The vast percentage of mankind is one great prodigal son who feeds on the husks of the swine he feign would leave for a better fare in his father's house. But his eyes are not yet open. He has not as yet "come to himself." When at last his vision is cleared, and he regains his senses, he will understand what his Lord meant when, in that famous parable, he said, "And when he [the prodigal] came to himself, he said, How many hired servants of my father's have bread enough and to spare, and I perish with hunger! I will arise and go unto my father, and will say unto him, Father, I have sinned against heaven, and before thee."

Both God and Christ are waiting this "coming to itself" of their human world which now languishes in the putrid atmosphere of the pigsty. They know that when we come to ourselves we will also soon come to them. Until we do, we are "beside ourselves." This stigma of spiritual insanity is the plague of our world. Some, of course, are afflicted more seriously than others with this unholy dementia, and our only hope is to "arise and go unto the father's house" as did the disillusioned black sheep of this parable.

To this end is the leadership of the Son of God exercised. That he will succeed in saving the world, there can be no doubt. But the war which has already cast down one third of the host of heaven is the titan of all struggles; Lucifer and his host have not yet surrendered to the powers of righteousness, nor will they until their last hope of conquering Christ has been dissipated, as is set forth in these gratifying words:

These shall make war with the Lamb, and the Lamb shall overcome them: for he is Lord of lords and king of kings: and they that are with him are called, and chosen, and faithful.—Revelation 17: 14.

THUS THE GLORIOUS VICTORY of God's gracious Son is pictured by the apocalyptic prophet from his isle of banishment in the Aegean Sea.

(Continued on page 19.)

Faith In God

By Seventy Glen H. Johnson

IT WOULD BE quite simple to state that we believe in faith as a principle of the gospel of Jesus Christ. We have the habit of searching in the Scriptures for proof texts stating such and such about faith in God, and very often we lack the faith we are talking about. Faith in God cannot be proved by something which is written in a book. It must find its expression in life. True, we discover many noble examples of faith in the history of religion, but one must recognize that these examples of faith have come from human experience. The Holy Scriptures are nothing more than the recorded experiences of men with God. And when these experiences were had, they were in the present tense. However, we can gain much from these recorded examples.

Perhaps we should talk about the cycle of faith in God. Faith does have a beginning and an end. It begins with a desire and ends with an action. All purposeful desires for good begin with the exercise of the will. There must also be a stimulus brought to bear upon the mind of the person, for true faith in God must be taught; in this process, it is presumed that learning takes place, and the next step is mode of conduct. It is not the purpose of this discussion to avoid the spiritual experience with the powers of heaven, as such, but to recognize that these experiences are but the methods and means of God's might and mind being made manifest for a definite purpose and end—that end being the righteousness of the kingdom of God existing on the earth. Too often we stop at the point of receiving the word of God through our faith in him, and then we glory in that fact without making the word flesh among us.

This is what we mean when we talk regarding the cycle of faith in God.

IT IS PRESUMED here that every normal person has within himself the qualities which make for the exercising of faith in God. Man, having a spirit, is capable of receiving the Spirit of God. He also has agency which makes him responsible to God in the experience of the exercise of will. There is abundant evidence of the fact of God's will being made known to man by the process of revelation, either by the prophetic movement or by the still small voice which speaks to conscience. By the prophetic movement, we mean the out and out declaration of the will of God by a prophet. The still small voice is the light which lightens every man who comes into the world. These two factors are necessary to the full exercising of faith in God and the reception of his mind and will. Without the two, there is no balance in the movement of faith.

When we discuss the fact of faith in God, we are not narrowing the principle to mere faith in one aspect of his purposes. We have all known people who had faith that the ultimate good will of man would prevail on earth, and that the purposes of God would be done, without actually taking a part in the implementation of the will of God in human affairs. These attachments toward God have been nothing more or less than sentimental. They lack vision and courage, which are both necessary parts of faith in God.

We have often placed faith in God on the gospel ladder and taught that when one has faith in God the next step to take is repentance, and so on through the rest to eternal judgment. The fact is, we cannot avoid faith in God in any period of our growing experiences. Each principle is dependent upon the other for support and strength. Some have thought that eventually faith should fulfill its purpose in man. They have said that in the eternal world we should "know as we are known." This we believe to be true, but have you studied that statement carefully? Notice what it says, "We shall know as we are known." Known by whom? Why, by God, of course. And how are we known except by the Great Mind which made us and knows just what we are and our relative position in the universe. It would be difficult to think that learning could not go on in the resurrection and celestial glory. In the very nature of things, God reserves the right to reveal; and it seems that a constant faith in him must be exercised. Then all the hindering causes of a true expression of faith in God shall be removed. Where its power to make perfect shall end, no one knows. Our perfection in the eternal world will not make us God but will make us what he intends we shall become under his guidance and our faith in him.

THE BEST CASE for observation regarding faith in God is Jesus of Nazareth. His life is the prophecy of what faith in God really is. Remember that faith in God comes from the person, not from a book. Jesus' life was made rich in the spiritual experience because he was constantly seeking to do his Father's will. For that reason he taught and preached the way of the kingdom of God on earth as the extension of the mind and will of God in human experience. One could hardly imagine that Jesus was testing faith in his experience as a scientist would test something in the laboratory just to prove his theory of life. His whole life was a manifestation of his faith in God. So it seems we must screen our faith in God through the life of Christ if a true manifestation of faith is made.

The initial experience of Joseph Smith has always challenged the thinking of good men in these days. Notice his experience in terms of an expression of faith in God. Joseph's first concern was the meeting of a specific need in his chain of choices. While reading in James 1: 5, his mind was moved to desire wisdom from God. He asked for this wisdom in faith and received an answer. Since that time, the results of Joseph's faith in God have been a constant reminder that faith has many implications and responsibilities. We have the content of his experiences in the first part of the Doctrine and Covenants. That faith in God has matched the needs of men in terms of revealing the way to a true expression of faith in God for those who desire to follow the life of Christ and implement the social nature of the kingdom of God on earth. Today, our faith in God carries a very great weight of responsibility. Our faith must be not only in the physical healings, the joys of the gifts, the little personal satisfactions which come as a result of a belief in God, but also include all these plus a deliberate acceptance of the law of tithing, intelligent response to the movements of religious education, building of strong family ties, and all the rest which devolves upon membership within the Church of Jesus Christ. The true test of our faith in God is when we reveal by our works that we really mean business in this great Zion endeavor. Let our faith encompass all the laws and commandments of God, and let us patiently seek to work together under the leadership God has given in terms of priesthood through his Spirit.

We have tried in this article to encourage you to have a faith in God which is all-inclusive. Don't direct your faith in one specific direction and become content with that, but let your faith in God seek to understand his mind and will; then have the courage to act. These days demand a true faith in God—a faith which inspires us to do the will of God on earth. That will is to build Zion in God's own way, in his own time.

Christ came not to redeem men IN their sins, but FROM their sins.

Helping Youth Grow

By Mrs. Glenn A. Scott

THE NEED for parents and adults to understand the psychological requirements of boys and girls is now fully recognized by religious leaders. It is no longer enough that the child attend church merely as a necessary religious activity. Instead, he should develop at his own level a feeling for the reality that lies in the worship experience.

Dr. Boynton Merrill tells of entering his church early one morning and finding a twelve-year-old boy sitting near one of the pillars in the nave. The boy asked: "Do you mind if I sit here?"

"Of course not," replied the minister.

Then the boy said, "This is a very beautiful church, isn't it?"

"Why, I think it is," agreed Dr. Merrill.

"It does things to you," the boy said.

"What does it do to you?" asked Dr. Merrill.

"Well," said the boy, "it makes you all kind of quiet inside, and it makes you feel bigger than you are."

In the world in which we live today, there is need for some experience which will make it possible for us to "feel all quiet inside and bigger than we are." We shall never be able to face life unless there is some central core of quiet within us to which we can retreat for strength and energy to live in this bewildering world.

OUR FAITH in the innate goodness of man is challenged as never before. Surely, we need some experience that will raise us from the dust—that will show us there is a force forever and unshakably good at the heart of the universe with which we can ally ourselves. For some of us, that experience without which we cannot live is the worshiping of and having faith in God.

We are indeed impoverished spiritually if we must stand helpless before the questioning faces of our boys and girls, if, when they ask us for a loaf of bread, we can hand them only a stone. They will sense in us our uncertainty, for they have already caught the note of despair from the adults they know.

Life for them now and in future years can take on the quality of hope and satisfaction if they begin while they are still young.

A sustained belief in religious living is the values of beauty, goodness, and truth. As one thinks about some of the people who have lived rich, full lives, it becomes apparent that time and place do not necessarily determine the quality of experience. Rose Christopher, a high school girl, sensed this fact when she wrote:

Some people say experience is travel,
Seeing strange, bizarre, exotic places;
And yet I say experience
Is merely our ability to endow ordinary people
And ordinary places
With unordinary meanings.

ONE OF THE characteristics of religion has been its ability to suggest the "unordinary" meanings that lie at the heart of everyday experience.

It requires the wise guidance of fathers, mothers, and teachers to help the boys and girls of today to grow up feeling equal to the tasks of life—"to feel bigger than they are." So the basic needs of young people is to have perfect trust and confidence in their parents and teachers. They respond to the homelike intimacy. The more completely we share God's purposes and the more nearly we live each day as a child of God, the more genuine will be our teaching.

(Continued on page 22.)

"After This Manner Shall Ye Pray"

By ARTHUR H. DUROSE

ONE OF THE MOST widely known pieces of sacred literature—perhaps the most widely known, with the possible exception of the Twenty-third Psalm, is the Lord's Prayer. In the Gospel according to St. Matthew, it is recorded as being a part of the Sermon on the Mount. In St. Luke's Gospel, chapter 11, Christ was praying in a certain place; and when he ceased, one of the disciples said to him, "Teach us to pray as John also taught his disciples." There is nothing strange about this; it is highly probable that Jesus taught various groups at various times how to pray. Almost certainly the twelve were present at the Sermon on the Mount, and to them he said, "After this manner pray ye." To the disciples, in St. Luke, he said, "When ye pray, say . . ." Ye is plural.

The Lord's Prayer is essentially a social prayer. You will notice that all the pronouns are plural: "give us," "forgive us," "suffer us not," "deliver us." This prayer was definitely intended for use in the community of saints! Note the difference between this and the admonition given for personal prayer immediately preceding: "Thou shalt not be as the hypocrites are: for they love to pray standing in the synagogues and in the corners of the streets, that they may be seen of men When thou prayest, enter into thy closet, and when thou hast shut the door, pray to thy Father which is in secret." These are our personal supplications to God.

The Lord's Prayer is very distinctively a prayer for Christians. The Israelites had a very limited concept of God as their Father and then only in the creative sense. But the real Christian knows God as his Father, not only in the matter of creation, but in the sense that he is an adopted child in the family of God. He is our Father; we are the brotherhood of Saints, the holy church, the family of God. No Christian can ask the question, "Am I my brother's keeper?" He knows that adoption into the family of God makes him a brother's keeper to all the other adopted sons of God. So in the sense in which Jesus gave us this prayer, only Christians can fittingly say "Our Father." A sense of divine kinship is felt by one who has been adopted into the family of God if he takes that adoption seriously.

Which art in heaven.—A literal translation of this phrase from the Greek reads, "Which art in the heavens." Almost without exception in the Greek New Testament this word is in the plural, coinciding strongly with St. Paul's description of the resurrection in which he says, "There is one glory of the sun, another glory of the moon and another glory of the stars, for one star differs from another star in glory, so also is the resurrection of the dead." The description in latter day revelation of the different states of glory and blessedness assigned to varied classes of persons also supports and is supported by the thought that heaven is not just one place, but that there are heavens wherein God can reward each according to his works.

Hallowed be thy name. This is a prayer that God may be rightly worshipped—as Malachi 1: 11 records it, "From the rising of the sun even unto the going down of the same, my name shall be great among the Gentiles." To hallow is to reverence, to exalt, to sanctify, to set great store by. So we reverence the holy name of our Father, God. Even the utterance of the phrase, "Hallowed be thy name," when reverently said is, in itself, an act of worship; but it is possible only to one who can apprehend in some degree the nature of God, his majesty, his holiness, and his love. In our reverence for his holy word, his sacraments, and his church, his revelations to us, we demonstrate our earnestness when we say, "Hallowed by thy name."

Thy kingdom come.—The word "kingdom" was not strange to the Jew. For hundreds of years it had been the central hope of Israel. The rabbis used to say that the prayer which did not include the kingdom was no prayer at all. But Jesus made it the central theme of his teaching. He spoke of the kingdom in two ways: as beginning with and gathering around him, and as the hope of a future not yet realized. To those who were interested in material things, he said, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God . . . and all these things shall be added unto you." Here is the kingdom being built and gathering around him; but at a later date, about the table in the upper room, he looked forward to the time when he would drink of the fruit of the vine in "the kingdom of God." "Thy kingdom come" is wide in meaning. It is a prayer for the peace and unity of the church—a prayer that justice and truth and kindness and purity may prevail, that Christ may enter our hearts, and that the gospel may be spread throughout the whole world. It is also a prayer for the hour of final consummation when the kingdoms of this world are become the kingdom of our Lord and his Christ.

Thy will be done on earth as it is done in heaven.—Praying for the will of God to be done is not fatalism. It is something more than sitting back and hoping that the will of God may not be too hard to take. It is a prayer for patience, but it is also a prayer for diligence to carry out that will in action. The will of God is not disease or slums or fear or hate. Ninety years ago, slavery was defended as being the will of God, but a man of vision said, "If ever God gives me the chance, I will hit this thing, and I will hit it hard." How often has this prayer traveled to our hands or our feet, resulting in the practical virtues which alone can bring in the kingdom of God. Jesus at the well in Samaria told his followers, "My meat is to do the will of him that sent me," but a little while later when he had done all that seemed humanly possible, and when it seemed inevitable that the "cup" could not pass from him, he said, "Not my will, but thy will be done." The will of God is done in our active, vigorous efforts to forward his kingdom, but it is also done when, having accomplished all we can, we may calmly leave the result with him.

Give us this day our daily bread.
—Jesus thus sets the seal of his approval on the right to pray for material as well as spiritual bread. We are taught to pray for bread for one day—not many; which serves to remind us of our day to day dependence upon God. The Greek word "daily" translated has been called the most untranslatable word in the Greek New Testament. It has been rendered "day by day" or "needful" or "for the coming day," but in any case the prayer is for the immediate need, not for storehouses for the future. Neither is it for luxuries, but for necessities—food, clothing, shelter. And at all times remember the prayer is "give us," not "give me."

Forgive us our debts as we forgive our debtors.—Here also is another indication that this prayer was intended primarily for Christians. Only one who has forgiven can effectively say, "forgive us." It is Christian to forgive, but Jesus knew it was so difficult even for Christians that we needed to be reminded every day. Our sins are called "debts," implying a personal accountability to God—a debt which we of ourselves cannot repay. We can only appeal for divine pity. But unless we forgive, unless we put away malice, bitterness, hatred, and revenge, we are yet in our sins, and we cannot be forgiven. Our forgiveness is hinged upon an "if."

Suffer us not to be led into temptation.—This rendering in the Inspired Version is much to be preferred over the King James Version. God leads no man into temptation; James 1: 13 states: "Let no man say he is tempted of God . . . but every man is tempted when he is drawn away of his own lust." The promise of God is that he will not allow us to be tempted above that we are able to bear, and he will always provide a way of escape. But this lies in putting forth our stanchest efforts to resist temptation and at the same time praying, "Deliver us from evil." Jesus told Peter on one occasion, "Simon, Satan hath desired to have you that he may sift you as wheat, but I have prayed for thee that thy faith fail not." Temptations thus are sometimes the result of assaults of the evil one; thus we are admonished to "resist the devil and he will flee from you." Here again our desired attitude is not passive dependence upon God, but an active resistance to evil and an active cultivation of righteousness. This prayer is an appeal for strength in the evil day that we might endure to the end and be found overcomers.

To conclude in a few words, our prayers should be simple, they should be for essential things, they should be unselfish, and they should be to "Our Father which art in heaven."

Growing Pains

By Florence M. Taylor

Children will love to hear or read about what happens to Jim and Polly and the others as they grow up—and they'll adore the many colorful pictures. For children who are beginning to read.

65c

Once, Long Ago

By Mary Owen Bruce

This is a selected group of stories from the OLD TESTAMENT, beautifully interpreted in a manner to kindle a child's interest. For the pre-school child.

65c

Treating Lightly Our Stewardship

By Bishop C. A. Skinner

THE STORY IS TOLD of a member of a certain church, who, when asked by a member of the finance committee for a contribution, explained that he would not be able to give anything that year as he was building a new home. Seeing an opportunity to impress upon the mind of the member the importance of the church, the solicitor said: "The house in which you are living provides shelter for yourself and family; no doubt you expect to pay rent while you are building your new home. You are enjoying the benefits and protection of the state and, of course, will pay your taxes. You will require groceries while the new home is under construction, and no doubt you will pay for them. Do you not also expect to enjoy the privileges and benefits of the church while your new home is being built?"

The member saw the point, agreed that the church meant much to himself and family, and that he would share in the cost of maintaining it. The portion of our income that we spend for essentials and nonessentials, luxuries and pleasure, indicates the value we place on them. The amount we contribute to the support of the church indicates the value we place on the kingdom. Christ once said: "Seek ye first the kingdom of God, to establish his righteousness and all these other things shall be added unto you."

There is a wealth of unexpressed love in the world. It is one of the chief causes of sorrow evoked by death: what might have been said or might have been done that never can be said or done.—Arthur Hopkins in Ladies' Home Journal.

The Seventy Present— A Spiritually Empowered

OUR OBJECTIVE is to become more efficient missionary ministers. This objective can be realized only through more efficient methods. No endeavor for good should be minimized; methods promising higher ratings in results can well be magnified in our missionary ministry.

The statements, "If God be for us, who can be against us," and "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me," presuppose that the power of God's Spirit is the most effective instrument obtainable for a successful ministry.

Our calling is that of saving men from sin and its attendant conditions and the salvaging from human wrecks those materials still available for kingdom use.

There exists no higher calling. No other work presents a more difficult, worth-while or exacting life. No task is so dependent upon the help of spiritual power.

Origin of Spiritual Power

Spiritual power arises out of the nature of God. The following scriptural texts all indicate God as the origin of all power:

Power belongeth unto God.—Psalm 62: 11.

For thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory, forever and ever.—Matthew 6: 15.

Through faith we understand that the worlds were framed by the word of God, so that things which are seen were not made of things which do appear.—Hebrews 11: 3.

The earth rolls on her wings; and the sun giveth her light by day, and the moon giveth her light by night; the stars also giveth their light, as they roll upon their wings, in their glory, in the midst of the power of God.—Doctrine and Covenants 85: 12.

The light which is in all things; which giveth life to all things; which is the law by which all things are governed; even the power of God who is in the bosom of eternity, who is in the midst of all things.—Doctrine and Covenants 85: 3.

Let every soul be subject unto the higher powers. For there is no power in the church but of God; the powers that be are ordained of God.—Romans 13: 1.

Sharers of Spiritual Powers

CHRIST SHARES IN SPIRITUAL POWERS. Creative and executive powers belonging to God were and are shared by the Son of God as a reading of the following list of references will indicate: John 1: 1-4; Matthew 28: 17, 18; John 17: 1-5; I Corinthians 15: 24-28; Doctrine and Covenants 85: 2; 90: 4.

MEN SHARE IN SPIRITUAL POWER. God's power, to certain limits, is also shared by all who believe in and know Christ and God: John 1: 12; John 14: 12; John 17: 3; Romans 1: 16, 17.

PRIESTHOOD SHARES IN SPIRITUAL POWER. To the priesthood, God's representatives among men, was and is given a portion of that power, essential to their work.

And when he called unto him his twelve disciples, he gave them power over unclean spirits, to cast them out, and to heal all manner of sickness and all manner of disease.—Matthew 10: 1.

Behold I will give unto you power over serpents and scorpions, and over all the power of the enemy; and nothing shall by any means hurt you.—Luke 10: 20.

And this greater priesthood administereth the gospel and holdeth the key of the mysteries of the kingdom, even the key of knowledge of God, Therefore, in the ordinances thereof the power of godliness is manifest; and without the ordinances thereof, and the authority of the priesthood, the power of godliness is not manifest unto men in the flesh; for without this no man can see the face of God, even the Father, and live.—Doctrine and Covenants 83: 3.

And behold I send the promise of my Father upon you; but tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem, until ye be endued with power from on high.—Luke 24: 48.

Again I say, hearken ye elders of my church whom I have appointed: ye are not sent forth to be taught, but to teach the children of men the things which I have put into your hands by the power of my spirit; and ye are to be taught from on high. Sanctify yourselves and ye shall be endued with power, that ye may give even as I have spoken.—Doctrine and Covenants 43: 4.

Channels Through Which Spiritual Power is Transmitted

KINGDOM OF GOD TRANSMITS SPIRITUAL POWER. By reason of God's power, the kingdom of God is. This kingdom, as a great reservoir of spiritual power, also becomes a transmitter of that power to her children.

For the kingdom of God is not in word, but in power.—I Corinthians 4: 20.

And he said unto them again, verily I say unto you, that there be some of them that stand here, which shall not taste of death, till they have seen the kingdom of God come with power.—Mark 8: 44.

GOSPEL OF CHRIST TRANSMITS SPIRITUAL POWER. The gospel of Christ, coming as it does in power, and being the power of God unto salvation, is also a transmitter of spiritual power.

For our gospel came not unto you in word only, but also in power, and in the Holy Ghost, and in much assurance.—I Thessalonians 1: 5.

For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to everyone that believeth; to the Jew first and also to the Greek.—Romans 1: 16.

Missionary Ministry

HOLY GHOST TRANSMITS SPIRITUAL POWER. The Holy Ghost is a transmitter of God's power to people, especially to the priesthood of his church. The Holy Ghost is, in fact, the great supply line of spiritual power from God to man.

But ye shall receive power after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you.—Acts 1:8.

And if ye shall ask with a sincere heart, with real intent, having faith in Christ, he will manifest the truth of it to you, by the power of the Holy Ghost; and by the power of the Holy Ghost, ye may know the truth of all things.—Moroni 10:5.

And ye may know that he is, by the power of the Holy Ghost, wherefore I would exhort you, that ye deny not the power of God; for he worketh by power, according to the faith of the children of men, the same today and tomorrow, and for ever.—Moroni 10:7.

Prerequisites to a Spiritually Empowered Missionary Ministry

I consider the following six conditions the most important instruments of preparation in the receiving of the power of God sufficient for a full and rich spiritual missionary ministry:

GODLINESS AS A PREREQUISITE. When broken down, godliness emphasizes cleanliness of person, purity in thinking and living, charity for all, and unreserved consecration of oneself to God's ministry. See Doctrine and Covenants 4:1, 2; 11:3, 4; 118:2, 3.

KNOWLEDGE AS A PREREQUISITE. As early as 1832 members of the priesthood were instructed to "Seek learning even by study, and also by faith." Education has, since that time, been increasing. We must advance with it. The Spirit cannot lead the mind in channels it is incapable of following. We must be able to speak in terms of the people to whom we minister. As far as possible, we must therefore obtain a knowledge of the whole field of learning, including the practical psychology of human nature.

And I give unto you a commandment, that you shall teach one another the doctrine of the kingdom; teach ye diligently and my grace shall attend you, that you may be instructed more perfectly in theory, in principle, in doctrine, in the law of the gospel, in all things that pertain unto the kingdom of God, that is expedient for you to understand; of things both in heaven, and in earth, and under the earth; things which have been; things which are; things which must shortly come to pass; things which are at home; things which are abroad; the wars and the perplexities of nations, and the judgments which are on the land; and a knowledge also of countries, and of kingdoms, that ye may be prepared in all things when I shall send you again.—Doctrine and Covenants 85:21.

However, great care must be exercised that learning does not subordinate spiritual power.

When they are learned they think they are wise, and they hearken not unto the counsel of God, for they set it aside, supposing they know of themselves.—2 Nephi 6:59.

And they shall teach with their learning, and deny the Holy Ghost, which giveth utterance.—2 Nephi 12:5.

But to be learned is good, if they hearken unto the counsels of God.—2 Nephi 6:61.

Theme outlines are excellent helps for young, inexperienced speakers. In this, however, great care must be exercised lest, holding too rigidly to the premeditated thought content of the outline, the spirit is restricted in its suggestion of thoughts and ways of presentation.

Neither take ye thought beforehand what ye shall say, but treasure up in your minds continually the words of life, and it shall be given you, in the very hour, that portion that shall be meted unto every man.—Doctrine and Covenants 83:14. (See also Matthew 10:15-17.)

No language or oratory can be more convincing, moving, or eloquent than that which is inspired by the Spirit of God. We must have a strong spiritual knowledge of Christ's acceptance of our church, knowing that it is indeed his church, if we are to be sincere in representing it to others.

PERSONAL CONTROL AS A PREREQUISITE. Control over ourselves is also a part of our equipment. When reaching down to lift up the fallen, we must be very careful that we, too, do not become victims of evil.

Unfortunately, men of the ministry seldom fall alone. Even if others do not share directly in the fall, the knowledge of the minister's lapse in self-control will curtail him and his fellow-ministers in any further spiritual appeal among those who know him. Furthermore, the Spirit of God cannot dwell in unholy temples. Personal control is essential in morals, in preaching, in administrations, in the exercising of spiritual gifts, and in private conversations. This, I would say, is most imperative if we would have access to spiritual power.

Paul expresses well how we can protect ourselves:

Put on the whole armour of God, that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil.—Ephesians 6:11.

FAITH AS A PREREQUISITE. Paul calls faith a shield that is capable of deflecting the "fiery darts of the wicked" (Ephesians 6:16). Our shield consists of faith in ourselves, in others, in the church and its ultimate triumph, and in the Godhead. Ours must be the kind of faith that is still strong when everyone else quits—that visions the end from the beginning—remaining until the very last.

Faith is the assurance of things hoped for; the evidence of things not seen.—Hebrew 11:1.

PRAYERFULNESS AS A PREREQUISITE. In thought, word, and conduct, we must be prayerful. A prayerful attitude will recommend our ministry to those we hope to influence; it will make for our personal stability and moral betterment; it will also lift us upward to God, who is the source of our spiritual power. Paul instructed men to "pray without ceasing" (I Thessalonians 5:17).

Fasting, if it cannot rightfully be called prayer, works toward meditative prayer and is very often the generating plant of a concentrated prayer of faith. "Howbeit this kind goeth not out but by prayer and fasting."—Matthew 17:21. Fasting, therefore, should be a reasonable part of our devotional practices.

Communion with God through prayer, in times past, seemed to be a preparatory school for meeting great tasks and for spiritual witnessing, examples of which are not wanting.

Peter, James, John, and Christ on the mount of transfiguration.—Matthew 17:1-13.

Christ's night of prayer preparatory to the choosing of his apostles.—Luke 6:12-16.

Christ in the garden of Gethsemane.—Mark 14:37-47.

Paul at Damascus fasting and praying for three days.—Acts 9:8-20.

School of the prophets.—Doctrine and Covenants 85:37-44.

Early organization ministry before being sent out to their appointments.—Doctrine and Covenants 85:21.

LOVE AS A PREREQUISITE. Though a part of godliness, love—because of its importance in the results of our ministry—demands special mention.

We know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren.—I John 3:14.

People everywhere, sometimes even those of like faith, are overwhelmed with darkness, distress, perplexity, and confusion in our present world. Love, Paul says, will never fail in such emergencies—"Charity [love in action] never faileth."—I Corinthians 13:8. (See also Doctrine and Covenants 122:16, 17.)

Love so sincere and deep that it brings pain to the heart of the minister as he senses the suffering of sinful people—what great blessings here and heavenly happiness hereafter they are denying themselves—is one of the finest prerequisites to a spiritually empowered missionary ministry.

Love inextinguishable burning in our hearts for the souls of men and women, will also be a reservoir of power as we penetrate the deepening shadows to carry into their lives the hope of the gospel of Christ, giving them faith, light, direction, strength, courage and a better sense of "life's proportions."

All of the foregoing, impregnated with the power and demonstration of the spirit, are prerequisites for our ministry of spiritual power.

Value of Spiritual Power in Our Missionary Ministry

FAITH CONFIRMED BY SPIRITUAL POWER. However convincing the logic of our message is, it still becomes necessary—as in Bible times—to confirm "the word with signs following" (Mark 16:21). Provisions for that were most certainly made in the church.

Now concerning spiritual gifts, brethren, I would not have you ignorant. But the manifestation of the spirit is given to every man to profit withal. Now there are diversities of gifts, but the same spirit.—I Corinthians 12:1, 7, 4.

And these signs shall follow them that believe.—Mark 16:16.

Wherefore tongues are for a sign, not to them that believe, but to them that believe not. But prophesying serveth not for them that believe not, but for them which believe.—I Corinthians 14:22.

(See also I Corinthians 12:28; Ephesians 4:8; Acts 2:1-41; I Corinthians 14:1-40; Joel 2:28-32.)

MINISTERIALLY SERVICED SPIRITUAL GIFTS BY THE POWER OF THE SPIRIT. There is little doubt that a part or all of the spiritual gifts with their attendant power were and should still be regular ministerial equipment. Too long have we either left our church void of these spiritual gifts or been content to sit by, letting Brother Y or Sister Z be God's instruments of service. Our call to and acceptance of priesthood responsibilities requires that we not only believe in and preach of spiritual gifts, but also that we pray for them and, when the Spirit of God so indicates, have faith sufficient to make ourselves available for that responsibility.

Even so ye, forasmuch as ye are zealous of spiritual gifts, seek that ye may excell to the edifying of the church.—I Corinthians 14:12.

Wherefore, brethren, covet to prophesy and forbid not to speak with tongues.—I Corinthians 14:39.

Follow after charity, and desire spiritual gifts, but rather that ye may prophesy.—I Corinthians 14:1.

And he said, Hear now my words: If there be a prophet among you, I the Lord will make myself known unto him in a vision, and will speak unto him in a dream.—Numbers 12:6.

Despise not prophesyings.—I Thessalonians 5:20.

Wherefore, beware, lest ye are deceived, and that ye may not be deceived, seek ye earnestly the best gifts, always remembering for what they are given; for verily I say unto you, they are given for the benefit of those who love me and keep all my commandments.—Doctrine and Covenants 46:4.

Build upon my rock, which is my gospel; deny not the spirit of revelation, nor the spirit of prophecy.—Doctrine and Covenants 10:11.

And I would exhort you beloved brethren, that ye remember that he is the same yesterday, today, and forever, and that all these gifts of which I have spoken, which are spiritual, will never be done away, even as long as the world shall stand, only according to the unbelief of the children of men.—Moroni 10:14.

(See also Doctrine and Covenants 46:5-9 and John 16:13.)

SPIRITUAL POWER THE ESSENTIAL ELEMENT OF SPIRITUAL TEACHING. The power of the spirit is essential to proper teaching. Without that power, teaching is as a sounding brass and a tinkling cymbal.

And if ye receive not the spirit ye shall not teach.—Doctrine and Covenants 42:5.

Verily I say unto you, he that is ordained of me and sent forth to preach the word of truth by the comforter, in the spirit of truth, doth he preach it by the spirit of truth, or some other way? And if it be by some other way, it be not of God. And again he that receiveth the word of truth, doth he receive it by the spirit of truth or some other way? If it be some other way, it be not of God: therefore why is it that ye cannot understand and know that he that receiveth the word by the spirit of truth, receiveth it as it is preached by the spirit of truth.—Doctrine and Covenants 50:5.

But the comforter, which is the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in my name, he shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you.—John 14:26.

And ye are called to do this by prayer and thanksgiving as the spirit shall give utterance.—Doctrine and Covenants 85:44.

And behold and lo this is an ensample unto all those who were ordained unto this priesthood, whose mission is appointed unto them to go forth; and this is the ensample unto them, that they shall speak as they are moved upon by the Holy Ghost; and whatsoever they shall speak when moved upon by the Holy Ghost, shall be scripture.—Doctrine and Covenants 68:1.

And I give unto them a commandment that they shall go forth a little season, and it shall be given by the power of my Spirit when they shall return; and ye shall go forth in the power of my Spirit, preaching my gospel.—Doctrine and Covenants 42:2.

(See also I Corinthians 2:10-14.)

SPIRITUAL POWER VITALIZES WITNESSING. The witnessing success of our ministry comes in the degree that we are in possession of the power of God's Spirit. Too often we prepare outlines and premeditate the approaches in personal interviews without the help of the spirit.

But ye shall receive power, after the Holy Ghost has come upon you; and ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem, and Judea, and in Samaria and unto the uttermost parts of the earth.—Acts 1:8.

Then, if you desire, you shall have my spirit, and my word; yea, the power of God unto the convincing of men.—Doctrine and Covenants 10:10.

Neither am I mighty in writing, like unto speaking; for when a man speaketh by the power of the Holy Ghost, the power of the Holy Ghost carries it into the hearts of the children of men.—2 Nephi 15:1.

(See also 2 Nephi 12:5.)

Spiritual power is the soul of Christian ministry; it puts authority in ministry. If the Spirit of God like a fire is burning in our souls, our missionary ministry will as a consequence be vitalized by that same power.

SPIRITUAL POWER SUPPLEMENTS POWER OF PRIESTHOOD OFFICE. An ordination carries with it an endowment of spiritual power peculiar to the office bestowed. The spirit of the office should, however, be supplemented by the power of the Holy Ghost—the first apostles were in possession of the apostolic authority, yet they were instructed by Christ to wait for additional power.

But tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem, until ye be endued with power from on high.—Luke 24:48.

To be good is not sufficient. We must have spiritual power. But what is spiritual power? Perhaps to state what it is not, because of its negative nature, would stir us most. I will say, that it is more than a good personality, a studious mind, a fluent tongue, a theme outline, eloquent oratory, or even priesthood authority. It is that inexplainable something that puts love, life, and power in all the above-mentioned instrument for successful ministering. It is that power which moves everyone within its radiation toward God's throne. It is that mystic something which causes men to change their way of seeing, thinking, and living—that causes them to exclaim, "I am a sinner, Lord, I repent,"—that brings them contritely to their knees, then picks them up and helps them on in the upward climb. It is that power which so completely changed Paul's way of life through his experience on the road to Damascus (Acts 9:1-22). That is spiritual power.

With God's ministry, it is the power that prompts thoughts, and even impels expression of thoughts.

And he answered and said unto them, if these should hold their peace, the stones would immediately cry out.—Luke 19:39.

It is the power that knows men's present needs and anticipates their future needs—that, knowing their minds, views, prejudices, and doubts, can control ministerially expressed thought content in private conversation or in public discourse—that knows all the barriers to conversion and removes them. "For the spirit searcheth all things." —I Corinthians 2:10.

Conclusion

Remember the worth of souls is great in the sight of God; . . . And how great is his joy in the soul that repenteth. Wherefore you are called to cry repentance unto this people. And if it so be that you should labor all your days, in crying repentance unto this people, and bring save it be one soul unto me, how great shall be your

(Continued on page 22.)

Camping Has a Place

By EDNA EASTER

NOTHING is quite so much fun as camping — so say the campers—and truly that is one of the objectives of camping. But it is more than that—a camp is a little laboratory of Christian living.

Last year, we asked a camping class to list some of the main objectives of church camping. Why did we have camping? Was it a part of the church? What did camping have to do with making better lives?

Here are the objectives the class suggested, with brief comments as to how they are a part of the church program.

Our church objectives in camping are to provide opportunities for:

1. The art of harmonious living.

This is about all we are asking for Zion, isn't it—and more than we have been able to accomplish as yet? (In my ten years' experience as camp leader and, during some of these seasons, supervising the activities of over 300 different young people, I have found very, very few "problem" campers. They come to have fun—to live, and work, and play together happily—and proceed to prove it.

2. Appreciation of nature. Every material resource we have is a result of God's gifts to man. The beauties of nature, the blessings of nature, the appreciation of nature—all go hand in hand.

3. Finding pathways to God. Young folk seek God—more intensely than do adults. They find pathways to God in camp: the morning devotions, the campfire programs each evening, special services during the week, the opportunities to talk things over with other campers, and counseling with and receiving counsel from the adult leaders. It seems easier to get close to young people, and for them to get closer to God, in the camp environment.

4. Self-reliance. Campers like to be able to do things themselves—in all the work and play and activities of the camp.

5. Physical, mental, and spiritual health—the threefold, balanced program.

6. Good times and adventure. This, probably, is what makes camping different: these opportunities for swimming, boating, hiking, exploring, learning to camp, getting acquainted with new friends, adjusting and helping others to adjust to group living. Both work and play are adventures in camping. It is fun for the camper to learn to make his bed "hospital style," under the direction of the camp nurse. (A young Oriole Girl told us once as she was being complimented on her bed-making ability, "Don't ever tell my mother I can make my own bed. She'll want me to do it at home!")

7. Specialized training. Campers want to learn—they want to become more skillful in swimming, in learning to row a boat properly and easily, in building a good campfire, in making a neat piece of handcraft, in helping with a worship program, in singing in a special number or participating in the prayers.

8. Developing leaders. Campers are not content just to have leaders—they want to become leaders, to share the camping experience with others younger than themselves. Camping means that much to them.

9. Camper participation in program development. Campers want to have a voice in their program. With wise guidance, this is a factor for good. Too, it is training for leadership.

If our church camps provide opportunities for touching the lives of young people even for the brief period of the camping session, with these appreciations and these opportunities for development, is there any question about the worth-whileness of them?

Camping in the church

The age groups served by our church camps are as yet somewhat limited. Camping is still in the growing process. Most of the camps are youth camps, for boys and girls between the ages of fifteen and eighteen. (The only church camps for the younger girls at present are the Oriole and the Blue Bird camps held at Gardner Lake for the girls of the Independence area, with perhaps a few out-of-town guests.)

Youth camps will be held in these areas this year:

Colorado Springs, Colorado; Pawnee, Oklahoma; Nauvoo, Illinois; Deception Pass, Washington; Brewton, Alabama; Columbus, Nebraska; Park of the Pines, Michigan; Alberta, Canada; Gardner Lake, near Independence, Missouri; one for the youth of the inter-stake area, and one for the youth of the city of Independence.

In addition, it is very probable that a camp will be held near Fargo, North Dakota, for the Minnesota-North Dakota area.

For further information on a particular camp, write: Department of Religious Education The Auditorium Independence, Missouri

If you want a sales' talk on the advantages of camping, just start a conversation with any boy or girl who has attended one of the church camps!

— — — a home column feature — — —

Home Management for the Veteran in College

By Marye Louise Wolfe

IN A PREVIOUS ARTICLE, we discussed setting up a budget that would work. A budget should be a practical and easy-to-operate money management plan. The first consideration will be the income to be divided. A married veteran without children will soon receive $105 monthly from the government. If there are no children, it would help for the wife to work. However, since her first responsibility is to her husband and home, a full-time job is not the most desirable. A part-time job, such as a dental or medical receptionist, typist, or clerical worker gives the young wife time enough to keep her home in order and yet help supplement the family income. The salary from a part-time position will not equal that of a full-time position, yet the part-time job will more than make up for the difference in salary of a full-time position in the mental attitude of the couple. If the wife can supplement the income and still maintain a normal home atmosphere, it is well worth the difference in salary. It will help stretch the income, too, because she can shop in the afternoon where the prices are cheaper and selections better. She has time to do her own baking and catch up the odds and ends before her husband gets home. This arrangement is more satisfying to both the husband and wife, because each feels he is doing his job. If there are children, the wife must be an especially good manager, because she is unable to supplement the income.

NOW LET US break down the budget and see how it can be made to work. In setting up the budget, we made allotments under various headings.

Our two big allowances were food and rent. Let's discuss food for a moment. It will be wise to use the foods in season as much as possible, because plentiful items are always cheaper. Eat the vegetables and fruits that are home grown. Perhaps there is space for a little garden in the summer. When fruits and vegetables are at the peak of the season, it is wise to home-can them for the following winter. They are cheap then, and easy to can. Commercially canned fruits and vegetables are high in price, but some will have to be bought. Here are a few hints on how to stretch the dollar.

1. Compare brands as to size of can and contents.

2. Don't buy by brand name alone.

3. Read the label. The government requires that contents and size be clearly marked on each label.

4. If possible, buy graded canned goods. Some of the chain stores are now handling these products. Large commercial canners usually put out a "fancy" grade, which for everyday purposes is too expensive to use.

Since grading is comparatively new, let me explain it a little. Grade A is equal to fancy—it is the product of largest size, picked at the ideal time, and, if it is fruit, usually packed in heavy syrup. Grade B is somewhat smaller than A, but the same quality and is generally two to seven cents cheaper per can. Grade C is the small and slightly imperfect product. For low-income brackets, I would suggest consistent use of B and C grades. B grade can be used successfully in everyday menus. Grade C can be used, for instance, in vegetable soup; or, if it is fruit, in Jello salads, desserts, or pie. Grade C is usually several cents cheaper than grade B. In eggs, the smaller brown ones are the better buy. It is not advisable to try to economize on milk unless the dairy is a reliable one. Raw milk is all right for cooking, but not for drinking purposes. Meat is another big item in every family budget. The cheaper cuts of meat take more time to prepare but are equally nutritious and tasty if prepared correctly. Any modern cookbook will show numerous ways to fix these cheaper cuts. The meat that cooks quickly, such as chops will be higher in price and leave you nothing for sandwiches. An allotment of $10 a week will cover three balanced meals a day for two adults if carefully planned. If there are children, it will have to be increased in proportion.

RENT IS OUR next consideration. Several facts influence this item—rent on an unfurnished apartment or home will be less than on a furnished place, however, there will be utilities to pay. The locality will influence the amount of rent, city houses and apartments being higher than rural ones. For a furnished apartment in a city area, let us set the rent at $50 per month.

Next we have the miscellaneous allowance. This will cover cosmetics, drugs, cleaning, books, and church offering. This can be taken care of on $5 a week.

Perhaps next we should consider clothing. It is rather hard to make an allowance for replacements, but $4 a month should take care of all minor ones.

Let us now take a look at the insurance allotment. It will be a necessity. While many people feel they cannot afford it, actually they can't afford to be without it. I

(Continued on page 22.)

The Right Key

By RUBY TINKHAM

MY DAUGHTER and her very best girl friend were playing dress-up. Each was discussing the relative merits of her present screen favorite. One was definitely sure that John Wayne would be her ideal forever and ever, while the other was just as certain that Roy Rogers had all the qualities every girl dreams about.

I was amused until this thirteen-year-old child of mine said, "It doesn't matter whom you marry, just so you love him!"

I was shocked, because I had voiced that very same sentiment fifteen years ago (under different circumstances, of course), and I really believed it when I said it a trifle defiantly to my parents. I was young and strong. To me, marrying outside the church was not a weakness, it was an opportunity. I would not be too hasty, but given time and the proper conditions of a close family life, I felt that I had a challenge awaiting me that would necessitate the very best I had to give.

My husband, a nonmember, attended church infrequently with me before our marriage. The fact that he attended because of me and not because of his interest in my faith did not make me feel uncertain of my chances in finally securing him as a member.

SO WE BEGAN our journey. At first there were many other exciting things to do. A new car, places to go, friends to visit, week-end trips and a home to build. Instead of bringing him into a closer relationship with the church, I allowed myself to be drawn away from it and into his activities, thinking there would always be plenty of time for religion.

Then the baby came. Now was the time. She must grow up strong and lovely, protected and sheltered by a love greater than our own. So I suggested that we all make it a regular habit to attend church together. I encountered some objections and excuses, but I thought, "If I go myself, maybe he will come, too."

Things went along like this until a missionary visited our branch. He had my consent to visit our home, and he came twice. The first time we sat out in the yard, and the topics of conversation were general. The second time, he met a hard silence that I tried ineffectually to bridge.

After he left, my husband made it very plain that he had no intention of ever joining any church. He said the Bible and Book of Mormon were just a lot of fairy tales someone had cooked up to entertain adults with moronic minds. He was so angry that I asked the missionary not to come again.

My daughter and I still attended church regularly, and one evening at supper she very casually said, "Mother, Mary is going to be baptized Sunday, and I want to be baptized, too." My husband "hit the ceiling," and said, "You're not going to be baptized! You're only a child. You have no more idea of what religion is than that chair you're sitting on. It's outrageous for any child eight years old to even think about being baptized."

This was a crisis, and I knew it. I would either stand or fall from here on. So I talked with my daughter. I explained to her what baptism really meant, and the obligations and privileges that went with it. I tried not to sway her emotionally, and then I told her to think it over for several days and make her own decision.

She came to me quietly one day and said, "Mother, were you ever sorry you were baptized?" I answered her just as seriously, "No, dear, never." Then she put her arms around me and whispered, "I won't ever be sorry, either!"

So on one beautiful Sunday afternoon in September, my daughter was baptized—and I wasn't there!

On that same Sunday in the evening, she was confirmed in the little white church where I had been confirmed years earlier—and I wasn't there.

AS I LOOK BACK, I wonder how God can ever forgive me for not going—I have never forgiven myself. But that was part of the price I paid for giving my consent.

There was a kind of armed truce at our house following this event, and religion was a taboo subject.

Then the second baby came. I wanted her blessed, but I was afraid. Should I ask my husband if it were all right, or should I ignore him? After debating with myself for several weeks, I wrapped her up one Sunday morning and took her to church with me. I had her blessed; we came home quietly, and nothing was ever said about it.

This opened up whole new vistas of opportunity. From now on I would no longer follow a course of active resistance, but I would worship my God with passive nonresistance.

We blessed our food silently and prayed secretly like the people in the Book of Mormon. I read my Herald and put it away. I did all my classwork in the afternoons before my husband came home from work.

You may think this cowardly, but I feel I have won a small victory. My children will not grow up without some knowledge of what I believe. Neither will they grow up feeling they have been forced into that belief. Whenever a question on religion comes up, I face it squarely and answer it as truthfully as I can—but I refuse to argue! There is no conflict in my life, because I am following my convictions. There is no friction in my home, because I refuse to make an issue out of those convictions.

IN A FEW YEARS my daughter will ask me, "Mother, do you think it's wrong to marry outside the church?"—And the answer?

Shall I say, "No, dear, I don't think it's wrong to marry outside the church. I did, and I've had a rich and satisfying life."

Or shall I say, "Yes, dear, I think it's wrong. Not that it's a sin against God or your church, but it's a sin against yourself and what you hope to become. It's like playing a game with three strikes already against you. It's like setting up hurdles in your path that you may never be able to jump. It's like a handicap of ten or fifteen years out of your life before you even start in the race."

What shall I say?

The Deity of Jesus

(Continued from page 7).

With his prophetic vision still attuned to his Father's will, he draws down the curtain of time in the face of all the world's corruption and its logical sequence of death to both body and spirit as he says of "mystery Babylon":

Babylon the great is fallen, is fallen, and is become the habitation of devils, and the hold of every foul spirit, and a cage of every unclean and hateful bird. . . . Therefore shall her plagues come in one day, death, and mourning, and famine; and she shall be utterly burned with fire: for strong is the Lord God who judgeth her.—Revelation 18: 2, 8.

In light of this great victory, it would not be surprising if the triumphant hosts of righteousness were joyously to march to the tune of some such hymn of praise as:

Mine eyes have seen the glory of the coming of the Lord,
He is trampling out the vintage where the grapes of wrath are stored,
He hath loosed the fateful lightning of his terrible swift sword.
His truth is marching on.

In the beauty of the lilies, Christ was born across the sea
With a glory in his bosom that transfigures you and me.
As he died to make men holy, let us die to make men free,
While God is marching on.

Of Such Is the Kingdom

By WINIFRED MILNER

JACK AND HIS MOTHER had finished evening prayers, and she had told him the story of David and Jonathan and listened while he read two stories in his second-grade reader. She was about to turn out the light when his strong little arms caught her in a tight hug. "G'night, Mom. I love you."

She held him close, feeling a sudden overwhelming gratitude because he was hers. "Good night, son. I love you, too." She kissed him, snapped out the light, and went down to her mending.

"He's still just a baby," she thought as she picked up one of his red socks and began filling in a large hole.

The hole had been neatly mended, and she was reaching for another sock when she saw Jack coming down the stairs.

"He's getting too big for his pajamas," she thought. His hair was rumpled and his eyes were full of sleep. Under one arm he carried a big slate they had bought together at the dime store. She remembered then that they were going to try out a new plan.

He came to her and carefully handed her the slate. When she took it, he yawned and rubbed sleep from his eyes with a fist that still bore signs of playing in the dirt, in spite of a bath.

"You forgot to look at this." He smiled sleepily and yawned again.

She pushed a lock of straight, brown hair out of his blue eyes and looked at the slate with its crooked white writing that he was so proud of. It was very good writing to have been done by a boy in the second grade.

Today I brot Mrs. Moyle her nuspaper. It was on the gras.

I went to the stor for Ruth and did not take the nikle she had for me.

I studied my lessons.

Her eyes read on down the list, while he stood watching with his face intent and serious. He was not sleepy now.

She turned the slate over.

"It's not good," he said softly. "I wish you didn't have to look at it." He leaned against her knee.

Frank's mama gave us kandy. I did not say thank you. I forgot to feed Miss Toby.

She read on until she noticed that his eyes were full of tears.

"Bring me the sponge off the kitchen sink," she said gently.

He brought it and she let him blot out all the white words he had so laboriously written there.

"The slate is clean now," she said. "You may start all over again tomorrow."

"I'm going to do better tomorrow."

"Of course you are dear."

He hugged her so tightly that it almost took her breath. His kiss tingled on her cheek. She watched him climb the stairs with his clean slate tucked under his arm. He walked victoriously with his head high and his shoulders straight. When he reached the top of the stairs, he turned to give her a big smile and wave good night. Then he disappeared into his bedroom.

She sat holding the damp sponge in her hand, and her own day came flooding into view with overpowering force. She saw her mistakes—time wasted—kind words and actions left undone. She had even repeated an ugly story because it was exciting. . . . A young girl would be made to suffer. She moved her lips and her words came softly. "Please, God. Help me wipe out my mistakes. Forgive my sins and allow me to start over with my slate clean tomorrow."

“And Power Was Given Unto Them”

A Prize-Winning Essay

By BARBARA McFARLANE

particles. He was far in advance of his day when he taught that matter was a formation of these particles. This exposition became known as the atomic theory and the small particles as atoms. The word carried a connotation in the Greek, meaning uncuttable, and this erroneous idea prevailed for many centuries after Democritus.

But the time and men were not ready for the theory of the atom, and it was first scoffed at and then forgotten—or almost forgotten. Not until the year 1808 did I resurrect the concept in the mind of an English schoolteacher, John Dalton, and from that time on, my chosen few worked through the years, slowly but unceasingly. Finally, the atom was “smashed” and ready to come forth for the use of man.

TO THE ROMANS I was known as Minerva. I was recognized by the Greeks under another name. The Babylonians respected my presence, and I was believed to be a part of the omniscient God of the Hebrews. Still I exist and will exist as long as men retain their intelligence.

Who am I? I am the force that has caused man of all ages to become restless and dissatisfied with the limits of his world. I lure him into the laboratory, across oceans, into new realms of daring thought, and, in the face of almost overwhelming derision, inspire him with a driving desire to create. I am no respecter of race or creed or personality. I see within the individual what no mortal can discern—his capacity for physical and intellectual travail; and I am the force in his environment that incites those latent qualities within him. He may abjure my presence, but I will not let him rest until he has given me expression.

My course of creation is slow, and its climax may come many centuries after I place the incipient idea in the mind of one of my chosen workmen. So it was with the thing of which I tell you now.

In the year 400 B. C., there lived in Greece a philosopher called Democritus. I saw within him those requisites so necessary for my work, and, thus, he conceived the hypothesis that the world consisted of empty space and an infinite number of small, invisible

LOOKING BACK NOW, men have determined that the Atomic Era began on December 2, 1942, in a converted squash court under the athletic field at the University of Chicago. At exactly 3:25 p.m., the first self-sustaining nuclear chain reaction was working.

December 2, 1942, a great day for me! The idea I had planted in the mind of Democritus in Greece so many centuries before had been brought to maturity. My responsibility was ended. I do not determine the destiny of those things created under my influence. They are given to mankind as passive instruments, and man is free to decide how he will use them—for his progress or for his destruction.

The hour of 3:25 p.m. A great hour for you, Dr. Vannevar Bush, Professor Albert Einstein, and Dr. Arthur Compton! But your responsibility is just beginning. Listen to me! It is in your hands now, and you have already made one decision to use it. “What had been Hiroshima was going up in a mountain of smoke,” reported Colonel Paul W. Tibbet, co-pilot of the plane that carried the first atomic bomb to Japan. That bomb had more power than 20,000 tons of TNT, and sixty per cent of the people of Hiroshima were killed. Ask the Japanese soldier who survived the conflagration about the people outdoors who were burned alive by the high temperature, and those inside who were buried by falling buildings. Ask him about the green vegetation that was scorched and the utter desolation of four and one-tenth square miles of the great city. Yes, the first page of the Atomic Era is written in the blood of those hundreds of thousands of people who lost their lives at Hiroshima and Nagasaki. It is done, right or wrong. It is done, and "let the dead past bury its dead."

The very practical problem facing you today, men of science, is the immediate safeguard for my puissant force. Let me set up the basic principles before you make the decisions that will determine the length of your civilization. You cannot subdue or forget this new potency, because I will not allow men to become lackadaisical of the culmination of my presence. The negative idea of "frightening" the world into peace will not prove successful, for it has been tried before. You did not heed my advice on this premise, Alfred Nobel, and warfare was made more terrible by the invention of dynamite. My inspiration is ubiquitous, and very soon men of other nations will hold this power in their hands as does the United States today; and the false security of a clandestine discovery will be gone. No, it is time now to forget the ways of the past and time to think in terms of a great partnership in which all the peoples of the earth must share. The old barriers of nationalism must be uprooted by every nation of the world. My intelligence, without disregard of segregated prejudices, is the essence of destruction.

LOOK TO THE FUTURE, gentlemen! Listen to Henry Stinson who knows what the atomic weapon can do! "Now with the release of atomic energy, man's ability to destroy himself is almost complete." If you continue in the ways of the past, you will surely destroy yourselves with this atomic power. Professor Einstein is cognizant of that consequence. "The release of atomic energy has not created a new problem. It has merely made more urgent the necessity of solving an existing one." You realize that you and your fellow scientists must find that solution. But you cannot do it alone. The people of the United States, the people of England, the people of Germany, the people of the whole world must help you. Men must live together harmoniously if they would live at all—but since the beginning of time there have been wars.

In the darkness with a great bundle of grief the people march.

In the night and overhead a shovel of stars for keeps, the people march: "Where to? What next?"

"Control of the atomic bomb will not keep the peace of the world. The heart and mind of man must be educated." These words came from the experience of a man who had seen the inhuman cruelty of a nation of educated minds. He spoke after living under the rule of the Japanese in the Philippine Islands. You spent $2,000,000,000 in the United States alone to perfect this weapon of destruction, and now the same effort must be put into educating the peoples of the world for the greater responsibility that is theirs. You can teach them the physics of my power; but unless you impart the philosophy, your efforts are in vain. You educators of the world must join with the men of science in establishing universal tranquillity. As you have the mind within your grasp, so also have you the heart, if you were only willing to recognize it.

TWO THOUSAND YEARS AGO there lived a teacher who taught a strange and impractical philosophy. It was impractical because it gave primary importance to the law of love—not a passive love but an active, motivating emotion that gave an affirmative answer to the question, "Am I my brother's keeper?" Men of that day thought it a dangerous belief, and the teacher paid for the ideal with his life. A few of his followers, inspired with the message, kept it alive; and from that small innovation, the idea grew and spread until today a great part of the peoples of the world bears the name of that humble teacher.

The civilized world is Christian in name only. The heart of that message of love has never been uncovered, so steeped in selfishness and hate is the structure of universal society. That order has devised the most barbarous and subversive method of settling disputes that can be conceived by the human mind—war. The best of the young men of the world are sacrificed on the fields of battle, sent by avowed followers of the man who came "that ye might have life and have it more abundantly." The insidious idea of racial superiority characterizes the organization that professes belief in "depart from me, ye that work iniquity." Leaders of nations, greedy for power and material gains, trample helpless countries and pray for success to the God who says, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." Yes, "the light shineth in darkness and the darkness comprehendeth it not."

Men of the Atomic Era of 1948, lift up your heads and follow the philosophy of that ancient teacher. His is the only way to save yourself from the tremendous power I have unloosed upon the world. Lift your eyes from the shadows of cupidity, hate, and selfishness, and utilize this new force in the light of love and worldwide brotherhood. And if you choose the illuminated way, you are promised, "That as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God."

New Horizons

Briefs

MUSCATINE, IOWA.—Louis G. Sager of Moline, Illinois, was guest speaker recently. His morning sermon was on "Divine Sonship," and in the afternoon, he led a round-table discussion. At the evening service, he presented an illustrated lecture on the life of Christ.

OREGON DISTRICT.—A district conference was held on March 26 and 27, at which eighteen delegates were elected for the coming General Conference. On Friday evening, the Lord's Supper was served to priesthood members and their wives at the Central East Side Church. Approximately 100 attended this impressive service, the worship center of which was a large cross and burning tapers. Classes were conducted on Saturday at First Church by Apostle R. E. Davey, Bishop M. E. Lasater, Missionary James Reneau, Elders Harold Carpenter and Miles Whiting, Mrs. Effie Verhei, and Mrs. Royce Chapman. The conference closed with a sermon by Apostle Davey, and members throughout the district returned to their home branches for Easter.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, IOWA.—Four years ago a girls choral group known as the Cecilian Singers was organized by Aleta Runkle. These girls sing each second Sunday of the month at the morning service, and each third Sunday at the evening service. For the past two years, Grace Doty has been their director and Olive Lainson, their accompanist. During this time, they have presented a minstrel show, giving three performances in Council Bluffs and neighboring towns. The proceeds were used to purchase white robes with gold-colored stoles.

EASTERN MICHIGAN DISTRICT.—Three branches, Owendale, Bay Port, and Caseville, participated in a class project which was under the direction of John Rogers. District President James Phillips also assisted in the presentation of the work. Another such class is being organized in the Sandusky area and will include five or six branches. It will be held on Sunday evenings.

NELSONVILLE, OHIO.—Twenty-five children participated in the program given Easter Sunday morning. At the church school hour, Carol Jean, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Warren Robinett, was blessed. In the evening, a candlelight service was presented under the direction of Ruth Ann Norris.

Helping Youth Grow

(Continued from page 9.)

It follows, then, that when we are helping children grow in character, to substitute consideration for others for self-interest, to make right decisions in the realm of conduct, and to build up wholesome and desirable habits, just so far are we making it possible for them to grow spiritually.

The experience of worship or the desire to pray may occur in a variety of situations—sometimes through stories, songs, or a table grace. Without the help of prayer, there can be no unity, for a family at prayer is a family at peace. Whatever experiences give the child a sense of security and a feeling of dependability will strengthen his belief in God.

As one of our great poets has said, "More things are wrought by prayer than this world dreams of."

The Seventy Present

(Continued from page 15.)

joy with him in the kingdom of my Father. And now, if your joy will be great with one soul that you have brought unto me, into the kingdom of my Father, how great will be your joy, if you should bring many souls unto me!—Doctrine and Covenants 16: 3, 4.

In the United States alone, there are approximately one hundred and forty million people to whom we must witness. In other parts of the world, there are two billion more people to whom we should be witnessing—"And again this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come."—Matthew 24: 32. To do this work, we need the power of the Spirit of God.

Therefore, Brethren of the Seventies, and Missionary Elders and Priests—every man to his post of duty. With ever-increasing spiritual power, and "as widely as we may," let us initiate a more spiritually empowered missionary ministry.

Home Management for the Veteran in College

(Continued from page 17.)

think $8 a month or $2 a week will give adequate insurance for a couple without children.

Amusement is our next item. Be it ever so small, some allowance should be put aside for amusement—say $2 a week. Amusement is essential: the same routine without diversion will create tension in home relationships.

If there is a car, allowance must be made for it too. The use of public conveyances will be less. To operate a car, one should figure about $5 a week or $20 a month. This will mean, of course, limited use, nor does it include personal tax assessment.

Last but not least is savings, which is determined by how much the veteran can afford to put away each month. Perhaps some of the allotments will have to be cut in order to put some money in the bank. This is advisable, as it is very important that some of each month's income be saved.

NOW that we have covered the planned output, let us figure the total. Food, rent, miscellaneous, clothing, insurance, amusement and car, totals $150 per month. I computed this on the assumption that either the wife works part time or the husband works after school. The amount of income will determine savings allowance, and let me again emphasize the importance of putting away some of the income for a rainy day.

Now we have a working budget. Try it for a few weeks. In so far as possible, set the amount needed and then stay within it; too many additional allowances will make the budget worthless.

Managing money can be an exciting game played by every member of a family. Friendliness, cooperation, love, and laughter go hand in hand with those who join the game.

BULLETIN BOARD

Priesthood Institute Canceled

The priesthood institute which was to have been held in Michigan on May 14, 15, and 16 has been canceled.

APOSTLE E. J. GLEAZER.

Michigan Youth Camp

The approval and co-operation of Apostle E. J. Gleazer and the district presidents having been secured, we are hereby giving official notice that the first Michigan Youth Camp will be held at the Park of the Pines, Michigan, June 20-27. It is anticipated that young people from each of the several districts of Michigan and the Northern Indiana District will be served by this camp.

Attendance at the camp is limited to boys and girls of high school age, namely fifteen to eighteen years. (A boy or girl who will be a sophomore during the year 1948-49 may be admitted. A few campers over eighteen years of age will be admitted, subject to the discretion of the director, to serve as assistants to the staff, with a view to their securing training and experience in camp leadership.)

Each camper will be required to pay the fee of $15 which will cover board, lodging, and all the educational services of the camp. It will not cover personal incidental expenses or transportation.

Application blanks are available through district presidents and local pastors. Applications should be filed with John Banks, 126 Townsend, Midland, Michigan. Registrations will be limited to not more than sixty-five campers, hence applications should be filed early to avoid disappointment.

Inquiries concerning the camp should be addressed to John Banks or to F. M. McDowell, the Auditorium, Independence, Missouri.

Camp officials thus far selected are: camp director, F. M. McDowell; assistant director, John Banks; and business manager, Allen Schreur. Steps are being taken to secure a trained and qualified staff.

Remember, camping is no longer a theory. Each and every youth camp has been an unqualified success. Attend one camp, and you are an enthusiastic camper forever!

F. M. McDOWELL,
General Director of Religious Education.

Blue Water Reunion

The Blue Water Reunion will be held July 24 to August 1, inclusive, at the reunion grounds in Lexington, Michigan.

W. BLAIR McCLAIN,
for the Committee.

Toronto District Church School Institute

A district church school institute will be held in Toronto, Ontario, on May 8 and 9 in conjunction with the district conference, at which delegates to the 1948 General Conference will be elected. The opening class session is scheduled for 3:45 p.m., Saturday, followed by classes at 7:30 and 8:30 in the evening. Sunday's services include a sermon at 10 a.m.; church school at 11:15; business meeting at 2:30 p.m.; panel-quiz discussion at 3:45; and preaching at 7 o'clock. Chris B. Hartshorn, editor of church school literature, will be guest speaker at the institute. A special invitation is extended to all church school workers in Ontario.

F. ELDON OLIVER,
District Director of Church Schools.

Northwestern Kansas District Conference

The Northwestern Kansas District Conference will be held at Alexander, Kansas, on May 8 and 9. Apostle D. T. Williams and Seventy Albert Loving are expected to be in attendance.

Chatham District Youth Convention

The Chatham District Youth Convention will be held at Chatham, Ontario, on April 24 and 25. Elder Almer Sheehy of London will be the guest speaker. A branch young people's leaders' meeting is scheduled for 4 p.m. on Saturday; registration will begin at 5:30, followed by a banquet at 7. Sunday's services include a fellowship meeting, classes, and preaching.

J. A. PRAY,
District President.

Change of Address

J. C. McConaughy
952 May Court
Akron, Ohio

Wants to Contact Member

Mrs. Tom Peacock, Evergreen, Alabama, is anxious to locate Mrs. Howard Walker, formerly of Quincy, Massachusetts. She will appreciate hearing from anyone who knows Mrs. Walker's present address.

Books Wanted

Vernes Collins, Centerton, Indiana, wants to purchase the following books: G. T. Griffith's Instructor and Exegesis of the Priesthood, F. H. Edwards' Missionary Sermon Studies, J. S. Roth's Gospel Messenger, Volumes II and IV of Church History, Parson's Textbook, and the Priesthood Manual. Please state price and condition of books before sending.

Missionary James Menzies, Box 252, Pleasant Hill, Illinois, needs the following books: Luff's The Old Jerusalem Gospel and Autobiography of Elder Joseph Luff; Into the Latter Day Light, by J. J. Cornish, and all four volumes of Church History. Please state price and condition of books before mailing.

"Heralds" Wanted

Cora Emerson, 904 South Wayland, Sioux Falls, South Dakota, will appreciate receiving copies of the April 10 issue of the Herald for distribution purposes.

REQUESTS FOR PRAYERS

George H. Roberson, 320 South Maple, McPherson, Kansas, asks the prayers of the Saints that he might be given direction on a problem which faces him.

Sarah G. Selbe, Route 2, Box 39, Phillipsburg, Kansas, asks to be remembered in prayer. She has chronic diabetes.

Prayers are requested for Mary Bowling of Maquoketa, Iowa. She is losing her sight and feels there is no hope for her except divine healing.

Mrs. Roy Turner, Route 1, Haskell, Oklahoma, requests prayers for a little neighbor girl, Ganelle Howerton, who has a heart ailment. Mrs. Turner, a new member, also asks the prayers of the Saints for herself.

Mrs. E. B. James, 112 McMillian Street, Evergreen, Alabama, asks the prayers of the Saints that she might be healed, if it is God's will, of her affliction.

Mrs. Catherine Johnson, Box 395, Live Oak, California, asks the prayers of the Saints for her husband who is greatly opposed to the church.

Mrs. Ida Millen, 2709 Dakota Avenue, Flint 6, Michigan, asks for prayers that she may be healed if it is God's will. At present she is unable to do her work or take an active part in church activities.

Reunion Schedule-1948

E. Montana	Jun. 19-Jun. 27	Fairview, Mont.
Texas	Jun. 25-July 4	Bandera, Texas
Owen Sound & Toronto	Jun. 26-July 4	Port Elgin, Ont.
New York & Philadelphia	July 3-July 11	Deer Park
Southwest Kansas	July 3-July 11	Arkansas City, Kansas
Gulf States	July 9-July 18	Brewton, Ala.
W. Colorado	July 10-July 11	Delta, Colorado
Central Missouri	July 10-July 18	Odessa, Missouri
Alberta	July 16-July 26
Zion	July 17-July 25	Gardner Lake
Nauvoo	July 17-July 25	Nauvoo, Illinois
So. New England	July 17-July 25	Onset, Mass.
Northern California	July 17-July 25	Asilomar, Monterey, California
Flint-Pt. Huron-Detroit-Windsor	July 24-Aug. 1	Blue Water, Michigan
Kentucky & Tennessee	July 25-Aug. 1	Paris, Tennessee
Northwest	July 30-Aug. 8	Silver Lake, Washington
Chatham-London	July 30-Aug. 8	Erie Beach, Ontario, Canada
Ken. & So. Michigan	July 31-Aug. 8	Liahona Park
Mo. Valley	July 31-Aug. 8	Woodbine, Iowa
Maine	July 31-Aug. 8	Brooksville, Me.
So. California	July 31-Aug. 8	Pacific Palisades
Reunion of the Ozarks	Aug. 1-Aug. 8	Racine, Missouri
No. & West. Michigan	Aug. 5-Aug. 15	Park of the Pines
Kirtland	Aug. 6-Aug. 15	Kirtland, Ohio
Oklahoma	Aug. 7-Aug. 15	Pawnee, Okla.
W. Montana	Aug. 7-Aug. 15	Race Track, Montana
Arizona	Aug. 8-Aug. 15	Prescott, Arizona
Arkansas & Louisiana	Aug. 9-Aug. 15	Clear Fork Cp., Hot Spgs., Ark.
Wisconsin & Minnesota	Aug. 9-Aug. 16	Chetek, Wisc.
Far West	Aug. 12-Aug. 22	Stewartsville, Missouri
So. Indiana	Aug. 13-Aug. 22
Eastern Michigan	Aug. 14-Aug. 22	Cash, Michigan
Idaho	Aug. 14-Aug. 21	Hagerman, Idaho
Des Moines	Aug. 15-Aug. 21	Guthrie Center, Iowa
Lamoni	Aug. 15-Aug. 22	Lamoni, Iowa
S. E. Illinois	Aug. 20-Aug. 29	Brush Creek, Ill.
Eastern Colorado	Aug. 20-Aug. 29	Colorado Springs, Colorado

Prayers are requested for Mrs. Anna Samuel and Miss Ethel Samuel, both of Lapeer, Michigan, and Mrs. Clarice Farreil of Chico, California.

DEATHS

DEPEW.—Elsie, daughter of A. P. and Elvira Cantrell, was born February 17, 1868, at Dalton, Georgia, and died September 11, 1947, in Kansas City, Missouri, of a heart attack. She had been a member of the Reorganized Church since her childhood.

She leaves her husband, Charles I. Depew of Rich Hill, Missouri; five daughters: Mrs. H. A. Bachman and Mrs. Leslie Owen of Rich Hill; Mrs. Ed Linter of Horton, Missouri; Mrs. L. I. Whetton and Mrs. O. A. Butler of Kansas City; a son, C. M. Depew, also of Kansas City; a sister, Mrs. Fred Hoelderie of Rich Hill; a brother, E. S. Cantrell of Archie, Missouri; eleven grandchildren; and eighteen great-grandchildren. The funeral was held at Central Church in Kansas City, Pastor J. C. Stuart officiating. Burial was in Floral Hills Cemetery.

DEPEW.—Charles I., son of Ezra and Rebecca Depew, was born January 1, 1866, in Montana, and died March 21, 1948, in the Nevada Hospital, Nevada, Missouri. Early in life, he moved with his parents to southeastern Kansas. On April 18, 1886, he was married to Elsie Cantrell, who preceded him in death six months ago. Following the death of his wife, he made his home with his children. He had been a member of the Reorganized Church since April 18, 1875.

Surviving are five daughters: Mrs. Hattie Bachman and Mrs. Edna Owens of Rich Hill, Missouri; Mrs. Lela Butler and Mrs. Fern Willow of Kansas City, Missouri; and Mrs. Ruth Lintner of Horton, Missouri; a son, Chauncy Depew; one brother, Melvin Depew; fourteen grandchildren; and twenty-one great-grandchildren. Funeral services were conducted at Rich Hill by Elder Arlie Allen. Burial was in Kansas City, Missouri.

Mary A. Burlington
1510½ Jules
St. Joseph, Missouri

BROONER.—Harry Arthur, son of Martha and Henry Brooner, was born November 2, 1877, near Pekin, Illinois, and died at his home in Fort Scott, Kansas, on January 18, following a heart attack. He had been a resident of Fort Scott for the past two years, moving there from Willow Springs, Missouri, where he was well known as a dairyman. He was married to Lucy Meinecke on September 6, 1925, and was baptized into the Reorganized Church the following year.

He leaves his wife; eight children, and two step-children. The funeral was held at the Reorganized Church in Fort Scott, Elders Dale Crowa and C. C. Martin officiating. Interment was in the Mapleton, Kansas, Cemetery.

MORGAN.—Lydia Preston, was born May 30, 1885, in Hitchcock County, Nebraska, and died March 2, 1948. She united with the Reorganized Church at the age of seventeen, and was married to Edward Morgan on February 13, 1921.

Besides her husband, she leaves four sisters: Mrs. Sarah A. Pittinger, Knob Noster, Missouri; Mrs. Sylvia Snodgrass, Elsinore, California; Mrs. Mattie Pittinger, Mountain Grove, Missouri; and Mrs. Carrie E. Herman, Harshaw, Wisconsin; and one brother, George Preston, Kansas City, Missouri. Funeral services were held at the Reorganized Church in Knob Noster, Elder J. T. Nutt officiating. Burial was in the Knob Noster cemetery.

GOODWIN.—Maggie M. Vanderflute, was born January 20, 1872, at Amsterdam, Holland, and died March 6, 1948, at St. Joseph, Missouri. She came to America when she was one year old. In 1889, she was baptized into the Reorganized Church at Lamoni; the following year, she married William Goodwin. Six children were born to this marriage, all of whom survive. They are: Mrs. Harry Hadden of St. Joseph; Mrs. Basil Shoots of Reynolds, Nebraska; Glen and Ray Goodwin of Tucson, Arizona; George of Long Beach, California; and Jack of Milwaukee, Wisconsin. Also surviving are two sisters: Mrs. Arthur Wood, Salt Lake City, Utah, and Mrs. Harve Davenport, Lamoni, Iowa; three brothers: Isaac and William of Lamoni, and Webe Vanderflute of Kellerton, Iowa; fourteen grandchildren; and four great-grandchildren. Funeral services were conducted by Elders Harold Felch and R. Melvin Russell. Interment was in Ashland Cemetery in St. Joseph.

VERNON.—Mrs. Frances, was born at Weston, West Virginia, on May 22, 1861, and died at her home in Mount Hope, West Virginia, on February 24, 1948. She has been a member of the Reorganized Church for twenty-eight years. At the age of sixteen, she was married to George Echols; eight children were born to this union, seven of whom preceded her in death. Later, she married Abner Vernon; eight children were born to this marriage also, three of whom preceded her in death. Mr. Vernon passed away thirty-two years ago. During her life, Sister Vernon proved herself a woman of sterling quality; her home was always open to missionaries.

Surviving are three daughters: Mrs. Effie Burnside, Parkersburg, West Virginia; Mrs. Libbie E. Young, Charleston, West Virginia; and Mrs. Dollie Merritt, Perry, Florida; two sons: E. E. Vernon of Perry and A. M. Vernon of St. Louis, Missouri; two sisters: Lettie Ashworth, Clarksburg, West Virginia, and Victoria Leroy of Arkansas; a brother, George Fox of Flemington, West Virginia; twenty-eight grandchildren; thirty-nine great-grandchildren; and one great-great-grandchild.

MORE.—Izora Eblin, was born in San Bernardino, California, in 1859, and died March 6, 1948, at her home in Colton, California, where she had lived for many years. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Dustin, who came to California in 1849. She united with the Reorganized Church in the early 1860's, maintaining her faith in its divinity throughout life.

She is survived by a son, Hiram H. More of Colton; a daughter, Mabel Caldwell of Los Angeles, California; four grandchildren; and seven great-grandchildren. Elder George H. Wixom was in charge of the funeral service, Elder H. C. Ferguson assisting. Interment was in the San Bernardino Pioneer Cemetery.

92867

18
h

Announcing: the new

TDC Vivid Projector

150 Watt Model B
$39.75

300 Watt Model C
$49.70

300 Watt Model D with fan cooling unit
$62.20

lift off carrying case $8.50

A NEW APPROACH TO THE PROBLEM OF ADEQUATE EQUIPMENT

CONVERTIBILITY: The new line of T.D.C.-VIVID Projectors is designed to enable a purchaser to start with a quality basic unit at a moderate price—and later convert to a higher wattage or add other refinements as his needs change. When you choose the 150-watt Model B, you can convert it at any time to the 300-watt Model C or the Model D (300-watts with fan) simply by returning your original model to the factory and paying the difference between the retail price of the model you want and the model you have. You don't trade-in or discard your original model. You merely return it to the factory for conversion.

FILMSTRIPS: A filmstrip head will be available for this machine within ninety days. It will fit in place of the lens cone and slide carrier.

FUNCTIONAL ADVANTAGES

SLIDE CARRIER: Shutter type self-centering slide carrier. Slides feed from right and eject from left.

FOCUSING: Smooth, positive action focusing knob for Micro-Focus lens control.

TILTING: Up or down, instant action, positive lock control.

APPEARANCE: Styled by industrial designers for ultra smart lines and eye appeal.

CONSTRUCTION: Die-cast zinc alloys for structural strength and appearance.

OPTICAL SYSTEM: 5" f/3.5 anastigmat lens. Extra large (60 mm) heat resistant Pyrex condenser lens. Neutral tint heat ray filter. Extra large lens tube with light baffles to prevent internal reflections which cause a halo around the picture.

Coated Lens $2.50 Extra

Coated Condensing System $5.00 Extra for further information write to

Visual Aids Department

Herald Publishing House
Independence, Missouri

LET THE YOUNG MEN AND MAIDENS CULTIVATE
THE GIFTS OF MUSIC.—
Doctrine and Covenants.

Photo by Clifford Carver

The Saints' Herald

VOLUME 95

MAY 1, 1948

NUMBER 18

www.LatterDayTruth.org

"... and Use Therein Instruments of Music"

P. S.

* GRACELAND ON THE AIR

The Graceland College A Cappella Choir may be heard from 4 to 4:30 p.m. on Station KFRM (550 kilocycles) on Sunday, May 2. The College Concert Band will be featured on this same date from 10:15 to 10:45 p.m. on Station KMBC (980 kilocycles).

* CANADIAN CUSTOMS

The homes of the cities of Canada are sturdily built, and a great many of the new structures going up in Ontario are of brick. They are compactly and tidily set close together, not observing the recent custom in the States of sprawling comfortably out on a wide frontage.

Canadian tables are generally set with fine chinaware, some of it made there, some imported from England. The bone china, the Wedgwood, Spode, Royal Doulton, and others make beautiful settings. When serving refreshments, the people have the delightful custom of using what they call "odd cups and saucers." This means that each cup and saucer is beautifully painted to harmonize, but different from every other cup and saucer set. If one is broken, there is no set of dishes to be spoiled, as a new one can be purchased. A pretty cup and saucer make a fine gift for a birthday, a holiday, or appreciation for some service. Visitors from the States are quick to admire this custom, and generally bring a number of pieces back with them when they return home. Such china makes a pretty display in a cabinet or on a sideboard. And those who know say that good food tastes better out of fine dishes.

Some Canadian Saints have the custom of serving two desserts. At this time of the year they usually have a pitcher of their delicious maple syrup, which they bring on at the end of the meal. The visitor fills up all odd corners with this delicacy, thinking it is all he will get. Then they bring on pie or cake! Let nobody think he is going to reduce while visiting in Canada. Very good meals are served in beautiful public dining rooms at costs lower than in the States.

In the beautiful dining room of the William Pitt Hotel in Chatham, Ontario, there is a fine picture in color of His Majesty George VI. When the Rotary Club met there, the president arose at a certain point in the program, water glass in hand, and said, "Gentlemen, the King!" They all stood, and in deep-throated unison responded, "The King!" Later, we sang, "God Save the King," and I felt sure they meant every word of it. One observes that many of the great roads are "King's Highways," with the Crown at the top of each marker. One of the finest trafficways is dedicated to the Queen, and marked "E. R." It is true that some years ago our newspapers made something of the conversion of the British Empire into the British Commonwealth of Nations. As long as the spiritual unity of these great peoples is symbolized in so many ways, a world in danger can look to them to keep their bonds of relationship strong and help to stabilize things. What better symbols could they have of their cultural unity and of their mutual determination to preserve the freedom they enjoy?

Everywhere in Canada, one sees boys and girls, men and women, riding about on bicycles, which they do easily and gracefully, gliding swiftly along. Their wheels are light, the tires small and easy to propel. Very different from the balloon tires and heavy, clumsy frames overladen with gadgets used in the States. Ours are so hard to push, it is no wonder we dislike them, or get small gas motors to run them. A motorized bike loses all its value for wholesome exercise, and the rider becomes sluggish and fat.

RESTORATION SCRIPTURE is clear on the matter of music in the church. But owing to the stringent requirements placed upon the musician who would strive for excellence, and perhaps because many of our groups have been small, for other reasons, it has not always been true that we have followed some of the clear instruction received.

There is, for example, the counsel: "... that the worship in the house of the Lord may be complete and wholly acceptable, let them who shall be moved thereto by a desire and the gift to sing take upon them the burden and care of the service, and use therein instruments of music of the reed and of the string, or instruments of brass in congregations that are large, and as wisdom and choice may direct."

This is coupled with the more often quoted passage in the same place which suggests: "Let the young men and the maidens cultivate the gifts of music and of song; let not the middle-aged and the old forget the gladness of their youth and let them aid and assist so far as their cares will permit."

At Graceland College, the above quoted instructions have opportunity for a measure of fulfillment. The cover picture shows a portion of the Graceland College Concert Band, an organization in which the "instruments of music of the reed and . . . of brass" find expression. Director of this organization is William Graves who has written an article on church music which appears elsewhere in this issue.

Eligible persons who have had training in musical instruments, or who desire to begin such training, are invited to investigate the opportunities offered at Graceland to "cultivate the gifts of music and of song." Applications are now being received for admission to Graceland College for the school year of 1948-49, which begins September 10.

IN THIS ISSUE

EDITORIAL:

New Strength 3

OFFICIAL:

Foreign Appointments 4
 Change in Erie Beach Reunion Committee 4
 Opportunities at the Sanitarium 4

ARTICLES:

On Being Profitable to God, by Apostle Charles R. Hield 5
 Letters 9
 Congregational Singing, by William Graves 10
 Other Sheep I Have Which Are Not of This Fold, by Roy Weldon 12
 Briefs 15
 Finding My Place Through Service, by Mrs. Robert Farnham 16
 Finger-Play Stories, by Lena Wells Jones 17
 Worship Suggestions for June, by Berna Zerr 18
 Education in the Shadow of War, by F. Carl Mesle 20
 Trouble-shooter, Answer by Evan A. Fry 21
 Bulletin Board 22

New Strength

The Joint Council meetings that ended on Wednesday, April 21, have continued the evidence of strength and vitality that is manifested nearly everywhere in the work of the church. In the official announcement (page 4, this issue) notice is given to the church of the appointment of Apostle Blair Jensen to take the place of Apostle Myron A. McConley in charge of the European Mission, and of the appointment of Apostle Roscoe E. Davey to the Australasian Mission. It is anticipated that a statement from the First Presidency will soon appear to give news of other actions of the Joint Council.

The Restoration Festival has had an excellent observance in most of the branches of the church. Reports are received of the active participation of the young people everywhere in the programs and in the raising of funds for the Missions Abroad project. A detailed report may be expected later, as returns are still far from complete, except to indicate a general success in the effort.

A new generation of workers is giving its strength to the tasks of the church. Many of them are sons and daughters of church families; at the same time, a surprising number are converts whose families have had no previous connection with the church. Better opportunity for educational, professional, and cultural development makes it possible for these young people to give a fine contribution to church work, leadership, and activity. In nearly every congregation we find some who are members of the professions—doctors, dentists, teachers, nurses—or prospering business people, engineers, or agriculturists. The strength and support of these able members is a great help to every branch where they serve. They do a high quality of work in the church, they help to improve the public relations of the congregation in the community, and they win favorable recognition for the church everywhere.

Some years ago, there was a serious concern among those who then carried the burden of church responsibility, as to whether the coming generation of young people would be interested in the church, and as devoted to it as their parents were. Those young people have now given the answer for themselves. They are interested and devoted. Wherever they have been given encouragement and an opportunity to serve, they have responded splendidly. This is not saying that the hope of retaining our young people has been uniformly successful everywhere. Some are lost. Some congregations and officers do not give them any encouragement or opportunity to serve. But it is true that many a church could not work effectively today without the help of the fine young people who have demonstrated their loyalty and ability.

Wherever we travel, we find these splendid second and third generation members of church families, along with converts, giving fine service to the church. With a growing interest among younger people, the church looks hopefully to the future.

Bishop C. A. Skinner, working under the Presiding Bishopric, has done a fine work in preserving and beautifying our church historical properties, especially at Nauvoo. Those who have a chance to look at some of the old photographs of the buildings there will realize how much has been done to protect them and enhance their fundamentally beautiful qualities. Thousands of people see these historic properties, and a fine work is done there in telling the story of the Restoration to visitors who know little or nothing about it. Some come back many times, bringing friends with them.

Brother Skinner is a lover of beauty, particularly where it concerns church properties. He is anxious that every congregation of church people should care for their church buildings and beautify them. Paint and landscaping can do wonders for a church. A smoothly cut lawn, a few good shade trees, and bushes well placed can make even a plain building appear neat and attractive.

A few years ago we received a picture of a church building that had good lines and quality, but the picture could not be used because the yard was in utter neglect. We sent it back with the note, "This church looks as if nobody loves it. Plant some bushes and send us another picture when you get it properly fixed." We have often remembered that church, and hope that the members will do the little work necessary to make it beautiful. It would be a pleasure to see another picture of it, properly landscaped. Strangers and friends will gladly come to an attractive church. The condition of the church reflects the spiritual condition of the congregation.

Thoughts. A friend said to me, "Under the divine love, every spiritual problem can be solved. With human love, every problem of the home can be solved. With fraternal love, every problem of the church can be solved."

With Christian love, everything will come out all right. Without it, nothing can come out right.

Men have pursued the mystery of life through every physical creation, down to the smallest units of matter, the molecule, the atom, and the electron. But always it has eluded them. Now they suspect that the secret is not to be found in any material, but in the cosmic ray that comes out of space with no apparent origin. And we stand hopefully on the sidelines saying to them, "Look again, Brother, look again. God is there." L. J. L.

Editorial

Foreign Appointments
European and Australasian

Since world travel limitations largely persist, and in order that those of the Quorum of Twelve affected may make timely and adequate preparation of personal and family affairs, the First Presidency made the following appointments, as announced to the Joint Council on Friday, April 16.

As soon after General Conference to be held October 3 to 10 as practicable, Apostle D. Blair Jensen will take charge of the European Mission, relieving Apostle Myron A. McConley, who with Sister McConley will return to America in September. Brother Jensen's wife, daughter, Dona, and son, Blair, will accompany him.

Apostle Roscoe E. Davey is appointed to the Australasian Mission, which includes New Zealand. He and Sister Davey and daughter, Donna Fay, will leave for Australia by way of Hawaii immediately after General Conference by steamer or plane as may be deemed expeditious or advisable.

It is contemplated that these appointments will require our brethren and their families to remain overseas for a term of years.

Change in Erie Beach Reunion Committee

In view of the inability of Apostle D. Blair Jensen to be present at the Erie Beach Reunion (July 30 to August 8), it has been agreed with Brother Jensen that Elder John F. Sheehy shall act as chairman of the reunion committee.

For similar reasons, it has been agreed that Elder Jerome F. Wildermuth shall act as chairman of the Kirtland Reunion Committee (August 6 to 15).

THE FIRST PRESIDENCY,
Israel A. Smith.

Attention is called to the following letter concerning openings on the Staff of the Independence Sanitarium and Hospital:

Dear President Smith:

The Sanitarium School of Nursing is losing three instructors this Spring. We are wondering if you might know of any eligible church girls who would like to fill these positions. To date, we have been able to fill only one of the vacancies. The positions vacant are:

(1) Medical-Surgical classroom instructor, whose duties are to teach medical nursing, surgical nursing, Pharmacology, Mathematics of drugs and solutions; relieve part time in the nursing office, and help the students with some of their extra curricular activities. She must be a registered nurse, preferably with a degree in nursing education, or at least post graduate clinical experiences and education in medical or surgical nursing.

(2) A clinical instructor, who is really a nursing arts assistant helping to supervise the students on the ward, helping to teach nurse aids, helping with the student health program and various extra curricular activities. This individual should be a registered nurse with a degree in nursing education, or at least some post graduate education and experience.

These positions are open to women who want to work in the church hospital with student nurses and among many other church people. This is an opportunity to serve the church young people, and at the same time carry on a useful, professional life. We would appreciate any help from you in filling these vacancies on our school faculty.

Also, we would like to remind you that we are now taking applications for the fall class of student nurses. Requirements for a student nurse are: age, seventeen and one-half to thirty-five years; high school graduate, upper half of class; good physical and mental health; good character references.

Sincerely yours,

Gertrude E. Copeland, R.N.
Superintendent of Hospital

Vida E. Butterworth, R.N. M.A.
Educational Director

VEB:JF

THE SAINTS' HERALD

Volume 95

May 1, 1948

Number 18

EDITORS: The First Presidency: Israel A. Smith, John F. Garver, F. Henry Edwards.

ASSISTANTS: Leonard J. Lea, Managing Editor; Kenneth L. Graham, Business Manager.

The Saints' Herald is the official publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, with headquarters at The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri, and is issued through the offices of Herald Publishing House, 103 South Osage Street, Independence, Missouri.

Entered as second-class matter at the post office at Independence, Missouri, under Act of March 3, 1879. Issued weekly at Independence, Missouri. Price, $3.50 per year and $1.75 for six months in advance in the U. S. A., its territories and possessions; Canada, $3.75 per year and $1.90 for six months; other countries, $4.50 per year. Notice of a change of address must be given three weeks ahead of the date that it is to become effective. Accepted for mailing at the special rate of postage provided for in section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized July 21, 1921. Printed in the United States of America.

On Being Profitable to God

"... cast ye, the unprofitable servant into outer darkness."—Matthew 25: 30.

By Apostle Charles R. Hield

THE CHRIST FOUND it difficult to teach people here upon the earth what the kingdom of heaven was like and the type of society which he knew there. In the latter part of his ministry, he tried to teach the people with whom he came in contact, by means of parables or stories, the standard of life and laws in the kingdom of heaven.

Those who have been in a foreign country and tried to tell the natives, even in their own tongue, some of the customs here in the United States, will realize how difficult it is for a people, who have never seen a football game, for example, to visualize the action of one of these athletic contests. I noted the difficulty a teacher had down in the state of Chiapas, Mexico, trying to teach some young boys the game of baseball. In Edmonton, Canada, I witnessed a game of cricket. I thought I knew all about the game as I watched it, but when I came home and tried to tell my boy and my girl how it was played, I had difficulty in describing the game so they could visualize the playing field. The meadow was not laid out like a diamond, as we have in baseball; the bat had a different shape; and one fellow seemed to be able to stay at bat as long as he could keep the ball from bouncing and hitting the wicket. Many of us remember the movie entitled The Story of Dr. Wassell, in which one of the wounded servicemen by the name of "Hoppie" has great difficulty trying to explain to his native nurse how they played baseball back in Arkansas.

SO THE CHRIST, having come from the kingdom of heaven, having lived there with God and being a special ambassador from the Courts of Glory, found it difficult to make people understand what the kingdom was like. They were not accustomed to that method of living and action and found it hard to comprehend. Christ, therefore, used parables. He took one feature of life in the kingdom of heaven and tried to explain kingdom standards in word pictures so that the people would understand it in terms of their own experience. He told stories: of the rich man and Lazarus; of the unrighteous steward; of a man who made a great supper, only to find his invited friends making excuses why they could not attend; of a certain vineyard keeper who had a fig tree which was not bearing fruit; of a rich farmer who tore down his barns in order to build greater ones; the account of the good Samaritan, etc. He compared himself to a vine with his Father as the husbandman, and the people as branches. "... the branch cannot bear fruit of itself except it abide in the vine."

One of these parables is the source of our text. It is known as the parable of the talents. Here a lord gave his servants different talents. To one he gave five talents; to another, two talents; and to another, one talent. In this parable, the Christ attempts to teach us something about the standard of values in the kingdom of heaven from which he came, and to which most of us would like to go at the end of this life.

From this Biblical use of the word "talent" has come our accepted meaning of the word, which has the value of referring to any ability that a person may have. We say, for instance, that a person is talented. A talent in Christ's time, however, meant a great sum of money, as much as a laborer could earn in twenty years.

IT IS IMPORTANT to realize that these talents were given to the different servants. It is equally important for our civilization today that we realize the many things God gives to us. It would be quite a task, would it not, if we had to break down the volcanic mountains as they were left after the formation of the earth? The wind, rain, freezing and thawing, have eroded the rock into soil permitting vegetation to grow. If we had to put all of the mineral elements in the soil, it would be quite a job, wouldn't it? Man can make water by combining hydrogen and oxygen, but it is a very costly method; we often do not appreciate what God has made possible for us in rain. When we have a coal strike, or the electric light plants shut down, or there is a shortage of wood, oil, or gas, we realize immediately the need of heat. Now scientists are saying that all combustion, all fire and heat, is a type of atomic energy. Man has not been able to create the elements, and we should be very grateful to God that he has created coal and oil so that we are able to use water power to turn our electric turbines, etc. The sun is the great source of heat, growth, and life in the world. Were it to be removed for only a few hours, the world would soon freeze and die. How valuable, therefore, is the gift of God in heat, atomic power, or whatever we may finally call it. Furthermore, man has been unable to put the elements together and make life. We can, in the laboratory, make an object that looks like an egg. It may have a shell like an egg; it may have yolk and white like an egg; it may be scientifically composed of exactly the same chemical elements; but this synthetic egg, put under a hen, merely rots and does not hatch. The life-giving qualities of trees, grass and animals, are fairly well understood by man, but life itself comes from God. Christians who believe in God and Christ should be particularly appreciative of these great gifts which God has made available for his creation. It is estimated that God provides between ninety-five and ninety-seven per cent of everything that we have. We do very little of the work, comparatively, which makes possible our whole economic system. Evidently in the kingdom of heaven, the citizens realize the source of life and the gifts which they enjoy and are grateful for them.

NOTICE THAT THE LORD in the parable gave talents to everybody. The fifteenth verse of this twenty-fifth chapter of Matthew says, "He gave . . . to every man according to his several ability." Some people who are perplexed about life come to youth camps and conferences. They would like to contribute to world betterment, and the kingdom of God, but do not know how to start. They feel inadequate for the task. They suffer from an inferiority complex. They are sure that they have no talent whatsoever. From this parable, it would seem quite obvious that God has given talent to all people. One of the main tasks of Christian ministry is to lift people to higher ground and convince them that with God's help they can do great things and accomplish much good. I have never met an individual who didn't have a talent of some kind.

This parable would also seem to indicate that God and Christ recognize that all men are not created equal, as far as their talents are concerned. Some people are born in regions where the quality of the soil is deficient in vital elements, and this lack is communicated to them through their food. Some areas of the United States had a much larger rejection for military service during World War II than other areas. Some children are born into better homes than are other children. I know of a case in Oklahoma where two little Indian children were brought to an institution for the mentally ill. They had been found by the state health authorities living in a cave and having only wormy corn to eat. The nurse there told us that it would be some years, if ever, before these children could again develop normal health and mentality. A disease had crept into their muscular tissues and nervous systems. Some children are born into fine, cultured Christian homes, while others start life in an environment of sin, crime, filth, and godlessness. While some may have advantages over others when they come to this earth, the quality of the love which God has for us all is the same. We all are equally loved. We all have a like opportunity to receive divine approval if we use the talents we have as God wishes.

IT ALSO SEEMS to be clear that the measurement of success in the kingdom of heaven is not what many use as a yardstick here. It is not cleverness, nor wealth, nor fame, but faithfulness in using the talents which we have for the growth and advancement of the kingdom of God.

In speaking of these three men, the five-talent fellow, the two-talent fellow, and the one-talent fellow, Christ was talking about men who were laborers on a big estate. They recognized the rule of their lord. They knew from whom they had received the contributions. They accepted the gratuities, and all of them seemed to be aware of a responsibility for the use of these talents. They expected to give an accounting later to their benefactor. We do not know exactly what the five-talent fellow did. He was a very skilled trader, perhaps. He may have followed the movements of the caravans and supplied the needs of the many Roman troops which were in his country. Obviously he bought and sold with quite a bit of skill. At least he increased his five talents to ten talents.

The two-talent fellow probably was a blunt and honest man, having none of the quick trading genius of the five-talent man. He may have rented some land and worked hard. At least he increased his two talents to four talents. To the five-talent man the lord said, when he returned, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant! Thou hast been faithful over a few things; I will make thee ruler over many things: enter thou into the joy of thy lord." We must notice also carefully that exactly the same words, the same approbation, were given by the lord to the two-talent steward as was given to the five-talent servant. The quality of the second man's faithfulness over that entrusted to him was judged equal to the trustworthiness of the man granted the larger number of talents. If Christians wish approval of their Lord and their Master, they, too, must learn to be faithful over the talent or talents with which they have been entrusted. This means that one of the standards of measurements in the kingdom of heaven is faithfulness—not merely the amount of talents which you have at the end of life, but what you have done with the talents entrusted to you. This seems to correspond with Paul's statement as he speaks of the responsibility of stewardship, for he says, "it is required in stewards, that a man be found faithful."—I Corinthians 4: 2. To the widow who cast her farthing (two mites) into the temple treasury, Jesus said that she had "cast more in, than all they which have cast into the treasury." In the kingdom of heaven, there will be, therefore, no penalty for poverty of original endowment. Neither will there be great acclaim because of large initial aptitudes. God knows whether we have five, ten, or fifteen talents, or only one; and he is expecting us to improve upon such talents as we have for the profitability of his kingdom here upon the earth. Surely the judgments of God are without flaw.

THE MAIN FEATURE of the parable, however, is that the spotlight may fall upon the man with one talent. It is hard for us to understand exactly why he did not improve upon his gift. It may have been because of jealousy, because he was not given two or five. We all know people who are jealous of others with more talent. All cannot be president of the United States; all cannot be captain of the team; all cannot play first violin; all cannot be chairman of the board.

One thing we do know about the one-talent fellow is that he misjudged his lord. In his own mind, he had pictured his lord as a hard man, a taskmaster, reaping where he had not sown, and gathering where he had not planted. His excuse also was that he was afraid of the lord.

That alibi is not particularly a new excuse for unfaithfulness in building the kingdom. Many people rationalize an excuse for not serving God. They say they are "too busy" with their own affairs. Why should they contribute to the building of someone else's kingdom—even God's? Why should they increase his wealth? What are they to get out of it? The success or failure of God's kingdom, what does that mean to them?

We should think more carefully what the wealth of God and Christ is. God knows the location of all of the coal, gold, platinum and uranium in the world. He is the lord of all land. He is not primarily interested in cattle and stock. The wealth of God cannot be calculated by huge inventories of jewelry, fur, or clothes. The riches of God cannot be computed in assessed valuation of factories or stocks and bonds. Bank statements will not show where his treasure is. The most sought after mineral today is the uranium ore with which atomic bombs are made. Some have conjectured that the huge sun spots which are visible through the telescope at the time of eclipses of the sun are caused by atomic explosions of uranium on the sun. A little careful thinking, however, and we can but realize that the wealth of God and Christ is not found in minerals. It is not found in stars or on the moon. God and Christ never brag of their material possessions.

This reminds me of the case at one of our round tables, in which a man challenged a number of us to prove to him that he did not own his property. Of course, during his lifetime, a man does hold legal deed to his property, and his title is recorded at our county seats. As far as our law jurisdiction is concerned, he is entitled to the use and management of this property. The request, however, was made of this good man (and he was a good man): "Please ask us again, one hundred fifty years from now, this same question, as to whether you own property or not." Of course, the answer then would be obvious. We hold title to property; we have use of it, but the real ownership is with God. We manage it; we are stewards over it; but he expects us to be accountable for that stewardship.

THE WEALTH OF GOD is locked up in human souls. The growth, the personality, the character, the serviceability of man in helping build the kingdom is the treasure of God and Christ. He considers himself wealthy and happy when people comply with eternal laws. God's wealth is caught up in anything or anybody which will help contribute to the building of the kingdom. This truth was illustrated in the time of Christ when, on one occasion, the people offered him a crown. How foolish to offer the Creator of the world a crown or the kingship of a small country like Palestine! The wealth of God and Christ is not in land or in ruling over a subject people. The royal treasuries of rulers are not their ambition. Their riches are found in the minds and hearts of their creations.

God is not attempting to exploit us in asking us to be profitable to his kingdom. A good parent will not exploit his own children here upon the earth.

How much less will God, the perfect Father, seek to exploit his children.

In the kingdom of heaven, those who are not willing to increase their talents and use them to increase the wealth of God must be considered "slothful" and "sinful." Here we have another definition of sin. Quite obviously not to be profitable to God, not to increase our talents, is classified as sin by God; and he condemns it very sharply. God looks upon us much as he would a plant or a seed which has a capacity to grow. God gives us life, and we should grow and bear fruit. It was the Apostle Paul who spoke to Timothy, saying, "stir up the gift of God, which is in thee." It is clear that God will admit people into the kingdom of heaven who have increased their talents, and used them to augment the Lord's wealth.

If we would know how Christians should act and how they should use their lives, we only have to look at Christ. He is always our perfect example. Whose wealth was Christ enriching? What was his treasure? We all know that the wealth of souls for his Father's kingdom was the main thing in the heart and mind of Jesus. He did not settle down in Nazareth but continually drove himself forward to build up a God-like society here on the earth. We often hear him speaking of it: "I must preach the kingdom of God to other cities also; for therefore am I sent."—Luke 4: 43. (Here Christ tells why he has been sent by his Father to the world.) Christians who really understand Christ and the program which God sent him to teach are not slackers. They do not bury their talents.

IT SHOULD BE noted also that the third fellow, this one-talent man, from our worldly standards perhaps could not be adjudged a bad individual. The Christ was very severe in his chastisement of people who were immoral, or killed, or stole. There is no indication at all that this one-talent servant was a drunkard, that he stole, or that he was a murderer. We do not know that he was immoral. He probably was a good father, a good husband, and a good neighbor. He may not have exploited anyone. He may have paid good wages. He did feel a conscious responsibility for the money. He did not squander the money on horse races or games of chance. He did not lose it shaking dice or playing cards. He did not spend it on liquor. We have no knowledge that there was a second woman in his life and that he had wasted the money on her. He didn't even lose it, intentionally or unintentionally. He just buried his talent in the ground.

He had not taken the time to know his lord's true character. (This applies to many Christians.) He had a poor understanding of the goals of his benefactor. He did not share his great love. True love drives one forward to accomplish good. It is the greatest force in the world for the accomplishment of justice, good will, peace, progress, and harmony. Lacking this vision of the rightness of his lord's program, he had no foresight; he had no adventuresome spirit. He was indifferent. He may have thought that being a little fellow, a one-talent individual, he didn't matter, anyway.

CHRISt, IN THIS PARABLE, seems to indicate that every talent is needed by God in his plan. In this story, the lord gave out eight talents and got back fifteen. From all modern standards that would be a very excellent return, wouldn't it? Yet Christ indicates that any one individual who does not improve upon his talents is retarding, to that extent, the growth and the development of the kingdom of God here upon the earth. It is much like a tree; the nourishment is taken by the roots out of the ground and passed up through the trunk to the leaves. There, through action of the sun, and other natural processes, it is changed into food qualities and goes into all parts of the tree, even back down into the roots. The loss of one leaf hurts the tree just that much. Christ is always emphasizing the value of the little things. He speaks of the "cup of cold water." He mentions feeding the hungry, visiting the sick, and the prisoners. He commends the sacrificial offering of a small amount of money.

As we study the life of the Christ, we find an individual who was daring, one who certainly used his talents to the utmost, even though that venturesomeness took him to the cross. Dare we come to the Christ and say to him that he is asking too much of us? When he demands that we increase our one talent to two talents in order to augment his wealth, can we protest that he is asking a very selfish thing? Let us think carefully. The wealth of God is not selfish in any of its features. The wealth of God, let us repeat, is caught up in life—life lived happily and successfully according to divine law.

THIS PARABLE would indicate that in the kingdom of heaven people will be judged by the things that they do, not by the things which they do not do. Religious people are so wont to brag on what they do not do. Many act like the Biblical scribes and Pharisees, who thanked God that they were not as other people. Many religious folk like to compare their good qualities to the poor characteristics of others. Some boast that they do not steal, like several they know. They are not immoral. They do not drink. They do not smoke. Christ speaks to all Christendom, however, in this parable and says that we may not do any of these outward things and yet be a "slothful" and a "sinful" servant. We have not improved our talents nor increased the wealth of God. (And let us remember that to increase the wealth of God is to help the righteous growth of personality. It is to be concerned about the souls and the lives of all people.) In the kingdom of heaven from which Christ came, and which he knew so well, the citizens did not pass by on the other side of the road. God asks us not only to be as growing plants, bearing leaves and flowers; but he asks us also to be fruitful. We recall the story of Christ when he withered up the fig tree because it was not bearing fruit.

In the parable, the one talent was taken away from the slothful servant and given to the man who had increased his five to ten talents. The ten-talent fellow had learned how to be faithful over his stewardship and obviously he could well make use of another one. That is so true in our everyday life. A person who studies nature, who learns to love the great outdoors, finds stories in the rocks, in the trees, in the anthills, in the flowers. He knows the life and struggles of the bees. When he increases his one talent to two, soon he finds that he has gained four talents in this field. This principle is also true of music. One can bury his talent in the ground and not use it or, with a little practice, develop enough talent to be an opera singer. With effort, our two talents increase to four, our four to eight, and our eight to sixteen. Anyone who will magnify his calling and use his talent righteously, receives other talents. He grows and expands, and the world is made better and happier because of his "faithfulness."

IN THE PARABLE, the Lord said: "Take therefore the talent from him." This taking away is merely a sober statement of eternal law. It is just as true as two times two is four, or the law of gravity. Bury our affection for our family, stop loving our children and our companions, and love soon grows cold; our gift is lost. The opportunity which God gives us is taken away from us. That is also true about practicing on the piano. Neglect your talent, bury it for a while, and pretty soon the former ability which you had is gone. I well recall that as a young man

I used to do considerable skating, both ice and roller skating. I tried it, however, a couple of months ago and fell several times. The talent had not been improved; it had been left dormant, and I soon found myself without it. Stop being sympathetic and kind to people, and soon we lose the capacity to love them. Instead we become critical and hard. All of us in high school, perhaps, have had the experience of studying some foreign language—German, French, or Spanish. But if, after leaving school, we have had little or no use for it, the ability which we had to talk in this foreign tongue is soon taken from us.

In this parable we are told, also, that there is to be an accounting required of all people. Someday the Lord is sure to return. We are to be called before a judgment, and there we shall be asked what we have done with our talents. Most indifferent Christian people know that they have been given talents and have not used them. Yet, in the back recesses of their minds, they know that someday there will be a judgment. But they figure it is a long way off, so why be concerned now. Anyway, most of them hope that they will be able to wiggle through somehow. Like the one-talent fellow, they can say that they were "afraid." They will try to explain and justify their acts. They may even place the blame on God. He is a hard God, an unjust God! He reaps where he does not sow. Like the one-talent servant, they will probably hope to get by on their excuses. The judgment may be considered harsh. They probably will not expect their talents to be taken away from them or that they should receive a harsh condemnation from their Lord, being separated from other people who have been faithful in using their talents to increase the wealth of eternity.

THE JUDGMENT OF THE owner in this parable rather startles some Christians. For the Lord said, "cast ye the unprofitable servant into outer darkness; there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth." (Verse 30.) Here the Christ says that the kingdom of heaven will be made up of people who have been profitable to their Lord and Master, and that those who are not profitable shall lose their talent and be cast into outer darkness. Salvation comes, therefore, to those who accept responsibility in God's organization and are faithful in the righteous use of their talents. Salvation comes to those who are profitable in building the kingdom—a god-like society here upon this earth.

Examples of being cast into outer darkness are not confined to this parable. There is also the story of the wise and foolish virgins. From the standards of our world today, what had those five foolish virgins done? They were not in immorality, evidently, because Christ does call them "virgins." We do not know that they stole, that they lied, or that they broke up some other people's homes. Their condemnation resulted from not being prepared when the bridegroom came to the wedding. They, too, were cast into outer darkness. There is also the narration of the man who came to a wedding not having on the wedding garment (Matthew 22: 2-13), who was cast into outer darkness.

IT IS HARD, sometimes, for us to know exactly what the kingdom of heaven is like, but from the story here of the wise and foolish virgins, we are lead to believe that those who were allowed into the wedding feast were with friends; the house was well-lighted; there was music—probably a banquet with plenty of food, laughter and joy. In the parable of the talents, the five-talent fellow and the two-talent fellow were given words of appreciation by their lord. Because of their faithfulness, they were to be given additional responsibility over many things and know the joy of their lord.

The unprofitable servant was left out in the darkness, alone. He could but know of the joy and happiness of the faithful stewards. In the case of the five foolish virgins, they could, no doubt, hear the music and the laughter of those inside. They could see the light coming from the windows, and know that the banquet was being served.

"... there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth." Here Christ seems to indicate that many who do not improve their talents, who are not faithful, who have been unprofitable, will be overcome with remorse, anguish, and sorrow. They will look back upon their lives and admit that they had not assumed responsibility in making the world better, that they had been selfish and indifferent to God's program. They had been self-centered, refusing to work for the wealth and the treasures of eternal living. They were not interested in the salvation of others' souls and the sacredness of their personalities. This knowledge that they have been poor stewards for God; that they have been unfaithful; and that because of their choices they have been adjudged unprofitable to the kingdom life and therefore unworthy to enter into the joys which others enter into will be one of the greatest torments known to men.

Some, perhaps, will gnash their teeth at God and Christ. They do so here upon the earth, even today. We know of many who belittle the Christ—who laugh at Christians—who bury their God-given talents, or, worse, squander them in riotous living. Christ, in this parable, does not tell the judgment against a person who completely denies his stewardship to God. Evidently, many will be most angry at the turn of events and will curse God.

LET US BRIEFLY REVIEW this parable. God judges and rewards according to faithfulness. God expects us to be just stewards, to use our talents, and to increase the wealth of eternity—the sacredness of personality. All have talent. Though different, each one is loved equally by God and, if faithful, may receive the same commendation. We should know the purposes of God. Finally, when we comprehend the program of the Christ and his Heavenly Father, we seek continually to come to higher ground. We are not satisfied with our status quo. We venture, confident of the ultimate victory of God's kingdom. Every talent is needed. When we do our best, that best grows. When we bury our talents, we lose them. We shall be judged for what we do, not for what we do not do.

Thousands of Christians are most faithful in the use of their talents. They are courageous, they are venturesome, they are God-controlled people.

Many wish to know what the kingdom of heaven is like. In this parable, the Christ gave us a picture of a section of it. In other parables and sermons he explains more. This word picture should challenge us to do the best with all that we have. It is a call to help assure victory. It is a call of joy, of happiness, of thrilling accomplishment. Who can be indifferent? Who can be self-centered? Who can fail to be profitable to God, once he understands this beautiful parable? The kingdom of heaven will be made up of people who have been profitable to him here upon the earth.

Golden Wedding Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. L. P. Brown of San Diego, California, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary on April 6. They were guests at an open house at which their daughter, Mrs. H. E. Shierson, entertained. Mr. Brown, seventy-three, and Mrs. Brown, seventy-two, were born and married in Iowa, where they resided until 1909. That year they joined the western migration of homesteaders who went to Montana. Until two years ago, they made their home on a farm near Savage, Montana. Since then, they have lived in San Diego. True Latter Day Saints, they are revered and respected by all whom they contact.

They have three daughters, a son, and six grandchildren.

LETTERS

A Missionary Experience

When my sister and her husband offered to stay with our children so that my wife and I could have a vacation, the impression came to me that we should go to Wagoner, Oklahoma. I have a sister there, Mrs. Margaret Smith, who is a member of the church; she and her husband have ten children, only one of whom belonged to the church.

Arriving at their home, we found two grown daughters, a son and his wife; a grandson, and a son-in-law living with them. After we had been there two days, I began to tell them the story of the church. They seemed to be very interested. The following day, we drove to Tulsa to see if there were any Saints living in Muskogee, which is eighteen miles from Wagoner. Leslie Kohlman, pastor of the church in Tulsa, was away, but I did talk to Sister McComb, who told me of a Doctor Powell living at Muskogee. I contacted him the next day, and he invited me to preach in his home. He said there were seventeen members in that vicinity and some Baptist friends who might attend. I preached seven sermons, and each evening the house was packed. Every night, we took eight of our relatives from Wagoner with us. After the first two sermons, I awakened early in the morning by the impression that my sister's children and her daughter-in-law should unite with the church. This impression continued to grow and I told my nephew, Alvin, of it. He said, "Uncle Henry, I have been praying for three days that God would show me what to do, and I believe he is telling me through you." He discussed the matter with his wife, who was also greatly interested. The following day, my niece, Mrs. Dorothy Banks, said, "I have been thinking about being baptized for three days."

On Saturday afternoon, the church school superintendent and I visited another young man and his wife who were members of the Baptist church. She was ready to be baptized, but he was still undecided. When we left, I told them I believed they would both be ready by the following day; and they were. Pastor Kohlman and Brother Sherman came on Sunday to organize a church school. At 2:30 in the afternoon, we held a baptismal service in the Church of Christ; the six new members—five adults and one child—were confirmed at the Powell home. Three children were blessed, also. Brother Kohlman then organized the group.

I am deeply grateful to Dr. Powell and his family for making it possible for the old, old story to be told to his neighbors and church friends. This was one of the richest experiences of my life, and I am looking forward to meeting these good people again soon.

Henry Castings

1301 East Ninth
Des Moines 16, Iowa

(Editor's Note: The writer is a self-sustaining evangelist and has been a strong contributor to the work in Des Moines and surrounding areas for many years.)

Healed of Cancer

On November 13, 1947, I became seriously ill with what was thought to be virus pneumonia. After receiving repeated administration, I began to recover until about Christmas, when I suffered a relapse. X rays revealed that I had a growth on my left lung. The doctor decided to check the X rays which were taken when I was in the R.C.A.F.; these also showed a growth. A specialist was called, and further investigation brought the diagnosis, "Epidermoid Carcinoma of the left lung." Arrangements were made for my entrance in a Toronto hospital, where I was to be operated on. However, a period of five weeks elapsed before a bed was available. During this time, my wife and I were very worried. We decided to take our troubles once again to the Lord; and on February 18, I received administration at a special prayer service. At the close of the meeting, my cough—which had been insistent and irritating—ceased completely. By the time I entered the hospital, I had gained twelve pounds and my health was steadily improving. For ten days, I received the most critical tests and pathological examinations imaginable, but they revealed no trace of cancer. The specialists are still wondering why the first plates taken while I was in the air force and the later X rays showed the cancer so plainly, when the final examinations disclosed a very normal lung.

I am only one year old in the Restored Gospel, but I have been the recipient of a most decided healing. I am grateful to the good Saints in Detroit, Amherstburg, Chatham, Flora, Owen Sound, Toronto, and my own branch, Guelph, who prayed so fervently for me. Above all, I thank my Heavenly Father. I am left with the assurance that God is real, that miracles do happen, and that all things are possible for those who believe.

John Walker

70 Mill Street
Guelph, Ontario

Congregational Singing

A Measure of Your Spiritual Temperature

BY WILLIAM GRAVES

WHENEVER MAN has found himself in a situation in which he experiences difficulty in expressing by the spoken word his thoughts, feelings, or desires, he has turned to the media of the fine arts for assistance. This has been especially true in his religious life. Man, the architect, wishing to invite the ministry of the Holy Spirit, has erected beautiful, awe-inspiring temples in which to worship. In these temples he has placed all manner of beautiful handiwork: rich tapestries, ornate examples of wood and metalcraft, colorful stained glass windows. All this has been a perfectly natural situation. In order to facilitate communion with the Almighty, man sought to establish a common meeting place—a middle ground where God and man could mingle in spirit. On every hand, man observed that his God was a God of beauty. Here, then, was the common meeting place, the middle ground where man might reach up toward God and where God could extend his hand to man. Beauty has become the common meeting place, the mutual appreciation of which has created an ideal rendezvous for God and man.

AMONG THE ARTS probably the most personal way man has had of attuning himself with Divinity has been through the art of music. Soul-stirring religious experiences have stimulated the creation of sublime musical masterpieces, and these same musical creations have stimulated many ennobling religious experiences.

The hymn has been and is considered by many to embody the most universal expression of the religious emotion. Substantiating evidence, if not complete verification, for this belief is found when we observe the relationship that has existed for many centuries between the hymn and religious movements. The Holy Scriptures indicate, "And when they had sung a hymn, they went into the mount of Olives."—Matthew 26: 27; Mark 14: 27. Colossians 3: 16 contains the instruction: "Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom; teaching and admonishing one another in psalms and

... AN OPEN DOOR

With this article, the "Saints' Herald" continues a series begun recently in cooperation with Graceland College. Periodically, articles will appear in the pages of the "Herald" written by members of the faculty, and in some instances by students, of Graceland College.

It is the hope of the editors that to all who seek learning, this series will mean a doorway to the classrooms of Graceland . . . an open door.

hymns and spiritual songs, singing with grace in your hearts to the Lord." David's Psalms have been a continual source of inspiration since the time of their writing, about ten centuries before the birth of Christ.

In the period following Christ's life, extensive use was made of music in the Christian Church. The Roman Catholic Church developed a very elaborate liturgical ritual, using a great deal of music. Such men as Ambrose, Pope Gregory I, and Palestrina were commissioned to work toward the improvement of the musical portion of the church service.

WHEN MARTIN LUTHER instigated his religious reforms in the church in Germany, he paid especial attention to the potential contribution to man's spiritual development which he recognized to be inherent in music. As a result of Luther's influence, congregational singing was elevated to a relatively high position of importance in the church service.

If congregational singing were to become an integral part of the service, an obvious necessity was a type of music that would lend itself to the resultant demands of such a philosophy. Heretofore, music used in the Catholic Church had developed into a complex contrapuntal type singable by trained choirs but wholly unsuited for performance by the average congregation. Growing out of the need was the chorale, an art type best suited to usage in congregational singing. Its characteristics were a hymn (poem) portraying devotion of the highest type, a hymn tune (melody) reflecting the spirit of the poem but avoiding intricate rhythms and wide melodic skips, and an accompanying harmony being simple and straightforward.

Churches of today emulate the churches of yesterday in their recognition of the fundamental values resident within the hymn. To the Church of the Restoration has been given this instruction: "The service of song in the house of the Lord with humility and unity of spirit in them that sing and them that hear is blessed, and acceptable with God.

... Let the young men and the maidens cultivate the gifts of music and of song; let not the middle-aged and the old forget the gladness of their youth and let them aid and assist so far as their cares will permit; and remember that saints should be cheerful in their warfare that they may be joyous in their triumph."—Doctrine and Covenants 119: 6. Continued instruction is found in these words: "And verily I say unto thee, that thou shalt lay aside the things of this world, seek for things of a better. And it shall be given thee, also, to make a selection of sacred hymns, as it shall be given thee, which is pleasing unto me, to be had in my church; for my soul delighteth in the song of the heart; yea, the song of the righteous is a prayer unto me. And it shall be answered with a blessing upon their heads."—Doctrine and Covenants 24: 3. That music is capable of making a highly worthwhile contribution to the effectiveness of the church is conceded by a vast majority.

THERE IS ONE aspect of congregational singing, however, that is overlooked by many people. For the individual member; aside from contributing to the financial offering, participation in the service of song is the one way in which he can make an endowment to the religious endeavor of the entire group. In this part of the worship is developed to the highest degree the spirit of unity and togetherness so vital to the success of the Christian undertaking. It is in congregational singing that each individual contributes to the whole, and the massed strength of the whole is enabled to provide ministry to each individual.

If we admit that music has power to contribute to man's spiritual growth and that man can be inspired under the influence of the religious emotion to produce sublime musical creations, we but reason logically in asserting that music of inferior quality fails to stimulate a spirit of devotion and that man cannot possibly create music of deep spiritual significance if his personal spiritual powers are depleted. Not only is this true of an individual, but it applies with equal validity to the church as a whole. A dynamic, virile church will be characterized by music which is dynamic and virile. A church that is decadent and senile will give every indication of its condition by the type of music that is evidenced in its services.

Look to your congregational singing. It is a measure of your spiritual temperature!

PRESENTING THE AUTHOR . . .

William Graves is finishing his second year as teacher of stringed instruments and director of the band and orchestra at Graceland College. A graduate of Graceland with the class of 1936, Mr. Graves holds the B.S. degree in education from the Missouri State Teachers College at Maryville and has done graduate work at Drake University. He has had considerable experience as a teacher of music and director of instrumental groups, first in small school systems in Missouri, later in high schools in St. Joseph, and more recently at North High School in Des Moines. Recently he was made a member of the Board of Directors of the Iowa Music Educators Association. He is a priest in the church.

In his two years at Graceland, he has earned a reputation as a promoter of band and orchestral music and has been instrumental in bringing to Graceland outstanding young student musicians. The present Graceland College Concert Band is an organization of fifty members, the largest and—in the opinion of many—the finest in the history of Graceland. In the band are four state champions in trumpet, and a state champion of the baritone horn. In the string quartet, which Graves also directs, is a student who won first rating in a national contest for violin last year. Graves himself is a violinist.

Recently the band has completed a tour of many towns and cities in the Middle West, playing concerts to large audiences. Largely through the efforts of Graves, Graceland College was able to secure the United States Navy Band of Washington, D. C., called the "World's Finest," for an afternoon and evening concert recently in Zimmerman Hall on the Graceland campus.

In the accompanying article, the author reveals a portion of his own convictions on church music. Students under his direction at Graceland are exposed to a larger portion of the same convictions. Part of the result may be found in the story of the success of Graceland's band and orchestra this year.

Mrs. Graves is the former Kathlyn Cato, a Graceland graduate with the class of 1937. They have two children.

Service in the Church

In the editorial, "Ready to Build Zion," published in the January 10 issue of the Herald, I find some points on which I disagree with the writer. In most instances, where people do not respond when asked to volunteer for service, it is because they feel they are either not qualified, or that the few who usually take the responsibility in the group would think they were "butting in," if they went forward and offered to do any work. They take it for granted that the same ones who served last time will do so again.

When quite young, I did all that I could to improve my talents. Most of my life I have been isolated from church privileges; but the few times I was where I could have used my talents, there was never an opportunity to do so, because I did not have the effervescent personality needed to make people ask me to contribute to the work of the church. I did not have nerve enough to volunteer.

One time I attended a reunion. The meetings were all that anyone could ask but for the loneliness of nothing to do between times! How much I should have enjoyed supervising games for youngsters, helping teen-agers prepare a program, or teaching a class in handicrafts or hobbies.

My suggestion to the person who wanted girls to train to supervise younger children would be to prepare a written questionnaire asking all eligible persons what particular talents they had. Perhaps one girl could play a musical instrument while another could do something else. After the various talents were classified, each could be made to realize the importance of what her contribution might mean to the younger group. I think the same idea would help when people move into a community. Such questions as, "Do you sing or play a musical instrument? Do you give readings? Have you ever been the presiding officer of a club or lodge? What is your hobby?" would help to classify an individual and find out where he would fit in. Most people who have done worth-while things in their former homes are used to having their works speak for themselves and hesitate to tell others how good they are.

I recall a rather amusing incident when a church school was being held at my home. The elder's wife thought it might be a good idea to have someone read from the Herald. She came to me before the meeting and had me read it over, explaining very carefully about the expression. I read it, and she was quite pleased to think I had followed her instructions so carefully. I doubt if she ever learned that I had majored in dramatics at school.

M. ANDERSON.

895 High Street
Auburn, California

Other Sheep I Have Which Are Not of This Fold

The Story of the Book of Mormon

By ROY WELDON

PART I

The Mystery of Quetzalcoatl—The Good Shepherd Visits America

IN JOHN 10: 16, Jesus gives expression to one of the most significant statements to be found in the Scriptures: "And other sheep I have, which are not of this fold: them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice; and there shall be one fold and one shepherd."

It is recorded in the fifteenth chapter of Matthew that a woman of Canaanite descent followed Jesus and cried to him in behalf of her child. It was only after persistent and continued effort that Jesus was persuaded to minister to her child. Jesus explained his slowness to respond to the Gentile woman's cries with this terse but very significant statement: "I am not sent but unto the lost sheep of the house of Israel."—Matthew 15: 23. A candid, open-minded, truth-seeking approach to the meaning of John 10: 16 leaves no alternative but to look somewhere (Africa, Australia, Siberia, America, etc.) other than Jerusalem for evidence that the Good Shepherd had another flock of sheep (House of Israel) whom he visited and who heard his voice.

A survey of the history, legends, and archaeology of various nations quickly reveals that one does not have to be a detective to recognize that in Quetzalcoatl of the Aztecs we have a clue of the first order.

Courts and Temple of Quetzalcoatl at Teotihuacan

About thirty-five miles northeast of Mexico City lie the famous pyramids of Teotihuacan. In prehistoric times, Teotihuacan was a great city that filled a large area in the valley. The dwelling places of the people have long since disappeared, but broken pieces of pottery and other evidences of ancient occupation are numerous. According to Robert Marett, the great government and religious structures of the city occupy an area four miles long by two miles wide.¹ Among the most imposing structures of Teotihuacan are the huge Pyramid of the Sun (eight acres) and the awe-inspiring courts and temple of Quetzalcoatl. Paul found on Mar's hill an altar dedicated to an unknown God. In contrast, we find at Teotihuacan a temple dedicated to an unknown God (Quetzalcoatl) which, with its courts and priests quarters, occupies many acres.

The Diego Rivera Murals of Quetzalcoatl

Diego Rivera, a full-blooded Indian artist of outstanding ability, has recently completed a history of Mexico. This history is painted in murals on the expansive inner walls of the presidential palace in Mexico City. The history starts with the arrival in Mexico of the white God Quetzalcoatl. He is seated on a white cloud. The next scene shows Quetzalcoatl seated on a throne with the brown-skinned Aztecs worshiping their white God. In an eminent textbook, Epic of America, which is used in colleges and universities in the United States, James Truslow Adams introduces the student to the history of the United States with the story of Quetzalcoatl.

What the Legends Say About Quetzalcoatl

Mr. Lewis Spence, well-known English anthropologist, in a comparatively recent book (1923) sums up the Aztec legends of Quetzalcoatl from several trustworthy Mexican codices. "A God of the name of Citallatonac . . . sent an ambassador from heaven on an embassy to a virgin of TULAN called CHILMALMAN . . . to whom the ambassador announced that it was the will of this God that she should conceive a son . . . she conceived a son without connexion with man, who they call QUETZALCOATLE."² "They say it was he (QUETZALCOATL) who effected the reformation of the world by penance, since as, according to his account, his father had created the world and men had given themselves up to vice, on which account it had been frequently destroyed, CITINATONALI sent his son into the world to reform it . . ." Ibid., page 131.

"He alone had a human body like that of men; the other Gods were of an incorporeal nature."—Ibid., page 128.

" . . . Quetzalcoatl was a white man . . . with long black hair and a beard heavy and round."—Ibid., page 120.

"He instituted fasting and mortification and never married."—Ibid., page 127.

"He forbade all war and disturbance."—Ibid., page 127.

"The arts had their inception with Quetzalcoatl."—Ibid., page 123.

"As they considered him their advocate, they celebrated a solemn festival and fasted during four signs."—Ibid., page 132.

"They adored him as a God . . . for they believed it certain that he had ascended into heaven . . ."—Ibid., page 131.

" . . . he desired of them at the time of his departure to restrain their grief and to expect his return, which would take place at the appointed time.”—Ibid., page 130.

“ . . . when he died he was not visible for four days, during which period he tarried in the underworld.”—Ibid., page 132.

“He had priests who were called QUETQUETZALCOHUA, that is to say, ‘priests of the order of Quetzalcoatl.’” Page 260, Bancroft’s Native Races, Volume 3.

Paul found an altar on Mar’s Hill dedicated to an unknown God. In Mexico we find the largest pyramid in the world dedicated to Quetzalcoatl as the “Author of Light.”

Gregory Mason comments on the size of the pyramid of Cholula.

“The pyramid of Cholula which was dedicated to Quetzalcoatl and on top of which was built a temple in ancient times, is three times the size of the pyramid of the Cheops, the largest in Egypt.”³ (The comparison refers to the area covered and not to the height of the respective pyramids.)

Quetzalcoatl Promised to Return

“Such was the impression left on the native mind by this mysterious person (Quetzalcoatl) that notwithstanding the centuries had rolled away since his appearance, the Aztecs thought he had reappeared when the Spaniards landed on their coast; they pushed into the water to embrace the prows of their vessels and despatched messengers throughout the land to proclaim the return of Quetzalcoatl.”—Brinton, Myths of the New World.

Quetzalcoatl or Jesus Christ in the New World

The impact of the personality of Jesus Christ on the course of history in the Old World has been tremendous and incalculable. When we pick up the evening paper or write a letter or look at the calendar, we are confronted with the evidence of the impression of the personality of the “Good Shepherd” on all old world civilization. Every time we write the date or look at the date, we honor the Savior from whose birth time is measured.

The impression of the personality of Quetzalcoatl on the legends and temples and minds of the Aztecs is of such proportions that the identity of this white God born of a virgin, in the distant East, cannot be reasonably interpreted as being other than the Good Shepherd of Israel.

Manly Palmer Hall in his book, Twelve World Teachers, published in 1937 by the Philosophical Research Society of Los Angeles, includes Quetzalcoatl along with Confucious, Mohammed, Jesus Christ, et al, in his work on the “the twelve” great teachers of history.

The evidence that Quetzalcoatl was Jesus Christ is not complete until we add to the impact of his personality on prehistoric America the traditions which link and weld the history of Quetzalcoatl with the story of the Good Shepherd.

Briefly, and in addition to the excerpts quoted from Mr. Spence we present further milestones in the life of Quetzalcoatl.

- A. Quetzalcoatl’s birth was accompanied by the appearance of a new star and mysterious omens and wonders in the heavens.
- B. Tradition is silent as to his childhood years.
- C. Manly P. Hall says, “We read of the temptation of Quetzalcoatl, how during his penance the spirits of evil came to him and tried to divert him from his course. In another place is the account of his fasting for 40 days which later became a definite part of the Mexican ritual.”⁴
- D. Quetzalcoatl had power of bidding the winds to be hushed hence he is called “God of the Wind.”
- E. Quetzalcoatl destroys the death God (victory over death).
- F. One of his many appellations in the ancient language signifies a vine of juice thereof.⁵
- G. The morning star was his symbol.
- H. Spence says, “Quetzalcoatl died and was invisible for four days after which he was resurrected and ascended his throne.”⁶

- I. Between his death and resurrection, Quetzalcoatl tarried in the underworld.

Authenticity of Aztec Traditions

Mr. Paul Radin, eminent anthropologist of the University of California who has made a special study of the reliability of Aztec traditions, says, “Many oral myths give us such details which not only look historical but have so often been subsequently proved to be correct, that there is a certain presumption, of their being correct whenever we find them.”⁷

So voluminous and overwhelming is the mass of evidence that we find some scientists conceding that Quetzalcoatl once actually lived in this world.

Gregory Mason says, “Those scientists who speak with the most certainty and definiteness about the Toltecs are inclined to think Quetzalcoatl once actually lived in this world.”⁸ Quetzalcoatl, the God of the Aztecs, was not himself an Aztec. The Aztecs were preceded in Mexico by the Chichimecs and the Chichimecs by the Toltecs.

Nadailac says, “The Toltec era is referred to as the Golden Age of Mexico.”⁹

Brinton says, “In Mexican legends the early Toltecs were white men.”¹⁰

The Book of Mormon

The Book of Mormon stands as being the only book ever published which claims to contain the history of the visit of Jesus Christ to Ancient America.

The Book of Mormon records that after his resurrection, Jesus Christ came to America and fulfilled his pledge in John 10: 16 to visit other sheep of another fold. The evidence appears to indicate the place of his visit was in Central America or in Southern Mexico.

The dramatic appearance of Christ to the ancient Americans came when a large group of the people were gathered together at the temple in the Land Bountiful. The Book of Mormon tells us that the people, gathered together at the temple, heard a voice.

And it came to pass as they understood, they cast their eyes up again towards heaven; and behold, they saw a man descending out of heaven;

And he was clothed in a white robe, and he came down and stood in the midst of them, and the eyes of the whole multitude were turned upon him, and they durst not open their mouths, even one to another, and wist not what it meant, for they thought it was an angel that had appeared unto them.

And it came to pass that he stretched forth his hand, and spake unto the people, saying, Behold I am Jesus Christ, of whom the prophets testified should come unto the world.—3 Nephi 5: 9-11.

In the great assembly at the temple where Quetzalcoatl or Jesus Christ made his appearance there were probably present not only the ancestors of the Aztecs but also the ancestors of the Mayas and other Indian tribes. After his first appearance, he announced that he would return and meet the people again on the morrow. His appearances were continued over a protracted length of time. The startling news that Jesus Christ the Shepherd of Israel was making daily appearances at "The Temple in the Land Bountiful" spread like wildfire. It is recorded in the Book of Mormon that great numbers of people traveled all night as well as by day to reach the temple in the Land Bountiful (3 Nephi 9: 3).

It is also recorded (4 Nephi 1:3) that within two years of His visit, the entire population of ancient America was converted to Jesus Christ. This means that not only were the ancestors of the Aztecs converted to Jesus Christ, but the ancestors of every tribe had been gathered into the fold of the Good Shepherd. Consideration of Quetzalcoatl's counterpart among all the tribes of the new world would require a volume or series of volumes. It is within the scope of this presentation to offer only a few brief references.

Numerous Tribes Worship White God Dressed in Long White Robe

Both the Book of Mormon and Aztec traditions tell us that Quetzalcoatl or Jesus Christ appeared in ancient America dressed in a long, white robe.

Bancroft says, "Although bearing various names and appearing in different countries, the American culture heroes all present the same general characteristics. They are all described as white, bearded men, generally clad in long robes; appearing suddenly and mysteriously upon the scene of their labors, they at once set about improving the people by instructing them in useful and ornamental arts, giving them laws, exhorting them to practice brotherly love and other Christian virtues and introducing a milder and better form of religion; having accomplished their mission, they disappear as mysteriously and as unexpectedly as they came."¹¹

Born of a Virgin

Mr. Brinton says, "Many of the great Gods of the race, as Quetzalcoatl, Manibozho, Viracocha and Ioskeha, were said to have been born of a virgin. Even among the low Indian tribes of Paraguay, the early missionaries were startled to find this tradition of the maiden mother of the God, so similar to that which they had come to tell."¹²

"Quiche legends of earliest men say they were white children, white sons, leading a white life beyond the dawn. Creation itself is attributed to the dawn, the white one, the white sacrificer of blood."—Ibid., page 209.

Christian Doctrines in Prehistoric America

Mr. P. DeRoo says, "The first missionaries of the fifteenth century were greatly astonished to find them [Peruvians] in possession of several tenets of Christian doctrines and practicing a number of Christian rites."¹³ Mr. Brinton says, "These reformers [Quetzalcoatl, Votan, Viracocha, etc.] were credited with an ethical elevation in their teachings which need not blush before the loftiest precepts of the old world moralists. According to the earliest and most trustworthy accounts, the doctrines of Tonapa were filled with the loving kindness and the deep sense of duty which characterize the present Christianity. Nothing was wanting in them, says a historian, save the name of God and His Son, Jesus Christ."¹⁴

William Prescott says, "They [Spanish Missionaries] could not suppress their wonder as they beheld the Cross, the sacred emblem of their own faith, raised as an object of worship in the temples of Anahuac. Their surprise was heightened when they witnessed a religious rite which reminded them of the Christian Communion. On these occasions an image of the Tutelary Deity of the Aztecs was made of the flour of maize, mixed with blood, and after consecration by the priests, was distributed among the people, who, as they ate it, showed signs of humiliation and sorrow, declaring it was the flesh of their Deity."¹⁵

The Hand Design of Ancient America

In his ministry at Jerusalem, Jesus healed the sick, the blind, and the lame by touching them with his hands. "Then were there brought unto him little children, that he should put his hands on them and pray, and the disciples rebuked them, saying, There is no need, for Jesus hath said, Such shall be saved. But Jesus said, Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of Heaven.

"And he laid his hands on them, and departed thence."—Matthew 19: 13-15.

"And they [his disciples] shall lay hands on the sick and they shall recover."—Mark 16: 19.

"Now when the sun was setting, all they who had any sick, with divers diseases, brought them unto him, and he laid his hands on every one of them, and healed them."—Luke 4: 40.

If the Good Shepherd brought blessings to his flock in the Old World by placing his hands upon them, why should it not be reasonable that he should pursue the same course in bringing blessings to his flock in the New World? The Book of Mormon records that during the appearances of Jesus Christ at the temple in the Land Bountiful, all who were sick or lame or blind or afflicted in any manner were brought to Jesus, and he healed them (3 Nephi 8: 6-10).

The open, human hand has been found extensively among the ruins of prehistoric America. At Copan Honduras there is a large beautiful specimen of the open hand sculptured out of stone. Channing Arnold says, "The human hand is found extensively on ruins at Chichen Itza, Cozumel Island and other Maya ruins."¹⁶

Mr. Bancroft says, "Another form in which we may recognize Zamna is the image of Itzamatul, or the 'dew of heaven' who is said to have been a great ruler, the son of God, and who cured diseases, raised the dead, and pronounced oracles."

Mr. Bancroft says further, "This class of devotees generally resorted to the temple where he [Zamna] was represented in the form of a hand, KABUL, or working hand, whose touch was sufficient to restore health."¹⁷

Henry Clyde Shetrose director and archæologist of Ohio State Archæological Association, says, "The human hand is found in the Hopewell Mounds and it is related to the hand design of Middle America."¹⁸

7. Paul Radin, The Sources and Authenticity of the History of the Ancient Mexicans, page 137
8. Gregory Mason, Columbus Came Late, page 229
9. Nadaillac, Prehistoric America, page 275
10. Brinton, Myths of the New World, page 209
11. Bancroft, Native Races, Volume 5, page 23
12. Brinton, Myths of the New World, page 172
13. P. DeRoo, History of America Before Columbus, Volume 2, page 111
14. Brinton, Myths of the New World, page 337
15. William Prescott, Conquest of Mexico, Volume 2, page 368
16. Channing Arnold, American Egypt, page 266
17. Bancroft, Native Races, Volume 3, pages 464, 465
18. Henry Clyde Shetrose, The Mound Builders, page 117

(All italicizing and underling of words or phrases in the Lectures is by the author for emphasis.)

Questions, suggestions, or criticisms will be welcomed and responded to by the author. His address is R. F. D. 5, Warrensburg, Missouri.

Slides Now Available

Whether you have decided to have a vacation church school in your branch this year or not, you will enjoy seeing pictures of the Independence congregations in action last year. Scenes from the classroom, playground, and of the children on parade are shown. You will be interested also to see the handcraft, charts, and the staff as shown in these picture slides.

These pictures are being made available to help interest your community—children, parents, and leaders—in conducting a school of your own. They will give a clear idea of what a vacation church school does and what is expected of the pupils and workers. New Vacation and Reunion Church School Manuals, carrying the title, Treasuring God's Word, are now available.

Write us promptly to reserve these pictures for you. Give a preferred date and an alternate choice, if possible. A service charge of $1.25 should accompany the order. You will pay the return postage. There are 23 slides, 2" x 2" in natural colors. A script explaining the slides and some important features of a vacation church school will be included with each order.

HERALD PUBLISHING HOUSE
Visual Aids Department

PHILADELPHIA, PENNSYLVANIA.—Carole Jane, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Bukowski, was blessed on Sunday, April 11, by Elders S. Worrell and E. Lewis. Mrs. Bukowski is the former Betty Murdock.

LANSING, MICHIGAN. — The Southern Michigan Women's Anniversary Institute was held on April 6. District Leader Nellie Mottashed was in charge of arrangements, assisted by Mabel Foster. Mrs. Lydia Wight, women's leader of the Chicago District, conducted several class sessions on topics of especial interest to women in the church. A consecration and benediction service was directed by Francis Carlson in the afternoon. Both men and women assembled for a banquet in the evening. District President E. R. Carter served as chairman, and Almer Sheehy of London, Ontario, was guest speaker. Attendance at all activities of the day was large, with women from five other districts present. This is the fourth women's institute to be held in Southern Michigan Districts.

WARRINGTON, ENGLAND. — Missionary Eric Rowe and Seventy Glen Johnson recently conducted a series of meetings which ended on Easter Sunday evening. On the evening of Good Friday, a play entitled, "His Mother" was presented by the Zion's League. Hilda Dawbam, who took the part of Mary, designed all of the costumes. Summer plans for the League include motor trips to various parts of the country. Guest speakers of other branches have been invited to lecture on the church and its teachings at League services. Church school attendance has increased to an average of fifty. Blue Bird membership now totals twenty-eight.

TOLEDO, OHIO.—The Northwestern Ohio District Conference was held in Toledo on March 13 and 14. Apostle D. Blair Jensen and District President Alvin Wadsworth were in charge. General Conference delegates were elected on Saturday afternoon, and Wetzel Hardin was called to the office of priest. In the evening, sixty-eight Leaguers were served a fellowship dinner; Apostle Jensen was guest speaker. Elder Loyd Adams gave the evening sermon. A social service was held on Sunday morning. Apostle Jensen spoke at both the 11 and 2 o'clock meetings.

1. Robert Marett, Archaeological Tours from Mexico City, page 27
2. Lewis Spence, The Gods of Mexico, page 129
3. Gregory Mason, Columbus Came Late, page 236
4. S. Manly P. Hall, Twelve World Teachers, page 230
6. Lewis Spence, The Gods of Mexico and Peru, page 80

Finding My Place Through Service

By Mrs. Robert Farnham

THROUGH EXPERIENCE some years ago, I learned that happiness could come only in the giving of myself in service to others—forgetting myself, my troubles, my inadequacies and turning the whole of my attentions to those about me.

Three months after moving to Lamoni, I became very discontented and unhappy. We moved here right in the middle of the canning season; our neighbors, sensing this fact and wishing to welcome us, brought choice items from their gardens as gifts. I found myself agreeably busy from then on to late fall, canning fruit, tomatoes, and then more vegetables, more fruits in their season, and lastly pumpkin.

I was very happy. I had always thought I would enjoy living in a small town, and I was not disappointed. I found the people willing to give of themselves to others—even to newcomers—welcoming them with their warm-hearted generosity or in quiet sympathy serving the needs of those bereaved.

I was most happy those first few months, accepting service and friendship and experiencing the sensations of living in a new place.

This busy period passed, and the month of December arrived; then I began to feel lonely. As the days went by, I added more and more unhappy feelings. I felt as though I had a great many acquaintances but no real friends. I found myself disliking the town and everything about it. I longed for a close friend to talk to—someone to tell my troubles to. I didn't know exactly what those troubles were, but I was sure I had some. Oh, yes, I told myself that I would go through a period of adjustment, and I knew this was it—but it didn't help any. I read articles which advised me to dwell, when day was done, only on those things that were good—to forget the unhappy events and on the morrow determine to allow only kind words and actions to fill my days. I would straighten my shoulders, assume an air of "everything will be all right," and the next moment find myself right back where I had been—in the doldrums.

I DID NOT HAVE any preconceived ideas or specifications as to the friends I wished; I just wanted friends, and I knew that took time. I prayed but still did not seem able to shake the blues. I wondered what had happened to the consecrated person who had arrived in Lamoni in July.

I thought of my life in my former home. I had always reserved Thursday of each week as a day of giving service to others. My babies were small and often I waited for the high school girl who was helping me to get home before I could leave; then I would take the cakes, pies, and cookies I had made and, asking God's blessing upon them and myself, I would go to the homes of the "shut-ins"—the aged and ill. In so doing, taking God with me as I went, I was greatly blessed; those I visited received the same blessing, and a bond of fellowship was formed between us. I felt a sense of peace and contentment during these visits that nothing else could bring.

At last I realized, with a great wave of shame, the cause of my discontent. I had been receiving but not giving. I had been sitting in my home complaining, unhappy, and selfish without a thought of others and their need of companionship. I had been riding as a passenger too long—time I got in the driver's seat and gave some direction to my life! There were many as discouraged and lonely as I who had a real cause for being depressed. Many were ill and needed the ministry I could give; many were discouraged with the problems of life and were praying for God to send someone to their aid. Here I was—one of his handmaidens, one of the sources through which he could work—refusing to serve; and in this way holding back the blessings to those in need because of my inactivity. I went to the telephone, called the group women's leader, and asked her if I might go visiting with her as I did not know those who needed help. She gratefully accepted my offer and invited me to visit with her the next week. I again found my place in service; and through this service I found peace and happiness.

TOO MANY TIMES we sit on the sidelines, feeling shy, inadequate, and inferior—but inferiority is just another name for selfishness! We feel inadequate, so we do not make all the attempt to give of ourselves—we will not take an office; we will not serve on a committee; we will not attempt to visit, because we convince ourselves that we just can't do it, we are afraid of being laughed at. Are we going to be the kind of people Christ would have us be—those he can depend upon to help him here in his work or are we going to sit back afraid? It is good for us to discipline ourselves into doing the things we are afraid of doing; it is also good for us to discipline ourselves in doing the things

(Continued on page 22.)

www.LatterDayTruth.org

- - - a home column feature - - -

Finger-Play Stories

By Lena Wells Jones

I WONDER IF, in this world of hurry and bustle, mothers, fathers, or big brothers and sisters realize what a valuable part the simple art of finger-play has in the early development of small children. If they did, they would gladly take time to use this means of enriching those short sessions with the little ones to which they look forward. Finger-plays would become a needed medium of communication and development of the children's rapidly growing minds.

From the time a baby is old enough to enjoy "This little pig went to market" on his toes, or to clap his tiny hands in "Pat-a-cake," he is captivated by finger pictures and stories. At first, he is delighted to hear mother say them over and over. He loves repetition; and as he grows older, he learns to say them, too. Later, they help him to express his thoughts and to think new thoughts. The use of many little rhymes and jingles will implant in the child the attributes of Christian living—kindness, gentleness, patience, obedience, helpfulness, and cleanliness. A deep love for the Heavenly Father may have its beginning in finger-plays pertaining to birds, trees, flowers, and other things He has given us.

The small child loves action; his very nature seeks movement and variation. "He just can't keep still a moment." But, since he is incapable of abstract thought, our methods must be concrete or objective. It is quite natural, then, to have no trouble keeping him interested if he can put motions to a verse or song. Nursery and kindergarten teachers know the value of this method and use finger-plays to prepare for the story which will rest small bodies or turn young thoughts in the right direction. Wouldn't it be fine if mothers could have a list at their command to use as needed? Many a tense moment might be eased or avoided by the relaxing finger-play, directing the attention into other channels.

WITH ONLY A LITTLE CONCENTRATION, you can create a finger-play needed for any occasion or to impart a particular lesson. It doesn't necessarily have to rhyme, but it is more attractive to the child if it does, and more effective and easily learned. My need for a verse to use when we talked about our Christmas offering banks brought forth the following:

I like little pennies
My Daddy gives to me,
But I must be careful
How I use them, you see.
This one to church school I'll bring,
(thumb)

And this one's for Christmas offering,
(first finger)

This one I'll put carefully away, (second finger)

To buy something nice some day,

This one will buy a stick of candy (third finger)

And another for my friend, won't that be dandy? (little finger)

Just think how much my pennies can do,
And it makes me glad and happy, too.

This one the children like, on being helpful:

Five little children came in from play,

This is what I heard them say—

This one said, "Let's clean our shoes on the mat." (thumb)

This one said, "Let's hang up our coats and hats." (first finger)

This one said, "Let's wash our hands and faces." (second finger)

This one said, "Let's put our toys in their places." (third finger)

And this one said, "If we always do this way," (little finger)

We'll be helping Mother every day."

Another one for the lesson on the value of vegetables for children:

This little girl eats carrots and peas
(count on fingers)

This little girl eats corn and beans,

This little girl eats cabbage and tomatoes,
This little girl says, "I'm going to eat them all,

So I can grow big and tall." (Raise hands high over head)

(The word boy may be substituted for girl.)

Some finger-plays are effective when sung, such as "This is the way we wash our hands"; or, "One little, two little, three little Indians." One can substitute bluebirds in place of Indians, ending with, "Then little bluebirds gay, (and then) "Along came a kitty-cat and they all flew away."

MANY TIMES, adaptations can be easily made to fit situations as they arise by using a little originality or imagination as we did with "Five Little Birds Sitting in a Tree"—adapted from "Five Little Squirrels." The little birdies saw crumbs on the ground instead of nuts.

When bedtime comes, what child wouldn't love the one about "This little girl (boy) is ready for bed"? Or, the one about the mother doggy, piggy, kitty, or birdie who counts her babies before she puts them to bed. Others that I have found useful in the church school pre-kindergarten work are: "How Baby Grows," "Here's a Ball for Baby," "This

Is the Church Where We're Happy Together," "Five Little Birds Without Any Home," "Five Little Squirrels," "Five Little Jack-o-Lanterns," "This Is Pussy, Sleek and Gray," "Five Little Bluebirds," "The Busy Squirrel," "How to Make a Happy Day," "The Busy Fingers," "My Book," "The Clock," "See My Flowers," "The White Sheep," and "The Engineer."

Short finger-plays are learned quickly, and children love to hear the longer ones over and over again as a story. It is surprising how quickly they will be saying the longer ones with their leader. Many three-year-old children memorize easily and quickly. Of the longer verses, a very lovely one is, "The Bird's Nest." In its three verses, it pictures the nest in the apple tree, what it is made of, the three blue eggs soon to be there, and later on the three baby birds. It tells how busy the big birds will be feeding and tending their family, and finally how, "When winter comes with its ice and snow, off to the warm sunny South they will go."

Another and similar is the "Robin's Nest," also in three verses. I like very much the one about "The Little Worm" who spun a wee house of spider web threads and went fast asleep until the soft spring sunshine wakened the flowers; then the little worm crept slowly out of his web to find he had changed into a beautiful butterfly.

THESE AND OTHERS I have listed can be found, with all instructions as to motions, in the following books:

A Finger-play Book, by Louise M. Oglevee.

A Year of Lessons for the Nursery Child, by Anne Friend Roberts.

Songs for the Pre-School Age, by Aurora Medford Shumate.

These may all be obtained from the Herald Publishing House.

I believe a child who can have fun with finger-plays, action songs, and verses, will be less self-conscious and also will be able to express himself naturally. He will have within him a greater love for all God's living creatures and he will be able to get along better with his friends and playmates.

There's not one of us who does not recall some simple jingle or song which remains with us, and always will be a memorial of something beautiful in our early life—something which planted within us a principle of truth, faith, kindness, mercy, or love.

Worship Suggestions for June

BY BERNA ZERR

Theme for the Month:
CHRIST'S MINISTRY

June 6, 1948

CHRIST'S MINISTRY TO CHILDREN
(Children's Day)

Prelude: "Jesus Is the Children's Friend," Zion's Praises, No. 179.

Call to Worship: (Suggest youth classes do this as choral reading.)

"He commanded that their little children should be brought. So they brought their little children and sat them down upon the ground round about him, and Jesus stood in the midst . . . he commanded the multitude that they should kneel down upon the ground. And . . . he himself also knelt upon the earth, and behold he prayed unto the Father. . . . And no tongue can speak, neither can there be written by any man, neither can the hearts of men conceive so great and marvelous things as we both saw and heard Jesus speak; And no one can conceive of the joy which filled our souls at the time we heard him pray for us unto the Father. And . . . when Jesus had made an end of praying unto the Father, he arose; but so great was the joy of the multitude, that they were overcome. And . . . Jesus spake unto them, and bade them arise. And they arose from the earth, and he said unto them, Blessed are ye because of your faith. And now behold my joy is full. And when he had said these words, he wept, and the multitude bear record of it, and he took their little children one by one, and blessed them, and prayed unto the Father for them . . . and he spake unto the multitude, and saith unto them, Behold your little ones. And as they looked to behold, they cast their eyes towards heaven, and they saw the heavens open, and they saw angels descending out of heaven as it were, in the midst of fire; and they came down and encircled those little ones about; And they were encircled about with fire; and the angels did minister unto them. . . . And they were in number about two thousand and five hundred souls; and they did consist of men, women and children."—3 Nephi 8: 12-27.

Hymn: "Tell Me the Story of Jesus,"
Saints' Hymnal, No. 153.

Prayer of special blessing on the children.

Picture setting (optional): "Jesus and the Children," No. 560, 75c, Herald Publishing House.

Worship Suggestions:

Jesus loved children. He ministered to them. Who was not touched by the tender passages in the morning's Scripture? Who would not wish to be as one of those children? How did Jesus minister to these children? The Scriptures tell us that he took them in his arms. He was warm and loving and affectionate. He gave of his love. He healed many children, he was interested in them, and "was their friend." It was a child's lunch he used in feeding the thousands.

What about our ministry to children? Do we follow Jesus? Have we loved and given ourselves for the children in our midst? Have we even noticed them? Have we used them in God's work? Have we ministered to them in Jesus' stead and in his way? Let us examine ourselves this "Children's Day" and improve our ministry to them in the coming year.

Poem:

WHO WANTS THE BOYS AND GIRLS?

God wants the boys, the merry, merry boys,
The noisy boys, the funny boys,

The thoughtless boys;
God wants the boys with all their joys
That he as gold may make them pure,
And teach them trials to endure,
His heroes brave, he'd have them be,
Fighting for truth and purity.
GOD WANTS THE BOYS!

God wants the happy-hearted girls,
The loving girls, the best of girls,
The worst of girls;

God wants to make the girls his pearls,
And so reflect his holy face,
And bring to mind his wondrous grace,
That beautiful the world may be,
And filled with love and purity.
GOD WANTS THE GIRLS.

—Anonymous.

Closing Hymn: "See Israel's Gentle Shepherd," Saints' Hymnal, No. 364 (Stanzas 1 and 2).

June 13, 1948

CHRIST'S MINISTRY IN HEALING
Prelude: "Come Unto Me, Ye Weary,"
No. 329.

Call to Worship: (Suggest youth participating in Scripture reading, prayer, or poem.)

"And . . . Jesus . . . cast his eyes round about again on the multitude, and beheld they were in tears, and did look steadfastly upon him, as if they would ask him to tarry a little longer with them. And he said unto them, Behold, my bowels are filled with compassion toward you: Have ye any that are sick among you, bring them hither. Have ye any that are lame, or blind, or halt, or maimed, or leprous, or that are withered, or that are deaf, or that are afflicted in any manner, bring them hither, and I will heal them, for I have compassion upon you . . . for I see that your faith is sufficient, that I should heal you . . . all the multitude, with one accord, did go forth, with their sick, and their afflicted, and their lame, and with their blind, and with their dumb, and with all they that were afflicted in any manner; and he did heal them every one as they were brought forth unto him; And they did all, both they who had been healed, and they who were whole, bow down at his feet, and did worship him; And as many as could come, for the multitude, did kiss his feet, insomuch that they did bathe his feet with their tears."—3 Nephi 8: 5-11.

Hymn: "Come Learn of the Meek and Lowly," No. 258.

Prayer.

Worship Suggestions:

"The Spirit of the Lord God is upon me: because the Lord hath anointed me to preach good tidings unto the meek; he hath sent me to bind up the broken-hearted, to proclaim liberty to the captives, and the opening of the prison to them that are bound; To proclaim the acceptable year of the Lord, and the day of vengeance of our God; to comfort all that mourn, To appoint unto them that mourn in Zion, to give unto them beauty for ashes, the oil of joy for mourning, the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness; that they might be called Trees of righteousness."—Isaiah 61: 1-3.

Everyone is acquainted with the healing graces of Christ. All Christians have thrilled to the stories in the New Testament of his great sympathy and compassion for suffering. The Scripture says his mission was to bind up the broken-hearted, to comfort all that mourn, to give the oil of joy for mourning, and the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness. This was Jesus' example to us, and he was successful in it. This is how he gave of himself for others. These were particular ways of loving us. Jesus' way is the way of peace, and it must be our way. Let us not be hearers only, but doers of his way. We, too, must "bind up the broken-hearted, comfort those who mourn, and give the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness." May the coming week find us more skilled and more desirous of fulfilling this part of our mission.

Poem: No. 339 may be played softly as poem is read.

COMFORT ONE ANOTHER

Comfort one another,
For the way is often dreary,
And the feet are often weary,
And the heart is very sad.
There is a heavy burden bearing,
When it seems that none are caring,
And we half forget
That we were ever glad.

Comfort one another
With the hand clasp close and tender,
With the sweetness love can render,
And the looks of friendly eyes.
Do not wait with grace unspoken,
While life's daily bread is broken—
Gentle speech is oft
Like manna from the skies.
—Anonymous.

Closing Hymn: "Send Me Forth, O Blessed Master," No. 214.

June 20, 1948

CHRIST'S MINISTRY IN TEACHING (Father's Day)

Prelude: "I'm Pressing on the Upward Way," No. 241.

Picture Setting: "Christ in the Temple With the Doctors." (Few available—sepia, No. 6, 15c, Herald Publishing House.)

Hymn: "Sing Them Over Again to Me," No. 335.

Prayer: Suggest prayer of thanks for the good fathers, and a blessing of help to all men who serve as fathers in any capacity.

Scripture Reading: (Suggest young class do this as a group or by individual verses.)

"Hear ye therefore the parable of the sower. When any one heareth the word of the kingdom, and understandeth not, then cometh the wicked one, and catcheth away that which was sown in his heart; this is he who received seed by the wayside. But he that received the seed into stony places, the same is he that heareth the word and readily with joy receiveth it, yet he hath not root in himself, and endureth but for a while; for when tribulation or persecution ariseth because of the word, by and by he is offended. He also who received seed among the thorns, is he that heareth the word; and the care of this world and the deceitfulness of riches, choke the word, and he becometh unfruitful. But he that received seed into the good ground, is he that heareth the word and understandeth and endureth; which also beareth fruit, and bringeth forth, some an hundred-fold, some sixty, and some thirty."—Matthew 13: 17-21, Inspired Version.

Worship Suggestions:

"Show me thy ways, O Lord, Teach me thy paths."—Psalm 25: 4. Christ was the greatest teacher of all. His first teaching experience probably is the one recorded in the picture, "Christ and the Doctors." Later he taught thousands who followed him and sat at his feet. In contrast, when he came to Nazareth and began to teach in the synagogue, he was not received. Those who heard were "filled with wrath," and attempted to take his life. Today we pay tribute to the "fathers," those good men who have nurtured either their own or others' young, and been an inspiration and guide to them in life. The Bible tells us that the father is the head of his house. Those who have done the job well are the ones who have sat at the Master's feet, let the seed fall on good ground, and brought forth good fruit. They have been "teachable." How have we responded to the Great Teacher? Are we the stony ground? Would we have listened and obeyed or been like the folk at Nazareth? Let us be eager. Let us obey. Let us come before him with meekness and humility and receive his message. Let fathers, mothers, children—all, come and learn of his ways, and be taught by the Teacher of Men.

Closing Hymn: "Tell Me the Old, Old Story," No. 334.

June 27, 1948

CHRIST'S MINISTRY TO THE CHURCH

Prelude: "Onward to Zion," No. 436.

Call to Worship:

"Verily, verily, I say unto you, I give unto you to be the light of the world; a city that is set on a hill cannot be hid. Behold, do men light a candle and put it under a bushel? Nay, but on a candlestick; and it giveth light to all that are in the house. Therefore, let your light so shine before this world, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father who is in heaven."—Matthew 5: 16-18, Inspired Version.

Hymn: "The Church's One Foundation," No. 359.

Prayer for the great work of the church.

Mixed Quartet: "You May Sing of the Beauty of Mountain and Dale," No. 109.

Worship Suggestions:

"Husbands, love your wives, even as Christ also loved the church, and GAVE HIMSELF FOR IT."—Ephesians 5: 25. Christ gave his life for the church. She is his bride, his love, and his interest. Through the church, Christ can do his work of saving souls—through its activities and members he can reach sinners. The church is his medium of light in this dark world.

We are the people of his church—the children, the women, the men. We use the church, we serve, we worship, and we witness. How? With what quality? Do we love his church as he does? Are we giving our lives as he did for it? We must answer "yes." We must trim our lamps that our light will not be darkened, that our church might be a bright light on the hill. May his church, his bride, be ready when he comes and enters into his abode.

Poem: (Suggest Saints' Hymnal No. 211 be played softly during reading of poem.)

Hold high the torch.
You did not light its glow—
'Twas given you by other hands you know.
'Tis yours to keep it burning bright;
Yours to pass on when you no more need light,
For there are other feet that we must guide;
And other forms go marching by our side;
Their eyes are watching every smile and tear
And efforts which we think are not worthwhile,
Are sometimes just the helps they need,
Actions to which their souls would give most heed
So that in turn they'll hold it high
And say, "I watched someone carry it this way."
If brighter paths should beckon you to choose,
Would you small gain compare with all you'd lose?

Hold high the torch.
You did not light its glow—
'Twas given you by other hands, you know.
I think it started down its pathway bright,
The day the Master said, "Let there be light."
And he once said, who hung on Calvary's tree—
"Ye are the light of the world. Go—shine for me."

—Author unknown.

Closing Hymn: "O Lord of Light," No. 299.

Fortieth Wedding Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Lambert of Marlette, Michigan, celebrated their fortieth wedding anniversary on Sunday, April 4. All members of the immediate family were present for the occasion. Mr. Lambert is active as a priest in the Marlette congregation, and Mrs. Lambert is teacher of the adult class in the women's department.

Education in the Shadow of War

By F. CARL MESLE

A FEW WEEKS ago the mother of a young Latter Day Saint came to me and posed this question: "I would like my son to go on to college, but he feels so sure our country will soon be at war, or he will be put in uniform anyway, that there is no use starting college now. Do you think he is right?"

At the time, I answered that I felt her son was wrong, but my off-hand reply did not satisfy me. This mother's question has stuck with me like a thorn in my side, for I feel that it is typical of an attitude of fatalism which, if allowed to run free, could be more disastrous to our church and our nation than would war itself.

In this article, then, I should like to examine further the young man's theory and attempt at the same time to give a more nearly complete answer to the mother.

First, what are the possibilities of immediate war? I wish I knew the answer to that question; a few statesmen and military men would like to know, too. The best we can do is to consider the factors as they now stand and try to draw our conclusions from them.

Let me say it is my opinion that immediate war is unlikely. Here are the reasons:

1. Nobody wants war. I should hardly suppose that the rulers in the Kremlin are anxious to invite an atomic bomb-burst over its ancient wall. No more does the president wish for such a bomb over the White House, or the Secretary of defense over the Pentagon, or you over your home. Those nations which were engaged heavily in the last war are tired of physical combat; they are all still licking their wounds.

2. Russia is in no condition now to wage a successful war against us, even if she wanted to. She took too much destruction from the Nazis. Her dams are not yet completely rebuilt; her industry has not had time to recover to normal production—to say nothing of being prepared to stock-pile for and supply a major war.

3. To date, only this nation has the atomic bomb and an air force to

Here Is the Writer

Frank Carl Mesle, Jr., a native of Sherrill, New York, is a graduate of Graceland College and the University of Iowa. Drafted early in the war, he spent five years in the Army, and at the time of his discharge, was serving as a major in the Corps of Engineers in Washington, D. C. Before accepting general church appointment last September, he was a field executive for the Boy Scouts of America. Now he is director of youth activities in Zion with offices in the Auditorium. He and his wife, the former Kay Sprague, have two daughters, Cherry and Ann.

use it with any degree of success in anything but a surprise attack. General Groves, head of the Army Engineer project which manufactured the first bomb, maintains that the job of producing an atomic bomb by a dictatorial nation is doubly hard because the effort involves two factors which are most difficult for a dictatorship to condone. One is the endless failures which precede success, and the other is an industrial capacity and "know-how" that has so far been achieved only under our system of free enterprise.

Yet, even as we say immediate war is not likely, we must accept the fact that it is always possible. Here are some reasons for thinking this:

A. Following the First World War, there was a great deal of the same type of name-calling and verbal "pushing around" that we now witness. In the early twenties, I can recall seeing war-scare headlines such as those appearing today. Now as then, we and our war allies have emerged as victors in a hard fought conflict. We may hate war, but at the same time we have felt our strength and have rather gloried in our military prowess. As a result of raising ourselves to a position of world leadership, we have developed a natural swagger which says to the world, "We don't like being pushed around, and we don't have to stand for it, so keep out of our way."

The trouble is that Russia, whose magnificent war effort cannot be denied, is in a similar position. Russia's attitude is, "We've proved ourselves; now, we have some ideas about how this world should be run, and we don't like to be pushed around either, so keep out of our way."

When two major powers start swinging at the chips on each other's shoulders, there is always the possibility one of them will accidentally clip the other on the jaw.

B. There are those who believe that the Soviet government might have to strike out so aggressively as to produce war against another nation in order to use the resulting nationalistic loyalties to keep the nation united and to avoid an internal revolution which might deny the present leaders power. This seems to be the historic course of modern dictatorship.

The wisest course for our nation, therefore, would seem to be along the lines now being attempted by the administration:

New Horizons

1. To prepare to resist possible attack. This preparation will require a military machine designed to fight the next war, not the last one, that we must assure.

2. To seek to avoid war—but without compromising our principles as a Christian people—to help share the burdens of our brothers in need or our liberties as a free people, wherein the dignity of the individual is supreme. There are two further reasons for this:

a. For the sake of peace itself, war is costly and degrading to both the victor and the vanquished.

b. To give Russia an opportunity to straighten herself out. The pendulum swings both ways—from left to right as well as from right to left. The Russian people are as human as we. The various Soviet “plans” for the development of Russia contain much that is good. They reflect an idealism not often recognized because of ruthless administration. These plans, calling for improved agricultural methods and better industry, require a trained people to carry them out. Increased education coupled with the remnants of religion in Russia may eventually produce an “enlightened” people, and enlightened people do not mix well with dictatorship.

Left to work out its own destiny, Russia may yet rid itself of its own vices and soften its harsh communism into a workable, peaceful socialism through a process of national evolution; or, it may turn itself upside down again through revolution.

BUT THIS MAY seem to be far from the subject; so let us return to the young man who doesn’t think it worth-while to start college now.

By all means, fellow, go on to school. Six months, one year, two years of college are better than none. Your appetite will be whetted for more knowledge and, even in uniform, you can continue a certain amount of your studies.

If called into service, whatever training you have will count toward your advancement in rank and responsibility. I personally have heard

The Trouble-Shooter

QUESTION: In our study class we have come across the line, “Lead us not into temptation,” in the Book of Mormon version of the Lord’s Prayer. Why does this not read, “Suffer us not to be lead into temptation” as in the Inspired Version of the Bible?

ANSWER: By Evan A. Fry

Let’s face the facts. Either the Inspired Version rendition of this prayer is wrong, or the Book of Mormon version is wrong. They can’t both be right. We are embarrassed and at a loss for explanations only if we start with the premise that either the Book of Mormon or the Inspired Version of the Bible—or both—are absolutely infallible and letter-perfect, made so by perfect and infallible inspiration.

So far as I know, this church has never made that claim for any of its Three Standard Books. On one occasion, Joseph Smith said something to the effect that the Book of Mormon was the most correct of any book on earth, but my recollection of the context is that he was speaking specifically of its doctrinal content rather than of its phraseology. Personally, I regard it as utterly impossible for Joseph Smith to have translated the Book of Mormon word for word; that is, receiving by inspiration a word to correspond with each symbol on the plates. (For a more complete discussion of this subject, see “How Did We Get the Book of Mormon?” Saints’ Herald, Volume 92, page 850.)

A far more tenable theory is that Joseph Smith was made to know the sense or meaning of the symbols and left to phrase them in his own language. What could be more natural than that he should translate the Lord’s Prayer into the phraseology most familiar to him?

Let me illustrate. One of my university courses was in “Old English,” that is, English as it was written at about the time of King Arthur. “Old English” bears about as much relation to modern English as German does; it requires translation. One day, our translation exercise consisted of the familiar parable of the wheat and the tares. The vocabulary, the word order, even the grammatical constructions were totally different from modern English. Yet, as I translated, I found myself involuntarily and inescapably reverting to the familiar phraseology of the King James Version.

I surmise that something like this happened to Joseph Smith as he translated the Book of Mormon and came to the familiar words of the Lord’s Prayer. He ran ahead of his inspiration and slipped. This is not the only such mistake in the Book of Mormon. We cannot consistently claim absolute infallibility and perfection for the Book of Mormon, any more than we can for the Bible—even the Inspired Version. We must judge both by the over-all picture they present, the theology and morality they teach, and the principles of life they espouse.

Because there is this possibility of imperfection in all Three Standard Books, we should be thankful that we have three, so that we may compare one with another and resolve seeming contradictions in the light of the preponderance of evidence, common sense, sound reasoning, and continued inspiration.

too many fellows, who might have gone to college before the last war, bemoaning the lack of the two years of college which originally kept them from training as a pilot or from going to Officer Candidate School to belittle the importance of college in the Army.

The man who comes to the Army, Navy, or Air Force with a back-

Youngstown District Conference

The Youngstown, Ohio, District Conference will be held at the church in Youngstown, 17 East Earl Avenue, on Sunday, May 9. Apostle D. Blair Jensen is to be present. Activities of the day include a 9:30 a.m. prayer service; preaching at 11; lunch at noon; and a business meeting for the election of district officers and General Conference delegates at 2:30 in the afternoon.

W. G. McCune,
District President.

London District Conference

The Saints of London District will hold their annual conference on Sunday, May 16, at London, Ontario. Elder C. B. Hartshorn, editor of church school literature, will be the guest speaker.

IDA L. BAYNE,
District Secretary.

Maine District Conference

The spring conference of Maine District will be held at Stonington on May 15 and 16. In addition to the usual business session, delegates to the 1948 General Conference will be elected. Apostle George Lewis, Bishop D. O. Chesworth, and Missionary Don Harvey are to be in attendance. An all-day meeting will be held in Jonesport on Sunday, May 9.

NEWMAN WILSON,
District President.

British Columbia Convention

The spring convention of the British Columbia District will be held in the Vancouver Church, 2700 Dundas Street, on May 28, 29, and 30. A banquet is scheduled for Saturday in the Stanley Park pavillion. Guest speaker for the convention will be Apostle Roscoe Davey.

Toronto District Conference and Church School Institute

The Toronto District Conference and Church School Institute will be held on May 8 and 9. Chris B. Hartshorn, editor of church school literature, will conduct classes on Saturday at 3:30, 7:30, and 8:30 p.m.; he will also be the speaker at 10 a.m. and 7 p.m. on Sunday. Other Sunday activities include the regular church school service at 11:15; business meeting and election of General Conference delegates at 2:30 p.m.; and a panel quiz at 3:45.

BETHENE BAVINGTON,
District Secretary.

Special Services at Kalamazoo

The Kalamazoo, Michigan, branch will hold an all-day meeting on Sunday, May 2, at the formal opening of its new church building (Fairfax at South Rose). Services are as follows: 9:15 a.m., fellowship; 11, address by President Israel Smith; 2 p.m., talks by district officers; 3, sermon by Apostle E. J. Gleazer; 7:30, closing talk by Apostle Gleazer. Members of surrounding districts are invited to attend.

M. J. ROBINSON,
Publicity Chairman.

Books Wanted

Alvin Knisley, 1427 West Waldo, Independence, Missouri, wishes to obtain a copy of his book: Revelations in Our Times, which is now out of print. Please write stating the price of the book before sending it.

ground of advanced education greatly increases his chances of finding military service an opportunity to further training in leadership or technical fields and a valuable experience in his life rather than the pointless "sentence" that it often proves to be.

If you are not called into service, going to college now is even more in your favor. First, your vocation can be determined more by choice than by blind chance, for the world is seeking men who are qualified to fill its positions of leadership. The man who guides his own life in harmony with divine law rather than as pure circumstance dictates accomplishes more, and out of his accomplishments comes the satisfactions which bring happiness.

Academic education alone can hardly equip us both to meet life's problems and to make a contribution to our fellow man. The understanding and direction which come from studying our religious principles and from constant communion with God must be allowed to guide our thinking. Even so, there first must be cultivated the desire and willingness to think and to seek knowledge, or we will not be equipped to do what we might most desire to do in this one short life on earth.

If we aspire to do Christ's work on earth, to whom else but those who recognize it can he look to to help bring heaven close to earth?

WHETHER IT BE through healing the sick of body or tending the wounds of a nation, through building the city, Zion, or through steadying the helm of the United Nations, the task of building the kingdom of God on earth can be handled only by men and women of courage, conviction and training.

And so, to this young man and others, I repeat: If there is any doubt left in your mind, don't wait for the initiative to be taken from you; go forward now. If you can possibly do it, go on to college, never forgetting that God is near and that your church, community, and nation have a job for you to do. If you cannot go to college, seek out the next best means of qualifying yourself to make your contribution to the heritage which is yours, which you must pass on to others, enriched because you have lived.

Finding My Place Through Service

(Continued from page 16.)

we dislike doing. If we always did just the easy things we like to do, we would not grow and God's kingdom would never be established.

Let us give of ourselves and our love; as we give, we will find resident within us possibilities of service we had not dreamed were there. It is this love which our friends extend to us when hope, faith in the future, and all our plans collapse; without it we would fail utterly. Sometimes it is the very person who appears so poised and sure of himself who is in need of the most help. Keep the light of your love forever burning that all may see and be warmed by its glow.

Let us give of ourselves in service to others that we, with them, may find happiness with God.

Finds Inspiration in Herald

The Saints' Herald is such an inspiration to me that I feel life would be empty without it. Throughout my twenty-five years of membership in the Reorganized Church, I have never lived near a branch. Although isolated, I have not had the slightest desire to join another church, for by reading the Herald, my faith has grown stronger. I still trust that someday I may be a part of a Latter Day Saints congregation—perhaps one which I can help to organize. If there were others here who were interested, I'm sure we could start a mission. I shall appreciate hearing from any members who live near Ft. Pierce or plan to come here in the future.

Mrs. W. A. Stokes
Ft. Pierce, Florida

Correspondence Wanted

Mrs. Paul A. May, 422 South Columbia, Albuquerque, New Mexico, will welcome correspondence from other members.

REQUESTS FOR PRAYERS

Mrs. Pearl Burgess, 14 Lava Road, Bend, Oregon, requests prayers for her daughter, Geraldine Hunter, who must soon undergo an operation.

ENGAGEMENTS

Hield-Spargo

Mr. and Mrs. William Spargo of Minneapolis, Minnesota, announce the engagement of their daughter, Patricia Jeanne, to Norman Rex Hield, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Hield of Chicago, Illinois. Both Miss Spargo and Mr. Hield will be graduated from Graceland College this spring. The wedding will take place in early fall.

WEDDINGS

Smith-Yelverton

Patricia Yelverton of St. Louis, Missouri, and William C. Smith of Jackson, Mississippi, were married on March 19 at the home of Elder A. G. Miller in Vanleave, Mississippi, Elder Miller officiating. The bride, a Graceland graduate, is employed by a Jackson law firm; the groom is an employee of the telephone company. They are making their home in Jackson.

Johnson-Cotton

Vicky Cotton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Cotton, and Clark Johnson were married April 4 at Central Church in Los Angeles, California. Elder L. J. Ostertag read the double-ring ceremony. The bride is a graduate of Graceland, class of '45. The groom is a veteran of World War II, having served four years in the Navy. They are making their home in California.

Horton-Pedler

Joyce Mildred Pedler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Pedler, and Mervyn George Horton, son of Elder and Mrs. Floyd Horton, were married at the Reorganized Church in Caseville, Michigan, on April 10, the groom's father officiating. They are making their home in Caseville.

Brockman-Yahnig

Dorothy Yahnig, daughter of Mrs. Henry Yahnig, and Charles Brockman, both of Stewartville, Missouri, were married April 4 at a home service. Elder Gordon Hidy read the double-ring ceremony. They are making their home in Stewartville, where Mr. Brockman is an employee of the Stewartville State Bank.

Nuzum-Miller

Allison Grace Miller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Miller of Columbus, Ohio, and Harry K. Nuzum, also of Columbus, were united in marriage on March 18 at the Reorganized Church. Elder Charles A. Ferguson read the double-ring ceremony.

Bayless-Berridge

Barbara L. Berridge, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Barnett S. Berridge of Warrensburg, Missouri, formerly of McAllen, Texas, and William Bayless, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Bayless of Springfield, Missouri, were married on March 28 at the Reorganized Church in Warrensburg by Clair Weldon. They returned to Graceland College following their honeymoon where Mrs. Bayless (a Graceland graduate of 1947) will continue working in the library, and Mr. Bayless is a student.

Van Eaton-Webb

Maurine Webb, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Webb of San Antonio, Texas, and Wallace G. Van Eaton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Guy F. Van Eaton of Shellbrook, Saskatchewan, were married December 1 at the First Reorganized Church in San Antonio. Pastor H. E. Winegar performed the double-ring ceremony. The groom is a graduate of Graceland College and will soon be graduated from the Texas Chiropractic College in San Antonio.

Crabb-Jones

Elinor E. Jones, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Jones, Sr., of Denver, Colorado, and S/Sgt. Arthur C. Crabb of Sagle, Idaho, were married February 26 at the Reorganized Church in Denver, Pastor Merle Howard officiating. They are living in Salina, Kansas, where Sgt. Crabb is stationed with the Fifteenth Air Force.

Short-Duffey

Geraldine Duffey and William L. Short, both of Independence, Missouri, were married on March 13 at the Englewood Church.

NOTE: This is a correction of the wedding announcement that appeared in the April 3 issue of the Herald which gave June Short as the groom.

BIRTHS

Mr. and Mrs. Walter A. Burns of Germfask, Michigan, announce the birth of a son, Samuel LeRoy Arthur, born March 21. He was blessed on April 11 by Elder William Bushila.

A daughter, Cheryl Elisabeth, was born on November 4 to Mr. and Mrs. John Gann of Sacramento, California. Mrs. Gann is the former Phillipa Honeychurch.

A daughter, Shirley Ann, was born on September 11 to Mr. and Mrs. Herschel Damitz of Sacramento, California. Mrs. Damitz is the former Marjorie Beckett.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Grub of Nelsonville, Ohio, announce the birth of a son, born March 24. Mrs. Grub is the former Wilma Easterling.

A son, Ronald Ray, was born on March 30 to Mr. and Mrs. Raymond J. Thornburg of Osborne, Kansas. Mrs. Thornburg is the former Ardyce Mae Wilson.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur M. Radcliffe of Denver, Colorado, announce the birth of a son, William Ralph, born March 9. He was blessed on April 11 by Elders E. J. Williams and R. S. Salyards. Mrs. Radcliffe was LaNelle Marie Ralph before her marriage.

A daughter, Linda Lou, was born to Mr. and Mrs. John Leathers of Forrest, Illinois, on March 6.

A daughter, Dawn Lee, was born to Mr. and Mrs. Paul Winans of Boone, Iowa, on September 9. She was blessed November 23 by Elders E. G. Tucker and F. T. Mussell.

A son, Thomas Elon, was born on October 20 to Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Tucker of Boone, Iowa. He was blessed on November 23 by Elders F. T. Mussell and E. G. Tucker.

DEATHS

MATHEWS.—Marguerite A. Juliff, was born December 11, 1901, in London, England, and died at the Independence Sanitarium on February 20, 1948. She came with her family to Canada when she was eight years old, moving to Independence, Missouri, soon after. She was baptized into the Reorganized Church on August 21, 1910, and remained a faithful member throughout her life. On January 15, 1923, she married Edgar C. Mathews; four children were born to this marriage, one of whom preceded her in death.

She leaves her husband; two sons: Edward Eugene and Robert S.; and a daughter, Elizabeth, all of the home in Independence; two stepsons: Edgar Lewis Mathews of Houston, Texas, and William Frank Mathews of Sulphur Springs, Texas; and a sister, Mrs. Annie Heather of Independence. Services were conducted at the Speaks Funeral Home, Elders Glaude A. Smith and Amos T. Higdon officiating. Interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery.

CURTIS.—Pearl May Downs, was born September 14, 1898, at Cherokee, Oklahoma, and died at her home near Independence, Missouri, on March 6, 1948. She was baptized into the Reorganized Church on August 27, 1916, at Baker, Arkansas, and came to Missouri in 1917. On December 13, 1919, she was married to Elmer Curtis; seven children were born to this union.

She is survived by her husband; three sons: Elmer Keith of Casper, Wyoming; James E. and Dwight C. of the home; four daughters: Mrs. Pearl Chappellow of Independence; Mrs. Pauline Dike of Blue Springs, Missouri; Betty Jane and Frances Lynne Curtis of the home; her mother, Mrs. Lucy Downs of Independence; two sisters: Mrs. P. S. Shupe of Jericho Springs, Missouri, and Mrs. Harry Austin of Casper; two brothers: Sanford and Harley Downs, both of Independence; and four grandchildren. Funeral services were held at the George C. Carson Chapel, Elder Glaude A. Smith officiating. Interment was in Woodlawn Cemetery.

GILL.—Norman Clarence, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alton E. Gill, was born December 4, 1947, at Sandpoint Idaho, and died on February 20, 1948, in Spokane, Washington. He was blessed by Elders P. A. Worthington and D. E. Coleman on January 4, 1948.

Besides his parents, who live in Spokane, he is survived by a brother, Lloyd; a sister, Viola Mary; his maternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence D. Crabb of Sagle, Idaho; his paternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. John Gill of Escatawpa, Mississippi; a great-grandmother, Mrs. Mary Jenkins of Vay, Idaho; and a great-grandfather, John Crabb of Sandpoint. Funeral services were held at the grave side in a cemetery near Vay. Evangelist J. F. Curtis officiated, assisted by Elders R. W. Moore and R. R. Briggs.

McQUISTON.—Mary E., daughter of Joseph and Ida Marshall, was born October 7, 1887, and died suddenly on March 10, 1948. She was baptized on August 23, 1909, and was married to Theodore D. McQuiston on August 17, 1910, at Belvidere, Illinois. Throughout her life, she was a faithful member of the church and loved to talk of the gospel.

Besides her husband, she leaves a son, Wilbur J. of Marinett, Wisconsin; a brother, George of Beloit, Wisconsin; a sister, Mrs. Charlotte Vickers of Belvidere; and one grandson. Services were held at the Atkins and Johnson Funeral Home, Elder J. O. Dutton officiating. Interment was in Belvidere cemetery.

BOGEL.—Lois Eloise, daughter of Walter and Ardell Anderson of Wedron, Illinois, was born February 8, 1921, at Ottawa and died February 6, 1948, at St. Mary's Hospital, DeKalb, Illinois. She was married to Wayne E. Bogel on April 26, 1941; three children were born to this marriage. She had been a member of the Reorganized Church since June 26, 1932.

She is survived by her husband; three sons: Gary, Jerry, and Bruce; her parents; her paternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. George Anderson; and a brother, Kenneth, of Graceland College. The funeral was held at Mission Branch Church.

Reunion Schedule-1948

No. Dakota	Jun. 11-Jun. 13	Am. Leg. Pk., Detroit Lakes, Minnesota
E. Montana	Jun. 19-Jun. 27	Fairview, Mont.
Texas	Jun. 25-July 4	Bandera, Texas
Owen Sound & Toronto	Jun. 26-July 4	Port Elgin, Ont.
New York & Philadelphia	July 3-July 11	Deer Park
Southwest Kansas	July 3-July 11	Arkansas City, Kansas
Gulf States	July 9-July 18	Brewton, Ala.
W. Colorado	July 10-July 11	Delta, Colorado
Manitoba	July 10-July 11	Winnipeg, Man.
Central Missouri	July 10-July 18	Odessa, Missouri
Saskatchewan	July 10-July 18	Sylvan Lake, Alberta
Alberta	July 19-July 26	Gardner Lake
Zion Nauvoo	July 17-July 25	Nauvoo, Illinois
So. New England	July 17-July 25	Onset, Mass.
Northern California	July 17-July 25	Asilomar, Monterey, California
Flint-Pt. Huron-Detroit	July 24-Aug. 1	Blue Water, Michigan
Windsor Kentucky & Tennessee	July 25-Aug. 1	Paris, Tennessee
Northwest	July 30-Aug. 8	Silver Lake, Washington
Chatham-London	July 30-Aug. 8	Erie Beach, Ontario, Canada
Can. & So. Michigan	July 31-Aug. 8	Liahona Park
Mo. Valley	July 31-Aug. 8	Woodbine, Iowa
Maine	July 31-Aug. 8	Brooksville, Me.
So. California	July 31-Aug. 8	Pacific Palisades
No. & West. Michigan	Aug. 5-Aug. 15	Park of the Pines
Kirtland	Aug. 6-Aug. 15	Kirtland, Ohio
Reunion of the Ozarks	Aug. 1-Aug. 8	Racine, Missouri
Oklahoma	Aug. 7-Aug. 15	Pawnee, Okla.
W. Montana	Aug. 7-Aug. 15	Race Track, Montana
Arizona	Aug. 8-Aug. 15	Prescott, Arizona
Arkansas & Louisiana	Aug. 9-Aug. 15	Clear Fork Cp., Hot Spgs., Ark.
Minnesota & Wisconsin	Aug. 9-Aug. 16	Chetek, Wisc.
Far West	Aug. 12-Aug. 22	Stewartville, Missouri
So. Indiana	Aug. 21-Aug. 29	Bedford, Ind.
Eastern Michigan	Aug. 14-Aug. 22	Cash, Michigan
Idaho	Aug. 14-Aug. 21	Hagerman, Idaho
Des Moines	Aug. 15-Aug. 21	Guthrie Center, Iowa
Lamoni	Aug. 15-Aug. 22	Lamoni, Iowa
S. E. Illinois	Aug. 20-Aug. 29	Brush Creek, Ill.
Eastern Colorado	Aug. 20-Aug. 29	Colorado Springs, Colorado

Program Materials and Program Folders

MOTHER'S DAY PROGRAMS

Standard Mother's Day Book No. 3

A storehouse of materials of all kinds, including pageants, playlets, programs, recitations, music, etc. Features full-length pageant, "Mothers of Long Ago." 48 pages. Price, 30c.

CHURCH SCHOOL SERVICES

Mother's Day in Song and Story

A Mother's Day songbook and service combined. Price, 10c each; $1 a dozen.

Jewels for Mother's Day

Songs and recitations for the Mother's Day church school service. Price, 10c each. $1 a dozen.

Mother Mine

By Robert Whitmore and Others

A complete service for Mother's Day, including songs and recitations. Price, 10c each.

PAGEANTS AND PLAYS

Mothers of Long Ago

By Louise Miller Novotny

Noted mothers of history speak messages for mothers of today and tomorrow in this Mother's Day pageant.

The pageant can be elaborate or simple. Price, 10c each; $1.00 a dozen.

(Also included in "The Standard Mother's Day Book No. 3.")

Eureka Mother's Day Book No. 2

Edited by Mattie B. Shannon

Program material for kindergartners, primaries, juniors, and young people. Included is a program for a mother and daughter banquet. Price, 15c.

PAGEANTS AND PLAYS

CHILDREN'S DAY

Standard Children's Day Book No. 2

This contains the 16-page service, "Follow Me," and 24 pages of well-chosen miscellaneous materials, playlets, poems, stories, articles, and songs. Price, 30c each.

The Golden Chain

By Martha Bayly and Roy E. Nolte

This pageant for kindergartners, primaries, juniors, and junior highs is the story of two children sent into the garden by their mother to learn Bible verses. In an interesting way they are shown the value of co-operation for both individuals and nations. Cast may vary. 1 hour. Price, 35c each; $3.60 a dozen.

Summer's Festival of Praise

By Mattie B. Shannon

A nature pageant with scriptural application for kindergartners, primaries, juniors, and junior highs. Cast may vary. Price, 35c each; $3.60 a dozen.

A Children's Day Dream

By Lucy King DeMoss

A sixteen-page play to be used in preparation for a missionary offering. The two leading characters may be taken by senior boys. Other characters are a group of junior and junior high boys and girls, and another group of children who are brightly costumed and represent different nations. The general conversation of the play is interest in the welfare of each nation and how to spread the gospel to all. Price, 10c each.

CHURCH SCHOOL SERVICES

Follow Me

By Lucy King DeMoss

This playlet (also included in Standard Children's Day Book No. 2) tells a missionary story in which the young people portray interesting scenes in connection with Moffat, Livingstone, Grenfall, Africaner—the old chief—and a number of others. Price, 10c each.

for Mother's Day and Children's Day

(Substitution will be made if supply is exhausted.)

Make a beautiful service more beautiful with program folders.

100 for $1.75
250 for $4
500 for $7
1,000 for $12

(No order for less than 50 folders accepted.)

HERALD PUBLISHING HOUSE

The song of the righteous is a prayer unto me.

—Doctrine and Covenants.

Photo by Clifford Carver

THE Saints Herald

VOLUME 95

MAY 8, 1948

NUMBER 19

www.LatterDayTruth.org

The Graceland College A Cappella Choir

AUDITORIUM NEWS

... is celebrating its twenty-fifth anniversary this year. Founded in 1923 by Mabel Carlile, the organization is now directed by Herbert C. Lively of the Graceland music faculty.

Ten members of the fifty-voice organization are shown in the photograph on the cover of this week's Herald. They are (left to right)—first row: Dana Wendelburg, Independence, Missouri; Charlotte Engle, Brielle, New Jersey; second row: Frances Malcolm, Yakima, Washington; Betty Lusha, Chicago, Illinois; Bonny Lou Haferkemp, Temple City, California; third row: Robert Rose, Delta, Colorado; Charles Vreeland, Hagerman, Idaho; Alma Blair, Creston, Iowa; fourth row: Ronald Lentell, Independence; and Gordon Mesley, Kansas City, Missouri.

* GRACELAND COLLEGE, at Lamoni, Iowa, was recently the place of meeting for the Alumni Council. Principal item of business was consideration of the needs of Graceland. The College is crowded with an enrollment that has recently doubled and promises to continue growing. Greatest need now is for a Student Center building, for which $38,000 is on hand, and $22,000 is needed so that building can be started. This $60,000 building will help Graceland keep in step with expanding student needs. Alumni and friends of Graceland are being called to provide this help for church young people.

* APOSTLE MAURICE L. DRAPER announces that the new church at Memphis, Tennessee, will hold its first service on May 9. Brother Draper will begin a week's series of services there on May 24.

* YOUTH CAMPS. Apostle Charles R. Hield reports a Youth Camp for Southern California will be held at San Bernardino, May 7, 8, and 9. Then he will be associated with Apostle W. Wallace Smith at a Youth Camp near Tucson, Arizona, on May 14, 15, and 16.

* A PASTORS' LEADERSHIP TRAINING SCHOOL, with about eighty men from Central Missouri, Zion, and Kansas City Stake has been meeting once a month at Englewood Church, Independence, as part of a year's program of study. The current topic of study is, "Administration of Religious Education in the Branch," with F. M. McDowell and John Darling leading the discussion.

* MARRIAGE AND HOME PROBLEMS are treated in a kit of booklets and helps for counseling for a Melchisedec Priesthood Institute on May 10 and 11.

It is a secret of a happy life to appreciate all the good things that come your way, to be as little disturbed as possible by conditions you do not like and cannot change, and to make the best of everything as you go along. Many things can hurt you less if you change your feeling about them.

* DANDELIONS. Anywhere in the Midwest, dandelions flourish with a maddening impudence. The little golden flower is pretty, but the gray seed-heads that follow them in two days are ghastly. Some struggle to keep them dug out, some frankly give up. In the pretty park areas near the Auditorium, men are using some of the new spray weed killer to arrest the infestation. Hitherto, the prolific dandelion has won against every device of man. We watch with interest to see what will happen to it with the new spray.

IN THIS ISSUE

EDITORIAL:

A Message to the Church	3
Ministry to College Students	4

OFFICIAL:

Conference for College Students	4
---------------------------------	---

ARTICLES:

"Feed My Lambs," by Chris B. Hartsborn	5
Time Out for Living, by Louise Wrigley	7
Family Tree of Protestantism, by Elbert A. Smith	8
Firstly the Rich, by Patriarch Ray Whiting	10
Faith in God, by Seventy Glen H. Johnson	11
Other Sheep I Have Which Are Not of This Fold, by Roy Weldon	12
Briefs	15
She'd Rather Be Liked, by Naomi Russell	16
My Church Is Just What I Put Into It, by Marie Gosline	17
Agnes and the Zinnia, by Mrs. A. Headley	17
An Open Letter to the Zion's League, by Eugene A. Theys	18
What Can I Believe In? by Doris Miller	19
Letters	20
Bulletin Board	22

A Message to the Church

SINCE THE CLOSE of the 1947 General Conference, as proposed in the report of the First Presidency at that time, members of the presiding quorums have visited every mission except the South Sea Islands, and every major domestic center of church endeavor. At a Joint Council which ended recently, the observations made in these many contacts with the Saints over such a wide area were shared among the brethren, and the following conclusions were reached or confirmed:

The Church of Jesus Christ is one body. No matter where our people are located, in the degree to which they have felt the Spirit and genius of the work, they are one people; united in vital things, in godly endeavor, and in devotion to the kingdom.

Throughout the church there is a quickening of missionary activity. The good news from missions abroad is paralleled by good news from missions in the land of Zion; yet everywhere there is sober realization that the mere increase of numbers is not enough. Our best people, in our most truly representative branches, are trying earnestly to lead their friends and their neighbors to a genuine experience with Christ and to a commanding devotion to his cause.

We have been humbled and yet heartened as we have shared the devotional life of the Saints in the homes of rich and poor and in the many churches in which we have worshiped. But we have been impressed, as on many other occasions, that there is an art of worship. This art does not have its roots in elaborate ritual, but in the deep and sustained and sacrificial devotion of the faithful. When we approach our Heavenly Father in the beauty of holiness, he always meets us with the grace of his favor.

One of the distinctive characteristics of the Church of Jesus Christ in every age has been the commanding part played in her development by those who have served for love of the cause without hope of material recompense. As never before, we have been impressed by the truly divine wisdom embodied in the principle that "all are called according to the gifts of God unto them." Local spiritual leadership through those who every day "labor in the affairs of men" is not merely a principle of church organization; it is an essential principle of spiritual self-realization.

WE FEEL LED to point out the important fact that the urgent need for preaching the gospel from centers already established, and the equally urgent need for our people to grow through specific services according to their several abilities, have a significant bearing on the size and location of our churches. These churches should be beautiful and serviceable without being too large or too elaborate. Their construction should not burden the Saints with debt, and they should not entail obligations which will hinder the planning and financing of near-by missions. We should keep in mind the evangelization of our communities through the contribution of all and should not be content with the establishment of single churches in large communities and the refinement of ministry therein.

It is also important to keep the service motive dominant in our departmental work. There is no virtue in sound understanding except as this leads us to Christlike ministry. Church school students, both young and old, must learn about the gospel; but they must learn as a part of living the gospel and must receive guidance in this way of life. In particular, church attendance and participation in departmental activities must not become substitutes for spiritual achievement; they must lead the way to specific ministry and to the growth which comes only through service.

These conclusions, drawn from the surveys which have been made, are passed to you for your information and guidance, for they must illuminate our joint activities if they are to be of any lasting value. They will be reinforced, in time, by conclusions drawn from further contacts in the fields and, particularly, from contacts in our key rural communities. We commend them to your consideration, and you to the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ.

Very sincerely yours,

ISRAEL A. SMITH,
President of the Church;

P. M. HANSON,
President of the Quorum of Twelve;

G. L. DELAPP,
Presiding Bishop.

DR. LAWRENCE O. BROCKWAY of Ann Arbor, Michigan, a high priest with many years of distinguished ministry to his credit, has been asked to work with the members of the Quorum of Twelve in the various fields as a spiritual advisor to our college young people. The work at Graceland is already in able hands, but we feel sure that students in other college and university centers will be very happy to receive Dr. Brockway's ministry.

A growing number of young members of the church are going to college. This is as it should be. Many of these young people are working hard to prepare themselves to make worthy contributions to God and their communities. This is even better. Kingdom-building demands men of faith who are also men of trained ability.

No one who understands thinks for one moment that there is a new or different gospel for college people. The only hope of humanity still centers in the Lord Jesus Christ. The central problem which confronts mankind is still the problem of sin. And the only solution to this problem is still by way of repentance and faith. Sooner or later all have to learn that salvation involves redemptive suffering and not just informaton. But, nevertheless, college people do face some distinctive problems of spiritual readjustment. Their circumstances call for a faith that inquires and does not get panicky when confronted by new vistas of truth. They need to struggle hard for an adequate sense of proportion so that as they come to know more and more about mundane things they will not forget the unfailling importance of heavenly things. With the help of Dr. Brockway and many other men of faith and understanding, we hope to help more and more of our young people to find the adventure of getting an education a joyous experience of discovering God at work.

Dr. Brockway is also chairman of a committee of five which is making a careful study of the academic and vocational problems of college graduates with a view to making specific personal advice available to students who care for consultation. This advisory committee will gather considerable valuable information concerning the contribution which college graduates might make to the church, and will make this information available to the general church authorities.

Many interested persons will remember the "Conference on Ministry to College People" which was held in Chicago last September. A similar conference is now being called by the Presidency to convene at Graceland College on Sunday, June 13, through Wednesday, June 16, 1948. In the interim before the opening of this conference, Dr. Brockway and his colleagues will continue their initial contacts and studies; and when the conference convenes, it is expected that representatives of the presiding quorums will be available to discuss matters of interest to college students in the light of these studies.

Persons who have occasion to write Dr. Brockway can reach him at Department of Chemistry, University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Michigan.

THE FIRST PRESIDENCY,
By Israel A. Smith.

Conference for College Students

A conference on "Church Problems for College Students" will be held at Graceland College on Sunday, June 13, to Wednesday, June 16, inclusive. Board and room (without bedding) will cost $6.50. Representatives of the presiding councils will be in attendance to discuss the program of the church, the opportunities immediately confronting us, and the relation of college people to the program and opportunities. Any interested person will be welcome, although present Graceland College students are not urged to attend, since Graceland provides a channel for ministry to her own students in this field; and also because it is hoped that more upper classmen and graduate students than freshmen and sophomores will be at the conference.

Inquiries concerning the conference may be addressed to the First Presidency or to Dr. Lawrence Brockway, Department of Chemistry, University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Michigan, chairman of the Committee on Ministry to College Students. THE FIRST PRESIDENCY,
By Israel A. Smith.

Education derived from books is only a part of the great school of life, in which we learn from all our experiences according to our capacities and understanding. The alert student learns something every hour that he lives.

THE SAINTS' HERALD

Volume 95

May 8, 1948

Number 19

EDITORS: The First Presidency: Israel A. Smith, John F. Garver, F. Henry Edwards.

ASSISTANTS: Leonard J. Lea, Managing Editor; Kenneth L. Graham, Business Manager.

The Saints' Herald is the official publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, with headquarters at The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri, and is issued through the offices of Herald Publishing House, 103 South Osage Street, Independence, Missouri.

Entered as second-class matter at the post office at Independence, Missouri, under Act of March 3, 1879. Issued weekly at Independence, Missouri. Price, $3.50 per year and $1.75 for six months in advance in the U. S. A., its territories and possessions; Canada, $3.75 per year and $1.90 for six months; other countries, $4.50 per year. Notice of a change of address must be given three weeks ahead of the date that it is to become effective. Accepted for mailing at the special rate of postage provided for in section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized July 21, 1921. Printed in the United States of America.

"Feed My Lambs"

By CHRIS B. HARTSHORN

NATURE PROVIDES every lamb with a mother who performs the primary functions of feeding her young quite well. Should the mother be killed, the shepherd must find a way to supply the lamb with food. It is more tedious than difficult to play step-mother to an awkward, hungry lamb.

When Jesus told Peter, "Feed my lambs," Jesus was thinking of the young of his spiritual fold. "I am the good shepherd, and know my sheep, and am known of mine," he said. He told why he was a good shepherd when he said the good shepherd "giveth his life for the sheep." A hireling flees as the wolf attacks, because he is not paid to fight wolves.

How Important Are Children?

Much of the sentiment heard about "the dear children" is said for effect. It is expected of us. The parents love it, and the children don't mind. The missionary reports the baptism of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Dawson and their four children. Perhaps, another series results in the baptism of "one adult and six children." Why do we not say, "six fine, healthy, intelligent children and one 1898 model adult." Well, we adults don't think in those terms, and we are telling the story. People our own age are very important to us. What they think, say, and do matters much in this adult world. It doesn't take a student of psychology to analyze the evidence seen all about us and conclude that childhood—even second childhood—is a stage of life to be endured by the average adult just because there is no other way out of the dilemma.

All of you have heard—and some of you have said—"The children of today are the church's hope of tomorrow." That is relatively true, but it is not a compliment to childhood. It means that we regard them as important in the program of tomorrow, not of today. If that quotation correctly reflects the substance of our understanding of the child's place in the kingdom of God, we are apt to regard children with a benign tolerance.

AN HOUR spent by a trained and intelligent teacher with a nursery class (three-year-olds) is worth more to the kingdom than ten—or a hundred—hours spent with a class of senior adults. The main character trends are fixed before a person is six years old. Frank H. Richardson, M.D., says, "irrevocably fixed." That seems to go too far, for it does not allow for the power of God to work in the lives of people. Yet, it is a scientific fact that the habits which are formed in the young child and the impressions made on his mind will persist and largely govern his life. It is, therefore, very important that we be about the business of feeding the lambs.

Why is it so hard to get a teacher to take over a class of children? Every church school leader knows the stock excuses: "It takes too much time," or "Children make me nervous," or "I have them all week long. Get somebody else." Try to get a member of the priesthood, and he is likely to say, "Who—me? Oh, I can't teach kids." Children are not the "church's hope of tomorrow" as long as we hold those attitudes—or they hold us.

The education of children will not wait on a convenient season for adults. They will learn some things every day, good or bad. Character is being cast either with or without our help. The six-year period of grace is soon spent. Then we may have to spend days—perhaps years—straightening trees because we refused to spend a few hours inclining the twigs.

Children's Day

To atone for some of our stupidity in what we do to or fail to do with children, we have adopted the old custom of setting apart a holiday. Our "dear children" are dressed in their prettiest clothes, and they are brought to the main auditorium of the church to speak and sing some pretty lines. Perhaps, too, the sermon may be dedicated to the interests of better childhood, and parents will be reminded of the revelation (Doctrine and Covenants 68:4) which commands them that, ". . . they shall also teach their children to pray and to walk uprightly before the Lord."

The pastor may have some candidates for baptism from the seven-weeks course, This Is Jesus' Church. These will be baptized during the day at a beautiful ceremony. This meets the requirements of that part of the revelation which says that the children ". . . shall be baptized for the remission of their sins when eight years old." Of course, there is a condition—that they have been properly taught.

The church school is organized to assist the parents in this task of teaching. However, because of the conditions in some homes, all the teaching of religion many of these children will ever get will come from the church school. A good knowledge of the lessons in the nursery, kindergarten, and primary grades is needed to make the ordinances of baptism and confirmation effective. This fundamental knowledge is summarized and expanded in the prebaptismal course.

It seems that the least parents could do toward the spiritual growth of their children is to plan the time and help them prepare their lessons for each church school class. Most children, as well as adults, enjoy a class in which they can participate. A half hour on Saturday will give definite help in discharging the parental responsibility. An hour of study could accomplish wonders.

CHILDREN'S DAY should not be impressed on the minds of our little folk as a day to entertain their parents nor to exhibit pretty clothes. It should signify a day of attainment, a day of decision. Those who have reached the proper age and attained the right understanding are on this day inducted into a new life as members of Jesus' church. It thus becomes primarily a church school graduation service.

During an institute in Kansas City three years ago, a good-looking young man came to me and said, "Do you know who I am?" After looking searchingly for some clue to the answer, I confessed that I did not. "Well, you should know me, for you baptized me." He was one of about eighty who had been baptized one Children's Day in the font on the Temple Lot years before. I had baptized about eight children who were members of the Stone Church school of which I was then superintendent. The young man was correct; I was his spiritual father and should have remembered my son.

Food For Lambs

Ethel L. Smithers, in her text, The Use of the Bible With Children, tells of a child who tired of his church school class because of so much talk about Jesus. As he returned from kindergarten one Sunday, he told his mother he wasn't going any more. "They talk about Jesus all the time. They talked about him when I wore my green suit, they talked about him when I wore my blue suit, they talked about him when I wore my white suit, and now I know all about Jesus."

Any teaching which results in a distaste for continued learning about Jesus has been a failure. There is a timely warning in Dr. Smithers' observation, "The child does not inherit a love, devotion, and pleasant association with Jesus." The wise teacher and parent cultivate these attitudes with prayerful care.

I can remember a "play dinner" I had as a child in which the principle item of food was pickled beets. I ate so many beets that day that I lost all desire for pickled beets for many years—I lost also the beets I ate.

Recently I was in a room where a teacher of juniors had written this statement on the blackboard about the Lord's Supper:

"We have the promise that if we partake worthily, we will receive a forgiveness of our sins." There is a subtle suggestion in this statement which could easily mislead juniors. No doubt we have a number of people attending church on Communion Sundays who do not attend any other service because they have a ritualistic notion of forgiveness of sins fixed in their minds. The Scriptures do not offer any such basis of hope. Only as we are convicted of personal sin and bring forth fruits meet for repentance have we any promise. Harm has been done by careless teachings which associate forgiveness with the Communion emblems rather than with repentance.

THERE ARE some teachers of children who spend much time and some of their own money to bring interesting handcraft materials to their classes each Sunday. This is worthy of commendation. However, it is easy to carry this type of interest beyond the point of greatest good so that incidentals are stressed to the disadvantage of the objectives of the lessons the teachers have been selected to teach. "But the children like this way better. They are not interested in those lessons," some of the teachers say. More often than not, it is a measure of the teacher's interest.

The courses of our present curriculum are provided at the cost of much time, money, and talent. They are not perfect instruments, but there are many reasons why these lessons should be taught rather than more familiar materials which suit the fancy of the teacher. If the quarterly as recommended by the Department of Religious Education is selected and faithfully taught, there will be less tendency to overfeed on a few items and neglect others.

Neither will the danger of teaching spurious doctrines or giving the wrong emphases to true doctrines be as great. Only those children who have been faithfully taught all the lessons in our graded courses have a promise of having a well-rounded understanding of the church and its message.

If the Lambs Go Astray

Jesus made it a point to direct that the lambs be fed. His concern was not that their mothers might neglect them. He was thinking of the little ones in his kingdom, and he was thinking of the adults. To feed the mind and soul of a little child is not an easy task, nor should it be a task of our convenience. We need to train to do an intelligent job of feeding, and then give the food when the child's mind is ready to receive, or we fail both Christ and his lambs. It is a most important part of the total program of kingdom-building.

If I have made the teaching task of the church seem impossible, forgive me. It is far from it. The task should be easier than ever before as there are many more quarterlies, manuals, visual aids, and other helps than the church has ever had. Our plea is that we make the best use of them. There may be instances where the use of teacher-made lessons without the helps provided by the church could be defended. However, when the textbooks used by the children in public school cost two or three dollars each, it is hard to justify the attempt to avoid the twenty-five or fifty-cent cost of our best church school materials.

LET US LOOK at one more phase of the problem. Educators are apt to put less emphasis on the value of memorization work by young children today than when we were children. More time and effort is concentrated on activities and judgments. Let me quote Dr. Smithers' book once more: "We have shown that memorization before nine years of age is largely a wasteful process" (page 81). Whether you agree with this or not, it is well to know what others have learned by their years of training. Of course, we can get young children to repeat back to us the words, but it is more important that they have experiences by which to interpret those words. Meaning comes from associations, not from verbalizations.

From the Saints' Herald of February 21, 1942, comes a poem which will bear repeating.

A Sheep, Not a Lamb

'Twas a sheep, not a lamb, that strayed away,
In the parable Jesus told;
A grown-up sheep that had gone astray,
From the ninety and nine in the fold.

Out on the hillside, out in the cold,
'Twas a sheep the good shepherd
sought;
And back to the flock safe into the fold
'Twas a sheep the good shepherd brought.

And why for the sheep should we earnestly long,
And as earnestly hope and pray?
Because there is danger, if they go wrong,
They will lead the lambs astray.

For the lambs will follow the sheep,
you know,
Wherever the sheep may stray;
When the sheep go wrong, it will not be long
Till the lambs are as wrong as they.

And so with the sheep we earnestly plead,
For the sake of the lambs today;
If the lambs are lost; what a terrible cost
Some sheep will have to pay.

—C. D. Miller.

Some people have reasoned that they can avoid all this effort and risk of failure by refusing to teach in the church school. A greater mistake could not be made than to fold one's arms and do nothing. Better err in trying, than to be all wrong—in attitude, in sins of omission, and in shirking responsibility. Jesus said, "all are called . . . labor together with God for the accomplishment of

Time Out for Living

By Louise Wrigley

WE HURRY TOO much. We hurry right through life, not taking enough time to enjoy each precious moment of it. We put off things we would like to do until the distant future which never comes. No wonder psychologists say we are frustrated.

We have no time for our children. True, we feed and clothe them and answer "Um-hum" or "Don't bother me now," when they ask us questions which should be answered—but we don't really enjoy them. We endure them, failing to realize that soon they will be grown and gone and which way they go is up to us . . . only suddenly we find our opportunity for guidance fled long ago.

We have not time for those we love . . . and God didn't mean for us to be in this state. We have rushed into it by ourselves. We forever gallop nowhere, meanwhile crowding out blessings by the score, because "we simply haven't time now" for them.

Take a minute to enjoy that sunset, that sweep of trees against the sky. Take a minute to write that note, to smile, to make a friendly call on the new neighbor, to soak in the spirit of fellowship which is rightfully yours. Take a minute to put something into life. You will be repaid a million times by the warm feeling in your heart, the knowledge that you are truly getting something out of life.

the work intrusted to all."—Doctrine and Covenants 119: 8.

All those who want to follow Jesus should think of him as Isaiah did when he wrote, "He shall feed his flock like a shepherd; he shall gather the lambs with his arms, and carry them in his bosom." Many of these lambs are awkward, noisy, and uncertain, but everyone of them is precious in His sight.

Family Tree of Protestantism

LIFE MAGAZINE for January 10, 1947, had a chart in connection with a leading article on "The Methodist Church," which should be of interest to our people and especially to our ministers. The chart is reproduced herewith by courtesy of Life Magazine. Underneath the chart, beginning with the title, "Family Tree of Protestantism" was this explanatory note:

Family Tree of Protestantism shows the descent through centuries of modern U. S. churches from Catholic Christendom. The great separatist movements are shown at the top: Lutheranism, Calvinism, and Radical Sects which are connected to Calvinism by a dotted line because many leaned toward the austere teachings of John Calvin. The Church of England separated on political grounds (upper left). From these four 16th Century movements many churches formed in Europe, came to America and separated from their parent bodies as indicated by U. S. dates. The fans of lines shown in the chart represent independent churches in America which grew out of the individual movements, each line representing a single church. Those named, with the dates of their founding, are most of the large or historically important churches. The graph also shows the union of three major Methodist branches in 1939 (lower left) which split in the 19th Century. Since Protestant theologies overlapped each other during their growth, a graph like this has rarely been attempted. It is an extreme simplification, showing each church only in relation to the movement with which it is most closely connected.

MAY ANY GROUP of men, not satisfied with existing churches, take it upon themselves to organize a church and call it Christ's church? May any man of himself choose to be a minister and then go out to represent Christ? Is the vote of a group of men who have presumed to organize a church sufficient to authorize a man to go out and preach in the name of Christ? Is there a certain divine authority required before a man should say, "I baptize you in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost"? If such authority is required, how do men come by it? How is it passed on to others? How has it come to us from the days of Christ?

In this matter, Christ speaks for himself. To those men whom he wished to be his representatives, he said: "Ye have not chosen me, but I have chosen you and ordained you."—John 15: 16. They had not decided that they would prefer to be ministers. ("Ye have not chosen me, but I have chosen you and ordained you.") Certainly such a choosing and ordination would not be an empty form of human devising.

As a matter of fact, such an ordination meant so much that Christ said to these men, ". . . as my Father hath sent me, even so send I you."—John 20: 21.

Not only was there a divinely voiced calling and choosing of ministers under his administration, they were ordained by him:

"And he ordained twelve, that they should be with him, and that they might go forth and preach."—Mark 3: 14.

WE WOULD NOT in any way belittle the great amount of good done by the Protestant Movement in liberating men from the bondage of priestcraft, bringing the Bible within the reach of the masses of the people to whom it had long been denied and elevating religious and moral standards.

The fact remains, however, that the reformers did not claim any new revelation or commitment of authority from on high to build churches and to minister for Christ. So far as they gave attention to the question of authority, they seemed to trace it back to the Catholic Church mostly, or based it on scriptural references to other men called and ordained during the days of Christ or the early apostles, or frankly asserted that there is no need for an authoritative church and ministry.

By Elbert A. Smith

It was claimed for Luther: "His ordination, therefore, and that of all his Protestant successors, is as valid as that of the Romish priesthood of the 16th century."—History of Religious Denominations, Rupp, page 400. To Protestants that would not seem to be a satisfactory source of authority, the more so when they consider that any authority the Roman Catholic Church had when it ordained Luther was also exercised when it excommunicated him and officially pronounced anathema upon him.

John Wesley once wrote:

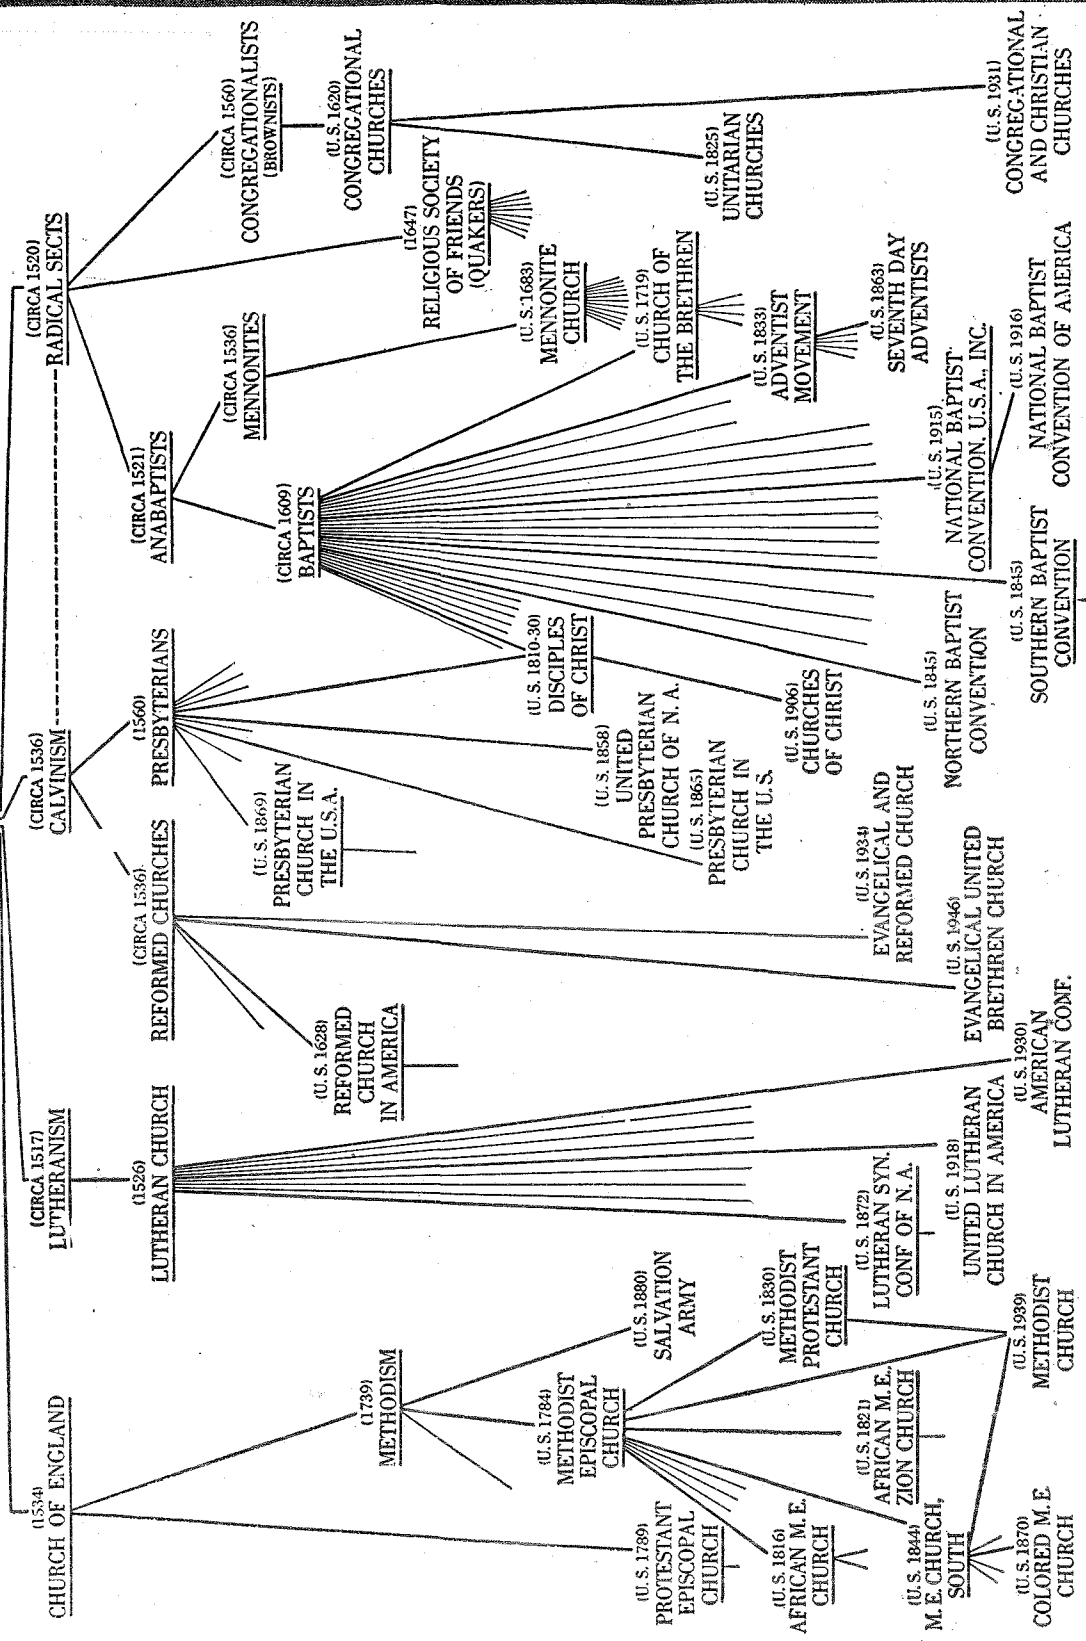

When asked by what authority I did these things, I replied, "By the authority of Jesus Christ conveyed to me by the Archbishop of Canterbury when he laid his hands upon me and said, 'Take thou authority to preach the gospel.'"—Richard Watson's History, page 75.

Judged from his writings, Wesley to the day of his death, though cast out by the Church of England, traced his authority back through and claimed membership in that church, which drew its authority from the Catholic Church:

He was driven out of the church, yet in 1789 he wrote: "I declare once more that I live and die a member of the Church of England; and that none who regard my judgment will separate from it."—Encyclopedia of Religion and Ethics, Volume 12, page 27.

In later years another group of Protestant church-builders, coming face to face with the question of their own authority to baptize the converts they were making, after much perturbation decided the matter in this way, "If we had authority
(Continued on page 21.)

CATHOLIC CHRISTENDOM

FAMILY TREE OF PROTESTANTISM

Courtesy Life Magazine, November 10, 1947

Copyright, Time, Inc.

Firstly the Rich

By Patriarch
RAY WHITING

FOR A NUMBER of years there has been some confusion and misunderstanding concerning the statement "firstly the rich" as found in Doctrine and Covenants 58: 3. A number of devoted Saints of moderate means have expressed that they could not go to Zion until after the "rich" had gone and established industries. I have heard it preached that the "poor" must remain where they are until "firstly the rich" had gathered.

By carefully reading this paragraph, one will discover that God is not at all trying to outline the procedure for the gathering. The method of gathering is clearly indicated in other sections and should be adhered to; but in this paragraph, the Lord is not discussing the matter.

This revelation is given to the elders, and it says, "For this cause I have sent you . . . that your hearts might be prepared to bear testimony of the things which are to come . . ." It is given to the elders not to instruct them how to gather, but to tell them that they are to "bear testimony" to some people, they are to "bear record" of something, they are to carry a message to "nations." And what was this message? "Of things which are to come," "of the land upon which the Zion of God shall stand," of a "feast of fat things . . . for the poor," "a supper of the house of the Lord" to which "all nations shall be invited." This is their testimony. They are to bear record that, to the good things of God in the Latter Days, "all nations shall be invited." What nations? All, but firstly the "rich and the learned, the wise and the noble" nations; this is what God is talking about—one invitation going to "all nations." Firstly, the ruling, the educated, the dominating nations, which were at that time and still are, the Gentile nations.

Then "after that, cometh the day of my power; then shall the poor, the lame, and the blind, and the deaf, come in unto the marriage of the Lamb, and partake of the supper of the Lord, prepared for the great day to come." After the Gentile nations have had the invitation, "after that cometh the day of my power" and then the downtrodden nations and oppressed peoples be invited. Here the poor, the lame, the blind, and the deaf refers to the Jews, the Lamanites, and other less privileged peoples.

IN Doctrine and Covenants, 87: 3, the Lord says the same thing only in different words as he again speaks to certain elders: ". . . that through your administration, they may receive the word, and through their administration, the word may go forth unto the ends of the earth, unto the Gentiles first, and then, behold, and lo, they shall turn unto the Jews; and then cometh the day when the arm of the Lord shall be revealed in power in convincing the nations, the heathen nations, the house of Joseph, of the gospel of their salvation." What nations? The "heathen nations, the house of Joseph," or surely the poor, the lame, the blind and the deaf nations. The reader will note the similarity in these two paragraphs. In section 58: 3, speaking of the "nations" to be invited, we find, "firstly the rich and the learned, the wise and the noble." Section 87: 3 says, ". . . unto the Gentiles first." And again in section 58: 3, ". . . after that cometh the day of my power," and in section 87: 3 ". . . then cometh the day when the arm of the Lord shall be revealed in power in convincing the nations." Once more, in section 58: 3, God speaks of "the poor," "the lame," "the blind," and the "deaf"; and in section 87: 3, he names these nations by saying, ". . . the heathen nations, the house of Joseph," which certainly have been and are the oppressed and downtrodden peoples of the earth.

IT HAS ALWAYS been the teaching of this church that the gospel was to go to the Gentiles first, and then later to the Jews, the Lamanites, and others. In section 104: 12, 13 instruction is found concerning this, which says repeatedly that the Twelve and the Seventy are to "proclaim the gospel of Jesus Christ" and to "build up the church and regulate all the affairs of the same, in all nations; first unto the Gentiles, and secondly unto the Jews," which is in complete harmony with both of the sections referred to above. Here, as in section 58: 3, the Lord is stating the order in which the invitation should be given. He is not discussing how individual members of the church are to gather.

At no time has God ever shown preference to rich people—nor to the poor. Neither does he intend that the "rich" shall come to Zion first. The condition that determines one's worthiness to "gather" is not wealth. If the Lord had wanted the "rich" first, why did he command Joseph Smith in section 87: 7 to raise money that "my handmaid, Vienna Jaques, should receive money to bear her expenses, and go up unto the land of Zion"? Here was an old lady so poor in this world's goods that she did not have carfare to Independence, yet God wanted her there.

Again, in Doctrine and Covenants 65: 4, the Lord says he would like to "retain a strong hold in Kirtland for the space of five years." This was in 1831. "And after that," or after 1836, "I, the Lord, will not hold any guilty that shall go, with an open heart, up to the land of Zion; for I, the Lord, requireth the hearts of the children of men." Nothing is said here about being wealthy, but

(Continued on page 15.)

Faith in God

By SEVENTY GLEN H. JOHNSON

THE WRITER of the Hebrew letter suggests that we "go on unto perfection, not laying again the foundation of . . . faith toward God" and all the rest. He was far reaching in his outlook, because he knew as do we that a constant reference to the foundation of a house will not satisfy the one purchasing the house. And, too, few houses are sold with just a foundation. We are not belittling this faith in God as being of no value in the gospel economy. We have been preaching it for years, but have we been preaching all the implications of this faith?

One of the basic things in life is character. Character in Christ is of the highest order. Without character, there is no true identification of our faith in God. For faith in God is not the identification of the Divine Being, as such, but the assumption of his nature. We find that life in the life of the Master. And it is to attain to a true knowledge of his life that we devote ourselves to the task of discipleship today.

Let us look at the testimony of Peter regarding the attainment of this knowledge of Christ. He talked of adding to our faith. And the addition of all the virtues mentioned in II Peter 1: 1-12, will give us the desired result of being fruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ.

HERE IS THE WAY Peter suggests we build a sound program of faith in God. Add to your faith, virtue. Against any age this principle of life is basic to the kingdom-building enterprise. It has its most important work in the life of the individual and family. It really means chastity or purity. Can you imagine a representative faith in God without purity of life? Cancel that from the life of Christ, and then ask him about his faith.

Now if goodness or purity were all there was to a balanced program in life, the whole plan would fall to pieces. It would take on the form of passiveness without virility. But Peter goes on to say that to virtue must be added knowledge. He hardly meant that each individual should become a walking encyclopedia, but everyone should have some definite ideas about life and the purpose of Deity in life—and all this for the sake of the kingdom. The disciples of the kingdom should have a clearly defined program to follow, for faith leads to the understanding of law. Faith in God leads to an understanding of the laws of Zion.

Again we discover the wisdom of Peter projecting itself a little further in the program of adding to faith. To knowledge must be added temperance. The root of its meaning is centered in self-control. Perhaps he meant here that control of self was more important than control over others. There is the note of individualism expressed here—that self should be brought under subjection to the laws governing the whole of the community. Mastery of self is basic to life in Christ.

THE NEXT addition to the list of necessary principles is patience. Peter saw that in the life of the Master. He saw self-possession under provocation and persistence in what had been begun. With these two qualities manifest, the kingdom was sure to succeed. Perhaps we should possess or let these two parts of patience possess our lives against the problems of the church today. That would be a pretty good test of our faith in the total program of the church and in God.

Another principle added is godliness. That is pre-eminent goodness. We just can't be good or better than the rest. We must be the best in quality of life if Zion is to become a reality, for there is no Zion outside of the pre-eminent goodness in the life of its people. A land of poverty of character in a land of physical plenty is a deadly combination. This church is made for men who are good and want to become better. It is for better men who must become the best. Does your faith in God satisfy you on the level of goodness or in just being better than the rest? If it does, Zion shall never become the standard it is meant to become in all phases of life. "To be the best that I can be" must stand as the motto of every Zion-builder.

Brotherly kindness is the next addition in this problem of life—recognizing our common parentage and having feelings befitting our common nature. There shall be gathered out of every nation under heaven unto Zion. How do your attitudes toward race problems fit into the picture of a Zionite community? Can you put to the acid test your faith in God when it comes to the problem of brotherly kindness presented on this basis? Think it over.

LAST BUT NOT least is the great principle of charity being added to our faith. If there is one thing needed in our world, it is this definition of charity: liberality in judging men or actions. This is the seasoning element in all our relationships. We expect God to act this way, but are we as anxious to work by the same principle? I believe we are. And in the light of the expanding and growing program of the church, we feel that this principle is being applied to our experiences.

Now notice what Peter suggests as the result of this type of simple addition to our faith. ". . . for if these things be in you, and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the

(Continued on page 21.)

Other Sheep I Have Which Are Not of This Fold

The Story of the Book of Mormon

By ROY WELDON

PART II

The Mystery of the Teoamoxtli— The Shepherd's Voice

And other sheep I have, which are not of this fold: them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice; and there shall be one fold and one shepherd.—John 10: 16.

And They Shall Hear My Voice

Wherever or whenever in the Old World the words of the Good Shepherd or his under-shepherds were heard, there was a universal urge to write them down that they might be preserved for the inspiration and salvation of coming generations.

Between the time the Lord instructed Moses to write the Book of Genesis and the other books in the Pentateuch until He instructed John on Patmos to "Write the things which thou hast seen" (Revelation 2: 19), books and instructions about writing are mentioned no less than 175 times in the King James Version of the Scriptures, according to Young's Analytical Concordance.

The urge of prophets, patriarchs, and holy men to write down the words of life that came when they heard the voice of the Good Shepherd is well illustrated in the Book of Job:

Oh, that my words were written! Oh that they were printed in a book! That they were graven with an iron pen and lead in the rock forever. For I know that my redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth; and though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God; whom I shall see for myself, and mine eyes shall behold, and not another though my reins be consumed within me.—Job 19: 23-27.

In the Old World they wrote down the words when they heard the voice of the Good Shepherd. It is reasonable to assume they would do the same when the Shepherd of Israel visited his sheep in the New World, and they heard his voice.

In the previous article, we found strong evidence from the Aztecs that Jesus Christ visited prehistoric America. Let us examine the evidence from Mexico that the Good Shepherd visited them, and that they heard his voice.

Spaniards Destroyed Entire Libraries of Ancient Documents

Because of the many similarities to Christianity which the Spanish priests found in the native religion, they thought that the Devil had attempted to build a counterfeit church here in America.

Father Duran at the end of his Historia Antiqua de la Nueva España (1585) wrote, "I verily believe that the evil spirit himself must have some how supplied these poor people with a spurious edition of the Bible." (Quoted from Jesus Christ Among the Ancient Americans, by Paul M. Hanson.)

The Catholic priests thought they could destroy this so-called spurious work of Satan by destroying every leaf of the ancient writings.

Brinton says, "Immense masses of such documents were stored in the archives of ancient Mexico Torquemada asserts that five cities alone yielded to the Spanish governor on one requisition no less than sixteen thousand volumes of scrolls. Every leaf was destroyed."¹ Archæologists and students of ancient America shudder at this wanton destruction of such a priceless treasure. Without question, these vast libraries of Mexican documents would have cleared up many mysteries and questions which now baffle the academic and scientific students of prehistoric America.

There is one man who was acquainted with the contents of the libraries who has given us an inkling of what these ancient volumes contained. His name is Ixtlilxochitl. He was a grandson of the king of Tezcuco. Tezcuco, a small kingdom allied with the Aztecs, was situated on the west of Mexico City. Ixtlilxochitl wrote a history of prehistoric Mexico.

The Teoamoxtli or Lost Book of God

The Book of Mormon contains the words which the ancient Americans wrote when they heard the voice of the Good Shepherd. It also contains the history of the end and total destruction of the white cultured Nephites by the barbarous Lamanites (Indians). After the Nephites were wiped out in the final battle, the last prophet, Moroni, inscribed the concluding paragraphs of the history of his people and hid the sacred book in a stone box with the Urim and Thummim. It remained lost from the knowledge of men until it was divinely revealed to Joseph Smith and later translated by him into the English language.

From the works of Ixtlilochitl, Bancroft gives us this story of the Teoamoxtli:

Returning now to the other version of Toltec history we learn that after the death of the first king of Tollan, his son Ixtlilcuechahuac mounted the throne. His reign, like that of his predecessor was peaceful and prosperous; but the only event recorded was a meeting of all the sages under the direction of the aged Huemam which took place only a few years before the end of the second king's term of office. At this assembly there was brought forward all the Toltec records reaching back to the earliest period of their existence, and from these documents, after a long conference and the most careful study, the Teoamoxtli, or Book of God, was prepared. In its pages were inscribed the Nahua annals from the time of the deluge, or even from the creation; together with all their religious rites.²

Teoamoxtli and Book of Mormon Compared

Ixtlilochitl's account of the end of the prehistoric Toltecs is startling in its similarity to the same story in the Book of Mormon. Those who have read the Book of Mormon will instantly recognize the similarities.

According to the Book of Mormon, the golden age of peace and prosperity in ancient America lasted for about 200 years after the visit of Christ. About the beginning of the third century after the appearance of Christ, a war broke out between the Nephites and the Lamanites.

Three hundred five years later, when the empire had been long at peace, a revolt broke out.—Native Races, Volume 5, page 210.

After several years of war, the Book of Mormon records that a treaty and agreement were reached in which the Lamanites would not come again in battle against the Nephites for ten years.

From the account in Bancroft's Native Races, we find a similar story.

Unable to resist this formidable army the Toltec king was compelled to send ambassadors bearing rich presents to sue for peace. . . . A truce . . . was concluded . . . to the effect that the Toltecs were not to be molested for ten years.—Volume 5, pages 279-282.

After the expiration of the ten-year period of truce, the Book of Mormon and Ixtlilochitl tell a similar story in their accounts, the one of the end of the Nephites, and the other of the end of the Toltecs. The points of their similarity include:

- A. Introduction of a new religion. Native Races, Volume 5, pages 280-282.
- B. Women join men in battle.—Ibid., page 283.
- C. Cities sacked and burned as fast as conquered.—Ibid., page 283.
- D. War continues year after year for a long time.—Ibid., page 284.

- E. Immorality, bestiality, and iniquity reigned.—Ibid., page 277. Lamanites eat flesh and drink blood of Nephites.—Book of Mormon, pages 772, 773.
- F. Numbers engaged in the war.—Ibid., page 282.

The Book of Mormon tells us that the Lamanites "were not numbered because of the greatness of their numbers." In the last day of battle after years of conflict, 230,000 Nephites perished. From the Book of Mormon account, there must have been millions of men engaged on each side during this long death struggle of the Nephites.

Bancroft says: "It is difficult to credit the statements of the old authors respecting the numbers of Chichimecs that espoused Xolotl's cause. Ixtlilochitl and Veytia state that no less than three million, two hundred and two thousand men, women and children rallied to his standard."³

It should be noted that the works of Ixtlilochitl were not available to Joseph Smith, since the Spanish Colonial manuscripts were not collected and translated and published to the English-speaking world by Bancroft until several decades after publication of the Book of Mormon.

Ixtlilochitl and Joseph Smith could not possibly have had any knowledge of each other. The numerous points of similarity in the records which they produced must have basis, therefore, in the fact that the Book of Mormon is a genuine record of God's dealings with the prehistoric Americans. Joseph Smith got the story from the original Teoamoxtli, or sacred book of the ancient people of God. Ixtlilochitl got the story from ancient manuscripts (long since destroyed) to which he had access in the fifteenth century.

In the previous article, we found that the ancestors of the Aztecs were not the only ones who were present in that great day when the Good Shepherd appeared; likewise we find that other tribes besides the Aztecs heard the voice of their God and therefore had a knowledge of the existence of a prehistoric sacred record.

The Popol Vuh

The story of the Popol Vuh, like the story of the Teoamoxtli, comes from the writings of a native author. The original Maya Quiche text was translated into Spanish in the early days of colonial history.

The manuscript, however, remained in obscurity in Catholic archives in Guatemala until it was discovered by Doctor Scheizer in June, 1854, and translated and published in the English language. Like the Teoamoxtli of Ixtlilochitl, the Popol Vuh of the Maya Quiches could not have been known to Joseph Smith.

Concerning the Popol Vuh (Book of God) Bancroft says: "I pass next to the tradition of the Quiche nations as preserved in the Popol Vuh. These traditions, the authenticity and general accuracy of which there is no reason to doubt . . . with apparent, though vague references here and there to actual events in the primitive history of the peoples whose descendants were the Quiches."⁴ Bancroft continues with an excerpt from the Popol Vuh:

The Popol Vuh, the national book, is no longer visible, in which it was clearly seen that we came from beyond the sea . . . It is the first book, written in olden times, but its view is hidden from him who sees and thinks.

Wonderful in its appearance, and the narrative of the time when he (the creator) finished everything in heaven and on earth.—Ibid., pages 170-171.

Like Quetzalcoatl, Votan was the first historian of his people and wrote a Book on the origin of the race.⁵

The Temple of the Hieroglyphics

At Copan, Honduras, there is a temple containing large tablets of hieroglyphics. The stairway which leads to the entrance of the temple is literally covered with hieroglyphics. At the base of the stairway stands an imposing figure of a man holding in his hand a king's escutcheon. I had the good fortune to visit Copan, Honduras, in 1941, in company with a group of archaeologists from the United States. As we approached the entrance to the mysterious temple of the hieroglyphics with its prehistoric figure in stone standing guard, someone asked the leading Carnegie Institute archaeologist as to the identity of the imposing statue. His answer was, "Your guess is as good as mine." Similar answers were given to other questions regarding the elegant ruins of this very ancient city. There is very much that science does not know about the ancient Americans. Archaeology has not yet scratched the surface. Much exploration is yet to be done.

There are, however, some conclusions that can be drawn about Copan as well as other archaeological sites. The people who built Copan were a religious people. The presence of temples and beautiful altars attests this fact. They had a system of writing as is attested by the abundance of hieroglyphics. If the Good Shepherd of Israel visited these people and they heard his voice, why would it not be possible that they would inscribe his words on temples and tablets of stone? If guessing is in order, why not venture the guess that the tablets of hieroglyphics (as yet undeciphered) in the temple of the hieroglyphics may be the words of Jesus Christ and that the imposing figure who stands at the entrance to the temple is either the Good Shepherd himself or one of the ancient American prophets. (Nephi, Alma, Mosiah, etc.)

The Brass Plates

According to the Book of Mormon, when the Lord led Lehi and his colony from Jerusalem to America in 600 B. C., they brought with them a record of God's dealings with their fathers (the Bible up to 600 B. C.). This record was inscribed on brass plates and contained, among other things, Genesis and the other books of Moses, as well as scriptures down to and including the Book of Isaiah.

We have already noted that the name "Toltecs" is identified with Quetzalcoatl and the golden age of prehistoric America. We have also noted that the Toltecs were a white race and that Ixtlilochitl and the Book of Mormon are in agreement on the cause and factors involved in their demise.

Dr. Eduard Seler says: "In the traditions of the Mexican and Central American races, there is mention of a civilized nation, said to have been in the country before all others, which was the originator of all arts and sciences. This was the Toltec nation. Among other things, the invention of the calendar is ascribed to this nation, and we are told that they carried their books with them on their migrations."⁶

If the Toltecs were of Hebrew origin and had brought the Hebrew scriptures with them in their migration from the Old World to America, the evidence should be readily discernible in the creation legends of the Indians.

Did the Ancestors of the Indians Know the Story of Genesis?

And the earth was without form and void; and I caused darkness to come up upon the face of the deep.—Genesis 1: 4.

From the Popul Vuh:

All the heavens was formed and all the signs thereof set in their angle and alignment, and its boundaries fixed towards the four winds by the Creator and Former, and Mother and Father of life and existence. He by whom all move and breathe, the Father and Cherisher of the peace of nations and of the civilization of his people.

Behold the first word and the first discourse. There was as yet no man nor any animal, nor bird, nor fish, nor crawfish, nor any pit, nor ravine, nor green herb, nor any tree; Nothing was but the firmament. The face of the earth had not yet appeared—only the peaceful sea and all the space of heaven There was nothing yet joined together, nothing that lung to anything else; nothing that balanced itself, that made the least rustling, that made a sound in the heaven. There was nothing that stood up, nothing but the quiet water of the sea, calm and alone in its boundaries; nothing existed, *nothing but immobility and silence, in the darkness in the night . . . and the instant it was formed, like a cloud or a fog was its beginning.*⁷

Miztec Creation Legend

"In the year and in the day of obscurity and darkness, yea, even before the days or years were, when the world was in a great darkness and chaos . . ."⁸

According to Genesis, creation involved a period of seven days and was accomplished by the word of God's power.

The Aztec book, The Anales de Quaubritlan, states that the world and all therein was created in seven days. "In the sign Tochtli the earth was created, the firmament was erected in Acatl, animals in Tecpatl, and man was made out of dust or ashes on Ehecatl, the seventh day."⁹

Creation Legends of Peru

"All things emanated from Pachacama, the all pervading spirit, the maker and moulder of matter. Pachacama it was who breathed the breath of life into man."

"By means of his word, the creator, a spirit powerful and opulent, created all things." The formula of his words in Peruvian prayers: "Let the earth be," "And heaven be," "Let there be night," "Let the light shine."¹⁰

Aztec Legends

Lewis Spence says, "In the literature of ancient Mexican mythology, we find persistent vestigial notices of a fall of the Gods, or rather of certain deities from heaven."¹¹

Also from Lewis Spence: "Tezcatlipoca deceived the first woman who committed sin. Ixnexhtli is the name of an Eve who sinned by plucking forbidden roses and was cast out of a paradise with her husband."¹²

Consideration of the scriptural analogies contained in the legends of all the Indian tribes of the New World would be a very large undertaking and entirely outside the bounds of a series of brief lectures. We, therefore, conclude the subject with a statement from the well-known English nobleman, Lord Kingsborough:

It is impossible when reading what Mexican mythology records of the war in heaven and the fall of Zontemonque and other rebellious spirits; of the creation of light by the word of Tonacatecotle; and of the division of the waters, of the sin of Xztiacoliuhqui, and his blindness and nakedness; of the temptation of Suchiqueal and her disobedience in gathering roses from a tree and the consequent misery and disgrace of herself and all her posterity not to recognize scriptural analogies. But the Mexican tradition of the deluge is that which bears the most unequivocal marks of having been derived from a Hebrew source.¹³

1. Brinton, Myths of the New World, page 25.
2. Bancroft, Native Races, Volume 5, page 251.
3. Bancroft, Native Races, Volume 5, page 292.
4. Bancroft, Native Races, Volume 5, pages 170, 171.
5. Bancroft, Native Races, Volume 3, page 451.
6. Dr. Eduard Seler, Significance of the Maya Calendar in Historic Chronology, Bulletin 23, Bureau of American Ethnology. (Quoted from Jesus Christ Among the Ancient Americans, by Paul M. Hanson.)
7. Bancroft, Native Races, Volume 3, pages 44, 45.
8. Bancroft, Native Races, Volume 3, page 70.
9. Lewis Spence, The Gods of Mexico, page 46.
10. Lewis Spence, The Myths of Mexico and Peru, page 305.
11. Lewis Spence, The Gods of Mexico, pages 55, 56, 104.
12. Lewis Spence, The Gods of Mexico, page 190. Myths of Mexico and Peru, page 305.
13. Lord Kingsborough, Mexican Antiquities, Volume 4, page 401.

(All italicizing and underlining of words or phrases in the lectures is by the author for emphasis.)

Questions, suggestions, or criticisms will be welcomed and responded to by the author. His address is R. F. D. 5, Warrensburg, Missouri.

Firstly the Rich

(Continued from page 10.)

about the "hearts of men" whether they be rich or poor.

We all know, or should know, that before one moves to Zion, there is preparation to be made, both spiritual and financial. The law is plainly given in regard to the gathering. That there should be counsel with the elders and with the bishops is repeatedly stated in the word and should be complied with before moving to the Center Place. But section 58: 3 is not one of those places where instruction is given concerning the gathering of the Saints, and it should not be so construed.

"Conversations"

Eleven Plays About the Prophet

By Elbert A. Smith

Scenes from Early Church History

In Stepping Stones

Starting with the June 6 issue, one of these little gems will appear once a month. They were first published in the 1930 "Vision." Popular request has demanded their republication.

Order your subscriptions to "Stepping Stones" now so your church school department or Zion's League can present these plays in your branch.

Single copy, per year, in United States, $1.25; in Canada, $1.50; other countries $1.75.

Packages: Five or more in one package (by the quarter), in United States, 30¢ each; Canada, 35¢ each.

Briefs

ENFIELD, ENGLAND.—Elder David A. Oakman was re-elected pastor and all other branch officers were sustained at the annual business meeting held in February. The balance sheet for 1947 showed an increase of income over expenditures and a substantial balance in reserve.

The men of the branch gave a dinner and program on Saturday, February 28. Proceeds were applied to the Zion's League Missions Abroad fund, which now stands at 128 pounds, the original target of 100 pounds having been exceeded. On Easter Sunday, a play entitled, "The Road to Emmaus," was presented.

MARION, ILLINOIS.—A sunrise service was held at 6:30 o'clock on Easter Sunday; and at 11 o'clock, members of the junior department presented the Easter story in song, reading, and pantomime. A cantata, "The Victorious Christ," and a play, "The Way of Life," were given in the evening.

Missionary William Guthrie conducted a three-weeks' series of meetings prior to the baptismal service held April 4. David Phillips, Charles Kelley, Carolyn Kelley, Phyllis Schroll, and Georgia Owens were baptized at this time. The confirmation service was held at 7:30 in the evening.

A new organ has been purchased for the church and will be installed this fall. The project was sponsored by the young married people of the branch. All departments are working to raise the money by the time the organ is installed.

SOUTHERN OHIO DISTRICT.—The members of Highland Branch, Sinking Springs, Ohio, were hosts to 100 Zion's Leaguers of the district on Sunday afternoon, April 11, at a banquet which officially began Restoration Festival Week. A sacrifice offering of $61.26 was taken for the fund; this brought the total pledge money raised by the Leagues in Southern Ohio District to $440. The program included a worship period built around Elbert Smith's recording, "Witnesses for the Restoration," a report of plans for the week and pledge funds from the various Leagues, an address by F. Rockwell, and special music.

MARLIN, TEXAS.—Church school officers and the Zion's League director were elected during the church school hour on Easter Sunday. Following the business meeting, members of the Zion's League presented an Easter program under the direction of Bettie Easter. Pastor J. R. Allen gave the 11 o'clock address.

She'd Rather Be Liked

By Naomi Russell

OF ALL THE tributes I could pay my mother, I think she would prefer just being reminded that I like her. In a way, it's a new relationship—our liking each other—although there's been plenty of love between us through the years.

In my preschool days, she was my idol. I used to brag about her to the other little girls on our street. There was no doubt in my mind—and I told them so—about her being the prettiest, smartest, and nicest woman in the neighborhood. I was sure her homemade bread was far superior to any produced by other mothers, and I was equally sure the flowers that grew in her garden were brighter and larger than anyone else's. I watched with typical six-year-old awe as she produced my first grade wardrobe, secretly wondering if I would ever learn the mysterious workings of the sewing machine, which she managed so easily. The perfume of washed clothes fresh from the line was another source of my early admiration. I can remember standing by while she sprinkled them for ironing and thinking, "Nobody's clothes smell as good as ours."

That was the era of mother-worship. Lucky for her, my campaign to prove her superiority to other mothers faded with the cares of grammar school. I realize now that it is poor public relations to boast of one's family's achievements; but in those days, I thought it something everybody about me should know.

DURING MY epidemic years, she was the great healer. I can remember still how she watched over me while I sweated out my first case of measles. She nursed me through all but one of the contagious diseases—and if I ever get whooping cough, she will probably help see me through that, too. She was also an unfailing source of comfort when I failed to comprehend long division and the intricacies of sentence diagraming.

These were the years of mother-the-indispensable. They must have been as hard on her as they were on me. After all, there are more interesting things for a woman to do than tend a victim of measles and mathematics.

In high school, I untied the apron strings and had my first fling with independence. It was good to be able to think for myself—to know that I didn't have to rely on maternal assistance. With this newborn egotism, I began to resent the guiding hand . . . the "Don't stay out late" and "Be a good girl" line.

"She doesn't understand," I used to tell myself; and she didn't—not any more than I understand my adolescent daughter. From then until I was married, I continued to love her, but we seemed to have little in common. At times, even conversation was difficult, because we lived in different worlds. Perhaps it was better that way—better than if she had insisted on keeping me "under her wing" when I wanted to chart my own course. Occasionally I am tempted to tell my daughter how she should wear her hair and the best way to spend her Saturday afternoons, and then I remember my own age of independence. She wants just as much to make those decisions as I did—and so I let her.

MATRIMONY PLACED mother in a new light. We're on a woman-to-woman basis now, and we have much in common. When I go home for a visit, we discuss the merits of various soap powders, the best buys in sheeting, and what to plant in the garden. When I can't find the recipe I want, I call her up; she can usually tell me "on the spot" what I need to know.

We go shopping together, too. Instead of taking her suggestions with skepticism as I did in my teens, I welcome them as honest appraisals. When we plan a Thanksgiving or Christmas dinner, we do it as equals, although her years of experience would entitle her to draw up the final menu.

I prefer this new day of liking-each-other to the mother-worship era or the mother-indispensable years (although she still is, of course). Certainly it is much to be desired to the age of independence.

Love, in itself, isn't enough. It's important as a stabilizer through the changing emotions of growing up; it's the unwritten "I'll stick by you when you need me" which holds families together in times of crisis—but it isn't enough. You have to like people as well as love them before you can be happy with them.

I shall be greatly flattered if, someday, my daughter sees fit to put a "P. S.—I like you" inside the Mother's Day greeting she sends.

Magazine Hi-Spots

The Woman's Home Companion for March gives the results of a poll taken on "How Do You Beat the Blues?"

The March Hygeia has several worthwhile articles; one, "Can Memory Be Improved," and an editorial, "A Program for a Clean America."

Many magazines contain articles on health and the new treatments for disease. Hygeia, which is published by the American Medical Association, always carries authentic information, for the treatments discussed have been proved meritorious. In getting information, it is well to get reliable information.

— — — a home column feature — — —

My Church Is Just What I Put Into It

By MARIE GOSLINE

THE SUCCESS OF THIS church of which I am so proudly a member depends upon me—not upon my neighbor down the street or upon Sister Jones who heads the women's department. This church is just what I put into it. If I want to go to church every Sunday and sit on the front row, but down deep in my heart hold hard feelings toward the pastor, I am not being a good Latter Day Saint. I am not even being a Christian. If I want to sit on the back row and frown every time the pianist strike a wrong note, I can do so. But that is not pushing to put this church ahead, and I am going to have to do just that if we are ever going to reach our goal.

If this church is going to redeem Zion, it's up to me to make my life a little better than my neighbor's—to have a higher standard of living than the people down the street. I must be a better Christian than the woman in the house next door. And Christianity is not just warming the church bench on Sunday or listening to the sermon with a rapt expression, a "holier than thou" look on my face. Christianity is that dinner I took to a sick woman across the street. It's that neighbor who came in and sat with me the night my husband's plane was late. It's teaching a little child the right way to live. It's showing by my own way of living that there is a richer, fuller life. It's offering hope to those I meet each day. It's being full of good cheer, and full of the joy of living. It's showing love for my fellow man in all these countless little ways! It's having the neatest, cheeriest home in the community, because here is where Jesus lives. If I have this, I won't have to hang up the sign, "God Bless our Happy Home," because any visitor will know by the smile on my face, by the fragrance of fresh-cut flowers on the table, that this is the sort of home in which Jesus would like to tarry. He will know by the light in my eyes, by the warmth of the fire in the grate, that God has truly blessed this home.

HAVE YOU EVER shown your husband the making of a stew in the kitchen, wish him luck, then back out the door? I did that the other night, and dinner was a success. You see, my husband learned to cook from his French mother. There was quite a commotion when he couldn't find the chili powder and the pimientos. "You know, Marie," he said to me, "a stew is just what the cook puts into it!"

How I hope, when the lid is finally off, I'll find that my church can redeem Zion because I've put enough of the right ingredients into my life. My church is just what I put into it!

Mother of Men

*Mother of the men of nations,
Guardian from the dawn of day,
Teacher in this honored station,
Molder of this mortal clay!*

*In the solemn hush of evening,
Gath'ring 'round the homely hearth,*

*List'ning to her guided wisdom,
Emblem of the Christ on earth.*

*Honor, patience, love, devotion,
Sing her virtues once again.
Praise we give and adoration
To the Mother of all men!*

—Ola Gunsolley Savage.

Agnes and the Zinnia

By Mrs. A. Headley

Agnes loved God and all of his beautiful creations. Although her home was drab, she brightened it each spring by planting a flower garden around it. She grew zinnias, because of all flowers, they grew best in the poor soil about her house. She would plant the seed in the better soil, and as soon as the zinnias were large enough, she would transplant them where she wanted them. Often in changing them, they would become broken. One especially—Agnes remembered because she had wanted so much for it to bloom in the right place—was broken several times. Each time it broke, she tied it to a stick so that it would grow straight. With the sun and rain and Agnes's tender care, the zinnia grew and became the prettiest in the garden.

As the years passed, Agnes became discouraged. Because of poor health, she could no longer sing in the choir as she had in her youth—nor could she serve God in any of the ways she used to serve him. As she grew older, she became crippled—and then more crippled. One day it seemed to Agnes that her heart would break, and she cried out, "Dear God, I am old and weak. I wanted to do so much for you, but now,—what can I do?" As she prayed, she seemed to hear a still, small voice saying, "Consider the zinnia." And Agnes knew that, although crippled, if she would be faithful, there was much yet for her to do. Her life could someday be as beautiful as the broken zinnia had once been.

Silver Wedding Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Furness of Kansas City, Missouri, celebrated their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary at their home on Sunday, April 4. About 200 guests attended the celebration. The Furnesses are members of Central Church in Kansas City.

AN OPEN LETTER TO THE ZION'S LEAGUE

Berlin, Germany

Dear Zion's Leaguers:

As I look out of my hotel window, I am reminded of the great work you are doing and how much we need your help in Germany. All around us is in ruin--not only the buildings but the lives and dreams of a onceproud nation.

You are so far from us that it will be hard for me to help you to see what we are seeing. Apostle McConley and I are making a two-month tour of the German Mission.

We have just returned from a Zion's League meeting here in Berlin, so I thought I would write you this letter. The young people from Berlin, Grossrachen, and Brandenburg were all there. Grossrachen and Brandenburg are in the Russian Zone, and our young people spent ten hours on a train just to meet with us for an hour and a half. They had to return shortly after the meeting, so you can see they will be quite tired when they get home.

We talked about building a greater German Mission in the next few years, and all the Leaguers were thrilled with the plans we made. When we had finished talking, they all wanted to know, "How soon can we start?" We must rebuild all our church homes as well as homes for our members. The only church left standing is in Grossrachen, and there we have a membership of over 200 Saints. Last year this group baptized thirty-nine members.

There were thirty-one Leaguers present this evening and you should have heard them sing the hymns of the church. You would not have been able to understand the words, of course, but you surely would have felt the wonderful spirit. They all seem to sing from the heart.

The church means much to these young people; they have gone through many trials and tribulations. When you lose your home, your family, and your freedom, you have nothing elseto turn to except God. I hope that you never have to pass through what they have experienced.

We are planning, as soon as possible, to build a little church here in Berlin; how soon that will be we don't know, but at least we have plans. Much of this will depend on the help you are now giving and will continue to give. All our branches here are without adequate meeting places, and this is one of our major problems at the present time.

Last year, the Saints in Germany baptized 139 members. They started five new missions, and two more are ready for opening as soon as they get the official o.k.--so you can't say they are not missionary-minded. There are missionary opportunities on every hand, and they are taking advantage of these opportunities. I believe that the German Mission will some day be one of our largest foreign missions, the fastest growing one.

One of our young Zion's Leaguers is in charge of a mission church school in the Russian Zone, and the attendance is on the increase. He must travel quite some distance each Sunday, and often he must walk.

We talked with some of the mothers in Berlin; they are the ones who carried on the services while the men were away during the war. Everyone of them had been bombed out once, some twice, and others three times; by the time the war was over, some had nothing left except their faith in God and the church. Many were the times they had to discontinue services and go to an air raid shelter.

One of the two German missionaries, Brother Alexander Kippy, died during the Russian invasion. Everyone was so occupied with saving his own life that Sister Kippy had to bury him alone in their little garden. Brother John Smolney was superannuated this January, so at the present time I am laboring alone. I hope, however, to soon have a young brother from here working with me.

We see much need for help here in spreading the gospel. If you could only see it as we do, I am sure that you would more than make your share of the goal in 1948. Just think as you give your money that every penny goes to help win another soul in one of the missions abroad. Brother McConley and I have missed only one or two meals since coming to Germany, but it has given us a keener appreciation of what our people are having to endure. Perhaps if you planned to miss one meal each day, you could use this money to give to missions abroad, and it would bring you closer to our needs here. Try this, and see if it won't help you in many ways . . . maybe twice a week would be a good start.

I must close my letter, Brother McConley and I are leaving early in the morning for Nurnberg. We have another very active branch there; last year, this little group baptized seventeen persons. Our membership in Germany at the present time is about 1,000 . . . watch us grow! May God bless you all in your efforts to help us in our missions abroad.

Sincerely,
Eugene A. Theys

P.S. I told the Leaguers here what you are doing for Missions Abroad, and tears came into their eyes. I knew what they were thinking. Thanks to you from all of us.

What Can I Believe In?

By DORIS MILLER

WHAT CAN I believe in if I can't believe in God and my church?

This question has formed itself in my mind recently because of some experiences and conversations I have had with friends. If my church and my God don't mean anything to me, what can other phases of life hold for me?

The teachings of Christ and his ministry form the basis of Christian beliefs. As in the past, we have also received the leadership of men in our church and the revelations given to them. Other phases of life should be relative to these concepts in our daily living.

Christ set the pattern for our relations with our friends in his parables and in his own life. "Love thy neighbor as thyself"—in living our religion we will love our neighbor. It is not something we can do only at pleasure. This loving spirit should apply to all our neighbors—not just someone down the street, but our neighbors in Holland, Germany, and Russia. That is basic.

The teachings of Jesus are based on the fact that everyone is a real person—each one is a separate and loved personality. By trying to help other people grow, by losing ourselves in the service of others, we will develop our own personalities and be people of worth and merit. This I can believe in.

If I cannot believe in the teachings of Christ and his life as interpreted by my church, other phases of life and my relations with other people will be changed. There can be little meaning in the other institutions of our world, such as education, marriage, and family, without the meaning Christ and the church has given them.

RECENTLY I HAVE had the thought-provoking and stimulating experience of corresponding with a young fellow of marked intelligence who is an avowed Communist and very proud and aware of it. He fervently believes that "... religion is the most hideous evil that has ever beset mankind." The church (meaning any denomination, though he is from a Reorganized Latter Day Saint home) is "... a dupe perpetrated on the masses for the advantage and security of the ruling class."

In answering his letters I have had to examine my own beliefs to see just why I believe in the things I do—why my basic concepts of Christ and his church are important to me. While this is a never-ending process, I think the reason that I do follow Christ's teachings and try to pattern my life after them is that they take into account the human being's ability and desires to be a person—to be loved and to love and serve others and thus give meaning to his life and the things of which he is a part. This is opposite to the doctrines this young fellow is following. To Christ there are no masses, no bourgeoisie, or ruling class. There are only people he can serve and help become better by teaching them his way of living.

I can believe in my church because it builds upon Christ's teachings and shows me how they are applicable in my daily affairs. By making my service and friendship to others relative to this and reflective of my church, my life takes on new and richer meaning.

Here Is the

Theys Family . . .

Seventy Eugene Theys began his career in church work by serving on the city-wide recreational committee in Independence. Before going into the mission field, he was pastor of the church in Cameron, Missouri. He attended William Chrisman High School in Independence and the Kansas City Business College. At the time of his general church appointment, he was manager of a group of stores in Missouri.

Mrs. Theys is the former Alma Black of Stewartville, Missouri. She and Eugene were married in 1942. Since last October, they and their young son, Michael, have made their home at Annastraat 2, Rotterdam, Holland, which is headquarters for the European Mission.

Living Souvenirs

Instead of bringing back the usual knickknacks sold to tourists, Beverly Nichols brings a plant, a seed, or a cutting from every country he visits and plants them in his garden. Yellow crocuses he dug up from Alpine slopes in Switzerland; immortelles from France; cornflowers from Prussia; cyclamen from the hills of Rome; white heather from the hills of Greece; vines from Tunis; anemones from a valley in Sicily; sweet bryony from Australia; a bit of ivy from Long Island—all bloom now in his garden as living souvenirs of travel.—Beatrice Plumb in Christian Herald.

New Horizons

LETTERS

"Sleeping on Our Oars"

As we look about us, we can see how few people really know the good way of life as Jesus taught it. This is partly our fault, because we, as Latter Day Saints, have failed to demonstrate the "better way." As Will Chambers used to say, "We are sleeping on our oars."

This is a job for everyone—the layman as well as the minister. We must be willing to use each talent for the cause. God's Spirit cannot work with people who live selfishly.

Christ is pleading with us to heed his call. Why do we tarry?

ROSE MARTENS.

Persia, Iowa

To the Saints in Cincinnati

The women of Warrington Branch wish to again convey their thanks to the Cincinnati members for the packages they sent. We held a distribution service, and all went home happy. We are grateful for the thoughtfulness of these people who are so far away. May God bless them and us in our united effort to further his work. We are proud to belong to an organization which enfolds people all over the world in a bond of love. Surely this oneness will bring us a clearer vision of Zion and inspire us to strive more diligently to achieve our goal.

Sister L. Lampard

Sister N. Dawborn

25 Dorothea Street

Orford Warrington

Lancs, England

Tribute to James Edward

Trevey

For nearly forty years Brother J. Edward Trevey was a good friend of mine. His wife and my wife were friends before either was married. Ed and Alice have been regular visitors in our home through the intervening years since our marriages—theirs in 1905 and ours in 1906.

I was greatly shocked at the rather sudden death of my good friend. Only a week or so before, the four of us spent the day together and I commented on how well he seemed. Now he is gone.

From every point of contact, I knew him well. He worked for the Rock Island Railroad as a Western Union lineman for thirty-seven years, which in itself speaks for continuity of purpose and character. On his retirement, he and his wife moved to Independence from Cedar Rapids, Iowa. Because of our previously close friendship, we realized more and more his sterling qualities.

Without hesitancy it can be said that he was always the same in temperament and disposition, whether we were fixing tires, enjoying the quiet of a camp together, or attending church somewhere. Ed, as we called him, was a faithful member of the church. Whenever he was called to work, he cheerfully did the best he could to promote the welfare of the church. Though holding the office of deacon, he was at one time appointed president of the branch where he resided at Cedar Rapids.

Not only was he devoted to his friends and the church, he was also devoted to his wife. He was loved by his neighbors and friends, and will be missed by even the children in the neighborhood where he lived. He will be missed by the members of his family, but most of all, he will be missed by his wife. Sister Alice is meeting this rugged change with courage and a braveness consistent with the life her husband always lived.

A good man has gone to a well-earned reward. There he will await the coming of us all.

M. H. SIEGFRIED.

1417 West Walnut

Independence, Missouri

Desires to Serve

Before I entered the waters of baptism, I knelt in prayer and confessed all my sins. I realized that God had given me a strong body, and I resolved that I would work for him. I have a desire in my heart to tell the story of Jesus. I do tell my neighbors about the gospel, but I shall not be happy until I can spend my entire time winning souls for Christ.

W. F. Johnston

1634 North Yorktown

Tulsa, Oklahoma

Recommends Article

I should like to ask all Herald readers not to overlook the article, "Face The Truth," by Ruth Selzer in the April 3 issue. In this short feature may be found the answer to our present state of mental confusion. The author was surely inspired of God to reassert His plan for us in a clear and simple way.

MRS. GALEN MORFIELD

408 South Locust

Flora, Illinois

Letter of Thanks

I wish to thank the Saints for their prayers in behalf of my husband. I am also grateful to Apostle Draper and Elder Burt who came to our home and administered to him. The doctor found that he had pneumonia as well as a skin infection. He is recovering and has gained three and a half pounds in two weeks. The infection has not entirely cleared up, and we shall be thankful for continued prayers.

Pearl Brett

Box 111

Mascotte, Florida

A Life of Dedication

I would like to pay a small tribute to our pastor, Elder Louis Zonker, who is also a student at the University of Ohio.

He came to us uninvited, and we opened our hearts to him. Being few in number, we knew that there could be no regular pastor for us; but even so, we prayed for one, believing that nothing is impossible with God. The first Sunday night he stood behind our pulpit, it was as if God had opened the heavens to say, "This is my beloved son, hear him." He taught us humbly lessons that we could understand; he told stories that held the children's interest. When someone commented, "I liked your sermon because it wasn't too long," he answered, "I had a teacher once who said that anything really important can be told in twenty minutes."

He comes to us each Sunday, and we look forward to having him present. Even on Christmas and Easter, when he could have spent his vacation at home with his family, he worshiped with us. Twice he walked the distance of five miles in order to be at church. On several occasions, he was forced to spend the whole day, but he never once said, "I must get back to town—I have to study," or "I must do some outside reading before Wednesday's exams."

His diligence has born fruit. He organized our first Zion's League, and gave unstintingly of his time to the reshaping of this disorganized group into something closely resembling a religious-minded congregation. He has shaken us out of our lethargy and aroused new interest in the general church program, making it possible for members who had never attended conference before to go. He has renewed our enthusiasm for beautifying our church home; already plans are being made to redecorate this spring.

He has even arranged for a missionary to visit us in the fall and conduct a series of meetings. He has blessed our children and administered to our sick. Each Communion service is an experience to remember.

He has taught us the meaning of true humility and dedicated service. I pray that we may continue to prove worthy of his ministry.

Ruby Tinkham

The Plains, Ohio

Comfort in Pain

We believe that whatever God has created has a place in the scheme of things. Even the birds have their place and contribute toward making us happy. A Sunday afternoon radio program, "The American Warblers," features an orchestra playing the accompaniment to song birds. To me, there is no sweeter music than these beautiful canaries make. It lifts me up and makes me realize the goodness of my Heavenly Father in creating so many things to make us happy. Even when we are in pain, the birds cheer us with their sweet songs.

A few mornings ago, while it was still dark, I was forced to get up, as I often do when the pain is too severe, to seek relief. Some warblers came to the door and sang their sweet songs. It caused me to forget the pain and remember the goodness of God. Like Paul, I have a thorn in the flesh, which the Lord has not seen fit to remove. Yet he sends these messengers to give cheer.

Mrs. Ruth Harp

210 Truax St.

San Antonio, Texas

Wants to Contact Saints

We would like to contact any Saints living in or near Claremore. We moved here a little over a year ago from Rome, Missouri, and have had no church associations during this time. Our daughter, who lives close to us, has two children which she would like to have attend a church school of our faith. We would be grateful for visits from any of the ministers who live in this area. Perhaps they could help us find a way to be of service to the church. We would especially like to hear from Brother Walter Bullard whose address we have lost.

Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Mendel

Route 4, Box 312

Claremore, Oklahoma

Tribute to F. L. Sawley

Words are inadequate for us to express our appreciation of the life and ministry of this esteemed brother. We can truly say he was a humble servant of God, acquainted with sorrow and grief, a stalwart defender of the faith. He fought a good fight and surely is worthy to walk with the Master.

Funeral services were conducted by Elder C. E. Harpe at the Saints' Home in Lamoni. Interment was in the Rose Hill Cemetery.

James Schofield

Lamoni, Iowa

Family Tree of Protestantism

(Continued from page 8.)

to preach, we had authority to baptize." They rested their whole ecclesiastical structure on that uncertain and unanswered "if."

Authority Repudiated

Writing as a Protestant, the late Reverend Burris Jenkins, once pastor of the Linwood Boulevard Christian Church in Kansas City and founder of the Community Church in that city, makes this very frank and logical confession in his book, The World's Debt to Protestantism:

The end result of Protestantism is freedom from authority, each one sailing the seas for himself, reasoning and thinking for himself They (the Protestants) had long ago given up papal and ecclesiastical infallibility; they had swung to a scriptural source of authority and found it crumbling under their feet They were not yet ready to accept the logic of their intellectual revolt against authority and declare without equivocation that there is no source of authority in religion. Even yet come out boldly with that declaration—there is no source of authority in religion—and cold chills go up and down many devoted spines. The declaration, however, is inescapable for any who launch out into the Protestant river of thought. Either one has got to stay by the old church (Catholic) that dates back almost to the apostolic age, or else he has to launch out upon a course of thinking which brings him to the inevitable conclusion that there is no source of authority in religion.

There is one alternative that Dr. Jenkins has overlooked in his argument, and that is the possibility of a restoration of apostolic authority. He repudiates the doctrine of succession; he does not find authority coming through the Reformation; it may have come—it did come through Restoration.

Catholics stress the imperative need of an authoritative ministry. In that they are logical. They claim that authority has come down to them from generation to generation in an unbroken line from the days of Christ. In that, they ignore the long dark ages of world history and the departure from the doctrines and spirit of the original church that constituted the great apostasy foretold by the prophets.

Protestants admit the apostasy, else they would not be Protestants; but they are hazy and confused as to the source of their own authority.

Latter Day Saints are as emphatic as Catholics regarding the need for authority; but claim to have received it through divine restoration—a unique, distinctive, and logical position.

Faith in God

(Continued from page 11.)

knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ." It is worth-while to add to our faith these qualities, for they bring the richest gift and blessing of our faith in God—that is life eternal. Jesus said, "And this is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent."—John 17: 3, Inspired Version. What greater function could we have for our faith?

A Star Shone

By Robbie Trent

Herein are tales forever lovely and true for they are part of the literature of the Bible. Small hands can turn these pages and short fingers can find the Mother and Child or the shepherds. For the pre-school child. 65c

* CONVERSATION. I was on a bus from London to Stratford, Ontario. A well-dressed farmer in the front seat beside me opened a pleasant conversation. He had traveled to the coast, and was interested in California and the southwest. It seemed appropriate to talk agriculture, and my early experience on a farm helped me. He left the bus at a crossroads, and I sat alone for a time. At St. Mary's a large crowd waited to get on. I was surprised when a big cello was poked over the back of my seat, and a woman's voice said, "Now if the chap up there will take hold of this, I'll climb over the packages in the aisle." I did, and she took the seat beside me. As we balanced the cello between us, it seemed appropriate to discuss music. She was making the trip to Stratford for a lesson. Her sons were interested in music, too, she said. So we had Mozart and Mendelssohn, Tchaikovsky and Grieg, Brahms and Beethoven all the way to Stratford. . . . Canadians are a friendly people, very cordial to visitors.

* ALL TORONTO is divided into two parts. There is Downtown, near the lake, with the banks, the newspapers, the hotels, the great department stores, the government buildings, and the university. This is the older, conservative part of town. Then there is the north side, which surrounds St. Clair Avenue, a newer section that belongs to the little people. With John F. Sheehy we were heading for the church along a broad business street. "What street is this?" we asked. "St. Clair Avenue," said Brother Sheehy. Later, going to visit a member, we crossed a busy thoroughfare. "What is this one?" "St. Clair Avenue," said Brother Sheehy. We wound around through a maze of short streets, going a long way and completely losing the visitor. Then we emerged on a wide boulevard. "What one is this?" Brother Sheehy laughed and said, "St. Clair Avenue!" It was like that all day. To the confused visitor, the whole city seemed to spin slowly around this one great business and traffic artery. . . . Toronto, you'd better look out. The folks up on St. Clair Avenue may be planning to take over!

* PARTY LINE. If, during the war shortage, you had to accept a party line phone, you are acquainted with Mrs. Windy. She is a specialist, and she has an interminable enthusiasm for her subject. Your Mrs. Windy may live on gossip, food, church, or other subjects. Ours is a seamstress, and, like a moth, lives on clothes. Her life contains little but hems, gussets, biases, edgings, ruffles, etc. If you have an emergency and must communicate with the doctor, the grocer, the collier, or the police, Mrs. Windy is sure to be holding the line, and she keeps it for hours. Clothes are her business, her recreation, her religion, and her vice. . . . It is a mark of maturity and civilization to be fair in using anything we share with other people, and not to treat it like a monopoly. If you are on a party line, be reasonable; govern your conversation by the clock, not by the calendar. Give the rest of the world a chance.

Let us fill our lives with things which will make good memories when we are old.

* QUOTE: "Men give good advice when they can no longer set a bad example."—Roe Fulker-son, in "Kiwanis Magazine."

Books Wanted
Harry Hearn, 113½ East Wabasha, Winona, Minnesota, wants to buy a copy of The Priesthood Manual that is in good condition.

REQUESTS FOR PRAYERS
Mrs. Myrtle Smith of Stonington, Maine, requests prayers that she may be healed of a lingering affliction.

Prayers are requested for Mrs. Pauline Bourland of Farmington, Iowa, that she may be healed if it is God's will. At present, she is in the University Hospital in Iowa City.

ENGAGEMENTS

Elmer-Norwood
Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Norwood of Bozeman, Montana, announce the engagement of their daughter, Wanda Bernice, to Edward Mansfield Elmer, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Elmer of Halfway, Oregon. The ceremony will take place June 13 in the Reorganized Church at Bozeman.

Johnson-Malcolm
Mr. and Mrs. Frank B. Malcolm of Yakima, Washington, announce the engagement of their daughter, Frances Helen, to Stanley Johnson, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. F. Fiebelkorn of Spokane, Washington. Both are students at Graceland College.

WEDDINGS

Northrup-Raymond
Donna Carolyn Raymond, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Raymond of Anamosa, Iowa, and Everett C. Northrup were married April 19 at Anamosa. They will make their home in Long Beach, California.

Levitt-Moothart
Treva J. Moothart and Wendell E. Levitt, both of Kalispell, Montana, were married on April 3 at the Reorganized Church in Kalispell. The double-ring ceremony was read by the bridegroom's uncle, Joseph W. Minthorn. The couple will live in Denver, Colorado, where Mr. Levitt plans to attend school.

BIRTHS

A daughter, Janis Elaine, was born to Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Kochis of Elyria, Ohio, on March 5.

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth C. Fowler of Independence, Missouri, announce the birth of a son, Rodney Dean, born March 13. Mrs. Fowler is the former Deloris Prine.

A son, Allen Jay, was born on January 19 to Mr. and Mrs. L. Jay Courser of Blanchard, Michigan. Mrs. Courser was formerly Ida Marie Carrick.

A son, Loren Merle, was born on March 2 to Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Persall of Vestaburg, Michigan.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Carrick of Vestaburg, Michigan, announce the birth of a daughter, Nancy Ruth, born on April 12.

Mr. and Mrs. David L. Snowden of Evergreen, Alabama, announce the birth of a daughter, Mary Beatrice, born February 26.

Mr. and Mrs. Otho Upchurch of Zearing, Iowa, announce the birth of a daughter, Pamela Jean, born November 30. Mrs. Upchurch is the former Fern Launins.

A son, Carl David, was born on March 16 to Mr. and Mrs. Carl S. Hammer of Colorado Springs, Colorado. Mrs. Hammer is the former Lorraine Wheatley.

DEATHS

FRY.—Laura May, daughter of Ogden Townsend Christy and Martha Elwell Bacon, was born December 22, 1879, in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and died at the age of sixty-eight in San Antonio, Texas. She was educated in Philadelphia, and, until her baptism into the Reorganized Church, attended one of the popular churches of that city. At the time of her conversion, the Restoration Movement was a target of persecution, but she gave abundantly of her time and energy to establish a branch of the church in Philadelphia. She was married to Orrin K. Fry on September 14, 1904, by Apostle Francis M. Sheehy. With her family, she moved to Independence, Missouri, in 1911, residing there until 1945 when she moved to San Antonio, Texas, for her health.

She is survived by her husband; a son, Orrin Kern, Jr., of St. Louis, Missouri; and MICHIGAN YOUTH CAMPA Week of Fun and Fellowship*Place? Date? Who Is Expected?

Park of the Pines—June 20 to 27, 1948—Young People (boys and girls between fifteen and eighteen years of age or at least sophomore standing in high school). Certain older campers may be admitted upon approval of the Camp Director.

What Does It Cost?

The camp fee is $15 per camper. This covers board, lodging, and educational service, but does not cover personal incidental expenses or transportation.

What Will Be Doing at Camp?

Campers and staff members will share a happy through-the-day and round-the-week fellowship, participating together in drama, music, swimming, boating, sports, singing, worship, hiking, campfire service, etc.

How Can One Get In?

Ask your pastor, district president, or youth leader for an application blank. Fill out the blank, and send it with a $1.00 deposit to John Banks, 126 Townsend, Midland, Michigan.

To Whom May One Write for Information?

Address your inquiries to the office of The Department of Religious Education, The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri, or to John Banks, 126 Townsend, Midland, Michigan.

Who Is in Charge?

The camp officials have been assigned as follows:

Camp Director, F. M. McDowell.
Assistant Director, John Banks.
Business Manager, Allen Schreur.
Assistant Business Manager, Joseph Engmark.

In addition to the above a large and qualified staff is being selected.

A Friendly Warning:

Registrations at the camp will be limited to not more than sixty-five campers. An early application is urgently recommended if one is to avoid later disappointment.

One week at a camp and you will forever be an enthusiastic camper.

DEPARTMENT OF RELIGIOUS EDUCATION,
F. M. McDowell, Director.

Maine District Conference

The Maine District Conference will be held May 15 and 16 at Stonington. The business session is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. on Saturday. A one-day meeting will be held at Jonesport on May 23. Apostle George Lewis, Bishop D. O. Chesworth, and Seventy Donald Harvey are to be present at both places.

NEWMAN WILSON,
District President.

Sault Ste. Marie District Conference

A district conference will be held at the church in Sault Ste. Marie, Ontario, on Sunday, May 23. Activities of the day include a prayer service at 9:30 a.m.; preaching at 11; and a business session at 2:30 in the afternoon. District officers and delegates to General Conference will be elected at this time. Apostle D. Blair Jensen is to be present.

W. A. BUSHILA,
District President.

"Heralds" Wanted

George H. Roberson, 320 South Maple, McPherson, Kansas, would like to obtain as many copies as possible of the Herald containing Elder J. D. Shower's healing. He will use these in missionary work.

Change of Address

Alex Cadwell
219 King Street
Guelph, Ontario

(President of Owen Sound District)

a daughter, Ruth Alverda Hoover of Los Angeles, California. Another son, Raymond Russell, died in infancy. Two funeral services were held, one at San Antonio on April 13, with Elders Crefield Jackson and Harry Robinson officiating, the other at Stahl Funeral Home in Independence on April 14. Pastor Glaude Smith was in charge of this service, assisted by Elder Amos T. Higdon.

KILMER.—Amelia Jane Chapman, was born August 4, 1869, near Omaha, Nebraska, and died at her home in Winnebago, Nebraska, on March 20, 1948. She became a member of the Reorganized Church early in life and on April 5, 1895, was married to Albert H. Kilmer at Persia, Iowa. Mr. Kilmer preceded her in death in January, 1936.

She is survived by one son, James Kilmer of Winnebago; a brother; three sisters; and three grandchildren. She also leaves four children which she took into her home as a family. Funeral services were conducted by Elder Lester Hunt. Burial was in the Omadi Cemetery near Winnebago.

TANNER.—Benjamin S., son of James and Elizabeth Tanner, was born December 6, 1872, at Bevier, Missouri, and died at his home on April 2, 1948. As a young man, he married Helena Davis; three daughters were born to this union. Helena died in 1910, and seven years later he married Sadi Miller. He united with the Reorganized Church in 1910 and was later called to the office of elder. His ministry extended into numerous homes where he called in times of illness.

He leaves his wife, Sadi; three daughters: Mrs. Margaret Kelso of Manhattan, Montana; Mrs. Naomi Miller of Great Falls, Montana; and Mrs. Ellen DeFrance of Mitchellville, Iowa; three sisters: Mrs. Mary Woolcraft of Great Falls; Mrs. Emma Minshall of St. Louis, Missouri; and Mrs. Ruth Parry of Parsons, Kansas; five grandchildren; and five great-grandchildren. Funeral services were held at the Reorganized Church in Bevier, Elders J. P. Vanskike and F. T. Mussell officiating.

BALLANTYNE.—Robert A., son of James and Emeline Ballantyne, was born October 4, 1870, at Soldier, Iowa, and died unexpectedly at his home near Lamoni, Iowa, on January 16, 1948. He was baptized into the Reorganized Church on May 18, 1879, at Moorhead, Iowa, and remained a devoted member throughout his life. On December 6, 1894, he was married to Mary E. Bartholomew; five sons were born to this marriage, one of whom (Alvin) preceded his father in death. Brother Ballantyne was ordained a priest at the age of twenty-four; an elder at thirty-two; and a high priest at fifty. He served as pastor of the Moorhead branch for seven years. After moving to Lamoni, he was pastor of the Thompson, Bloomington, and Evergreen congregations. He was president of the board of directors of the Lamoni Farmer's Co-operative Grain and Seed Company, and was also a member of the Lamoni Co-operative Creamery board since the beginning of that organization. Three years ago he and Mrs. Ballantyne observed their fiftieth wedding anniversary.

Besides his wife, he leaves four sons: Donald of the home; Murl, Clayton, and Dean, who live near by; two sisters: Mrs. Nettie Amundson of Soldier and Mrs. Fannie Moore of Des Moines, Iowa; nine grandchildren, all of whom he baptized; and two great-grandchildren. Funeral services were conducted at the Coliseum in Lamoni by Elder E. J. Gleazer, Jr. and Bishop Lewis Landsberg. Burial was in Rose Hill Cemetery.

ENIX.—William Joseph, son of Thomas and Martha Enix, was born June 20, 1868, in northern Missouri, and died March 30, 1948, at Fresno, California. As a boy, he moved with his family to western Kansas, where on September 16, 1889, he was married to Louise Lambert; six children were born to this union. He was baptized into the Reorganized Church at Dinuba, California, and was ordained to the office of priest, then elder. For the past few years, he served as assistant pastor of Fresno branch. As a rancher, he did much for the community in which he lived; as a church member, he brought a reverent and dignified service to those in his congregation. On September 16 of last year, he and Mrs. Enix celebrated their fifty-ninth wedding anniversary.

He is survived by his wife; four sons: Ralph and Frank of Fresno; Theodore of Clavis, California; and Winfred of Reedley, California; two daughters: Mrs. Nola Pillsbury of Los Angeles, California, and Mrs. Mable Huston of Fullerton, California; two sisters: Mrs. Ethel Tout of Willows, California, and Mrs. Minnie Clifner of Sayre, Oklahoma; and ten grandchildren. Services were conducted at the Lisle Funeral Home in Fresno, Elders

E. E. Workman and John W. Rushton officiating. Interment was in Belmont Cemetery.

OLTVEDT.—Helmer, was born September 17, 1882, in Holden, Norway, and died February 21, 1948, at Northwestern Hospital in Minneapolis, Minnesota. He came to America in 1906, settling in Minneapolis and on August 3, 1912, was married to Thora Marguerite Holm, who preceded him in death on December 26, 1929. He, his wife, and two daughters were baptized into the Reorganized Church in 1926.

He is survived by his second wife, Ruth, to whom he was married on December 19, 1942; two daughters: Helen Mary and Irene Marguerite; two sons: Thoralf Kenneth and Carl Helmer; and six grandchildren. He also leaves three brothers and two sisters in Norway. Services were conducted by Elder Vernon Lundeen at the Minneapolis Church. Interment was in Crystal Lake Cemetery.

SCHOFIELD.—Annie Jane, was born August 26, 1865, and died March 22, 1948. She was baptized at Leeds, England, on April 3, 1909, by John W. Rushton. She and her companion, Sister Wormald, were charter members of the Bradford (Yorks) Branch, which was organized in their home by Apostle Paul Hanson. A devoted worker, she was known and loved by members all over the world. Funeral services were held at her home in Bradford and at the graveside, Pastor George Aldridge officiating.

FISHER.—Willia, daughter of Horace and Lillie Sellers, was born June 24, 1916, at McKenzie, Alabama, and died February 13, 1948, at Pleasant View Sanitarium near East St. Louis, Illinois, after an illness of eighteen months. She was baptized a member of the Reorganized Church at the age of nine, and was active in the music department and young people's work. On December 4, 1937, she was married to Donald Fisher; one child was born to this marriage.

She is survived by her husband, Donald, and daughter, Donna Sue, of the home; her parents; a brother, Greely Sellers of Kennett, Missouri; and a sister, Mrs. Edgar McIntosh of Mirando City, Texas. Funeral services were conducted at the Landsdown Church in East St. Louis, Elders Prosper Carl and Charles Fletcher officiating. Burial was in the Mount Hope Cemetery.

MYERS.—Virgil Lee, son of David and Sophie Mahorney Myers, was born in Ladoga, Indiana, on January 31, 1873, and died on April 10, 1948, in Los Angeles, California. He had lived in California since 1901 and was with the Los Angeles Transit Company for forty-five years. He retired from active work on January 31 of this year. He will be remembered by those who knew him as a man of integrity.

He is survived by his wife, Roseanna; a daughter, Madeline Dexter of San Bernardino; two stepsons: T. Howard and Hubert Scudder; a sister, Mrs. Myrtle Myers Davis; and two grandchildren. His first wife preceded him in death thirty years ago. The funeral service was conducted at the Utter-McKinley Parlors, John W. Rushton officiating. Interment was in the Inglewood cemetery.

DALHOFF.—Mary Louise, was born on July 23, 1862, at North Hoboken, New Jersey, and died April 14, 1948, at Independence, Missouri. On April 9, 1882, she was baptized at New Albany, Indiana. Shortly afterward, she moved with her parents to Stewartsville, Missouri; for fifty-four years she resided in Buchanan County. She was married to Bernard H. Dalhoff on November 8, 1900, at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas. Their home was in St. Joseph.

Funeral services were conducted April 16 by Elder R. Melvin Russell. Interment was in Mount Olivet Cemetery near St. Joseph.

KAPLINGER.—Anna, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Johnson, was born October 19, 1882, at Stamba, Sweden, and died April 16, 1948, at Rest Haven in Independence, Missouri. She had been a member of the Reorganized Church since March 16, 1907, being baptized by C. S. Barron at Armstrong, Kansas. Her husband, Jacob H. Kaplinger, preceded her in death in 1919. For a number of years, she operated a taxi service in Independence, driving an average of 30,000 miles a year. She gave up her business in 1946 and was ill for several months before her death.

Surviving are two sisters: Mrs. Kate Kaplinger of Independence and Mrs. Clara Bennett of Manistee, Michigan. Funeral services were conducted at the Stahl Chapel by Elders Glaude Smith and John Boswell. Interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery.

CHAPMAN.—Roxie Leota, was born February 5, 1894, in Missouri and died April 16, 1948, at Vancouver Memorial Hospital. She had made her home in Vancouver for the past twenty-eight years. She was a member of the Reorganized Church.

She is survived by her husband, William J. Chapman of Vancouver; three daughters: Mrs. Elsie Knottingham, Mrs. Alice Kadaw, and Mrs. Mary Blair, all of Vancouver; five sons: Harold and Elvin of Portland, Oregon; Floyd of Missouri; Wilbur and Richard of Vancouver; three sisters: Mrs. F. E. Chapman of Vancouver; Mrs. H. A. Howell of Hood River, Oregon; and Mrs. Mary Mills of Santa Ana, California; and eight grandchildren. Services were held at the Vancouver Funeral Chapel, Elder J. L. Verhei of Portland officiating. Interment was in Park Hill Cemetery.

ROBINSON.—Thomas R., Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph R. Robinson of Des Moines, Iowa, died at Broadlawn General Hospital on April 9, 1948, from injuries received in an automobile accident. He suffered multiple lacerations and a cerebral concussion when the car skidded off the gravel and plunged down a fifteen-foot embankment.

He is survived by his parents; two sisters: Leslie Marie of Seattle, Washington, and Janice of the home; and his paternal grandmother, Mrs. Addie Robinson of Los Angeles, California. Funeral services were conducted by Elders Henry Castings and F. T. Mussell at Hamilton Chapel in Des Moines. Burial was in Pine Hill Cemetery.

FISHER.—Crawford William, was born in February, 1871, in Rusk County, Texas, and died March 25, 1948, at his home in Davidson, Oklahoma. He was married to Mary Herron on February 7, 1897, and was baptized into the Reorganized Church on July 20, 1924.

He leaves his wife; two daughters: Mrs. Nellie Hixson of Holdenville, Oklahoma, and Mrs. Bessie Tucker of Davidson; one son, Loyd, of Mangum, Oklahoma; nine grandchildren; and four great-grandchildren. Elder L. E. Dyke of Eagle City was in charge of the funeral service. Burial was in the Davidson cemetery.

SKINNER.—Belle D., was born August 12, 1863, at Amador City, California, and died April 24, 1948, at Independence, Missouri. She was married on July 19, 1880, to W. O. Skinner at Sacramento, California; four children were born to this union. On November 22, 1884, she was baptized a member of the Reorganized Church at Grizzly Flats, California. Her husband and one daughter, Bertha, preceded her in death.

Surviving are two daughters: Mrs. Ruth Price of Kansas City, Kansas, and Mrs. Velma Etzenhouser of San Diego, California; one son: Arden Skinner of Berwyn, Illinois; a brother, Ben Pertz of Santa Cruz, California; seven grandchildren; and three great-grandchildren. Services were conducted at the Stahl Funeral Chapel in Independence by Elders Glaude A. Smith and Francis McDonald. Interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery.

LAYTON.—Ida Amelia, was born October 29, 1857, in Delhaven, Nova Scotia, and died February 26, 1948, at Resthaven in Independence, Missouri. On December 12, 1877, she was married to John Wilbur Layton in San Francisco, California. Returning to Nova Scotia, both were baptized into the Reorganized Church in 1883 by Sister Layton's brother-in-law, Elder Joseph Burton. Six years later they made their home in Independence. Here Sister Layton taught the first Book of Mormon class to be held in Stone Church; many of her students later became active in the ministry. She was a member of the Patrons Society for several years and taught in the church school until her sixtieth birthday. Moving to Nauvoo, Illinois, in 1918, the Laytons were caretakers of church property there for a number of years. When they returned to Independence, Sister Layton worked with the Needlecraft Society and established a reputation for making beautiful hooked rugs. After suffering a stroke in 1944, she was admitted to Resthaven where she resided until her death.

She is survived by one son, J. Lawrence Layton of Florida; one grandchild; and five great-grandchildren. Her husband died nearly twelve years ago. Her daughter, Irene Layton, also preceded her in death. Miss Layton was an instructor at William Chrisman High School for seven years and also taught at Graceland Apostles George G. Lewis and C. George Mesley conducted the funeral service. Burial was in Mound Grove Cemetery.

Mary A. Burlington
1510 1/2 Jules
St. Joseph, Missouri

92867

18

h

HOWARD.—Henry Frank, was born in Harrison County, Iowa, on February 13, 1870, and died April 9, 1948, at his home in Council Bluffs, Iowa. He was baptized a member of the Reorganized Church as a young man in Persia, Iowa.

Surviving are his wife, Nettie, of Los Angeles, California; two daughters: Mrs. Adolph Ulfers, Omaha, Nebraska; and Mrs. Harold Jepson, Los Angeles; ten sons: Clay, Sioux Falls, South Dakota; Roy, George, and Harry, Los Angeles; Hal, Charles, Fred, and Loyal, Long Beach, California; William, Victorville, California; and David, Chicago, Illinois; three brothers: William, Sibley, Iowa; Charles, Ottumwa, Iowa; and David, Los Angeles; two sisters: Mrs. Minnie Lynch, Omaha, and Mrs. Lottie Garren, Los Angeles; twenty-nine grandchildren; and twenty-one great-grandchildren. Funeral services were held at the church in Persia, Elder V. D. Ruch officiating. Burial was in Valley View Cemetery near Persia.

HENSON.—Robert Lee, was born February 21, 1877, at Fayetteville, Arkansas, and died April 2, 1948, at Amarillo, Texas. In 1902, he was married to Nancy Edna Shephard; three children were born to this union. He had been a member of the Reorganized Church since April, 1930.

He leaves his wife; three daughters: Lois Ward of Chicago, Illinois; Mildred Freeman and Audentia Roy of Houston, Texas; two brothers: E. L. Henson of Ava, Missouri, and H. H. Henson of Farrwell, Texas; and six grandchildren. Funeral services were held at Alton, Texas, with Elder Ralph Wilt officiating, and at the Speaks Funeral home in Independence by Seventy Z. Z. Renfro. Interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery.

NEWMAN.—William Alfred, was born March 14, 1869, at Marysville, Tennessee, and died March 28, 1948, at Washunga, Oklahoma. He moved from Tennessee to Oklahoma in 1891 and was married to Stella Spencer in 1902. In 1922, he was baptized into the Reorganized Church and was later ordained a member of the Aaronic priesthood. At the time of his death, he was in charge of the small group of Saints at Washunga.

He is survived by his wife; four sons: Frank L. and Joseph A. of Ponca City, Oklahoma; William M. of Wichita, Kansas; and Francis G. of Hoquiam, Washington; two daughters: Mrs. Glen Monigold of Blackwell, Oklahoma, and Mrs. K. C. Williamson of Nottingham, Missouri; one brother, Charles L. of Washunga; one sister, Mrs. Sidney Miller of Portland, Oregon; twenty-two grandchildren; and three great-grandchildren. Seventy Albert Loving officiated at the funeral, assisted by Elders W. J. Shermard and L. W. Kohlman. Burial was in the Washunga cemetery.

PETERSON.—Alfred, son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Peterson, was born February 10, 1869, in Bloomington, Sweden, and died March 29, 1948, at his home in Independence, Missouri. He came to the United States at the age of fourteen and settled in western Iowa. Later, he moved to Canada, where he lived at Houlton, Saskatchewan. On March 19, 1899, he married Anna Klunkenbeard, and on December 8, 1912, he became a member of the Reorganized Church. He was ordained to the office of priest on August 20, 1916, and served faithfully in this capacity until death. His greatest regret was that, due to ill health, he was prevented from taking a more active part in missionary work. In 1918, he and Mrs. Peterson moved to California, remaining there until 1920, when they made their home in Independence.

He is survived by his wife; several nieces and nephews; and many friends. Funeral services were conducted at Walnut Park Church, Bishop J. S. Kelley and Elder R. D. Weaver officiating. Interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery.

CONDIT.—Ida Louise, daughter of Rasmus and Mary C. Larsen, was born August 14, 1874, in Logan, Utah, and died March 24, 1948. On August 15, 1898, she was married to Silas Dana Condit; four children were born to this union. A son, Clyde LaVerne, and a daughter, Cora Blakeman, preceded their mother in death. Mr. Condit died in 1931. Mrs. Condit had been a member of the Reorganized Church since June 19, 1887. She is survived by two daughters: Amanda Condit and Phyllis Richardson; a brother, Erastus Larsen; a sister, Mrs. Emma Barrett; and three grandchildren. Funeral services were conducted by Elders G. E. Tickemeyer and L. J. Ostertag. Burial was in Forest Lawn Cemetery.

REEL.—Grace Estelle, was born October 6, 1885, in Sullivan County, Missouri, and died March 20, 1948, at Ahwahnee, California, after a long illness. She had been a member of the Reorganized Church for many years and served as historian of Northern California District much of that time. She was also a skilled artist. She loved the church and willingly worked for it.

She is survived by her husband, Earnest; two daughters: Mrs. Dwight Burton Woodruff and Mrs. Ralph L. Hallen, all of Modesto, California; and a brother, Charles Miller of Sacramento, California. Evangelist William H. Dawson and Elder John Moffat conducted the funeral service in Modesto, California. Interment was in the Masonic Cemetery in Modesto.

POOLE.—Charles A., son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Poole, died March 28, 1948, in San Bernardino, California, at the age of eighty-three. His parents came to America from England in 1850 and helped to develop what is often referred to as the "Southern California Empire." Long a member of the Reorganized Church, Charles Poole also belonged to the Masonic order. He was a well-known business man in San Bernardino, highly esteemed because of his honesty, generosity, and sympathy toward those in need. Several years ago his health began to fail and he retired from business, living a quiet life until his departure.

He leaves his wife, Lena; a daughter, Mrs. Hazel Driggs, both of San Bernardino; two brothers: Walter of Los Angeles, California, and Fred of San Bernardino; three sisters: Mrs. Clara Peake, Mrs. Albert Fuller, and Mrs. Gene Caley, all of San Bernardino; and one grandchild. John W. Rushton was in charge of the funeral, which was held at the parlors of Stephen and Bobbitt. Interment was in Mount View Cemetery.

HILL.—Margaret Clara, was born November 13, 1889, at Platte City, Missouri, and died at her home in Elmonte, California, on March 7, 1948. She was baptized at East Los Angeles Branch on October 25, 1925, by the late Roy P. Burton.

She leaves her husband, Charles Roos Hill; a son, Grover; and two grandchildren of Los Angeles, California; four brothers: Charles and Milton Higby of Pueblo, Colorado; John Higby of Los Angeles; and Marion Higby of El Reno, Oklahoma; also a sister, Minnie Van Horn of Oklahoma City, Oklahoma. Services were held at the Schanel Funeral Home in Elmonte, Elder V. L. Lum officiating. Burial was in the Rose Hills Memorial Cemetery in Whittier, California.

NEITZ.—Rose McConnaughy, was born January 10, 1890, and died March 11, 1948, at Barberton, Ohio. She was baptized into the Reorganized Church on April 2, 1901. She was the daughter of J. C. McConnaughy, retired missionary, with whom she made her home. She also leaves her husband, Edward; a son, Edward, Jr.; a daughter, Mrs. Beulah Myers; a brother, Elmer McConnaughy; a sister, Mrs. Jesse Howd; and five grandchildren. Three other children died early in life. Services were held at the Campfield-Hickman Funeral Home in Barberton, Elder W. Hubert Mitchell officiating. Interment was in the Lakewood Cemetery.

JEAGERS.—Edmond A., was born June 24, 1861, at Lainsville, Indiana, and died March 26, 1948, at Louisville, Kentucky. He was married to Mary Young; ten children were born to them. Mrs. Jeagers and five of the children preceded him in death. He was baptized into the Reorganized Church on July 3, 1909, and on June 4, 1911, was ordained a priest. On August 19, 1934, he was ordained an elder, which office he held the rest of his life. He was ever faithful to his ministry and extended Christian influence to all with whom he came in contact.

He is survived by five sons: Theodore of Louisville; John, Herbert, Joseph, and Arthur of New Albany, Indiana; eleven grandchildren; and ten great-grandchildren. His second wife, the former Florence Jenkins, preceded him in death. Elder A. W. Gage was in charge of the funeral service.

O'DELL.—Eunice Ethel, daughter of John A. and Sarah F. Van Landingham, was born May 8, 1879, in Wichita, Kansas, and died March 17, 1948, at Lockwood, Missouri. She united with the Reorganized Church in 1923 and was a faithful worker throughout her life. In June, 1918, she was married to Claude O'Dell, who survives her. She also leaves her aged mother; a brother; three sisters; and four stepchildren. Funeral services were held at the Reorganized Church in Lockwood. Burial was in Lockwood cemetery.

GODWIN.—John, son of Arthur and Eva Godwin of Morris, Illinois, was born February 21, 1921, and died August 6, 1947, at Marseilles, Illinois. He attended Graceland College for two years, graduating in 1943. He had been a member of the Reorganized Church since 1929. He is survived by his parents. A brother preceded him in death. Funeral services were held at the Mission Branch Church, Elder I. E. Turner officiating.

Reunion Schedule-1948

No. Dakota	Jun. 11-Jun. 13	Am. Leg. Pk., Detroit Lakes, Minnesota
E. Montana	Jun. 19-Jun. 27	Fairview, Mont.
Texas	Jun. 25-July 4	Bandera, Texas
Owen Sound & Toronto	Jun. 26-July 4	Port Elgin, Ont.
New York & Philadelphia	July 3-July 11	Deer Park Arkansas City, Kansas
Gulf States	July 9-July 18	Brewton, Ala.
W. Colorado	July 10-July 11	Delta, Colorado
Manitoba	July 10-July 11	Winnipeg, Man.
Central Missouri	July 10-July 18	Odessa, Missouri
Saskatchewan	July 10-July 13	Sylvan Lake, Alberta
Alberta	July 19-July 26	Gardner Lake Nauvoo, Illinois
Zion	July 17-July 25	Onset, Mass.
Nauvoo	July 17-July 25	Asilomar, Mon- terey, California
So. New England	July 17-July 25	Blue Water, Michigan
Northern California	July 17-July 25	Paris, Tennessee
Flint-Pt. Hu- ron-Detroit- Windsor	July 24-Aug. 1	Silver Lake, Washington
Kentucky & Tennessee	July 25-Aug. 1	Erie Beach, Ontario, Canada
Northwest	July 30-Aug. 8	Liahona Park
Chatham- London Cen. & So. Michigan	July 31-Aug. 8	Woodbine, Iowa
Mo. Valley	July 31-Aug. 8	Brooksville, Me.
Maine	July 31-Aug. 8	Pacific Palisades
So. California No. & West. Michigan	Aug. 5-Aug. 15	Park of the Pines
Kirtland	Aug. 6-Aug. 15	Kirtland, Ohio
Reunion of the Ozarks	Aug. 1-Aug. 8	Racine, Missouri
Oklahoma	Aug. 7-Aug. 15	Pawnee, Okla.
W. Montana	Aug. 7-Aug. 15	Race Track, Montana
Arizona	Aug. 8-Aug. 15	Pescott, Arizona
Arkansas & Louisiana	Aug. 9-Aug. 15	Clear Fork Cp., Hot Spgs., Ark.
Minnesota & Wisconsin	Aug. 9-Aug. 16	Chetek, Wisc.
Far West	Aug. 12-Aug. 22	Stewartsville, Missouri
So. Indiana	Aug. 21-Aug. 29	Bedford, Ind.
Eastern Michigan	Aug. 14-Aug. 22	Cash, Michigan
Idaho	Aug. 14-Aug. 21	Hagerman, Idaho
Des Moines	Aug. 15-Aug. 21	Guthrie Center, Iowa
Lamoni	Aug. 15-Aug. 22	Lamoni, Iowa
S. E. Illinois	Aug. 20-Aug. 29	Brush Creek, Ill.
Eastern Colorado	Aug. 20-Aug. 29	Colorado Springs Colorado

Photo by Clifford Carver

*Seek ye out of the best books
words of wisdom*

—Doctrine and Covenants

THE Saints Herald

VOLUME 95

MAY 15, 1948

NUMBER 20

www.LatterDayTruth.org

"Out of the Best Books"

AUDITORIUM NEWS

Pictured on the cover of this week's Saints' Herald is a Graceland student whose attention has been diverted from the pursuit of learning momentarily for the purpose of having her picture taken.

The student is Burdina Root, a sophomore from Houston, Texas, who was chosen for the photograph primarily because she is what might be called a representative Graceland.

She is enrolled in a liberal arts curriculum and is taking English, speech, French, geology, sociology, psychology, music, and physical education. Extra-curricularly, her primary interest has been drama. This year she was a queen in "A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court," and at Commencement time, she will be Ophelia in "Hamlet." Last year she had a leading role in "Angel Street," was a cheerleader, and secretary of her social club. She is a member of the Crescents, traditional honor group of representative Graceland women.

More than 600 students like Burdina from thirty-eight states and seven countries and territories are attending Graceland this year. They are enrolled in courses like Burdina's and in a hundred more. Their interests seek expression in activities like hers, and in sports, in journalism, in photography, in radio broadcasting, and in many more. This breadth of interest and the wide divergencies of background from which they come make for the cosmopolitan campus which is Graceland's.

But most of the 600 share with this representative student one common goal. They seek the secrets of abundant living. To find them, they seek "out of the best books, words of wisdom."

AUSTRALASIAN VISITORS.—The First Presidency have received news of a coming visit from several officers of the church from Australia. A recent air letter from Herman Peisker, minister in charge of the Australasian mission, informs us:

"Brother Don Alberts and myself are looking forward to our visit to America and our contact with the church in the Center Place. We appreciate the opportunity afforded us to meet the men whose names are so familiar to us through the pages of the "Saints' Herald." We feel it is going to mean much to us and to the work in this land.

"We will be leaving Sydney on Wednesday night, May 19, at midnight, by 'Pan-American Clipper.'" After about nine days in Honolulu, we will leave for Los Angeles by the 'Lurline' on May 29. We expect to leave Los Angeles for Independence on Monday, June 7, and after a few days at Salt Lake City to arrive in Independence for that week end.

"Patriarch Dickinson is also visiting America. He precedes us to Honolulu, travels to Los Angeles by the 'Lurline' with us, then goes north to Canada, and tours there with his wife before beginning his visit to different centers in the States."

* TRAVELS. President Israel A. Smith and Bishop G. L. DeLapp left May 6 for Philadelphia and Washington on church business. Later President Smith will visit Michigan in company with President F. Henry Edwards and Apostle E. J. Gleazer in the interest of the church-building program. Bishop DeLapp will continue his trip with Apostle G. G. Lewis in the East.

* APOSTLE ARTHUR A. OAKMAN reports that in recent weeks District President William Guthrie has baptized twenty-three people in Southeastern Illinois District, where he has been under appointment about eighteen months. James Daugherty on a recent week end baptized twelve in a splendid series of meetings at Sparta, Wisconsin, where the twelve were confirmed, and a number of others have given their names for baptism. Those added to the church are persons of ability who will contribute to the work. Prospects are good for a record year in the East Central States Mission.

* NEWS NOTE: Baptisms for April (throughout church) total 226. This is the third best record for April in the last twenty-five years, being exceeded only in 1930 and '31.

IN THIS ISSUE

EDITORIAL:

Priesthood Leadership	3
Canadian Journey	4

OFFICIAL:

European Relief	4
Appointment of Bishop's Agent	4
Call for Student Nurses	4

ARTICLES:

Stewardship and the Land, by Gerald Gabriel	5
The Cause for Peace, by Joseph Richard Meloan	8
Turn Jesus Off, by Evan A. Fry	11
Other Sheep I Have Which Are Not of This Fold, by Roy Weldon	12
Unlimited Fields of Service, by Mrs. Mary Moats	16
Tillers of the Vineyard, by Enid and Joe DeBarthe	18
This One Thing I Do, by Sadi Anka Moon	20
The Wedding Ceremony, Answer by Leonard J. Lea	21
Bulletin Board	22

Priesthood Leadership

Volunteers

The great fact of the Christian faith, one seldom mentioned, is the number of volunteer, self-sustaining workers it calls to service. Year after year these devoted people give time and strength to working for the good of others with no hope of reward but the satisfaction of knowing they are doing what is good and right.

In our church, we could not carry on our work a single month without our volunteers. Without them, almost every local activity would come to a stop. This is particularly true of the priesthood.

Many a responsibility, many a problem, many a difficult and trying task is given to members of the priesthood. Though some are inclined to accept these services and take them for granted, it is certain that the membership in general appreciates what is done for them. In personal conversation and in letters, we hear and read words of praise and gratitude for what good men have done in their priesthood offices.

Weight of Responsibility

The volunteer pastor has a very heavy load to carry. Sometimes he loses sleep and hurts his health in order to serve the people. A helpful thing is for such pastors to arrange for periods of rest. There was one large congregation served by volunteers, where a good plan was worked out. There were two men of pastor caliber. While one rested, the other served for a year. Next year, they reversed the order. The two men carried on the work for a number of years that way without injuring their health. It was a splendid example of co-operation.

Another plan is to share the responsibility among a number of men. Able young men of quality are often called to the priesthood. They should be given an opportunity to train while they work. They are generally very willing and can do much good.

Training for Service

The training program for priesthood is one of the serious needs and considerations at the present time. Some of our best pastoral personnel, with their time fully occupied in ministerial responsibilities, have little opportunity for personal study and self-improvement. Usually, such busy men have the best capacities for study and growth. Members of the priesthood who are not serving are often those who have not responded to the admonition to prepare themselves by further training and study. We need to expand the number of men engaged in study and personal preparation.

In many parts of the church, the pre-ordination classes have brought fine response and results. Men entering into new duties have thus benefited by instruction, inspiration, and guidance.

Importance

Sometimes members of the priesthood, personally and generally, are subject to criticism. This may discourage them, but they should realize that anybody who does anything at all will make mistakes and must meet some criticism. It is one of the penalties inflicted upon workers. The person who escapes it probably does nothing. The importance of an office or service is indicated by the amount of comment, adverse or favorable, that it draws.

However we may feel about criticism, we would not be wise to ignore it. First of all, we must be humble and examine what is said to see what truth there may be in it. Criticism, even though it may be sharp, may help us to improve. We know we are far from perfect, or there would be no complaints. Our most sincere dedication to our tasks calls for us to make constant efforts to do better.

Cultural Growth

Wherever one travels, one finds a growing percentage of young people in our congregations who have had opportunities for education and cultural development. Older members of the priesthood sometimes find it hard to keep up with them, unless they are willing to make an effort. Often the problem can be solved when young men are called to be ordained and bring new vitality to the local leadership. Our church is gradually shifting from a predominantly rural membership to an increasing percentage of urban, industrial, business, and professional membership. The change is bringing greater strength, finer service, better teaching, and many other improvements. Very often it is true that parents do not have opportunity to develop their talents, but they can and do see that their children are trained and educated. In the course of a few years, this is reflected in all lines of leadership as well as in the priesthood.

It is easy to observe how important the family relationship is in the reaching of higher standards among our church membership. Fathers and mothers reach the highest levels they can. Then they try to push their children on up the ladder to higher levels. It is inspiring to see parents who think more of their children than of themselves, and who, for the sake of the church and its work, are willing and happy to see new standards of strength and attainment in their children. This fact is very significant in the development of traditions of service in the priesthood.

L. J. L.

Editorial

OFFICIAL

European Relief

We receive some inquiries from time to time as to the handling of clothing for European relief purposes through the Campus Shop in Independence. The Campus Shop is an adjunct of the Bishopric, serving the needy in Independence and contiguous areas as well as the European Saints at the present time.

We have neither space nor workers to properly process the clothing contributions for European relief at the Auditorium, and we have, therefore, asked the workers at the Campus Shop to assume this responsibility.

Orders for the particular clothing garments requested by European families, to whom we are mailing packages, are placed with the Campus Shop by this office. These orders are filled according to garment and size and delivered to Brother L. R. Holmes at the Auditorium, who supervises the packing of the boxes. This means that we expect the Campus Shop to fill our orders regardless of whether they receive the clothing from persons whose contributions are marked for overseas shipment, or whether the clothing is received by them through other normal channels. Also, ordering the clothing by garment and by size means that every garment that is donated for overseas shipment may not be so used, because each garment donated may not be specifically requested. However, all garments not requested by this office for overseas shipment, go to assist some needy family in this country through the Campus Shop.

THE PRESIDING BISHOPRIC.

Notice of Appointment of Bishop's Agent

Notice is hereby given of the appointment of Brother Frank D. White, 4337 Locke Street, Fort Worth, Texas, as Bishop's Agent of the Central Texas District, succeeding Brother C. M. Mitchell. Solicitors are hereby notified to send their reports for the month of May and each succeeding month thereafter to Brother White at the above address.

We take this opportunity of expressing our appreciation to Brother Mitchell for the years of service that he has rendered in this office.

We have also appreciated the support given by the Saints to Brother Mitchell during the period of his service, and take this opportunity of commending Brother White to the Saints for their favorable consideration and support.

THE PRESIDING BISHOPRIC,

By W. N. JOHNSON.

Approved:

THE FIRST PRESIDENCY,

By J. F. GARVER.

A Call for Student Nurses

Forty young women are wanted to enroll in the 1948 class of the Independence Sanitarium and Hospital School of Nursing. The period of registration extends to August 15. In the present nation-wide shortage of nurses, excellent opportunities are offered to those who can qualify, and graduates have many choices of specialization in the field of nursing, as well as excellent compensation for their work.

Parents and church officers can help by seeing that young women of their congregations are informed of the need for their help and of the possibilities that are open to those who take up the nursing profession. Here is an opportunity for a splendid service to the church, as it is very desirable that a high proportion of our student nurses should come from our own membership.

All who are interested should write for the "Nursing Packet" which contains full information, to Miss Nelle Morgan, R. N., Director of Nurses, Independence Sanitarium and Hospital, Independence, Missouri.

THE FIRST PRESIDENCY,
By F. Henry Edwards.

Canadian Journey

CONTINUED FROM LAST WEEK.

In the cool, bracing atmosphere of Canada, one feels a vigor and physical welfare not generally experienced in warmer climates. There is a cheerful alertness about the people that is soon caught by a visitor from the South.

The cities of Ontario have developed many thriving shops and businesses, some of them small, some of them large and enjoying trade that reaches over the border and across the seas. In Chatham, Brother J. V. Dent has developed a large business with his family and associates, engaging in both retail and manufacture of agricultural implements. Employment for a number of church people is provided there.

At Bothwell, Ontario, a beautiful church building and a fine congregation are under the pastorate of Brother W. R. Leverton, who is a son of a pioneer church worker, Arthur Leverton. At Kimball there is an excellent church building in the country. John Harkness is pastor. At Chatham Branch there is a Men's Club under the presidency of Brother James Kelley. With church men from neighboring branches attending, the basement of the church was filled; a fine dinner was served by the women of Chatham Branch.

Guelph is a commercial and industrial city with many fine old homes and early buildings. The Ontario Agricultural College and a number of other institutions are there. Our church is an attractive structure with a congregation of well-informed, cultured people. Brother F. C. McLean is the pastor. The district president, Brother Alex Cadwell makes his home here. He is a self-sustaining church worker and is in the paper box manufacturing business. He and Sister Cadwell and their daughter maintain a beautiful home.

The city of Toronto is so populous and covers so large an area that it has a truly metropolitan character. Our Toronto church is presided over by District President John F. Sheehy. This congregation has large attendance and excellent services with the assistance of finely trained musicians and many families who have had long experience in church work. Brother Archie McLean, who was bishop for many years, is in retirement now but was able to give a very cordial wel-

(Continued on page 22.)

THE SAINTS' HERALD

Volume 95

May 15, 1948

Number 20

Editors: The First Presidency: Israel A. Smith, John F. Garver, F. Henry Edwards.

ASSISTANTS: Leonard J. Lea, Managing Editor; Kenneth L. Graham, Business Manager.

The Saints' Herald is the official publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, with headquarters at The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri, and is issued through the offices of Herald Publishing House, 103 South Osage Street, Independence, Missouri.

Entered as second-class matter at the post office at Independence, Missouri, under Act of March 3, 1879. Issued weekly at Independence, Missouri. Price, $3.50 per year and $1.75 for six months in advance in the U. S. A., its territories and possessions; Canada, $3.75 per year and $1.90 for six months; other countries, $4.50 per year. Notice of a change of address must be given three weeks ahead of the date that it is to become effective. Accepted for mailing at the special rate of postage provided for in section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized July 21, 1921. Printed in the United States of America.

Stewardship and the Land

BY GERALD GABRIEL

The author is a senior at the University of Missouri, where he is majoring in rural sociology. A native of Kennett, Missouri, he attended Graceland College in 1936-37. Two years later, he moved to Independence, Missouri, where he was a member of the Walnut Park congregation. During the war, he served in the Navy, being stationed at Pearl Harbor. Here he began his study in the field of sociology by way of a correspondence course.

He is married (Mrs. Gabriel is the former Doris Talcott) and has two children, Jerry, Jr., six, and Cherie, four. He is active as a priest in the Columbia Mission, which was formed recently by university students. After graduation, he plans to serve as a rural social engineer.

For it is like as a man traveling into a far country, who called his own servants, and delivered unto them his goods.

And unto one he gave five talents, to another two, and to another one; to every man according to his several ability; and straightway went on his journey.

Then he that had received the five talents went and traded with the same; and gained other five talents.

And likewise he who received two talents, he also gained other two.

But he who had received one, went and digged in the earth and hid his lord's money.

After a long time the lord of those servants cometh, and reckoneth with them.

And so he that had received the five talents came, and brought other five talents, saying, Lord, thou deliverdest unto me five talents; behold, I have gained besides them, five talents more.

His lord said unto him, Well done, good and faithful servant; thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things; enter thou into the joy of thy lord.

He also that had received two talents came and said, Lord, thou deliverdest unto me two talents; behold I have gained two talents besides them.

His lord said unto him, Well done, good and faithful servant; thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things; enter thou into the joy of thy lord.

Then he who had received the one talent came, and said, Lord, I know thee that thou art a hard man, reaping where thou hast not sown, and gathering where thou hast not scattered.

And I was afraid, and went and hid thy talent in the earth; and lo, here is thy talent; take it from me as thou hast from thine other servants, for it is thine.

His lord answered and said unto him, O wicked and slothful servant, thou knowest that I reap where I sowed not, and gather where I have not scattered.

Having known this, therefore, thou oughtest to have put my money to the exchangers, and at my coming I should have received mine own with usury.

I will take, therefore, the talent from you, and give it unto him who hath ten talents—Matthew 25: 14-28.

FOR MORE THAN A generation, we have been hearing about the conservation of the land.

We are made aware that where civilized man has lived the longest, land has suffered the most. If we apply the preceding parable to man and his relationship to the land, we begin to see the new concept growing in the minds of men of an old responsibility entrusted to their care. These servants or stewards were not only to conserve, they were to enrich, to replenish, and to gain.

The Earth Is Good

"And I, God, saw that all things which I had made were good."—Genesis 1: 14. Our forefathers may have questioned this goodness, since they believed that terrifying demons lay within the earth, waiting to destroy. But as we look into its depths and measure its resources, we realize to a limited extent the vastness of its store of minerals, which are all good. We know the goodness of the rain, the wind, and the soil. When we grasp the significance of the climate, the seasons, the light, and even life itself in their relationship to one another, we cannot help but appreciate the essence of this goodness. Fundamentally, man's trifling with these creations has changed little of this gigantic store.

The Earth Is Generous

God compliments man by making him in His own image, and by giving him dominion over His creation. When man devotes his life to the promotion of this creation, the earth is kind. It gives to all men liberally—to the rich and poor, farmer and urbanite alike. The earth becomes unkind only to those who go beyond its laws; because, like its maker, it changes not in its relationship to man.

The Creator did not confine his kindness to one generation, nor did he make it possible for any generation to remove all that is beneficial to man. He created the minerals of the soil so as to lock up some ninety-five per cent of them in the rocks, which very slowly release them. Most of these he placed deep within the earth, and by volcanic eruptions (one of the demons of our forefathers) he draws them forth that they may begin to decompose into useful forms for man. The remaining five per cent he stored in the rocks, which are on or near the earth's surface. These rocks release their minerals quite readily, and because they are of a softer nature, man can speed up their decomposition. In this rationing for future generations, he foresaw the needs of all men.

In his consignment of responsibility to us, he recognized the limits of our carrying power. Man has a very small part to play in the improvement of these things. Most of the plants and animals can largely care for themselves, only a minimum amount of work rightly performed will enrich their usefulness to man. God assumes ninety-five per cent of the responsibility in supplying minerals for the human body through air, light, and water. The remaining five per cent he placed in the soil, which makes man responsible for a small part of the constituents of his own body. This mere five per cent God intended the steward to wisely preserve and improve. When we deplete the soil of these minerals, we subtract from that five per cent, and the absence of only a fraction of this amount will result in ill-health and unhappiness.

God was kind in the planning of creation. When man unwisely uses these minerals, future generations can yet enrich and improve. In the atmosphere above, he placed useful elements, of which eighty per cent is nitrogen—the principle constituent of our high-priced livestock feed and one of the important elements which is most apt to be deficient in our present-day soils. So constructed are some of the plants he gave, as the legumes, that they can reach up and gather the nitrogen to store in the soil, where it will again be available to plants which are useful to man.

The Earth Is Holy

The earth is holy because God created it. Since it is divine, it is sacred, and we must deal with it humbly and worshipfully. It is not ours, for we did not create it. We cannot make anything of it that is not made, for God created all things and saw that they were good. We may have dominion over them; we may change their form or replace their elements. Since God is the Father of all things, the plants and animals are holy. God gave us power over them, and we are under obligation to co-operate in their augmentation.

Dominion Is Not Ownership

"And I, God blessed them, and said unto them, be fruitful and multiply and replenish the earth and subdue it."—Genesis 1: 30. Subdue means "to conquer and bring into subjection, to crush, to overcome as by persuasion or kindness." Therefore, man was given power to select that which was for his benefit and to promote it; likewise, he was to have power to crush or change that which proved to be detrimental. Given this power, he would be expected to enrich or to gain. This freedom of choice gave him power to develop that which would increase his talents, or promote and encourage that which would decrease this enrichment. The Psalmist David adequately portrays this relationship between man and God in the creation (Psalm 8). The dominion spoken of there gives man power to control the "things under his feet . . . beasts of the field . . . the fowls of the air . . . and whatsoever passeth through the paths of the seas." This power of dominion means to care for, "to dress, and to keep" (Genesis 2:18). Man was given his free agency with the understanding that whatever he did, results would follow, and the results would not always be pleasant.

Man is a product of the earth. Future generations shall continue to be a product of the same. This would imply that if future generations are to be healthy and happy, we are divinely obligated to make righteous use of the earth. Since we are not the owners, we do not have the right to misuse that which belongs to others.

Wasteful Man

Living conditions in the old world taught our religious forefathers a deep reverence for the land; but because they found in America seemingly limitless resources, little care was taken to conserve or to build the land. They found that the fertile soil could produce in twenty-five years a tree which would take ninety years in the old country. The waste and exploitation of these lands by our forefathers have created a problem in productivity, health, and happiness. The tragedy of it is that on the least productive soils we find the most people; on the highly productive soils, we find the most and best food with the smallest number of people.

We know the results; we have the facts—yet we are reluctant to conserve unless we are paid for what we really should consider our obligation. Last year tax payers paid a half billion dollars for soil conservation. Farmers in the past decade have seen the results in better crops and increased income; yet when the continued government payments began to look uncertain, many canceled their plans for liming, terracing, and employing other conservation methods. It is no longer a matter of education; the questions which now face us are: Shall the government possess the land, to give entitlement to those who will utilize practices that conserve and enrich the soil? In future periods of depression, shall the government, banks, and other loan agencies be forced to foreclose on farms that have been used unwisely? Is this a task for a government, or is it a moral question for the church?

Am I My Brothers' Keeper?

It has been said that one who does not act rightly toward his fellow men does not act rightly toward the earth. It is well known that future generations will suffer because of the present misuse of the land; however, suffering does not wait for future generations. The suffering begins now with the poor steward who not only suffers himself but also causes his innocent neighbors to suffer. For instance, the gully that starts to erode on one farm does not stay at home. Headwardly, it eats its way across the fields and under fences to despoil the farm of the man who is a good steward. The soil from the other end of the gully travels on to fill reservoirs of power plants, to interfere with navigation in rivers and harbors where it makes its deposits. Eroded land means poor land to the owner and a loss of water to him and his neighbors. Rapid runoff means less stored water in the soil for plants, a lowering of the water table (which calls for deeper wells) and more floods in the river bottoms to destroy crops, lives, and property.

Loss of soil fertility and moisture means a loss in productivity, which eventually means the loss of a farm. It is more than a loss to the unwise steward; it is a community loss. It contributes to more mortgage foreclosures, more rented farms, and more migration. It is a church loss. Poor farms mean poor church attendance. The steward who attempts to care for a poor farm must put much more in it than he receives. He becomes handicapped financially, living standards are lowered, and finally he must move on. Some thirty-four per cent of these in Missouri move every year in hopes of finding a better farm next year. A wise steward will seldom purchase such a farm for the reasons shown on the following charts.

Class of Land	Safe Carrying Power Per cent of Debt	Per Cent Foreclosed
1	50%	3%
2	40%	6%
3	30%	12%
4	20%	22%
5	Only if he had a safe source of outside income.	48% few farms just handed over.

These are findings taken from records kept on 11,000 farms in the northwestern part of the United States following 1917. Class 1 farms cost $50,000 including the farm, livestock, feed, and adequate machinery; seventy-five per cent of these were paid for before the dates due. Following are the findings of Land Banks in Missouri. The excellent farms are those which were considered good farms on which to farm and make money.

	Loan Value Per Cent of Sale Value.	Years to pay for.
1. Excellent	99	18.18
2. Good	80	23.2
3. Fair (largest area)	66	27.9
4. Poor	31	59.5
5. Very poor	19	100

Viewing these figures, it would not be difficult for the wise steward to decide on the type of farm he should buy.

It is commonly taken for granted that these low-class farms can be abandoned and they will build up again. It is estimated that it takes about 600 years to build an inch of soil under natural conditions; but with the help of man, this can be speeded up. Another misconception is that the farmer can purchase these poor farms in times of low prices and make use of them in times of high prices by adding lime and commercial fertilizers. By so doing, he wrings out the remaining organic matter. Organic matter (often less than five per cent of the soil content) gives the soil tilth, water, and air-holding capacity. When man uses up this five per cent, he has an even poorer farm. This old proverb comes to us from Europe:

*Lime plus lime without manure
Makes father rich and son poor.*

We get the same results today if we add fertilizers (which are correctives) to the lime, without building up the organic matter. God intended that man should be a good steward, that he return organic matter to the soil in the form of barnyard or green manure. Again man is responsible for the mere five per cent—God supplies the air, water, and minerals which make up the ninety-five per cent. Because our forefathers unwisely depleted the five per cent, we now must not only replace it but also apply minerals or correctives, which we commonly call fertilizers.

A Will to Do Right

Like many other moral problems, stewardship toward the earth does not confine itself to any class or group of people. Every one partakes of its goodness.

Like other moral problems, it cannot be solved by making appeals through the purchase of peoples desire. Educational measures seem limited in their effectiveness, economic returns do not reach those we think they should. The will to do good—the desire to do rightly toward the creations of God—must be the incentive. With this comes the realization that the small space which Moses shadowed is not the only place that is holy; the place where we stand is also holy ground.

What the Church Can Do

The church is commanded to be the light of the world. If that light would be of greatest service, it must find the dark places. Surely this is one of them. Progressive communities are being talked about over the nation. Men travel far and wide to see how things are accomplished. Individual church members can do a great deal by co-operating in combating social and economic ills of the land. In mutual endeavor, people learn to share; if they share in these problems, they cannot help sharing some of their philosophy and religion. Unity in right relations toward the land is attractive; it is part of the gospel itself.

Income of church families can be increased through the continued use of farm classes. Promulgation of our stewardship as given in Psalm 8 will help us to establish the right relationship between man and the land. Savings and loan associations can be promoted among the membership to establish a revolving fund for the purchase of desirable farms for farm families. Other forms of co-operatives can be encouraged to help increase the income and decrease the expense of the farm family, that land might be purchased and wisely used. A gathering program, with help from reliable agencies to appraise farms and assist farmers to adopt the balanced-farming plan, will be especially helpful to those who move in from other areas. The encouragement of the family-sized farm will continue to be important. Foremost is the realization that God created all things and that they are good. Man is given a great calling—stewardship—to enrich, to replenish and to gain.

The Cause For Peace

By Joseph Richard Meloan

WHAT IS THE cause for peace? If I had ten minutes, what could I say in its favor to effectively plead its case?

I've been mulling this thought over in my mind for some time. At first it seemed easy—all the obvious reasons: we want peace because we don't want murder, hunger, pillage, violence. In other words we want peace because we don't want war. But is that a sufficient answer? The Prince of Peace must have had something more positive in mind.

As I began to think further, my reasons became so simple that they seemed of little importance—as the world goes, yet they mean much to me. The answer seemed to be in My Town.

For the first time in my life, I've tried living in a small town in Kansas. I have purposely searched for the values to be found in its way of life, keenly aware that things would be different here than in the city. As this experience has unfolded, it has come to me that here is something worth fighting to preserve, not only to keep but to spread to others—a real cause for peace. Here is something of the pattern for Zion.

Perhaps I can tell my little story so that you who live in the city may know of what I speak, and you who live in towns like this may appreciate more fully the things you now take for granted.

LAST SUMMER, while traveling through the several states adjoining Zion, the special charm of the little Missouri and Kansas towns brought a strong desire to me to share their peaceful ways. A lifetime of living and working under high tension had made me wonder if there were not a better way. Perhaps I had wanted too much and the price wasn't worth it. In the fall,

I broke with the city, went to southern Kansas, and staked my few remaining dollars on a "month's try" at what is now "My Town."

Revelations came fast. The first occurred when my car broke down as I was en route to another town on business. I walked to the nearest farm house, and the good people invited me—a stranger—in. They were having dinner and asked me to join them. Somehow this little act of kindness shook my whole consciousness. I thought, "Why, they don't even know me . . . no one asked me if I had any money to pay for it . . . free food just for the asking." I declined with thanks—not because I wasn't hungry, but I was embarrassed. This was a new world in which I was unacquainted. Too long I had lived in the city where if I didn't sell I could not eat. And, too often, the price of a hamburger, left over after expenses were paid, was a questionable accomplishment. Then there were other times when I dined well but did not know what the morrow would bring. So it was that I came to realize I must pay before I could eat; and I must eat to live; and somehow the fact that I must have money became so deeply ingrained in me I lost sight of some other mighty important values.

Things were different in the country—things more important than money. I pondered these values as the farmer towed me to town and refused payment. This man was wealthy—his time was valuable, but it would have been no different in any case. He really wanted "to visit" with me. Friendly conversation, the association with others was worth more to him than money. Yes, I needed more of this kind of life.

SO I MOVED to the town of my choice. Everyone spoke to me on the street—people who had never seen me before. No introduction was necessary here. (I once lived in a northern city where, at the end of four months, I didn't know anyone in the house except the landlady; and I'm the sociable sort.) People wished me well in business. No show or pretentiousness was necessary. An elderly business man told me he had done business with nothing but a two dollar table and a seventy-five-cent chair for twenty years and made a good living. On the street, one could not tell by appearances who had money and who did not—nor by actions. Yet, this is the richest wheat county in Kansas. The city man who thinks a five dollar raise in salary puts him into high society could not vision that the smallest of these farmers is rich by comparison; he is independent and has no fear of starving or being at the mercy of office politics. The farmer who sat on the restaurant stool next to me at breakfast this morning casually mentioned selling ten thousand acres of wheat yesterday.

THESE PEOPLE in My Town and the towns like it are the hope of the world right now, but I doubt if they know it. It's natural for them to be the way they are. But once in a while something highlights it, such as when the Friendship Train came through, and they all gave. One Kansas farmer opened his bins and literally gave a fortune in wheat. God had been good to him, he reasoned. Even though his fields lay parched, as he made the gift, he knew the people in Europe needed it, and well, he had faith—the kind of faith I saw as I stood on the street corners with these wheat farmers and they anxiously scanned the skies. "If we only had a little moisture," was their constant understatement. The time was growing short for planting. It was even a month past when it should have been done, and the days without rain continued. So they planted the seed in the dust with hope, and then the rains came—thanks to God. Slowly the vast wheat lands became green and then gold, giving life to millions.

Yes, faith is their business; and, living closer to the elements, they are more understanding of each other. They are helpful, too, because people in the country know that whatever their favorable circumstance today, tomorrow may be different.

They were not always "well-off." Many struggled from a lowly beginning. And the grandmas and grandpas are the pioneers who settled this country, for it is indeed a young country. The local banker typifies the American dream, for he was once janitor and now is president of the bank. He remembers this as he helps others over the rough spots—men whose only security is his belief in them.

THIS IS PROBABLY as American a town as any in these United States. Even if the people are of many nationalities, it still adds up to something we all want to believe in. They get along pretty well here, too. The Mennonites, the Catholics, the Church of Christ, and all the rest are trying to make it a good community. Intolerance is a word they don't seem to know about, and all the worry over the threat of communism or capitalism seems confined to the city papers. Along with their religion, whose doctrinal differences seem only to blend into a "treat each other right" policy, they seem to accept people for what they are, and in a town this size, they know what you are. The greater sin to their way of thinking, is hypocrisy—trying to seem what you are not. This is almost unpardonable to the midwesterners' love for reality. Otherwise they go along with the teachings of the Master about casting the first stone.

And, peculiarly, we have no crime waves like in the city, where no one knows anybody and where evil can flourish unknown and unabated. We have one "cop" which we kind of tolerate. He doesn't seem to have anything to do . . . of course, he has . . . little things. But when I see him, I think of the city. How in one week I saw three people almost murdered before my eyes and left a hotel two days before a man was killed in almost the same spot. Violence seemed to persist everywhere like a wicked spirit. This I miss—gratefully.

Here I am also without the Gestapo tactics of the big city police force. The sort of terror that was struck into me one night on a boulevard when a patrol car with red lights blazing and siren screaming forced me to the curb. Almost expecting gunfire in the wonderment that I might have been mistaken for an escaped convict, I discovered after being dazzled with a flashlight, surrounded by officers, identification and draft status ascertained, that I was guilty of going twenty-seven miles an hour . . . two miles an hour over the speed limit!

Nor was this an isolated instance; it was repeated with some variations at other times as I would be caught unawarily in speed traps principally designed to ring the judge's cash register when I appeared in a courtroom packed with other "stupid" citizens, also guilty—this in a city near to the heart of Zion . . . a city rife with drunkenness, gambling, gangsterism—a city where even the ballot box is stuffed or stolen—where the very foundations of our government are shaken.

BUT IN THE small towns where we are known for what we really are—where if our neighbor needs help, we can know that, too, and help him—we get along, each man quietly working out a way of life that seems right for him and fair to his neighbors.

The good things this life offers includes not only friendliness and understanding, but the contrasts reflected in little things. People from the country and small towns, for instance, cannot believe what they see when on a visit to the City. They witness people straphanging two hours of their life away each day, trying to get to their employment and home again. Small wonder so little time remains for the culture they pretend. This while farm folk in their more peaceful way listen to their radios and become, as surveys show, the best-informed group on national and world affairs.

Nor can I let this observation pass without commenting on the rudeness of the city pictured in its natives standing back of others in restaurants at lunch hour, waiting for the one seated to hurry and finish. A pleasurable feeling, no doubt, to the man hastily devouring his food with someone looking over his shoulder—the food he struggled so hard to get but cannot enjoy.

Here in My Town, the places I usually frequent—the post office, the bank, the stores, the theater—are within one block. And although I do not need a car in town (I can walk anywhere I want to go), traffic is no hazard. We have no meter "bandits," and we can park in the middle of the street if we so wish. There have been no accidents since I've been here, because folks are careful and don't want to run over their neighbors. Perhaps that in itself is a key to their character.

And people are honest, I know, because I run a business. My customers are very conscientious about paying, and if they can't pay right away, I don't resort to a battery of collection attorneys because I know they will as soon as they are able. As a result, I don't find it necessary to work so hard to pay losses, as is the city way.

So life goes on in this small town,
(Continued on page 22.)

Rome Grips Washington

By Gilbert O. Nations

The shrewdest diplomat and politician since Leo XIII is now on the Vatican throne. Like all his predecessors for more than four centuries, he is an Italian priest, Eugenio Pacelli. He reigns under the name of Pope Pius XII.

Following the policy initiated by Leo XIII a half century ago, Pius XII is moving for control of Washington, capital of the world's most powerful nation. His latest aggressive move is the setting-up of the throne of a Roman archbishop in Washington, D. C. The recent death of Archbishop Michael Joseph Curley of Baltimore made this step easy and simple.

Late in the nineteenth century, under Leo XIII, the Vatican began massing its might in Washington. That sagacious Pope sent to Washington Archbishop Francis Satolli as a nuncio. But our government did not officially receive Satolli. So he became only a papal delegate without diplomatic status.

The sixth successive delegate is now at Washington. He needs only recognition by a President of the United States to raise him to the status of a nuncio with rank of ambassador. In that event, under a rule laid down by the Congress of Vienna at the close of the Napoleonic wars, he would then take precedence of all other envoys and so head the diplomatic corps at Washington.

Late in the last century Leo XIII chartered Catholic University and located it at Washington. He made it the one canonical university in our land and designated the entire hierarchy as its governing body with power to elect from their membership a board to manage the institution. The board elects the rector as executive head of the faculty.

In September, 1919, Benedict XV organized within the American hierarchy the National Catholic Welfare Conference with headquarters in the heart of Washington. That body has its own news service which serves the hundreds of hierarchical weekly and monthly papers, censors the secular press, and loads it with propaganda.

During the long reign of Archbishop Curley of Baltimore, some recognition was grudgingly accorded to Washington. Previously every church, priest, school, college, and university in the Capital City was subject to the Baltimore throne. Washington was a mere suburb of the Maryland city. Then Curley was design-nated as Archbishop of Baltimore and Washington. His cathedral and throne were yet in Baltimore. Recognition of Washington was only nominal. It supplied an excuse to save Rome from the charge of belittling the Capital City.

But now the time seems to have come to increase papal power in the Capital City of the United States. The rival ecclesiastical government must be in plain view of high Federal officials.

To this end, Washington has been detached from Baltimore and designated as capital of a distinct Roman province. An Irish New York priest named Patrick A. O'Boyle was consecrated in a spectacular ceremony last January 16, and installed as the first Archbishop of Washington. Heretofore, the Archbishop of Baltimore was ex-officio chancellor of Catholic University. Now that honor is bestowed on O'Boyle.

The ninety-year-old precedence of the Baltimore Archbishop remains, but five counties of suburban Washington are severed from the province of Baltimore and annexed to that of Washington. They are Montgomery, Prince Georges, Charles, Calvert, and St. Marys counties. Moreover, Archbishop O'Boyle is expressly empowered to participate in provincial councils of the Baltimore province.

Pope Pius XII's move on Washington is a vital symptom of our critical times. —The Converted Catholic Magazine, April, 1948.

When you're traveling, select each day's high spot to enter in your diary—that is infinitely better than trying to keep a complete diary of a journey. It may be something beautiful seen that day—a piece of Chinese porcelain in a museum or the view toward Whitehall from the bridge in St. James's Park at dusk—or the evening chimes in a small village, or the arrival at a warm, comfortable hotel after a day of cold and rainy travel. It may be the spire of Salisbury Cathedral, or St. Mark's Square in Venice in the late afternoon. Collect memories of the beautiful sight or sound or thought or experience of each day.—Helen Dean Fish, Invitation to Travel. (Ives Washburn Inc.)

Easter in Shanghai, China

I saw mentioned in the local English paper that there was to be an Easter sunrise service at the race course. It was raining, but I got up early and walked expecting that there the English-speaking people of Shanghai would be gathered. Instead, it was a Chinese audience with only a few non-Chinese.

I had a wonderful experience as I stood and looked down on the crowd. I did not speak to anyone, but I felt that the Chinese gathered there were indeed good people. I have spent weeks trying to come to grips with some of the economic problems of China; I have met many kinds of people and had meals in Chinese homes, but this morning I felt that these people—happy, kind, and enthusiastic—belied the statements one sometimes reads of the Chinese approach to life. As I stood, I felt the Spirit bearing witness to me and urging me, as one who has had the privilege of traveling about the world, to witness to others in the church two things. First, that the gospel of the kingdom will indeed be preached in all the earth, and secondly, that the gospel will be spread largely by personal contact.

As I looked at these people, the thought came to me that mass preaching did not bring them to Christ. I have no experience to check the truth of this rather unusual thought other than the Spirit which accompanied it, and the obvious fact that each one of these people must in turn shed light among his associates. When the whole congregation sang together in Chinese my favorite hymn, "Holy, Holy, Holy," the tears ran down my cheeks, and I realized as never before the real universality of God. I also fully appreciated the Spirit behind the hymn, "I Gave My Life For Thee," even when sung in Chinese.

One cannot but feel humbled by such experiences. . . .

PERCE R. H. JUDD.

Note of Thanks

William Hussung, 1032 West Waldo, Independence, Missouri, wishes to thank all who remembered his wife, Alice, in prayer and with cards and letters. They were greatly appreciated.

Grateful for Blessing

We want to thank all the Saints for their prayers in our behalf; we are grateful, too, to God for his blessing. We are isolated and will appreciate having any elders in this area call on us.

Mrs. W. E. Jacoby.

120 Hinton Avenue
Moberly, Missouri

Turn Jesus Off!

By Evan A. Fry

And it came to pass, when Jesus had finished all these sayings, he said unto his disciples, Ye know that after two days is the passover, and the Son of Man is betrayed to be crucified. Then assembled together the chief priests, and the scribes, and the elders of the people, unto the palace of the high priest, who was called Caiaphas, and consulted that they might take Jesus by subtilty and kill him. But they said, Not on the feast day, lest there be an uproar among the people Then one of the twelve, called Judas Iscariot, went unto the chief priests, and said, What will ye give me, and I will deliver him unto you? And they covenanted with him for thirty pieces of silver. And from that time he sought opportunity to betray Jesus.—Matthew 26: 1-4, and 11, 12, Inspired Version.

A TRUE INCIDENT was passed on to me recently by an observing soul who personally witnessed it in a restaurant in greater Kansas City. A row of men were seated at the counter; a radio was blaring away somewhere behind the counter, almost unnoticed. Then the program changed, and a religious service was introduced. (I hope it was not this one, but it might have been.) One of the men at the counter, with an expression of utmost disgust and boredom beckoned to a waitress, and in a good loud voice said, "Hey, turn Jesus off!"

"Turn Jesus off!" I should like to think that this man simply thought he was making a wisecrack, and that he hadn't bothered to think what he was saying. I know how weak and watery is some of the stuff ladled out via pulpit and radio these days in the name of religion, and how human and fallible some of us are who are trying to preach the gospel of Christ to a world which is forever trying to turn him off. Men have been trying to turn Jesus off ever since the day, when at the age of twelve, he confounded the doctors in the temple at Jerusalem. Some have belittled him, some have ignored him, some have wisecracked about him and attempted to laugh him off. The Pharisees and the Roman soldiers thought to turn him off by killing him. But Jesus and his message go on and on, surviving men and empires and triumphing over pagan ideologies and worldly kingdoms.

You can't turn Jesus off. Better men than you and I have tried it and failed. But have you ever considered what would happen if you could "turn him off" and wipe out all his influence and history and teaching in the world? The first thing which would happen is that none of us would be here. There would be no world, no sun, no moon, no stars, no universe. John in speaking of the Word, which is Christ, says: "All things were made by him, and without him was not any thing made that was made." Paul says in I Corinthians 8: 6, that there is "one Lord Jesus Christ, by whom are all things, and we by him." More explicitly, in writing to the Colossians (1: 16, 17), Paul says, "For by him were all things created, that are in heaven, and that are in earth, visible and invisible, whether they be thrones, or dominions, or principalities, or powers; all things were created by him, and for him; And he is before all things, and by him all things consist." Jesus is the light which is in all things; the intelligence and power by which they are created, ordered, and sustained. If we could turn Christ off, the universe would dissolve and we ourselves with it.

IF WE COULD turn Jesus off, most of the world's best art and literature and music—which center in him—would be lost forever; for he has been the inspiration for creative endeavor for two thousand years. We should lose most of the world's philanthropy and charity which is given in the name of Christ or because of his teaching men to know a common Father and a common brotherhood. Hospitals, homes for the aged, orphanages, old-age assistance, social security, aid to the blind, the crippled, the helpless of all kinds and all races and all ages—all are given in the name and in the Spirit of Christ. Turn Jesus off, and the world would revert to the jungle law of tooth and claw, which is still only a small fraction of an inch under our thin veneer of civilization.

Turn Jesus off, and we should immediately lose most of the human rights and freedoms which have been established by generations of suffering and bloodshed. Human rights are basically Christian. Men must be free to choose for themselves, or they cannot be held responsible for their acts. Slavery is wrong, whether it be personal, political, spiritual, mental or economic. Jesus taught—not so much by direct word, but certainly by inference—that all men are equally precious in the sight of God, and therefore that they have equal claim on freedom of thought and action. Turn Jesus off, and we would go back to the days of ruthless conquest, slavery, murder, and rapine. Hitler turned Jesus off in Germany and drenched a world in blood. He enslaved men; he debauched women and made them chattels and playthings of men for the breeding of cannon fodder. He prostituted education, as people always do when they turn off Jesus. Jesus taught men while he was among them; he promised his Spirit to teach them all things and guide them into all truth after he was gone. He regarded each human soul as worth teaching and having a right to learn to the utmost of his capacity, so that he could exercise free moral will and agency in intelligence and true freedom.

(Continued on page 19.)

Other Sheep I Have Which Are Not of This Fold

The Story of the Book of Mormon

By ROY WELDON

PART III

Joseph's Land: The Flock That Was Led to America

And other sheep I have, which are not of this fold; them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice; and there shall be one fold, and one shepherd.—John 10: 16.

WE HAVE found strong evidence that the Good Shepherd visited America. We have also found substantial evidence that his sheep in America heard his voice and wrote down his words and had a sacred book. We are now confronted with the question of the origin of these sheep (House of Israel).

There is much in tradition and in ancient pictographs about the ancestors of the Indians migrating over seas and through vast forests and deserts. As already noted, the Toltecs are said to have carried their books with them.

Bancroft's works tell us:

The Chileans assert that their ancestors came from the West. The Chipeweyans have a tradition that they came from a distant land The Algonquins preserve a tradition of a foreign origin and a sea voyage. For a long time they offered an annual thank offering in honor of their safe arrival in America. According to Careri, The Olmec traditions relate that they came by sea from the East.¹ (For original Thanksgiving Day, see Mosiah 1: 30.)

In the Popol Vuh, we are told that the Lost Book of God shows clearly "that we came from beyond the sea." Mr. Bancroft says, "According to the Quiches' tradition, the primitive portion of the Nahoas, or ancestors of the Toltecs, were in a distant east, beyond immense seas and lands."²

Gregory Mason says, "There are many legends along the west coast of South America concerning the remote arrival on rafts, of a very learned and powerful people."³

Brinton says, "The Aztec priests never chanted more regretful dirges than when they sang of Tulan the cradle of their race."⁴

"Sahaguñ, (pioneer traveler among Aztecs) was asked by the natives if he came from Tlapallan. He had crossed the sea to their country; and the inquisitive native wanted to know if he came from the same place their ancestors did."⁵

The evidence in the New World points across the sea for the origin of the ancient people. Since Christ himself is the Holy One of Israel and said he was "not sent but to the lost sheep of the House of Israel," it appears the Bible might be the most likely place to look for the origin of the flock of sheep who were led to America.

The Flock of Joseph

"Give ear, O Shepherd of Israel, thou that leadest Joseph like a flock; thou that dwellest between the cherubim, shine forth."—Psalm 80: 1.

Where did the Shepherd of Israel lead the flock of Joseph? Let us trace the movements of Joseph and see if the Bible will not give us a plain, clear-cut answer. Jacob's blessing to Joseph says:

Joseph is a fruitful bough, even a fruitful bough by a well; whose branches run over the wall;

The archers have sorely grieved him, and shot at him, and hated him;

But his bow abode in strength, and the arms of his hands were made strong by the hands of the mighty God of Jacob; (from thence is the Shepherd, the stone of Israel:)

Even by the God of thy father, who shall help thee; and by the Almighty, who shall bless thee with blessings of heaven above, blessings of the deep that lieth under, blessings of the breasts, and of the womb;

The blessings of thy father have prevailed above the blessings of my progenitors unto the utmost bound of the everlasting hills; they shall be on the head of Joseph, and on the crown of the head of him that was separate from his brethren.—Genesis 49: 22-26.

The next lead we get as to the destiny of Joseph is found in Deuteronomy. Moses gives a description of Joseph's land to which we shall make future reference.

And of Joseph he [Moses] said, Blessed of the Lord be his land, for the precious things of heaven, for the dew, and for the deep that coucheth beneath,

And for the precious fruits brought forth by the sun, and for the precious things put forth by the moon,

And for the chief things of the ancient mountains, and for the precious things of the lasting hills,

And for the precious things of the earth and fulness thereof, and for the good will of him that dwelt in the bush; let the blessing come upon the head of Joseph, and upon the top of the head of him that was separated from his brethren.—Deuteronomy 33: 13-16.

Let us continue to trace the movements and destiny of the tribe of Joseph. First Chronicles tells us more:

And in Jerusalem dwelt of the children of Judah, and of the children of Benjamin, and of the children of Ephraim and Manasseh.—9: 3.

A Remnant to Escape from Jerusalem

"For out of Jerusalem shall go forth a remnant, and they that escape out of Mount Zion; the zeal of the Lord of hosts shall do this."—Isaiah 37: 32.

Just before Nebuchadnezzar came against Jerusalem to sack the city and carry the survivors away into captivity, the Prophet Jeremiah, who lived in Jerusalem at that time, delivered a prophecy to some one, instructing them to flee and get far away.

Flee, get you far off, dwell deep, O ye inhabitants of Hazor, saith the Lord; for Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon hath taken counsel against you, and hath conceived a purpose against you.

Arise, get you up unto the wealthy nation, that dwelleth without care, saith the Lord, which have neither gates nor bars, which dwell alone.—Jeremiah 49: 30, 31.

Let us sum up our Biblical clues so far. The blessing of Joseph was to be at the "utmost bound of the everlasting hills" (Andes or Rockies). Joseph's Land was to be blessed with many specific things as mentioned in Deuteronomy. We shall soon search for that part of the earth which best meets the requirements of this prophecy. The flock of Joseph settled in Jerusalem. Someone was to escape from Jerusalem before the king of Babylon destroyed the city. The "zeal of the Lord of hosts" was to do this. In other words, the Shepherd of Israel would lead Joseph like a flock (Psalm 80: 1). Jeremiah delivers the prophecy to those that are to flee and offers some hints as to where they are to go. It is to be far off. It is to be a "wealthy nation which have neither gates nor bars, which dwell alone." All the cities of the Old World had walls, gates, and bars, and no nation dwelt alone.

We found strong evidence in the New World, pointing back across the sea as the place "from whence they came." Now, in the Old World and from the Bible, we find clear-cut evidence pointing across the sea to the New World as the place to which the flock of Joseph was led.

Joseph's Branches to Run Over the Wall (Sea)

Psalm 80: 1, 8, 11 says:

O Shepherd of Israel, thou that leadest Joseph like a flock.

Thou hast brought a vine out of Egypt; thou hast cast out the heathen, and planted it.

She sent out her boughs unto the sea; and her branches unto the river.

Isaiah says:

For the fields of Heshbon languish, and the vine of Sibmah; the lords of the heathen have broken down the principal plants thereof, they are come even unto Jazer, they wandered through the wilderness: her branches are stretched out, they are gone over the sea.—16: 8.

Jeremiah says:

O vine of Sibmah, I will weep for thee with the weeping of Jazer: thy plants are gone over the sea; they reach even to the sea of Jazer: the spoiler is fallen upon thy summer fruits, and upon thy vintage.—48: 32.

Joseph's Land Described

We have already had strong indications that the Shepherd of Israel led his flock of Joseph away from Jerusalem down "through the wilderness" and "over the sea," "to the utmost bound of the everlasting hills."

Moses in the thirty-third chapter of Deuteronomy names eight specific points for which Joseph's land is to be noted. If America is Joseph's land and the choice pasture to which the "Shepherd of Israel" led "the flock of Joseph," then we must expect that America will meet the requirements of Moses' eight points better than any other country in the world.

Blessed of the Lord be Joseph's land for the precious things of heaven.

Peter says, "Unto you . . . who believe, he [Christ] is precious."—I Peter 2: 7. Without question, the Saviour is the most precious thing of heaven. Joseph's land was to be blessed because of the precious things of heaven. In other words, Joseph's land was to be blessed by the presence of the Holy One of Israel. In our first article, "The Mystery of Quetzalcoatl," we found that evidences of Christ's visit to Joseph's Land (America) is indeed great.

Moses used the word things (plural), so Joseph's land is to be blessed with more than one precious thing of heaven. Next to the presence of the Good Shepherd himself, his words or a holy record takes second place as a precious thing of heaven. (See I Samuel 3: 1.)

We found evidences on both sides of the sea that the ancestors of the Indians came from Ancient Israel. Also, we find evidences on both sides of the sea (Old and New World) that Joseph's Land was to be blessed of a second thing of heaven—a holy book.

The Book of Ezekiel in the Bible tells us:

The word of the Lord came again unto me, saying, Moreover, thou son of man, take thee one stick, and write upon it, For Judah, and for the children of Israel his companions: then take another stick, and write upon it, For Joseph, the stick of Ephraim, and for all the House of Israel his companions:

And join them one to another into one stick: and they shall become one in thine hand.

And when the children of thy people shall speak unto thee, saying, Wilt thou not show us what thou meanest by these?

Say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God; Behold, I will take the stick of Joseph which is in the hand of Ephraim, and the tribes of Israel his fellows, and will put them with him, even with the stick of Judah, and make them one stick, and they shall be one in mine hand.—37: 15-19.

According to Ezekiel, Judah was to have a book (the Bible), and Joseph was also to have a book. Where is the Book of Joseph? If America is Joseph's land, then we ought to find evidence of Joseph's book on this side of the sea. Among the Indians' writings and legends as already noted, we find evidence that the Ancient Americans had a Holy Book of God. The seeker for truth asks, "Where is the book now?"

Joseph Smith, the 18-year-old son of a New York farmer, was divinely led to find an ancient record deposited in a stone box close to the top of a high hill near Palmyra, New York. In the box was found a volume of thin gold plates inscribed with ancient hieroglyphics. Also in the box was found the ancient Hebrew instrument known as the Urim and Thummim. By means of this remarkable instrument, Joseph Smith was able to translate the ancient record into modern English. It bears every earmark and every evidence of being Joseph's book, the lost sacred record of the Ancient Americans. It tells how the Good Shepherd led the Flock of Joseph from Jerusalem to the New World. It records the words of the prophets here in America and the ebb and flow of history among the ancient Americans. It reaches its grand climax in the story of the appearance of Jesus Christ to all the people at the temple in the Land Bountiful and the subsequent Golden Age of America when all the people were converted to the gospel and lived together in a great brotherhood. This was the great era of art, architecture, and high achievement in every field. As already noted, the Book of Mormon also records the eventual termination of the Golden Age and the gradual decline of morals until the Nephites (or Toltecs) were entirely wiped out, and the last prophet hid the record in the earth which eventually came forth in 1830.

The Urim and Thummim

Among the precious things of heaven possessed by the Israelites in Old Testament times was the Urim and Thummim. It is mentioned first in the twenty-eighth chapter of Exodus as being worn in the breastplate of the high priest. It was consulted to obtain the will and counsel of the Lord. David used it a number of times. (See I Samuel 28: 6; 30: 1-8; I Chronicles 13: 3; Leviticus 8: 8; and Numbers 27: 21.) After the departure of the colony of Joseph from Jerusalem in about 600 B. C., it disappeared from Old Testament history. Ezra (2:63) and Nehemiah (7: 63-65) later looked for it, but no mention of it is again made in the Bible. After the colony of Joseph reached America under Nephi's leadership, the Urim and Thummim, or interpreters as they are called in the Book of Mormon, are mentioned several times.

There is also evidence from archæology that the Ancient Americans knew about the Urim and Thummim or Holy Stones.

While digging about the base of the great pyramid, El Castillo, at Chicken Itza, archæologists found a large square stone box, similar to the one Joseph Smith found. Inside this box was a priceless mosaic of precious stones and a Sac-tun or "Holy Stone." Another stone box was found in the temple of the warriors by Morris and Morley. In describing the contents of the box, Ann Axtell Morris says, "At the center of the cavity lay a large spherical ball of dark jade polished glass. This was one of the Sac-tuns or 'light stones' which the old priests had used for prophecy."⁶

In another place in the book quoted above, Mrs. Morris refers to the Holy Stones as "peep stones."

Not only was it evident that the ancient people knew of the Urim and Thummim, but they also knew of thin gold plates with hieroglyphics.

A Spanish Colonial history states:

The Mexican Indians sold to some European Antiquarians very thin plates of gold, evidently worked with a hammer, which their ancestors had been able to preserve, and on which were engraved ancient hieroglyphics.⁷

We have given consideration to the first of eight different things for which Joseph's land was to be blessed. Let us briefly consider the seven remaining points.

Blessed of the Lord be Joseph's Land for the dew and the deep that coucheth beneath.

For great rivers, fountains, and lakes, America is far ahead of any other part of the world.

According to Hendrick Van Loon's Geography, the Mississippi-Missouri River is the longest river in the world (4,221 miles). It is navigable 3,550 miles inland from the Gulf of Mexico, a distance greater than from New York to London.

The Yukon, known as the "Wandering River," rises within fifteen miles of the Pacific, flows 2,300 miles, then empties into the Pacific. Steamboats cover all but fifteen miles of it. Next to the Mississippi-Missouri River, the Amazon is the longest river in the world (3,900 miles). For volume of water, no river can compare with the Amazon. During the wet season, the mouth of the river is said to be fifty miles wide. The Amazon River drops only one inch each five miles in its last 700 miles and flows only two and one quarter miles per hour, yet its current is felt 200 miles at sea.

And for the precious fruits brought forth by the sun.

The agricultural fruits of America are indeed precious now. Because America is so far ahead of the rest of the world in agricultural resources, it is literally feeding the world. Countless millions across the sea depend upon the world's bread basket (Mississippi Valley) for their food. In statistics published in 1938, before the war had upset the world's economy, the United States (only one of the nations living in Joseph's land) was producing sixty per cent of the wheat and cotton of the globe.

And for the precious things put forth by the moon.

It is well known that the moon as well as the sun plays its part in influencing and wooing plant life into maximum activity.

Mr. Nadaillac says:

In no region of the globe has nature been more prodigal than in the vast districts stretching from Guiana to Uruguay, from the Atlantic to the forest spurs of the Andes, forming the empire of Brazil. The fertility of the soil under the double influence of heat and moisture is wonderful; forest trees grow in great profusion everywhere; valuable medicinal plants spring up in profusion which are not to be met with in any other climate and vegetables good for food or fruits pleasant to the taste of man, with flowers of the most brilliant colors. Fifteen thousand vegetable species peculiar to Brazil have already been recognized.⁸

And for the chief things of the ancient mountains.

The United States possesses (1938) almost $11,000,000,000.00 in gold, or nearly half of the world's monetary metal. It has two thirds of civilization's banking resources. The purchasing power of the population is greater than that of the 500,000,000 people in Europe and much larger than that of more than a billion Asiatics. These figures are to be found in the record. They are the envy of the world. Turning to one of our journals, The United States News, we find more statistics concerning automobiles. This country has 22 to every 100 persons. Canada has 11; France, 5; United Kingdom, 5; Germany, 2; and Italy, 1.

The United States produces fifty per cent of the copper and pig iron, and forty per cent of the lead and coal output of the globe.⁹

These figures are taken from an article published in 1938. The title of the article is "America Has Highest Living Standard of the Nation."

If we take Moses' eight points in Deuteronomy as the determining factor in identifying Joseph's land, there can be no other conclusion than that America is Joseph's land and that it is the place where the Good Shepherd led the flock of Joseph (Psalm 80: 1).

And for the precious things of the lasting hills.

There are no forests in the Old World that begin to compare with the vast forests of the United States and Canada. "Founder's Tree" on the Eel River in Northern California is the tallest tree in the world (364 feet). In the Sequoia National Forest in California, there is one tree which contains enough lumber to build fifty-five five-room homes. Hooker's Oak, near Chico, California, is the largest oak tree in the world. There are trees in California with a circumference of ninety-eight feet.

And for the precious things of the earth and fulness thereof.

The United States, exclusive of the other countries of the New World, produces seventy per cent of the world's oil (1937-38).

The United States contains six per cent of the world's area and seven per cent of its population; but because of its wealth, based on the richness of its vast natural resources, it consumes forty-eight per cent of the world's coffee, fifty-three per cent of its tin, fifty-six per cent of its rubber, seventy-two per cent of its steel, thirty-six per cent of its coal, and forty-two per cent of its pig iron.

And for the good will of him that dwelt in the bush.

A great mass of evidence indicates that the ancient Americans had prophets and a Sacred Book, and that Jesus Christ visited them. In what other part of the world (Europe, Siberia, India, Australia, Africa) is there such evidence of having "the good will of him that dwelt in the bush"?

1. Bancroft, Native Races, Volume 5, page 22.
2. Bancroft, Native Races, Volume 3, page 270.
3. Gregory Mason, Columbus Came Late, page 71.
4. Brinton, Myths of the New World, page 105.
5. Brinton, Myths of the New World, page 106.
6. Ann Axtell Morris, Digging in Yucatan, page 262.
7. Historia de Oaxaca, Volume 1, page 62.
8. Nadaillac, Prehistoric America, page 465.
9. Article, Oakland Tribune, January 8, 1938.

(All italicizing and underlining of words or phrases is by the author for emphasis.)

Questions, suggestions, or criticisms will be welcomed and responded to by the author. His address is R. F. D. 5, Warrensburg, Missouri.

Visual Education in the Church School

With the ever-increasing use of projectors and slides in our churches, a suggestion as to how to use them more effectively may be in order. So much interest was shown in the commercial slides we used at Christmas and Easter in the church school, I suggested to my class of junior high girls that we make some slides of our own depicting scenes from the Bible. They were most enthusiastic and began immediately to make plans. The following Sunday, we discussed the project with the boys, and they too were enthusiastic. Later we enlisted the help of the older young people and some of the adults.

If various congregations could work on different themes and then exchange slides, many stories from the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Church History could be made available for use in church school work.

M. Anderson.

895 High Street
Auburn, California

Helped by Prayers

I would like to express my appreciation to all who sent cards and letters and those who remembered me in prayer. I am improving every day, and I believe I shall continue to improve. The doctor says my heart is in such a condition that he can't promise I will ever get well, but I have faith that I shall be healed. I keep busy crocheting and selling handkerchiefs.

My advice to those who are discouraged is to place themselves in the care of God and do what they can to make life worth living. Even if it is only to offer a prayer for others, that service will make life happier.

Mrs. Martha Luce

124 East Dwight
Lansing 6, Michigan

WRITE FOR OUR NEW

1948 - 1949

Book Catalog

HERALD PUBLISHING HOUSE
Independence, Missouri

Unlimited Fields of Service

By MRS. MARY MOATS

WHICH IS ANOTHER way of saying, "Hitch your wagon to a star," then doing something about it by trying to live up to your greatest possibilities.

We have a great heritage in this Zion message, and the challenge of our lives is to live up to that heritage. According to the thinking of many great men, the last dispensation of time is running out. It is later than we realize and there is great need for more definite consecrated effort in God's work especially our particular part of it, woman's work. We should be filled with that same sense of urgency that caused Christ, when twelve years old, to say, "Wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business?"

God's work, kingdom-building, is not static; it is progressive, ever moving onward and upward. If we do not keep pace with it, we will be found wanting and will be left out of the program. Time has not waited for us, and now we must work hard to accomplish what must be done. This is a time that calls for a great faith and the willingness to give our best efforts to that faith. Each age has had crusaders. Our age calls for crusaders in kingdom-building.

I believe that all women should belong to the women's department; it is a privilege and a responsibility. We should be active workers; for by serving an organization, we really serve ourselves. We have an opportunity for personal growth through the assumption of responsibilities and the expectation of being treated as responsible persons. We need to be open-minded for higher and wider service. We need to grow mentally and spiritually. To do this, we must subject ourselves to mental and spiritual stimuli. We learn to do by doing, not by just thinking we will do someday. When we accept and fulfill our obligations, we grow—we develop latent talent and widen the avenues of service. Paul said, "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." An outstanding example of the acceptance of responsibility is found in the life of Pauline Arson, leader of the General Department of Women. She was not accustomed to working in this field, as her particular interest had been music. With her acceptance, she brought all her gracious charm and effort into this new work. She has developed previously unused talents; the department has been enriched, and she has found joy of service in an unlimited field. I also know a lovely, young lady who never knew that she could sing until she was practically pushed into it. She was an accomplished organist and was quite content to be just that. After marriage, she moved to a distant city where the singing need was greater than the need of an organist. She developed her voice, and now the avenues of her service are widened and her life is richer and fuller.

PRESIDENT ISRAEL A. SMITH has told us that Zion awaits the quality of her people. Let us consider the word quality. It means our daily living, our contacts with and reactions to others, our acceptance or rejection of responsibility. We feel sure that our lethargy and timidity have contributed to this delay. Righteous living requires courage and strength. The quality of our Christianity, of our godliness is determined by our action. Jesus tells us that "a tree is known by his fruit." Yes, we have unlimited fields in which to serve and work, and we need to prepare for wider avenues of service.

If we fail in our service of kingdom-building, it is because we do not make wise choices, choosing those things which lead away from Zion ideals and goals. We are pledged to build the kingdom of God. This is our heritage and challenge. The avenues of service are many and varied enough to challenge, if we but look for them. Every woman may not find satisfaction of service in all of the avenues, but she will find an avenue which meets her need and talent, and in it she will find the joy of serving. This is God's promise to his children. When we allow his spirit to come into our lives, we are led and directed in paths of righteousness.

It is good for the soul of Christian people to work and play together. Work becomes play when the heart and soul are in it. It gives us a sense of "belonging" when we are accepted by those whom we admire and we do want to belong. If you don't believe it, think of all the different organizations and societies to belong to. It is good to be counted in. I hope we want to be counted on, also. If we really believe in an organization, we must work for the best interests of it; in working, we grow.

WOMAN'S WORK is varied. Her primary duty is to her family and home; then her church; then her community. Just as a pebble, when dropped into a stream of water, first causes a tiny ripple, which in turn causes a larger ripple, until more and more ripples appear and spread far out into the streams, so woman's influence is felt. Let us see to it that this influence is Christlike. As we "lengthen our cords and strengthen our stakes," let us re-evaluate our goals, deepen our convictions, and always remember that the most important thing in our lives is to become more Christlike, and by so doing, establish Zion. Let us never lose touch with our immediate and first loyalties as we widen the avenues of our service.

- - - a home column feature - - -

Women have tremendous power. A glance into the history of the world testifies to this power both for good and evil. When it is directed into uplifting channels, through organization, the entire community is improved. Today, more than ever, women need to interest themselves in civic affairs, and world problems. We need to inform ourselves and keep up with current events. We need to know what and how our children are being taught. Horace Mann says, "Knowing as we do that the foundation of national greatness can be laid only in the industry, the integrity, and spiritual elevation of the people, are we equally sure that our schools are forming the character of the rising generation upon the everlasting principles of duty and humanity? It becomes, therefore, a momentous question whether the children in our schools are educated in reference to themselves and their private interests only, or with regard to the great social duties and prerogatives that await them in after life." We are responsible for our educational system with all its inadequacies. Dorothy Thompson has written several articles calling attention to the need for changes in our teaching methods. We women have the right of franchise and should use that right; this privilege brings obligations. We do owe a debt to society. It is for women to bring an incorruptible integrity, dignity, and intelligence to society. They should be worthy keepers of the morals of their families, churches, communities, and nation. They should guard zealously against any infiltration of a lowering of high standards.

Many great and noble women have charted the course for us to follow.

Thumbnail Sketch of the Author

Mrs. B. F. Moats, a member of the General Women's Council since its inception in 1932, for years has been a moving power in the woman's work in Kansas City Stake and especially in the Central Church.

A graduate nurse, Mrs. Moats served in 1909 as Superintendent of Nurses in the Independence Sanitarium. During World War I, she saw extensive overseas duty with the American armed forces. For the last decade or so, she has been a member of the Board of Trustees of Graceland College. Just within the past few years, she received her B. A. Degree at Kansas City University.

Mrs. Moats is known for her beauty, charm, and efficiency in Kansas City social and club circles as well as in the church. In spite of these many interests and abilities, however, the church comes first in her life and thought. To her friends, Mary has particularly endeared herself by her gracious helpfulness, her sweet humility, and the spiritual quality of her life.

MRS. B. F. MOATS

Emma Smith kept the spiritual lamps burning for her family; she preserved the records of her husband for the church. Emma Burton is an example of great service in missionary avenues, while Marietta Walker kindled educational fires. There are many fine women of the present day who are following in the steps of service, and history will tell of their contribution to the church.

WHO SHOULD be better prepared to serve than one who has been tutored in the gospel message? The problem of the world is spiritual, not material; it is one of education and growth. We do not grow without effort, and we women need to keep the lamps of faith and hope burning. This is the answer to today's challenge.

Brother Floyd M. McDowell says, "The chief purpose and value of organization depends upon what happens to the souls of those who organize." We must build our women for greater service by translating our faith into a vital living faith; we must go out into the many fields of service so that the torch of our heritage will ever challenge our best service.

Teach me to feel another's woe
To hide the fault I see;
That mercy I to others show
That mercy show to me.

—Alexander Pope.

Flowers in the House of God

Flowers in the house of God
How beautiful to see,
Placed lovingly by thoughtful hands;
It somehow touches me.
I think that God rejoices, too,
That there are those who care
Enough about his house to bring Their choicest blossoms there.
I like to think that there must be
Some special, small reward
For those who bring their gardens out
To magnify the Lord.

—Alice H. Mortenson.

Tillers of the Vineyard

DID YOU EVER take an occupational aptitude test such as those given to men of the armed forces? In October we took the Bengé test out of curiosity and for our own information. It was fun and informative. After determining in the light of the tests our respective occupational aptitudes, we found we should be draftsmen, writers, high-school instructors, or landscape artists. Farmers? Oh, no!

INTEREST IN THINGS

Just where does the farmer appear in the test, we wondered. Jobs are listed according to qualifications under A, B, C, D, and E; with special interests under the headings: People, Ideas, Numbers, Things. One who is placed under a C rating of educational and professional training and experience with an interest primarily in people (determined by the test) can adapt readily to training as nurses, chain-store managers, and Y. M. C. A. secretaries. Should you rate under A with an interest in people, you could be a clergyman, physician, or advertising executive.

Hmmmm—where's the farmer? Here it is, close to the bottom in the lowest grouping, E, under Things. To best fit the role of farmer, one should rate with a minimum of training and experience, and be interested primarily in things. So, that's why people aren't farmers if they can train for a white-collar job.

PREPARATION NECESSARY

Our educational leaders at last are beginning to recognize the dignity and true skill requirements of agricultural occupations. Many of us can recall the aspersion implied when instructors delegated some students to the realm of farmers and farmers' wives as not mentally qualified or having personalities suited to white-collar jobs.

Yet had many of our most alert, studious boys and girls been encouraged to cling to their love of the soil with a professional attitude, our top soils would not be generally rated as twenty-five to one hundred per cent eroded. Though numerous educators and agencies have sponsored the cause of the farmer in the past decade, many farm parents today, secretly or openly, hope their sons will vindicate their farmer heritage, not by proving themselves on the farm but by becoming doctors, teachers, and ministers.

For a long time, teaching has been the gate of escape for the young man or woman reared on a farm who yearns to prove his or her mettle. That was the avenue we each used and were pursuing when we met and joined forces. We weren't going to be menial servants of the soil. Not only that, we wanted to serve the church; and the church needed specialists.

We started to prepare to serve and to set up goals for avenues of service. Things happened to halt our progress and alter our course; yet we were sure each change could be used to benefit us. Somehow we would finish our educations and become specialists in agricultural instruction and writing. So we hammered away, but often our wedges seemed to bounce back.

As we studied, our interest in tilling the soil grew. We read in the Doctrine and Covenants, sections 98 and 100, "Build up the waste places of Zion." We mulled over this for months. Further scriptural study indicated that man was placed upon the earth, God's vineyard, to tend and dress it and to live abundantly—both temporally and spiritually.

APPLIED INTELLIGENCE

Bishop G. L. DeLapp gives six requirements for stewardships in his quarterly, Zion's Procedures. First, "An intelligent, orderly, systematic application of all of our time to the task of preparation in our daily vocations, in our service to the church, to the improvement of the mind, the strengthening of body."

Apply this requirement to the vocation of tilling and dressing the vineyard. "An intelligent—" but wait! When Zion and the regions round about were divinely appointed as the locality of the gathering, the counties included had a rich, loamy soil from one to two feet deep. (See Saints' Herald, Volume 19, page 197.) This estimate in 1872 especially referred to the region of Lamoni Stake, though the Independence area probably was well over the one-foot loam depth minimum. What became of that two-foot layer of soil? It has been estimated that about one half has been lost, and in many places one hundred per cent lost, through unintelligent management of the soil. It will take intelligence to conserve that which remains.

"An intelligent, orderly, and systematic application of all of our time to the task of preparation in our daily vocations. . . ." What a monumental assignment! More of us could qualify if the phrase

By ENID and JOE DeBARTHE

"to the task of preparation" were omitted. The art of soil tillage is only recently a study of preparation. In the past, as soon as a hand could hold a plow steady in the furrow, the soil was there to be tilled. Today that hand must be backed by the preparation of knowledge of how to till, by contouring, terracing, or not plowing at all.

Agriculture is a very important phase of Zion-building and is an integral part of our service to the church. How many of us, when imbued with the desire to give our lives in service to God and the cause of his kingdom on earth, have considered remaining on the farm to do it? Yet three of the four stakes of Zion are essentially agricultural.

How difficult it is to learn to be orderly and systematic about anything after one is old enough to be thrown on his own resources. Throughout school life, the habit is largely superimposed. Order and systematic preparation need to be lifetime habits begun in the parental home. The need of order and systematic preparation is evident in every profession, but it is an especially challenging one on the farm and in the farm home where the exigencies of weather and livestock upset the order of the day.

SPECIALISTS NEEDED

It was stated recently that a stake needs specialists in many fields. In agriculture there are many specialties. A person's lifetime could be devoted to only one of these phases: soil conservation, agricultural chemistry, horticulture, bee culture, animal husbandry, specialized marketing, crop specialization, rural housing, and rural community planning. Does one need to divorce himself from actual tillage of the soil to exemplify these things after due preparation and even while preparing?

Again we refer to the quotation . . . "to the improvement of the mind." One of the nation's greatest minds in the field of self-sustaining agriculture was that of Dr. George Washington Carver. As an agricultural chemist, he opened many industrial possibilities directly related to the soil, its conservation, and the subsequent health and abundance of life for the tillers of the soil in the South. We cannot all study to become specialists, but unless we make an effort to learn the results of the study of specialists, we do not improve our thinking in relation to our daily vocations or our service to the church.

There is an abundance of life for us in our own vocation—whatever it is—if we but utilize all the resources, both known and (as yet) unknown, within the field. By taking inventory of our own time, qualifications, financial status, study habits, and progress in relation to our goal, we measure our abundance and can see where or how to increase it. Filing our financial inventories or annual tithing reports is a step in measuring our abundance. We must go on from there.

“... To the strengthening of the body.” Zion—a land flowing with milk and honey. The soil of Zion originally had the elements necessary to produce strengthening food for man and beast. Improper soil management has robbed it of some of those elements, but they may be returned by intelligent preparation and planning. The National Geographic Society has stated that the Mississippi Valley is the ideal home of man. Zion and the four stakes of Zion are in the center of that valley region. We have been divinely urged to become stewards, to earn and care for a stewardship, an inheritance.

The majority of farmers do not have the preparation of study and research required of ministers and doctors; perhaps they should have. If actual schooling is not available, books, pamphlets, and advisory specialists are. Actual contact with animals and soils is a fine laboratory for research so long as one carefully and consistently notes conditions, trends, and progress. The ability to interpret the factors in terms of abundance comes with study, thought, and the careful use of records.

DIGNITY IN HONEST TOIL

The time should soon come when tilling and dressing the vineyard will be an honorable profession, requiring training as specific as teaching. We didn't get to become specialists, but we feel no less honorably employed because we left the teaching profession to till a small plot of Zion's waste places. The challenge to study is unlimited. Someone needs to plan farm homes according to use, environment, and structural beauty. The southern colonial house built for the pretentious plantation does not belong on a small farm in Iowa or Missouri. Most of our Iowa farmhouses are modified versions of this architectural type and have lost their former beauty. Our own house is definitely a mongrel. What will the new one be?

The farm woman's home should not duplicate her town sister's home because of the difference in its function. And the problems in building for the farm man are greater than for his wife. Does any other common employment offer as much width of expansion of study, research, and application as farming?

We conclude that the task of tilling and dressing the vineyard does require intelligent, orderly, and systematic application of all of our time and talents to the creating of an abundance for ourselves, our posterity, and the church. Such a task is an important stewardship.

Turn Jesus Off

(Continued from page 11.)

IF WE COULD turn Jesus off, we should have no hope in this life and no hope of a life to come. We know that we are under sentence of death. Everyone of us must die. Every fiber of our being cries out for life. We want to live. We shudder at the thought of annihilation, of extinction of the personality which we have spent so long building. More and more as we grow older, we discover that just as we are beginning to learn how to live, it is time to die. There is no hope for any life after death, save in Jesus. It was necessary that he dwell among us in flesh to show us how to live and to demonstrate to us that it was possible to live in human flesh without sin. It was necessary that he die as to the flesh—not to appease an angry God and bring him back to man, but so that the bands of death and hell and the grave might be broken through the power of this sinless life, and so that through his name all men who would call upon that name might also be brought forth to newness of life.

There is no other name given under heaven whereby men may be saved. In the great day of judgment, every knee shall bow and every tongue shall confess that he is Lord; but some will confess this to their own glory and salvation, and some will have to confess it to their everlasting shame and contempt—if they have gone through life “turning Jesus off” and refusing to listen to the pleas of those who presented his name and his gospel. Sometimes those who preach him do so in weakness and in clumsiness and with lack of clarity and conviction. But I advise you to consider well before you turn Jesus off when his message of salvation comes to you. You cannot turn him off. The Pharisees and the chief priests and the Romans thought they had turned him off for good when they crucified him and laid him in a tomb. Yet he and his teachings have outlived Herod and Pilate and the men who crucified him, and the empire which furnished the authority for that execution. You cannot turn off Jesus' influence in the universe, in the world, or in your life. In him you live and move and have your being. In him is your only hope for the future. In him is the only hope for the world of the future. He can turn you off if you will not accept him and his salvation; but you cannot turn Jesus off!

In Appreciation of Leadership Training Courses

Our classwork has improved greatly and increased our Sunday night church attendance. Classes are preceded by a twenty-minute song service. An extra study class is held one night each week for those who have missed lessons and wish to make them up.

Mrs. Edith Odom

McKenzie, Alabama

All but one taking the leadership training course are teachers or leaders in the branch. They enjoy the work and have written themes. I wish I were sixteen instead of sixty-five. If I could have taken a course of this kind when I was young, I might have accomplished a great deal more than I have. Class attendance now totals twenty-nine, but those who are not taking the work for credit don't study as hard as the others.

A. G. Miller.

Ocean Springs, Mississippi

Correspondence Wanted

We should like to hear from Saints living in or near Brownsville. My husband was transferred here on April 1 to work in the Department of Agriculture, and we are eager to get in touch with other members in this area.

Mrs. L. O. Fink.

1151 West St. Charles St.
Brownsville, Texas

This ONE Thing I Do

By Sadi Anka Moon

A YOUNG MAN traveled in Turkey and watched the people work in the fields. He saw them use crude, antiquated implements, much as the Hittites used centuries and centuries ago. Five times a day, the traveler observed, these people laid down their scythes in the fields and prayed. When he slowed his car to watch, not one eye was lifted or one head turned—even in parts of the country where a car was seen only four or five times a year.

Christ taught his disciples over and over that they were to “seek first the kingdom.” Paul, the scholarly missionary, said, “This one thing I do” and he was well on the way to self-discipline—the kind of discipline it takes to “seek first the kingdom.”

The primitive farmers in Turkey pronounced upon themselves the kind of discipline which allowed them to tend first and only to their worship. How different from the young man today who, when asked, “What do you want to do in life?” answered, “I just want to find happiness.”

“And how will you find it?”

“Why, happiness is an illusive quality which must be picked up here and there wherever you can find a bit of it.”

Wrong! The gospel of Christ is a gospel of law and order. Even happiness is found as a result of a given equation.

HAPPINESS IS LIKE baking a cake. When you plan to bake a fudge cake, you put in specified ingredients. You know that you can't throw in just anything—an old shoe, a feather, a bag of cement, or a can of paint—and expect to get a fudge cake. The laws of chemistry as applied to cooking must be obeyed to achieve the end desired.

Similarly, we can look in the recipe book—the Bible—for fine social results, and we find that the Teacher has given his students a sure recipe for the happiness they all want.

The recipe for happiness, according to the Scriptures, reads something like this: Seek first the kingdom. Obey my commandments. Teach all peoples these things. Have faith. Have charity. Love your neighbor—and your enemy. Study to show thyself approved—a workman. Fear not. Doubt not. Serve your fellow man. Speak not disparagingly about anyone. Be clean. Seek wisdom. Pray always. Be not idle.

There are lots of ingredients.

NOW, SUPPOSE you've set yourself to follow the recipe for obtaining happiness. “Yes,” you say, “I recognize that I'm going to have to follow the directions Christ and our Father have set up if I will achieve the ends I want.” And you set to work.

The nature of social progress is faltering. You may be enthusiastic and see clearly where you want to go on Sunday. On Monday the whole horizon may be clouded, and you are all confused. “Oh, I'll try again tomorrow,” you say.

Jesus pointed out that when you want to follow his chart to achieve the ends of everlasting joy, you cannot do it spasmodically. “O ye that embark in the service of God, see that ye serve him with all your heart, might, mind, and strength.”—Doctrine and Covenants 4:1. That means all the time. That means you're not going to take a holiday on Saturday night and say, “Time out—the pace is too tough. I'm going dancing. I'll pick up again tomorrow.” You can't go that way in this project. It takes many steps forward to make up for one step back.

“Diligence” is our method.

“I know I'll have to pay for my laziness,” says one young man. “I should make myself get down and do this, but I'd rather—” do this and do this and do this, no doubt. But doing all these other things isn't doing the one thing that constitutes the necessary ingredients for the cake of happiness.

ONE OF THE greatest nuisances that keeps wanting to get into the cake you are baking is the element, second best. There is no place in the cake for it. Second best isn't an old shoe, but it is a poor grade of flour. One bad thing about second best is its very quality of not being necessarily wrong. Many times it's a good thing, in and of itself, but it won't fit in your life.

Another bad thing about second best is that it has a strong shield of rationalization. Rationalization is

www.LatterDayTruth.org

New Horizons

the ability to find a "good" reason for doing something you want to do, especially if that something is not the thing you should do. For example, you should be doing your theme paper for English tomorrow, and you think how much the garden needs to be hoed—so out you go. The garden probably does need hoing, but—what was the first thing?

"This one thing I do." Energy can be spent only in one direction. When it is going in the direction of second or third best, it can't be first best. A second bug-a-boo in the process of whipping up happiness is a poor recipe. Aunt Maud held fast to her recipe for chocolate cake. Her mother had given it to her, so it must be good, she reasoned. But she didn't understand why none of the rest of the family would eat her concoction. We couldn't tell her that it tasted like soda and was too dry. Aunt Maud would have been offended and wouldn't have changed recipes anyway.

How many of us are Aunt Mauds, sticking stubbornly to some habit or activity which surely destroys the flavor of a happy life, but which we hang to with the vim of a crowdad on the farmer boy's finger? Our cake will go on forever tasting like soda. How could it do otherwise? It's in the recipe. We can't force the rest of the human race into accepting our pet sins. They can see through our biases—"just because your mother gave you the recipe."

That taste of soda in our recipe for happiness might well be any number of besetting sins. It can be the secret grudge we hold against Sister Martin for the attractive garden she has, or the flaring temper we pamper. It may be our weakness for staying in bed just a little longer in the morning, or our passion for cheap novels. For as many soda-flavored cakes as we insist upon baking, just so many times we deprive ourselves of something with a pleasant taste.

What then is the answer to the problem? Find a good recipe. Read it carefully. Follow it explicitly. Eat it proudly.

The Trouble-Shooter

The Wedding Ceremony

QUESTION: My husband is Catholic. At the time we were married, he refused to be married in my church, and I refused to be married in his; so we were married by a justice of the peace. Later he wanted me to be married by the priest of his church, and I refused. Still later he asked me to go with him to have the marriage blessed; I refused. Recently, I was talking to another member of our church, who said he didn't believe that anyone not called of God had any authority to perform any rites of God. I think he is correct. Do you think I should ask my husband to be married in our church, then go with him to be married in his church? Would this be pleasing to God?

ANSWER: By Leonard Lea

The marriage ceremony has a dual character: under the civil law, it is a contract that may be made by the two parties before a justice of the peace or other qualified civil officer, or before a minister of the gospel who is also authorized to administer it. When either the minister or the civil officer performs the ceremony and fills out the marriage certificate, he completes the requirements of the law.

In its other aspect, marriage is an ordinance or sacrament of the church, in which the blessing of God is invoked upon the man and the woman who enter into the state of matrimony. To church members, the religious ceremony is very important. When an ordained minister of our church performs a wedding ceremony (in the United States) he performs both the religious and the civil ceremony at the same time. In some countries, the couple may go through both ceremonies, one before a minister, and the other before a civil officer, the civil ceremony being required for legality.

Your marriage is recognized as valid by the church, and no additional ceremony is required. While our church law (Doctrine and Covenants 111:1) recommends a wedding ceremony performed publicly by church officers, it also recognizes other ceremonies in these words, "not even prohibiting those persons who are desirous to get married, of being married by other authority."

It is stated upon reliable information that if you are to be married by a Roman Catholic priest, you will be required beforehand to promise that all your children shall be reared in the Roman Catholic faith.

Far more important than the performance of the extra marriage ceremonies is to try faithfully to make your home a place of love and happiness for your husband, so that he shall see the effects of your religion in your life, and respect your church. Encourage him to meet church people and to be friendly with them. Many a good woman has won her husband to the church in circumstances like yours through kindness, tact, and faithfulness to the church.

Success in Marriage

Success in marriage is much more than finding the right person: it is a matter of being the right person.—Rabbi B. R. Brickner in Boston Evening Transcript.

Canadian Journey

(Continued from page 4.)

come to visitors. His son, Dr. Charles McLean, is making a valued contribution to the church work. Magistrate J. L. Prentice of the Toronto Court has long been identified with the work here and teaches a class in the church school. Brother Sheehy has given a splendid and devoted leadership to this congregation. It would be impossible to mention the names of all the devoted people who have contributed to the church work here.

The Humber Bay congregation is presided over by Brother Fred Le Feuvre, who is a self-sustaining church worker and a candy manufacturer in Toronto.

It is a striking experience to be driven over the beautiful double lane Queen Elizabeth Highway around the end of Lake Ontario from Toronto to Niagara Falls. At the latter city, the church and congregation are in charge of pastor George Towers. Even on a rainy day, it is an impressive experience to see Niagara Falls from the Canadian side.

Our congregation in the thriving industrial city of Hamilton is in charge of Brother E. M. Kennedy, who is a druggist by profession.

The church at St. Thomas is an old one and has enjoyed the leadership and ministry of a number of men widely known in the development of the Reorganization. Stratford is one of the most interesting of small Canadian cities to visit. It is located on the River Avon like its English counterpart and has named its schools from the plays of Shakespeare. Brother Howard Schlotzhauer is doing a fine work there. Professionally he is a member of the faculty in the city school system. It was a memorable experience to visit at the home of Brother Schlotzhauer and also at the home of Brother and Sister William Leney.

The final stop on this Canadian border was at London, where one of our finest and strongest Canadian congregations is located. Brother Almer Sheehy is district president and in charge of the branch. In this congregation, one finds a number of notable church workers, including the eminent physician and surgeon, Dr. E. V. Shute, Brother Ted Shaw, and members of the McGregor family.

A visit with the people of the Canadian churches is a fine experience for anybody from the States. If there were more such visits, we would have a better understanding of the viewpoint, the needs, and the problems of our Canadian friends, and we would realize more clearly the importance of this splendid country to the north of us. One is distressed to learn that in the early months of the year the Canadian people are not able to grow or obtain such common and needed salad vegetables as lettuce and celery, while these products are over-produced and some of them going to waste in the States. This is because of a currency problem that one wishes could be solved. It seems that there is such an abundance of raw and manufactured products in Canada needed in the United States, and if we could purchase these things in sufficient quantity, our growers could ship the much-needed vegetables to Canadian markets. We are hurting ourselves as well as our Canadian friends not to do better in this matter.

We are pouring millions into countries around the world which will never return a cent to us. It would seem a wise thing to co-operate with a friendly neighboring country that asks for nothing free, that pays its own way, and that can give us needed commodities in return for everything it gets.

Some of our finest church people are in Canada, and numbers of them move to the States. Conditions there, too, present us with one of our finest missionary opportunities.

L. J. L.

The Cause for Peace

(Continued from page 9.)

and if atomic war came tomorrow and erased our government at Washington and our principal cities from the map, it is difficult to believe that it would make any difference here. This seems a world of its own, sufficient unto itself, and good.

However, we know in this day that we must be concerned and related to all that happens everywhere. But it seems to me the "cause for Peace" lies in the preservation of places like My Town, and the recognition that in it exists the elements of Zion. On this we must build!

Program Material for Father's Day

STANDARD FATHER'S DAY BOOK 1

With Materials for Fathers' and Sons' Occasions

A wealth of materials for building successful programs for Father's Day and Fathers' and Sons' occasions in church and school are found in this book. Here are dramatizations, readings, and recitations, song parodies, games, short talks and toasts for banquets, and worship suggestions. Program committees will find just what they want in this new booklet for that celebration to honor the fathers in the church school as they have been honoring the mothers in the past. 38 pages. Price, 30¢.

Herald Publishing House

Independence, Missouri

BULLETIN BOARD

Address the Department at The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri.

P. S.

Southern New England District Reunion

The annual Southern New England District Reunion will be held at Onset, Massachusetts, July 17 to 25. President F. Henry Edwards, Apostle George Lewis, Bishop Donald Chesworth, and Elder Reed M. Holmes are to be present. The annual business session of the reunion is scheduled for 10 a.m., July 17. At this time district officers and General Conference delegates will be elected. Sleeping accommodations and meals will be available during reunion week. Inquiries may be addressed to Mrs. Ralph Hardy, 27 Hancock Street, Lexington, Massachusetts.

JAMES W. BARTON,
District Secretary.

South-Central Michigan District Conference

The spring conference of the South-Central Michigan District will be held at Saginaw on Sunday, May 23. Visiting personnel includes Mrs. Ruth Simons of Flint and Blair McClain of Detroit. Mrs. Simons is to be the instructor for two women's classes; Elder McClain will conduct two classes for men and give the 11 o'clock sermon. Delegates to General Conference will be elected and priesthood calls approved at the afternoon business session.

JOHN W. BANKS,
District President.

Eastern Michigan District Conference

The Eastern Michigan District spring conference will be held in Sandusky on Sunday, May 23. Services will begin at 9:30 a.m. and conclude with a sermon at 3 p.m. E. E. Smith, pastor of Port Huron Branch, will be the guest speaker.

JAMES C. PHILLIPS,
District President.

Southern Michigan Conference

A special conference for Southern Michigan District will be held at Belding on May 23 for the election of General Conference delegates. Since Elder E. R. Carter has been ordained to the office of patriarch, a new district president will be elected also to serve the remainder of the church year. Apostle E. J. Gleazer will be the 11 o'clock speaker. The business session is scheduled for 2 p.m.

MABEL B. FOSTER,
District Secretary.

Southern Nebraska District Day

A "district day" has been planned for southern Nebraska to be held at the church in Lincoln on May 23. Activities will include institute work for women, men, and young people, and the election of delegates to General Conference. Apostle D. T. Williams and Seventy A. L. Loving are to be present.

BERTHA E. KELLER,
District Secretary.

Nauvoo Camp

Historic Nauvoo welcomes campers for the annual week-long sojourn on its famous shores. On the banks of the broad Mississippi nestles the beautiful setting for Nauvoo Camp.

Dates this year are June 6-13. The first meal is the evening meal, June 6.

Ages of campers include fifteen to eighteen. Special permission will be granted in some cases to campers older or younger.

The total fee is $15 plus a small fee for crafts. One dollar should be included with the registration. Registrations are due May 31.

Write the Department of Religious Education for registration blanks and information.

"Heralds" Wanted

George H. Roberson, 320 South Maple, McPherson, Kansas, would like to have copies of the May 17, 1947, Herald for use in missionary work.

REQUESTS FOR PRAYERS

Benito Maliwat, 1014 West Linden, Independence, Missouri, is still suffering with his hand and asks for continued prayers.

Prayers are requested for Leon Huioutu, Box 44, Papeete, Tahiti, a Leaguer and member of the church band in Tahiti, who has been paralyzed since falling in the shipyards where he worked. He will greatly appreciate letters from Saints in America and other countries.

Mrs. John Hedeon requests prayers for her sister, Mrs. Gust Johnson of Garfield, Minnesota, who has been bedfast for nearly nine years with a nervous affliction.

ENGAGEMENTS

Price-Davis

Mr. and Mrs. Jesse L. Kirksey of Independence, Missouri, announce the engagement of their daughter, Pamela Davis, formerly of Fisher, Arkansas, to Rich Price of Hagerman, Idaho. Mr. Price is attending Central Missouri State College at Warrensburg, Missouri.

Willoughby-Curtis

Mr. and Mrs. George Curtis of Greenwood, Missouri, announce the engagement of their daughter, Aline, to James Willoughby, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Willoughby of Lee's Summit, Missouri. The wedding will take place in June.

Reunion Schedule-1948

No. Dakota	Jun. 11-Jun. 13	Am. Leg. Pk., Detroit Lakes, Minnesota
E. Montana	Jun. 19-Jun. 27	Fairview, Mont.
Texas	Jun. 25-July 4	Bandera, Texas
Owen Sound & Toronto	Jun. 26-July 4	Port Elgin, Ont.
New York & Philadelphia	July 3-July 11	Deer Park Arkansas City, Kansas
Southwest Kansas	July 3-July 11	Deer Park Arkansas City, Kansas
Gulf States	July 9-July 18	Brewton, Ala.
W. Colorado	July 10-July 11	Delta, Colorado
Manitoba	July 10-July 11	Winnipeg, Man.
Central Missouri	July 10-July 18	Odessa, Missouri
Saskatchewan	July 10-July 18	Odessa, Missouri
Alberta	July 19-July 26	Sylvan Lake, Alberta
Zion	July 17-July 25	Gardner Lake
Nauvoo	July 17-July 25	Nauvoo, Illinois
So. New England	July 17-July 25	Onset, Mass.
Northern California	July 17-July 25	Asilomar, Mon- terey, California
Flint-Pt. Hu- ron-Detroit- Windsor	July 24-Aug. 1	Blue Water, Michigan
Kentucky & Tennessee	July 25-Aug. 1	Paris, Tennessee
Northwest	July 30-Aug. 8	Silver Lake, Washington
Chatham- London Cen. & So.	July 30-Aug. 8	Erie Beach, Ontario, Canada
Michigan	July 31-Aug. 8	Liahona Park
Mo. Valley	July 31-Aug. 8	Woodbine, Iowa
Maine	July 31-Aug. 8	Brooksville, Me.
So. California	July 31-Aug. 8	Pacific Palisades
No. & West. Michigan	Aug. 5-Aug. 15	Park of the Pines
Kirtland	Aug. 6-Aug. 15	Kirtland, Ohio
Reunion of the Ozarks	Aug. 1-Aug. 8	Racine, Missouri
Oklahoma	Aug. 7-Aug. 15	Pawnee, Okla.
W. Montana	Aug. 7-Aug. 15	Race Track, Montana
Arizona	Aug. 8-Aug. 15	Prescott, Arizona
Arkansas & Louisiana	Aug. 9-Aug. 15	Clear Fork Cp., Hot Spgs., Ark.
Minnesota & Wisconsin	Aug. 9-Aug. 16	Chetek, Wisc.
Far West	Aug. 12-Aug. 22	Stewartsville, Missouri
So. Indiana	Aug. 21-Aug. 29	Bedford, Ind.
Eastern Michigan	Aug. 14-Aug. 22	Cash, Michigan
Idaho	Aug. 14-Aug. 21	Hagerman, Idaho
Des Moines	Aug. 15-Aug. 21	Guthrie Center, Iowa
Lamoni	Aug. 15-Aug. 22	Lamoni, Iowa
S. E. Illinois	Aug. 20-Aug. 29	Brush Creek, Ill.
Eastern Colorado	Aug. 20-Aug. 29	Colorado Springs Colorado

* RICHES.

When I saw the elderly couple in the store, I thought they were poor—very poor. Her dress was plain and old, and I doubted if she had ever seen the inside of a beauty shop. His overalls were thin and faded. But when he spoke to her, there was a kindly light in his eyes, and the gentleness and tenderness of love in his voice; and when she answered him it was in the same tones she had used so long ago in their sweetheart days. . . . How mistaken I was! These people were not poor—they were rich. Rich in the only kind of treasure that can bring comfort and happiness to the heart. Rich in something that could not be bought and sold—nor lost in a market, nor stolen by thieves.

When I went to church last Sunday, a number of pleasant things happened to me. The organist played one of my favorite pieces of music. The preacher gave me a good idea to help me solve a personal problem. I was happy to see a neighbor who had been ill, and was recovered. And then I met some old friends I had not seen in years, and would have missed if I had not gone to church that day. Then there was another friend who was in trouble, and I was able to give him some help and encouragement. I am very glad that I went to church last Sunday. On general principles, I am going again next Sunday.

In a recent church service, a distressed mother was trying her best to shush her crying baby. Attempting to see the situation from the baby's viewpoint, we are convinced he was trying his best to shush the preacher. Neither the mother nor the baby succeeded. . . .

When it is fine weather on Sunday, people go riding in the country because it is too fine to be cooped up indoors. When it is bad weather they stay home because they don't want to be exposed. Can anybody tell us, what kind of weather will these people accept as good church-going weather. . . .

* YOUTH AND AGE

What are the differences between old men and young men?

A young man can tell his story quickly and in few words; old men are long-winded and take a long time.

Young men talk about the present and the future; old men talk about the past.

Check up on yourself. If you tell the old stories over and over again to the same people, if you keep lengthening them and inventing new details, look out! Father Time is whetting his scythe for you, and is getting read to mow you down.

* PERSONNEL POLICY. One simple rule, practiced by everybody, would prevent a lot of trouble and criticism in the world. It is the "hands off" policy. If people would keep their hands off each other, a lot of fighting and divorces could be eliminated. If they would keep their hands off each other's property, many lawsuits and expensive legal bills could be avoided. If they would keep their hands off the children, many a thwarted, miserable individual could grow up in happiness. And if men and women could learn to keep "hands off," the gossips, scandal-mongers, and destroyers of reputations would have nothing to talk about.

Mary A. Burlington
1510½ Jules
St. Joseph, Missouri

92867
18
h

The Perfect Graduation Gift

Inspired Version of the Holy Scriptures

Cloth Binding $4.50

Flexible Leather $9.50

with thumb index $10.50

Limp Leather $7
with thumb index $8

De luxe Leather $11

with thumb index $12

Name lettered in gold, 75¢ a line.

The Bible in Every Day Living

By Roy A. Cheville

The purpose of this book is to make the Bible usable and functional in everyday living. It is concerned with the appreciation and evaluation aspects more than with the factual material. Part of the book is given to building an overview of Bible history and literature. This is a new edition.

$2.25

5 or more to one address $2 each

HERALD PUBLISHING HOUSE
INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI

“Together With God”

Photo by Clifford Carver

THE Saints Herald

VOLUME 95

MAY 22, 1948

NUMBER 21

www.LatterDayTruth.org

Together With God

AUDITORIUM NEWS

On the cover of this week's Herald is another photograph in the current series illustrating phases of student life at Graceland College. The students shown here are gathered in the historic chapel room on the campus like generations of students before them who have met there for many purposes, but, most remembered, for "fellowship" services. Actually, today, with more students enrolled and attending fellowships than the old chapel can hold, most such services are held in the gymnasium. But occasionally the weekly Wednesday night meeting is divided into sections. Then, one of the groups will meet in the historic room. The photograph illustrates such a meeting.

Elsewhere in this issue of the Herald appears an article, "Shall There Be Prayer Meetings?" by the man most responsible for the success of these services at Graceland, Dr. Roy Cheville of the faculty.

It is in meetings such as these that youthful hopes and ideals find expression in group experience toward the goal of the fellowship service, and the goal of life—"together with God."

R. EDWIN BROWNE.

IN THIS ISSUE

EDITORIAL:

Prayer Meetings, Again! 3

OFFICIAL:

Children's Workers, Musicians, Poetry Writers 4
Shipments of Food and Clothing to European Families 4

ARTICLES:

Shall There Be Prayer Meetings? by Dr. Roy A. Cheville 5
Open the Door Into the Classroom, by Russell Tooze 7
In God's Image, by W. J. Haworth 9
Other Sheep I Have Which Are Not of This Fold, Part IV, by Roy Weldon 12
Briefs 15
Serve the Lord With Gladness, by Gladys Gould 16
Preferring One Another, by Emily Inouye 17
God's Design and Man's Witness, by R. J. Farthing 18
Where To Now? by Robert W. Buckingham 20
How to Be Friendly 21
Bulletin Board 23

* ACHIEVEMENTS BY DOCTORS SHUTE.—Two church members, Dr. Evan V. Shute, of London, Ontario, and his brother, Dr. Wilfred E. Shute, of Guelph, Ontario, are named in an article in "Magazine Digest" for May, 1948, for their participation, with other doctors, in experiments with Vitamin E (specifically Alpha Tocopherol) for heart trouble. The article is written for popular use, and covers the results of experiments recorded earlier in articles written for medical journals by the doctors. One fact brought out is that much of the real pioneering in this medical venture was done by our two church doctors. Both men are giving fine support and service in their local congregations of the church, and stand high in the esteem and appreciation of church people.

* TRAVEL NOTES. President Israel A. Smith recently completed a ten-day trip with Apostle E. J. Gleazer, visiting Fort Wayne, Indiana, on April 25; occupied a high school auditorium in Detroit with 800 people present; and had overflow crowds in Port Huron on the 27th, Midland on the 28th, and Flint on the 29th, in which public address systems were used to carry the programs to persons seated in auxiliary auditoriums. At Lansing on the 30th, President Smith talked to students and other members of the church from both Lansing and Ann Arbor, and preached to a full house in Lansing. President Smith officiated at the opening of the new church at Kalamazoo, where there was also a dinner gathering of 100 in his honor. This trip made it possible for President Smith to visit one district of Indiana and four of Michigan, with attendance from all Michigan districts except the northern. In visiting five districts, he contacted personnel from seven of them, with finest possible interest and attendance.

President F. Henry Edwards, Bishop G. L. DeLapp, and Apostle E. J. Gleazer left on Wednesday, May 12, for a trip to visit Detroit, Windsor, Port Huron, and Grand Rapids.

* NAUVOO. A friendly new guide is in charge of the service for church properties at Nauvoo, Illinois. Our historic shrines there are in fine condition, according to Apostle Maurice L. Draper, who recently spent a week there helping Brother Cecil Ettinger get his work organized. Brother Draper gave fine service there a few years ago.

* BAPTISMS. From the mission of Apostle E. J. Gleazer, Virgil J. Billings has reported sixty decisions obtained in the year ending April, 1948, as a result of sixteen series of services. The baptisms were conducted by himself and other ministers.

At Midland, Michigan, three persons joined the church following the recent work of Harry J. Simons. At Saginaw, Brother Carter of Lansing conducted a series that brought six baptisms. These gains are reported in a letter from John W. Banks.

* MICHIGAN. Brother Tom Worth reports: "The two weeks from the 10th to the 24th were spent in the Royal Oak congregation. Seven new members—three adults and four young people—were added to the church. In the matter of these decisions the co-operation of Brother McAllister, the pastor, was very commendable and much appreciated.

"The last week of the month was given to a
(Continued on page 23.)

Prayer Meetings, Again!

YES, AGAIN. They have been up for discussion before. Like the weather, prayer meetings are always with us. Some persons have tried to dismiss them, some to do away with them. Persons pass, but prayer meetings remain.

Why? What brings the people back to them, week after week, in spite of small attendance, unplanned programs, spiritless singing, tedious petitions, and dull testimony? And what is it that occasionally lifts the people up so that the prayer meeting brings them closer to God than any other service of the church?

YOU SHOULD ENJOY reading Dr. Roy A. Cheville's thoughtful article entitled, "Shall There Be Prayer Meetings?" It will help you to find the right answer to that question. Dr. Cheville knows young people, and he has had long practice in planning group experiences for them that help them to understand their deepest needs and aspirations in terms of the highest ethical and religious ideals.

Many a young minister of the church today can remember the turning point in his life as an experience in one of the splendid meetings of young people at Graceland College. In varying degrees, such changed young people run into the thousands. What changes them? What makes the difference? Why do they come in large numbers to the Graceland meetings when they formerly obtained no help from home prayer meetings, or took little interest in them? There is a difference that we should try to understand.

AN INCIDENT that happened a number of years ago will throw some light on the secret of Dr. Cheville's power. The occasion was a Youth Convention on the campus of Graceland College. The day had been full of activities, and I was tired. It was toward late afternoon. I wanted a few minutes to rest, alone. I thought of the Chapel on the second floor of the old "Ad" Building. Up the stairs I went and found the Chapel darkened, the blinds drawn against the glare of the afternoon sun. I sat down at the back. After a few moments my eyes became accustomed to the dim light, and I saw that I was not alone. Over on the other side of the room was Dr. Cheville, pencil in hand, a pad of paper on his knee, looking at a picture on the rostrum, deep in thought. He had not noticed my quiet entrance. I went over to speak to him, asking, "What are you doing?" He looked up and smiled. "I'm planning the next service," he said.

There was more than planning, of course. He had come there in an attitude of search, of prayer, and meditation. He was giving thought and care to the young people, and what he could do for them. He was tired, and he might have been justified in simply resting. But there was a work to be done. When evening came, he was ready, and the young people were given something more than just another meeting. What was done had significance and importance. This accounts for the influence of the Graceland meetings.

WHAT IS THERE in prayer meetings that makes them endure and survive all the conditions that work against them? My own observation is based on a lengthening line of experience. I am convinced that they are indispensable as a part of the church services. They minister to the poor and the humble, to those who are burdened with care or sorrow, to those who find life hard. The rich, the well, the competent, may be able to get along without them for a time. But dark and cloudy days come into every life, and a person is fortunate if he has developed an acquaintance with God in the prayer meetings, so that when his trials come he is no stranger to God, and God is no stranger to him. When God is your personal friend, it is easier to find him in your time of trouble. Prayer meetings are for everybody—the well and the sick, the rich and the poor, the informed as well as the uninformed—if they only knew it. The trouble is, they don't always know it.

THE NEED of the prayer meeting is better leadership. With continued good leadership, any group of our people can have fine prayer meetings. With poor leadership, meetings will be dull and pointless. A great responsibility rests upon the leader. Any elder can improve himself as a leader if he tries. He must invest time and effort. Three hours of preparation are not too much to get ready for a prayer meeting that will last an hour. The elder must pray, search the Scriptures, and think. He must seek to know the will of God for his people. He must seek for an answer to the question, "What do these people need at this time?" If he seeks earnestly, in most cases the answer will come.

No condition will ever come to the church where the people do not have personal needs and problems. That is written into our natures. It would be an incomplete church that could not provide for this situation. Consequently, there will always be prayer meetings. We can find God more easily together than we can find him alone. We can help each other. We can exchange experiences and give each other ideas and encouragement. The prayer meeting is the most democratic of all church services. It is the one activity where all may participate, express their needs, their troubles, problems, and desires.

What can we do? We can make the prayer meetings better, and we can direct them so that they meet the greater needs of our people.

L. J. L.

Editorial

OFFICIAL

Children's Workers, Musicians, Poetry Writers

We need your help in the preparation of a new hymnbook for kindergarten and primary children, ages three to nine. Many of you have years of experience and abundant material which would be extremely helpful in this endeavor to assemble a book to be used in our churches and in the homes of our church people. Others of you have ability that may be turned to our specific need at this time.

The great need at present is for songs or words for songs (music is not essential) expressing our distinctively Latter Day Saint concepts and beliefs in terms boys and girls of ages three to nine can understand. If children's workers would send in copies of such songs (original or otherwise) which they have used and found suitable, and poets and musicians would send in lyrics or songs composed particularly for this publication, it would be a great contribution to the church now and for some years to come.

Below are listed some of the concepts which might be treated:

Blessing of Children
Baptism
Healing of the Sick (Call for the Elders)
Zion
Idea of a Prophet
Prayer
Restoration (God Speaks)
Priesthood
Missionary
The Six Principles (Faith, Repentance, Baptism, Laying on of Hands, Resurrection, and Eternal Judgment)
The Love of God (Pleasing God)
Accountability

Please give the name of the author of words and the composer of music (if music accompanies) so proper credit can be given. If the song is copyrighted, please tell us by whom, so we can gain permission to use it.

Send lyrics and songs to the Music Department, The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri.

The hymnbook is now being assembled, so your prompt response will be greatly appreciated.

FRANKLYN S. WEDDLE,
Director of Music

Shipments of Food and Clothing to European Families

We are shipping food and clothing parcels regularly from the Auditorium to 325 German families and in addition, various groups and congregations throughout the church in the United States and Canada have adopted 100 additional European families to whom packages are mailed each month.

To date, we have shipped 7,500 packages, in which there were packed 100,000 pounds of food and clothing, direct from the Auditorium in Independence, and it is estimated that through the adoption program, referred to above, an additional 1,500 boxes have been sent, containing 30,000 pounds of food and clothing. This would make a total of 9,000 packages sent to European families, containing a total of 130,000 pounds of food and clothing.

Near the beginning of our program, we mailed a questionnaire to each family on our mailing list. These questionnaires gave us the individual clothing needs and sizes of the members of each family, and by the recapitulation of the food requested, we were able to arrive at a good standard food package. Each family had to have the questionnaire approved by the local pastor. Having the questionnaire approved by the pastors assured us of the worthiness of the people to whom we are mailing and lessened the likelihood of any of our goods finding their way into the black market.

The information from the questionnaires is transferred to a shipping record and our packers work from these forms each week. In this way, an accurate record of all items we are sending is kept, and we are assured that each individual family is being well cared for.

After a study of the reported needs of the families, a standard food package was made up in consultation with Miss B. Mildred Nelson, Extension Nutritionist at Iowa State College in Ames, Iowa. Under Miss Nelson's guidance, the package which was finally standardized contained only those items of the highest nutritive value.

Although it has been stated that it takes 85,500 calories per month to keep one adult in good health, nutrition experts qualify this by saying that if a person gets calories equal to 75 per cent of this figure, together with other necessary nutrients, he will have good health. When added to the ration allowed in their own country, the calories and other important nutrients which we provide will equal or approximate the 75 per cent figure, and thus enable the recipient to maintain fairly good health.

H. W. CACKLER, Bishop,
For the Presiding Bishopric.

Do not expect too much of yourself, but expect your best. You may not be a genius, and you may never be able to equal the brilliant performance of those who have reached the top. Do your best every day, at every task, and you will succeed.

THE SAINTS' HERALD

Volume 95

May 22, 1948

Number 21

EDITORS: The First Presidency: Israel A. Smith, John F. Garver, F. Henry Edwards.
ASSISTANTS: Leonard J. Lea, Managing Editor; Kenneth L. Graham, Business Manager.

The Saints' Herald is the official publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, with headquarters at The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri, and is issued through the offices of Herald Publishing House, 103 South Osage Street, Independence, Missouri. Entered as second-class matter at the post office at Independence, Missouri, under Act of March 3, 1879. Issued weekly at Independence, Missouri. Price, $3.50 per year and $1.75 for six months in advance in the U. S. A., its territories and possessions; Canada, $3.75 per year and $1.90 for six months; other countries, $4.50 per year. Notice of a change of address must be given three weeks ahead of the date that it is to become effective. Accepted for mailing at the special rate of postage provided for in section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized July 21, 1921. Printed in the United States of America.

Shall There Be Prayer Meetings?

One of a series of articles published in co-operation with Graceland College, to bring its classrooms and meeting halls into the homes of "Herald" readers, and open to them the friendly West Door of its historic Administration Building, and reveal the "life and lore" of the church college.

By Dr. Roy A. Cheville

RECENTLY A FRIEND in my church put this frank question to me, "Don't you think prayer meetings are outmoded?" The phrasing of the query indicated he had made up his mind. A sentence that begins, "Don't you think?" is really not an inquiry: it is a request for agreement with an implied opinion. The word "outmoded" also carries the attitude of back-number styles. Taken that way, our concern might be for some new-look meetings. My friend, however, was no faultfinder, no sour cynic. He was concerned with the effective development of our people. I think he had been on the prayer meeting sidelines for quite some time. In fact, he had not even been near the playing field, let alone in the ranks of onlookers or participants. He was carrying a picture of a few scattered meetings, several of them from childhood days.

My friend seemed to expect me to agree with him. Here, however, was a question that could not be answered with a "Yes" or a "No." Many of our most important investigations are that way. Here is about what I said, "Perhaps. The time may come when the prayer meeting as we have known it may no longer serve our people in these times. Yet there has been something that has happened in our prayer meetings that we cannot afford to lose. It is something that is essential to the vitality of our movement. Lose that, and we are a dead church. Whether this happens in a prayer meeting or elsewhere does not matter. The main thing is that we experience it and that we experience it in a wholesome way. Let's give some thought to what this is and how it can best be cultivated in modern conditions. Maybe the prayer meeting will go, but this vital group experience must be kept alive."

THAT QUESTION OF PURPOSE

My co-workers smile and associate one word with me when we get into formulating programs and arranging meetings. It looks as if I shall keep on using it until I find a word that speaks with clearer meaning. That word is "objectives." It insists that I have in mind some purpose for holding a meeting. And that purpose is to be visioned in terms of what is to happen in the lives of persons through this specific activity. It states to us who direct meetings what we expect the participants to experience that will make a difference, that enlarges their spiritual development. This implies, of course, that I have some idea of the kind of person God wants them to become. Since personal growth is a social experience, this program will involve "togetherness with God." Such an approach precludes announcements of "prayer meeting next Wednesday night as usual." It discounts platitudinous themes such as "love" and "faith." It thinks of "love" as an experience in the lives of the persons of this congregation in terms of their specific life situations. There is difference between a junior meeting that talks about "love" and one that interprets this so as to prevent cliques and cattishness in everyday life.

Over and over again comes the question, "Where do I find these objectives?" Let's be honest and say there is no standard book in which they can be listed. Publications can offer suggestions but they cannot take the place of local leadership. Out of the life of the people, out of their calling to saintly growth, phrased in their setting will come the goals and the themes that can insure vitality. On the college campus, for instance, one Wednesday evening of this month we are holding "sectional" meetings. It is likely that nowhere else in the church would there be place for this. Students from the southern mission join to consider returning this summer to their home field. Likewise those of the northwest meet, and so on. If these meetings link up with life, they will service the youth of these several areas. Someone has to be conversant with all this.

As much a part of Graceland College as the "Ad" Building, the hill-top, and the lilac garden, is Dr. Roy A. Cheville. Notable for his sympathetic understanding of young people and their problems, he has written their songs, organized their prayer meetings, and helped them to relate their intellectual development to their spiritual growth for almost a generation. . . . He took his Bachelor of Philosophy degree at the University of Chicago, 1922; his Bachelor of Divinity in 1935; and the Doctor of Philosophy degree in 1942, with the thesis, "The Latter Day Saints and their Changing Relationship to the Social Order." . . . He is chairman of the Social Science Department at Graceland, Director of Religious Activities, and of lyceum programs, counselor to students on marriage and the family, and a friend of the young person in need of help at all times.

THESE THINGS ARE STILL NEEDED

It is stimulating, sometimes disconcerting to talk to a nonmember visitor about our prayer meetings. We need to allow for the fact that he cannot appreciate them until he lives with our people. Last fall a student of another faith attended an early prayer meeting on the campus. He asked of a friend, "What's the idea? I don't get it." He had never seen and heard Christians rise and speak as they did, with such frankness, with such fervency. I took that simple question to myself, "What's the idea?" I became aware that we need to keep asking ourselves what we are seeking to accomplish. So I went over our long story of "social services," "prayer meetings," "testimony circles," for we have used varied terminologies, and asked what we have been wanting to experience. Here is about what I concluded:

1. Sense of brotherly togetherness in a common endeavor.
2. Assurance of the divinity of "the work" and of its enduring value.
3. Personal fitness and conviction of personal worth in the sight of God and his people.
4. Inspiration and motivation to live the saintly way of life.
5. Clarification of individual and group goals and stewardships.
6. Extension of our sights and enlargement of our insights about the nature and work of God and of his church.
7. Rapport with God and revelation of his will.

These things the occasional visitor would scarcely be aware of, let alone understand. I saw them as indispensable achievements in our common life. Then I looked to the meeting my nonmember friend had attended and asked if they had happened there. I could answer, "Yes, to a degree." When a youth from Utah, the only student from that state, and a young man from Texas, and a girl from England spoke in succession, my heart searched out to encompass them all. The radius of my world of brotherhood increased. When a youth from Detroit told how academic learning was hard for him and he wanted our help so he could increase his competency, I found him included in my circle of prayer. That was at the first of the year and we were talking about the objectives for our coming to the campus. Of course we did not achieve the fullness of our possibilities but something of quality did happen in our lives.

ORDERS ARE SECONDARY

Once in a university I was attending, a committee worked on refining the devotions of the chapel program. A liturgical service was drawn up. There were responsive readings, choral introits, and so on. But attendance did not increase. It fell off. The fixed form was not adaptable to changing conditions. We have resisted this kind of formal service, yet sometimes we have fallen into a pattern of prayer meeting procedure that is about as inelastic. There is a scripture reading, a "season of prayer," an "opening talk" as if these were requirements. We even tend to associate a certain atmosphere with worship. Music on the piano or organ tends to be soft and even mournful, if it is to be the prelude to a prayer service. Yet there are times when the joyous atmosphere, the triumphant spirit need the full organ or the fortissimo chorus. All this is trying to say that the order of service is secondary to the purpose and mood of the meeting. We can have no single prayer meeting pattern in our world of such varied human needs. Wanted are the prophetic souls that will be sensitive to the spirit of the multitudinous slants of our religious life.

WE'VE BEEN SAYING "FELLOWSHIPS"

Some ten or more years ago I became aware that the term "prayer meeting" was not quite describing what was wanted in our Wednesday evening meetings. Praying was only one feature. The term "fellowship" more nearly described the communion and comradeship we were seeking to realize. The term "prayer meeting" carried an unattractive connotation to many a youth. I would not quibble over a word, but if one word proves more serviceable than another, let's use it. After all, it is the wholesomeness and serviceability that matters.

Using another term does not solve all the problems. No branch has more diversity than our campus congregation. Some students are analytical and want a critical approach. Others shun the very appearance of inquiry. Some see their faith as the very core of their entire living; others would like it to be a veneer or a dressing that does not interfere with weekday activities. Some want the church to give the answers; others shy from such. We must search, therefore, for the common interests and bonds that will make fellowship possible and vital. Isn't this the heart of the prayer meeting purpose?

WAS THIS A PRAYER MEETING?

It was Wednesday evening, September 17, 1947. This was the time for the first midweek meeting of the college year. The organ was playing missionary hymns as four young married couples and the leaders of the meeting came to the platform. We sang, "Men of God, Go Take Your Stations." Each of the eight young persons spoke—the Frank Frys, the Albert Scherers, the Glen Johnsons, the Gene Theys. In two weeks they would be sailing from New York for the European fields. A student from Britain, and a staff member who had been with

(Continued on page 22.)

OPEN THE DOOR and Let Him Come Into the Classroom

By RUSSELL TOOZE

RELIGION HAS A very definite place in our modern educational philosophy. The social, educational, economic, and religious phases of our life cannot be segregated in a democracy. Learning, the American Way, involves all of these factors simultaneously.

A few prominent citizens throughout our beloved country publicly denounce the toleration of religious teachings in the nation's public schools. They contend that the first amendment to the Constitution of the United States forbids incorporating religious courses in the educational curriculum of city, county, or state institutions of learning. This is a malicious assertion based upon opinion, not facts. No straight-thinking person can draw a single inference from Amendment I of the Federal Constitution which is in opposition to giving public school children religious training. The truth of the matter is that no article, section, or amendment of our constitution specifically forbids or even warns against offering religious instruction in educational plants. The only declaration pertaining to religion made by our forefathers in the Federal Constitution is: "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion." This statement is made in Amendment I and obviously means that a national or universal religion shall not be made mandatory by the government of the United States. Every true American respects the foresight and judgment of the founding fathers for making a definite provision regarding this issue.

NO ONE IMBUED with the democratic spirit advocates a universal religion in the United States or anywhere in the world; although the principles of the gospel of Jesus Christ are identical no matter where they are found. All we want as teachers is the privilege (which is rightfully ours) to read the Bible to our classes; we are not asking for permission to preach to our children. Through hearing God's holy word, youngsters will become the doers of it; Satan is smart enough to know this, too. Therefore, the evil forces are fighting frantically to keep God out of education. Nevertheless, they are staging a losing battle. In spite of the split-decision recently handed down by the United States Supreme Court declaring religious instruction in a publicly-supported school to be unconstitutional, there is more of a demand than ever for Bible clubs, Bible courses, scripture reading, and released time from school for religious training programs, the reason being that the high tribunal in giving its opinion did not specifically state that it was or is unlawful to inculcate religious ideas in the minds of students or incorporate religious courses in the curriculum of any educational institution. It merely decided that the one case brought up for judgment from a state supreme court was unconstitutional. Technically, those deciding on the case reversed themselves in the opinion when they declared that their decision did not apply generally to all public school systems. Consequently, the religion-versus-public-schools question stands right where it did before the United States Supreme Court handed down its recent decision in the Illinois case (School Board versus Atheist), except for the one school system reprimanded.

IT IS MOST gratifying to know that California has an educational committee at work preparing a bill for presentation to the state legislature, which, if passed, would make scripture-reading in the public schools (possibly an interpretation) mandatory. But regardless of the final content of this bill, it will stress spiritual values. Those acquainted with California educators know that when they get behind a piece of legislation, it passes by no mean majority (for example, proposition 3—state appropriation for education). Outstanding school systems are making definite plans for the emphasis of spiritual values in the course of study, although last spring many school boards banished the released time program for religious training. The main reason given for such action was that it conflicted with the regular day school schedule. Many civic and religious leaders thought this a mistake, but were defeated in their attempt to keep the part-time (one to three hours a week) religious instruction program from being enforced. The opponents of this plan become ruthless in their attack when they think that Bible is to be instituted as a course of study in the public schools.

A large city school system in southern California adopted a part-time experimental religious training plan for the 1946-1947 school year. At the close of the second semester, the project was terminated by the Board of Education (only one member dissenting). This was a young Christian gentleman who realized the true value of at least exposing children to the teachings of Christ. Those voting against the measure claimed that releasing pupils from classes for religious instruction interrupted the general school schedule. Which, do you think, is more important — arithmetic, English, physical education, geography, or Christ? Why terminate an experiment of such importance at the end of only one school year (eight, nine, or ten months)? Most educational plans of an experimental nature have a duration of from two to five years. The experiment in Intercultural Relations in this same system is being conducted for three years. Strange, isn't it, that this project is so much more important than the experiment in religious values? This is typical of hundreds of similar cases throughout the United States. In connection with this example, it is interesting to note that a Jewish rabbi and Catholic bishop were the only two clergymen who had the courage to see the fight for religious training of children through to a semi-finish. It may be uplifting to others with like courage and faith to know that these valiant men have not been completely subdued yet.

A controversy of this nature is never settled in a democracy until the people cast their ballots. Let me give you a specific occurrence, then you be the judge as to how this particular incident (and others like it) will come out. The Gideons received permission to distribute New Testament Bibles to all of the children who wanted them throughout the previously mentioned school system. In every class, the students asked for one of these beautiful little pocket Testaments. In large west coast schools, the classes are very cosmopolitan; many denominations as well as nationalities are represented. Reports come to us that throughout the day boys and girls read the Scriptures. Since the Bibles were passed out, we have learned by way of the grapevine that the youngsters read their New Testament while the roll is being taken as well as when classes are in session. A beautiful manifestation that the gospel is attractive to both the old and the young. Doesn't this example show that the majority of parents are God-fearing? On the basis of this happening, who do you think will win the final nod in the religion versus education controversy?

AT PRESENT the school previously discussed has under way the writing of a spiritual values program. This is an indication that the board of education has changed its views since last spring. It is also an indication that religious training is on the way into public education. I read the following announcement in a bulletin not long ago: "Rehearsal for Bible Club members will be held tonight after school in Room —. See — today if you are going to the Bible Club Rally on Saturday." Isn't this a healthy sign that children and parents are interested in religious instruction? A few schools in the nation have Bible courses incorporated in their regular curriculum. Why don't the others try it?

I mentioned before that an article was recently published in one of the California educational magazines, asserting that a special committee had been set up to formulate a bill for presentation to the state legislature which would make the introduction of the Scriptures into the course of study compulsory. Does this sound as if the United States Supreme Court has handed down a decision making religious instruction in the public schools unconstitutional? Do you think for one minute that leading educators would be writing articles in national periodicals advocating religious training of the youth of America through the public schools if it were unconstitutional? And would public schools be allowed to have Bible Clubs and courses in Bible if such were unconstitutional? Let us be sane in our reasoning and base our judgments on facts, not opinions and fancy. Enough damage is being done to the young people of our schools without our going about spreading malicious propaganda.

LATTER DAY SAINTS, by this time, ought to realize that future growth and development depend upon the youth. The survival of any organization is largely reliant upon the moral training its children are given in the public schools as well as in the church schools. Every effort should be exhausted toward establishing a permanent religious educational program in the curriculum of all publicly-financed institutions of learning. This cannot be done by sitting around talking about the problem. It will take precise and positive action on the part of every Latter Day Saint in conjunction with every other Christian worker in this country. You may rest assured that this movement will require assistance from those in our midst who are in high places in the church and public office—men and women capable of wielding a "big stick" on those with whom the future of education rests. Lip service will fail. All of us must work.

Can you think of anything more beautiful than having a Bible on every teacher's desk in the United States? And wouldn't it be fine if every teacher could pick up the Good Book and read from it every morning before starting class? Then what a thrill it would be to listen for a few minutes to personal religious experiences from the students. I cannot imagine anything more impressive than to have a few fervent prayers every morning after preliminaries have been dispensed with and class activities are about to begin for the day. God would appreciate this too.

LET THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST join the great national movement to bring religious training into the public schools. Elect men and women to educational positions who believe in Christ and live Christian lives. Schoolmen and civil service personnel have to take an oath or prove their allegiance to the United States; why not add the board of education members to the list and require that all pledge allegiance to Christ? As it is, we are conceding that the state is more important than the church. Why not put first things first? Then our children will see living examples of the truths we are trying so hard to inculcate in their minds. The best teacher is example.

It is high time that hypocrisy be wiped out of the public schools. Educators tell us that the teacher's
(Continued on page 22.)

In God's Image

By W. J. HAWORTH

MUCH GLAMOUR attaches to the family tree. Englishmen pride themselves if their forebears "came over with William the Conqueror." Americans set much store by families whose progenitors "came over on the Mayflower." Australians whose ancestors came with the First Fleet, as freemen, rather boast of it.

It is splendid to be able to trace one's family back along a clean line; but is it not a little superfluous to handle after getting into such a huddle of social groups? Some genealogical claims are at once pretentious and humorous. For instance, the Genealogical Society of New South Wales has, for inspection, a family tree claiming succession to Adam and Eve.

I believe that my family tree ranges back to Adam and Eve also, but I haven't the temerity to try to trace the line. I have a friend who claims that his family tree started in the ooze and slime of primordial seas as an amoeba, and he plays leapfrog with lemurs, apes, and other anthropoid creatures trying to trace his lineage.

Let Moses state the basis of the Adam and Eve commencement: "And I, God, created man in mine own image, in the image of mine Only Begotten created I him; male and female created I them. And I, God, blessed them and said unto them, Be fruitful, and multiply."—Genesis 1: 29, 30, Inspired Version.

Now let Professor Dendy, Doctor of Science, state the case for the amoeba beginning:

"The earliest life on the earth was confined to the beaches . . . these limited areas over which the primordial seas ebbed and flowed."

The credentials for the statement of Moses were furnished by God through revelation. If any person could create man, he would need to be almighty. Furthermore, one so powerful should be able to tell us about the task he performed. To tell us, he must reveal himself to some man. There is nothing, therefore, either unnatural or unreasonable about the claim made by Moses that God Almighty did, indeed, reveal to him the story of the creation of Adam and Eve.

WHAT OF THE AMOEBAS? Did its creator reveal this hypothetical first atom of protoplasm and the circumstances in which he created it? Oh, no! According to evolutionists, the amoeba just chanced to come alive on a slimy seashore. What was it made of? Its protagonists do not tell us; but science tells us that all life, animal and vegetable, has its basis in protoplasm. I'll give you the scientific data for that; but in passing let me ask: Which would be the more difficult task, for the creator of protoplasm to make Adam and Eve, and all things animate and inanimate, or to just let it lie around in the ooze and slime of some mythical seashore waiting for something to come of it?

I promised to give you the scientific data about that wonder basis of life, protoplasm. Here it is. I take it from a most interesting book entitled The Romance of Medicine by Ronald Campbell McFie, M. A., M. B., C. M.:

All living creatures, whether roses or reptiles, microbes or men, were shown to be either single cells or colonies of cells, and all cells were shown to be composed of the same material, "protoplasm." King and cabbage were shown to be made of cells, and the cells in both cases were shown to be made of identical stuff. Shakespeare had said that we are of such stuff as dreams are made of; Virchow proved that we are made of such stuff as worms are made of.

Thus did Leeuwenhoek's lens pick all life to pieces and then piece all life together. Thus did the microscope find a least common denominator for all flesh.

Sir James Paget considered the development of ova, through multiplication and division of their cells, as the greatest truth in physiology, and certainly it is the most wonderful. Picture it! Two cells, microscopic particles of protoplasm, so frail that a little sunshine, or a trace of carbolic will slay them, meet, and, lo! in the meeting a miracle is wrought; they blend into one and the one cell multiplies in a mysterious manner and becomes a man with an immortal soul. Two other cells, likewise microscopic particles of protoplasm, made of exactly the same material, meet and blend, and, lo! a lily! The one condition of development, the one condition of immortality, a meeting.—Page 99.

NOW I ASK YOU, did the Being who created this wonder plasm, need to go down into the mud and slime to commence life on earth, when everywhere around us he is making day by day, in our very presence, king and cabbage, rose and lily, out of the same material? He who can make men of this substance now should have had no trouble in creating Adam and Eve, or in creating animals, plants, and flowers.

The theory of the amoeba origin of life depends upon the hypothesis of spontaneous generation of life. Some eminent believers in it have spent years trying to prove spontaneous generation in test tubes, without the slightest success.

The Bible story of creation is linked up with the statement, "Male and female created I them." This not only applies in the realm of human beings and animals, but plants, fruits, and flowers as well. No one has ever observed a departure from this rule in the animal world.

It is just the same in the vegetable kingdom. To illustrate this, let me quote a couple of paragraphs from an article in Reader's Digest on "Pollen—Wonder Dust of Nature."

All about us in the air drifts a miraculous, potent dust of life. Invisible to the naked eye, a grain of pollen yet carries a spark of fecundating life, male life. Some pollens ride the wind to seek their fortune. You may see them rise in a golden cloud when you tease the curls of a slim alder or tap the ripe tassels of a pine. Others enslave the dusty bee as she threads her way from flower to flower. But every pollen grain is bound upon a journey, which may be an inch in length or hundreds of miles, and its destination is a female flower of the same species.

Without pollen no seed would set anywhere in the world, grass would wither, and the fruit tree put forth no fruit. For pollen flies across the ever-present chasm of death, and starts the miracle of new life.—Condensed from a book by D. C. Peattie.

THE BENEFICENT CREATOR of all things arranged for their perpetuation through male and female of each species. The egg that is not fertilized yields no chick; the female flower unfertilized by male pollen produces no fruit.

An Austrian monk, Gregor Mendel, devoted his life to pollinating peas in his cloister garden. He revealed some of the secrets of heredity through this practice. He showed that plant heredity is bound up in what scientists call "genes." For instance, an everblooming rose which had no "gene" for fragrance was pollinated from a rose that did have a "gene" for fragrance but none for everblooming. The result was an everblooming rose that was also fragrant.

The author of the article in the Reader's Digest tells us that, by pollination, 4,000 crosses have been made between China Asters; 8,000 sorts of tulips have been produced by crossbreeding; whilst the rose leads with 15,000 experimental crosses. It will be observed that all crosses are within the same species. Truly, "male and female created I them."

Of course, the evolutionist knows of the Mendelian experiments and has made some rather startling deductions therefrom. Professor Dendy says that these experiments "speeded up our conception" of the process of evolution. Note that it was the evolutionists "conception of the process of evolution" that was speeded up, not the process of evolution itself. Upon this deduction he proclaims, "The Darwinian theory of gradual changes has given place to one of little jumps. Evolution is no longer a tortoise but a hare."

He then cites Professor Huxley as declaring that all animal and plant life has the common basis of protoplasm. We agree that queen and cauliflower, lamb and lily are indeed made of the same basic ingredient—protoplasm. What the evolutionist does not tell you is that there are in each two kinds of plasm—germ plasm and body plasm. It is in the germ plasm that the "gene" of heredity resides. As we have quoted already, the male germ in pollen is carried across the everpresent chasm of death and in uniting with the female germ in the flower, the miracle of new life is re-enacted.

THOUGH AN evolutionist, Professor Dendy, frankly admits in a lecture: "Whatever may have happened in the far-distant past, at the present day, as far as we can see, every living thing is the product of some pre-existing living thing. The relation of parent and child holds good throughout the whole organic world."

Just so. I have mentioned the two kinds of plasm—body plasm and germ plasm. While in every species of animal and plant life, body plasm is substantially the same, there is a sharp difference between the germ plasm of male and female. Each has its one "gene" or heredity. It is no idle tale when we say that a boy has a "yen" for a girl, or vice versa.

Professor Morrison states that the "genes" of heredity are so nonspatial that all the "genes" of animal and plant life could be placed in a thimble. To me, that means that they are spiritual.

The Bible informs us that all life was created spiritually before it was given a physical being. Perhaps it is this spiritual entity that dominates the germ plasm and gives quality to the "gene" of heredity.

The amoeba, creature of evolutionary hypothesis, cannot be proved to be at the root of any family tree. Even so ardent a champion as Professor Dendy has to concede that "the day draws ever nearer when we shall have presented to us a complete reconstruction of man's development from his remote ancestors."

The discovery of the neolithic man and the Java bones is regarded by Dr. Dendy as "links in the chain of evolutionary development." Just why should they be so viewed? The fact that Adam and Eve lived six or seven thousand years ago does not preclude the possibility of people having lived upon this very globe before them.

It is believed that the earth has been inhabited a number of times, destroyed a number of times, and made over a number of times. This accounts for the fossilized remains of men, animals, and plants found by geologists in various strata of rock. But your family tree commenced with Adam and Eve. Perhaps it is only a protoplasmic relation that exists between us and pre-Adamic races. Possibly protoplasm is one of the eternal elements. At least, we may assume that it is composed of some of the eternal elements such as oxygen, hydrogen, and nitrogen.

WHAT IS THE AMOEBA? Dr. Annandale says it is "The generic name of certain microscopic protozoa, one of which is common in our fresh water ponds and ditches. It consists of a gelatinous mass, and from continually altering its shape received this as well as its former name, Proteus anamaculae."

So, the amoeba is a microscopic protozoa. And what is a protozoa? Annandale again tells us: "A subkingdom including the most lowly organized members of the animal kingdom, and which may be defined to be animals composed of a nearly structureless jelly-like substance without a definite body cavity or trace of a nervous system."

The amoeba are thus seen to be very common, made of the same substance as all living things. They are abundant in our fresh water ponds and streams. Do they reproduce? If so, what do they reproduce? Man has been able to observe them throughout the centuries. Where is there a record that an amoeba ever changed into anything else? Presently I shall prove that it cannot.

Was the amoeba created or did it evolve spontaneously? In 1905, a learned gentleman named J. P. Burke of the Cavendish Laboratory claimed that he would soon give to the world evidence of spontaneous generation in a test tube. Time has demonstrated the futility of Mr. Burke's claim. God alone can create life, and biology has demonstrated that he has limited the reproduction of life to species of pre-existent life.

Upon this very point, let me read to you a scientific statement taken from the Sun, of October 28, 1947:

WHAT IS REPRODUCTION

Only living things can produce from their own bodies new members of their species.

This activity is reproduction.

The child, the chicken, and the colt grow up to look like their parents.

The plant produces seeds; if we put these seeds in the ground they grow up into plants that resemble the original plant. Even the one-celled amoeba reproduces its species.

Nonliving things cannot take part in this activity.

These then, are the ways in which a living thing differs from one that is not alive:

Its cells are filled with protoplasm. It can draw nourishment from the things that surround it. It can produce new members of its species.

The members of this family fall into two great groups—animals and plants.

We learn from this scientific question and answer that all living things including the amoeba may reproduce their own species. Outside of this limit, they can produce nothing.

THE DARWINIAN theory of evolution commenced with the hypothesis of the amoeba that changed to something else, and by natural selection and chance variations, life progressed along a certain line until at an uncertain point, the lemurs branched off from the parent trunk, and man made another branch.

If this were so, all life would be in a transitional stage, and we should be witnessing stupendous changes right along the line. No such thing has been observed and recorded in human history.

Darwin's reply to this most obvious truth is that transition and extinction go hand in hand. Rather lame, isn't it? The amoeba is still in existence, producing only amoebae; the lemurs and anthropoid apes are all with us, and each reproduces only its own kind. That is the inexorable law of life. Only the "missing" link of Darwin is missing.

Pollinations may produce changes in characteristics, but such changes are limited to species. You cannot successfully pollinate a carnation with rose pollen; and the same truth holds good throughout the entire vegetable and animal kingdoms.

It is the spiritual side of the great issues involved in this discussion that tells against the materialist. It is a fact that all forms of life were created spiritually before the physical creation. God is the Father of the spirits of all flesh, and in these spirits are the "genes" which dominate heredity.

Genesis tells us that plants, herbs, beasts, fishes—in fact all kinds of living things come within the category, "male and female created I them." That is true which will work, and this truth must be self-evident to all of my readers.

Professor Dendy himself has furnished us with an admission that this is so. Permit me to restate this admission:

Whatever may have happened in the far-distant past, at the present day, as far as we can see, every living thing is the product of some pre-existing living thing. The relation of parent and child holds good throughout the whole organic world.

ARE YOU WORRIED because someone has told you that science favors evolution? Did you ever ask which branch of science asserts it? Biology, an exact science, rejects it, recognizing that whoever made them male and female is responsible for reproduction in every kind of life. The fact is that science, as such, makes no pronouncement on the subject. Evolution is merely the expression of thoughts which some scientists have given to the world.

My advice is, "Prove all things; hold fast to that which is good." Let there be many windows to your soul. The narrow pane of one poor creed cannot catch the radiant rays of truth. If you are not satisfied with what you have read here, study it out for yourself, and in your studying, give the Standard Books of the church first place.

As you read and study, remember that God has promised, "If any man lack wisdom, let him ask of God, who giveth liberally to all men and upbraideth not, and it shall be given him."

To man was given dominion over the beasts of the fields, the earth, and sea, and all that in them is, because he was God's signature placed at the end of his creation. Of all creation, he is the only being capable of thinking the thoughts of God after Him. You can do this if you ask him for the mental and spiritual wisdom and power. You belong to the race of man created in God's image.

How to Help Your Child Grow Up

by Angelo Patri

First Aid for Parents

Because he genuinely loves children, Angelo Patri is certainly the best-loved world authority on child care and one of the wisest. This invaluable book on every phase of child training is only

$4

Herald Publishing House

Independence, Missouri

Other Sheep I Have Which Are Not of This Fold

The Story of the Book of Mormon

By ROY WELDON

PART IV

The Good Shepherd Establishes a Fold (Hebrews) in America

And other sheep I have, which are not of this fold; them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice; and there shall be one fold, and one shepherd.—John 10: 16.

In the previous article, we gave consideration to evidence from the Bible that the Shepherd of Israel led the flock of Joseph to America. We found that the Bible promised to Joseph a special land, a promised land (Deuteronomy 33: 13-16; Genesis 49: 22-26), a land abounding in precious things. This promised land was to be "afar off," "across the sea," and "unto the utmost bound of the everlasting hills." All this involved a great migration or movement of a colony of people from ancient Israel to America. Before giving direct consideration to archaeological evidence that the Shepherd of Israel established a fold (Hebrew social order) in ancient America, let us examine some of the American Indian origin legends.

Mr. Paul Radin says, "The Mexicans came from Aztlan. They carried with them an idol called Huitzilopuchli. They affirm that it was this idol that had commanded them to leave the country, promising them that they would be rulers and chiefs of all the provinces which had been settled by the other six tribes; of a land greatly abounding in gold, silver, precious stones, feathers, rich shawls, and every costly thing conceivable. Thus did the Mexicans set out just as the Children of Israel had done in search of the promised land taking with them their idol enclosed in an ark made of rushes just as the others had taken with them their ark of the covenant. They took with them four principal priests who made their laws, instructed them in their rites and sacrifices, etc. They traveled with their ark wherever their idol bade them go."¹

Mr. Radin says the Mexicans came from Aztlan. Mr. Baldwin quotes from E. G. Squier: "In the map of their migrations presented by Gemelli, the place of the origin of the Aztecs is designated by the sign of water (Atl standing for Aztlan), a pyramidal temple with grades, and near these a palm tree."²

We shall soon give consideration to the pyramidal temple with grades, as one of the signs of the origin of the Aztecs. Another symbol of the origin of the Aztecs is the palm tree. Concerning this palm symbol, Mr. Baldwin says, "In history Jerusalem has been sometimes referred to as the city of Palms. In I Kings 6: 29-36, the walls of Solomon's Temple are described as being decorated with palm trees carved in wood and overlaid with gold."³

Concerning the origin legends of the Maya Quiches (Guatemala), Lewis Spence says, "The truth is that the conditions of migration undergone by the Maya were similar to those described in the Scriptures."⁴

According to Mr. Nadaillac, the people of Yucatan believed that their ancestors had come from the East, across a great body of water.⁵

A Hebrew Temple in America

Did the Shepherd of Israel establish a fold for his sheep here in America? If he did, the first evidence we should look for will be a temple of Hebrew design. Solomon's Temple at Jerusalem was the center of the Good Shepherd's fold in the Old World. We have also a second strong reason to look for a temple of Solomon in the New World. The "Stick of Joseph" (Book of Mormon) which contains the record of the Good Shepherd's dealings with the flock he led to America contains the story of the erection of a temple in Peru after the manner of Solomon's Temple. "And I, Nephi, did build a temple; and I did construct it after the manner of the temple of Solomon . . . and the workmanship thereof was exceeding fine."—2 Nephi 4: 22-26.

Solomon's Temple was composed of three courts, the innermost being called the Holy of Holies.

Hyatt Verrill says, "The great temple of Pachakamak, Peru, is composed of courts in the center which is the Holy of Holies containing the image of their great God."⁶

The Book of Mormon records that as their civilization developed, the Nephites gradually spread northward (from Peru into Central America and Mexico). It is also recorded that they continued to build temples, sanctuaries, and synagogues after the manner of the Jews (Alma 11: 22, etc.).

Mayan temples were usually composed of an outer corridor and an inner sanctuary surmounting a more or less lofty pyramid.⁷

In Bancroft's Native Races, Volume 4, page 332, is a drawing of the ground plan of the Temple of the Cross at Palenque. This drawing shows an outer court or corridor and an inner corridor and a Holy of Holies. In a tablet on the wall of the Holy of Holies was found the great symbol (cross) of the Shepherd of Israel.

Solomon's Temple was very large. The temple of the thousand columns with its courts at Chichen Itza covers five acres. The north colonade extends across the north side of the court. It is a spacious hall 463 feet long.⁸

Nephi says the temple he built (after the manner of Solomon's Temple) was of "exceeding fine workmanship."

Claudis Cranston, in a recent book, comments on the prehistoric temple of the Sun at Cuzco, Peru. "The Inca temple of the sun is in the heart of the Spanish built city of Cuzco. This is said to be the mystery building of the world, as there is no mathematician or engineer who has at his command the delicate instruments and other mechanical apparatus necessary to its plan and construction. The immense precise stone blocks of its masonry . . . of stone not present in the vicinity, were apparently transported by some unknown method to the spot. There are no modern means of performing such a feat.

"Against this background, the Inca priests clad in sumptuous ecclesiastical robes performed the sacred ceremonies of the Sun worshipers. Hundreds of these priests were housed in buildings adjacent to the Inca Temple of the Sun, exactly as hundreds of the priests were once lodged in the buildings of the ancient temple at Jerusalem."⁹

BESIDES ITS THREE COURTS, its size, and fine workmanship, the Temple of Solomon was noted for other things:

- A. Greatest collection of gold and silver known in the Old World (II Chronicles 9: 14-22).
- B. The flowers, palms, and temple utensils were made of pure gold (I Kings, chapter 6; II Chronicles, chapters 3, 4).
- C. The nails used in the Temple of Solomon were of pure gold (II Chronicles 3: 9).

Hyatt Verrill says, "Taken all together the gold of the Incas was probably the greatest accumulation of the precious metals the world has ever known prior to the time of the Conquest."¹⁰ Mr. Verrill continues: "It is obvious that the Incas, finding the temple ready made, repaired it, added to it and made use of it as their own place of worship. Although the Spaniards transformed the temple to a Christian Church, and added a deal of European embellishment and adornment to it, yet the greater portion of the structure still remains that of the prehistoric unknown inhabitants of Peru.

"Architecturally, this Temple of the Sun is one of the most remarkable buildings of the entire world. It is built of immense blocks of amazingly fitted stone, no two of which are alike in size or shape, but which are so accurately designed and cut that the circular interior with its radii is mathematically and geometrically perfect. . . .

"In the days when the Incas held sway, this temple presented a sight which would have made Aladdin's cave look tawdry by comparison. The walls, outside and inside, were completely covered with plates of burnished gold. The gardens were filled with trees, shrubs, and plants of silver and gold. Among the leaves and branches of precious metals were birds, animals, and insects of gold and silver, and, even the fountains, the tools and the implements of the gardener's trade were of the same precious metals. . . ."—Ibid., 302, 303.

"The woodwork of the temple of the sun at Pachacamac was fastened together with gold nails and when, at Pizarro's orders, these were removed, they were found to weigh more than 32,000 ounces, roughly a value of over half a million dollars in our money."—Ibid., page 291.

The Law of Moses

We have already discovered that the Bible, the Book of Mormon, and Indian traditions all indicate that the Shepherd of Israel led some of his sheep of the flock of Joseph to the new world. The Bible and Book of Mormon agree that this "remnant escaped from Jerusalem" just before Nebuchadnezzar destroyed the city (about 600 B.C.). The children of Israel of that day practiced the Mosaic Law.

The Temple at Jerusalem and the Mosaic Law went hand in hand. They were two parts of a whole. Together they comprised the Shepherd's fold for ancient Israel. If the Shepherd of Israel established half of his fold here (Hebrew temples), then it is logical to look for evidence of the prehistoric existence of the other half (the law of Moses).

The Book of Joseph (Book of Mormon) tells us the ancient Americans kept the law of Moses.

"And we did observe to keep the judgments, and the statutes, and the commandments of the Lord, in all things, according to the law of Moses."—2 Nephi 4: 14.

"The prophets, and the priests, and the teachers, did labor diligently, exhorting with all long suffering the people to diligence, teaching the law of Moses, and the intent for which it was given."—Jarom 1: 24.

H. H. Bancroft says, "Circumcision was practiced upon all Aztec male children."¹¹

Theodore A. Willard says, "It is a curious fact that the ancient Itza-Mayas had many habits and customs similar to those of the Jews. Many have remarked that some of the faces carved on the walls and stones are of a Jewish caste. . . . Both the Itza-Mayas and the Jews venerated one God, of whom they made no image. Both worshipped toward the East; and both burned incense in the four directions. The confession of sins and atonement were common to both peoples. Both believed in devils. The Maya like the Jew was punctilious about washing and in making ablutions."¹²

Concerning the discovery of the great stone heads of La Venta in 1946 (Mexico), Mr. Miguel Covarubbias, in a book just off the press, says, "On stele C two impressive chieftains stand face to face, surrounded by lesser men suspended in space. The face of the man on the left is smashed, but the other is untouched and represents a stern, fully bearded man with an enormous aquiline nose, totally different from the flat nosed people of Le Vanta. . . . A personage with surprisingly pronounced semitic features."¹³

Altars for sacrifice are a common discovery in unearthing the temples of ancient America.

In the National Geographic for July, 1931, is a picture of what is reputed to be the largest and finest altar yet discovered (found at Uaxactun, Guatemala).

The Book of Mormon says, "And they also took of the firstlings of their flocks, that they might offer sacrifice and burnt offerings, according to the law of Moses."—Mosiah 1: 30.

Concerning the similarities between the Mosaic and Aztec systems, Lord Kingsborough says, "There was much in connection with the sacrifices that was common to Mexicans and Jews."¹⁴

The Mexicans applied the blood of sacrifices to the same uses as the Jews; they poured it upon the earth, they sprinkled it; they marked persons with it, and they smeared it upon walls and other inanimate things (Ibid., page 154).

No one but the Jewish High Priest might enter the Holy of Holies. A similar custom obtained in Peru (Ibid., page 156).

Both Mexicans and Jews regarded certain animals as unclean and unfit for food (Ibid., page 273).

It was customary among the Mexicans to eat the flesh of the sacrifices of atonement (Ibid., page 176).

Mr. C. Reginald Enoch says, "Cloths of vicuna wool, which were interwoven with gold and silver filaments (Peru), have come down to us today in all their primitive freshness. . . . An art which passed in remote times from Babylon to other cities and which is first mentioned as employed in the Ephods of Aaron."¹⁵

The Jubilee Year

According to the law of Moses (Leviticus, chapter 25), the Hebrews made a new start every half century. This was called the Year of Jubilee. Mortgages and debts were canceled and all the land returned to the original tribal inheritance. It was a time of celebration and rejoicing.

Thus far we have found evidence of the existence in ancient America of much that the Good Shepherd had in his fold at Jerusalem in Old Testament times. Let us see if there is evidence that the Year of Jubilee was known in ancient America. Mr. Jose Jiminez Gomez says, concerning the Aztec calendar stone, "The snake scales are supposed to represent centuries of 52 years and on the upper side of the body of the serpents can be seen blazes of fire which means that at the beginning of every century they kindled the new fire."¹⁶

In the Mexican National Museum in Mexico City there are numerous bundles (stone) of roped years. Manly P. Hall says concerning these bundles of roped years, "The Mexicans had periods composed of what they called the binding of years. These bindings contained fifty-two years and constituted a cycle."¹⁷

Concerning the volador, a religious ceremony of the Totonacs of Mexico, Dr. Alfonso Caso says, "The four macaws descending from the poll and taking thirteen turns are symbols of the 52 years of the Indian cycle, that is to say, of the movement of the sun in 13x4 which gives the 52 years figure."¹⁸

The Cherubim in America

The cherubim were winged figures and were a part of the ark and tabernacle of the Mosaic Law.

And he made the mercy seat of pure gold. . . . And he made two cherubims of gold. . . . And the cherubims spread out their wings on high, and covered with their wings over the mercy seat, with their faces one to another; even to the mercy seatward were the faces of the cherubim.—Exodus 37: 6, 7, 9.

Stephen D. Peet says, "Many copper plates representing men with wings issuing from their shoulders have been found."¹⁹

Patriarchy, Geneology, and Totemism

Patriarchy, genealogy, and totemism were all part of the Old Testament system and found within the Good Shepherd's fold in ancient Israel. Stephen D. Peet says, "The prevalence of Totemism in the Old Testament is shown by the dying words of Jacob, for in them he described the animal figures which were shown on the escutcheon of each tribe. The lion on the escutcheon of Judah, the serpent on that of Dan, the wild ass on that of Issachar, and the bird on that of Naphtali.

"How the patriarch came to use this language is a mystery. . . . Whatever the explanation is, the passage furnishes a good illustration of a custom which was common among the uncivilized races, and is still prevalent among the aborigines of America; namely, the custom of giving the names of animals and plants to children and making these serve as emblems of the clan or tribe.

"Herrera remarks of the Mayas, "They were wont to observe their pedigrees very much and therefore thought themselves all related and were helpful one to another. They did not marry any who bore the same name as their father . . . this shows that the patriarchy existed among the Mayas'"²⁰

There are a number of theories as to the origin of the American Indian (Mongoloid, Hebrew, Phœnician, Egyptian, Indigenous, etc.). Concerning the Hebrew origin theory, Mr. Bancroft says, "The theory that the Americans are of Jewish descent has been discussed more minutely and at greater length than any other. Its advocates, or at least most of them who have made original researches, are comparatively few, but the extent of their investigations and the multitude of parallels they adduce in support of their hypothesis, exceed by far anything we have yet encountered."²¹

The Theory of Egyptian Origin

The British scientist, F. A. Mitchell Hedges, says, "The modern theory is that the Mayas appeared in Central America sometime between 1,000 B.C. and the Christian era, and that their civilization was derived from Egypt, from which they came across the vast Pacific. The points of resemblance between the Maya and the Egyptian civilizations are too numerous and peculiar to be explained by some imaginary impulse in all prehistoric people to develop along the same line."²²

The question may well be asked: if the Shepherd of Israel led the flock of Joseph to America in 600 B.C., and established a fold for his sheep here, why is it that both Egyptian and Hebrew evidences are met with? Joseph was governor of the land of Egypt. He was second to Pharaoh himself. He married an Egyptian woman. His sons were raised in Egypt.

The Bible says, "Now the sojourning of the children of Israel who dwelt in Egypt was 430 years."—Exodus 12: 40. As slaves in the land of Egypt, the children of Israel built pyramids, obelisks, and inscribed hieroglyphics on Egyptian monuments.

The Prophet Nephi in the very first verse in the Book of Mormon says, "I make a record in the language of my father which consists of the learning of the Jews and the language of the Egyptians.—1 Nephi 1: 1.

Nephi was the prophet who wrote the first chapter in the "Stick of Joseph" (Book of Mormon). Mormon and his son Moroni wrote the last chapters. The "Stick of Joseph" (Ezekiel 37: 16-22) was named after the Prophet Mormon.

Mormon says, "And now behold, we have written this record according to our knowledge in the characters, which are called among us the reformed Egyptian, being handed down and altered by us, according to our manner of speech."—Mormon 4: 98.

The Egyptian Tau or letter T has been found at Palenque, Copan, and in Peru. Mr. Nadaillac says of the palace at Palenque, "Numerous masonry niches in the wall merit special attention on account of their resemblance to the letter T or rather the Egyptian Tau."²³

THE GREATEST EGYPTIAN DISCOVERY in America is not pyramids, stelæ (obelisks), hieroglyphics, or mummies. It is the Aztec calendar stone. It is a huge round stone, twelve feet wide, four feet thick, and weighs 57,000 pounds. It is on exhibit in the Mexican National Museum in Mexico City. It has twenty months of eighteen days each, with five complementary days and six hours for the measurement of a year's time. This is similar to the calendar possessed by the ancient Egyptians.

Stephen D. Peet says, "The year in common use, called the vague year, began at different times of the true year through a long cycle. Here we find the analogy between the Egyptian and the American systems very startling."²⁴

The works of H. H. Bancroft touch on this point, too: "I have also recognized in your memoir on the division of time among the Mexican nations, compared with those of Asia, some very striking analogies between the Toltec characters and institutions observed on the banks of the Nile. Among these analogies there is one worthy of attention. It is the use of the vague year of 365 days, composed of equal months, and five complementary days, equally employed at Thebes and Mexico, a distance of 3,000 leagues. Now, it is remarkable that the same solar year of 365 days, six hours, adopted by nations so different, and perhaps still more remote in their state of civilization than in their geographical distance, relates to a real astronomical period, and belongs peculiarly to the Egyptians. The fact of the intercalation (by the Mexicans) of 13 days every cycle, that is the use of a year of 365 days and a quarter, is proof that it was either borrowed from the Egyptians, or that they had a common origin."

Barbaric Religions

The barbaric religious systems that led to the downfall of ancient Israel were Sun Worship (Jeremiah 8: 2; 7: 18, etc.), human sacrifice and serpent worship (II Kings 18: 4). These are the three abominations that wrecked the Good Shepherd's fold in ancient Israel and scattered the sheep on a thousand hills.

We have found abundant evidence that the Shepherd of Israel set up his fold in ancient America. Now we are confronted with remarkable evidence that the same idolatrous abominations that wrecked the fold in ancient Israel wrecked the fold in ancient America. Stephen D. Peet says, "The most remarkable fact which is brought out by this study, is that the aboriginal religions of America correspond to the earliest forms of religions which prevailed in the East. The system of sun worship which prevailed among the agricultural tribes of the gulf states closely resembled that which existed in Egypt and Babylonia at the opening of history and many of the same customs were observed."²⁵

Mr. Peet continues, "The significance of these different works (mounds) will be understood if we compare the rites and ceremonies of the sun worshippers of this district with those which prevailed in Syria and Phœnicia in Old Testament times."—Ibid., page 321.

The Book of Mormon history tells us that soon after the colony of Joseph arrived in America, in about 580 B.C., it divided. One group was faithful to God and kept the law of Moses (Nephites). The other group reverted back to the idols and religious vices which led to the downfall of ancient Israel. This group (the Lamanites) was cursed and their skins were darkened so there would be no inter-marriage between the white, cultured Nephites and the lazy, idolatrous Lamanites. Eventually and after the Golden Age of ancient America which followed Christ's visit here, the entire population gradually drifted away from the Good Shepherd's fold. A war of extinction broke out between the Nephites and the Lamanites, and both nations turned from the gospel of Christ to idolatry, human sacrifice, sun worship, and snake worship. "Yea, the more part of them [Nephites] had turned out of the way of righteousness, and did trample under their feet the commandments of God, and did turn unto their own ways, and did build up unto themselves idols of their gold and their silver."—Helaman 2: 146, 147, 158. "And they [Lamanites in last war] did also march against the city Teancum, and did drive the inhabitants forth out of her, and did take many prisoners, both women and children, and did offer them up as sacrifices unto their idol gods."—Mormon 2: 16.

The prophets of ancient Israel warned the people if they did not cease from worshipping the sun and moon and offering their sons and daughters up as sacrifices to the idols of Baal, that the Lord would destroy them and leave their cities desolate. When Columbus discovered America, the words of the prophets against ancient Israel could just as appropriately have been spoken against the Aztecs for human sacrifice to idol gods or against the Mayas for snake rites (II Kings 18: 4) and against the Incas for sun rites.

Jeremiah says, "Because they have forsaken me, and have estranged this place, and have burned incense in it unto other gods. They have built also the high places of Baal to burn their sons with fire for burnt offerings unto Baal. . . . Therefore, behold the days come, saith the Lord, that this place shall no more be called Tophet, nor the Valley of the son of Hinnom, but the valley of slaughter. And I will make this city desolate, and a hissing; everyone that passeth thereby shall be astonished and hiss because of all the plagues thereof."—Chapter 19: 4, 5, 8.

"And I will make Jerusalem heaps, and a den of dragons; and I will make the cities of Judah desolate, without an inhabitant."—Jeremiah 9: 11.

An Array of Sobering Facts

The facts indicate that the God of Israel established his fold in America. His sheep prospered and enjoyed a Golden Age as long as they listened to the voice of the Good Shepherd. The day came (third century A.D.) when they turned away from their Shepherd's fold and reverted back to the abominations which destroyed the fold in ancient Israel. Now the fold the Good Shepherd established in America is desolate and the words of Jeremiah to Jerusalem and the cities of Judah are startlingly applicable.

Chan Chan, Kabah, and Sayil are "desolate without an inhabitant." Piedras Negras, Tikal, and Uaxactun are "desolate" and a den of dragons." Monte Alban, Teotihuacan, Copan, and Chichen Itza, glorious cities of ancient America, are "heaps" and "an astonishment to all that pass by."

Now, from the pages of the Book of Mormon, the warning comes to us AND TO OUR CITIES.

And now we behold the decrees of God concerning this land, that it is a land of promise, and whatsoever nation shall possess it, shall serve God, or they shall be swept off when the fulness of his wrath shall come upon them.

And the fulness of his wrath shall come upon them when they are ripened in iniquity; for behold, this is a land which is choice above all lands; wherefore he that doth possess it shall serve God, or shall be swept off; for it is the everlasting decree of God.

And this cometh unto you, O, ye Gentiles, that ye may know the decrees of God, that ye may repent, and not continue in your iniquities until the fulness come, that ye may not bring down the fulness of the wrath of God upon you, as the inhabitants of the land have hitherto done.—Ether 1: 31, 32, 34.

Warning Words of Christ From Ancient America

Yea, wo be unto the Gentiles except they repent, for it shall come to pass in that day, saith the Father, that I will cut off thy horses out of the midst of thee, and I will destroy thy chariots, and I will cut off the cities of thy land and throw down all thy strongholds:

Thy graven images I will also cut off, and thy standing images out of the midst of thee and thou shalt no more worship the works of thy hands.—3 Nephi 9: 101, 103.

¹Paul Radin, Sources and Authenticity of the History of the Ancient Mexicans, page 67.

²Baldwin, Ancient America, page 218.

³Baldwin, Ancient America.

⁴Lewis Spence, Myths of Mexico and Peru, page 152.

⁵Nadaillac, Prehistoric America, page 526.

⁶Hyatt Verrill, Scientific American, March, 1931.

⁷S. G. Morley, National Geographic, May, 1927.

⁸S. G. Morley, National Geographic, July, 1931.

⁹Claudia Cranston, Sky Gypsy, pages 281-283.

¹⁰Hyatt Verrill, Old Civilizations of the New World, page 294.

¹¹Bancroft, Native Races, Volume 3, page 371.

¹²Theodore Willard, The Lost Empires of the Itzas and Mayas, page 422.

¹³Miguel Covarrubias, Mexico South (1946), page 90.

¹⁴Lord Kingsborough, Mexican Antiquities, Volumes 6 and 8.

¹⁵C. Reginald Enoch, The Secret of the Pacific, page 224.

¹⁶Jose Jimenez Gomez, The Aztec Calendar, page 2.

¹⁷Manly P. Hall, Twelve Great Teachers, page 234.

¹⁸Dr. Alphonso Caso, Archaeological Guide Book on Mexican National Museum.

¹⁹Stephen D. Peet, Prehistoric America, the Mound Builders, Their Work and Relics, page 180.

²⁰Stephen D. Peet, Prehistoric America, Myths and Symbols, Volume 5, pages 8-35.

²¹H. H. Bancroft, Native Races, Volume 5, page 77.

²²F. A. Mitchell Hedges, London Daily Mail, March, 1924.

²³Nadaillac, Prehistoric America.

²⁴Stephen D. Peet, Prehistoric America, Volume 5.

²⁵H. H. Bancroft, Volume 5. See also Delafield, Antiquities of Ancient America, page 52.

²⁶Stephen D. Peet, Prehistoric America, Volume 5.

(All italicizing and underlining of words or phrases in the articles are by the author for emphasis.)

Questions, suggestions, or criticisms will be welcomed and responded to by the author. His address is R. F. D. 5, Warrensburg, Missouri.

HAILEYVILLE, E. OKLAHOMA.—

The work in this group is steadily growing. Our prayer meetings are of a high spiritual order. This week with lights out on account of a storm, we met by candlelight, fasting and praying for the good of the work, particularly in this place. Among the fourteen present seven prayers and fourteen testimonies were offered, six of which were from members participating for the first time, children and young people from nine to sixteen years of age. The climax came when a young man, 13, arose expressing his joy at attending, what was to him, the most wonderful meeting he had ever experienced—that of the baptism and confirmation of his brother's wife at Tulsa, Oklahoma, a few days before. From that point in the service the Spirit seemed to flow out to all the other youths to such an extent that it has, no doubt, made a permanent impression upon them.

Last week a group of our young adults and teen-agers attended the Youth's Conference at Stillwater, where we have a young couple attending college, Harvey Leon Dollins and his wife, June, the new member referred to above. All were favorably impressed with a new vision of the church because of the fine services there and the power of Brother Hayden's sermons.

Our Zion Builders' League, composed of all from four to eighty years of age, is a lively organization of about fifty members, including nonmembers. Church history is the theme of the classwork, taught by Sister W. P. Hubble, president of the organization. Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Dollins, as losing captains, entertained recently the winning group with a dinner and party. Some of the Wilburton Saints, eighteen miles away, attend our young people's services.

Two or three weeks ago, the Haileyville and the Wilburton groups met at Fanshawe, a distance of forty miles, for the regular Wednesday evening prayer service, fine in spirituality and fellowship.

All this interest, as well as prospective new membership, makes poor music to the ears of the Adversary; but we are determined he shall work no harder than we. With the unity of these people and their great desire to build up God's kingdom, some good surely must be accomplished. —ORA DOLLINS, Hartshorne, Oklahoma.

Imagination was given to man to compensate him for what he is not, and a sense of humor was provided to console him for what he is.—Wall Street Journal.

"Serve the Lord With Gladness"

By GLADYS GOULD

PERHAPS I NEVER did quite grow up. At least I am much more in sympathy with the child's viewpoint than the adult's. In working with children in the church school, I hope to help them love the Lord, his day, his house, and his creation; but I know that I have failed unless each brief half hour that they are under my care proves to be a happy, growing experience. The regular church services also may be gladsome and purposeful events for children in which they absorb the atmosphere of the prayer and preaching meetings. Unfortunately, these hours are not always made enjoyable.

Most of us have suffered with the small child who is placed in a grown-up seat with no view but the back of the seat in front, and who receives no attention save frequent scowls, head shakings, incomprehensible hushes, and threats as his restlessness increases. And when he is dragged protestingly down the aisle, and we hear his anguished wail outside and see him brought back in, tearstained, shaken with sobs, and plunked back into his dreary seat, we writhe, feel helplessly resentful, and long to give him a fair chance.

Other children are neglected, allowed to gather unsupervised in the back seats in laughing, whispering groups. They enjoy it but lose the spirit of worship and destroy it for others. Some toddlers are set free to roam noisily about the room, forming bad habits for themselves and jeopardizing the piety of the congregation.

It is not surprising that many mismanaged youngsters whose church experiences have been bitter, embarrassing, or heedless, assert their independence as soon as their years warrant it and stray away from church services. No bond has been formed to tie them there. But there are persons who have not at any age lost interest in the church. They have accepted it as an interesting, needful part of their lives—lives that radiate its influence. There must be reasons.

I LIKE TO REMEMBER the example set by an ex-schoolteacher (not a mother) who was in charge of a boy from babyhood to five years. She went to church prepared with a pocketbook filled with articles to interest a boy—a comb, mirror, pencils, pad of paper, scissors, paper punch, picture and drawing books, and puzzles. If possible, she found a seat for him by a window. When he lost interest there, she slipped him one object out of her bag. As soon as he had exhausted its possibilities, it was whisked out of sight and another substituted. When the Communion was observed, and other children were puzzled and tearful because they were passed by, this child was supplied with a small cookie to enjoy with the participants. He was occupied and contented and found always a look of love and understanding in the face of the woman who had brought him there. Now at eleven, he still enjoys church, requires no special privileges, is observant and interested.

Some mothers complain that they would get little from a sermon if they had to amuse their children through the service. One wonders what they get from a worship hour spent in chastising them.

Small ones can sometimes be helped to comprehend what "hush" means by having at home daily, very short, worship services in which they learn to bow their heads for prayer, to sing, to listen, to be quiet through a scripture reading, to whisper instead of talking out loud.

It helps to tell primary or junior folks a personal experience of the minister for the day to arouse their interest in him. Then, instead of leaving them in the rear seats, invite them to the front rows, supply them with songbooks, see that there is a teacher or parent or two in the row behind them, alert to the situation. Such efforts have aroused enthusiasm in the children and in the chorister and minister. Interest in the sermon grows if the theme is discussed at home, the parents and young folks telling what they most enjoyed. Church school lessons become alive if reviewed in the home, and if efforts are made to put them into effect in the life of the family.

Girls who have reached the giggling age and boys in their awkward, self-conscious years make good junior choir material, ushers, and offering collectors. Using them in church service ties in their interest and loyalties and gives them self-assurance.

SUCH HABITS lay a good foundation, but something more is needed that we may, young and old, join the spirit of the Psalmist in saying, "I was glad when they said unto me, let us go into the house of the Lord." What is it that brings us back eagerly week after week?

When Moses heard the words, "put off thy shoes from off thy feet; for the place whereon thou standest is holy," he knew he was in the presence of Divinity. He heard God's voice and saw his light and felt his power. And Moses hid his face in fear and awe. That he was humbled is shown by his first question in response to the mission given

(Continued on page 22.)

www.LatterDayTruth.org

- - - a home column feature - - -

Preferring One Another

By EMILY INOUYE

PEOPLE LAUGH with the telling of the story of the short, fat man who was huffing and puffing as he ran up a hill in the rear of a group of young people. Someone stopped him long enough to ask, "What's the hurry?" He replied, "You see—huff—that group of young people just going over the hill? huff—puff—Well, I am their leader!"

When I heard this story for the first time, I laughed too. Then I thought the matter through. I tried to visualize that group of young people before they started on the race. What had the leader done to draw such fine youths together? What had he said to them? What inspiration had he offered? What incentive had touched off the spark that had fired them with so much enthusiasm? They must have been together, all intent on the same goal, for the answer was, "See that group?" There was no reference made to stragglers or strays; the entire group was out front, going over the top. As I pondered over these thoughts, the story gained new significance. I saw leadership in a new light.

History points to Christ as the greatest leader of all times. God, the Father, chose Christ, his Son, as a leader because Christ offered to do his Father's will and did not seek after glory for himself. Genesis 3: 3, Inspired Version, tells us Christ said, "Father, thy will be done, and the glory be thine for ever." In this one simple sentence, we glimpse a great spirit of humility. He wanted none of the egotistical glory that sometimes accompanies leadership.

In preferring not to take this honor for himself, he showed a deep love for God, his Father; and by his offering to do his Father's will in all things, he showed a genuine love for all people. We see reflected throughout his leadership a great unselfishness, a willingness to serve with trust and confidence; a willingness to give all that he had, or that might be gained, to his Heavenly Father and to his fellow men.

AS WE READ the glowing account of this, the greatest of all leaders, we learn to love him. We are inspired to do the things he commands and are not willing to be mere followers. His example is one of preferring others and not of carrying the entire load himself. He developed leadership among his group of followers. Luke (9: 1, 2) tells us "he called his twelve disciples together, and he gave them power and authority over all devils, and to cure diseases. And he sent them to preach the kingdom of God, and to heal the sick." In Luke 10: 1 we are told "the Lord appointed other seventy also, and sent them two and two before his face, into every city and place where he himself would come." There was no jealousy on his part that these men should go before him and heal the people and do many great and marvelous things. Preferring one another, he did not try to do all of the miraculous or outstanding things himself. His leadership was so dynamic, his lessons so well taught, his examples so well set that these men were equipped with a Christlike quality of leadership. They were equipped with an ability to go ahead of him into every city and accomplish much.

All through Christ's leadership we see a spirit of great love and deep humility. These two principles were demonstrated by the example he set when he washed his disciples' feet. He did not expect more of them than he himself was willing to do. Thus in humility and love Christ set the perfect example of leadership.

WE HAVE MANY great women leaders in our branches. Their greatness lies in their Christlike quality of leadership. They are women who have been filled with a genuine love for humanity. They are women who work hand in hand with their pastors toward kingdom-building. These leaders have a competent corps of co-workers, officers, and committee women, all developing leadership ability under their encouraging supervision.

They have tolerance and confidence in their co-workers. These women are leaders who, when called upon meet emergencies, give unselfishly of their time and possessions.

The greatest thing a leader does is to share the honor of accomplishment with other women in the department. She knows her name will never be written in glowing letters upon the new pulpit or the new electric stove which she was instrumental in purchasing for the church. Her name will never go down in the history of the branch because she was responsible for the burning of the mortgage; but, the things that were accomplished under her leadership will be preserved in the branch annals as achievements of the department of women during a certain period of time.

When the time comes for a change of leadership, she will have developed within her ranks consecrated workers capable of helping others over the top. They will point to her with pride and say, "She was our leader." They will think of her as one who labored with them in humility and love, obeying the exhortation of the Apostle Paul in his letter to the Roman saints: "Be kindly affectioned one to another with brotherly love; in honor preferring one another."—Romans 12: 10.

God's Design and Man's Witness

NOTE: During the World Week of Prayer, joint services were held in Grand Valley, Ontario, by five churches: the Trinity United, Anglican, Disciples, Presbyterian, and Reorganized Latter Day Saints. The following sermon was delivered by Elder R. J. Farthing at Saint Albon the Martyr's Anglican Church.

By R. J. FARTHING

THE TWO PHASES of this subject may be illustrated by the two sides of a Canadian coin. The obverse side shows the head of a reigning sovereign, his name and title, or some other emblem of national authority. The reverse side shows the date and value of the coin. Both the head and tail of the coin are necessary to give it worth and validity.

One side of the coin proclaims the authority by which it issues from the mint, while the other indicates the value to be accorded it in business transactions among men. The obverse side typifies God's design or plan for the redemption of the souls of men, while the reverse side represents the witness or testimony of men, by which effect and validity and acceptability are given to the divine purpose among the children of men.

What, then, is the design of God? A design is an outline of an original work, a plan of a project, or a blueprint not to be deviated from without the consent of the architect. The use of the word design in our topic indicates that God has planned a work.

What is the work of God? I quote the words of God spoken to Moses: "This is my work and my glory, to bring to pass the immortality, and eternal life of man."¹

I believe that this work was planned in the courts of heaven before man was placed on the earth. The accomplishment of the work was entrusted to the master workman, Jesus Christ, who by his atoning death and glorious resurrection "hath abolished death, and brought life and immortality to light through the gospel."²

What, then, is the outline of God's design for the redemption of man from death, both temporal and spiritual?

I suggest the following as some of the distinctive and essential features of the plan of salvation:

First. An infinite and eternal atonement for man's sins has been made by the Son of God.

Second. Men must have faith in God and in the gospel proclaimed by divine authority.

Third. Men must repent of their sins and obey the gospel ordinances.

Fourth. The bodies of all men shall be resurrected, Jesus Christ being the firstborn from the dead.

Fifth. The righteous who have been justified and sanctified shall dwell with God the Father in the eternal world of glory.

IN OUR STATEMENT of the redemptive work of God, two parts of that work were mentioned: the immortality and the eternal life of man. To many, these may seem to be the same thing; but there is really a clear-cut distinction and a great difference between the two. Immortality is that undying and incorruptible state of the body after its resurrection described by Paul in his First Letter to the Corinthians.³ Eternal life, however, is a spiritual condition of rapport with the divine personages. Jesus said in his prayer, "This is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent."⁴

Eternal life is the consummation contemplated in the divine design for the willing and obedient. This determinate purpose in the divine will cannot be made ineffective. "The works, and the designs, and the purposes of God, can not be frustrated, neither can they come to naught. . . . Remember, remember, that it is not the work of God that is frustrated, but the work of men."⁵ "My word shall not return unto me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in the thing whereto I sent it."⁶

We have been dealing, up to this moment, with the obverse side of the coin, "God's design." Let us now flip the coin and look at the reverse side, "Man's witness."

The truth of God's plan for the salvation of fallen man is demonstrated when a certain central and essential fact is proved—that fact that Jesus died as an atonement for man's sins and rose again from the dead.

The resurrection of Christ from the grave and his victory over death is the most stupendous event in the history of the world. There is nothing to compare with it in ancient, medieval, or modern history. For, upon this event depends the hope of man's resurrection, the guarantee of his redemption from the bondage of sin, and the assurance of the felicity of eternal life.

A fact of such transcendent importance requires being established by well-qualified witnesses, unimpeachable testimony, and an overwhelming preponderance of evidence. Hearsay witnesses will not do. The witnesses must have seen with their own eyes and heard with their own ears.

The Almighty has not left himself without a witness.⁷ Jesus, immediately before his ascension, said to his apostles, "And ye are witnesses of these things."⁸ Indeed, "the twelve apostles are special witnesses of the name of Christ in all the world."⁹

When the apostles and other disciples numbering about one hundred and twenty were gathered at Jerusalem awaiting the Pentecostal endowment, they proceeded to choose one to take the place of the traitor Judas. Peter said: "Whereof of these men which have companied with us all the time that the Lord Jesus went in and out among us, beginning from the baptism of John, unto that same day that he was taken up from us, must one be ordained to be a witness with us of his resurrection."¹⁰ Two were found who appeared to be qualified to act as special witnesses. The lot fell upon Matthias, and he was numbered with the eleven apostles.¹¹

Peter, endowed with the Spirit's power on the day of Pentecost bodily declared to the assembled multitude, "This Jesus hath God raised up, whereof we all are witnesses."¹²

Besides the testimony of the apostles, we have that of Mary Magdalene and other women who saw their risen Lord. Paul tells us that the risen Jesus was seen of above five hundred of the brethren at once—and last of all by Paul himself in open vision on the road to Damascus.

All this direct evidence is corroborated and confirmed by the piecemeal and circumstantial evidence of the multitude who saw him crucified, the centurion who pierced his side, the soldiers who watched his tomb, and others.

As to the quality and dependability of his testimony concerning the mission of Jesus Christ, Peter tells of his experience on the Mount of Transfiguration with Jesus, Elias, and Moses. He says: "We did not follow cunningly devised fables, when we made known unto you the power and coming [second advent] of our Lord Jesus Christ, but were eyewitnesses of his majesty. . . . There came a voice to him from the excellent glory, saying, This is my beloved Son in whom I am well pleased. And this voice which came from heaven we heard, when we were with him in the holy mount."¹³

From the testimony of the apostles, the faith of the Christian Church was developed. Dr. H. T. Andrews, of Hackney and New College, London, writes:

The elementary principles which formed the basis of Christian faith and practice in the first century . . . consisted in (1) Repentance and faith in God. (2) Teaching about baptisms and the laying on of hands. (3) The doctrine of the resurrection and eternal judgment. These three groups give us . . . the minimum demands made by the Christian Church on its members.¹⁴

This was the irreducible minimum, but the goal was a maximum of truth, all truth, for the exhortation of the writer to the Hebrews was: "Let us go on to perfection."

IN THE DAYS of the early Christian Church, to accept the apostolic testimony to Christ meant to believe something about him. This belief was formulated in a baptismal confession, which by the middle of the second century took this form:

I believe in God, Father Almighty, and in Jesus Christ his Son, our Lord, born of the Holy Spirit and of Mary, the virgin, crucified under Pontius Pilate and buried, on the third day rose from the dead, ascended into heaven, sitteth at the right hand of the Father, from whence he cometh to judge both quick and dead. And I believe in the Holy Spirit, the Holy Church, the remission of sins, and the resurrection of the flesh.¹⁵

The resurrection of the body of Jesus is such a stupendous fact that it should be matched by a tremendous faith on our part. The poet, Vachel Lindsay, who lived in Abraham Lincoln's home town in Illinois, caught the spirit of this thought in the lines:

This is our faith tremendous,
Our great hope who shall scorn?
That in the name of Jesus,
The world shall be re-born.

There is a rhetorical anaphora on faith as a mainspring of action in the Letter to the Hebrews.¹⁶ It recites the faith and works of a cloud of Old Testament witnesses:

Through faith the worlds were framed.
By faith Abel offered a more excellent sacrifice.
By faith Enoch was translated.
By faith Noah prepared an ark.
By faith Abraham went out not knowing whither he went.
By faith Sarah was delivered of a child when she was past age.
By faith Abraham offered up Isaac.
By faith Isaac blessed Jacob and Esau.
By faith Jacob blessed the sons of Joseph.
By faith Joseph gave commandment concerning his bones.
By faith Moses did many wondrous things, and so did Rahab, and Gideon, and Barak, and Samson, and Jephthah, and David, and Samuel, and all the prophets.

In the New Testament era also, the saints were compassed about with a great cloud of witnesses to the power of faith.¹⁷ We have already mentioned some of those witnesses.

But every age, ours included, needs its own human witnesses, as well as the continuing witness of the Holy Spirit. Stanley Jones tells us in his book, The Christ of the Indian Road, that a certain Hindu said to him: "You are the boldest man I have ever seen. You said you had found God. I have never heard a man say that before."

Other noted witnesses for God in our modern times have written:

And now, after the many testimonies that have been given of him, this is the testimony, last of all, which we give of him, that he lives; for we saw him, even on the right hand of God.¹⁸ Therefore, having so great witnesses, by them shall the world be judged.¹⁹

THERE ARE TIMES when even the church falters in its mission, when its members cease to testify against sin in personal life, in society, in business, and in politics. How can there be a conviction of sin if there is no testimony against it? The church designed of God lives by bearing its testimony to the gospel truth and by sounding out a loud, clear call to repentance.

The witnessing church can offer no program that leaves God out. As James Reid has said: "The gospel can do little for people who will not let it do everything." There must be an awareness that it is "God with whom we have to do,"²⁰ for "against none is God's wrath kindled, save those who confess not his hand in all things."²¹ The church must continue to testify that man does not live by bread alone.

The stupendous fact of Christ's resurrection must be matched with a tremendous faith in the divine design. Such a faith results from a weight of testimony from eyewitnesses of unimpeachable veracity who have made actual contact with God. So convincing a testimony must be supported by an overwhelming logic that coincides with a personal spiritual experience. And thus the testimony of divinely chosen witnesses inspires an unshakable faith in God's plan of redemption; man's soul grips the chain of an anchor that takes hold on the verities of eternity.

In a church holding by such a faith, although there may be differences of opinion, if these differences are held in unity of purpose and desire for the good of God's work and people, they will result in helping to bring to pass a unity of understanding. We may, therefore, be encouraged and press on to the consummation designed of God for his people—unity, honor, sanctification, and glory.²²

References:

- ¹Doctrine and Covenants 22: 23.
- ²II Timothy 1: 10.
- ³I Corinthians 15: 42-54.
- ⁴John 17: 3.
- ⁵Doctrine and Covenants 2: 1, 2.
- ⁶Isaiah 55: 11.
- ⁷Acts 14: 17.
- ⁸Luke 24: 48.
- ⁹Doctrine and Covenants 104: 11.

An opportunity to serve with the finest people in our town

● Qualified high school graduates and college girls have a golden opportunity to receive one of the finest professional educations. If you are accepted as a student nurse, you will prepare for a rewarding and useful career. You may serve in one of our great hospitals with some of the finest men and women you will ever know—our world-famous American doctors and nurses.

As a graduate nurse, many interesting fields will be open to you. And when you marry, you will find your nursing education invaluable in bringing up your family.

Ask your hospital for full information about entering nursing school. Classes are filling up now!

Applications for enrollment in the September, 1948, nursing class are now being taken by the Independence Sanitarium and Hospital School of Nursing. For information, send a post card to Miss Nelle Morgan, R.N., Director of Nurses, Independence Sanitarium and Hospital. Ask for the Nursing Packet.

¹⁰Acts 1: 21, 22.

¹¹Acts 1: 26.

¹²Acts 2: 32.

¹³II Peter 1: 16-18.

¹⁴Abingdon's Concordance, page 1307.

¹⁵Abingdon's Concordance, page 947.

¹⁶Hebrews, chapter 11.

¹⁷Hebrews 12: 1.

¹⁸Doctrine and Covenants 75: 3.

¹⁹Doctrine and Covenants 17: 3.

²⁰Hebrews 4: 13.

²¹Doctrine and Covenants 59: 5.

²²Doctrine and Covenants 129: 9.

Where To Now?

By ROBERT W. BUCKINGHAM

AS YOUNG PEOPLE, we may well ask, "Where to now?" We have a choice to make concerning our work and what we wish to accomplish. This decision is especially important as we consider the needs of the world and the church.

We must realize that we owe something to society as a whole. It is our moral obligation and privilege to give to society that which will help to improve it. We cannot accomplish this by just living a "good life," but by living a better life. This requires development and understanding. We are more able to appreciate this world in which we live if we can each day be an uplifting influence to humanity.

Perhaps our first concern is that of enumerating some of the things which need to be done, keeping in mind that criticism which is not constructive is harmful. Let us look at society as a whole so that we may see what is required of us as members of Christ's Church.

Present-day society lacks the essentials which Christ emphasized so much—an active love and a deep understanding through which men may enjoy greater harmony and trust in each other. By looking at the problems of the world, it is very easy to see how much these two characteristics would help if they were put into practice.

As we look at our church, we see that we need a more adequate program in which the best methods now known may be put into practice. This means a program which will employ every phase of economics, sociology, psychology, and all other fields of learning. Ours is a tremendous task. We are called to be leaders of mankind or "physicians unto men." This is not a half-hearted task; it requires all the skill and understanding which we can muster for the job. Most important of all, we must be ready and waiting to carry out this plan. Hesitation will kill our best desires.

WHEN WE FIRST mention a plan, we think of the type of country or community in which we live. We realize the good and the bad characteristics which have their place in our particular society. We realize the habits and customs of the people, and we learn to evaluate their importance. To effectively carry out our plan, we, the minority, may be faced with the task of educating the majority that there is a better, finer way of doing things. This fact must be established before any plan of action can succeed.

Robert (Bob, to his friends) Buckingham hails from Cashmere, Washington, which is in the heart of the apple country. He is nineteen and a sophomore at Graceland, where he is majoring in music. After he gets his degree, he hopes to serve the church. His father is pastor of the Wenatchee mission in Washington.

The initial step in mapping a plan is to review our resources and potential aid. We must know what we have to work with and how we may use those resources most advantageously. After we have thoroughly evaluated our position, we may be able to present a long-range plan by which we will be able to achieve that "more abundant life" about which Christ talked.

When we attempt to enact this plan, we will at times face obstacles much the same as those faced by Christ. We will be confronted with ignorance, misunderstanding, lack of desire, and all other characteristics which tend to retard progress. This facing of obstacles is going to require that prime requisite of the gospel of Christ—a spiritual development. This must have a quality of faith which is unequalled in the world today. Our desire to carry forth this plan must inspire within us a zeal and initiative that are so strong they cannot be quenched. This zeal must not be undirected. It must be able to guide us in the channels which are right. This faith must tie us to God and Christ so securely that it will be able to help us in times when we are not able to see clearly the next step before us. Such is not a blind faith, but one which signifies our love to God and our desire to walk and work with him.

TO CARRY OUT this plan, we must educate ourselves in the ways of God. This means not only studying the books of the church, but also doing some creative thinking in our own experiences. Only by growing will we be able to build a Zion which will endure. Because of our desire to push on into new areas never before explored, we grow in our understanding of God's purpose in us. We must be able to reach new heights of insight and inspiration by which our daily lives may be enriched. As we progress in overcoming these steps of development, we become more in tune with God; because of this, we gain a higher degree of understanding and love for our fellow men, without which we are not able to meet God and make advancement in the eternally progressing plan which is his.

New Horizons

Some of us are apt to say, "This business of spiritual development is not for me. I can't understand it." Because of this block we set against it, we are not able to develop. No matter how intelligent we are, or how intelligent we think we are, we all wonder at times concerning this world. We wonder what that spark of life is which gives vitality and growth, and how it operates within every living thing. Science, as yet, is not able to answer that question. By thinking creatively about such matters, we shall increase our understanding. This does not mean we shall be able to obtain a definite answer—we probably won't; but we shall have traveled a little further in our understanding of the purposes of God.

IN OUR EFFORTS to obtain the "better" life, we must develop. Our vision must be broadened to include a more universal view of things. Many times we have a very narrow belief concerning God and Christ; and because of this, we limit the ministry which is ours to receive if we conform to God's laws. This does not mean a blind following; it requires thought and care.

The church has come a long way, and its members have made a great development; but now, as never before, we are faced with a re-emphasized fact that the world needs our ministry. It is our duty today to re-evaluate and reinterpret our message in the language of 1948.

We have the plan; but what is more important, we have the way of God which must be given to the world. By co-ordinating our zeal and our understanding, we will be able to give to society the knowledge and vision which it needs today.

By centering our vision on Christ, we will be able to produce a plan of action which will embody his characteristics. Let us press on and be on the frontier of thinking and acting for the world to follow.

The Trouble-Shooter

How to Be Friendly

QUESTION: I do not make friends easily, and I find myself alone much of the time. I go to church, but the people seem distant and are not interested in me. I want to like people, but I do not find it easy to talk to them. I don't enjoy being an isolationist, but that's what I am. What can I do to overcome it?

ANSWER: Go to work immediately, but be patient with yourself and do not expect too great results in a short time. If you keep trying, you can have a good time and win some friends. Other lonely people have found the following plans helpful.

1. You must begin with your mind. Like all of us, you probably think too much of the time about yourself, and too little of the time about others. When you look at a crowd, instead of being afraid of them or disinterested, say to yourself, "They're nice people. I like them." Then smile and start out. The difference in attitude will change your approach to them. Chances are, if you like them, they will like you. You must be more interested in others than in yourself.

2. Cultivate the smile. Don't be afraid to lead with a smile. In most cases, people will smile back. Try it. Even if a few don't respond, don't let it discourage you. Just feeling in your own heart that you like people will change you, and the change will reach and win friends for you.

3. Be a joiner. If you are lonely in the big group, get into the little ones. Attend a class regularly. Sit by somebody who likes to talk; she will get you into the conversation. Offer to help when there's work to be done. If your mind doesn't work fast, maybe your hands do. Working with people can make friends for you.

4. Attend many church activities. The more meetings you attend, the more contacts you have, and the more opportunities you will have to visit. You can't solve your problem alone. You need other people to help you.

5. Learn to say "yes." When people ask you to assist in any way, say "yes" if you can, if the date is open. Soon it will become known that you will accept responsibility. People quit asking if you refuse often. They like willing helpers.

6. Be dependable. If you agree to do something do it. Don't back out or fail on a promise or obligation. Be on time and have the task done on time.

7. Learn to listen. Listen to people's talk attentively and interestedly. People are happiest when they are talking about themselves. They aren't particularly interested in your life. But if you encourage them with a frequent "yes" or a nod of the head, they will think you are wonderful. Besides, you will learn a lot in listening.

8. Try talking to strangers. Pick your stranger carefully, of course. Don't talk about anything personal to either the stranger or yourself. Better try one of your own sex—it's safer. Talk about something you both can see as you ride the train or car. Most people traveling are lonely, and would like to talk if they could break the ice. Learn to be an ice-breaker.

9. Read extensively, remembering the interesting little humorous stories and informational articles that make good conversation. Particularly pick those that illustrate some principle that will help people toward a better view of life and a better standard. When you talk, use these things.

10. Trust God to find you opportunities to serve him. Remember that he has a great work to do, and that you are a part of his plan. He will help you and lead you forward in that work.

Shall There Be Prayer Meetings?

(Continued from page 6.)

her parents in the Scandinavian mission gave pledges of support of those of us who stayed at home. Then youth from Missouri, from California, from Pennsylvania prayed. I prayed, too. God was near that night as we commended these friends to his providential care. As the congregation sang, "God Be With You Till We Meet Again" each one received the hand of fellowship from the president of the college and then walked down the center aisle as if going to his mission field. The organ pealed out, "The Spirit of God Like a Fire Is Burning" as hundreds shook hands with their eight brothers and sisters who soon were leaving for missions abroad. Here were testimonies not soon to be forgotten. Here were prayers that stirred the hearts. Here was hymn singing that vibrated with deep emotion. Here was dedication to the mission call of the church.

Was it a prayer meeting?

AND THERE WERE PICTURES!

This Wednesday evening we were at the Coliseum. We sang hymns of world brotherhood. The lights went out one by one. On the screen came the moving picture, "Seeds of Destiny" portraying the needs of war-torn countries. Then there were testimonies and prayers. As the meeting came toward its close, a compelling impulsion came over me with a clearness of a message to be spoken to the student congregation in terms of their present participation in the church's work. The organ played as the assembly filed out, silently. They could not be the same for they had sensed the call of a starving world. Strange mixture that—pictures and prophecy.

Was it a prayer meeting?

WE CHANGE, BUT CONTINUE

Members of the early Reorganization hungered for the prayer meeting. So many lived in isolation. At conferences and reunions they needed the testimonies and the prayers of their fellow Saints. They organized them into a type of meeting suited to their day. It is a long way from the General Conference that met in Israel Roger's new barn in October, 1859, to the assembly that will gather in the Auditorium this coming October. We still need the seasoned testimonies of those who have walked with God. We still need the prayers of those who talk with their Eternal Father. We still need so much the sense of togetherness. We still need the repentant hearts and the alert minds that can receive the work of the Lord. We shall have to plan our meetings in accordance with our times. What we call them I cannot say. They will differ from the prayer meetings of seventy years ago. Maybe we shall not call them by that name. The main thing is that all of us shall come "together with God."

Open the Door

(Continued from page 8.)

personality is far more important than textbook material. If this be true, and there isn't much doubt as to the validity of the assertion, then it is time that every pedagogue, administrator, and school board member take on at least a veneer of religion. In fact, a little religious training wouldn't hurt any of these public servants.

When this philosophy becomes a reality, the parents, teachers, administrators, board members, and clergymen in every hamlet and metropolitan area in America will blend their voices in one resounding chorus, BLESSED BE HIS NAME FOR NOW MY CHILDREN SHALL KNOW JESUS.

"Serve the Lord"

(Continued from page 16.)

him: "Who am I, that I should go?" His second question shows his desire to know more fully the Being he addressed: ". . . when I come unto the children of Israel, and shall say unto them, The God of your fathers hath sent me unto you; and they shall say to me, What is his name? what shall I say unto them?" The answer was: "Thus shalt thou say unto the children of Israel, I AM hath sent me unto you."

What an assuring message for Moses to carry: The God of your fathers is living and aware of your need! The body and spirit of Moses were bowed before the presence and message of Divinity.

Because we have found the Lord to be in his house, we return often, reverently, expectantly, with a desire to know him better. And if we who have found him there will make the needful preparation to invite and make welcome his presence in our midst, then the children of the church will come to feel his Spirit in the hymns, prayers, and scripture; they will recognize his power in the words of his servants and in the testimonies of those who know him. Once they know for themselves that the great I AM is present and mindful of them, children will remember that the House of the Lord is a holy place.

WRITE FOR OUR NEW

1948 - 1949

Book Catalog

HERALD PUBLISHING HOUSE

Independence, Missouri

BULLETIN BOARD

Oklahoma State Reunion

Members of the Central and Western Oklahoma Districts will hold their reunion at Pawnee, Oklahoma, August 7 to 15. Reservations only (no money) are to be sent to H. M. Elwell, Box 37, Guthrie, Oklahoma, by July 1. Rentals are as follows: large tents, $6; small tents, $4.50; dormitory space—adults, 75c; children, 40c; steel cots with mattresses, $2.50. Meals will be served in the dining hall at nominal prices. Promptness in making reservations will assure comfortable housing for all.

L. W. KOHLMAN,
Reunion Secretary.

Northern Michigan District Women's Institute

The Northern Michigan District Women's Institute will be held in Gaylord, Michigan, on May 29 and 30. Banquet on May 29, at 7 p.m., with Apostle Gleazer as our speaker. Men and women invited. Sister Glada Crinzi of the Detroit District will be the instructor. Write Mrs. Edith Engmark for reservations by May 24. Women from our neighboring districts are invited.

HELEN FRITZ,
District Leader.

Box 105
Boyne City, Michigan

WEDDINGS

McDowell-McCune

Elizabeth Margaret McCune, daughter of Elder and Mrs. W. G. McCune, and Howard Lamont McDowell were married April 23 at New Castle, Pennsylvania. Elder McCune read the double-ring ceremony.

Shirk-McDonald

Glada MacDonald, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis D. MacDonald, and Daniel W. Shirk, Jr., son of D. W. Shirk, both of Independence, Missouri, were married April 23 at the home of Elder Evan Fry, who officiated. The bride is a graduate of the 1947 class of nurses at the Sanitarium, where she is now employed.

BIRTHS

Mr. and Mrs. Reuben Cline of Sacramento, California, announce the birth of a son, Timothy Reuben, born January 9. Mrs. Cline is the former June Bevard.

A son, Dale Patrick, was born on March 23 to Mr. and Mrs. Darrell V. Tripp of Burnside, Illinois.

DEATHS

WATSON.—Mary Watson, daughter of Thomas F. and Elizabeth Rodey Haltey, was born September 3, 1864, at Wintnersham, England, and died April 25, 1948, at Independence, Missouri. At the age of four, she and her parents came to Toronto, Canada. Following the death of her mother, she was placed in a convent. At the age of fifteen, she was baptized into the Reorganized Church. Soon afterward, she moved to Independence, Missouri, with her brother and his wife. These three were staunch supporters of the Reorganized movement and diligent workers in the "Old Brick Church." On December 2, 1885, she was married to William Watson; eight children were born to this marriage. Shortly after their golden wedding anniversary, Brother Watson passed away. In addition to other activities, she was an active member of the Independence Pioneer Club.

She is survived by four daughters: Mrs. May Rogers of Oak Grove, Missouri; Dr. Ethel Watson, Mrs. Tessie Jones, and Mrs. Vida Lautier of Independence; two sons: Gomer Richard of Independence and Alexander Charles of St. Louis, Missouri; and three grandchildren. Funeral services were conducted by Patriarch F. A. Smith, assisted by Elder Hubert Case.

LAPWORTH.—Elizabeth Kirkwood, was born September 17, 1869, at Crescent, Iowa, and died at her home near Cameron, Missouri, on February 25, 1948. She was baptized into the Reorganized Church on May 27, 1890, and was an ardent worker in the church school for many years. On December 7, 1892, she was married to James R. Lapworth; two children were born to this union. After living sixty years in the home where she was born, she moved on February 13, 1930, to Cameron, where she spent the remainder of her life. Mr. Lapworth preceded her in death on October 1, 1927.

She is survived by a son, Harold, and daughter, Mrs. Elsie Butler, both of Cameron; a brother, T. A. Kirkwood of Underwood, Iowa; and one grandchild. Funeral services were conducted at the church in Cameron by F. L. Hinderks and at Crescent, Iowa, Nels P. Johnson officiated. She was buried beside her husband in the Crescent cemetery.

MILLER.—Spraye G., daughter of David and Elizabeth Manning, was born April 14, 1892, at Charlotte, Michigan, and died at her home in Clio, Michigan, on April 25, 1948. She was baptized into the Reorganized Church on May 26, 1901, at South Boardman, Michigan, and was a devoted worker until her illness ten years ago. She was married to Jesse B. Miller in June, 1915.

She is survived by her husband; two sons: Jesse J. of Flint, Michigan, and Hyle B. of Clio; four sisters: Mrs. June Burch of Midland, Michigan; Mrs. Opal Kotesky of Clio; Mrs. Garnet Potter and Miss Donna Manning of Los Angeles, California; two brothers: William and M. J. Manning of Sunnyside, Washington; and three grandchildren. Services were held at the Newall Street Church in Flint, Elder Arthur H. DuRose officiating. Interment was in Montrose Cemetery.

Reunion Schedule-1948

No. Dakota	Jun. 11-Jun. 13	Am. Leg. Pk., Detroit Lakes, Minnesota
E. Montana	Jun. 19-Jun. 27	Fairview, Mont.
Texas	Jun. 25-July 4	Bandera, Texas
Owen Sound & Toronto	Jun. 26-July 4	Port Elgin, Ont.
New York & Philadelphia	July 3-July 11	Deer Park
Southwest Kansas	July 3-July 11	Arkansas City, Kansas
Gulf States	July 9-July 18	Brewton, Ala.
W. Colorado	July 10-July 11	Delta, Colorado
Manitoba Central	July 10-July 11	Winnipeg, Man.
Missouri	July 10-July 18	Odessa, Missouri
Saskatchewan	July 10-July 18
Alberta	July 19-July 26	Sylvan Lake, Alberta
Zion	July 17-July 25	Gardner Lake
Nauvoo	July 17-July 25	Nauvoo, Illinois
So. New England	July 17-July 25	Onset, Mass.
Northern California	July 17-July 25	Asilomar, Monterey, California
Flint-Pt. Huron-Detroit-Windsor	July 24-Aug. 1	Blue Water, Michigan
Kentucky & Tennessee	July 25-Aug. 1	Paris, Tennessee
Northwest	July 30-Aug. 8	Silver Lake, Washington
Chatham-London	July 30-Aug. 8	Erie Beach, Ontario, Canada
Cen. & So. Michigan	July 31-Aug. 8	Liahona Park
Mo. Valley	July 31-Aug. 8	Woodbine, Iowa
Maine	July 31-Aug. 8	Brooksville, Me.
So. California	July 31-Aug. 8	Pacific Palisades
No. & West. Michigan	Aug. 5-Aug. 15	Park of the Pines
Kirtland	Aug. 6-Aug. 15	Racine, Ohio
Reunion of the Ozarks	Aug. 1-Aug. 8	Racine, Missouri
Oklahoma	Aug. 7-Aug. 15	Pawnee, Okla.
W. Montana	Aug. 7-Aug. 15	Race Track, Montana
Arizona	Aug. 8-Aug. 15	Prescott, Arizona
Arkansas & Louisiana	Aug. 9-Aug. 15	Clear Fork Cp., Hot Spgs., Ark.
Minnesota & Wisconsin	Aug. 9-Aug. 16	Chetek, Wisc.
Far West	Aug. 12-Aug. 22	Stewartville, Missouri
So. Indiana	Aug. 21-Aug. 29	Bedford, Ind.
Eastern Michigan	Aug. 14-Aug. 22	Cash, Michigan
Idaho	Aug. 14-Aug. 21	Hagerman, Idaho
Des Moines	Aug. 15-Aug. 21	Guthrie Center, Iowa
Lamoni	Aug. 15-Aug. 22	Lamoni, Iowa
S. E. Illinois	Aug. 20-Aug. 29	Brush Creek, Ill.
Eastern Colorado	Aug. 20-Aug. 29	Colorado Springs Colorado

P. S.

* THE SEVEN WONDERS OF THE WORLD

The Seven Wonders of the Ancient World were beautiful architectural masterpieces. But we have progressed far beyond them in many ways. Just consider the Seven Wonders of the Modern World that make ours the most wonderful age in history: 1. Wonder if there will be another war, and when? 2. Wonder how long the present government will last? 3. Wonder when taxes will be hiked, and how much? 4. Wonder how to get more money for less work? 5. Wonder how to meet next month's installments? 6. Wonder who'll be the next president? 7. Wonder when the next depression will strike?

* HIGH FINANCE

What has happened to us is made clear by a simple fact. We used to buy a big loaf of bread for a nickel. Now we can get a small one for fifteen cents.

The cause is that everybody wants more and more for less and less. The result is that everybody gets less and less for more and more.

For every person who may be found cultivating a garden, there are a dozen trying to make an easy living at his expense.

Our nation must avoid the fallacy of the two gamblers who were broke, and tried to recoup their fortunes by swindling each other.

Money is good only as long as there are products and commodities to buy with it. Increasing the "take" of money will not help us. What we need is increased production. When we can get a loaf of bread for a dime, or a nickel, our money will be worth something.

AUDITORIUM NEWS

(Continued from page 2.)

series at Carlton. . . . In each of these two areas, as is most often the case, there are challenging possibilities for local priesthood with missionary zeal."

* NORTHERN CALIFORNIA. Bishop E. C. Burdick of Sacramento says, "We are still conducting the priesthood classes on cottage meetings, and we also now have four cottage meetings being conducted by the priesthood. Assigning two to each meeting gives eight of the men a weekly responsibility. We have three baptisms ready for Children's Day for which these cottage meetings are entirely responsible, also three young people we should be able to baptize in the next thirty days. . . . I have found great joy and satisfaction in this work. . . . Also it is doing wonders for these young men of the priesthood, and it is quite noticeable what it is doing for the branch. Our average attendance is on the increase."

* RELIGIOUS EDUCATION. John Darling was recently at Omaha with John Blackmore and Dr. Henry Merchant for a young people's rally that brought an attendance of sixty-five. The theme was, "Youth Moves Forward."

Dr. F. M. McDowell and Mrs. McDowell left on May 12 for the East to attend an institute at Philadelphia on the 15th and 16th, and to Brooklyn on the 23rd. There they will visit their daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. W. Max Wise. Brother Wise holds the office of elder, and will receive his Doctor's degree at Columbia University on June 1, working in the field of educational guidance.

Mary A. Burlington
1510½ Jules
St. Joseph, Missouri

92867
18
h

Handwork Supplies

FOR

Vacation and Reunion Church School

- | | |
|---|--|
| Water Colors—50¢ a box | Construction paper, assorted colors—30¢ |
| Crayons, non-roll—10¢ a box | Paste, pint jar—35¢ |
| Tempera colors, small jars—11¢ each | Scissors, blunt good quality—18¢; excellent quality 35¢ pair |
| Violet | Yellow |
| Magenta | Green |
| Blue | Red |
| Orange | |
| Tempera Colors, large jars—25¢ | Carpet Warp, ½ lb. skein—75¢ |
| Black or white | 2 yards bookbinding cloth (makes 15 small covers) $1.75 |
| Printers Ink, ¼ lb. can—45¢ | Book Binders Board, 11" x 14"—15¢ a board |
| Oak Tagboard, 12" x 18"—5¢ a sheet | Blueprint paper, 9" x 12"—6¢ a sheet |
| Adhesive Tape, 1" x 2½ yds.—17¢ | Heavy Hectograph paper—$2 a ream |
| Speedball Linoleum Cutters and Handle—75¢ | Clay—5 lbs. for 75¢ |
| Ream of White Typing Paper—$1.25 | Linoleum Blocks—36¢ each |
| Brayer—75¢ | Paper Toweling—15¢ a package |

Order through your Book Steward or direct from the

HERALD PUBLISHING HOUSE

Independence, Missouri

Photo by Clifford Carver

“... and my grace shall attend you.”

VOLUME 95
MAY 29, 1948
NUMBER 22

THE Saints Herald

www.LatterDayTruth.org

And My Grace Shall Attend You

CLASS OF '48. The church officers and congregations of Independence have co-operated for the past several years in entertaining student members at a program and banquet. The class of '48 was entertained at a dinner program at the Laurel Club in the Auditorium on Tuesday evening, May 18. Many participated in the program, including Edwin Browne of Graceland College, who was master of ceremonies, and President Israel A. Smith, who brought a message to the students.

TRAVELS. President Israel A. Smith reports a fine experience during his visit to Philadelphia on May 6 and 8 on church business. He spoke at Brooklyn on Sunday morning, May 9, and was at Norwalk, Connecticut, that evening. He went on to Washington, where he met Bishop G. L. DeLapp, who also visited Philadelphia on Sunday evening. In Washington they were with Apostle G. G. Lewis on church business. President Smith later visited New York and departed for church headquarters via Chicago.

PRESIDENT I. A. SMITH has been requested to become a member of the Sponsoring Committee of the Independence Chapter of the Missouri Division of the American Cancer Society, by Lewis H. Ehrlich, president, of Columbia, Missouri. Dr. Vance Link has been prominent in the promotion of this work.

MELCHISEDEC PRIESTHOOD. An institute for the Melchisedec priesthood was held at Stone Church, Independence, from May 10 to 14. Dr. F. M. McDowell and Bishops Walter Johnson and Henry Livingston took turns at presenting themes and leading the discussion.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA DISTRICT. Apostles W. Wallace Smith and Charles R. Hield, with Paul Moore, young people's leader of Southern California District, held a very successful youth retreat at Camp Seeley (a camp owned by the city of Los Angeles), 17 miles from San Bernardino in the San Berdo mountains. There was an average of 100 young people in attendance for the three-day camp. A most excellent spirit was present and exceptional co-operation from the young people. Sister Ann Jasper of the East Los Angeles Branch was in charge of the food, assisted by her sister and many of the young people. District President Louis J. Ostertag and his wife were present throughout the camp. Russell F. Ralston, who is currently conducting a missionary effort at San Bernardino, contributed fine leadership in activities, including evensong, stunts, teaching, and classwork.

FROM GERMANY, Eugene Theys writes: "As yet I find it impossible to enter the Russian zone to visit our groups at Gross, Raschen, Brandenburg, and Sentsenfborg. Some of the members and most of the priesthood came to Berlin and we spent two days going over plans for the mission. On Sunday, May 9, we baptized thirty people in Berlin. Many have waited for three or four months receiving instruction in prebaptismal classes. I have given all pastors instructions that everyone must attend a three-month baptismal class. This will eliminate anyone's being rushed, and sufficient time will be given to fully instruct new members. This afternoon I am baptizing George Baier and his wife. I have been spending a lot of time writing to and answering questions for them during the last four months. They have been helping to translate some of our tracts and putting the final polish on some that were translated in the States."

Yesterday morning, 296 young men and women from many states and several countries walked across the Graceland campus wearing cap and gown. It was the fiftieth graduating class to cross those lawns in the shadow of the administration building tower since 1898 when Frederick Madison Smith was the sole graduate of the first class.

Diligently have they been taught, and the grace of Graceland will attend them.

Graceland's fifty-third year has ended.

To replace the 296, about the same number of new students will join the sophomores at Graceland for the beginning of the fifty-fourth year on September 10.

Applications for admission for the 1948-49 term are now being accepted by the college. Prospective students should write for application papers to the Office of Public Relations, Graceland College, Lamoni, Iowa.

IN THIS ISSUE

EDITORIAL:

Israel	3
Across the Desk	4
The "Uncertain Trumpet" Certainly Discredited	18
An Error Corrected	19
Education Free and Otherwise	19

ARTICLES:

Zion Today, by Ray Zinser	5
The Restoration Movement, by Patriarch Elbert A. Smith	7
The Anonymous Giant, by Dr. Evan V. Shute	10
Other Sheep I Have, No. Five, by Roy Weldon	12
Brother Gamet's One Hundred Years	15
They Are In Our Hearts, by Florence W. Simmons	16
Whosoever Will . . . Is Called, by Mrs. William Worth, Jr.	17
Our Sleeping Pioneers, by Glen Cargyle	20
The Power of Thought, by Isabella Shaw	21
Seek and Thou Shalt Find, a poem, by Dennis Muir	21
Bulletin Board	23

Israel

THE ANNOUNCEMENT of the formation of the Jewish political state under the name of "Israel" is one of the most interesting and, possibly, one of the most significant pieces of news of recent times.

Certain advantages immediately appear. Now, after the lapse of many centuries, the Jewish peoples of the world have a homeland. They are no longer orphans among the races of the earth. When persecution strikes them, as it often has, they may have a place of refuge. When Jewish people are in trouble anywhere in the world, they will have a government that can intercede for them and represent them before the states and the great international tribunals. Too long the Jewish peoples have known what it is to be the helpless victims of persecution and hate, with no one to plead or protest for them in an officially recognized way.

Certain disadvantages are equally obvious. The new state comes into its inheritance, fighting for land and space against a population already established and determined to hold its ground. Like ancient Israel, modern Israel can come into its Promised Land only by dispossessing another people. It must fight for its life from the very beginning. And either way the victory goes, some people will lose and suffer.

THE BATTLE between the Jews and Arabs must certainly be regretted. On each side there have been incidents which seemed to make the use of force and weapons necessary, yet it is hard to see how they have brought any benefit. The solution of the many problems can only be harder because of the suffering and hurt that have come from the fighting.

Some observers have already criticized the new state. "This is not Israel," they say. "The tribes of Israel were lost. This is Judah." Yet it is a name the people have always used in referring to themselves, and they have chosen it as their title now.

To a large degree, the new state of Israel will survive or perish by its own efforts. There may be some help from greater powers; but if Israel is to prosper and grow strong, it will do so by its own achievements.

THE NEAR EAST has long needed some new spirit injected into it. The Mohammedan religion has given the people a fatalistic resignation to conditions that other people have long since successfully overcome. Primitive methods of agriculture have robbed the soil of its fertility and have kept crops at a minimum. Disease and suffering have seriously affected the health, initiative, and productivity of the population. Lack of education has deprived them of leadership. Political organization has been effective only in bleeding the poor for taxes and delivering the mineral resources of the earth into the hands of great companies organized among the western nations. Missionaries, teachers, and medical personnel have been confronted with almost insuperable obstacles to their efforts, given in the most kindly and humanitarian way, for the help and relief of the suffering peoples of the Near East.

The people of Turkey, under the leadership of Kemal Ataturk, have shown the best evidence of turning to a modern way of life, but have had great problems to meet. The Jews, coming from western nations where many of them have developed the finest technical abilities and capacities for leadership, have an even better opportunity for changing the archaic ways of the Near East. Wisely managed, the establishment of Israel could prove a great blessing to that region of the world.

YET THERE are moral and spiritual factors involved that, in view of previous experience and study of history, make a thinking observer pause and wonder. How many of the ancient promises attach to Judah? How much of the inheritance belongs to the true tribes of Israel?

Freedom—especially freedom of speech, publication, opinion, conscience, and religion—is something that we should expect in the enlightened Jewish state that is just making its formal beginning. An orderly and stable society should be expected, and in such a society, the opportunity for educational and missionary work should be afforded in a measure not hitherto possible. Missionary work in a land where people were always hungry, sick, or in trouble was difficult. There was always the problem of dealing with "basket Christians." In a modern Jewish state where people are able to take care of their own physical needs, a more normal interest in the problems of mind and spirit may be expected. At the same time, the Jews as a people have been very much interested in practical subjects, such as business, science, education, the arts, and culture, but have not given much attention to Christianity. Missionaries would face some distinct problems in working among them.

Recognition by the United States must be a real help to the difficult way the new state of Israel must follow. Perhaps recognition from the United Nations will come. Even so, the war with the Arabs and other Mohammedan powers, as well as many internal problems, will give the new nation plenty to do.

The interest and concern of the world will be directed toward the development of the new Israel. One can imagine that almost immediately there will be a flood of applications for entrance from great numbers of Jews in Europe who have suffered terror and oppression. The world should extend a helping hand at this time.

L. J. L.

Editorial

Across the Desk

Here is an excerpt from a recent letter from Elder D. M. Cassidy, our energetic and forward-looking pastor at Cedar Rapids, Iowa:

An incident occurred here recently which touched my heart. You will remember Sister Christine Wilson, the old English lady. She was born March 1, 1867. I went to see her and administer to her. She handed me an envelope that was addressed to the church and contained five twenty-dollar bills. I knew she was living on a pension, so asked her if she was sure she could afford that. She said she knew she didn't have long to remain here, and the Lord had been good to her in letting her stay this long; before she passed away, she wanted to know she had done her bit. She was giving $100, and the envelope read, "A thanksgiving offering." She is one of the finest Christians one ever meets. I only wish we were able to build our church before she passes away. She has been here for so many years, always hoping and dreaming that some day the Saints would have a building. It will be a shame if she can't remain with us for a little longer and meet with us the day we dedicate it.

We, too, felt our hearts touched when we knew of Sister Wilson's gift, and we share Brother Don's hope that she will be spared to see the desire of her heart. F. H. E.

Mrs. Wayne Simmons writes an interesting letter from San Jose, capital city of Costa Rica, near Panama, which we believe our readers will appreciate for its subject matter and the interesting manner in which it is written. Brother Simmons, formerly of Kansas City, is now engaged in educational work for the government. He was recently ordained to the Melchisedec priesthood at Mobile, Alabama, on the eve of their flight to Central America. Excerpts of the letter follow:

San Jose, Costa Rica
March 18, 1948

Dear Brother Smith:

The past weeks have been so full of events it seems as though it must be more than just a month since we received your wire with the welcome news of the approval of Wayne's ordination. Since I am sure you have had a full report of the ordination service from Brother Crownover, I will not go into that, except to say that we were truly thankful to have it take place before we left the States. Our oldest son will be eight in August, and now there will be no need for him to wait until our return to the States for baptism and confirmation. It means much more than that, of course, but it was a point of concern to us.

We enjoyed meeting the Mobile Saints, and especially the visit afterward with the Crownovers and Drapers. The discussions lasted until midnight and might have gone on until morning except for the fact that the Drapers had to drive 600 miles to Tampa, and we had to return to New Orleans.

We flew from New Orleans to Guatemala City on Saturday and stayed there until Monday morning. In New Orleans, we rode to the airport with the pilot and discussed the possibility of seeing the ruins in Yucatan. He had told us that if it weren't too cloudy, he could take us quite close to Uxmal. But upon leaving Merida, he found it too rough near the ground and had to take us higher than he had planned. He did make a half circle about the ruin so we had as good a view as possible, and we attempted to get some color pictures. We don't know yet if they were successful or not. Later the ruin of Tikal was pointed out to us, though we were too high to see much detail.

Guatemala City is a blend of the old and the new. The barefoot Indian carrier, with a load taller than he is, travels the street in company with the latest in modern trucks. The "new look" walks side by side with the tiny Indian woman in her brilliant hand-woven garments. The high walls and ancient doors of former times still enclose the real life of the city, but electricity and running water make the living more pleasant. We thoroughly enjoyed our visit of several hours to the new archaeological museum. All displays are from sites in the country and are arranged most interestingly.

Leaving Guatemala, we landed briefly in San Salvador, Honduras, and the Managua, Nicaragua, of a recent song. This flight was the most interesting I have ever taken, as we flew at a low altitude; it was a very sunny day, so we had a clear and detailed view of the country.

On board that day was a check purser—a sort of an inspector who could give what orders he chose. When he learned we were taking color pictures, he became very friendly and brought back a flight chart to show us what to watch for ahead. He indicated certain volcanoes of interest and upon leaving Managua, instructed the pilot to fly completely around a live cone. He made a complete circle, taking us in over it so low that we saw the fire flaming up in the center. To complete his good deeds for the day, he took the boys up with the pilots and had them explain to the youngsters how to fly a plane. When some unnecessary wing-tipping took place, we were convinced that our young sons had at least one hand on the stick. Naturally they loved it and thought the purser a real friend.

We landed in San Jose about one that afternoon and were met by people from the school and the mother of our friend in Aruba. Along with happy greetings, I received a very beautiful orchid corsage. And we were invited to have dinner that evening with the director of the school and his family.

You might be somewhat interested in the school set-up here. We learned these facts from the present director: The Lincoln School here was started by a retired Utah Mormon elder, who also was responsible for other Lincoln Schools being established in various Latin American countries. I am not sure if he still lives here in San Jose, but he is still district supervisor for all Lincoln Schools. This school was started only three years ago, and the founder was director until they could get one from the States, who is the present director. The school was established for the purpose of making possible an English education to children of Latin America from the kindergarten up through high school. Children sent to this school usually come into the kindergarten knowing no English at all. All instruction is given in English and the American system is used. All textbooks come from the States.

The school is a private one, receiving no help from this government but receiving grants from the United States government. Some teachers are hired from the States, but quite a number are local women or men who have studied in the

(Continued on page 6.)

THE SAINTS' HERALD

Volume 95

May 29, 1948

Number 22

EDITORS: The First Presidency: Israel A. Smith, John F. Garver, F. Henry Edwards.

ASSISTANTS: Leonard J. Lea, Managing Editor; Kenneth L. Graham, Business Manager.

The Saints' Herald is the official publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, with headquarters at The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri, and is issued through the offices of Herald Publishing House, 103 South Osage Street, Independence, Missouri.

Entered as second-class matter at the post office at Independence, Missouri, under Act of March 3, 1879. Issued weekly at Independence, Missouri. Price, $3.50 per year and $1.75 for six months in advance in the U. S. A., its territories and possessions; Canada, $3.75 per year and $1.90 for six months; other countries, $4.50 per year. Notice of a change of address must be given three weeks ahead of the date that it is to become effective. Accepted for mailing at the special rate of postage provided for in section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized July 21, 1921. Printed in the United States of America.

Zion Today

By Ray Zinser

AN OPEN DOOR.—This is number three in a series of articles written by members of the faculty of Graceland College under the general title, "An Open Door."

For Graceland students, the West Door of the Administration Building is an open door to a fuller, richer life, made possible by a Graceland education. This series seeks to bring the Graceland classroom to the homes of "Herald" readers.

In this article, the author, a teacher of sociology, examines Zion-building from a sociological viewpoint.

SINCE THE DAY men began to live together, there has been the desire to effect a social organization capable of giving to its members something a little better than the pattern existing at that particular time. This is the eternal quest of man. Such a quest could be called the "desire to develop a Utopian reconstruction."

Unless one is totally oblivious to international currents, there is a strong appreciation of the exigency of effecting a reconstructed society today . . . not only to effect a better life, but to provide man a means by which he can prevent internecine warfare and eventual self-annihilation. Of the many approaches to the development of a reconstructed society, one which stands out significantly is the "Zionic approach."

Zion is a way of community living involving a deep-rooted spiritual condition and an actual community development on earth. Deeply imbedded in the philosophy of Zion is the development of a "personality-centered" culture in which each man is provided an equal opportunity to develop his talents and native endowments to the highest degree of expression and competence. If we agree on these basic assumptions, what then are the mechanics or ways of putting the Zionic philosophy into actual operation?

In our church literature, aided by our social and economic studies, we find that we have the basic principles for a plan of operation. However, we have not yet bridged the gap between theory and practice; our principles have not yet been integrated into a clear plan of action.

In the theory we find definite references to the utilization of economic, political, social, and religious instrumentalities to effect a reconstructed society. This society we call Zion. Stewardship is the central motif of Zionic procedure and living. Consecration of time, talent, and money provide the means by which the individual steward carries out the three fundamental principles of trust, management, and accountability. Each man is expected to give according to his capacity; and, in return for his labors, each man will receive his "just wants and needs." In addition, as the individual has claim on equal opportunity for development, so has the group a claim upon the contribution of the individual to the group.

What, then, are the specific instrumentalities to be used in closing the chasm between theory and practice? Our present general theory must be made more specific by research work in all phases of Zionic living, conducted simultaneously by church officials, members trained by experience in professions, businesses, farming, etc., by university graduates, by university students, by special commissions and research councils. Specialists in all fields must be brought into the councils and, where necessary, men outside the church must be used to aid in studying and eventually developing the instrumentalities of specific and actual operation of co-operatives, storehouses, various

Presenting the Author

Ray Zinser is one of the youngest and newest members of the Graceland College faculty. He is twenty-five. A former resident of Kansas City, Missouri, Ray is a graduate of Graceland, class of 1942. He holds the A. M. Degree in sociology from the University of Chicago, where he graduated "with honors" in 1947. His minor was psychology. He is just completing his first year teaching sociology and a course called "Youth in the Local Church" at Graceland.

Ray was president of the Graceland student body in 1941-42. He served forty-four months in the Navy and was discharged with the rank of lieutenant. While a student at the University of Chicago, he was a resident of International House, home on the campus for 500 students of all races, creeds, colors, and religions. He edited the bi-weekly paper of the House called "The Int-former." His roommate was a Negro.

Ray says his vocation and avocation are "Zionic development." His students have also noted a penchant for loud bow ties.

Now working toward his Ph.D. Degree, this summer Ray will be teaching sociology at Wayne University in Detroit. He returns to his teaching duties at Graceland when the West Door opens again this fall.

types of ownership and management. At the same time, we should have actual local neighborhood units established to put into operation Zionic principles of community living. One approach might be to gather together highly qualified and competent young couples to live together in an area where Zionic principles may be demonstrated.

What is the purpose of Zionic community living? The purpose is to provide a means by which man may live in the happiest and most complete type of collective life, encouraging the most complete type of personality expression.

ZION IS NOT a type of living for Latter Day Saints only, nor is it a society to perpetuate just the institutional structure of the Reorganized Latter Day Saint Church. The Church is only an instrument, a means to an end. It definitely is not an end in itself. Its institutional structure is perpetuated only so far as it uses the structure to promote the Christian life through Zionistic procedures which means the practical demonstration of the social philosophy of Christ.

What is the role of actual Zionistic society in international life? As specific communities are developed in various parts of this nation and missions abroad, people will observe the advantages of co-operative living. Whenever we build our Zionistic communities to such an extent that the advantages become obvious to others, the style of living in these communities will be promoted in other societies. There is neither logic nor valid evidence to support a Zionistic society unless advantages which accrue to each person are greater than those which can be gained from any other society.

The following are specific things which can aid in giving additional impetus to the Zionistic process:

1. Development of a more pervasive and integrating spiritual base for social interaction.

2. Development of a master plan for Zionistic building so that all activities fit in as integral units.

3. Development of research councils in the various fields of endeavor related to community life.

4. Informal and formal education for each person and specialization of each person in the various fields of community endeavor, e. g., farming, business, professions, political action, social studies, etc.

5. Establishment of local neighborhood groups to demonstrate in a practical way principles of stewardship. (This might include actual establishment of new communities, to which might gather the vanguard of the "rich, wise, learned, and noble.")

Finally, Zionistic society through the Zionistic process can be demonstrated in our time. The world waits for practicing preachers.

Across the Desk

(Continued from page 4.)

States—or, as in one case, the North American wife of a Costa Rican. The tuition is high, so only wealthy people are able to send their children.

Since many of the wealthier people here are anxious to send their children to the States for higher education, they welcome such a school. As proof of its success is the fact that they have a waiting list of students and have had inquiries from as far as Cuba and Lima, Peru.

About 140 students are enrolled in the elementary school (first six grades plus kindergarten) this year. Wayne has seven teachers under him, and he is doing a full schedule of teaching. The high school has about sixty-five pupils.

The board (made up of five Costa Ricans and five North Americans living here) has contacted Mr. Nelson Rockefeller in regard to the school, hoping to interest him in making a grant for building purposes. The school has been given sufficient land to put up a big school plant, and it is evident that there is going to be a real need for it. Mr. Rockefeller cabled that he would be here this past Sunday to discuss the school with the director. However, our political troubles here kept him from arriving, as "Pan-Am" was by-passing San Jose.

The present director doesn't plan to stay too much longer; he has been here two years now without a vacation. He hopes to return soon to the States to stay and has given some indication that he would like to groom Wayne for his position when he leaves.

We could be very much interested in staying here for some time. The opportunity of improving our knowledge of the Spanish language couldn't be better. Living costs are much less than in the States and the climate, delightful and beneficial to me. As this is the most literate capital of Central America, it offers the best opportunities for beginning church work. That such work is possible here is indicated by the fact that there are several Protestant Churches already established here. The Methodist people have a church and school here. A new pastor has just arrived with his family from the States. He is also head of the school, which is small. The Seventh Day Adventists have a church and operate a small commissary where we buy some of the necessary States products. And the above-mentioned Utah Mormon has just brought in two young Mormon missionaries. I cannot say for certain that they are from the States, but I believe they are. It would seem to indicate that there is room for our church, too, if anyone is interested enough to make a beginning. I know Wayne has every intention of trying to make a start here, but his school obligations come first and his knowledge of the language must be increased before he can make successful visits in Spanish-speaking homes. Since it has long been our dream to come to Latin America to improve our knowledge of the language and customs of the people, we are happy to know that it may be possible for him to stay on here in a highly responsible position.

It would be very encouraging to us to know that there are others, perhaps young people still in school, who recognize the possibilities in these countries, and who can be preparing for the time when the church will be able to send them here.

The country is beautiful. We have made many small excursions in and about San Jose. Such flowers you never saw, and they grow everywhere! We have here all the growth you associate with the tropics and a climate that reminds one of Missouri in the spring. Mornings are crisp, with a bright sun in a blue sky. Noons are hot under the sun, and the sky is filled with fleecy white clouds, like ambling flocks of sheep. Afternoon brings dark clouds from the Pacific, piling higher and higher in the sky until the sun is swallowed, and a chill breeze hurries people into their wraps.

The boys are recovering from a bad sunburn; it's easy to forget how this tropic sun can burn even when the breeze is cool. They are adjusting themselves very well to the new environment. Neil is taking Spanish at the school and as all his playmates in the neighborhood speak only Spanish, he and Gary are learning a few words. Children must have a universal language, for they seem to make friends and exchange ideas concerning their play without any common ground of words.

Our boxes of possessions from the States are arriving in Puerto Limon this week; but with the present state of unrest in the country, we can have no assurance they will reach us soon. I imagine it would be well to begin cultivating the Latin's reaction to time. Scarcely anything is so important that it must be done today; there is always mañana!

This has been mostly about us, but we aren't forgetting those at home. Our prayers are for you and the church and all our friends who are busy about the work of the kingdom. We would be glad to hear from you at any time with news of the church, and if there are any questions you would like to ask about this place, we will be very glad to write concerning them.

We hope to accomplish a part, if not all, of the program we have set ourselves, in the next two years. Then we expect to return to the States and find our place again in some group of Saints.

VERNEIL SIMMONS.

The Restoration Movement

A sermon given in the Stone Church, Independence Missouri, Sunday evening, April 11, 1948, at the beginning of Zion's League Restoration Festival.

A review of some of the early events in the Restoration Movement and an analysis of their significance.

By PATRIARCH ELBERT A. SMITH

I AM HONORED to have been selected to speak this evening at the beginning of the Restoration Festival. Latter Day Saints have certain terms and idioms peculiar to ourselves. In a somewhat jocular way Apostle F. M. Sheehy used to speak about the "vernacular of the redeemed."

If you were in a strange city and among strangers and should overhear two or three men talking about the Gathering, the Center Place, the Redemption of Zion, and the Restoration, they would be using a vernacular that you would understand. If you were passing a little chapel in that strange city and should overhear the congregation singing "We Thank Thee, O God, for a Prophet" or "The Spirit of God Like a Fire Is Burning" you would very quickly identify the congregation.

I believe it was our Brother John Sheehy who capitalized on this that I am talking about. Finding himself on board a train among strangers, he went through the coaches whistling the tune, "There's an Old, Old Path." Very soon a man rose up from his seat with extended hand. Brother Sheehy had found a friend.

During the week just beginning, groups of our young people from coast to coast in the United States and Canada and overseas in Australia and New Zealand, in Britain, and some of the countries of Europe, and in the Islands of the Pacific will sing typical Latter Day Saint songs and speak this "vernacular," particularly in their discussions of the "Restoration Movement."

This evening I wish to talk about some of the opening episodes in our church history and their significance. It may be significant that the chief of these events occurred in the early spring. The earth was just coming out from the long darkness and bondage of winter into new life. The church was coming out from the dark ages of apostasy, restored to new life and a new mission, or rather the old mission. Also the chief actors in these events were young men in the springtime of life, with the strength and vigor, the initiative and the enthusiasm of youth.

THE FIRST EPISODE; THE VISION OF 1820

The first episode occurred early in the spring of 1820. This is an old, old story to old-time members of the church but has not been heard so often by some of our young people. There had been a great religious revival in western New York in which three prominent Protestant churches united. It was accompanied by one of those emotional earthquakes that featured revivals of those days. However, when the revival ended it broke up in confusion. There was a contest among the churches over the division of converts and regarding their differences and doctrines.

So far as the records show, the older people were content to argue the matter out and then go their way; but there was a young man, just a lad in fact, troubled in mind, who chose a different course. In searching through the Bible, he came to this commandment with promise, "If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God that giveth to all men liberally and upbraideth not and it shall be given him."—James 1: 5. This lad declared, "Never did any passage of scripture come with more power to the heart of any man than did this to mine."

This lad was Joseph Smith. Finding no time limit to the promise he had read, he retired to the forest just back of his parental home to pray. It was a beautiful, natural tabernacle. The sun of the early spring shone through the trees but, while he prayed, a light brighter than the sun shone down about him. Of that experience he wrote: "I saw a pillar of light exactly over my head above the brightness of the sun; which descended gradually until it fell upon me When the light rested upon me I saw two personages (whose brightness and glory defy all description) standing above me in the air. One of them spake unto me, calling me by name, and said, (pointing to the other,) "This is my beloved Son, hear him."

In answer to his plea for light, Joseph was told to join none of the churches, that their creeds were wrong. That statement caused him a great deal of grief later, but time has demonstrated that it was true. The creeds of that day have been revised or to a great extent forgotten.

There are two things of significance in connection with that experience that I would comment upon, the first being that God was restored to the present tense. Religion is prone to express itself in the past tense.

When Christ came to earth, the Jews were looking back to the days of Moses. They were talking about the things that God did then. Annually they celebrated the feast of the Passover. They were worshipping a God of the past but were blind and deaf to the things that God was doing in their presence through his Son. Jesus said to them, "Having eyes you see not, having ears you hear not." And he declared to them, "God is a God of the living and not of the dead."

Even as they were looking back in the year A. D. 30, so in the years 1820 and 1830 Christians were looking back to the days of Christ and the apostles, to the visions and blessings and revelations of those days. They were thinking of God in the past tense; there was to be no more word from him, no revelation, no prophets, no miraculous healings. There is an interesting book entitled Theological Institutes, published by the Methodist Book concern in 1834. That was in the period in which the Restoration Movement was coming forth, and in that book the declaration was made, "The gift of prophecy has passed away with the other miracles of the first age of Christianity." This book was for the study of ministers in their Theological Institutes. It spoke of a God in the past tense. The Restoration Movement brought God back to the present tense. God is.

Sir Oliver Lodge was a fellow of the Royal Society in Britain, scientist of such repute that he was President of the British Association for the Advancement of Science, at the time the greatest organization of the kind in the world, and in his book, Science and Immortality, Lodge made this declaration:

This is the lesson science has to teach theology—to look for the action of Deity, if at all, then always; not in the past alone, nor only in the future, but equally in the present.—Page 30.

Science has something to teach religion, to look for the revelation of God, if at all, then always, not alone in the past nor only in the future. The message of the Restoration on that point was sound, both scientifically and religiously.

The second significant item was the declaration, "This is my beloved Son, hear him!" That was to be the keynote of the Restoration Movement. Jesus had said, "I will build my church," and he was revealed again in the present day, building his church.

We are told in Revelation 19: 10 that "the testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy." The testimony of Jesus is the very "spirit of prophecy," and that testimony came with such force to that young man that he became the Prophet of the Restoration Movement. Some years later he was joined by Sidney Rigdon in that wonderful testimony found in Doctrine and Covenants 76:

And now, after the many testimonies which have been given of him, this is the testimony, last of all, which we give of him, that he lives; for we saw him, even on the right hand of God; and we heard the voice bearing record that he is the Only Begotten of the Father.

No other literature in the modern religious world has a comparable testimony. Out of such experiences came our typical Latter Day Saint hymn, "We Thank Thee, O God, for a Prophet."

THE SECOND EPISODE; VISION OF 1823
On the evening of September 21,

1823, the young Prophet had another vision—this time as he was engaged in prayer before retiring to his rest in his room in the parental home. The angel that visited him on this occasion told him many things concerning the coming forth of the Restoration Movement. He was told that his name should be had for good and evil among all people. A great many persons have worked hard to help fulfill this prophecy and have given him an evil name in many places throughout the world. Others have given him a good name. Many have taken a wise course and have ignored the slander and the falsehoods concerning this young prophet and have given attention to his message. These have come to rejoice in the restored gospel.

The young prophet was shown in vision the Hill Cumorah and at that place in due time he came into possession of the plates of the Book of Mormon.

THIRD EPISODE: RESTORATION OF THE PRIESTHOOD

It was while translating the Book of Mormon that he and his scribe, Oliver Cowdery, found references to baptism. Apparently a question arose in their minds concerning the authority to baptize. Some years later the founders of a church that has since become quite prominent faced this same problem. They had been preaching; they had made converts who wished to be baptized, and they asked each other the question, "Have we the authority to baptize?" They answered it in this way, "If we had authority to preach, we have authority to baptize."

Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery took a different course. Again they went into the forest to pray, and while they were thus praying, a messenger from heaven descended in a cloud of light, and having laid his hands upon them, he ordained them, saying, "Upon you, my fellow servants, in the name of the Messiah I confer the priesthood of Aaron." Subsequently the Melchisedec priesthood was restored. This was to be an authoritative ministry. "As my Father hath sent me, even so send I you."

Having received the Aaronic priesthood and acting under commandment, Joseph and Oliver baptized each other. Oliver Cowdery bore a remarkable confirmatory testimony concerning their experiences:

On a sudden, as from the midst of eternity, the voice of the Redeemer spake peace to us, while the veil was parted and the angel of God came down clothed with glory, and delivered the anxiously looked for message, and the keys of the gospel of repentance!

What joy! What wonder! What amazement! While the world was racked and distracted—while millions were groping as the blind for the wall, and while all men were resting upon uncertainty, as a general mass, our eyes beheld—our ears heard.

As in the "blaze of day"; yes, more—above the glitter of the May sunbeam, which then shed its brilliancy over the face of nature! Then his voice, though mild, pierced to the center, and his words, "I am thy fellow servant," dispelled every fear.

We listened—we gazed—we admired! 'Twas the voice of the angel from glory—'twas a message from the Most High! and as we heard we rejoiced, while his love enkindled upon our souls, and we were rapt in the vision of the Almighty!

But, dear brother, think, further think for a moment, what joy filled our hearts and with what surprise we must have bowed, (for who would not have bowed the knee for such a blessing?) when we received under his hand the holy priesthood as he said, "Upon you my fellow servants, in the name of Messiah, I confer this priesthood and this authority, which shall remain upon earth, that the sons of Levi may yet offer an offering unto the Lord in righteousness!"—Church History, Volume 1, pages 37, 38.

THE FOURTH EPISODE: ORGANIZATION OF THE CHURCH

Finally the time was fully come for the church to be organized. Six young men met at the home of Peter Whitmer, Sr., in Fayette, Seneca County, New York, April 6, 1830. This again was early in the spring. These young men were Joseph Smith, age 24, Oliver Cowdery, 23, Hyrum Smith, 29, Peter Whitmer, Jr., 20, Samuel Smith, 22, and David Whitmer, 25. It will be seen that the average age of these young men was about 24 years.

They had no experience in church building. There was no church on earth that they could look at for a pattern to follow in organizing the church they had been commanded to organize. They had met by commandment, and they were guided by revelation. This was a serious and solemn business they had entered upon. It was to cost three of them their lives. The old song, "Faith of our fathers, living still, in spite of dungeon, fire and sword" was not to our people just poetry or a figure of speech, an idle song. It was written in blood. They knew fire and sword and dungeon and death.

Joseph Smith gives this account of the meeting of organization:

Having opened the meeting by solemn prayer to our Heavenly Father we proceeded, (according to previous commandment) to call on our brethren to know whether they accepted us as their teachers in the things of the kingdom of God, and whether they were satisfied that we should proceed and be organized as a church according to said commandment which we had received. To these they consented by an unanimous vote. I then laid my hands upon Oliver Cowdery and ordained him an elder of the "Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints." After which he ordained me also to the office of an elder of said church.

We then took bread, blessed it, and brake it with them, also wine, blessed it, and drank it with them.

We then laid our hands upon each individual member of the church present that they might receive the gift of the Holy Ghost, and be confirmed members of the church of Christ. The Holy Ghost was poured out upon us to a very great degree. Some prophesied, whilst we all praised the Lord and rejoiced exceedingly.—Times and Seasons, Volume 3, pages 944, 945.

This was the first business meeting—the first conference of the church. It will be observed that it proceeded with due regard to the right of God to speak and also the rights of the people. The word of the Lord was presented, and those present received it by a unanimous vote. Afterward they observed the first Communion supper of the Lord in our church history. And the Holy Ghost was poured out upon them to a great degree. Some prophesied while they all rejoiced and praised the Lord. It was a pentecostal experience. Out of such experiences, and many of them, came our hymn, "The Spirit of God like a fire is burning; the latter day glory begins to come forth."

CONTENT OF THE RESTORATION MOVEMENT

Let us review briefly the content of the Restoration. First, revelation was restored. And today, in addition to the Book of Mormon and the Bible, we have the book of Doctrine and Covenants which is the open canon of scripture, open to receive the word of God as it comes to us from time to time. I know of no other people on earth who have a comparable book or custom.

The church was restored in its original organic form with apostles and prophets and all the other officers of the New Testament church. It was restored with its original doctrines as named in the sixth chapter of Hebrews; and with the old spiritual gifts and blessings mentioned in First Corinthians, 12th chapter, and many other chapters in the New Testament scripture.

The church was restored with its vision of Zion, first as a geographical place in the heart of America, a place that Roger Babson, noted economist, is now publicizing as the "safest place in the world in time of war and the richest in time of peace." That vision included also the vision of a righteous people under a Zion organization.

The church was restored with its message concerning the second coming of Christ, and its warnings concerning wars and calamities coming upon the earth preceding that event.

The Restoration Movement brought a renewed and broader vision of God, not a God of the past alone. Not only was he presented as a God of the present in relation to his church, there came also a great vision of the vastness of his creation and his continuous work as a Creator. Section 22, paragraph 21 of the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, a revelation given in 1830, has this language:

Worlds without number have I created . . . there are many worlds which have passed away . . . and there are many also which now stand, and numberless are they unto man; but all things are numbered unto me; for they are mine, and I know them.

This revelation came through a young man reputedly ignorant, living in the western part of New York State at a time when the science of astronomy as we have it today was in its infancy. There was, I believe, only one astronomical observatory in the United States and that of no great importance. Yet modern science with its one hundred and two hundred inch telescopes has brought us no greater vision of the vastness of the universe than that set forth in the words I have quoted. And furthermore, the revelation continued, revealing God as still at work as a creator:

The heavens are many and they cannot be numbered unto man, but they are numbered unto me, for they are mine; and as one earth shall pass away, and the heavens thereof, even so shall another come; and there is no end to my works.

God did not labor six days in creation and then sit down to rest forever. He is still at work in the vast universe as a creator.

We serve no God whose work is done,
Who rests within his firmament;
Our God, his labors just begun,
Toils evermore, with power unspent.
—Thomas Curtis Clarke.

THE SCOPE OF THE RESTORATION MOVEMENT

The visible church on earth is small, but Paul speaks of it as the family of God in heaven and on earth. The church on earth has an alliance with vast and powerful spiritual forces. The Restoration Movement cannot be judged at any time by the size of its membership. Christ noted that principle when he was on earth and said the "kingdom of heaven cometh not by observation." And he compared it to a grain of mustard seed.

In the beginning of the Restoration Movement, God set in motion forces; world wide, which were destined to prove earth shaking, to prepare for the coming of the Son of God.

In a revelation given in 1830, the Prophet announced the beginning of a "dispensation of the gospel for the last times; and for the fullness of times." Note the prediction that this was to be a "dispensation," and for the "last times," and for the "fullness of times," and that the prophecy was given in 1830. (See Doctrine and Covenants 26: 3.)

I would call your attention now to a remarkable statement made by John Fiske. John Fiske was a noted American historian, lecturer, and author. He held a chair in Harvard University, at one time, and in the dictionary of American Biography a statement is made that "perhaps he was the most popular lecturer on history that America has ever had."

John Fiske gave a series of lectures before the Concord School of Philosophy, which lectures were published in book form in 1885 under the title, The Idea of God. This was fifty-five years after the giving of the revelation to which I have referred, announcing the beginning of the last dispensation. In one of those lectures, speaking about the nineteenth century (in which the Restoration Movement began), John Fiske said:

This century, which some have called an age of iron, has been also an age of ideas, an era of seeking and finding the like of which was never known before. It is an epoch, the grandeur of which dwarfs all others that can be named since the beginning of the historic period.—The Idea of God, page 56.

John Fiske was much more specific. He put his finger down on the year 1830 in that remarkable era as the year marking a line between all generations that had come before it and those that came after it. He said:

The men of the present day who have fully kept pace with the scientific movement are separated from the men whose education ended in 1830 by an immeasurably wider gulf than has ever before divided one progressive generation of men from their predecessors. The intellectual development of the human race has been suddenly, almost abruptly, raised to a higher plane than that upon which it had proceeded from the days of the primitive troglodyte to the days of our great-grandfathers.—The Idea of God, page 57.

Referring to this remarkable era beginning in 1830, John Fiske continued:

In the eyes of the twentieth century the science of the nineteenth will doubtless seem very fragmentary and crude, but the men of that day and of all future time will no doubt point back to the age just passing away as the opening of the new dispensation.—The Idea of God, page 58.

It is strikingly significant that this distinguished student should have singled out the year 1830 as memorable in such a great era and should have referred to it as the beginning of a dispensation, a new dispensation, using the very term that the Prophet Joseph Smith had used in 1830.

"THE WAVES CIRCLE ROUND WITH THE SHOCK."

There is a familiar hymn often used by our people, composed by my father
(Continued on page 22.)

The Anonymous Giant

A Book of Mormon Hero

As read at a Toronto youth meeting on April 17, 1948

By Dr. Evan V. Shute

IN ALL Holy Writ, whether it be the Bible or Book of Mormon, there are perhaps only two anonymous heroes, the Good Samaritan and the brother of Jared. And so such spiritual giants take their places with the men who discovered tin, iron, glass, mortar, the wheel; those who first domesticated the dog and horse; and those equally anonymous shadows, the men who dominate legend. For who really knows anything of Charlemagne or Phidias or Hannibal or Alfred the Great or St. Francis of Assisi? Anonymous wrote Job and Proverbs, as well as almost every wise and pregnant saying since that Shakespeare or Milton or Montaigne forgot. He leads our charges and pays our taxes. Perhaps the very greatest men have ever been "anonymous"—even to their contemporaries! Certainly all of us with fine wives and mothers realize that the best people we've ever known are lost forever in the respectable oblivion of "Mrs."

Anonymity, which most great heroes share with the angels, is such a test of a man. It may hide the burglar or the inventor, the individual member of the Light Brigade or the blackest traitor. Wonderful, beautiful, and dreadful things are done under its dark cloak. It hides all but a few of mankind and almost all our big and little actions. If paper and ink were destroyed, every fragment of the greatest fame would disappear, too. What does any living scholar know of the boldest man of the Huns or of the Aztecs or the Hittites—or of their singers or statesmen or great beauties? Nothing! Oblivion hides whole nations and ages of mankind. Fame is a feeble candle which is carried hurriedly through a crowded hall. Now it is blown out, now relit. Here and there a face stands out in the shadows for an instant—then the light passes and another is momentarily seen. Anonymity reclaims the wisest and bravest and handsomest in that lively chamber into which all of us press for our brief moment.

SEEN IN THIS LIGHT, the struggle for fame and reputation must ever be disappointing and illusory beyond belief.

One could wonder that any thoughtful, reasonable man would strive for reputation rather than solid achievement, or that he would or would not do any worthy thing because of "what people say." I once heard the late President Frederick Smith preach on the topic, "They Say," and pour his scorn over people who cared too much about public opinion. Let Latter Day Saints live their lives careless of that ridiculous criterion. May we live our days under Jesus' eyes and not in view of what "they say." Like the brother of Jared, let us be a brother—no more, no less. Let our works and examples supply the remainder of the description. They tell more, anyhow, than the meaningless succession of consonants and syllables uttered as "John" or "Archibald" or "Mabel."

We have had too much self-seeking and too little God-seeking in our church and nation. Too many of our priesthood members, especially, are eager to preach or pray before a Sunday crowd but "too busy" to take a cottage meeting or a church school class of teen-age boys. The brother of Jared would not have cared. I could go on and on about anonymous service to God—but others can enlarge on the idea in their thoughts and, I hope, in their lives.

THE STORY in Ether tells us how Jared turned to his "large and mighty" brother, asking him to intercede for the people at Babel. The "brother" was obedient, was open to direction—indeed, had waited for it—and did not hesitate to approach his Lord even when he saw the Lord's anger had been roused. Who dared to face the Lord in his wrath on that day but this brother of Jared—with a request not for himself but for others? He patiently "cried this long time" unto God and got an answer—also a most unique promise.

The brother of Jared fell away from God when he got what he wanted—until the Lord chastened him. But which of us would the Lord berate for three hours for backsliding? That was some measure of his dessert in the Lord's eyes, with whom he was not anonymous. He got the warning then, however, which men have so often received: "My Spirit will not always strive with man."

We live in a day when this becomes more and more apparent. We must maintain our God-contacts, or we may not be able to get through on the line when we put in an emergency call for the Great Policeman. "Remember now thy creator in the days of thy youth, while the evil days come not"—Ecclesiastes. And I would remind you of that, if nothing else. The penalty for driving God out of our lives is that we, not he, go into exile; and then what loneliness when our enemies cluster around, and we find we are far from the fort, and its door is closed against us! In a world like ours, do any of you feel wise or strong or clever enough to find your own way through its tangles? If not, keep your hand in God's.

Jared's brother was a man of his hands and had no false views about the dignity of white collar jobs. Evidently a high priest, he still wielded a hammer with the rest of his brethren. We are called to be "workers together with God," not stratified in class or economic or professional layers but each doing what he can. Let each help with God's temple as he may.

Here was a man who didn't know it was impossible to build submarines before Simon Lake thought of them. God ordered him to do it, and he did so without argument! The impossible is the thing that great men have always done—perhaps because it's the thing really worth doing. The people we want in our congregations are those who will cheerfully do the impossible things, since all Jesus' prime and genuinely inspiring commands lie in that category. I like the motto I have seen ascribed to Higgins, the New Orleans shipbuilder, and to the Marine Corps: "The difficult things we will do today; the impossible may take us a little longer."

When I visited Dr. Hertzler, the "Horse and Buggy Doctor," at his Clinic at Halsted, Kansas, a few years before he died, he told of a conversation he had had with the great Dr. Kettering, research director of General Motors at that time. "I never hire college graduates," he quoted the latter as saying. "They know all the things that can't be done!" Friends, the Great Commission and Jesus' example unite to call us, like Jared's brother, to all the noble and helpful and wonderful work which has been left for us to do since everyone before us knew it couldn't be done. The right man sees the boundaries of the possible—and then laughs joyfully. He thanks heaven "which hath matched us with this hour."

JARED'S BROTHER had faith to ask God's help to light the submarines he built. And what a profound philosopher he was when he said, "We know that thou art able to shew forth great power, which looks small unto the understanding of men!" Anyone who thinks he understands the action of the green pigment in plants, chlorophyll, or the action of the vitamins in cereal germs, or the automatism of the breathing pores of plants, or the power of roots to withstand freezing, or the necessity compelling a tree to grow vertical, or the fact that one plant cell grows

Sketch of the Author

DR. EVAN V. SHUTE is one of our able volunteer leaders and workers at London, Ontario. Almer Sheehy, pastor and district president, pays tribute to his energy, his enthusiasm, and versatility in contributing to the accomplishment of much fine local work. "He is thoroughly devoted, and a wonderful help," says Brother Sheehy. Dr. Shute is an eminent obstetrician and gynecologist, and has lectured before medical bodies on his subject. We asked for a photo, to which he replied, "Haven't had a photo in years. Probably years more will elapse." So we can only inform the reader that he has a friendly smile, and is the kind of man anybody will enjoy meeting and engaging in conversation.

into mahogany and another into a chrysanthemum, will be able to ridicule this passage. No one else dares do so. And I have chosen at random merely a few items from the botanical phenomena all about us. If God has such wisdom and such power, may we not trust him? And if his power may not be trusted, how shall we trust the saurian wisdom or the arachnid might of man?

The brother of Jared saw God, literally — "having this perfect knowledge of God, he could not be kept from within the veil!" This passage is very marvelous to me, and I do not pretend to comprehend it. But I can see that a man might come so near God that he could touch him, even if touching him were merely to remind us how our enmity and betrayals had wounded him.

I take it that the Book of Mormon holds no more wonderful incident than is described here in the so-called primitive days of our race. My own experience in discovering scientific truths or in writing is that one struggles for a long time to set the stage for what suddenly comes to him in a flash, like a revelation—the completed thought, the magical form of words, the whole sum of separate ideas with its linkages completed. The veil drops suddenly because it seems that one has struggled so long and so hard to leave darkness that all at once light can no longer be denied him. Perhaps God visits transcendent spirits thus, if they set a worthy stage for the supremest Actor. The challenge is, therefore, to set our stage—then God must lift the curtain.

Let me end half-way through the thrilling story of Jared and his brother with Moroni's comment, "When ye shall receive this record, ye may know that the work of the Father has commenced upon all the face of the land."

PERHAPS NO GENERATION has ever needed this assurance more, unless it were those men who lived in the days of the first apostles and just afterward, when Jesus seemed to have left his people so much alone and in such hard straits. It is difficult at times to see our own Father's hand in the preliminary details that are designed to lead to the establishment of his kind of kingdom. But he intends to tolerate no successful rival. That means that before he comes, all rival kingdoms and powers must be broken, the strength of man must undo itself, the mind of man must realize its terrors and its dire need of governance, the arm of flesh must be palsied by disease and destruction and horror until it shall no longer be raised in rebellion. The long insurrection of created things must cease. God's victory must be complete—complete not by his dominance, but by recognition of our frustration and evident inadequacies.

We have long known that freedom exists "by the consent of the
(Continued on page 22.)

Other Sheep I Have Which Are Not of This Fold

The Story of the Book of Mormon

By ROY WELDON

LECTURE NUMBER FIVE

The Great Upheaval—The Good Shepherd's Rod

And other sheep I have, which are not of this fold: them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice and there shall be one fold and one shepherd.—John 10: 16.

"Thy Rod and Thy Staff They Comfort Me" (Psa. 23: 4)

In previous lectures, we have presented evidence that the Good Shepherd visited America, that the Good Shepherd's voice was heard in America, that the Good Shepherd led the flock of Joseph to America, and that the Good Shepherd had a fold for his sheep of the House of Israel in America. We shall now give consideration to the Good Shepherd's rod in America.

What is the Rod of the Shepherd of Israel?

When Moses met God at the burning bush, the Lord told Moses to cast his rod (shepherd's rod) on the ground. It became a serpent, and Moses fled from before it. The Lord told Moses to pick it up by the tail. As he did so it turned again to a shepherd's rod. It was by this selfsame rod that Moses turned the rivers of Egypt into blood.

And thou shalt say unto him [Pharaoh], The Lord God of the Hebrews hath sent me unto thee, saying, Let my people go, that they may serve me in the wilderness; and, behold, hitherto thou wouldest not hear. Thus saith the Lord, in this thou shalt know that I am the Lord: behold, I will smite with the rod that is in mine hand upon the waters which are in the river, and they shall be turned to blood.—Exodus 7: 16, 17.

It is very evident in Exodus 4: 20, 21, that miracles or the power to do miracles is the rod of the Shepherd of Israel.

And the Lord said unto Moses in Midian, Go, return into Egypt: for all the men are dead which sought thy life. And Moses took his wife and his sons, and set them upon an ass, and he returned to the land of Egypt: and Moses took the rod of God in his hand. And the Lord said unto Moses, When thou goest to return into Egypt, see that thou do all those wonders before Pharaoh which I have put in thine hand.—Exodus 4: 19-21.

The greatest miracle of history transpired when all the sheep of the House of Israel stood together in the valley of the shadow of death. Before them was the Red Sea, and behind them were the armies of Pharaoh. Then, Moses stretched out the rod of the Shepherd of Israel over the Red Sea and it divided. It is little wonder that the Psalmist said, "Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me."—Psalm 23: 4.

From the story of the striking of the rock from which the water flowed to the story of the three Hebrews and the fiery furnace, and the story of Jonah and the whale, the Old Testament almost seems to be one continuous relation of miracles.

The life of Christ in the New Testament from the virgin birth to the resurrection morn is also one continuous relation of miracles. To unnumbered millions of followers of the Good Shepherd it is the miraculous story and hope of the resurrection that comforts them as they pass through the valley of the shadow of death. "Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil, thy rod and thy staff they comfort me."

Run, Speak to This Young Man

Zechariah says, "and, behold, the angel that talked with me went forth and another angel went out to meet him, and said unto him, Run, speak to this young man, saying, Jerusalem shall be inhabited as towns without walls for the multitude of men and cattle therein."—Zechariah 2: 3, 4.

This prophecy clearly deals with events lying in futurity. It indicates that the contents of the prophecy were to be announced by an angel to a "young man," other than to Zechariah for the text discloses an angel said to the angel talking with Zechariah: "Run, speak to this young man." No one would say to a person talking with another, "Run," and speak to such a person. The prophecy clearly was to be fulfilled in the latter days!

In the early part of the 19th century, Joseph Smith, a young man of the state of New York, says he was visited by an angel who revealed to him the hiding place of the sacred record of the ancient Americans near the top of a near-by hill. It was only a comparatively short time after this (1856) that Jerusalem for the first time in history, commenced to be inhabited as a town without walls.

Canon Hanover says concerning Jerusalem, when he moved here in 1853,

"The gates were closed each day from sunset to sunrise. No one could leave the city or get into it without a special permit from the Turkish Government. Large areas within the walls were unoccupied by buildings and were used for agricultural purposes.

"A change for the better came in 1856. People then began to have courage to build outside the city walls."¹

According to Zechariah an angel was to speak to a young man before Jerusalem was to be inhabited as a town without walls for the multitude of men and cattle therein. This prophecy is now fulfilled.

The modern and largest part of Jerusalem is now built outside the walls. Joseph Smith stands pre-eminently as being the young man who meets the requirements of this prophecy.

The Shepherd's Rod in Modern America

The angel who came to Joseph Smith not only revealed the hiding place of the Sacred Book but also gave instructions as to its translation into the English language.

A vast amount of recently unearthed scientific evidence now supports the Book of Mormon. Someone has said that if the Book of Mormon had been found while plowing a field, the world would have accepted it. The reason the world does not accept it is because it has an angel and other miraculous things connected with its coming forth. Paul says, "And God hath set some in the church: First, apostles; secondarily, prophets; thirdly, teachers, after that miracles, then gifts of healings, helps, governments, diversities of tongues."—I Corinthians 12: 28.

In his famous sermon on the day of Pentecost, Peter says, "Ye men of Israel, hear these words; Jesus of Nazareth, a man approved of God among you by miracles and wonders and signs which God did by him, in the midst of you, as ye yourselves also know."—Acts 2: 22.

In Biblical times prophets were approved by miracles. The seal and test of the Savior himself was in his shepherd's rod. When John the Baptist was in prison, he sent his disciples to inquire of Jesus whether he was the Messiah or not.

Jesus answered and said unto them, Go and show John again those things which ye do hear and see: The blind receive their sight, and the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed, and the deaf hear, the dead are raised up, and the poor have the gospel preached unto them.—Matthew 11: 4, 5.

The Prophet Joel in a prophecy about the last days says,

I will pour out my spirit upon all flesh; and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, your old men shall dream dreams, your young men shall see visions; And also upon the servants and upon the handmaids in those days will I pour out my spirit.—Joel 2: 28, 29.

Joel says young men will prophesy in the last days. Zechariah indicates an angel would go and speak to a young man before Jerusalem was built without the walls. Where is the consistency of a generation that rejects the young man Joseph Smith, the boy prophet of the 19th century because he testifies of angels, gifts of prophecy, healing and miracles?

It is a strange fact that though the modern world claims to be Christian and to believe the Bible, yet it rejects Joseph Smith because of his claims of the miraculous.

They do this in the face of the inescapable fact that the miraculous is associated with the prophets of Biblical times.

Two Angel Stories

After the body of Jesus had been placed in the tomb, the chief priests and Pharisees went to Pilate and asked that a watch be set over the tomb so that his followers could not steal the body and then claim that he had risen. Under Pilate's authorization, the tomb was sealed with the great seal of Rome and Roman soldiers stood guard. Then came the hour of the resurrection morn. There was a great earthquake, and an angel from heaven descended and rolled away the great stone from the door of the tomb. The Roman soldiers fled to the city in terror. They went to the high priests and Pharisees and told their story.

And when they were assembled with the elders, and had taken counsel, they gave large money unto the soldiers, saying, Say ye, His disciples came by night, and stole him away while we slept.

So they took the money, and did as they were taught: And this saying is commonly reported among the Jews until this day.—Matthew 28: 12, 13, 15.

There were two stories about the resurrection of Jesus. One was an angel's story. The other was the story of the Roman soldiers. For generations only a handful of people believed the true story. It was hundreds of years before the angel's story, the true story of the resurrection, was generally accepted.

There are two stories about the coming forth of the Book of Mormon. One is an angel's story. The other is the Solomon Spaulding story.

The Roman soldiers' story of the resurrection was a product of the enemies of Christ (high priests and Pharisees). The Solomon Spaulding story about the Book of Mormon is a product of the enemies of Joseph Smith.

Inez Smith Davis says, "In 1834, E. D. Howe published the first rabid exposé of Mormonism, led on by his indignation because his wife and other members of his family had united with the church. In this book he first published to the world the theory that the Book of Mormon was derived from a romance written by one Solomon Spaulding in the year 1812."

The original Spaulding romance manuscript was lost between the time Howe published his book and the time it was discovered among a large quantity of old Ohio documents in 1884. Concerning this famous manuscript which the world had supposed was the basis for the Book of Mormon, Mr. J. H. Fairchild, president of Oberlin College in Ohio, and member of the Ohio Historical Society, says, "There seems no reason to doubt this is the long, lost story. Mr. Rice, myself, and others compared it with the Book of Mormon, and could detect no resemblance between the two, in general or in detail. There seems to be no name or incident common to the two. The solemn style of the Book of Mormon, in imitation of the English Scriptures, does not appear in the manuscript. The only resemblance is in the fact that both profess to set forth the history of lost tribes. Some other explanation of the Book of Mormon must be found, if any explanation is required."

The demise of the Solomon Spaulding Romance as the origin of the Book of Mormon leaves the angel's story to stand alone as the only explanation of this remarkable book.

The Great Upheaval in Ancient America

The manner of discovery and translation of the Book of Mormon are extraordinary and remarkable. The contents of the book are also very extraordinary and remarkable as we shall presently see.

The Book of Mormon records that when Jesus was born at Bethlehem there was a day and a night and a day in America when there was no darkness (3 Nephi 1: 11, 12). Some 30 years after the Book of Mormon was published, H. H. Bancroft collected and published his works containing the work of Ixtli-lochitl who had recorded the same event.

The next event recorded, although Veytia makes it precede the hurricane, is the stopping of the sun for a whole day in his course as at the command of Joshua as recorded in the Old Testament.

This event is supposed to precede the hurricane which is also in harmony with the Book of Mormon. The Book of Mormon records that 33 years after this remarkable event there arose a great hurricane and earthquake and geologic upheaval. It lasted for 3 hours (while Christ was on the cross at Jerusalem). There are 118 separate descriptive phrases in this eyewitness account recorded in the Book of Mormon. Here are a few excerpts:

And it came to pass in the thirty and fourth year, in the first month, in the fourth day of the month, there arose a great storm, such an one as never had been known in all the land;

And there was a great and terrible tempest

And there were exceeding sharp lightnings.

And the city of Zarahemla did take fire; and the city of Moroni did sink into the depths of the sea, and the inhabitants thereof were drowned.

And the whole face of the land was changed

And many smooth places became rough.—3 Nephi 4: 6, 7, 8, 10, 11.

Cities on Tops of Mountains

One of the Book of Mormon prophets says in his prophecy about the upheaval,

And behold there shall be great tempests, and there shall be many mountains laid low, like unto a valley, and there shall be many places, which are now called valleys, which shall become mountains, whose height is great.—Helaman 5: 79.

There are numerous prehistoric cities in the New World which have been discovered on the tops of mountains. Xochicalco and Monte Alban in Mexico are notable examples of this.

If it is true that during the great upheaval where there were valleys "there became mountains whose height is great" it must be expected that we should find evidence of prehistoric ruins on the mountains, because cities are usually built in valleys. It is necessary to travel a steep mountain road for nine miles in order to get from the valley floor at Oaxaca to the great prehistoric city of Monte Alban on top of the mountain. Some say these cities have been built on tops of mountains for military reasons. However, when we consider the cities on the tops of mountains in Peru, a new factor enters the equation.

Mr. Nadaillac says, "Tiahuanaco rises in the center of a basin formed by two lakes of very unequal size . . . This table land is 12,000 feet above sea level, almost at the line of perpetual snow. At this height vegetation is impossible, no cereal can ripen, breathing is difficult, there is nothing produced by which life can be sustained."

C. Reginald Enoch, F.R.G.S., says, "It is known that portions of the Andes and the North American Cordillera have been raised and that other parts have sunk. It is even conjectured that the highland region of Peru and Bolivia may have been elevated since the building of the egalithic structures of the pre-Inca people; and one of the arguments adduced is that these buildings exist in a region where now timber does not grow and where maize will not ripen."⁶

The Abbe Brasseur de Bourbourg says, "If I may judge from allusions in the documents that I have been fortunate enough to collect, there were in these regions, at that remote date convulsions of nature, deluges, terrible inundations, followed by the upheaval of mountains accompanied by volcanic eruptions. These traditions, traces of which are also met with in Mexico, Central America, Peru and Bolivia, point to the conclusion that man existed in these various countries at the time of the upheaval of the Cordilleras and that the memory of that upheaval has been preserved."

Mr. Nadaillac says, "Other traditions allude to convulsions of nature, to inundations, and profound disturbances, to terrible deluges, in the midst of which mountains and volcanoes suddenly rose up."—Prehistoric America, page 527

None of these references and quotations we are offering were available to Joseph Smith in 1830.

Mr. Nadaillac says further concerning the great upheaval, "In the Sierra Nevada region, at various localities on the Pacific coast, numerous traces of the presence of man are met with. The discovery of implements or weapons at a depth of several hundred feet, in diversely stratified beds showing no trace of displacement, simply implies that the country was peopled many centuries before the arrival of the Spaniards, and that the inhabitants were witnesses of the convulsions of nature, of the volcanic phenomena, which brought about such remarkable changes."⁸

Cities Sunk in the Sea

The Book of Mormon says that during the great upheaval many great and notable cities were sunk. Some of these cities listed (3 Nephi 4: 32) were known to be along the west coast of South America according to previous descriptions in the Book of Mormon.

Here again we are confronted with the remarkable fact that although it was absolutely unknown in 1830 that there were cities beneath the sea off the coast of Ecuador, yet the Book of Mormon contained the information that cities had been sunk beneath the sea in this region.

Johnston's Universal Encyclopedia says concerning the west coast of South America, "The whole region is subject to earthquakes, one of which in 1822 destroyed several cities, and raised the coast four feet above its former level, which change of level proved permanent."⁹

Let us now consider a remarkable discovery made 30 years after the Book of Mormon had been published. Mr. Baldwin says,

James S. Wilson, esq., in 1860 discovered on the coast of Ecuador ancient or fossil pottery vessels, images and other manufactured articles, all finely wrought. Some of these articles were made of gold. The most remarkable fact connected with them is that they were taken from a stratum of ancient surface earth which was covered with a marine deposit six feet thick.

The ancient surface earth or vegetable mould, with its pottery, gold work and other relics of civilized life, was, therefore below the sea when that marine deposit was spread over it. This land, after being occupied by men, had subsided and settled below the ocean, remained there long enough to accumulate the marine deposit, and again be elevated to its former position above the level of the sea. Of these discoveries, Sir Roderick Murchison, at a meeting of the Royal Geological Society in 1862, says, "The discoveries which Mr. Wilson has made of the existence of the works of man in a stratum of mould beneath the sea level, and covered by several feet of clay, the phenomenon being persistent for 60 miles, are of the highest interest to physical geographers and geologists. The facts seem to demonstrate that, within the human period, the lands of the West Coast of Equatorial America were depressed and submerged, and that, after the accumulation of marine clays above the terrestrial relics, the whole coast was elevated to its present position."¹⁰

Remarkable Evidence From the Science of Seismology

The weird phenomena which accompany major earthquakes were absolutely unknown in 1830. There was no science of seismology at that time, yet the Book of Mormon purports to record in their proper sequence the phenomena that accompany the great upheavals.

In its eyewitness account of the great upheaval, these three terms are used concerning the quake: "Rocks did rend," "Dreadful groanings," "Tumultuous noises" (3 Nephi 4: 62).

Mr. E. J. Houston says, "After the actual quaking of the earth, the most wonderful and impressive thing is the great variety of sounds and noises. These occur not only while the earth waves are passing through the crust at any place, but also long before the principal shocks reach the place as well as long after they have passed."¹¹

After the great upheaval had ended, we find these remarkable words in the Book of Mormon:

Nevertheless, all these great and terrible things were done in about the space of three hours; and then behold, there was darkness upon the face of the land. And it came to pass that there was thick darkness upon all the face of the land, insomuch that the inhabitants thereof who had not fallen, could feel the vapor of darkness;

And there could be no light, because of the darkness; neither candles, neither torches; neither could there be fire kindled with their fine and exceeding dry wood, so that there could not be any light at all.—3 Nephi 4: 18-20.

Let us summarize:

There was thick darkness,
The vapors of darkness could be felt,
No fires could be kindled because of the darkness,
Many overcome by the vapors of darkness,

These statements sound fantastic and do not make sense except to seismologists. However, in 1830 there were no seismologists. The science of seismology had not yet been born. In an interview with a Berkeley, California, professor of science and authority on earthquakes, the author was informed that no one on earth in 1830 could have written an accurate account of the phenomena that attend major earthquakes in their proper sequence. The weird facts of seismology were unknown then.

Here are the facts every student of seismology now knows: In a major earthquake, the earth opens up and closes again. Immense quantities of carbonic and sulphurous gases are released from the interior of the earth. These gases cause immediate darkness. The gases are thick or heavy and can be felt. These gases do not support combustion, and therefore no fires can be built in their presence. Because the gases are heavy, they cling close to the ground. If a person will stand or otherwise keep his head above the gases, he can breathe; otherwise he will be overcome and suffocate.

Dr. Hartwig says, "Carbonic gas and carbureted hydrogen are two gases that often proceed from the earth's crust at various places. The former comes forth in incredible quantities in certain regions . . . a light dipped in carbon gas is immediately extinguished and every animal inhaling it is liable to instant suffocation."¹²

A Submarine Earthquake

From a news account published July 4, 1945:

Texas Island Shores Are Covered by Denizens of Deep Killed by Quake

Corpus Christi, Texas., July 4, 1934.—Fishermen who ventured out to Padre Island for a day of sport on the Fourth of July, were confronted by the sight of thousands of tons of dead fish, washed up on the shores of the island. Nauseating fumes, identified as sulphur dioxide, rose from the waters of the Gulf of Mexico so strong that persons walking on the beach found it difficult to breathe. The great piles of dead fish extended for about 40 miles along the shoreline . . . In some places the fish were stacked three feet deep. Sharks, kingfish, mackerel, trout, and every other kind of sea life in the region fell victim to the strange condition. Experienced fishermen estimated that 40,000 tons of fish lay on the beach with more being washed up all the time. Some of the fish were still alive when washed ashore, but were so overcome by the deadly fumes that they could not swim.¹³

Let us look at the facts squarely. We have two alternatives. We can believe the angel's story about Joseph Smith and the Book of Mormon or we can try to account for how an unlearned youth in 1830 could have written a tale of a terrible prehistoric upheaval with cities sunk beneath the sea, valleys that became mountains, and an earthquake that produced such apparently fantastic results as have been enumerated above and then have this tale substantiated in every detail by scientific exploration and archaeological investigation from 30 to 115 years after the book containing this strange tale is published.

God Moves in Mysterious Ways His Wonders to Perform

From the beginning of God's dealings with man, the Shepherd of Israel has carried his Shepherd's Rod. The work of the Lord has always been characterized by the remarkable, the marvelous, and the miraculous.

If the angel's story of the Book of Mormon is true, then we should expect that the contents of the book itself in their relationship to all known facts will manifest the qualities of the remarkable, the extraordinary, and the marvelous.

¹Quoted from Rebuilding Palestine According to Prophecy, by George T. B. Davis, pages 31-34.

²Inez Smith Davis, The Story of the Church, page 73.

³"The Bibliotheca SACRA," January, 1885, published at Oberlin, Ohio.

⁴Bancroft, Native Races, Volume 5, page 209.

⁵Nadaillac, Prehistoric America, page 400.

⁶C. Reginald Enoch, The Secret of the Pacific, page 310.

⁷Nadaillac, Prehistoric America, page 16.

⁸Nadaillac, Prehistoric America, page 37.

⁹Johnston's Universal Encyclopedia, Volume 2, pages 51, 52, Article "Chile."

¹⁰Baldwin, Ancient America, pages 274, 275.

¹¹E. J. Houston, The Atmosphere, Chapter 24.

¹²G. Hartwig, Volcanoes and Earthquakes.

¹³*Oakland Tribune*, July 4, 1945.

(The author wishes to thank Professor Isaac Ball of Berkeley, California, for suggestions and help in preparing material on seismology.)

Brother Gamet's One Hundred Years

ELDER LEVI GAMET will be one hundred years of age on June 3 if his good health continues. He was born on that date in the year 1848, in Pottawattomie County, Iowa, and was baptized December 1, 1861, at Little Sioux, Iowa, by F. W. Condit. He was ordained a priest in 1865 by D. H. Bays and H. Lytle, and an elder on June 6, 1880, by J. C. Crabb, J. F. Minton, and Z. F. Martin. On April 15, 1920, he was ordained a high priest by Apostles U. W. Greene and J. F. Curtis.

Brother Gamet was under appointment and labored in the north central states, the southern states, and other places. In recent years, he has been identified with the Grandview congregation, Kansas City, Kansas, and has been present at many meetings in Kansas City Stake and at General Conferences. He has been honored at general church gatherings as the oldest living member of the priesthood. It will be observed that he is older than the Reorganization of the church. He was baptized only a year after young Joseph Smith became President of the Reorganization and has been a priest since the close of the Civil War. These factors make his long life even more impressive. A great many members of Brother Gamet's family are active members of the church and have contributed much to its work in many fields. Brother Gamet has always been a strong supporter of the church. He has led an irreproachable life and has always been faithful to his trust as a minister.

Among the promises given to Brother Gamet in his patriarchal blessing is the following:

"Thy latter days shall be pleasant. Thy eve-time of life shall be filled with comfort and consolation. Thou shalt be entitled to an entrance into the rest promised those that are faithful to God."

Plans have been made in Kansas City Stake to give him special honors on his hundredth birthday.

We congratulate Brother Gamet on his splendid life and service to the church and on his attainment of this remarkable age in life.

Friends who wish to send him birthday cards and greetings may address him at 1115 N. 36th Street, Kansas City, Kansas.

Oriole Monitor's MANUAL

Prepared by the Department of Religious Education

$1

HERALD PUBLISHING HOUSE
Independence, Missouri

a new tract

Why We Believe in Divine Revelation Today

By A. B. PHILLIPS

10 for 25c 25 for 60c
50 for $1.10 100 for $2

HERALD PUBLISHING HOUSE
Independence, Missouri

They Are In Our Hearts

FOR EACH OF US, there are people in our yesterdays whom we cannot forget. Multiple thought of them does not wait to wing back on the gray breezes of Memorial Day. Our homage is not scheduled to dutiful ceremony; rather, it is spontaneous, for these folk lit altars in our hearts—memorials that need not plead holiday remembrance. The stream of gallant women who marched up the hills of yesterday, the ones who touched your life and mine, lived to the high call of holiday; and in its all-out spirit of emergency, subdued their problems, sorted the opportunities, and made their dreams live in those they loved. And courageously, loyal to the God-impress in humanity, they loved everyone. They suffered, they sacrificed, they caught hold of faith with the hands of exigency and drew a concourse of fellow travelers up the highroad in their wake. While they were with us, we were caught up in the simple splendor of their daily living and carried a bit further upward through the power awakened by their faith and vision. Forward! Upward! was their song. These are the unforgettables who passed your way and mine and left us with this song of life.

Glorious as is that song, it remains simply the echo of an old refrain to so very many of us, instead of the great incentive which lifts us out of our smaller selves to that larger stature of these gallant women.

WE ARE REMINDED by many conditions this memorial season that a great number of us are existing in spiritual ennui. Not really boredom—life today is such a carnival in America from where I am writing. But spiritually, we are “fillers” done up in artistic packaging, while the few become cornerstones to our generation. They are unforgettables in process. Some small demand is made of us, and we meet it well. Efficiency is our lever. Then, with the spiritual longevity of the night blooming cereus which breathes its transient loveliness for a fleeting moment and then withers, we withdraw and close the door of our larger statures. “In Memoriam” is too often a busy glance across the years where a fading vignette shrouded in lavender recalls the wan luster of Aunt Edith. Aunt Edith always put off helping out the neighbors until she had spare time. Needless to say, there was none to spare. Time is something we must sacrifice, because there is no terminal for the interesting personal things we plan for ourselves. Are we Memorial Day Aunt Ediths? Such memoriams must be resurrected with the organ’s roll and the granite-studded acre. We have no need for wreaths and tapers, however, to remember the women who live in our hearts this year because they truly lived in our yesteryear.

In Joseph’s City of Beauty, we see the gracious Emma at her open door. She has dignity in that larger value of exacting demands upon her own resources, but it is tempered by generosity to others. She welcomes the houseless, the orphan, the traveler, and in sacrificial exchange bids farewell to her husband and sons. The orbits of ten thousand homes broaden and rise because Emma Smith, the prophet’s wife, accepts the full responsibility of womanhood and fulfills it at its best in their midst. She is of those who are arrayed in white, because she bore great trials looking up. She is unforgettable.

There was a woman in your community and one in mine who left life’s best gifts with us. There are such women about us today. We treasure them, even if we do not share their gifts.

By Florence W. Simmons

IN AUSTRALIA, we hear a woman praying. Her spirit and heart intercommunicate prayer in all its august wonder and peace in tireless intercession to God—for others. Prayer is her music, and she has found the lost chord—for others. She strokes the suffering body, braves the unknown and dread disease. Faith is in her fingertips, and the sick recover. This gentle woman of great faith is strong in kindness. Emma Burton is unforgettable.

There are women today who live on this plane of gallantry in sequence to those who lived yesterday as redeeming forces to their generations. These, too, are unforgettable.

Who has to be reminded of a spring valley drenched with violets? Or an autumn hillside ripe with the timeless fragrance of harvest? Not those with the seeing eyes and the appreciative heart. They are unforgettable. So, too, is this woman whose beauty of personality reflects the graces of the seasons and whose life is a vital ministry to both young and old, to the accepted ones and those who know they are not. Though some of these folk have lost much of their semblance to the Image in which they were created, she loves them all. Prayerfully and well, she nurtures her family as a cherished stewardship for which she is responsible. But, her door is ever ajar, and always someone comes within for her help. They come weary, sick, and hungry; they leave
(Continued on page 22.)

- - - a home column feature - - -

"Whosoever Will . . . Is Called"

Behold, the field is white already to harvest, therefore, who desireth to reap, let him thrust in his sickle with his might and reap while the day lasts, that he may treasure up for his soul everlasting salvation in the kingdom of God; yea, whosoever will thrust in his sickle and reap, the same is called of God.—Doctrine and Covenants.

By Mrs. William Worth, Jr.

WE ARE ALL CALLED to work in the harvest of souls. The field is white and ready to harvest, but the reapers are all too few. How can we qualify ourselves for the great job?

Let us compare the harvest of souls to the harvest of farm crops. Does the farmer go out and haphazardly sow the seed and then wait for it to grow and mature so he can reap the harvest? No, certainly not! He very carefully clears the land of all debris, then plows and harrows the soil until it is fine and mellow. If the soil is in need of additional food, he broadcasts the proper fertilizer for the seed he plans to plant. Thus the ground is put in proper condition to receive the seed. Having done all this, the seed is planted; and as it grows, the weeds are kept out because they take much of the nourishment from the young plants. In this manner, the farmer diligently cares for the crop until it is matured and harvest time arrives. He is happy for the yield is abundant, and he feels amply repaid for the time and effort he put forth.

Much time and effort must also be put forth in preparing the "soil" for the harvest of souls. It must be well-prepared, just as the soil for the sowing of seed is, so that the harvest will be abundant. This time the seed is the Gospel of Christ. The kind of care and attention given the seed after it is planted and begins to grow will determine whether the harvest will be fruitful or not.

THE FARMER does not acquire his knowledge of farming quite by accident. He makes a scientific study of his chosen vocation. So, if it takes study on the part of the farmer to be successful in his work, it also stands to reason that we must study diligently in order to be laborers in the field of Christ.

"Study to show thyself approved, a workman that need not be ashamed of his labors" is an old admonition, but it is still necessary today. "Study the Three Standard Books for in them is contained much valuable information" continues to be good advice. Years ago our ministers were given this commandment which also holds true today, "And I give unto you a commandment, that you shall teach one another the doctrine of the kingdom [the principal promises of the gospel]; teach ye diligently and my grace shall attend you, that ye may be instructed more perfectly in theory, in principle, in doctrine, in the law of the gospel, in all things that pertain unto the kingdom of God, that is expedient for you to understand; of things both in heaven, and in earth, and under the earth; things which have been; things which are; things which must shortly come to pass; things which are at home;—that ye may be prepared in all things when I shall send you again, to magnify the calling where unto I have called you, and the mission with which I have commissioned you."

Again, "Treasure up in your mind continually the words of life."

From these statements we would gather that men, of both orders of priesthood, who are under the responsibility of preaching and teaching should be keen students of the word of God and the needs of men.

These commandments were given to the priesthood of our church; but this does not mean that the lay members should grope around in darkness or take the words of the preachers as law and all-truth. They have the same capacity for learning as the priesthood, but too often they are content with just going to a lecture, thinking it will give them the needed intelligence. The admonition, "Study to show thyself approved" applies to lay members, also. It is for them to realize that theirs is the job of helping prepare the minds of people so that the seed of the gospel can be planted. How are we, the lay members, to help in this great work unless we study?

WOMEN ARE LAYMEMBERS of the church but have an important part in the progress of the work. It might be well to see how they fit into the picture in light of the statement, "Whosoever will . . . is called."

We know a woman's place is in the home. And being devoted to her husband and children, she tries to make the home comfortable and pleasant—a haven of rest where the family can feel secure from the outside world and find the peacefulness of God's Spirit. The mother is the first teacher of the children. It is her great responsibility, shared by the father, to see that the children are brought up to love the Lord.

"Study to show thyself approved" applies to women also. They have the responsibility of helping their husbands in priesthood work, as well as training their sons for possible priesthood material.

It behooves each and everyone to "Thrust in his sickle with his might while the day lasts, that he might treasure up for his soul everlasting salvation in the kingdom of God; yea, whosoever will thrust in his sickle and reap, the same is called of God."

The Uncertain Trumpet Certainly Discredited

A member writes us a letter which makes another interesting chapter on the unreliability of Mormon church "records."

From our viewpoint, one of the unfortunate and objectionable things about the claims of Utah Mormons regarding Joseph Smith's alleged connection with polygamy is their ex parte nature, records made by those who had an interest to serve and where no one had any opportunity to cross-examine witnesses.

Most of the testimony offered by Utah has been discredited, some of it very much discredited, and the best they could produce was disbelieved by Judge John F. Philips when the question was in issue in his court.

Here is the letter:

In the Historical Record (Utah Mormon official magazine, of which Andrew Jensen, a polygamist to the end of his days, was editor) for May, 1887, there were published purported affidavits of Eliza M. (Partridge) Lyman and Emily D. P. Young, purportedly executed two months apart, but in almost identical wording. Both affiants (sisters) alleged they were "married or sealed" to Joseph Smith on May 11, 1843, by James Adams, a high priest, and both alleged Emma Smith, wife of the Prophet, was present.

Emma Smith gave her testimony about polygamy some years before these alleged affidavits were published in the Historical Record. Her statement was published in the Saints' Herald for October 1, 1879, in which she denied all knowledge of polygamy, so far as her husband was concerned. So here was a sharp conflict of testimony between these women, and, as between them, it remains a question of veracity: Who told the truth?

On this point, however, we recall the testimony of Joseph F. Smith before the Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections in 1904, and we quote:

"Senator Foraker: The church construes it, as I understand, to mean that she is in the hands of the Lord, to be destroyed by the Lord.

"Mr. Smith: By the Lord, if there is any destruction at all.

"Senator Pettus: Have there ever been in the past plural marriages without the consent of the first wife?

"Mr. Smith: I do not know of any, unless it may have been Joseph Smith himself."

This quotation is taken from the Proceedings Before the Committee on Privileges and Elections of the United States Senate in the Matter of the Proceedings against the Right of Hon. Reed Smoot from the State of Utah to Hold his Seat.—Volume 1, page 201.

This testimony supports Emma Smith as against the women who made the affidavits in question.

Now, frankly speaking, I have come to have little regard for the dependability of any Mormon records relating to this and other heresies of that body, and I only introduce what follows to show that their own history raises serious doubts about the truthfulness of the two Partridge sisters in making the affidavits—if they did execute them.

From their own History of the Church, Volume 5, by B. H. Roberts, we quote the following, pages 385 and 386:

"Thursday, (May) 11.—At 6 a.m., baptized Louisa Beeman, Sarah Alley, and others.

"Eight a.m., went to see the new carriage made by Thomas Moore, which was ready for traveling. Emma went to Quincy in the new carriage. I rode out as far as the prairie.

"Ten a.m., Brigham Young (and others) assembled in council," etc.

"Monday, 15—Emma having arrived at Yelrome, last night from Quincy, with the carriage, we rode home together."

From this account we are led to wonder when and where the alleged ceremonies could have taken place. Certainly any hour before 6 a.m., when the baptisms of several persons were performed, would have been unseasonable and therefore unlikely. Between some time after the baptisms took place, which could not have been conducted very quickly, and eight o'clock, was the only interval in which these alleged sealings could have taken place, all of which certainly challenges disbelief in these purported affidavits.

These items also bring us to a realization of the slowness of travel in those days: Emma started on the 11th of May to go to Quincy by "horse and buggy" (carriage), probably the lightest and easiest as well as fastest means of transportation of that day. Four days were required for Emma to go to and return from Quincy which is about fifty miles distant from Nauvoo.

Keeping this in mind, we take up our next question:

Both of these purported affidavits state the "sealing" was performed (1) May 11, 1843, by James Adams, a high priest, (2) at Nauvoo. We have satisfactory evidence that Judge James Adams could not have been in Nauvoo on May 11, 1843.

Let us relate briefly a few facts about this James Adams: From "Early Settlers of Sangamon County (Illinois)" we discover he was born January 24, 1783. He was a lawyer by profession and was elected probate judge of Sangamon County in "1823 or 1824" and served until his death on August 11, 1843. So he was over sixty years old at his demise.

Judge Adams had been deputy grand master of the Masons in Illinois and had come to Nauvoo when the lodge was begun there. In this way he became acquainted with the church, was baptized and later was ordained a high priest.

The writer some weeks ago secured access to official records of the Probate Court of Sangamon County, Illinois, and had photostat copies made of the records of certain proceedings of that court had on May 12, 1843. These records would not only be highly admissible but would be held to be conclusive evidence as to facts recited therein. From this record we quote:

"580

"Sangamon Probate Justice Court

"12th May 1843.

"Present James Adams Probate Justice of the Peace & c

"Edward Stapleford Administrator of Mary Bruce dec'd filed his report in the words following.

"To the Probate Justice of the Peace in & for Sangamon County Illinois I Edward Stapleford Administrator of Mary Bruce dec'd find no real or personal property to administer on. I therefore surrender the said administration
"May 10th 1843

"E. Stapleford

"Whereupon it is ordered that John H. Merriweather & Jacob Burn be & they are hereby released from responsibility as sureties for the said Edward Stapleford Administrator of the said Mary Bruce dec'd.
"May 12th 1843.

"J. Adams P.J.P.S.C.

"Sangamon Probate Justice Court

"12th May 1843

"Present James Adams Probate Justice of the Peace & c

"David Spear

"vs

"The Estate of Joseph W. Hornsby dec'd

Plaintiff claimed on a/c for $504.00

1843 May 12th Plaintiff Orville Paddock Daniel Ragsdale, William Lowry & Isaac P. Spear to prove his account, and on hearing their testimony. It appears that the claims of David Spear are established to the amount of $504.00

"It is therefore ordered that the claims of the said David Spear against the estate of the said Joseph W. Hornsby dec'd be and the same are hereby allowed in the sum of $504.00"

Here we have conclusive proof that Judge Adams was present in person in his court room in Springfield, Illinois, on May 12 and—it would of course be presumed—during court hours.

I have before me a map of Illinois, and find that as a "crow would fly"—that is, by a direct route, straight line, the distance is about one hundred five miles. It is reasonable to believe the distance over then established roads—such as were established as early as 1843, was considerably greater than the direct "air" line. By the shortest routes over present state highway the distance is from one hundred fifty to one hundred seventy-five miles.

There were of course no railways, no stage, no pony express (which carried mail only) at the time. Judge Adams was well along in years, nearing the end of his allotted time, and could neither have run nor walked nor ridden a horse or horses a hundred miles between even early morning of one day and court or business hours of the next.

We would say and do confidently aver that these court records conclusively disprove the allegations in the Partridge affidavits.

And thus it is and always has been with the so-called "evidences" presented to prove Joseph Smith was a polygamist. All this failure of proof strongly supports our contention that he was not implicated with either the doctrine or practice of plural wifery.

J. U. NIUS.

EDITORIAL NOTE—When Emily D. P. Young gave her testimony in the Temple Lot case, she testified she married Brigham Young in 1844, though "sealed" to Joseph Smith for eternity, "by proxy"! What does that do to her alleged affidavit? Also the Historical Record, on page 240, says the marriage(?) was on March 4, 1843, whereas on page 237, in a sketch of Emily, she is quoted as saying it was on March 8, 1843.

That the James Adams referred to in the purported affidavits and Judge James Adams were one and the same, is evident, the Historical Record having but one James Adams in the index.

When Joseph Smith went to Springfield, under arrest, to appear before Judge Pope, he and associates were four days in reaching Springfield, thirty-two miles being the greatest distance covered on any one day. They were four days in returning to Nauvoo.

ISRAEL A. SMITH.

An Error Corrected

False statements by clergymen of other churches at Chilliwack, British Columbia, prompted one of our members to run an advertisement in the Chilliwack Progress of March 24, 1948. After quoting our Epitome of Faith, it read:

The world headquarters of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints is in Independence, Missouri (The home town of the president, Harry Truman.) The Reorganized L. D. S. Church has been recognized by the State courts of the U. S. as the legal successor of the church established by Joseph Smith in 1830. The above statement of beliefs has always been our beliefs and convictions.

The church which has its headquarters at Salt Lake City, Utah, is in no way connected with our organization. (The founders of the so-called "Mormon" church, Salt Lake City, left our organization at Nauvoo, Illinois, in 1846.) The doctrine of polygamy was introduced into their church at Utah in 1852 by Brigham Young, so it can readily be seen that it was never taught by the Reorganized Church. The doctrine of polygamy, Adam God worship, and things contrary to the Holy Scriptures should never be connected with the name of Joseph Smith, Reorganized Latter Day Saints, or Book of Mormon, and men who profess to do justly as Christians or believe in the religious freedom of this nation or in fair play will cease to connect those doctrines with the church known as the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

ISRAEL A. SMITH.

Education, Free and Otherwise

With an attempt at righteous indignation, the editors of America, a Catholic journal published by the Jesuit Fathers, protest because Baldwin-Wallace College, a Methodist coeducational institution at Berea, Ohio, requires compulsory chapel attendance and the enrollment of all its students in classes of religion. It seems that 163 Roman Catholic students attending the Protestant college had been censured by the officials in the chancery of their diocese for attending this school. Furthermore, Catholic leaders are criticizing the Protestant college for making Bible courses required study of all its students.

"We doubt if a single Catholic college in the United States requires non-Catholic students either to attend Catholic religious services or Catholic religion courses," say the editors of America. "Protestants would be the first to protest should a Catholic college follow the Baldwin-Wallace pattern."

There is certainly no point in this statement. If a private college, owned and operated by a denomination, requires its students to live in harmony with its rules and scholastic requirements, it is not violating the principle of freedom of conscience. Students attend these colleges because of the principles they hold and teach. They are not public nor state institutions and are free to educate the youth in harmony with their religious beliefs. We see no reason why Catholic colleges should not require all of their students to attend religious services and take courses in religion. This is their right and privilege. It is also the privilege of Protestant colleges to ask all their students to subscribe to the principles which make those colleges effective centers of training for the denomination that supports them.

If the editors of America wish to consider public education which is not free, let them look at the public schools of New Mexico, where Catholicism is dominating scores of tax-supported institutions. A startling exposé by Frank S. Mead in the Christian Herald gives the facts concerning these conditions. He shows that religious freedom in New Mexico today is threatened by Catholic encroachment on the public schools. The church is using its enormous influence to direct and control the public-school policy. He states that the church catechism and "holy Marys" are being taught as a regular feature of the public-school curriculum and that Protestant children are required to learn the catechism and often are promoted according to their proficiency in reciting it. This writer also states that there are 129 Catholic nuns employed as regular schoolteachers in public schools in the northern part of New Mexico alone.

Thus do Roman Catholic leaders shout for Protestants to guarantee freedom of conscience by not requiring Catholic students who enroll in Protestant colleges to attend chapel or study the Bible in class; yet, at the same time, the Catholics are seeking control of the public schools, and where this is not possible, they are demanding that the state use public funds to support Catholic private schools.

If America is to remain free, if religious liberty is to be preserved, every citizen must understand the sinister program the Roman Catholic hierarchy is planning for the public-school system whereby it shall eventually be subservient to the church.

M. L. N.

—Signs of the Times.

ISRAEL A. SMITH.

Our Church's Story

A Pictorial Version of the Story of the Church

by Henry Anderson

In cartoon picture form the Story of our Church is given. It begins with Young Joseph's bewilderment in trying to select a church to join, his going to the woods to seek God's advice, the organization of our church, the trials of the Saints, and finally the reorganization in 1860.

60c

HERALD PUBLISHING HOUSE

Independence, Missouri

Our Sleeping Pioneers

Elisha Werett lived one hundred seven years ago. So did his neighbors, Jerusha, Laura, Ira, Rebecca, and Cordella. Elisha and his neighbors knew Joseph Smith, because they were early church pioneers in Nauvoo. Now they lie in a little cemetery near the "City Beautiful." For years, this and surrounding land belonged to William Marks, who was president of the Nauvoo Stake at the time of Joseph and Hyrum Smith's death. In 1873, William Marks and his wife deeded approximately six of 160 acres of farm land to the Reorganized Church to be used as a cemetery, although it had been used as a church cemetery by grant of the owner since about 1840.

For at least five decades; possibly longer, the cemetery has not been in use; and for some time, it has been unkept. Perhaps no close living relatives remain to care for the graves. Despite its neglect, this spot is of historical interest; a number of early church pioneers buried there were prominent members of the Restoration Movement in the 1840's.

INSIDE THE FENCED area, which is the cemetery proper, stately oak and elm trees bear clusters of new spring leaves on their outstretched branches. Stippled patterns of sunlight fall on the ground which is heavily laden with underbrush. Broken hickory branches accent the earth's dense covering. The whole scene presents a perfect contrast between a long-forgotten cemetery and a modern, well-landscaped burial grounds.

One would hardly think this area to be a cemetery without investigating its interior with an observing eye. Markers are very obscure because of the foliage, except for the taller, more elaborate stones. Many have toppled over and are partially covered with soil. Others are about ready to fall. Limestone markers are the most prevalent; only two or three are made of granite.

Most slabs are flat, about three inches thick, and either arched or

Here Is the Writer . . .

Glen Cargyle

Eleven of Glen's twenty-one years were spent in the West Indies. Since his return shortly before the war, he has become interested in places of historical significance to the church.

After college, he plans to enter the field of radio as sound effect technician. Now at Graceland, he is promoting the idea of a campus radio station.

square with rounded corners on top. Moss has grown over many of the names on the stones. Others are eroded to the extent that they are not clear.

At different places in the cemetery, the graves of four families have picket and rail fences around their stones. These fences are weather beaten and dilapidated. One picket fence was erected by friends of the deceased; this is indicated on one of the fence posts. The high mounds over the graves are unusual in that most of them are over a century old.

By GLEN CARGYLE

ODDITIES IN marking the stones is an interesting feature. The word "consort" is used often in reference to a companion. Most stone markings begin with, "In memory of" or "Sacred to the memory of." Nearly every stone gives the age by years, months, and days. A few give the years, months, days and hours. Such is the case of one which reads:

Sacred to the memory of Miss Marian S. Lyon
Daughter of Col. Windsor P. and Slyvia P. Lyon who donated his life
March 19 A. D. 1842
Aged 2 yrs 8 months
17 days and 6 hours
The little Rose
Sleeps here in peace.

Notice the "Miss" preceding the infant's name and reference to her father who "donated his life March 19 A. D. 1842." One marker even indicates the date the deceased left England. It reads: "Francis and Elizabeth Clark from England in 1841."

The most recent grave is marked 1882; a large number of stones are dated in the early 1840's. A cholera epidemic at that time killed many Saints—which probably accounts for the early death of a number of those who are buried in the cemetery. Mary Pilkington was only fifteen years, three months, and twenty-five days old at the time of her death. S. G. Hufeaker died at the age of twenty-seven years and ten months. Rhoda E. King passed away when only nine months and twelve days old. One wife died at forty-four; her husband followed two years later. One man died at the age of twenty-four, another at thirty-one, and another at thirty-three.

New Horizons

There are probably other stones among the tangle of poison vines and weeds. However, not too many graves appear on the grounds. There may be some which are unmarked or perhaps the original markers have deteriorated. Many were undoubtedly made of wood, which has long since rotted.

Mark Siegfried of Independence, who for many years lived in Nauvoo, supervised and aided in constructing the fence around the cemetery after the surveyor of Hancock County located the boundaries. He states that a number of the graves in a plot on the hill were moved to their present location in the cemetery when the road was cut through and widened from the flat to the temple grounds.

A big improvement could be made in the appearance of this sacred place. With the aid of some weed-killing chemicals, a few sickles, and rakes, wonders could be accomplished. One trimming each year would be sufficient.

Zion's Leaguers from all parts of the Middle West will be at youth camp in Nauvoo during the summer. In one day, an organized group of workers could put the cemetery in fine shape.

Such a clean-up would be a tribute to our sleeping pioneers. Had it not been for their courage and sacrifice, we would not have the heritage we have today.

Sketch by the author.

The Power of Thought

By ISABELLA SHAW

WHILE I WAS LIVING in Independence, a new and challenging idea came to me as I listened to Evan Fry speak on "Thought" one morning. After returning to Canada, I attended a series of teacher training classes and my ideas grew into a new philosophy from which I have derived a great deal of satisfaction and happiness.

As human beings, we are created by God and either make or unmake ourselves by the thoughts we entertain through life. We either climb steadily toward divine perfection or slide downward to the animal level.

The mind is the master weaver of character. By controlling our thoughts, we can, to a large extent, shape our own destiny. A God-like character does not come about by chance; it is the result of continued effort in proper thinking. On the other hand, a bad disposition develops naturally from mean and degrading thoughts. We read in the Scriptures that as a man thinks in his heart, so he is.

Our spirit takes on the physical body at birth, and as time goes on, it reveals itself as being either weak or strong. It is like a magnet, attracting that which is within it—love or hate; faith or fear. If you would have freedom of mind, you must be the master of thoughts. Trace the effects of them on yourself and others; when necessary, learn to control or alter them. God answers our prayers only when they are sincere and in harmony with our thoughts.

By our right of creation, we are progressive and are given all the facilities to develop a Christlike nature. In fact, we, too, are creators. Life is and always was justly ordered. Law and order, not confusion, are the dominating principles in God's universe. If your life is one of disorder and confusion, change your thinking habits.

Aim at a good goal and encourage desires that harmonize with it. Purposeful thought will stimulate success and prosperity. Doubt is the forerunner of weak habits which spell failure.

We cannot always choose the circumstances under which we live, but we can choose the condition of our minds. Consider your mind the master of your body. Good health or disease is the offspring of our thinking. Fear can kill; happy thoughts produce vigor and well-being. If you would heal your body, heal first your mind.

On the faces of those who have made a success of life, we see wrinkles of sympathy and compassion—but these are the fine etchings of clean, purposeful thinking. To men and women of this caliber, age is kind, and the years bring pleasant memories.

If we would build the kingdom, we must ever cherish a vision of it in our minds and hearts. To desire is to obtain.

Seek and Thou Shalt Find

By Dennis Muir

I climbed a hill one day,
In search of knowledge, friendship,
love.

With carefree heart and purpose light,
I made my search
Unthinking that around me
Lay the things I sought.

Now, too late, I see Those things were with me day by day.
Too late?

No, there are other hills to climb,
And knowledge, friendship, love
Will always lie in wait.

Dear God, let those
Who now are climbing Graceland's
Hill
Give of their strength
And giving, find their soul's reserve.

The Restoration Movement

(Continued from page 9.)

under the inspiration of the Spirit, which contains a line, "The pebble has dropped in the water, and the waves circle round with the shock." Without doubt that line referred to the Restoration Movement, which Christ would have said began "without observation" and was like "a grain of mustard seed planted in the ground," or, as this modern parable would express it, like "a pebble dropped in the water," practically unobserved at the time by the world, but the waves were destined to circle out with the shock.

It was much more than a pebble dropped in the water. God set in motion forces that were to shake the world, and transform the world to the accomplishment of all his purposes. The waves mount high and they threaten to leave standing only those nations and those groups of people who are willing to accept Christ as the Prince of Peace, the Savior of the world, and find themselves willing to serve God and Christ. A great struggle is developing between Christ and anti-Christ.

We who believe in the Restoration Movement may well consider further lines in the hymn to which I have referred, "Let us shake off the coals from our garments, and arise in the strength of the Lord. Let us break off the yoke of our bondage and be free in the joy of his word."

The Anonymous Giant

(Continued from page 11.)

governed." There is a still higher degree of liberty which exists by the active desire of the governed. God aims at that, because only in the land where that kind of liberty is breathed is there any hope of lasting and effective obedience. He will attain his end. Can we anticipate his compulsions by our own obedience?

Woe to us who live in the days of the final struggles and have our part in them. Foes and famines may strike us, too, as they did the minority of Jews in rebellious Canaan of old until each judge arose to deliver them. We must be comforted by the word Moroni left us: "by this ye may know that the work of the Father has commenced upon all the face of the land." In his victory, and only thus, can we win. But that is our comfort. Jesus comes to deliver us. Nothing less can we trust. More we do not need. May I conclude with a chapter of the Bible written to our day—the last chapter of Ecclesiastes. However garbled its present sentence structure is, its meaning is clear, and it is still nearly as magnificent as when it was first written!

"Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth, while the evil days come not . . . while the sun, or the light, or the moon, or the stars, be not darkened . . . In the days when the keepers of the house shall tremble, and the strong men shall bow themselves . . . Also when they shall be afraid of that which is high, and fears shall be in the way . . . Vanity of vanities, saith the preacher, all is vanity . . . Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter: Fear God and keep his commandments, for this is the whole duty of man."

They Are in Our Hearts

(Continued from page 16.)

refreshed. It is Mother Edwards in England. She wears a crown of love. She is unforgettable.

MEMORIAL TIME does not find all of today's people in that legato state in which one partakes of neither the bitter tonics of life nor of its sweetest cup. Too many have savored the bitter and are working night and day to reclaim lands, repair shattered houses, restore warmth and security to broken families. So many of the earth are humbled to their knees, seeking a God they had not bothered to find before. So many in the far stretches of the world are reaching past the barricades of old formalities and racial distinctions with hearts suddenly alive and the open, helping hand. They are drinking in the full sweetness life offers those who transcend self in the "me and mine" to include the struggling ones about them.

Some of us have forgotten, if ever we knew, how amazingly alive we can feel—the fresh, clear wine of joy that tingles the soul when one is traveling the highroad that draws to its hearthside the sick and the homeless. It is the road of a great incentive, a great love, an enduring faith. And it may lead, wonderfully laden, from our kitchen to their kitchen, from our medium-stocked store to their scantier one, from our virile hand to their feeble one. But it lifts us above the babel of Martha's "many things" to the splendor of living completely, richly, and in continuous processing—the purifying element of daily sacrifice—for others.

Stewards of the home—love, faith, and prayer for others; these are the hallmarks of those we honor and will never forget. They are the truly great ones of the earth. They are unforgettables!

Pleasanton, Iowa, Branch

The George Morey Historical Society wishes to invite former and present members of the Pleasanton, Iowa, Branch, also all descendants of Grandfather George Morey to attend the branch home-coming day on June 6, 1948. All-day services will be held, church school and communion service in the morning, a basket dinner in the community or city hall, in honor of J. R. Keown's 92nd birthday, he being the oldest living relative of Elder George Morey. In the afternoon a program will be held at the church in commemoration of the organization of the church and of the branch. Visitors are asked to bring well-filled baskets.

LUCY KEOWN.

2517 East Grand Des Moines, Iowa

Note of Thanks

To the many friends who so kindly remembered me on my birthday with messages of commendation and encouragement, I extend my thanks and good wishes. I am now an inmate of Rest Haven, 9904 Winner Road, Independence, Missouri.

CHRISTIANA SALYARDS.

Name Omitted

A member of the church whose address is Box 151, Braman, Oklahoma, has written to us asking for information but has neglected to sign her name. If this note comes to her attention, will she please write us so that we can answer her. Box 151 Braman, Oklahoma

BULLETIN BOARD

Southwestern Iowa District Music Institute

A music institute for the Southwestern Iowa District will be held at Council Bluffs, Iowa, on June 25, 26, and 27, under the direction of Franklyn S. Weddle. On Friday evening, there will be a banquet. Those planning to attend should make reservations with Mrs. Lois Spence, 199 Test Street, Council Bluffs, by June 18. All branch pastors and music directors are urged to attend.

HOMER A. DOTY,
District Music Supervisor.

Central Nebraska District Conference

The Central Nebraska District Conference will be held at Inman, Nebraska, on June 4, 5, and 6. A young people's rally and luncheon is scheduled for 5:30 p.m. Friday. A business meeting will be held at 2 p.m. Saturday for the election of General Conference delegates and district officers and the presentation of reports. Services are planned for both Sunday morning and afternoon. Apostle D. T. Williams, Seventy and Mrs. A. L. Loving are to be present.

JAY H. BUTLER,
District Supervisor.

Northeastern Nebraska District Conference

The semi-annual conference of the Northeastern Nebraska District will be held at Omaha on June 6 for the election of delegates to General Conference, the approval of recommendations for ordinations, and business matters pertaining to the reunion. For further information, address Albert Livingston, president, 4742 Capitol Avenue, Omaha, Nebraska, or Carl T. Seif, secretary, 2582 Whitmore Street, Omaha.

New York District Conference

The New York District Conference will be held May 29 and 30 at Buffalo, New York. Special musical program Saturday at 7:30 p.m. Activities of Sunday include a prayer service at 9:00 a.m.; church school, 9:45; preaching at 11:00; lunch at noon; business session, 2:30 p.m.; and a vesper service at 4:00 p.m. Apostle George Lewis and Bishop Don Chesworth are to be present.

WALTER O. SIMPSON,
District President.

Northern Michigan District Youth Convention

The young people of Northern Michigan District will hold a convention at the Boyne City Church, June 11-13. Elders W. Blair McClain and Warren Chelline will be present. The convention will open with a campfire worship service on Friday evening. All young people and their leaders are invited to attend. For further information, contact Delbert Dodds, Boyne City, Michigan.

Third Annual Regional Youth Conference at Kirtland

The third annual regional youth conference will be held in Kirtland, Ohio, on June 19 and 20. The region includes Ohio, West Virginia, and Pennsylvania, but all young people are welcome. Those planning to attend should mail their registration and fee (75c) to Charles Brockway, 204 White Pond Drive, Akron 13, Ohio, by June 7. Those who attend the banquet must send $1 with their registrations, as seating is limited and only the early applicants can be sure of tickets. The conference convenes on Saturday, 11 a.m., Eastern Daylight saving time. Bishop G. L. DeLapp, Apostle D. Blair Jensen, and Elders John Booth and Ray Ashenhurst will be present.

Blue Water Reunion

Reservations for tents and cots may be made with Noble Gault, 18475 Floral, Box 375, Route 2, Farmington, Michigan. For reservations for cabins, rooms, cottages, or trailers, contact E. E. Smith, 1227 Varney, Port Huron, Michigan. The reunion will be held July 24 to August 1.

Camp Yopeca

Two camps are to be held this year at Lake Doniphan, formerly Gardner's Lake, near Excelsior Springs, Missouri. The first camp by the beautiful lake will be Saturday, June 12, to Saturday, June 19. The second camp will be Saturday, June 19, to Saturday, June 26.

Camp Yopeca is for young people 15 to 18 inclusive. Special permission may be granted for a few slightly younger or older.

Each camp will open on Saturday afternoon, with campers checking in at 2:00 o'clock, and will close immediately after lunch the following Saturday.

A registration fee of $1.00 for each week should be forwarded with the application blank to Carl Mesle, Camp Director, The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri. The additional $13.00 will be paid on arrival at camp.

Send today for your registration materials. All registrations should be in the mail not later than June 6.

Campers from all the stakes and from Independence are invited. Plan to spend a glorious week swimming, boating, and having fun at the campfires, with crafts, in devotions, and just having a good time. Girls will be housed in the Lodge and in Hilltop Cabin, while the fellows will be lodged in the cabins across the lake. Adult cabin counselors will be assigned to each unit.

A very small fee will be charged for craft materials, but aside from that bring very little spending money. Pop and candy will be sold at the canteen after the noon and evening meals. A medical examination card will be mailed each applicant at the time the application is received. Bring the completed card to camp with you.

Books and "Heralds" Wanted

Mary Ann Cross, Washington, Oklahoma, wants as many copies of the series of Book of Mormon articles by Evan Fry as she can get. She also wants the book Indian Maiden and Her White Deer. Please write stating price and condition of book before mailing.

Harry Hearn, 113 1/2 East Wabasha, Winona, Minnesota, needs a copy of The Instructor. It must be in fair to good condition.

Requests Prayers

I ask an interest in your prayers and I shall pray for you in return.

Mrs. J. H. TOON.

Box 191
West Sacramento, California

Elder Israel Goheen, Route 5, Gladwin, Michigan, requests prayers that he may be healed of a heart ailment which is hindering him in his ministry.

Prayers are requested for Mrs. Nina Poland, 2419 Raskob Street, Flint, Michigan, who fell recently and is suffering great pain.

Mrs. Carl Oakleaf, Lindsborg, Kansas, asks the prayers of the Saints that she may receive spiritual guidance.

Elmer Anderson, Copley Hospital, Aurora, Illinois, requests prayers that his health may be restored. His family needs him, and he also wants to be able to continue his work in the church. Friends may write to him at the Hospital or his home address (Seneca, Illinois).

Mrs. Donie Pugh, Route 4, Brewton, Alabama, asks the prayers of the Saints that she may be healed if it is God's will.

Mrs. J. Hocutt of Kingsford Heights, Indiana, requests prayers for her small daughter, Helen, that she may be healed of her affliction.

Prayers are requested for the widow and family of Theodore Miller, who died May 12.

Mrs. Mary McDonald asks to be remembered in the prayers of the Saints that she may be healed of cancer or that the pain may not be so severe. She attended Graceland in 1910-11.

Mrs. Faye Hotop, Drasco, Arkansas, asks prayers for her aged mother, who has to move and can find no place to live; her son, who is suffering from war fatigue; her granddaughter, who has a skin infection; and herself. Mrs. Hotop's husband died last year, and she is having difficulty making a living.

ENGAGEMENTS

Longanecker-Landsberg

Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Lansberg announce the engagement of their daughter, Marcene, to Edwin Longanecker, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Longanecker of Lawrence, Kansas. Both are students at the University of Kansas. The wedding will take place in June.

Gregory-Vail

Mrs. George Wehlitz announces the engagement of her daughter, Ramona Vail of Portland, Oregon, to Chester E. Gregory, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Gregory of Vancouver, British Columbia. Ramona and Chester are both attending Graceland College.

Reunion Schedule-1948

No. Dakota	Jun. 11-Jun. 13	Am. Leg. Pk., Detroit Lakes, Minnesota
E. Montana	Jun. 19-Jun. 27	Fairview, Mont.
Texas	Jun. 25-July 4	Bandera, Texas
Owen Sound & Toronto	Jun. 26-July 4	Port Elgin, Ont.
New York & Philadelphia	July 3-July 11	Deer Park
Southwest	July 3-July 11	Arkansas City, Kansas
Gulf States	July 9-July 18	Brewton, Ala.
W. Colorado	July 10-July 11	Delta, Colorado
Manitoba	July 10-July 11	Winnipeg, Man.
Central Missouri	July 10-July 18	Odessa, Missouri
Saskatchewan	July 10-July 18	Sylvan Lake, Alberta
Alberta	July 19-July 26	Gardner Lake
Zion	July 17-July 25	Nauvoo, Illinois
Nauvoo	July 17-July 25	Onset, Mass.
So. New England	July 17-July 25	Asilomar, Monterey, California
Northern California	July 17-July 25	Blue Water, Michigan
Flint-Pt. Huron-Detroit-Windsor	July 24-Aug. 1	Paris, Tennessee
Kentucky & Tennessee	July 25-Aug. 1	Silver Lake, Washington
Northwest	July 30-Aug. 8	Erie Beach, Ontario, Canada
Chatham-London	July 30-Aug. 8	Liahona Park
Ken. & So. Michigan	July 31-Aug. 8	Woodbine, Iowa
Mo. Valley	July 31-Aug. 8	Brooksville, Me.
Maine	July 31-Aug. 8	Pacific Palisades
So. California	July 31-Aug. 8	Park of the Pines
No. & West. Michigan	Aug. 5-Aug. 15	Kirtland, Ohio
Kirtland	Aug. 6-Aug. 15	Racine, Missouri
Reunion of the Ozarks	Aug. 1-Aug. 8	Pawnee, Okla.
Oklahoma	Aug. 7-Aug. 15	Race Track, Montana
W. Montana	Aug. 7-Aug. 15	Prescott, Arizona
Arizona	Aug. 8-Aug. 15	Clear Fork Cp., Hot Spgs., Ark.
Arkansas & Louisiana	Aug. 9-Aug. 15	Chetek, Wisc.
Minnesota & Wisconsin	Aug. 9-Aug. 16	Stewartsville, Missouri
Far West	Aug. 12-Aug. 22	Bedford, Ind.
So. Indiana	Aug. 21-Aug. 29	Cash, Michigan
Eastern Michigan	Aug. 14-Aug. 22	Hagerman, Idaho
Idaho	Aug. 14-Aug. 21	Guthrie Center, Iowa
Des Moines	Aug. 15-Aug. 21	Lamoni, Iowa
Lamoni	Aug. 15-Aug. 22	Brush Creek, Ill.
S. E. Illinois	Aug. 20-Aug. 29	Colorado Springs
Eastern Colorado	Aug. 20-Aug. 29	Colorado

Mary A. Burlington
1510½ Jules
St. Joseph, Missouri

92367
18
h

On the Banks of the Mississippi

Nauvoo Camp

June 6-13, 1948—First Meal, June 6 - 6:00 P.M.

Ages: 15-18 — $15.00 Total Fee

Send $1.00 with Registration

Swimming

Boating

Crafts

Excursions

Worship

Campfires

The Mansion House—On the Hill Above the River

Registrations due May 31

Write to Department of Religious Education

The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri

The Nauvoo House—Center of Camp Activity

Photo by Marvin M. McDole

“To Love and to Cherish”

THE Saints Herald

VOLUME 95

JUNE 5, 1948

NUMBER 23

www.LatterDayTruth.org

To Love and to Cherish

AUDITORIUM NEWS

Since the day we first met, our love has grown steadily. Such a love demands a shrine, so we took our marriage vows before the altar of the house of God. There our covenant was made sacred to us by prayers of thanksgiving and blessing offered by a minister whom God chose and endowed with his Spirit to perform such holy ordinances. As we stood before him, our joy was increased, because we knew that he was deeply interested in us. Our friends were with us, too, to join the minister in asking God's blessing upon us.

Together we shall walk the way of life, sharing our best from this day on. Life will be happier, more complete, for both of us. We each will be enriched by the treasures of the other's personality. Still we are not of ourselves complete—we need the watch care of our Heavenly Father and the sustaining fellowship of good friends throughout our lives.

As the years pass, we shall visit this shrine again—many times. If there are children in our home, we shall bring them before this same altar that God's blessing may be asked upon them. We shall bring them here for baptism, also. Someday, perhaps, a son or daughter of ours may stand here with a loved one to be united in marriage. Then we shall listen as they take their vows and relive this day, praying that their lives may be as blessed as ours.

—GLAUDE A. SMITH,
Pastor, Stone Church

IN THIS ISSUE

EDITORIAL:

Journalistic Vacation 3

OFFICIAL:

Music for General Conference 4

ARTICLES:

Shoes for Europe's Needy 4

We Can Have Lasting Peace, by Milton R. Young 5

Union Based on Christianity 6

"Be Not Afraid," by Ruby Tinkham 7

There Is Power in Prayer 8

The Scoffer, by Mabel Williams Crayne 9

The Supper-time of the Lord, by Hubert Case 10

Other Sheep I Have, by Roy Weldon 12

Worship Suggestions for July, by Sarah Van Fleet 16

Advice to the Bride, by Alice Burgess 18

Advice to the Groom, by F. M. McDowell 19

Sketches in Black and White, by Aleta Runkle 20

Definitions Wanted, Answer by A. R. Gilbert 21

Briefs 22

Bulletin Board 22

EVANGELIST RAY WHITING, in a recent report, writes:

"Fourteen people were baptized at the close of my series in Tulsa, Oklahoma. One more gave her name for baptism in Muskogee, and I baptized a married Catholic woman Saturday at the close of my week in Oklahoma City. She is the second Catholic I have baptized this year. She is also the thirtieth person to be baptized following my services this year."

ELDER J. H. SIMONS of Flint, Michigan, reports two baptisms at Flint on April 25 and two candidates who have given their names for baptism. He also states that he was recently associated with Elder John Banks of Midland, Michigan, where three have been baptized and further additions are anticipated.

EVANGELIST JOHN R. GRICE, in a letter dated May 24, writes:

"Yesterday we held a baptismal service at Knobnoster, Missouri, and six candidates were immersed. We may have more before we are through. There are some who will not take the step at this time, no doubt, but the seed has been sown in their hearts, and we trust it may spring into fruition at some future date."

THE "LONDON FREE PRESS" for Saturday, May 22, features a picture of Almer W. Sheehy, pastor of the London Branch, standing at the door of the new mission, which is located at 1321 Dundas Street at Highbury Avenue in London. This is the result of the expansion program planned by the church. Dr. E. V. Shute, counselor to Pastor Sheehy, is director of the project.

JOHN DARLING of the Department of Religious Education will direct the youth camp to be held at Colorado Springs, Colorado. Edna Easter and Lyle Woodstock will be in charge of the Nauvoo Camp. Both camps begin on June 6.

DR. FLOYD McDOWELL recently addressed the Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, congregation. Following this engagement, he went to Columbia University, New York, to see his son-in-law, William M. Wise, receive his Doctor's Degree.

Journalistic Vacation

THIS EDITORIAL is reaching its completion in beautiful Forest Park, St. Louis, where the city fathers have conveniently set up a picnic table that can be converted with very little trouble into an admirable temporary office. This office is beautiful. Across a few yards of pretty green grass there is a lovely lagoon, its surface rippled by a summer breeze. Beyond is a pretty hill, topped by a romantic pavilion with a red-tiled roof. The whole scene is made wonderful by a cloud-laced, blue sky and a soft, honey-amber sunshine that is possible only in the Middle West. The editorial could have been written in the home of friends, where pleasant conversation was much easier, or in a hotel room, where there was no inspiration. But here in the beauty of nature one may share the meditations of God, and ought to be able to write anything that is good and beautiful. Sunday, we worshiped with the church people, enjoyed their kindness and hospitality. Monday we visited the beautiful gardens, the fine art museum, and the scenic wonders of the city. Today, alas, an editorial deadline must be met.

THIS VACATION has brought on a few odd reflections. One of them concerns a very common experience, and you may have felt the same way about it. For the past eighteen years, the boys on the truck have faithfully hidden, twice a day, somewhere in the hedge or in the tree at the front of the house, a rather bulky assortment of reading matter in the form of a newspaper. It is a game we play. Sometimes I win the game and find it. And when I do, I feel obliged to read it, because I have paid for it or will pay for it if the collector catches me. Twice a day for eighteen years this has been going on. Another fact that seemed quite unrelated was the feeling of vertigo that appeared about the same time each day.

The relationship of these two facts did not occur to me until recently when I was away from home on an extended trip. For days I did not bother to read the strange newspapers I saw; and for those same days, I had no distress in the stomach. This seemed remarkable, and for an experiment I extended my newspaper vacation. It continued to work—no paper, no stomach-ache. Apparently what I read worried me, and physical discomfort followed. The old adage, "Ignorance is bliss," is true for a little while, even if it leads to ruin. It can't last long, but it is fun while it lasts.

I know I can't go on this way very long without losing touch with some of life's most important current facts. Sometime I must take up my papers again, regardless of the disturbance to my equanimity and emotional life. An intelligent and civilized existence is not possible without a newspaper. When this trip is over, I shall reach for the 'phone and order my papers again. Whoever would keep informed of the state of sin and sorrow in the world must bear his burden of ulcers in the stomach and troubled nerves. You can have peace of mind, at a price. But when the price is ignorance, it is too high.

One thing should be noted. The unpleasantness that causes the ulcers is not the fault of the newspaper; it is the fault of the troubled world whose dangers and calamities the paper must report. Do not blame the editor and his reporters. The real responsibility rests upon statesmen and politicians and extends to the whole population that keeps itself in trouble.

A VACATION is an opportunity to meet people, to see new and interesting scenes, or to refresh the mind on experiences and places that have belonged to the past. But unless the vacationer brings a freshness of viewpoint to his journey, he might as well stay at home. And if he maintains the inquiring mind of a child or a reporter, he can often find new and stimulating material in the old scenes. It is the open mind and the alert eye searching for colors, incidents, and details that really counts. I have seen couples playing bridge and missing the most wonderful scenery in the world outside a train window. I have seen a small child find ecstasy in the color of a little flower in the back yard. The next time you drive down a familiar road, pretend that you are seeing it again for the first time after years of absence. Look at the trees, the shrubs, the homes. In such a mood, you will find delight and variety in what you have been missing every day. In such a mood, you can find new depths in your contacts with life, in your religion, and in your relationships with all kinds of people. When the prophet called upon God to open a young man's eyes in order that he might see, he realized what God would like to have happen to every one of us. We need to learn to see life again.—L. J. L.

"Everybody ought to plant something—a tree, a bush, or a flower. It adds to the richness of life. Watching it grow brings an interest in nature, in the sun and the rain. I have seen a poor man tending a shrub he had planted in his dooryard, and getting more pleasure out of it than if he had owned a show place; and I have seen a rich man more concerned over a little, diseased two-dollar bush he had set out with his own hands than he was over all the rest of his estate."

"These trees"—with a wave of his hand—"will be my friends for the rest of my life; and after that my children's and my grandchildren's. They are the best friends a man can have."—J. J. Levison, nationally known landscape forester, quoted in American Magazine.

Editorial

OFFICIAL

Music for General Conference

October 3-10, 1948

The following list of four anthems has been chosen for performance at General Conference in October. These four anthems will be sung by a mixed conference choir made up of singers throughout the church who are interested in preparing these numbers before they arrive at Conference. This preparation may be made in the local choirs of the church, but individuals who do not have the opportunity for singing in a choir are also urged to secure this music and learn it so they will be able to sing with us.

These anthems are all simple but effective, and we strongly recommend that choirs throughout the church secure them for their own local use. We will plan just two rehearsals during conference and the choir will appear at two services.

We have been somewhat disappointed in the response to this part of the work in the past two conferences and hope that this year more people can find their way clear to participate. Following is the list of conference choir anthems:

"Grant Us Thy Peace," Mendelssohn, published by Neil A. Kjos Music Company, No. 5082 S.A.T.B., at 15c.

"Thy Kingdom Come, O Lord," F. M. Christiansen, published by Augsburg Publishing House, No. 209 S.A.T.B., at 10c.

"For Thou Art Righteous," Hugh Gordon, published by A. P. Schmidt Company, No. 1723 S.A.T.B., at 12c.

"Praise the Lord, Ye Heavens Adore Him," Prichard, arranged by Don Malin, published by C. C. Birchard and Company, No. 1475 S.A.B. with Descant, at 20c.

It will be noted that the last anthem is arranged for three parts, making it possible for smaller choirs to use all of the men on the so-called baritone part. This anthem is no less effective than straight four-part mixed. We suggest that the descant part on page six be sung by one or two sopranos if there is no children's choir available to sing it. If you have a children's choir, this is a very nice way to work it into an adult service.

FRANKLYN S. WEDDLE,
Director of Music.

If you don't get everything you want, think of the things you don't get that you don't want.

Shoes for Europe's Needy

The following is part of an article which appeared in the April issue of The Kansas Citizen:

Thousands of men, women, and children of European countries today are wearing stout, comfortable shoes—collected, repaired, and shipped in Kansas City through the co-operation of the Shoe Repair Division of the National Trade School, 1233 Grand Avenue, and local and national groups.

During 1947, rebuilt shoes were sent to Europe's needy by twenty such internationally known organizations as the President's Advisory Committee on Voluntary Foreign Aid, the American Friends Service Committee (Nobel Peace Prize winner for its outstanding work since before World War I), American Red Cross, American War Dads and Auxiliary, Church World Service, Lutheran World Relief, Methodist Committee for Overseas Relief, Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints (with world headquarters in Independence), the Salvation Army, and the Southern Baptist Convention.

The school has a capacity enrollment of approximately 400—all former GI's. That their work is destined for people who so recently fought the cause of democracy, seems only to stimulate the eagerness with which the students are learning their trade. The shoes they are repairing so carefully may fit the feet of former enemy or ally—it makes no difference to the student or the school.

The vast project suggested itself when administrators and instructors at the school realized—as it got under way in May, 1946—that GI Joe couldn't learn to rebuild shoes out of a book; he needed a large number and wide variety of shoes on which to practice his new training if he were to achieve proficiency.

It was not until late last year, however, that the school's public relations department began scratching the surface of the immense field of foreign relief, where authentic reports say the greatest material need, after food, is shoes. First foreign relief customer was the Reorganized Latter Day Saint Church, for whom the school completed nearly 1,500 pairs by the end of 1947. The shoes were gathered by women of the church through their highly effective Campus Shop organization and, after being rebuilt by the school, mailed to Europe in individual packages by the new foreign aid department of the church, headed by Bishop H. W. Cackler. Some 200 volunteer workers spend at least one day a week packing and mailing food, clothing, and shoes to certified individuals in Europe. Thousands of dollars already have been spent on the project, and the work will continue as long as the need lasts, it is promised.

The shoe school has completed similar projects for other local groups including the Greek Orthodox Church, Kansas City Baptist Union, Kansas City Business Men's Bible Class, Italian Institute Auxiliary and St. Paul's Episcopal Church. Other local groups contributing shoes which the school turns into various relief channels include the Goodwill Industries, Parent-Teacher Council of Kansas City, Kansas, St. Christopher's Inn, St. Vincent de Paul Society, the Teachers' Co-operative Council of Kansas City, Robinson Shoe Company, and employees at Sheffield Steel Corporation. Still other shoes are received from War Dads and auxiliary chapters throughout the country and from Salvation Army and Goodwill Industries setups within 200 miles of Kansas City.

In addition, the school has bought thousands of pairs of worn Army shoes in an attempt to keep up with the enormous demand of 400 student shoe repairmen. Attaining an early proficiency in the trade means everything in the world to most of the students, particularly those who are disabled. At one time they worked around the clock, hammering and sewing away in four shifts of 100 men each, which have since been reduced to three larger classes working from 6 o'clock in the morning to 11:30 at night. Each student develops a real interest in the vocation quickly or makes way for somebody who is eager for the training.

Said to be the only one of its kind when it was first opened, the Kansas City institution is now acknowledged to be the largest shoe repair school in the country, with enrollment at maximum all the time. The building which it now occupies at Thirteenth and Grand, after outgrowing the original quarters at 2700 McGee, soon is to be abandoned for a still larger building at 1600 Grand.

THE SAINTS' HERALD

Volume 95

June 5, 1948

Number 23

EDITORS: The First Presidency: Israel A. Smith, John F. Garver, F. Henry Edwards.

ASSISTANTS: Leonard J. Lea, Managing Editor; Kenneth L. Graham, Business Manager.

The Saints' Herald is the official publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, with headquarters at The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri, and is issued through the offices of Herald Publishing House, 103 South Osage Street, Independence, Missouri.

Entered as second-class matter at the post office at Independence, Missouri, under Act of March 3, 1879. Issued weekly at Independence, Missouri. Price, $3.50 per year and $1.75 for six months in advance in the U. S. A., its territories and possessions; Canada, $3.75 per year and $1.90 for six months; other countries, $4.50 per year. Notice of a change of address must be given three weeks ahead of the date that it is to become effective. Accepted for mailing at the special rate of postage provided for in section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized July 21, 1921. Printed in the United States of America.

We Can Have Lasting Peace

PEOPLE OF THE WORLD, confused and embittered, are today grimly contemplating the future. They have at last created weapons which have driven them to a wall where there is no alternative but to live peacefully. The atomic bomb, bacteriological and biological warfare are stark realities standing ready to destroy their creators should they abuse them. There is no escape. Added to this predicament is the fear that our current cold war could leave the earth a smoldering inferno.

The road to peace is not a mysterious one. Man has long traveled it and is not unfamiliar with the obstacles of hatred, fear, selfishness, pride, and tradition. Heretofore, he has simply lacked the incentive, the determination to reach his goal. Other factors have taken precedence. Money and power have time and again relegated peace to a position of secondary importance.

But how can we have real peace? I believe we can begin with the premise that permanent peace must be founded on Christian and democratic principles and on long needed reforms in many countries to give greater opportunity to millions now lacking the bare necessities of life. Not only do these principles form the foundational supports upon which a peaceful world may be built, they must be the very essence of the spirit with which the structure is assembled.

Today we are confronted with a practical problem. The threat of ruthless communism has cast its ominous shadow of gloom over the democracies, and people everywhere are talking of the trend toward war. These fears are by no means baseless, but we need not despair of our chances for peace. The challenge must be met openly, with fairness and firmness.

CHRISTIANITY requires that we must not condemn without hearing the people who turn to ways of life inconsistent with our beliefs. Hunger and want are the evil sources of power for unscrupulous leaders in those nations where the governments, and not the people, are masters. This we must recognize in our efforts to combat totalitarianism. These governments must be dealt with on a basis of calculated callousness, but their people must

United States Senate

COMMITTEE ON APPROPRIATIONS

May 4, 1948.

President Israel A. Smith,

The Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints,

The Auditorium,

Independence, Missouri.

Dear President Smith:

Some time ago you asked me if I would prepare an article for publication in the Herald, and I am sorry that the press of activities here in Washington has not permitted my doing so before this time.

Since peace is most vital to all of us, I felt that something along the line of the article enclosed would be usable. This article is not at all lengthy, but I rather believe that it reflects the feelings of a good many of us who are quite aware of the burdens that have been placed upon us during these troublesome times.

With kindest personal regards,

Sincerely yours,

MILTON R. YOUNG,
U. S. Senator.

MRY:hb

know that our desire for genuine peace is unbounded.

The roots of the European Recovery Program are in such thinking. It is fostered in the belief that by it we can help others to help themselves. Practically speaking, it is aimed to win back lost ground the world over, to renew hope and ideals shattered by war and poverty. True, our business and commerce generally stand to profit by it. Farmers

By MILTON R. YOUNG

United States Senator

will receive better prices. But these by-products must not be confused with, nor can they outweigh, the underlying purpose of the plan. We cannot submit to commercialism!

ERP offers only a beginning. It is not enough that we extend charity of itself. The Christian spirit so clearly symbolized in the Freedom Train, in the countless gift packages, and in the tons of personal letters sent to Italians on the eve of their recent election must reach every hamlet, must touch all souls. Doubling and redoubling such efforts will bring peace closer.

Perhaps the ultimate solution to our problem lies with some form of effective world federation, but since this ideal is scarcely attainable in the visible future, we have no choice but to build constructively the machinery now in operation. This can be done as we watchfully await the outcome of our present crisis. The United Nations need not share the fate of the League of Nations. Though it was born in an upsurge of wartime allied unity, it need not die for want of spirit and purpose.

The challenge to our people, our churches, and our government is unmistakable. We must go all out in every direction for peace. All efforts, however small, will aid in tipping the scales away from the destruction which is certain to follow in the path of indifference.

Some problems cannot be solved, but can be abolished by bringing both parties to a plane of living where the problem simply disappears.

Union Based On Christianity

British Religious Leaders Call to Europe

THERE IS NO SALVATION for mankind except by a return to the sense of duty owed by every human being to his God and to his fellow man. This was the message given by Lord Halifax, the chairman, and reiterated by succeeding speakers at a meeting held in the Albert Hall, London, on April 26, to rally Christians to action in the present European crisis. The meeting was organized by Christian Action (Oxford).

Supporting the chairman on the platform were the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Cardinal Archbishop of Westminster, and the Moderator of the Free Church Council; the speakers were Sir Stafford Cripps, Miss Florence Hancock, chairman of the Trades Union Congress, Mr. Richard Sullivan, K. C., chairman of the Catholic Social Guild, and representatives from Germany, Italy, Holland, Sweden, France, and Belgium.

The Prime Minister, in a message to Lord Halifax, said: "There is no more urgent need today than the reaffirmation of the absolute moral values on which our Christian civilization is based." Mr. Churchill also sent a message suggesting that the unification of Europe assuredly offered immense material advantages and might also be the main road to the peace and future of the world. "All these hopes will come to naught unless the structure of the new Europe is built firmly upon moral and spiritual foundations," he wrote.

New Standards

Lord Halifax, opening the meeting, said he thought they were all convinced that the present disorder of the world was due to its attempt to live by new standards totally different from those of Christianity.

Besides being a great fountain of strength for the personal life, Christianity was also a great social code, teaching men and women everywhere how to live together in mutual respect and ordered freedom.

In the field of everyday affairs it stood for honesty, truth, justice, fair play, tolerance, respect for the individual, for all, in short, on which human life depended, just as it was the absence of these very things in international life today which was making the world restless, weary, and disturbed. We all had to acknowledge our share in that great failure of the world to hold on to the things that truly made for its health and well-being.

Many of us had hoped that the war would have brought the great redeeming compensation of deep spiritual revival, but he did not think it had. The statesmen of the nation, and of others with whom we were working closely in defense of everything which was vital to the good life, whether of individuals or nations, were doing their best.

But the vital spring that must support their efforts was the deep spiritual conviction among their peoples that there was no salvation for mankind except by a return to the sense of duty, owed by every human being to his God and to his fellow man.

The Challenge

Our way of life was today challenged by forces that would fight with every weapon at their command. The creed of those forces was to them a religion, and they worked for the conversion of the world with an intensity and untiring pertinacity that few religious movements had been able to command. The time had come when we must be prepared to go out and do battle for our faith.

Sir Stafford Cripps said the meeting was no ordinary Christian gathering, but an attempt to mobilize Christian effort and Christian faith in western Europe behind the great political, social, and economic drive to turn our future toward the ways of peace, harmony, and happiness.

If we were to translate our Christian faith, the free and fearless spirit with which we had been divinely endowed into terms of practical effect, we could do it only through that form of free and progressive democracy which had grown to be the symbol of our country's Christian civilization and that of western Europe.

For that democracy, and not some totalitarian or authoritarian conception, alone embodied the true freedom of the spirit which was the essential basis of our religious beliefs.

We must not only employ democratic methods, but we must use them for Christian ends. The freedom and justice which our Christian faith demanded must be explicit in the actions of our community, whether in the international, national, or local sphere.

We had a duty to our fellow men just as we had a duty to Christ. We could only exercise that duty through the channels of human organization and government. That is why our Christian duty demanded that we take part in the political and social life of our communities. And in that participation, whereby we helped to order the future of world affairs, we must apply to the full the principles of our faith.

The conscious exertion of our beliefs was not by any means an easy task. If it were, it would be hardly worth-while, for it would accomplish little or nothing. It was the effort, the hard work, the determination which was required of us that gave us the power to succeed and joy in our successes.

No inventiveness or ingenuity of men, no power of arms or force of wealth, no material gain or economic advance could save the world if it turned its back on the love of God. If man neglected the things of the spirit and put aside the full armor of God, he would seal the doom of future generations.

Need For Unity

Miss Florence Hancock said that the Trades Union Congress and the organized movement it represented were firm in their support of a union of the western nations. Political realities were teaching the European nations that they must unite to defend again, with the weapons of the spirit, the institutions of free citizenship and the right of all peoples to live undisturbed and unthreatened by the domination of their neighbors.

—FROM THE BRITISH
INFORMATION SERVICE

Vacation Church School Slides

Whether you have decided to have a vacation church school in your branch this year or not, you will enjoy seeing pictures of the Independence congregations in action last year. Scenes from the classroom, playground, and of the children on parade are shown. You will be interested also to see the handcraft, charts, and the staff as shown in these picture slides.

These pictures are being made available to help interest your community—children, parents, and leaders—in conducting a school of your own. They will give a clear idea of what a vacation church school does and what is expected of the pupils and workers.

Write us promptly to reserve these pictures for you. Give a preferred date and an alternate choice, if possible. A service charge of $1.25 should accompany the order. You will pay the return postage. There are 23 slides, 2" x 2" in natural colors. A script explaining the slides and some important features of a vacation church school included.

Herald Publishing House
Visual Aids Department

"Be Not Afraid---"

By Ruby Tinkham

THE SMALL CHILD says, "Don't turn the light out, Mommy, I'm afraid in the dark." The older child says, "I'm not going past Young's house again, Mother, that big dog of theirs always runs out, and he nearly scares me to death."

Childish fears? Not entirely. My neighbor has spent a small fortune on patent medicines because she is scared of cancer. Her husband is a nervous wreck because he is constantly afraid of losing his job. On the other hand, there is a friend who has three grown sons and she lives in daily apprehension of another war—fear is her demoralizing companion. Her husband teases her, and yet he is so afraid of insecurity, he works himself unmercifully hard in a driving effort to establish financial security.

What is the basis of these fears? In each one we sense a definite need—a personal inadequacy.

The small child will enlarge his understanding and gradually outgrow his fear of darkness. The older child, if given a puppy of his own to love and care for, will soon overcome his fear of all dogs.

BUT WHAT ABOUT the grown-ups? The woman with her fear of cancer might study the disease and become so well-informed that she never need worry over its attacking her unawares. Her husband on the other hand could, by careful application, make himself so valuable to his firm that he would become an asset no employer would want to lose.

Then the woman who is afraid of war. This is more than a personal fear, because it is shared by others. Instead of dwelling on this fear and increasing its power for destruction, she could concentrate on the historical background of the causes for war and become a source of valuable information along the lines of constructive thinking, so others who have fallen into the same rut might profit from her efforts. Then, too, she might build such a rich, rewarding companionship with those three sons, that should she lose them in war, she would not be left empty handed.

Now, the man who is afraid of insecurity. He is a man without faith in the future—and without faith in himself, a man who has never found out that the great lack he feels can never be overcome by the accumulation of more and more wealth. He would have to make a determined effort to establish new values in his life that would gradually assume major importance over money.

This would require a change in the God he worships, but therein lies the secret of inspired living which brings courage and contentment. What he doesn't realize is that the help he needs would more than compensate for the loss of his golden idol.

I ONCE READ an article which said the devil's chief tool was indifference. I think not—he accomplishes much more with fear! We are bound to find some without indifference, but I have yet to find any without fear! Even the man who claims vehemently to know no fear is often concealing his greatest fear—that of being found out!

Fear is a powerful weapon. It may produce mass hysteria or work slowly in the form of individual disintegration.

There were men who knew no fear—men like Moses, John the Baptist, Christ, the Apostle Paul, Alma, and Joseph Smith. Why didn't they know fear? The answer is self-evident—because they knew God! Each of these men had to know God personally before he achieved that sublime sense of freedom nonexistent with fear. They knew God so intimately that the only fear they might have known was, "Am I serving him well enough?" I wish I could number for you the times in the Bible alone that God took the trouble to say, "Be not afraid!"

The question logically follows then, "How can I overcome my fear?" First, face it, and acknowledge to yourself that it is a real and active force for evil in your life. Point out to yourself how it works unceasingly to destroy your best efforts and undermine your creative ability. This is half the battle. Then ask for help! If men like Christ and Joseph Smith are not ashamed to admit their weaknesses to God—then neither should you be. The next step is hard—you must have faith! Faith is the enemy of fear—each destroys the other. It has been said that fear is simply faith inverted. History teaches us that when people lay aside fear and put their faith in God, miracles happen!

THEN MINIMIZE YOUR fear—cut it down to proportions where it won't count. I once saw a small child pushed into a pool of water. He paddled like mad until someone pulled him out and said, "Why, Freddy, I thought you were scared of the water." He looked up sheepishly and replied, "I was scared, but I was sure scarer of drowning!" You've heard people say with satisfaction, "I may lose my job, but I've still got my health." That's just another way of saying, "I'm not afraid." They minimize their fear by contrasting it with worse things.

Another thing, don't try to overcome your fear all at once. Take it easy—in stages—so you can watch your own progress and take pride in a slow, steady accomplishment. I knew a baby who was so frightened every time he was put in a bath tub he screamed frantically. His mother gave up trying to bathe him that way. Then one day she found him playing in water with all his clothes on. She conceived the idea of bathing him with part of his clothes on and it worked fine. She removed one article at a time until his fear was overcome.

Never be afraid to say, "I'm afraid." Admitting fear and bringing it out into the open robs it of part of its power. Sharing your fear eases your burden and invites help. I worked in an office where all the employees were scared stiff whenever the boss came through. Every girl was afraid to lift eyes from her machine for fear he would descend on her in avenging fury. One day a group of us admitted to his private secretary how much we dreaded seeing him come through the outer office. She laughed. "You're afraid! Why you ought to see him. He's scared every time he has to go out there. He told me one day it was just like walking in front of a firing squad."

EVERY SO OFTEN compare your fear. Get your church history out and read about Emma Smith and Parley P. Pratt and some of those others that made it easy for Latter Day Saints today. Study your history and see if Washington and Lincoln had no fears to fight.

You may say, "Yes, but they had a purpose." We have a purpose, too—as great as Washington's and greater than Lincoln's. May we live in shame as well as fear if we fail to accomplish that purpose which was born and bred in the martyrdom of early Saints!

Then you may say, "But God was with them." Are you implying that God is not the God of the living and that he is not the same yesterday, today, and forever? If so, your fear is justified and you need help. If, on the other hand, your faith has told you that herein lies the answer to all problems, then your fears are small ones taking their place with the other imperfections in your life.

Remember, whenever you feel tempted to fall back into the easy ways of fear (for fear is weakness) that it wasn't easy for Daniel to stay in the lion's den—for Christ to hang on a cross of shame—for Joseph Smith to proclaim to an unbelieving world that he had talked with God.

None of these things were easy, yet each of these men conquered fear through their faith in and knowledge of God. You can do it too!

There Is Power in Prayer

THE longer I live, the more firmly do I believe in the nearness of God and the power of prayer. The rule that was given us by an obscure carpenter, who never wrote a line or had an influential friend, and who died the death of a common criminal, is still the only true rule by which we humans may live in security and peace.

When anyone says to me that he would like to have seen a miracle, I think of this miracle, that we hold no name in all our history worthy to be mentioned in the same breath with that of Christ. Poor and unknown, yet his words still ring about the world, and his law, so utterly opposed to all natural human law, is the one thing that can save us yet.

Fantastic to think that we can send prayer abroad, to spread peace and blessing among those whom we never will know, and whose thanks never will reach us? Well, there are many fantastic delusions in this world, such as that money brings happiness, or that a beautiful girl is always a happy girl. We fool ourselves about half the things we know or think we know.

But not about prayer. Peace and infinite good are as plentiful as the air we breathe, as close as the air we breathe. We need only to reach out our spiritual hands to grasp them; they are infinite, and deep in the heart of every creature alive there is passionate longing for them.

In every spare moment, enter into the empire of God's peace and spread this union of prayer all over the world.

The Scoffer

By MABEL
WILLIAMS CRAYNE

WADE MITCHELL stood in the rear doorway of his large, well-built barn and looked out over his ripening fields of wheat. Some of it stood almost five feet high. In another two weeks it would be ready to cut.

He thought of the time when he and his wife, Hattie, had visited in California and his nephew had asked him if he would like to live there. He had replied, "It's a nice soft spot for folks to go to when they get old, but I haven't seen anything yet that looks as good to me as a field of wheat."

Now he smiled broadly as he said aloud, "Yes, and, by granny, I still think so."

Suddenly his eyes narrowed as they focused on a dark cloud in the west. "I hope it's nothing more than a shower," he muttered, but his smile vanished as he went toward the house.

The house looked very small compared to the big barn; Wade had often said that he was going to build Hattie a new one with all the gadgets it would hold to make her work easier. Losing that crop of flax last year was a heavy blow and changed a lot of his plans.

As he entered the back door, his wife looked up from the pan of apples she was paring for sauce and smiled.

"I'll wager you were out looking over that wheat again," she said, "and I don't blame you, for it sure is a pretty sight." Then she noticed his troubled look and asked, "What's the matter, Wade, are you sick?"

"Not yet," he replied, "but I'm liable to be. Come outdoors a minute, Hattie. I want you to look at that cloud."

Hattie hurriedly put aside the apples, and together they went outside and stood in the warm sunshine, shading their eyes with their hands while they looked anxiously at the sky. Although the cause of their concern looked small and far away, they both knew how swiftly it could travel and how hard it could strike when borne by a strong wind.

"What does that look like to you?" asked Wade. "I'm worried."

"Well, Wade," she answered, "it may be just a shower, and it may be something much worse. You had better blow the horn for the boys to come in from the summer fallow. It may be a good thing that they are not far away." Her face paled as she said, "Look, the stock and the poultry are already headed for the sheds. They know more than most humans when it is time to come in out of the storm."

WADE BLEW two loud blasts on the horn that meant, "Come in," then caught Hattie excitedly by the sleeve and said, "Listen, do you suppose it will take the wheat just as it did the flax? I couldn't stand another knock like that, Hattie. I guess you'd better pray."

Hattie turned on him with scornful eyes, "Still scoffing at religion, are you? I asked you to pray with me about the flax, and you laughed at me. I refused to pray unless you did. You lost your flax. Maybe the Lord will give you another chance to pray and prove his power, but I'm not praying this time, either, unless you do."

They hurried into the house and closed the doors and windows, then watched for the boys until they saw them drive their teams into the barn and shut the big doors against the wind.

The clouds came nearer; as they blotted out the sun and the room darkened, Wade could hear a low hum. He caught Hattie to him. "Listen, Hattie, I hear it coming, and I know it's hail. God won't pay any attention to my prayers. You pray, Hattie, please do. I won't ever laugh at you again."

"No," she answered with a sob in her voice, "it's your wheat, and you can pray for it yourself."

Wade dropped to his knees, and Hattie knelt beside him.

"Oh, Lord," he prayed, "forgive me for being an unbelieving sinner. If you can't save the wheat for my sake, please do it for Hattie. She's a good woman, Lord, and believes, and I'll let her teach me. I'll try to learn more about your way. Amen."

As Hattie added her supplication to his, they heard the hailstones beating upon the house and the crash of glass.

Wade groaned, "There goes a window in the kitchen."

They knelt there in silence until the nerve-racking noise had died away in the distance. Hattie had been holding his hand and now she gave it a tender squeeze, and again her voice was heard in prayer.

"Oh, God, I thank thee for the greatest blessing I have ever known. Make me an example for thee that my husband may see thee as I do; then even a field of shattered grain will never cause him to doubt the existence of a wise and loving Heavenly Father. Help him to trust thee and thy wisdom no matter how dark the clouds. Amen."

Wade was overcome with a new and strange emotion, and his eyes filled with tears. For the first time, he realized that Hattie would rather have him a believer than to have a dozen new houses.

Together they arose and went to the door to see what damage had been done. With amazement they saw that the storm had held so tenaciously to its course that it had passed over the house, the summer fallow, and on to the pasture beyond. Only the broken window and the piles of hailstones around the house told them how near destruction had come. Instead of being pounded into a stubblefield, their beautiful wheat stood proudly north of the barn and almost five feet high.

Wade took his wife in his arms and kissed her. Her face was wet with his tears, but he was not ashamed.

Hubert Case, Missionary Extraordinary

Hubert Case is a man who has given honor to the name of "missionary." In 1944, he celebrated his fiftieth anniversary under General Conference appointment. Last December marked the fiftieth year since his ordination as a Seventy. He has labored in many fields; his most remarkable service has been given in the Society Islands and in Oklahoma, where he has had special success in presenting the gospel to both Caucasian and Indian races.

Just before his departure to the Society Islands, he was married to Miss Alice M. Montague, and the two of them were blessed for their mission by President Joseph Smith. He pays a grateful tribute to his wife for her loyal help in his missionary work and in bringing their children to maturity of mind and spirit as well as body.

Brother Case who celebrates his seventy-eighth birthday on June 5, has baptized 2,752 people; and many still come to him for counsel and prayer, as he is a man of great faith. Though church officials, recognizing that his strength would have to be conserved have superannuated him, they left him free to minister as he felt able. This he has done with splendid effects.

The beautiful oil painting of Brother Case reproduced here was made by an artist engaged by Dr. and Mrs. Arthur B. Church, son-in-law and daughter of Brother and Sister Case. Through their kindness, we have received a photograph in order that it might be presented in the "Herald."

The Supper-time of the Lord

Selections from a sermon delivered by Hubert Case at Liberty Street Church in Independence, Missouri

IN THE PARABLE of the king's son (Matthew 22: 4), we are told of the great dinnertime in the world's history. God prepared a dinner for his Son in the meridian of time and invited guests to come, for all things were made ready. The Jews did not see that. They did not know he was inviting them into the kingdom to give them spiritual food. Most of them did not understand the preparation they missed in that whole program. Some who actually were convinced and converted by the power of the infinite God to come into the kingdom and eat the children's bread were the ones who made their preparation. The children's bread was the spiritual food Christ had for his children on earth. He spoke of it when he said to Peter: "Feed my sheep." What did he feed them? He offered them the sincere milk of the word, not husks or theories of men.

It was mentioned again when the woman of Canaan came and asked a miracle at his hand. (Matthew 15: 21-27). It seems to me he gave her one of the hardest answers he ever gave to any human being: "It is not meet to take the children's bread, and to cast it to dogs." What was her answer? "True, Lord, but the dogs eat of the crumbs that fall from the Masters' table." He granted her request and her child was healed.

OUR DISPENSATION is the supper-time, as it is called in the Scriptures. Christ is preparing a great supper. In Luke 14: 15, he states, "Blessed is he who shall eat bread in the kingdom of God." We are entitled to spiritual food, and that is the program of the invitation sent out now just as it was sent out then to everybody to come to the kingdom for the great dinner which was prepared. Just stop a minute and ask yourself the question, "Are we entitled to that bread?" Have we come into the kingdom where we can receive the bread that he has for us today?

Let us turn a moment and look at this wonderful proposal: "Seek first the kingdom of God." Seek first, that was the call then; it is the call today; seek that kingdom, come in at the door, that we might become partakers of the children's bread at this great suppertime in preparation for the marriage supper of the Lamb, when Jesus Christ shall come back to this earth. I wonder, sometimes, if we have any idea about what that really means. I am not speaking disrespectfully when I say the majority of people professing Christianity have no idea what the invitation to the kingdom of God means. They haven't the slightest idea of what the kingdom is. The tenth chapter of John describes Christ as the door of the fold and as the good shepherd. It takes authority to open the door and bring people in. Why do we baptize in water and then lay on hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost as they did in Bible times? The reason is that authority from God has been restored for man to open the door and bring people in that they might eat the children's bread which he has for his children in the kingdom of God today.

I HEARD George H. Hilliard, one of the good men of this church, many years ago preach a sermon on the twenty-fifth chapter of Matthew about the question of when God lights our lamp. He demands of us that we shall keep our lamps trimmed and burning. That good man said that when the angel came and restored the authority and people came in through the door, the baptism of the Spirit lights our lamp. The spirit of man is the candle of the Lord (Psalm 18: 28) and God lights that candle by the power of the comforter when it comes into any person's life who is made a partaker of citizenship in the kingdom of God and receives the comforter. That Spirit will guide us and help us to understand the need of daily spiritual food, and we will receive it if we are doing our part today in preparation for his coming. Are we doing that? Every Latter Day Saint I know, who is acquainted with the doctrine of this church, believes that the spiritual gifts and all of the spiritual experiences of the church are necessary, including healing of the sick and being fed on the sincere milk of the word. In this way, one becomes a partaker of the "children's bread."

That is why Jesus said to the woman of Canaan, "It is not meet to take the children's bread and give it to the dogs." But that woman certainly got one of the crumbs, and she got a great commendation. "I have found not such a great faith—no, not in Israel." She knew what the benefits were to those who were citizens, and she knew that Jesus was dispensing them among the people. They were feasting on the good things of that great dinner God prepared for his Son when he sent him into the world, and sent servants out to invite guests to come in and eat.

When we come to look at the Bible, actually read it, and stop to pray over it, we can see that picture. Why did not everybody come in. You have the answer . . . why don't they come in now? The people began to make excuses when God sent his servants out the second time and again the third time. These servants said, "Lord, they make excuses and still there is room in your house," and God said, "Not one of those people who made excuses shall eat bread in the kingdom. They cannot eat at my table."

AT THE GREAT SUPPERTIME spoken of in Matthew 22: 11-13, it is stated that there was one man found at the wedding who did not have on the wedding garment. The king said, "Take this man and bind him, hand and foot, and cast him into outer darkness." Jesus is the bridegroom; the church is his bride. There isn't any reason to make excuses, if we have on the wedding garment, which is the righteousness of the Saints (Revelation 19: 7, 8). We must make the preparation he requires for such an event as the great closing of mortality's program on the earth. This does not mean just the preachers; it means every one of us. All must become righteous, following after peace and righteousness, putting on the armor of God.

We really need to understand what we are working at today. When I think of this, I turn my attention to some of the beautiful things God has given his people, and I wonder why such a small percentage understand. It is astonishing to find out how few are reading and how few are giving their lives to prayer and meditation and communing with God, that they might do what Jesus said—keep their lamps burning that others might see their good works and glorify the Father which is in heaven.

YOU MAY BE SURE that good works are a big part of what he requires of every one of us. How much righteousness do you suppose we have without good works? Are we paying any attention to these things that will bring us into closer rapport with him, that we may have a knowledge? "If any man will do his will, he shall know . . ." (John 7: 17). He also says, "And this is life eternal, that they may know thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent" (John 17: 3). Here are several verses from Revelation, "Let us be glad and rejoice, and give honor to him: for the marriage of the Lamb is come, and his wife hath made herself ready. And to her was granted that she should be arrayed in fine linen, clean and white; for the fine linen is the righteousness of saints. And he saith unto me, Write, Blessed are they which are called unto the marriage supper of the Lamb. And he saith unto me, These are the true sayings of God. And I fell at his feet to worship him. And he said unto me, See thou do it not; I am thy fellow servant, and of thy brethren that have the testimony of Jesus: worship God: for the testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy."—Revelation 19: 7-10.

Don't forget that, because it certainly is important that his Spirit bear witness with our spirits that we are the children of God. When he gives us the comforter, it bears witness with our spirits that we are his children, and that is the seal of our adoption, Paul says, as citizens

(Continued on page 15.)

Other Sheep I Have Which Are Not of This Fold

The Story of the Book of Mormon

By ROY WELDON

PART VI

VISIONS—The Shepherd's Staff in Ancient America

And other sheep I have, which are not of this fold: them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice and there shall be one fold and one shepherd.—John 10: 16.

LET US SUMMARIZE the evidence presented thus far:

The Good Shepherd visited America

The Good Shepherd's voice was heard in America

The Good Shepherd led the flock of Joseph to America

The Good Shepherd establish his flock of Joseph to America

The Good Shepherd's rod in America

We shall now give consideration to the evidence of the Good Shepherd's staff in America.

What is the staff of the Shepherd of Israel? Wheat has been called the staff of life. Isaiah says, "For, behold, the Lord, the Lord of hosts, doth take away from Jerusalem and from Judah the stay and the staff, the whole staff of bread and the whole stay of water.—Isaiah 3: 1. Bread is the staff of life to the physical man while the word of the Lord is the staff of life to the spiritual man. Moses said, "Man doth not live by bread only, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of the Lord doth man live."—Deuteronomy 8: 3. (See also Luke 4: 4; John 6: 26-41.) There are a number of scriptures that clearly indicate that the word of the Lord is the bread and staff of life of the spirits of men. Amos says:

Behold, the days come, saith the Lord God, that I will send a famine in the land, not a famine of bread, nor a thirst for water; but of hearing the words of the Lord:

And they shall wander from sea to sea, and from the north even to the east, they shall run to and fro to seek the word of the Lord, and shall not find it.—Amos 8: 11, 12.

As the physical man is dependent upon the stalks of grain to bring forth the precious wheat, so also the spiritual man is dependent upon the prophets of the Lord to bring forth the precious words of the Lord.

Prophets and Visions

If there be a prophet among you, I the Lord will make myself known unto him in a vision, and will speak unto him in a dream.—Numbers 12: 6.

Where there is no vision, the people perish.—Proverbs 29: 18.

Biblical history and the history of civilization go hand in hand to indicate that human progress has been directly related to prophets and to the staff (visions) of the Shepherd of Israel. Where there has been no vision, the people have perished culturally, intellectually, and even physically. There have been six major civilizations. All of these have had direct relationship to prophets and visions.

The Civilizations of the Old World

Egypt produced a major civilization. Joseph, who was sold into Egypt as a slave, became the prophet of the Lord in Egypt. He was empowered to foresee the great famine and was made governor over all of Egypt. He was able to supervise the storing up of vast reserves of corn so that the people would not perish.

Babylon also benefited from the presence of Hebrew prophets in its courts. Daniel occupied the same position in Babylon that Joseph occupied in Egypt.

Then was the secret revealed unto Daniel in a night vision. Then Daniel blessed the God of heaven.—Daniel 2: 19.

But there is a God in heaven that revealeth secrets, and maketh known to the king Nebuchadnezzar what shall be in the latter days.—Daniel 2: 28.

The Greek and Roman civilizations also had the benefit of direct contact with prophets and visions and the word of the Lord. Paul and Barnabas and numerous other prophets and missionaries of New Testament times established branches of the church among the Greeks and Romans. In the Bible there are entire books (Romans, Corinthians, etc.) containing the word of the Lord to Greeks and Romans.

The tides of history and human progress have risen and fallen as men have either turned to or turned away from the teachings and words of the Shepherd of Israel and his servants, the prophets.

The Civilization of Prehistoric America.

The power and authority of the Good Shepherd in the Old World centered in the Shepherd's rod (miracles) and the Shepherd's staff (prophets, visions, word of the Lord). If everything pertaining to the Shepherd's rod (the miraculous) and the Shepherd's staff (the prophetic) were removed from the Old and New Testaments, there would scarcely be a dry skeleton left Previous articles have strongly indicated that the Good Shepherd came to America, that he led the flock of Joseph to America and set up his fold here in America. We also considered equally strong evidence that his sheep in Ancient America heard his voice, and that he exercised the Shepherd's rod of his power in their behalf.

The four major civilizations of the Old World had direct contact with the prophets of Israel. Shall we say that the ancient civilization of America was an exception, and that it was able to reach the same heights without benefit of the Shepherd's staff (prophets, visions)?

The doubting soul may question the relationship between major civilizations and the prophets of Israel, yet the indisputable fact still remains that the four great civilizations of the Old World each had Hebrew prophets in their midst, and without them men have not been able to attain equal heights.

The great Biblical covenant and promise to Abraham that "in thee and in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed" (Genesis 22: 22), is strikingly substantiated by the historical facts involved in each of the Old World civilizations.

COLUMBUS

The Book of Mormon (Stick of Joseph) is like the Bible. If everything miraculous and prophetic were deleted out of it, there would scarcely be anything left.

One of the Book of Mormon prophets who possessed both the Shepherd's rod (miracles) and the Shepherd's staff (visions) looked down the long vista of time.

In the vision which he saw of the future this prophet (Nephi) says:

And I looked and beheld a man among the Gentiles, who was separated from the seed of my brethren by the many waters; and I beheld the Spirit of God that it came and wrought upon the man; and he went forth upon the many waters, even unto the seed of my brethren, who were in the promised land.—1 Nephi 3: 147.

When Columbus sought to persuade Ferdinand and Isabella to back his plans to sail west across the sea, the king ordered the most learned astronomers and cosmographers to examine Columbus's theories and then report their findings to him. This conference took place at the great seat of learning, the University of Salamanca. Washington Irving gives us an excerpt from this report:

Is there anyone so foolish . . . as to believe that there are antipodes with their feet opposite ours; people who walk with their heels upward, and their heads hanging down; that there is a part of the world in which all things are topsy turvy . . . where it rains, hails and snows upward!¹

The determination and faith of Columbus in his lone course against every known precedent and against the persuasions of all authorities of his time has been the puzzle of historians as well as the inspiration of poets. ("Sail on, sail on and on."—Joaquin Miller.)

The historian, Mr. P. De Roo, says:

There is no sense in ascribing Columbus's admirable achievement merely to his enthusiasm or his genius. Foolhardiness would in this case be the more correct expression.

Divine revelation only, or scientific acquirements could entitle him to predict with assurance as he did, the success of his undertaking. *We may well ask whether Divine Providence traced beforehand those guiding lines on Columbus's charts.*²

The Book of Mormon prophet in a vision saw the Spirit of God descend on Columbus. Columbus in a letter to the king and queen of Spain (1503) narrated a dream he had and in which he heard a voice say, "He [the most High] gave to thee [Columbus] the keys of those great gates of the ocean . . . which fast closed with such mighty chains."³

The Vision of Lehi

As the Bible starts with Moses (Pentateuch), so the Book of Mormon starts with Lehi. Moses had the vision of the burning bush. Lehi had a vision of a pillar of fire. It was in this vision that the Hebrew prophet Lehi first learned that the Lord had chosen him to lead a colony of Joseph from Jerusalem to a promised land.

The Book of Mormon records that the Nephites measured their time from the time they left Jerusalem, about 600 B.C. This was published in the Book of Mormon in 1830, nearly 100 years before Morley and Spinden deciphered the Maya dates which revealed that the Maya calendar started from an original date in the sixth century B.C. Mr. Spinden says, ". . . the Venus Calendar of the Mayas proceeded from an original inauguration in the 6th century before Christ."⁴

Gregory Mason says the date which Mr. Spinden and Mr. Morley deciphered which went back to the 6th century B.C., "took its origin from certain celestial events."⁵ According to Mr. Webster, a celestial event is a heavenly vision.

Subsequent to the Spinden-Morley correlation, a new correlation was worked out. This is known as the Goodman-Hernandez-Thompson correlation which is 260 years later than the Spinden correlation. Some leading archaeologists support the later correlation.

The material presented in the preceding paragraphs appears to be well authenticated. However, in view of an earnest desire to give full recognition to all available evidence, I feel I should call attention to the fact that three scientists—Goodman, Hernandez, and Thompson—have worked out a new correlation of the date referred to. This correlation places the date about 250 years later, which would give us 363 B.C. instead of 613 B.C. Most leading archaeologists are now supporting the Goodman-Hernandez-Thompson correlation instead of the Spinden-Morley correlation.

Maya Calendar Versus Inspiration

Ann Axtell Morris says:

It is far more accurate, indeed, than the system under which the so-called civilized world operated until about a century ago, when the revised Gregorian calendar was put into effect. Such a calendar was not invented in a week. Untold years of laborious calculation; coupled with inspired vision must have been necessary to bring it to the finished state where we find our first date.⁶

The Shepherd's Staff (Prophets, Visions) in America

In Biblical times, it is indicated that men became prophets by fasting, prayer, and going alone into the wilderness. Moses went up into the mountain and fasted alone forty days on two different occasions. Daniel fasted two weeks, after which he had visions which extended down to the last days. Christ after his baptism went alone into the desert for forty days where he fasted and prayed and obtained the powers of his ministry.

The Book of Mormon records the same kind of procedure (Enos 1:4-8). The Book of Mormon prophet, Alma, says: "Behold, I have fasted and prayed many days that I might know these things of myself."—Alma 3:79.

Alma 12:4, 5 states:

For they were men of a sound understanding, and they had searched the scriptures diligently, that they might know the word of God.

But this is not all: they had given themselves to much prayer, and fasting, therefore they had the spirit of prophecy and the spirit of revelation, and when they taught, they taught with power and authority, even as with the power and authority of God.

Hyatt Verrill says:

Among our North American Indians a man usually becomes a shaman or medicine man by fasting, prayer and seeing a vision.

Somewhat similar is the method followed by the Tegualas and Tupitowalis of Central America. *When a man of these tribes thinks he should become a medicine man, he goes alone into the jungle and fasts alone for several days.*⁷

Kingsborough says the Mexicans believed that Quetzalcoatl "united in his own person the character of a king, a priest and a prophet."⁸

Mr. Bancroft gives us an Aztec ritual prayer which indicates there were prophets in Ancient America.

Ruler's Prayer to Tezcatlipoca (excerpts)

With great thirst I await thee and demand urgently thy word and inspiration which thou didst breathe into thy ancient friends and acquaintances that have ruled with diligence and rectitude over thy kingdom. This is thy throne and honor on either side, whereof are seated thy senators and principal men who are as thine image and person. They give sentence and speak on the affairs of state in thy name, thou usest them as thy flutes speaking from within them and placing thyself in their face and ears, opening their mouths so they may speak well.

. . . . I desire to say that I unworthily represent thy person and thy image, that *the words I shall speak have to be esteemed as thine, that my face has to be as thine, mine eyes as thine and the punishment I shall inflict as if thou hadst inflicted it. For all this I entreat thee to put thy spirit within me and thy words so that all may obey them and none contradict.*⁹

Prophecies in the Book of Mormon

The Bible contains internal evidence of its own authenticity. The prophecies and visions of its prophets have been fulfilled and are still being fulfilled.

Consideration of the question of the presence of prophets and visions (the Shepherd's staff) in Ancient America cannot be complete until we examine some of the Book of Mormon's internal evidence of its own authenticity.

Like the Bible, the Book of Mormon contains numerous prophecies which have been fulfilled.

In this article we shall limit ourselves briefly to several prophecies the Book of Mormon contains relative to certain things which were to happen after the book should be published.

The Restoration of the Jews

All Biblical students know that the Scriptures are replete with prophecies concerning the restoration of the Jews to their ancient homeland.

In 1830, there was no outward indication that these ancient prophecies were about to be fulfilled. The Roman Emperor, Titus, sacked Jerusalem in A.D. 70 and banished the surviving Jews to other countries. From A.D. 70 until 1830, the Jews lived as foreigners without citizenship rights in the various countries of Europe.

Hollis M. Read says:

It must be evident to any common observer that there is a great movement among them. This wonderful people, who for 1800 years remained unaltered, have undergone a marvelous revolution within the last forty years especially the last twenty.¹⁰

Mr. Read's book was published in 1870. He says the marvelous revolution undergone by the Jews took place "within the last forty years." This would place the beginning of this great change in the year 1830.

The Book of Mormon which was published in March, 1830, contains the following prophecy:

And now I would prophesy somewhat more concerning the Jews and Gentiles. For after the book of which I have spoken [Book of Mormon] shall come forth and be written unto the Gentiles The Lord shall commence his work among all nations, kindreds, tongues, and peoples to bring about the restoration of his people upon the earth.—2 Nephi 12: 79.

Dr. Hollis M. Read, A.M., says:

There is much at present in their civil condition that indicates the returning favor of heaven. Nothing decisive or permanent was done to remove the disabilities of the Jews until the beginning of the present century. . . . In England a single ray of light darted above the horizon, but was soon extinguished. An act passed in Parliament (1753) in favor of the Jewish Emancipation; but was repealed the next year; and not till the year 1830 was the question renewed and then only to be lost. Yet in the same year a bill in their favor was carried in France.¹¹

The Book of Mormon, published in March, 1830, contained a prophecy that after its publication the Lord would commence his work among all nations, looking to the restoration of his people to the land of their inheritance. It is significant that the first permanent grant of civil rights to the Jews in 1500 years was passed by the French Parliament in 1830, a mere few months after the Book of Mormon was published. It is more significant that within a period of a half century after the French acted in favor of the Jews, every nation in the civilized world except two had passed similar enactments.

In an issue of the Prophetic News, published in 1887, we find the following statement:

The only countries in which, half a century ago [1837] the Jews enjoyed full and integral equality of rights, are France, Belgium, the Netherlands, and the United States of America. At present [1887] except Russia and Roumania, the constitutions of all countries of the civilized world guarantee civil and political equality of rights to the Jews.

Let it be borne in mind that in repealing the disqualifications of the Jews, all those countries to which we are referring, have had to do with a state of things that had lasted for 1500 years.

It is an easy thing to denounce Joseph

Smith as an imposter and an ignoramus, and the Book of Mormon as a fraud. It is not so easy to explain away the prophecies in the Book of Mormon in their relation to subsequent events.

Gathering of the Jews

The Book of Mormon contains a prophecy by Christ which gives the time when the Jews should gather to Jerusalem. The time was to be very soon after the coming forth of the Book of Mormon.

Then shall the covenant which the Father hath covenanted with his people be fulfilled; and then shall Jerusalem be inhabited again with my people, and it shall be the land of their inheritance.

And verily, I say unto you, I give unto you a sign that ye may know the time when these things shall be about to take place, that I shall gather in from their long dispersion, my people, O house of Israel and behold, this is the thing which I will give unto you for a sign these things which I declare unto you shall be made known unto the Gentiles [coming forth of the Book of Mormon]—3 Nephi 9: 85-93.

The Book of Mormon was published with a prophecy between its covers that its coming forth would soon be followed by the fulfillment of Old Testament prophecies (restoration of Israel) which had stood with no sign of fulfillment for over 2,000 years.

In an article published in the National Tribune in 1889 (June 15), Mr. F. G. Carpenter says:

At present the Jews are coming here by the hundreds. . . . a half century ago [1839] there were only 32 Jewish families in all Jerusalem, and the number in Palestine was only 3000. Now [1889] there are nearly 50,000 in the Holy Land.

In 1830, there was only a handful of Jews in all Palestine. In 1889, there were 50,000. In 1935, 61,541 Jews returned to Palestine. Today, "Israel" is an independent nation.

Lebanon to Be a Fruitful Field

In 1830, there were very few Jews in Palestine, and the country itself was desolate. The restoration of the Jews involves more than people. It involves the land also.

An old encyclopedia gives us the situation in Palestine in the early part of the eighteenth century.

Eighteen centuries of war, ruin, and neglect have passed over it. Its valleys have been cropped for ages without the least attempt at fertilization. Its terraced walls have been allowed to crumble, and its soil has washed down its ravines, leaving the hillsides rocky and sterile. Its trees have been cut down and never replaced. Its fields have been desolate. Its structures pillaged and all its improvements ruthlessly destroyed. A land of ruins without man or beast. Everywhere, on plain or mountain, in rocky desert, or on beetling cliff the spoiler's hand has rested.—McClintock and Strong's Encyclopedia, Article on Palestine.

The twenty-ninth chapter of Isaiah tells us about a book that is to come forth. This is followed by this significant declaration:

But behold, saith the Lord of hosts, I will show unto the children of men, that it is not yet a very little while, and Lebanon shall be turned into a fruitful field; and the fruitful field shall be esteemed as a forest.

And in that day shall the deaf hear the words of the book.—Isaiah 29: 29, 30.

Both the Book of Mormon (2 Nephi 12: 79-87) and the Bible (twenty-ninth chapter of Isaiah) agree that the restoration of Israel is to follow the coming forth of a book. The Book of Mormon goes a little further than the Bible and identifies itself as being the book whose coming forth is to precede and herald the restoration of Israel (2 Nephi 12: 79-87).

When the Book of Mormon was published in 1830, Palestine was an unproductive wilderness.

In a book published in 1935, Mr. George T. B. Davis says:

The change that has taken place in Palestine is almost unbelievable, and well nigh beggars description. Swamp lands have been reclaimed, and have given place to waving fields of grain. Sandy wastes have been turned into beautiful orange groves. Desert places have been turned into a veritable garden of Eden. *Indeed it is quite probable that such a sudden change from a waste wilderness to a land blossoming as the rose has never before been witnessed in the history of the world.*¹²

The Times Before Appointed

When Paul went up on Mars Hill, he found an altar "To the Unknown God."

Whom therefore ye ignorantly worship, him declare I unto you.

God that made the world and all things therein,

And hath made of one blood all nations of men for to dwell on all the face of the earth, and hath determined the times before appointed, and the bounds of their habitation;

That they should seek the Lord, if they are willing to find him, for he is not far from everyone of us.—Acts 17: 23-27.

By means of his Shepherd's staff (word of the Lord by prophets, visions) the Shepherd of Israel has "determined the times before appointed and the bounds of their habitation." At the time before appointed, the Lord raised up Joseph in Egypt and Daniel in Babylon. At the time before appointed, he revealed himself by a vision to Paul on the road to Damascus, and Paul carried the blessings of the Shepherd's staff to two more civilizations (Greece and Rome). At the time before appointed, the Lord revealed himself by vision and dream to Columbus, and the New World was discovered. At the time before appointed, the Good Shepherd revealed himself by vision to the boy prophet of the nineteenth century (Joseph Smith). At the time before appointed (1830), Joseph Smith was divinely led to discover and bring forth the Book of Mormon with its prophecies of imminent fulfillment of the ancient promises to the House of Israel.

It is a matter of history that the five previous major civilizations (Egypt, Babylon, Greece, Rome, and Prehistoric America) were all directly associated with and influenced by prophets and the word of the Lord.

The coming forth of the Book of Mormon and the restoration of prophets, visions, and the word of the Lord in our day has been followed by the greatest era of scientific, social, and intellectual progress the world has ever known, and the nation (U. S. A.) that has nestled the return of an authoritative religion (prophets, visions) has become the heart and center of our great twentieth century civilization.

¹Washington Irving, Life of Columbus, page 35.

²P. De Roo, History of America Before Columbus, Volume 2, pages 501, 502.

³Montgomery, Leading Facts of American History.

⁴Herbert Spinden, "Deciphering Maya Mysteries," Scientific American, March, 1928.

⁵Gregory Mason, "The Great American Mystery," McCall's Magazine, April, 1930.

⁶Ann Axtell Morris, Digging in Yucatan.

⁷Hyatt Verrill, The American Indian, page 124.

⁸Kingsborough, Mexican Antiquities, Volume 6, page 213, quoted from Paul M. Hanson's Jesus Christ Among the Ancient Americans.

⁹H. H. Bancroft, Native Races, Volume 3, page 230.

¹⁰Hollis M. Read, The Hand of God in History, page 357.

¹¹*Ibid.*, page 348.

¹²George T. B. Davis, Rebuilding Palestine According to Prophecy.

The Suppertime of the Lord

(Continued from page 11.)

of his kingdom. We have found citizenship, and he has given us the seal of our adoption. We have been adopted; we have come into a new kingdom—a new world, the kingdom of God and his righteousness.

The power of regeneration cleanses our souls and helps us to prepare to live in the beautiful city of God. May its heavenly peace and his blessed Spirit help us to eat that bread which comes down from heaven, for Jesus said, "My bread is to do the will of my Father, which is in heaven."

A Reasonable Service

by

Grace Baughman Keairnes

We discovered 75 unbound copies of this book tucked back in a corner. We have bound them up now for you who would like a copy of this favorite old church story for your own library. There will be no more—just 75

75c each

Order from your Book Steward or from

HERALD PUBLISHING HOUSE

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI

The SAINTS' HYMNAL

leather binding

A semi-limp binding of Morocco-grained cowhide
Stamped in pure gold with red under gold edges and round corners.
Opens easily and can be used on the piano.
YOU'LL want this hymnal in your own home to play and sing your favorite hymns.

$5

Order from your Book Steward or from

HERALD PUBLISHING HOUSE

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI

Worship Suggestions for July

Theme for the Month:

FREEDOM OF SPIRIT

JULY 4, 1948

FREEDOM IN RELATION TO THE NATION

Prelude:

Call to Worship:

Stand fast therefore in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free, and be not entangled again with the yoke of bondage.—Galatians 5: 1.

Suggested Hymns (Saints' Hymnal):

- "These Things Shall Be," No. 187
- "O Beautiful for Spacious Skies," No. 418
- "My Country, 'Tis of Thee," No. 423
- "Blest Be Thou, O God of Israel," No. 121

Prayer.

Scripture:

And this land shall be a land of liberty unto the Gentiles; and there shall be no kings upon the land, who shall raise up unto the Gentiles. And I will fortify this land against all other nations; And he that fighteth against Zion, shall perish, saith God; for he that raiseth up a king against me, shall perish. For I the Lord, the King of heaven, will be their king; and I will be a light unto them for ever, that hear my words.—2 Nephi 7: 18-21.

Poems:

HYMN OF GRATITUDE

Great God of nations, now to thee
Our hymn of gratitude we raise;
With humble heart and bending knee
We offer thee our song of praise.

Thy name we bless, Almighty God,
For all the kindness Thou hast shown
To this fair land the Pilgrims trod—
This land we fondly call our own.

We praise thee that the gospel's light
Through all our land its radiance sheds
Dispels the shade of error's night,
And heavenly blessings round us spreads.

Great God, preserve us in thy fear;
In danger, still our Guardian be;
O spread thy truth's bright precepts here;
Let all the people worship thee.
—Anonymous.

AMERICA

When earth was baptized
And the floods subsided,
As divinely decreed,
The land was divided.

Divorced from other lands,
Wide oceans between,
Like great shadowing wings
America was seen.

From the knowledge
Of the nations, hidden, sealed
To his chosen prophets
Alone revealed.

A goodly land,
Of all lands the choice;
Where the wicked may fear
But the righteous rejoice.

Prepared, preserved,
Divinely blessed,
An asylum for the persecuted,
Enslaved, and oppressed.

America! America!
How great is thy name!
Millions have taken hope
At the heralds of thy fame.
—Amateur.

Stories:

- "The Rise of the First American Democracy"—Mosiah 13.
- "The First Banner of Liberty in America"—Alma 21: 38-43.

JULY 11, 1948

FREEDOM IN RELATION TO THE HOME

Prelude:

- "Gracious Spirit, Dwell With Me," No. 192
- or
- "O Master, Let Me Walk With Thee," No. 213

Call to Worship:

A partnership with God is parenthood;
What strength, what purity, what self-control,
What love, what wisdom, should belong to them
Who help God fashion an immortal soul.

I am among you as he that serveth.

Ye shall succor men: 'tis nobleness to serve.

—Autumn Leaves.

Suggested Hymns (Saints' Hymnal):

- "Jesus, Mighty King in Zion," No. 361
- "Sovereign and Transforming Grace," No. 76
- "Father of All, in Whom Alone We Live," No. 61
- "Blest Be the Tie That Binds," No. 343
- "Oh, Lord, Thy Benediction Give," No. 84

Scripture:

Behold, their husbands love their wives, and their wives love their husbands, and their husbands and their wives love their children.—Jacob 2: 57.

Inasmuch as parents have children in Zion, or in any of her stakes which are organized, that teach them not to understand the doctrine of repentance; faith in Christ the Son of the living God; and of baptism and the gift of the Holy Ghost by the laying on of the hands when eight years old, the sin be upon the head of the parents; for this shall be a law unto the inhabitants of Zion, or in any of her stakes which are organized; and their children shall be baptized for the remission of their sins when eight years old, and receive the laying on of hands.—Doctrine and Covenants 68: 4.

By Sarah Van Fleet

Pray in your families unto the Father, always in my name, that your wives and your children may be blessed.—3 Nephi 8: 52.

A Prayer for a Little Home:

God send us a little home—
To come back to when we roam—
Low walls and fluted tiles,
Wide windows, a view for miles;
Red firelight and deep chairs;
Small white beds upstairs;
Great talk in little nooks,
Dim colors, rows of books;
One picture on each wall;
Not many things at all.
God send us a little ground—
Tall trees standing 'round,
Homely flowers in brown sod,
Overhead thy stars, O God—
Bless all the winds that blow
Our homes and all we know.
—Anonymous.

Design for Family-Living:

One: Thou shalt have love. "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God." Love of husband and wife, of both for the children, of all for the home.

Two: Thou shalt have faith. Faith in a higher power. Faith in human nature. Unquestioning confidence in members of the family.

Three: Thou shalt have a goal. Planning for education of children. Professional advancement for adults.

Four: Thou shalt have a financial plan. Systematic budgeting and spending of income. Co-operation of parents and children in that plan. Knowledge of importance and unimportance of money. Provision for family by insurance and will-making.

Five: Thou shalt have health. Practice of rules of hygiene and nutrition. Safe-guarding from home and public dangers, physical and moral.

Six: Thou shalt have a sense of humor. Serenity, gaiety, ability to see the funny side, as essential elements of happiness.

Seven: Thou shalt have recreation. Education and leisure. Privacy for entertainment. Cultural background, books, pictures, tasteful home furnishings, as far as obtainable.

Eight: Thou shalt have courtesy. The politeness of kindness. Patience and understanding. Discipline of children, self-control. Maintaining social amenities within the family.

Nine: Thou shalt have toleration. Recognition of individual rights. Toleration of other nations, other races. Instilling habits of peace.

Ten: Thou shalt have social responsibility. Service to community, church, country, world. "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."

—The Latter Day Saint Home of Today and Tomorrow, page 90.

JULY 18, 1948

FREEDOM IN RELATIONSHIP TO THE CHURCH

Prelude:

"To Thy Temple We Repair," No. 59

or

"Father, Once Again We Come," No. 80

Call to Worship:

One thing have I desired of the Lord, that will I seek after, that I may dwell in the house of the Lord, all the days of my life, to behold the beauty of the Lord, and to inquire in the temple.—Psalm 27: 4.

Suggested Hymns (Saints' Hymnal):

"The Church's One Foundation," No. 359

"Lead On, O King Eternal," No. 181

"He Leadeth Me," No. 264

"Be With Me," No. 305

Prayer:

Scripture:

Now, in Christ Jesus, ye who sometime were far off are made nigh by the blood of Christ. . . . For through him we both have access by one Spirit unto the Father Now therefore ye are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellow citizens with the saints, and of the household of God; And are built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone; In whom all the building fitly framed together groweth unto a holy temple in the Lord; In whom ye also are builded together for an habitation of God through the Spirit.—Ephesians 2: 13, 18-22.

And ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free.—John 8: 32.

Being then made free from sin, ye became the servants of righteousness.—Romans 6: 18.

Solo:

"How Lovely Are Thy Dwellings," by Liddle (May be obtained at any music store.)

Poems:

AN ANGEL UNAWARES

If after kirk ye bide a wee,
There's one would like to speak to ye.
If after kirk ye rise and flee,
We'll all seem cold and stiff to ye.

That one that's in the seat wi' ye,
Is stranger here than you, may be;
Add you your soul unto our prayers;
Be you our angel unawares.
—Anonymous.

Love is the doctrine of this church,
The quest of truth is its sacrament,
And service is its prayer.

To dwell together in peace,
To seek knowledge in freedom,
To serve mankind in fellowship,
To the end that all souls shall grow into harmony with the Divine;
Thus do we covenant with each other and with God.

—Author unknown.

Story:

"Building the House of God," Worship Services for Youth, by Alice Bays, page 238, or,

Selection of a story about the establishment of the church from The Story of the Church, by Inez Smith Davis.

JULY 25, 1948

FREEDOM IN RELATION TO FRIENDS

Prelude:

"O, Brother Man, Fold to Thy Heart Thy Brother," No. 339.

Call to Worship:

This is my commandment, That ye love one another as I have loved you. Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends. Ye are my friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you. Henceforth, I call you not servants; for the servant knoweth not what his Lord doeth; but I have called you friends, for all things that I have heard of my Father I have made known unto you.—John 15: 13-15.

Suggested Hymns (Saints' Hymnal):

"The Old, Old Path," No. 260

"What a Friend We Have in Jesus," No. 257

"I Would Be True," No. 294

"Thou Must Be True Thyself," No. 300

"Praise God," No. 14

Prayer:

Poems:

BE A FRIEND

Be a friend. You don't need money;
Just a disposition sunny;
Just the wish to help another
Get along some way or other;
Just a kindly hand extended
Out to one who's unbidden;
Just the will to give or lend,
This will make you someone's friend.

Be a friend. You don't need glory.
Friendship is a simple story.
Pass by trifling errors blindly,
Gaze on honest effort kindly,
Cheer the youth who's bravely trying,
Pity him who's sadly sighing;
Just a little labor spend
On the duties of a friend.

Be a friend. The pay is bigger
(though not written by a figure)
Than is earned by people clever
In what's merely self-endeavor.
You'll have friends instead of neighbors
For the profits of your labors
You'll be richer in the end
Than a prince, if you're a friend.
—Edgar A. Guest.

The bread that giveth strength I want to give,
The water pure that bids the thirsty live;
I want to help the fainting day by day;
I'm sure I shall not pass again this way.

I want to give the oil of joy for tears,
The faith to conquer crowding doubts and fears,
Beauty for ashes may I give away;
I'm sure I shall not pass again this way.

I want to give good measure running o'er,
And into angry hearts I want to pour
The answer soft that turneth wrath away;
I'm sure I shall not pass again this way.

I want to give to others hope and faith,
I want to do all that the Master saith;
I want to live aright from day to day;
I'm sure I shall not pass again this way.
—Author unknown.

LOVE THYSELF LAST

Love thyself last; look near, behold thy duty
To those who walk beside thee down life's road;
Make glad their days by little acts of beauty,
And help them bear the burden of earth's load.

Love thyself last; look far and find the stranger
Who staggers 'neath his sin and his despair;
Go, lend a hand and lead him out of danger
To heights where he may see the world is fair.

Love thyself last; the vastnesses above thee
Are filled with spirit forces, strong and pure;
And fervently these faithful friends shall love thee,
Keep thy watch over others and endure.

Love thyself last; and thou shalt grow in spirit
To see, to hear, to know and understand;
The message of the stars, lo, thou shalt hear it,
And all God's joys shall be at thy command.
—Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

Scripture:

Beloved, let us love one another; for love is of God; and everyone that loveth is born of God, and knoweth God. He that loveth not, knoweth not God; for God is love. In this was manifested the love of God toward us, because that God sent his only begotten Son into the world, that we might live through him. Herein is love, not that we loved God, but that he loved us, and sent his Son to be the propitiation for our sins. Beloved, if God so loved us, we ought also to love one another. No man hath seen God at any time, except them who believe. If we love one another, God dwelleth in us, and his love is perfected in us.—I John 4: 7-12.

Story:

Luke 10: 31-38 may be used as a story.

Advice to the Bride

Dear Anne,

So you have actually set the date and are in the midst of those breath-taking last weeks before the great event, and you want a bit of advice from your godmother?

Knowing you so well and the circumstances of your engagement, I am not apprehensive; your marriage will start, I believe, with several strikes in your favor. You and John have been together, early and late, for about a year, haven't you? This means real friendship; basic like-mindedness and congeniality make you good companions.

Then you report that John has joined our church and that his devotion puts some of the old-time Latter Day Saints to shame. That means a united home for Christ, with that definite stimulus toward actual Zionic-living which this gospel message brings. Very reverently, I thank God for that, Anne.

You are both college graduates with similar educational backgrounds --another basis for stability of marriage. But you do come from different cultures. Yours is a professional class, deeply-rooted, generations back --ministers, doctors, lawyers and teachers. And you are a third-generation Latter Day Saint. Don't be surprised if in your brilliant husband you find out-croppings of his good family's German peasant mores. Treat these with respect. Be open-minded, and you will find some of these patterns of home and family living altogether endearing and desirable. That wise old European culture has still a few lessons to teach us. I hope you can manage to become friends with his mother so you can learn the ways that are so dearly familiar to John and help him to perpetuate some of them in your home. When there comes a clash of cultures, you will surely be able to talk it out together.

By the way, have you ever had a regular bang-up quarrel? And have you been able to talk things out and arrive at a mutually acceptable solution, each giving ground a little? Or is a difference of opinion settled always one way, with always the same one of you in the ascendancy? That would be a wrong beginning. And such lamblike deferring to another's opinion will not last, believe me!

In brief, plan carefully patterns and levels of home living that are right for you two. Some long-time Zionic goals will motivate these plans, but learn to live in the present tense. Don't be overanxious for the future; build each day some achievement, happiness, and a degree of holiness. Start on a sound financial basis. After certain necessary physical provisions, measure budget layouts by spiritual and cultural yardsticks. Many of your generation, especially the veterans, are furnishing a wonderful example of plain-living and high-thinking. Foster always rich cultural and spiritual interests and activities together. Be realistic in your planning; face facts, but keep your home always a heavenly place, where you can play, live, and worship comfortably together.

Remember, you asked for this. Can I help it if I'm the combination of preacher's daughter, preacher's wife, and school mistress? I'm bound to sermonize!

God bless you, Anne, is the prayer of Your godmother,

Alice Burgess

Advice to the Groom

Dear John,

So you are married now! Frankly, I expected it long ago. Why shouldn't you and a perfectly wonderful girl like Mary form a life partnership?

Indeed, marriage is so much your natural right and sacred privilege, its enjoyments so peculiarly personal, that I--claiming to be your friend-- should merely wire, "Congratulations and best wishes," and retire from the stage as quickly as possible.

Recently I was privileged to hear a nationally famous after-dinner speaker who was advertised as a "humorist and philosopher." His wealth of stories contained many choice bits of homey, yet sound advice. His chief delight, it seems, was found in holding up to ridicule certain current fears, fads, and traditions, ending each such outburst in turn with the warning, "It ain't necessarily so."

This marriage business seems to have acquired more than its share of such lore. Some of it is sound and sane. Some consists of dangerous half-truths. Some, though highly romantic and thrilling, is pure fiction. Concerning such, I bring the warning, "It ain't necessarily so."

What follows is a little sermon. It won't cost you anything extra. Just the trouble involved in reading it.

A foremost national authority on marriage matters said the other day, "Romantic love, the great American experiment as a guarantee to happiness in marriage, is now recognized as a myth." Another of equal reputation writes, "The idea that marriage will succeed automatically if people are enough in love has had its day." People need as much love as ever, but in addition their need is for understanding and spiritual growth.

That's it, John. Married love that endures is made of sturdy stuff. Its ingredients include intelligence, character, mutuality, whole-mindedness, and the like. These do not fall upon one as a mantle out of a moonlit sky. Rather they constitute an achievement infinitely costly and glorious.

I close this preachment at this point lest I lose your friendship forever. Just remember that you must:

Intend to make a "go" of marriage. "Nail your flag to the mast."

Work at the job. Anything worth-while will not live or grow without effort.

Practice the art of co-operation. Marriage is a 50-50 partnership.

Give the best of yourself to this partnership, and that, never forget, means the whole of yourself.

Treat your companion for what she is--"one made in the likeness of her creator."

There is only one eternal triangle that can be trusted, and that consists of yourself, your mate, and God.

In a word, John, enjoy the romance of these happy days. They are yours, and you have every right to them. I have had no desire to deprive you of one iota of such satisfactions. On the contrary, I hoped to point the way toward their enrichment and fulfillment. With all my heart I believe the best is yet to be. I close, happy in the thought that persons of the quality of yourself and Mary will succeed in achieving this rich fruitage of your love. I'm for you with all my heart.

Your well-meaning friend,

F. M. McDowell

www.LatterDayTruth.org

Sketches in Black and White

By ALETA RUNKLE

A BLACK HAND reaches out to you in friendly greeting. Do you clasp it as warmly as if it were white? A black face smiles a welcome. Is your answering smile quick and sincere?

* * *

It was in the university that I first met Lois—a beautiful mulatto with black, glossy hair and fair skin, but with the unmistakable features of a Negro. Her voice was low and pleasant, her speech cultured. Her smile included everyone with unaffected friendliness. It was in the first few sessions of our graduate classes in the music department that we, who were classmates of Lois, discovered her extraordinary talents. She possessed superior innate rhythmic sense. Her keen mind analyzed difficult harmonic progressions rapidly. But it was in her study of piano that all of these inherent talents combined to make a brilliant artist. Gruelling hours of practice couldn't dampen her enthusiasm; her interest and skill increased daily. At the conclusion of her year of graduate study, Lois was awarded an "honors" for her piano recital—the most coveted merit in the department.

When she received her degree, Lois was eager to continue her study for a doctorate, but that would necessarily mean that she receive some financial assistance. Her first thought was to request a teaching fellowship. She made inquiries of the department head—an unprejudiced scholar interested in promoting congenial racial relations. It was with sincere regret that he refused her request. White students would resent a colored teacher—even though the instructor were a person of unusual ability who could expertly guide their study. Kindly the professor explained that Lois herself would be sacrificed in such an intolerant situation. Both her professional and personal life would be unhappy. Now, if she were white—

* * *

I sat in the superintendent's office waiting for an interview. The well-groomed white lady who had sat across from me was now in the inner office—perhaps applying for the same position as I. She was an attractive person—regular features, fair complexion, smooth, black hair. She was the composite of refinement and gentility. Later, when she came out of the office, the superintendent turned to me and said, "Would you say she was white or colored?" White, of course! But she was applying for a position in the Negro school! How easily she could have "passed," but she chose to retain her colored heritage. Such loyalty impressed me.

* * *

Included in my supervisory assignment this year in the public schools of Independence was the colored school. I looked forward to this new experience of such close association with the colored children and their teachers. I had attended university classes with Negro students and had never resented them; a few times I had formed a fine friendship with some of them. Here, perhaps was an opportunity to help in a small way to promote racial understanding and to see for myself if there were any marked differences in abilities between races. Would the Negro children be better singers than the whites? Would their rhythmic sense be more natural and accurate?

I shall never forget my first morning at Young School. With shy eagerness, warm brown eyes signaled friendly hellos. I was accepted. I listened expectantly to their songs. Were they better singers? No, not at all. They needed to be taught, as did our own white children, to sing lightly and in tune.

For a time I delayed the rhythmic experience until we could establish a singing background. Then came the day to teach the little ones how to skip, gallop, and march, and to recognize which type of music told them to skip and which to march. That was a choice day. I am always hesitant to make definite affirmations with limited observations, but I am quite sure that Negroes possess, for the most part a keener rhythmic sense than whites. Those little children needed only one explanation for each rhythm and soon they were responding with superior accuracy and natural grace. It was not necessary for me to give individual attention to any child. Those youngsters had the "know-how." Theirs was an innate knowledge.

New Horizons

* * *

Then there was the day before Christmas vacation when the little first and second grade colored children were singing "Silent Night" for me. I had heard the song over and over again for several days in our other schools. The white children had always sung it sweetly, and I had enjoyed their natural interpretation, but after so many repetitions I could not feel any particular emotion in connection with the song. This morning as I listened to "Silent Night," I felt a distinct spirit that was peaceful and tender as those youngsters sang. I make no claims to understanding the movements of the Spirit, nor always to be conscious of its presence, but against my limited background of such experiences, I feel free to say that in a measure the Spirit of God blessed the singing of those children; and in my humble opinion, I believe our Father found his little ones and their colored teacher acceptable that morning.

* * *

Last summer at reunion, a young colored man came to camp at the invitation of a gracious lady and her husband. The contact was enriching and wholesome for all of us. Robert was an excellent tenor. He sang for evensong one night and so inspired the eight hundred who were there that they were loathe to leave even for the lure of the "cook shack." In the middle of the week, it was his voice that wakened the campers on the early morning devotions. It was a familiar sight about camp to see Robert and a group of our young, white fellows in friendly conversation. The entire experience was an interesting social experiment, the effects of which may be far-reaching.

Black and white—opposites on the color chart. How shall we reconcile these extremes? Is segregation the answer? Shall we keep the colored folk strictly in check lest their increasing power endanger our present mode of economic and social life? How tolerant are we? Do we honestly want the Negroes to enjoy equal privileges? How shall we explain the world brotherhood implied in the statement, "for of one blood hath God made all nations"?

What would you say?

The Trouble-Shooter

Definitions Wanted

QUESTION: Frequently I find myself confused over the usage of the words "laws," "principles," "doctrines," "beliefs," and "truths" in such phrases as "financial law," "law of Christ," "principles of the gospel," and "doctrines of the church." What are the exact meanings of these words? Are they in the field of science or philosophy?

ANSWER: By A. R. Gilbert

An adequate understanding of another person's expression and point of view depends, it seems to me, upon three major factors:

1. The desire for such an understanding
2. An adequate background of experience for understanding
3. Accurate expression by the one to be understood.

The first requisite for understanding another person is for one to intend to do so. This will not only prevent deliberate and intentional misinterpretation, but will also prompt one to positive acts of inquiry and consideration in order to facilitate clear understanding. Many people are so preoccupied with picking flaws in another's ideas and in arguing for a preconceived point of view that they find it very difficult to enter into a co-operative effort to understand another. This is especially true in cases where there is a difference of opinion.

We interpret the present in terms of our past experiences. For this reason, rich and broad experience should be stressed as a basis for expression and understanding. The primary role of experiences in understanding has been well presented in these words of Dr. Roy A. Cheville:

It seems to me that the college student will do well to give attention to expanding experience along ever so many fronts. Much of this expanding will come through the eyes and ears of others, in reading, in conversation, in pictures. Given a new experience, we shall seek to procure a name for it. . . . In a nutshell, I would say, get the experience, and the words will take care of themselves.¹

Accurate expression by an author or a speaker facilitates clear understanding on the part of a reader or listener. It is not possible, however, to assure accurate expression or clear understanding by means of a precise definition of each word. The exact meaning of a word depends to a large extent upon the setting in which it is used and upon the intent of the author. At least eighteen different definitions for the word "law" may be found in the dictionary. Moreover, words may sometimes be used to designate meanings not recognized by a dictionary and still be understood clearly. While observing some children playing ball, I heard such phrases as "peg 'er second," "shoot it home," "knock me in." These remarks were perfectly understood by all of the children, notwithstanding the peculiar usage of some of the words.

In attempting to dispel confusion about meanings, I would suggest that emphasis be placed upon a genuine and active intent to understand and upon a consideration of the setting of circumstances and culture in which the events occur.

¹Roy A. Cheville, "How to Build a Better Vocabulary," The Saints' Herald, April 7, 1945, page 315.

ENGAGEMENTS

Harvey-Dodds

Mr. and Mrs. William H. Dodds of Grand Rapids, Michigan, announce the engagement of their daughter, Elna Elaine, to Bruce Robert Harvey, son of Mr. and Mrs. Homer E. Harvey, also of Grand Rapids. The wedding will take place in late June. Both Elna and Bruce are students at Graceland.

Jackson-Trusty

Mr. and Mrs. Darl L. Trusty of Webster City, Iowa, announce the engagement of their daughter, Freda Darlene, to Donald D. Jackson, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Jackson of Prescott, Iowa. The wedding will take place on June 6 at the Reorganized Church in Webster City.

Ward-Fenn

Mr. and Mrs. Weaver C. Fenn of Carson, Iowa, announce the engagement of their daughter, Leona Jean, to Joseph Kenneth Ward, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Ward of Independence, Missouri. Both Miss Fenn and Mr. Ward are Graceland graduates. The wedding will take place in Carson in August.

Ward-DeTray

Mr. and Mrs. Donald E. DeTray of Independence, Missouri, announce the engagement of their daughter, Dorothy Lou, to Vaughn Newton Ward, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Ward of Independence. Mr. Ward is a graduate of Graceland College. The wedding will take place on June 17 at Spring Branch Church.

Meredith-Church

Dr. and Mrs. Charles F. Church, Jr., of Independence, Missouri, announce the engagement of their daughter, Marilyn Ruth, to Leslie H. Meredith, son of Dr. and Mrs. H. Voas Meredith of Iowa City, Iowa. Both Miss Church and Mr. Meredith are graduates of Graceland College, class of '48. The wedding will take place in late summer.

WEDDINGS

Gilbert-Ashenhurst

Betty Ashenhurst, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dan Patton of Burchinal, Iowa, and Harry Gilbert, son of Mr. and Mrs. David Gilbert of Thornton, Iowa, were married at the bride's home on February 22. The Reverend Harvey Walker read the double-ring ceremony.

Gress-Magenheimer

Georgia Ruth Magenheimer and Richard A. Gress of Kansas City, Kansas, were married April 11 at St. Luke's Lutheran Church. They are making their home in Kansas City, Kansas.

Lohman-Johnson

Phoebe C. Johnson, daughter of Mr. C. O. Johnson of Far West, Missouri, and Gustav Franklin Lohman of Turney, Missouri, were married in the Far West Church on May 16. Elder O. W. Okerlind, uncle of the bride, performed the double-ring ceremony. The Lohmans are making their home on a farm near Turney.

Snuggs-Stemm

Frances Stemm, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Stemm, and Chester Snuggs, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jake Snuggs, were married on May 1 at the Reorganized Church in Lucas, Iowa. Priest Albert W. Baker read the double-ring ceremony. The couple will make their home on a farm near Lucas.

Wicks-Brown

Peggie Lavelle Brown, daughter of Mrs. Ester Brown, and Frank Wicks, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wicks of Dallas, Texas, were married February 14 at the Reorganized Church in Dallas. Elder Linden Wheeler officiated.

BIRTHS

Mr. and Mrs. Warren Harding of Bozeman, Montana, announce the birth of a daughter, Mary Helen, born March 11. She was blessed on Easter Sunday by Elder Joseph Yager.

A daughter, Katherine Winona, was born on May 1 to Mr. and Mrs. Wendell B. Wilson of Dallas, Texas.

Mr. and Mrs. Bruce K. Setchfield of Independence, Missouri, announce the birth of a daughter, Ruth Ellen, born April 24 at the Independence Sanitarium. Mrs. Setchfield is the former Sarah Saloniimer.

A daughter, Scarlet Dawn, was born April 22 to Mr. and Mrs. K. Ernest Newberg of Ravenwood, Missouri. Mrs. Newberg was formerly Lois Patience of Shenandoah, Iowa.

Erie Beach Reunion

The Erie Beach Reunion will be held July 30 through August 8 on Lake Erie, fourteen miles south of Chatham, Ontario. The opening service is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. on Friday. Apostle Paul M. Hanson, Bishop Walter Johnson, Elders John Sheehy, Almer Sheehy, and Jack Pray will be in charge. Mrs. Glada Crinzi is to be guest women's leader. For information concerning tents and cabins, contact J. F. Kelly, 205 St. Clair Street, Chatham, Ontario.

J. A. PRAY,
Publicity Chairman.

Attention, Manhattan, Kansas, Saints

Mrs. Anabel Deckert wants to rent a three- or four-room apartment or house in Manhattan. Her husband is entering Kansas State College this fall. Please write to her before June 6, c/o Jack Hauschild, Sterling, Kansas.

All-Day Meeting at Bend, Oregon

An all-day meeting will be held in the auditorium of the Bend Public Library in Bend, Oregon, on Sunday, June 6. District President J. L. Verhei and Elder Miles Whiting will be present to discuss plans for the development of a mission in the vicinity of Bend. Members living in this area are urged to contact George M. Dyer, 1325 Harmon Boulevard, Bend, Oregon (Telephone Ph. 87 days, 522-R evenings).

Anniversary Celebrations

Mr. and Mrs. Edward S. Heaviland will celebrate their golden wedding anniversary on June 12, 1948. On this same date, their daughter and her husband, the Harry V. Randsalls, will celebrate their silver wedding anniversary. Open house will be held at the Heaviland home, 11827 Ohio Avenue, Detroit, Michigan, on Sunday, June 13, from 3 to 6 in the afternoon. At 7:30 in the evening, a special service will be held in their honor at the Highland Park Church, Joselyn and Louise Avenues. All are welcome to attend.

Southern Missouri District Conference

The Southern Missouri District Conference will be held at Kennett, Missouri, on July 11 and 12, beginning with a prayer service at 10 a.m. on Saturday. The business session is scheduled for 3 o'clock, Saturday afternoon. District officers and delegates to General Conference will be elected, and priesthood calls approved at this time. Missionary William Guthrie is to be present.

JAMES A. PHILLIPS,
District President.

Azalia, Michigan, Homecoming

Homecoming services will be held at Azalia, Michigan, on Sunday, June 20. Features of the day include an early morning prayer service (9 a.m.), preaching at 11: dinner; musical service at 1:30 p.m.; and a fellowship hour at 2 o'clock.

BEN FERGUSON, Pastor.

Wants to Contact Saints

John I. Hacker, who has recently been transferred to Washington, D. C., from Memphis, Tennessee, wishes to contact members in that area. He may be addressed c/o Commanding Officer, Airborne Co-ordinating Group, Naval Research Laboratory, Bellview, Washington, D. C.

REQUESTS FOR PRAYERS

Mrs. John Ketcham, Monmouth, Iowa, asks to be remembered in the prayers of the Saints that she may be healed of her illness.

DANVILLE, ILLINOIS.—A mission has been organized with O. C. Henson as acting pastor and William Poore as church school director. Meetings are held each Sunday morning at 126½ West Main Street in an upstairs hall. Church school classes are conducted at 10 a.m., followed by a preaching service at 11. Support from the district officers has been excellent, some coming from Taylorville, Beardstown, Creviston, Decatur, and Indianapolis to assist with the meetings. A baptismal service has been planned for Sunday, May 16. Although most of the members drive from five to forty miles, attendance is good.

MONTGOMERY, ALABAMA.—A series of meetings were conducted recently in Hamner Hall by Elder Orlin Crownover of Mobile. At the close of this series, Brewton Green and Franklin Steiner presented plans for the new church; these were accepted and work on the building should begin in the near future. On April 1, the women's department sponsored a dinner which netted $70 for the fund. Vera Dixon is in charge of the department.

VANCOUVER, WASHINGTON.—A series of meetings was held May 2 to 12 by Missionary James Reneau. Members of the local priesthood are conducting cottage meetings in the Ridgfield district each Thursday evening. The older young people (New Horizons group) have purchased a Solovox for the piano. The Zion's League is now under the supervision of Harold Carpenter with Lila Thurman as president. The women, under the leadership of Ruby Fishel, are nearing their goal of $500 for the building fund. A vacation Bible school is being planned for June.

PORTLAND, OREGON.—A women's institute was held at the Central East Side Church in Portland on May 8 under the direction of Roycie Chapman, district women's leader. The theme for the day was "Hold Fast." Activities included a 10 a.m. fellowship service; a class at 11 with D. M. Gilpin, chief probation officer of Clark County, Washington, instructing; basket lunch at noon; classwork under the direction of Miss Gay Coshow and District President J. L. Verhei in the afternoon; reports from local leaders; a play, "Henceforth Friends," by the Vancouver women; special music; and a candlelight dedication service. Seventy-five women attended the institute.

Mr. and Mrs. Matt D. Crownover of San Francisco, California, announce the birth of a son, Kurt Matt, born April 21.

A daughter, Pamela Sue, was born on April 17 to Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Reneau of Council Bluffs, Iowa. Mrs. Reneau is the former Earlena Rae Ebeling of Independence, Missouri.

Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Gustin of Hardtner, Kansas, announce the birth of a son, Gary Paul, born February 23. Mrs. Gustin was formerly Evalina Dial.

DEATHS

WALKER.—Lottie, was born December 1, 1878, in Marshalltown, Iowa, and died March 20, 1948, at her home in Oregon City, Oregon. She was married to Richard Thomas Walker on April 22, 1869, and was baptized a member of the Reorganized Church in 1915.

She is survived by her husband; four daughters: Mrs. Robert Good and Mrs. V. A. Mowreader of Oregon City; Mrs. Emil Iversen of Seattle, Washington; and Mrs. C. R. Rotzlen of Fargo, North Dakota; and six grandchildren. Funeral services were conducted in Oregon City, Elder Harry Fry officiating. Interment was in Mountain View Cemetery.

TODD.—John A., was born November 23, 1871, in Clark County, Missouri, and died at Ft. Madison, Iowa, on April 27, 1948. He was married to Mary Ellen Butler on July 1, 1897. He lived in Ft. Madison from 1898 to 1911, then spent twelve years in Michigan, returning to Ft. Madison in 1923 for the remainder of his life. He united with the Reorganized Church at Free Soil, Michigan, on September 10, 1916. His wife and other relatives survive. The funeral was held at the church in Ft. Madison; Elder W. H. Gunn officiated, assisted by M. E. Francis. Burial was in Elmwood Cemetery.

BOURLARD.—Pauline, daughter of Henri and Aline Hansens Martin, was born on March 27, 1896, in Carbondale, Iowa, and died May 7, 1948, at Iowa City, Iowa. She was married to Theodore R. Bourlard in February, 1918; three children were born to this union. She had been a member of the Reorganized Church for twenty years.

Surviving are two daughters: Mrs. D. L. Von Seggen and Meredith Bourlard and a son, Theodore, all of Farmington, Iowa; also a brother, Aime Martin of Topeka, Kansas. Mr. Bourlard died in 1943. Funeral services were held in Farmington, Elder W. H. Gunn officiating, assisted by the Reverend F. Backous, pastor of the Nazarene church. Burial was in Green Glade Cemetery.

HOYT.—Sidney Alma, was born February 20, 1881, in Kansas and died unexpectedly on May 6, 1948, at Omaha, Nebraska. He resided near Pisgah, Iowa, for a number of years where he engaged in farming. In 1922, he moved to Omaha and was employed by the Missouri Pacific Railroad. He was baptized into the Reorganized Church as a young man.

He is survived by his wife, Verna of Omaha; a daughter, Mrs. H. A. Harrison of Houston, Texas; two sons: Alma Ross and Marion Hale, both of Houston; a sister; Mrs. Cora Wakehouse of Pisgah; three brothers, Alfred of Excelsior Springs, Missouri; George of Missouri Valley, Iowa; and Oscar of Council Bluffs, Iowa; and five grandchildren. Services were held in the Hoffman Mortuary in Omaha, Elder V. D. Ruch in charge. Interment was in West Lawn Cemetery.

DeFRIESE.—Mary E., was born June 7, 1872, and died March 10, 1948, following a brief illness. She was married in 1887 to Audley Paul DeFriese. In addition to the eleven children born to them, they adopted a son. Mrs. DeFriese and her husband both joined the Reorganized Church in November, 1924.

Surviving are five sons: A. P. and J. C. of Seminole, Oklahoma; J. R. of Oklahoma City, Oklahoma; W. H. of San Diego, California; and O. K. of Santa Fe, New Mexico; four daughters: Mrs. C. C. Williams of Seminole; Mrs. Cora Osborn of Oklahoma City; Mrs. J. W. Davidson of Sapulpa, Oklahoma; and Mrs. T. A. Nourse of Tulsa, Oklahoma; thirty-one grandchildren, and thirty-two great-grandchildren. Mr. DeFriese died on March 30, 1945. Three children also preceded Mrs. DeFriese in death.

CROWN.—Lenora M. Ward, was born April 5, 1881, in Walden, Arkansas, and died suddenly at Centralia, Washington, on April 8, 1948. She was baptized into the Reorganized Church on March 8, 1896, at Lick Creek, Iowa, and remained a faithful member throughout her life. On November 15, 1903, she was married to Elmer Crown of Farmington, Iowa.

She leaves her husband; three sons: Esmond of Omaha, Nebraska; Mark of Washington, D. C.; and Dale of Fort Scott, Kansas; two daughters: Gertrude Earl of Seattle, Washington, and Donna Jerread of Boise, Idaho; three sisters: Jessie Ward LeBaron of Seattle; Hattie Belknap of San Antonio, Texas; and Melva Crum of Seattle; two brothers: Clarence Ward of New York City, and Harold Ward of Washington, D. C. Services were held at the Collins Brothers Funeral Home in Seattle, Elder Carl F. Crum officiating. Interment was in Evergreen Cemetery.

BAKER.—Sylvia Chase, was born April 17, 1880, in Dennisport, Massachusetts, and died at her home in Somerville, Massachusetts, on April 8, 1948. She was married fifty years ago to Alpha A. Baker, after which she lived in East Boston and Somerville. She was a devoted church member and was particularly active in district reunion work.

She leaves a son and daughter, Charles Y. Baker and Mrs. Morris Smith, both of Boston. Funeral services were held at the Reorganized Church in Boston on Sunday, April 11, in place of the morning sermon. Bishop D. O. Chesworth was in charge. Interment was at West Dennis, Massachusetts.

WHITE.—Laura Ellen Watkins, was born November 29, 1851, in Albia, Iowa, and died April 28, 1948, at the home of her grandson. On December 24, 1876, she was married to T. White; two boys and two girls (twins) were born to this marriage. Both she and her husband were baptized into the Reorganized Church in the early 1900's at Hiteman, Iowa.

Surviving are two sons: Charles A. of Bellingham, Washington; and Frank A. of East Moline, Illinois; seven grandchildren; seventeen great-grandchildren; and four great-great-grandchildren. Her husband and twin daughters, Bessie and Essie, died several years ago. Funeral services were conducted by Elder Solomon Tripp.

Reunion Schedule-1948

No. Dakota	Jun. 11-Jun. 13	Am. Leg. Pk., Detroit Lakes, Minnesota
E. Montana	Jun. 19-Jun. 27	Fairview, Mont.
Texas	Jun. 25-July 4	Bandera, Texas
Owen Sound & Toronto	Jun. 26-July 4	Port Elgin, Ont.
New York & Philadelphia	July 3-July 11	Deer Park
Southwest Kansas	July 3-July 11	Arkansas City, Kansas
Gulf States	July 9-July 18	Brewton, Ala.
W. Colorado	July 10-July 11	Delta, Colorado
Manitoba Central	July 10-July 11	Winnipeg, Man.
Missouri	July 10-July 18	Odessa, Missouri
Saskatchewan	July 10-July 18
Alberta	July 19-July 26	Sylvan Lake, Alberta
Zion	July 17-July 25	Gardner Lake
Nauvoo So. New England	July 17-July 25	Nauvoo, Illinois
Northern California	July 17-July 25	Onset, Mass.
Flint-Pt. Huron-Detroit-Windsor	July 24-Aug. 1	Asilomar, Monterey, California
Kentucky & Tennessee	July 25-Aug. 1	Blue Water, Michigan
Northwest	July 30-Aug. 8	Paris, Tennessee
Chatham-London Cen. & So. Michigan	July 30-Aug. 8	Silver Lake, Washington
Mo. Valley	July 31-Aug. 8	Erie Beach, Ontario, Canada
Maine	July 31-Aug. 8	Liahona Park
So. California No. & West. Michigan	Aug. 5-Aug. 15	Woodbine, Iowa
Kirtland	Aug. 6-Aug. 15	Brooksville, Me.
Reunion of the Ozarks	Aug. 1-Aug. 8	Pacific Palisades
Oklahoma	Aug. 7-Aug. 15	Park of the Pines
W. Montana	Aug. 7-Aug. 15	Kirtland, Ohio
Arizona	Aug. 8-Aug. 15	Racine, Missouri
Arkansas & Louisiana	Aug. 9-Aug. 15	Pawnee, Okla.
Minnesota & Wisconsin	Aug. 9-Aug. 16	Race Track, Montana
Far West	Aug. 12-Aug. 22	Prescott, Arizona
So. Indiana Eastern Michigan	Aug. 21-Aug. 29	Clear Fork Cp., Hot Spgs., Ark.
Idaho	Aug. 14-Aug. 22	Chetek, Wis.
Des Moines	Aug. 14-Aug. 21	Stewartsville, Missouri
Lamoni	Aug. 15-Aug. 22	Bedford, Ind.
S. E. Illinois Eastern	Aug. 20-Aug. 29	Cash, Michigan
Colorado	Aug. 20-Aug. 29	Hagerman, Idaho
		Guthrie Center, Iowa
		Lamoni, Iowa
		Brush Creek, Ill.
		Colorado Springs Colorado

P. S.

CHURCH MEN IN BUSINESS

The recent trip to Canada brought us some very interesting information about church men who are combining careers in business and professional life with Church work. . . . At Chatham, Brother J. V. Dent, his son, and associate, James Kelley, conduct a large implement and manufacturing business which gives employment to a number of church people. At the same time they are doing excellent work in the district in co-operation with District President Jack Pray. . . . In Toronto, while enjoying the hospitality of Brother and Sister W. J. Bavington, we learned of a number of church businessmen there. The LeFeuvre Candy Company is owned and operated in both production and sales by Brother F. C. LeFeuvre, who is also pastor of a near-by branch. . . . Brother Bavington and his son have built up a large painting business that handles many of the biggest jobs in Toronto and many other Canadian cities. Brother Bavington has been for many years a hard worker in church affairs, and on the week end I visited there, he drove seventy-five miles in the rain to spend the day with the Niagara Falls Branch. . . . Magistrate J. L. Prentice of the Toronto Court has combined his career in law for many years with both local and district service. Dr. Charles McLean has followed his father, the well-loved Bishop McLean, in a fine contribution of service to the church. District President John F. Sheehy has had good support, and is doing excellent work in all that area. . . . Brother William Hughes has a glass-cutting business that does very beautiful work and enjoys an international trade; he has made a number of gifts for the beautification of the Toronto church. . . . In London, there is Dr. Evan V. Shute, a pioneer in developing the use of Vitamin E for heart trouble, who gives splendid service to the church work. . . . In Guelph, his brother, Dr. Wilfred Shute, also had a leading part in the research and testing of Vitamin E and is very active in church work. Alex Cadwell, head of a paper box manufacturing business, is district president of that area. . . . Many others could be recalled. Over the years, these men and others like them have patiently developed businesses that have made it possible for them to achieve independence, and to help the church in many ways, including giving employment to members.

* BEWARE OF V. M.'S. A brother whose name will be protected with the shadows of anonymity recently coined a good phrase—"the vociferous minority," meaning the kind of folks who get what they want by making a lot of noise and complaint. "We must be careful," says this brother, "that we are not moved to make decisions in response to the clamor of a vociferous minority. We may go against the wishes and needs of the great silent majority if we do."

This writer has often wondered what ailed him. Now he knows. He is a V. M. It is a bad condition, but not incurable. Maybe something can be done about it. We hope so. Anyway, we are going to try. . . . Could you, by any chance, be a V. M.? Remember, it creeps up on you. Many people are victims and don't know it. Your best friends don't tell you about it. Solemn thought: A V. M. could be all right if he adopts a good cause.

Mary A. Burlington
1510½ Jules
St. Joseph, Missouri

92867
18
h

Books Make A Good Vacation Better

Poems for the Great Days

Edited by Thomas Curtis Clark and Robert Earle Clark

Whether you seek a bit of poetry for personal inspiration and meditation or for use in a lecture or sermon, group gatherings or worship services, here you will find the great poem for the great day, which is both satisfactory and inspiring. $2.50

No Trumpet Before Him

By Nelia Gardner White

Here is a novel worthy of the $8,000 prize it won! (offered by the Westminster Press) The story of young Paul Phillips—"misfit" minister. Here is a man both holy and human—who lived by the faith he preached. For those who enjoy novels. $3

Harry Truman, President

By Frank McKnaughton and Walter Hehmeyer

Here is the first full and careful analysis of the whole Truman administration. From his first ascendancy to the executive office in 1945, this book answers the questions of those who want a clear picture of Harry Truman, his associates, their accomplishments, and their policy in the future. $3

Lightning

A Cowboy's Colt by Bill and Bernard Martin

This action is set against a backdrop of security that a rancher's son has in the companionship of his mother and daddy. How the love of a horse brings the boy and an Indian to understanding and friendship makes a moving and beautiful story that will be read many, many times. For children 4 to 99. $1

Story of the Church

By Inez Smith Davis

In this new edition, here is truly the story of the church, dramatic, filled with real people in living situations. Upon the social and religious background of the young American republic, it sketches the account of the experiences of Joseph Smith, the organization of the church in 1830, all of the intervening story between, and up to and including the modern history of the church. This book has proved its value through the steady demand for it by church members. $4

ORDER FROM YOUR BOOK STEWARD OR FROM

HERALD PUBLISHING HOUSE

Independence, Missouri

Photo by Marvin M. McDole

Home Builders

"They shall build houses and inhabit them."

—ISAIAH 65: 21

THE Saints Herald

VOLUME 95

JUNE 12, 1948

NUMBER 24

www.LatterDayTruth.org

Home-Keeping Hearts--

AUDITORIUM NEWS

There is an old saying that "Home-keeping hearts are happiest." If you want proof of that, walk through the lobby of any big hotel, or look at the faces in a great airport; then visit almost any of your friends at home, and you will realize what it means.

Life's greatest and most beautiful adventure is experienced by two young people who, filled with hope, make plans for their future home and follow it through to completion, watching it all the way for the fulfillment of their dreams.

All civilization is built ultimately upon the foundation of good homes. All the great social conventions surround it and protect it. Religion finds its finest support there. Art and culture grow out of it. Education begins in it. The principles of conduct and honor on which all social and economic integrity depend are taught there. The home is very near the center of everything that is good in the world.

How important that our young people should build strong moral and spiritual foundations in their lives for the erection and maintenance of good homes! For the home is no stronger and no weaker than the characters and personalities of those who live in it.

The church has a great interest in the homes of the people, for when homes are threatened or endangered, the church suffers too. Then it becomes the duty of the church to help and strengthen the home, to cooperate with parents, to nurture the children, and to train the young people who are to be the future members of the congregation and the future citizens of the state.

L. J. L.

EUROPE. Apostle Myron A. McConley became ill while at Porsgrund, Norway, according to word from Elder Glen Johnson. At the time of the latest report it was expected that he would be able to continue his Scandinavian itinerary, which called for him to proceed from Oslo to Copenhagen about June 3.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.—Apostle George G. Lewis writes: "On Wednesday last, May 26, a branch of the church was organized at Springfield, Mass., to be known by that name. The pastor selected by the people is Elder James W. Barton, 147 Kibb Road, East Longmeadow, Mass. . . . The branch has served as a mission since 1941. Most members came from Vinal Haven, Maine, moving during the war period because of employment. There are about 29 members resident in the city, and an additional 30 in near-by communities. The Saints meet in one of the homes of a member, but have been urged to look towards securing a hall."

ROCK ISLAND, ILLINOIS.—A church school institute was held May 22 and 23 which brought a splendid attendance and support, under the direction of District Church School Director Evert McFarlane. Themes centered upon the subject of choices, in serving, learning, and developing methods and skills. Sister Thelona Stevens of the headquarters office was the guest speaker. Preaching Sunday morning was by District President W. W. Richards. Sunday evening, Sister Stevens spoke at Moline, with Victor Witte, pastor of Tri-Cities, in charge, and participated in the awarding of twenty Certificates of Leadership Training for studies directed under the women's department.

IN THIS ISSUE

EDITORIAL:

A Day for Children	3
Radio Representation in England	4

OFFICIAL:

ARTICLES:

Children's Day, by Robert Lacey	5
Distaff Song, a poem, by Evelyn Palmer Maples	6
The More Abundant Life, by Seventy Percy E. Farrow	7
A Source of Joy and Rejoicing, by Floyd A. Gatrost	9
Salesmen for Zion, by M. Anderson	11
Other Sheep I Have, by Roy Weldon	12
Letters	15
The Need of Study in Local Women's Groups, by Mrs. Dagmar Holm Root	16
Food Reminiscences, by Mrs. Israel A. Smith	17
Blue Bird-Oriole Award Services, by Edna Easter	18
"Light of Life" Award, by Ruth Zion	19
Church Beautiful Contest	19
Not of Ourselves, by Stanley Johnson	20
Reclaiming Disinterested Persons, Answer by C. V. Graham	21
Bulletin Board	22
Briefs	23

* COVER PICTURE

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Deal are prominently identified with church music and young people's work, and have been active workers since long before their marriage. Mrs. Deal was formerly Eugenia Hulmes, daughter of Brother and Sister George H. Hulmes, who have always been active in Stone Church choir. The young couple have posed for the special series of "Herald" covers for the month of June, to illustrate the theme of "Home Building." Marvin M. McDole, head of our Visual Aids Department, does his usual excellent work in photography.

* DIFFICULT

Some congregations, as well as individuals, are hard to understand. There are several like the congregation at X. They have never had the burden of supporting a full-time pastor. They have enjoyed the services of a number of fine, able volunteer pastors who have made splendid contributions. But contentious factions have always made it so hard for the pastor that eventually he found it necessary to retire to save his health. He could not stand the combined burdens of secular work and pastoral troubles. The real pastoral work would not have been too hard. He could not stand the quarreling. The factions succeeded in breaking—not each other—but their pastors. Now they are looking for another pastor. Can they find a man who is willing and strong enough to stand them? They will ask him to give his time without compensation. . . . What a blessing it would be if, before the installation of the new man, all the members would agree to love each other, to get along, and to help the pastor.

A Day For Children

THE PROCESSION OF LIFE is a fascinating and mysterious thing. Changes take place frequently, but the procession never halts. The old questions of whence? and whither? can be answered only in terms of faith, and are as baffling to human sources of information as ever. One can take his part, answering the call of destiny, or refuse and be a misfit, but he cannot control the procession.

Last Wednesday was an eventful day in the life of our little neighborhood group of the Stone Church membership. A number of changes were mentioned in the prayer meeting. A fine faithful man who has labored long passed away. His companion, who has had poor health, will have the sympathy and help of the neighbors, who have always been generous and kind. A couple recently married returned to make their home in the group. A young woman bore her testimony; she will be married and move with her husband to another state. Some lovely children have come to the homes of young parents on the street, and a mother brought her small son and two nephews to prayer meeting. The little lad is musical, and waved his small hand to help conduct the singing. . . . It is sad when old friends pass away, but comfort comes in the presence of the children, who bear the promise of the continuity of life. Thank God for the children.

CHILDREN'S DAY this year is scheduled for June 13. For all who love children, it is a day of rejoicing and hope. The church is privileged to act as the spiritual home of the child, to give him his first knowledge of the social life and religious instruction in the company of other children, and under the direction of church school teachers and officers. It is good for us to make this an important day in our church calendar.

Above all, children need love that is guided by wisdom and intelligence. One can see the beauty of life developing and reflected in the faces of little children who know what this love is and enjoy its rich gift every day of their lives. One can see tragedy and want in the faces of children who are not loved. Is it an idle or unnecessary thing that we plead the cause of the children, and ask that first of all they must be loved?

Too many parents think they have completed their task and met their responsibility in performing the mere biological function of bringing children into the world. The animals do that much for their young, and even show signs of love for them. Surely we may expect more of human parents. If America is ever lost, that loss will show first in the declining love and care for children. There are too many unloved and unwanted children brought into the world.

CHURCHES need to be planned for children as well as for adults. The main auditorium is usually always appropriate for and occupied by adult services. Secondary auditoriums and classrooms are now quite generally provided for the children. We should do as much as possible to make them light, clean, wholesome, and pleasant for the sake of the children. Their earliest experiences in the church should be happy ones if we expect them to love the church and continue faithful attendance in later years, when they too will have children to bring to church. Our building committees and church planners are doing much better than formerly, and are giving more attention to educational needs. Modern churches are planned under a new concept. Once they were regarded only as places of worship. Now they are being planned also as schools for the whole family.

EXPERIENCE teaches us the unity of life. There is no religious instruction that does not have its cultural and spiritual implications and influence. There is no cultural and educational program that does not have its spiritual influence, either for good or evil, positive or negative. These things grow out of the characters, the faith, the personalities of the teachers. How important for the children that our church schools should bring them under the care of fine, informed, and dedicated teachers. Even in secular schools where the teaching of religion is not included, the main thing children gain relates to attitude and character. Facts may be forgotten, but many a student will remember what a good teacher has given him in his outlook on life. It takes good teachers as well as good parents to make good children and good citizens.

We are concerned about the children all through the year. It is good that we are. Children's Day is an occasion for specially remembering the children, honoring them, and making them realize their importance to the world, and for recognizing the contribution that is made to them through the church school. It is a day for thanking the teachers and all the volunteer workers who have done so much for them. In many branches it is a day when the programs of preparatory instruction for membership are brought to culmination, and when baptisms and confirmations occur. It is well to remind zealous parents and others that the church expects them to regard strictly the requirement that no children be baptized before the eighth birthday.

On this Children's Day the church will formally welcome many children into membership. May we not slacken our interest in and love for them with this ceremony, but maintain our concern for them in providing for their instruction, their happiness, their social and spiritual growth and development.

L. J. L.

Editorial

Independence Complimented

From Destiny, a magazine devoted to Anglo-Saxon or "House of Israel" matters, we quote the following from an article by Morgan Wood in the June, 1948, issue:

I have traveled the country rather extensively the past twelve months and the same story is told almost everywhere; namely, that American high school youth is pretty well beyond control in school hours, and that the school authorities (not being much beyond school age themselves in many cases) believe this condition to be normal. Lack of discipline is normal! Hoodlumism in high school corridors is normal! Teachers standing in awe of their pupils is normal!

There are, however, at least two exceptions to be noted. In the Middle West and West one comes, here and there, upon an oasis in the general disorder and these occur usually in communities where the Lutheran or Mormon influence is apparent. In the State of Missouri, where the Latter Day Saints are numerous (the reformed church that never followed Brigham Young and never countenanced polygamy), the youth of the towns are several cuts above those of other communities. Independence, Missouri, the home town of President Truman is 50 per cent Latter Day Saints, that city being their world headquarters, and all through that area, and into adjacent Kansas, Iowa, and Nebraska, the influence of the sober, decent life of the adults is reflected in the behavior of the youth.

Radio Representation in England

From Apostle Myron A. McConley we have an interesting account of the effort of our brethren to secure, through the radio, a statement of differences between us and the "Mormons."

The British Broadcasting Company was to allow a "Mormon" Church program, and Brethren McConley, Fry, and Rowe did "a lot of leg work and some head work" to get a statement on the air as to church differences, without success—at first; but when the program was rebroadcast later, a satisfactory statement was read in connection with it.

Writes Brother McConley:

So, for the first time, they tell us, the difference between the churches has actually gone out over the radio.

Some were here with us listening to the broadcast, and we were very happy. Then others called up, including John Coggan at Nuneaton. Have talked over the phone with Bishop Trapp, and they too are happy. So the blood pressure of our people was greatly relieved.

I hope sometime we can get something on the radio here and believe if we get some quality stuff that has educational and cultural and spiritual appeal, it can be done. I expect to hear that perhaps Blair [Jensen], during his regime, may be able to do such a thing. Anyway, our relationship with the BBC was established, and they will be more careful of what they put on in the future, I think.

ISRAEL A. SMITH.

The Sanitarium Nursery Department and the Work of the Mother's Club

The Mother's Club of Independence was organized thirty-seven years ago, with the purpose of helping and contributing supplies to the nursery of the Independence Sanitarium and Hospital. There is usually a waiting list for the membership, but the active number is limited to twenty-four because the club has always met in the homes of members. However, friends of the club have assisted and contributed to their good work by making articles and sending contributions.

Club members cut and made 1,232 garments in 1946, and 1,136 in 1947. The first bags of work have been distributed for 1948, and much of the work done has been given to Miss Gertrude Copeland, R.N., Superintendent of the Hospital. Another allotment of material will be cut and distributed this month. There are more than two dozen articles in each person's bag of sewing. Out-of-state friends have been most helpful, and several hundred garments have been donated from afar, including a number of knitted baby garments, which have been sold for the nursery benefit fund. All the sewing was done from patterns and directions supplied by the Mothers' Club. They have been much appreciated, as well as the gifts in cash which are received occasionally. All donations have been gratefully acknowledged immediately.

During the war years, the Mothers' Club purchased for the Nursery of the Independence Sanitarium and Hospital the following items: two incubators, an oxygen unit, an electrically heated basinette, a washing machine, a clothes dryer, and sixteen beds. The present project is the nylon cloth curtain now ready to be hung across the large window through which visitors view the nursery from the fourth-floor hall. The reason for this curtain is that if a baby needs very special attention, perhaps because of illness, there is no comfortable way of treating it in privacy. Immediately when a nurse takes a baby in her arms, visitors are drawn to the window. The large curtain will be easy to draw across the window and shield a worker when necessary. Small movable screens are used at present, but are not satisfactory.

The club is furnishing several new bedspreads this year, which will be pretty and colorful, as are the present ones that the Panadelphians, a young mothers' sewing club of Independence, embroidered and appliqued beautifully a few years ago. The club bought about 600 yards of outing flannel for this year's work, besides other materials. All garments and articles must have identification tapes sewed on them. The words "Independence Sanitarium and Hospital" are woven into this tape as part of the purchase price.

The importance of the nursery is revealed in the report by Miss Faulkner of an average of one hundred births a month so far in 1948—a total of 403 babies. There were over 1,200 last year. There will be more garments to be made up this year than before, and the Mothers' Club will be very happy to have assistance from groups and individuals who are free to help. Inquiries should be addressed to the secretary, Mrs. R. D. Etzenhouser, 1317 West College, Independence, Missouri. Other officers for the coming two years are: Mrs. G. L. DeLapp, president; Mrs. John Lloyd, vice-president; Mrs. B. R. McGuire, treasurer; Mrs. M. H. Siegfried, historian.

THE SAINTS' HERALD

Volume 95

June 12, 1948

Number 24

EDITORS: The First Presidency: Israel A. Smith, John F. Garver, F. Henry Edwards.

ASSISTANTS: Leonard J. Lea, Managing Editor; Kenneth L. Graham, Business Manager.

The Saints' Herald is the official publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, with headquarters at The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri, and is issued through the offices of Herald Publishing House, 103 South Osage Street, Independence, Missouri.

Entered as second-class matter at the post office at Independence, Missouri, under Act of March 3, 1879. Issued weekly at Independence, Missouri. Price, $3.50 per year and $1.75 for six months in advance in the U. S. A., its territories and possessions; Canada, $3.75 per year and $1.90 for six months; other countries, $4.50 per year. Notice of a change of address must be given three weeks ahead of the date that it is to become effective. Accepted for mailing at the special rate of postage provided for in section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized July 21, 1921. Printed in the United States of America.

Children's Day

By ROBERT LACEY

SUNDAY, JUNE 13, is Children's Day. The hearts of many fond parents will fill with pride as they see their youngsters step up on the platform to recite a meaningful poem or sing a carefully memorized song. Little do these children know that they are being anxiously watched—and perhaps verbally pushed through their lines—because it is extremely important to their mothers and fathers that they give a good performance so the audience will recognize and appreciate their talents.

Children's Day was set aside for the purpose of such a review in which special attention might be given to their aptitudes and abilities. It provides opportunity, also, for parents to review the charge and responsibility of guiding the thoughts and ambitions of youth. Although the child is much a part of the home, parents often know little of the importance of the charge that is theirs.

The growth of a normal child's personality from birth to his twelfth birthday is a miracle, and even within the first year the responsibility of training begins. Here is some interesting data from the Encyclopaedia Britannica:

In a psycho-genetic sense, the growth of intelligence begins early. Even the newborn child is a habit-forming creature. Conjointly through experience and maturation of his abilities, he "learns" to adapt himself to his surroundings. He learns to act to cues, sights, sounds, and to relations between things. This adaptability is the essence of that which is later called intelligence. Even before his first birthday he shows insight and can use a string as a tool to pull an attached object toward him; at two years, he distinguishes between "in" and "under"; at three years, he builds from a model, a bridge of three blocks; at five years, he defines words in terms of use; at seven years, he makes a verbal distinction between a stone and an egg; and at twelve years he can define abstract words such as "envy" and "pity." His memory span, as measured by the number of digits he can recall, increases steadily during these years. He gradually acquires notions of similarity, analogy, truth, error, causation, but his intellectual interests are rooted in the concrete rather than the abstract. Much of his concealed thinking is more naïve and primitive than we suspect. . . .

Mental growth results in a steady intensification of individuality The structure of this personality is the result of both intrinsic and extrinsic factors, the intrinsic ones being the organic craving and propensities such as hunger, thirst, fear, rage and aggression, affection, imitative, playful, exploitive, and experimental activity. Out of such general tendencies arise all sorts of emotional or instinctive seeking and avoiding responses such as curiosity, modesty, self-display, jealousy, emulation and co-operation. . . .

From the standpoint of personality, the development of the child's mind consists in the progressive attainment of emotional independence or morale. This is a process of increasing detachment from the parental care upon which the infant is so completely dependent; hence, the parent-child relationship is the key to the progress of the psychological maturity of the child. . . . Schiller combined truth and imagination when he remarked that the adult would be a genius if he but lived up to the promise of childhood. Sincerity, directness, originality, naïve freedom from inhibition, vitality, and happiness are characteristic of childhood at its best, and the mental health of the race depends upon an increasing projection of these qualities into maturity.

THESE YOUNGSTERS who march up on the platform are more than just little boys and girls who (it is hoped) will give a good performance on Children's Day. Although the information quoted from the encyclopædia deals largely with the normal development of any average child, the greatest and most important of all training still remains the responsibility of parents. "The hand that rocks the cradle rules the world." Or as Margaret Slattery in her Primer for Teachers so ably adapts it: "The hand that rocks the cradle may indeed rule the world, but the voice that teaches youth determines the sort of world to be ruled." We have our present world because somebody taught a child. American parents may well be thankful that their children were born in a free land where they may be taught the gospel.

The relationship established be-

DISTAFF SONG

By EVELYN PALMER MAPLES

What matters dirty dishes in the sink,
Toy-splattered floors or sleepy, yawning beds?
There's a hopy tree-frog in the garden,
And golden sun-dust crowns two baby heads.

Today's sun may be shadow-pale tomorrow,
And six will soon be wandering sixteen.
I must make memories for later laughter
And gather to my heart the hours between.

tween parent and child may, in time, become the relationship between the soul and its God. Earthly affections are the ladders by which the heart climbs to universal love. Love is to be tested always by its effect upon the will. Christian living means moral living, but the idea of an abundant life goes beyond that. It includes also a life with God. Froebel, the founder of the kindergarten system, believed that only by repeating small acts of self-sacrifice could the child attain the right kind of love and concern for others. Thoughtfulness, consideration, and respect are the primary essentials of Christian personality from infancy to adulthood.

Many parents seem totally unaware of their responsibility in molding their children's behavior patterns. They do not stop to realize that the conduct of their children is a reflector of their efforts in teaching the ways of obedience. Many can recall a prophecy in which parents were admonished to teach their children obedience, so that when God should find need of their services, he would have to call only once and, because of their early training, they would heed when spoken to the first time.

The following revelation was given to Frederick G. Williams in May, 1833 (Doctrine and Covenants 90: 6). Perhaps we who cry for divine aid in time of trial might do well to insert our own names in place of Frederick G. Williams.

The glory of God is intelligence, or in other words, light and truth; light and truth forsaketh that evil one. Every spirit of man was innocent in the beginning, and God having redeemed man from the fall, men became again in their infant state, innocent before God. And that wicked one cometh and taketh away light and truth, through disobedience, from the children of men, and because of the tradition of their fathers. But I have commanded you to bring up your children in light and truth, but verily I say unto you, my servant Frederick G. Williams, You have continued under this condemnation; you have not taught your children light and truth, according to the commandments, and that wicked one hath power, as yet, over you, and this is the cause of your affliction. And now a commandment I give unto you, if you will be delivered: you shall set in order your own house, for there are many things that are not right in your house.

WHAT IS BEING TAUGHT in your home? What will be taught before this day is finished? Will your children feel a nearness and concern for each member of the family and for their friends? What will they hear? Will they be talked with or at? Will they be asked their opinions in the affairs of family and neighborhood relations? Will they hear a blessing asked upon the food? Will they be asked to offer a prayer for the safety and welfare of their loved ones, the people of this nation and other nations? Will there be a family council at which they are encouraged to discuss their problems?

If we would "set our house in order," we must first set our own life in order. We must "tune in" for a reconciliation so that we may be unafraid and unashamed to ask our Maker to help us in our efforts to do right. When we have done this, our children will become concerned about the needs of those in their home, their community, and the nations of the world. And when God calls for the services of our sons and daughters, they will heed when they hear the first call.

So That's How It Started!

FRIEDRICH FROEBEL established the first kindergarten in Germany in 1837. Memories of an unhappy childhood under a stepmother dogged the tall, lanky Froebel through middle age. As a forester and later as an architect, he continued to talk about making children's lives happier. But not until he was fifty-five did he get the chance to open a school at Blankenburg. He called it a "small child occupation institute" and "shouted for joy" three years later when he thought of the pleasanter Kindergarten (child's garden).

Later on, in America, Mrs. Carl Schurz, a Froebel student, interested Elizabeth Peabody of Boston in the work. In 1860 the Massachusetts woman opened America's first kindergarten; ten years later she went to Germany and brought back Emma Marwedel, who established a kindergarten teachers training school in Washington and later opened a kindergarten in Los Angeles, where her first pupil was Kate Douglas Wiggin, the author. By this time prominent educators like President Eliot of Harvard were putting their stamp of approval on the movement. Today some 600,000 four- and five-year-olds attend American kindergartens. — News-Week.

The More Abundant Life

By Seventy Percy E. Farrow

JESUS, by use of the best means at his disposal, invariably struck directly at points of superlative interest and importance. Seeking to impress the disciples with the most important factors confronting them in preparing to minister to humanity, he asked the question: "Is not the life more than meat, and the body than raiment?" No doubt he placed this truth before them interrogatively in order to stimulate more than passive or shallow thinking. He wanted them to go to the root of a matter of foremost importance to them and to the world with which they would be dealing. His aim was to clarify to man the realisms of the eternal quest of how to experience life in its fullest measure. To reach this aim, man must begin by placing emphasis upon these realities according to their influence and effect upon him, in helping him to achieve the fullest realization of the better life.

Before the Master upon this occasion were the fishermen who had had to struggle against the elements in order to obtain a living, and who, no doubt, had developed thereby a close range perspective, placing unproportionate emphasis in their thinking upon the material things of life. Likewise, it could be said of the "publicans and sinners" with whom he was accused of associating, some of whom were probably in his audience. He knew that these, with the later disciples of his teaching, would meet a world all out of balance on the same issues—a world that would appear eternally disposed to place major emphasis upon things transitory and of secondary importance. Emphasis thus placed wrongly can never produce the best qualities in human conduct and in human relationships, because such emphasis upon this phase of living establishes wrong relationships between man and God. These anti-social and anti-religious relationships cannot bring to pass the more abundant life for man. They lead man away from his Maker rather than to him. Therefore, Jesus was anxious that his disciples should first know that living righteously need not interfere with the necessity of providing for our material needs. Neither should the acquiring of these physical necessities interfere with the feeding of the inner man, or the satisfying of the hunger of the soul; for the God who created us made both the spiritual and the physical nature of our being. He created both the need and the supply to serve that need. In Christ, he revealed how to find the fuller supply for the more abundant way of living.

I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly.

AS SEEN through the eyes of our Maker from its beginning, and taken at its face value, life is abundant. God held nothing back, nor kept anything away from man that would be for his good. "And I, God, saw that all things which I had made were good." The inference seems to be that Jesus came into the world to make possible the addition of more abundant living to a life that was already copious. Which would seem to infer also that man may have only life, robbed of its highest aims and achievements, or, by recognizing the rules of the more abundant way, he may have a life that is infinitely greater than the struggle for mere existence warrants. In other words, you can have life in degrees proportionate to that which you, in partnership with God, are willing to invest.

At this point, the problem of the worth-whileness of living naturally seems to assert itself. This question should not be considered as an issue for debate, nor should it suggest an attitude of fatalism or pessimism; it should be taken as quite the ordinary question growing out of the attitude of seeking to understand the meaning and purpose of living. This is indeed an everyday question and is being asked over and over again.

It becomes especially pertinent in the light of that which is happening in the world today. Every weapon conceivable to the minds of men has been manufactured and used to destroy life. For the same use, experts are spending their time feverishly in search of more powerful weapons with more deadly effect. Daily, even now that the second World War is over, people are meeting death by unnatural means. Is it any wonder they ask: is life worth the struggle that we put into it?

Many already have answered this question negatively. They see no hope for the future. They say, "These things always have been and they always will be." Others, somewhat passively and more or less with a seared conscience and a shrug of the shoulders, have given themselves over to the ranks of the fatalistically inclined. They defiantly say, "Let happen what may, we take things as they come, and there is nothing we can do about it." Those who do this usually drift through life rather aimlessly without understanding much of the real purpose of living or without seeking the higher level of nobler living. Others, lacking comprehensiveness and appreciation of the real purpose of living, spend their time in dissipation that perverts the very virtues of life. It is a deplorable thing, and yet more so a thing to be pitied, that men and women will pervert the sacred God-given laws and powers of procreation in licentious indulgences. A few others give up in the hopelessness of despair and end this life by committing suicide. Everywhere there are evidences of distorted perceptions about the true meaning of life.

IN THIS MAZE of confusion, it is not easy to find one's way. Yet we must learn as never before to think straight. In this state of darkness pervading the souls of so many people, our concepts of the self-evident truths of life must be kept clear. We do not solve problems by evading them.

In spite of the undesirable situations which exist, there have been and now are evidences manifesting a constant human struggle toward a better way of living. The difficulty lies in the fact that most of the time man has not taken God into partnership. In some measure, that which we see taking place now is the result of this desire to live a better way, plus a distorted sense of values which has developed because man, trusting in his own resources and ingenuity, has not been able to find the road that leads to true security and happiness. In this regard, the world presents a tremendous challenge to the church. We dare not ignore this challenge. We must meet it with clarity of understanding and with all the spiritual energies with which the church is endowed. The power of the gospel to save men must be vindicated in a world darkened by the sin of false concepts, deeply rooted in the allurements of man's pride as he trusts in the arm of flesh.

The record which we have of the Sermon on the Mount indicates that Jesus faced up to this sin of the world—the sin of perverted thinking. It also indicates that he wanted his disciples likewise to come to grips with the sin that seems to be the basis of all evil-doing. To make the disciples acutely aware of the proper priority in life's values, Jesus said: "Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth Take no thought for your life, what you shall eat Behold the fowls of the air Consider the lillies of the field Seek ye first to build up the kingdom of God." The life which is given of God, the life which originated with and in him, must give his ways first consideration and place in the interpretation of the meaning of living. This would seem to be both the sensible and normal thing to do.

RIGHTEOUS LIVING brought to pass through inspired teaching will take away ultimately this and all other sins from the world. Was it not predicated upon this emphasis in teaching that John the Baptist was able to point to Jesus and say: "Behold the Lamb of God, who taketh away the sin of the world"?

We are all agreed that the atonement was a necessity. This was God's way of proving to us that he is willing to forgive our sinning. But the willingness of God to forgive our sins does not remove sin from the world, nor does it remove our individual sinning. What would have been the value of the death of Jesus if it had not been for his teaching and the example of his life? The overflowing abundance of life—eternal life—could not be revealed in the death of our Lord, for death is the "wages of sin." Sin ends in death. The limit of its power is death. Eternal life is righteous living and is not builded upon forces which can produce nothing better than death. Jesus died to demonstrate that he, who never had been guilty of sinning, was willing to share in the suffering which sin brings upon man, in order that man might be saved from both sin and death. He was willing to go the last mile.

The more abundant life is revealed, then, in this quality of living which neither sin nor death can destroy, but which has power over death as well as over sin. Any glory there may have been revealed in the death of Jesus was achieved, first by the life he had lived both before and after he came into the world, and second by his resurrection from the dead. It was the quality of his living that enabled him to say, "I have the power to lay it [his life] down, and

I have the power to take it again." This same power, revealed in the life of Jesus to overcome the forces of sin, is placed at the disposal of man as he understands and seeks to live up to "the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ." Man, thereby, receives power to become a son of God, also.

And this is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent.

THE PITIABLE THING is that man does not seem to understand. Too often he does not want to understand. He does not seem willing to pay the price of unconditional surrender to the ways of God. The glamour of the material world entices him so that the way of God is hidden from him by blindness, which he thus inflicts upon himself. Worse than this, his perverted thinking does not manifest itself solely in the acquiring of worldly wealth to satisfy his materialistic estimations of life's values but may lead him astray in many other instances. In the pretense of doing good, he may seek to satisfy his carnal and selfish interests. As an example of this, we may well consider the following verses: "Take heed that ye do not your alms before men to be seen of them; otherwise ye have no reward of your Father who is in heaven. . . . Do not sound a trumpet before you as the hypocrites do . . . that they may have glory of men. Verily they have their reward." If it is the glory of men you are seeking, then you will have such reward as that type life can afford to give you. If you want reward such as God has to offer, learn his ways and live so as to achieve everlasting life, and you will get it.

Stabbed to the heart with the horror of man's stupidity and blindness, Jesus had compassion on the multitudes he saw struggling in the throes of death, in the bondage of their sinning. How gladly would he have given them freedom, but even the compassion of Christ was not enough to do that. Weeping over Jerusalem

(Continued on page 22.)

A Source of Joy and Rejoicing

BY FLOYD A. GATROST

And this is mine everlasting covenant, that when thy posterity shall embrace the truth, and look upward, then shall Zion look downward, and all the heavens shall shake with gladness, and the earth shall tremble with joy.—Genesis 9:22, Inspired Version.

SOME GOOD PEOPLE may believe that to be a Christian one must go about with a long face and a sad countenance; but Jesus and the apostles and latter day revelation don't teach us that about the gospel. Quite to the contrary, they tell us very plainly that through obedience to the gospel we receive our greatest joy and happiness.

"Good tidings of great joy" was the proclamation the angel made to the shepherds of Bethlehem on the night Christ was born. Those tidings were first made known to Adam in the beginning of the world, and he was filled with gladness in the promise that he would have joy in this life; and that again in the flesh, he should see God. Eve, too, was glad and spoke of "the joy of our redemption, and the eternal life which God giveth unto all obedient."

Enoch's people realized this gospel promise in a high degree. They had fellowship with Christ in this life and passed into the life beyond without tasting of death. The Nephite people also rose to a high plane of spiritual development under gospel fruition, and it is written of them: "Surely there could not be a happier people among all the people who had been created by the hand of God."

To Noah the promise was made that, when obedience to the gospel law is prevalent on the earth, Enoch's Zion should return. When this occurs, the spirit of joy shall so pervade the heavens and the earth that they shall tremble under the weight of their happiness. Among the great and precious promises made to those who are obedient to the gospel is that of joy in this life and in the life to come.

"Men are that they might have joy." Joy is our reaction to things pleasant to us. On the physical plane, we find pleasure in appetizing food, in things that appeal to our sense of beauty, in the fragrance of flowers, the beauty of nature, in general the things that attribute to bodily comfort. On the mental plane, we find joy in things intellectual and cultural. On the spiritual plane, we find joy in what Nephi so aptly terms "the things of the soul."

HE WHO CREATED US, both body and spirit, recognizes the legitimate claims of our physical nature and has provided for their satisfaction. In the word he has given us, he enumerates some of the things he has made for the benefit and use of man—"both to please the eye, and to gladden the heart; yea, for food and for raiment, for taste and for smell, to strengthen the body, and to enliven the soul." But he admonishes us that these good things "are to be used with judgment, and not to excess, neither by extortion" (Doctrine and Covenants 59: 4, 5).

Our Heavenly Father, always mindful of our highest interests, also speaks to us of the superior value of the life of the spirit of man over that of the body, and of the surpassing joy of which the spirit is capable over that which the body can enjoy. He says to us: "Fear not, even unto death; for in this world your joy is not full, but in me your joy is full. Therefore, care not for the body, neither the life of the body; but care for the soul, and for the life of the soul, and seek the face of the Lord always, that in patience ye may possess your souls, and ye shall have eternal life."

This admonition should not be construed to sanction neglect of our physical needs or to underestimate them. It was given in a time when the church was under bitter persecution, some even facing death. It was an encouragement to all to be true to the soul's higher interests and not to be intimidated by fear of physical violence into giving up the faith. Martyrs in times past endured death rather than to deny Christ and his gospel. They obeyed with integrity his warning: "Break not my commandments to save your lives."

STATED SIMPLY, the question is: Which is of more value to us, the life of the body or the life of the soul? Which is more worthy of consideration, this short life of the present or the life that is everlasting? Which is more worthy of preservation?

"Break not my commandments to save your lives," is a strict requirement laid upon us. Jesus himself walked in the way he requires us to follow. He was obedient even unto death on the cross; so for our own sakes this strict requirement is laid upon us to keep his commandments. There is no other way in which we may be educated in the divine life and fitted for its fullness of joy.

It is a fundamental principle of the gospel that everyone shall be rewarded according to his works. Each shall receive that which he is able to enjoy. The reasoning is that it does not profit a man to have a gift bestowed upon him which he is not able to appreciate.

We cannot enjoy that which is beyond our comprehension. We grow in understanding of things spiritual as we advance in the divine life. It is necessary to apply ourselves to this work of understanding and discipline, if we desire to enjoy what God is so willing to give us. The opportunity is open to all of us, but effort is necessary on our part to attain it. Like Paul, we must press forward to win the prize. The way is pointed out to us in the gospel.

SINCE IT IS SO NECESSARY for us to keep the commandments, we should know what they are. We may learn something by listening to the preaching of the word and by the prayer of faith, but the Lord has given us to understand that he requires us to exercise ourselves to understand. He says that we should learn by study and also by faith (Doctrine and Covenants 9: 2; 85: 36). The easy way is to listen to what someone else has learned by study, but the more accurate and profitable way is to apply ourselves to know the word of God. "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth."—II Timothy 2: 15.

Lehi, in vision, saw a tree that bore the whitest fruit he had ever seen; and when he ate of the fruit, he found it to be the sweetest he had ever tasted, and it filled his soul with great joy. He saw, also, a river of water and a rod of iron that extended along the river's bank and led to this tree of desirable fruit. Beside this rod of iron was a straight and narrow path, and people were pressing forward to enter it. But a great mist of darkness arose, and many who began walking in the path lost their way. Others took hold of this rod of iron and clung to it, pressing forward through this mist of dense darkness until they reached the tree and ate of its precious fruit.

Across the river from this tree was a spacious building filled with people; young and old, very finely dressed, who pointed their fingers mockingly at those who were eating of the fruit. Because of this, some ceased to eat, because they could not endure derision and scorn. They turned away into forbidden paths and were lost.

The tree in the vision represented the love of God, which is desirable above all other things and most joyous to the soul. The rod of iron represented the word of God, which will lead those who cling to it to the Tree of Life.

It is a mistake to think we have been saved as soon as we have been baptized in water. It is but the beginning of a forward movement in the way of truth that must continue to the full fruition of the gospel promises. Peace and a degree of joy will be with us even through the trials of this life, but the full realization of the promise is at the end of the race; the full reward will come only when the work assigned to us has been completed. Then good and faithful servants shall enter into the joy of their Lord.

REAL AND LASTING JOY will not be attained by delving into the pleasures of this world; the greatest joy and happiness will come to us only through obedience to the gospel. If we are not careful, we may be deceived into seeking that type of pleasure which will not bring us lasting joy and peace and happiness. One of the marked characteristics of these latter days is the love of pleasure more than the love of God. In marked contrast to this, we read in Romans 14: 17, "The kingdom of heaven is not meat and drink; but righteousness and peace and joy in the Holy Ghost." In the fifth chapter of I Timothy, verse 6, we read further, "But she that liveth in pleasure is dead while she liveth."

We have been warned in latter day revelation not to use the material things of the world to excess—excesses in eating and drinking, personal adornment, and amusements. We are living in an age notoriously given to things that we should avoid. As James tells us (5:5), "Ye have lived in pleasure on the earth, and been wanton; ye have nourished your hearts as in a day of slaughter."

TIBERIUS WAS EMPEROR of Rome in the time of the personal ministry of Christ in Palestine. One of the first experiences of Jesus was that in which he was taken, in the spirit, to the top of a very lofty mountain; there, in a vision, he saw all the kingdoms of the world and the glory of them. He looked out over all that wide expanse of picturesque lands, mountains, valleys, rivers, blue seas, and splendid cities, over which Tiberius was absolute ruler.

As the worldly mind estimates value, it was a splendid empire. Historians affirm that there never was a prouder city than Rome, the city of seven hills, capital of the empire. But this city of lofty palaces and unsurpassed grandeur for the nobles was a city of misery for the poor, and heartbreaking bondage for millions of slaves.

When Tiberius was grown old, he retired to Capri, a beautiful little island in the Bay of Naples, within easy reach of Rome. It was a delightful place of rich soil and cool breezes, its shore washed by the bright blue waters of the Mediterranean Sea. He is said to have built himself twelve palaces there and to have constructed a number of other beauty spots. Then he gave himself up to the satisfaction of sensuous pleasures.

But all the wealth at his command could not give him happiness; for physical pleasures cannot satisfy a starving soul. The picture history draws for us of Tiberius in his old age is one of utter misery. Master of a great empire, he was more unhappy than the lowliest slave in it. With unlimited wealth at his command, he was more distressed and miserable than the most poverty-stricken of his subjects. While Tiberius was going from palace to palace in lovely Capri, seeking in vain for happiness in every excess of self-indulgence, Jesus of Nazareth, with no place of his own to lay his head, was traveling the length and breadth of Palestine, teaching that a man's life does not consist in the things he possesses; warning the overwealthy of the corroding effect upon their souls of their excessive riches, and reminding them that they might be called to part suddenly with their swollen fortunes and go in poverty of soul to a world where men are judged according to higher standards of value.

JESUS' CONSTANT EFFORT was to lead men to perceive the higher meaning of life, to teach them to live more intelligently—to make their lives more truly satisfying. Tiberius died an old man, having drunk the world's golden cup dry to its bitter dregs. Jesus, in early manhood, suffered a glorious death, conquering every temptation that had assailed him.

The picture of the sinless Christ on the cross surpasses anything that the imagination of man can conceive or art can execute. Nothing earthly can approach the spiritual glory and grandeur of that silent figure with pierced hands extended as if holding aloft the cause of truth more precious to him than physical life. It is clothed with imperishable beauty—the beauty of self-mastery, of loyalty to things true and pure. In these things, the Christ of Galilee is the example for us.

Our Conversions

Having parents who gave their children little religious training, I grew up "in the dark," so to speak. But somehow I always sensed, from a small child on, that God was above, and that I had a need for him.

At nineteen I married a young Latter Day Saint whose parents were God-fearing people and had given all their children religious training and opportunities to attend church. I went to church with my husband and began to receive the light I sought in childhood. That pleasant dream of married happiness was short, because five months later he was fatally injured in an accident. He died with the wish on his lips that I would study about the church and be baptized.

The hours before his death I hadn't eaten or slept. In my room that night appeared a light which was brighter than any sunlight, and a figure saying, "Go to sleep, for he is going home."

After that, I slept—knowing he was in heaven.

A few weeks later I attended a series of missionary services and decided that I wanted very much to belong to the church. It was in February and the roads were bad. While driving, I struck an icy place on a sharp curve and the car turned around three times. With a prayer on my lips, I stayed at the wheel and the car soon went straight. I was at the church in time for the baptismal service.

Three years later I married a nonmember. He belonged to another church and was not easy to convince. I was almost afraid of the future, but prayer and much patience have worked wonders. It would never have been wise had I "harped" on the subject or attended church without him. On two occasions, I went to his church with him but received nothing from the sermons. I continued reading, studying, praying, and when I thought the right opportunity had come, I proved my point; we attended as many funeral services at my church as possible.

Our son and daughter were blessed in the church. They soon reached the age when church school training was a "must." It was my husband's desire by this time to attend services every Sunday also.

When our son was eleven years old and ready to be baptized, it was his father's desire to also become a member of God's church. They were baptized at the same time.

Our little daughter isn't old enough for baptism yet, but it gives me great happiness for the four of us to attend church together.

VAVA MARIE HANSEN.

Route 1
McClelland, Iowa

Salesmen for Zion

By M. Anderson

IF LATTER DAY SAINTS are to sell the theory of Zion to the world, they must learn to be tolerant.

The expert salesman recognizes the fact that he must first gain the confidence and respect of his prospect—assuming that he has already learned of the merits of his product. He does not do this by criticizing all of his competitors. If the prospect is antagonistic because of previous unpleasant experiences, the salesman lends a sympathetic ear to his complaints. He explains very carefully and cautiously how his product is not guilty of these offenses. He then begins to build up its merits.

The salesman's best prospect is not the person who already has a product similar to his own, even though it may be of inferior quality. No, his best prospect is the person who needs the article he has to sell and needs it badly.

These are points that we should remember when acting as salesmen for Zion. Jesus said, "I came not to call the righteous but sinners to repentance." He also said, "He who is not against me is for me." If these statements are correct, then our best prospects are not those who are now affiliated with a church and leading good Christian lives, but those whose lives have been damaged and who need what we have to offer. The righteous are doing their bit where they are now working and will pave the way for something better.

ONE WHO HAS ATTENDED MEETINGS of various denominations frequently in the past thirty years can see the great changes that have been brought about in the creeds of the popular Protestant churches as they have gradually absorbed the theories first advanced by the prophet of the Restoration.

A few years ago, if one were to quote the scripture of the various glories, he would be considered a heretic. Now that doctrine is commonly taught. A few years ago one did not dare suggest such a thing as the kingdom of God being established on this earth and in a natural manner, but now ministers preach that we should do something about "Thy kingdom come" instead of just saying it. They teach that people who live only for the material things of life would not feel very happy in spiritual company.

We should never forget that not everyone who cries, "Lord, Lord," will be able to enter in. This applies to Latter Day Saints the same as people of other denominations. Too many seem to think that complying with the ordinance of baptism by one having authority gives them a through ticket to celestial glory. Maybe it does, but there are lots of places they can get off along the way if they don't pay attention and stay on until they reach their destination.

It Can Be Done

An interesting article appeared recently in the Christian Century, featuring an address by the dynamic Governor Youngdahl of Minnesota before a state ministerial conference, in which he stated, "The church can have the kind of society it is willing to tolerate or the kind it is willing to fight for."

The story tells how the "Crusading Governor" put the liquor business under strict control and threw out 8,500 slot machines in Minnesota. The basic concern of Governor Youngdahl is the enrichment of human lives. He says we must "build character in the high chair rather than burn up our youth in the electric chair." He attacked delinquency on a state-wide scale, establishing a youth conservation commission. He realized that lives cannot be enriched in the midst of lawlessness and crime, so he cleared the ground before beginning the construction work.

When a campaign of ridicule was launched at the governor's dream of law enforcement, he appealed directly to the people. Twice a week over seventeen radio stations he pleaded the cause of decency, and the decent people responded.

When the newspapers recently voted Governor Youngdahl the "outstanding Minnesotan of 1947," it was not only because of what he does but what he is. He is a denial of the despairing cry that no good man dares to hold a public office. He is also an example of what a good man can do in a public office when he has the necessary support.—VIDA M. FLETCHER.

MINISTRY TO THE ERRING and CHURCH COURT PROCEDURE

By Bishop L. Wayne Updike

Here is the official booklet dealing specifically with ministry to persons of church membership who do not meet the standards of conduct necessary to continuing membership. Included, too, is the statement on court procedure adopted by the General Conference of 1932 and twenty-one suggested forms for court action.

50¢

Order from your Book Steward or direct from

HERALD PUBLISHING HOUSE
Independence, Missouri

Other Sheep I Have Which Are Not of This Fold

The Story of the Book of Mormon

By ROY WELDON

PART VII

FINE WORKMANSHIP—THE GOOD SHEPHERD'S PASTURE IN AMERICA

And other sheep I have, which are not of this fold: them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice and there shall be one fold and one shepherd.—John 10: 16.

He shall feed his flock like a shepherd.
—Isaiah 40: 11.

IN ONE of the beautiful shepherd chapters of the Bible, Jesus says, "I am come that they [the sheep] might have life and have it more abundantly."—John 10: 10.

In a previous lecture, we discussed the fact that the mountain peaks of great achievements in the history of the world (Egypt, Babylon, Greece, Rome, Prehistoric America and modern civilization) have all had direct contact with the servants (prophets) of the Good Shepherd (Joseph, Daniel, Paul, Barnabas, Nephi, Joseph Smith, etc.).

From the beginning, the purpose of Jesus Christ had been to lead men out of the valley of ignorance, sin, and inferiority. From the beginning, the influence of Christ and his teachings has moved men to climb upward toward better things.

The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want. He maketh me to lie down in green pastures; he leadeth me beside the still waters.—Psalm 23: 1, 2.

They shall feed in the ways, and their pastures shall be in all high places.—Isaiah 49: 9.

Then said Jesus unto them again, Verily, verily, I say unto you, I am the door of the sheepfold. . . . I am the door; by me, if any man enter in, he shall be saved, and shall go in and out, and find pasture.—John 10: 7, 9.

Mr. Robert E. Speer says, "Christ is the worlds' life."¹

Wherever the Christian influence goes and to the measure it is accepted, men "have life and have it more abundantly." The reverse is also true. When men turn away from the Christian influence, selfishness, materialism, and even barbarism quickly manifest themselves. Nazi Germany is a classic example. Hitler and his followers turned away from Christ and his teachings. In a few short years, Germany descended to barbaric standards of life that have shocked and appalled the civilized world.

The facts of history unequivocally indicating that the finer things (high pastures) of life are directly traceable to Jesus Christ.

Kenneth Scott Latournette says:

We have, and properly, had much to say of the effects of Christianity upon the collective life of communities, nations, and mankind as a whole. Here has been the most potent force which mankind has known for the dispelling of illiteracy, for the creation of schools, and for the emergence of new types of education. From Christianity have issued impulses for daring intellectual and geographic adventures. The universities, centers for pushing forward the boundaries of human knowledge, were at the outset largely Christian creations. Music, architecture, painting, poetry, and philosophy have owed some of their greatest achievements to Christianity. Democracy as it was known in the nineteenth and twentieth centuries was in large part the outgrowth of Christian teaching. The abolition of negro slavery was due chiefly to Christianity. So, too, were the measures taken to protect the Indians against the exploitation of whites. The most hopeful movements of the regulation of war, for the mitigation of the sufferings entailed by war, and for the eventual abolition of war owed their inception chiefly to the Christian faith.

The elevation of the status of women owed an incalculable debt to Christianity. No other single force has been so widely potent for the relief of suffering brought by famine and for the creation of hospitals and orphanages.²

The Golden Age of Ancient America

The finest workmanship of our twentieth century civilization is traceable to the influence of Jesus Christ. "The fine workmanship" of prehistoric America is also traceable to the Good Shepherd's appearance among the ancient Americans.

Lewis Spence says:

Just prior to the discovery of America there was a widely disseminated belief throughout America that at a relatively remote period strangers from the East had visited American soil, eventually returning to their abodes in the land of the sunrise. For example, Quetzalcoatl, who landed at Vera Cruz with several companions, and speedily brought to bear the power of a civilizing agency upon native opinion.³

The Book of Mormon ascribes the golden age of ancient American civilization to the fact that all the people had become "the children of Christ."

And surely there could not be a happier people among all the people who had been created by the hand of God. There were no robbers, nor murderers, neither were there Lamanites, nor any manner of ites; but they were in one, the children of Christ, and heirs to the kingdom of God.—4 Nephi 1: 19, 20.

Hezekiah Butterfield says:

The greatest legend, so full of noble suggestions, relates to Quetzalcoatl, who came from the eastern world to Guatemala, and the Golden Age that arose under his preaching, when the birds sang never before so sweetly, when the flowers bloomed never before so brightly, and a single ear of corn taxed the strength of a man, and no violence was allowed to bird, beast or man.⁴

G. Leslie Mitchell says:

They worshiped at first one God . . . in this solar manifestation . . . a divine being, Quetzalcoatl descended to earth, renewed ancient ways of life, and brought new secrets of power. It was the Golden Age of Anahuac.⁵

H. H. Bancroft says:

Quetzalcoatl was very rich; he had all that was needful both to eat and to drink; maize was abundant, and a head of it was as much as a man could carry. . . . Pumpkins measured a fathom around; cotton was sowed and gathered in of all colors. . . . The adherents of Quetzalcoatl were also very rich and wanted for nothing. . . .

The people had at least three reasons for the great love, reverence and devotion with which they regarded him: first he taught them the silversmith's art. . . . He prohibited and forbade all war and violence. . . . He taught only virtue, abhorring all evil. . . . He himself ordained and appointed many new rites, ceremonies and festivals for the adoration of the gods. . . . He had priests who were called Que Quetzalcohua, that is to say, "Priests of the order of Quetzalcoatl."⁶

Wisdom of the Wise Shall Perish

The twenty-ninth chapter of Isaiah deals with the coming forth of a book. The statements of the prophet indicate the book should come out of the ground and that the wisdom of the wise men should perish.

And she [Ariel] shall be brought down, and shall speak out of the ground, and her speech shall be low out of the dust; and her voice shall be as of one that hath a familiar spirit, out of the ground, and her speech shall whisper out of the dust.—Isaiah 29: 14.

The Wisdom of the Wise Men of the Nineteenth Century

The archæologists of the nineteenth century had no understanding of America possessing a rich pre-Columbian history and conceded only a meager archæology of clay pots and bone awls. The prehistoric inhabitants of America were referred to as stone-age men. Stone implements and flint arrow points comprised the cultural achievements of the pre-Hispanic inhabitants.⁷

The wise men of the early part of the nineteenth century did not believe there were any great pre-Columbian American nations. In March, 1830, a book was published, giving the history of two great pre-Columbian civilizations. This book (the Book of Mormon) literally fulfill's Isaiah's prophecy about, "speaking out of the ground" and "whispering out of the dust." The Book of Mormon came forth out of the ground and was published to the world (1830) nine years before the first pre-Columbian city (Chichen Itza) was explored and publicized to the English-speaking world.

Before the facts were known, the Book of Mormon told the story of Christ's visit to ancient America and of the fine workmanship accomplished by the ancient Americans.

We will now give the reader the facts and let each one judge for himself as to whether "the wisdom of the wise men" has perished.

Two Civilizations

Before science had discovered positive evidence of one civilization, the Book of Mormon was published containing the story of two great civilizations and their "fine workmanship" in hundreds of details.

It is now common knowledge that there was more than one major civilization in ancient America as well as lesser cultures.

Remains have been found of a very ancient people in America which are classified as "archaic," and there are remains of civilizations left by the pre-Incas, Incas, Nahuas, Mayas, Zapotecs, Aztecs, et al.

Gregory Mason says:

But we must remember that there seems to have been a great gap between the sort of life these later nations led and the existence of the archaic people, the relics of the two eras which have come down to us show scarcely any similarity and many divergencies. It is quite possible that the Peruvians, Aztecs, and Mayas were as ignorant of these archaic people as we are.⁷

J. Leslie Mitchell says, "Whatever the origin of the Maya people of the Old Empire, that origin is connected only remotely with the origin of the area's antique civilizers."⁸

Earl Morris and Gustav Stromsvik say, "No one knows whence the Mayas came, but it is agreed before they arrived in Central America, another race had lived there for thousands of years."⁸

Thomas Gann writes about the Mayas being archæologists and collecting figurines, etc., of the civilization which had preceded them.¹⁰

According to the Book of Mormon, the first people came to America from the Tower of Babel (2200 B.C.), and the second people from Jerusalem (600 B.C.).

Thomas Gann says that the archaic dates back some 3,500 years, while the Old Empire civilization dates back 1,500 years.¹¹

The Book of Mormon records the history of the two oldest and greatest civilizations of America. After the demise of the second great civilization (Nephite), the records were deposited in the earth by the last prophet in the early part of the fourth century A.D. After the close of Book of Mormon history, several lesser civilizations arose such as the Inca, the Maya new empire, the Aztec, et al.

Fine Workmanship in Buildings

Before archæology and scientific research brought the facts to light, men of learning used such terms as "stone age men" and "no pre-Columbian history."

The Book of Mormon contains many statements about fine workmanship in great temples and palaces. Here is a sample statement:

And it came to pass that King Noah built many elegant and spacious buildings. . . . And he also caused that his workmen should work all manner of fine work within the walls of the temple.—Mosiah 7: 11-13.

No attempt is made here to apply any specific statement in the Book of Mormon to any particular archæological site. The point to be borne in mind is that the Book of Mormon, published in 1830, records the existence in America (before the arrival of Columbus) of great palaces and spacious temples. These statements were published to the world before such buildings as the House of the Governor at Uxmal, the Temple of the Warriors at Chichen Itza, the Palace at Palenque, or the Palace of the Mosaics at Metla, et al., were known to exist.

Concerning the House of the Governor at Uxmal, Yucatan, Gregory Mason says:

This building is 320 feet in length, and is said to contain two hundred thousand cubic feet of masonry, not counting the massive substructure. Wonderfully designed and constructed, its façade is covered with most ornate scripture. . . .

In the application of beautiful sculpture to the façades of buildings, the Mayas have never been equalled.¹⁰

S. G. Morley says, "Façades were treated with a sculptural decoration which for intricacy and elaboration has rarely been equalled by any people at any time."¹⁴

Before archæology unearthed the facts, the wise men said "stone-age men" and the Book of Mormon said "all manner of fine workmanship" in "elegant and spacious buildings."

The Yale expedition to Manchu Picchu in 1912 uncovered stone buildings of master artists in masonry. The precision, symmetry of construction, and gradual graduation of the tiers combines to produce an effect which is a joy to behold.¹⁴

Archæologists marvel at the way huge stones weighing many tons are fitted together with such accuracy that not even a knife blade can be inserted between them. With some of the finest work at Ollantaytambo, Peru, the joints are too fine to be seen with the naked eye. It is necessary to use a lens to be sure there is really a seam and not a false joint.¹⁶

Metallurgy

The learned men of the nineteenth century thought the pre-historic Americans were a stone-age people. The Book of Mormon, however, told the world a different story when it was published in 1830. Here is a sample of numerous statements found in the book:

And we multiplied exceedingly, and spread upon the face of the land, and became exceeding rich in gold, and in silver, and in precious things, and in fine workmanship of wood, in buildings, and in machinery and also in iron, and copper, and brass, and steel, making all manner of tools of every kind, to till the ground, and weapons of war.—Jarom 1: 19.

J. D. Baldwin says:

They had great skill in the art of working metals, especially gold and silver. Besides these precious metals, they had copper, tin, lead, and quicksilver. . . . Their goldsmiths and silversmiths had attained a very great proficiency.¹⁷

Specimens of metallic plating have been found. The only way we could duplicate this work is by electro-plating. How the ancient Americans accomplished it is unknown.

Clark Wissler says:

Metal work was praiseworthy, especially at Cartago. Skillful casting . . . has been noted, and good examples of soldering, plating, and even gilding have been collected. Different colored alloys were produced of gold, silver, and copper.¹⁸

In the "treasure room" of the Mexican National Museum in Mexico City and in the state museum at Oaxaca, there are dazzling displays of jewelry and necklaces of gold, silver, and precious stones found at Monte Alban.

The Book of Mormon says the ancient people wore all manner of gold and silver jewelry and even pearls (3 Nephi 1: 27).

Don Alfonso Caso found more than 500 articles from tomb seven (Monte Alban), including necklaces of gold, pearl, and turquoise composed of hundreds of beads each.²⁰

Astronomy

According to the Book of Mormon, the ancient Americans were well advanced in their knowledge of the movements of the stars and planets. ". . . All the planets which move in their regular form doth witness that there is a Supreme Creator."—Alma 16: 55.

"And behold there shall be a new star arise, such an one as ye never have beheld."—Helaman 5: 59.

Before the great mounds of the prehistoric cities of Central America were opened up, the learned men thought that the prehistoric Americans were unlearned barbarians. They have now revised their concepts. No revisions are necessary for the Book of Mormon.

Herbert Spinden, Ph.D., says,

When most of our ancestors were untutored barbarians, the Mayan-Priest astronomers had developed their science to a mathematical precision. . . . They could tell the exact number of days between the recurrence of any phenomena.²¹

The Mayas in their knowledge of the movements of the heavenly bodies—the sun, moon, Venus, and probably other planets as well, far excelled both the ancient Egyptians and Babylonians. Their mathematical system included the use of the abstract mathematical quantity of zero which is recognized as one of the outstanding achievements in the history of the world.²²

Staircase Farms

The Book of Mormon gives numerous instances of proficiency in the cultivation of all kinds of agricultural products. (See Mosiah 4:9; Enos 1: 34, etc.)

Archæologists have found that to reclaim a single acre of mountainside land in Peru involved the laying of approximately 700 perches of stone and the transportation of nearly 5,000 tons of soil. The staircase farms built by prehistoric man in Peru involve the moving of millions of tons of earth and the cutting and transportation of millions of perches of stone.²³

For their fine developments in the field of agriculture, we owe the ancient Americans a tremendous debt of gratitude.

Herbert J. Spinden says, "We owe to the Indian well over half of our agricultural wealth."²⁴

It is estimated that the world's annual production of one of these products alone (the potato) is of greater value than all the gold the Spaniards obtained from the New World.

Maize, or Indian corn, a second valuable product that has come down to us from prehistoric America via the Indian, produces more than $300,000,000.00 worth of corn annually.

Other products for which we owe the fine agricultural work of the prehistoric Americans include pineapples, squashes, pumpkins, strawberries, sweet potatoes, alligator pears, cascara sagrada, kidney beans, persimmons, tomatoes, cocaine, peanuts, lima beans, peppers, quinine, turkeys, tobacco, and rubber.

Therapeutics

The Book of Mormon says:

And there were some who died of fevers, which at some seasons of the year were very frequent in the land; but not so much with fevers, because of the excellent qualities of the many plants and roots which God had prepared, to remove the cause of diseases to which man was subject by the nature of the climate.—Alma 21: 75-77.

Mr. Nadaillac says, "To them [Toltecs] popular gratitude attributes the invention of medicine and the vapor bath. Certain plants to which curative properties were attributed were the remedies mostly used"²⁵

Donald Cadzow says:

The red medicine man, as known to the average tribe was the one who treated his patient by the use of herbs, barks, and roots of certain trees and shrubs, the knowledge concerning the use of which has been handed down through the ages.²⁶

Herbert J. Spinden thinks that quinine is perhaps the most valuable medicine in the world for its assistance in reclaiming the fever-ridden tropics.²⁷

Archæologists believe brain surgery was practiced to a considerable extent because of the large number of trepanned skulls found.²⁸

Donald Cadzow says:

Dental surgery was also practiced in ancient times by the people of some parts of South America. Occasionally skulls have been found by explorers with the enamel of the front teeth very skillfully scraped off and round solid gold discs inset.²⁹

Lost Art of Coloring

Hyatt Verrill says:

Cups, vessels, utensils, and many other objects were highly and beautifully embellished with colors applied like lacquer or enamel. Even today, after a lapse of centuries, the colors upon these are bright and fresh. Chemicals have little if any effect upon the pigments used, and they resist the action of all ordinary known solvents. No one has yet been able to learn the secret of their composition or to duplicate them, and we may consider the work as a true lost art.³⁰

Fine-twisted Linen

In the field of textiles, the contrast between the Book of Mormon and the learned men of the nineteenth century stands out in bold relief.

The expression "bone awls" describes the archæologist's concepts. The Book of Mormon used the expression, "fine-twined linen."

"Behold, their women did toil and spin, and did make all manner cloth of fine-twined linen, and cloth of every kind."—Helaman 2: 33.

"And they did have silks, and fine-twined linen, and they did work all manner of cloth, that they might clothe themselves from their nakedness."—Ether 4: 73 (Jaredites).

Exploration has now brought the truth to light. In an American trade journal, Mr. Walter Beasley sums up the facts for us:

A new and noteworthy movement, in fact, an accomplished and successful work of far-reaching interest to the textile industries, is the creation of fresh artistic designs by making use of the antique patterns of prehistoric fabrics found in the burial places of the new world. The most wonderful textiles in the world, showing the highest artistic skill in weaving and decorative art, are now determined to have come from ancient Peru, and these fabrics are beyond all question the most interesting technical and artistic record of textile history—indeed in some of their techniques and color combinations, they far surpass the best modern work.³¹

In an advertisement in the Kansas City Star for April 13, 1947, the Jones Store advertised its "First Lady" bed sheets with 140 threads to the inch as the best in Kansas City.

Concerning the best fabrics of prehistoric America, Mr. Beasley says,

In harmony of color, the beauty and fastness of dyes, and the perfection of spinning and weaving, place these fabrics in a class by themselves, not only as compared to the other textiles of this land but as regards those of any other people. Many contain nearly 300 weft yarns to the inch. Mr. Crawford in order to obtain exact information of the fineness of the weft in a fragment of tapestry, found it was impossible to count the weft with the testing lens ordinarily used in textile analysis. It was necessary to clamp an inch of cloth on the platform of a dissecting microscope and pick off the weft yarn with a needle. The operation took three hours and a half.—Ibid.

Archæologists tell us that during the past fifty years scientific exploration and excavation have gathered together a considerable mass of information, and here and there it is commencing to be possible to fill in the background of the ancient American picture.³²

Edward Herbert Thompson says:

I wish I might impress upon the readers of this book the fact that despite all that is said, done, or written to the contrary, most of the sciences are today in a state of flux. If this be so, even with what we have hitherto regarded as the exact sciences, how much more must it be the case with those which are acknowledged to be yet in their swaddling clothes, archæology, ethnology, and otherologies that follow in the wake of anthropology.³³

Archæology is in a state of flux. During the past fifty years it has amassed some information by which it can now commence to block in the background of the ancient American picture.

Over a hundred years ago the Book of Mormon was published with the entire picture of ancient America blocked in with hundreds of details of fine workmanship. Science's unearthing of facts has not made it necessary to revise one single word of detail in the Book of Mormon. The scientists on the other hand have been forced to revise their concepts continuously. Truly the words of the Prophet Isaiah have been fulfilled—"The wisdom of their wise men shall perish and the understanding of their prudent men shall come to nought."

The only logical explanation of the Book of Mormon is that it is a genuine history of the ancient Americans and contains the real secret of ancient America—Jesus Christ and his prophets were here in America and led at least two great civilizations to high pastures of fine workmanship.

¹Robert E. Speer, The Man Christ Jesus, page 245.

²Kenneth Scott Latournette, Advance Through Storm, pages 440, 441.

³Lewis Spence, Myths of Mexico and Peru, page 3.

⁴Hezekiah Butterfield, South America and Panama, pages 3, 4.

⁵G. Leslie Mitchell, The Conquest of the Maya, page 197.

⁶H. H. Bancroft, Native Races, Volume 3, pages 241, 251, 260.

⁷S. G. Morley, National Geographic, July, 1931.

⁸Gregory Mason, Columbus Came Late, page 76.

⁹J. Leslie Mitchell, Conquest of the Maya, page 117.

¹⁰Earl Morris, Gustav Stromsvik, Article in San Francisco Chronicle, January 20, 1935.

¹¹Thomas Gann, Ancient Cities and Modern Tribes, pages 196, 197.

¹²Thomas Gann, Ancient Cities and Modern Tribes, page 199.

¹³Hyatt Verrill, Old Civilizations of the New World, page 257 (reference).

¹⁴Gregory Mason, "The Great American Mystery," McCall's Magazine, April, 1930.

¹⁵S. G. Morley, Introduction to Study of Maya Hieroglyphics, page 5.

¹⁶See National Geographic, April, 1913.

¹⁷O. F. Cook, National Geographic, May, 1916.

¹⁸J. D. Baldwin, Ancient America, pages 248, 249.

¹⁹Clark Wissler, The American Indian, page 291.

²⁰Dr. Alfonso Caso, "Monte Alban," National Geographic, October, 1932.

²¹Herbert Spinden, Scientific American, January 20, 1928.

²²S. G. Morley, "Yucatan, Home of the Gifted Maya," National Geographic, November, 1928.

²³Showalter, National Geographic, June, 1930.

²⁴Herbert J. Spinden, "Thank the American Indian," Scientific American, April, 1928.

²⁵Nadaillac, Prehistoric America, page 276.

²⁶Donald Cadzow, "The Vanishing Indian Medicine Man," Scientific American, May, 1927.

²⁷Herbert Spinden, "Thank the American Indian," Scientific American, April, 1928.

²⁸Hiram Bingham, National Geographic, May, 1916.

²⁹Donald Cadzow, Scientific American, May, 1929.

³⁰Hyatt Verrill, Old Civilizations of the New World, page 322.

³¹Walter L. Beasley, The South American, page 30, April, 1917.

³²S. G. Morley, "Unearthing America's Ancient History," National Geographic, July, 1931.

³³Edward Herbert Thompson, People of the Serpent, page 76 (Published 1932).

LETTERS

Miracles Still Happen

I often hear it said that miracles don't happen now as they did in the early days. When I hear people say this, I wonder if they ever read their Bibles. I know miracles still happen, because I have experienced one.

About sixteen months ago, I was in an automobile accident; three doctors told my father that I wouldn't live for three hours. He called on two of the elders from the McKenzie Branch to administer to me. I don't remember the first administration, because I had a concussion of the brain and didn't know anything for a week; but I know now that the power of God was with me that night, because I steadily improved.

I had nineteen fractures, including a broken leg and hip. After the doctor saw that I was going to live, he told me that I would never walk again. I told him I didn't believe it, and through prayer and faith I was walking without crutches in six months. I know that all things are possible if you only believe.

During my five months in bed I was administered to several times, and the experiences I had will go with me through life. It is a wonderful thing to feel the power of God lifting one up.

I know miracles still happen, or I wouldn't be enjoying the beautiful things of life that God gives us. I thank God every day for his wonderful healing power.

ANNE GRAYSON.

Post Office Box 354
Greenville, Alabama

Note of Thanks

I wish to thank all who offered prayers in behalf of my sister, Mrs. Clarice Farrell, who recently had a serious operation. She is feeling fine.

CORA EMERSON.

904 South Wayland Avenue
Sioux Falls, South Dakota

From an Isolated Member

We live on a ranch forty-five miles from the nearest branch and can attend church only occasionally. My husband is not a member, but he is very much interested in the church. Two of our five children are old enough for baptism. If any members come to Mountain Home, we would certainly appreciate having them visit us. Pray for us that we may not always be isolated.

MRS. EDWIN DAVIS.

Mountain Home, Idaho

To the Saints in Zion

We wish to thank all who sent packages to us. We are sure God has opened the hearts of the Saints in Zion, and we are grateful to God and the Saints in America. It is three years since the war ceased, and our need is just as great as it was during the war. We are still hungry and in need of clothing, but we realize that the words of Jesus and the prophets must be fulfilled. Wars, pestilence, hunger, and high prices are predicted, so we see the fulfillment of prophecy.

I should like to tell how God helped me keep my faith during trying times. In August, 1926, I joined the church and promised then to serve God and asked him for a special blessing of faith. He answered my prayer. When I was seventeen years old, I needed special strength to overcome temptations. My faith became stronger and stronger until I cried out, "Nothing can make me deny my faith."

In 1928, my family moved to Berlin, but it was necessary for me to remain at Grossrâchen. I was active in the branch there and played in the orchestra. At that time I went through a severe testing, but with my special gift of faith and with God's help I was able to remain faithful.

In 1936 I married a sister in the Grossrâchen Branch, and we were blessed by the birth of a girl and a boy.

Then came a day when I had to join the army. I prayed to God that it would never be necessary for me to kill, and he heard my prayers. Never was it necessary for me to shoot, nor was I ever shot at. My faith was carrying me through, although there was much suffering and sorrow. When the war ended, I was taken prisoner by the Americans. After three months, I was freed, and then began a new life which I have reconsecrated to God.

I found my family in dire need upon my arrival home; they had been living on potatoes. Then we were allowed three pounds of bread every week. Today, things are not much improved, but we have faith in God that he will not forget us.

We thank you again and again for your kindness. May God bless you.

THE SCHNEIDER FAMILY.

Grossrâchen, Germany

Fortieth Wedding Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. T. George Neville of Willoughby, Ohio, celebrated their fortieth wedding anniversary, April 20, while visiting their son, Major Robert B. Neville at Camp Lejuene, North Carolina.

The Need of Study in Local Women's Groups

By MRS. DAGMAR HOLM ROOT

THERE ARE SO MANY PHASES of women's work that one hesitates to say which is the most important—work in the home, in the church, or in the spreading of the gospel to neighbors, friends, and the world.

Women have been greatly blessed by God. He has committed wonderful trusts to them, and down through the ages, they have responded with faithful devotion. Mothers of our early church held their families together through trying times and pioneered the way for us in women's work.

In our local groups, it is difficult to say what course should be followed because everything depends upon the interests and the age range. Needlework has its place for those who are interested in sewing. We know that Dorcas of Bible times did much sewing for the poor. There may be children who cannot go to school or church for want of clothes, and valuable contacts can be made through service of this nature.

Family night with games and dinners to raise money for new churches and other projects promotes sociability and fellowship; however, if the women of the church give all of their time and energy to the making of money, the many things that need to be done for the advancement of the missionary program outlined at General Conference must suffer. The tremendous opportunities and obligations of the church, spiritual, educational, and social cannot be met if all the time is spent in making money.

WE NEED TO SPEND part of our valuable time in class study. If the church of tomorrow is to be stronger than the church of today, we shall need to acquaint ourselves with its program and learn all we can about the gospel so that we can better tell it to the world. That is the purpose of study in our local groups. If we really love the gospel, we shall want to share it with others. It is true that the best way to witness for Christ is to live worthily, but we need a generous amount of study to learn how to live that life more abundantly and how to help our children to live usefully. Our church pledge reads: "I will study the Standard Books of the church systematically and in the spirit of devotion, that I may understand the mind of Christ."

Let us examine the value of studying the Bible. If we do not possess strong convictions ourselves, we can read about the experiences of faithful people in Bible days, and our faith is strengthened. We gain courage and the desire to try out God's promises to us; and when we find that they work, our own beliefs are strengthened. This is transfer value in Bible study.

Reading and study are invaluable in that they make us want to have experiences others have had and do something worth-while for God and the church. Attitudes are all important; we must want to be stronger spiritually before we can become so. When we read the story of Hannah's unselfishness and devotion in giving her only child into the hands of the priest, Eli, we are inspired to make greater sacrifices ourselves. When we read in the church history of the sacrifices of the first missionaries, who carried the gospel westward, plodding through snow with only a crust of frozen bread in their pockets, tired, but inflamed with an indomitable missionary spirit, we are inspired to do more today.

THERE IS INSPIRATION and stimulation in study and discussion, because we learn much from each other. Someone has said, "Everybody has something to teach me." However, I have never seen any really effective work done except when courses were taken for credit. Of course, we can gain inspiration and get a general view of a subject as auditors, but really to get much out of it, we should study intensively and take notes. We need to make our passive knowledge active so that we may have a store of knowledge from which to draw in defense of the gospel. The church certificate is a worth-while incentive for saving credits. Perhaps this is my school-teacher attitude.

It is unfortunate that in the past we have taken such a careless attitude toward classwork in religion; whereas, in our public schools, definite knowledges are required and achievements of pupils are measured in tangible figures. It is true that it is more difficult to measure attainments in abstract ideals with which religion deals, but we can do far more checking on the results of our teaching. Much has been accomplished along this line during the past few decades. In the past, we were satisfied merely to hope that we were getting somewhere—that people's lives were being changed—but in recent years the pendulum has been swinging in the direction of more tangible results. We have kept pace with other churches, as is reflected in Guide-Lines and other church literature.

- - - a home column feature - - -

The field of study is wide and offers material for all groups. There is an abundant supply of materials according to the interests. In our group, we studied the Book of Mormon for a year, using the four quarterlies, writing answers to questions each week, and taking the examinations sent out by church headquarters. Interesting papers on supplementary reading were handed in, and a wealth of information on archaeology strengthened our faith and made us feel that we had really accomplished something worthwhile.

Let us make use of the abundant literature which will help us enrich the lives of those around us and build a better world, where "God is recognized as our Father, where all men are brothers, and where peace prevails." Study coupled with action brings a sense of vitality, a feeling of progress toward Zion's goals.

Announcement

We are happy to announce that a new pamphlet by Mrs. A. L. Gibson is now available to our women's groups. This little pamphlet will be especially helpful to young mothers in the teaching and training of their children.

In this pamphlet, Mrs. Gibson takes the position that every child has the right

1. to be born in a godly home—of godly parents.
2. to be wanted.
3. to be regarded as the most holy stewardship to mankind, and cared for and trained as such.

Mrs. Gibson explains, very briefly, what constitutes a good home, how parents can prepare for and welcome a child, and suggests how children may be trained to become "Members of Christ, children of God, and inheritors of the kingdom of heaven."

We still entertain the forlorn hope that some day a change in the system may do away for the need of a change in us.

Food Reminiscences

By Mrs. Israel A. Smith

AT THE TIME I was being persuaded that the greatest career a girl can choose lies within the home, I began to realize my training was sadly lacking for that all-important role. I could make some delectable salads, and I had worked hard in learning how to make biscuits that would pass for my mother's, but I knew that was not enough. So the year before Israel and I were married, I took a short course in domestic science, where I learned the basic principles of cooking with some ruffles to add interest.

After we were married, there was one cheese dish Israel especially enjoyed. This is a good source of protein, especially in these days of shortages and high meat prices:

CHEESE SOUFFLE

- 4 tbsp. butter
- 5 tsp. flour
- $\frac{1}{2}$ tsp. salt
- 1 cup milk
- 3 eggs
- $\frac{1}{2}$ cup cheese

Melt butter in double boiler and stir in flour gradually to which has been added the $\frac{1}{2}$ tsp. of salt. Gradually add the milk, then the cheese which has been grated or cut fine. Stir and cook until cheese is melted. Cool. Then add the beaten egg yolks. Beat the egg whites until stiff, then fold them into the cheese mixture. Pour into greased baking dish, set in pan of water and bake 1 hour in oven 325 degrees.

As the years passed and responsibilities were added, I found less time for dishes which were so exacting, for when a souffle is taken from the oven it must be served at once—no fooling.

Later when the boys were away at college or in homes of their own, I had more time for ruffles and salads. And I did not realize I had perhaps been neglecting this very fine husband of mine until one day he greeted one of my souffles with, "Nina, this reminds me of when we were first married. You made this often then. Remember?"

I do not understand how Israel escaped the kitchen urge, for his two brothers, Fred and Hale, both took pride in culinary feats. He never fails to give me a lift if I am tired or indisposed, but he doesn't even pretend to enjoy it. Perhaps for that reason he is more appreciative of what I can do—that is enough for me.

No doubt I would get better results if I were clever as Sister Billings, wife of Captain George Billings of Stonington, Maine, who announced that no one on the place could cook lobsters as well as the Captain. He chuckled and said he knew she was "spoofing him"; nevertheless, he proceeded to prepare some very delicious lobster dishes.

Israel, like his father, has always been fond of fish and never tires of asparagus. At the time I write this, we are cutting asparagus from the bed which supplied Father's table with that delicious vegetable.

The Poor of Soul

By NETTIE C. LAKE

Who walks beside a rosebud
And does not sense its bloom,
Its lovely form and color,
Its delicate perfume,

Who walks beneath the heavens
And does not see the sky,
The sunrise and the sunset,
The tints that glow and die,

Who treads a rural pathway
And never hears a bird,
Nor notes the trembling grasses
A passing breeze has stirred,

Who dwells among his fellows,
And sees them pass his door,
Nor ever hears their heartbeats
Is pitifully poor!

Blue Bird - Oriole Award Services

By EDNA EASTER

AWARD SERVICES were held on Sunday, April 25, in twelve of the Independence congregations of the church. In nine of these congregations, the award services took the place of the regular Sunday evening services. Awards were presented in the others during the church school hour.

Five Blue Bird girls received the highest honor in the younger girls' program, the gold band of the senior warbler, signifying four years of satisfactory work. Shirley Abbott, Kathryn Rogers, Donna Lafferty, and Perdilla Hancock of the Bluebell Band of Second Church, and Shirley Stover of the Leelanee Band of Englewood Church earned senior warbler awards.

Perhaps the outstanding award of the Oriole program was that presented to Lorena Steffens—the "Light of Life" pin. These pins are presented to girls who complete six preliminary religious awards. This pin may be earned by members of any of the recognized intermediate programs for girls: Oriole Girl, Girl Scouts, Camp Fire Girls, 4-H Club Girls, and others. Requirements for this award are church-centered and are similar to those of the Boy Scout's "God and Country" award. A minimum of one year's work is required. The work is fourfold: (1) To gain knowledge through personal and class study of the Scriptures and other good books, (2) To establish or strengthen personal religious habits through church school and church attendance, daily worship, etc., (3) To develop personal religious experiences through worship, daily devotions, and participation in the work of the church school or church, and (4) To serve the church (one hundred fifty hours of service are required).

Lorena Steffens, who attends Second Church, was an Oriole girl and is now an Oriole monitor of the Liberty Street Church. She has the highest Oriole rank award, has twenty-one honor badges, and has earned the 300-hour service pin for paging at the Sanitarium. This service is in addition to the 150 hours of service to the church.

OTHER GIRLS receiving preliminary certificates in the "Light of Life" program were Dorothy Ferguson and Carolyn Essig of the Sunrise Circle, Spring Branch Church (both received their first and second awards); and Yvonne Rhyan of the Custodes Ignis Circle of Stone Church, who received her fifth award.

Alberta Douglas of the Liberty Street Oriole Circle and Winola Hart of the Custodes Ignis Circle of Stone Church each received the highest Oriole rank honor, the first rank builder arm band.

Girls who served the Independence Sanitarium as pages were recognized in the presenting of service pins. One-hundred-hour bronze pins were presented Marilyn Andes and Joanne Nelson of the Eden Heights Oriole Circle; Joan Kramer and Helen Propst of the Englewood Circle; Marilyn and Shirley Tiberghien of the Enoch Hill Circle; Charline Andes of the Spring Branch Circle; and Althea Wildermuth, Donna Beth Davis, and Helen Harder of the Orinzi Circle of Stone Church. Two-hundred-hour sterling pins were presented Charline Andes of the Sunrise Circle, Spring Branch; and Barbara Bryant of the Orinzi Circle, Stone Church. A three-hundred-hour gold pin was presented Leora Allred of the Sunrise Circle, Spring Branch.

To earn these awards, the girls act as pages at the Sanitarium, relieving the nurses of much routine work. Oriole girls have served a total of approximately 17,000 hours since 1943. There have been seventy-three one-hundred-hour pins, seventeen two-hundred-hour pins, and five three-hundred-hour pins presented during this period. This work was started during the war when the hospital was short of nurses and other personnel. Since then, it has been continued on request of the Sanitarium officials and by the eager consent of the girls.

One hundred three Blue Bird girls were presented with their insignia. Ninety Oriole girls completed their pledge requirements and were presented the "Spreading Tree" insignia. The Blue Bird ranks are based on a year's work, and most of the work is completed at the fall season. However, besides the girls receiving the gold band, sixty-nine other girls received white, red, or blue feathers signifying the completion of the first, second, or third year's work.

Forty-one intermediate ranks and a total of 360 honor badges were earned in the Oriole program. These badges were earned in forty-three fields of endeavor in nine general areas including the church, the home, the girl herself, cultural, craft, field and forest, recreation, pioneering, school and community.

Six hundred eighty-three awards were presented in the congregations in Independence. This total is increased to 699 when the honor badges earned by the Mt. Washington Oriole Circle and the insignia awards of the Blue Bird girls of Blue Springs are included.

The Oriole circle having the greatest number of awards was the Orinzi Circle of Stone Church; the Blue Bird band with the most awards was from Gudgeon Park.

As a part of their award service, the Blue Springs Blue Bird Band presented their church with a large framed picture of Sallman's "Head of Christ."

There are 240 Blue Bird girls in twenty-six bands, and 160 Oriole girls in seventeen circles in the city of Independence.

The "Light of Life" Religious Award Program for Girls

I am the light of the world; he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life.

THE REQUIREMENTS of the "Light of Life" program are challenging. To earn this pin takes a lot more than enrolling and doing a bit of work for a year, yet it is possible for any junior high girl (Oriole Girl, Girl Scout, Camp Fire Girl, 4-H Girl, or others) in any of the activity programs to complete the requirements. Each carefully-planned step is a little more difficult than the previous one. The five preliminary steps are recognized by certificates, the sixth by a certificate and the pin.

Requirements foster growth in knowledge through study of the Three Books, church fiction, the Herald and Stepping Stones, church history, doctrine, organization, personnel, and the financial and social program. A rather thorough study must be made in one of the major areas.

Religious experiences become habits through regular attendance and participation in the church school and other church services, through daily scripture reading and devotions, through compliance with the stewardship program, and through living a life consistent with the ideals of the church.

Service to the church becomes a habit long before the required 150 hours are served under the direction of the pastor. The girls come to know of areas of service within the church, what true church membership entails; and the pastors come to know there are girls anxious to share with the work.

Before the girl receives her pin, her pastor must write a letter giving his personal evaluation of her character, attitudes, and worthiness to receive the pin. The award is an achievement, and the girls, the homes, and the church benefit from it.

Ruth Zion, in the article following, tells what the completing of the "Light of Life" program has meant to her.

For details and information on the program, write the Department of Religious Education, The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri.

Ways in Which the "Light of Life" Award Has Enriched My Life

By RUTH ZION

SINCE THE STARTING of the "Light of Life" Award program last April, my whole life has been centered around my church and this award. The study for it has brought me new knowledge of my church books and church history. For instance, the question, "Who was the first man to be baptized?" That question had never arisen before, and it interested me, so I read more about it.

My Girl Scout attendance and work has also reached a "new high" since I started the award program. I have taken a greater interest in their way of giving me a well-balanced life. Many times when I have been tempted to do things which my parents and the church look upon with disapproval, I have thought of how it would look if I would do those things and then stand up and receive my award—my conscience would bother me. I have noticed already that the younger girls are looking toward me as an example they should follow. Even some of the older girls are following my lead in participating in church activities.

Since I have worked in the church, I appreciate other's talents more, because I have found out what work it is to get a program in order so it may run smoothly on Sundays.

I now see how from the first award to the sixth, the work has become more difficult so that we might grow in mind. I have seen, from the things I thought were hard (but were really easy) how the program has been built up so we could do the hard things with better understanding. In working on this award, I have taken more interest in the things going on in my class, and I have taken an active part in class discussion. I think it would be well for some older people to work on this award, too. I believe it would interest them, as it has me, in the work of building the church to the point where Christ wants it. I see, though, where it would have been impossible for me to get this award if my pastor and fellow workers had not taken the interest they did. They have helped me so that it was possible to do activities I otherwise would not have been able to do. I think they should really be the ones to receive this award. The people who helped me pass the questions should also have special recognition, for they have given me a better knowledge than the study of the questions themselves gave.

I think this award has truly added to my life, and its influence will be with me always.

Church Beautiful Contest

ONE OF THE ASPECTS of the development of a great missionary program for the church is the necessity of beautifying our church buildings so that nonmembers will find it pleasant to attend them. Strangers cannot help judging us first by external appearances. Afterward, they come to know our inward spiritual light and strength. Since they judge by external appearances, we should make these as good as possible.

Even the most humble church building can be made more attractive if it is given a good lawn and some pretty shrubs. This can be done without much expense, and volunteer members of the congregation can do most of the work if they receive advice from someone who is informed on the principles of landscaping. Anybody can go to a library and read about this subject.

Bishop C. A. Skinner has done a splendid work in improving the settings of some of our historic church properties. As a result of this experience, he is very much interested in making similar improvements to many of our church buildings, and he has personally undertaken the sponsorship of the "Church Beautiful Contest." Anyone who is interested in entering a local church in this contest may write to Bishop C. A. Skinner, The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri. In a recent letter, Sister Vassie Sheets of Columbus, Ohio, announced a desire to enter the Second Columbus Church. We would like to hear from other persons who will enter their churches also. The main purpose is to beautify our church buildings not only for helping in the missionary work but also for the encouragement of members. There should be a beautification committee active for every one of our church buildings.

HELPS FOR ORIOLES and ORIOLE LEADERS

Oriole Monitor's Manual
$1

Light of Life
Religious Award Program for Girls
25c

The Oriole Girls' Handbook
An Activity Program
(includes Light of Life)
50c

Order from your Book Steward or from
HERALD PUBLISHING HOUSE
Independence, Missouri

Not of Ourselves

By
Stanley Johnson

IN THIS BUSY WORLD we often fail to meditate upon decisions or steps of importance which we are called upon to make. Our selfish attitude dominates our minds to a point where nothing but our immediate personal desires are present in our conscious thinking. We fail to notice—or, if we notice, we fail to heed—the integration between men, the integration between man and Divinity, and the divine purpose that is present in moments of human indecision. We can but vision the effects of the choice upon ourselves.

Almost 2,000 years ago Christ stood on the mountainside near Jerusalem and said, "After this manner shall ye pray." He then proceeded to teach his disciples and the multitude what we now call the Lord's Prayer. If we carefully analyze this prayer, we will notice the depth of meaning upon which it ends: "For thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory, for ever and ever."

IF WE ARE TO PRAY this prayer conscientiously, we must align ourselves with the principles therein. This last phrase precludes all chance for individual selfish motives. It abolishes all personal-glory motivation which might be present. It humbles and yet strengthens the individual who applies its philosophy to his existence. How often have we become proud at the conversion of a close friend? How often have we felt a tinge of vain glory when calling upon a lay member whose faith we consider less strong than ours? How often have we said, "Come with me to my church"? This selfish nature seems to be characteristic of mankind and yet if we are to live as Christ suggested, this trait must be subjugated.

This sense of success which comes from human endeavor often is not valid. Many times it is merely an emotion which comes from the lack of a significant goal. The shallow person is too often satisfied with what he terms success. This, in reality, is failure, for in achieving the

Here Is the Writer

Stanley Johnson, a graduate of Graceland, is twenty years old. With nearly six years of journalistic experience behind him, he served this year as editor-in-chief of the "Graceland Tower" (college weekly). His contributions first appeared in the "Herald" in 1945. He holds the office of priest, and his home branch is in Spokane, Washington.

simple goal set for himself, this person has failed to appreciate the over-all problem as it exists. Such delusion of achievement is possible without the guidance of Deity, thus enabling man to stumble through his life without ever experiencing divine help. In such a case, the individual is confining himself to a small program on a small scale with an insignificant accomplishment. We are never truly successful until we set a goal so high that it is impossible to reach it without God's help. Then, as we come face to face with the reality of our own lack of power and the omnipotence of the Godhead, we verge upon the border of true success through honest self-appraisal. Living a powerful life that calls for divine assistance necessitates applying the principles of the gospel to everyday living.

This is applicable in all types of life and all modes of living. Making the church of God live in our own lives is the surest method of achieving the acme of satisfaction—satisfaction, that is, not glory—and realizing the potential power which is awaiting our call for assistance, depending merely upon our soul and life being in personal communion with this divine force is the most effective way of realizing individual strength which can be used for the redemption of man. Recognizing the kingdom of God and the requirements for entrance into it can be the most soul-searching motivation possible. Remembering that the kingdom is his is difficult but necessary.

Accomplishing the requisites for Christlike living can be done more quickly and easily if we will only recognize the three possessions attributed to Deity in the Lord's Prayer. We must recall them every time selfishness takes sway; we must repeat to ourselves every time we let personal motivation take control, "Thine is the kingdom, thine is the power, thine is the glory, for ever and ever."

Evasion

One of the main reasons, I believe, for personal unhappiness lies in our evasion of facts, work, and simple living itself.

Life goes on so much smoother and happier when we face things as they come—evading nothing that we ought to do, or that we would rather not do. So many of our senseless fears are fed by this very act of evasion. Mark Twain once said: "When in doubt, tell the truth." A very good thing to memorize.—George Matthew Adams.

New Horizons

The Trouble-Shooter

Reclaiming Disinterested Prospects

QUESTION: I have a friend who, at one time, seemed interested in the church. After telling her of our beliefs and the story of the Book of Mormon, I asked her to attend a service with me. She went to several of our meetings and seemed to enjoy going. Then she began attending services at another church. Now she seems entirely disinterested in the Restored Gospel. We are still good friends, and I haven't given up the hope that someday she will be a Latter Day Saint, but I don't know how to rekindle her former interest. Since she knows about the church and its program, there seems little more to say. What shall I do now?

ANSWER: By Charles V. Graham

Let us first share a few observations before we try to answer your question.

The Lord informs us according to Luke 12: 48, "For unto whomsoever much is given, of him shall much be required." Our Savior says almost the very same thing in Doctrine and Covenants 81: 1, "For unto whom much is given, much is required."

As a people we believe that we represent God's church on earth, and that it is the only authoritative church with a fullness of the gospel of Christ. Therefore, it logically follows that by taking this position of being given much, much is required of us.

You say you have told your friend of our beliefs and the story of the Book of Mormon and that she seemed to enjoy attending several of our meetings. You have started in the right direction. God revealing himself in the name of his Son, said through a latter-day prophet, "It becometh every man who hath been warned to warn his neighbor."—Doctrine and Covenants 85: 22. According to your statement, you have partly fulfilled this commandment; however there are several other approaches that might be made toward your friend.

You mentioned that the person in question is still a good friend. This being true, don't lose hope, even though she is attending services at another church.

Keep in mind what the Prophet Nephi said under divine inspiration: "The Lord giveth no commandment unto the children of men, save he shall prepare the way for them that they may accomplish the thing he hath commanded."—1 Nephi 1: 65.

You have indicated your personal feeling of responsibility in sharing the "way of life." In many places, the sacred writings are replete with statements challenging Christ's disciples to "let their lights shine" and to "preach the gospel." According to Nephi, such commandments would never have been given unless God would prepare the way to accomplish them. Thus you must first believe that God will help you, providing you have sufficient faith in him and do all within your power to win your friend to Christ through his church.

You say, "She knows about the church and its program." You may have informed her concerning these things, but to know all about them takes a lifetime of study, experience, and living, so there is a possibility of helping her to become better acquainted with our message.

You ended the next to last statement with, "There seems little more to say." I'm glad you made this remark. It may prove to be your most valuable weapon. Many times we say too much too often.

Finally you ask, "What shall I do now?" In trying to help you, we list the following:

1. Since you have taken her to church and she is somewhat informed regarding our beliefs, yet is attending another church, the best thing to do might be to patiently wait a while, but pray about it continuously and lay your future plans of contact.

2. Your friend may be comparing your church people and doctrine with others. Grant her this opportunity. Like many others, she will likely come to know the truth through comparisons. She is also a child of God, and if she is honestly seeking light and truth, his spirit will strike a chord harmonious with hers. Thus she will see and experience the divinity and richness of the message of the Restoration.
3. Go to your pastor or some dependable priesthood member and let him share with you in this problem. The pastor, using wisdom, could visit her in her home occasionally.
4. After winning her as a friend, he could invite her out to a church service that he had taken particular pains to plan. If you were successful in getting your friend to attend your church again, it might easily be in vain unless the church was neat and attractive and the service well-planned and intelligent.
5. It might be well for you to make plans to go out with your friend to places of interest and visit in her home. Share common interests, but don't talk about the church unless she brings it up. Some of our neighbors and friends get to thinking that all we do is go to church and talk church. We can easily defeat the fulfillment of our greatest desire by churching our friends to death. Don't misunderstand me—I would take advantage of every opportunity to tell the story, but I would be wise in my points of presentation.

First, make a real friend of your acquaintance.

Second, invite her to go with you to participate in activities of interest to her that are above reproach.

6. Ask her at an opportune time to read the church school quarterly you have just finished.
7. Invite her to attend your class or branch picnic, outing, skating party, or swim the next time you have one.
8. If you can't afford the expense yourself, get someone to share with you and give her a six-months' or year's subscription to the Saints' Herald.
9. Ask your pastor to furnish you a few missionary tracts and lend them one at a time over a period of time. It isn't advisable to give anyone too much reading material at once.
10. If your prospect likes to read, such books as The Call at Evening or Dawn of Peace would be excellent helps.
11. You could go with your friend to her church once in a while. It wouldn't hurt you any, and it might open the way for you to get her to go with you again to our church.
12. Christ said, "Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works." This finally is the most important key to the heart of your friend.

One's life should be constantly an example of Christ's teachings and ministry. No matter what we tell our friends regarding the Latter Day message, our words fall at our feet and are a reproach upon the church unless nonmembers are able to see the fruits of the gospel in our lives. The very best way to tell the story is to live it, and by so doing, people will see our good works.

Some of the most powerful attributes to be used in influencing our friends are patience, love, kindness, honesty, meekness, longsuffering, friendliness, and openmindedness.

13. Continue to influence your friend by living a good, clean life yourself. Pray for her. Be sincerely friendly toward her. Learn of her hobbies and become interested in them; then, from this common ground, you should be able to successfully lead her into the kingdom.

May God bless you in your effort for good.

The More Abundant Life

(Continued from page 8.)

was not enough, for Jerusalem was destroyed while her people were yet in their sins. Dying on the cross was not enough to save the world, for the world is still in sin.

Man must become teachable. And then those who know the way—the servants of God—must teach him. By the power of this teaching, he, too, must be pierced through to his heart and soul. As with the nails that pierced the hands of Jesus, man must likewise be pierced with the consciousness of his own depravity and the consequences of his own sinning. As the spear of the Roman soldier pierced the body of our Lord, the soul of man must be pierced with the two-edged sword of the light and understanding of truth. Jesus suffered the agony of Gethsemane and the torture of the cross to demonstrate to all mankind its worth, and to prove at what a terrific cost he was willing to pay for the more abundant life for man. This is indeed more than meat and raiment.

The brain is never more than half developed, and usually not even one fifth used.—Frederick Tilney, The Brain From Ape to Man.

BULLETIN BOARD

Detroit-Windsor District Conference

A special conference for the Detroit-Windsor District will be held at Central Church in Detroit, Michigan, on June 27. Delegates to General Conference will be elected and special classwork provided for men, women, and young people. Apostle Gleazer and Seventy Thomas Worth are to be in attendance.

W. BLAIR McCLAIN.

Alberta District Camp

The Alberta District Camp will be held July 19 to 26 at Sylvan Lake. There will be interesting class studies and recreation for all ages. It offers an excellent chance for members to meet their district and general church officers.

Those having reports should mail them to the district secretary, Mrs. Ardella Clark, 9911 153rd Street, Edmonton, Alberta, not later than July 10, 1948.

Saskatchewan Reunion

The Saskatchewan Reunion, which combines the Northern and Southern Saskatchewan Districts, will be held at Beaver Creek, Saskatchewan, July 10 to 18.

Services at Clinton, Missouri

If you know of members living in or near Clinton, Missouri, who would be interested in attending services, please have them contact Orville Hulmes, Fourth and Green, Clinton, or Walter Chapman, 603 East Green, Clinton. Church school is held each Sunday morning at 10 and preaching at 11 in the Seventh-Day Adventist Church.

Ava, Missouri, Home-coming

All former members of Ava Branch are invited to attend home-coming services at the church on July 4. To reach the church, drive ten miles south of Mansfield on Highway 5, then three and one half miles southeast on the new gravel road F.

Northwestern Iowa District Conference

The Northwestern Iowa District Conference will be held on June 27 at Missouri Valley, Iowa. Activities of the day include a 9:30 prayer service; business session for the election of General Conference delegates at 10:45; classwork at 1:30 p.m. for men, women, young people, and church school personnel; and a sermon by Apostle D. T. Williams at 2:30. Seventy E. Y. Hunker is to be present also.

MRS. WILLIAM ADAMS,
District Secretary.

Eastern Montana District Reunion and Conference

The Eastern Montana District Reunion and Conference will be held June 19 to 27 at Fairview, Montana. Apostle R. E. Davies and Evangelist J. F. Curtis are to be present. Meals will be served in the church basement for all who care to eat there. For information concerning rooms, please write District President Vernon W. Ditton, Fairview, Montana, or District Secretary Lawrence Brown, Savage, Montana.

Azalia, Michigan, Home-coming

Home-coming services will be held at Azalia, Michigan, on Sunday, June 20. Features of the day include an early morning prayer service (9 a.m.), preaching at 11, dinner, musical service at 1:30 p.m., and a fellowship hour at 2 o'clock.

BEN FERGUSON, Pastor.

New York-Philadelphia District Reunion

The New York-Philadelphia District Reunion will be held in Deer Park, New Hope, Pennsylvania, July 3 to 11. President F. Henry Edwards, Apostle George Lewis, Bishop Don Chesworth, and High Priest Carl Muir will be in charge. Rates are as follows: dormitory, $3; tent, $2; cabin, $4. Meals will average $1.50 daily. Housing applications should be sent to Charles Harris, 2055 East 19th, Brooklyn, New York.

Southern Missouri District Conference

The Southern Missouri District Conference will be held at Kennett, Missouri, on July 10 and 11, beginning with a prayer service at 10 a.m. on Saturday. The business session is scheduled for 3 o'clock, Saturday afternoon. District officers and delegates to General Conference will be elected, and priesthood calls approved at this time. Missionary William Guthrie is to be present.

JAMES A. PHILLIPS,
District President.

Books Wanted

W. Blair McClain, 359 Louise Avenue, Highland Park 3, Michigan, needs a full set of Priesthood Journals, either bound or unbound.

Mrs. R. L. Hays, 137 East Elm, Independence, Missouri, wants Volumes I, II, and IV of Church History, The Fourth Relief, In the Shelter of the Little Brown Cottage, and The Vineyard Story.

REQUESTS FOR PRAYERS

Mrs. R. L. Hays, 137 East Elm, Independence, Missouri, who suffered a stroke two years ago, asks for prayers. She is able to walk now but still needs the prayers of the Saints.

Prayers are requested for Mrs. F. C. Webbe of Kirtland, Ohio, who is in the hospital awaiting surgery.

Alta Mischnick of Beatrice, Nebraska, will appreciate being remembered in the prayers of the Saints.

WEDDINGS

Nielsen-Hansen

Andrey Hansen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard P. Hansen of Council Bluffs, Iowa, and Everett Nielsen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Poul S. Nielsen of Logan, Iowa, were married May 23 at Logan. Elder E. Y. Hunker officiated at the double-ring ceremony.

Lea-Esgar

Lucile Esgar, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank H. Esgar, and Leonard J. Lea were married at Stone Church in Independence, Missouri, on Friday morning, May 21. Pastor Glaude A. Smith performed the double-ring ceremony. The Leas are making their home at 1428 West Short Street in Independence.

DEATHS

GREEN.—Melissa I., daughter of Emma and Isaac Ross, was born July 30, 1872, at Pittsburg, Kansas, and died May 6, 1948, at Independence, Missouri. For many years, she was a member of the Reorganized Church; and as long as she was able, she attended services regularly. While living on West Van Horn in Independence, she frequently entertained the Sanitarium nurses at her home. On January 31, 1900, she was married to Andrew J. Green, who later became vice-president of the Jackson County Bank. Mr. Green died in April, 1928.

Surviving are two sons, Master Sergeant A. J. Green, who is with the Army of Occupation in Freising, Germany, and Sanford F. Green of Independence; a sister, Mrs. Frances Skinner of Whittier, California; and two grandsons. Funeral services were conducted by Elder Glaude A. Smith at the Carson Funeral Chapel. Interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery.

HILES.—George McClellan, was born August 23, 1863, at Wesleyville, Pennsylvania, and died at his home in Independence, Missouri, on May 10, 1948. He was married to Carrie A. McWethy at Harold, Kansas, on May 5, 1889; they were together for their fifty-ninth wedding anniversary. He was baptized into the Reorganized Church at Kingfisher, Oklahoma, on October 28, 1896. In 1903, he was ordained a teacher, and in 1915, an elder.

He is survived by his wife; two daughters: Mrs. H. E. Waite of Independence, and Miss Mary Hiles of the home; two sons: Perry of Bates City, Missouri, and John of Independence; a sister, Mrs. Minnie Cosper, Temple City, California; a brother, John Hiles, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania; and seven grandchildren. Services were conducted at the Speaks Funeral Chapel, Elder Glaude A. Smith and Bishop T. A. Beck officiating. Interment was in the cemetery at Holden, Missouri.

ALLEN.—Lydia Ethel, daughter of Adam W. and Lydia Kelley Simmons, was born at Grantsville, West Virginia, on February 26, 1904, and died February 12, 1948, at Clarksburg, West Virginia. She was baptized a member of the Reorganized Church on November 30, 1941, and faithfully attended services until her death. She was women's leader in the Clarksburg Branch for a number of years and taught the junior church school class for three years.

She leaves her husband, Stephen C. Allen; her father; three sisters: Mrs. Leila Johnson of Clarksburg; Oma Smith of Buckhannon, West Virginia; and Hattie Early of Spencer, Ohio; and one brother, William B. Simmons of Cass, West Virginia. Services were held at the Davis-Weaver Funeral Home in Clarksburg, Elder Robert L. Rodgers and Samuel Zonkers officiating. Interment was in Sunset Memorial Cemetery.

Reunion Schedule-1948

No. Dakota	Jun. 11-Jun. 13	Am. Leg. Pk., Detroit Lakes, Minnesota
E. Montana	Jun. 19-Jun. 27	Fairview, Mont.
Texas	Jun. 25-July 4	Bandera, Texas
Owen Sound & Toronto	Jun. 26-July 4	Port Elgin, Ont.
New York & Philadelphia	July 3-July 11	Deer Park
Southwest	July 3-July 11	Arkansas City, Kansas
Kansas	July 9-July 13	Brewton, Ala.
Gulf States	July 10-July 11	Delta, Colorado
W. Colorado	July 10-July 11	Winnipeg, Man.
Manitoba	July 10-July 11	Central
Missouri	July 10-July 18	Odessa, Missouri
Saskatchewan	July 10-July 18	Beaver Creek Saskatchewan
Alberta	July 19-July 26	Sylvan Lake, Alberta
Zion	July 17-July 25	Gardner Lake
Nauvoo	July 17-July 25	Nauvoo, Illinois
So. New England	July 17-July 25	Onset, Mass.
Northern California	July 17-July 25	Asilomar, Monterey, California
Flint-Pt. Huron-Detroit-Windsor	July 24-Aug. 1	Blue Water, Michigan
Kentucky & Tennessee	July 25-Aug. 1	Paris, Tennessee
Northwest	July 30-Aug. 8	Silver Lake, Washington
Chatham-London	July 30-Aug. 8	Erie Beach, Ontario, Canada
Ken. & So. Michigan	July 31-Aug. 8	Liahona Park
Mo. Valley	July 31-Aug. 8	Woodbine, Iowa
Maine	July 31-Aug. 8	Brooksville, Me.
So. California	July 31-Aug. 8	Pacific Palisades
No. & West. Michigan	Aug. 5-Aug. 15	Park of the Pines
Kirtland	Aug. 6-Aug. 15	Kirtland, Ohio
Reunion of the Ozarks	Aug. 1-Aug. 8	Racine, Missouri
Oklahoma	Aug. 7-Aug. 15	Pawnee, Okla.
W. Montana	Aug. 7-Aug. 15	Race Track, Montana
Arizona	Aug. 8-Aug. 15	Prescott, Arizona
Arkansas & Louisiana	Aug. 9-Aug. 15	Clear Fork Cp., Hot Spgs., Ark.
Minnesota & Wisconsin	Aug. 9-Aug. 16	Chetek, Wisc.
Far West	Aug. 12-Aug. 22	Stewartsville, Missouri
So. Indiana	Aug. 21-Aug. 29	Bedford, Ind.
Eastern Michigan	Aug. 14-Aug. 22	Cash, Michigan
Idaho	Aug. 14-Aug. 21	Hagerman, Idaho
Des Moines	Aug. 15-Aug. 21	Guthrie Center, Iowa
Lamoni	Aug. 15-Aug. 22	Lamoni, Iowa
S. E. Illinois	Aug. 20-Aug. 29	Brush Creek, Ill.
Eastern Colorado	Aug. 20-Aug. 29	Colorado Springs Colorado

Briefs

WARRINGTON, ENGLAND.—Seventeen Blue Bird girls participated in a service arranged especially for them on Sunday, April 18. They presented the play, "Good Samaritan," and sang, "Just As I Am." Ten of the girls were presented nestling awards by Pastor S. Dawborn. Priest S. Smyth gave the sermon. In the evening, the Blue Bird leader talked on girls' work, after which the girls presented a program and served refreshments.

A women's group was organized on Monday, May 3, under the supervision of Sister H. Dawborn; Bessie Forster was elected secretary. A message from the women of Sarnia, Canada, who had sent a parcel, was read to the group.

On May 12, Jean Dickson and Jean Alcock were baptized.

SAN LEANDRO, CALIFORNIA.—The children's department presented a program on Easter Sunday morning, after which the choir gave the cantata, "The Living Redeemer." On April 6, the women's department sponsored a rummage sale; proceeds were applied to the building fund. The women have also adopted a German family to send food and clothing to. Mother's Day was observed with a special pre-worship program.

YOUNGSTOWN, OHIO.—The first annual conference of the newly-organized Youngstown District was held on May 9 with Apostle D. Blair Jensen and District President William McCune in charge. Statistical reports of the five branches read at the business session showed an increase of twenty-four in district membership. Delegates to General Conference and district officers were elected. Recommendations for ordinations included William C. McCune, Jr., John L. Bidle, Howard L. Rhyal, Carl L. Rhyal, Frank Edward Reichard, and Glenn Elias Reichard, to the office of elder; Horace F. Reichard, William Ray Clinefelter, John F. Jordan, and Howard Lamont McDowell, to the office of priest. At the close of the business session, the young people of the district held an organization meeting and elected officers.

NAMPA, IDAHO.—Apostle R. E. Davey was in charge of the May Communion service. A special meeting was held in the afternoon at which Nancy Jane, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Talish, and Hector Lou, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donn Nippert, were blessed.

Mary A. Burlington
1510½ Jules
St. Joseph, Missouri

92367
18
h

NOW --in your own home--

You Can Hear Our Brother Elbert Tell His Wonderful Restoration Story!

Witnesses For The Restoration

written and narrated by Brother Elbert A.
Smith—recorded on unbreakable Vinylite—background music by the Stone Church choir

Now, no matter where you are—Chicago or Melbourne, Lamoni or Silver Springs, you can hear our Brother Elbert A. Smith tell his beautiful story of the Restoration. From your own phonograph, this record—WITNESSES FOR THE RESTORATION—will bring you his powerful testimony, and a striking challenge to church youth everywhere.

Written and narrated by Brother Smith against the stirring background music of our Stone Church choir, this record is filled with inspiration and spirit. His is a prophetic and historic word—a testimony for our church that should become a part of everyone of us.

RECORDED both sides

You must hear this message . . . it is directed especially to the youth of the church but every member will want to hear it. Told in his own words, it is Brother Smith's story of the Restoration Movement. It is a dignified and superb presentation.

Send for your record soon—hear this wonderful story over and over again. All you need to do is clip the coupon below and send direct to Stone Church Recordings, Herald House, Independence, Mo. Send check or money order—or if you prefer, we will charge your account and bill you later.

MUSIC by the Stone Church Choir under the direction of Paul Craig—musical theme—"The Spirit of God Like a Fire Is Burning."

UNBREAKABLE Vinylite plastic records. These records are pressed from red Vinylite and are unbreakable. Recording was done in the church's own studio in the Stone Church—records were manufactured by Muzak Corporation of America in New York.

LEAGUERS—You'll want to use this record at some special worship service. It will provide an ideal theme for prayer meetings, retreats, Zion's League banquets.

WITNESSES FOR THE RESTORATION is an inspiring word from an inspiring leader to the youth of the church.

ORDER NOW!

Send me copies of Brother Elbert A. Smith's "Witnesses For the Restoration" at $2.50 each.

I am enclosing check or money order (.....)

Please charge my account and bill (.....)

Name.....

Address.....

City..... Zone..... State.....

Stone Church Recordings

HERALD HOUSE • INDEPENDENCE, MO.

Clip This Coupon!

Photo by Marvin M. McDole

Foundations

"Whosoever heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them, I will liken him unto a wise man, which built his house upon a rock; and the rain descended, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house; and it fell not, for it was founded upon a rock."—Jesus, in Matthew 7: 24, 25.

THE Saints Herald

VOLUME 95

JUNE 19, 1948

NUMBER 25

www.LatterDayTruth.org

Look to Your Foundations

AUDITORIUM NEWS

IF YOU are interested in old houses, you will have many a happy adventure exploring them, as thousands remain standing all over the country, many open to inspection. Here are the survivors of America's romantic and historic past, still bearing the marks of the dramas, happy and tragic, that have been enacted within their walls. They are all that is left to recall the work of the builders, some of them now unknown.

Some of these old houses still stand in perfect condition—walls true, mortar solid, bricks all in place. Others, apparently built equally well, are in danger, with cracks around the windows and over the doors, and floors buckling unevenly. What accounts for the difference?

FOUNDATIONS! For some of the old builders knew their craft, and they made their foundations both deep and strong, below any possible frost line, below any drouth line. Others, not so well informed, would today see their works falling to ruin, not because of poor walls, but because of shallow foundations.

Every life is like a building. Every family and home has foundations—cultural, religious, and spiritual. A life and a home are as strong and enduring as their foundations.

GOD is our Maker, our origin, and our destiny. His Word is the foundation of our great human relationships in the church, in the state, and in the home. As the Scriptures teach us, those who are wise build their homes upon a Rock. And the Rock of human experience and life is the Word of God.

To all the splendid young people who, filled with promise and hope, are starting out their lives together, building homes, we direct this reminder and invitation. Make God a part of your home. He is your Father. Build your life around the church, its work, its social and fraternal relationships. Be sure that Christ is a daily guest in your home. So you will build upon the Rock which storms cannot shake nor destroy.

L. J. L.

IN THIS ISSUE

EDITORIAL:

The Modern Father	3
Across the Desk	4
Don't Break Your Heart	4

OFFICIAL:

Pictures Wanted	4
---------------------------	---

ARTICLES:

Will a Man Rob God? by Joseph E. Baldwin	5
This Is Faith, by Ruby Tinkham	7
A Parable for Fathers, by Harriet Glaze	8
The Guiding Hand, a poem, by Frederick A. Kunz	9
Federal Aid to Parochial Schools Viewed by Oxnam	10
On the Side of Truth, by Vida M. Fletcher	11
Other Sheep I Have, by Roy Weldon	12
Woman's Calling to Worthy Citizenship in Christ's Kingdom, by Mrs. S. A. Burgess	16
Food for Thought, by B. Mildred Nelson	17
Letters	19
Briefs	19
What Are You Planning for Fun, by Frances Hartman	20
A Memorable Experience, by Dwain L. Miller	21
Bulletin Board	22

AUSTRALIAN VISITORS. President I. A. Smith has been in the West on church business, and met Brethren Don Alberts and Hermann Peisker who have recently arrived from Australia. Their arrival at Independence was scheduled for June 15.

LIBERTY, MISSOURI. Apostle C. G. Mesley was in charge of the organization of a branch of the church at this historic city on June 6. It is in the Far West Stake area, across the Missouri River to the north of Independence. Besides Brother Mesley, Stake President Emery E. Jennings and his counselors, Orville Moffet and James Bowman, and Stake Bishop Earl Higdon and his counselor, Raymond Jensen, participated. The program began at 9:45 a.m. Elder Lloyd Siebert, who is the new pastor, made the motion for the organization of the branch. The meeting was held on the city square in Odd Fellows Hall, where future meetings will be held. Fifty people were present. This is the second branch to be organized in Clay County, whose fine citizens were so kind to the refugee church people during the persecutions of the early church. The other branch is north of Kearney.

NORTHWEST. Apostle R. E. Davey reports damage and distress in the Northwest, affecting our people. The worst loss has been in Canada, in the Frazer River valley. Members of the Aggasiz Mission have suffered losses which have not yet been calculated; most of the members are farmers; the town had been flooded. Prominent church families affected are the Taylors, Campbells, Muirheads, and others. Rosedale and Chilliwack, British Columbia, have been isolated. In Portland, few members are now known to have been affected by the floods.

Boise, Idaho, April 25 to May 9, gave good response and attention to a series of services by Apostle Davey, with a young woman baptized and two other baptisms delayed on account of illness, and others interested.

In Seattle, Arthur F. Gibbs recently closed a successful series and is now laboring in Tacoma with a good response.

James Reneau, a young missionary appointee to the Oregon District, recently held meetings in Longview and Southeast Portland with good results.

LOUISVILLE, KENTUCKY. President F. Henry Edwards and Bishop H. L. Livingston were at Louisville checking plans for the purchase of a building for the use of the branch here. There is a fine group here for which Elder James B. Welch serves as pastor. District President Chester B. Metcalf also participated in the meeting, and members there hope to have a good church home.

GOMER T. GRIFFITHS, Route 2, Willoughby, Ohio, formerly president of the Quorum of Twelve, is ill in Huron City Hospital at East Cleveland, Ohio, and requests the prayers of church members for help and recovery, according to a letter received from Sister Catherine Griffiths by the First Presidency.

BAPTISMS. From the current report of A. Orlin Crownover:

"I baptized four people during the month, one man, three women, all in their twenties. Three family circles were completed."

The Modern Father

AS WE CELEBRATE Father's Day (June 20) this year, it seems appropriate to point out that the many problems arising out of modern home life call attention to the fact that fathers are key figures in their solution, and that while we must respect the importance of the mothers, we must also call upon fathers for help. Recent magazine articles have pointed out that fatherhood is a neglected art, especially in the United States.

We have traveled far from the social order that made the father a little king and tyrant in his home. But we have gone too far in giving fathers only the responsibility of making money, and in placing all responsibility in the hands of mothers. This has proved in very many homes too great a burden for the mother, and has forced an artificial cleavage in family affairs that has been disastrous to many modern homes. We are swinging around to the belief that fathers could give a little less attention to financial success in order to help make honorable citizens of the children. It takes more than one parent to make a good home, no matter how capable the mother is.

THE PROPHET Malachi looked forward to the fulfillment of the promise that "he shall turn the heart of the fathers to the children, and the heart of the children to their fathers," lest the earth be smitten with a curse. Many homes are smitten with a curse of estrangement and misunderstanding between fathers and children, simply because fathers do not spend enough time with their children, and do not give enough opportunity for love to grow. The curse can be lifted only as fathers take up their tasks and responsibilities, and grow in mind and spirit with their children.

There was a time when the mother's responsibility for the home was so complete that she did all the shopping. Now many husbands are seen pushing grocery carts around the stores, examining goods, checking lists and prices. Once it was the mother who pushed the baby carriage, often alone. Especially since the war, young fathers have shared this task, often going alone and enjoying the company of their children. And how fortunate the home where the father is able, when the mother is tired or ill, to cook meals and take care of the baby. An article by a nurse in a popular magazine recently recommended that the father should give the baby its bath and put it to bed in the evening, not only to help the mother, but to give father and child a chance to love and understand each other. The first step toward loving a child is to take it in your arms. Here in Independence is at least one young ex-GI father who enjoys doing many services for his young daughter every day. What happy years are ahead for that girl, of play and happy companionship with "Dad." And what happiness for him, too.

THE CHURCH does not contact all fathers, of course, which is a misfortune. There are many ways in which churches can help educate fathers for their tasks. It can give attention to the problems of homes, to the responsibilities of enlightened modern fatherhood.

Few men are good fathers by mere instinct, just as few women are good mothers without study and training. Some thought and care are necessary. The church can contribute to the ideas back of good parenthood by presenting special sermons, talks, and classes. Family evenings at church bring many people there who would not otherwise be found in church. Once there, friendships are formed. The church is an educational institution for right living, and whatever it does to help the homes will strengthen its own foundations.

There was a time when Mother's Day programs contained too much fatuous adulation with no real sense behind them. Women have revolted against that sort of thing, and programs are much improved. Fathers never suffered that kind of saccharine attention, but it appears that intelligent attention is needed badly. We need to consider the problems of home life in relation to what fathers could do toward their solution.

One thing appears to be true: Modern family life is suffering from disintegration. Families fall apart before individuals are ready or strong enough to stand alone. In fact, it was never intended that individuals should stand completely alone. They always need, and should always enjoy the larger family relationships.

LOVE, loyalty, and understanding can develop only as people spend time together. This cannot be done by remote control or by writing checks, although love must still work sometimes at a distance, and checks must be written. You cannot raise a family with nothing but a fountain pen. You have to be present in person to develop love between fathers and children. Servants hired cannot substitute for a father's presence and smile. Father must spend some time at home. There is a necessity for both him and the children that he should be the fixer of broken toys, the authority on small bits of information for children, the evening companion and storyteller, and the good sport on a picnic or vacation. And, most important of all, Dad and Mother together are needed to read the Bible stories and lead the children in nightly prayer.

And for fathers who bear their share of the burden, there are treasures of happiness—treasures which too many fathers have lost while pursuing less important things in the world of affairs and in the competition of life. The church cannot reach nor reform all the fathers of the world, but it can help some of them, who will help others. L. J. L.

Editorial

Pictures Wanted

From time to time we learn about pictures of members of the priesthood and church officials, groups at reunions and at various churches, taken through the years since the reorganization of the church, and just within the last few days one of our retired ministers turned over to us some very interesting pictures, which we can place to advantage in the archives of the Graphic Arts Department. Properly catalogued and listed, they may be of use to us in years to come. We would like to suggest to members of the church having such old pictures which they do not care to retain because of the lapse of time or for other reasons, that they send them to the First Presidency, The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri, and all will be very gratefully received and proper disposition made of them.

ISRAEL A. SMITH.

Across the Desk

From a German brother, Franz Beil, dated April 29, 1948:

Dear Brother Smith: With great joy I received your words of acknowledgment. From your letter I see you have the wish to come among us sometime. For me and for the Hannoveran congregation it would be a great delight to be able to greet you in our midst. I am very thankful to you and members there in America because of the gift parcels. We really are helped by these presents as we go through this bad time of need. Please give our thanks to all members there.

With best wishes at this Whitsuntide to all people there and all the Saints.

ISRAEL A. SMITH.

When we fail, our pride supports us. When we succeed, it betrays us. —Colton.

The test of good manners is being able to put up pleasantly with bad ones.

A Counselor's Letter to Young People.

A church officer writes: "The last two marriages in which I have been invited to give counsel have been instances of member girls proposing to marry nonmember men, both of whom openly admitted flagrant violations of moral law over a period of years, even during the period of engagement with our girl members. And in neither case was our girl member concerned that the man was in one case a fornicator and in the other an adulterer. And both of these girls are above average. . . . These two experiences leave me somewhat at sea. Don't our girls (or boys) care what kind of moral characters they choose as life-long companions and parents of their children?"

PASTORS have seen many young women suffer misery and unhappiness because they married men of immoral character. During courtship, a man's personality may seem very charming, even if he is a sinner. His attentions are flattering, and the girl may have the impression that she will always be able to keep him interested and faithful to her. She may think that she has a greater power over him than others have had. But in the end, when daily association dulls her novelty and the inevitable decline of physical beauty reduces her charm for him, she will experience the hopeless feeling that comes when she knows he is spending his time with other and newer lovers. Then life becomes very bitter, especially if she has children, and she knows her unfaithful husband is spending money on other women.

PRINCIPLES AND CHARACTER are important. They are the basis of security, happiness, and peace. A man of no principles, or loose ones, rarely thinks of how he makes other people suffer. He is particularly apt to sacrifice his wife for his own pleasure. He is not mindful of his children. And when he goes philandering there is so little his wife can do about it.

There is no way to describe adequately the suffering and unhappiness of a wronged wife so that younger women will be warned and avoid the trouble. No matter what is said, some young women are always being lured and deceived by the pleasant talk and the fair promises of men of loose morals. And heartbreak is the inevitable result.

PARENTS should be responsible to teach their children the importance of morality and honor. Sometimes they honestly try and fail. If they have done their best, they are not to blame. But if they fail to try to teach their children, they bear a heavy responsibility, and they are bound to reap some of the harvest of sorrow of their children. Often they must pay for their neglect by having to undertake the support of grandchildren that wicked husbands abandon.

MARRIAGE is an investment of life. When a girl marries a man, she makes a bank deposit of time, of youth, of beauty, of personality. These are deposits she can never withdraw or use again. The only way she can realize the benefit of her deposit is to find happiness in the love, companionship, and support
(Continued on page 9.)

THE SAINTS' HERALD

Volume 95

June 19, 1948

Number 25

EDITORS: The First Presidency: Israel A. Smith, John F. Garver, F. Henry Edwards.

ASSISTANTS: Leonard J. Lea, Managing Editor; Kenneth L. Graham, Business Manager.

The Saints' Herald is the official publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, with headquarters at The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri, and is issued through the offices of Herald Publishing House, 103 South Osage Street, Independence, Missouri.

Entered as second-class matter at the post office at Independence, Missouri, under Act of March 3, 1879. Issued weekly at Independence, Missouri. Price, $3.50 per year and $1.75 for six months in advance in the U. S. A., its territories and possessions; Canada, $3.75 per year and $1.90 for six months; other countries, $4.50 per year. Notice of a change of address must be given three weeks ahead of the date that it is to become effective. Accepted for mailing at the special rate of postage provided for in section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized July 21, 1921. Printed in the United States of America.

WILL A MAN ROB GOD?

By Joseph E. Baldwin

Even from the days of your fathers ye are gone away from mine ordinances, and have not kept them. Return unto me, and I will return unto you, saith the Lord of hosts. But ye said, Wherein shall we return?

Will a man rob God? Yet ye have robbed me. But ye say, Wherein have we robbed thee? In tithes and offerings.

Ye are cursed with a curse: for ye have robbed me, even this whole nation.

Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it.—Malachi 3:7-10.

A NEGRO PREACHER walked into the office of a newspaper in Rockymont, North Carolina, and said: "Misto' Edito', they is forty-three of my congregation which subscribe fo' yo' paper. Do that entitle me to have a chu'ch notice in yo' Sadday issue?" "Sit down and write," said the editor. "I thank you."

This is the notice the minister wrote:

Mount Moriah Baptist Church. The Rev. John Walker, Pastor. Preaching morning and evening. In the promulgation of the gospel, three books are necessary: The Bible, the Hymn Book, and the Pocketbook. Come tomorrow and bring all three.—Presbyterian Advance.

This Negro preacher had a point in his newspaper notice that many church members have not learned in their Christian training as yet. They have not learned that even if the gospel is free, to take it into all the world costs money. That's why one missionary said: "I always baptize a man with his wallet in his pocket. I try to convert his pocketbook when I convert him."

Was your pocketbook converted when you were? Do you bring it with you when you come to church each Sunday? Might not we say that we have four standard books in our church—the Bible (Inspired), Book of Mormon, the Doctrine and Covenants, and the Pocketbook? A working knowledge of each is important to salvation.

Not one of you will disagree with me when I say we believe in the six principles of the gospel. I believe there are more than six—maybe one hundred and six. Anyway, we all agree that such principles as faith, repentance, baptism, etc., are essential to salvation. You believe with me that complete obedience to these is vital. We would not permit one to join the church if he said he did not believe in baptism, would we? In our church, we believe in complete obedience to the laws and ordinances of the gospel on the part of our members. At least that is our ultimate aim.

In line with this thinking, let me say that the law of tithing and the principle of stewardships are just as much a part of God's laws and principles as baptism and the laying on of hands. We would not feel we were full-fledged members if we had not been confirmed by the laying on of hands. Yet, many of us feel we are members in good standing although we have failed to obey even a part of the financial law. Why? We cannot obey the laws we like and disregard the others and still be good stewards—whether we admit it or not, we are stewards over our lives and what we have in this life.

Are you a good steward or a poor, unprofitable one? Remember the parable of the talents. The good and profitable stewards were rewarded and blessed; the slothful and unprofitable steward lost that which he had. It is our hope that we will learn to live up to the standards for stewards so that we may help build His kingdom. The blessings he has in store for all those who fully obey his laws will follow.

The Financial Law

Bishop Earl Higdon says, "The financial law is a rule of action established in religious experience dealing with man's relations to his physical possessions."

"The financial law of the church is God's law pertaining to the handling of the finances or other material possessions that he has entrusted to our care."—Handbook of the Financial Law, page 24.

In 1923, the Bishopric interpreted the financial law as follows:

Whereas, the law of God teaches that the earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof. Therefore:

- a. All men are of necessity stewards
- b. That the law of stewardship applies to each and every member of the church (Doctrine and Covenants 42:9; 70:3, and 101:2.)

Therefore be it resolved: That the order of Bishops believe it to be the duty of every member of the church to acknowledge his stewardship by complying with the law as given in the Scriptures:

- a. Filing his inventory (First financial statement)
- b. Paying his tithes
- c. Paying his surplus

- d. Making his offerings
- e. Thereafter, giving an account of his stewardship annually as provided in the law of God (annual financial statement).

God spoke very plainly to the church in April, 1909, concerning the financial law:

The church has been directed to accede to the rendition of the bishopric with respect to the temporal law; and until such heed is paid to the word which has been given, and which is in accordance with other revelations given to the church, which had been before given, the church can not receive and enjoy the blessings which have been looked for when Zion should be fully redeemed. Therefore, hearken once again unto the voice of inspiration, in warning and instruction, and conform to that which is given and receive what is awaiting the upright and the pure in heart.—Doctrine and Covenants 129: 8.

There are many who have not accepted this revelation to the extent that they obey it as a commandment of God. Nevertheless, it is a law of God and the church. It was approved by the General Conference and made a part of the Doctrine and Covenants as the mind and will of God to the church. The financial law applies to everyone in the church, no matter how old or young, rich or poor. One cannot be excused from this law any more than he is excused from obeying the principle of baptism or any other law of the church.

The first and primary function of the law is to do something for man. It develops faith in the individual. It binds man's loyalty to the church. It strikes at the heart of selfishness. It makes us share with God and our brothers. This is co-operative living which also finances his church. However, its primary function is not to bring money into the church treasury; its primary function is to develop stewards.

Stewardship

Stewardship is the foundation of the financial law. It is an attitude. It concerns itself with our attitude toward God, our fellow man, and our earthly possessions. It is recognizing that God is the supreme sovereign, the supreme owner of everything in the universe, and that man is a steward accountable to God. In the broad sense, stewardship includes our time, talents, intelligence, health, and all our material things—even life itself. The stewardship attitude gives a person a sense of trusteeship over all of life, and this is a part of our church philosophy. This stewardship attitude must begin within. At its best, it begins in the hearts and minds of those who sense their responsibility to God in every phase and activity of life. Stewardship is an individual responsibility and opportunity. Our church must wait for each of us to accept our individual responsibility as stewards before it can do anything about the stewardship business in the larger sense.

Will a Man Rob God?

In light of the foregoing, I ask the question which the prophet of old asked the people of his day, "Will a man rob God?" They probably responded as we would—"No." And God said, "Yet ye have robbed me." The puzzled people cried, "Wherein have we robbed thee?" God answered, "In tithes and offerings."

How would we as a church stand up to the test today? How would you as a member respond to this question? Will you rob God? Perhaps most Latter Day Saints would say no; yet, only one out of four is making any contribution to the general church. This includes all tithing payments and offerings made by men, women, and children—just one out of four. How would you like to start your automobile some morning and find that it was running on one cylinder out of four? How far do you suppose you could drive? Your pulling power would be extremely low, if you could go at all. The church is pulling along on one out of four—what about the other three? Are you robbing God?

An Invitatoon

"Return unto me." This is God's invitation to his people. Regardless of our sins, our disobedience, our failure to obey his commands, he stands ready to accept us if we will return. We have gone away, and we must return to God. This means admitting our sins, our failures, our disobediences, and complying with God's laws if we would return to him.

A Promise

"And I will return unto you, saith the Lord of Hosts." The promise is if we will return unto God, he will return unto us. He stands waiting for us to return. He wants us to return so he can come to us. We have our own agency and must decide for ourselves when we will return. He will not force us to return. This invitation and promise can be applied to any phase of the gospel of Christ; in this connection, we are thinking of it in regard to the financial law. God says we have robbed him. The figures of our day show it is still true. The call is to return to obeying the financial law and God will return to us. We must bring our tithes to the storehouse—pay our tithing to the bishop. Let us comply with the whole law. We read, "Prove me now herewith." God is almost daring us. You hear children, young people, and even adults say, "I dare you." We can almost hear God say, "I dare you—I dare you to return unto me. I dare you to file your inventory and pay your tithing. I dare you to comply with the financial law wholeheartedly."

Prove me now, herewith, saith the Lord of Hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven and pour you out a blessing that there shall not be room enough to receive it.

When thou art converted, strengthen thy brethren.

The words of the Master to Peter can be applied to us today. Those of us who are converted to the financial law should strengthen other members. We should help them to see the beauty, the importance, the value and the divine command in the financial

(Continued on page 8.)

www.LatterDayTruth.org

This Is Faith By Ruby Tinkham

YOU ARE MORE than familiar with the definition of faith, I know. You have read many fine articles, heard a number of carefully prepared sermons, and listened to inspired testimonies by the hundreds on this subject. But have you ever wondered what faith meant to the average man or woman who has only a limited religious and educational background? Most articles are written by people who have extensive educational experience. Most sermons are preached by ministers who have devoted their lives to understanding the complexities of human life in relation to God.

Now, for the men and women who are neither well-educated nor dedicated to the discovery and usefulness of faith—how do they make use of this quality in their everyday life?

The first woman I asked belongs to no church at all and has had very little religious experience that I know of, yet she gave me an answer that not only surprised me but made me feel humble in her presence.

She said: "When my little daughter comes to me and says, 'Mommy, may I please have a new dress for the Easter program?' I look down at her, and I know that even if I had only one dollar in my purse, I would buy her the dress she asked for. Then it is that I know how God feels toward all his earthly children, and I know, too, that if I ask him with that same feeling in my heart that she asked me and the request is right and best for us all, he will answer me. That's my faith." This came from a woman who never belonged to a church in her whole life!

THE NEXT was an old man that had been a Methodist for years and years. He gave me an answer something like this.

"I've been a Methodist for years and years and years and my whole family before me, but I'll tell you right now we're not the only ones that'll get to heaven, no siree! It's like this, I know there's a God and I know too that he's working right now here on this earth, and he'll go on workin', too. But this is my faith, I know if I do the best I kin, God will do his best, too, and everything is gonna turn out all right." Then he grinned and added, "It always has so far."

The next was a young man who was reared in a broken home and has always taken responsibility beyond the average. He has become a material success and, because he never attends any church, I was more than anxious to find out his attitude toward faith. His answer was very different from the others; but considering his background, I found it very apt, too.

His reply was: "To me faith is like self-confidence, only it goes much deeper than that. It's feeling prepared to meet any emergency at any time because you have made adequate preparation for it."

I asked, "Don't you believe in a God?"

He smiled, knowing that I feel a great reverence for my God, and answered quietly, "Yes, I believe in God, but I think he works with all men everywhere and isn't limited by the boundaries of sectarian beliefs. My faith is this—if I develop my potentialities for good, then I have the right to expect help, because God works with all men everywhere to accomplish good."

NOW, I COME to the best one of all. This time I picked a small child who had religious training with her first bottle. First I asked, "Sara, what is faith?"

She looked at me a trifle scornfully and answered, "Why, you know what faith it. It's believing in God."

I countered with, "Yes, but do you believe in God, Sara?"

She was really scornful this time. "Why, sure I believe in God. When I'm bad, he whispers and says, 'Sara, please be a good girl.'"

I loved her surety, but I had to challenge her faith, so I continued determinedly, "Yes, but you can't see him, Sara, or hear him, or feel him, can you?"

She must have felt my intensity, for she gave me a long look and then she challenged me with, "No, but I know he's there!"

I know now what faith is, and I also know what Christ meant when he said, "Except you become as a little child."

Are We On the Lord's Side?

During the last war I heard an Army Chaplain say it was not because of our superior defenses that the Japs did not take advantage of their position following the attack on Pearl Harbor, but merely the fact that the Lord did not will they should take over.

If there were ever a time when the people of this country needed to make sure they were on the Lord's side and worthy of his protecting influence, it is now. We should remember that it doesn't do any good for us to ask him to be on our side, we must make sure that we are on his side.

Many of us pray "Thy Kingdom Come," but how much do we do each day of our lives to make it a reality? If every person in this land, which was founded on the principles of freedom, were living with that thought in mind, we would need fear no force of evil.

M. ANDERSON.

A Parable for Fathers

By HARRIET GLAZE

THE YOUNG FATHER requested a son. And the One Who Hears Requests answered, "The price is high—higher than you can now guess. And there is no guarantee that the investment will yield a good return."

But the Young Father said, "I know. I will take the risk."

So the request was granted. And when the Young Father gazed down at his newborn son, he was troubled. "Is this the son for which I asked? How can I guide this small bit of humanity up to where I now stand and point the way beyond?"

Then the One Who Answers Questions gave him a Book of Rules. "This will help. Study it carefully and apply the wisdom therein with patience and love."

So the Young Father took the Book and opened it to the first page. But when he had read a little way and was just beginning to understand, Business knocked with stern knuckles upon the outer door. "Come with me. I will show you how to find the means to help your son."

"But the Book . . . may I take it with me?"

"Only if you keep it well hidden. Our task is concerned not with lofty striving. We must give ourselves wholly to the practical earning of bread."

The Father answered, "The Book says that man does not live by bread alone. So if you will allow me to take it with me, I will serve you part of every day."

And it was so. And when the Father parted from Business and returned to his home, the boy ran out to meet him, and together they partook of the bread, and the boy grew strong and tall.

THEN ON ANOTHER DAY the Father was searching in the Book when, from out the window, Pleasure called. And her voice was honey sweet. "Come dance with me. Time has swift feet, and soon you will no longer be able to enjoy the pattern of youth."

The Father went to the window and looked wistfully out at the beckoning smile of Pleasure. And then he sighed and shook his head. "I cannot join you today. I have promised to take the boy to catch fish." And he turned his back to Pleasure.

But later as he walked with his son along the bank of a stream, he felt a hand upon his shoulder, and there was Pleasure walking with them. And the boy saw her, too, and smiled and learned to laugh.

And on still another day as the Father was reading to his son from the Book, a tumult and a shouting approached. Father and son went to the door and when it was opened, they saw a great crowd of people all shouting and calling the Father by name. The leader came forward and extended his hand. "I am Fame. I have been delegated by these friends to ask you to come with us that we may place a crown upon your head and a scepter in your hand."

"May I bring my son along, too?" the Father asked.

Fame shook his head. "No man can bring another. Each must achieve the goal alone."

So the Father withdrew and closed the door slowly, and as he turned again, he saw that now his son was as tall as he. And there was a new light in the young eyes. "You should not forsake your reward because of me. I must go and bring them back." He threw his cloak about him and opened the door. "Let me depart with your blessing."

And the Father gave him his blessing and placed the Book in his hand. "Let this be your guide, even as it was mine."

The boy tucked the Book under his arm. "Do not grieve for me, Father. I shall return soon." So saying, he was gone.

THEN THE ONE Who Keeps the Accounts came to the Father with an itemized bill. And across the front in bold, golden letters were the words, "Paid in Full."

"And what of the price?" asked the One Who Keeps the Accounts. "Do you think now it was too great?"

And the Father looked along the highway at the happy throng of people led by the son who now, himself, wore the golden crown. And the Father smiled and stood a little straighter. "To see my son happy and strong leading his fellow men along the high road—for this no price is too great. I would pay it over and double again!"

Will a Man Rob God?

(Continued from page 6.)

law. If the one out of four who complied would help some of the other three, we would soon see our percentage improving.

Our task is to preach the gospel in all the world and to Zionize the church. This job is hardly possible with one out of four. We need the support of every member of the church. To establish Zion, we need stewards who are thoroughly converted to the stewardship attitude. We need members who have had their pocketbooks converted.

Do you pay tithing? Do you file your financial statement? Do you rob God? Answer these questions and put your lives in order that you may all become good stewards in the sight of God.

Why must we have enough memory to recall to the tiniest detail what has happened to us, and not have enough to remember how many times we have told it to the same person?—La Rochefoucauld.

Don't Break Your Heart!

(Continued from page 4.)

of a good and faithful husband. Those who get divorces must sacrifice a great amount of the deposit they have made in the bank of married life.

There is only one kind of safe advice that can be given to young women of the kind mentioned at the beginning of this article. Don't marry an immoral man. If you do, you will be sorry. You will suffer. You will be wronged. If he has abandoned another woman for you, he will later abandon you in favor of yet another love. An honest husband who will be true to his covenants, who will be kind, who will devote his time to you and bring his money home is the most desirable kind of companion. He may not be rich in imagination, he may not be the most pleasant kind of talker, but you know that he will give you all he has. The clever liar and philanderer, no matter how interesting, will sooner or later break your heart and leave you desolate. Avoid him as you would the devil or the plague.

BUT SOME OF YOU may ask, "Isn't it better to marry an immoral man and try to reform him, than not to marry at all?" The answer is, It is better not to marry at all than to be attached to a sinner. You don't want to be alone, but it is better to remain alone than to marry such a man and be abandoned later. Do not be discouraged. Wait a while, and you may meet a good man who is worthy of your best love and devotion. But if you have thrown yourself away on an unworthy companion, when the good man comes you cannot have him.

Principles of honor are your protection. Your church advises you to set your standards high. This is for a good reason. There has been so much sorrow for those who have failed to heed the admonition. It is only with high standards of honor and character that true and enduring happiness can be found.

L. J. L.

The Guiding Hand

A father, young and full of pride
With his new son,
Held up his hand before
The cherub's face
And said,
"Look up here at your daddy, little Paul."
The child responded to the gentle voice,
And followed with his eyes
The moving hand.

The father knows of days
Unborn
When he must guide those toddling feet
To surer steps—
Must shape with care his infant son
Into a boy of ten,
Nor cease to say,
"Look up here at your dad, young Paul."
With eagerness a lad
Will grasp his father's hand
And try to match
His stride.

And yet,
This father need not walk alone
Nor fear the pattern
He must lay.
A hand has reached to take his own—
A low voice speaks
And seems to say,
"Look up here at your Father, Son."

* * *

Dear God,
I only pray he'll hear that voice
And take your hand.

FREDERICK A. KUNZ

Federal Aid to Parochial Schools Viewed by Oxnam

[EDITOR'S NOTE: The following excerpts from an article by Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam of the Methodist Church, New York, are reproduced by permission of The Nation's Schools. The Bishop formerly was President of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America.]

FEDERAL aid to education is one issue. Public aid to nonpublic schools is another. . . . The camel's nose is under the tent. Senate Bill 2499 [in the 79th Congress] provided that "public services, other than instructional services, shall be equally available to all children attending nonprofit, tax-exempt schools selected by their parents and meeting the requirements of the state's compulsory attendance laws." School lunches and buses are the camel's nose. Lunches and buses may be considered as public health measures, but the Roman Catholic Church regards them as precedents leading to the ultimate objective. Full support of parochial education is the real objective.

I am not here attempting to deal with the fundamental issue of the separation of church and state, but rather with the more immediate question of public support of sectarian education in a democracy. The distinguished Fr. John Courtney Murray tells us, "It would be a great gain, too, if it were agreed to drop the deceptive formula, 'separation of church and state.'" But it is precisely that formula which is a statement of basic principle that we will not drop.

Contrary to Roman Catholic denials, the question of the separation of church and state is involved. The Most Rev. John T. McNicholas, Archbishop of Cincinnati, and President General of the National Catholic Educational Association, in a pamphlet entitled Federal Aid for American Education writes: "Marriage implies the right to procreate and to educate children. This right does not come from the state or from any civil or ecclesiastical authority; it comes from nature and from God." Note that he includes "ecclesiastical" as well as civil authority in that statement, but a little further on he tells parents "they must also recognize that the church, in the spiritual order, is divinely commissioned to teach their children the things of God and to prepare them for their eternal destiny." Is this the basis of the pressure brought upon the parents to send their children to parochial schools, parents who have a right to make their own decision under a right that comes from God and not from "ecclesiastical authority"?

The right of the parent to which the archbishop refers seems to be abrogated by Canon 1374 which states, "Catholic children must not attend non-catholic, neutral, or mixed schools, that is, such as are open to non-Catholics. The bishop of the parish alone 'decides' under what circumstances and with what precautions attendance at such schools may be tolerated?"

What the Roman Catholic hierarchy says in Spain is not what it says in the United States. Because of the very "unity" that emerges from its totalitarian organization, we must seek its real purpose in the practices followed by the church where it is powerful enough to realize its desires. The hierarchy in Spain does not believe in the public support of Protestant education. M. Searle Bates in his monumental study Religious Liberty, an Inquiry, states "No Spaniard can secure a certificate for leaving school or can enter the civil service unless he has official evidence of instruction in the Roman Catholic religion. . . ."

The question is not: Should a Roman Catholic parent be permitted to send his child to a parochial school? That right is recognized. The question is: Should all the people be required to support private and sectarian parochial education as well as support the public schools? There is the further question: Should the people in a democratic society determine the curriculum of the schools they support? William Solzbacher, a devout Roman Catholic, writing in Commonweal under the title "The Church and the Spanish State" said: "Spain is the only country where the words Catholic and totalitarian appear side by side in constitutional law." They are present in the Unification Law of 1937 and the Charter of Labor, 1938. "One people, one State, one leader, one faith, one Church!" If, perchance, this kind of emphasis should creep into a parochial school, would the people who pay for the instruction and who believe in democracy regard this as democratic practice?

The Roman Catholic position logically calls upon every parent to determine the education of his children, and if schools satisfactory to the views of the parents are not available, then the parents must associate themselves with other parents and establish schools to their liking, and call upon the people to support these schools. Does the hierarchy really mean this? If so, does the hierarchy honestly hold that a communist parent has the same duty and should be granted the same privileges? Is the communist father to determine the education of his child, to build communist schools, and call upon the rest of us to pay the bill? Personally I do not want public moneys to be used to support communist schools, fascist schools, Roman Catholic schools, or Protestant schools. Public money should be used to support public schools.

I do not want public support of private education that rears a child in a philosophy of materialism, in Marxian economics, in the communist theory of social development nor in an acceptance of the method of dictatorship whether temporary or permanent. In a word, I do not wish public support for private communist schools. Nor do I want public support of fascist schools where Nazi paganism or Mussolini methodology are taught. Neither do I want public funds used in parochial education where historic fact is sometimes suppressed to glorify the church and undemocratic papal pronouncements are given undue prominence. For instance in Pope Leo XIII's "Immortale Dei," "It is not lawful for the state, any more than for the individual, either to disregard all religious duties or to hold in equal favor different kinds of religion. . . ."

Public money should be used for public education.

The attempt to secure public support for parochial education raises another question. . . . Where do we stop? Is there to be a Methodist system of education? An Episcopalian? A Baptist? Are all to be supported by public funds? There are more than 700 colleges and universities related to churches, more than 500 are Protestant. What, too, of the great institutions of learning on private foundation? Anyone acquainted with the problem of budget-balancing in private education, or with the great needs and opportunities in research and service that remain unmet until private philanthropy makes funds available, knows that demands upon public treasuries would soon be mountain high. And who decides how much and when?

The real value that lies in a private system side-by-side with a public system of education is lost the moment the private system is supported by the public. There are values in experimentation, in different emphases. But does anyone think for a moment that public support will not involve public regulation at the local level much more strict than the present regulation in terms of standards?

(Continued on page 18.)

www.LatterDayTruth.org

On the Side of Truth By VIDA M. FLETCHER

The fewer the voices on the side of truth, the more distinct and strong must be your own.—Channing.

IN THE EARLY DAYS of the church, when our elders went about preaching the gospel, temperance was a distinguishing characteristic of the Saints as a people. They were known by their refusal to imbibe alcoholic beverages as well as by their opposition to slavery. It is a matter of church record that the Saints boycotted stores that sold tobacco or liquors.

Since then, the voice of the Saints has grown weaker and weaker until today very little is heard from us as a people against these evils. But the voice of the enemy rings out in challenging tones and popular appeal to the public.

Several fallacies are foisted upon us in various and insidious ways. The most popular of these untruths at the present time, is that alcoholism is a disease. Stories are written using alcoholics as the heroes or heroines and posing them as victims of illness. No blame or guilt is attached to them for becoming alcoholics—just pity and sympathy. Much ballyhoo is put out to this effect. Towns and cities are studying how to combat the disease of alcoholism; funds are being allocated to cure the afflicted, but nothing is said about stopping the supply of alcohol that makes the alcoholic. No one suggests that an abstainer from these beverages ever contracted "alcoholism."

ALCOHOLICS ANONYMOUS receives and deserves much commendation for its good work—but why attempt to cure a few of the injured at the foot of the cliff while the crowd keeps pouring over the edge of the cliff? It would be so much simpler to educate people so they do not fall off the cliff—then there would be no need for a hospital at the bottom.

Another untruth voiced by many is that prohibition was forced upon our nation by a small minority of citizens. The truth of the matter is that the Eighteenth Amendment received the most overwhelming support ever given any part of the Constitution. Before the first World War, twenty-six of the forty-eight states had adopted state prohibition. Before it went into operation in January, 1920, thirty-three states had adopted state prohibition. The total votes received for ratification were 1,309 to 240 in the state senates—eighty-four per cent for prohibition; and 1,775 to 1,025 in the state legislatures—a seventy-nine per cent vote for prohibition. It was ratified by the largest number of states and the largest percentage of states that had ever ratified any amendment to the Constitution in the entire history of our country. Fifty-six per cent of the voters favored prohibition.

Prohibition represented the expressed will of the nation, yet the wet propaganda makes the masses of the people believe that it was put across by a small minority. Repeal was put across in 1933 by the votes of only twenty-four per cent of the qualified voters of the country.

Prohibition was repealed after immense sums of money were spent in a campaign to discredit the law, to play up and even encourage violations. An untried method of amending the Constitution was used to repeal the law. With both party machines arrayed against it and determined to rush repeal through, the moral forces did not have a chance.

The latest Gallup poll reports that today thirty-three per cent of the voters say they would vote for prohibition. There are seventy-six million qualified voters; and thirty-three per cent of these means that over twenty-five million persons would now vote for the return of prohibition as against the fourteen million who voted for repeal fourteen years ago.

WE ARE TOLD that prohibition was a failure—the success or failure of any law as applied to the liquor traffic is whether or not it reduces the consumption of alcoholic beverages. Mr. Gebhardt, the liquor statistician, said that prohibition had been a failure because it had succeeded in reducing liquor consumption only thirty-five per cent. Mr. Sanford, the U. S. Government statistician, said prohibition had reduced consumption sixty-five per cent. Even according to wet figures, prohibition did more to reduce consumption than license, government monopoly, or any other system of permission has ever succeeded in doing.

A fallacy about the Eighteenth Amendment is that it took away a man's right to drink. Let us look at the matter. What is prohibition? What is its aim? Prohibition law deals with the traffic in liquor, the act of barter and sale, and the promotion of trade in order to increase consumption and reap immense profits. It does not deal with the act of drinking. It does not forbid consumption by any person. The law deals with a social act which is of public consequence. Law is for the protection of society. The use of alcohol by an individual may affect no one but the man who drinks, while the offering for sale to the public of that same glass of liquor is an act that affects the public interest and is therefore subject to governmental action.

Prohibition law does not seek the reformation of the drinker—it simply aims to protect society from the pernicious influence of a trade which is a social institution. A household might distill its own liquor as well as bake its own bread. All that prohibition means is that the public facilities for the gratification of appetite must cease.

The traffic has become an organized temptation; the saloon is not in existence simply to respond to a natural craving of the appetite but to create and stimulate appetite. It is impossible to strip the saloon of this inciting character except to put an end to its existence. Gladstone says, "It is the duty of government to make it easy to do right and difficult to do wrong."

THE STATISTICS of every state show a greater amount of crime and misery attributable to the use of beverages obtained at retail liquor stores than any other source. Alcohol increases the ranks of the poor. It forces children into industry to help in their support and thus deprives them of education and a better chance in life. Its effects upon government are direct and perilous.

Every "drunken" ballot imperils every sober man's interests. Every liquor shop is a recruiting station for any party having evil designs. The saloon is an ally of every corrupt political ring. It is ready to capture the caucus or stuff the ballot box. In many of our larger cities, it is able to dictate nominations; in more, it is able to defeat anyone who incurs its ill will. Within its sphere, it makes bad citizens faster than schools and churches can make good citizens.

It is well for Christian citizens to remember these things in this election year; the caucus is the place to work for good men and true in these days of anxiety. A thousand prayers may not prevail as much as one ballot cast for the right man at the right time and place.

Other Sheep I Have Which Are Not of This Fold

The Story of the Book of Mormon

By ROY WELDON

PART VIII

THE BOOK OF MORMON PROVES JOSEPH SMITH A PROPHET

Other sheep I have which are not of this fold; them also I must bring and they shall hear my voice and there shall be one fold and one Shepherd.—John 10: 16.

Joseph Smith Versus the Time Factor

The prophets of Biblical times were under shepherds. The test of their divinity was in the time factor.

And when this cometh to pass, (lo, it will come,) then shall they know that a prophet hath been among them.—Ezekiel 33: 33.

Behold the former things are come to pass, and new things do I declare, before they spring forth I tell you of them.—Isaiah 42: 9.

Surely the Lord God will do nothing, until he revealeth the secret unto his servants, the prophets.—Amos 3: 7.

And now I have told you before it came to pass that when it is come to pass, ye might believe.—John 14: 29.

According to the Bible in the "last days" there will be both false and true prophets.

And it shall come to pass in the last days, saith God, I will pour out of my spirit upon all flesh; and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, and your young men shall see visions, and your old men shall dream dreams; and on my servants and on my handmaidens I will pour out in those days of my Spirit; and they shall prophesy.—Acts 2: 17, 18.

When Jesus was telling his disciples about the last days, he issued a very clear-cut warning.

Take heed that no man deceive you, for many shall come in my name, saying, I am Christ; and shall deceive many. And many false prophets shall arise, and shall deceive many.—Matthew 24: 5, 6, 9.

The Scriptures indicate that God expects men to study and use intelligence and the utmost precaution before accepting or rejecting the claims of prophets.

Paul says, "Prove all things, hold fast that which is good."—Thessalonians 5: 21.

Jesus says, "For every tree is known by its own fruit."—Luke 6: 44.

And again, beware of false prophets, that come to you in sheep's clothing; but inwardly they are ravening wolves. Ye shall know them by their fruits.—Matthew 7: 19, 20.

The Book of Mormon is the fruit of Joseph Smith. As already indicated, the test of the prophets in Biblical times was the time factor.

... Then shall they know a prophet hath been among them. ... before they spring forth I tell you of them.

And now I have told you before it came to pass, that when it is come to pass ye might believe.—John 14: 29.

The revelation of truth and facts (crucifixion, resurrection, etc.) beforehand was the basis (John 13: 18, 19) upon which Jesus asked his disciples to believe in him. The same is true of the prophets. A prophet is ahead of his time or he is not a prophet.

Was Joseph Smith Ahead of His Time?

Can the fruit of Joseph Smith (the Book of Mormon) meet the acid test of the "time factor"?

Personal Experience

I was born and reared in a Latter Day Saint home. From infancy, I was taught to believe that Joseph Smith was a prophet of God just as Isaiah and Paul were prophets of God. The questioning age arrived, and suddenly it occurred to me that the reason I was a Latter Day Saint was because I just happened to have been born into a Latter Day Saint home instead of a Methodist, Mohammedan, or Buddhist home. I was a product of my environment. My religion was a mere happenstance in the lottery of life.

Let no one be afraid to examine the foundation of his religion. To question, investigate, and search into the reason of things is far more healthful, wholesome, and progressive than to accept everything without question. Columbus questioned the traditions, precedents, and concepts of his time and discovered a new world.

The balance of this lecture is the story of my personal experience in questioning the prophetic claims of Joseph Smith.

Sometime after I got the idea of questioning my religion, I noticed a news article about the discovery of an important prehistoric city in Central America. The article went on to state that Chichen Itza was the first of these cities visited and publicized to the English-speaking world by Stephens and Catherwood in 1839. Since then over 100 Prehistoric Mayan cities have been found in the jungle.

When I read this news article, I got my clue. The Book of Mormon, published nine years before Chichen Itza was found by Stephens and Catherwood, had described Central America as the center of the Nephite empire.

Nine years before Stephens and Catherwood discovered Chichen Itza, the Book of Mormon was published containing statements about great cities and population.

And it came to pass that I [Mormon] being eleven years old, was carried by my father, into the land southward, even to the land of Zarahemla; the whole face of the land having become covered with buildings, and the people were as numerous almost as it were the sand of the sea.—Mormon 1: 7.

And there began to be much peace again in the land; and the people began to be very numerous, and began to scatter abroad upon the face of the earth. Yea, and on the north and on the south, on the east and on the west, building large cities and villages in all quarters of the land.—Mosiah 11: 156.

S. C. Morley says the population of Chichen Itza was 500,000 people.¹

The Book of Mormon (1830) says that this region (Central America) was covered with buildings and the people nearly as numerous as the sands of the sea.

After a great amount of exploration and discovery in this same region, one of the scientists, Mr. Thomas Gann, tries to picture Prehistoric America.

This region now overgrown with a dense tropical forest, had been cleared and put under an intensive cultivation. Great cities had flourished on every side. Lofty pyramids, temples, and splendid palaces of cut stone, spacious plazas and courts filled with elaborately carved monuments, of strange, yet imposing dignity, market places, terraces, causeways were to be counted not by tens and scores, but by hundreds and thousands. Indeed it is not improbable that this was one of the most densely populated areas of its size in the world, during the first five centuries of the Christian era, the seat of a mighty American empire.²

Having noted that Joseph Smith was ahead of his time in translating the Book of Mormon in 1830, committed to great cities and vast populations in Prehistoric America, I determined to read the Book of Mormon very carefully and note down the numerous points upon which science and exploration might now have something to say.

I found over 400 points. These points involve various exact sciences and fields of study.

In order to apply the acid test of the time factor (Biblical test of prophets) to the fruit of Joseph Smith (Book of Mormon) it was necessary for me to read numerous scientific books, histories, and treatises. All this involved several years of fascinating investigation as well as two thrill-packed trips into Mexico and Central America, (nearly 20,000 miles of travel) in order to study and photograph at first hand the archaeological evidence pertaining to the Book of Mormon.

Briefly, we present a few of the numerous points above mentioned and the evidence pertaining to each.

The Four Brothers

The Book of Mormon tells us that the Hebrew colony from Jerusalem (600 B.C.) was led by four brothers (Nephi, Sam, Laman, Lemuel). See 1 Nephi 1: 47-55, 90-95.

From the findings of anthropologists and explorers, none of which were available to Joseph Smith in 1830, we present a few excerpts.

Lewis Spence says, "The great Kiche and his three brothers, according to the Mayas, led the first people to Southern Mexico."³

Mr. Brinton says:

The Tupis of Brazil claim a descent from the four brothers. The fourfold division of the Muyscas of Bogota was traced back to four chieftains created by their hero God Negumsteba.⁴

Hardly a nation on the continent but seems to have had some vague tradition of an origin from four brothers, to have at some time been led by four leaders or princes, or in some manner to have connected the appearance and action of four important personages with its earliest traditional history.—Ibid., page 94.

From Bancroft's works we learn that the Popol Vuh told the story of the four brothers.

Now it came to pass that the time of the death of Balam-Quitze, Balam Agab, Mahueutah, and Igi-Balam drew near. . . . Then they called their sons and daughters and their peoples around them to receive their last counsels. . . .

Thus died and disappeared on Mt. Hacavitz, Balam-Quitze, Balam Agab, Mahutucuh and Elquin Balam, these first men who came from the east from the other side of the sea. Long had they been here when they died; and they were very old, and surnamed the "Venerated" and the "Sacrificers."⁵

Youngest Brother Becomes Prophet and First King (Book of Mormon)

Rivero and Tschudi Tersherdi say:

Peru was populated about 500 years after the deluge. Its first inhabitants flowed in abundantly toward the Valley of Cuzco, conducted by four brothers, Ayar-Manco-Topa, Ayar-Cache-Topa, Ayar-Auca-Topa and Ayar-Rica-Topa, who were accompanied by their sisters and wives. The youngest of the brothers who according to the tradition was at the same time the most skillful and hardy.⁶

Mr. Baldwin says:

The youngest of these brothers assumed supreme authority, and became the first of a long line of sovereigns.⁷

The Liahona

The youngest brother, Nephi, received from the Lord a ball with spindles called Liahona (compass). With it, Nephi directed the course of the colony's journey to America. (Alma 17: 71-77.)

Mr. Bancroft says:

According to the Quiches' traditions, the primitive portion of the Nahoas, or ancestors of the Toltecs, were in a distant east, beyond immense seas and lands. . . . The supreme command was in the hand of a chieftain, whom history calls Qyetzalcohuatl, that is to say, "Lord par excellence." To his care was confided the holy envelope, which concealed the divinity from the human gaze, and he alone received from it the necessary instructions to guide his people's march.⁸

White Race

The Book of Mormon describes the Nephites as a white and delightful people and the Lamanites as a dark, lazy race who lived in tents and hunted beasts in the forest. (Enos 1: 29-34.)

Daniel G. Briton says:

Just as, in Mexico, the natives attributed the erection of buildings, the history of which had been lost, to the white Toltecs, the subjects of Quetzalcoatl, so in Peru various ancient ruins, whose buildings had been lost to memory, were pointed out to the Spaniards as the work of a white and bearded race who held the country in possession long before the Incas had founded their dynasty.⁹

In the state museum at Merida, Yucatan, there are ancient pictographs showing red men bowing down to white men.

H. H. Bancroft says, "From the Popol Vuh. . . . All seem to have spoken one language, and to have lived in great peace, black men and white men together."¹⁰

The Great Wall of Peru

According to the Book of Mormon, there were great wars between the dark, barbarous Lamanites and the white, cultured Nephites. From among the Nephites there arose a great military genius by the name of Moroni, who fortified the line between the two nations (Alma 22: 8-14).

This line was fortified "from the West Sea, running by the head of the River Sidon."

It should be a matter of more than passing interest that 103 years after the Book of Mormon was published, the world should be amazed by the discovery of a great prehistoric Maginot line in America.

Mr. Robert Shippie, aviator archaeologist for the National Geographic discovered the Great Wall of Peru in 1933. This wall runs from the Pacific Ocean (West Sea) by the head of Santa River.¹¹

In the National Geographic for January, 1933, are several pictures of this great wall which runs unbroken for forty miles at one place. The Book of Mormon says the line was fortified, "from the West Sea, running by the head of the River Sidon." It is significant that this great fortified line should be found running from the Pacific Ocean by the head or delta of the River Santa in Peru. The Book of Mormon says the Lamanites were lazy, lived in tents, and hunted for a livelihood. If this were true, no archaeological remains of consequence should be expected in the zones occupied by them. The great wall in Peru is a line between two archaeological zones. The zones south of the wall show only a crude (Lamanite) archaeology, while to the north of the wall we find the Nephite regions of high culture.

The Book of Mormon says considerable about their forts, which were constructed with towers and surrounded by moats (Alma 21: 170; 22: 1-7).

American archaeological expeditions to Peru (1915, 1916) revealed that the prehistoric fortifications were built with salient and re-entrant angles to permit crossfire. Dry moats were also found.¹²

Elephants

After the Book of Mormon was published in 1830, a great deal of fun was made of it because it described a prehistoric race in America who used elephants and other huge beasts in their industries.

And they also had horses, and asses, and there were elephants, and cureloms, and cumoms; all of which were useful unto man, and more especially the elephants, and cureloms, and cumoms.—Ether 4: 20-22.

The early elders of the church could not meet the sarcasm and criticism directed at them by their enemies because of elephants as well as numerous other items mentioned in the Book of Mormon.

Time and exploration have changed the concept about elephants as it has other concepts. Of the great La Brea tar pits, deathtrap of prehistoric beasts, near Los Angeles, Mr. E. Richmond Thomas says:

Between the years 1906 and 1913, out of the black night of the tar, were brought imperial elephants, mastodons, saber-toothed tigers, camels, bisons, ground sloths . . . and extinct beasts in skeletal form almost intact.¹³ (Now on exhibit in Los Angeles Southwest Museum in Los Angeles.)

Mr. Nadaillac says:

The first Americans too were contemporary with gigantic animals which, like their contemporaries of Europe, have passed away never to return. They had to contend with the mastodons, the megarithium, the mylodon, the elephant, with a jaguar larger than the present day and a bear more formidable than that of the caves.—Prehistoric America, page 15.

Horses

In addition to the point about elephants, the science of paleontology has come to the aid of the Book of Mormon on another of the numerous points previously mentioned.

The Book of Mormon versus horses involves an episode which is a little humorous if not dramatic.

Forty years after the Book of Mormon was published (1870), one of the most determined enemies of Joseph Smith (Beadle) proposed once and for all to dispose of the Book of Mormon and Joseph Smith.

Mr. Beadle said:

Now your prophet says the Nephites landed in America 600 years before Christ, and the last of them perished about 500 A.D. and all this time they had used the horse and the ass. Now any history of America will show that the horse was completely unknown to the Indians until brought here by the Spaniards.¹⁴

Mr. Beadle's book had hardly started to roll off the presses in St. Louis, Missouri (1870) before his horse proof kicked the wrong way on him. The science of paleontology had commenced to unearth skeletons of prehistoric horses in America.

The American Encyclopedia (article—"horse") now says:

Its fossil remains (horse) have been so frequently found, especially in the southern and western states, and in South America and have been so carefully examined by competent paleontologists, that no doubt can remain of the former existence of the horse on the American continent, at the same time with the mastodon, and that man was probably his companion.

Harnessing Giant Extinct Beasts

In a previous lecture (Fine Workmanship) comment was made as to how the prehistoric Peruvians cut and moved the huge blocks of stone.

Of the fortress of Saschuaman near Cuzco, Stephen D. Peet says, "The largest stone in the fortress has a computed weight of 361 tons."¹⁵

It would take nine freight cars to carry the weight of this one stone. At Tiahuanaco and also at Ollantaytambo there are huge stones computed to weigh 200 tons or more which, it is claimed, were transported as far as seventeen miles over mountainous country.¹⁶

In 1945 my brother Walter Weldon, and I, after an arduous mountain hike, visited and photographed the largest single ancient relic yet found in North America. It is a stone idol estimated to weigh not less than 300 tons. It is located in a remote, uninhabited mountain region about seventy-five miles from Mexico City.

The Book of Mormon says the elephants and the cureloms and cumoms were especially useful to them. It says further, "And they did make all manner of tools with which they did work their beasts." (See Ether 4: 20, 21, 75.)

In an article entitled, "The Dinosaurs of the Southwest," Samuel Hubbard, curator of archaeology at the Oakland, California, Museum shows rock pictures (Travel Magazine, October, 1929) of Imperial elephants, mammoths, and dinosaurs which prove that prehistoric Americans had a knowledge of these beasts. (Found in the gorge of Hava Supa River in Arizona.)

In a summary of explorations recently carried on by Dr. Byron Cummings, head of the department of Archaeology of the University of Arizona, and Dr. Mark Harrington of the Los Angeles Southwest Museum, Mr. G. K. Spencer says of paintings found in Gypsum Cave and other caves, "Some of the drawings, made with colors, the weather of ages has not erased show huge palanquins on great beasts which somewhat resemble our elephants. They may have been great sloths, but they tend to indicate that the ancient men had tamed some of the bigger animals."¹⁷

Giants in Prehistoric America

The Book of Mormon says the first people who came to America (Jaredites) from Tower of Babel were "large," "mighty" and of "great stature." (See Ether 6: 16, 44, 73, 99.)

Bancroft says, "The Quinames or giants are mentioned as the first inhabitants of Mexico."¹⁸

Mr. Charles Holloway describes an archaeological find in the state of Sonora, Mexico, in December, 1930:

Five large skeletons, the first evidences that a race of supermen once roamed this vast wasteland, were unearthed today by an international expedition of scientists.¹⁹

Need we remind our readers that this first discovery of skeletons of giants came a full 100 years after the Book of Mormon had told of "large" and "mighty" men of "great stature."

This is just one more of the parade of points which proves that Joseph Smith was ahead of his time. This is just another instance of how the fruit of Joseph Smith (The Book of Mormon) meets the Biblical test for those who claim to be prophets (Time Factor).

The discovery of giant bones above mentioned stimulated further exploration in the same region. Stewart Robertson in the magazine, Family Circle, for May 13, 1938, shows pictures and describes the discoveries of Paxton Hayes.

The pictures show mummies of giants over seven feet tall which have blonde hair.

Highways

And it came to pass that there were many cities built anew, and there were many old cities repaired, and there were many highways cast up, and many roads made, which led from city to city, and from land to land, and from place to place.—4 Nephi 3: 8.

F. A. Stahl says:

The Spaniards found throughout the empire (Incan) a system of highways in which the engineering difficulties overcome were worthy of a Goethals, mighty chasms were spanned, deep crevices walled, mountains tunneled, passageways cut through solid rock, drifting sands overcome, morasses bridged, and some of these great roads, despite the corroding influence of the conquerors, still exist.²⁰

Eunice R. Blackburn says, "Some of the old Mayan roads, built 1500 years ago, still serve for local transport and for automobiles."^{20a}

The Book of Mormon says a great deal of commerce and trade were carried on over these highways.

Gregory Mason says, "There were lovely turquoise inlays in Peruvian temples while the nearest turquoise deposit now known is 2,800 miles away at Santa Fe, New Mexico."²¹

Hyatt Verrill says, "Objects of red pipestone, which occurs only in the vicinity of the Great Lakes, are found in ancient graves as far south as Chile."²²

Cement

And there being but little timber upon the face of the land, nevertheless the people who went forth became exceeding expert in the working of cement: therefore they did build houses of cement, in which they did dwell.—Helaman 2: 7.

The finest specimen of cement the author has seen in Mexico was excavated by the Mexican government at Tula in 1944. The cement is on the interior of the wall which surrounds the pyramid. Mr. J. Alden Mason in his article, "The Egypt of America" in the Journal of the American Museum of Natural History for July and August of 1928, also comments on cement at Tula. Mr. Nadaillac describes highways with a layer of cement two inches thick as well as other constructions of cement.²³

Astronomy

According to the Book of Mormon, before Christ was born, the ancient Americans were so far advanced in their knowledge of astronomy that they knew it was the earth that moved and not the sun.

For sure it is the earth that moveth and not the sun.—Helaman 4: 62.

Although Galileo constructed a telescope in the year A.D. 1581, the earth's rotation was not positively proved until Bradley discovered the aberration of light in A. D. 1727.²⁴

There was no scientific basis for a statement in 1830 that the ancient Americans 2,000 years ago knew it was the earth that moved and not the sun. It was not until nearly 100 years after the Book of Mormon was published that archaeologists dug into the great mound at Chichen Itza known as "El Caracol" (the Snail) and discovered the now famous Mayan astronomical observatory.

Egyptian Hieroglyphics

The very first point of the many points by which the Book of Mormon can be tested on the "time factor" is found in the first verse in the Book of Mormon.

I, Nephi, having been born of goodly parents, therefore I was taught somewhat in the learning of my father. . . . therefore I make a record of my proceedings in my days; yea, I make a record in the language of my father which consists of the learning of the Jews and the language of the Egyptians.—1 Nephi 1: 1.

Mormon and his son, Moroni, the last writers in the Book of Mormon also commit the book to the existence of Egyptian hieroglyphic writings in ancient America.

And now behold, we have written this record according to our knowledge in the characters which are called among us, the reformed Egyptian, being handed down and altered by us, according to our manner of speech.

But the Lord knoweth the things which we have written, and also that none other people knoweth our language, and because that therefore none other people knoweth our language, therefore he hath prepared means for the interpretation thereof.—Mormon 4: 98-101.

The Columbia Encyclopedia (1945) in defining the word hieroglyphic says:

A type of writing used in ancient Egypt; because of the similarity to Egyptian hieroglyphics of inscriptions found in Crete (of Minoan civilization), in northern Asia Minor (Hittite), in Mexico and Central America (Maya, Aztec, and Toltec), and on Easter Island, these pictographic styles are called hieroglyphic.²⁵

Two of the most celebrated modern students of hieroglyphics are H. J. Spinden and Friedrich Hrozný (of Praha), who writes in German and French.—Ibid.

Mr. Nadaillac says, "There is a very distinct resemblance in some of the hieroglyphics to those of 'Egypt.'"²⁶

F. A. Mitchell Hedges says:

The modern theory is that the Mayas appeared in Central America some time between 1,000 B.C. and the Christian era, and that their civilization was derived from Egypt, from which they come across the vast Pacific. The points of resemblance between the Maya and Egyptian civilization are too numerous and peculiar to be explained by some imaginary impulse in all prehistoric people to develop along the same line.²⁷

Webster's New International Dictionary says:

Hieroglyphic 1—A sacred character; a character in the picture writing of the ancient Egyptians, or by extension of other people, as the Mexicans, etc.²⁸

Funk and Wagnalls New Standard Dictionary says:

Hieroglyphic 1—A picture writing (literally a sacred writing); primarily designating, especially in the plural, the picture writing of the ancient Egyptians; hence any kind of writing in which the figures of objects take the place of conventional designs, as in that of the Chinese, Aztecs,²⁹

The first Mayan city (Chichen Itza) was not explored and publicized to the world until nine years after the Book of Mormon was published. Quirigua, in Guatemala, which abounds in Egyptian influence (hieroglyphic inscriptions, obelisks, Egyptian faces, symbols) was not discovered until 1845.

It is remarkable that the Book of Mormon should commit itself to Egyptian influence and Egyptians' writings here before they were discovered. Before the hieroglyphics were found, the Book of Mormon said (as quoted above) that the Egyptian had been altered by them and no other people could read their language. While progress has been made in deciphering the date glyphs, the hieroglyphic writing itself continues to remain undeciphered.

In conclusion, I desire to bear my testimony. In this article and previous articles, it has been possible to present only a small fraction of the hundreds of points and the supporting facts from numerous fields of science and research. It is my testimony that not as much as one single point in the Book of Mormon needs to be revised to meet the facts of subsequent discovery. In contra-distinction, the scientists have been under the necessity of continuous revision.

Mr. Nadaillac says:

America does not stint her surprizes for those who study her ancient history. . . . Here, too, we are in the presence of nameless people, of races without a written history; and to add to our difficulties, new discoveries are daily made, upsetting preconceived hypotheses, breaking down earlier theories, and completely destroying what had appeared to be the best founded conclusions.³⁰

Over 100 years after the Book of Mormon was published, Mr. F. A. Mitchell Hedges said, "The entire scientific conception of the aboriginal races of Central America and a large portion of South America will have to be revised."³¹

There can be only one answer for such a marvelous array of facts. Hyatt Verrill, a widely known archaeologist gives us the answer. I wrote a letter to Hyatt Verrill about the Book of Mormon. Mr. Verrill responded very kindly and at some length. Dated June 27, 1946, at Lake Worth, Florida, his letter has this to say about the Book of Mormon:

My archaeological studies convinced me that the Book of Mormon was inspired, for it contained many archaeological and historical facts which were absolutely unknown at the time it was written.

Hyatt Verrill judges the Book of Mormon to be genuine and authentic because of the "time factor."

This same factor is winning additional recognition, and irrevocably the day must come when this book will take its place beside the Bible as one of the great books of all time.

Napoleon Hill says:

It was faith which revealed to Joseph Smith fragmentary evidences of a civilization which preceded the American Indians on this continent at least a hundred years before positive evidence of such a civilization was unearthed on the North and South American continents. Incidentally, the revelations wrought by his faith led to his assassination at the hands of a mob whose leaders resented this modern day revelation of "miracles" through faith, thus indicating how doggedly mankind has fought all who dared to turn the spotlight of understanding on the principle of faith.³²

Henry A. Wallace, former vice-president of the United States, said in an address before the New York National Book Fair in New York City:

Of all the American religious books of the nineteenth century, it seems probable that the Book of Mormon was the most powerful. It

(Continued on page 18.)

Woman's Calling to Worthy Citizenship

In Christ's Kingdom By Mrs. S. A. Burgess

WHAT DOES WOMEN'S WORK in the church mean to me? First of all, it means marching victoriously in God's kingdom. As a church woman, a mother, a wife, and a citizen of this choice nation, problems of personality, home, family, church, and community life frequently loom up so big, so complex that my own small efforts are entirely inadequate. Alone, I am incapable of solving these problems. But when I know hundreds of women in Independence, Kansas City, Lamoni, Detroit, Canada, all over the organized church are thinking, praying, and attempting to apply our own peculiar Zionick yardstick to determine life values in these problems, I am enriched with fresh spiritual and mental power. I can go forward in courage and fresh purpose. When I can catch the vision of all women of the church striving together with God to meet the ever-present exigencies of woman's work in the home, the church, and the world, I know if we walk close together and close to our Lord, eventually he will enable us to live victoriously.

I had many wonderful early impressions of organized women's work; I can remember that, no matter where we were living (wherever father's church appointment led), mother cared for the sick, fed families in emergency or need, and often contrived whole wardrobes for a brood of children whose mother was chronically ill. Wherever possible, she shared these labors with older women of the branch, often organizing in relays for service over long periods in a home. I can remember her visiting homes, selling church books and publications, even collecting funds as assistant bishop's agent. Yet she ever felt the challenge of

Mrs. S. A. Burgess has been an active member of the Women's Council for a number of years. She is a graduate of Cornell University in New York, where she received her Bachelor of Arts Degree; later she took her Master's Degree in psychology and education at Clark University. She taught Latin and German in Lamoni High School. While in Lamoni, she met and married Samuel A. Burgess, who has served the church faithfully in many ways and is at the present time research assistant to the First Presidency. Mrs. Burgess has many talents and has given of them generously to the church, which takes first place in her life.

She is well known to church members because of her literary ability, having written numerous articles and a number of quarterlies. She and her husband were co-authors of the Centennial Pageant of 1930, and also of twenty-six weeks of church history broadcasts over KMBC. She and her daughter Eveline have written several plays together. Talented in music, in her early childhood, she, her brother, and their missionary parents composed what was known as the Chase quartet. Later she often did solo parts with the Stone Church Choir and in oratorio. Always a friend to the young women of the church, she was the founder and leader of the Temple Builders. For several years, she gave valuable leadership to the women of Zion.

Mrs. Burgess is especially proud of her two talented daughters, Eveline and Florence (Mrs. Dan Belcher), and her little granddaughter, who is a new addition to the family. A woman of high spiritual qualities, a loyal and devoted Saint, a sincere friend, a helpful worker, and a charming hostess, she is considered one of the outstanding women of the church.

preparation for better service. She was always taking some course: recreational leadership in the branch, normal courses in Bible and Book of Mormon, and even literary courses. The women under her stimulus were always studying, as well as serving the needy and making money for the branch when necessary. I grew up with an all-around picture of women's work.

THEN CAME THE DAY when Sister Ruth Smith (the late Mrs. Frederick M. Smith) asked me, a young married woman, to head the young women's department. My contacts with the fine general executive board of that day and the long letters from "Sister Ruth," in which she revealed her idealism and progressive vision for women of the church and the world, gave me great inspiration and an enlarged concept of goals ahead.

Thus an early idea of the importance and dignity of woman's calling in the gospel plan and "Sister Ruth's" vision of untried possibilities and challenges still ahead for the women of our church prepared me to accept the call to what seemed an impossibly large task in women's work. Eventually I was able to center my time and energy almost exclusively in that particular field.

As in every department of kingdom-building, the field is ripe to the harvest and the laborers all too few. But great blessings come to us if we enter into this task in prayerful humility, looking to our Lord for strength and wisdom. It gives me much encouragement to see so many younger women entering into their stewardship conscientiously and intelligently.

Never was woman's responsibility greater in the home, the church, and the world. Every day and every moment seem filled with possibilities for good and for evil, and often woman must make the choice for her husband and family as well as for herself. Our lives, to be at all endurable in this fast-moving age, must be conditioned in stability, peace of mind, the long view. There is scarcely a magazine anywhere which does not remind women of this day that these boons are in her hands to bestow upon or to deny her family. As never before, discoveries in child psychology are emphasizing the stark necessity of a right start in the life of the child. They strongly reiterate that the first two or three years will establish the child in mental health or ill-health, in a well-adapted or maladjusted personality, in right trends or twisted patterns of living. All agree that the best equipped institution with the most expert personnel cannot equal a wholesome hour with an intelligent mother's love and care. Medical authorities are challenging us with the need of safeguarding the health of our husbands against increased stresses of more and more complex living. They call attention to the higher and earlier mortality rate of men and the predominance of middle-aged and elderly widows in our society. They urge greater care, more frequent medical checkups, a less demanding schedule with wholesome recreation, and—above all—relaxation and peace in the home.

THIS BRINGS US to woman's greatest task—making the Latter Day Gospel a reality in her home. Even though marriage be founded on faith in Christ and his church and although both husband and wife are firmly grounded in those spiritual convictions to be found in the church, still upon the wife and mother rests the major responsibility for making religion a vital force in the home. She must be equipped mentally and spiritually to interpret the children's everyday experiences in terms of Christ's love and his purposes for them. She must contrive to make it easy for each family member to do his or her job in the branch. Especially must she support her husband in his priesthood work—the same sort of moral support that is often typified by reference to the elders of Israel holding up the hands of Moses at a critical time of his ministry. When I have been faithful in this holy task, when I have striven prayerfully and devotedly in day-by-day selfless endeavor toward higher levels of thought and life in the home, the diverse and complex problems of family living often dissolved themselves in a united higher motivation for Christ.

May we see today more clearly than ever before the great task to which God has called us. May we, even as Emma a century ago, become an elect womanhood, answering God's call and going forward in love and fellowship to present a united front against the evils that beset our homes and families in this age. May we study and pray and work together and learn from each other until we attain spiritual maturity, until our homes and our lives radiate the gospel light to the world around us. May we, as women of Christ's church, progress to a worthy and effectual citizenship in his kingdom.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

BY B. MILDRED NELSON

Instructor in Nutrition, Extension Department, Ames, Iowa

A PART of this meat-wheat-egg saving campaign is the choice of less expensive cuts of meat. All of us know how to make dozens of dishes using hamburger or just plain ground meat. It's one of our most versatile foods.

But have you asked for a chuck roast lately, or a flank steak, rolled flank, or flank cubes; a heel of round, a hind shank, rump or rolled rump roast, plate, rolled plate, or short ribs; brisket, or corned beef, cross-cut fore shank, knuckle soup bone, arm pot roast, arm steak, English cut, rolled neck, or boneless neck?

Believe it or not, they all come off an ordinary beef carcass. You may not find them all at your butcher's, but some of them will be there—enough to make it worth-while to ask.

Of course, most of them have to be cooked with moist heat, because they're less tender cuts. But they're tasty and nutritious when done.

We especially like to stuff a flank steak with dressing and cook it in a covered roaster with plenty of moisture or in a pressure sauce pan. Another favorite is chuck pot roast with vegetables popped in just in time to get them tender at serving time. And there's nothing much less expensive or better tasting than flank or brisket cubes in a beef and vegetable stew.

HAS IT EVER OCCURRED to you that we usually price foods as we do paintings, according to their æsthetic value, rather than according to their nutritive quality? Some of our cheapest foods carry the most in real value. Many of those we have learned to like the best are the least nutritional.

Take liver, for example. As much as we talk about the virtues of liver, I know some of you won't touch it, even though it does cost much less than a steak. But maybe you would like to know what it has that other meats lack. In supplying protein and calcium, it ranks along with muscle meats. But when it comes to phosphorus, iron, vitamin A and riboflavin, it outranks them all. An average serving will supply nearly one third more phosphorus, four to six times as much iron as muscle meat, 19,200 units of vitamin A value (against none for the muscle meats), more thiamin than any of them but lean pork, nearly ten times as much riboflavin, and two to seven times as much niacin as the others. It even supplies some vitamin C under some circumstances.

And strangely enough, pork liver, which we often ignore in the market because of its "strong flavor" and which sells most cheaply, is even better nutritionally than beef or calf. Cook it slowly. Then serve it with a tart gravy or sauce and a few onions; the flavor will be quite satisfactorily masked, and the family will learn to enjoy it.

Right along with liver in real value is heart. It doesn't have the vitamin A value, only about one half as much iron, one third as much riboflavin, and less than half as much niacin and vitamin C. It gives a little more calcium, twice as much thiamin, and some vitamin C. All in all, it out-classes muscle meats tremendously, but doesn't quite reach the high standard set by liver. Either is a good buy for your money.

HAVE YOU NOTICED the waxed vegetables that are in the fresh fruit and vegetable section of your grocery stores these days? Rutabagas and turnips, some parsnips, sweet potatoes, and other root vegetables are coming that way now. Even though waxing vegetables wasn't started with the thought of helping Europe, it is saving huge quantities of food.

The wax is a tasteless, odorless product that saves for the dinner table the moisture, flavor, and food value that formerly escaped into the grocery store or storage bins. It even protects the vegetables from some of the diseases and decay that formerly attacked and wasted them. You'll get more for your money if you buy the waxed ones. Even the grocer makes money by handling waxed vegetables, for it saves the huge storage and transportation losses he used to have.

And several of the root vegetables are excellent buys now. Rutabagas furnish extra vitamin C and A. Sweet potatoes are excellent sources of vitamin A, but they are a little expensive. Turnips add variety and several vitamins and minerals. You get the most good from turnips when you eat the tops, too. Whichever you choose, don't pass the waxed ones by.

Other Sheep I Have Which Are Not of This Fold

(Continued from page 15.)

reached perhaps only one per cent of the United States, but affected this one per cent so powerfully and lastingly, that all the people of the United States have been affected.¹⁸

Surely the Lord God revealed his secret of ancient America to his servant the prophet, Joseph Smith (Amos 2:7).

Jesus said, "And now I have told you before it come to pass that when it is come to pass ye might believe."—John 14:29.

Before it came to pass that the facts were known about ancient America, the Lord revealed the entire story to Joseph Smith that the world might have reason and faith to believe the rest of the work of Joseph Smith and the prophets of his line which occupy after him.

To Joseph Smith was not only revealed the secret of ancient America but the secret of future America—A Zion, a social order based upon the gospel of Jesus Christ where regenerated men and women gather together to build a regenerated social order. To this end, the Lord restored to the earth through his servant Joseph Smith, the Old Jerusalem Gospel and Church complete with twelve apostles, prophets, and with the gifts of the spirit, as they were in the church Jesus established in New Testament times.

I questioned the work of Joseph Smith and discovered the biggest, most satisfying thing in my life. I invite you to do the same.

¹⁸S. G. Morley, Chichen Itza—An Ancient American Mecca.

¹⁹Thomas Gann, Ancient Cities and Modern Tribes, page 53.

²⁰Lewis Spence, Myths of Mexico and Peru, page 75.

²¹Daniel G. Brinton, Myths of the New World, page 101.

²²Bancroft, Native Races, Volume 3, pages 53, 54.

²³Rivero and Tschudi, Peruvian Antiquities, page 52.

²⁴Baldwin, Ancient America, page 264.

²⁵Bancroft, Native Races, Volume 3, page 270.

²⁶Daniel G. Brinton, American Hero Myths, page 188. (Quoted from Paul M. Hanson's Jesus Christ Among the Ancient Americans.)

²⁷H. H. Bancroft, Native Races, Volume 5, page 547.

²⁸Robert Shippie, "Air Adventures in Peru," National Geographic for January, 1933.

²⁹Hiram Bingham, "Further Explorations in the Land of the Incas," National Geographic for May, 1916.

³⁰E. Richmond Thomas, "Death Trap of Prehistoric Beasts," Travel Magazine for November, 1934.

³¹Beadle, "Mysteries and Crimes of Mormonism," page 77 (Published in St. Louis in 1870).

³²Stephen D. Peet, Ancient Monuments and Ruined Cities, Volume 4, page 456.

³³C. Reginald Enoch, Secrets of the Pacific, page 211.

³⁴G. K. Spencer, Ancient Cities of America's Gobe (report of excavations by Dr. Byron Cummings and Dr. Mark Raymond Harrington).

¹⁸Bancroft, Native Races, Volume 1, page 670.

¹⁹Charles Holloway, "Scientists Find Trace of Mexican Giant Race," Oakland Tribune for December 13, 1930.

²⁰F. A. Stahl, In the Land of the Incas, page 19.

²¹aEunice R. Blackburn, "Primitive Methods in Use in Yucatan," Education for December, 1939.

²²Gregory Mason, Columbus Came Late, page 279.

²³Hyatt Verrill, Old Civilizations of the New World, page 26.

²⁴Nadaillac, Prehistoric America, pages 349, 368.

²⁵*American Encyclopedic Dictionary*, page 307.

²⁶*The Columbia Encyclopedia* (1945), compiled and edited by Columbia University; Clarke F. Ansley, editor-in-chief.

²⁷Nadaillac, Prehistoric America, page 328.

²⁸F. A. Mitchell Hedges, London Daily Mail for March, 1924.

²⁹*Webster's New International Dictionary*, Second Edition, unabridged (1947).

³⁰*Funk and Wagnalls New Standard Dictionary* (1947).

³¹Nadaillac, Prehistoric America, page 260.

³²F. A. Mitchell Hedges, Seattle Post-Intelligencer (Quoted from Harold I. Velt's The Riddle of American Origins, page 4.) (September 7, 1930.)

³³Napoleon Hill, The Law of Success, Volume 2, page 145. Published by Ralston Society, Meriden, Connecticut.

³⁴Henry A. Wallace, New York Times, November 5, 1937.

Federal Aid to Parochial School Viewed by Oxnam

(Continued from page 10.)

Is a Jew to pay taxes for the support of Roman Catholic parochial education when he believes in some quarters the emphasis is of such a nature as to contribute to anti-Semitism? Such matters would sooner or later be in the courts. Is it not the course of wisdom to maintain our right to private education by supporting that education privately? All of us, Roman Catholic, Protestant, and Jew, enjoy freedom in this land. It should not be jeopardized by the demand for public support. There is no state church here. The people who love the church support it. There is a public school here, and the public supports it. That is as it should be. Let parochial education find support among those who want it. Let it contribute the character it professes to produce. In other lands the desire for power and property has made the church one of the greatest land-holders of the nation, and well-nigh dominant politically. We do not want religious division here. We want neither clericalism, nor anti-clericalism. We want Americans who believe in democracy, respect each other, and maintain our liberties. This attempt to win public support for parochial education is ill-conceived, will divide us, and must be defeated.

www.LatterDayTruth.org

LETTERS

Our Sanitarium

Prior to my stay in the Independence Sanitarium, I had never felt any urge to become a nurse. But since spending two weeks there, under such excellent care and in that pleasant atmosphere, I realize that there is a real difference in nurses trained at the Sanitarium and those trained in other hospitals. Had I been a patient there when I was younger, I would surely have been motivated to consider taking nurse's training at the Sanitarium. One nurse (after having some training at another hospital) told me how much more she gained from training at the Sanitarium.

I can only relate my personal experience as a patient, to show what I learned about the Sanitarium. My stay there was a most pleasant experience. The very walls seemed to breathe the Spirit of God. I recall with pleasant memory hearing the nurses sing at their chapel service early of a morning. As the strains of familiar Latter Day Saint hymns and music floated up to my room, they seemed more inspiring than usual. By just telling a nurse, I had access to the Communion on the first Sunday of the month and administration whenever I desired. My first morning started with hearing the nurses sing at chapel, and then being administered to before I went to the operating room. I had the feeling that God was with me and with the doctors and nurses; I went with no more fear or thought of what would transpire than if I were going to lie down for a nap.

My companion and I had prayed over my health, and it came to us both that I should go to our own church doctor and hospital. Being under the care of the Sanitarium personnel was a tonic in itself.

Twice before, when our two children were born, I spent time in another hospital. Truly, there is no comparison between this hospital and our Sanitarium. I had no idea there could be such a difference! There must be very efficient management on the part of those in charge of our hospital. Every nurse is of a high moral type. I marveled that they all were of the same top quality. They are always cheerful and seem to have innate ability in keeping patients "pepped up." They were sincerely happy to perform any act of service for a patient. I never saw one during my entire stay who begrudged the smallest service a patient might request. I never saw one who seemed to be bored with her tasks.

None of this was so in my former hospital experiences. Unless it were very important, I was afraid to even push my buzzer. Then sometimes a nurse would come in and look at me as though to say,

"Did you have to buzz for me?" The two night nurses carried on so that patients couldn't sleep and never answered a buzzer in less than forty-five minutes. It was during the war when there was a shortage of help, but these particular two made much use of the war as an alibi.

Of course, I expected to find it better at the Sanitarium, but not in so great a measure. I soon learned from the nurses themselves that if I felt the least need or want of their service, no matter how small, I was to push the buzzer. And I found that almost like magic one of them showed up—never any long delays. It seemed that the nurses were doing dozens of little favors for me, without my even requesting them.

In my other hospital experiences, many of the nurses were "clock watchers." There seemed also to be a marked difference in the skill of each nurse, but at the Sanitarium they all seemed equally skilled. Immediately I felt confidence and reliance in their ability. They were decided in their movements. They never appeared tired. Surely they must keep the laws of health themselves.

One day, while I was telling my family how wonderful the nurses were, another lady passing through overheard me and stopped to verify my statements. "You're just as right as you can be," she said. "I've been here for four weeks now with some of my family. The nurses are still the same. You can't praise them enough!"

Just as gratifying are the doctors who, because of their devotion to the church, render their service from the standpoint of working in hand with the Great Physician rather than seeking material gain. It is gratifying to be able to have complete trust in doctors you know are sincerely interested in your welfare.

After leaving this friendly place, I found myself wondering why some folk said to me, "I know you're glad it's over with!" I almost raised my right eyebrow—for really I felt reluctant to leave. Perhaps the Sanitarium isn't perfect, but it is a hallowed place aside of just any other hospital I've seen. Since my experience there, I have come more than ever to think of this institution not as "the Sanitarium," but as "our Sanitarium."

I wish I could urge those contemplating becoming nurses to make any sacrifice necessary to take their training at the Sanitarium. They will find themselves well compensated.

MRS. KENNETH PIEPERGERDES.
Wilver Dell Farms
R. F. D. 1
DeKalb, Missouri

Violent exercise is like a cold bath. You think it does you good because you feel better when you stop it.—Robert Quillen.

Briefs

SOUTHERN MICHIGAN DISTRICT.

—After meeting with the Saints at Lansing on Friday evening, President Israel A. Smith addressed members of the priesthood and their wives at a banquet held in the Crystal Room of the Columbia Hotel in Kalamazoo on Saturday evening, May 1. He was also the speaker on Sunday at the ordination service and informal opening of the new church on Fairfax Avenue in Kalamazoo. District President Edward R. Carter was ordained to the office of patriarch by President Smith and Apostle E. J. Gleazer. In the afternoon, Apostle Gleazer spoke to the group, after which members of the priesthood were presented by their pastor, Elder Pierce. The new church is a low, red brick veneer structure with a seating capacity of 175. It has a full basement and kitchen facilities. The oak pulpit was donated by Charles Wade of Lansing, a former member of Kalamazoo Branch; Elder Clarence Dudley, also of Lansing, supervised the carpenter work on the pulpit. Missionary Luther Troyer gave the closing sermon of the day.

NORTHWESTERN KANSAS DISTRICT.

—The district conference was held at Alexander, Kansas, on May 8 and 9 with Apostle D. T. Williams, Seventy Albert Loving, District President H. F. Chapin, and Elder Showers in charge. General Conference delegates and district officers were elected on Saturday afternoon. Elder Showers gave the morning sermon; Apostle Williams spoke at 2 and 8 p.m. on Saturday, as well as giving the morning and afternoon address on Sunday. A Communion service was also held on Sunday morning.

GRAVELLY HILL, BIRMINGHAM, ENGLAND.

—The women of Midland and Southern District held their third annual gathering on April 24 and 25 at Gravelly Hill. District Leader Elsie Bailey was in charge. On Saturday, Nellie Wicks of Enfield gave a talk and two musical numbers. Sunday began with a prayer service which was directed by Brother Coggan of Nuneaton. In the afternoon, four branch leaders gave resumés of the activities in their groups, and Mrs. Frank Fry spoke on the work of women in the building of Zion. At 6 o'clock, Mrs. Myron McConley addressed the group on "Tending God's Garden Aright." Nellie Schofield, director of music at Birmingham, was in charge of the musical program which followed. Lunch and tea were provided by the local women's department.

What Are You Planning for Fun?

By FRANCES HARTMAN

HAVE YOU ever taken a minute to analyze how you spend your leisure time? Even those who have scheduled their activities to hour fractions do not always know what they do for fun . . . and that is an important factor in these busy days, with summer just around the corner.

There are approximately four or five free hours left us each twenty-four-hour day after our time has been budgeted into necessary periods. Whether we're just winding up a school year and contemplating a summer session or holding down a steady job, we are spending approximately eight hours at work or in attending classes and preparing lessons. Another eight hours is designated for rest, sleep, and grooming. (Skimping on rest seems necessary sometimes, but it is never profitable. Although some individuals do not require much sleep, few can go without the proper amount over a number of years without detrimental results to health, either directly or indirectly. And how about grooming? We shouldn't skimp on that either!). Average eating time is two hours a day, and transportation calls for approximately one or two hours more. This leaves four or five hours of free time to worship, participate in various services, enjoy recreations, pursue individual hobbies and interests, or catch up on those odds and ends that invariably pop up to demand attention.

THERE IS the matter of "facts and figures" also to consider in connection with our time. It is a fact that:

1. A healthy body needs a change of action frequently for stimulation.
2. An alert mind needs to be alive—actively engaged in several different activities.
3. A growing soul needs clean, wholesome fun.

We have to figure on:

1. Personal handicaps that cut down our ability to participate

Here Is the Writer

Frances Hartman has long been a contributor to the "Herald." A native of Independence, she was active in Zion's League and, prior to her enrollment in Grace-land, was employed by the Department of Religious Education. Her hobbies are writing poetry and collecting poster stamps (Christmas seals, etc.). In addition to her work at Grace-land this past semester, she has taken courses at the University of Kansas City and University of Kansas.

and toward the conditions of the life in which we find ourselves. Certainly circumstances alter our ambitions so that we find a constantly growing and changing goal before us, based on our scale of advancement in personal estimation, spiritual unfoldment, and social stability.

Many persons go through their allotted years as "Scrooges," never finding the pleasant side of life. Their souls become encased in little cells that hold them in bondage. Others see only the fun in life, and the deep waters of their souls dry up and blow away on the breeze of their laughter. But it is possible to find the happy medium, understanding the seriousness of living, yet finding satisfaction in a ready smile and cheerful countenance. The soul can't stay immune from such exposure, and soon each thread woven into the dark cloth of everyday life shows the gleam of silver shining through.

in recreation that calls for "survival of the fittest."

2. Complexes or mental antagonisms against some forms of recreation we have not learned to enjoy.
3. Discarding the activities that do nothing for us and selecting those that best help to develop our inner selves.

Perhaps the most pertinent resolution for joy is our attitude toward it

FUN ISN'T ONLY RECREATION, although it is closely related to it. Fun is an attitude toward each new day and each activity in the day. Working or going to school can be fun if it brings satisfaction. A little practice goes a long way in forming a perfect attitude toward everyday living; and it is a relief not to look forward constantly to the future for happiness, hoping that a change in circumstances will bring about fulfillment of our desires.

What are you planning for fun through the summer months? Those who are happiest tell us that the richest enjoyment is an active body, an alert mind, and a growing soul. There is a world of difference between just living and living more abundantly.

New Horizons

A Memorable Experience

LAST SUMMER we—a group of Independence young people—chartered a bus and took a trip to Nauvoo, Illinois. We had planned the trip early in the summer, but when we got ready to go, we heard that the roads had been washed out by floods and were still dangerous for traveling. Nevertheless, we decided to go. The officials of the bus line checked with the state highway department to find out which roads were safe, and after plotting our course, we were on our way to a new adventure.

We hadn't traveled long before we were all convinced that the bus we hired wasn't meant for long trips. The seats were hard and straight, and I doubt if it had a spring in it. We felt every bump and crack on the highway. Had these been the only discomforts, no one would have complained; but during the night it became unexpectedly cold, and the bus didn't have a heater. This necessitated a bit of ingenuity on our part in order to keep warm. Those who dozed off to sleep for a while felt worse afterwards than those who stayed awake and suffered. If you have ever tried sitting up and sleeping all night in a drafty, joggling bus, you know the discomfort we endured.

AFTER ELEVEN HOURS in this portable torture chamber, we arrived at Nauvoo. The reunion committee representatives were waiting for us when we arrived, and they immediately showed us where we could wash up. Fifteen minutes later, we were all in line for breakfast. A delicious aroma from the kitchen was soon tickling our noses and making our mouths water. We couldn't isolate any of the smells to know what we were having, but we knew that no matter what they served, it would be all right. Minutes later we were looking into generous plates of bacon and eggs with accompanying hot rolls. Our difficulties in getting there were soon forgotten as we ate and talked about the day ahead of us. Shortly after breakfast, we were all gathered in front of the Nauvoo House and ready to go sight-seeing.

We saw many wonderful sights that day, but I can't say that any one impressed me more than any other. Being blessed with a vivid imagination, I could pretty well visualize the city as it used to be. The streets were still there, or at least I could see where they had been. Most of Dwain Miller has been a member of the Reorganized Church since 1943. He attended Graceland in 1944-45 and then moved to Independence, where he taught school for one year. He was president of the City-wide Zion's League for two years and has recently been ordained a priest. At present, he is director of the Englewood choir, although he claims Enoch Hill as his home congregation. Here he serves as assistant director of religious education, supervisor of young people's activities, and teacher of the Zion's League class. He is also announcer on "Thoughts for the Day" which is broadcast each Sunday morning at 7:45 on KMBC.

Here Is the Writer

the foundations and even many of the original buildings were still standing. They were red brick buildings, narrow and tall, with dangling wooden shutters that creaked with every breeze. The windows were boarded up and the steps delapidated. In many yards, weeds had grown up above the first-story windows. But in spite of the ruin and overgrowth, I could imagine what a beautiful city it must have been. Symmetrically laid out, it ran from the Mississippi River waterfront up the side of a hill where, at the top, stood the white temple of God. If a person has any sort of romantic characteristics, he surely could have a holiday in Nauvoo, dreaming over the remains of what once was a marvelous city—the largest in Illinois. I know now why it was called Joseph's City Beautiful.

By DWAIN L. MILLER

IN MY IMAGINATION, I could see distinguished people busily going about their tasks, some hurrying, others sauntering. I could see horses and buggies moving up and down the streets and hear people greeting each other.

"Good morning, Brother Pratt."

"Good morning, Sister Kenyon."

"How's that new house coming along, Pete?"

"Just fine, Jed. We want you and the wife to come and visit us when it's finished."

"We'll do that, Jed."

"Hello, Brother Smith. A fine morning, isn't it?"

"Yes, it is, Brother Caldwell."

These were industrious people in a rapidly-growing city, people with like ideals and a common goal. Is it any wonder the city was so beautiful?

THE TRIP HOME was no less interesting. We started early in the day so we wouldn't have to travel all night, but, nevertheless, we hit a rainstorm which caused us to lose our way. Fortunately, we were close enough to Kansas City to discover our mistake and find our way back. We arrived home tired physically, but stimulated and refreshed spiritually. For a day we had vicariously lived in this delightful city which had been dedicated to God.

So you don't believe in punctuation! Read this pronouncement of the oracle at Delphos: "Thou shalt go thou shalt return never in battle shalt thou perish."

BULLETIN BOARD

Saskatchewan Business Meetings

The business meetings of the Northern and Southern Saskatchewan Districts will be held July 16 and 17 at the joint reunion at Beaver Creek, ten miles south and three miles west of Saskatoon. The reunion will last from July 10 to 18.

ERNEST A. LEDSWORTH, President,
Northern Saskatchewan District.

Northern Indiana Youth Convention

The young people of Northern Indiana District will meet in Buchanan, Michigan, on June 26 and 27 for their annual convention. Dr. Roy Cheville will be in charge, assisted by District President Luther Troyer and Youth Supervisor Geneva Swaim. Young people of neighboring districts are also invited to attend. Registrations are to be made with Mrs. Paul Swaim, R. F. D. 2, Buchanan, Michigan.

Azalia, Michigan, Home-coming

Home-coming services will be held at Azalia, Michigan, on Sunday, June 20. Features of the day include an early morning prayer service (9 a.m.), preaching at 11, dinner, musical service at 1:30 p.m., and a fellowship hour at 2 o'clock.

BEN FERGUSON, Pastor.

All-Day Meeting at Lima, Ohio

An all-day meeting for the Saints of Northwestern Ohio District will be held on July 18 at the church in Lima (corner of Brice and Kenilworth Streets). Theme for the day is "The Branch Approach to Missionary Work." Bishop Jerome Wildermuth of Cleveland will be guest speaker. Activities of the day include a fellowship service at 9 a.m.; preaching at 10:45; a basket dinner at noon; and classwork from 1:15 to 3:30.

ALVIN C. WADSWORTH,
District President.

Kirtland Reunion

The Kirtland Reunion will be held August 6-15 at Kirtland, Ohio. Either President John F. Garver or President F. Henry Edwards will be in attendance. Other staff members include Bishop Walter Johnson, Seventy Harold I. Velt, Elders Casimir Nikel, Loyd Adams, and Ray Ashenhurst, and Mrs. H. I. Velt. Patriarch Richard Baldwin will be present to give blessings. For information concerning tents and cots, contact Ray Ashenhurst, Route 2, Willoughby, Ohio.

J. F. WILDERMUTH,
Acting Chairman.

Arizona State Reunion

The annual Arizona State Reunion will be held at Fort Lawton, Mt. Lemon, Tucson, Arizona, August 8 to 15. (This has been formerly known as the Granite Dells Reunion at Prescott.) Apostles C. R. Hield and W. Wallace Smith, Mrs. Rosamund Smith, High Priest Garland E. Tickemyer, and Missionary Russell Ralston are to be in attendance.

Those planning to attend should send a registration fee of 75c when they make their reservations. The camp is located at 8,000 feet altitude in the "tall pine" country. There is a modern kitchen-dining room and central auditorium. Meals will be served cafeteria style. Bedding will not be furnished. Reservations should be made immediately with Russell H. Wood, Route 5, Box 119, Tucson.

MARION M. BLAKELY,
Arizona Co-ordinator.

Port Elgin Reunion

The Owen Sound and Toronto Districts will hold their reunion at Port Elgin, Ontario, June 26 to July 4. Apostles D. Blair Jensen and Arthur A. Oakman, Missionary Merle Guthrie, and Elders Almer W. and John F. Sheehy are to be present. Mrs. Jensen will be in charge of women's work. Prices are as follows: tents, $3.50 up; cots, 75c each; meals (daily), adults, $1.40, children under twelve, $1.00. A deposit of $5.00 must accompany requests for cabins. Reservations may be made with Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Dobson, Port Elgin, Ontario.

Northern California Reunion

The annual Northern California District Reunion will be held at Asilomar, Pacific Grove, California, July 17 to 25. President Israel A. Smith, Apostles W. Wallace Smith and Charles R. Hield are to be present. Local appointive ministers and district officers will also be in attendance. For reservations, write L. A. MacDonald, 1872 Eighth Avenue, Sacramento 14, California.

Pastor Wanted

The Wabash, Indiana, Branch is in need of a pastor. This branch has a membership of forty-one and an excellent church building. The members will assist any elder volunteering to serve as pastor to find work and a suitable place to live. Those interested may contact District President Luther S. Troyer, 213 Drew Street, Paw Paw, Michigan.

Requests for Prayers

Prayers are requested for Maude Mitchell, 485 South West Street, Galesburg, Illinois, who is suffering with a heart ailment.

ENGAGEMENTS

Craig-Bohn

Miss Marcella Schenck announces the engagement of her niece, Marie Bohn of Independence, Missouri, to Jack Craig, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Eckles of Long Beach, California. The wedding will take place in August.

Bevans-Moses

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Moses of Nokomis, Illinois, announce the engagement of their daughter, Marguerite, to Frederick Joseph Bevans, son of Elder Frederick Bevans of Rock Island, Illinois. The wedding will take place in June.

WEDDINGS

Carnahan-Sheppard

Lillian Myrabel Sheppard of Temple City, California, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Sheppard of Cedaredge, Colorado, and James Edwin Carnahan of Altadena, California, were married on June 5 by Elder Blaine Bender.

DEATHS

BALL.—Carrh (Carl) E., was born June 8, 1870, in Oakland County, Michigan, and died May 24, 1948, at Sacramento, California. He was baptized into the Reorganized Church forty-eight years ago in Flint, Michigan, and on September 30, 1906, was ordained an elder at Prairie, Illinois. He served as pastor of the Moine, Illinois, Branch for several years and was active in the work of the church in Sacramento. He was married to Hannah Marshall on August 24, 1898, who died December 23, 1936. The following year he married Marion Burton, who survives him.

He also leaves a daughter, Vivian Seeley; three grandsons; and two great-grandsons, all of Los Angeles, California. Funeral services were conducted at Mission Chapel in Sacramento by Pastor Myron Reed Schall. Entombment was at the Sacramento Memorial Mausoleum.

HUGHES.—Jennie L., daughter of William and Sarah Hampton, was born September 22, 1864, at Clyde, Iowa, and died April 26, 1948, at the home of her daughter. Although her father was a Methodist minister, she attended a series of meetings conducted by a missionary in the Reorganized Church when she was fourteen and decided to be baptized. Because of parental objection, she was not permitted to at that time. However, on January 1, 1881, she was married to Henry C. Hughes, and both joined the Reorganization soon after their marriage. From that day until her death, she was an enthusiastic supporter of the Restored Gospel. Mr. Hughes died March 27, 1923.

Surviving are two sons: Leroy C. Hughes, Independence, Missouri, and J. Everette Hughes, Grand River, Iowa; two daughters: Mrs. Fred Loar, Mapleton, Kansas, and Mrs. O. P. Atkins, Great Falls, Montana; twelve grandchildren; and twelve great-grandchildren. Funeral services were held at the Reorganized Church in Mapleton, Elders Lee Quick and Arthur Dennis officiating. Interment was in the Mapleton cemetery beside her husband.

FENDER.—Alvin Henry, was born near the town of Bee, Nebraska, on January 29, 1893, and spent his early days in Ogallala, Nebraska. Here he was married to Evelyn Irene Hogg on July 5, 1916. They moved to Colorado in 1919 and made their home at Grand Junction in 1934. He was a carpenter by trade and, at the time of his death, was employed as a foreman by the Otto Bauman Construction Company. While working on the new Craig High School building, he was killed instantly on May 24, 1948, when a hoisting cage fell on him. He had been a member of the Reorganized Church since boyhood and was ever faithful to it. He was also a member of the Carpenters and Joiners Union in Grand Junction.

He is survived by his wife; a son, Robert; a granddaughter; and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Fender of Grand Junction; three brothers: Sollie of Arvada, Colorado; Roy of Ogallala; and Martin of Grand Junction; and a sister, Mrs. Lillie Easton of Omaha, Nebraska.

PETERS.—Benjamin J., died May 17, 1948, at the St. Vincent Hospital in Portland, Oregon. An elder in the church, he served as pastor of the Southeast Portland Branch the past two years. All who knew him felt his passing a great loss.

He is survived by his wife, Ruby; two sons: John of Portland and Marvin of Texas; and one grandchild. Evangelist Walter Barker officiated at the funeral service. Burial was in the River View Cemetery in Portland.

MALONE.—Sophia Olson, daughter of Sophia and Soren Olson, was born in Broughton Township, Illinois, on December 27, 1873, and died at her home near Kempton, Illinois, on April 30, 1948. She had been in poor health for some time and on January 10 of this year, she entered the Billings Hospital in Chicago. She returned to her home on February 5, where she was confined to her bed until death.

She was married to William Malone on January 8, 1902; three children were born to this union. She was a member of the Reorganized Church. She is survived by her husband; a son, William T. Malone, Jr., and two daughters: Mrs. Ila Gardner and Mrs. Irma Drew, all of Kempton; a sister, Mrs. Oscar Peterson; a brother, Nephi Olson; and three grandchildren. Funeral services were held at the Malone home on May 2, Elders Lloyd Hadley and I. E. Turner officiating.

ANDERSON.—Elmer E., died at Copley Hospital in Aurora, Illinois, on May 18, 1948, at the age of seventy-one. He was baptized into the Reorganized Church on November 6, 1890, and on January 1, 1902, was married to Belle Hanson. Seven children were born to this union, two of whom died in infancy.

He is survived by his wife; two daughters: Alta of the home, and Mrs. Sigurd Eike of Seneca, Illinois; and three sons: Albert of Sheridan, Illinois; Silas of Ames, Iowa; and Kenneth of Seneca, Illinois. The funeral was held at Mission Church on May 21. Elder Lloyd Hadley conducted the service, assisted by Elder I. E. Turner and John W. Fettersson.

HIXON.—Maude Twombly was born in Custer County, Nebraska, and died at Highland, Kansas, on April 28, 1948. Following the death of her mother, she and her father and younger brother moved to Atchison, Kansas, where she became a member of the Reorganized Church early in life. In April, 1907, she was married to Percival Earl Williams; one child was born to them. Mr. Williams died in November, 1907. Five years later she married Thomas Samuel Long; four children were born to this union. Mr. Long passed away on March 13, 1929. On May 12, 1940, she married James A. Hixon of Highland.

She is survived by her husband, James; three sons: Earl Williams of Troy, Kansas; William Long of McFall, Missouri; and Wesley Long of Fair Field, California; two daughters: Mrs. Lonnie Johns of Tekamah, Nebraska; and Mrs. Harry Lewis of Plattsburg, Missouri; two step-daughters: Mrs. Nellie Taylor of White Cloud, Kansas, and Mrs. Fred Witt of Los Angeles, California; three brothers: George Hopkins of Fanning, Kansas; Ray and William Twombly of Sparks, Kansas; three sisters: Mrs. Emil Jeschke of Fanning;

Mrs. Theodore Jeschke of St. Joseph, Missouri; and Mrs. Harry Ratcliffe of Washington, D. C.; and twelve grandchildren. Funeral services were held at the Fanning church, Elder William Bolinger officiating. Interment was in Fanning cemetery.

REYNOLDS.—Louella Victoria, daughter of Ansyllum and Amanda Jane Fry Coon, was born February 10, 1856, in Harrison County, Iowa, and died April 21, 1948, in Independence, Missouri. As a child, she traveled with her parents in a covered wagon on trips between Oklahoma and Iowa. She was married to Brigham Reynolds on January 19, 1877; seven children were born to this union. The greater part of her early married life was spent on a farm in Iowa. On September 11, 1882, she was baptized into the Reorganized Church near Woodbine, Iowa. She moved to Independence on March 21, 1921, and consistently attended Walnut Park Church for twenty-seven years before her death. Her husband; two sons, Fred and Bert; and two daughters, Effie Smith and Ada Butterworth, preceded her in death.

Surviving are two sons, John E. and Guy A., and a daughter, Mrs. J. E. Smith, all of Independence; fourteen grandchildren, and ten great-grandchildren. Services were held at the Speaks Funeral Chapel, Elders Glaude A. Smith and Donald V. Lents officiating. Interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery.

O'DELL.—Paul Jay, was born November 28, 1937, at Mt. View, Wyoming, and was drowned near his home in Lebanon, Oregon, on April 18, 1948. He was baptized into the Reorganized Church less than a year ago and showed promise of becoming a devoted worker in the church.

He is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Paul O'Dell; a sister, Shirley; and a brother, Larry.

MOORE.—Ainsworth R., son of John and Lucy Moore, was born February 28, 1871, at Dallas, Iowa, and died May 15, 1948, at his home on Lee's Summit Road, Independence, Missouri. He was baptized a member of the Reorganized Church on July 24, 1904. On October 20, 1907, he was ordained a priest, and on June 24, 1923, an elder. For a number of years he served as pastor of the Macon, Missouri, Branch; and until his last illness, he was a faithful worker in the church. On December 2, 1896, he was married to Emma Louise Hand at Taberville, Missouri; six children were born to this union. One daughter, Flora Maxine, preceded him in death. For the past sixteen years, he made his home in Independence.

He is survived by his wife; two daughters: Mrs. John W. Cook of the home, and Mrs. Charles A. Tanner of Kansas City, Missouri; three sons: Ainsworth D. of the home; Henry F. of San Angelo, Texas; and Sidney C. of Independence; one sister, Mrs. Clifford Flora of Wheatland, Wyoming; and two grandsons. Services were held at the Stahl Funeral Home, Elders Glaude A. Smith and J. W. A. Bailey officiating. Interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery.

JENKINS.—Nellie, daughter of John and Pricilla Davis, was born September 12, 1859, in Wales. (Date of death not given.) She came to America with her father's family when she was seven years old. On January 21, 1881, she was married to Winchester S. Jenkins in Streator, Illinois; five children were born to this marriage. In the early 1900's, they moved to Cleveland, Iowa, where they heard the gospel message and were baptized members of the Reorganized Church. Sister Jenkins was preceded in death by her husband and oldest son, John. Her last months were spent at the home of her daughter in Wichita, Kansas.

Surviving are two daughters: Mrs. Maude Zwang of Indianapolis, Indiana, and Mrs. D. J. Williams of Wichita; a son, Winn S., Jr., of Albia, Iowa; ten grandchildren; and eight great-grandchildren. Services were conducted by Elder John Blackstock at the Humeston Funeral Home in Albia.

WHITMAN.—Virgel Clyde, was born May 28, 1903, in Kansas City, Kansas, and died at his home in Independence, Missouri, on May 8, 1948. He received his education in Independence and was employed by the Independence Stove and Furnace Company, from 1917 until he became ill eight months before his death. He was married to Rebecca Nazer on June 21, 1936; two daughters were born to this union, one of whom died in infancy. He was baptized into the Reorganized Church on June 29, 1939, and was a faithful worker until his death.

He leaves his wife; three daughters: Ruth Jillene of the home; Thelma Cross of Kansas City, Missouri; and Dorothy Swinney of Seattle, Washington; his mother, Mrs. Edith Whitman of Independence; two sisters: Mrs. Elsie Snow of Independence and Mrs. Elvive Taylor of Oklahoma City, Oklahoma; five half-brothers: Allen, George, Albert, and Kenneth Perry of Oklahoma City, and William Perry of Kingfisher, Oklahoma; and two grandchildren.

BRADFORD.—Orson Lockwood, son of Daniel Jefferson and Florinda Jane Bradford, was born at Webb City, Missouri, on August 11, 1884. (Date of death not given.) He was baptized into the Reorganized Church on August 30, 1896, and was ordained an elder on June 23, 1912. Throughout his life he was an ardent, conscientious, and devoted worker. On June 24, 1908, he was married to Maude I. Sutherland; five children were born to them.

He is survived by four daughters: Lella Mae Dunham, Edith Zoe Decker, Doris Marie Hansen, and Dorothy Maude Vanderwood; a son, LeRoy D. Bradford; his mother; six sisters: Mrs. Elbert Richardson, Mrs. Claude O. Fry, Mrs. Harry V. Dace, Mrs. Anthony Robinson, Mrs. Rebecca Mae Agur, and Mrs. Ira Waldron; thirteen grandchildren; and four great-grandchildren. Services were held at the Broadway Funeral Parlors, Evangelist Ray Whiting and D. J. Williams officiating.

ARNEY.—Clyde Lee, son of George B. and Ida Jones Arney, was born January 21, 1907, at Carrigan, Missouri, and died May 27, 1948, at Bonneville, Missouri.

He is survived by his parents; his wife, Irene Carr Arney; two children, Betty Jean and Leland Arney of Kansas City, Missouri; two brothers: Dewey of Springfield, Missouri, and Ray of Miami, Florida; and four sisters: Mrs. Mable Thompson and Mrs. Edna Kugler of Quincy, Illinois; Mrs. Louise Swayze of Lexington, Missouri; and Mrs. Dorothy Titus of Kansas City, Missouri. One son, Clyde Arney, Jr., was lost in the war. Funeral services were held in Lexington, Elder Evan Fry officiating.

Reunion Schedule-1948

No. Dakota	Jun. 11-Jun. 13	Am. Leg. Pk., Detroit Lakes, Minnesota
E. Montana	Jun. 19-Jun. 27	Fairview, Mont.
Texas	Jun. 25-July 4	Bandera, Texas
Owen Sound & Toronto	Jun. 26-July 4	Port Elgin, Ont.
New York & Philadelphia	July 3-July 11	Deer Park
Southwest Kansas	July 3-July 11	Arkansas City, Kansas
Gulf States	July 9-July 18	Brewton, Ala.
W. Colorado	July 10-July 11	Delta, Colorado
Manitoba Central	July 10-July 11	Winnipeg, Man.
Missouri	July 10-July 18	Odessa, Missouri
Saskatchewan	July 10-July 18	Beaver Creek Saskatchewan
Alberta	July 19-July 26	Sylvan Lake, Alberta
Zion	July 17-July 25	Gardner Lake
Nauvoo So. New England	July 17-July 25	Nauvoo, Illinois
Northern California	July 17-July 25	Onset, Mass.
Flint-Pt. Huron-Detroit-Windsor	July 24-Aug. 1	Asilomar, Monterey, California
Kentucky & Tennessee	July 25-Aug. 1	Blue Water, Michigan
Northwest	July 30-Aug. 8	Paris, Tennessee
Chatham-London Gen. & So. Michigan	July 30-Aug. 8	Silver Lake, Washington
Mo. Valley	July 31-Aug. 8	Erie Beach, Ontario, Canada
Maine So. California	July 31-Aug. 8	Liahona Park
No. & West. Michigan	Aug. 5-Aug. 15	Woodbine, Iowa
Kirtland	Aug. 6-Aug. 15	Brooksville, Me.
Reunion of the Ozarks	Aug. 1-Aug. 8	Pacific Palisades
Oklahoma	Aug. 7-Aug. 15	Park of the Pines
W. Montana	Aug. 7-Aug. 15	Kirtland, Ohio
Arizona	Aug. 8-Aug. 15	Racine, Missouri
Arkansas & Louisiana	Aug. 9-Aug. 15	Pawnee, Okla.
Minnesota & Wisconsin	Aug. 9-Aug. 16	Race Track, Montana
Far West	Aug. 12-Aug. 22	Tucson, Arizona
So. Indiana	Aug. 21-Aug. 29	Clear Fork Cp., Hot Spgs., Ark.
Eastern Michigan	Aug. 14-Aug. 22	Chetek, Wisc.
Idaho	Aug. 14-Aug. 21	Stewartsville, Missouri
Des Moines	Aug. 15-Aug. 21	Bedford, Ind.
Lamoni	Aug. 15-Aug. 22	Cash, Michigan
S. E. Illinois	Aug. 20-Aug. 29	Hagerman, Idaho
Eastern Colorado	Aug. 20-Aug. 29	Guthrie Center, Iowa
		Lamoni, Iowa
		Brush Creek, Ill.
		Colorado Springs Colorado

* MIDWEST SUMMER

This is the season of the year when everybody who can go anywhere else does so. The rest perspire and endure, longing for the cool snows of the Rockies. There is shade, but it isn't cool. There is a breeze, but coming off the plains of Kansas you could dry hair with it. There is water, but it is steamy warm. . . . A small cat pursues a robin at a slow walk, and the robin just hops, knowing it isn't necessary to fly. . . . No matter how little clothing you wear, it is too much. Coats remain on the hangers, and only preachers, judges, and undertakers are subservient enough to wear them. If kilts ever become fashionable, here's a customer. The sarong would be about right if it could be made legal. . . . A good time to spite your enemies by inviting them here for a visit, but you don't feel that mean toward anybody. Does anyone need a good beachcomber at a cool, northern port?

* GRADUATION

Dr. F. M. McDowell was present on June 1 at the Convocation of Columbia University, New York, when 7,995 persons were graduated to receive various degrees. With so many, diplomas had to be given later, and graduates were presented by departments. Dr. McDowell's son-in-law, Brother W. Max Wise, received his doctor's degree in education.

* WALKING TO CHURCH

A few things cling persistently to the memory. The late Dr. Edward Shillito of London once wrote an essay "On Walking to Church." The exact words are forgotten, but he went beyond the trite notion that walking is good for the body. Walking to church, he said, is good for the spirit. It brings you down to earth; it makes you humble to have to walk; you have time to meditate on the way and to prepare your soul for entering the house of God. By the time you have walked a little distance, you welcome a chance to sit, and you do so tranquilly.

Can anyone worship effectively who has just emerged from a Cadillac or a Buick, or even one of the more popular makes? Not as well as one who has made the distance, step by step, from his own door to the pew.

This age of motor transport brings worshipers from longer distances—certainly too many miles to walk. Thousands are condemned to ride in various degrees of suffocation, physical and spiritual, in their cars. Fortunate is the family that lives a few blocks away from the church, so that Father can put the keys resolutely in his pocket and say to the family, "It's a fine day. Let's walk to church!"

* KIRTLAND TEMPLE

"Museum Echoes," for May, 1948, a magazine published by the Ohio State Archaeological and Historical Society, High Street at Fifteenth Avenue, Columbus 10, Ohio, features "The Temple at Kirtland," by S. Winifred Smith, Assistant Editor, and a picture of the Temple on the cover. The article contains historical and descriptive material that would be of interest to general visitors and the public.

Mary A. Burlington
1510½ Jules
St. Joseph, Missouri

92867
18
h

Zion's Leaguers

Here's How to Earn Money for your

"Missions Abroad" Project

Sell Zion's League T-SHIRTS. Every Leaguer will want at least one. You can make money and still have a good looking shirt. They are white with a large, navy blue Zion's League emblem on the front. The emblem was designed especially for these shirts by Rena Ricker for the Chicago District Zion's League. You can earn 50¢ on each shirt for your League "Missions Abroad" project.

JUNIOR SIZES (24 to 32) REGULAR SIZES (34 to 40)

Small
Medium
Large

Small Medium
Large

Sold in lots of 6 (assorted sizes). Be sure to state Junior or Regular and the size of each class.

YOU PAY US $12 a doz. SELL FOR $1.50 ea. or $18 a doz.

YOU MAKE 50¢ each or $6 a dozen

Single shirts—$1.50 ea.

HERALD PUBLISHING HOUSE

Independence, Missouri

Photo by Marvin M. McDoie

“The House of the Lord”

I am the door; by me if any man enter in, he shall be saved, and shall go in and out, and find pasture.

—John 10: 9.

THE Saints Herald

VOLUME 95

JUNE 26, 1948

NUMBER 26

www.LatterDayTruth.org

"The House of the Lord"

Look at the trees, and you will learn a lesson about the human soul. They grow upward, reaching for the light of the sun. Some of them die when larger trees cut off their portion of light. Some of them grow twisted and deformed, reaching toward a small patch of open sky in the surrounding forest. As long as they can, they reach up.

So the human soul was made to reach for God, and it starves if it does not find the light that causes it to reach up to him.

The House of the Lord is not a prison. It is a spiritual home, a refuge where all who belong to him may come. It is a place with an open door, and it welcomes the children in.

It is said that the greatest privilege civilization offers us is the right of free access to society; and the right of free withdrawal to the privacy of our own homes. The prisoner and the slave are not free to go and come. But the freedom of the children of the Lord is expressed in the lines of the text from John: "I am the door. . . . if any man enter in, he shall be saved, and shall go in and out, and find pasture." He is free to go into the world and find what he needs from life; he is free to return home for the hours of rest and refreshment.

Young people who are starting out together in life, accepting their responsibilities to home and society, will find themselves called and invited in many directions, asked to give their time to many things. Among all their arrangements, let them not forget that "The House of the Lord" is their spiritual home, and that they owe it to themselves to go there to bow in worship, to learn, and to serve their Creator. —L. J. L.

YOUTH CAMPS.—One of the great projects of the church is to provide youth camps during summer vacations in which younger folk can have good experiences in groups under church leaders. Many fine results have been obtained from the youth camps for several years, and young folks enjoy them very much.

Nauvoo Youth Camp was held from June 6 to 13, with forty-one campers, under the direction of Lyle Woodstock, and with Edna Easter as assistant director. This year one of the projects was the study of the history of Nauvoo, with an excursion to Carthage to visit the old jail building there where Joseph Smith lost his life.

Other activities included training in "Pioneering," which taught the campers how to cook, provide shelter, and sleep out of doors, and to identify certain foods to be found in nature. Among the latter was the making of a food from arrowroot. There was also craft work, including leather tooling and the making of useful objects from leather; and metal tooling. Young people from fifteen to eighteen came from six states: Missouri, Iowa, Indiana, Michigan, Illinois, and Nebraska.

Michigan holds a youth camp at Park of the Pines, June 20-27, and has sixty campers registered for this year's meet. A complete and well-arranged program is organized, with a large staff, including Dr. F. M. McDowell, and many local and district personnel.

Two youth camps for different groups have been conducted at Lake Gardner in Clay County, for young people from Independence, the Kansas Cities, and adjacent areas.

BISHOP G. L. DeLAPP

On a recent visit with his sister, Sunday, June 6, Bishop G. L. DeLapp had a very interesting experience. The minister of the Congregational Church, Reverend E. W. Savage, was suffering from a heart condition, and invited Bishop DeLapp to occupy the pulpit on that Sunday morning. Bishop DeLapp responded, using as his theme, "The Gospel Shall Be Preached Unto All Nations." There was a fine and appreciative response from the congregation.

There is another interesting item in the background of this occasion. Years ago, when Reverend Savage was pastor at Bonesteel, South Dakota, he invited Elder Levi Gamet to occupy the pulpit there. Learning that Brother Gamet was celebrating his one hundredth birthday in Kansas City, Kansas, early in June, Reverend Savage wrote a letter to him recalling the earlier experience.

LONDON, ONTARIO. The church and its membership have long maintained fine relationships with leaders in cultural and civic affairs and with other churches in this city. Newspapers have given space to church activities. Almer W. Sheehy, pastor and district president, and Sister Sheehy were featured in "The Free Press," London, for May 20. Brother Sheehy has made many friends for the church, and is a popular speaker in all civic causes.

JONESPORT, MAINE. After being closed two months for redecoration, during which time the congregation held services in the union church, this church was reopened for a district conference that packed it to the limit on May 24. Apostle G. G. Lewis gives a fine report for the people of this area. Elder Don Harvey, Seventy, is the missionary in charge.

IN THIS ISSUE

EDITORIAL:
Worship the Lord	3
OFFICIAL:
Official Notice	4
American Heritage	4
ARTICLES:
Responsibilities of Parents, by G. N. Briggs	4
The Way of Destiny, by W. C. Stone	5
Success in Marriage, by Ernest E. Crownover	6
Satan—Real or Fiction, by Norma Anne Kirkendall	8
The True Significance of Fasting, by Margaret W. Gibson	9
"I, the Lord," by George Njeim, President of Seventy	12
Repeal—a Betrayal of the American People, by Harry E. Caylor	15
Spoil the Child, by Verda E. Bryant	16
I Am Your Son, a poem, by Winifred Milner	16
Radio Listening for Children, Reported by May Worth	17
Now That the Festival's Over, by Sarah Van Fleet	18
Restoration Festival Observed in Holland	19
Reluctant Soldiers of the Cross, by Charles Kornman	20
Briefs	22
Bulletin Board	23

Worship the Lord

"Give unto the Lord the glory due unto his name: bring an offering, and come before him: worship the Lord in the beauty of holiness."—I Chronicles 16: 29.

AS WE DROVE along the highway we looked into a pasture where a beautiful Palomino horse was grazing. Those who have seen these creatures know what a splendid picture they present, how they give glamour and drama to a type of transportation that is now, except in a few instances, almost obsolete. Yet for all his beauty, that magnificent creature spent and will spend most of his days with his nose to the ground, seaching for food. All his attention is devoted to the physical existence.

We have all seen people like that, of course. Beautiful women, handsome men, who give a lifetime to cultivating in their bodies and clothing a resemblance to the mannequins in Vogue or Esquire, or the shop windows of Fifth Avenue. Intellectually and spiritually they may or may not have some significance, but it is kept quite in the background.

AND EVEN YOU AND I—what is to be said of us? Have you ever lamented that so much of your day must be spent in mere clothing and feeding of your body, in keeping it warm and comfortable, in preventing sickness, or getting well?

Physical beauty lasts such a few years, then deserts us. We may keep up a futile pretense, as some do, desperately buying fine clothing and ornaments as long as there is a rack of bones and flesh on which to hang them. But in the end the soul must lay all these pretty things aside and pass on to another sphere. Only the things of the mind and spirit can be taken with us. While we are in the midst of life, we must meet the problems and obligations of this world. If we are wise, we meet them bravely and with good humor, and with a purpose of making things easier and pleasanter for our fellow men about us. But at the same time, we must keep our minds upon the eternal life.

WORSHIPING GOD is turning the attention of the mind toward that eternal world for which it is destined, if our faith in the survival of the spirit means anything at all. And that faith means more than anything else to a great many people. If they thought of it seriously, it would mean that much to nearly all the people in the world.

The domination of our lives by purely physical things amounts to a kind of tyranny, against which the mind often feels like revolting. Grant that food and clothing are good and greatly to be appreciated. Grant the innocence of taking pleasure in them. But there are times when we are discontented with them alone, and we know that we are meant for something nobler and more enduring.

There are various refuges and diversions. We find happiness in the companionship of other people. We can put in our time on the search for truth and knowledge. We appreciate music, art, literature, architecture, and entertainment. But there are times, too, when we long for something more than these things. We reach out, trying to understand the ultimate Cause and the ultimate Purpose of life. It is then that we seek God and worship him.

Try looking up into the starlit sky on a clear night. Try to understand so simple a thing as the limitless space which even the brilliance of the innumerable stars cannot illuminate. The human mind cannot conceive of infinity in the two dimensions that we encounter every day—time and space. We quit looking at the heavens out of plain fear that the mind could be lost in wonder and awe. We return our attention to the earth, to things small enough to understand. God's workshop is too big for us to comprehend.

LIFE PRESENTS us with a number of paradoxes. Although it is impossible for science to gather all the facts about the physical universe, it is necessary to keep trying to learn new facts in order to master the business of living. Although it is impossible at any moment for doctors to conquer every disease, it is important for them to keep trying in order to save life. Although it is impossible for us to understand God in all his greatness, it is important for us to keep trying, in order to give peace and purpose to the mind and spirit.

It is good for us to worship God. It is good for us to listen to what others have learned about him, and what they have to say of him. It is good for us to meet at the House of the Lord on the day appointed for that purpose, and give our attention to the eternal life of which we are a part.

In all our lives we are a part of various organizations. Business is organized; education is organized; science is organized; so are medicine, entertainment, social life, and even crime and vice. In all our lives we unconsciously recognize the principle that was stated in the earliest contact between man and God, "It is not good that the man should be alone." For this reason, too, worship and religion are organized. We may worship privately, but we also need the company of our fellows in worship and in learning about God. We hear the call, "Let us go into the house of the Lord." We are wise if we respond to the call. For we have no greater business in this life than to learn what God meant us to do. And we can do that learning more effectively if we do it together.

L. J. L.

Responsibility of Parents

OFFICIAL

By G. N. BRIGGS, President Emeritus, Graceland College

I recently received a letter from a member who is greatly interested in the church and in the youth of the church. One paragraph is of the greatest significance to parents.

"It is always necessary to carry on a campaign of educating the parents to give financial support to the education of the youth. I have lately come in contact with cases of the most deplorable and tragic parental selfishness and indifference toward their responsibilities to their own children. The old pioneer idea still seems to persist that if you support the children until they are sixteen, then it is all right to throw them upon their own resources and let them make their way in life the best they can."

We have been told that Joseph Smith once said, "Whatever principle of intelligence we attain unto this life, it will rise with us in the resurrection."

If every parent could be made to realize that education prepares our youth not only for this life but for all time and contributes to his happiness and well-being for eternity, our institutions of learning would make a much larger contribution to society.

One of the high officials of the church recently exemplified the contribution his parents made in preparing him so that he could be called to the very important position in which he is now ministering to thousands.

"They could have selfishly required of me, as some parents do of their children, such duties that education beyond the required attendance up to sixteen years in California would have been impossible. But by their grace, there was extended to me an opportunity to finish high school and to attend college. Their sacrifices eased the burden of feeding and clothing me, of meeting many of the obligations in the bare maintenance of life in such a way that attendance at school was possible. But did their grace in providing me with the opportunity to attend the classes and laboratories of the college give me my education? Not at all. It required, in addition, hours of study, attention to lectures, care in performing experiments in the chemistry and physics laboratories, conscientious reading, and active participation in all the functions of my classwork. In other words, it took many different kinds of good works.

"In this illustration can be found several of the principles of eternal salvation through the gospel. By grace, I was privileged to go to school. In hope I studied the lessons and met the laboratory requirements. By the foolishness of the professors' lectures, to use the words of the Apostle Paul, the information was presented to me. By immersion in the spirit of education, a kind of baptism, I absorbed the ideas and philosophy of education. By calling on the names and examining the lives of authorities in political science, mathematics, chemistry, physics, languages, history and so on, I discovered truth. By obedience to the principles discovered and revealed by the master teachers and scientists of the ages, truth was confirmed and made a part of my own experience. Does this sound so much different from the gospel of Christ? None of this would have been possible but for the grace
(Continued on page 22.)

According to advices from Elder J. L. Verhei, district president, "several of our families have been wiped out of home and possessions." Steps are being taken to care for the situation; but any of our members who desire to be of assistance should communicate with Brother Verhei, 3824 South East Grant Court, Portland 15, Oregon.

THE FIRST PRESIDENCY,
Israel A. Smith.

The American Heritage

We are in receipt of a communication from President Thomas D'A. Brophy, The American Heritage Foundation, suggesting that an effective reminder of our precious heritage and the freedom we enjoy will be a special anniversary ringing of all church bells of the nation from 9:55 to 10:00 a. m. on Sunday, July 4, thereby dedicating the day to peace and freedom and American ideals.

I do not believe that the majority of our churches are equipped with bells, but if those in charge concur in the suggestion, we leave to the discretion of our pastors whether they should co-operate in this matter.

ISRAEL A. SMITH.

If you spend much time wondering what somebody else is going to do, you will get nothing done yourself.

Do not let another person's plan set your pace. It will always leave you in a second position.

Plan your life for the best you can possibly attain. The world will manage to get along with you.

THE SAINTS' HERALD

Volume 95

June 26, 1948

Number 26

EDITORS: The First Presidency: Israel A. Smith, John F. Garver, F. Henry Edwards.

ASSISTANTS: Leonard J. Lea, Managing Editor; Kenneth L. Graham, Business Manager.

The Saints' Herald is the official publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, with headquarters at The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri, and is issued through the offices of Herald Publishing House, 103 South Osage Street, Independence, Missouri.

Entered as second-class matter at the post office at Independence, Missouri, under Act of March 3, 1879. Issued weekly at Independence, Missouri. Price, $3.50 per year and $1.75 for six months in advance in the U. S. A., its territories and possessions; Canada, $3.75 per year and $1.90 for six months; other countries, $4.50 per year. Notice of a change of address must be given three weeks ahead of the date that it is to become effective. Accepted for mailing at the special rate of postage provided for in section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized July 21, 1921. Printed in the United States of America.

The Way of Destiny

The Faith, as God's Will for Man, and Man's Search for God

When the Son of Man comes, will he find the faith on earth?—American Revised Version.

AS OUR WORLD PASSES through continual crises, the resulting stresses appear to be altering our national as well as our group and individual destinies, reshaping those things in which we have trusted. These changes are reflected in the perplexed and often embittered attitudes of our friends and neighbors. As the conflicting ideologies of Communism, Fascism, and Democracy muster their forces, our need to maintain a spiritual and mental balance ever increases.

We are frequently advised that this balance is a matter of increasing and implementing our faith. We are led to realize that some form of faith is fundamental to life itself, especially life as we know it in civilized communities. The need of firm belief in the permanence and stability of peoples, persons, and things is vital to our established society as well as our individual peace of mind. Without this faith, chaos would prevail.

As we enter a train, streetcar, or bus, we do so secure in the thought that we will be conveyed to our destination. We go about our employment at rest in the knowledge that we will receive some compensation at stated times. We casually anticipate that there will be commodities on our merchant's shelves for us to purchase as our needs may occur. The thought that these commodities might not be available some day would be very disquieting.

IN ORDER TO UNDERSTAND what hinders the development of the type of faith necessary to meet our requirements, we may do well to consider for a moment those things now claiming our loyalties and some of the influences at work in the world. To do this, we should scrutinize those things in which we daily express our belief. The objects of our faith have contributed toward making us what we are. The forces our faith has set in operation are those things which govern us. Therefore, an understanding of these objects and forces should be helpful in the continual readjusting of our lives in the light of the gospel of the kingdom.

Someone has said that the kind of persons we are today will largely determine the kind of persons we shall be ten or twenty years from now. This is as true of groups of people as it is of individuals. The type of persons and institutions in which we exercise faith, or in which we train ourselves to exercise faith, will largely determine the outcome of our lives as well as those of our children.

We generally accept unquestioningly that with which we are familiar. Faith in wealth or possessions is a major incentive and largely the controlling force in most human endeavor today. Our government is founded on our concept of property rights. Our laws originate in and are designed to perpetuate the prevailing property relationships with which we are familiar as well as the profit motive itself.

(Any government, divine or human, having to do with mankind, will have its case in some concept of property relationships, that is, the relationship of man to his tools as well as to the product of his tools and labor.)

SINCE our current concept of wealth secures the individual as titleholder, almost to the exclusion of social responsibility, it is difficult for us to comprehend that this is not final in the mind of God. (See Leviticus 25: 23-28.) Regardless of its virtues, this accepted concept of property rights of persons or groups of persons is a major contributing factor in the strife that has passed as well as that which is looming.

By W. C. Stone

As an outcome of this strife and its consequences, there has appeared an urge in human thinking that is a portent of the kind of world toward which we are drifting. As our lives become increasingly complex and our problems multiply, we perceive an abiding desire to be permitted to entrust our social problems to anyone who will solve them without burdening our lives with responsibility, and so solve them that we may go on our way, living with very little effort.

This urge finds expression in the wave of superhuman comics now flooding our homes. We give almost religious attention to these characters who are pictured as being able to control the elements as well as solve national and world problems singlehanded. It finds further expression in the almost determined resistance of many of us to consider any social problem at home or abroad.

WOVEN in with this is our loss of faith in democratic processes, a loss ever-increasingly discernible in group and national relationships of peoples. We are learning to distrust our neighbors and leave our public welfare in the hands of a few. Our cynicism regarding the integrity of most political officials is enlarging itself to include almost all that comes within our vision. This is coupled with perplexity and an inner fear of our own ability to comprehend social problems. We frequently salve ourselves with the thought that these things do not concern us.

This loss of faith in people paves the way for the rise of those forces whose dreams of power are contrary to those we proclaim in behalf of Zion as well as those we normally hold. This state of mind leads to the rise of political machines, varying in size and scope from the Pendergast machine in Kansas City to the National Socialist Movement of Hitler, as well as paving the road for Communism.

WHATEVER the size or scope, these all combine in exemplifying a denial of the existence of God and the subverting of that which is naturally best in the life of peoples, reducing them to a state of servile fear and dependence upon these unrighteous forces for livelihood—even life itself. This lack of faith in mankind is plainly discernible all about us. It rears its ugly head in the council of the United Nations. Racial and religious intolerance is both the symptom and seedbed upon which this lack of faith thrives.

The Apostle Paul and the Modern Prophet substantially agree in calling this condition the rule of the Powers of Darkness¹ and Spiritual Babylon.² This same prophet further informs us that those left in this condition are to be destroyed. Our Lord appears to have had this condition in mind and seems to doubt our ability to seriously affect the course of human events by any means other than those he has prescribed, for he calls upon us to come out of Babylon.³

As we consider our Lord's admonition, we are reminded that the Apostle Paul speaks of those saints before us who have sought a better country. We are plainly told that had they been mindful of those countries or conditions from which they were called, they would not have lacked an opportunity to return.⁴

Possibly some clue to our problem may be found in this question propounded by the Master when he

Success in Marriage

Can church people improve their record?

ADMINISTRATIVE OFFICERS throughout the church are becoming deeply concerned over the problem of marriage and divorce among church members. Certainly there is justification for this growing concern, for church members everywhere, in ever-increasing numbers, are falling victim to the failures which terminate in divorce.

Divorce is a very real thing, and its results upon the people who resort to it are both acute and lasting. For the purpose of drawing comparisons and conclusions, let me introduce some interesting information. According to authorities upon the subject, the rising divorce rate is threatening our oldest, most vital institution—the family. This threat is so great that 112 American groups met in conference from May 6 to 8 at the White House. All of our legal efforts to slow the trend have failed. Easing divorce laws, making them stricter, requiring waiting periods before marriage, putting restrictions on remarriage after divorce—all of these methods have been tried without success. The answer to the divorce evil, then, is not to be found in attempting legal remedies for marriages which have failed. This leaves us to choose one of two alternatives: First, let this social and spiritual evil go unsolved by forfeit, or second, attack the problem from another point of approach—logically, by educational methods.

By Ernest E. Crownover
Pastor, Leavenworth, Kansas

Mr. Reginald Heber Smith, in an article in the Atlantic Monthly for December, 1947, states that divorces in the United States have increased 6,000 per cent since 1867 (in eighty-one years) while the population has increased only 300 per cent. In 1867 there were 9,937 divorces; in 1945 there were 494,000, and in 1946 there were 613,000. To quote Mr. Smith: "The sober facts are that asked his disciples, "Which of you, by worrying, can add one cubit to his stature?" In this same chapter we find Jesus urging the disciples to lay aside their natural apprehensions concerning the problem of providing for themselves as they went about proclaiming the kingdom. They are reminded of the birds, which neither sow, reap, nor store anything, yet are provided for.⁵

In the King James Version, Jesus is represented as bringing in the lilies for comparison. One other version uses the term "anemones" in place of lilies. This term may be more descriptive of what our Lord had in mind. The dictionary defines the anemone as the "windflower." This well describes the transient nature of the plant, blooming today and gone tomorrow. We have all seen this flower in the spring upon the hills and plains of our country, blooming one day and gone when next we pass. Yet, said Jesus, Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these.

We may not be called upon to move out to the extent required of those disciples. Yet one thing remains clear, that is the force of these words of the Master: "Where thy treasure is, there will thy heart be also."⁶ Until we become less concerned in the affairs of this world and train ourselves to exercise a firm belief in that which we proclaim, we are not likely to advance.⁷

¹Ephesians 6: 12.

²Doctrine and Covenants 108: 4.

³Revelation 18: 23.

⁴Hebrews 11: 13-16.

⁵Matthew, sixth chapter.

⁶Romans 12: 2.

last year (1946) the marriages of more than 1,200,000 men and women were terminated by law, and that there are now more than five million divorced persons in the United States. The trend has been steady and uninterrupted, and our divorce laws have become more and more complex." And to continue: "When the law gets hopelessly bogged down, as is true in our present divorce law, reform is best accomplished by a fresh start from a new premise. That has been the history of the evolution and growth of our legal system." The United States is not alone in facing a rampant divorce situation. In an article copyrighted by the Chicago Tribune and reprinted in the Kansas City Star for December 22, 1947, it is stated that in 1947 five times as many suits for divorce were filed in Britain as in 1938, and ten times more than in 1935. The reasons given for a great percentage of the petitions indicate extremely childish temperaments in people physically adult: "I asked my husband to buy a broom and he asked if I wanted to ride it." "She weighs 196 pounds, and whenever she falls down, she rocks the house."

Bishop Richard T. Loring of the Episcopal Church is quoted in the December 23, 1947, issue of the Leavenworth, Kansas, Times: "Sexual maladjustment is the cause of divorce in seventy-five per cent of marriages. Fifteen per cent fail because of economic reasons—either not enough money or the stupid handling of it. The other ten per cent fail because of 'pure cussedness.'"

WHAT ARE THE REASONS given by parties to divorces? According to Jacques Bacal and Louise Sloane in "The True Causes of Divorces" in Look magazine for October 28, 1947, thirty per cent of the men claim their wives were unfaithful and twelve per cent said that in-laws were the cause of divorce. Thirty-three per cent of the wives accused their husbands of unwillingness to accept the responsibilities of marriage, and thirty-three per cent said their husband's infidelity was the cause of divorce. Other reasons given were: conflict in careers, religious differences, frigidity, extravagance, criminal acts. These authors conclude that the real trouble is—no training. "Why adultery? Why infidelity? Why irresponsibility? Why incompatibility? These are effects, not causes. They are the actions to which men and women are driven by the final accumulation of the day-by-day irritations of marriage. And the irritations are not inherent in marriage itself, but rather spring from our constant struggle to resolve the conflict between marriage as it is and marriage as we always expected it would be."

In the United States in 1946, there was one divorce to each three and one eighth marriages—and in the church? The following statement is from a letter written by Elder J. D. Anderson, Kansas City Stake president, under date of October 29, 1947:

"During the year 1946 there were sixty-five marriages reported, and fifteen divorces." The record indicates, then, that the rate of divorce in the Kansas City Stake is one to each four and three tenths marriages, which is very close to the national figure. The writer gathered such information as is available concerning the general church and the divorce rate. According to monthly reports which come to the Auditorium, there were 1,567 marriages and two hundred and thirteen divorces during 1946, in which at least one party was a member of the church. Since some marriages would fail to be reported, and also some divorces, it is admitted that this figure is not accurate—that at best it merely indicates the trend within the church. But the figures, such as they are, show one divorce for every seven and three tenths marriages in the church. There are indications that approximately eighty per cent of the marriages of our church girls are to men who are not members, and that probably a still higher percentage of men who are members marry nonmembers.

A GAIN QUOTING Reginald Heber Smith: "The law can create, enforce, and dissolve contracts. It can deal with marriage as a contract. It is totally beyond the power of the law to create a sacrament. Therefore, it cannot successfully deal with marriage as a sacrament." And that brings us up to now. What to do? It would seem that continence and innocent premarital behavior are needed, and that marriages should be consummated after sober reflection and careful selection; that in the choice of a mate, selection should be on a basis of high standards. Forbearance and understanding are required, and a wholesome regard for the rights—yes, the happiness and joy of the other—must be observed.

Probably marriage will not become more successful until it ceases to be a legal contract only and becomes a significant and binding sacramental covenant. The church began to be officially concerned about the divorce evil in 1866, for on April 10 of that year the General Conference passed Resolution Sixty-six to clarify some aspects of the problem. Again on April 9, 1884, and April 11, 1896, Resolutions 272 and 412 were passed. While it is necessary that the conference establish or pass upon interpretation of church law defining our attitude toward and disposition of divorce problems, it clearly has provided only a working basis for treating the result. Legislation does not prevent marital difficulties.

Some of the nation's schools have had success from educational efforts to prepare people for marriage.

Is the church ready and prepared, or is it ready to prepare, to add spiritual significance to marriage education, beginning with small children, before the wrong pattern of sexual behavior is conceived? The May 15, 1948, issue of The Saints' Herald reprints from the Boston Evening Transcript this evaluation from Rabbi B. R. Brickner: "Success in marriage is more than finding the right person: it is a matter of being the right person."

Satan - Real or Fiction?

By NORMA ANNE KIRKENDALL

HIS SATANIC MAJESTY has long been a subject of debate and personal contemplation. Too many people are good merely so they "won't go to the devil," for hell's furies hold mental anguish for them even now. The Bible rightly places its emphasis on love for God, and the references made to an evil force are usually allegorical and veiled. I think it's about time this bugaboo is erased and an understanding reached.

Although there is one Satan, there are many devils. Anything which attempts to distract man from his purpose in life is a devil, whether satanically controlled or not. Thus the love of money, seeking for fame, or desire for alcohol may be a personal devil to one man and not prove a temptation to another. So let us consider first what to call this evil personage. He has been given many names.

Probably the most colorful of his names is that of Beelzebub, the name given by the Pharisees. Interestingly, this is made up of two words meaning "master of flies," and obviously referring to his mastery over the filthy things of life.

Genesis introduces him as a snake—dangerous and repulsive. Elsewhere he is represented as a dragon—ferocious and powerful. Other figurative names include the prince of darkness, a roaring lion, the tempter, and the sower of tares. I prefer the title "Satan," the definition of which is adversary (this, in turn, means "one who opposes and tries to defeat").

THE BIBLE is full of references to the power of Satan. Early in Genesis we read of this angel who fell and at the same time wielded such a power that he carried with him one third of the angels of heaven. It is interesting to note that the reason for this fall was his desire for personal glory, even above the glory of God. This angel had been close to God, so close that he had the opportunity to offer his services for the redemption of mankind.

The closing pages of the New Testament likewise mention the satanic forces, this time carrying predictions as to the final outcome of the entire struggle.

Of course, the best known of all of the temptings was that of Christ. The text gives no indication that Christ and Satan held any "reunion," but it is evident that Christ was thoroughly familiar with Satan's methods and his intentions. Note the old, familiar theme popping up—offering personal glory and great power in exchange for the loss of the soul.

Too many people think of Satan as being eternal, always in existence from the beginning. Lucifer (Isaiah 14:12-17), whose name meant "son of the morning" or "morning star," was created in the glorious beauty of perfection. Then the fall came, and Lucifer began his evil campaigns of vengeance which gained him the other cognomens. No sooner had man been created a little lower than the angels than Satan stepped in and started his earthly crusade for evil. As would be expected, this power does not come openly to most men but works through other human sources and tries always to disguise the temptation in such a manner that it is not recognizable unless the one tempted maintains a moral standard by which he can measure such things.

GENESIS is full of allusions to the partial success of Satan. "The wickedness of man was great in the earth, and every imagination of the thoughts of his heart was evil continually."—Genesis 6: 5. God found it necessary to use stern measures to combat him, and a flood wiped out mankind in order to wipe out the results of the influence of Satan.

The greatest names of the Old Testament—even the kings, judges and prophets—were partially corrupted by satanic influences. David, one of God's elect, succumbed to temptations, some of major degree. The illustrious Solomon, likewise, strayed far from God's ways. God never condoned such evil, but he did use the best material available. If one believes that Satan is the primary source of all major evil, then Satan through his tool, Herod, began early on his persecution of Christ, even trying to bring about His death.

Satan's greatest victories have been through the methods of logic. "There is a way that seemeth right to man." First comes the appeal to the animal nature, the need for bodily comforts—"Command these stones to be made bread." If Christ had used his supernatural powers as Satan had suggested, the value of his coming would have been nullified and Satan would have won. But Christ's thinking was as rapid and accurate as that of Satan.

Satan made use of the scriptures to gain a point—but Christ defeated him there also—"It is written again," quoting from the same scriptures as rebuttal.

As a last resort in the temptation of Christ, Satan used the thing which constituted his own weakness, an offer of worldly power—in fact almost an offer of partnership. Although Christ had already denied such ambitions once, possibly Satan thought that association with men might have weakened Christ's spiritual intentions.

YES, SATAN was a very real power, and his presence was acknowledged by Christ. Christ was so familiar with the possible channels of satanic power, that he even saw it when it came through the weaknesses of his own disciples. He told Peter, "Get thee behind me Satan," referring not to Peter but to the devilish suggestion Peter had made.

Satan and God have conflicted at many points (Job 1: 6-9). The Bible even records conversations between them. Poor old Job was buffeted about somewhat as a test of the powers of a mortal man to remain faithful to God instead of falling into sinful ways.

Nor need the vocabulary be limited to the past tense concerning Satan. He continues to be successful. The same methods used in the past brought him such dividends that he has not felt the need to change them to any great degree. A study of his past can give an insight into his present-day channels of work. Knowledge of the Bible teaches the certain set patterns of his behavior and his use of weak man, thereby giving us a weapon with which we can combat his forces.

It is not my intention to discuss the ultimate defeat of Satan, other than to state that we do have assurance that Satan will lose the final battle.

The old proverb, "Forewarned is forearmed," is my text. A realization that Satan is a real and vicious foe is one of our strongest weapons to maintain and forward the cause of God as opposed to satanic power.

Growing Old

Someone has said: "Nobody grows old by merely living a number of years. People grow old by deserting their ideals. Whether sixty or sixteen, there is in every human being's heart the joy of the games of living. You are as young as your faith, as old as your doubts; as young as your self-confidence, as old as your fear; as young as your hope, as old as your despair."—Detroit Branch Bulletin.

The True Significance of Fasting

By Margaret W. Gibson

ACCORDING TO Webster's dictionary, to fast means "To abstain from food, either from necessity, or as a religious obligation."

Fasting is not mentioned in the Scriptures before the time of Moses. It is highly probable that it was practiced, however, because the gospel which was had in the beginning is no different from the gospel now.

Moses fasted a long period of forty days and forty nights while he was upon Mount Sinai in the presence of God. It was a remarkable occasion. The rest of the people were down in the valley, not daring to set foot on the sacred mount around whose top the lightnings flashed and the thunders roared.

God had something of tremendous portent to say to Moses at this time—for the benefit of mankind. We know a part of it from the King James Version of the Scriptures—and we learn much more from the Inspired Version. It was necessary for Moses to come very close to God. In doing so, the claims of the flesh had to be denied that the claims of the spirit might be pre-eminent. This seems to have been accomplished, and Moses was able to draw so close to the Father that he spoke with Jehovah and saw him (at least, in part). The Ten Commandments, which were to bring the children of Israel to the point where their most enlightened could become followers of Christ, were written for Moses to deliver to his people.

Fasting was thus, early in history, associated with the highest sort of spiritual preparation for blessing to come. Moses, too, according to the Inspired Version, was tempted by Satan on Mount Sinai. But partly because he had overcome the legitimate claims of the flesh, he was able to overcome the most subtle temptations which Satan offered to both the flesh and the spirit. The abstinence from fleshly lusts had prepared him to abstain from the spiritual temptations.

We are told, further, that Joshua fasted for the receipt of blessings, and that Elijah also abstained from food. David, the King of Israel, fasted and prayed for his son's recovery from illness, but his prayer was not answered.

THE OUTSTANDING FAST, in all history, was of course, that of Jesus. At the outset of his career, he went into the wilderness "to be with God," as the Inspired Version puts it. Satan did not want Jesus to come face to face with the challenge of God in the flesh—and his first temptation was offered to the flesh. "Command that these stones be changed into bread."

For forty days and nights Jesus went without food or drink—physical food, that is, and he was hungry. But spiritually Jesus had been fed. That food and drink of which he later told the woman at the well—"whosoever eateth of this bread and drinketh of this water, shall never hunger nor thirst again"—had been his during the entire period, nourishing and refreshing him. He had learned that temporary demands of the flesh were of far less value than the permanent satisfaction of the Spirit. It was with the confidence of faith and experience that he could say to Satan, "It is written, Man shall not live by bread alone!"

After that, Jesus was standing on even higher ground and could also sense the poison in the next temptation: "Cast thyself down from the pinnacle of the temple. Is it not written, he shall give his angels charge over thee? They shall bear thee up in their hands, lest at any time, thou dash thy foot against a stone."

The appeal to one's vanity—to be honored, held in awe, worshiped—this was one of the stones upon which Satan, himself, had fallen. God would give signs, yes, at the proper time, but not to "make-believers," nor to glorify individuals. Jesus had found following God so spiritually satisfying, and self-denial in his cause so small a price to pay, that he could answer, "It is written, Thou shalt not tempt the Lord, thy God."

The third temptation came to Jesus when he was physically very weak and tired, but spiritually, mighty and strong. All the kingdoms of the earth and the glory of them were spread before Christ—and Satan offered them to Jesus if he would but worship him.

But Jesus was looking with his spiritual eyes now, and they saw far beyond the vision shown by his tempter. He knew that such a choice would defeat God's purpose for man. For him, Jesus, a cross, not a crown. But toward that cross he could see all the people of the earth pressing; and because that cross was in the hand of God, Jesus saw the multitudes gathered also into that safe and comforting refuge.

His fast of earthly things had given him heavenly vision.

"Get thee hence, Satan; for it is written that thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve."

And Satan departed, and angels came and ministered unto Jesus.

These temptations met Jesus at the beginning of his career. He had been at the crossroads—and he had chosen the right road.

But he was still human as well as divine. Even in his death, he felt human anguish and pain. Satan's nature doesn't let him stop until his intended victims slip from his outstretched hands into the sheltering arms of the Father. Jesus must have faced Satan often, before he sighed, "It is finished!"

MORE THAN ONCE, Jesus spoke to his followers regarding fasting. We do not find a direct command to fast, but Jesus must have mentioned it to them, for we find him referring to them as fasting, and then giving them instructions how to fast.

Moreover, when ye fast, be not as the hypocrites, of a sad countenance: for they disfigure their faces, that they may appear unto men to fast. Verily, I say unto you, they have their reward.

But thou, when thou fastest, anoint thy head, and wash thy face; that thou appear not unto men to fast, but unto the Father, who is in secret; and thy Father, who seeth in secret, shall reward thee openly.—Matthew 6: 17, 18, I. V.

Christ believed in fasting. He taught his disciples to do so, for it had specific value. They were to give up lesser desires for greater—and they must be sincere. If they fasted so that people could praise them, they were doing it for self-glory, nor for God's glory—and they would be nothing more than hypocrites.

We find that in Jesus' time, fasting and prayer were often a necessary accompaniment to the healing of those mentally and physically ill. At one time, the apostles asked the Master why they had been unable to heal a lunatic boy whom he had been able to heal. After chiding them for their lack of faith, Jesus added, "Howbeit, this kind goeth not out but by prayer and fasting."

Prayer and fasting seem to be joint requisites for obtaining blessings sought. They are closely entwined—and rightly, of course. Fasting turns our hearts toward prayer, and prayer makes us want to practice self-denial.

In the thirteenth chapter of The Acts, we find the apostles met in fasting and prayer, and that after this, Paul and Barnabas were called and ordained apostles.

Cornelius, a just and good man among the Gentiles, fasted and prayed that he might learn God's will concerning his future. God recognized the sincere desire of his heart and sent an angel from heaven to tell him exactly what to do.

Paul and Barnabas fasted and prayed at Derbe before commending newly ordained elders to the church (Acts 14: 23), and Paul fasted when the ship upon which he was traveling to Rome was driven by the storm. He speaks of "approving" himself as a minister to God, by "fastings" (II Corinthians 6: 5), and as having been in "fastings often" (II Corinthians 11: 27). Always his fastings and prayers bore fruit.

NOWHERE DOES GOD TELL US to abuse the body so that it cannot properly do the work with which it is entrusted. One pauses with pity and impatience at the spectacle of people who deliberately torture themselves and disfigure their bodies, and live in wretchedness and beggary "for the glory of whatever gods they worship." What kind of gods could such be, who could create bodies beautiful and delight in seeing them maimed and disfigured? The answer is, of course, that God isn't like that, and never was, and never will be.

But to refrain from food for a period of time in order to pray and think more spiritually is an entirely different matter.

Modern revelation on fasting and prayer is much the same as former revelation and, in addition, the word fasting is used interchangeably with "rejoicing." What food is eaten is to be prepared with "singleness of heart," in other words only what one needs (Section 59: 3).

In Section 92, the church was rebuked and asked to fast and mourn because of disobedience. This is not contrary to the spirit of the fast, as mourning is repentance desiring the blessing of forgiveness.

In Section 124: 1, President Joseph Smith addressed the conference assembled in 1897. Speaking under the influence of the Spirit of God, he said, "Thus saith the Spirit of your Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ; your fasting and your prayers are accepted and have prevailed."

Following these introductory remarks, the Spirit was poured out in abundance. The counselors to the presidency and three apostles were called to office, and that revelation in which provision was made for the calling and selection of other officers was given. The revelation is filled with instruction, inspiration, and warning—the way for which seems to have been clearly prepared by the fasting and prayers of “the elders of the church.”

WE NOTE NOW that before a General Conference, we are asked to fast and pray that God be in charge of it and direct the leaders. We find that the more sincere we are in obeying this request, the more truly his Spirit does prevail.

Frequently we are asked at reunions to come to prayer meetings fasting from the morning meal, and when we are obedient, a blessing usually follows.

Not only in our church but in other Christian churches, it is the custom to come fasting to the Communion service. We attend that meeting seeking the particular blessings of self-honesty, repentance, forgiveness, and new strength, and fasting brings us closer to God.

Many Christian churches keep the season of Lent, in memory of the forty days which Christ spent fasting in the wilderness. We profit greatly from such experiences. Some individuals sacrifice candy, ice cream, or other favorite food or amusement during the period. That, too, helps, and if done in the right spirit is undoubtedly appreciated by the Lord.

But the greatest value of the fast is that the practice of it gives us more understanding of what God really wants us to give up. We give up sweets, which have become part of our physical craving, and we find that Jesus means more to us.

We go a little further, giving up something more essential and praying more earnestly; then we find we are praying more wisely and more unselfishly for better things and for more people. We grow in understanding.

Eventually, the true conception of Jesus' temptation and fasting flashes upon us. It is sin that Jesus wants us to fast from. It is sin, not bread or candy or ice cream, that is holding us back and preventing the coming of the kingdom!

We have to learn to understand, gradually, but by fasting consistently we do learn. The sweets that we longed for—the food which would become part of our bodies—are not as firmly entrenched in us as our sins are, and we must lay aside the evil in us to see clearly.

Christ had not completely overcome Satan when angels ministered to him on the Mount. Even in the garden, the two were wrestling for the soul of man. “Thy will be done,” was a hard thing to say.

In Jesus' prayer for his disciples, we find these beautiful words:

And for their sakes, I sanctify myself, that they also might be sanctified through the truth.

Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through their word.

That included all who believe on him through the Scriptures.

CHRIST'S TRUEST FAST was the putting from his own nature anything which would cause anyone else to stumble. He was requesting a great thing of God in his prayer; he was asking that every human being who was living, had lived, or ever would live, would be saved in the kingdom of God. And his prayer will be answered, except for those, who, having known light, prefer darkness.

God, himself, cannot withhold the blessings asked for by righteous men. In the first place, righteous men ask for right things. No more righteous being than Jesus ever lived. Nothing blinded his spiritual vision as to what to ask for. Everything he had, he gave willingly to make that request come true.

In prophetic vein, Jesus once said, “And I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me.” It was dependent upon that “if.” Jesus would not have been lifted up had he not kept to the program which was his to carry out. But he did keep completely to the program and he was lifted up. He is drawing and will continue to draw all men unto himself.

Through us, God is calling to men everywhere today. We have done but a fraction of what is required of us. We have frittered away the Lord's time, and we shall answer for it.

We need to fast and pray—the real fast, the fast that requires self-sacrifice, self-control, and self-restraint. A person once prayed for the ability not to say one cross word all day and succeeded in doing so—with God's help. It was difficult, for that person was hot-tempered and impetuous, ill and worried. But the windows of heaven were opened upon that individual, and others, too, were blessed because of a sincere fast.

We ask God for an endowment of the Spirit to further the work of the kingdom. Without that endowment, the kingdom cannot be built. Are we willing to fast, really fast for it? If we are, our prayers will be granted, and there is no limit to what we may ask, provided we are obedient.

And whatsoever things we ask, we receive of him because we keep his commandments, and do those things that are pleasing in his sight.—John 3: 22.

WE ARE PREPARING for another conference this year. Nearly half the people on earth are hungry, sick, and desperate. The shadow of another war is already darkening our days. Out of all the world, God has chosen us—a little band of 140,000 people—to save the world. He has promised to endow us with power to do the task if we will qualify.

This doesn't mean that God will save the world if we just ask him to and then don't pay our tithing. He can't and he won't, but the blood of those to whom our tithing could have taken the gospel will be on our heads and upon the heads of our children. In this case, fasting means paying our tithes and doing without the things which the money we owe to God is now buying. Having complied with the law, we can expect

(Continued on page 14.)

“I, the Lord”

The first of a series of three articles introducing Joseph Smith, the last of the Major Prophets

By GEORGE NJEIM

President of Seventy

IN THE YEAR 1820, a young man, Joseph Smith, made the startling claim that he had seen two heavenly personages standing at the end of a shaft of light which extended from where he stood into the heavens above. One of these personages, pointing to the other, addressed young Smith saying, “This is my beloved Son, hear him.” This visitation was in answer to Smith’s prayer. He had retired into the woods to seek release from his confusion as to which of the many churches familiar to him was the Church of Christ. The answer that came to him was, “Join none of them.”

This claim, though it produced scarcely a ripple in the ocean of humanity at that time, has slowly gained momentum until it has reached the proportion of a tempest. Although a century has elapsed since the claim was made, the passing of the years has not diminished the controversy. That Joseph Smith sought God in prayer has never been refuted—nor has it ever been an issue. Any minister, regardless of his religious affiliation, when confronted with a confused mind, would suggest prayer for help. Did not Christ say, “Seek and ye shall find; knock and it shall be opened unto you?” But that Christ appeared to Joseph

Smith is still a subject of debate, and over that small detail the controversy rages. It is not considered peculiar or objectionable to say that he knocked on the celestial gate, but to many it seems intolerable to believe that the door was opened to him.

From the time when his experience was made public, Joseph Smith became a marked man in the community, and life was made very unpleasant for him. Since every one in his community was a member of one church or another, he must have led a lonely life. He obeyed the command he had received and joined none of the churches; he had been told that their doctrines were “doctrines of men.” Had he not persisted in his claims, the storm would have passed away; and since it is human nature to be forgetful, he would have been left to live in peace. But three years after making his first statement, he made another. This time, September, 1823, he said he was told by an angel that God had a momentous work for him to do.

AFTER RELATING his first experience, Joseph Smith must have appeared to people about him to be a visionary or an eccentric. This time it was evident that the man was progressing according to a plan. He said the Lord wanted him to translate a book into English, and that an angel had shown him that the book was written on gold tablets which had been buried in the ground. When these last facts became known, people ceased attributing visionary powers to him and began accusing him of wanting riches. “He was lazy and a digger of treasures,” as later historians have carelessly said. To others he was and has ever been an impostor. Some time ago, News Week described him in the words used above. Six issues later the editor, in the letters-column, expressed his regrets because he had “relied upon accounts of Joseph Smith which were written by historians whose bias is open to question.”

There were, on the other hand, a few who did not believe the accusations against Joseph Smith. They believed that he was a good man, and that God was using him as he used other prophets in former days to introduce a message that was vital to his time. Thus the controversy has continued, even up to the present time.

What makes this issue important is the great and striking claim that divine intervention can and does still occur. We are living in an age very different from the age in which the claim was made. One hundred and twenty-some years ago the world was fairly stable—materially, spiritually, and politically. The nations were living at peace, and no threat of complete annihilation was hanging over them. Today the opposite is true. Civilization is declining, and even the most thoughtless of us cannot overlook the fact that this world is not as it used to be. The Biblical statement that prophecies, “The wisdom of their wise men shall perish, and the understanding of their prudent men shall be hid,” was never so true as now. The wisdom of the statesman and the knowledge of the economist seems to have led us toward a morass. The theologian is appalled at finding his classes deserted, and the minister is saddened because of the increasing number of empty pews before him. Old and established values and rules of conduct are changing and being replaced by the law of the jungle and the power of force alone. Many of us with the wall behind us and decay ahead of us are perplexed and know not what to do. We can only lift our heads upward, and, like Jehoshaphat of old, say, "We have no might against this great company that cometh against us; neither know we what to do; but our eyes are upon thee." Is there today a word from God for this strife-torn world as there was for the people of old?

IF ONLY BECAUSE of his noble effort to reach for more than man-wisdom, the claims of Joseph Smith cannot go unnoticed today. More than that, we believe the answer to the question asked is found in these claims. For the God, who, in the meridian of time, "so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life," is not ignoring us in the hour of the world's greatest of trials. He is objectively revealing his will as he did in days of old.

Here is the place where our difficulties arise. The claims of Joseph have been fiercely disputed. How can we arrive at a satisfactory conclusion as to the truthfulness of the story?

True, since the claims of Joseph are to a prophetic gift, we find ourselves at a loss when attempting to find a parallel to them in human experience. It is to the more ancient and generally recognized prophets we must resort. The soundness of any view, whether scientific, economic, religious, or prophetic, stands out by comparing it with other views on the same subject and by measuring it against later developments. By his claims to an objective heavenly visitation, Joseph Smith at once elevated himself to such a height that it is difficult or impossible to find a contemporary with which to compare him. Even the reformers are out questioned. Therefore the nearest source we can go to dates back to almost two thousand years and more—to the prophets of the apostolic period and to those who lived in Israel before Christ.

Also, due to a common misunderstanding of prophetic gifts, the function of and qualification for that office should be comprehended. Many people think that the prophet's function is to foretell future events. That is true only in part. The function of the prophet is to declare the sovereignty of God. With that declaration goes the predictions of blessings for the obedient subjects and wrath for the disobedient. When it comes to the qualifications of the prophets, finite individuals can pass no judgment. The right of choice is left to the one who sees deeds and understands motives. Man sees only the former, and that "through a glass darkly." Motives are completely hidden from him despite his psychological understanding. Certainly, no man would have qualified a fugitive from justice for a divine commission, yet such was Moses. A man of vulgar and profane language could never be considered by us, yet such Isaiah called himself and asserted his unworthiness. Peter hid his face from the Lord because of his shame for his deeds, yet was chosen for a leading role in the Church of Christ. And Paul, the Apostle to the Gentiles, found himself, before his calling, doing the evil which he would not allow.

JOSEPH SMITH was a man like all men—subject to the temptations and conditions of his day, but he was no rogue in the sense of being dishonest or unprincipled. As we shall find out later on, he had a high degree of love for his fellow beings. Why he was found qualified for such a mission is known only to God. But this we know: he functioned fully as the prophets of old. The main purpose of his mission was to declare the majesty and sovereignty of God. The predictions were contingent. Their fulfillment depends on the response to the divine call.

The story of his calling took place three years after he had had his first vision. This time he was seventeen years of age and was in his room petitioning the Lord for forgiveness. He relates his story in the following language:

While I was thus in the act of calling upon God, I discovered a light appearing in the room, which continued to increase until the room was lighter than at noon-day, when immediately a personage appeared at my bedside standing in the air, for his feet did not touch the floor. He had on a loose robe of most exquisite whiteness. It was a whiteness beyond anything earthly I had ever seen; nor do I believe that any earthly thing could be made to appear so exceedingly white and brilliant; his hands were naked, and his arms also a little above the wrist. So also were his feet naked as were his legs a little above the ankles. His head and neck were also bare. I could discover that he had no other clothing on but this robe, as it was open so I could see into his bosom. Not only was his robe exceedingly white, but his whole person was glorious beyond description, and his countenance was truly like lightning. The room was exceedingly light, but not so very bright as immediately around his person. When I first looked upon him I was afraid, but the fear soon left me. He called me by name, and said unto me that he was a messenger sent from the presence of God to me, and that his name was Moroni. That God had a work for me to do, and that my name should be had for good and evil among all nations, kindreds, and tongues; or that it should be both good and evil spoken of among all people. He said there was a book deposited written upon gold plates, giving an account of the former inhabitants of this continent, and the source from whence they sprang. He also said that the fullness of the everlasting Gospel was contained in it, as delivered by the Savior to the ancient inhabitants. Also that there were two stones in silver bows, and these stones fastened to a breastplate constituted what is called the Urim and Thummim, deposited with the plates, and the possession and the use of these stones was what constituted seers in ancient or former times, and that God had prepared them for the purpose of translating ing the book. After telling me these things, he commenced quoting the prophecies of the Old Testament. He first quoted part of the third chapter of Malachi; and he quoted the fourth or last chapter of the same prophecy, though with a little variation from the way it reads in our Bibles. Instead of quoting the first verse as it reads in our books, he quoted it thus: "For behold the day cometh that shall burn as an oven, and all the proud, yea and all that do wickedly shall burn as stubble, for the day that cometh shall burn them saith the Lord of Hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch." And again he quoted the fifth verse thus: "Behold, I will reveal unto you the priesthood by the hand of Elijah the prophet before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord." He also quoted the next verse differently: "And he shall plant in the hearts of the children the promises made to the fathers, and the hearts of the children shall turn to their fathers: if it were not so the whole earth would be utterly wasted at his coming." In addition to these he quoted the eleventh chapter of Isaiah, saying that it was about to be fulfilled. He quoted also the third chapter of Acts, twenty-second and twenty-third verses, precisely as they stand in our New Testament. He said that that prophet was Christ, but the day had not yet come when they who would not hear his voice should be cut off from among the people, but soon would come.

He also quoted the second chapter of Joel from the twenty-eighth to the last verse. He said that this was not yet fulfilled, but was soon to be.

IT IS NOT HARD to see why the contemporaries of Joseph Smith misunderstood him and interpreted his motives other than he had stated. For nineteen hundred years there had been no claim to such a supernatural experience, and the world was resting on the belief that the Bible contained all that God needed to reveal. Furthermore, everyone was satisfied with the order of things as they were. Also the time that is needed for the testing of the validity of prophetic utterances was not granted to them. They were quick to judge, and that was natural. But it is difficult to understand why the people of our day should continue to echo the cry of his ancient critics in the face of what has been happening in the world around us.

When the claims of Joseph Smith were made, the world was on the threshold of its greatest industrial, commercial, and scientific age. Should not God reveal himself progressively and proportionately to the newly attained knowledge? Such was the story of his self-disclosure in the sacred Scriptures. At first, he appeared as a tribal God, but as the conception of these Semitic people was enlarged, God became the God of Hosts. At first a box, the Ark of the Covenant, was his earthly seat; but with the advancement in knowledge, we discover that heaven was his throne and the earth his footstool.

Had there been no appreciable revelation of God to match the advance in knowledge and human relations, the idea of God would not have survived until the present. Also, we are beginning to discover that the universe is composed of different forces working in perfect harmony with each other to produce the existing order. If the balance between these forces were changed, disaster would be the result. Man also is made up of different forces and desires. He is not all mental, or emotional, or spiritual, and so it is with his desires. They are not all material. If the equilibrium between these forces were disturbed, man would destroy himself. The stress on the purely material and the purely secular and scientific during the last hundred years is working havoc with man and destroying the idea of God. It is for the preservation of this immutability which appears in the universe and man that God should reveal his will in this day and age. The Bible has ceased to be the authority to us that it used to be to the contemporaries of Joseph Smith, and the state of satisfaction that characterized his age certainly is not present today. A working order has been disturbed and God must restore the proper balance between the newly-gained knowledge and his supreme authority, or all is lost.

SUCH WAS THE divine mission assigned to Joseph Smith. The gospel which once was the good news for his contemporaries and the ancients did not contain sufficient good news to meet the demand of the new age. Hence the Lord prepared a record of his visit to the ancient Americans to meet the demand of a doubting period. The "fullness of the everlasting gospel" was contained in it. This word fullness indicates the insufficiency of the former.

With enough surface investigation of the heavenly ministry to Joseph Smith, we find that the adverse criticism of his contemporaries, though natural in the face of his prophetic claims, is certainly unwarranted now. A full appreciation of his message is possible only when the details become known and when time shall have been allowed to verify the facts. The elapse of a century and more makes the truthfulness of his message shine brighter than ever.

The True Significance of Fasting

(Continued from page 11.)

answers to our prayers when we pray, for we have fulfilled the conditions necessary for an answer.

Fasting means something special to each of us. We know, generally speaking, what we are doing, or not doing, that holds back God's work; and if we don't know, we can find out. If we care enough, we will fast or "abstain from" that thing, and then we can ask with a reasonable expectation of getting true blessings.

The endowment of the Spirit of God will come as soon as we want it enough to earn it. It can't dwell in unclean temples, but it will dwell in our lives as soon as we invite it in by "fasting" from the sins which defile us. God, himself, cannot withhold his power from us if we live righteously, and the kingdom will rise.

And hereby we know that he abideth in us by the Spirit which he hath given us.

REPEAL---

A Betrayal of the American People

THE DEVASTATING RESULTS of the national repeal of the Eighteenth (prohibition) Amendment now "make one of the blackest chapters in American history," according to the Black Book of Repeal just published by the Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

Mrs. D. Leigh Colvin, president, said that the book is to supply the American people with text information about the devastating effects of alcoholic beverages on the population, since it was claimed by repealists that "Repeal would bring Utopia." Excerpts from the book follow:

The current reaction of disillusioned voters is demonstrated by the fact that an increasing one fourth of the nation, by area, containing one fifth of our people, again has prohibition laws by local option.

Immediately after repeal, the previously outlawed alcoholic beverage traffic launched a vast, nationwide and up-to-now continuing campaign of advertising and sales promotion to make people feel that it is fashionable and glamorous to drink!

Americans in wet areas have been encouraged to become the world's heaviest drinkers. The fact that alcoholic beverages are as habit-forming as other narcotics has made this drink objective a comparatively easy one!

The growing grip of drink under repeal is amply demonstrated by the fact that consumers (drinkers) spent $8,770,000,000 for alcoholic beverages in 1946, as compared with $2,003,000,000 in 1934, the first complete year of repeal.

The current American "drink bill" to the nation, the state, the community, the family, and the individual cannot be totaled without recognizing that the amount of money spent for alcoholic beverages is equaled by the cost of drink-associated crime, disease, insanity, loss of income, poverty, juvenile delinquency, broken homes, and other human and economic waste. Drink is the first step of the individual away from religion.

Arrests for drunkenness including drunken driving in the United States reached an all-time high of one for every forty-three persons in 1946, or 250 per cent over 1932, the last complete year of national prohibition.

Drunkenness has become the second leading cause for arrest. One fifth of those arrested for drunkenness are under twenty-five years of age.

One out of every four admissions to psychiatric wards of the nation's general hospitals is an alcoholic, and one of every seventeen men and women committed to . . . hospitals for permanent care of psychiatric (mental) patients is an alcoholic. The number of chronic alcoholics in the country has grown to 750,000 and the number of "problem" drinkers to 3,000,000.

Since repeal, the alcoholic beverage traffic has consistently waged an insidious campaign to promote drinking in the home and to persuade women to drink. Owners of bars, night clubs, and liquor stores are urged by the traffic to locate in residential neighborhoods for these purposes! The result has been a congestion of alcoholic beverage selling places in shopping areas, often up to ten to a block.

The increase in promoted drinking among women has become a national problem, and murder and other crimes in once-smart residential areas have become common rather than exceptional.

Under the commercially promoted and politically promulgated myth that it is not intoxicating, beer, including "3.2" beer, is a major cause of drunkenness and alcoholism.

More than 446,500 taverns, worse than old-time saloons, and other alcoholic beverage retail places, one for every eighty-five families, are now open in this country.

No greater fraud has ever been perpetrated upon the American people than the continuous cry of the alcoholic beverage traffic that "it pays taxes" and that these taxes take the place of or reduce others!

Not a single dollar in taxes, including property taxes, is paid by the alcoholic beverage industries which is not included in the retail price of the beverages and collected from the consumers!

A special commission reported to the 1945 Massachusetts Legislature that the annual public cost of drunkenness approximated $61,000,000, or nearly five times the $13,139,266 collected in taxes on alcoholic beverages in a year by the state and local governments.

The commission said the yearly burden on taxpayers in that state included $4,000,000 for care of mental patients whose illnesses were "caused or precipitated by alcoholism"; $6,000,000 for "cost of crime due to inebriety," and $51,000-

By HARRY E. CAYLOR

000 for "financial dependence (charity) due to inebriety."

Drink is a major factor in one third of all crime, and plays a part in nearly every classification of crime.

How often have you read in your daily paper, "The killer had been drinking"? A survey in one city revealed that either the offender or victim had been drinking in two thirds of sex crimes.

A pedestrian or driver reported as having been drinking is involved in one out of every four fatal auto accidents.

Since repeal, three fifths of an estimated 16,000 local option elections in counties, cities, wards, and other political subdivisions have resulted in dry victories by vote of the people. About 500 such areas are voting dry, annually.

The honest law enforcement officer who is conscious of his oath and Christian obligation always finds the prohibition law no harder to enforce than other laws. Thus, prohibition with law enforcement, rather than public and political surrender to evil, is the answer.

This article was supplied by the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, 1730 Chicago Avenue, Evanston, Illinois.

THE LIFE OF CHRIST VISUALIZED

COLOR FILMSTRIPS TAYLOR-MADE TO SUIT THE NEEDS OF CHILDREN

The Birth and Childhood of Jesus
The First Year of Christ's Ministry
The First Galilean Ministry
The Last Ministry

The Betrayal and First Trial of Christ

"The Life of Christ Visualized" is a series of five new filmstrips now available, produced from the original "action pictures" of the Bible, used by the Standard Publishing Company in their well-known illustrated booklets of the same title. The five films are in black and white or in color, single frame, with text material on the film, and are excellent for religious instruction on the elementary and secondary levels. These filmstrips may also be cut apart and mounted to make single frame slides if no filmstrip projector is available. An inexpensive cardboard mount, the Mercury "Jiffymask," is available at $.55 per box of 50.

$5.00 each

Black and white film strips.....$2.00 ea.

Visual Aid Department

SPOIL THE CHILD

By VERDA E. BRYANT

I WAS WALKING down the street last winter when the weather was reported to be eight above zero. Suddenly from a steep driveway just ahead of me there shot a little boy, not more than four or five years old, speeding on a tricycle out into the street. As his cycle tipped over in the middle of the street, I noticed he was bundled from head to toe against the bluster of the January cold so that he fairly seemed to bounce as he fell. At that moment I heard a voice from across the street calling, "Bobby, come over on your own side of the street."

Picking himself up from the street, Bobby replied in a normal voice, "Oh, shut up." I thought it was a good thing his mother couldn't hear his reply.

The voice called again, "Come here," and I tried to determine from where it came. Finally I saw a door standing a nose-width ajar and heard the mother plead, "Come over here. Don't coast down the driveway. You might get hurt."

The boy turned his head toward his mother and answered in a tone which she should have heard, "Ah, shut up."

At this the mother commanded, "Come here this instant!"

Bobby's only reply was to turn around and scream at the top of his voice, "shaddup, I said," and he proceeded to push his trike up the driveway.

The door across the street closed with a bang, and Bobby went on his merry way. I concluded the mother had gone to get her coat so she could settle young Bobby, so I walked very slowly. I saw Bobby ride his tricycle down the driveway into the street, where it tipped over, and Bobby again bounced in the middle of the street, picked himself up, and started for the driveway. Apparently the mother was not going to brave the cold to make her child obey, for when I turned the corner a block and a half away, Bobby was still tipping himself over in the street, and bouncing as he hit.

FAR GREATER DANGERS than the possibility of physical injury are besetting this child. What hope can there be that Bobby (and dozens of other such youngsters) will ever amount to anything? I pictured him as an incorrigible youth in a decade, perhaps a hardened criminal a score of years from now. Is it not just such early training that builds the juvenile delinquents of tomorrow?

I wondered if this situation were an isolated one, or if it were more general than we suspect as an aftermath of the pendulum's swing away from the "spare the rod and spoil the child" theory to the "he knows what he wants" idea?

Somewhere along the way, the parents of today must hit a happy medium, recognizing that children are people, that they have their own personalities, peculiarities, and desires which must not be unjustly squelched, but that they must also be taught to recognize that other folks are also people with personalities, peculiarities, desires, and rights to which they are entitled to give expression. It can be only by the grace of God that children such as this little Bobby can grow into respectable citizens, showing consideration of others, honor, and just all-around good Americanism.

I AM YOUR SON.

You hold me in your arms and dream,
And plan the man I will become.
But what you are will shape my destiny,
And form the pattern you will cut for me.

ONCE LADY MARY held the infant Jesus in
Her arms and dreamed her dreams.
God must have known her tutelage would be
A careful toiling, hour by hour,
A prayerful seeking after wisdom's ways.
He must have seen her depth of soul,
Her gentleness, her hungry searching
After truth and light,
Her steadfastness that would not swerve
From right,
Her faith, her pleasure in familiar sights
And sounds of nature—flowers, birds, clear,
Crystal water in a pool, rich fields of Grain, and falling rain.
He must have known that she could give a Boy his needs and more—
That she would kiss away his tears and Fears, and find the answers to his constant Questionings, else God would not have put
His Son within her care.

I AM YOUR SON.

I push my roots into the soil you give,
And like the seed, begin to die or live.
Within me is a part of earth, a part of God.
I am too weak to say what I shall be—
A devil or a man.
You hold me in your arms and dream
And plan the man I will become.
But what you are will shape my destiny,
And mold the pattern you have cut for me.

—Winifred Milner.

Radio Listening for Children

MANY PARENTS are confronted with the question "Just what kind and type of radio programs should children listen to?" One group of parents was privileged to listen to a lecture a few weeks ago by Brother D. B. Sorden on this subject. The following thoughts are taken from his lecture.

There is good and bad in almost everything—even in us. So it is with radio programs. These programs are educational in some ways for good or evil. They create attitudes which result in ways of thinking or acting.

We are confronted on every side with choices between good and bad, fine and vulgar, beautiful and ugly. With radio comes the chance for a few more choices.

Since the beginning of radio, a controversy has been waged principally among parents over the radio fare for their children. Some unfavorable criticisms have come from parents who have found it difficult to accept the likes and dislikes of their children.

To a certain extent, radio became a source of conflict between parents and children, because it interfered with other activities such as home duties, bedtime, mealtime, music practice, and outdoor recreation. The children just couldn't miss their radio programs.

Twenty-six years ago the first children's program was broadcast. Since then, several have come and gone, due to different reasons.

In 1932, CBS carried a program called "The Adventures of Helen and Mary." This was later changed to "Let's Pretend"; it is still broadcast weekly and is to be highly recommended.

Then the comic strip characters began to come to life over the air lanes. Along with them came "The Shadow" and "The Green Hornet." These had a great drawing power for the children, and they became so absorbed in the programs that they could do nothing but keep their ears glued to the loud speaker at the appointed hour for the broadcast. This went unnoticed by the parents for some time because "many mothers welcomed this electric nursemaid." But when the youngsters awoke in the night, screaming from a terrible dream or nightmare, parents began to realize their children were getting too much emotional reaction from their radio listening. Something had to be done.

COMMITTEES WERE formed and at different times were given time on the air to demonstrate the type of programs they would like their children to hear, but this was not entirely satisfactory because few of the committee members were qualified to write radio script. This is a highly specialized art, and those undertaking the task were not experienced. Had more time and money been spent on the project at that time, far more desirable programs for children would be available today.

Parents have power and can influence the type of programs broadcast. The air lanes belong to the people. The industry has just rented them, and with enough pressure, the people can determine what the terms of rental shall be. This will take a little time, effort, and money. When you hear a program you like, write the radio station saying so. If you don't like a program, write your reasons why.

In an article in the Parent-Teacher Magazine for January, 1948, these questions were asked at the close of a feature on radio listening:

1. Do crime programs have a detrimental psychological effect on the listener?
2. Do radio thriller programs ending in suspense have an effect on the health of the children?

Reported by May Worth

3. If so, is it good or bad?

Both negative and affirmative answers to each of these questions were supplied by eminent authorities in this field. Here again each individual parent must make a choice for himself.

PARENTS MUST guide radio listening in the home. The Family Listening Hour—a time when the whole family could listen and enjoy the fellowship of each other as well as the radio program would be ideal. A bulletin board in the home has worked in many cases. The program and time for broadcast are written on the board for each member of the family to see.

It is the duty of the parents to saturate the children with so much innocent, amusing, and inspiring fun that they are immunized against the impure and horrible. They should be trained to enjoy the best and most wholesome things of life.

Before we can intelligently appraise the type of programs a radio station carries, we must listen to all the programs for a day or more. With this knowledge, we can help our children to choose wisely the programs for their listening pleasure.

Here is a job for all parents.

Barometer of Love

A great many people would like to know when they are falling in love, so that they may decide whether to stop or continue. There is a simple test: the first symptom is a tendency to confide in the absent one, and it is high time to take notice when a man discovers himself talking to a woman who isn't there.
—Winifred Kirkland in Outlook.

Now That the Festival's Over

By SARAH VAN FLEET of the Department of Religious Education

“RESTORATION FESTIVAL has ended. What now?” I sat looking at this title on a short article which had been sent to us and began thinking about the festival and all the events that had taken place in connection with it. I, too, wondered, “What now?”

My work in the Department of Religious Education was new and interesting. Soon after I came to the department, letters began to arrive containing plans which Leagues all over the world were making to commemorate the restoration of the fullness of the gospel here on earth. Brother Elbert’s “Witnesses for the Restoration” lay on my desk, and I read it several times, feeling the spirit that the people in hundreds of branches would feel as this was read at their banquets or services.

We, the young people of Independence, were all engrossed in getting ready for city-wide activities for the Zion’s League. Commission meetings were being held several times a week with hundreds of young people united to celebrate the restoration in work, play, worship, and service. I was on the worship commission and kept busy copying scripts, conducting rehearsals, contacting people, and just generally getting ready for the worship pageant that was to start the week off with the spirit of the Restoration. I believe the pageant was a success because God was with us. Many other times that week his Spirit was with us.

ONE DAY, while looking over a manuscript that had been sent to us, a picture of what the Restoration consisted of came to me. I had always said, “restoration of the gospel,” but that could mean a lot of things. What were we celebrating about the restoration? Here it was in black and white, what the restoration of the gospel consisted of. Once again the clearness of the truths we hold precious was there before me, and I had a few moments to think on them. There was first authority, the establishing of the church by divine direction, the Book of Mormon and its authenticity, the restoration of Christ’s church here on earth, and the restoration of priesthood, first the Aaronic and later the Melchisedec.

The sweet spirit of peace stayed with us the whole week, and I’m sure it was with all the young people throughout the church at their various services. To me, the most inspiring part of it all was the privilege of reading the many reports of what the Restoration Festival had meant to other youth throughout the world. These reports all reached my desk for filing, and many times I felt a warm glow of satisfaction as I read of what had happened to different groups of young people as a result of the unity, love, purpose, and sacrifice they had experienced in preparing for their services.

A feeling of thanksgiving came to me as I read: “The Festival has served to tie us into consciousness of our distinctive organization as the Zion’s League. After ten years of existence, we needed something to universally tie or identify us with the total program of the church. We needed something to give us a greater consciousness of our selfhood in the church.” And “Our Restoration Festival, held April 17-18, was a spiritual and social success. God was with us and the people were blessed.”

I picked up another letter that read: “Let us remember today that God has been good to us in that he has permitted us to enjoy and be a part of this Marvelous Work and a Wonder.” Then one of the girls called in and said, “You know, I enjoyed all of Restoration Festival Week, but the nicest thing to me was our branch prayer service on Wednesday evening when the League took part.”

BROTHER ELBERT’S TESTIMONY should come to us here, “The voice is still calling, calling your name and my name—and others in many lands. Presently it will call the names of those not yet born. God and Christ and the Holy Spirit are still at work in the world. . . . This is our witness, as it is written: ‘By these things we know there is a God in heaven who is infinite and eternal, from everlasting to everlasting, the same unchangeable God.’—Doctrine and Covenants 17: 4. ‘And now, after the many testimonies which have been given of him, this is the testimony, last of all, which we give of him, that he lives; for we saw him, even on the right hand of God; and we heard the voice bearing record that he is the Only Begotten of the Father.’—Doctrine and Covenants 76: 3. This is our witness and our testimony, that the Restoration Movement is of God. Like our fa-

Let's Go Over the Top in October

Apr. 25		$9,073
Mar. 25		$5,305
Feb. 25		$4,537

thers and mothers before us, we have made a covenant with him, and our covenant we shall keep."

Another letter had this to say: "We have come closer to our fellow Saints throughout the world. We have developed a deep concern in our world-mission endeavor. Last fall, we set a goal for our contribution. Tonight we have realized this objective." Can you imagine a greater joy than having the Spirit of God within a group and that group realizing it has achieved a goal and will be setting another?

IT'S TIME to put the file folder away until it will be drawn on for ideas for the new League Annual or for mimeographed material to go out to your leaders who are calling for help.

"Restoration Festival ended April 18, but the Restoration did not end after the angel's visit nor at the death of Joseph, the prophet."

Let us not forget what the festival has done for the youth of the church in drawing them together in unity, love, work, sacrifice, and the opportunity to serve in building the kingdom of God in this great land of freedom.

"Let us thank God and go to with our might, both young and old, in the greatest work ever entrusted to mankind; the work of helping prepare Christ's spiritual temple for his coming."

Let us go over the top in raising the quota set for the Zion's League in the Missions Abroad Project. This is important. We have proved that it can be done. It only remains for us to do it.

Restoration Festival Observed in Holland

A Group of Rotterdam Leaguers

ON SECOND EASTERDAY, the young people of the church in Rotterdam went for a trip to Breda, a town about forty miles from Rotterdam. A group of twenty-two started by train at 7 o'clock in the morning. One boy was a very fine harmonica player and serenaded the others while they were on the train. After arriving at Breda, they had a walk for about an hour to the Mastbos, a large woodland south of Breda. It was very fine weather and they enjoyed the trip very much. Arriving at their destination, they rested for a while and then held their morning service in the midst of the woods. The service was led by the president of the League; Rinus Laban, a nineteen-year-old deacon, spoke on the first vision of Joseph Smith. The opening song was "d'Arde met haar bloemenfracht" (Earth with her ten thousand flowers). At the close of the meeting they sang "The Spirit of God like a fire is burning" (in English). After this interesting service, they had lunch.

Following lunch, there was a period of recreation. The group was divided in two smaller groups. From each was taken one person. The two stood about forty feet from the groups. The leader called some objects, one after the other—a handkerchief, a shoe, a pair of stockings, a shawl, a pair of spectacles, etc. Each group could help hand the article over to its player, but no one was allowed to rise. He who had the objects at the feet of the leader first was winner.

After this they had a long walk through the woods to look for a place to have some refreshments. While walking, they sang songs "Gloogopde gele wagen" (High on the Yellow Cart), "De Faden op de lanen in" (On the Paths and Avenues), etc. At last they found a suitable place where they could serve lemonade. It was already rather late at that time. While the girls rested, the boys had a football match. After this they started for the station in Breda, where they took the train home. At 6 o'clock they arrived in Rotterdam. All were tired, but they had had a fine day in God's nature.

HENDRIK COMPIER, League President.

MINISTRY TO THE ERRING and CHURCH COURT PROCEDURE

By Bishop L. Wayne Updike

50¢

Order from your Book Steward or direct from
HERALD PUBLISHING HOUSE
Independence, Missouri

Reluctant Soldiers of the Cross

By Charles Kornman

ONCE UPON A TIME there was a good old man. His people had chosen him to be their leader, as it was known that he was a man of prophetic insight and that through him, God was wont to speak his will to his children. These people came from the land of Israel and were being hounded and chased by Pharaoh and his warriors. The king had a huge building program planned, and he needed workers the worst way. This chase continued until Moses and the Israelites found themselves surrounded — the wilderness and Pharaoh on three sides and the Red Sea at their very feet. The people reacted very much as unarmed people do today when they are attacked by a superior force. They became panicky and started belittling their leaders for getting them into such a mess. However, Moses was a good psychologist, as all great leaders have been, and he knew that a sure way to calm the panic-stricken people was to get their minds off their troubles and give them something to think about. So, he called them around him and talked to them. "Fear not, stand still and see the salvation of the Lord". . . . He recalled all the blessings they had received and how they had had a pillar of fire and a cloud to guide them in their journey. Can't you just see him standing in the midst of his people while this army of chariots was bearing down on them? Speaking under prophetic impulsion, he must have been an inspiration to those frightened people.

God knew the people had just about reached the end of their resources. The Red Sea was stretching to the east, right in their direction of travel. Pharaoh was coming up rapidly and action needed to be taken. So the Lord talked to Moses and told him: "Speak to the children of Israel that they go forward."—Exodus 14: 15.

From those people Moses was talking to was to come the group who later settled Palestine and who were to bring forth the Son of God. What would have happened to the world had those people failed to listen is purely conjecture, but the very thought of a world without a Christ is terrifying. Then we come on down through history and find other crises equally destructive in origin and intent, but somewhere along the line there has always come a voice to command the people to keep the faith and to trust in God.

A man with such a message was Samuel. The Philistines had been pestering the people of Israel, attacking them in great and seemingly indestructible force. The story goes that the Israelites came to Samuel for help and guidance. They knew they had disobeyed the Lord, and, now that they were in danger, they wanted to atone for their sins and once again be under the protection of God. They came in all humility and sincerity, asking for forgiveness. "And the Lord thundered with a great thunder on that day upon the Philistines. . . and they were smitten before Israel." Then Samuel, realizing how much they had to be thankful for and knowing that God had done all this for his people, took a stone monument and set it up in commemoration of all that had gone before. He called this stone Ebenezer, and at the unveiling said, "Hitherto hath the Lord helped us." He always kept the thought before the people that upon God was the entire responsibility and that no mere man had done the helping.

WE GO ALONG with the Israelites in their travels and find them again in danger of annihilation. It is still their old bugaboo, the Philistines, who this time have a champion to challenge the Israelitish warriors. There is no one in all of King Saul's army who is willing to stand up in the face of this monster with any idea of victory. And David walks forth midst the pity of his

So the Lord talked to Moses and told him: "Speak to the children of Israel that they go forward."

New Horizons

www.LatterDayTruth.org

fellow men and jeers of the enemy. In a matter of minutes, the uneven duel is over, and the promise that David made to the giant is fulfilled. "Thou comest to me with a sword and with a spear and with a shield: but I come to thee in the name of the Lord of hosts, the God of the armies of Israel, whom thou hast defied. This day will the Lord deliver thee into mine hand."

Every time a crisis has faced the children of God, there has always been a man with a message of faith and hope—a central figure upon whom everything depended. And his message has always been that God is near and willing to help those who are not afraid to ask forgiveness for the wrong things they have done and who want to be helped. These men realized the maxim that even God cannot help a person unless that person is willing to co-operate.

These crises seem to fall into groupings. The early pre-Christ Israelites were nomadic by nature and by force of circumstance. Their crises seem to have developed as a result of their travels. And the man with the message was essential to maintain unity. When they were in trouble, it was usually because they had lost sight of their goal and had lost confidence in their Unseen Leader.

The people of God who lived in the era of Christ faced another type of crises—they came about as a result of obedience. To declare that one was a Christian in those days was to invite sure death and the crisis that Christians are facing today is no less dangerous because of the security with which they can affirm their faith. The Philistines are not poised on the edge of our bivouac ready to strike at a moment's notice. We will not be put into the arena to furnish food for lions or bait for mad bulls if we go to church next Sunday, although some people seem to think so—they stay away so consistently.

DID YOU EVER WONDER why the men and women of discernment and understanding always challenge us to work a little harder, study more diligently, and be more faithful in our compliance with the laws of God? It can be answered in comparatively few words—because the greatest single obstacle to a constructive growth towards a Christlike life is to develop a lethargic and complacent outlook at it.

We became interested in this church through perhaps as many channels as there are converts in the church. We all went through the same ritual in becoming a member. An authorized minister raised his hand, and we were immersed with the immortal prayer of baptism ringing in our ears. Soon after, we were confirmed members in the Church of Jesus Christ. We were given a challenge and an admonition—we were members in the church—not just another organization. We became conscious of the fact that, whether we wanted the responsibility or not, by our act of submission to baptism we became missionaries for the belief that this way of life is the best way on earth to live. This charge—this command to testify constantly of Jesus has been reworded in many different ways—all along our paths we have been constantly reminded that we have a personal responsibility to God to tell the story. Many of our songs proclaim that we are willing to follow Jesus even to our death. Why is it then that so many of our people develop such extreme cases of lethargy? This thing is big—this church with its program of Zion is the only salvation the world has. How can we be so complacent and stubborn when the church is literally on its knees asking for consecrated workers?

LET US LOOK at a case history. Robert X. was attending Graceland; his plans were beyond the formative stage—he was going to be a missionary. It didn't matter where, just so he was in the company of Christ. Then disaster took a backhand swipe at him, or so it seemed at the time—his application for General Church appointment was denied. His sister was accidentally killed just three days before General Conference. From his darkened viewpoint, everything possible had gone wrong. He had worked hard for his church. He had worked even harder to acquire an education—all for absolutely nothing. He was through Graceland. He was broke. He could have thrown his head back, buckled on his harness and gone on to school, but there was no reason—no "push" to spur him on. And lethargy reigned supreme.

The numbness that pervaded him from April 13 to the end of the school year was a blessing in disguise. Immediately upon graduation he went into the Army. There, the discipline and training brought him back to a semblance of his old enthusiastic self, but the "church" was in Missouri. He had forgotten that Christ goes with his people just as far and just as long as they will co-operate with him. Gradually the monotony and drudgery of wartime army life began to tell, and the old Robert was gone.

Discharge eventually came and again Robert was free to go on—if he wanted to. Instead he went home and went to work in a mine. The dangerous, exciting work attracted him, and he became a good miner. Then one day he got a letter—just a short note from an old friend. One paragraph spoke about Thelona Stevens and her Book of Mormon class. This friend asked Bob if he had ever read the twelfth chapter of Alma. Curiosity as to its content sent him to a dusty old box in the attic after his Book of Mormon. He read the story, and its effect was such that in a matter of minutes, he wrote a letter, asking for information as to entrance to a college close to an active branch.

Robert's lethargy and unconscious renouncement of his church's teachings were perhaps produced by rather unusual circumstances, but the result was the same as though it had been born of "sleeping in" on Sunday mornings, skating instead of preaching service, ignorance of the Scriptures, dilatory habits of prayer. At this point, let us stop and ask about ourselves. It's so simple to fall into the "easy" way of living. Perhaps we are slipping. An inventory now can register the lack, and we can do something about it before valuable time is lost. Someone once said that we spend entirely too much time in climbing back.

Speak to the children of Israel that they go forward. What better slogan could be devised? And what better advice could be given to the lethargic and the complacent? David once made a prayer petition that sums up in a beautifully worded sentence the thought that should be uppermost in our minds at all times: "Let the words of my mouth and the meditation of my heart be acceptable in thy sight, O Lord, my strength and my redeemer."

Responsibility of Parents

(Continued from page 4.)

of my parents. Yet, in addition to grace were needed all these other principles and functions in order for me to receive the benefits of the grace thus extended."

If his parents had not been willing to sacrifice during the early years of his ministry for Christ, he, in all probability, could not have been ready for the call which came to him. May all parents sense their great opportunity in this most critical age when their children are growing up so they will be ready when the time comes that they will be called into active church work.

Report from Minot, North Dakota

The Saints of Minot and vicinity met on Sunday afternoon, June 6, at the Stedwick home eleven miles east of Minot for a communion service. The group here has been augmented for the summer by several students attending Minot State Teacher's College, and regular Sunday services will continue throughout the season.

A picnic will be held at Oak Park on July 4. The Saints and their friends are invited to come and spend the day.

Orrin R. Wilcox

Box 183 M. S. T. C.
Minot, North Dakota

Briefs

MAINE DISTRICT.—The district spring conference was held at Stonington on May 15 and 16. Delegates for the coming General Conference were elected at the business session. On Sunday, Apostle George Lewis, Bishop Don Chesworth, and Missionary Don Harvey were speakers. Special music was provided by the Stonington junior choir under the direction of Elder William Wilson.

An all-day meeting was held at Jonesport on May 23. Apostle Lewis, Bishop Chesworth, and Elder Harvey were again the speakers. The Jonesport Choir, directed by Geneva Church, sang several anthems. Dinner was served in the church basement at noon.

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLORADO.—Barbara Brown and Mrs. Jessie Finney were baptized on Easter Sunday. Other recent baptisms include Harold Eugene Strader, Roger Leon Olsen, Georgia Ann Olsen, Mrs. Ruby Olsen, and Mrs. Lorraine Self. District President C. Houston Hobart conducted a series of missionary meetings from April 20 to May 4. Carl David Hammer was blessed on May 2. The new Hammond electric organ has been installed and will be dedicated on June 20.

ALVA, OKLAHOMA.—Mrs. Albert Bergen of Alva and Oscar Gustin of Lambert, Oklahoma, were baptized on April 4, Pastor Paul Lee officiating. District President Ralph Wilt was present on April 18 to discuss plans for the new church. On the following Sunday, three children were blessed: Betty, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Carlson; Betty, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Morris; and Gary Paul, son of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Gustin. Elders Paul Lee and Glen Limb officiated. Since last winter, family night has been observed once each month in honor of all those having birthdays within the month. The birthday dinner consists of "covered dishes" brought by the members; this is followed by a local talent show.

NORTHEASTERN NEBRASKA DISTRICT.—The semi-annual district conference was held at Omaha on June 6. Fourteen delegates to General Conference were elected and three ordination calls were approved. These three were Wesley Ballenger, priest; Clark Ballenger and Robert Gilmore, deacons. The time of holding district conferences was made the order of special business at the next conference.

BULLETIN BOARD

Sault Ste. Marie District Young People's Convention

The young people of Sault Ste. Marie District will hold a convention in Sault Ste. Marie, Michigan, July 9 to 11. Seventy Harold Velt and Missionary Loyd Adams are to be in charge. Registration will begin Friday evening; the convention proper will start on Saturday morning.

MALCOLM TOMLINSON
District Youth Leader

Nauvoo Reunion

The Nauvoo Reunion will be held July 17 to 25 at Nauvoo, Illinois. Reservations may be made with Max Hromek, 2807 Avenue N, Fort Madison, Iowa.

Northern Michigan District Reunion

The annual Northern Michigan District Reunion will be held at the Park of the Pines, four and one half miles north of Boyne City on Charlevoix Road, August 6 to 15. Apostle E. J. Gleazer will be in charge. President John Garver, Apostle Paul Hanson, Elder and Mrs. Harry Simons, Elder John Banks, Elder Warren Chelline, and several of the district leaders are to be in attendance also. A program to serve all ages from early morning until 10 in the evening is being arranged. Those desiring to rent tents and cots may contact Mrs. Ada Alldread, Boyne City, Michigan. Meals will be served on the grounds.

ALLEN SCHREUR.
For the Committee.

REQUESTS FOR PRAYERS

Prayers are requested for H. A. Hacker of Harrison, Arkansas, that he may be relieved of his affliction.

Mrs. Mary Crooker Donaldson of Topeka, Kansas, asks to be remembered in the prayers of the Saints that the operation she must soon undergo will be successful. She will go to surgery on June 21 at the Security Benefit Hospital.

Mrs. M. O. Thacker, St. Clair Hospital, Annex 9, East Seventy-first Street, New York City, asks the prayers of the Saints while she is undergoing treatment for her eyes. She will also appreciate cards and letters. If there are elders near, she would like administration.

Okia Hatten, 1214 Sixth Street, Apartment C, Santa Monica, California, has been very ill and would appreciate the prayers of the Saints.

ENGAGEMENTS

Frost-Root

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Fornicola of Sault Ste. Marie, Michigan, announce the engagement of their daughter, Phyllis Root, to William D. Frost, son of Mrs. Frieda Frost of Muskegon, Michigan. The wedding will take place on September 4.

Fairburn-Coshow

Mr. and Mrs. James Coshow of Vancouver, Washington, announce the engagement of their daughter, Gay Darline, to Burton Wayne Fairburn of Spokane, Washington. Miss Coshow is a graduate of Eastern Washington College, and Mr. Fairburn is a graduate of Gonzada University, Spokane. The wedding will take place in early fall.

WEDDINGS

Davis-White

Bertha Jean White and Paul Max Davis of Kansas City, Missouri, were married at Stone Church on June 8. Elder William Bath, grandfather of the groom, performed the double-ring ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Davis are making their home in Kansas City.

Speer-Allen

Velma Lucille Allen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ira Raymond Allen of El Dorado, Kansas, and M. Leonard Speer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Maben Speer of Phoenix, Arizona, were married June 6 at the Reorganized Church

www.LatterDayTruth.org

in El Dorado. Elder D. J. Williams of Wichita read the double-ring ceremony. They are making their home in Independence, Missouri. Mrs. Speer is a graduate of Graceland College; Mr. Speer will attend Graceland this fall.

Frisbie-Black

Betty Jean Black, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert C. Poits, and Paul M. Frisbie of Detroit, Michigan, were married at the Reorganized Church in Brooklyn on April 23. Elder E. LeRoy Squire performed the double-ring ceremony. The bride is a graduate of Graceland College; the groom will soon receive his M.A. Degree from the University of Chicago. At present, they are residing in Woodhaven, New York.

BIRTHS

Mr. and Mrs. Glen Middleton of Goodland, Kansas, announce the birth of a daughter, Linda Kay, on May 18. She was blessed May 30 by Elder J. R. Graybill. Mrs. Middleton is the former Twyla Bean.

Mr. and Mrs. Kerney R. Wells of St. Albans, Vermont, announce the birth of a daughter, Beverly Jean, born May 18. Mrs. Wells was formerly Evangeline Davis of Jonesport, Maine.

A daughter, Andrea Hope, was born on May 17 to Mr. and Mrs. John Bruno of Vancouver, Washington.

Mr. and Mrs. Perry Musgrove of Vancouver, Washington, announce the birth of a daughter, Lauretta Lynn, born April 18.

Mr. and Mrs. Wendell Kelley of Manhattan, Kansas, announce the birth of a daughter, Jeanne Patricia, born April 28. Mrs. Kelley is the former Helen Johnson.

A daughter, Bonnie Jean, was born on May 18 to Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Wood of Topeka, Kansas. Mrs. Wood is the former Ione Sheets.

Mr. and Mrs. John L. Whipple of Columbia, Missouri, announce the birth of a daughter, Jacqueline Sue, born April 29. Mrs. Whipple, the former Shirley Swanson of Chicago, is a graduate nurse of the Independence Sanitarium. Mr. Whipple is a student at the University of Missouri.

DEATHS

DAVIS.—Florence, died at Monmouth Hospital on April 8, 1948, following an illness of several months. She had been a member of the Reorganized Church since September 24, 1911.

She is survived by a son, Wesley Davis of Wayne, Nebraska, and a small grandson. Funeral services were held in the Lugg Memorial Chapel, Elder Victor Witte officiating. Burial was in Aledo Cemetery, Aledo, Illinois.

PEASE.—Mary Anne Minnie, was born November 28, 1883, in Amador City, California, and died May 19, 1948, at the home of her brother, John Honeychurch, in Sacramento, California. She was baptized into the Reorganized Church on September 23, 1928, and remained a faithful member throughout the remainder of her life.

She is survived by her son, W. R. Normington of Stockton, California; two brothers: John Honeychurch of Sacramento and Thomas Honeychurch of Stockton, California; and two grandchildren. Funeral services were held in Sacramento, Evangelist William H. Dawson officiating. Burial was in the Odd Fellows Lawn Cemetery in Sacramento.

SMITH.—Mary Elizabeth, was born March 26, 1869, at Atchison, Kansas, and died May 21, 1948, at the Jennie Edmundson Hospital following a heart attack. She had been a member of the Reorganized Church since March 11, 1928; she also belonged to the Palm Grove Woodman Circle. Her husband, William C. Smith, died thirty-four years ago.

She leaves a daughter, Mrs. Thomas J. Sorenson of Council Bluffs, Iowa; a brother, Albert Hendricks of Bluefield, West Virginia; four grandchildren; and three great-grandchildren. Services were held at the Cutler Funeral Home, Elder V. D. Ruch in charge. Burial was in Walnut Hill Cemetery in Council Bluffs.

NELSON.—Evanella, daughter of Robert and Elizabeth Perry, was born November 11, 1894, in Caseville, Michigan, and died May 1, 1948, at the Independence Sanitarium following a brief illness. As a girl, she moved to Warrensburg, Missouri, with her parents, where she resided for a number of years; for the past thirty-one years, she made her home in Independence. She was baptized into the Reorganized Church on June 26, 1904, at Reaverton, Michigan, and on February 27, 1921, was married to Jalmer G. Nelson at Independence. She was a devoted worker in her home, church, and community, and was a member of the Independence Music Club and Independence Symphony Orchestra.

She is survived by her husband; two daughters, Wilda and Bonnelle; and a son, Jalmer, Jr., all of the home; five sisters: Pearl Perry of Independence; Mrs. Ethel Morgan and Mrs. Golda Marr of Warrensburg; Mrs. Agnes Cockefair of Grandview, Missouri; and Mrs. Gladys Greer of Archie, Missouri. She also leaves one brother, Arthur Perry of Gladwin, Michigan. Services were held at the Stahl Funeral Home. Elder Ivan Clothier officiated, assisted by Elders Fred Epperson and Glaude A. Smith. Burial was in Mound Grove Cemetery.

NEPHEW.—Catherine May, daughter of Lily and James Langstaff, was born May 6, 1880, in Bedford, Iowa, and died May 6, 1948, at the Burnett Sanitorium in Fresno, California. She was married to Calvin Nephew in Michigan on May 29, 1904; two sons were born to this union. Baptized into the Reorganized Church on July 8, 1906, she was faithful to her covenant and valiant in her testimony until death. Her motherly and friendly character won her many friends. Mr. Nephew preceded her in death in 1932.

Surviving are two sons: Calvin J. of Fresno, California, and Robert L. of Sacramento, California; one sister, Mrs. Retta Grummett of Saskatoon, Canada; a brother, Charles Langstaff, also of Saskatoon; and two grandsons. Services were conducted at the Lisle Funeral Home in Fresno, Elder Myron Reed Schall of Sacramento officiating. Interment was in Mountain View Cemetery.

FREDRICK.—Marguerite Elizabeth, daughter of James and Agnes Wilson Parks, was born at Wesley, Illinois, on February 28, 1863, and died at her winter home in Orlando, Florida, on April 7, 1948. She was married to Frank Eugene Fredrick in Joliet, Illinois, on December 25, 1888; two sons were born to this union. She was baptized a member of the Reorganized Church on May 28, 1904, at Miller, Illinois. She resided in her home in Joliet for fifty-eight years, enjoying perfect health until three weeks before her death. It can be truly said that she spent her entire life doing good to others.

She leaves a son, Harlow G. Fredrick of Orlando; a brother, William M. Parks of Joliet; a sister, Mrs. Rosa Parks Pitt of Orlando; four grandchildren; and one great-grandchild. Mr. Fredrick preceded her in death four months ago, and a son, Harold Eugene, passed away in 1931. Funeral services were held in Joliet, the Reverend Arthur Hoffman officiating. Burial was in the family lot in Oakwood Cemetery at Joliet.

PALMER.—Walter Glen, son of Samuel R. and Mary Downs Palmer, was born September 28, 1914, at Taloga, Oklahoma, and died May 24, 1948, at the Independence Sanitarium. With his family, he moved to Missouri in 1920, living first at Grandview and then Independence. He was baptized into the Reorganized Church on December 9, 1923, and was ordained to the office of deacon on November 6, 1938. He attended Sugar Creek Church near Independence and assisted in the services there. On July 27, 1940, he was married to Donetta Marie Tindall; three children were born to this union. For the past seven years, he was an employee of the Sheffield Steel Corporation.

He is survived by his wife; a son, Roland Glen; and two daughters: Sharon Marie and Janice Ann, all of the home; and four brothers: Orville H. and Virgil R. of Independence; Paul D. of Grandview; and Arthur E. of Sugar Creek.

WILLIAMS.—Sarah Ellen, daughter of Benjamin and Polly Anne Sammons, was born May 22, 1879, in Marceline, Illinois, and died June 9, 1948, at her home in Independence, Missouri. In infancy, she lost her mother and made her home with her maternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Smith. For several years preceding her marriage, she made her home with the late Mr. and Mrs. T. B. Hudspeth. In 1894, she united with the Reorganized Church remaining ever staunch and true to her convictions. On November 30, 1898, she was married to Edward H. Williams at Livingston, Montana. With her husband and family she traveled extensively, living at various times in Montana, Missouri, and Saskatchewan. In June of 1928 she made her home in Independence.

She leaves her husband; three sons: Edward T. and Franklin B. Williams of Independence, and Glen H. Williams of Inglewood, California; three daughters: Mrs. Dora S. Cox of Independence; Mrs. Leona May Cook of Kansas City, Missouri; and Mrs. Ella Opal Page of Inglewood; three grandchildren; her step-mother, Mrs. Virginia Belle Sammons of Independence; two sisters: Mrs. T. J. Anderson, Lone Jack, Missouri, and Mrs. John Meek of Kansas City; and two brothers: John Sammons, Orofino, Idaho, and William Sammons, Napoleon, Missouri. Services were conducted by Elder Evan A. Fry at the Speaks Funeral Home in Independence. Burial was in Mound Grove Cemetery.

WILLEY.—Joseph E., son of Burton and Joanna Willey, was born February 17, 1874, at Knox, Indiana, and died at his home in Wymore, Nebraska, on May 6, 1948. During the Spanish-American War, he served in Company I of the Sixteenth Infantry. On January 8, 1908, he was married to Elizabeth Cross at Coldwater, Kansas; two children were born to this union. He had been a member of the Reorganized Church since June 15, 1913.

He is survived by his wife; a son, Richard, and a daughter, Mrs. Edith Williams of Beatrice, Nebraska; a brother, Frank of Wheaton, Kansas; three sisters: Mrs. Grace Odell of Joy, Illinois; Mrs. Cora Wright of Lincoln, Nebraska; and Mrs. Nora Boyer of West Hollywood, California. Elders Francis and John Schrunck of Lincoln were in charge of the funeral. Graveside services were also conducted by the Masonic Lodge, of which Mr. Willey had been a member for fifty-three years. Interment was in the Liberty, Nebraska, cemetery.

GIVENS.—Bessie Elizabeth, was born April 21, 1884, at Martin's Ferry, Ohio, and died June 8, 1948, at Independence, Missouri. She was married on November 21, 1905, to Harry Danford Givens; five children were born to this union. Her husband, a son, and a daughter preceded her in death. She was baptized into the Reorganized Church at Wheeling, West Virginia, on June 6, 1909. Since November, 1934, she had made her home in Independence, where she was a member of Stone Church congregation.

She is survived by one son, George Givens of Independence; two daughters: Mrs. Anna Manross of Kirtland, Ohio, and Mrs. Esther Ball of Akron, Ohio; and eight grandchildren. Funeral services were conducted by Elder Glaude A. Smith, assisted by Elder Paul Elliott, at the Carson Chapel in Independence. Interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery.

RENAUD.—Leila Dawson, was born September 6, 1904, in Orange County, California, and died June 4, 1948, at Tulare, California, following several months of illness. She was baptized into the Reorganized Church on April 5, 1914, and on September 9, 1924, she was married to Joseph Renaud. Three daughters were born to this union. She was active in church work, serving as a church school teacher and district secretary. She was highly esteemed because of her high ideals. Her kindly disposition won many friends, and her hospitality and service to others were greatly appreciated.

She is survived by her husband; three daughters: Louise, Laura, and Emily; two brothers: James A. and Walker Dawson; and one sister, Mrs. Mary Snively, all of Tulare. Funeral services were conducted by John W. Rushton at the Hamilton Peers Parlors. Interment was in the city cemetery.

HARSTRIET.—Marilyn Josephine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Zeo Harstret, was born June 4, 1948, at Elhorna, Indiana, and died June 5, 1948, at the Washington, Indiana, hospital. Mr. Harstret is pastor of Washington Branch. Brief funeral services were held at the home and at the grave side in Plainville cemetery, Evangelist Arthur W. Gage officiating.

PERKINS.—Rufus S., was born September 10, 1871, in Jefferson County, New York, and died February 25, 1948, in the Plum City, Wisconsin, hospital following a long illness. In 1900 he went to Rio, Wisconsin, to learn the jewelry trade, at which he worked various times during his life. He was assessor of the town of Frankfort for seven years. A successful business man, his advice was often sought by others. On July 26, 1900, he was married to Mercie V. Shedd. He had been a member of the Reorganized Church since July 27, 1928.

He is survived by his wife; two brothers: George of Riley, Canada, and Israel of Arkansas; two sisters: Mrs. Lucy Newman of LaCross and Mrs. Kate Weber of Eau Claire. Funeral services were conducted by R. W. Smith and Clive Metcalf at the church in Porcupine Valley. Interment was in the Arkansas cemetery.

Mary A. Burlington
 1510½ Jules
 St. Joseph, Missouri

92867
 18
 h

BIGGS—Joseph, son of Richard and Martha Biggs, was born December 18, 1873, in England and died March 12, 1948, at Lakeside Hospital in Cleveland, Ohio. He was baptized July 6, 1890, and was ordained to the office of priest soon after. On September 21, 1899, he was ordained an elder. He served the church as a missionary in West Virginia and Pennsylvania and, during his early years, was often referred to as "the boy preacher." He married Ida M. Shim of Clarksburg; six children were born to them. Mrs. Biggs died in 1915 and he later married Alberta Lake, who preceded him in death in 1938. The following year, he was married to Mrs. Isabelle Booker of Independence, who survives him. An employee of the Ohio Rubber Company in Wiloughby for twenty-five years, he was respected and spoken of as "one man who lives his religion." He also served as a guide at Kirtland Temple for a number of years.

Besides his wife, he leaves four daughters: Ruth of Charleston, West Virginia; Jessie of Akron, Ohio; Martha of Kirtland, Ohio; and Lillian of Charleroi, Pennsylvania; a son, Charles of Buffalo, New York; fifteen grandchildren; and seven great-grandchildren. One daughter, Virginia, died in infancy. Elders Roy Ashenhurst and Albert Wouters conducted the funeral service. Burial was in South Kirtland cemetery.

Reunion Schedule-1948

No. Dakota	Jun. 11-Jun. 13	Am. Leg. Pk., Detroit Lakes, Minnesota
E. Montana	Jun. 19-Jun. 27	Fairview, Mont.
Texas	Jun. 25-July 4	Bandera, Texas
Owen Sound & Toronto	Jun. 26-July 4	Port Elgin, Ont.
New York & Philadelphia	July 3-July 11	Deer Park
Southwest Kansas	July 2-July 11	Arkansas City, Kansas
Gulf States	July 9-July 18	Brewton, Ala.
W. Colorado	July 10-July 11	Delta, Colorado
Manitoba	July 10-July 11	Winnipeg, Man.
Central Missouri	July 10-July 18	Odessa, Missouri
Saskatchewan	July 10-July 18	Beaver Creek Saskatchewan
Alberta	July 19-July 26	Sylvan Lake, Alberta
Zion	July 17-July 25	Gardner Lake
Nauvoo So. New England	July 17-July 25	Nauvoo, Illinois
Northern California	July 17-July 25	Onset, Mass.
Flint-Ft. Huron-Detroit- Windsor	July 24-Aug. 1	Asilomar, Mon- terey, California
Kentucky & Tennessee	July 25-Aug. 1	Blue Water, Michigan
Silver Lake	July 30-Aug. 8	Paris, Tennessee
Chatham- London	July 30-Aug. 8	Everett, Washington
Cen. & So. Michigan	July 31-Aug. 8	Erie Beach, Ontario, Canada
Mo. Valley	July 31-Aug. 8	Liahona Park
Maine	July 31-Aug. 8	Woodbine, Iowa
So. California	July 31-Aug. 8	Brooksville, Me. Pacific Palisades
Northern Michigan	Aug. 6-Aug. 15	Park of the Pines
Kirtland	Aug. 6-Aug. 15	Kirtland, Ohio
Reunion of the Ozarks	Aug. 1-Aug. 8	Racine, Missouri
Oklahoma	Aug. 7-Aug. 15	Pawnee, Okla.
W. Montana	Aug. 7-Aug. 15	Race Track, Montana
Arizona	Aug. 8-Aug. 15	Tucson, Arizona
Arkansas & Louisiana	Aug. 9-Aug. 15	Clear Fork Cp., Hot Spgs., Ark.
Minnesota & Wisconsin	Aug. 9-Aug. 16	Chetek, Wisc.
Far West	Aug. 12-Aug. 22	Stewartsville, Missouri
So. Indiana	Aug. 21-Aug. 29	Bedford, Ind.
Eastern Michigan	Aug. 14-Aug. 22	Cash, Michigan
Idaho	Aug. 14-Aug. 21	Hagerman, Idaho
Des Moines	Aug. 15-Aug. 21	Guthrie Center, Iowa
Lamoni	Aug. 15-Aug. 22	Lamoni, Iowa
S. E. Illinois	Aug. 20-Aug. 29	Brush Creek, Ill.
Eastern Colorado	Aug. 20-Aug. 29	Colorado Springs Colorado

A Reasonable Service

by

Grace Baughman Keairnes

We discovered 75 unbound copies of this book tucked back in a corner. We have bound them up now for you who would like a copy of this favorite old church story for your own library. There will be no more—just 75

75c each

Order from your Book Steward or from

HERALD PUBLISHING HOUSE

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI

The

SAINTS' HYMNAL

leather binding

A semi-limp binding of Morocco-grained cowhide
 Stamped in pure gold with red under gold edges and round corners.
 Opens easily and can be used on the piano.
YOU'LL want this hymnal in your own home to play and sing your favorite hymns.

$5

Order from your Book Steward or from

HERALD PUBLISHING HOUSE

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI

Morning at the Damascus Gate

Photo by Adelbert Bartlett

THE Saints Herald

VOLUME 95

JULY 3, 1948

NUMBER 27

www.LatterDayTruth.org

Jerusalem

AUDITORIUM NEWS

THE DAMASCUS GATE is the principal port of entry in the north wall of the system of defense that Sultan Suleiman the Magnificent erected about the old city in 1542. Important streets leading from the south of Jerusalem converge upon it, and the roads fan out from it fingerwise through the newer areas to the north and to lands afar. People of many races and religions use it together, not always understanding each other, and not always at peace.

War is an old story in Jerusalem. It is a matter of millenniums since the children of Israel first occupied it, since David made it his throne. It has changed hands and appearances many times. Now, modern Israel is making a desperate struggle to possess and hold it against the Moslem peoples who have occupied it so many centuries. There are bomb explosions and gunfire in the Holy City, and the stones of the ancient streets are once more stained with blood.

The struggle that is going on there today may seem small in comparison with the greater dangers and problems elsewhere in the world. Yet it is a battleground that has involved the troops of great powers for two thousand years; it is redolent with the prophecy and history of the past, and it is portentous with the destiny of the future world.

Jesus was proclaimed the Prince of Peace for the gospel he taught there; yet it gave him little peace. He wept over the city that had so few tears of mercy for him. It is still suffering from the hardness of heart that brought it woe from its beginning. Jew and Arab are related by race, but separated by religion. In the spirit of Christ they could find peace together.

L. L.

IN THIS ISSUE

EDITORIAL:

The Standards of Zion	3
Across the Desk	4

OFFICIAL:

Change of Boundary Lines	4
Alaska	4

ARTICLES:

Freedom Is of God, by Evan A. Fry	5
Freedom, the Church and Home, by Bishop J. S. Kelley	7
We Are Stronger Than We Think, by Desa Hartford	9
If Ye Have Love, by Ernest E. Crownover	9
On Human Bondage, by Ruby Tinkham	10
Personal Faith, by Vida Gallagher	11
Appreciating St. Paul, by Karl Schoepke	11
The Golden Book, by George Njeim	12
Worship Suggestions for August, by Bernice Bonham	16
It's "On the Record," by Floy Lorene Bennett	18
Beauty Sleeps, a poem, by Louise Wrigley	19
The Men of Williamsburg, by Elbert Dempsey, Jr.	20
The Lord Is My Helmsman, a poem, by Mrs. Dewey Mercer	21
The Evening Service, by Fred Alexander	21
Sentence Sermons, by Norma Anne Kirkendall	21
Briefs	23
Bulletin Board	23

WARRENSBURG, MISSOURI. Elder John R. Grice has just completed his missionary series here. Despite the counter attraction of high school and college graduations, the series was very successful. Eight were baptized and one other has already requested baptism.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, IOWA. On the afternoon of Mother's Day, V. D. Ruch baptized three young married men whose wives were already members of the church. This makes a total of twenty-seven baptized in Council Bluffs Branch this year.

MISSIONS ABROAD. A beautiful gift was made recently to the Missions Abroad project of Zion's League. Pfc. Richard W. Batt, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Batt of Burt, Iowa, gave his life in the European Theater in the recent World War. His remains were returned to this country from France, and on May 26 a memorial service was held for him. Instead of flowers, many of the friends brought money gifts, amounting to $86.50, which was given to the Missions Abroad project. Thus, consistent with his sacrifice, the gift in his memory goes to the cause of bringing the peace of the gospel to the nations of the world.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION DEPARTMENT. By arrangement with the First Presidency, Dr. F. M. McDowell, of the Department of Religious Education, will spend most of the summer at Columbia University, New York City, where he has a special opportunity to participate in some advanced studies in the fields of counseling and home ministry. Columbia University is offering special opportunities in research, library resources, and class attendance to holders of doctor's degrees. Brother McDowell is pursuing this study in relation to special problems in church work.

EUGENE A. THEYS, at Rotterdam, Holland, June 14, wrote: During my trip I personally baptized thirty-five people. I would say that these people who are uniting with the church in Germany can be favorably compared with those being united anywhere in the church. Some of them are university people, business men, and professional people. On my return to the office, I notice that the German mission has baptized, to this date, 128 people, and one in our Swiss mission. I believe that we will reach the two hundred mark this year in Germany. Just before I left Hamburg, a very fine young man came up to me and said that he wanted to be baptized on my next trip. He is thirty-five, a graduate of the University of Berlin in the school of journalism. He is working on one of the leading newspapers and helping us with some of the materials to be translated for our forthcoming mission paper.

GOMER T. GRIFFITHS, recently reported ill and in the hospital, is reported by Sister Griffiths to be a little improved, and will undergo an operation in the middle of July. They will appreciate the prayers of church members.

TOM WORTH, at Royal Oak, Michigan, writes on June 15: "Six more new members have been gained to the church, making a total of thirteen here in two months. . . . Many other nonmembers were persuaded toward Christ, many members revived, and many renewed and strengthened in the most holy faith."

The Standards of Zion

"Let your hearts be comforted, for all things shall work together for good to them that walk uprightly, and to the sanctification of the church; for I will raise up unto myself a pure people, that will serve me in righteousness; and all that call on the name of the Lord and keep his commandments, shall be saved."—Doctrine and Covenants 97:4.

THE PASTOR'S MANUAL has given the theme, "The Standards of Zion," for presentation to the congregations of the church during the month of July.

From the very beginning, the message of this church sounded the note of repentance to the world, and urged upon the membership the maintenance of high standards of personal and group conduct, morality, and ethics.

No good society was ever built upon a foundation of poor standards among its citizens. Personal honor, morality, integrity, and intelligence are basic to all enduring social improvements. No Zion can ever be a reality without a condition of righteousness among the people. No organization, no matter how perfect, can lift a sinful people out of their sufferings, except by improving individuals first. When the people are righteous, organization can begin to do something with and for them. Unrighteousness will destroy all good work.

FOR SOME REASON, the idea is current that God requires us to be good merely for his pleasure and satisfaction. This is a mistake. With a little study, one can find the benevolent purpose back of most of the Mosaic law; more could be found if we had a better knowledge of the ancient conditions of life. It was stated among the divine purposes, "To keep the commandments of the Lord, and his statutes, which I command thee this day for thy good."—Deuteronomy 10:12. The love of God and his purpose of helping and saving his people shine through the whole gospel of Christ. In a very real sense, and in spite of all the changes that have come to the world, it is still true that "The wages of sin is death" in both the physical and the spiritual realms; it is still true that "the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord" (Romans 6:23).

IT HAS ALWAYS BEEN the hope of our people that those who join this church should steadily become better in their moral and spiritual standards for having given themselves to Christ. We could point to the fact that our people were honest, that they paid their bills, that they kept debt down in all possible cases; that they were true to their homes and companions, that they had a low divorce rate. They lived as good neighbors, friends, and citizens. These were humble virtues, but important ones.

Yet, as we associate with members of other churches, with good citizens, the "honorable men of the earth," we have occasion to ask ourselves very seriously if we have lived up to the high standards to which the gospel calls us. We wonder, are we any better for belonging to this church? If we are not, we have a work to do for ourselves before we can do much for the world.

In the earlier years, our people were noted for keeping apart from worldly entertainments, practices, and faults. As time passed, there was a degree of accommodation to prevailing social conditions. We see things that cause regret; the divorce rate has risen, and church courts are troubled with problems and questions that should never occur among a truly converted people. Many have maintained the old standards, but some have forgotten. With good reason, the latter-day prophet declared, "Say nothing but repentance unto this generation."

ONLY A SUPERIOR PEOPLE can produce a superior society, which is something meant by the term "Zion" if it means anything at all. "For this is Zion, the pure in heart." That is the beginning. Read Doctrine and Covenants 85:21 for the study curriculum and the cultural standards of a Zion-building people. Read section 106 for the kind of consecration that will be required, and section 42, all of it, for the standards of conduct.

So much for the requirements. It is not necessary to go into detail. Most people, especially ours, know what they should do. If itemization is required, it will do for another occasion. "Men need not so much to be told as to be reminded."

But what shall we say of the rewards of living according to "The Standards of Zion"? So far as the institutions are concerned, the economic and industrial relationships, we cannot begin to live Zionically now. But in a personal way, there are many fine members living according to "The Standards of Zion." It is a wonderful experience to live among such people, to have them as neighbors and friends. It is an experience so happy as to make one unwilling ever to live anywhere else. If all else should fail, this much makes the work of the church eminently worth-while, a successful achievement. The ideals of the church are reflected in the personal conduct and the home life of its finest people. To live in a neighborhood where everybody is at peace, where one sees no influence of liquor, hears no loud or objectionable talk, where every human need meets some response of kindness and consideration, is one of life's high privileges.

At least we have a demonstration that the Standards of Zion are practical, and that they help good people to be better in every way. This should inspire all of us to try harder.

L. J. L.

Editorial

Across the Desk

Congregation Organized at Liberty, Missouri

One hundred nine years after Joseph Smith and his associates were held in prison in Liberty Jail, a group of Saints living there and in the surrounding neighborhood were organized through the efforts of Far West Stake officials. The undersigned hoped to be in attendance on Sunday, June 6, but was called away from home. We believe it was an auspicious occasion.

Stake President Emery E. Jennings has written about the event, and from his letter we quote:

We were, of course, most sorry that circumstances did not permit you to be with us last Sunday at Liberty, Missouri, at which time we organized a congregation there. We had fifty people in attendance. To our delight, four men of the priesthood, who will make Liberty their church home, were present. These men held the rank of elder, priest, teacher, and deacon.

Brother Lloyd Seibert was elected president of the group; I am sure he will prove to be an efficient, dependable, hard-working shepherd, and a good administrative officer. He enjoys the support and confidence of many of the Saints in and around Liberty, most of whom have known him for many years. He has a most talented wife on whom he can depend for wise and efficient support. Such companionship is important, as you know, to the success of the man.

Mother Bevins was there with what she would call a part of her "brood." Her enthusiasm was contagious, and everyone was lifted up because she expressed her joy about a congregation being organized at Liberty.

Besides Apostle Mesley and his wife, we had in attendance my two counselors, James Bowman of Cameron, and Orville Moffet of St. Joseph, Bishop Earl T. Higdon, and one of his counselors, Raymond Jensen of Bedison. . . .

We all enjoyed a most tasty basket dinner, after which I talked to the group about our stake program and the work we were attempting to do in this area.

It is good to know that we are again definitely situated in Liberty as a church. As I told the Saints in my afternoon sermon, by the right kind of conduct and church activities, we should not only win and sustain the respect and good will that we now enjoy in this community, but also, through hard work, we should have a nice church building of our own within the next five years. I believe we can do it. We hope that in this small beginning we shall continue to grow numerically and gain spiritual strength so that Liberty will be a real spearhead in the southern part of our stake.

I know that you share with us a real personal interest in the success of this new beginning and for any personal attention you can give Brother Seibert and the group, as well as ourselves, we shall be ever grateful. From our end of the line, we shall keep you posted regularly as to what has transpired there.

ISRAEL A. SMITH.

Stone Church Radio Choir

This fine organization under the direction of our Church Director of Music, Elder Franklyn S. Weddle, rendered three songs at the Fort Leavenworth Military Cemetery on May 31. Some weeks ago Chaplain James E. Rogers of the Veterans Administration Center appealed to us for assistance. Brother Weddle responded, some thirty singers taking part. It was a patriotic ministry given with pleasure and undoubtedly with a great deal of excellence.

ISRAEL A. SMITH.

Columbia River Floods

We have not received specific advices as to our members who have suffered from the recent floods at Portland, but word from District President J. L. Verhei indicates he has the situation well in hand. He states, "We believe we can fully take care of their needs here."

ISRAEL A. SMITH.

OFFICIAL

Change of Boundary Lines

The following changes in boundary lines affecting the Northeastern Illinois District, Wisconsin District, and Chicago District, have been made by the Joint Council of Presidency, Twelve, and Presiding Bishopric:

Winnebago, Boone, and McHenry Counties in Illinois transferred to the Wisconsin District.

Lake County, Illinois, transferred from Northeastern Illinois District to the Chicago District.

THE FIRST PRESIDENCY

Alaska

We regret that circumstances make it advisable to postpone the proposed survey of our membership in Alaska. We trust that next year we can get the work started there.

Our request for names resulted in the following:

Allen, Tom	Juneau
Allish, Edith F.	White Horse
Briggs, Mr. and Mrs. Dale	East Anchorage
Campbell, Kenneth	Fairbanks
Deck, Melvin	Seward
Fields, Mrs. O. E.	Juneau
Fowler, George L. and Julian	Fairbanks
Guerin, Eckley K.	Juneau
Hagaman, Floyd	Fairbanks
Hammond, Carl E.	Anchorage
Harrison, Mrs. Georgia	Fort Richardson
Herrin, Mrs. Geo. D.	Juneau
Hunter, Mr. and Mrs. H. M.	Fort Richardson
Langdon, Mr. and Mrs. R. F.	Wasilla
Martin, Mrs. Gene	Juneau
Martin, William	Fairbanks
McNeil, Ralph J.
Moffett, Mr. and Mrs. Archie	Palmer
Pement, Mr. and Mrs. John O.	Fairbanks
Reynolds, Mrs. J. L.	Kodiak
Roley, Cecil	Anchorage
Roley, Mrs. Lydia	Anchorage
Schuyler, Ralph	Fairbanks
Warren, Mr. and Mrs. M. L.	Fairbanks

ISRAEL A. SMITH.

THE SAINTS' HERALD

Volume 95

July 3, 1948

Number 27

EDITORS: The First Presidency: Israel A. Smith, John F. Garver, F. Henry Edwards.

ASSISTANTS: Leonard J. Lea, Managing Editor; Kenneth L. Graham, Business Manager.

The Saints' Herald is the official publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, with headquarters at The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri, and is issued through the offices of Herald Publishing House, 103 South Osage Street, Independence, Missouri.

Entered as second-class matter at the post office at Independence, Missouri, under Act of March 3, 1879. Issued weekly at Independence, Missouri. Price, $3.50 per year and $1.75 for six months in advance in the U. S. A., its territories and possessions; Canada, $3.75 per year and $1.90 for six months; other countries, $4.50 per year. Notice of a change of address must be given three weeks ahead of the date that it is to become effective. Accepted for mailing at the special rate of postage provided for in section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized July 21, 1921. Printed in the United States of America.

Freedom Is of God

By Evan A. Fry

WHEN PAUL was accused by rioting crowds in Jerusalem and arrested by Lysias, the chief captain of the Roman garrison, the soldiers bound him and prepared to examine him by scourging. To the centurion who stood by, Paul said, "Is it lawful for you to scourge a man that is a Roman, and uncondemned?" The centurion told the chief captain of this new development, and the chief captain came to question Paul further concerning his Roman citizenship. To Paul's declaration that he was a Roman, he replied, "With a great sum obtained I this freedom." And Paul said, "But I was free born.

Though most of us can be both proud and thankful—as Paul was—that we are free born, we should never lose sight of the fact that our freedom has been bought with a price. Just as the Roman freedom which Paul enjoyed had been purchased by the blood and sweat and toil of Roman legions throughout the world, and by the daring and courage of noble men, so the freedom which you and I enjoy today has been purchased for us with the blood and sweat and tears of thousands of men who have struggled upward toward the light through persecution and arrogance and tyranny. It has been purchased with the blood of men who have died on a thousand battlefields of this and other nations. Though we are free born, our freedom was bought for us with a great sum.

Maintaining freedom costs something, too. Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty. There are always those who, for selfish ends, would enslave their fellow men, politically, socially, economically, intellectually, religiously. Insidiously and cleverly they appeal to men, trying to entice them to give up their freedom for an easier life of dependence on supposedly master minds of master men; trying to make them sell their freedom for security, trying to entice them to destroy the liberty of others in the hope that thereby they themselves may gain more. The maintenance of liberty demands eternal vigilance, self-discipline, and self-control, a high form of intelligence, and an exalted righteousness and morality which cannot be tempted by a mess of pottage.

FREEDOM IS INNATE, inborn, God-given. The Declaration of Independence (which is the culmination of a long fight for freedom among English-speaking peoples) boldly asserts: "We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, and that they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights, that among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness." Freedom is not something one person can give to another. A man may relinquish his freedom or allow it to be taken from him by default. One man may impose slavery or bondage upon another. But the inherent, inborn, God-given right of every human being to freedom cannot be taken away.

What is the reason for this inherent right of freedom which God has given to everyone? In the very beginning of creation, God gave man his free moral will—his agency. He made him free to choose for himself. He warned him of the consequences of wrong choice and assured him of the blessings that would follow right choice and obedience. Freedom of choice is necessary, first for man's development and second, in order that God might be justified in his judgments. If there were no possibility of choice and no freedom to choose, man would be worse than a slave of Deity; he would be a puppet dancing on the end of a string. Man, made in the image of God, is free to choose. And when he chooses good or evil, the consequences that ensue are in keeping with the action chosen. Wickedness is punished; righteousness and obedience are rewarded.

Especially in the field of conscience and religion is freedom necessary to the ideal and complete development of man. It is impossible to compel a man to be religious, or to worship, or to believe any religious dogma—true or untrue—against his will. Forcing the outward physical actions of conformity or worship cannot change the state of the mind or soul. Therefore, any tyranny which seeks to control conscience, or to stipulate certain acts of religious worship, or to compel the support of any state or established religion, is not only futile—since conscience cannot be compelled—but it is out of keeping with the nature of the God who, in the beginning, gave every man his inalienable right to freedom of choice.

THE ONLY EXCUSE for the existence of governments, magistrates, and laws is that men's right and freedoms might be protected. If it were possible for men to live together without ever infringing—wittingly or unwittingly—upon the rights or privileges or freedoms of each other, then there would be not the slightest need for any sort of government. But men are not made that way. Always there are some who do not respect the rights of others. Always there are some who are too weak to protect themselves. And so men associate themselves together in governments which derive their just powers from the consent of the governed. Those governments exist solely for the purpose of protecting the rights, privileges, and freedoms of all men under their control. In order that those rights and privileges and freedoms might be defined, laws—both constitutional and statutory—are established. And that the laws may be impartially administered and not left to the vagaries of men seeking vengeance for real or fancied wrongs, certain magistrates are chosen to execute, administer, and adjudicate the laws.

Since government and law exist solely for the purpose of maintaining and protecting human freedoms, it becomes the duty of every citizen of a government which performs these functions to support that government; to protect and defend it with his life if need be; to support it with his money and with his interest and effort; to defend the constitutional and statutory law which is the instrument of government; to seek after and uphold honest, wise, just, and capable men for the duties and responsibilities of government; and to respect and obey every phase of that law himself, knowing that a disregard for any law leads to anarchy, and anarchy leads to tyranny.

If these things be true, it follows that any man who advocates the overthrow of a government which derives its just powers from the consent of the governed and protects its citizens in their rights and freedoms, is a traitor not only to his country but to every free citizen of that country and also to his God. The man who would deny the inherent, God-given right of freedom to any other man is a godless man, even if he supports the church and sings the "Star-Spangled Banner" from memory. It is no accident that always the men who have sought to enslave other men and to overthrow the governments that protect human liberties have so frequently been godless, atheistic, amoral, immoral men—even though some of them have given more than nominal allegiance to some popular and politically convenient form of religion.

LATTER DAY SAINTS have more reason than most of their fellow Christians to love these United States of America and to thank God for the freedom which they enjoy under its Constitution. The Book of Mormon makes the bold statement concerning the land of America, "There shall none come into this land, save they shall be brought by the hand of the Lord. Wherefore, this land is consecrated unto him whom he shall bring. And if it so be that they shall serve him according to the commandments which he hath given, it shall be a land of liberty unto them; they shall never be brought down into captivity; if so, it shall be because of iniquity: For if iniquity shall abound, cursed shall be the land for their sakes; But unto the righteous, it shall be blessed forever." Even a casual student of history will be struck by the fact that the early colonists who came to America seeking gold or empire or fish or furs, all failed. By and large, this nation was built—and is still being built—by those who came to it seeking political and economic and religious freedom, and who had been led to it by that passion for freedom.

The Book of Mormon also teaches that God in his wisdom kept this land from the knowledge of other nations until it was time to give it for an inheritance to those freedom-seeking peoples from the Old World. It teaches that Columbus was inspired and led by the Spirit of God. It promises that this shall be a land of liberty unto the Gentiles; that no king shall prosper here; that those who fight against it shall perish, so long as this nation serves God. But it also teaches that if the people of this continent neglect or refuse to serve God in righteousness, they shall be swept off when they are ripened in iniquity and the fullness of God's wrath comes upon them. It is a choice land, a land of promise; and those who dwell here shall forever be free from bondage and from captivity, and from all other nations under heaven, if they will but serve God; if not, the wicked and rebellious shall be swept off.

MILLIONS OF MEN AND WOMEN and children in this world are still under political bondage today, in spite of two wars to make the world safe for democracy. There can be no peace in the world until all men are free, for in every man is that instinct and longing for liberty which will assert itself sooner or later in spite of tyranny and oppression and slavery. The tyrant and oppressor are never secure, never safe, never happy, because they are always sitting on the lid of a volcano, which may blow up at any moment.

We should not be blind to the fact, too, that there are other freedoms which men passionately long for and sooner or later will have. The nation and the world will be in a ferment of unrest until every last man has all the several kinds of freedom to which he is entitled—political, intellectual, economic, social, and cultural. It is useless to give a man freedom to vote, and then deny him the freedom to work, to earn his bread, and to eat. It is futile and tyrannical to offer a man the freedom of the ballot, but to shackle his mind by barring him from any sources of information, education, and culture which will help him decide how to cast that vote. It is useless to declare men independent of kings and tyrants, and to leave them slaves to bad habits, to sin, to death.

It was the work of Jesus Christ to set the prisoner free, to open the doors of the prison house, to release the captives of sin and death and the grave as well as the captives of all kinds of human injustice and tyranny. Our democracy is based in Christ's teaching that God is our common Father, and all men are brothers—

(Continued on page 22.)

Freedom, the Church and Home

A sermon delivered at Stone Church, Independence, Missouri, May 30, 1948

By Bishop J. S. Kelley

THE MESSAGE OF FREEDOM is one that should be carried to every man, woman, and child, and to "every nation, kindred, tongue and people." It is one that is related directly to the missionary endeavor of the church throughout the world.

There are no finer words in the Scriptures than the promise that "Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."—John 8: 32. We are well aware of the importance and meaning of the theme, "The cause of freedom is the cause of God."

Every year it is the custom of the people, and particularly those who are interested in the work of the churches, to devote one day—Memorial Day—especially to the honor of those who went forth to give their lives in the cause of freedom. Some of them died, not knowing whether their sacrifice was in vain or not. In a larger sense, we honor all who have given their lives directly in the cause of humanity and human betterment. Abraham Lincoln, Elijah Lovejoy, and Joseph Smith were such. They gave their lives as a result of their efforts to lead men toward freedom and justice for all.

THE FREEDOM we enjoy has had a stormy course in its development. From the absolutism of ancient times down through the Dark Ages into modern times, there has been untold cruelty, selfishness, and injustice in the world, growing out of the relationships of men and nations.

When Christ came to earth about two thousand years ago, rulers had the power of life and death over their subjects; a man had the same power over his wife and children. Christ understood the kind of world he came into, and in the short space of time he lived among men, he had full insight into their lives, their character, and their needs.

Christ was not an uninformed dreamer as some people claimed. He was not tucked away in some unknown corner of the earth. He lived on one of the main highways of the Roman empire and sooner or later received all the news of the known world. He dealt with all kinds of people and their problems; Sadducees compromising with Rome; Pharisees waiting for their Messiah to come from heaven and redeem them; zealots, fiery and militant, revolutionary rebels crying out for bloodshed to make right their wrongs.

Understanding the needs and problems of all these, he taught peace, patience, sympathy, love of neighbor and the importance of the individual being. "Even the least of these" suffering men and women were worthy of his attention, and he wished to free them from their real bondage.

THERE IS NO MEASURING ROD for the great influence of Christ and Christian teachings on the history of freedom and human betterment in the world that followed. We do know that the Christian influence took hold and was felt in ever-growing crescendo. One Roman emperor along the line liked the followers of Christ who had come up through so much persecution and travail. To him they seemed more industrious, more stable with a happier outlook on life, and therefore were better citizens. He made Christianity the state religion, and even made the cross the symbol of conquest in the name of Christ. Christianity was so good for people that he would spread the gospel by force and by the sword. Such a method was so un-Christian that it could only hinder the spread of freedom and free institutions.

Down through the ages men fought for freedom, died for freedom, and then fought all over again for the same thing. Then they found out after all the struggle, sacrifice, and destruction that these wars had not accomplished the desired results.

WE FOUGHT A WAR to make the world safe for democracy—I was a soldier in that one. We were resisting evil, so it was justified. We prided ourselves in having a righteous cause; we were morally indignant against a great wrong and went forth to battle devoted to a Holy Cause.

Our nation resorted to conscription and such horrors as poison gas, bombing of open cities (just as the enemy was doing) and blockades to starve civilians—all to make the world safe for democracy. Dictatorial controls over the national life were imposed, including the things we ate and wore. We even put up with suspension of the Bill of Rights, a cornerstone of our individual liberty.

Then nations entered into a one-sided, vengeful peace treaty with all the safeguards for the victors and awoke later to find out that the world was less safe for democracy than it had been for a long time.

Nations went through the same selfish trading—the national bickering that had gone on before—quarreling over the spoils.

Finally we came to the last war—the war to end all war—to bring about a just peace for all peoples based upon principles such as the Atlantic Charter. Civilian populations of cities were wiped out, and thousands of men, women, and children were murdered in cold blood and for no purpose, until killing seemed to be a pleasure for those engaged in it. Finally cities of 200,000 or more were wiped out with a single atomic bomb—all for the sake of peace and freedom, and we haven't attained it yet. We do not even have a peace treaty. Thus war and its horrors have been of little use in attaining freedom or human betterment in the world.

SCIENCE has contributed much to the welfare and better living conditions of mankind. Every day some new development or invention in electronics, radio, television, or some other field makes life seem more enjoyable and easier. Sometimes it seems that life is becoming too easy and effortless. We rest in air-conditioned rooms, arise and eat a few vitamin tablets to give us energy, and then drive to the airport and fly, in a few hours, to New York, San Francisco, or most any part of the world.

Much progress has been made in the chemical field in producing foods for the benefit of mankind. Also poisons for weeds used in wheat and corn fields have been developed to increase production.

We still lag in social progress, however, and in the relationships among people for developments of universal benefit.

Dr. Cousins said recently to the graduates of William Jewell College: "Science has provided us the means of living, but our explorations have lagged in discovering a way to live together. Social justice, democracy, the sacredness of human personality, and the hope for a peaceful world capture our imaginations. But as long as they are abstractions and as long as we make exceptions of ourselves in making them effective, we shall continue to move from one crisis to another."

Dr. Cousins concluded that pioneering is needed today in the courage to act, and not just talk, in promotion of social justice, democracy, and peace.

I. A. R. WYLIE wrote of a story told by a young Russian guide in a recent magazine article: "It doesn't matter how we Russians suffer now. One day every Russian will have a car in his garage, a radio in his home, and all the food he can eat, and work only two hours a week for it. All our problems will be solved." The correspondent said that she did not explain to the Russian that she had a car, a radio, and all she wanted to eat, and still had problems to solve; also, that working hours are the happiest. He would not have understood or believed it.

In the final issue, the individual, whether citizen of a republic or a communist, must stand alone to solve his own problems, work out his own personal relationships, do his own living, and make his own adjustments with God. No directive power can do our living for us and hence, the greater the individual freedom—the greater opportunity for personal development.

We must accept life for what it is—a challenge to our individual quality. It is with such challenge that we learn what stuff we are made of and grow to our full stature.

Scientific development or material wealth are not the answer to our problems—nor will they preserve our freedom. People must develop spiritual values to learn the real purpose of life and adjust social relationships so as to be able to live together happily and peacefully.

Now, if the nations have not attained and preserved freedom by war or by scientific and material development, it must come in some other way.

IT IS THE VOICE AND INFLUENCE of the church that will bring peace and freedom and happiness to a troubled world. We need to put in practice the gospel principles—the ethics of Christian teaching to preserve our way of life.

A generation ago men had a hard time believing in God, the Father and Creator, but they thought Christian principles to live by were the hope of the world. Today most men believe in God and a plan of life, but they think Christian ethics too simple and old-fashioned to use in a complex society of the machine age.

How can we, in the busy world of today, take time to "go the second mile," "turn the other cheek," "love our enemies," "do good to those who hate us," "pray for those who despitefully use us or persecute us," "love our neighbor"? The world needs this influence of the church, and until we experience such an influence in modern life, we will go from one trouble to another. We will have crises at home evidenced by strife between groups and crises abroad in contest between nations.

To begin with, the church influence should be felt in every home. Priesthood visits should be made, family worship encouraged—meeting around the family altar, and sharing of religious experiences. It is particularly essential to bring this influence to the younger members of families. Stewardship of material possessions should be taught, according to the church law and also sharing material blessings and setting apart a portion for the Lord's work.

There cannot be a strong church organization without the background of happy, energetic homes supporting the church and its program. The church needs the home, just as the home needs a religious influence.

In the home, the church influence may preserve freedom by developing ideals of freedom-loving people, love of free institutions, desire for better relationships in society, business and government—in fact, all phases of national life.

The message of freedom should be taught by the church and find root in the lives of the people—in their homes, community, and national life. It is our prime missionary task to preserve freedom and teach the better way of life. To accomplish this, we need the influence of the church in all phases and walks of life, beginning in the home. In this way, the peoples of the earth may attain desired ends in the gospel way and come to a full realization that the cause of freedom is the cause of God.

We Are Stronger Than We Think

By Desa Harford

THERE IS HIDDEN in us a strength we do not know. There is a spark of power that links us with the infinite—the great force that affects our destiny, that controls the seas, that keeps the stars in their places and course—a force that holds mankind in the hollow of its hand.

We must feed the spark we have by experiences, by daily prayer, by service and meditation. We try in our weak way to do things, but we cannot do them alone.

We have taught words, but we must do more than that. To be strong, we must choose the hard way, passing up applause and position for the sake of an ideal. It takes an understanding which is to be gained only by stripping oneself of vanity and putting on the sackcloth of sacrifice.

We are stronger than we realize. Let us use that strength. Let us not be afraid of fear, of poverty, of loneliness. Let us realize that in the performance of duty, one does not suffer alone. There is something of the Infinite helping us, guiding us on. Let our minds take the right way naturally and gladly; then we will not, we cannot, be afraid. With God, we are stronger than we think.

If Ye Have Love

By Ernest E. Crownover

By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another.—John 13: 35.

LOVING OTHERS is prerequisite to living with them in harmony and co-operation. We are capable of developing the conditions of fraternity only as there is mutual respect and trust and the heart to care. Only then are we willing to expend self for others; and expenditure of self for others is the proof of our caring and loving. The love of God and Christ for us today is the margin of safety between us and utter destruction; as possessors of that love, we may move unafraid into the problems of life only if we return that love and extend it to others.

The Apostle Paul in his letter to the Romans (chapter six, verse twenty-one) says that the fruitage of sin is death. In the following verse, he continues to say that the fruitage of holiness is everlasting life. Most of us expect to receive everlasting life but neglect to develop a searching concern as to how we may do this. Too many have dismissed the matter with the thought that "Jesus did it all," while others, aware that a task remains for them, are confused in their contemplation of that task and become lost in speculation that Jesus will make up for their confused failures. They hope that in some mysterious way the Christ shall be pleased to redeem them at the judgment bar of God. This cannot occur, for the Apostle Peter warned, "Save yourselves," and Paul advised, "Work out your own salvation."

THE PURPOSE of the spiritual gifts is to make it possible for us to grow in grace and spiritual capability. This enriches life and can make it Christlike, opening the way for the use of the gifts of the gospel in constructive programs of living and servicing. Good intentions are not sufficient; even Paul persecuted the saints with what he felt to be good purpose. Those who possess the qualities developed by the Holy Spirit will be moved by light and truth, and their actions will be calculated to affirm all good works. Friction and discord are eliminated, doubt disappears, unity of purpose and co-ordination of effort are the rule, and God is able to guide. Alma admonished his people: "Humble yourselves before the Lord, and call on his holy name, and watch and pray continually, that ye may not be tempted above that which ye can bear, and thus be led by the holy spirit, becoming humble, meek, submissive, patient, full of love and all long-suffering, having faith on the Lord."—Alma 10: 28.

Following this indicated pathway, Paul says that our very nature is changed—that regenerative processes create a new man. He wrote the Galatians that the fruit of this new spirit "is love, joy, peace, long suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance; against such there is no law." He counseled the Ephesians to "walk as children of light."

The Christ clearly and steadfastly demonstrated these qualities in his life and ministry, and it was this light in him which so forcefully set him apart from his associates in purpose and character. By this light, we are able to see the truth which frees us from carnal shackles. Ananias, although associated with the followers of Christ, had not availed himself in full of the powers available in his

(Continued on page 22.)

ON HUMAN BONDAGE

WE WERE DISCUSSING the Israelites and how they were held in bondage first by the Egyptians, then the Babylonians, and finally on down to the Persians, the Assyrians, and the Romans. It is difficult to believe that any people possessing the knowledge of God consecutively over such a long period of time could ever fail to accomplish their purpose—yet they did fail!

Someone made the statement, "It's a good thing we aren't held in bondage as they were, we would probably fail, too." I wondered about that. We do have our freedom—freedom to worship as we please—but there are different kinds of bondage. The Israelites suffered from a kind of social bondage—suffered as a group. We as free individuals suffer from a kind of personal bondage which is sometimes just as fatal because we are unaware of our condition.

For instance, I know a woman who is being held in bondage constantly by her household routine. She washes on Monday rain or shine. She even misses community activities of importance if they happen to fall on Monday.

I know another who is in bondage to her two children. Their every wish is her command. She even anticipates their demands until they treat her like some beloved servant. If asked to take part in some church program, she refuses with the air of a martyr and uses the children as an excuse.

Now, if I should ask either of these women if they were free, they would stare at me as if I had lost my mind, and emphatically answer, "Yes!"

Then there is a man who is in bondage to his ambition. He neglects his wife, never really knows his children, and uses his home for a hotel because he is on an unending quest for social prestige and wealth.

I also know of another man who was so proud of the appearance of his new car, he allowed his two children to walk home from school in a cold, driving rain, which resulted in bad colds for both of them.

Yet, if I asked either of these men if they were free, I would most certainly receive a similar emphatic answer.

WE THINK we are so free that we fail to attach any importance to the innumerable small tasks which constantly encroach upon our time and talents, diverting us from our original purpose. These same small daily tasks seem so insignificant we cannot see that through them we are willingly worshipping a clever master who is familiar with the weaknesses of men since the beginning of time. If we will not forsake or deny our purpose, this skillful master unobtrusively devises ingenious ways of directing our precious energy into channels of useless activity.

Suppose we face the fact that we have wasted valuable time unthinkingly in personal bondage to unimportant details. How can we emerge from our state of lethargy? The answer is: By passionate devotion to our original purpose.

There has never been a man yet who could not change his entire life as well as his entire personality if he gave his devotion to a common cause for good. Take the Apostle Paul, for example. We throw off the shackles of personal bondage when we refuse to give of our time and talents to anything but a consecrated co-operation with God.

Remember when Johnny was a little boy how he banged up his playthings? You soon learned that punishment never did as much good as diverting him to some constructive pastime.

By Ruby Tinkham

I remember an elder who used to conduct missionary services at our branch a long time ago. He was passionately devoted to the cause of Zion. He used to say, "Latter Day Saints are getting soft! They need to suffer a little, sacrifice a lot, and learn to serve in obedience."

When he said "suffer," he meant stating our convictions for the whole world to hear and then accepting the consequences as the early Christians did—with pride in the fact that we are the chosen people of God. That would mean don't run and hide if someone calls us a Mormon.

When he said sacrifice, he meant giving of our time and talents and means beyond the required amount, without any thought of laying up blessings in heaven, but solely because we love our brother enough to care how he is getting along.

When he said "serve," he meant finding the place where God and man can work best together to build the kingdom. At the same time, through his grace, we earn our own salvation.

DO YOU REALIZE what the name "Latter Day Saint" means? It means that we have inherited a sacred title from the early Christians who won it through suffering and death. It also means that we are not qualified to wear it proudly unless we are willing to hold their banner high enough for the rest of the world to see. To them it meant suffering and death. To us, it means creating a new kind of life and then living it.

Yes, I can still hear that grand old man saying, "Suffer, sacrifice, and serve!" I wonder what he would say to us now?

Personal Faith

By Vida Gallagher

WHEN WE have some material thing and want to share it with a friend or neighbor, we do it because we want to bestow a favor. What better thing than the restored gospel does any Latter Day Saint have to share? We should never forget for a minute that Christ has said, "This church have I established." We should consider ourselves a better friend when we have shared this great light and truth.

Dr. E. Stanley Jones says the only thing we take with us when we leave this earth is what we have given away. While very few have surplus material wealth to give, we all have the gospel and time and talents to share!

What happier experience could any of us have than to be able to look around in paradise and have our friends shake our hands and thank us for inviting them there.

In a revelation given December, 1833, God said, "In the day of their peace they esteemed lightly my counsel; but in the day of their trouble, of necessity they feel after me."

Most of us come to know Christ better during some severe trial. It seems as if our greatest blessings follow seasons of distress. Aren't we supposed to be a tried people? What happens to us isn't nearly so important as how we react to it.

When my young son asks for a drink of water, he does so in a different tone than when he asks for candy, pop, and gum. Perhaps it would be better if we'd ask only for things we truly need or would benefit us. We should be thankful that we don't receive everything we ask for and have faith that God knows what is best for us. Nor should we ever ask for anything without being willing to say, "Thy will be done."

Sow an act, and reap a habit;
sow a habit, and reap a destiny.

Appreciating St. Paul

By Karl Schoepke

NOTE:—The author lives in Grossraschen (Russian Zone), Germany. He is twenty-six years old and holds the office of priest. Of his contribution, he says: "It takes courage to write an article in a foreign language. Therefore I beg the readers to be indulgent if some misunderstanding occur."

RECENTLY I was strongly moved by the quotation in the Bible (Acts 9: 15): "For he is a chosen vessel unto me, to bear my name before the Gentiles and kings, and the children of Israel." I spent considerable time to find out the reasons why God had chosen the famous Apostle Paul to do a great and marvelous work in the field of the gospel of Jesus Christ—to preach the gospel to many peoples of different nations and to the leaders of these nations.

It is known to us that St. Paul was a very learned man. His chief interests and main work lay in the field of the law of Moses and the prophets after Moses. Besides, he was able to speak several languages: Greek, Roman (or perhaps Latin), and Hebrew. It cannot be denied that this extensive knowledge partly prepared St. Paul for missionary work.

But this knowledge alone did not cause the Lord to appoint him as a special witness. We know that the Heavenly Father explores the depths of the heart and the mind. King David expressed the thought as follows: "He knoweth secrets of the heart." God saw deeper than we as mortal people usually can see. St. Paul was very honest and consistent. Sometimes we think of a man that he is honest but very much later we recognize our error. The sincere and consistent character of Paul can be clearly seen in his actions: before his conversion, he fought against the followers of Jesus Christ, thinking that the saints were the enemies of the Lord. Immediately after his conversion, he recognized his error and struggled against the enemies of the Holy Trinity or Deity. He became a faithful and courageous fighter for Christ's cause till his death, seeking mainly the salvation of other people; he did not think too much of his own person.

IT IS USEFUL to point out the circumstances and difficulties under which Paul had to perform his missionary and administrating work for God. At that time there were no radios, no aeroplanes, no telephones, no autos, etc. St. Paul was often obliged to undertake long walking-tours. Sometimes he was tired, but he did not stop preaching.

If we carefully consider the total work of St. Paul, we see that after his conversion to the gospel of Jesus Christ, he performed a work for God and mankind which is almost incomparable with the work of any other man in the world's history. By the Bible, we are exactly informed that he founded many branches in different countries. It is not so easy to establish branches; sometimes a person must preach many years before it can be done. It should be not forgotten that Paul often was in danger for his life, and many times was compelled to defend his belief. Perhaps another person would have given up the creed of the gospel.

Summarized, it can be said that the work of Paul demands the appreciation of posterity. Our church as a body and we as members of that body ought to revere the deeds of St. Paul and thank God that He chose such a learned and sincere man.

The Golden Book

The second in a series of three articles presenting the Book of Mormon, the great latter day work given to the world through Joseph Smith.

By GEORGE NJEIM

President of Seventy

IN CONSIDERING the prophetic claims of Joseph Smith, one cannot ignore the Book of Mormon.

It is this book, more than anything else the man said or did, which would either condemn him as an impostor or forever exonerate him from false charges and classify him with the major prophets.

The story of the appearance and translation of the Book of Mormon is a fascinating one. It is an account of a people whose forefathers came to the Americas from Palestine about 600 B. C. under divine guidance. On this hemisphere, they multiplied, although their descendants became divided on matters of religion and social behavior. The traditions, history, and sacred writings of the Jews and the House of Israel were known to them. Jesus Christ appeared to them in this hemisphere after his resurrection and established his church among them, leaving twelve disciples to carry on the work. Their history—social, political, and spiritual—was preserved by their priests and kings. Mormon, one of these priests, made an abridgment of this history of the people on gold tablets, which fell into the hands of his son Moroni. Relentlessly pursued by his enemies, Moroni, through divine instruction, deposited the records in the ground along with other valuables he had. The plates remained in the earth from A. D. 420 until the angel revealed their location to Joseph Smith. At this time, Joseph was seventeen years old. In 1827, four years later, the plates were removed from their depository and translated. In 1829 the resultant book was given to the world as the Book of Mormon.

A description of these plates and the means by which they were translated is as follows:

These records were engraven on plates, which had the appearance of gold. Each plate was not far from seven by eight inches in width and length, being not quite thick as common tin. They were filled on both sides with engravings in Egyptian characters, and bound together in a volume as the leaves of a book, and fastened at one edge with three rings running through the whole. This volume was nearly six inches in thickness, a part of which was sealed. . . . With the records was found a curious instrument called by the ancients the Urim and Thummim, which consisted of two stones, clear as crystal, set in two rims of a bow.

It was through this instrument, the Urim and Thummim, that the book was translated.

THE DOUBTER'S ANSWER to all this amazing tale of supernatural revelation was not slow in developing. Instead of God being the author of this translation, it appeared that Solomon Spaulding, an ex-clergyman, had written a similar romance about the American Indian and his origin, which somehow had been lost in the publisher's office and never printed. Joseph Smith got it through Sidney Rigdon, and, inspired by it, wrote the Book of Mormon. This story, though vehemently denied by both Smith and Rigdon, was rather generally accepted among the early critics as the authentic explanation. But for the last half century it has been discarded, because the original Spaulding romance turned up and had no resemblance whatever to the Book of Mormon. No substitute theory has been brought forward. In the absence of any other explanation, Smith's story is now weathering criticism under its own sail as an original production.

What is the purpose of this revelation, and why should God reveal to us a record of his will after leaving his word, the Bible, in our midst for centuries? Is it not merely confusing?

The book states the purpose. On its fly leaf, it claims its aim is to show both Jew and Gentile that "Jesus is the Christ." The aim is worthy, but even at that, it needs accurate definition, because "Christ" is getting to be an inclusive term, and a wide variety of causes and groups now lurk under His mantle.

ACCORDING TO THE GOSPELS, there is one way of knowing that Jesus is the Christ. That way is the knowledge of the word and the keeping of it. Christ, who came to earth and lived among us, according to the Gospel by John, was the word of God made flesh. This word of God, as we know it today, is recorded in the Gospels of the New Testament and, by action of the church, became canonical during the last period of the fourth century. By this act, Christ and his teachings were preserved for posterity. But this preservation and identification of Christ in the canonical writings failed to bring about a unified knowledge of him. Disagreement and strife about the nature of Christ and his teachings multiplied; after almost two thousand years of squabbling, we have not arrived at any commonly accepted and definite conclusion. From all observations, should we be granted further extension of time, it, too, would be insufficient for the attainment of this desirable end. Something is wrong somewhere. The question now is, and for a long time has been, cannot and will not Christ himself bring about unity and establish his cause among men according to his own methods? The Book of Mormon contains that will of Christ as well as other prophetic statements confirming and extending our vision of the whole problem he raises.

One of the ancient prophets who lived on this western continent before the Christian era was able, by the spirit of inspiration to see the coming forth of the book and tell of the part that it should play. He said: "And the angel spake unto me, saying, these last records which thou hast seen among the Gentiles shall establish the truth of the first which are of the twelve apostles of the Lamb, and shall make known the plain and precious things which have been taken away from them And the words of the Lamb shall be made known in the records of thy seed, as well as in the records of the twelve apostles of the Lamb."—Book of Mormon, page 38.

NOT ONLY was this prophet able to see the part that the Book of Mormon would play, but he was able also to see the Gospels before they were written. He saw then what scholars are suspecting now. He saw some "plain and precious truths" taken away from them. If that is a fact (and it is a fact which became apparent after Joseph Smith translated the Book of Mormon) the word of God which was made flesh and lived among us is not all represented in the New Testament, and what we have preserved and canonized was only a part of the original. If that be accepted as true, it is easy to understand why Christ and his purposes are so little understood. What should have been a unifying factor is missing.

It is stated also in the Book of Mormon that, as the word proceeded out of the mouth of the Jew, it came out in purity; it was the Gentiles who induced its imperfections. "Wherefore, these things go forth from the Jews in purity unto the Gentiles And after they go forth by the hands of the twelve apostles of the Lamb, from the Jews unto the Gentiles, thou seest the foundation of a great and abominable church, which is most abominable above all other churches. For behold, they have taken away from the gospel of the Lamb many parts which are plain and most precious."

These statements may sound absurd, but nevertheless, the knaveries they refer to are historical. Saint Paul, writing his first epistle to the Corinthian saints, reminds them, "I wrote unto you in an epistle not to company with fornicators." According to that, what we call the First Corinthian letter of Paul, is in reality the second, and what we call the second is the third. Also writing to the Colossians, Paul asked them to read the epistle to the Laodiceans as well, and have the epistle to the Laodiceans read to them. This epistle to the Laodiceans is missing. As to the pruning of the Gospels, the first four verses of the first chapter of Luke make the matter quite plain. Many eye witnesses wrote of Christ, and yet, out of all that number, we have only the Gospel of Mark. Matthew and John were written later.

BIBLE STUDENTS also tell us that the New Testament, as we know it today, was put together in the fourth century. Of the original manuscripts, nothing is known. The oldest of these manuscripts, which erroneously we call the originals, are now in the British Museum, Vatican Library, and the University of Cambridge, but none of these antedates the fourth century. How many times the originals were translated and rewritten and how many errors crept in during this period and how trustworthy were those who did the work on them are still matters of conjecture.

Even what we possess of the Gospels contains disagreements, and those who are specialists on the subjects admit that errors have crept in. "That there are serious discrepancies between the Synoptists no one denies" says Conrad Noal. "In copying ancient manuscripts, various additions have crept in, and more serious sometimes are the omissions." He concludes by saying that when all "alterations, additions, and compressions" have been discounted, one will find left a "substratum" giving a "picture of a commanding and essentially consistent personality." But he does not point out how much more commanding, how much more consistent, and how much more unifying that personality would have been had there not entered into the gospel text these distracting and diluting influences.

Not only modern historians support the claims of the Book of Mormon that "many parts which were plain and most precious" had been removed "from the gospel of the Lamb," but the oldest church historian, Eusebius, who wrote in the fourth century A. D. when the act of mutilating the scriptures was still fresh, tells of the deceptive acts of those early Christians. As early as the years 160-180, according to the statement of one called Hegesippus, there were some Apocryphal books "forged" by the heretics. In another chapter of his Ecclesiastical History, Eusebius wrote "that the truth of the Gospel was preserved until the times of Victor, who was the thirteenth bishop of Rome from Peter." But that from his successor, Zephyrinus, "the truth was mutilated." Also pointing to heretics (and it is most difficult to know who were the heretics during those days of claims and counter claims), the same author says: "For this purpose they fearlessly lay their hands upon the Holy Scriptures, saying that they have corrected them. And that I do not say this against them without foundation, whoever wishes may learn: for should any one collect and compare their copies one with another, he would find them greatly at variance among themselves. For the copies of Asclepiodotus will be found to differ from those of Theodotus. Copies of many you may find in abundance, altered, by the eagerness of their disciples to insert each one his own corrections, as they call them." In the face of this, one wonders as to the source of our still existing originals of our present Scriptures.

THE EFFECT of the Book of Mormon is not to be felt among Gentiles alone. Jewish life and attitudes are to be influenced by it as well. At no time in the history of this unfortunate people was there such a need for a Christ and a Redeemer as there is now. Europe is completely closed to them, and the status of Palestine remains uncertain. But in spite of their great need for a deliverer, the Christ whose picture we see in the Gospels does not appeal to them. Their approach to the Gospels is interesting. This is what they think of them:

The earliest of these sources, the original of Mark's Gospel, contains references which show that it was written shortly before or after the destruction of Jerusalem in the year 70; in other words, forty years after the death of Jesus. Like the other Gospels, it was originally written in Greek, whereas the sayings of Jesus were uttered in Aramaic. It is therefore impossible to lay such stress upon the perfect accuracy of the record of events and in statements written down forty years after they occurred or were made, and then in a language other than that in which such statements were originally uttered.

After some sound thinking, one finds it extremely difficult to condemn the Jew for this attitude. The New Testament, aside from the doubt it inspires respecting its authenticity, is completely antagonistic toward them. In all the Gospels, there is only one statement reassuring them of a final return to Palestine, and that is to be after the city of Jerusalem is trodden by the Gentiles! Why does Christ leave such cold comfort to the people over whose welfare he once lamented sympathetically as he stood on the mountain viewing their capital? He antedated his incarnation and, by his spirit, the prophets had both rebuked and also comforted them before. Has he so changed now that all he could leave was censure and blame? Had there not crept in certain additions or omissions into the Gospels' text, perhaps a different story from what we have now would have appeared. According to the Acts of the Apostles, the picture of the relationships between Jews and Gentiles in the Apostolic Church is a picture of continuous strife.

IN THE BOOK OF MORMON Christ appears to have a completely different attitude toward the Jews. The only word of comfort which ever came from his lips that has come down to us was uttered while he was on this continent. As he was addressing the ancient Americans, who, according to this book, were descendants of Jacob, he said:

The Father having raised me unto you first, and sent me to bless you, in turning away every one from his iniquities, and this because ye are the children of the covenant.

Then speaking concerning the Jews, he said:

And will remember the covenant which I have made with my people, and I have covenanted with them, that I would gather them together in mine own due time; that I would give unto them again the land of their fathers, for their inheritance, which is the land of Jerusalem, which is the promised land unto them forever, saith the Father.

This promise, however, is not given unconditionally. Because of an unrepentant attitude, these people were thrown out of Palestine, and it does not stand to reason that God would restore them in that unrepentant condition. "The time cometh," he says, "when the fullness of my gospel shall be preached unto them, and they shall believe in me, that I am Jesus Christ, the Son of God, and shall pray unto the Father in my name." It is then the Jews will be able to find that peace which they seek and which the world has denied them.

Both Jews and Gentiles need the additional conviction that the message of this book carries, namely, that Jesus is the Christ.

IN ADDITION to what took place with our scripture in the first three centuries, we had to put up with the scientific misunderstandings of the nineteenth century. Around the middle of this century, it was discovered that the world is not so old as the Bible said, but much older. Even man was not created as the Scriptures narrate. In the hands of people that do not understand the first principles of theories and inductions, this scientific discovery became a deadly weapon. Churches, mosques, and synagogues were emptied of worshipers. Why should man pray to a nonexistent Deity? By his own ability to survive, man reached his present state, and, by continuing to trust in his own powers, he will reach the ultimate goal—mundane happiness.

If tampering with the scriptures brought about divisions among the Christian people and a misunderstanding of the purposes of Christ, this latest discovery brought about the repudiation by some people of any divine authority. If God is really the Father and sent us his Son to save mankind why should he become so indifferent to the need of his children when they reach the place where they are about to exterminate themselves? In this connection, the Book of Mormon is nothing short of an example of divine strategy. Its miraculous appearing is a witness to a revolting people and to a spiritually calloused world that the Lord is God and that Jesus Christ is the manifestation of God.

PARALLEL WITH THE decay of the authority of the Bible, there has come also a decay in the Christian hope of eternal life. Men are outstandingly characterized today by their gluttonous appetites for novelty, the "appeasements" of the day, and love of merriment. They are so minded deliberately, because they believe that tomorrow they will die and their life ends there. The coming forth of the Book of Mormon was timely in this respect, also. It has tried to counteract this shortsighted view of life by dealing at length with the question of the immortality of the soul. Its teachings on such subjects as the resurrection of the dead and retribution after death lend firm support to the analogous teachings of the New Testament—teachings which the world is discarding at an alarmingly increasing rate. In the face of such spiritual disillusionment, this book offers within its pages that which should strengthen its believers to hope instead of despair. It enhances the desire for good works and righteous deeds.

The purpose of the Messiah was to give life and give it more abundantly. The primary weakness of Christianity is in the lack of a harmonious and general understanding and interpretation of his design for living as revealed to us in the Scriptures, and, secondly, in the genuine acceptance of his way in practice. That there will be a timely way out of this confusion is not as hopeful a prospect as some may think. The practical way of the life Christ wants us to live was abandoned in the second century, and since then Christian people have been interested in thinking of Christ instead of living like Christ. Seventeen hundred years have not brought us any where near that purpose. We are perhaps, farther now from that purpose than we have ever been before. Christ himself must help us out of this difficulty, or we shall be completely lost. In the Book of Mormon many of the disputed doctrines of Christ, over which there is much heated debate, are made plain. Furthermore, the practical Christian way of life over which we seem to stumble appears to have held no fears to those people who heard his voice on this continent. For almost four hundred years they practiced his social and economic precepts. To men and women hungering and thirsting for righteousness, the Book of Mormon has become the vital component of a spiritually nourishing diet.

Thus judging Joseph Smith by his production of the Book of Mormon, one can see no ulterior or selfish motives. It is on the Book of Mormon that his prophetic claims rest because it reveals God in a most objective manner. The greatest evidence for the authenticity of the claims of Joseph Smith and the divinity of the book is to be found in the need of humanity for such a divine revealer. Here it pleased God to call upon an unknown youth to do his work. Out of theological confusion, He has brought order, and out of spiritual anarchy, He has brought authority.

Announcing:

Life After Death

Available in 2" x 2" Slides and Filmstrips

"If a man die, shall he live again?" This age old question is ably discussed and answered in the words of the Scriptures in this new slide set. It was prepared by Apostle Maurice L. Draper and the Advisory Committee on Visual Education to be used as a missionary aid.

This set has been produced in two forms; 2"x2" slides in cardboard mounts, and single frame filmstrips. The cost has been held as low as possible to allow widespread use of this material. The script that accompanies this set is designed for two purposes: (1) to provide a suggested script for use with the slide set or filmstrip, and (2) to acquaint our friends with our convictions concerning Life After Death. The script is illustrated with reproductions of each slide. Extra copies are available as indicated below.

Filmstrip, S.F., 30 frames	$2.50
2 x 2 slides, in readymounts	5.00
Film only, for mounting in S.V.E. binders	3.50
Extra copies of script: each	.10
	50 for 3.75
	100 for 5.50

order from

Visual Aids Department

HERALD PUBLISHING HOUSE

Independence, Missouri

Worship Suggestions for August

By BERNICE BONHAM

Theme for the Month:

ENRICHING OUR FELLOWSHIP

AUGUST 1, 1948

ENRICHING OUR FELLOWSHIP
THROUGH SERVICE

Prelude:

"Hark! The Voice of Jesus Calling,"
Saints' Hymnal, No. 344.

Call to Worship:

"I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service. And be not conformed to this world; but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what that good and acceptable and perfect will of God is."—Romans 12: 1, 2, I. V.

Hymn: "Hark! The Voice of Jesus Calling," No. 344 (stanza 1).

Prayer: (Help us to know the Master better.)

Hymn: "O Master, Let Me Walk With Thee," No. 213 (stanzas 1-3).

Talk (Five or six minutes):

Based on Alma 12: 30-121. Tell in your own words of Ammon's life as a great missionary. He was rich with blessings because he forgot himself and served others. We, too, must serve others and the Master, whatever the cost. As we serve one another, we are blessed with friends and, together, we are blessed with his Spirit.

Solo or Duet: "Hark! The Voice of Jesus Calling," No. 344 (stanzas 2 and 3).

Commission:

"Who, then, is willing to consecrate his service this day unto the Lord?"—I Chronicles 29: 5.

Hymn: "Send Me Forth, O Blessed Master," No. 214.

Prayer of Blessing:

(The Lord will help us this week to do that which we have resolved to do.)

AUGUST 8, 1948

ENRICHING OUR FELLOWSHIP
THROUGH KNOWLEDGE

Prelude:

"Come Ye Apart," No. 108.

Call to Worship:

"Bow down thine ear, and hear the words of the wise, and apply thine heart unto my knowledge."—Proverbs 22: 17.

Hymn: "One Sweet Hour With Jesus Every Day," No. 318.

Prayer: (Help us to know how we can deepen our fellowship with the Master.)

Scripture:

"Behold, I am God, and have spoken it; these commandments are of me, and were given unto my servants in their weakness, after the manner of their language, that they might come to understanding; and inasmuch as they erred, it might be made known; and inasmuch as they sought wisdom, they might be instructed; and inasmuch as they sinned, they might be chastened, that they might repent; and inasmuch as they were humble, they might be made strong, and blessed from on high, and receive knowledge from time to time."—Doctrine and Covenants 1: 5.

Hymn: "Oh, Master, Let Me Walk With Thee," No. 213.

Talk:

Based on Genesis 7 and Doctrine and Covenants 45: 2. Enoch's people, through knowledge and observance of God's laws, enjoyed a fellowship that has ever been a challenge to God-loving peoples. God has unfolded his plan and designated the place where those who will keep his laws are commanded to gather and build the Zion of the latter days. Zion offers a fellowship which no other plan in the world offers. These laws can be kept only through knowledge and observance of them. Those working for Zion are drawn into a fellowship that will be surpassed only by the fellowship of the Master when he comes to dwell with the Saints in Zion.

Hymn: "You May Sing of the Beauty," No. 109.

Commission:

"If thou shalt ask, thou shalt receive revelation upon revelation, knowledge upon knowledge, that thou mayest know the mysteries, and peaceable things; that which bringeth joy, that which bringeth life eternal."—Doctrine and Covenants 42: 17.

Benediction.

AUGUST 15, 1948

ENRICHING OUR FELLOWSHIP
THROUGH TITHING OF TIME

Prelude:

"I Gave My Life for Thee," No. 330.

Call to Worship:

"Let the church be admonished that the times are portentous and demand faithful adherence to the faith and work of the church, that mankind may be blessed by and find peace in those religiously social reforms and relationships which have been divinely imposed as a great task of achievement. Remember and keep the commandments, be alert to keep out of the church and from its members those forces which make for disunity, and in harmony and saintly accord be about the task of freeing Zion of her bondage."—Doctrine and Covenants 137 (last paragraph).

Solo: "I Gave My Life for Thee," No. 330 (stanzas 1, 3, 4).

Prayer: (Help us to know how we can more fully give ourselves to the Master.)

Hymn: "Be With Me, Lord," No. 305 (stanzas 1, 2).

Talk:

Tithing of Time. Sunday belongs to God (Doctrine and Covenants 59: 2). The rest of the week should be planned or budgeted and tithed in order to be sure God's time is not crowded out, for time must be taken to live with him, rather than with the world. A part of the labor for God includes the study of his word, prayer, and service. A good example of tithing of time is found in the work done on the Nauvoo Temple. "There was no laborer in all Nauvoo, however poor, that was not proud to give his tenth day's work to the Temple."—The Story of the Church, page 273.

Conclusion may include: "It is required of the Lord, at the hand of every steward, to render an account of his stewardship, both in time and in eternity. For he who is faithful and wise in time is accounted worthy to inherit the mansions prepared for them of my Father."—Doctrine and Covenants 72: 1.

Picture and Appreciation:

"The Light of the Bible," by Bisschop (Order from Herald Publishing House). "The Light of the Bible" is a picture of an elderly woman reading from an old-fashioned Bible. Her face is aglow with a beauty that seems to come from an inner peace. From childhood until now she has studied His Word, learning new truths and gaining new understanding along the way of life. Her hands are toil-worn, showing she has given much service and works of comfort to others. Yet through a life of joy and sorrow, happiness and disappointments, she has found time to study her faithful friend, her Book of Light. Now, in her old age, you sense the contentment and peace that is hers as she reads her Bible. We, too, if we will search the Scriptures over and over again, seeking out their secrets, shall come to know the living word.

Poem: "Seek the Lord in Prayer" (To be read to the soft accompaniment of "Take Time to Be Holy," No. 322).

Wouldst thou know the way to lighten
Every load of grief and care?
Seek the presence of the Saviour,
Carry all to him in prayer.

Wouldst thou find the joy of being Used of Jesus everywhere?
Closely walk beside the Master;
Often seek his face in prayer.

Wouldst thou have a power for service,
In life's conquest have a share?
Lean upon the arm Almighty;
Spend much time with God in prayer.

Wouldst thou have divine enrichment—
Grace for all who have to bear?
God will bless with richest measure,
All who go to him in prayer.
—Author Unknown.

Hymn: (Tells another way of tithing our time)

"Serving One Another," Zion's Praises, No. 83 (stanzas 1, 2), or "Let Us, Brothers," Saints' Hymnal, No. 287 (stanzas 1, 3).

Commission (Remain standing):

"This life is the time for men to prepare to meet God; yea, behold the day of this life is the day of men to perform their labors . . . for after this day of life, which is given us to prepare for eternity, behold if we do not improve our time while in this life, then cometh the night of darkness, wherein there can be no labor performed." —Alma 16: 229, 230.

"Thou shalt not idle away thy time; neither shalt thou bury thy talent that it may not be known."—Doctrine and Covenants 60: 3.

Benediction.

AUGUST 22, 1948

ENRICHING OUR FELLOWSHIP THROUGH TITHING OF TALENTS

Prelude:

"Holy, Holy, Holy," No. 7.

Call to Worship:

"Behold, thus saith the Lord unto the elders of his church . . . Behold, it pleaseth me, that you have come up hither; but with some I am not well pleased, for they will not open their mouths, but hide the talent which I have given unto them, because of the fear of man. Woe unto such, for mine anger is kindled against them."—Doctrine and Covenants 60: 1.

Solo: "I Gave My Life for Thee," No. 330.

(Hear the voice only and have a large picture of Jesus in front. Preferably one that looks at you. Sallman's new "In His Presence" is excellent Order from the Herald Publishing House.)

Prayer: (Help us to more fully polish our talents for the Master's use.)

Hymn: "What Fruit Have you Gathered for Jesus," No. 221.

Talk:

Based on Matthew 25: 14-30, the profitable servant. The talents we gain as we use the ones we have are for the purpose of helping to build up the Lord's work, rather than for individual praise or glory, for all talents are for the benefit of all. Though Doctrine and Covenants 60: 1 is addressed to "the elders of his church," the reprimand applies to all who hide the talents God has given to them. The Lord says woe unto such, for he can help only those persons who come offering the use of their gifts. Many types of gifts are given for the use of the work of our Master—the gift of song, the gift of writing (as is mentioned in Doctrine and Covenants 125: 11), and many of the other easily recognized talents. Not least of the talents is that of the ability to cultivate friendships for the Master. This is a precious gift, offering cheer and the sense of "belonging" to many who otherwise may feel no one is interested. All can cultivate the art of being friendly, for

'Tis the human touch in this world that counts,
The touch of your hand and mine,
Which means far more to the fainting heart
Than shelter and bread and wine.
For shelter is gone when the night is o'er,
And bread lasts only a day,
But the touch of the hand and the sound of the voice
Sing on in the soul alway.

—Spencer Michael Free.

Poems:

TALENTS

If you have a talent,
Be it great or small,
Make of it the most you can;
Give to it your all.

God has given you this talent;
You must do your part
To be a trustful steward
With a willing heart.

Do not hide your talent
'Neath a blush or sigh;
God needs cheerful workers,
Time is fleeting by.

Consecrate your talents
To the Master's cause;
He will bless your efforts,
If you keep his laws.
—Ruby McBride.

A PRAYER

It is my joy in life to find
At every turning of the road,
The strong arm of a comrade kind
To help me onward with my load.

And since I have no gold to give,
And love alone must make amends,
My only prayer is, while I live,
God make me worthy of my friends!
—Frank Dempster Sherman.

Hymn: "You May Value the Friendship," No. 109 (stanza 3).

Commission:

Have you had a kindness shown? Pass it on.
'Twas not given for thee alone. Pass it on.
Let it travel down the years,
Let it wipe another's tears,
Till in heav'n the deed appears—pass it on.
—Author Unknown.

Benediction.

AUGUST 29, 1948

ENRICHING OUR FELLOWSHIP THROUGH TITHING OF POSSESSIONS

Prelude:

"I Was Glad and Did Rejoice," No. 67.

Call to Worship:

"Even from the days of your fathers ye are gone away from mine ordinances . . . Return unto me, and I will return unto you, saith the Lord of hosts. . . . Will a man rob God? Yet ye have robbed me. . . . In tithes and offerings. Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, . . . and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it. And I will rebuke the devourer for your sakes, and he shall not destroy the fruits of your ground; neither shall your vine cast her fruit before the time in the field, saith the Lord of hosts. And all nations shall call you blessed."—Malachi 3: 7-12.

Hymn: "O Lord, Around Thine Altar Now," No. 74.

Prayer: (That we might come to know Jesus better as we give our possessions to him.)

Scripture Reading: Doctrine and Covenants 106.

Talk: Tithing Our Possessions.

Zion will be built by a consecrated people. The caliber of the people is best demonstrated by the use that is made of material possessions. One tenth above one's needs and just wants belongs to

It's "On the Record"

By Floy Lorene Bennett

"MUSIC HATH CHARMS"

IN THE VERY EARLY LIVES of our children, we discover something of the infinite power of music and its effect on human behavior. Even before the infant is able to see well, he can hear and may be frightened by loud noises or soothed by the soft voice of the mother. "Rock-a-bye, Baby," has been many a child's first introduction to music. From this, he progresses with the mother to other lullabys, and an infinite parade of nursery rhymes. These are sung or recited, but—whether by speech alone or by speech and tune—they are always recited or sung with a definite, simple, pronounced rhythm.

If either or both parents can sing, the child is fortunate, because the parents can profitably act as entertainers, educators, and chief assistants to the sandman by singing for the child. This can be a happy and unifying experience for the family, too—a security-builder and a basis for family understanding and appreciation. At an early age, children may be introduced to radio and phonograph. Because so few radio programs are suitable for the very young, the phonograph offers far greater possibilities. Selection of program material and the time for using it is entirely within parental control. Furthermore, endless repetition is possible. Children love to hear over and over again the rhymes and tunes of "Rock-a-bye, Baby," "Humpty, Dumpty," "Jack and Jill," and others.

THE PHONOGRAPH is such a rich source of family enjoyment, child education, and development that parents will do well to try to provide a record player of some sort for the home. Phonographs differ widely in type, quality, and price. A small electric phonograph for the child's earliest records may be bought very reasonably. For children who are old enough to operate it alone, the manual phonograph may be satisfactory. Sometimes all one needs is a turntable to be attached to the family radio. But if parents are really interested in taking advantage of the vast opportunities offered by use of phonograph records, they may wish to pool all resources and buy a family Christmas gift, using all the money for one gift which might otherwise be spent for many smaller and less valuable individual gifts. In this way, a better instrument can be bought, and the family as a whole can enjoy the beautiful music, speech, and drama which can be played on a really good, automatic, electric phonograph—perhaps, even a radio-phonograph combination.

If you have a phonograph or are planning to get one, it is a good idea to give considerable attention and time to making your record selections. It is neither necessary nor advisable to start with a large library. Start with a very small, carefully-selected group of records and add to it as time and opportunity permit. Records make very suitable holiday and anniversary gifts.

At this time, the building of a children's library is the chief concern of the writer, although really good children's records are enjoyed by adults, too. If we may assume that since his birth the child has enjoyed the simple lullabys and nursery songs as sung by his parents, by the time he is two years old he should be able to enjoy these same songs on the phonograph. The younger the child is when he is introduced to the phonograph, the more important it is that he hear tunes and words with which he is already familiar. The transition will be much simpler and, if the beginning experiences are pleasant, it will be much easier to hold and stimulate further interest in this particular medium for recreation, appreciation, and education.

Of course, the first concern must be enjoyment. Choose for the child's first records nursery songs that he will learn and enjoy for their gaiety, rhythm, and tunefulness. Later, one may think more about teaching in this pleasant way new ideas and concepts, even facts and habits. One thing, however, is paramount, listening must be fun.

For first records, it is certainly best to select vocalists in preference to instrumentalists, and soloists in preference to ensembles, because here again you will be closer to the child's past experience. The personality of the performer will be more readily felt and the music more easily interpreted by the child.

Now let us select some records. In order to furnish a guide for the inexperienced parent, a few appropriate record selections will be listed and briefly described. Remember always, learning can be fun by way of a carefully selected record library.

MOTHER GOOSE

NURSERY RHYMES have ever been the delight of childhood. They combine common sense with immortal nonsense. Unfortunate, indeed, is the boy or girl who has never known Mother Goose and learned to love her rhymes and tunes. They help to initiate a love for beauty and act as a stimulus through the years for a continuous extension of the artistic horizon.

The children of Mother Goose are often convincingly human. Any child will understand the conceit of "Little Jack Horner," the fright of "Little Miss Muffet," the disappointment of "Little Bo Peep," and the carelessness of "Little Boy Blue." There is an unflinching charm in the words and melodies, a very special magic for every child.

Let us, then, begin our children's record library with nursery rhymes and songs. Frank Luther has made some very delightful recordings. One especially suitable collection of melodies is "Nursery Rhymes" sung by Mr. Luther and accompanied by orchestra and sound effects. The beginning is a gay one:

Cock-a-doodle-doo,
My lady's lost her shoe;
My master's lost his fiddling stick
And doesn't know what to do.

The crow of the cock, the descriptive accompaniment, and the tune itself, sung in Frank Luther's inimitable style, bring laughter, waving of arms, swaying of bodies, and numerous other indications of wholehearted appreciation from the very young child. By the time the singer has introduced with appropriate words and has sung through all the rhymes of "Good Morning, Merry Sunshine," "Lazy Mary," "Rain, Rain, Go Away," "The Muffin Man," "This Little Pig Went to Market," and so on to the end of the record, most children will shout, "Play it again! Play it again!" And very soon, it is quite likely that Mr. Luther will no longer be singing solos; he will be merely a big, gay voice singing in unison with Martha's or Donnie's sweet soprano. And if the truth be told, it is highly probable that Mother and Dad will enjoy the tunes quite as much as the children. Repetition of the record for the child will be no chore at all but a very real pleasure.

"Mother Goose Songs," another collection for children sung by Frank Luther, makes an excellent supplement to the record described above.

"MANNERS CAN BE FUN"

THE IDEAS so delightfully presented in Munro Leaf's book, "Manners Can Be Fun," have been put into rhyme, set to music, and sung by Frank Luther in a most intriguing way. Each little song-story deals with some elementary rule of courtesy and thoughtfulness. Learning to conform to the rules of good behavior becomes a happy adventure. The child's pride is appealed to in such a way that his response is natural. It is hoped, however, that in explaining to children any question they may have concerning the various "rules" presented so effectively that the parent will not attempt to moralize or overexplain. Clarify questions, but let the song-stories do the teaching. They are amusing and artful. Children will love them.

"WHAT IS GOD LIKE?"

*"What is God like, Mother, dear,
Can I see his face?"*

WHAT PARENT has not encountered this question? What parent has not found it difficult to give a satisfactory answer in language and style which puts the child's mind at ease, yet makes him sure of the great goodness, ever-presence, and all-powerfulness of the Creator. Olive Volkmar answers the question beautifully in her poem, "What Is God Like?" and the lovely contralto voice of Karolyn Harris tells the story in song so simply and charmingly that all children will enjoy hearing it played over and over. There is a magic in song which makes it a delightful medium for learning.

"Song of Growing Things" on the other side of the above record is a beautiful selection, too. A child's excitement over losing her first tooth furnishes an entertaining introduction to the lovely "Song of Growing Things."

Beauty Sleeps

*Two sapphire eyes dream-filled,
Now heavy-lidded, try their best
To open wide.
There's such a lot to see,
And bedtime comes so soon!*

*The tumbled copper curls are baby fine
Which lie upon a clean, starched pillow,
Framing a face where innocence of rounded cheek
Is contradicted by three saucy freckles
On a tiny nose.*

*From the ruffled nightie cuff,
One small, pink hand curves gently 'round
A teddy bear
"To keep him warm," she says,
And shuts her eyes.*

*The twilight world of flitting fireflies,
Drowsy birds, and twinkling little stars
Is hushed before the lovely sight
As Beauty sleeps.*

—LOUISE WRIGLEY

The Men of Williamsburg

By Elbert Dempsey, Jr.

OUR NATION was born a miracle. It was created by men who rose above reality and acted like gods. Fourth of July orators and history books told me so.

I certainly could not see much similarity between this heroic occasion and our poor efforts to meet everyday problems with men of clay. I looked to the future when we, too, could create miracles with men who acted like gods. And I suspect our nation and church waited and looked with me. I do not wait or look any more. One reason is Williamsburg, Virginia.

At Williamsburg, the old community has been rebuilt as it was when it was the colonial capital of Virginia. Every session of the legislature, all the leaders in the colony flocked to Williamsburg from their isolated plantations and villages. Here they discussed the price of tobacco, argued taxes, planned Indian defense, passed laws, and developed the public opinion of the colony. On the pews of Burton Parish Church you can read the names of the men who served together on the legislature. They read like a roster of the founders of our nation. You can stroll along streets undisturbed by traffic or telephone poles. You can sit by candlelight where Patrick Henry exhorted his fellows to fight for their rights. You can visit homes where they lived, shops where they bought wigs, and soon the spirit of the place sinks into you.

THEN YOU VISIT Raleigh Tavern where they celebrated or relaxed after a hard day. Here Washington, Jefferson, Madison, Monroe, the Lees and many more jostled across the table, fighting out the issues of the day. Here they developed the awareness of reality and the mutual understanding that helped make them the backbone of the nation in later years. Here the great Virginians gave birth to a nation over a joint of beef and a glass of wine.

To me, Williamsburg symbolizes some of the common, earthy reasons why the Virginians were able to lead our people to nationhood, why the followers of Christ led men to Christianity, and why we are not leading many to Zion.

The men at Williamsburg faced pressing problems for which they earnestly and courageously sought answers. They debated fiercely, and they fought for answers which could actually get results. More important, they merely used their Williamsburg experience as a fountainhead of ideas which they later applied at Valley Forge, Yorktown, Philadelphia, and Washington. They were practical men of affairs more than patriots or heroes.

The men around Christ were motivated less by material or intellectual reasons and more by the spiritual, and they were less robust about it all, but apart from this, they were more akin to the hardy planters than to the pious Saints of today. Those who were productive were men of action. They had a job, and they were oriented toward doing it and not merely hoping for it.

If we are to be as successful in our planning as the men at Williamsburg or at the Last Supper, we must gear ourselves to reality as they did.

IT IS FINE to plan a new church, to dream of the lofty steeple, fine organ, the beautiful decorations. But it is an empty dream until someone starts digging dirt and sweating over a pile of bricks. Likewise, the freedom, opportunity, and justice sought by the men at Williamsburg were empty dreams until armies were raised, men killed, and political skirmishes won. And so the goals of the church to evangelize the world and build Zion are empty dreams until we take practical measures to make today better than yesterday.

Instead of praying for Zion, let us pray to be better neighbors. The best way to promote the brotherhood of man is to strive to be a brother.

Instead of wringing our hands over the vast evil in the world, let us fight for better schools. For years Independence has been losing many of its finest teachers to other schools or better paying private businesses. We have a good school system for this section of the country, but it is far inferior to what it would be if we were willing to pay the price for the best teachers and the most capable and dynamic leadership. As a result, the people of Independence are poorer citizens, bankers, carpenters, housewives, neighbors. Zion is that much farther from reality.

Yet I remember a few years back the board of education and superintendent came to the people on their knees, begging for more money, not for improvement, but merely to maintain the status quo. All that many of our members gave them was

www.LatterDayTruth.org

New Horizons

sympathetic support. If we are serious about Zion, we will have to fight for better schools. There are times when we can serve the cause of Zion better at the polls than at prayer meeting.

WE NEED more adequate spiritual training. I have heard many stories on prayer that give me greater faith in prayer, but in all my life I only recall one discussion on prayer that made it much more understandable and enabled me to use it more effectively. We must have more of this before there is any hope for Zion.

This is not an effort to list all the things we must do to have Zion. You can add to the list as well as I. I am merely bringing out the approach that would be used by the men of Williamsburg or any other who would have any chance of success.

July Fourth we celebrate the success of these men, and those in other colonies, who were stirred to combine great goals with practical measures to bring them into reality. The only fitting tribute we can pay is to act in their example.

For those who feel I am leaving out God, I say we should pray for and expect his assistance. But the greatest gift he can send is the power to act as effectively as the men of Williamsburg.

The Lord Is My Helmsman

By MRS. DEWEY MERCER

The Lord is my helmsman;
He guideth, with steady hand,
my fragile craft.
He knoweth the sure way
down roaring rapids,
And amongst the dashing confusion of turbulent waters,
The depths and the shallows
He knoweth.
To him, the night is not dark,
Nor doth the tumult terrify.
Have courage, my soul,
and be still.
Let God steer the course,
And know in thine innermost heart
That, e'en though the way be long and perilous,
He shall bring thee at last to still waters.

The Evening Service

By Fred Alexander

This impression is merely a figment of the writer's imagination. Any resemblance to any congregation, living or dead, is purely coincidental.

THE MINISTER behind the pulpit was filling the auditorium with eloquent phrases of culture and restraint concerning the frivolities of a sinful world. His sterling words wafted gently over the congregation which was comfortably steeped in a caressing heat that just slightly exceeded body temperature. The speaker was weaving a spell over his listeners. Here was a man with the skill of a Brahms creating a lullaby of unsurpassed gentleness. Abruptly, it seemed, the peroration ended. There was a symphony of rustle and whisper made staccato by a few interspersed coughs as the voice receded into the silence from whence it sprang. Another voice was reciting in a tone bereft of energy the closing hymn which had been selected to keep the congregation from resembling a group of mass sleepwalkers upon leaving the church.

The congregation, summoning what seemed to be unearthly strength, struggled to its feet like a group of bears first seeing the light of day after a season of hibernation. The final hymn burst upon the consciousness of the worshipers with the abruptness of a bucket of cold water in their respective faces. Lungs began to function, blood coursed through veins and arteries that had long been cloistered by the mechanics of sitting down, bleary eyes vaguely translated words into meaning and husky larynges into sound.

Then silence! And thus was initiated the second sermon of the evening . . . the closing prayer. Here was a man just as gifted in lack of brevity as the speaker and out to prove it. Time soon found the audience swaying where it stood with something closely akin to rigor mortis setting in. Every member of the congregation poised for a fast break-away like a runner waiting for the gun.

And then it was over—bedlam broke loose—the congregation was having its day now.

“Why, Mrs. Parker, where have you been these past weeks, my dear?”

“Oh, your liver, dreadful, isn't it?”

“Have you heard that young Bill Jones was—yes! Isn't it awful!”

Finally the auditorium was quiet. The congregation had gone. Another sermon had passed into the eternity from which it had come.

Sentence Sermons

Experience is a great teacher, provided the pupil is brilliant and no one is in a hurry.

How can a sleeping man awake him who is asleep? (Hindu proverb)

Too much sun makes a desert. (Arab proverb)

Hate is the weapon of the defeated. (Seydell)

Truth is as elusive as water, but as enduring as the sea.

There is no point in living just a little higher than the devil, when you can live with Christ.

The bee, though it finds every rose has a thorn, comes back loaded with honey from its rambles. (Halliburton)

It is better to appreciate things you cannot have, than to have things you are not able to appreciate.

A man is known by the company he keeps—out of.

The art of using moderate abilities to advantage often brings greater results than actual brilliancy.

—Norma Anne Kirkendall.

Freedom Is of God

(Continued from page 6.)

and because they are brothers they have equal rights to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. Through his teachings, he freed men's minds: "Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." Through his example and his power, he can set men free from the power of tyrannical and sinful habit and make them free in the joy of his word. Through his own death and burial and glorious resurrection, he has released men from the bondage and fear of death. Because he lives, we shall live also; death is swallowed up in victory.

When men have learned to live in perfect Christian brotherhood, with Jesus reigning over every heart, there will need to be little or no worldly government, but only a perfect liberty for every man. For where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty. We thank God today that we are free Americans, and free men in Christ.

Worship Suggestions for August

(Continued from page 17.)

God. All are accountable to God for not only the one tenth, but also the nine tenths. The Lord needs stewards who will gladly pay their debt to him and then try to manage the remainder so there will be more to give toward his work. It isn't just the giving God is concerned with, but what it does to the individual in the giving.

"Verily it is a day of sacrifice, and a day for the tithing of my people, for he that is tithed shall not be burned (at his coming)." — Doctrine and Covenants 64: 5.

"Let no one deceive himself that he shall not account for his stewardship unto me." — Ibid., 69: 2.

Poem:

WHAT HAVE YOU DONE TODAY?

You will do much in the years to come,
But, Stewards, what of today?
You will give your talents in goodly sum,
But what will you give today?
You will lift the heart and dry the tear,
You will speak the words of love and cheer,
But what did you speak today,

You will be so kind in the after-while,
But, Stewards, what of today?
You will bring to each lonely life a smile,
But what have you brought today?
You will give to truth a grander birth,
And to steadfast faith a deeper worth,
You will feed the hungry souls of earth,
But whom have you fed today?

Zion you'll build in the by and by,
But, Stewards, what of today?
You will pay tithing, yes, you'll try,
But why not start today?
'Tis sweet in the idle dreams to bask;
But here and now, are you doing your task?
Yes, this is the thing your souls must ask,
What have you done today?

—Adapted.

Hymn: "Take My Life," No. 307 (stanzas 1 and 4).

Benediction.

If Ye Have Love

(Continued from page 9.)

fraternity. The qualities enumerated by Paul were indistinguishable in him. Outwardly obedient to the ceremony of burial in Christ and purportedly obedient to the proper management of property, he nevertheless sought to establish and live a lie. The unregenerate man could be guided only by the baser qualities of the unquickenened man, and the end was the only possible result that carnality can produce.

UNREGENERATE MEN today wield great power. They sit in the seats of government and shape national destinies. They marshal the world's armies. Few scientists see God at work in their test tubes and complex instruments. The learned professors would have us believe they look upon their own sons and daughters as the progeny of apes. The self-called divines, clothed in hypocrisy, stand in their ornate pulpits and prate of a puerile God, pagan in character. And the minions of anti-Christ darken the minds, dull the senses, and cover the light with which men are born so that in their flesh they think to successfully challenge God with their knavery. They heap indignity upon men by their seduction of governments and kingdoms; they subvert politics and pillage economies; they play off nation against nation; they make a colossal lie and teach it as a great truth; they undermine the press and destroy free speech; if they could, they would require that we support their base operations with our property and our lives. Then in their satanic effrontery, they declare themselves the vice-gerents of God on earth!

The conditions of life resultant from walking and talking with God will withstand the assaults of base spirits and complete the creation of a new nature in man. By the power of this creative force, men shall in their fraternity and sonship remove emphasis from things of the flesh to the things of the spirit. Losing faith in the things of corruption, men shall exercise their resources to establish the paramount good. The kingdom of our Lord shall become an actuality.

We are called to lead all men in this undertaking. Upheld both by faith and by knowledge, the fruits of the spirit shall shape our nature, and, under the Spirit of God therein available, we shall succeed in our calling.

Healed by Administration

During the past four years I have suffered much. Two of those years were spent in the University of Iowa Hospital, where I underwent a serious operation. On April 7 of this year, I began to grow steadily worse until I was moved from a ward into a private room. The doctors had little if any hopes for my recovery. However, I called for the elders and, during the administration, I felt the Spirit of God present in my room. I slept well and began to regain my strength. Two days later I walked about my room. In a few more days, I was able to walk back to the ward. The doctors realized that a real change in my health had taken place, and one of the patients in the ward recognized it as a miracle.

I am grateful to God for this blessing and to the Saints in Moline and Rock Island who remembered me with their prayers, cards, letters, presents, and money. One good sister even took me into her home and cared for me. My deepest desire now is that I may live a life pleasing to God, the head Physician, who has seen fit to heal me.

MYRTIE SIMMS.

311½ West Second Street
Davenport, Iowa

Briefs

PORTLAND, OREGON. — Gordon Charles, infant son of Charles and Nadine Hertzig, was blessed on March 28 by his grandfather, Elder P. G. Hager, and Apostle Roscoe E. Davey. Thomas Dobbs, son of Howard and Jean Million, was blessed the same day, Elder Albert Nelson and Apostle Davey officiating.

ENFIELD, ENGLAND—The amount in the Zion's League Missions Abroad fund now stands at $128 instead of 128 pounds, as stated in the report which appeared in the May 8 issue of the Herald. The original target was $100.

PASADENA, CALIFORNIA. — The following children were blessed on Sunday, June 13: Roger Michael, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Saunders; Cynthia Ann, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Donahue; Carol Diane, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Avery; and Melvin Eugene, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Donahue. Elders Harry Waylett, Blaine Bender, and Warren McElwain officiated.

ESCATAWPA, MISSISSIPPI.—Three new members were baptized on Sunday, June 13. They are Leo Livaudias, his daughter, Joy, and Marylon Pruitt.

Golden Wedding Anniversary

A reception was held for Mr. and Mrs. Harry J. Yelland on Sunday afternoon, June 13, at the home of their son, John Yelland, in Pasadena, California, in honor of their fiftieth wedding anniversary. They were married on June 15, 1898, at Conifer, Colorado. Mrs. Yelland is the former Margaret Elizabeth Elliott. Their oldest son, Harry Yelland, and daughter, Mrs. Herbert Bridgman, eight grandchildren, and four great-grandchildren were also present for the occasion. Mr. and Mrs. Yelland have lived in Pasadena since 1923.

Note of Thanks

I wish to thank everyone in Independence who made my stay so pleasant. I am not sorry that I went nearly a thousand miles in order to be in the church hospital for an operation, for I received a real blessing. The prayers of and association with Saints aided me in regaining my health. Mr. Solomon joins me in this expression of appreciation.

MRS. A. C. SOLOMON.

210½ West Capitol Street
Jackson, Mississippi

BULLETIN BOARD

Land o' Lakes Reunion

The Land o' Lakes Reunion will be held August 9-15 at Chetek, Wisconsin. Apostle A. A. Oakman, Evangelists Willard Hield and Ben Hewitt, Seventies Percy Farrow and James C. Daugherty, and District President H. W. Keairnes are to be in attendance. Registrations should be sent to Harry Wasson, 539 North Terrace, Janesville, Wisconsin. The registration fee is $2.00.

JAMES C. DAUGHERTY.

Silver Wedding Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Lansden Short of 4020 Brooklyn Avenue, Kansas City 4, Missouri, will celebrate their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary on Sunday, July 11, by holding open house from 7 until 10 p.m. at their home. Mr. Short, son of Mrs. Mary I. Short, and his wife, the former Florence Amelia Wolfe, daughter of Mrs. Elizabeth Wolfe and the late J. F. Wolfe, were married on July 8, 1923, at the old Central Church in Kansas City. They have three sons: Harold Lansden, Eugene Franklyn, and Kenneth Earl.

Southwestern Kansas District Reunion

The Southwestern Kansas District Reunion will be held July 2 to 11 at Camp Horizon, which is located about seven miles south and east of Arkansas City, Kansas. Services and recreation have been planned for all ages. Apostle D. T. Williams, Bishop Stephen Robinson, Elder John Darling, and Miss Mildred Nelson are to be present. Camp facilities are excellent and prices reasonable. A cost of $2 per day or $18 for the entire reunion will provide three meals daily and lodging in a modern dormitory. (This does not include bedding.) Those desiring to camp may rent tents for $5; this fee also includes the use of camp facilities. The reunion begins Friday noon, July 2, and ends Sunday noon, July 11.

DON MANUEL.

Music at Park of the Pines Reunion

Musicians planning to attend the Park of the Pines Reunion should come prepared to sing solos or duets or to participate in the choir. Choir rehearsals will be held each morning at 7:30. A concert is to be given on Friday evening.

LOUISE EVANS.

REQUESTS FOR PRAYERS

Mildred Owens Ogg, Box 21, Channel View, Texas, requests prayers for her son, Jackie, who is soon to undergo an operation for grafting bone on his arm. This will be his third operation.

Mrs. Herbert C. Swoffer (the former Lulu Surbrook) of Crosswell, Michigan, requests the prayers of the Saints that she may be healed if it is God's will. She is a victim of cancer.

Mrs. E. B. James, 112 McMillian Street, Evergreen, Alabama, requests prayers for her husband who is ill.

James A. S. Hervey of Tulsa, Oklahoma, requests prayers for his daughter who lives at 16789 Helen, Route 2, Wyandotte, Michigan. She has been in the hospital and is in need of a spiritual blessing.

ENGAGEMENT

Heaviland-Counts

Mrs. Charles Otis Counts of St. Louis, Missouri, announces the engagement of her daughter, Kathryn, to Curtis William Heaviland of Portland, Oregon, son of Mrs. M. L. Baird and Mr. C. W. Heaviland. The wedding will take place in St. Louis on August 27.

WEDDINGS

Davie-Smith

Marjorie Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Smith of Thamesville, Ontario, and Thomas Davie, son of Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Davie of Port Elgin, Ontario, were married at the Reorganized Church in London, Ontario, on May 24. Bishop John C. Dent performed the ceremony. The couple will make their home in London.

Seay-Clason

Mrs. Alice E. Christgen announces the marriage of her granddaughter, Betty Clason, to James Owen Seay. The wedding took place on June 6 in Kansas City, Kansas. Mrs. Seay is a graduate of Graceland and Kansas State Colleges. Mr. Seay is attending the University of Kansas at Lawrence.

Rogers-Possehn

Waneta Joy Possehn, daughter of Mrs. Verna Cameron of Lyons, Michigan, and Raymond Rogers, son of Mr. and Mrs. Rogers, also of Lyons, were married on June 5 at the Methodist church in Lyons. J. J. Rusnell, grandfather of the bride, performed the ceremony, assisted by the Methodist pastor. The couple will make their home in Lyons.

Price-Houston

Norma Houston of Independence, Missouri, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Houston of Tama, Iowa, and Virgil Fred Price of Independence were married June 6 at the Grandview Church in Tama. Elder V. G. Lents performed the double-ring ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Price will make their home in Independence.

Reunion Schedule-1948

Texas Owen Sound & Toronto New York & Philadelphia	Jun. 25-July 4	Bandera, Texas
Southwest Kansas	Jun. 26-July 4	Port Elgin, Ont.
Gulf States W. Colorado	July 3-July 11	Deer Park Arkansas City, Kansas
Manitoba Central Missouri	July 2-July 11	Brewton, Ala. Delta, Colorado
Saskatchewan	July 9-July 18	Winnipeg, Man.
Alberta	July 10-July 18	Odessa, Missouri
Zion Nauvoo So. New England Northern California	July 10-July 18	Beaver Creek Saskatchewan
Flint-Pt. Huron-Detroit-Windsor	July 19-July 26	Sylvan Lake, Alberta
Kentucky & Tennessee Silver Lake	July 17-July 25	Gardner Lake Nauvoo, Illinois
Chatham-London Cen. & So. Michigan Mo. Valley Maine So. California	July 17-July 25	Onset, Mass. Asilomar, Monterey, California
Northern Michigan Kirtland Reunion of the Ozarks Oklahoma W. Montana	July 24-Aug. 1	Blue Water, Michigan
Arizona Arkansas & Louisiana Minnesota & Wisconsin Far West	July 25-Aug. 1	Paris, Tennessee
So. Indiana Eastern Michigan Idaho Des Moines	July 30-Aug. 8	Everett, Washington
Lamoni S. E. Illinois Eastern Colorado	July 30-Aug. 8	Eric Beach, Ontario, Canada
	July 31-Aug. 8	Liahona Park
	July 31-Aug. 8	Woodbine, Iowa
	July 31-Aug. 8	Brooksville, Me.
	July 31-Aug. 8	Pacific Palisades
	Aug. 6-Aug. 15	Park of the Pines
	Aug. 6-Aug. 15	Kirtland, Ohio
	Aug. 1-Aug. 8	Racine, Missouri
	Aug. 7-Aug. 15	Pawnee, Okla.
	Aug. 7-Aug. 15	Race Track, Montana
	Aug. 8-Aug. 15	Tucson, Arizona
	Aug. 9-Aug. 15	Clear Fork Cp., Hot Spgs., Ark.
	Aug. 9-Aug. 15	Chetek, Wisc.
	Aug. 12-Aug. 22	Stewartsville, Missouri
	Aug. 21-Aug. 29	Bedford, Ind.
	Aug. 14-Aug. 22	Cash, Michigan
	Aug. 14-Aug. 21	Hagerman, Idaho
	Aug. 15-Aug. 21	Guthrie Center, Iowa
	Aug. 15-Aug. 22	Lamoni, Iowa
	Aug. 20-Aug. 29	Brush Creek, Ill.
	Aug. 20-Aug. 29	Colorado Springs Colorado

Photo by Adelbert Bartlett

The Old Jerusalem Road

THE Saints Herald

VOLUME 95

JULY 10, 1948

NUMBER 28

www.LatterDayTruth.org

The Old Jerusalem Road

AUDITORIUM NEWS

Between the trunks of the cypress trees—fitted by nature to endure the heat and the thirst of the hills of Palestine—we look to the right and see the Old Jerusalem Road, curving like a ribbon around the hill, where it drops down to cross the Plain of Esdraelon, and goes on toward the farther hills of Samaria.

Nazareth is in the lower foreground, and spreads over the hill to the left, where a white church is surrounded by the gardened homes of a colony of people interested in the arts. It was here that the angel made the announcement of the strange news to Mary, where Jesus spent his youth and was rejected by the people.

Mount Tabor forms a background for the town, but seems to look the other way—out over the plain to the north, from which the invasions came that carried the people into captivity.

Through millenniums of time, the Old Jerusalem Road has resounded to the tread of marching feet and lifted its columns of dust like veils into the still air. Soldier and merchant, priest and prophet, the humble and the great, have traveled there, to be forgotten in time. The Lord himself came this way.

How long will the road be there, and what feet of men yet unborn are destined to travel it?

YOUTH CAMP ROMOCA, at Colorado Springs, June 6 to 13, drew a fine group of fifty campers ranging in age from 15 to 18 years. General supervision of the camp, morning devotions, and studies were directed by John Darling of the headquarters Religious Education office, assisted by C. Houston Hobart, district president. A high light of the week was a fine dramatic and musical presentation by the young people of a series of tableaux based on the Book of Mormon, with supporting music by the choir; this and the campfire sessions were directed by Aleta Runkle, assisted by Marguerite Eagan. A specially fine fellowship prayer service was held one evening after a tour of the cliff dwellings and a picnic in the Garden of the Gods, with Merle Howard, pastor at Denver, in charge and other staff members assisting. Recreation included several hikes into the mountains, swims at the pool of the Broadmoor Hotel, etc. Under Mildred Sheehy, campers learned leather craft, and added a unit to a very interesting belt that is lengthened each year with a new leather circle, and a thong for each member. Practical experience in photography was given under Richard Marolf, a camp darkroom for developing pictures was made, and some good photos collected. Camp theme was, "They told—we shall tell," drawing material from the Book of Mormon. Health of the campers was supervised by Marie Hulmes, R.N., and the cafeteria was operated by Mayme Highland of Denver and Pauline Roberts of Goodland, Kansas.

IN THIS ISSUE

EDITORIAL:

The Price of Happiness 3

ARTICLES:

Tentative Financial Report of Presiding Bishopric, Year 1947	4
"Do Not Move—We Are All Equal Here," by Bishop D. O. Chesworth	5
Your Church in the News, by Raymond E. Troyer	7
Spiritual Reserves, by Grace L. Krabl	9
The "Laying on of Hands" in Court, by Lloyd Harding	10
Receives Doctor's Degree	11
The Great Day of the Lord, by George Njeim	12
The Three Angles of Assumption, by Bessie Taylor	15
Truer Parenthood, by Mrs. J. W. Jones	16
Dollar Stretchers, by Dell Willard	17
Graceland Memorial Student Center Fund Boosted by Lamoni Gift	18
The Right People, by Naomi Russell	19
A Faith That Works, by Marie Gosline	20
Kingdom Careers, by Don Higgins	21
Briefs	22
Bulletin Board	23

CANADIAN MEMBERS PASS. Two men who have contributed much to the work of the church in Canada have recently passed away.

In London, Ontario, Brother J. F. Winegarden, a high priest, formerly district president and president of the London Branch, passed away on Thursday night, June 17, after a long illness. His was a valiant and valued service and ministry to the church.

In Chatham, Ontario, Anthony R. Hewitt, who has served long and prominently in both civic and church affairs, succumbed to a chronic heart ailment on the morning of June 26. He was widely loved and respected for his good work and fine influence.

The sympathies of the church are extended to the families, friends, and congregations where these men served.

WARREN H. CHELLINE, at Windsor, Ontario, wrote on June 8: "We had six baptisms Sunday, with several more scheduled in the near future. The missionary series can be called successful, I am sure."

ROTTERDAM, HOLLAND. A letter from Seventy Albert Scherer, president of the Holland mission, tells of a fine institute and dedication of the mission headquarters at Annastraat 2, on June 19 and 20. There was excellent attendance, interest, and participation. The letter will appear in an early issue of the "Herald."

THE SAINTS' HERALD

Volume 95

July 10, 1948

Number 28

EDITORS: The First Presidency: Israel A. Smith, John F. Garver, F. Henry Edwards.

ASSISTANTS: Leonard J. Lea, Managing Editor; Kenneth L. Graham, Business Manager.

The Saints' Herald is the official publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, with headquarters at The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri, and is issued through the offices of Herald Publishing House, 103 South Osage Street, Independence, Missouri.

Entered as second-class matter at the post office at Independence, Missouri, under Act of March 3, 1879. Issued weekly at Independence, Missouri. Price, $3.50 per year and $1.75 for six months in advance in the U. S. A., its territories and possessions; Canada, $3.75 per year and $1.90 for six months; other countries, $4.50 per year. Notice of a change of address must be given three weeks ahead of the date that it is to become effective. Accepted for mailing at the special rate of postage provided for in section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized July 21, 1921. Printed in the United States of America.

The Price of Happiness

"Happy is that people whose God is the Lord."—Psalm 144: 15.

A FEW DAYS AGO a church officer sat across my desk, asking me to do a certain work that needed to be done. He had come for my final answer. I had decided to tell him "No."

It would be hard work, and I would not be paid for it in any material way. The only reason for doing it is that it needs to be done. Thousands of other church people are serving on the same basis.

As I tried to answer him, I listened to my voice objectively, as if another person were speaking. I was almost surprised when I heard my voice saying "Yes" instead of the "No" I had planned.

But I know I shall be far happier for saying "Yes" than I would have been for saying "No."

A FRIEND called on me. He was unhappy. Not for himself, but for another man. That good man is burdened with problems and cares. He walks to his office, worrying all the way. He does not see the sunshine, the green grass, the flowers, the trees. All the beauties of God's earth are lost to him. He does not even see his friends, so absorbed is he in his cares. Many who would be friendly to him think he is purposely snubbing them, too proud to speak. They cannot see within, where all is gloom and suffering.

We cannot be solving problems all the time; we cannot carry our troubles with us everywhere, without breaking down. Sometimes we must rest, sometimes find relief.

Let the cares of the office remain at the office. Do not take them home with you. Do not carry them about with you. While you go to work, notice the beauty of the world about you. Even in the city, there is a world of interest in people's faces, eyes, and gestures. A smile and a greeting from a friend will help you, and a brief chat may give you some thought that will open a closed door for which you alone could find no key. And it will keep some of life's priceless treasures—your friends.

THE JULY issue of Coronet has a fine leading article which will be helpful to anybody who will read and observe it. The author, Dr. David Fink, says that the cause of a great deal of our trouble with our nerves is criticism; not, please note, other people's criticism of us, but our criticism of other people. If we are hypercritical, we are disturbed, perhaps angry and hurt. The raw edges of our personalities are rubbed to the bleeding point by a callous world.

There was a time in my life when some people had hurt me very much. As long as I was angry and resentful, they had the power to continue hurting me. Every day I was hurt again by the memories of wrong, even though I did not see them. My nerves were sick, and I went to the doctor. Instead of medicine, he prescribed a book for me to read. Later, I found that it had all been said before in the Book of Books: "For if ye forgive men their trespasses, your heavenly Father will also forgive you." I learned to forgive, the hurt went away, and after a while I was well again. Jesus was a master psychologist. He knew that even God cannot free us of pain and sin until we put the cause out of our hearts and minds.

We must forgive, then God can help us. We must forgive "till seventy times seven," as Jesus told Peter, or as often as there is something to forgive.

WHAT IS HAPPINESS? It would be hard to give an accurate answer, and there would be a lot of terms and qualifications that would miss the main point. I can indicate the difference in experience. If you must resort to escapes from the dissatisfactions of your life—drink or detective stories, day dreams or endless movies, stuffing yourself into semi-consciousness with food—you are not happy. If you are pleased with your work, your home, your friends, and are glad to continue to have them the way they are, then you are happy.

A few weeks ago I saw a wealthy man. He was alone, as usual, and he did not look happy. He acquired his money in strange ways—taking advantage, robbing widows, sharp deals in property, picking up anything he could when he had a chance, dishonesties of many kinds. He has a few friends, and they will not trust him. His way of life has robbed him of happiness.

Another man not far from us has worked all his life and is now retired. He cared only for enough to satisfy his wants; he has given a great deal away, helping people in need. He has friends everywhere. People love him because he loves them. He does not wait for people to like him—he likes them first. They cannot help liking him. He has never traveled far, except in the direction of heaven. He is a happy man.

HOW IS THE church related to happiness? There are many scriptures that inform us of God's love, and of his plan for the peace and welfare of his children. He has given his commandments for our protection and for our good. If we are obedient, we have the opportunity to be happy. One promise is, "They that remain and are pure in heart shall return and come to their inheritances; they and their children, with songs of everlasting joy; to build up the waste places of Zion."—Doctrine and Covenants 98: 4.

The happy people I know are those who have served and given. The bitter ones are those that have always taken.

L. J. L.

Editorial

Tentative Financial Report of the Presiding Bishopric Covering the Year 1947

WE ARE SUBMITTING herewith a condensed statement of income and expense covering the year 1947. An elaboration of this report, together with balance sheets and schedules, will be given in the Bishop's Report to the General Conference in October, together with a supplemental report covering the first six months of this year.

It is to be noted that the total income for 1947 amounted to $1,161,367.28, as compared with $1,066,988.59 for the year 1946. The expenditures increased substantially, amounting to $632,059.80 for 1947, as compared with $523,536.98 for the year 1946. This increase is due in part to an increase in the number of men under appointment and increases in ministerial costs and administrative costs due to the general trend of rising costs. The net gain for the two years compare favorably, being $550,144.52 for 1947 and $565,863.72 for 1946.

Our records show a total number of contributors for the year 1947 amounting to 29,314, as compared with 25,549 for the year 1946.

We are glad to have the pleasure of submitting this favorable report and express our hope and confidence that by the time of General Conference the apparent decrease in income covering the first five months of this year will have been overcome and a substantial increase will be realized.

Respectfully submitted,
 THE PRESIDING BISHOPRIC,
 By G. L. DeLapp,
 H. L. Livingston,
 W. N. Johnson.

June 22, 1948

CONDENSED STATEMENT OF INCOME AND EXPENSE GENERAL, LAND AND INHERITANCE, AND TEMPLE FUND Year Ended December 31, 1947

TITHES AND OFFERINGS:

Tithes.....	$ 1,077,814.68
Offerings.....	25,792.22
Christmas Offering.....	45,979.71
Total (Exclusive of Bequests, Surplus, Etc.).....	$ 1,149,586.61
Bequests.....	6,515.60
Surplus.....	143.98
General Conference — Net.....	1,731.12
Zion's League Missionary Fund.....	3,389.97
Total Tithes and Offerings.....	$ 1,161,367.28

EXPENSES:

MINISTERIAL:

Active Family Allowance—Net.....	$251,094.61
Ministerial Reserve Payments.....	58,451.08
Total Active Allowance Expense.....	$309,545.69
Elder's Expenses — Net.....	91,538.85
Inactive Family Allowances — Net.....	68,727.78
Total Ministerial Expense.....	$ 469,812.32

ADMINISTRATIVE

PAYMENTS TO GRACELAND COLLEGE,

Appropriation, Interest, Etc.....	51,929.00
LIBRARY EXPENSE	1,000.00
CONSECRATION AGREEMENTS	867.16
HOUSES OF WORSHIP—Improvements and Expense.....	5,709.34
MISCELLANEOUS EXPENSE	581.96

Total Expense..... 632,059.80

EXCESS OF INCOME OVER EXPENSE..... $ 529,307.48

OTHER INCOME:

Gain on Real Estate Operations.....	$ 7,821.29
Loss on Real Estate Sales.....	3,169.50 $ 4,651.79
Interest Income — Domestic.....	12,084.36
Interest Income — Canadian.....	3,225.15
Dividends — Corporate Stocks.....	100.50
Miscellaneous Income	775.24

Total Other Income..... 20,837.04

NET GAIN FOR THE YEAR..... $ 550,144.52

“Do Not Move-- We Are All Equal Here”

By Bishop D. O. Chesworth

“DO NOT MOVE, we are all equal here,” is an expression credited to the Duke of Wellington on an occasion when he attended his church for the purpose of partaking of the communion of the Lord’s Supper. An old man, very poor, moved down the opposite aisle and knelt at the communion table near the duke but was quickly touched on the shoulder by the usher who requested, in a whisper, that the old man move farther away or wait until the duke had received the bread and wine. The whispered request did not escape the notice of the dignitary and, clasping the other man’s hand, he was able to prevent his rising. In a reverent undertone, the duke said, “Do not move, we are all equal here.” Most will readily admit that, in the eyes of our Heavenly Father, there is no superior clay. Unless we accept this equality, we miss the purpose of the great atonement of Christ.

In the latter-day dispensation, we are all equal in that we have an opportunity to become stewards. The president of the church is not denied this privilege; he is expected to participate in this feature of the gospel. There is not any quorum of priesthood excluded and neither are members. We are all equal in that we have this opportunity—we must become equal in that we all respond affirmatively.

The following was included in a recent branch report on stewardship from London, Ontario: “In the final sense, therefore, all men are stewards of God. This principle involves four important elements; ownership, agency, responsibility, and accountability.”

THE DOCTRINE OF STEWARDSHIPS was presented to us over and over again by the late President F. M. Smith. In his General Conference sermon of 1942, after presenting the goal of the church—which, he stated, was the triumphant glorified Christ coming to His awaiting people—he stated that the “perfected society which will justify the return of the Son of Man to earth is what we catch up in the doctrine of stewardships.” He further stated, “Stewardship comprises complete consecration of every Latter Day Saint, consecration first of spirit that will give the spiritual dynamic of his activity a certain and ever-present direction toward higher goals toward which we have been called, and the consecration of abilities, and activity, speaking of every individual as well as of groups. Consecration of what we possess, our wealth—of all capacities and capabilities, caught up in the one expression, unreserved devotion to the cause of Christ and to the cause of the church . . . is much of the material development which will be required of this people.”

Stewardship philosophy has been coming into prominence during these past few years. There are a number of books on the subject, but this interest in our membership has not yet attained the degree that we are writing books and making research in the field, despite our pioneering in this doctrine.

Consider the thought expressed by a Mr. Ronald Bridges in his pamphlet, On Stewardship: “There are two kinds of persons who contribute to religious enterprises. The first one considers his contribution a payment for services rendered. He is the bill-payer. The second considers his contribution a return of the Lord’s own portion. He is the steward. Consider the bill-payer. Are you one? If so, you are in a good, old American tradition. We Americans have a great sense of duty about paying what we owe, promptly and in full. . . . Now stewardship is something else. The bill-payer says, in effect, that the earth is not the Lord’s, nor the fullness thereof; it belongs to me and the rest of the people. I’ll pay my share of the running expenses. The steward says the earth is the Lord’s and the fullness, too. He considers himself trustee for a portion of it; he holds in trust to God such features as time, talent, and treasure. Systematically and faithfully he returns the Lord’s portion—traditionally a tenth—and is accountable for the use of the other nine tenths.”

FROM PERSONAL OBSERVATION, I have noticed that many Saints have not become inspired about the stewardship way. This is an attraction before us and should not be lost any more than the spiritual gifts. It is our duty to offer this way of life to the world. At the present time I am asking members to indicate six printed materials or books which they would give to a nonmember prospect. For lack of any book prepared by us on this subject, only two out of seventy people felt the need of sharing our belief in stewardship by stating that "something like the Youth Stewardship pamphlet should be developed and offered to the world." Do not move, we are all equal here. Specifically, it is the duty of those who feel the urgency of this emphasis to do something about it.

During the past two years I have met many people, members and non-members, and have shared something of stewardship with them, probably centering my attention (call it attack, if you prefer) on two particular phases of stewardship—accounting and payment of tithes. These are very important and necessary steps in building the individual personality and, keep in mind, it is God's way.

Unhesitatingly we can suggest that there are many reasons for tithing. It is an acknowledgment of God's ownership; it is the percentage indicated in both Old and New Testaments, it was recognized and honored by Christ, it is businesslike; it is convenient and practical; it will make happy, triumphant disciples; it will secure adequate financial support for the kingdom; and it will solve every financial problem of the church. Our members are willing but need to be converted to the importance of salesmanship. We need more salesmen who are working. Charles M. Schwab once said, "Many of us think of salesmen as people traveling around with sample kits. Instead, we are all salesmen, every day of our lives. We are selling our ideas, our plans, our energies, our enthusiasm to those with whom we come in contact." Do not move, we are all equal here.

ONE GLANCE at the parable of the talents helps us get to the root of the difficulty. There were at least four things troubling the one-talent man and keeping him back from the rewards and blessings of the Master.

First, he was paralyzed by fear, as the world is today. It is fearful of machinery; the worker fears his employer; the capitalist fears organized labor. The paralysis of fear causes people to refuse to release their potentialities and develop themselves. The unprofitable servant represents all men who are afraid to stake their lives on the great eternal verities for fear of loss. Secondly, he was a concealer; he is joined by many today listed as church members who, in reality, are out of circulation. Then this one-talent man was a rascal; and fourthly, he was lazy. Stewardship lifts men from the status of the one-talent man.

There are certain sins which are seldom mentioned because of their indelicacy. Some think this one is easily the world's besetting sin. It is exceedingly sly and artful and therefore apt to escape unsuspected. We may confess all our other sins, but this one—never! Did you ever hear anyone confess, "I am covetous"? We pass over this one with charity. There is no church discipline for the covetous man, and sometimes he is trusted with great responsibility. Out of the dim past we hear the words of Jesus, "Take heed and beware of covetousness; for a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth." Can we say that laying up treasure for ourselves and ignoring God's claim upon our possessions is covetousness?

The greatest benefit in tithing probably comes back to the tithe-payer for it breaks the backbone of greed and covetousness. One who has not the grace to tithe gets a distorted view of wealth and becomes dominated by unworthy cravings which tend toward selfishness, but more injurious than that, he breaks close fellowship with God. One does not read in the Bible, "Look out for number one," or "God helps those who help themselves." The words of the Bible are: "He that will lose his life shall find it."

DO NOT MOVE, WE ARE ALL EQUAL HERE—unless differences exist

where companions are not affiliated with our church. With this exception, all can make the accounting; it is our starting point in the treasure phase of stewardship. Request the form, "First Tithing Statement," which is used by everyone filing: junior, youth, or adult. You will be amazed at the simplicity of the new forms. An Income and Expense Record Book for the ensuing year's recording and the Handbook of the Financial Law will greatly assist you.

When should you file the first statement? Just as soon as you are converted. Then start the payment of tithes and anticipate that you will be helped in pursuing such a good cause.

Do not move, we are all equal here, too, in the use of the Duplex Envelopes, which are available and most certainly should be used. In a branch six miles from Dixfield, Maine, the pastor sent out a letter entitled, "If Our Church Envelope Could Speak." This is what it said: "Take me out of this box, please! It's my turn to go to church, and I can't go unless you take me Wait a minute, I can't go to church empty. I wouldn't be able to look another envelope in the face. There that feels better. That bill just fits my pocket. Now, let's go to church. No, wait, I feel a bit one-sided. You have filled only ONE pocket, and I have TWO. What's this one for? It is for others. Now I'm ready for church, and my place is on the altar in the church."

WHAT PERCENTAGE of achievement should we expect? We know that many who are ill do not call for the elders for administration. We know that many neglect the various ordinances made available in the church. We also know that many do not attend church. In the entire United States fifty-two per cent of the people are affiliated with a church (1947 report) but only thirty-two or thirty-three per cent of that fifty-two per cent attend.

What percentage should be attained in securing inventories and

Your Church in the News

By RAYMOND E. TROYER

YEAR IN and year out, the church receives a great deal of publicity. Some of it is good; some of it is mediocre—most of it could be improved upon. Like good radio programs, good individual contacts, and other aspects of public relations, there are never enough good news stories used in papers where our churches are located.

The value of such publicity is hard to determine. It is at a high premium for advertisers, but it is doubtful that we can determine the degree of effectiveness of the results for the church. From an evangelistic standpoint, most converts are won in other ways. However, newspapers can certainly supplement any evangelistic program.

With better publicity, the dividends in public relations are certain tithepayers? It is very difficult to suggest, but we do know that we all have an equal chance. YOU CAN RESPOND! Others can say, "We have felt better since complying." Do not move, we surely are all equal here on this point. "Prove me herewith, and see if I will not open the windows of heaven and pour out a blessing." Whether at the service of Communion with the Duke of Wellington and the poor old man, at the factory, or on the farm, there are some phases in which we are equal. For this may we be thankful. For the desire to respond, we should ever be grateful. Stewardship, needed so much today, awaits a people divinely endowed who will sense that it is God's way of sharing. If that awareness could come this year, we could report that 1948 brought more filers, more tithepayers, and more tithing than ever before to promulgate the Restored Gospel.

to be higher. Values should accrue in at least the following ways: (1) A better understanding of the church and its program by the public at large, (2) a reminder to our own inactive members that we still have a vital message and program in which they are invited to participate, and (3) encouragement to those who are active. The news medium thus provided as to activities, time, and participants is also of value.

Knowing just what is the best publicity and methods of obtaining it are problems to be faced by all those directly concerned. People usually read the newspapers because it satisfies some of their wants. A few may read for a thrill which is satisfied by crime reports, while others look for the satisfaction of more basic human needs.

IN ORDER to capture the interest of people who would be an asset to the church, those who direct the publicity should have at least two qualifications. They should be sensitive to the needs of the people of our generation, and they should be able to see how our message can be applied to meet these needs. There are an infinite number of needs of people that can be met only through a compliance with the basic principles of the gospel. With such an understanding, the writer can produce publicity which will be acceptable by editors. This type of publicity will also command the attention of readers.

The leaders of the church are men inspired of God. A few well-chosen statements from their messages or a synopsis of their talks would be useful in a newspaper feature. The person who reads the article may not attend the next service, but he will at least have a better appreciation of the church.

Too often we have said that worldly institutions are ahead of us in Zionic procedure. The truth may be that these institutions have better public relations officers who get their aims or so-called accomplishments in print. In actual practice, our church may be ahead because of the continuous growth we have made with the help of God and the firm foundation upon which we have builded.

Our message, if well written, would often hold a prominent spot in the newspapers. An example of such an article was written prior to World War II. Presiding Patriarch Elbert A. Smith spoke to members of the church at Joplin, Missouri, on "The Church and War." That same night, a prominent public speaker addressed a widely-publicized gathering in the largest auditorium in the city on the same subject. Reports of the meetings were taken to the newspaper where I was employed. Employees of every department discussed the subject that night, and the concensus of opinion (including the city editor's) was that Brother Elbert's views were more tenable, in view of world conditions at that time, than the other speaker's. The article about his talk was given equal prominence in heading, space, and position with the one about the meeting at which several times as many people attended.

Reunion Publicity

THERE ARE TYPES of newspaper publicity which may be found useful in church work and which will be acceptable to newspapers. While the following paragraphs emphasize reunion publicity, the underlying principles of them will be found to work for district institutes, conferences, and local branches in their relationships with newspapers.

The feature story is one type of publicity. The Latter Day Saint reunion is unique in most communities today. This uniqueness in itself may form the basis for a good feature story. There are usually not just four or five, but many feature stories possible at every reunion. The children's program, Zion's League activities, the work of the women's department, and every class or sermon may merit feature stories. The particular service at the reunion of priesthood members and others without financial remuneration may be the means of presenting the entire story of our philosophy of priesthood functions.

Often a historical sketch may be used, especially where reunions have become established institutions in a community. Local or general church anniversaries or milestones make interesting stories of achievements. Almost every general church appointee and often others on the staff have life stories which make good articles. People are interested in the places these men and women have been, the ministry they have performed, and the fact that here are individuals who have given of their time, energy, and efforts in behalf of the church. Historical sketches of either the local reunion or an individual on the staff may easily be covered in such a way as to publicize the reunion, the church, and the message of the Restoration.

THERE ARE A NUMBER of ways to get the message of the church in the news. Sermons or classwork may be summed up in articles that are welcomed by the press. At other times, editors will accept statements of policy, the merits of a certain type of service, or the objectives of the church, or accounts of the accomplishments of the church which can be interestingly written up from an interview with general church leaders.

The chances are no other institution in the district served by your newspaper will have as many vital pronouncements in a single day which would form the background for good newspaper articles as your district reunion this summer. Such articles, which stem from the reunion influence, may be directly on the needs of our generation and what the church, the Zion's League, or the children's department may do in a positive program—or they may be in relation to marriage, the divorce problem, conditions of government and voting, or our Zionistic program.

Several years ago, an article bearing on a strategic problem in educational circles was taken to the editor of a Joplin paper. The Tennessee legislature had outlawed the study of evolution in the public schools. The matter had been before the Missouri legislature, which had killed the measure in spite of propaganda from many religious groups. Elder Amos T. Higdon was holding a series of meetings at the time and, during a sermon early in the week, he had voiced approval, with good reasoning, of the Missouri legislature's not following the Tennessee example. The reporter who received the article immediately took it to the city editor for possible use by the Associated Press. It received prominent space in the local paper, presented a point of view of the Restored Gospel, and helped to advertise the services being held.

Other Suggestions

A FEW BRIEF SUGGESTIONS may help administrative officials and publicity directors in their programs.

In some places, newspaper publicity may have been denied our church in the past. If such is the case, a person should act tactfully and with good judgment in establishing working relations. To feel ill will or to make disparaging statements about the paper and its staff only leads to less cordial relations. I have found that editors will publish our news if it is well written and follows the general format of other church news and local style. Those interested in publicity should keep friendly relations with reporters and editors.

I have often found it helpful to contact the city editor and managing editor personally. Such a contact, if it is short and friendly, serves as a gesture for getting acquainted. It will have far-reaching results at times because, in the end, these people determine headings, position, and the final editing that is done. They may refer you to the proper reporter who will ordinarily receive your articles. The person contacting the paper should be careful of his dress, because his appearance will determine the impression the editors have of the church.

NEWSPAPERS YOU WRITE for publication usually will not appear exactly as you have written it. It may have been rewritten or many vital thoughts omitted. Some of this rewrite can be prevented by studying the style of writing in a paper, especially the way other church news is written. Almost every editor has his own particular style. Sometimes an article may be cut in half through no fault of the editor. At times, he appreciates a long article because he is short of news for that issue; at other times, he is forced to cut an article or even leave it out because of lack of space.

Neat, accurate, double-spaced typed copy with plenty of margin cannot help but impress the editor, and it will get immediate and favorable attention. If it is not typed, it usually has to be before it is sent to the linotype operator. Copy that is "dirty" or hand written may be difficult to read and may furnish a ready excuse for being rejected.

News is a most perishable thing. The time element is of paramount importance. A topical or timely sermon delivered last night may be news today or in the next issue of the paper, but may be of no interest to the editor at a later date. This may mean immediate use of the typewriter after the sermon, a fast trip to the paper office to beat the deadline, or special delivery letters plainly marked "news item."

Copy should include something universally appealing that will be of paramount interest to readers and acquaint the public with some of our message. There also must be included other news facts as to the time, occasion, and any future services to be held. Articles containing some points of religious philosophy are usually better and receive more attention than those that read like the minutes of a business meeting.

It is often possible to have articles published in more than one newspaper. At reunions I have attended the community was served by one weekly, three morning and three afternoon papers, most of them from other towns. All of the papers gave us good space and position and used engravings which we furnished. Where such service is possible, it is best to vary the articles sent to the different papers. Sometimes this taxes the creative ability of the writer and takes a great deal of time, but it is necessary for best recognition over an extended period.

To be most effective, a consistent, long-range publicity program should be followed. Such requires planning and frequent contacts with the leading officers of the organization served. With an alert person heading the publicity work, many things will stand out as meriting newspaper reports which will go into print at frequent intervals.

There are several books that should help one in writing for publication. From my experience on newspaper staffs and as a lay reporter for our church and a number of other organizations I highly recommend Keeping Your Church in the News by W. A. Brodie ($1.25) which may be obtained from the Herald Publishing House. Other publications which Herald House recommends are:

Public Relations for Churches, by Stewart Harral, $1.25.

Successful Letters for Churches, by Stewart Harral, $2.00.

A Crowded Church Through Modern Methods, by Eugene Densmore Dolloff, $1.75.

Religious Radio: What To Do and How To Do It, by Everett C. Parker, Elinor Inman, and Ross Snyder, $3.00.

Spiritual Reserves

WE READ now and then in our newspapers of the gold reserves of our country, of our army and naval reserves, forest reserves, and financial reserves. In domestic life, families take pride in their food reserves, but how much thought is given to spiritual reserves?

Most of us, at one time or another, have known the value and importance of material reserves in times of emergency, whether the resources were available or not.

Material reserves are acquired by foresight, business acumen, discrimination, quick perception, and intelligence; and the use of all of these powers, for the average person, is to the one great end—to have and to hold.

Spiritual reserves require no less the use of all of our powers, for the Lord asks our heart, mind, might, and strength—but to a different end.

Material reserves or resources are not rustproof nor mothproof; they are not exempt from the spoiler; the elements in their raging may lay them low. And should they survive all these assaults, even then we cannot carry them with us when we depart this life and enter eternity.

HOW IMPORTANT it is for us to have access to reserves that are imperishable—spiritual reserves, for they serve us in this life and are our passport to the mansions prepared for us on the other side.

But what are spiritual reserves, and how do we obtain them? The question is best answered, I think, in the attitude and words of Jesus in the incident of the poor widow who brought her offering to the temple treasury. Casting in two mites (eight mills in our money) was "all that she had, even all her living." We may wonder why Jesus looked with such favor upon this act. Was the temple in such dire need that it required of this widow "her living"?

By Grace L. Krahl

No, it was not that; Jesus did not look upon her as having nothing left. In his discernment, she was rich—she had the riches that he had—his only riches. She was using the privilege of showing her faith and confidence in God that he would supply her future needs. These were spiritual reserves which, because of her love for God, she was able to give to the utmost.

ONE MORE INSTANCE. When David the king was at war with the Philistines who were encamped in Bethlehem, he was so weary that "his hand clave unto the sword" for the Lord had wrought a great victory that day. In his exhaustion, he said, "Oh that one would give me drink of the water of the well of Bethlehem, which is by the gate." And three mighty men broke through the host of the Philistines and drew water out of the well of Bethlehem and took it to David. But David would not drink it; instead, he poured it out "unto the Lord." When he learned at what cost it had been procured, he made it an offering.

There is a stimulating thought in this narrative—that is, that there are other things also too sacred to be spent upon ourselves: talents, education, testimony, personality, religious experiences, etc. All these, if we are fully consecrated to the Lord's work, could be poured out as an offering to God and for the good of our fellow men.

The out-poured life becomes a re-filled life. For the vessel that remains full there can be no further in-flow; it must be emptied if it would be replenished, otherwise stagnation takes place. Thus the formula by which spiritual reserves are attained is Christ's own—loving, sharing, trusting God.

The "Laying on of Hands" in Court

PART I

IT IS PASSING STRANGE that a sacred and holy ordinance such as the laying on of hands for the healing of the sick should find its way into the cases and records of the courts of the land, and stranger still that the majority of these cases should be on the criminal side of the docket.

For the Biblical background of this religious rite, we have, of course, the example and practice of the Master as he went about administering to those who were wretched and suffering and afflicted. More specifically, and as a matter of statement of the doctrine, we have the words of James, who is considered to have been a brother of the Master according to the flesh.

In his general epistle, James says: "Is any sick among you? let him call for the elders of the church; and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord; And the prayer of faith shall save the sick, and the Lord shall raise him up; and if he have committed sins, they shall be forgiven him."—James 5: 14, 15.

James, as is his custom, uses simple and understandable language. He is not given to sophistry or tautological statement. Thus, in a brief passage, which we now have as two short verses in the Bible, he sets out the foundation and outline of a divine plan for the benefit and blessing of the faithful.

The elements thereof may be noted as follows: (1) sickness; (2) the elders; (3) prayer; (4) anointing with oil; (5) healing by God (not by the elders); and (6) forgiveness of sins.

And in the sixteenth chapter of Mark, we find recorded as the last statement of the Master, after his resurrection and before his ascension, a commission to his eleven apostles involving the signs following those who believe. The concluding words of the Savior are: "They shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover."—Verse 18.

UPON THESE FUNDAMENTALS and by this authority, James and his fellows practiced the laying on of hands for the healing of the sick. This ordinance still survives among Christian peoples, sometimes in purity, sometimes in error, and sometimes, as we shall see, for mercenary gain.

We are given an example by Mosheim of the application of the doctrine in the ancient Christian Church. He says: "The Grecian Christian, when dangerously sick, sent for the elders of the church, agreeably to James 5: 14, and after the sick man had confessed his sins, the elders commended him to God in devout supplication, and anointed him with oil."—Book 1, Century 1, Part 2, chapter 4, page 87.

John Wesley also discusses the matter as follows: "Having anointed him with oil—this single, conspicuous gift, which Christ committed to his apostles, Mark 6: 13, remained in the church long after the other miraculous gifts were withdrawn. Indeed, it seems to have been designed to remain always, and Saint James directs the elders, who were the most, if not the only gifted men, to administer it. This was the whole process of physic in the Christian Church, till it was lost through unbelief."—Notes on Saint James 5: 14, page 606.

So much, then for prologue and stage setting. Now we have many ramifications of so-called divine healing extant in our midst.

A NOVEL SITUATION was developed in the records of two trials of one defendant in a certain state. And the facts and circumstances therein show the determination and persistence of malefactors in this connection.

This man practiced what he called a system of "suggested therapeutics." The system, according to the testimony of the defendant in the trial, had nothing to do with religion or prayer. The Supreme Court, in its opinion on appeal, states the questions and sums up the case as follows:

"It is suggested that section 8400 must be construed with section 8405, reading in part: 'Nor shall this chapter be construed to discriminate against any particular school of medicine or surgery or osteopathy or any system or mode of treating the sick or afflicted, or to interfere in any way with the practice of religion: Provided, that nothing herein shall be held to apply to or regulate any kind of treatment by prayer.'

"Suggestive therapeutics, as shown by the record before us, is not the practice of any religious belief, nor is it 'any kind of treatment by prayer.' As practiced by the appellant, it consists of a laying on of hands upon that part of the body where the trouble is and, quoting from appellant's testimony, 'upon certain parts of the spine that control this—these nerves, or the nerves that control the organ; and I give certain suggestions which go from my mind to the mind of the patient, and the mind of the patient controls his own body. That is the way the cure is performed.' The claim is also made that, by this laying on of hands, certain vibrations are sent through the body that are instrumental in effecting the cure. That the mind exercises a powerful and oftentimes controlling influence upon the body cannot be denied, and we are offering no criticism upon appellant's methods. We are only concerned with the fact that it is a mode of treating the sick, and as such can be practiced only after obtaining the proper certificate from the State Medical Board."

By LLOYD HARDING

AFTER HIS FIRST CONVICTION was affirmed by the Supreme Court, the defendant, or appellant as he is referred to by the appellate court, resumed his practice. Attempting to profit by his experience in court, the wily fellow then sought to overshadow what he did with an aura of religion and to dissemble what he said into prayers.

He assured his patient that the treatment was by prayer, but there was no change in fact, and his treatments were the same as they had formerly been. Nor were his services rendered for the good of humanity but for a monetary consideration, and on his second conviction testimony was elicited that he charged one dollar a treatment or a bargain rate of six treatments for five dollars.

His second conviction was also appealed to the Supreme Court, and it likewise was sustained. The learned and perspicacious judge who delivered the opinion of the Supreme Court made curt disposal of the appellant's pretensions to sacred culture. He wrote as follows:

"While we are not disposed to define either a form of prayer or an essential posture for those who invoke it (vide 'The Prayer of Cyrus Brown' by Sam Walter Foss), and while prayer, accompanied by the laying on of hands, finds ample warrant and justification in the 'Holy Writings,' we cannot escape the conclusion that appellant has done no more than make a superficial adjustment of his practice so as to avoid the effect of the former adjudication against his methods. He attempts to distinguish the cases, but they are essentially the same. It might be contended with reason that this is a stronger case against him for the testimony of the witness who was treated is that, after the warmth of the hands of appellant had become noticeable, they were moved to another place upon his body, thus indicating that appellant's faith was not entirely without questioning, or above the aid of physical manipulation, which is sometimes quite as effective in promoting circulation and health as are the prayers of the faithful.

"The only distinction we can see between this case and the other one is that appellant has renamed his method of suggestion. Formerly he conveyed his own suggestion of mind through his hand to the mind of the patient, and the patient cured himself, or believed that he was healed. Now he would, by the employment of the same methods, invoke the will of the Supreme Being as a direct curative force. There has been no change in appellant's methods, either in form or substance."

THE CRUX of the entire matter is brought out clearly in what has been set out. It is the duty and desire of law-makers generally to protect the citizens of the commonwealth, and particularly those who are rendered, when laboring under affliction and ill-health, more gullible than usual.

The Supreme Court of another state, in a case not otherwise of much interest, covers the generality thus:

"The most important of police powers is that of caring for and preserving the health of the citizens of a State, and this power is inherent in sovereignty, and the Legislature may pass all such laws as are reasonably necessary to accomplish that purpose."

And now from the civil branch of the law we take an earlier and most interesting case in which the majority opinion differs somewhat from the views heretofore covered. In this case, a physician filed information against a self-styled "magic healer" for practicing medicine without a license and caused his arrest. Upon preliminary hearing before a magistrate, the magic healer was discharged. He immediately sued the physician for damages for malicious prosecution and false imprisonment. The physician won in the trial court and the appellate court affirmed the case.

From the opinion on appeal we gather that this man alleged in his petition for damages that, at the time of his arrest and incarceration in the common jail, he was engaged in the profession of healing diseases without the use of medicine, commonly and better known as a magic healer; that he healed the sick without the use of medicine in any form or manner whatever by placing his hands upon that portion of the body which was afflicted; that this gift or magic power was given him direct from the Lord; that he made no charge for his services but accepted such compensation as the gratitude of his patients induced them voluntarily to offer; that, as a result of his arrest and prosecution for practicing medicine without a license, he suffered great humiliation and mortification, lost two days' compensation in "gifts" amounting to twenty-five dollars per day, was put to an expense of fifteen dollars in employing a lawyer to defend against the untruthful accusation, and, in fact, lost almost his entire practice; that his prosecution was malicious and without probable cause. He claimed damages in the sum of five thousand dollars.

Placing a strict construction upon the statute of their State, the majority of the appellate court held that the magic healer was not violating the law in his practice. On this point it was said:

"The purpose of the act is clearly indicated by its title, 'to regulate the practice of medicine.' It was not intended to regulate the practice of mental therapeutics, or to embrace psychic phenomena. These matters lie within the domain of the supernatural. Practical legislation has nothing to do with them. If they are a part of a man's faith, the right to their enjoyment cannot be abridged or taken away by legislation. However the so-called wisdom of this world may regard these things, it cannot be denied that, long before the Savior told his disciples that in His name they should heal the sick and prevent all manner of diseases by the laying on of hands, the practice of healing by means of prayers, ceremonies, laying on of hands, incantations, hypnotism, mesmerism, and other forms of psycho-therapeutics existed. To the iconoclast who denounces these things as the figments of superstition, or to the orthodox physician who claims for his system all wisdom in the treatment of human malady, we commend the injunction of Him who was called 'the Good Physician,' when told that others than His followers were casting out devils and curing diseases: 'Forbid them not.' What matters the system, if, in fact, devils are cast out, and diseases healed?"

THE MAJORITY OPINION, however, denied to the magic healer the right to damages against the physician who caused his arrest. This holding was upon two grounds, the latter of which was stated thus:

"Besides, we think that the practice of the plaintiff in error, while not in violation of the statute regulating the practice of medicine, was presumptively an imposition upon the credulity of the public, which might in its consequences result in much injury, and that he was exercising a pretended power of magnetic healing to the deception of the people, and was obtaining their money in the shape of gifts under false pretenses, and we do not think that the law should permit him to recover damages

Receives Doctor's Degree

Miss Beth L. Reimer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. T. Reimer, 719 North River Boulevard, Independence, Missouri, has accepted a medical internship at the San Diego General Hospital in San Diego, California, beginning July 1. She received her degree from the University of Kansas School of Medicine in June. She is a graduate of Central High School in Kansas City, Missouri, and Graceland College (class of '42). Miss Reimer will be twenty-four in August.

resulting from a legitimate effort on the part of a citizen to test the legality of his practice."

In this same case one of the judges filed a concurring opinion, but he says that his concurrence is really a dissent. In colorful language, he gives his dissenting views. He says, in pertinent part:

"I cannot agree to the proposition that the object of this statute is only to forbid quacks from pretending to be regular physicians when they are not so. The right of the Legislature to say by what systems and by what classes of persons diseases shall be treated springs from the police power of which the health and safety of the people are wards. . . . The ignorant and superstitious parent, who takes his child critically ill to a 'magic healer' when he should seek the advice and treatment of some skilled physician, and thereby lets it die, has done the perpetuation of the race the same injustice as if he had taken a knife

(Continued on page 22.)

IN CONSIDERING the function of a prophet, we discovered that the main burden of his prophetic duty is to declare the sovereignty of God. His second function was to predict, but these predictions are provisional. In his claim of being a prophet of God, Joseph Smith fulfilled the first duty of a holy calling. His main purpose was to be a translator of the Book of Mormon so its message could convince Jew and Gentile that Jesus is the Christ. How about the predictions that go hand in hand with the prophetic calling? Did Joseph Smith commit himself on the issue?

From the time the holy messenger appeared to the young man in September, 1823, until his murder in June, 1844, Joseph Smith never ceased to issue warnings. As the angel showed the record that was to the "convincing of Jew and Gentile that Jesus is the Christ," a series of quotations from the Bible were repeated. In all these quotations there appeared a strong note of divine displeasure, and the prediction of an immediate judgment. Even before his death, speaking to Sidney Rigdon by revelation, Joseph told him to "lift up his voice as with the sound of a trumpet, and to warn the inhabitants of the earth to flee the wrath to come" (D. and C. 107:32).

Indeed, when the quotations of the heavenly messenger are summed up, it would appear that the "terrible day of the Lord" is coming—a day in which God's fury will "burn as an oven," and all the "proud and they that do wickedly" and refuse to "hear the prophet," (this the angel spoke concerning Christ) shall become fuel. As the Lord revealed the purpose of the mission of this hitherto unknown youth, compassion seemed to be its primary motive. "I the Lord, knowing the calamity which should come upon the inhabitants of the earth, called upon my servant, Joseph Smith." Calamity was at hand, and the Lord would not allow it to come without the people's being warned.

The Great Day

It is to be noted that there was no impulsiveness in his warning. He was no reed blown by every gust of contemporary opinion, bending to soothe his congregations or placate his enemies. From the first to the last, he steadfastly stood by his tragic prophecies.

NOT A FEW of the critics of Joseph Smith have inferred that he was merely a clever and adroit schemer, and that personal gain was the primary motive behind all of his claims. This, from all the evidence of history, is not true. Were it correct, the word "schemer" might be omitted, because he failed to "cover his tracks" with a way out. The imposter and contriver, before revealing a plot would first think of a way of escape. But this man innocently told people that these events of which the angel told him were soon to take place. By designating the time element, he burned his prophetic boats behind him. The phrases, "about to be fulfilled," "soon would come," and "soon to be," are quite prominent in the vision. Indeed, they are connected with almost every quotation. That he expected men of his own generation to witness these hardships is undeniable. He often referred to the work that he initiated as the "fullness of the gospel." He predicted that when the fullness of the gospel was revealed, "there shall be men standing in that generation that shall not pass until they shall see an overflowing scourge" (Doctrine and Covenants 45:4). Then, under the power of the Holy Spirit, he named, "pestilences, earthquakes . . . and many desolations." These points alone are a sufficient evidence that the man was no mere contriver, for such a man would not have placed so much stress on the immediacy of these things. Or, had he been a trickster, it would have been to his advantage to have chosen a dubious and ambiguous line of prediction.

Joseph Smith not only made stupendous claims to a prophetic gift, but also furnished the key by which public opinion might indict or acquit him, as the case might be. When he said, in the name of Christ, that a "desolating scourge shall go forth among the inhabitants of the earth, and shall continue to be poured out, from time to time, if they repent not, until the earth is empty, and the inhabitants thereof are consumed away, and utterly destroyed by the brightness of my coming," he did not say it with conditions or apologies. These are strong words, and the mind behind them was either mutilated or inspired. He even went on to say: "Behold, I tell you these things even as I told the people of the destruction of Jerusalem, and my word shall be verified at this time as it hath hitherto been verified."—Doctrine and Covenants 5:3. The proof of authority that his visions and revelations were divine rests on the statement appearing in the preface to the book of Doctrine and Covenants: "For what I the Lord have decreed in them, shall be fulfilled." Certainly, no authority can be greater than the verification and the fulfillment of a prophetic claim. This appears to be the test for prophetic claims in the Bible—Deuteronomy 18: 20-22; Matthew 7: 15-20—and Joseph Smith was willing to rest his claims on the verdict of time.

THE QUESTION now is, when and how?

Three discoveries, the steam engine, electricity, and the internal combustion engine, evidenced to challenge the young prophet's claims and by sheer mechanical force promised to bring about the prophetic millennium. Physical comfort, wealth, and even health that our progenitors had never enjoyed made their appearance during the nine-of the Lord

The last in a series of three articles outlining the historical vindication of the prophecies of Joseph Smith.

By GEORGE NJEIM
President of Seventy

teenth century. Joseph Smith himself lived to see and hear of the great miracles steam was performing. The radio, the automobile, the aeroplane, the submarine, the washing machine the electric ironer, refrigeration, and many other inventions came into existence after the message of doom was announced. In his Outline of History, Wells says: "From the days of Pepi in Egypt, to those of George III, the human family lived with no advancement in its material welfare." But since the days of George III, material progress has staggered the imagination. In fact, one wonders, had Joseph Smith lived to the ripe age the Bible has allotted to man, what he would have thought about his own predictions of destruction.

These mechanical developments marked an age whose multiple advances were astounding. International commerce reached heights undreamed of before. Distances shortened and accordingly, intercourse among peoples was made easier. The industrialized countries benefited by the opening of new markets, and backward people profited by the demand for their raw materials. Capital accumulations rose to astronomical figures, and labor helped it to subdue the earth. Education, which before this period had been the monopoly of the rich few, began to reach the common stratas, increasing scientific reserves of man power and so assisting scientific research still further. Two things—disease and war—still taxed man's prospects heavily and hindered him from enjoying a fullness of happiness. Toward the elimination of these destructive forces, our increasing scientific and intellectual equipment was next directed. With discovery of the X ray, advanced antiseptic and aseptic surgery, anesthesia, serums, and vitamins, great strides were made against the death of man. The control of many diseases once regarded as inevitably fatal was accomplished, the average span of life was lengthened and infant mortality greatly lowered.

WAR ALSO was approached with the self-same vigor that characterized the period, and many were the influential men who thought eventually that Mars had been dethroned forever. The efforts that Hugo Grotius, the international Dutch jurist, had initiated in the seventeenth century were augmented by the endeavors of other peaceful men. At the beginning of the twentieth century, world peace appeared certain. True enough, in the interim, the world saw some wars, but the urge for peace was greater than the urge for the destruction of human life. By the year 1851, when the Great Exhibition of London was held, the spirit of optimism had reached a new height, and the poet Tennyson could sing of the coming "Federation of the World." Even after that date, the hopes of peaceful men received some setbacks. But after the first Hague Peace Conference, which was held at the invitation of the Czar of Russia, whatever doubt was left in the minds of cynical people concerning the ultimate success of the peace movement was completely removed. The International Court of Arbitration was established in 1899. Statesmen there "considered the negotiation of 125 arbitration treaties between nations, as their highest activity." The Encyclopedia Americana, commenting on the peaceful attitude prevalent at the beginning of the twentieth century, had this to say: "Throughout the civilized world there was promise of peace and a growth of the spirit of humanity and internationalism. War between civilized nations seemed almost a thing of the past. Many World Fairs, Universal Expositions, held in the preceding half century had brought the nations together as never before. Trade between nations as a medium of cementing friendships seemed to portend an ever-better understanding among rival peoples. The educated class was drifting into a sense of security as regards war."

WHAT JOSEPH SMITH, as a prophet of God, had to say about the peace-war issue is worth mentioning here because of its contradictory nature to world opinion. In 1831, under the influence of the Spirit he said, "And again, verily I say unto you, O inhabitants of the earth, I the Lord am willing to make these things known unto all flesh, for I am no respecter of persons, and willeth that all men shall know that the day speedily cometh, the hour is not yet, but is nigh at hand, when peace shall be taken from the earth, and the devil shall have power over his own dominion."—Doctrine and Covenants 1: 6.

Here is the opinion of the man whom the world termed an imposter arrayed against the opinions of the wise men and the statesman of the nations. "I the Lord am willing to make these things known to the world"—but whoever thought of listening to the Lord at a time when peace was here in reality? In modern parlance, God's visibility was poor.

That peace was actually on earth was not enough. People began to look forward to its preservation during our century. Prior to the second Peace Conference that was held at the Hague, a National Arbitration and Peace Conference was held in 1907, at New York City. Andrew Carnegie, the great sponsor of peace movements, presided over the conference. A message from the President of United States, Theodore Roosevelt, was read. "The nineteenth century," he wrote, "saw, on the whole, a real and great advancement in the standard of international conduct, but as among civilized nations and by strong nations towards weaker and more backward people, the twentieth century will, I believe, witness a much greater advance in the same direction." Following this conference, the second Hague Conference was held, and the representatives of still more nations attended its meetings. After its adjournment, it was said, "It strengthened the faith in peace, and there were confident prophecies of a time soon to come when reason would rule international relations as it did personal relations."

FROM THIS TIME ON, the obscure "Mormon" prophet and his message were completely forgotten by serious, thinking people.

Suddenly, however, and when men were dreaming of greater wealth, comfort, peace, and scientific achievements, the bottom dropped out of our made-in-the-world security. The bright and brisk new outlook on the world revealed itself as one filled with hatred and fear. War broke out on every hand, and the new wars were characterized by weapons and agencies more prodigious than men had ever witnessed in their long history—products of the advances of science we had blindly relied on to bring and maintain the Golden Age. And from that awful war, 1914, until the present time, the world has never seen one single year of peace.

The signing of the Treaty of Versailles had brought relief and joy throughout most of the civilized world. But as we look at that treaty today, we can see that it was not built on a genuine desire for peace but was largely an indication of exhaustion. The belligerents were tired out, but the defeated immediately began to prepare for greater conflict. While that treaty was being signed, war was actually going on between Russia and Poland, and the ink was hardly dry enough to fold the treaty when Turkey and Greece entered into the conflict. Then there were the Franco-Spanish campaigns against the Riffs, and other smaller operations in Egypt, Palestine, Syria, Hedjaze, Iraq, India, Haiti, Nicaragua, and various South American countries. While these were progressing, Japan and China kept sparring for an opening for four years. During this period, the efforts of the peace-lovers did not cease. Conditions in the world, intricate as they were, did not deter them. The League of Nations, the Court of International Justice, the Locarno Treaties, the Kellogg-Briand Pact, and other treaties, were all designed to prevent further war. But to believe in them seriously now would be to ignore the fate of Manchuria, Ethiopia, Austria, Czechoslovakia, and finally the invasion of Poland, which ushered in the Second World War.

THE MEMORY of this war is still fresh in our minds to demand close review. Nine years now have elapsed since its beginning, and what hectic years they have been! More contenders for world supremacy have been eliminated this time—Germany, Italy, and Japan. Hundreds of towns and cities were reduced to rubble, and their inhabitants—those that survive—are roaming around. Hatred made a record high, and the innocent noncombatants who became its victims numbered in the millions. Even now after three years of peace, displaced persons are still a problem, and fear reigns throughout the world. The United Nations Organization was born in the fog of San Francisco and still is in the fog. The last two contenders, the United States and Russia, are, like athletes, behind iron- and green-back curtains, conditioning themselves for the final meet by exerting every nerve of their scientific and propagandizing energy. They need to be in shape. When the time comes for that battle, we are made to understand the spectacle is going to be great—a race of jet-planes, atomic bombs, and bacteria.

WHAT WILL THE result be?

There are many answers to the question, but it will be interesting to listen to Joseph Smith telling us what God says: "Go ye . . . in your several callings, unto the great and notable cities and villages of the world, setting forth clearly and understandingly the desolation of abominations in the last days; for I will rend their kingdoms; . . . for I, the Lord, have put forth my hand to exert the powers of heaven; ye cannot see it now, [that is, the year 1832] yet a little while and ye shall see it, and know that I am, and that I will come and reign with my people."—Doctrine and Covenants 83: 24. The kingdom of God will be the result.

Here we let the verdict rest with the unbiased. Joseph Smith made claims of an objective heavenly visitation to him and was severely censured by his contemporaries. Even now he is still a misunderstood man. As his claims are examined, they are found to be free of any selfish or ulterior motives. On the contrary, they measure up to the best teachings of the ancient and widely recognized prophets. They reveal to us in a most miraculous manner what the world sorely needs—Jesus Christ, a divine leader. They also, plainly and without any hesitation, reveal to us the consequences of a persistent rebellion, if we so choose to act against this God of power. The fulfillment of these predictions is noticeable on every hand. To us he is definitely a prophet.

There are no sacrifices, only opportunities.

The Three Angles of Assumption

WE ALL ASSUME life in the beginning at the angle of pure optimism. The little child accepts unhesitatingly the world about him with a full trust and confidence. In this, he is akin to all nature. Birds and beasts, domestic animals and wildlife, all the plants of field and forest, respond to the sun and rain by growing as if everything in the world were good.

Children, in their process of growing up, begin to be conscious that there are indignities and injustices about them. Their world of pure optimism begins to fade, and they drift toward the second angle which is that of pessimism. Proverbs 1: 7 says, "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of knowledge." The child departs from his innocent nature as he approaches this second angle. He begins to use his reason and judgment. When he knows fear, he can understand the logic of the Mosaic law, of "an eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth." No one anywhere especially objects to this principle. We all condone the punishment of the guilty and the reward of the worthy. The problem comes when the innocent suffer and the wicked prosper. The facts of inequality and inadequacy become more and more obvious to the child, and in spite of the recognized good he sees about him, he may become a confirmed pessimist for the rest of his life.

There is nothing unnatural about pessimism in its early stage. In fact, it is evidence of a quickened conscience about life's problems. Perhaps without this arousing, our problems could never be solved. Pessimism is a natural reaction to rebuffs and indignities. Tragedy comes when no further progress is made. The confirmed pessimist usually adopts the proverbial philosophy of eating, drinking, and being merry. Self-preservation and self-satisfaction become his guide. He agrees with the pessimist King Solomon, who said: "All is vanity . . . and he that increaseth his wisdom, increaseth his sorrows."—Ecclesiastes 1: 1-18.

By BESSIE TAYLOR

THE REAL triumphs of life are reached when we are able to mount up to that third angle—the "Pisgah" angle. Aged Moses climbed Mt. Pisgah on the borders of Canaan to get a panoramic view of the Promised Land. This apex angle is not easily attained. It is reached only by experience through study, prayer, and faith. From this elevation, we can better interpret the problems of good and evil. We can look both backward and into the future. We can see good and evil in their true proportion. We can see things as they really are, which in most cases are not so good that they couldn't be better, and not so bad that they couldn't be worse.

Too many times our occupation on this angle is very short lived. Our emotions carry us back to the other two angles. We become too optimistic or too pessimistic. Job is the classical example of one who struggled to remain on this higher plane in spite of all his troubles. Though suffering shook him, eventually he regained the higher ground. In fact the whole purpose of that book is to demonstrate how one should maintain his faith and integrity in the face of trouble. Job was tried physically, mentally, economically, socially, and spiritually—all the ways anyone could be tried.

The task of building Zion will be for those who have come up on the highest peak. As we build, we will experience legitimate worries and be aware of controversial problems. Zion will be built only by effort and by struggle. Our courage will be borne by a determination and a knowledge of the deep necessity for the establishment of the kingdom. Pure optimism will never build Zion any quicker than pessimism. We must somehow learn to combine our optimism and pessimism into a fusion that will give us the hope, the courage, the confidence, and the joy of optimism; and the heedfulness, the prudence, and the caution of pessimism. Matthew Arnold says that perfection lies in the true balance of life. It is when we get out of balance that sin and trouble overtake us. A tire will run miles and miles if perfectly aligned and balanced, but if it gets a little off, it is soon damaged. Zion in her perfection will be a place where everyone's life is in true balance.

Tribute to Hubert Case

I wish to express my appreciation and admiration for one of our church men, Brother Hubert Case. It was in early spring, 1938, that I heard his last sermon at a two weeks' series of meetings held at Sperry, Oklahoma. I was privileged to prepare dinner for a group of which he was a member. I noticed that he did not drink tea or coffee, but preferred water or milk. He was a very interesting guest and I felt well repaid for my efforts. He later publicly thanked me for what I did, and I shall always treasure the memory of his kindness. He baptized three members of my family, my mother, my youngest brother, Lloyd Roberts, and my young sister, Zola Grace Perkins. He also preached the funeral sermon of my young sister-in-law.

MRS. RUBY TOON.

Box 191
West Sacramento, California

If I could get to the highest place in Athens, I would lift up my voice and say: "What mean ye, fellow citizens, that ye turn every stone to scrape wealth together, and take so little care of your children, to whom ye must one day relinquish all?"—Socrates

Truer Parenthood

By MRS. J. W. JONES
Mother of Apostle Maurice Draper

I THINK OF PARENTHOOD in much the same way that I think of teaching. All parents are teachers in the final analysis, so it calls for similar qualifications. A few years back we had to accept parenthood as uncontrollable. Information was not then available so we could control the timing and the size of our families. But now we can have our children when we want them and as many as we want, so we also can consider our task of teaching our children a little differently. One thing seems certain, with the assuming of parenthood we also assume the job of being a teacher. It's difficult to have to perform tasks we dislike, so we should try to cultivate a liking for the opportunity of teaching along with the opportunity of parenthood. We say of the church that its greatest and most basic task is teaching. And I feel we must say the same thing of parenthood.

I think I can hear some say that this is so idealistic and requires such a well-informed person that it would be hopeless or useless for them to try it. Don't you know the Lord recognizes your inabilities? He has often promised to help you, he cannot help you if you are not trying.

LET ME BEAR A PERSONAL TESTIMONY. I was one of those parents who was very much lacking. Having been reared mostly in isolation from the church and having only one year of high school, I felt very inadequate in the task of parenthood and had so expressed myself to my husband when our five children were all under nine years of age. He told me he did not fear for our children so long as I was conscious of my limitations and would try to do my best. I learned many things as they learned, and in a sense we grew up together. But because of my own consciousness of inadequacy, I tried to leave no stone uncovered in the way of putting the children in such church associations as were available to us—district conferences, youth meetings, reunions, inter-branch activities, retreats, and youth camps. Then we tried to put into actual living some of the things we learned.

All good and worth-while contributions to the world need to be taught. In the fields of science, medicine, and inventions, the discoveries have to be thought out and translated into a terminology which is teachable to the masses. And so we can say that the world continues its accumulation of knowledge and understanding through the medium of teaching.

In order to teach the truth effectively, we must love the truth, and we must love the people enough to be very patient. The greatest privilege we have is to rear our children righteously and help them to establish stable and righteous homes. We must find God. We will find him in others as we learn to love them. Where there is least of self, there is more of God. Our attitudes are easily seen and felt and transferred. And they are important. Children's attitudes are formed early from associations and environments.

THE RESULTS OF TEACHING are growth and understanding; these qualities come to us quite slowly. We can be convinced as to how slowly by considering how long we have had to live to learn some of the more simple truths of life. There are a number of things which contribute to our slow growth. We might mention a few which are especially pertinent. First, we all too often choose not to be taught. We are so sure we know, and so will not listen or put ourselves in a position to be taught. Second, we often have prejudices and are stubborn, unresponsive, or indifferent. It is certainly a fine thing for us to look often into the gospel mirror and ask ourselves a few questions such as: "Do I love others, or am I trying to love others as Jesus loved?" "Do I desire to teach, not only a church school class, but by example before my children?" "Am I patient, understanding, forgiving?"

We say love could be the greatest force in the world if it were used. Let us add a little to it and say love of God and his Son is the greatest force for good in the world. Jesus knew that, and he wanted Peter to know it, too. Peter was to feed the saints, teach them, and lead them. He must be very sure he loved Jesus, else he could not lead them to love and understand the Master. Christ asked him over and over, "Lovest thou me?" trying to emphasize in Peter's thinking the importance of being sure.

In Doctrine and Covenants 68: 4, we read:

And again, inasmuch as parents have children . . . that teach them not to understand the doctrine of repentance; faith in Christ the son of the living God; and of baptism and of the gift of the Holy Ghost by the laying on of hands when eight years old, the sin be upon the head of the parents, for this shall be a law unto the inhabitants of Zion, or in any of her stakes which are organized; and their children shall be baptized for the remission of their sins when eight years old, and receive the laying on of hands; and they shall also teach their children to pray, and to walk uprightly before the Lord. And the inhabitants of Zion shall also observe the Sabbath Day to keep it holy. And the inhabitants of Zion shall also remember their labors, inasmuch as they are appointed to labor, in all faithfulness, for the idler shall be had in remembrance before the Lord. Now I the Lord am not well pleased with the inhabitants of Zion, for there are idlers among them; and their children are also growing up in wickedness; they also seek not earnestly the riches of eternity, but their eyes are full of greediness. These things ought not to be.

- - - a home column feature - - -

THIS HAS TO DO with the creation of environments. The Lord knows how important they are, according to the preceding quotation. Here we are specifically commanded to create an environment of repentance; that, we say, is a turning from evil and a turning to do good. I have always contended we cannot teach our children to be something we are not. We are not perfect, but are in constant need of repenting. This being so, how can we hold that we are always right and that our decisions are not to be questioned? I've heard parents say they made mistakes in the disciplining of a child, but that they didn't dare to back down. Why? Aren't they big enough to say they are wrong? It is a wise parent who will swallow his pride and admit he is wrong and humbly ask forgiveness. It isn't required any more of our children to say they are sorry and ask pardon than it is of us, and we should lend moral support and courage to the child by leading the way in the creation of this environment.

And then the Lord speaks of the environment of faith, of obedience to God's will through baptism, of prayer, of righteous living, of keeping the Sabbath holy, of doing our work well and being dependable, of not being an idler, and of not being greedy.

Again we, the parents, must be in the process of becoming in order to lead our children, for it is said that what we are speaks so loudly that what we say cannot be heard. Let us be genuine and sincere. We can't hide what is inside of us, for it shows all over our faces.

No true saint ever knew that he was one.

Dollar Stretchers

By Dell Willard

BEFORE PAT and I were married, we decided to build a home in order to save on apartment rent. This wouldn't leave much to spend for furniture, but we made up our minds that a home was more important. Our house is only semi-modern, but with the rent we save, in a few years we will build a bathroom, utility room, two bedrooms, and a garage. In order to have a private bedroom now, we built a book shelf and braced it down to the boor in the middle of our future living room. This gives us a small bedroom and living room, and just the right setting for our studio divan.

The divan is an old iron cot, which we salvaged from Pat's folks' garage. I made a slip cover for it, but then there had to be cushions, so off to the junk yard I went. They gave me old car springs, which I cut to the right size and fitted cardboard boxes around them. These were covered with an old comforter, then slip covered to match the divan. The cost for the whole piece was eighteen dollars.

One day as we were driving by the junk yard, I saw an old stove base. The bright idea struck me, why not a coffee table! The stove base was purchased for seventy-five cents. I set a wooden frame on the inside, and an old picture frame on the top. Then I put a glass at the base of the frame, which made a place for me to put my doll china dishes. I finished off with a glass on the top inside the picture frame and bronzed the whole table. This is my favorite piece. The whole cost, including the glass, was three dollars.

I refinished an unwanted desk which had been made from an old organ. Of course, there had to be a desk chair. I purchased a used straight back chair with graceful legs for two dollars and fifty cents. After sawing the back down, I padded the whole chair, except the legs, and upholstered it in white leather. The cost was four dollars. A chair like it in the store would cost over fifteen dollars.

My table is an old typewriter desk which was left from some office supplies. We rejoined and refinished it. We purchased a love seat for five dollars, and I refinished and upholstered it. My dressing table is an old sewing machine disguised with a skirt. We were fortunate to have some very nice wedding gifts, one being a platform rocker. With these, plus the bed and chest which we already had, we needed only to buy a table, chairs, and refrigerator.

The curtains in our home are made of monk's cloth. I put them on pull-cord curtain rods so as to double for window blinds and curtains.

Our house and furniture together cost around $2,500. With Pat's few savings and the rent we saved, we've almost paid for it in two years' time.

Any couple can make their own furniture if they really want to. After you've made up your mind, let your imagination run wild with the thought of finishing something useful and beautiful.

Book Lure

I love a new and fragrant book
With leaves not soiled or torn,
And yet, somehow, it seems I'm proud
My Bible's old and worn.
How sweet the breath of pages new—
White petals edged in gold!
Yet there's a lasting fragrance in My Bible, worn and old.
It seems the spotless volumes
Have a cool and distant air,
My Bible snuggles close upon
A table, desk, or chair.
It's always near—just like a friend—
And ready when I call,
I love a new book, but I love
My Bible best of all.

—IVA MERRILL.

Graceland Memorial Student Center Fund Boosted by Lamoni Gift

Photo by Clifford Carver

GRACELAND COLLEGE needed a total of $60,000 to build a new student center building and faced the prospect of raising the last $22,000 of this amount as late as this last spring. A nation-wide campaign was begun by mail and by personal solicitation wherever it was possible.

As a part of this campaign, a good contribution was made by citizens and business men of Lamoni. A representative group are shown in the picture after having handed a check for $5,000 to President E. J. Gleazer, Jr., in his office at Graceland College. The men shown are, left to right, Rollin White, John Reynard, Ralph Derry, Wallace Blair, and William Marsh. Dr. E. E. Gamet, not present at the time the picture was taken, also worked for the raising of the fund. Contributions are still coming in from Lamoni, and it is thought the city total may reach as much as $6,000.

R. Edwin Browne of the Graceland College staff reports that $19,000 of the $22,000 needed has been raised. This amount does not include reports from the Independence and Kansas City areas, which have not been received yet. There has been another meeting with the architect, plans have been further developed, and it is hoped that work may be begun on the Memorial Student Center building this summer.

The Right People

By NAOMI RUSSELL

AS A CHILD, I knew exactly what Zion would be—a golden city whose citizens dressed in white robes and never had to work. I may have allowed for angels, too—I can't remember now. At any rate, my pre-adolescent concept of Zion was a beauty, and the best part of it all was that I firmly believed it would "just happen" on the Lord's appointed day without anyone's having to put forth much effort except to be good, and not smoke or drink or swear.

It was a sad day when I had to replace this shining ideal with the vision of a storehouse instead of a Gothic temple. I learned, too, that Zion would involve some labor, and there would be more blue jeans and gingham aprons than white robes per square block. I did like the idea of equality among men which the Zion theory presented, because even in my teens I saw much of how "the other half" lived, and I didn't like it.

Of course, I was of the opinion that the blueprints were all drawn up, ready for the builders to move in and take over. I believed, because I had often been told so, that it was up to my generation to build Zion. I wondered why no one had bothered to do it before, but I was glad, in a way, that mine was the chosen generation—it seemed like a project worth working on. I supposed all we were waiting for was word from the Almighty, and then we'd march up to the Auditorium and say, "OK, give us the plans. Now is the hour."

THEN I FOUND OUT there was no blueprint—so I began asking for a definition. I got some interesting answers: "Zion is the city of Independence and the territory surrounding it." "Zion is a state of mind, and you can have it in California as well as in Missouri." "Zion is the perfect social order with God as its head." "Zion is the pure in heart." A few I asked were bluntly honest and confessed, "I don't know."

Despite the hazy picture I have of the kingdom of God, I still believe wholeheartedly in it. I believe that if a sufficient number of people live as Saints should live, the plan will be revealed. I'm even naïve enough to believe it is quite possible that this generation will do the building.

FORTUNATELY, we have some specific rules for Zion living. They cover every phase of life from diet to budgeting the family finances. Here are some of them:

1. A Saint cultivates the Christian graces—faith, virtue, knowledge, temperance, patience, godliness, brotherly kindness, and charity.
2. A Saint is clean in thought, speech, and life. His moral standard should be above reproach.
3. A Saint is sincere and honest. Good works must proceed from a sincere heart, not from a desire for praise or honor.
4. A Saint is generous. The "second mile" principle should govern generosity.
5. A Saint is brotherly. There must be no discrimination between color, race, nation, or social class.
6. A saint is a good citizen.
7. A Saint leads a useful life. He must engage in an occupation which is useful and in keeping with the other standards of Sainthood.
8. A Saint is thrifty. He keeps the financial law and discharges his responsibility as a steward with care and consecration.
9. A Saint spends his leisure time creatively. His recreation should be truly re-creative.
10. A Saint endeavors to maintain a standard of health. The Word of Wisdom is an indication of the requirements of God in the matter of physical and mental well-being.
11. A Saint avoids the use of habit-forming drugs. This precludes the use of alcohol, tobacco, or other drugs on the basis that those who so indulge are living on a lower mental and physical level than is intended in the divine purpose.
12. A Saint respects the sanctity of marriage. The standard of the church in marriage relations is that of the highest Christian principle.

13. A Saint is expected to share regularly in the worship and activities of the church.
14. A Saint is expected to be unflinching in his observance of the Lord's Supper.
15. A Saint is expected to take part in the work of the church according to his gifts and opportunity.
16. A Saint is expected to take his share in contributing to the funds of the church according as God has prospered him.
17. A Saint should maintain a standard of good reading.
18. A Saint should plan for individual and family devotions and study the Word of God.*

NOTHING VAGUE or hard to understand about those, is there? They present the perfect formula for converting ordinary human beings into Zion-builders. And it's going to take a number of them, plus some organizing, to get the job done. The best of plans and materials may be wasted unless the right people are handling them. Our big assignment for today is to become the right people. God, I believe, will take care of the rest.

*A Church Member's Manual.

God Speaks

God speaks in a still small voice,
And not by mighty thunderings,
Not lightning's flash or ocean's roar,
Nor earthquake's mighty shaking power,

Or wars of man-made blunderings,
But in the eloquence of peace.

God speaks in a still small voice,
In high resolve, in impulse good,
In sense of shame when wrong is done,
In surge of peace when right has won,
In acts of service, brotherhood,
God speaks in silence, eloquent.

LEONA HANDS

A Faith That Works

By MARIE GOSLINE

PERHAPS it was because of a long illness that my little country church means so much to me. During this time there was one light that shone through the darkness if I would but look. There was one voice that spoke through the dimness if I would but listen. And because of that light, my church, and that voice, the prayers of the faithful, I found health to a certain degree, wealth—enough of it and happiness to spare. While on the surface, these long illnesses seem cruel, they are not. This illness taught me that Jesus is ever mindful of his own, that however insignificant one may be, one may still cling to him and receive his blessing. It taught me for sure that the prayers of the righteous "availeth much." It taught me by a very slow and painful process that there is Someone stronger, Someone kinder, and Someone who offers a helping hand if we will but grasp it. It taught me that this church to which we Latter Day Saints belong has a faith that works.

Tucked away in a spot in sunny, southern California is one of our little churches—a church which was built by three women—the church of my childhood. This is a small church in a small village, but it has much that most of its city sisters lack. It has warmth and an atmosphere of good fellowship. It's the sort of church where strangers are asked home for dinner. It's the sort of church where Jesus (unless I miss my guess) would like to find himself come Sunday morning. It's where home-grown flowers adorn the altar. It's where a vested choir sings every Sunday. It's where whole families, including the pastor's family, work for the Cause. It's where beautiful folders, professionally printed, give the program of the week's services. These are all little things, but they mean much. And the Jesus who bathed his apostles' feet—just a little thing—would have loved them.

WERE JESUS A STRANGER in my village, it would be easy for him to find his church. It is always

Here Is the Writer

Marie Gosline has this to say of herself:

"We are three: Jim, whom I met while attending the University of California at Berkeley, and who is now an executive of the Standard Oil Company of California; Tony, our little honey-colored cocker spaniel, whose dog brain puts him in second place; and I, who come in third.

I completely lose my heart each time I see the ocean or mountains. I like gardening, ranching, and all outdoor life. I detest night life and anything that keeps me up after 9 p.m."

advertised in the Saturday evening paper. It is listed among the names of the other churches at the leading hotels in town. He would feel at home among the people who worship there. He would find in an atmosphere of peace and understanding the good fellowship that belongs in every one of our churches. He would find that those who worship have a faith that "works"—not one that is built for show. Once inside this little country church, Jesus would find a warm welcome. Many would ask him how long he was staying in town.

A SHORT TIME ago I acquired my grandmother's clock. Now this is no ordinary timepiece. Away back in the days of the gold rush when my grandmother left England for California, this clock was one of her wedding gifts. It sailed with her around the Horn. For years and years it ticked away the hours in her home. It has seen much life, and now it sits on the mantel of my fireplace in my small cottage by the shore of San Francisco Bay. It is almost one hundred years old, and to me it is a beautiful piece of work. So the other day I invited some of my neighbors and friends in to sit by the fire and to see this remarkable piece. I thought, of course, that they would marvel at its age, its beauty, and its workmanship. But I was mistaken! No one cared how old it was. No one cared how beautiful it was. No one cared that it had been created by an artist. But each one, as he looked at it, asked, "Will it work?"

How like my grandmother's clock, which has now been repaired and tells the time of day on my mantel, is my religion. No one cares how old it is. No one cares how beautiful it is. Few care, apparently, about the Artist who created it. But everyone cares and wants to know, "Will it work?"

MY LITTLE COUNTRY CHURCH has had a hard struggle. It has had many trials and growing pains, but it still offers rest to the weary, spiritual food to the hungry, and Jesus Christ to the world. I cannot forget that light—my church—and what it meant to me during my long, dark hours. Neither can I forget the prayers of the faithful. All were

New Horizons

Kingdom Careers

RECENTLY I asked myself, "Just what is it that I need to successfully make my life acceptable to God as a true servant?" I found myself saying, "Cleanse your desires." And seriously, is this not of great importance? Since desire is often one of our greatest motivations for action in any direction, surely we should attempt to cleanse our desires and direct them toward our great goal—that of serving God.

This can be brought down to little things like our desire for entertainment, our taste for certain harmful beverages, the sort of people with whom we associate. Again it can be applied to the entire plan of our life. In other words, our desire first should be to live and labor in keeping with the highest principles of human association—the principles taught by Christ. In our vocation, the way we earn a livelihood, our desire, and goal should still be the same.

I have been asked and for many years have asked myself, "Just how is it possible to apply certain vocations toward building the kingdom of God?" For young people who seared upon my heart. Those long months, and even years, have taught me what prayer can do, and what that light—my church—means to me. It taught me what it is to have a faith that works.

Greatest of all that we Latter Day Saints have to be thankful for is that since we have the fullness of the gospel to offer to the world, we have a faith that depends not upon its age, its beauty, or its workmanship; we have a faith that offers sustenance to the hungry, a faith that offers an outstretched hand to the poor, the meek, the downtrodden, a faith that lifts the fallen—a faith that offers hope to the world. We have a faith that works. The rest is up to us.

By DON HIGGINS

are now studying for their life's work, this is the most difficult question to answer. And truthfully, if I could answer the question, I'm sure I would be famous by now. But I believe I can suggest at least some eventual ends and at least some indirect methods of applying nearly any vocation to kingdom-building. What about laborers, lawyers, doctors, artists, writers, correspondents, producers, actors, and a hundred others?

THE ANSWER I have to the artistic and creative minds is this: We have a theory, a doctrine, a philosophy of life which can be expressed in a thousand ways outside of the pulpit. This philosophy can be expressed in many ways to many people who would never otherwise listen. Let your play, your book, your music, your art express these great principles. It will if the desire exists.

The laborer is not left out. His actions, his example among fellow workers, the way he talks, the way he deals with people, the attitude he has can do much to forward the principles of integrated society. And, too, he can take an active interest in his job to bring advancement in position so that he will be of greater influence.

To the persons who pursue professions, there is a great expanse of opportunity. The lawyer who practices not only the codes of his profession but the principles of Christ can have a tremendous influence over a large segment of society. The administration of justice, true justice, is a prime requisite in our ideal society. Doctors, brokers, agents, salesmen, and all the others are in a position to actively practice, being aimed directly at society.

EVERYONE, regardless of profession, vocation, or trade should attempt to become self-sufficient as much as possible. If we are to become free of the influence of forces which tend to hamper our progress, we must become free of our economic dependence upon them. To do this, we must own our economic sources—our businesses, factories, and raw materials. Since all great movements motivate from the basic element of society, the family, we should also own our own homes and property.

I have no intention even in part to suggest that we become aloof in the respect of believing we are superior, or of using shyster methods of attaining our economic and social goals. Once again, it must be based on clean desire.

We must realize that any contact we make with other people may exert influence upon them. And because of this, I believe any act can be called an act for God if properly directed. Instead of attempting to make more of our young people become preachers, why not encourage them to become proficient and influenced in some leading profession or trade, doing well at whatever they attempt, with a desire to build the kingdom? With the desire as their influence, they can reach out to many who would never be touched by our ministers. I believe they can do valuable groundwork and even do constructive building. What many people forget is that the kingdom will include everything—entertainers, brick layers, and lawyers. A halo can fit the head of a laborer as well as a minister if they both have the proper desire and fulfill it.

The "Laying on of Hands" in Court

(Continued from page 11.)

and stabbed the child to the heart. Contemplate the effect on the community if a scourge of small pox or yellow fever should fall upon it, and the people should submit themselves to the care of 'magic healers,' instead of physicians. The state has an interest in the mental and physical condition of its every citizen."

This judge felt that the practice of the magic healer was a violation of the statute under consideration, and in no uncertain way he writes:

"My idea is—that the plaintiff who confesses in his petition that 'his profession is and was at the time of his arrest—that of healing diseases, without the use of medicine, commonly and better known as a magic healer,' and that at that time he had a 'lucrative practice' in several countries, conclusively shows that probable cause existed for his arrest for a violation of the statute. It boots not that the plaintiff points to the prophets and apostles, and says 'it is a matter of Christian right.' If so, let him give the powers without price. 'Freely ye have received, freely give,' was Christ's command, as he gave his apostles miraculous power over disease and death."

Of course this judge concurred in the holding that the magic healer could not recover any damages. In pungent language he says:

"If he were taking money and professing to heal, and did not heal, he was a cheat and a swindler. If he used natural agencies and healed, he violated the statute regulating the practice of medicine. In any view, his cause of action arose from an unlawful act, and he cannot recover."

(Continued next week.)

Helped by Prayers

I wish to thank all who remembered me in prayer following my request in the Herald. I have had a remarkable recovery, and the doctors say my heart is now perfectly normal. I am to officiate at a baptismal service soon, and I believe I shall be quite able to perform this rite.

ELDER ISRAEL GOHEEN,
Gladwin, Michigan

Briefs

SPRINGFIELD, MISSOURI.—The church school has made a good record in reaching higher standards. All four adult classes are studying for credit under the Department of Religious Education plan and are taught by accredited teachers. Fifty-three persons in the branch are now studying for credit. At the recent institute at Pittsburg, Kansas, the church school paid transportation and expense for all teachers to attend. Recent Vacation Bible school had an enrollment of about ninety-three.

RAPID CITY, SOUTH DAKOTA.—Thirty persons attended the Communion and ordination service held at the George L. Mefferd home on May 23. Elder E. C. Judson of Wheatland, Wyoming, Elder Alma F. Mefferd of Omaha, Nebraska, and Priest H. L. Mathewson of Pocatella, Idaho, were present. High light of the day was the ordination of Priest George Mefferd to the office of elder. Brother Mefferd has conducted church school services in his home since 1936. Since then a number of persons have united with the church and some drive as far as fifty miles to attend services.

KIRTLAND, OHIO.—The third annual Regional Youth Conference, held at Kirtland, Ohio, on June 19 and 20, was attended by over 200 young people from Ohio, West Virginia, and Pennsylvania. Apostle Blair Jensen gave the keynote address of the conference at 11 o'clock on Saturday, emphasizing the theme, "Choose Ye." In the afternoon Bishop Henry Livingston conducted a class session on "The Right Use of Money." John Booth, city pastor of Columbus, then addressed the group on "Brotherhood Through Service," after which Apostle Jensen conducted a class; his subject was "Techniques in Converting." Lloyd Adams and Ray Ashenurst, general church appointees, led a discussion on "Preparing for a Christian Career." At 3:15, a field meet was held; winners were presented church books as prizes. Bishop Livingston was guest speaker at the evening banquet.

An 8:30 prayer service was held at the Temple on Sunday morning. At 9:30, Etelka White, chairman of the planning committee was in charge of a forum at which Saturday's work was reviewed. A hymn, "Choose Ye," written especially for the occasion by Charles Brockway, and sung by the Conference Choir, preceded Bishop Livingston's 11 o'clock address. Approximately 350 persons attended this service. The conference closed with a consecration service at 1:30 in the afternoon.

BULLETIN BOARD

Pittsburgh Young People's Conference

The young people of Pittsburgh District will hold a conference at Lock Four, Pennsylvania, July 9-11. There will be outdoor recreation on Friday and a business meeting at 7:30 p.m. Saturday, followed by a series of talks on Graceland by young people who have been students there. Sunday's activities include a baptismal service at 9 a.m.; a round table discussion on Graceland at 9:30; an address by Merle Guthrie at 11; lunch at noon; and a confirmation and ordination service at 2 p.m.

HENRY M. WINSHIP,
District President.

All-Day Meeting at Millersburg

An all-day meeting will be held at the Millersburg church on Sunday, July 18. Elders John Stiegel and Fred Bevans of Moline, Illinois, are to be the guest speakers.

CLIFFORD WAKELAND, Pastor.

Cash Reunion

Eastern Michigan District will hold its nineteenth annual reunion at Cash, Michigan, August 14 to 22. Apostle E. J. Gleazer, Bishop T. Beck, and Elders Blair McClain, Luke Troyer, and James Phillips will be present. Mrs. Blair McClain is to be in charge of women's work. Meals will be served on the grounds. For reservations, write Harmon Fetting, R. F. D., Sandusky, Michigan.

JAMES C. PHILLIPS.

Silver Wedding Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Earl L. Short of 4020 Brooklyn Avenue, Kansas City 4, Missouri, will celebrate their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary by holding open house at their home from 7 until 10 o'clock in the evening on Thursday, July 8, and from 2 until 6 o'clock on Sunday, July 11.

Books Wanted

Lester L. Bryant, 2413 Thirteenth Street, Bremerton, Washington, needs twelve copies of Dr. F. M. Smith's Our Social Ideals. (Fewer copies will be accepted.) This pamphlet contains the opening address given at the General Conference held in October, 1922.

Mrs. Robert Maier, Box 394, North Miami Beach, Florida, needs a copy of Bearrice Witherspoon and A Marvelous Work and A Wonder.

REQUESTS FOR PRAYERS

Stanley Stautenburg, Route 2, Ravenna, Ontario, asks the Saints to pray that, if it be God's will, he may be healed.

Clara L. Wilcox, Gainsborough, Saskatchewan, requests prayers that she may be healed, if God so wills, of a heart ailment. At present, she is in the hospital.

WEDDINGS

Gorker-Padget

Virginia Padget, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. P. Padget of Arkansas City, Kansas, and John Gorker, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. N. Gorker, also of Arkansas City, were married June 6 at the home of the bride's parents, Elder C. S. Gose officiating. They will make their home in Manhattan, Kansas, where Mr. Gorker attends college.

Waite-Carlile

Alice Carlile, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Carlile of Cameron, Missouri, and Don E. Waite, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Waite of New Westminster, British Columbia, were married at the Reorganized Church in Cameron on June 20. Elder Ned Jacobsen of Lamoni, Iowa, performed the double-ring ceremony. The Waites are making their home in Iowa City, Iowa.

Burdick-Cline

Dorothy Mae Cline, daughter of Mrs. Zella Cline of San Jose, California, and Albert Votaw Burdick, son of Bishop and Mrs. Edwin C. Burdick of Sacramento, California, were married June 5 at the Reorganized Church in San Jose. Bishop Burdick read the double-ring ceremony. The couple will make their home in Sacramento.

Hands-Jackson

Dolores Jackson and Raymond Hands, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond C. Hands, were married at the Reorganized Church in St. Louis, Missouri, on the evening of June 5. Pastor Frank McDonald performed the ceremony.

Nikel-Davey

The marriage of Edith Mae Davey of Independence, Missouri, and Frank Ray Nikel of Blacksburg, Virginia, was solemnized at the Stone Church in Independence on June 13. Apostle Roscoe E. Davey, father of the bride, performed the double-ring ceremony.

Gardner-Stockwood

Veneta Stockwood of St. Petersburg, Florida, and Frank D. Gardner of Flint, Michigan, were married May 6 at the home of Pastor Harry J. Simons in Flint, Pastor Simons officiating. Mr. and Mrs. Gardner will make their home in Flint.

BIRTHS

Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Foster Chase of Moose-dale, Saskatchewan, announce the birth of a son, Lloyd Edward, born May 28. Mrs. Chase is the former Beryl E. Jones of Birmingham, England.

A daughter, Pearl Josephine, was born on April 19 to Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Spargo of Vancouver, British Columbia. Mrs. Spargo is the former Dorothea Staynoff.

Mr. and Mrs. Laverne K. Tuttle announce the birth of a son, Laverne Kenneth, Jr., born June 19. Mrs. Tuttle was formerly Edith Rinker.

DEATHS

WARREN.—Lilla M., daughter of Richard and Elizabeth Ann Bullard, was born May 12, 1886, at Providence, Rhode Island, and died June 23, 1948, at her home in Independence, Missouri. She was baptized into the Reorganized Church at Boston, Massachusetts, on September 5, 1897, by her father. On October 1, 1907, she was married to Charles S. Warren in Boston, after which they made their home in Los Angeles, California; five children were born to them. In June, 1910, they moved to Independence, where they have lived ever since. Sister Warren was an active worker in the church as long as her health permitted. Her work was mostly with children, supervising and teaching religious education and music.

She leaves her husband; four sons: Charles R., Auburn, California; Harland E. and William E. of the home; and Myron C., Kansas City, Missouri; a daughter, Lilla Beryl of Independence; three brothers: Richard Bullard, Jr., Dunnegan, Missouri; Harold Bullard of Independence; and Walter Bullard of Iceland; seven grandchildren; and other relatives.

HELM.—William Albert, was born in Adams County, Illinois, on March 20, 1862, and died June 21, 1948, at Independence, Missouri. He was married to Lula Ogle in 1891; three children were born to them. One daughter, Minita, died in infancy, and Mrs. Helm passed away in 1911. He was baptized into the Reorganized Church on May 3, 1914, and ordained to the office of deacon on March 3, 1915. On July 14, 1929, he married Mrs. Emma Baldwin.

He is survived by his wife; a son, Orville G. Helm, pastor of the Bennington Heights congregation in Kansas City, Missouri, and a daughter, Mrs. Myrtle Winn, also of Kansas City; three grandchildren; and five great-grandchildren. Services were conducted by Elders Amos T. Higdon and Gerald Winholtz at the Stahl Funeral Home in Independence. Interment was in the Sharron Cemetery at Drexel, Missouri.

WILD.—Michael G., son of John and Sophie Wild, was born February 12, 1877, at Leinfelden, Wurtemberg, Germany, and died February 6, 1948, at his home in Ann Arbor, Michigan. He came to America when he was seventeen years old. On October 17, 1905, he was married to Rose Worner, who died in 1919. On July 15, 1938, he married Mrs. Ola Hay Croisdale of Austin, Texas. He was baptized into the Reorganized Church on August 13, 1934, and remained a faithful worker until his death.

He is survived by his wife, Ola; two daughters: Miss Gertrude Wild and Mrs. Leona Madison of Detroit, Michigan; three sisters: Mrs. Federicka Hartman and Mrs. Gottlieb Brigel of Ann Arbor, and Mrs. Caroline Maier of Northfield Township; a brother, William Wild of Ann Arbor; and one grand-daughter. Services were held at the Muchlig Chapel, Elder Lawrence Brockway officiating. Interment was in Forrest Hill Cemetery.

HOPKINS.—Rcelia Ann, daughter of Margaret and Thompson SeEVERS, was born in a log cabin near Forty Highway and East Fork River on December 14, 1862, and died at a convalescent home in Independence, Missouri, on June 14, 1948. She was married to James Allen Hopkins on May 23, 1877; ten children were born to them, five of whom preceded her in death. She was baptized into the Reorganized Church in 1912 and was an active member until her illness. She operated a rug loom at the campus shop as long as she was able to see; after that, she wound shuttles and taught others how to operate the loom. She was active in the women's group work, and when she became ill, she had the women hold meetings at her home. Mr. Hopkins died on November 25, 1924.

Surviving are two sons: James T. and Elmer E. Hopkins; and three daughters: Rcelia Ann Bailey, Margaret Pryer; and Delphia York, all of Independence. She also leaves thirteen grandchildren and twenty-two great grandchildren. Funeral services were held at the Speaks Chapel in Independence, Elders Chas. Edmunds and Kenneth Henry officiating.

SAWLEY.—Francis L., son of Aaron and Sabrina Sawley, was born November 8, 1863, at Geneseo, Wisconsin, and died at the Saints' Home in Lamon, Iowa, on March 29, 1948. He was baptized April 25, 1883, at North Freedom, Wisconsin. In 1892, he was ordained an elder, and in 1912, a seventy. He served in this capacity until ill health forced him to give up missionary work in the spring of 1919. All of his life he suffered from hip joint disease, but he bore his affliction patiently and cheerfully. When he could no longer walk, he employed himself with handwork, making many beautiful crocheted and tatted articles. He had been a resident of the Home since 1924.

He leaves his wife; four children; and a brother. Funeral services were conducted by Charles E. Harpe, his personal friend and missionary associate. Burial was in Rosehill Cemetery in Lamon.

MOSS.—Samuel, son of Edward and Harriet Thrutchley Moss, was born August 12, 1876, at Macon, Missouri, and died June 4, 1948, at his home in Macon following two weeks of illness. He was married to Mabel Lee Judy on February 19, 1896. Mrs. Moss and a daughter, Annie, preceded him in death in the early 1900's. He had been an employee of the Macon street department since 1934 and was recognized by those who knew him as a faithful public servant. He was baptized a member of the Reorganized Church in his boyhood.

Surviving are two daughters: Mrs. J. L. Tibbs of Macon and Mrs. Charles Leubbers of Los Angeles, California; a sister, Mrs. Ben Humphrey of the home; three brothers: Edward of Macon; William of Akron, Ohio; and James of Los Angeles; and one grandchild. Services were held at the Albert Skinner Funeral Home, Elder F. T. Mussell of Des Moines, Iowa, officiating.

AWALT.—Frances Ellen Brown, was born at Apple River, Illinois, on May 10, 1868, and died June 9, 1948, at San Luis Obispo, California. She was married to William Henry Awalt at Marysville, Missouri, on June 19, 1884. In 1888, they moved to California, where they engaged in ranching. Later they left the ranch and made their home in San Luis Obispo. Eight children were born to them, one of whom died in infancy. Mrs. Awalt joined the Reorganized Church in 1901 and, although isolated, remained ever faithful to her covenant. Mr. Awalt passed away on August 31, 1941. Two daughters, Mrs. Mary Cheda and Mrs. Minnie Branch, also preceded her in death.

Surviving are two sons: Thomas H. and Albert, both of San Luis Obispo; three daughters: Mrs. Nellie Sandercoc, Los Angeles, California; Mrs. Elsa Shipman, Berkeley, California; and Mrs. Edythe McDaniel of San Luis Obispo; and a sister, Mrs. Hettie Sturgill of Santa Barbara, California. Services were conducted at the Godeaux Funeral Home by John W. Rushton. Interment was in the Arroyo Grande Cemetery.

MANCHESTER.—Lydia M., daughter of Robert and Marinda Mincar Ballantyne, was born January 29, 1861, at Bandera, Texas, and died February 28, 1948, at Santa Cruz, California. She was baptized into the Reorganized Church in 1872 and remained a faithful member throughout her life. On March 7, 1880, she was married to Frank J. Manchester; six children were born to them. Her husband and two daughters preceded her in death.

Surviving are two daughters: Mrs. Edith L. Clement, Morgan Hill, California, and Mrs. Myrtle McGraw, Inman, Nebraska; two sons: Clarence F., Santa Cruz, California, and Floyd E., Palo Alto, California; two brothers: John W. Ballantyne, Lexington, Oklahoma, and David Ballantyne, Charter Oak, Iowa; one sister Rachel Ballantyne, Charter Oak; ten grandchildren; eight great-grandchildren; and one great-great-grandchild. Services were held at Gilroy, California, Elder Charles J. Cady officiating. Interment was in Gilroy cemetery.

HARMON.—Herschel, son of Levi M. and Lavina E. Harmon, was born in Wayne County, Illinois, on January 5, 1893, and died at his home in Independence, Missouri, on April 7, 1948. He served his country with the armed forces overseas during World War I. Upon returning to the States, he was married to Oda E. Ayres on December 25, 1921; two children were born to this union. He was baptized into the Reorganized Church in October, 1930, and later served in the priesthood. In 1933, he moved to Salem, Illinois, where he became a well-known and respected business man, a member of the V. F. W. and American Legion. For the past two years, he had devoted his time to community and church affairs in Independence.

He is survived by his wife; a daughter, Fern of Independence; a son, Merle Reid of Denver, Colorado; two brothers: Merle J. of Armington, Illinois, and Virgil of Salem, Illinois; and two sisters: Mrs. Dolly Lloyd of Wood River, Illinois, and Mrs. Katie Woods of Washington.

Reunion Schedule-1948

New York & Philadelphia	July 3-July 11	Deer Park
Southwest Kansas	July 2-July 11	Arkansas City, Kansas
Gulf States	July 9-July 18	Brewton, Ala.
W. Colorado	July 10-July 11	Delta, Colorado
Manitoba Central	July 10-July 11	Winnipeg, Man.
Missouri	July 10-July 18	Odessa, Missouri
Saskatchewan	July 10-July 18	Beaver Creek Saskatchewan
Alberta	July 19-July 26	Sylvan Lake, Alberta
Zion	July 17-July 25	Gardner Lake
Nauvoo So. New England	July 17-July 25	Nauvoo, Illinois
Northern California	July 17-July 25	Onset, Mass.
Flint-Pt. Huron-Detroit-Windsor	July 24-Aug. 1	Asilomar, Monterey, California
Kentucky & Tennessee	July 25-Aug. 1	Blue Water, Michigan
Silver Lake	July 30-Aug. 8	Paris, Tennessee
Chatham-London	July 30-Aug. 8	Everett, Washington
Cen. & So. Michigan	July 31-Aug. 8	Erie Beach, Ontario, Canada
Mo. Valley	July 31-Aug. 8	Liahona Park
Maine	July 31-Aug. 8	Woodbine, Iowa
So. California	July 31-Aug. 8	Brooksville, Me.
Northern Michigan	Aug. 6-Aug. 15	Pacific Palisades
Kirtland	Aug. 6-Aug. 15	Park of the Pines
Reunion of the Ozarks	Aug. 1-Aug. 8	Kirtland, Ohio
Oklahoma	Aug. 7-Aug. 15	Racine, Missouri
W. Montana	Aug. 7-Aug. 15	Pawnee, Okla.
Arizona	Aug. 8-Aug. 15	Race Track, Montana
Arkansas & Louisiana	Aug. 9-Aug. 15	Tucson, Arizona
Minnesota & Wisconsin	Aug. 9-Aug. 15	Clear Fork Cp., Ark.
Far West	Aug. 12-Aug. 22	Hot Spgs., Ark.
So. Indiana	Aug. 21-Aug. 29	Chetek, Wisc.
Eastern Michigan	Aug. 14-Aug. 22	Stewartsville, Missouri
Idaho	Aug. 14-Aug. 21	Bedford, Ind.
Des Moines	Aug. 15-Aug. 21	Cash, Michigan
Lamoni	Aug. 15-Aug. 22	Hagerman, Idaho
S. E. Illinois	Aug. 20-Aug. 29	Guthrie Center, Iowa
Eastern Colorado	Aug. 20-Aug. 29	Lamoni, Iowa
		S. E. Illinois
		Brush Creek, Ill.
		Colorado Springs
		Colorado

HOW TO PROMOTE

Publicity for Churches

KEEPING YOUR CHURCH IN THE NEWS by W. Austin Brodie

Ministers and church officers, whether in large metropolitan centers or in small towns and villages will find this practical handbook just what they have long needed. The book is distinctive in its completeness of text and wide range of subjects. $1.25

SUCCESSFUL LETTERS FOR CHURCHES

by Stewart Harral

This book tells you how you can write letters that will create loyalty, promote stewardship, build up attendance, and win converts to your church. Easy, readable, useful, this manual brings together letter-writing helps never before available to church leaders. $2

PUBLIC RELATIONS FOR CHURCHES

by Stewart Harral

Here is an exhaustive treatment of the various promotion and publicity channels available to a church, written in swift-moving style. $1.25

RELIGIOUS RADIO: WHAT TO DO AND HOW by Everett C. Parker, Elinor Inman, and Ross Snyder

This is the first complete preview of modern radio in the service of the church to be published. The authors delve into all the important problems of religious broadcasting and present detailed helps invaluable to anyone active or interested in this work. $3

A CROWDED CHURCH THROUGH MODERN METHODS by Eugene Dinsmore Dolloff

This book tells the earnest and ambitious minister how he can draw people into his congregation and hold them, how he can keep his church in the forefront of community life, and how to retain the interest of youth. $1.75

Order from your Book Steward or from

HERALD PUBLISHING HOUSE

Independence, Missouri

Photo by Adelbert Bartlett

The Garden of Gethsemane

THE Saints Herald

VOLUME 95

JULY 17, 1948

NUMBER 29

www.LatterDayTruth.org

The Garden of Gethsemane

AUDITORIUM NEWS

The Garden of Gethsemane is on the east side of the Valley of the Kidron, east of the city of Jerusalem, near the modern St. Stephen's Gate. In the cover picture, the Mount of Olives rises above it.

It was here, according to tradition, that Jesus retired for prayer. He asked the disciples to remain behind as he took Peter and the sons of Zebedee with him. It was a time of sorrow. The disciples were tired and slept during his anguish of spirit. And when he had finished praying, it was here that he waited while Judas led the multitude bearing weapons to take him captive.

In this climate, the soil is often dry for long periods of time and it is a struggle for any vegetation to remain alive. The monk brings water to the thirsty plants. The olive trees are gnarled and very old, but still bear the precious olives which are so important as food, and as a source of the oil so valued in the commerce of the Near East.

The condition of the trees and the Garden is symbolic of the torment of soul through which the Savior passed. Reading the story in Matthew 26: 36-46, and looking at the picture as it is today, trying to imagine what it was then, we can appreciate the trial he endured.

Every life has some place that corresponds to the Garden of Gethsemane. If we can remember how Jesus faced it, and what he did, we can find help to go through our most severe trials.

APOSTLE PAUL M. HANSON has just returned from an extended tour of the West, including Denver, Salt Lake City, Boise, Vancouver, Seattle, Portland, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Sacramento, and many other church centers. He reports a fine visit with Brother John W. Rushton, who served the church so many years in the Quorum of Twelve. Friends who wish to write to Brother Rushton will reach him at 14858 Gilmore Street, Van Nuys, California. Brother Hanson preached at many places, and showed his beautiful and informative sets of slide pictures at others. He reports, "Everywhere, without exception, there was a very commendable interest shown by both members and nonmembers. There is an increase in the number of baptisms, and while this is not primarily important for its own sake, it is a sign of increasing strength and life in the church. The people are generally very well pleased with the progress being made."

OUR AUSTRALIAN VISITORS, Don Alberts and Hermann Peisker, have been kept busy in visiting various places during their stay. Conducted by Bishop Mark H. Siegfried, who is well informed on the history of the spots, they visited Nauvoo for the June 27 historical program, Carthage, and other places. Another trip took them to Council Bluffs and Omaha, (where they had a reunion with the John Blackmores), historical Winter Quarters, etc. They have also visited the reunion grounds at Stewartsville, Missouri, and at Gardner Lake, where they contributed to the work of the Youth Camp. These visitors are making many fine friendships in the States, and will carry much good will back to Australia with them.

APOSTLE CHARLES R. HIELD reports good work in missions in the vicinity of Los Angeles, California, where Garland E. Tickemyer is pastor. The missions are Southeast, Venice, and Huntington Park. Another is planned at Figuero. Central Los Angeles congregation has made a large subscription to assist the new mission. . . . At Camp Seeley, near San Bernardino, one hundred young people participated in a very successful youth camp. Another fine youth camp was held at D'Autremont, near Oracle, Arizona. . . . And Marion Blakely, formerly pastor at Sandwich, Illinois, is now in Arizona, doing fine work as Co-ordinator of Interbranch Activities. . . . Two men have done well in baptisms: George Njeim has finished a series at Stockton, California, and is now at San Diego; Russell Ralston has finished a series at Santa Rosa, and is now working at Lennox. . . . And at Santa Ana, California, Pastor Roy Hughes and John Inman are deeply interested in a fine group of Mexican families, including the Robles, Arballo, Cervantes, and others. Apostle Hield recently visited them and talked to them in Spanish.

SAMUEL WORRELL, bishop's agent of the New York-Philadelphia District, and a counselor to Carl Muir, pastor at Philadelphia, was recently a visitor to the Auditorium and the guest of Bishop Henry Livingston. Brother Worrell, in secular life, is superintendent of the plant of John Zimmermann Sons, so well known to church people. Sister Worrell and their daughter, Katherine Louise, are also visiting.

IN THIS ISSUE

EDITORIAL:

Sins Against Children	3
Across the Desk	4

OFFICIAL:

Official Notice	4
Phoenix Co-ordinator	4
Accommodations at General Conference	4

ARTICLES:

With God, Together We Build the Kingdom, Apostle E. J. Gleazer	5
Four Things, by Robert J. Miller	7
Objectives of Organ Music in the Church, by Bethel Davis Knoche	8
The "Laying on of Hands" in Court, by Lloyd Harding	10
Youth Camp Michivoix at Park of Pines	11
The Use of the Book of Mormon in Missionary Work—Part I, by Seventy Harold I. Velt	12
Ephraim, by Audrey Reid	14
Zionic Materials, by Ruby Tinkham	15
Workday Song, by Alice Bolon	16
Letters	18
Music—A Medium of Religion, by Doreen Trudell	20
Blueprint for a Zionic Home, by Hazel Haynes Anderson	21
Trouble Shooter, answer by Patriarch A. C. Martin	21
Bulletin Board	22

Sins Against Children

“And Reuben answered them, saying, Spake I not unto you, saying, Do not sin against the child; and ye would not hear?”
—Genesis 42:22.

ON THE FIRST SUNDAY of the month at the eleven o'clock service in Stone Church, there was a large group of fine children present, sitting together in the front rows, all of them recently baptized and confirmed and ready to receive the Communion of the Lord's Supper for the first time. Unaccustomed little hands reached for the Bread, and were a little awkward in handling the tiny glasses used for the Wine, but the assistant pastors serving reassured them with smiles, and they smiled happily in return.

It is always a happy experience to deal with children under circumstances like this, and one is led to reflect on the great investment of loving care and labor, as well as expense, that is put into the children by the parents, by society, by the church, and special groups. Who can estimate what it costs to raise a fine child? And, more important, who can estimate what that child is worth?

And then one thinks of the sins we commit against the children. The words of Reuben come back to us, “Do not sin against the child.” How are we sinning against the children today?

CELEBRATION OF the Fourth of July was rather quiet in our city this year. There wasn't very much shooting of fireworks in the weeks before it, and little afterward. On the first there was a heavy rain, and there is nothing like a good rain to keep fireworks under control. Sale of fireworks is kept under wise restriction in the city, and the tawdry little stands on the highways outside, purveying pain and destruction to innocent children, were properly wet down. One feels like praying for rain around the Fourth just to protect the children.

How many sins are committed against children by the venal purveyors of fireworks, matching their pennies of pitiful gain against a child's burnt fingers, tetanus, a lost eye, or scars the little ones will bear for life. And what sins the parents commit in letting the children buy fireworks.

A TRAGIC CASE was recounted in the newspaper a few days ago. Some children, acting out a scene they had observed in a movie, killed a small companion. If there is such a thing as eternal justice, and we believe there is, will those children be held responsible for the death of that little one? Or will those who made such a movie be held responsible? Or the theater that showed the film to the children? Or the parents who let them go?

Such movies are a sin against childhood. Society needs to organize and to be aroused against the sort of thing that makes gangsters and torturers out of the children by means of a very strong program of visual education.

Perhaps, by keeping quiet, by permitting such things in your city, you are responsible for the death or maiming of some child.

“Do not sin against the child.”

YOU MAY be listening to a very fine radio program for a few minutes. The commercials are often false or misleading, but are fairly harmless because few people pay any attention to them. Or do they? Authorities on such matters can answer the question.

But generally, in fifteen minutes or a half hour, you will be aroused and provoked by what the radio is blaring out at you. “What am I listening to?” you exclaim, and jump to turn it off.

I was visiting in a pleasant home one evening. Mother was doing the dishes, and did not hear the program. Father was reading the paper, and if he heard the radio, gave no indication. Junior was on the floor, propped on his elbows, listening with all the ear capacity that creation gave him. The program concerned a group of men who were torturing another man with knives and fire to get him to reveal some information they wanted. The little boy would be remarkable if he did not think of this drama in relation to his play life. That program, and many others like it, are sins against childhood.

WHAT CAN THE CHURCH DO? It can help to educate parents to some consciousness of their responsibility in the selection of programs. One fine cultured family considered the radio so great a hazard for the children that the radio was banned; there was simply no workable instrument in the house during the impressionable years; a record player, good magazines, a play yard, and athletic equipment seemed to be all that the children wanted. Those children have since made a superior record of achievement in the world.

The church can exert the strength of its influence and lead people in protesting against bad programs. It has no force, but it can plead and persuade in the cause of childhood.

Let us remember the words that Reuben spoke in behalf of young Joseph, whom the other brothers would have killed, but who was sold in the desert to the Ishmaelites, “Do not sin against the child.”

All material wealth perishes: None but spiritual treasures go with us when we die. The only real good we can leave behind us is in the lives of good children. L. J. L.

Editorial

OFFICIAL

Communications intended for the First Presidency should be addressed to the "First Presidency, Auditorium, Independence, Missouri." Our practice is to sign official letters "First Presidency" by the member giving attention to the matter presented. Of course, letters can be addressed to a certain member of this quorum if the sender desires the personal attention of that member only. We desire to be prompt in answering inquiries, but letters sent to a member of the quorum may not receive attention promptly in event that member is away from Independence.

This same rule should apply likewise to the Presiding Bishopric.

THE FIRST PRESIDENCY,
ISRAEL A. SMITH.

The Standard, April issue, contains this query:

This statement makes us wonder at a recent press report of a judicial finding in America when some Utah Mormons were on trial for polygamy, that, since the Mormon religion favored polygamy, and since the Constitution allowed freedom of worship, then Mormons could practice polygamy.

The press report was wrong. The Supreme Court and all courts which have considered polygamy, while holding for freedom of worship, have declared freedom of worship does not mean "freedom of practice," that is, license to violate statutory enactments.

ISRAEL A. SMITH.

Quake in Hawaii

We have received a letter from Elder Howard F. Miller, who is in charge of the work in Hawaii, advising us as to the recent earthquake. He writes:

Perhaps you have heard the news of the recent earthquake which affected Oahu. I hope they did not exaggerate it on the mainland as much as they did the tidal wave of April, 1946. However, we did know that we had an earthquake, and it shook us from our beds early in the morning.

There has been some damage to several of the large buildings in town, but none of our structures have suffered damage that we can see now with the exception of a few cracks in the plaster in the Makiki church; there was no damage to the foundation or walls. Our mission house, which is now two-stories high, rocked a little, but we were very happy that the quake did not come two months earlier when the mission house was on jacks. We can find no damage whatsoever to the foundation, which makes us quite happy that we put the extra reinforcement in it.

We have had no reports of damage or injury to our people, so rest assured that all is well.

ISRAEL A. SMITH.

Arizona Co-ordinator

By interaction with the First Presidency, we have appointed Elder Marion M. Blakely, of Phoenix, Arizona, to serve as co-ordinator of all interbranch activities in the State of Arizona.

Signed

CHARLES R. HIELD,

W. WALLACE SMITH,
Missionaries in Charge

Accommodations at General Conference, October 3 to 10 Inclusive

The Housing Committee requests that all visitors to Independence during the General Conference who can make private arrangements for rooms do so as early as possible. This will assist the Housing Committee and will avoid much correspondence. Those who desire the Housing Committee to make arrangements for rooms should mail their letters to the Housing Committee, The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri.

The following details are required:

1. Number in party
2. Rooms required
3. Day of arrival
4. Length of stay in Independence
5. If alone, whether willing to share a room
6. Whether a delegate to the Conference.

As a word of caution, may we suggest that persons arriving for Conference without reservations for sleeping accommodations will find it difficult to secure rooms in or near Independence.

Assignment of any rooms by the Housing Committee will not be possible before Sept. 1, 1948.

GENERAL CONFERENCE
HOUSING COMMITTEE

Across the Desk

The Martyrs

Memorial services in honor of the founder, Joseph Smith, and his brother Hyrum, were held on Sunday, June 27, 1948, the anniversary of their assassination, at Nauvoo, where the remains of these two men have reposed now for a hundred four years. The services were arranged by District President Harold D. Smith.

Music for the occasion was provided by Shirley Howard and Donna Weddle. Elder Herman Peisker of Australia offered the invocation and Apostle Roscoe E. Davey gave the Memorial address.

At the graves, Elder Mark H. Siegfried was presented for remarks and a prayer of dedication; the benediction was offered by Elder Don Alberts of Australia. Wreaths were placed on the graves by Sister Roscoe E. Davey (for the prophet), Sister Betty Ettinger (for the patriarch), and Miss Dona Davey (for Emma, the elect lady).

ISRAEL A. SMITH

THE SAINTS' HERALD

July 17, 1948

Number 29

Volume 95

Editors: The First Presidency: Israel A. Smith, John F. Garver, F. Henry Edwards.

ASSISTANTS: Leonard J. Lea, Managing Editor; Kenneth L. Graham, Business Manager.

The Saints' Herald is the official publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, with headquarters at The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri, and is issued through the offices of Herald Publishing House, 103 South Osage Street, Independence, Missouri.

Entered as second-class matter at the post office at Independence, Missouri, under Act of March 3, 1879. Issued weekly at Independence, Missouri. Price, $3.50 per year and $1.75 for six months in advance in the U. S. A., its territories and possessions; Canada, $3.75 per year and $1.90 for six months; other countries, $4.50 per year. Notice of a change of address must be given three weeks ahead of the date that it is to become effective. Accepted for mailing at the special rate of postage provided for in section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized July 21, 1921. Printed in the United States of America.

With God, Together We Build the Kingdom

By Apostle E. J. Gleazer

A transcript of a sermon given at the Northern Michigan District Women's Institute held May 30, 1948; at Gaylord, Michigan. Reported by Bessie M. Brown.

And I, brethren, could not speak unto you as unto spiritual, but as unto carnal, even as unto babes in Christ. I have fed you with milk, and not with meat; for hitherto ye were not able to receive it, neither yet now are ye able. For ye are yet carnal; for whereas there is among you envying, and strife, and divisions, are ye not carnal, and walk as men? For while one saith, I am of Paul; and another, I am of Apollos; are ye not carnal? Who then is Paul, and who is Apollos, but ministers by whom ye believed, even as the Lord gave to every man? I have planted, Apollos watered; but God gave the increase. So then neither is he that planteth anything, neither he that watereth; but God that giveth the increase. Now he that planteth and he that watereth are one; and every man shall receive his own reward according to his own labor. For we are laborers together with God; ye are God's husbandry, ye are God's building.—1 Corinthians 3: 1-9.

WITH GOD, together we build the kingdom. I have changed the wording around just a little for the purpose of emphasis. I could say, With God, together we harvest, but if I did that, I would be limiting the topic to this service alone. With God, together we build the kingdom—we cannot build it in any other way.

The Apostle Paul discovered, even in his time, that men who professed to be disciples did not understand that unity of effort was necessary in the work of God. I don't know why this should be, because all through his ministry, Jesus emphasized over and over again that his followers must be one. He attempted to co-ordinate their activities for a common purpose, but in New Testament times, men had not yet learned that only as they labored together could they succeed.

This is illustrated even in our modern industrial world. There was a time, when all manufacture was in the "handcraft stage," when individuals were rather independent. They were capable of making most of their own clothing. Some of them were capable of building their homes, and making many other things they needed. They were capable of providing largely for themselves, or at least it was provided within their family or tribe. That is not the case today, and modern industry shows us that men cannot live in this life, save they labor together.

Can you imagine an automobile being produced by one man today? Certainly not! Even the common shoe (and I don't know why we should call it common because, like other things, it costs plenty) is a product of many sets of hands. The manufacturing of shoes is a joint enterprise. I doubt that you can think of anything that is a product of one man. True, a farmer may plant his seed, but the chances are he did not raise the seed himself. Even if he did, the machinery that he utilizes in planting it was produced elsewhere and by other hands. Every human endeavor today seems to depend upon the labor of other people in order to make it possible. It would be interesting for us just to look at our own apparel and attempt to discover the number of hands and various persons who were engaged in producing the very clothing that we wear.

We have talked in our church from time to time about unity of effort, but I think we have taken the wrong way to produce this unity. We cannot succeed in having unity of effort when we start with man. We must start with God, for he is the unifying force in the whole universe. All things exist because of him, and that is why I have deliberately arranged these words to begin with the statement, "With God."

MOST OF YOU, if you were asked why you united with this church—why you made a covenant with God in the waters of baptism—would answer, "Because I was convinced that this is the work of God." If you identified yourself with this church for any other reason, you made a mistake, and I hope by this time you have learned that this is God's work. This is a divine movement. Certainly, humanity is represented in it, but this church was established by God. I could bring to you many statements regarding this, but one will suffice. In latter-day revelation, God states clearly: "This church have I established and called forth out of the wilderness."¹

THIS IS THE church of God. This institution was conceived and brought forth by the personal ministry of God the Father and God the Son, who appeared to young Joseph Smith. God continued to manifest himself to the individuals who were responsible for the organization of the work on this earth by even sharing with them the ministry of angels. And the Lord continues, even to this day, to manifest himself to this church. This is a divine movement. Were it not so (I don't say we are divine, I am talking about God's church) there would be no hope of bringing to pass unity of operation.

I shall always remember something I learned from a member. Frequently when we give, it is not unusual that we also receive. A member of one of our large congregations was speaking to me about a leader who left the church and departed from the faith, taking a large portion, though not the majority, of the membership there with him. This brother was one who did not follow, yet he was one of the closest friends of the departing leader. He was a little late getting to church that evening, and the dissenting faction had already arisen and were marching out of the church, just as our brother and his wife came in.

Meeting our brother, the departing leader said, "Well, Jack, we have done it, we have walked out."

Our brother hesitated. The other man said, "Well, aren't you coming along?" Our brother replied, "No. Your coming into this church did not make it divine. Your leaving the church will not make it less divine."

I wonder how many of our people would still be actively engaged in this work today if only they had realized the truthfulness of that statement? I know individuals who have become inactive due to the fact that someone behaved in a manner which displeased or discouraged them. They seemed to think that divinity had left the institution because of the behavior of men. We are not responsible for the divinity that is in this church. We have no power within us to make it divine; neither can we take any of the divinity away from it by leaving it.

If each of us were aware, constantly aware, that this is the church of the living God, I seriously question that there would ever be a day in our experience that we would not be actively engaged in attempting to bring to pass the work of our Master. And to the extent we are convinced that this is the work of God, we are conscious of the fact that every other individual who shares this conviction with us is one of us, and, in that respect, we have unity of operation. In this sense, we are disciples indeed, for we follow the same Lord.

HOW COULD we follow the same Lord and not be a unit? To the extent that we are engaged in the same work, we become one. The nature of the enterprise creates unity. That is why you hear people testify how glad they are for the association that has come to them through gospel experiences. A common task unifies us. It is folly to talk about unity until you succeed in having men and women engage in a common experience as they work at a common task. I don't mean a cheap task—I mean common in the sense that we share it together.

I like Paul's statement: "I have planted, Apollos watered; but God gave the increase." Just as we pointed out that there is no one person who is responsible for the manufacture of a modern automobile, so it is true in the perfecting or saving of a soul. Many individuals make a contribution to that work.

Occasionally we attempt to discover how many people are being baptized by the men under Conference appointment, but we are fully aware of the fact that one's work cannot be truly evaluated by the number of persons he baptizes. It has been many years since I have gone down into the waters of baptism with a candidate. I have been approached several times to baptize someone, and usually I have not been responsible for converting the person who asks me to do it. I think, in some cases, it is a question of office. But while I have not officiated in the waters of baptism recently, I know positively that I have assisted to bring men and women into this church, in more ways than one. I have deliberately contacted individuals who are not of our faith and succeeded in interesting them in this work. I don't say this boastfully. I say it by way of illustration. I have stimulated other men and women to go out and make friends, so that their friends can become aware of what God is doing in these latter days and eventually ask for baptism in this church. To the extent that any of us succeed in attracting men or women to this movement, to the extent that any of us succeed in encouraging other folk to bring their friends and relatives into the presence of God, to the extent that we share testimony, to the extent that we stimulate individuals to ask for baptism, we have assisted in the conversion of these people, although someone else officiates at the baptismal service.

Many times it is wisdom for the missionary to permit a branch president or some member of the local priesthood to officiate in the waters of baptism, because the missionary moves on and is not permitted to remain there to follow through the interest that he has aroused. It seems natural that most of us have a very strong affection for the individual who baptizes us, just as we have for the individual who officiates at our wedding ceremony or blesses us as children. I have known individuals who have testified in later years, "Brother So-and-So took me in his arms and blessed me at the altar of God when I was a baby," and they have an affection for that minister.

Now that type of affection should remain where the individual is best qualified to minister. A good missionary does not convert men and women to himself; he converts them to Christ. They must have some respect for the servant; otherwise, they would not accept the truth. But even though they have this respect, a good missionary will transfer it to the pastor of the branch where the convert is to be enrolled, so that the pastor can continue to minister, not only of himself but also in utilizing the priesthood of his branch to bring to this new member all the ministry he requires. There again you have joint ministry, for no pastor can minister alone. He ministers together with his priesthood and with his departments.

EVERY DEPARTMENT of our church has its missionary responsibility or—shall I say—its missionary opportunity. Many people are first attracted to this church through the church school, through the women's department, through the young people's organization; or, believe it or not, through the choir. I have known of individuals who had a love for music and were asked to participate in that part of the service. They did not come to hear the preacher. They were not interested in the preached word, but they were interested in music. They came to participate in music; they heard the word of God and became impressed. Maybe they were not impressed with the first sermon—it may have taken several—but the choir was instrumental in bringing them in touch with this work. In this respect, even the departments labor together. But unless these departments are conscious of the fact that they, too, are a part of the divine movement, they are not going to assist in the work of the church.

IT IS NOT difficult for any of us to sense something of the importance of laboring together with God. The very fact that the angels would consider it an honor to have the opportunity that you and I have today should be sufficient to impress us with the privileges that are ours.² "Be not weary in well-doing, for ye are laying the foundation of a great work."³ I wish we could remember that, every day we live, we are engaged in a great work. "And out of small things proceedeth that which is great."⁴ We have been admonished to consider our calling. If we would take these statements seriously and literally, I doubt that we would have an inactive member in any branch in this church. I can promise you that inasmuch as we would be engaged in activity, we would have a unity we have never experienced in this movement, because engagement in a common task would bring to pass our unity.

I am happy to tell you there is a greater spirit of unity in this church than I have ever known, and men who are older than I am in service testify that they have never experienced such unity throughout the church. I think one reason for it is that more of us are working at the task assigned than we have in previous years.

I ASKED THIS question some time ago of a pastor, "Are your people active?"

He surprised me. He said, "Yes, we have an active branch here, Brother Gleazer."

"Well," I said, "I am puzzled. I have heard some things."

"Oh, now wait a minute," he said. "You didn't give me time to explain. Our people are active. We have a few that are active for Christ, and the rest are active in opposition to Christ."

They were active, all right, but they were not active to bring to pass the purposes of the Master.

In some of our business meetings in the past (I hope they are past) we have observed activity such as no pastor would witness during the regular services. We see folk who are active in business meeting that we never see at any other time. This is not the kind of activity I am interested in, and this type of activity does not bring unity, but divisions and difficulties.

I am very grateful that the testimony of the ministry throughout the church is to the effect that greater unity is being manifest among our people. I am confident that this is because we are concentrating on common goals and working together to bring them to pass; and we are realizing that the service of each and everyone of us is essential if we would be successful. We are today as a team. We are sensing that, in reality, we are laborers together with God. I believe as we continue to labor in this respect that we will witness increasing portions of the Spirit of God, until the time comes when the great endowment that we have heard so much about will be in our midst. For as we become one in Christ, we become one with each other; and where we have this unity, the Spirit of the Master will be manifest in a degree that we have longed and prayed for.

With God, together we build the kingdom.

1. Doctrine and Covenants 32: 2.
2. I Peter 1: 12.
3. Doctrine and Covenants 64: 6.
4. Ibid.

Four Things

By Robert J. Miller

Four things a man must learn to do
If he would make his record true:
To think without confusion clearly;
To love his fellow-men sincerely;
To act from honest motives purely;
To trust in God and Heaven securely.
—Henry Van Dyke.

Van Dyke's summation of the vital things in life may not be all-inclusive, but surely he gives us much to think upon which is worth-while. And if we were to follow the procedure which he so beautifully outlines, we would not fail to reach "the mark of our high calling in Christ Jesus."

"To think without confusion clearly"—calmly and honestly trusting God to give us light and direction, undecieved by false ideologies, theories and concepts of life, properly evaluating all things we meet concerning life—to do this, we must be fair in our thinking, honest of heart and mind, and very sincere. We must be true to God, and to ourselves.

In such honest and fearless meditation, we soon learn to appreciate life's fuller meanings and why Christ has taught us to "love our neighbor as ourselves." For surely the inter-relations of men and women in society make this a must if we would derive our greatest blessings from life.

Bethel Davis Knoche

Objectives of Organ Music in the Church

By Bethel Davis Knoche

INTRODUCTION

We have a great many requests for suggestions regarding material and the technique of service playing for the organ. Some time ago we asked Mrs. Knoche to prepare the article which follows for publication to help to fill this demand. She has been teaching organ at Graceland College and is studying with Harold Gleason at the Eastman School of Music. We would also refer you to an article which appeared in the "Herald" May 3, 1947, by Roy Benson of the music faculty of Graceland. It is hoped by the General Church Music Department that these suggestions will be helpful and point the way for an improved musical ministry in the church.

Franklyn S. Weddle, Director of Music

THE FOREMOST objective of organ music in the church is perfection. Above all places, the church is entitled to and should receive the works of the masters performed with the skill and magnificence befitting them. Except on rare occasions, this is not the case; but it should be the concern of every church organist to better this condition. Since music is a vital part of the service, the needs of the congregation should be considered, because many people receive as much inspiration through music as the spoken word.

As stated above, the ultimate goal of the church organist should be perfection, and such perfection may be obtained by the following suggestions.

Because music initiates and coordinates the entire service, the pastor, musical director, and organist should work together in outlining the service for the highest type of worship.

The prelude sets the theme, and its success or failure depends on the choice of material. Its importance lies in the fact that it directs one's mind toward the lesson of the hour. It should be suggestive of a theme or themes to be found in the hymns, anthems, and/or scripture and sermon.

The responsibility for good congregational singing rests with the organist. In order to have perfection in the hymn singing, the organist must play with exact rhythm and clarity. The following principles should be practiced consistently.

All repeated notes are to be played exactly, and other notes legato. If the same chord is repeated several times, the inner notes may be held and the outer notes repeated; but do not tie from an unaccented beat to an accented beat. All parts should be phrased at the end of each line unless the words are carried over into the following line. When phrasing within the line, the soprano part is the only one to be broken; the others should be kept legato. The phrases between the verses should be rhythmic, and the length of the rest should be exactly the same for each stanza. The common note between the last chord and the "amen" should be tied, and all other parts broken by a rest of the same length as that used between the stanzas.

EACH HYMN has an individual characteristic style, consequently, the performance and registration should vary with the interpretation. For instance, brilliant and martial hymns would be played with a non-legato or marcato touch and a bright registration of reeds and mixtures.

Hymns for meditation offer endless varieties for effective registrations, such as playing the melody on a solo stop either in the tenor or soprano register, with a soft accompaniment on another manual with the pedal. Repeated notes should be tied in the accompaniment to produce a well-sustained legato in contrast to the melody.

Pedal parts are to be played as written except on small organs where they can be played an octave lower. In returning to the original register, it should be done at a consonant interval—a fourth, fifth, or octave.

There are three ways to announce a hymn: manuals without pedal, manuals with pedal, and with the soprano part as a solo, the alto and tenor on another manual, and the bass part on the pedal. The volume of tone should be not less than a mezzo-forte, and it should be increased on the last two lines of the hymn. By all means, in introducing the hymn, set the correct tempo and maintain it throughout the entire hymn.

The offertory should be a short and melodious piece with either a solo stop with accompaniment or a soft registration. A wealth of material of this type may be found in such works as The Little Organ Book (orgelbuchlein) by J. S. Bach, and Choral Improvisations by Karg-

Elert, and Hymn Preludes by Seth Bingham to name only a few.

It is well to remember that a postlude does not have to be loud or of marchlike quality. There are many fine works which are not too difficult that would be more effective and appropriate, depending upon the tone of the service.

AT ALL TIMES an organist must have a repertoire suitable for any occasion, and the repertoire should be selected according to one's ability, for it is better to play a simple number well than a more difficult one beyond the ability of the organ or organist. Following is a list of suggested material that ranges from simple to medium difficulty:

New Year:

1. "The Old Year Now Hath Passed Away"J. S. Bach
2. "In Thee Is Gladness"J. S. Bach

Easter:

1. "As Jesus Stood Beside the Cross"Scheidt
2. "In Death's Strong Grasp the Saviour Lay"J. S. Bach
3. "Christ Is Arisen"J. S. Bach
4. "An Easter Prelude"Egerton
5. "Resurrection Morn"Johnston
6. "Easter Morn on Mt. Rubidoux"Gaul

Thanksgiving:

1. "Thanks Be to Thee" (arranged Lefebvre)Handel
2. "Now Thank We All Our God"Karg-Elert

Christmas:

1. "O Hail This Brightest Day of Days"J. S. Bach
2. "A Babe Is Born in Bethlehem"J. S. Bach
3. "Lo, How a Rose"Brahms
4. "Pastorale Symphony" (Messiah)Handel
5. "In Dulce Jubilo"J. S. Bach
6. "Pastorale"Franck
7. "Christmas Pastorale"Rogers

Communion:

1. "Agnus Dei"Bingham
2. "Communion"Purvis
3. "Toccata per l'Elevazione"Frescobaldi

4. "Qui Tollis"Couperin
5. "Meditations on Communion Hymns"Sowerby

Weddings:

1. "Romance san Paroles"Bonnet
2. "Messe de Mariage"Dubois
3. "Benediction Nuptiale" Saint-Saens
4. "When Thou Art Near"Bach-Schreiner

Funerals:

1. "Hark! A Voice Saith, all Are Mortal"J. S. Bach
2. "O How Futile, How Inutile"J. S. Bach
3. "Come, Blessed Rest"Bach-Fox
4. "O World, I Now Must Leave Thee"Brahms

General Use:

1. "O Thou of God the Father"J. S. Bach
2. "All Praise to Jesus' Hallowed Name"J. S. Bach
3. "O Sacred Head Once Wounded"Kuhnau
4. "Salvation Now Is Come to Earth"J. S. Bach
5. "I Call to Thee, Lord Jesus Christ"J. S. Bach
6. "Sleepers Awake, a Voice Calleth"Karg-Elert
7. "After a Trial"Karg-Elert

Collections:

1. *Liturgical Year*J. S. Bach
Published by Oliver Ditson Company
2. *Historical Organ-Recitals*Joseph Bonnet
Published by G. Schirmer, Inc.
3. *Choral-Improvisations, Op. 65, Volumes I-II-III*Karg-Elert
Published by Edward B. Marks Music Corporation
4. Twelve Chorale Preludes (Edited by Franklin Glynn)J. S. Bach
Published by G. Schirmer, Inc.
5. Methods of Organ Playing (Excellent Study Book) Harold Gleason
Published by F. S. Crofts and Company
- *6. *One Hundred Easy Organ Preludes*G. C. Albert Kaepfel
Published by Concordia Publishing House, St. Louis, Missouri
- *7. *The Concordia Organist*J. H. E. Hoelster
Published by Concordia Publishing House, St. Louis, Missouri
- *8. *Organ Voluntaries*Oscar Meier-Hansen

Published by Augsburg Publishing House

*Selections for one-manual organs only.

PERFECTION IS acquired not only by technical skill but also by devotion. Since we are the true Church of Jesus Christ here on earth, we should give him the very best we can offer. Our lives should be so attuned to God, that we may be an instrument in his hands through which he may inspire the congregation as he so desires. Whether it be a large Bach prelude or fugue or a simple hymn, played with the utmost technical ability, it is meaningless without the inspiration that may come only through God. Therefore, perfection is composed of two parts—technical skill and devotion—and neither is complete without the other.

In conclusion, I would like to quote from the Book of Mormon, II Nephi 14: 12, "But behold I say unto you, that ye must pray always, and not faint: that ye must not perform anything unto the Lord, save in the first place ye shall pray unto the Father in the name of Christ, that he will consecrate thy performance unto thee, that thy performance may be for the welfare of thy soul," and, I might add, and for the welfare of the congregation.

Nothing muddies the sheen of our days so completely as the habit of taking things for granted. Now that my eyes are open to this truth, my senses find miracles and loveliness everywhere in things I once overlooked: the sunny flavor of orange juice and the ruby redness of currant jelly on hot brown toast; a green bowl filled with vermillion petals—zinnias from a neighbor's garden, their centers minute yellow stars; in the gray dawn a robin's song, crimson clear against the brown chirp of sparrows; rain, and under its luminous gray mist, grass glowing like green flame—April rain. Every day brings with it some new sense of exquisite regard for common things. And no matter how or where old age finds me, that remembered beauty will be with me, lending color to any possible bleakness.—Eleanor B. Stock in Independent Woman.

The "Laying on of Hands" in Court

PART II

(Continued from Last Week.)

IN PURE PRACTICE, the laying on of hands in modern times is performed in like manner as it was anciently. Upon request from the one who is sick, the elders—that is those holding the holy priesthood and having authority from God to officiate—perform the sacred rite.

The ordinance is highly symbolical. The oil used is pure olive oil, which has been consecrated by prayer for holy usages. A drop or two of the oil is used in the anointing, as an emblem of the Holy Spirit. This anointing is then confirmed by prayer, and the hands of the elders are merely laid upon the head of the afflicted one.

There is no manipulation, no massage, no movement of the hands, and no attempt to transmit bodily warmth. The effort is solely by prayer, coupled with a goodly faith that the Heavenly Father hears the supplications of his ministers and blesses his suffering children in their necessities.

And all this is without money and without price, and without thought or hope of financial reward. "Freely ye have received, freely give" is put into actual practice.

This is a far cry from the magic healer or the charlatan or the humbug or the money-thirsty leech who lays claim to some mysterious gift from Divinity, and then commercializes the matter as a means to venal gain; but not having the power, resorts to manipulation and stroking and physical warmth and whatnot to supply the lack.

The statutes concerning this matter make an exception of treatment by prayer and according to the tenets of any bona fide religion. As was said in amplification by another court which defined police power:

"No attempt is made to interfere with religion or religious devotions. This does not, however, authorize one under cover of religion or a religious exercise to go into healing commercially for hire, using prayer as the curative agency or treatment. Religion cannot be used as a shield to cover a business undertaking. The defendant was engaged in a business venture, not a religious exercise. The practice of medicine, defined by our statute, means the practice of the healing art commercially, regardless of the curative agency employed. The commercial practice of healing by prayer, followed as a money-making venture or occupation, is the practice of medicine within the plain meaning of the statute."

NO MORE DESPICABLE money-grabber can be imagined than the one who seeks to capitalize on the sufferings and afflictions of humanity through trickery and chicanery. Almost all, if not all, of us have been assailed with sickness and pain and disease. Under such conditions, we all feel helpless and alone, and in our search for relief and comfort, we are easy victims to alluring promises and chimerical assurances, at which in our healthier moments we would scoff.

This does not argue against a faith in God or in his power to heal, if need be, by a miracle, nor does it disparage the efforts and prayers of the righteous who importune at the throne of grace in behalf of those who suffer. Heaven forbid that aught should be said to discount faith in God in these confused times, but for those who have not the faith to be healed, common sense should certainly dictate that they seek assistance in their physical distress from learned and conscientious men who may charge for what they do in the practice of honorable and noble professions, but who are known by reputation to give "value received."

IT IS ASTONISHING to learn to what lengths some of the quacks will go. Suffice it to say that in at least one appealed case the defendant had attempted to take care of an obstetrical case. Not content with such usurpation, this man brought a group of his students into the home of the patient to learn his course of treatment. The proceeding was not, however, strictly clinical, for during waiting periods, according to the record, some of the "students" prayed and some of them danced.

The expression is common that business and religion will not mix. Some of those who have been prosecuted under the laws regulating the practice of medicine, however, seem to have made a determined effort to make religion a part of their business, but not from altruistic motives. We quote from a case in which this phase was developed:

"The question to be determined is not whether defendant practiced his religion in treating (the patient), but whether the defendant practiced medicine within the meaning of the statute. Assuming that one brings himself within the statute and practices medicine without a certificate of qualification, he is none the less guilty because in so doing he also practiced his religion. The regulation of the practice of medicine is a police regulation for the protection of the public; it does not interfere with the exercise of religious liberty; it merely safeguards the lives and health of the public against the use and employment of dangerous agencies in the hands of the unlearned and unpracticed in the science and art of medicine. Whether an act is or is not embraced within the Act as practicing medicine depends upon the latitude of interpretation of the Act. Our statute is extremely broad; its language is: 'Any person who treats or offers to treat disease of human beings by any system of treatment whatsoever.'

By Lloyd Harding

"Under this statute, I apprehend, any agency of supposed therapeutic value set in motion with the design to cure, prevent, or alleviate human disease or suffering of body or mind by one who receives a quid pro quo for such service, would be comprehended within its terms; not necessarily that there should be an employment of drugs or surgical or mechanical appliances. Physicians in some cases ascribe a therapeutic value or efficiency to the power of mental suggestion; would the physician in employing such agency be any the less practicing his profession? We think not. In those cases, however, where no charge is made for the service, and recourse is had merely to prayer, without the employment of material or human agencies, it cannot be said that the person invoking divine interposition in behalf of another is treating or offering to treat diseases of human beings by any system within the meaning of the statute, and cannot be said to be practicing medicine."

IN THIS CASE the defendant employed prayer and the laying on of hands, but, according to the patient, he also made a partial physical examination and resorted to rubbing. By agreement with the patient, the defendant was to receive twenty dollars for his services, and two payments of five dollars each were made to him. Concerning this matter and the artifice sought to be used by the defendant, the court said:

"These sums defendant testified went to the church or society of which he was president and bishop, receiving compensation as such. This circumstance, however, is immaterial since, if the offense was committed by defendant, the law would countenance or tolerate no evasion by his receiving compensation by indirection through the medium and device of a corporation."

This same phase of combining religion with business and thus attempting to produce something beyond the reach of the laws regulating the practice of the profession of medicine is strikingly covered by excerpts from another case, which is the last one we shall consider. The court said:

"The statute prohibits the practice of medicine without a license, but excepts from its prohibition 'the practice of the religious tenets of any church.' But things were done by this defendant which no good faith could justify. He combined faith with patent medicine. If he invoked the power of the spirit, he did not forget to prescribe his drugs. 'It is beyond all question or dispute,' said Voltaire, 'that magic words and ceremonies are quite capable of most effectually destroying a whole flock of sheep, if the words be accompanied by a sufficient quantity of arsenic.'—Morley's Critical Miscellanies, III, page 17. While the healer inculcates the faith of the church as a method of healing, he is immune. When he goes beyond that, and puts his spiritual agencies aside, and takes up the agencies of the flesh, his immunity ceases. He is then competing with physicians on their own ground, using the same instrumentalities and arrogating to himself the right to pursue the same methods, without the same training."

And, by a masterful summary, the entire matter is gathered up in the same opinion in these passages, to wit:

"The meaning of the act is made plain when we consider kindred legislation elsewhere. In varying phrases immunity is granted to those who practice their religious tenets, but always in such a form as to confine the exemption to spiritual ministrations. Through all this legislation there runs a common purpose. The law exacts no license for ministration by prayer or by the power of religion. But one who heals by other agencies must have the training of an expert."

THERE IS AN OLD and upright profession whose members are charged with religious duties, including, of course, intercession by prayer. No recognized minister of any reputable church will hoodwink or cheat those who ask for his services, nor attempt to use a request for prayers as a means to get gain. And if the tenets of his church provide for the laying on of hands, he will administer the rite as prescribed by such tenets.

If faith and prayer fail to heal, there is available to the sufferer the accumulated knowledge of centuries in the duly licensed members of the medical professions.

There is, then, no need for any ailing person to drift into the fringes of either profession for succor, nor to be duped out of money by those beyond the pales of all professions, whose only purpose is to defraud.

The law seeks to protect the people and to punish men and women who prey upon the unwise or the unwary. But the law is merely a result; for the cause we may look again to Holy Writ, where it is recorded that the love of money is the root of all evil. Lurid and heartless though it may be, the dolorous fact remains that even the sacred institutions, those things which are grounded upon the goodness of God and which nurture the instinct in man to seek his Creator, have been spoliated and prostituted through greed, and trodden under heinous feet in the scramble to get money. Through necessity in the orderly administration of justice, even the laying on of hands has been dragged through the criminal courts of our land.

TO US of the Reorganization there should come a deeper gratitude that in the Restoration the ordinance of the laying on of hands was an essential part of that which was restored to earth. There should come also a more complete appreciation of this holy rite which is available in pristine purity to each of us, simply if we request it in sincerity.

We should return thanks often for the revelations which reactivated the performance of this ordinance among men and which vouchsafe to us as a peculiar people the unique blessings of the Almighty God of love.

We begin to sense something of the infinitude of God's love and mercy when we consider that there are four other usages for the laying on of hands in our church in addition to administering to the sick. These four are the blessing of babies, baptizing by fire and the Holy Ghost, ordaining men to the priesthoods, and giving the patriarchal blessing.

These are some of the mysteries of the gospel, and happily is this true. Otherwise, impious and venal men would doubtlessly seek to commercialize these holy ordinances also.

Youth Camp Michivoix at Park of Pines

Appreciative comments come from a number of sources concerning the success of Camp Michivoix for young people held at Park of the Pines, June 20 to 27. Allen Schreur reports a total registration of fifty-two campers. John W. Banks of Midland writes, "The Youth Camp was a huge success at the Park. Much good will result from this experience by the youth as well as the leaders. Next year many will have to be turned away or else another camp formed. Probably two persons attending the camp will be baptized soon."

Miss Bettylou Lalone, of Boyne City, was selected as one of the nine outstanding campers of the meet, and was invited to write. The following is quoted from her letter:

"I especially enjoyed the camp. Being crippled from infantile paralysis, I have not had much of a chance to participate in such good times. Nothing was ever enjoyed more by anyone. I missed nothing. The young people were so wonderful about helping, carrying me when necessary. They helped me gain confidence and love. I am eighteen years old and am well interested in working for the church that has given me so much.

"The name of the camp was taken from Michigan and (Lake) Charlevoix. The day began with the bugle, calling us to get up. There was a flag raising, followed by a worship service, which we sometimes held on the lake shore. Breakfast, and then, of course, K.P! . . . Campers have their free time when the staff meets, and late risers come out. After the clean-up, inspection is completed, and the bell chimes for class. The special interest groups ranged from music to car-driving. The classes in drama and music worked all week for a special vesper service presented at the end of the camp.

"Camp is fun! The day's activities make you wonder, 'What if I hadn't come?' There is a companionship all seem to share, a love deeper than one has had before, of so many at one time. Even in sports and free time, the feeling of fair play and fellowship is apparent. . . . Evening comes too soon but is a setting for campfires, song-fests, and worship services. Under the stars, we found God. . . . The days pass, and soon only a few are left. Our fun has been clean and real, and leaves no twinge of conscience. It is hard to put one's feelings into words."

The Use of the Book of Mormon in Missionary Work - Part 1

Substance of a lecture presented at the Convention of Twelve and Seventy, Kansas City, Missouri, January 3 to 9, 1948

By Seventy Harold I. Velt

It Fills an Urgent Need

IN THE WORLD today, comparatively few men believe that Jesus is the resurrected Christ, the only begotten Son of God.

Millions more find their belief all too vague and uncertain to effect a change for the better in their lives to any great extent.

Also, many who do believe in Jesus have been influenced to believe that his doctrinal ordinances are not essential to salvation and have no place in transforming the world.

Too, there are those who, because of prejudices already formed, need something to disabuse their minds of false impressions.

The Book of Mormon fills a vital need in all such cases; its very purpose, as stated on its title page, being "to the convincing of Jew and Gentile that Jesus is the Christ, the Eternal God, manifesting himself unto all nations.

Its Value

1. The Book of Mormon is of real missionary value in itself. Thousands have been able, by experience, to testify to the truth of the promise of Moroni 10: 5 (page 775), "And if ye shall ask with a sincere heart, with real intent, having faith in Christ, he will manifest the truth of it unto you, by the power of the Holy Ghost."

I was privileged to give visual aid lectures for a week in Detroit, Michigan, to a group of members of The Church of Jesus Christ (sometimes called Bickertonites, for they were organized by William Bickerton who was baptized by Sidney Rigdon in 1845). The greater part of their membership is of Italian descent, converted from the Catholic Church through the use of the Book of Mormon. Then take the case of Sidney Rigdon, that powerful orator and co-founder with Descander Campbell of the Christian Church. Though disinclined to believe the story of our missionaries who visited him, after praying about the matter, he received the testimony that the Book of Mormon was true. Many, many such cases might be cited. Then remember, regardless of how convincingly we present the subject (and we cannot place too much emphasis upon the term "Unto the convincing of Jew and Gentile"), let us never fail to urge the investigator to pray for a testimony as he reads the book.

2. Of still greater value in missionary use is the Book of Mormon when read under directive advice as to where to read first. For instance, suppose we wanted to use the Bible to convince a heathen that Christ was the Savior of the world. Who would urge him to read that book from cover to cover, beginning with Genesis?

Likewise, for best results, we would advise our prospect to first read from about page 600 (Nephi, the son of Nephi) in the Book of Mormon in order to quickly grasp what the book really stands for. Then upon reading of the signs in America of the birth and later of the death of Jesus in Palestine and of his subsequent coming to America as the resurrected Christ, one is ready for the confirming evidence of American archaeology and Indian tradition.

3. Powerful and convincing indeed is the Book of Mormon story of the coming here of the resurrected Christ, when supported by the Indian traditions of their fair God, Quetzalcoatl, (also called Kukulcan or Wiracocha)—the only God who was born in the flesh of a virgin, but not in America—in connection with the worship of whom the cross was everywhere in evidence as a symbol of adoration. Take for example the Book of Mormon story of the three days of total darkness following the three hours of terrible earthquake in America at the time of the crucifixion of Jesus in Palestine, and of the sudden appearance of Jesus soon afterwards among the people.

This is confirmed remarkably by the testimony of Cieza de Leon who stands first in the first rank of authorities on Inca civilization. Writing to the King of Spain he said, "Before the Incas reigned in these kingdoms, or had ever been heard of, the Indians relate another thing much more notable than all things else that they say. For they declare that they were a long time without seeing the sun, and that, suffering much evil from its absence, great prayers and vows were offered up to their gods, imploring for the light they needed Presently afterwards, they say, that there came from a southern direction a white man of great stature The people called him the Maker of created things, the Prince of all things, Father of the Sun called Ticiviracocha"

Read the whole context from Jesus Christ Among the Ancient Americans, page 124.

4. Of increasingly greater value still is the Book of Mormon in missionary use when, together with the foregoing, it is pointed out from Bible prophecies that there was to come forth such a record at a certain time and in a certain manner; which record or book was to become one with the Bible in God's hand.

5. Of still greater missionary value is the Book of Mormon when studied in connection with the manner of its coming forth—the witnesses who saw and handled the plates of gold and the circumstances surrounding their remarkable testimony. When one man testifies of a miraculous experience, it may be of interest. When several at one time, in confirmation thereof, hear the same words, see the same happenings, and experience the same heavenly feelings, and then continue to the very end of their days to bear their testimony undeviatingly, there is something vitally more than mere passing interest. This is true of the witnesses to the Book of Mormon. Their testimony is made powerfully more strong by the fact that the trying circumstances of passing years would certainly have persuaded them to have denied their original testimony had there been any fraud to expose—or even, perhaps, had there been left in their minds any room for doubt of what they had seen and heard.

We find in the nature of the above circumstances such convincing evidence that God was in the Restoration Movement, that he could say with every good reason relative to the same, "wo be unto him that rejecteth the word of God" (II Nephi 11:135; Doctrine and Covenants 5: 2). Also, "And all this shall stand as a testimony against the world at the last day."—Ether 2: 3.

Men will wrangle for religion, write for it, fight for it, die for it—anything but live for it.—C. C. Colton, Lacon.

For Every Member of the Priesthood

These booklets have been prepared under the direction of the First Presidency for our ministers, general church appointees, and all members of the priesthood.

Preaching Ministry

By Lorne White

Those who are called to preach the gospel must be ceaselessly alert to increase their resources and improve their ministry, overcoming their handicaps and limitations for the sake of the people they serve. Selected from the writings and publications of the church, supplemented by current thought and experience, these chapters will be useful to experienced preachers as well as to young men beginning their service.

50c

Procedures in Presenting Calls to the Ministry

By Lorne White

"Called of God as was Aaron," might be taken as the theme of this book, for this is the foundation of our whole concept of priesthood and ministerial leadership. How calls are to be recognized, safeguarded, and acted upon is carefully discussed and considered in this volume which summarizes the best that has been written upon this subject by our people.

50c

Ministry to the Erring and Church Court Procedure

By Bishop L. Wayne Updike

Here is the official booklet dealing specifically with ministry to persons of church membership who do not meet the standards of conduct necessary to continuing membership. Included, too, is the statement on court procedure adopted by the General Conference of 1932, and 21 suggested forms for court action.

50c

HERALD PUBLISHING HOUSE

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI

Ephraim - By Audrey Reid

OFTEN we hear discussions about who is to build Zion—the Indians or the people of this church. And there are arguments as to whether we are Israelites or Gentiles. Having made an extensive study of the matter, I should like to write in a very simple manner the story of the Israelites, giving references to prove my statements.

Jacob was one of the sons of Isaac and a grandson of Abraham.¹ At Padanaram, God appeared to Jacob and changed his name to Israel.² Jacob had twelve sons. Their names were Reuben, Simeon, Levi, Judah, Issachar, Zebulon, Dan, Naphtali, Gad, Asher, Joseph, and Benjamin.³ For many years, all of these people were known as Israel.⁴

After their sojourn in Egypt, the Israelites lived for a long time in Palestine in a peaceful condition (among themselves that is) and had but one ruler. Then they began to quarrel and finally they separated into two nations.⁵ The ten and one-half tribes continued to call themselves by the name of Israel. The tribe of Judah and one half of the tribe of Benjamin were known as Judah until after they were returned from captivity; then they became known as Jews. The ten tribes were never known as Jews.

The Assyrians captured and led into captivity the ten tribes of Israel.⁶ Only Judah was left. Afterwards Judah was carried away captive to Babylon.⁷ Later, Cyrus, King of Persia, permitted many of the tribe of Judah to return to build up Jerusalem.⁸

JOSEPH WAS ONE of Jacob's sons. Joseph had two sons named Manasseh and Ephraim. In those days, the older son usually received the greater blessing, but Joseph received the birthright.⁹ Then Ephraim, who was younger than Manasseh, received the greater blessing.¹⁰

If we study the Book of Mormon, we learn that Lehi and his son were descendants of Manasseh.¹¹ Therefore, we see that the Indians, of the tribe of Manasseh, were to receive a great blessing, but not as great as Ephraim.¹⁰

We have already stated that the ten tribes of Israel were taken captive and scattered among the people. In studying the history of the ancient peoples, we find that first one nation and then another strove to be rulers, Syria, Assyria, Persia, Media, and others. Various degrees of cruelty marked these wars, but nearly always captives were taken and made slaves. It was such warfares as these that took the Israelites captive and then scattered them. To make the scattering even more general, the warfare did not stop in Asia; but the Europeans and Asiatics began to strive to rule over each other. The Greeks first ruled over Asia; then the Romans did. Thus the Israelites were taken to Europe. Also, there were migrations from Asia to Europe.

EPHRAIM WAS SCATTERED. Hosea says, "Ephraim hath mixed himself among the people."¹² Again he says, "My God will cast them [Ephraim] away, because they did not hearken unto him; and they shall be wanderers among the nations."¹³

Columbus discovered America. Europeans migrated to the discovered land. Many of those who came were seeking religious freedom. Is it too much to believe that Ephraim was scattered among these people? No, for had not Jacob promised this land to Manasseh and Ephraim? Manasseh had come first, now the Lord had led Ephraim here.

What were the promises of God to Ephraim after they had served their term of bondage? Hosea says that God will be merciful to Ephraim.¹⁴ Zechariah tells us that God says, "I will strengthen the house of Judah, and I will save the house of Joseph, and I will bring them again to place them; for I have mercy upon them; and they shall be as though I had not cast them off; for I am the Lord their God and will hear them. And they of Ephraim shall be like a mighty man, and their heart shall rejoice as through wine; yea, their children shall see it, and be glad; their heart shall rejoice in the Lord. I will hiss for them, and gather them; for I have redeemed them; and they shall increase as they have increased. And I will sow them among the people; and they shall remember me in far countries; and they shall live with their children, and turn again. I will bring them again out of the land of Egypt; and gather them out of Assyria; and I will bring them to the land of Gilead and Lebanon; and place shall not be found for them . . . and I will strengthen them in the Lord; and they shall walk up and down in his name, saith the Lord."¹⁵

Ephraim is called the strength of the Lord's head by the Psalmist.¹⁶

IN THE PAST century God called a prophet, Joseph Smith, as he promised long ago. Joseph Smith's blessing designates him to be of the tribe of Ephraim. From the promises that we have mentioned, and the many more to be found in the Bible, we cannot doubt that he is of the tribe of Ephraim. For those who are Book of Mormon students, other references can be made to prove it. Only one will be mentioned here. It strengthens our belief that he was a literal descendant of the Joseph that was sold into Egypt. In the Book of Mormon, we are told that only Israelites can hear the voice of God.¹⁷ Certainly if we believe any of the testimony or work of Joseph Smith, we must admit that he not only heard the voice of God and Christ but also saw them. The Book of Mormon, in the same passage, states that the only way, in

(Continued on page 22.)

www.LatterDayTruth.org

Zionic Materials - By Ruby Tinkham

IN MY NEIGHBORHOOD there are four Methodist families, one Catholic, and two Nazarene. If you should come here to live, I wonder how long it would take you to find out that I am a Latter Day Saint. If I were Zionic material, I would be the kindest, most generous, and most moralistic person on this little street, and you would be able to tell me from the rest by those very qualities because they would be so prominent in my everyday life. But could you? No. I am no better and no worse than any of my neighbors.

They are all kind and generous and possess good morals. They all attend church regularly, and pay tithing the same as I do. That makes me only an average person and average people are never going to build Zion.

It makes me wonder if I am a typical Latter Day Saint. It makes me wonder, too, if Latter Day Saints were as well known for building Zion as the Jews are for rejecting Christ, and the Catholics are for their allegiance to the pope, if maybe Zion would not already be a reality.

How then am I going to change my life so that I may become Zionic material? If my neighbor borrows from me and pays me back, then we are equals. But if he borrows, and I make it plain that I expect nothing in return, I have gained in quality. If he pays his tithing and I pay mine, we are again equals. But if I pay more than just one tenth, I have advanced beyond him. If he asks me to go one mile, and I willingly go two, I have begun to realize what quality means, and the road gets easier each time because God is on my side.

SOME WILL SAY, "Why, that's impossible. You can't get through this world on those principles." The same people said they could never build a railroad across the United States, that men would never fly around the world or talk into a telephone. But we did! And here's the reason why—the impossible things have always been done by a few people who had faith in their project and were willing to work harder than any average person to accomplish their purpose.

Zion will be built the same way—by a few people of quality who have faith in their project and are willing to work harder than any average person to accomplish their purpose.

It was just as true in the days of early Christianity as it is now. Jesus came into a world that was full of different kinds of religious beliefs. If he had been any ordinary, average person, he would have taken one look and said, "It's impossible to do anything with these people. They are satisfied with what they have, I can do nothing here."

But he didn't do that. Instead, he left us a pattern which, if we are willing to follow it, will win for us the same kind of glory that is his.

He carefully chose people who could rise above the quality of the majority of their day, then he endowed them with the power necessary for carrying out their commission. We have that same promise.

ISOMETIMES wonder, if God should suddenly grow angry at our shilly-shallying and give our promise to some other people, what would we do?

It might be a good idea to think of ourselves as being on probation with God right now and set a time limit within which we actually work to build Zion.

Talking and preaching and writing articles like this, will never do the job. It takes action. And that doesn't mean next week or next year—it means today!

YOU MAY SAY, "But how do you hope to change average people into Zionic material. You talk as if it could be done overnight."

No, it can't be done overnight. But we mustn't think it can't be started now. You can't build a house with green lumber or you'll have a sorry sight later. So, you season the lumber.

Now, how do we go about this process of seasoning. First, we might try being just a little bit kinder than our neighbors. After this becomes a habit, we could try being a little more generous. When this also becomes a habit (and the beauty of doing good is that it finally does become a habit) we could tighten up on our morals. By that, I don't mean overcome our own bad habits necessarily, but we could improve on the vague attitude and silent disapproval we take toward conditions that exert evil influences in our communities.

Where we are small in number, it is much easier not to see a thing or to ignore a bad influence than to put up a fight. So, we allow our children to grow up in an environment that is destructive rather than bear with the criticism that might result from an open campaign of improvement. We forget that God works for good and, where we are few, he increases our strength by adding people of other faiths who are in accord with our campaign but lack the right leadership.

This leadership is our birthright and should be cultivated as our most outstanding quality in attaining Zionic membership.

It would be nice to hear people say, "See that little town over there? It's the finest town in this part of the state. There's a group of Latter Day Saints there building Zion, and, you know, I think they're going to do it, too!"

Workday Song - By Alice Bolon

WHAT COULD BE more beautiful and more unifying than housewives singing a workday song?

In his poem, "The Tuft of Flowers," Robert Frost tells of going out to turn the new-mown hay that had been cut by some other workmen. There was neither sight nor sound of the mower, but all around were signs of his labor.

A butterfly led the poet to a tuft of flowers that the mower's blade had cut around, leaving them standing. This caused the poet to say:

The butterfly and I had lit upon
Nevertheless a message from the dawn,
Men work together, I told him from the heart,
Whether they work together or apart.

In this poem, Robert Frost has touched upon one of the significant aspects of labor among people—that feeling of unity which they sense in working in a common cause for a common end. Whatever the work may be, the worker feels through the honest performance of his task a kinship with all mankind and the strong unifying force of brotherhood.

HOW DO WE come by the workday song that gives The Joy of Living? Wordsworth suggests in his "Ode" that the melody for the workday song comes with each of us when we make the earth our home, because we are the children of God.

Not in entire forgetfulness,
And not in utter nakedness,
But trailing clouds of glory do we come
From God, who is our home.

As we grow, if we expand the melody, there comes a consciousness of belonging, of being found by and guided by our Heavenly Parent here in familiar, earthly surroundings. This awareness of divine love surrounding us urges us to desire and strive to please God.

WHO GIVES these songs of praise from the citadel of inner consciousness? Happy, peaceful people, even the more primitive ones, interpret the song in their simple culture. Certain Eskimo tribes believe themselves especially favored of the Great Spirit. The scheme of things appears to them to have been especially prepared for their ideal existence.

Various South Sea Island tribes of peaceful, cheerful disposition, which enjoy luxuriant natural environment and put forth little effort for comfortable living often consider themselves favorites of a beneficent God.

Happy children, without knowing why, sense the song.

People who seek intelligently through training, faith, love, and insight, develop its theme and comprehend the song most fully, giving it articulation in their activities in the workday world.

WHAT IS THE NATURE of the workday song?

The overtone of the song is an air of high adventure of life that Horatio Powers speaks of in "The New Year."

A flower unblown, a book unread,
A tree with fruit unharvested,

This is the year that for you waits,
Beyond tomorrow's mystic gates.

Grace Noll Crowell's lines telling of her eager approach to each new day and the discovery of its loveliness typifies the middle notes of the workday song.

The day will bring some lovely thing
I say with each new dawn,
Some gay adventurous lovely thing to hold
Against my heart when it is gone,
And so I rise and go to meet
The day with wings upon my feet.

Very often the "lovely thing" is not something spectacular, but something as supremely simple as encountering from others, sincere charming manner, pleasant voice, friendly interest, or thoughtful acts of appreciation, prompted by that force of love which is out of sight.

The "gay adventurous thing" may be joy in one of the common things which the workday song gives one, "eyes for seeing," or "perception in hearing." It may be the awareness of fragrant lilacs in opening bloom beyond the window as one washes breakfast dishes, the fascinating sight of new grass sparkling after rain, a miracle of the winter season such as exquisitely white, lacy snowflakes drifting down, or the tiny yellow-green leaves of early spring which one watches almost breathlessly as they develop into the deep green mature leaf of summer. The leaves speak their silent simile of the unfolding faith of a life that is carefully nourished.

There is the gladness of the bird songs which may lend an appropriate background for the day's work. Shelley, in his "Ode to the Skylark," said: "Teach me half the gladness that thou dost know."

THERE IS THE GAIETY of innocent simplicity in the songs, play, and laughter of children. There is adventure in the tasks that press. If the song from the sanctuary of personality has caused the housewife to develop God-conscious attitudes, she realizes that many notes of the song are a praising with the work of her hands. A "lovely thing to hold against her heart" when day is done may be the knowledge of skillfully prepared food which has pleased her loved ones or it may be the pleasure she has felt in co-operating with the Creator of the universe, in working in her garden to grow things for the table or flowers to grace the air with their fragrant, colorful beauty.

- - - a home column feature - - -

Her thrill may come from hanging the family wash on the line as she revels in heaven's blue, the warm sunshine, and the breeze that billows out the clothes.

It may be happy evening thoughts that give her appreciation of the splendid sunset which makes gathering the fresh, dry clothes from the line a double pleasure.

The housewife with the workday song does not shut herself away from beauty, because she is ever on the alert to find it in her surroundings and in terms of the everyday. Her inner glow at close of day may come from satisfaction earned in being budget-wise.

The homemaker should not derive more pleasure from the expensive garment which she may occasionally be privileged to wear than from being smartly groomed through wise buying and her own creative effort.

THE MELODY of the workday song assists one in the pleasant blending and balancing of the spiritual, the beautiful, and the practical, and in expressing all in proper vocabulary and everyday activity.

"The great things are so simple, and the simple are so great," from "A Song of the Road" by Fred G. Bowles, are lines that a housewife may well remember in her moments of worry and frustration, when she wonders if her daily round of small tasks is worth-while.

Now and then the workday song may give a grand crescendo, a vacation. The housewife who is fortunate enough to have the grand crescendo in her workday song, can enhance the song by electing to vacation in the open country where she can add grace notes of appreciation from the more spectacular natural forces. This helps to place God in the center of the song instead of herself.

To see the majestic ruggedness of the Tetons, or the rhythmic, graceful marching beauty of the Mission Range of the Rockies at sunset, to view the magnificent falls of the Yellowstone, or to walk around Devil's Tower in the Wyoming Black Hills, will give her an understanding of what Emerson was speaking of in "Each and All" when he said,

Beauty through my senses stole,
I yielded myself to the perfect whole.

One author has said that "ours in America is a hothouse civilization—a beautiful flower without roots, and unless we can root this civilization in a deep convincing religious faith, it will wither and die."

Perhaps people can allow their lives to become too cluttered with the material, with the gadgets of industrial civilization, and with the "busyness" of day-to-day surface things, and separate themselves too far in spirit from eternal verities.

It might be wise to spend more time in the open air or take a "walk around" occasionally instead of riding so fast to such near places, often without any special purpose, and nothing real to do after arriving.

A woman should remember that whatever of natural, spiritual, cultural or character beauty she has seen or experienced can be treasured "to flash upon the inward eye, which is the bliss of solitude." It can enrich the workday song in periods of routine activities. (Adapted from "The Daffodils" by Wordsworth.)

The cheerful wife and mother sings her song effectively if the family members enjoy being together and doing things together. She can be sure she has the right tune if she strengthens the personalities of those around her by lifting them from depression, anger, or despair, and builds up their confidence in themselves and others. She gives them of her calmness, optimism, and courage by example.

She does not sit in the scorner's seat,
Nor hurl the cynic's ban.

—Adapted from "The House by the Side of the Road," by Sam Walter Foss.

IF ONE REMEMBERS to be true to her song, she will treat others after her own honor and dignity, and will be willing to settle difficulties on the basis of what's right instead of who's right.

Because people have intelligence, they have capacity for emotional or mental pain, and the greater their love and comprehension, the farther this capacity extends toward the infinite. It is natural then, that the one who sings the workday song cannot always, as does the sundial, count only the sunny hours. Since people live by human nature there must occasionally be the serious undertone, for as Shelley said,

We look before and after
And pine for what is not,
Our sincerest laughter
With some pain is fraught.

Housewives can learn a workday gladness by cultivating the "Spirit which teaches a man to do good," (adapted from the Book of Mormon).

They can strengthen their church congregations by teaching their children and by being ready for participation in the service through keeping their lives in tune with the Infinite. Their participation should become a part of the natural expression of their workday song.

This ethereal yet tangible song from the stronghold of faith, which women sing together although they are apart, will give evidence in the signs of their labor which others around them can see.

The song is vital and gives involuntary high notes of praise and faith in the magnificent unity of all creation and the central loving force of God. The music of the workday song floats out in all directions, into many lives, even when one person sings alone. Think what power would be in the song when sung effectively by many homemakers.

LETTERS

Letter From Germany

(The following letter was delayed in process of translation for publication.)

Heidrege, Germany
January 1, 1948

Dear Bishop Cackler:

In this way I wish to express to you, the church, and Brother Holmes our heartfelt thanks and appreciation for the great help you good people have given to us and for the great sacrifices you have made in our behalf during the last year.

Without your assistance our lot in Germany would indeed be hopeless. Our bishop's agent, Brother Ahlborn, gives a monthly report to Brother McConley and will keep you informed of what we receive. I only wish that I could shake the hand of everyone of you and personally thank you for the great work of love you are doing. This being but an idle dream as the great waters separate us, I can only say thanks to you all from the bottom of our hearts. It looks as if our food supply is getting worse instead of better. We receive hardly any meat, shortening, or milk, and you can see what it means to receive some from you.

May the Lord richly bless you all for your unselfish love toward us. We hope that in the not too far distant future this suffering may end and a way be opened in which we can express in a better way to you our appreciation.

AUTHUR PAASCH AND FAMILY.

A Letter of Testimony

I have belonged to the Reorganized Church for nearly twenty-six years and have had a variety of experiences, some of it good and some hard to bear. I was baptized at the age of sixteen, and although I didn't attend church regularly, I tried hard to live a good life. When unhappiness came to me, I was very resentful and was troubled by angry thoughts against those who had hurt me. One day when I was in such a mood, I felt as if someone said to me, "If you keep on this way, you will lose your mind and will have to be sent away." I wondered what to do and was directed to read a chapter of the Bible or pray whenever the hurt mood came upon me. It took a long time to overcome this fault, but with the help of God I was able to do it. Now I am reconciled and feel kindly toward everyone.

About two years ago I had to go to the hospital for an operation. I prayed and called for administration. As a result, my fears were relieved, and I felt at peace. I thank God that he has done so much for me. He has shown me where I was wrong and what to overcome. He has answered my prayers and has healed my ill body, and he has given me a fine family of which I am very proud. We have much to be thankful for. Pray for me that I may always overcome my faults and mistakes and be found faithful in the gospel.

MRS. MARGARET ALTMAN.

R. F. D. No. 1
Lucasville, Ohio

Holland Mission Holds Week-end Institute

One of the outstanding activities of the Holland Mission for this year was a week-end institute held in Rotterdam on June 19 and 20. Members from all the branches in Holland attended. The theme of the institute was "How Can I Best Serve the Church?" Seventy and Mrs. Glen Johnson, Seventy E. A. Theys, and Seventy Albert Scherer, president of the mission, assisted by local workers, were in charge. Apostle and Mrs. McConley were to have been present, but illness prevented their attending.

Activities began Saturday afternoon with classes at the church for the priesthood and women's department. The young people, under the supervision of Peter Laban and Hendrik Compier, participated in outdoor recreation. A service for the dedication of the new mission headquarters was held in the evening. Addresses were given by Seventies Theys and Scherer, and the recording, "Witnesses for the Restoration," was played and interpreted by Anton Compier. The dedicatory prayer was given by Elder A. J. Mosterdijk.

A priesthood devotional was held at 8:30 Sunday morning, followed by junior church at 10 and classwork for young people and adults at 11:15. A basket lunch was served at noon by the two Rotterdam women's groups. After lunch, the children were shown slides at the church, while three classes were held in an assembly room of a near-by high school. Seventy Glen Johnson gave the closing address of the institute. Music for the services was provided by Mrs. Johnson, violinist; Mr. Constant v.d. Elshout, guest soloist and Mr. Nich Lotichius, accompanist; and the Zwaagwesteinde, Utrecht, and Rotterdam choirs.

Albert Scherer

Mission Headquarters
Annastraat 2
Rotterdam, Holland

The Importance of Setting a Good Example

Recently I have been talking to a young school teacher who belongs to another church. After explaining our beliefs and our plan for a Zion, I thought she must surely be impressed with the possibilities which the Restored Gospel offers. However, her answer was quite to the contrary. She said, "If you people have such a wonderful gospel, why don't you live it? I can't see any difference between Latter Day Saints and the members of other churches—they use tobacco, play cards, dance, swear, and work on Sunday just like the others. About the only different feature is that Latter Day Saints attend the Latter Day Saint Church."

The Church is always judged by its members. Fortunately, we do have some good ones—both young and old—who are conscientiously striving to build the kingdom, but there are many more who are not willing to forego worldly pleasures and live saintly lives.

My prayers are for all God's children that they may keep themselves unspotted from the world and live useful lives.

Mrs. J. H. Thomas

South Elm Street, Route 3
Lamoni, Iowa

Pontiac, Michigan, Links Early Church History With Present

THE RESTORATION MOVEMENT first made its influence felt in Pontiac in the summer of 1831 when Lyman Wight, John Correll, John Murdock, and Hyrum Smith accompanied Lucy Smith to this city to visit the family of her oldest brother, Stephen Mack. Later, Jared Carter was sent from Kirtland to follow up this work and was successful in baptizing seventy people.

It is not known how long this group remained together, but we know that Joseph Smith and others visited the group in 1834.

So far as the church is concerned, Pontiac was again heard from when a branch was organized in the home of Brother and Sister J. M. Riley on North Shirley Street on August 16, 1916, by Apostle J. F. Curtis, who was then in charge of the Great Lakes Mission, and Elder William Davis, vice-president of the Eastern Michigan District. Prior to this time, services had been held in the homes for several months, with priesthood members from Detroit and other points in the district assisting in the work. Street meetings were also held during the summer months.

Priest J. M. Riley was elected the first pastor, and there were twenty-one charter members enrolled. The first baptism thereafter took place a month later, when early Sunday morning, September 16, the Saints journeyed to Orchard Lake by streetcar and two candidates were baptized.

In January of 1917, following the coming of three elders, James H. Mead, Walter L. Bennett, and Francis McDonald, to the city, Brother Riley resigned from the branch presidency, and Elder Mead was elected to that office. The Sunday services continued to be held in the homes, and there were cottage meetings on Wednesday evenings.

In May, 1917, provision was made for the purchase of a lot on Whittemore Street for a church site. It seemed that the Lord was not willing that a permanent building be erected there, for several efforts were made to get a building started but each attempt met with failure. Late in 1917 it was decided the property should be sold. A short time later the present location on Front Street was purchased for $2,500.

This property consisted of a lot, which was a part of the original estate of Stephen Mack, and a large well-built barn which was raised, moved back from the street and remodeled to serve our purpose as a church. A full basement was constructed, the outer walls of the building brick veneered, and a tower with main entrance built at the north-west corner of the building.

At first only the lower auditorium was completed, and this was used for church services for about seven years. In the winter of 1926 the sum of $4,500 was borrowed from a bank, and the upper auditorium was finished and formally opened in May of that year.

In October of 1933, after the failure of the bank which held the mortgage, we were able to buy, with eight hundred dollars of borrowed cash, more than enough deposits in the defunct bank to liquidate the mortgage which had then been reduced to $3,150.

This latter debt was paid and the church dedicated in October, 1936, with President Frederick M. Smith delivering the dedicatory address, and Bishop G. Leslie DeLapp receiving the deed to the property for the general church.

During the years, the branch has enjoyed steady growth in numbers both by baptism and letters of transfer. Besides those already mentioned, other elders who have helped to guide the destiny of the branch are W. L. Bennett, M. J. Crowley, Silas Parker, L. O. Pearson, Carlisle Whitehead, Manuel Ward, and Randall Hulse.

Pontiac Branch has experienced its share of hardships, financial stress, and spiritual depression, yet its periods of financial, spiritual, and numerical growth have far surpassed those of the opposite nature. The members who have seen it develop from its beginning to the present time cannot but feel that God has been mindful of the branch and its people. He has spoken to them by way of admonition and rebuke, but more often by way of commendation. He has healed their sick when human aid could no longer help, comforted the sorrowing, and called into his ministry those who have prepared themselves for that work.

There is much yet to be done, and we trust and pray that the seed which has been sown will continue to be watered, that more seed will be sown and faithfully nurtured until all in this city who so desire may hear and understand the gospel as restored in these, the last days.

Myrtle Berndt

Pontiac, Michigan

First Things

If the world is to be saved from physical and moral destruction, every person professing Christianity must put the church first. Some do put it first, some, second; but to the vast majority, it is purely incidental, with social and business life rating greater importance.

We may not be able to serve as missionaries in some foreign land, but we can work in the locality in which we live.

Management and labor are beginning to see the vital need for Christianity as a code of ethics for them to follow if they are to reach an agreement. The church has a way of life that the world must accept if it is to survive. It is the channel of our most cherished values—the custodian of liberty. It may be compared to a great water system. No matter how complete and efficient it may have been when installed, it will soon fail to function if neglected.

We each should do our part to make the church and its way of life so valuable to the citizens of the community that it will no longer play a minor role but be a vital factor.

If people will not attend church and receive spiritual food in that way, we should do all in our power to bring the spiritual values of the church to them. This may be accomplished through a greater use of radio. Even if people find sermons boring, they are not adverse to music and plays of a high character. The greatest of all teachers used entertaining stories as a means of pointing the way of life. He also encouraged little children to follow him. Today we support such organizations as the Boy Scouts and groups of a similar type for girls, but there are constantly more applications for membership in these organizations than it is possible to accommodate with the number of leaders we have. How many mothers with small boys of Cub Scout age know that it is necessary to have a den mother who has a boy in the group? If children can be started in the right way at this age, we needn't worry about their future.

If we can supply the right leadership for the youngsters, they will furnish good world leadership in the future.

M. ANDERSON.

Auburn, California

Fourth Church, Kansas City, Closes

The Sunday morning (June 27) service was the last one held at Fourth Church. Over half a century ago, I sang my first solo in the building which constituted the first and only church in Kansas City. Fifty-four years later I sang "The Lord's Prayer," by Mallott as the last to be sung in the church; for the congregation is dissolved and the building is to be sold.

This unique experience gave me a tremendous thrill—one which does not often come to a singer. With that, the joy of seeing my fifth grandson blessed at the closing scene of the services held in this building made the day very gratifying to me.

Arthur Koehler

3328 Chestnut

Kansas City, Missouri

Services at Greeley, Colorado

A survey taken in April by Brother Malcolm and Brother Barrows of Denver revealed that there were between twenty-five and thirty members in the vicinity of Greeley. Meetings were arranged and first held at the home of Thelma Anderson, then in the Rose Chapel at the Sattley-Gilly Mortuary.

As many as twenty-four have attended these Sunday services, and a program was presented on Children's Day. Speakers from Fort Collins are assisting in the work. After many years of isolation, it is indeed encouraging to again have the privilege of attending Latter Day Saint services.

Margaret C. Cunningham

Box 218

Evans, Colorado

Music - A Medium of Religion

RELIGION HAS much to learn from music, for religion deals with life, and music is the perfect symbol of life. In the words of the poet,

God is its author, and not man; he laid
The keynote of all harmonies; he planned
All perfect combinations, and he made
Us so that we could hear and understand.

For some time I was quite concerned about the fact that I wasn't a man, and that I couldn't go to the far corners of the earth "preaching the everlasting gospel." But when I asked myself, "Just how many ways are there to teach religion," I suddenly realized that preaching from behind a sacred desk was not the only way. When I think of what music means to the human soul, and what it can do, I am amazed. It is not a soulless form of physical energy nor the result of mechanical evolution, the only purpose of which is to stimulate the nerves. Rather, it is a door opening into the infinite. It is a medium of communication between spiritual beings. God, himself, speaks to his children through music.

The songs of a people keep alive their spiritual aspirations. We Latter Day Saints, who are often referred to as "a singing people," know this to be true. Hymns furnish the atmosphere and wings by which mortals can, for a little while at least, get almost free from worry and concern and rise to the realm of pure beauty. Thus, by the aid of music, they may be lifted, if they will, nearer to God. Or it may raise them from the earth just enough to give them freedom from the evil that clings to their baser nature.

HEBREW PSALMODY and Christian hymnology have served as wings to bear the gospel far and wide over the earth. Every upward

Here Is the Writer

Doreen Trudell is a student at Graceland where she will be a sophomore next year. Currently best - Known for her musical accomplishments, Doreen is accompanist for the Oratorio and for the band. She plays the organ and piano. Recently she has been elected president of her social club. Doreen came to Graceland from Pontiac, Michigan, where she was one of the top ten in scholarship in a graduating class of almost 500. She was also president of her Zion's League in Pontiac, and for three years represented the young people of Flint-Port Huron District at annual Zion's League retreats held on the Blue Water reunion grounds. Her article arises out of a love of music as ministry. At Blue Water she has been "minister of music" in charge of all devotions and music for all services.

movement of Christianity has been marked by a fresh outburst of lyric fervor which has added to it both expulsive and impulsive force. Reformation and revival have always owed a great measure of their power to the inspiring and truth-conveying aid of music. I have heard and still do hear, of people who either were converted or became interested in our Restoration Movement through our hymns.

Music which interprets the deepest feelings of the human heart is understood and appreciated by people of all nationalities, classes and grades of culture. Music for young people should always be of the very best, because it is during the adolescent years that it has its greatest natural appeal. Music soothes us, stirs us up; it puts noble feeling into us; it melts us to tears, we know not how. It is a language by itself, just as perfect in its way as speech, just as divine, just as blessed.

By Doreen Trudell

BECAUSE MUSIC is one of the mightiest factors in human life in its influence on ideas, moods, and ideals, here is a way in which I feel I can minister—with young children in their junior choirs, helping them to love and appreciate music and the things it can do for them. I believe, as does G. Stanley Hall, that, "For the average youth there is probably no other such agent for educating the heart to love God, home, country, and for cadencing the whole emotional nature, as music."

In my new-found ministry, I need to remember in the use of hymns, spirituals, and special music, as in the use of pictures, poetry, and stories, that it takes both an art and an artist to achieve the finest results. It is with humbleness that I approach my ministry, for it was God himself who formed all such perfect harmonies, and it is God who is giving me an opportunity to put these to use and minister to his children, bringing them to a clearer and more understanding love of him.

Morning Blessing

Singing notes and early dew
With gentle breeze in welcome air
Like new beginnings, comfort you
Till evening falls in laden care.

JOSEPH SCHENCK.

www.LatterDayTruth.org

New Horizons

Blueprint for a Zioniac Home

By Hazel Haynes Anderson

THE MAIN PURPOSE of marriage for Latter Day Saints is the establishing of Zioniac homes. Preparation for this high goal begins long before the couple stands at the altar to take their vows; it must come as the result of true devotion to the church and its ideals. Such loyalty is born of early training, and it is for today's parents to lay the foundations for tomorrow's model marriages.

I shall not attempt to discuss all the complexities of this matter. I am only beginning to establish a home, and I have much to learn. I am trying, however, to arrive at a plan that will serve our present needs and expand with use to fit any activity in which we engage. It must be one that will hold us to our faith in happy days and strengthen us in times of trial.

Family worship is the cornerstone. Prayer is an essential part of this; great strength and inspiration come when two people kneel together, clasp hands, and commune with their Heavenly Father. With their parents as an example, small children will soon learn to share in these daily devotions. Prayer can be made a habit the same as brushing teeth, and even the very young will accept it as part of their home-life routine.

There is a plan for leisure in the Zioniac home, too. This plan provides relaxation and creative entertainment for every member of the family. Commercial entertainment is claiming a large percentage of America's free time, and it is doing much to break the solidarity of the family. Evenings which parents and children might spend reading, singing, or playing together have been replaced in most homes by evenings when young John and Mary rush off to the movie as soon as they've finished dessert, leaving their still fond-of-the-gay-life parents to pursue whatever pleasure they please without the encumbrance of children. Perhaps this is the best the family lacking all semblance of originality and initiative can achieve, but Latter Day Saints should strive to cultivate the fine art of self-expression to the degree that they can provide some form of homemade entertainment on at least five out of every seven evenings in the week.

A Zioniac home operates by the law of stewardship. A close record

Here Is the Writer

Hazel Haynes Anderson spent thirteen of her nineteen years in Lamon, Iowa, where she attended the local high school and Grace-land College. She was married to Robert Anderson on November 23, 1947, in the college chapel. They are making their home in Pleasant Hill, Missouri, while Robert attends college in Kansas City. Hazel says, "I enjoy writing and hope to contribute much to the 'Herald' in the future."

is kept of income and expenditures, and tithing is paid as consistently as the grocery bill. The principles of stewardship are applied to time, also. There must be a sensible balance between work and play, and no day is complete without its "good deed." If a child is reared in such an atmosphere, the stewardship way will unquestionably become his pattern for living.

All great social revolutions have had small beginnings; Zion will too. First as individuals and then as family groups, we must draw up blueprints for the Zioniac way of life. Having made our plans, we must proceed to live according to them. Only then can we pray, "Thy kingdom come," and honestly expect God to help us in the task of building Zion.

Trouble Shooter

Question: Why are only some people told of their lineage in patriarchal blessings? Does this mean that those who are not told are considered unworthy, or that God prefers they do not know?

Answer: By Patriarch A. C. Martin

In answering these questions, I think it is necessary first to explain the purpose and contents of a blessing. The purpose is to give a priestly or authoritative blessing by a father of the flock, who represents God. A spiritual prayer is offered in which the individual is rededicated and reconsecrated to the service of God.

The contents of the prayer may be in way of comfort, admonition, rebuke, or counsel in the way of Christian living.

Doctrine and Covenants 125:3, reads, ". . . and if so led, to point out the lineage of the one who is blessed." This indicates the evangelist does not always have the leading of the Spirit as to lineage; and unless he is so directed, he would not know.

This does not mean that those who aren't told are unworthy, but the spiritual contents of the blessing, I would say, determines the worthiness to receive. After all, to be counseled or directed in the way of a godly walk is the important thing. To know of lineage would not necessarily enthrone one in ways of godly living. Yet, in the examination of oneself in the light of modern revelation, we may go far in determining our lineage for it is written, "The rebellious are not of Ephraim."

I would again call all to a godly way of living and advise them to set a definite course the way their souls should go. When they have done something for God, they will have an inward feeling that they are entitled to or merit a blessing. This also determines worthiness or unworthiness.

Ephraim

(Continued from page 14.)

which God will manifest himself to Gentiles is by the Holy Spirit.

Most often when patriarchal blessings are given, if the tribe is designated, it is Ephraim. We believe that this is literally true. Christ's sheep will hear his voice.

What is the work that Ephraim is to do for the Lord? To build the kingdom, to be an example to the nations of the world of how men should live together in love.

Blessed are the Gentiles who hear and obey the voice of the Master. But the people of Ephraim rejoice with greater joy that the promises of God are true and are coming to pass. References are taken from the Inspired Version of the Bible. Most of them are to be found in the King James version at slightly different places.

1. Genesis 27; 28
2. Genesis 35: 10
3. Genesis 35; 23-26
4. Exodus 1
5. II Chronicles 10; I Kings 12; 20, 21
6. II Kings 18
7. II Chronicles 36
8. Ezra 1
9. I Chronicles 5; 2
10. Genesis 48; 19-28
11. Book of Mormon, page 335, verse 3
12. Hosea 7: 8
13. Hosea 9: 17
14. Hosea 11: 9
15. Zechariah 10: 6-12
16. Psalm 60: 7
17. Book of Mormon, page 645, verse 22

Note of Thanks

To those who remembered me on my one-hundredth birthday by sending letters, greeting cards, and gifts, I wish to extend my heartfelt thanks and appreciation. It was indeed a pleasure to hear from so many of the dear ones in the gospel. The tie that binds us is strong and lasting.

Since it is impossible for me to answer all the letters, I am taking this means of expressing my gratitude.

Elder Levi Gamet

1115 North 36th Street
Kansas City, Kansas

BULLETIN BOARD

Liahona Park Reunion

The Liahona Park Reunion held each year at Sanford, Michigan, will convene on Saturday, July 31, and last through Sunday, August 8. President John F. Garver, Apostle E. J. Gleazer, Bishop T. R. Beck, Warren Chelline, Ellwood Smith, John W. Banks and B. H. Doty will be present. The opening service will be on Saturday evening, when Ellwood Smith will deliver the first sermon of the reunion.

JOHN W. BANKS
For the Committee

Books Wanted

George H. Roberson, 320 South Maple, McPherson, Kansas, would like to buy a copy of the Autobiography of R. C. Evans. If some reader has a copy for sale, please write to Mr. Roberson, stating price and condition of the book.

Reunion of the Ozarks

The annual reunion of the Spring River and Rich Hill Districts will be held at Racine, Missouri, twelve miles south of Joplin, August 1 to 8. Guest ministers will be Apostles Arthur A. Oakman and Maurice L. Draper, John Blackmore of Omaha, Nebraska; Victor Witte of Rock Island, Illinois; and Donald L. Kyser of Miami, Oklahoma. Tents may be ordered from Mark Mink, Route 3, Joplin, Missouri. Special business sessions will be held in the reunion pavilion on Saturday afternoon, August 7, for the election of delegates to General Conference.

WILLIAM PATTERSON
District President

REQUESTS FOR PRAYERS

Mrs. R. L. Dorrah, M. R. 1, Ravenna, Ohio, asks the prayers of the Saints that she may regain her health and be able to do her work.

Prayers are requested for Mrs. John Farrell who has psoriasis.

Mrs. William Renwick, 239 Waverley Avenue, Highland Park 3, Michigan, requests prayers for her husband who is suffering with a heart ailment.

Mrs. Dimple Johnson, Tunnel Hill, Illinois, must soon go to surgery for the removal of part of her left lung. She asks the prayers of the Saints that, if it be God's will, she may be healed.

Mrs. C. W. Dobbs, 1518 Third St., Moundsville, West Virginia, requests prayers for her husband that he may be healed of his affliction and not lose his sight.

Mrs. Clara McNeil, Pleasanton, Iowa, requests the Saints to pray for her husband's physical and spiritual welfare. He has had tuberculosis for eight years.

ENGAGEMENTS

Doran-Miller

Mr. and Mrs. Anson Miller of Fort William, Ontario, announce the engagement of their daughter, Myrtle Lois, to Gerald Doran, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Doran of Port Arthur, Ontario. The wedding will take place at the home of the bride's parents on August 4.

Miller-Montgomery

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph L. Montgomery of Fairland, Oklahoma, announce the engagement of their daughter, Madaleen, to William M. Miller, son of William L. Miller of Oronogo, Missouri. The wedding will take place in late summer in Fairland.

WEDDINGS

Key-Linton

Laverne Linton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Linton of Anadarko, Oklahoma, and James L. Key, son of Mrs. Bernice Key of Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, were married June 12 at Oklahoma City. The double-ring ceremony was performed by W. C. Hayden.

Landis-Condit

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Condit of Lamoni, Iowa, announce the marriage of their daughter, Margaret, to Sam F. Landis, of Columbus, Ohio. The wedding took place on June 6 in the Graceland College Chapel, President E. J. Gleazer, Jr., officiating. Both Mr. and Mrs. Landis are Graceland graduates. They will make their home in Des Moines this fall where Mr. Landis will attend Drake University.

Elmer-Norwood

Wanda Berniece Norwood, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Heman C. Norwood of Bozeman, Montana, and Edward Mansfield Elmer, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Elmer of Halfway, Oregon, were married on June 13 at the Reorganized Church in Bozeman. Seventy Arthur Gibbs read the double-ring ceremony. Both Mr. and Mrs. Elmer are graduates of Graceland. They will make their home in Bozeman where Mr. Elmer will attend college.

Hobart-Craig

Jacqueline Craig, niece of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Triplett, and Gail D. Hobart, son of Mrs. Carl H. Hobart, both of Webb City, Missouri, were married at the Reorganized Church in Joplin, Missouri, on May 29. Elder C. Huston Hobart of Colorado Springs, Colorado, brother of the bridegroom, performed the double-ring ceremony. Mr. Hobart is a graduate of Graceland College. The couple are making their home in Colorado Springs.

Correction

FRY.—Laura May. The funeral service at San Antonio was conducted by Elder David S. Palmer, assisted by Elder Crefield Jackson and Priest Harry A. B. Robinson.

Reunion Schedule-1948

Gulf States	July 9-July 18	Brewton, Ala.
Central Missouri	July 10-July 18	Odessa, Missouri
Saskatchewan	July 10-July 18	Beaver Creek Saskatchewan
Alberta	July 19-July 26	Sylvan Lake, Alberta
Zion Nauvoo So. New England	July 17-July 25	Gardner Lake Nauvoo, Illinois
Northern California	July 17-July 25	Onset, Mass.
Flint-Pt. Huron-Detroit-Windsor	July 17-July 25	Asilomar, Monterey, California
Kentucky & Tennessee	July 24-Aug. 1	Blue Water, Michigan
Silver Lake	July 25-Aug. 1	Park of the Pines Kirtland, Ohio
Chatham-London Cen. & So. Michigan	July 30-Aug. 8	Everett, Washington
Mo. Valley Maine	July 31-Aug. 8	Erie Beach, Ontario, Canada
So. California	July 31-Aug. 8	Liahona Park Beaverbine, Iowa
Northern Michigan	July 31-Aug. 8	Brooksville, Me.
Kirtland	Aug. 6-Aug. 15	Pacific Palisades
Reunion of the Ozarks	Aug. 6-Aug. 15
Oklahoma	Aug. 1-Aug. 8	Park of the Pines Kirtland, Ohio
W. Montana	Aug. 7-Aug. 15	Racine, Missouri
Arizona	Aug. 7-Aug. 15	Pawnee, Okla.
Arkansas & Louisiana	Aug. 7-Aug. 15	Race Track, Montana
Minnesota & Wisconsin	Aug. 8-Aug. 15	Tucson, Arizona
Far West	Aug. 9-Aug. 15	Clear Fork Cp., Hot Spgs., Ark.
So. Indiana	Aug. 9-Aug. 15	Chetek, Wis.
Eastern Michigan	Aug. 12-Aug. 22	Stewartsville, Missouri
Idaho	Aug. 21-Aug. 29	Bedford, Ind.
Des Moines	Aug. 14-Aug. 22	Cash, Michigan
Lamoni	Aug. 14-Aug. 21	Hagerman, Idaho
S. E. Illinois	Aug. 15-Aug. 21	Guthrie Center, Iowa
Eastern Colorado	Aug. 15-Aug. 22	Lamoni, Iowa
	Aug. 20-Aug. 29	Brush Creek, Ill.
	Aug. 20-Aug. 29	Colorado Springs Colorado

DEATHS

MEFFERD.—Minnie D., was born March 22, 1872, at Mineral, Illinois, and died May 18, 1948, at Rapid City, South Dakota. She was married to George Lemuel Mefferd at Portsmouth, Iowa, in 1891; eight children were born to this union. One son died in infancy, and another, Sherman, died in 1940. Mrs. Mefferd united with the Reorganized Church in 1897 and was a faithful member throughout her life. Her husband preceded her in death on January 29, 1945.

Surviving are three daughters: Mrs. O. T. Walston, Greeley, Colorado; Mrs. A. G. Cheney, Salem, Oregon; and Mrs. H. L. Mathewson, Pocatello, Idaho; three sons: Loyal Verg, Mt. Pleasant, Iowa; Alma Feranda, Omaha, Nebraska; and George Lemuel, Jr., of Rapid City; twenty-two grandchildren; and twenty great-grandchildren. Services were conducted by Elder E. C. Judson at the Behrens Funeral Home in Wheatland, Wyoming. Interment was in the Mountain View Cemetery.

GUSTAVUS.—Flora Guerne, was born in Detroit, Michigan, June 19, 1888, and died April 23, 1948, at her home in Detroit. On June 28, 1913, she married Gerhard Gustavus; to this union two children were born. She joined the church in 1921 in Detroit and remained a faithful member until her death. Her life was one of loyalty and unselfish devotion to her family, neighbors, friends, and church. She leaves her husband; a son, Gilbert; a daughter, Ruth; a sister, Mrs. Bertha Armitage; and a brother, Edward Guerne of Harbor Beach, Michigan. Services were held at the Peters Funeral Home. David W. Dowker gave the sermon; he was assisted by W. Blair McClain. Burial was in Forest Lawn Cemetery.

HARDER.—John Robert, was born March 8, 1911, in northern Michigan and died of a cerebral hemorrhage at Grace Hospital in Detroit, Michigan. (Date of death not given.) He was graduated from the Beaverton, Michigan, high school in 1929. At the time of his death, he was a draftsman in the Kaiser-Frazier Corporation.

He is survived by his wife, the former Madge Cassidy; two sons: James and William; a daughter, Margaret, all of Dearborn, Michigan; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Harder of Beaverton; a brother, Charles; and two sisters: Mrs. Norma Bunting of Midland, Michigan, and Mrs. Vida Sansam of Iron River, Michigan. Services were conducted at the McFarland Funeral Home in Dearborn, David E. Dowker officiating.

CLARK.—James Valentine, was born February 14, 1879, at Middlesex, England, and died June 9, 1948, at Toronto, Ontario, Canada. He was baptized a member of the Reorganized Church on March 23, 1896. In 1909, he was ordained a deacon and in 1946, a priest. He served as branch treasurer for many years and was an energetic worker who enjoyed beautifying the church grounds and arranging flowers for services. He was married on July 11, 1900, to Alice H. Oliver at St. Mary's, Ontario. He was well known for his ministry in visiting the sick and discouraged.

He leaves his wife and two daughters: Mrs. O. E. Weedmark of Kansas City, Missouri, and Miss Myrtle Clark of the home. Services were conducted at the Toronto Church by Elder John F. Sheehy. Interment was in Mount Pleasant Cemetery.

CHEESEMAN.—Marion Eugene, was born May 16, 1894, at Persia, Iowa, and died April 28, 1948, at Topeka, Kansas. He taught school in Kansas for many years and was principal of the schools at Hollenberg, Leonardville, and Ozawkie. He was a member of the Kansas State Teacher's Association and, for a while, served as pastor of the Reorganized Church in Topeka.

He is survived by his wife, Emma; a daughter, Eugenia Cheeseman; and a son, Fred, all of the home; two sisters: Mrs. Bessie Abbey of Hamilton, Ontario, and Mrs. Millie Wadell of Saskatoon, Saskatchewan; and one brother, Lloyd Cheeseman of Holbein, Saskatchewan. Services were held at the Penwell Funeral Home, Patriarch Higgins and Elder C. E. Christenson officiating. Interment was in Mount Hope Cemetery.

BERONIUS.—Jeanette C., died May 9 at her home in Topeka, Kansas, at the age of seventy. She was a member of the Reorganized Church and has been a resident of Topeka for thirty-eight years. Her husband, Charles H. Beronius, preceded her in death. She is survived by a daughter, Mrs. F. J. Shirley of Medford, Oregon; three sisters: Mrs. J. W. Wolf of Kansas City; Mrs. H. J.

O'Brien of McHenry, Illinois; and Mrs. William Telford of Springfield, Illinois; and three brothers: John and James Cairns of Kansas City, Missouri, and Tom Cairns of Independence, Missouri. Funeral services were held at the Wall-Diffenderfer's Mortuary. Interment was in Mount Hope Cemetery.

NEWCOMB.—Owen L., was born in Delhaven, Nova Scotia, on July 24, 1868, and died June 18, 1948, at Independence, Missouri. He was baptized December 14, 1895, at Boston, Massachusetts. On August 3, 1902, he was ordained a deacon and on July 9, 1905, a teacher. He was in business with E. L. Traver in Boston for a number of years, after which he went to Canada. In 1926 he made his home in Independence and the following year became the first custodian of the Auditorium, which position he held until 1944. He took a great interest in his job, sometimes working fourteen to sixteen hours a day. His greatest wish was that the people at the Auditorium should be comfortable. He was very proud of a letter from President F. M. Smith thanking him for his services.

He leaves his wife, Nora, of Resthaven near Independence, and a sister, Mrs. Sophie Rumery of Lubec, Maine. Funeral services were held at the Speaks Chapel, Elder Glaude A. Smith and Bishop J. Stanley Kelley officiating. Interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery.

FILLMORE.—Blair, died at his home in River Philip, Nova Scotia, on June 20, 1948, following a heart attack. He was eighty years old. A life-long member of the Reorganized Church, he was a close adherent to all his religion stood for. His first wife, the former Anna Discon, died twenty-nine years ago, leaving him with three children: Mabel (now Mrs. Rufus Knight of Oakland, California); Calla (Mrs. Len Underhill of Oregon); and Etter of Truro, Nova Scotia. Besides his children, he is survived by his second wife, Fannie Hyndman Fillmore.

Many friends gathered to pay their last respects to this fine man who was loved by young and old alike. Interment was in the Glenville Cemetery.

WINTEMUTE.—Eleanor, was born in Amherst, Nova Scotia, and died May 18, 1948, in the Vancouver, British Columbia, General Hospital. She was a member of the Reorganized Church and attended Vancouver Branch. She is survived by her husband, a daughter, and a sister.

HEWITT.—Anthony R., born sixty-three years ago at Carlingford, Ontario, died June 27, 1948, at Chatham, Ontario, following a long illness. As elder and pastor of the Wallaceburg Branch, he served the church long and faithfully. He was widely known because he traveled into all parts of the province to minister to the Saints and his friends.

He is survived by his wife, Mary; a son, William; twin granddaughters; four brothers: B. A. Hewitt of Toronto, Ontario; Wilbur and Ed Hewitt of Detroit, Michigan; and Joseph Hewitt of Chatham. Elder J. A. Pray was in charge of the funeral service. A graveside ceremony was conducted by Lodge Number 145 A.F. and A.M.

GRIFFIN.—William, son of Samuel and Almyra Griffin, was born October 22, 1854, at Palmyra, Iowa, and died April 25, 1948. He was married to Elizabeth Jane Badgely on October 27, 1878; five children were born to them. One daughter, Wertie, preceded him in death. He was baptized into the Reorganized Church on February 24, 1896, and remained faithful to his covenant throughout life. Mrs. Griffin died on August 12, 1927.

Surviving are two daughters: Ivie Wells and Blanche McNeer of Milo, Iowa; and two sons: Dr. P. B. Griffin of Independence, Missouri, and Harry, an invalid. Funeral services were conducted by Henry Castings and Herbert Scott.

SHAY.—Mildred Alice, daughter of Homer and Brooksie Jane McGuire, was born June 11, 1920, at Boonville, Missouri, and died on June 24, 1948, at her home in Independence, Missouri. She was married on April 8, 1937, to Anthony Shay; three children were born to them. She and two of her children were baptized into the Reorganized Church on June 13, 1948.

She is survived by her husband; a daughter, Dorothy Marie; and two sons, Homer Lee and Michael Wayne, all of the home; her mother, Mrs. Brooksie McGuire of Blue Springs, Missouri; a sister, Nadine McGuire of the home; and a brother, Wilbur V. McGuire, in the armed service, now at sea in the Pacific. Services were conducted by Elder Glaude A. Smith at the Speaks Funeral Chapel in Independence. Interment was in the cemetery at Boonville.

P. S.

* FOUR BOOKS

An Independence member asked her six-year-old granddaughter, "Darling, do you know what the Three Standard Books of the church are?"

"Sure. The Holy Bible, the Doctrine and Covenants, and the Book of Mormon."

Then, after a moment's pause, she added, "Why, Grandmother, there are four. There's the New Testament, too."

* WE SING FOR JOY

Good congregational singing is a beautiful experience, but sometimes there are agonies you can't escape. . . . A singer I do not care for is a man who believes everybody ought to sing somehow, but the Lord gave him no equipment for it. He just pitches his foghorn at the lower end of the piano because he thinks it's masculine. His tones bear no relation to anything on the printed page, and he just decides on the tune as he goes along. . . . Most difficult to endure is the bazooka-voiced sister who sings an approximate alto, and there isn't any note on the scale she can't flat. . . . When it comes to that, I am pretty mean myself. I like to get near some fine baritone, secretly imagine that my voice sounds something like his, and turn loose. It does my soul good. What it does to his soul I have never dared inquire, and he has been too polite to reprimand me. Congregational singing is a wonderful and incomprehensible thing, and I sometimes wonder how the musicians endure it so patiently.

* HOW LONG SINCE YOU WROTE?

Over every home desk there should be a bulletin board with reminders to the family. One notice should be a question, "How long since you wrote a letter to Mother and Dad?" Or you could fill in the names of relatives, friends, or absent loved ones. For most of us the answer would be, "Too long!"

And for our "Herald" writers there could be one, "How long since you have written an article for the 'Herald'?" We can give you the answer, Brother and Sister Author; it is, "Too long!" If you have a talent for writing, and you have trained it, there is a work for you to do. This is your ministry to the church and your fellow members. Probably there is an idea for an article that has been hovering around, waiting for expression. Today may be the day when you should sit down and put it on paper.

* COURTESY

A courteous request will get you anything in the world that a demand will, and a lot more. In addition, you receive a bonus of good will from the person who helps you.

* WORD

There ought to be a word meaning the opposite of influence. Perhaps "defluence" would do. So many people have it.

* BEAUTY

In all the pictures of beautiful girls you ever saw, the girl has her mouth shut. She may be smiling, and she may be listening. But she is not talking or eating. A wise beauty may both talk and eat, but she will not let the photographer snap the picture while her mouth is filled with either words or food. . . . And notice the pictures of successful men. The lips are buttoned.

. . . . Listening is the graceful poss, if there is one, for most of us.

Mary A. Burlington
1510½ Jules
St. Joseph, Missouri

92867
18
h

a new L. D. S. Novel

North of Heaven

Biloine Whiting and Josephine Skelton

HERE IS THE STORY of the followers of Alpheus Cutler and their trek to the "land between two lakes"—the place of prophecy where Father Cutler sent his people guided by Uncle Vet and Mr. Denna to build Clitherrall and to wait the coming of the "Moses Man" who was to lead them back to Zion.

Here, too, is the story of the Whitlow family, of home-loving Jen and tall strong Luke, and their children—the self-righteous Effie; Allan, who somehow was dissatisfied with the austere Cutlerite beliefs and went to hear the "Joseph-ite" preacher; sweet, shy May with the healing touch in her hands; and Cordie who was just born a Cutlerite for she didn't have it in her mind or heart. And, of course, lively, little Granny.

In this dramatic story, the authors have recaptured the spirit of the pioneers, the mood, the seriousness, the sense of conflict with the work, the occasional questionings and uncertainties, the sufferings and privations.

Every R. L. D. S. family will want to read this fine story of the Cutlerites and of their beliefs and of the conversion to the Reorganization of a part of the original group who settled in Minnesota.

$2.50

Order from your Book Steward or Direct from

Herald House

Independence, Missouri

Clip This Coupon!

ORDER NOW!

Send me copies of "North of Heaven" at $2.50 each.

I am enclosing check or money order (.....)

Please charge my account and bill (.....)

Name.....

Address.....

City.....

Zone..... State.....

HERALD HOUSE ● INDEPENDENCE, MO.

Photo by Adelbert Bartlett

The River Jordan

THE Saints Herald

VOLUME 95

JULY 24, 1948

NUMBER 30

www.LatterDayTruth.org

The River Jordan

AUDITORIUM NEWS

If there is a sacred river for Christians anywhere in the world, it is the River Jordan, in Palestine. From earliest times, it has figured in the history of their religion, and throughout the ages pious travelers have risked danger to see it, to bathe in it, and to carry precious vials of its waters home.

Because of its precipitous descent, the river has been useless for navigation. The barren desert through which most of it flows has never supported a great city, and since it ends in the Dead Sea, it has no link with ocean commerce. Lying in the valley created by a great geological rift, it is only a little more than a hundred miles long, as an airplane would fly, from its source on the western slopes of Mount Hermon in the north, to its mouth. It drops rapidly, being only seven feet above sea level at Lake Huleh, about 685 feet below sea level at the Sea of Galilee, and 1,275 below at the Dead Sea, the lowest surface water level in the world.

A fine authoritative account of it, well illustrated, has been given by Nelson Glueck in The River Jordan, a book that will be quoted for years to come by good reference works.

The River Jordan is precious to Christians, sentimentally, because Jesus was baptized there. It is even more precious to the Jewish peoples, because its crossing, near Jericho, marked the entrance to the Promised Land, and today it figures in the hopes of modern Israel for a national homeland. It is also precious to the Arabs, a Mohammedan people, mostly, because they and their ancestors have lived by it for many centuries, and know no other home.

When will peace come to the river that has seen so much war, that has wet the feet of so many pilgrims from faraway lands?

L. J. L.

IN THIS ISSUE

EDITORIAL:

The Problem of Evil	3
Across the Desk	4

OFFICIAL:

Notice of Appointment of Bishop's Agent	4
---	---

ARTICLES:

Atomic Force and Spiritual Power, by E. J. Gleazer, Jr.	5
Your Reasonable Service, by Ernest E. Crownover	8
Challenges, by Norma Anne Kirkendall	9
Service, by Merlin Miller	9
Tracting and Visiting, by Apostle Maurice Draper	10
The Use of the Book of Mormon in Missionary Work, Part 2, by Seventy Harold I. Velt	12
A Growing Understanding of the Mission and Message, by Mrs. C. G. Mesley	14
Magazine Hi-spots	16
Books: Maya Explorer	17
Broken Promises, by Grace L. Krabl	18
Sectarianism Reaches for the School Child, by Jeane Nelson	20
The Trouble Shooter, Answer by Leonard Lea	21
Briefs	22
Bulletin Board	23

BAPTISMS. Apostle Arthur A. Oakman reports the good work of Missionary James Daugherty, who recently baptized twenty-four people in Wisconsin. Visiting Fairland, Oklahoma, he baptized eleven more. He has baptized forty-one persons this year, thirty-five of them in the last ten weeks.

Also from Apostle Oakman's mission, William Patterson of the Spring River District reports twenty-nine baptisms, and indicates the fine missionary aspects of the district.

In Rock Island, Illinois, Victor Witte lately baptized six. And William Guthrie has been responsible for about thirty baptisms that have taken place.

T. W. Bath of Pittsburg, Kansas, wrote on June 13 that the Vacation Bible School reached a peak of 75 attendance, and that there were eighteen baptisms that morning, with other encouraging local news.

J. F. CURTIS, formerly of the Quorum of Twelve, is visiting Independence, following his attendance of the reunion at Fairview, Montana. He will also serve at the Kentucky-Tennessee reunion at Paris, Tennessee, and the Louisiana - Arkansas reunion at Hot Springs, Arkansas.

BISHOP E. C. BURDICK, 2445 Forty-first Street, Sacramento 17, California, is carrying on a very successful experiment in missionary work. He is teaching a class of fifteen young married couples the basic missionary message of the church, with all possible questions and answers that come up in real life situations. He tries to have them ready for any question that can be given them. Husband and wife go out together to tell the gospel story, visiting families and homes. They have been given two or three lessons on each gospel subject, and are well schooled. Apostle Hield reports splendid results in this work.

VISITORS. Gomer R. Wells, in charge of the guide work at the Auditorium, reports 3,055 registered visitors in the year ending June 30, 1948. Because the parties are conducted through the building, numbers of visitors sometimes arrive for short inspections and do not register, making the real number larger. People of many different faiths visit the building and the church is explained to them. More help is needed in the guide work, and devoted volunteers who would study for the work could render a good service.

BROTHER HERMANN PEISKER, who has been our mission president in Australia, and who arrived in the U. S. A. recently for a four-months' stay which would close with his attendance at the General Conference in October, had a sudden attack of illness and was admitted to the Independence Sanitarium and Hospital, where he was found to be suffering from a kidney ailment involving a stone and some infection, and was operated on Tuesday morning, July 13. His condition is regarded as serious, and everything possible is being done for him within the resources of medical and nursing science. He is being remembered in the prayers of church members, who trust that he may receive a blessing.

The Problem of Evil

THE PROBLEM OF EVIL is not a piece of mere philosophical speculation. It is all around us. And everywhere it exists, it leaves a trail of misery and suffering.

A little boy recently asked his mother, after his father had been away all night, "Mother, has Daddy been out with that bad woman again?" Adultery has brought spiritual death to that home. A wife's faith in her husband has been killed; a child's respect for his father has been destroyed; peace has been taken from them.

One thinks of the stocks, the pillories, and the whipping posts of colonial days. These things would be fit punishment for that wicked man. But modern law is tender and gentle with sinners and criminals. It does not give nearly so much protection to their victims. Some people think of how the vigilante committees handled cases like this, but that too is dangerous and cruel.

Whatever we do writes its record in our minds and spirits. What we do, we are. As we act, we become. We must live with ourselves—the thief must live with a thief, the liar with a liar, the lecher with a lecher. We can turn our eyes away from the mirror on the wall. But from the mirror of the soul we cannot turn away, and it haunts us in all our waking hours.

A GROUP OF GIRLS, during the lunch-hour, gathered around the switchboard, talking. One might have thought they were discussing clothes or dates. He would have been wrong.

The youngest one caught their problem up in a question, "How can you know whether it pays to be good?"

Many older people do not have the right answer to that question.

There are two powers seeking you, wanting your eternal soul. Your Heavenly Father wants you, for your own good, and for the good of others. It is his purpose to bring you to a condition of eternal happiness. The power of evil also wants you, to exploit you, to consume you, regardless of your misery and woe.

THE FIRST WAY TO KNOW whether it pays to be good is to look at the alternatives. Take any number of bad people you knew ten years ago, or five, or even three. How many of them have got in trouble? How many have been in jail? How many care to face their former friends now? And how many of them are dead today? Some survive, of course. But in what condition? And many do not survive.

God can afford to be patient. He has all the time there is. The sands of the hour glass cannot run out on him. No matter how long you avoid him, he will get you in the end. Better give up to him now.

A NEWSPAPER STORY recently told a case in point. A young man was the son of a wealthy contractor, went to a fine school, got a law degree, became a judge, and was made a director of a bank. Even with his extraordinary position in life, his better than usual income, he was not satisfied. What was good enough for others was not good enough for him. He tried gambling to get more. And gambling robbed him. Still, he had faith in it, and he stole to gamble more, probably with the usual foolish notion that he would pay it back. But evil is not kind to its victims. The shortage at the bank became enormous. Now he has been caught, exposed, disgraced, dishonored. Would it have paid him to be good? Undoubtedly. Did it pay to be bad? It did not.

Evil has no future. It will destroy itself, as every parasite does, because it kills its host first and then leaves itself no means of support. The end of evil is suicide. Good is bound to replace it in the end, and fill up the vacuum of desolation it leaves. Evil is like a fire that burns prairie and forest. Blackness and ruin follow it, but grass and trees always return after a time.

BEING BAD IS like going for a walk in a swamp, or getting into a slough. You never know what you are going to step into next. There is no stopping point; there is no safe place to rest; you are in danger all the time. To go back is about as perilous as to go ahead, once you are in the middle of it. Trouble is sure to come. And you cannot camp on the edge of it—you are either out or in.

There is one way out. You can repent. It will cost something to make the necessary restitution. You can never make up for the lost life, the lost opportunity, the lost time. But you can get on the right road again. And you can save yourself from the ruin which is the end of all sin.

A friend sent a note on a sermon heard by an eminent New York minister. Dr. McCracken said at Riverside church: "There is no tie so tender, but sin can sever it. There is no bond so strong, but sin can shatter it."

There are a thousand reasons why it pays to be good, why the moral life is better and happier. And you can see those reasons illustrated in the lives of men and women, all about you, every day.

L. J. L.

Editorial

Across the Desk

Some of the reunion themes being reported to the office are very stimulating. Among these we note that adopted for the Central Missouri Stake Reunion: "Let Nothing Separate Us." The participants in the reunion plan to consider the factors which unite them under God, in the Lord Jesus Christ, as members of the church, by the guidance of the ministry, as members of each other, in the light of the Holy Spirit, and for the sake of the work whereunto all have been called.

Zion and Kansas City will have a joint reunion and will remind each other that "Today We Lay the Foundation Stones for Zion." Daily themes indicate that these stones are laid by being obedient, by sharing talents, by being temperate, by being dependable, by keeping the Sabbath holy, by studying God's word, by loving one another, and through earnest prayer.

The Central Missouri Stake Reunion will be held July 10 to 18, and the Zion and Kansas City Stake Reunion will be held July 17 to 25. It occurs to us that some who cannot be at these reunions might wish to remember these themes in their private devotions and by so doing strengthen the ties uniting us as people of God.

F. H. E.

From Sister Carol Genrich, my niece, the daughter of Elder Hale W. Smith, a former missionary, I have received word about her family. They live at Route 3, Siloam Springs, Arkansas. She writes as follows on June 20:

I presume you have already heard from Father, because he is as happy as we are over the outcome of our trip to Joplin last Sunday—but I wanted to write you also, because I know you are truly interested.

Our plans all went well. Dad joined us, and we drove to Joplin—ninety miles away—and there during the service our two younger children were blessed and our son was baptized by Dad. Then my husband followed our son into the waters of baptism. Later, before the close of service, they were both confirmed into the Church of Jesus Christ. That day my cup of joy overflowed, for my fondest hopes were realized—our family circle was complete in the bonds of the gospel.

Many, many times I have wondered why fortune took us so far away from Independence and isolated us so completely from church privileges, but we feel now that this isolation was to show us how far we had strayed from God, and it served to draw us closer to him. We had our home for eight years on the very doorsteps of our church, almost within the shadow of the Stone Church. Yet we ignored and neglected our wonderful opportunity. But within a year after leaving there, we began to feel the lack of contact, the hunger for spiritual food, and our souls cried out for that which we had lost. So now, we are hoping that it will not be long before we can find a new home and this time near those of our own faith.

I read in the Herald the letters from those isolated from the church and feel with them their sense of loneliness, but if we could tell them of our experience, we feel they would be strengthened. During these three years we have read every scrap of church literature we could lay our hands on. We read the Heralds each week; we subscribed for the children's papers; we studied the Book of Mormon, the Doctrine and Covenants, and the Bible. I actually learned more about our church and the gospel of Jesus Christ during these years than I learned in all the rest of my life put together. I had to learn in order to teach our children and to answer the many, many questions, doubts, and criticisms put to me by my husband. So isolation has been good for us, and we are grateful to God for loving watchfulness over us and for leading us all to him.

My brother, Hale W. Smith, Okmulgee, Oklahoma, sends me a song written by his son-in-law, Russell W. Genrich, which he wrote while investigating the work. He has since been baptized. The words, called "Admonition," follow:

OFFICIAL

Notice of Appointment of Bishop's Agent

Notice is hereby given of the appointment of Brother Helmut Lippa, Barzigerstr. 27, Grossräschen, Germany, as Bishop's Agent of branches in the Russian Zone.

We commend Brother Lippa to all the Saints in that area, as he comes well recommended.

Tithes and offerings may be sent to him, and receipts will be issued by him to each individual so contributing. Brother Lippa will send his Bishop's Agent's reports to Brother E. A. Theys, who will in turn make a report to us. All solicitors in the Russian Zone will send their reports to Brother Lippa.

Sincerely yours,

THE PRESIDING BISHOPRIC,

By G. L. DeLapp.

Approved:

The First Presidency,

By Israel A. Smith

Be ready for Jesus, ye Saints of today,
And trust him for guidance all of the way.

Preach ye the gospel, that all may hear,
Teach of your Savior, the time may be near.

Be ready, ye Saints, be faithful and true,
And work for your Savior all the day through.

Save ye the lost ones, teach them the right,
Tell them of Jesus, the way, and the light.

Be ready, ye Saints, he calls unto thee,
Prepare for his coming, ruler to be.
Sing of his glory and love so divine,
Pray to your Father, ye builders of Zion.

ISRAEL A. SMITH

THE SAINTS' HERALD

Volume 95

July 24, 1948

Number 30

EDITORS: The First Presidency: Israel A. Smith, John F. Garver, F. Henry Edwards.
ASSISTANTS: Leonard J. Lea, Managing Editor; Kenneth L. Graham, Business Manager.
The Saints' Herald is the official publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, with headquarters at The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri, and is issued through the offices of Herald Publishing House, 103 South Osage Street, Independence, Missouri.
Entered as second-class matter at the post office at Independence, Missouri, under Act of March 3, 1879. Issued weekly at Independence, Missouri. Price, $3.50 per year and $1.75 for six months in advance in the U. S. A.; its territories and possessions; Canada, $3.75 per year and $1.90 for six months; other countries, $4.50 per year. Notice of a change of address must be given three weeks ahead of the date that it is to become effective. Accepted for mailing at the special rate of postage provided for in section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized July 21, 1921. Printed in the United States of America.

Atomic Force and Spiritual Power

By E. J. Gleazer, Jr.

President of Graceland College

An address to the Graceland congregation at the concluding service in a series reviewing the Missions Abroad—Hawaii, Australasia, Europe, Scandinavia, and Britain.

Introduction

OUR SPIRITUAL CAMPUS has touched shores thousands of miles away during these recent weeks. We have seen in the ministry to missions abroad giants of this movement. With little assistance from home and occasionally lacking even an expressed interest in the work, there have been those who have carried the message of the church to the peoples of the world. The dignified figure of Patriarch Waller comes to mind; through example as well as word, he told the gospel message to those in the islands of the sea. We've shared in imagination the thrilling story of the work being introduced in Britain. We have felt keenly the suffering of a handful who have carried on in Europe and Scandinavia. By those who have home ties in the land down under, there has been portrayed the promise of progress there. And there are probably few of us who wouldn't confess that as our area of concern has widened, we have felt the presence of futility. The problems have appeared as great as the bodies of water which divide these nations. What can an organization of just over 100,000 do that will make any difference in a world of two billion? What message could a church whose numbers are in the hundreds or less in many states and on some continents bring to the confused world of 1948? If we have sincerely worshiped in the services of these weeks, the counsel given of old has pierced our calloused sensitivities—"Let a man examine himself."

A sincere examination can lead to only one of two alternatives. Either a man gives himself unqualifiedly to the cause, or he must disassociate himself from the body. For there is no advantage whatsoever in belonging to the Church of Jesus Christ unless a man is immersed in it. Prestige, social advantages, a comfortable philosophy cannot be found. As inseparable companions to the spirit of peace promised, there can be expected a dissatisfaction with the present state of things, a restlessness, a sensitive conscience, the threat of misunderstanding or ridicule by those not sympathetic with the goals of the fellowship, and a gnawing, disturbing picture of what can be but is not. The message we would give to the world today then most certainly cannot be understood apart from the messenger. It must be personified. It cannot be wholly expressed in tracts, letters, sermons, or hymns. This word must become flesh. A young man at a youth conference recently testified, "When God had a message to give to the world, he didn't send it on a piece of paper—he sent a life, the life of his Son."

We need go no further unless we can agree to those terms. Too long has the world been separated from its bodily expression, and it has become harmless, anemic, worse than useless in many cases because it consisted of professions which salved the consciences of humanity but withered under such perversion. The Church of Jesus Christ has no message today which can be understood by the nations of the world apart from living expression. "It takes the overflow of heart to give the lips full speech."

A Voice of Warning

THE MESSAGE of the Church of Jesus Christ to the world of today must be a voice of warning. It is a warning in the spirit of prophecy—not prophetic merely in the sense of foretelling the future. When a sequence of events is noted, it doesn't take much of a prophet to know what the end result will be. The message of the church must be prophetic in the higher sense of insight, discernment, and interpretation. The man who lives by the elevated train soon is unconscious to the sound of the passing cars. There are those who have before them every day the beauties of nature—a maple tree with its seasonal dress or a snow-capped mountain peak—but are blind to the sight by virtue of its constant presence. We need a voice of warning to call to our attention the sounds and the sights and experiences that represent the shattering of a civilization which has been destined to achievements unsurpassed in the history of man.

It is an unpleasant responsibility to give a warning, one bound to lead to uncomfortable moments and rough ways. We destroy our prophets. We resist those who say we are responsible for the conditions in which we find ourselves. People think, surely the fault is that of the Jews or the Russians or the Germans or the Americans or the Republicans or the Democrats; perhaps it is the vengeance of God that has brought us to these undesirable days, or it might be the work of the devil or the uncertainties of nature; but men do not want to be told that the jungle in which they find themselves is of their own planting. Be that as it may, the seeds have been planted and the honest voice will declare that the growing trees have been cultivated with our selfishness, pride, and concern with things. The known paths are disappearing beneath the weight of undergrowth, the light of the sun is being blotted out, and night noises are striking terror to the hearts of the few who have ears to hear and eyes to see. Somehow, from somewhere, there must sound out that voice as hard as conscience—a voice which does not exempt self—telling us that we have sinned and have come short. The Church of Jesus Christ cannot remain silent. In every neighborhood, in the community, in the nation, and in the souls of men, sin—falling short of that which could be—must be seen. It must not be tolerated, must not be compromised. The Church can become the conscience of this civilization. It has already revealed that promise, but those who gave it expression were somehow diverted.

A Call to Repentance

The message of the church to the world of 1948 is a call to repentance. Has there ever been a word so grossly misunderstood as repentance? Jesus used it in his first public statement—"Repent ye for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." Eighteen hundred years later the call came again—"Repent ye for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." Repentance must be seen in its relation to sin. Sin can be described as the difference between what we are and what we could be. Repentance means, therefore, to adopt the necessary measures to more nearly approach our potential. The man who has heart trouble is told by the doctor that he must change his way of life, he must adjust himself to a healthful way of living, or he will die. The man expresses his repentance by living according to the doctor's counsel.

The farmer, who through ignorance of the laws of the soil or deliberate attempts to wrest from every acre all that can be produced without thought of replenishment, soon sees his soil exhausted, powerless, unproductive, capable of growing only weeds and cockleburrs. The consequences of his way of farming punish him. As he comes to himself—consults the soil conservation service, fertilizes the soil, plows on the contour, rotates his crops, and adopts sound farming practices—he is demonstrating his repentance, and the results follow. The soil begins to produce once more and he is the beneficiary.

FROM SOMEWHERE there needs to sound the call for man to repent. Surely the misery, the pain, the torment pushing up their tortured leaves wherever men dwell are the products of soil laid waste—social soil misused through the errors of men. Our social order is sick unto death. Where there should be an abundance, there is barrenness; where happiness was intended by the Creator of us all, there is too often hatred and despair. The voice of the one who wept over Jerusalem—who said, "A new commandment I give unto you that ye love one another," who said, "I am come that ye might have life and have it more abundantly"—that one calls, "Repent ye for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." Change your way of life, for you were meant to know joy and the satisfactions of human fellowship, the thrill of growth, the companionship of God's Spirit—this is the kingdom of heaven. But those words cannot reach the ears of men today unless there be someone who can speak them.

Is there somewhere a band of men and women who, through the power of their fellowship as well as the words they speak, can give meaning and clarity to the charge, "Repent ye for the kingdom of heaven is at hand"?

THE MESSAGE of the Church of Jesus Christ to the world of today is a declaration that the abundant life can be a living reality. As the major problems of this generation are precipitated, the residue is seen to be the person. Man's greatest enemy is himself. We've learned to dam the rivers, direct planes through fog and storm, and even partially control the hurricane. But the times are perilous. Could it be that the words spoken prophetically by Paul many years ago are being validated? "This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come. For men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection, truce-breakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good, traitors, heady, high-minded, lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God; having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof."—II Timothy 3: 1-5.

The times are perilous because men make them so! And the danger grows greater because of man's growing power. The peril became a sword of Damocles on a day in 1945—a year that might compare in importance for men with that separating A. D. from B. C. For one is in recognition of the Christ; the other could become the crowning achievement of materialism, the birth of the Frankenstein, the atomic monster which may destroy its creator. Growing power demands growing control for survival. The theme of the conference a few months ago of the American Association of Junior Colleges was "Education for Survival," but education alone cannot save the world, for it is rooted in things as they are.

MAN, IN THIS CASE, cannot lift himself up by his own bootstraps. He must see God if he is to know the abundant life. He must see himself as related to Divinity. Man is created after the image of the Son of God—a little lower than the angels—and promised the power to become a son of God. But his high calling is being blotted out beneath his growing concern for things. The call of the Church is for men to recognize their kinship to the Divine, their trusteeship of life and its opportunities, and the purpose for existence.

Surely life is a "little holding lent to do a mighty labor." Personality is of supreme value. The worth of men exceeds that of things, be they oil wells, acres of land, kingdoms, nations, or gold. The question of right and wrong must be decided by reference to the worth of persons. Men are worth dying for. Institutions and things are made for men. Never, perhaps, has there been a day with such a threat to man's right of choice and, therefore, his right of growth. The abundant life can become a reality, but man must have a revelation of his own worth, his reason for being, his responsibility to other men, and his part in a universe-wide purpose in which he adds to the total pattern.

Church Dedicated to Purpose

TO THIS PURPOSE the church dedicates itself. Perhaps you've been wondering, "What about the Book of Mormon, the distinctive ordinances of the church, the gifts of the spirit, priesthood, and the principles of the gospel?" These are aids in the process of becoming. They have worth as instruments and means for an eternal purpose. The goal of Zion is of importance because of what we become as we work toward that goal—as we participate in the kind of experiences that mature Zionist attitudes. The distinctiveness of ordinances is of importance as they add to the stature of a distinctive people—a people that now in its economy, its recreation, its family life, its zest for living, its health, its optimistic outlook, experience abundant living. If this be not true, to what avail is all the rest? If we are to have a distinctiveness, let us learn to place first things first; the first things are not the policy of the church or even its beginning and history, but in becoming a peculiar people—peculiar in quality of life.

What of our message to the world today? Surely the Church of Jesus Christ has a message, but it will not be given in a spirit of smugness, not with the attitude of knowing all the answers, of being the chosen people, not in setting itself above those poor mortals who must wrestle with the problems of every day. The Church of Jesus Christ will emulate its founder in sending forth its message. It will know the common man, it will harden its hands with him in his occupation—the carpenter shop, the fishing boat, the field of grain, the automobile plant, the business house, the schoolroom. It will see preaching as a lesser function, and living as a major one. It will buttress the good desires of men through its ordinances. Men will find inspiration and encouragement for the good life through the congeniality and richness of its fellowship. It will lead, will draw, will teach, but it will leave with the person his right of choice and will allow him to assume the consequences of his deciding, for it will see as its reason for being the revelation of human growth. A message to the world, yes, but it has its beginning in a smaller circle. "Andrew first findeth his brother Simon, and saith to him, We have found the Christ." Jesus said, "Love thy neighbor." To the fishermen, he said, "Let down thy nets where you are."

What Can We Do?

WHAT CAN WE DO—we who apparently are limited in resources, man power, and influence?

When I went to school, I was told that the atom was the smallest particle of matter. It was such a little thing that it didn't amount to much. But now comes the atomic bomb and the release of atomic energy. The atom has suddenly become a thing of fearful power. We look on the atom with new respect. Perhaps here is a clue for a new measure of ourselves. We feel terribly little in the face of world problems. We feel ourselves almost helpless. But like the atom, perhaps, we can start a chain reaction, releasing the energies of other people, working with other people to form a terrific power. Just as the atom lends its strength in combination with others to blast a city, so can our force in chain reaction with others do any job necessary to save men. The Word says that in latter days, "The weak things of the world shall come forth and break down the mighty and strong ones."

Days of Crises and Opportunity

WHERE DO YOU STAND? These are days of crises and, therefore, thrilling days of opportunity. God has promised the companionship of his spirit to those who venture in his name. No greater prize can we win than this, but it will be found as we move forward not uncertainly or hesitantly, but happily and forcefully. The church must become militant. Religion has been called "the opiate of the people," but religion can also be a tremendous, a terrible thing, stirring up the people, shattering all that is false, setting forth truth boldly. The curtain has gone up on the greatest drama in human history. Man's day of decision is inevitably upon him. To us has been given the unsurpassable privilege of living in such a day. To the Church has been given time to prepare for its mission to the people of the world in the day of their greatest need. The need for ministry and the ministers are in this century brought together. In their meeting can be born the kingdom of God.

Your Reasonable Service

By Ernest E. Crownover

I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service.
—Romans 12: 1.

GOD HAS NEVER at any time made an unreasonable demand upon any man. He simply asks that we give our time and effort to the support of the social welfare as we go along in our daily affairs. It is sufficient if we do this in an intelligent and understanding way, co-operatively, under leadership. He doesn't ask the spectacular and sensational, but the steady and consistent loyalty of converted and regenerated men and women.

The scripture asks for a living sacrifice. A sacrifice is anything consecrated and offered to God. It must be holy and acceptable. If the person, therefore, is disciplined in righteousness, the way is open for him to devote himself to God's purposes.

God is perfect. Intelligence, light, and truth are his glory. It may be assumed that he will use only qualified servants, informed, trained, with objectives in mind and a determination to persevere. These he will use as powerful instruments for good. God does not ask us to forget that we are vital, live personalities. Rather, he asks us to remember that fact, and apply our vitality to his glory and the service of others. He would not have us sterile, barren, bankrupt of productiveness. Not desiring a dead sacrifice, he asks one that is living, abounding in faith.

He rendered tremendous service to us. Creation itself is our bed, our table, and our canopy. And the Son of God died that we might receive an even greater estate. Light and truth are at our side, and the inspiration of the Almighty gives understanding. If we are born of this creative spirit, we will seek earnestly the best gifts and expend them utterly for God and the brethren in reasonable service. In this alone we may find the satisfaction and personal salvation which shall be the lot of only the faithful servant.

The Order of Bishops has published, with the approval of the Presiding Bishopric, a study entitled Standards for a Steward. Although brief, it is the product of extensive studies over a period of time. The outline "sets forth the solid foundations upon which we may develop as stewards." I wish to reproduce the outline here, beginning with the last paragraph of the few introductory remarks:

As an aid to church members in measuring their qualifications, there are set forth below some basic standards for a steward.

1. PERSONALITY TRAITS

THE STEWARD:

- A. Maintains basic integrity, moral soundness, clean personal living, honesty (Psalms 15:1-5; 24:3, 4; Matthew 7:26; I Peter 3:10:12).
- B. Is altruistic in outlook (Luke 10:28-38; Matthew 25:35-41).
- C. Possesses a humble spirit (Matthew 18:3; Micah 6:8; Doctrine and Covenants 11:4).

2. PERSONAL PRACTICES AND HABITS

THE STEWARD:

- A. Attends church consistently and gives active support to the local branch (Hebrews 10:23-25; Doctrine and Covenants 59:2; III Nephi 8:53).
- B. Evidences a growing understanding of the church doctrine and program (II Timothy 2:15; Doctrine and Covenants 85:21).
- C. Files a financial statement annually, pays tithes and offerings, and assists financially in his local branch according to ability (Luke 11:43; Proverbs 3:9; Doctrine and Covenants 42:9; 129:8).

- D. Is industrious in all good works (Titus 3:8; Doctrine and Covenants 75:5; 42:12).
- E. Has a record of honorable dealing in business, financial and social relations (Luke 6:32; Romans 12:17).

3. FAMILY LIFE

THE STEWARD'S HOME:

- A. Is distinguished by stable, happy family relationships and cultural refinement (Ephesians 5:33; 6:1-4; Proverbs 23:22-24; Jacob 2:55-57).
- B. Provides meaningful religious experiences for the children, indoctrinating them in the stewardship philosophy (Proverbs 22:6; Doctrine and Covenants 68:4; 90:6, 9).
- C. Gives opportunities for the practical application of stewardship principles (Mosiah 2:25-28).
- D. Evidences good financial management (Proverbs 31:27; 27:23, 24; Doctrine and Covenants 119:9).

4. COMMUNITY LIFE

THE STEWARD:

- A. Is community minded, exerting his influence toward the physical and spiritual betterment of his neighbors (Matthew 22:38; James 1:27; 2:17, 23, 25; Doctrine and Covenants 58:6).
- B. Is co-operative, dependable, courteous, and adaptable in his community relations (Romans 13:10; 15:2; I Corinthians 10:32, 33).
- C. Strives to be worthy of leadership responsibilities by developing qualities of initiative, resourcefulness, and proficiency (Matthew 5:18; Doctrine and Covenants 4:1, 2).

5. ECONOMIC QUALIFICATIONS

THE STEWARD:

- A. Becomes self-sustaining to the best of his ability, developing competency in his chosen vocation or profession (I Timothy 5:8; I Thessalonians 4:11, 12; II Thessalonians 3:10-12).
- B. Accumulates resources to the end that he and others may be provided with an inheritance in harmony with the principles set forth in the revelations to the church (Doctrine and Covenants 48:2; 45:12; 57:4).

Challenges

—4—

By Norma Anne Kirkendall

— 1 —

STATISTICS interest me and, although I realize there is no such thing as a true average, I watch such figures, for they indicate trends of living. For instance, in my browsing recently I ran across the figures showing some of the activities an average man accomplishes each day. His heart beats 103,389 times and his blood travels 168 million miles while he breathes 23,040 times. He inhales 438 cubic feet of air, eats three and one fourth pounds of food and drinks two and nine tenths pounds of liquid. He perspired one and forty-three hundredths pints and gives off eighty-five and six tenths degrees of heat, generating 450 tons of energy. His nails grow forty-six millionths inches, while his hair grows one thousand seven hundred fourteen hundred thousandth of an inch. Most important, he exercises seven million brain cells.

Another calculation interested me. Comparing the normal lifetime of seventy years to the waking hours of an individual's single day (7:00 a.m. to 11:00 p.m.), if you are

15 years old, the time is 10:25 a.m.
20 years old, the time is 11:34 a.m.
25 years old, the time is 12:42 p.m.
30 years old, the time is 1:52 p.m.
40 years old, the time is 4:08 p.m.
50 years old, the time is 6:25 p.m.
60 years old, the time is 8:42 p.m.
65 years old, the time is 9:51 p.m.
70 years old, the time is 11:00 p.m.

Swift to its close ebbs out life's little day.

Then a man of eighty years of age set down the statistics of his life and decided that he had slept twenty-six years and worked twenty-one years. He had spent 238 days shaving, 140 days paying bills, twenty-six days scolding children, two days yelling at dogs, and twenty-six hours laughing. Evidently he didn't consider his time spent in church work as important, or possibly it was too negligible in quantity.

— 2 —

MY EARLIEST RECOLLECTION of any form is of trying to guide my newly purchased Irish Mail (a complicated variant of a tricycle) down the sidewalk. Somehow the machine insisted on moving in the opposite direction from the one in which I guided it. Of course, at two years of age, my muscular co-ordination was not complete—and thus two days later I drove off the porch, diving on the concrete right on my nose. That nasal digit was broken, and even today's sniffled discomfort reminds me of this early escape.

People often try to take on responsibilities for which they are not fitted or for which they have not been trained. In such a situation, it is to be expected that difficulties will arise. Preliminary failures do not necessarily presage total failure, although such may be the final result. Certainly this is an added argument in favor of preparation for all activities undertaken, in order to eliminate as many of the possibilities of hurt as you can. Every failure, no matter how minor, leaves a scar which may carry over into other activities. How much better to have never got that scar. Conversely, each success makes easier each succeeding task.

Thus my crooked nose reminds me that there are some things which should not be tackled without adequate preparation or capabilities.

— 3 —

BACK IN 1942, a friend of mine rushed into my home, telling me that a sign erected on a certain spot said that twenty-three bombing planes would be built there. So we began speculating as to how large a factory would be erected. Yet, the next time I passed that corner I saw that what the billboard actually said was that twenty-three bowling lanes would be in the new structure. Her war-conscious mind had told her brain an untruth.

Too often we believe things, and we would vow as to their whole truth, which are figments of distorted spiritual vision or personal desires. We attribute attitudes to others which either ape or contradict our own—as we so desire. It soon becomes the same old story of the mote and beam. This is the reason why few people can be counted upon as reliable witnesses, for no matter how straight they think their story is, it still is not complete and is likely to be tinged by prejudice.

We who are witnesses for Christ should be so familiar with the truth and so sold on the whole endeavor that there can be no chance for misrepresentation.

PROMINENTLY DISPLAYED on the doors in the entranceway of the National Cathedral in Mexico City are placards printed in large letters, both in English and Spanish. The words are strangely incongruous: "Beware of pickpockets."

In a department store in Barberton, Ohio, I read a sign which irritated me by its implications: "We reserve the right to search your handbags."

It is evident that purse snatching, pick-pocketing, and petty thievery are growing in frequency. The problem is troublesome to merchants and individuals alike. No police force is large enough to patrol all possible channels of this type of violation, nor is the major part of it attributable to a growing number of kleptomaniacs.

This problem enters into our lives from other angles as well as those of loss of tangible property. One of the most common losses to all people is that of valuable time, stolen by false advertising, worthless printed matter, trashy radio programs, and misleading movies. One reason so many people advance for their inability to get things done is that they "just don't have time." We all have the same amount of time—eternity—to live. The real problem is not that we don't have the time, it is the weighing of the relative value of the things we want to do. It is easy to come to the end of a day and not know where the time has gone, for inconsequentialities too often rob us of this valuable resource.

Service

I belong to my church
For but one reason
To serve;
To seek to build
The kingdom of God
And establish his righteousness.
And for myself I seek nothing
Save the accomplishment
Of this end.
And though I have faith
In his promises
No dreams of celestial glory
Lead me on.
And though my reward
Be pain and disappointment,
Yet my desire shall be
To serve.

—Merlin Miller

Tracting and Visiting - By Apostle Maurice Draper

Tracting

Definition

Tracting should not be understood as being limited to "handbilling" a neighborhood, but should be understood as the use and distribution of tracts in any situation where the printed, brief messages may be helpful in stirring men to a conviction of sin and repentance through a consciousness of Christ.

History

Tracts have been used by almost every church in Christendom to present its version of the spirit and law of the gospel. It might be said that the letters of Paul were tracts of a special, intimate nature, written with the special needs, background and understanding of the people to whom they were addressed in mind.

Tracts have been prominent in the Restoration. From the beginning, literature has been used to expand, undergird, and make more permanently effective the spoken testimony.

The writing and publication of tracts was commanded in 1901 (Doctrine and Covenants 125:11); they were to be written in such languages as the missionary activities of the church should require. Scandinavian, German, Chinese, Japanese, and Portuguese are especially named, in addition to English, which gives rise to the thought that effective work in any mission cannot be carried on by verbal testimony alone; it must be buttressed and supported by the written word, thus giving permanence to the oral testimony.

Before this date, tracts, leaflets, brochures, and books had already been effectively used in early missionary work. Experience lends authority to such works as A Voice of Warning, one of our earliest tracts.

Use of Tracts

Technically we are outside the range of our topic to include brochures and books in this discussion. However, most of our tracts have been brochures rather than tracts in the strictest sense, and since the purpose of all literary products is fundamentally the same in each case, and their uses not a great deal different, we shall presume to discuss also the use of larger works than leaflets and tracts.

The use of tracts seems to have fallen into disrepute in some quarters. This may be partly because of the limitations of choice in subject matter and length of treatment, and because many of our tracts have grown old and out-of-date. Missionaries, however, instead of complaining of these limitations, ought to do the obvious thing; i.e., write manuscripts of those needed and submit them for examination. If the use of tracts is considered a disreputable method of missionary work, either because of poor quality or lack of technique, it should be rescued and used again. The Catholics are reported to have revived street preaching in England, and have used it to good advantage, giving it a dignity and effectiveness thought impossible a few years ago. Maybe this can be done with tracting.

House to House

The specific methods of tracting should be evaluated against the background of the answer to the question, "Do people read tracts because they are interested, or are they interested because they read tracts?" The evident answer is that they read tracts because they are interested, either through some personal contact with church members, through some community activity which has been drawn to their attention, or by the approach made by the person doing the tracting.

House-to-house tracting may easily become an aimless activity in which valuable tracts are indiscriminately scattered like handbills. If so, they will receive no more attention than handbills, and most of them will wind up in the wastebasket. This kind of tracting probably is more difficult than any other method, and may be an inefficient use of the missionary's time, since he is usually in the area so short a period that he does not have the opportunity to follow up. This method could be very effective, however, for local priesthood and laity, who live in the neighborhood, and who can follow up consistently over a period of months or even several years. The missionary may well take some time in training local personnel in the method as part of his missionary administration. To do so, he must get out and do it with them. This does not mean that he should spend a disproportionate share of his time in this, when it may more profitably be used in visiting known prospects, conducting cottage meetings, teaching and preaching. But additional emphasis on this method makes available an avenue of service to local people which we are not now using.

IN HOUSE-TO-HOUSE TRACTING, the tract should be handed to the neighbor personally. Do not leave it in the mailbox. This is against federal regulations. Do not tuck it under the door or stick it in the screen door handle. Remember, if the tract is read, it will probably be because there has been awakened an interest in the matter by the contact of personalities. Introduce yourself briefly, identify your church affiliation, give the location of the building, and a brief remark about the subject treated in the tract. If the tract is Faith of Our Fathers, you may say, "This pamphlet contains a statement by one of the grandsons of Joseph Smith to a large Protestant Church of some of the reasons for his distinctive beliefs. We think you will find it of interest." If the tracts are received, state that you will be back to pick it up at a certain time. This will do two things: it will conserve tracts, but more important, it will make the person feel that you consider it valuable enough to be worth your while using the time and energy to recover it. This, in turn, may stimulate interest even more, resulting in a sooner, more attentive reading.

When returning to pick up the tract, you can soon learn if it is worth-while leaving another. At this point, some of the homes will be eliminated from your follow-up. Others may be eliminated after the second or third visit, while some will begin to stand out as homes of missionary opportunity. These may be followed up by cottage meetings, visiting, and accompanied always by invitations to attend services at the church.

In new openings, the homes of those showing interest may well serve as rallying points for meetings which progress through the visiting, cottage meeting stages, to the point where classes, prayer services, and other activities may be held. If such interest develops, however, a public meeting place should be sought and obtained as soon as possible.

Person to Person Tracting

This is probably the most effective method. Every member, and certainly every ordained minister, ought to have a small supply of tracts covering the entire field in which we have publications. In this more restricted circulation of literature, books should also be used. There is great merit in the suggestion that books should be given away, not loaned. It was once thought that people would not value that which they are given, and that they ought to buy books and tracts. On the other hand, the spirit of the gospel is not that men shall receive that to which they are entitled because they have earned it, or have paid for it, but that men do not know what they are missing because of their blindness and spiritual inexperience. God gave his Son. Christ gave his life. These gifts were not earned, they were the result of love. What if we do lose some tracts to people who will not read them, or spend our good money on books which we shall never see again? We should exercise reasonable care—"Do not cast your pearls before swine"—but worthy people are won by sacrificial love, not by "selling" them the gospel through charging them for the written message.

Person to person contacts are made first with one's own friends. If alert to the opportunities, many tracts can be placed in the hands of friends to enlarge upon some bit of conversation and to open the field of interest to include other subjects. Through one's friends, access may be had to their friends, and so on—a method which should result in a widening circle of friends of whom many may become church members.

A variation on the person-to-person method is the use of the mails. Everyone has correspondent friends and acquaintances to whom tracts and books may be sent. Due to the peculiar joy nearly everyone seems to have in receiving mail, especially of a personal nature, it is likely that presentations made in this way will be read and with considerable initial interest.

Use of Tracts in Preaching Services

Every branch should have a tract rack in the foyer of the church. This should be kept clean, in a prominent place, and continually replenished. When missionary sermons are being featured by local speakers on Sunday evenings, tracts on the subject and those related should be prominently displayed. Reference may be made to them in the bulletin, or by announcement from the pulpit. Long after churchgoers have forgotten the details of the sermon, or even the major points, they can refer to tracts on the subject and build the material into their growing understanding of the gospel.

During evangelistic series of services, tracts should be even more prominently displayed. We have even heard of missionaries who prepared a brief statement with scriptural references concerning the subject to be discussed and distributed mimeographed copies to the entire congregation. This is certainly a form of tracting.

We need a greater variety of tracts than we now have. Let us not blame the Presidency or the Herald Publishing House or anyone else, if we don't have them. Let us write them, on many subjects, and in varying styles of treatment. As they become available, let us use them—use them in such quantity that the volume at the Herald House will reduce some of the prices we complain of. Through them an increasing number of casual acquaintances may become friends and finally members of the church.

Visiting

IT IS PRESUMED that the nature of this gathering justifies the limitation of the subject to missionary visiting. Certainly we could not now do justice to the entire field of ministerial visiting, including that which is directed toward family adjustments, differences, and the variety of pastoral situations involved in visiting. Let us then think of missionary visiting.

Many visits may result from the follow-up of tracting methods as indicated heretofore. So far as the factors of time, directness of conversational approach, and the number of people involved are concerned, the missionary visit may be said to lie somewhere between the passing contacts of house-to-house tracting and the cottage meeting. This distinction, however, is not sharp and may hardly be accurate, since the cottage meeting is one form of visit. Visiting is not restricted to the direct appointment kind of contact associated with cottage meetings, but it includes any kind of experience in which there may be conversation and communion of mind and heart concerning the gospel. This may take place by appointment, either at cottage meetings, or in an even more informal social experience at which no special message is presented by the visiting minister. It may also occur on the street, at school, or at work. Admittedly, this is a broad construction of the term, but it is prompted by the experience of a pastor in California who testified one time that he looked for an opportunity to get in a good word about the church whenever and wherever he met a member or friend with whom he felt free to so converse. It is further bolstered by the recent experience of a young deacon, a star backfield football player for Graceland, who played a part in the conversion of a teammate in a Mobile high school by the almost unconscious testimony of a few words here and there, together with the quality of his life and personality.

WHEN VISITING in a home, there are several negative rules to follow.

1. Don't take a church service into the home. Hymns and vocal prayers will not be a part of a regular visiting experience. Praying may be left to the discretion of the minister, who will try to sense the pulse of the home situation. Let vocal prayer be the result of the spiritual consent of those in charge of the home. Your prayers will be much availing, but let them be in secret, and before coming to the home until the ties of friendship permit the intimacy of leading a worship experience in the home. Do not avoid the prayer, but lead the people into it carefully.

Hymn singing in a visit is undesirable. The exceptions may occur in homes where music is part of the natural fabric of life, and then initiative should be taken by those in the home. But in all cases it should be remembered, homes are not designed for church services, and visiting is a different kind of ministry from that of preaching and congregational worship.

2. Don't stay too long. The first visit in a stranger's home is a time of exploration. There may be tensions at first, and these can be resolved most easily through frequent, brief contacts, in which growing experiences come gradually enough to be constantly fresh and yet not over-stimulating. Then there may be conditions demanding attention by the householder which would be interrupted or frustrated by too-long visits. Leave the people wanting to see more of you, rather than sighing with relief when you're gone.

AFFIRMATIVE RULES would include the following:

1. Have something to talk about. Don't be left in the lurch if conversation doesn't come easily. Have several subjects in mind for discussion. It is very helpful if an interest of your host can be learned in advance, and it can be introduced for conversation. Listen to him. You are there first of all to make a friend. When you have won his confidence, you'll have plenty of opportunity to turn his thoughts toward the gospel. With a few well-phrased questions, he may be encouraged to talk himself into the church.

2. The advantage of visiting over other kinds of contacts is partly in the intimacy permitted by the narrowing of attention to the needs and personalities of a few people, or perhaps one person. But intimacy is not merely a matter of a few numbers—it is a spiritual relationship. It involves the identification of the visitor with his host. He must be able to enter a communion of experience with them. Several suggestions for the spiritual preparation essential to this would include: thought and study, both of the people to be visited and the particular purpose to be achieved in the visit,

(Continued on page 22.)

The Use of the Book of Mormon in Missionary Work - Part 2

Substance of lecture given at Convention of Twelve and Seventy, Kansas City, Missouri, January 3-9, 1948

Correct and Wise Emphases

IN ADDUCING EVIDENCE from Bible prophecy, from archaeology, from Indian traditions, or from witnesses, the quality of the evidence should have first consideration rather than the quantity.

Great emphasis should be given to the basic, the fundamental and selling points together with the connecting links that make them valuable, rather than passing unimpressively over much matter, some of which may be questionable or subject to fair criticism.

From Bible prophecy the following is important:

1. A record that some day was to become one with the Bible in God's hand, was to be preserved by the descendants of Joseph (Ezekiel 37).
2. Joseph's people were not to remain in Palestine, but were to "run over the wall" (Genesis 49).
3. The land described suggests America (Genesis 49; Deuteronomy 33).
4. In this land called "Joseph's" or "his" land, heavenly blessings would be experienced. (Special emphasis is in order here, for the record they would keep might reasonably be expected to tell of such heavenly blessings or experiences with God, even as the Jews who recorded such events in Palestine.)
5. Jeremiah 49: 30-32, reveals that certain ones were commanded to flee from Hazor, Jerusalem, about 600 B. C. to some place in the world where a people dwelt alone, and upon whom a great calamity was impending. (This prophecy forms a powerful connecting link with the account of the downfall of the Jaredites and the coming of Lehi and his colony in 600 B. C.; it finds archaeological support in the evidences of different eras of occupation.)

6. The "Sealed Book" of Isaiah 29 was to come forth at a certain time (already past) and in a certain manner fulfilled literally by the coming forth of the Book of Mormon.

Its value would be of a spiritual nature, for it would be associated with "a marvellous work and a wonder" which would cause the meek to increase and their joy be in the Lord, the poor among men to rejoice in the Holy One of Israel, and those who murmured to learn doctrine.

The words of the book would be delivered to a learned man (this was liberally fulfilled when Martin Harris presented to Professor Anthon of New York a transcript copied from the plate) and the book itself to an unlearned man. (Joseph Smith, the translator, was unlearned.)

7. The "other sheep" referred to by Jesus were the inhabitants of America. From archaeology and Indian traditions, emphasis might well be placed upon the following:
 - a. The God, Quetzalcoatl, whom the ancients worshiped, came to them in the form of a man.
 - b. He was not born in America. (This is extremely important.)
 - c. He was born of a virgin. (The interesting question arises: How did they know this, since he was not born in their own country? They did; and this generally accepted tradition becomes to us of tremendously more value than if they had claimed he had been born in America.)

By Seventy Harold I. Velt

- d. He never married. (An interesting contradiction to certain Utah doctrines.)
- e. The crucifixion is recognized, attested by the adoration of the cross in connection with his worship by the ancients. (This is more powerful as evidence, because he did not die in America.)
- f. He was bearded and white of skin. (He was different from the Indians in these respects.)
- g. His promise to return was universally accepted by the Indians. So strongly so, that this belief had a considerable bearing on the conquest by the Spaniards.
- h. He was the creator—the eternal light — called Pachayachachic, meaning the teacher or regulator. He was also called Pachacamac, meaning ruler of the universe.
- i. Murals of him clearly represent he did not die after his appearance in America but ascended into heaven, where he lives.
- j. The Spaniards found baptism being practiced by the Mayas in Central America with the understanding that it symbolized "being born again." Thus, in contradistinction to the term Capucxstal, which means simply to come to life a second time, there was instead Caput-sibil, which means "to be born again" in the sense that only Jesus could have introduced. There are other points worthy of special emphasis, but the foregoing are pre-eminent in their missionary value and can be well-established from authentic sources.

Emphases in Connection With the Witnesses

MERELY PRESENTING the fact that the plates were seen by witnesses, three of whom saw an angel, though valuable in itself may be added to greatly and the evidence made exceedingly more strong by an examination of the nature of the circumstances.

Too, there is the principle in God's great economy of the Lord's doings being first revealed by prophecy. So important is this principle in the examination of spiritual claims such as we are considering, that the Lord has left on record, "If they believe not Moses and the prophets, neither would they be persuaded though one should rise from the dead." — Luke 16: 31. When something miraculous happens in the precise manner that has been prophesied in the name of the Lord, that is stronger testimony to the honest investigator than any other miraculous thing could be. "We have therefore a more sure knowledge of the word of prophecy" might appropriately be applied here. Prophecies concerning the witnesses to the Book of Mormon were of such a nature, so outstandingly different from what might have been expected and so peculiarly subjected to discovery and exposure of deceit and collusion—should there have been such among the men involved—that we immediately have something of great worth as we study the following points of prophecy from the Book of Mormon itself, pages 150 and 726, together with Doctrine and Covenants 5 and 15:

1. Three witnesses besides Joseph would see the plates.
2. They would do so by the power of God and not of man.
3. They would hear the voice of God from heaven.

4. Only these three besides Joseph would have the same testimony in this generation.

5. A few others would view the plates (but not have the same testimony).

6. The three were named (Oliver Cowdery, David Whitmer, and Martin Harris).

7. The three were to see other sacred things besides the plates.

Remember, all these prophecies were on record; and yet, until the latter part of June, 1829, not one such experience had been had. And notice, by the very nature of them they would not likely be, unless it were God who had said so. No amount of fraud could produce the kind of experience the witnesses had. They heard, out of a conduit of light which shone around them, a voice from heaven saying, "These records have been revealed by the power of God. They have been translated by the power of God. The translation is correct, and you are commanded to bear testimony to the world of what you now see and hear."

The details of the circumstances surrounding the translation and the testimony of the witnesses were made so public by newspaper articles and other writers and testimonies at the time (although frequently in an attempt to destroy the validity of the work) that by carefully comparing them, one finds the principal physical events substantiated which are necessary in this study. (For detail, see the very valuable work, A New Witness for Christ in America, by Kirkham.

Only one unacquainted with these events of history would question the sincerity of the witnesses. An insincere man would not have mortgaged his farm against the importunities of his friends as did Martin Harris to raise $3,000 for the printing of the first 5,000 copies of the Book of Mormon; nor would an insincere man have traveled thousands of miles at his own expense in the interests of its circulation. Neither would he have paid $1,800 tithing to the church at one time. Such physical facts as these are amply supported from outside evidence as well as by church witnesses. Realizing this, some have sought to weaken the power of the testimony of the witnesses on grounds other than insincerity or fraud, or that these men ever denied their testimony.

Werner, for instance, writing in The Ladies' Home Journal under the title "Brigham Young," says the witnesses never did deny their testimony. Then he goes on to say what he (Werner) believed actually took place was this:

"They were praying, and desirous and anxious to see the plates. What was in the back of their minds was projected forward, and they saw the plates and the angel."

Quite obviously Mr. Werner's theory will not hold. Firstly, if the plates had not actually been there, they could not have been handled. When the men stretched out their hands to turn the gold leaves, they would have been disillusioned immediately; but they handled the plates.

And Mr. Werner did not take into consideration that eight other witnesses, who did not have the same experience as these three, also handled the plates.

Then there is the fact that three men of different types, ages, and walks of life, together with the fourth man, Joseph Smith, all heard the same words from heaven out of the bright light in broad afternoon daylight; they saw the angel, heard the same words which he spoke, and saw other sacred things.

How powerful is such evidence in missionary work!

A law student came in from the hills to study law with a country lawyer. He stayed two days. Someone asked him why he quit. Didn't he like law?

"Naw—law ain't what it's cracked up to be. Sorry I learned it."

A Growing Understanding of the Mission and Message

By Mrs. C. G. Mesley

I THINK one of the most rewarding things that anybody, Christian or non-Christian, can do is to read the Bible often. It is not necessary for me to tell you what a wonderful piece of literature it is. It is accepted as that by all grades of people in the world. Writers and teachers tell us if we want to develop a good style, we should study the Bible. Even from that point of view, it is richly rewarding. But it is infinitely more rewarding in the glimpses it gives us of truly great men and women. Some men and women were, by nature, not very great, but because they allied themselves to a mighty cause, they became great.

Let us think of two of the best-known apostles whose biographies are written in the Book of Books. Peter and Paul, both apostles of the Lord, had very different backgrounds, but they had certain fundamental similarities; and they are tied rather closely into your life and mine. Consider the call of Peter—not the call to discipleship, but the more direct call to service that came to him from Jesus. The story is very simply told in about three verses by Matthew, and, I believe, three verses by Mark in almost identical language. Just three short verses, but the result of those short verses has changed the history of the world.

PETER WAS on the Sea of Galilee while Jesus walked up and down the shore. Seeing Peter working with his nets, Jesus said, "Come, follow me." There was nothing spectacular about it, just the invitation, "Come, follow me," yet Peter straightway left his nets and followed Jesus. How very stupid and how very foolish it must have seemed to some of Peter's friends. Maybe it seemed that way to Peter. He had a fairly lucrative business; he had a certain amount of social prestige; he was married. Why should he be asked to leave his home and his wife? He was an experienced and skillful fisherman. Why should he give that up? Why should he take on the uncertainty of the life of an itinerant preacher? He knew that Sea of Galilee—but preaching—that was totally different. He didn't know whether he could do it. He faced all the doubts and fears of the unknown. Why should he give up his security when he didn't know where his next meal was coming from? Why didn't he say, "I can serve the church by working at my trade and paying my tithing"? Some of our people say that today. But when Jesus said, "Come, follow me," Peter left his nets and left his home, left the things to which he was accustomed and went out to follow the Lord.

VERY DIFFERENT was the call that came to Paul. Paul was on the highway in the full blaze of noon on that main road leading to Damascus when the word of the Lord came to him. It came with such force he was stricken to the ground and blinded by the impact of the experience. Wasn't that dramatic? Just as dramatic as the call to Peter was simple. And this is what Ananias told him, "You have been chosen of the Lord that you might come to know him and that you might be his witness unto all people of what you know and have seen." From that time on, there was no turning back for Paul.

I can't think of a sharper contrast; I can't think of two more world-shaking events than the call of Peter and the call of Paul to direct service. You will say that is very interesting to read as a bit of biography in the Bible, but what has that to do with you and me?

It has this to do with us; we are called to the same service to which Peter was called. In the face of the need of this world and to the discipleship that we assumed when baptized, the call comes to us, I believe, stronger than ever before. The call comes, just as strongly as it did to Paul, that we shall know the Lord, and, knowing him, shall witness unto all people those things which we know. We are baptized with the same baptism; we are pledged to the same world-wide mission—the establishment of the kingdom of God on this earth.

The tie between Peter and Paul and you and me is very real.

WHAT DOES JESUS call us to follow him to? I think he calls us to ways of understanding our fellow men, or sympathizing with our fellow men, or fellowship with our fellow men. I am quite sure that he is calling us to winsome goodness. You all know the story about the little girl who prayed. She prayed that all the bad people should be made good, and that all the good people should be made nice. We are made conscious of the winsomeness of Jesus Christ as we read of his life. His goodness was so approachable—not terrifying, but tender. This is one of the most attractive qualities of his personality. So winsome was he that little children loved him, so approachable that even wicked people were not afraid of him. The publicans and the sinners welcomed him. It wasn't that he didn't know the law—he knew, but he was understanding, he was sympathetic, and he had a wonderful gift for fellowship. The common people heard him gladly. This winsome goodness was not terrifying, not terrible; with all the dignity of real meekness, he lived. Don't you and I need that sort of goodness? Sometimes our very eagerness to preach the gospel leads us into errors. We have the truth, but we don't need to hit anybody on the head with it. The Lord himself didn't do that. We are told to preach the word with meekness and mildness. It is very difficult for me to be meek and mild, but the Lord knew what he was talking about. Win people, don't club them. Win them to the church by lovable, sympathetic, understanding goodness. That in itself is a tall order and, because it is such, we go to our Master.

IF IT WAS NECESSARY for Jesus to spend hours and sometimes a whole night in prayer so he could see the will of God and his purposes—so that he could see people as God saw them, so that he could see good in his fellow men—don't you think it is necessary for us to pray often? I am sure of it. If the Lord of life needed this discipline, how much more you and I need it. The Lord says, "Follow me into the ways of prayer, follow me into the ways of intercession." One of the sweetest, one of the tenderest parts in that very wonderful Book of Books comes in the account of the Lord's Supper when Jesus was talking to Peter. He said, "Peter, behold, Satan hath desired to have thee that he might sift thee as wheat, but I have prayed to the Father that thy faith fail not." Wasn't that marvelously tender of Jesus' sensing Peter's need that He should pray to the Father that his faith fail not!

- - - a home column feature - - -

You and I intercede for those we love. In the old days when knighthood was in flower, those colorful and chivalrous men went out seeking to redress wrong and to establish right. We no longer have our knights going out in shining armor, but every morning our men go out into the world of affairs. They go out to buck ungodly evil conditions. It is our hope and our prayer under all circumstances that they shall be men of honor, some of the honorable men of the earth. We know in this day it is not always the man of honor who gets promotion. Often a man is penalized for his virtue. Sometimes it is hard to see men of less worth preferred before our dear ones, but as women of this church and followers of Jesus, we should pray that under all circumstances our men will be honorable. We should be willing to take the consequences, whatever they may be. We must pray for our men that they may hold blameless the name of Jesus Christ in the business world; it is not an easy thing to do.

ALL LATTER DAY SAINT MOTHERS should pray for their children. Sometimes it is difficult for youngsters to stand up for what is right. We desire they should be truly good, yet not snobbish nor priggish. We need to pray for them that in their sphere, humble though it might be, they may do what is good and pure and true, resisting evil. We need to pray for the young people who go to college. Some of them go far from home and become so buried in their studies that they neglect the church. We should pray for the boys and girls at Graceland. They have choices and decisions to make, and they need wisdom. They need the gifts of the Spirit if those years are to be the happiest and most productive in the long run. We need to pray for our young people on the hill at Graceland that they shall have the courage of their convictions.

We could go on and on with these prayers of intercession. I am thankful I am not president of this church, but that doesn't relieve me of responsibility. The burden our leaders carry is tremen-

Presenting the Author

The world-wide organization of the church has brought many splendid people to our shores; outstanding among them is Sister Blanche Edwards Mesley. She was born in England, educated at the University of Birmingham, and came to America as a young woman. Many fine opportunities were offered to her in other fields because of her abilities and preparation, but she chose to give her service to the church, even though it took her away from her homeland and family.

From 1923 to 1929, she was leader of the General Department of Women. Under her leadership, interest in the women's work grew, and a greater number of women were stimulated to engage more actively in it. She was married to Apostle C. G. Mesley in 1927 and since then has been a companion to him in his church work at home and abroad, while still retaining a deep interest in women's work and furthering it on every occasion. The Mesleys have a son, Gordon, of whom they are justly proud.

To her home, Sister Mesley brings an appreciation of beauty; her art is expressed in her skilled workmanship of knitting and needlework. She has a keen sense of humor and is a delightful friend.

She has been a member of the General Council of Women since its organization in 1934, and her careful attention to the opinions of others as they are expressed and her wise counsel have endeared her to the members of this group.

Words cannot describe adequately the gracious qualities, the consecrated spirit, the deep devotion and convictions which combine to make Sister Blanche such a vivid personality in the church. She is in demand as a speaker, teacher, and reunion worker by nonmember groups as well as by our own church people. We feel fortunate that she is among us in the center place.

dous. How do we know that they are not at this minute making far-reaching decisions? If we ask God to be with those men and enable them to be guided by his Spirit, there is a far greater chance for their success than if we are indifferent.

Have you ever prayed for your local pastor? I have the honor of knowing a certain Elder Swain. This man is a printer by trade and has his print shop in the back of his house. His family has had a super-abundance of sickness. Few families have suffered more, and there have been doctors' bills, hospitalization, and all sorts of expenses. Yet I have never known of a church service in their branch when Walter Swain did not attend. At funerals and in time of bereavement, he is a tower of sympathetic strength. It is marvelous how that man has discharged all those duties—and not one penny in recompense. How ungrateful we would be to take the ministry of a man like that without so much as a thank you. There are Walter Swains all over this church. There are hundreds of them here throughout this country. We should thank God for those people and pray daily that their hands may be strengthened, and that they may be filled with the power and the Spirit of God according to their needs. It is a privilege to be able to pray for people like that.

HAVE YOU COME to the place where you can pray for your enemies? The Master said, "Do good to those who despitefully use you. Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good." Don't let the unhappy things of life get you down. Pray for those who despitefully use you, that your own hearts may be changed. Try to see these people as God sees them; he loved even the worst of them well enough to send his Son to die for them. Pray for them that their wrong attitude shall be changed, that the Spirit of the Lord shall work with them until they see the error of their ways. Do good to them that hurt you. It is not easy, but it is infinitely worth-while.

Jesus said, "Follow me into the ways of repentance and forgiveness." He taught us the bigness of forgiveness. He puts our pettiness to shame. You remember the parable about the servant who owed his lord one thousand talents. His master forgave him the debt, yet he had a man who owed him only fifteen cents cast into prison. Jesus calls us to be big and generous, not little and petty. Jesus calls us to the joy of repentance. Contradictory as it may seem, I am not saying repentance is easy. It is difficult to say we have made a mistake, but guilt is altogether too heavy a burden for the human heart to carry, and Christ said we must get rid of this. Repent and have the wonderful experience of receiving forgiveness through God's love. This is why our Communion service is such a blessed institution. We have the joy of God's forgiveness, and, if we really enter into the spirit of the meeting, there comes a sense of cleansing. We are washed clean of miserable little sins and from some of our petty outlooks and unworthy opinions. The burdens we have put on our own hearts—the burdens of resentment, anger, jealousy—are lifted, and we are given the spirit of joy.

JESUS CALLS US to study. Have you ever noticed what a wonderful mind he had? He talked to many different people in different walks of life and spoke their language. He talked to lawyers; he talked to the Pharisees; he talked to the woman of the world, publicans, tax gatherers, fishermen, and in every instance, he spoke as one having authority. The Lord God saw fit to remind us of it in this day and age. In Doctrine and Covenants, he says, "Study all good books." Make yourselves acquainted with everything. Let your mind be as Christ's, so that when the opportunity comes, you can talk to people in their own language and win them to the gospel.

We are called to a study of God's Word. That is more than merely reading, merely occupying a pew in prayer meeting. A moron could do that. A study of God's Word is infinitely more than that. We must take home with us what we hear on these occasions and incorporate it into our own lives. Bit by bit we will grow until someday we may reach the fullness of the stature of Christ. Study can be a hard thing. Like all the other good things of the earth, it doesn't come easy, but it is worth-while. By study, I don't mean we should always be reading a book. It is more important that we think, and think more than we do. Somebody has said that thinking is the most difficult thing man ever does. Thinking is a great adventure—it takes courage to be a real thinker. Jesus called us to have a well-informed mind. We owe it to ourselves. We certainly owe it to the Lord who has done so much for us.

JESUS CALLED US to follow him in ways of thanksgiving and joy. The God I worship is a God of joy, otherwise I couldn't worship him. I am sure, too, that he is a God of fun and humor, as well as a God of righteousness. And Jesus calls us to follow him in these ways of fun and joy and thanksgiving. Think of some of the people who have followed Jesus in that grand gift of thanksgiving. The angel at his birth said, "I bring you tidings of great joy which shall be to all people on the face of the earth." When Stephen was called before the council at Jerusalem, he knew there was no hope of escape. He was going to be stoned to death, and he knew it. The scripture tells us every member of that council looking on the face of Stephen saw that it was as the face of an angel. Going out to his death, he rejoiced, and his face was radiant. By order of that same council, Peter was flogged and imprisoned, yet, having been flogged, he rejoiced that he was worthy to suffer for Christ's sake. Our gallant friend Paul was beaten one hundred ninety-five times. Three times with rods. He was in peril from outside the church and from within. Although hungry, thirsty, and given up for dead, he said, "I count myself blessed to suffer for his sake." There is the point. Paul, a gallant apostle, was glad to suffer for Jesus' sake. While in prison, after having been flogged, Paul and Silas sang and gave thanksgiving to God. "In all things give thanks." When we think of how small our trials are compared to the trials of these people, we feel rather ashamed of ourselves.

WHAT IS OUR TASK TODAY? To come to know God, as Paul was told so many years ago. We must come to know God and then be his witnesses among the people. This world needs not only a Savior that was but a Savior that is, Jesus calls us to a great service. I am wondering how you think of Jesus. Do you think of him as the greatest teacher who ever lived? Thousands of people think of him that way. Do you think of him as a brave man who had the courage of his convictions even though it caused his death? Do you think of him as a master being to be worshiped and left at that? Or do you think of him as your personal Savior? Latter Day Saints don't often talk along these lines, but he is our Savior. Jesus came to redeem us from our lost estate and turn our faces toward things of greater worth. Infinitely more than a teacher, infinitely more than an elder brother, infinitely more than a philosopher, Jesus is the Redeemer of his people.

I will always count myself fortunate for having known a girl named Carrie Delofski. Before I knew her, she was a captain in the Salvation Army; then she came in contact with our church. It was a sheer delight to be with that girl. She was not particularly beautiful; she didn't dress particularly modishly, but an inner radiance shone through her personality and was in her path wherever she went. Her testimony was always a joyous thing. Jesus Christ really was her Redeemer, and she knew it. The blessed thing was that she lived it, and she cast this radiance wherever she went. Jesus says to you and to me, "Come, follow me in the realization of this Messiahship, that wherever you go, this radiance of the redeeming power of Jesus Christ shall be shed abroad in the hearts of people."

Magazine Hi-spots

In June McCall's

"Can a Child Be Too Bright?" by Albert I. Maisel, summarizes twenty-five-year studies of unfolding life stories of more than 1,500 extremely gifted people, explodes many superstitions about the unusually bright child.

"Test Your Taste" (matching silver and plates) by Elizabeth Matthews.

Ladies' Home Journal for June

"My Mother Is a Valiant Woman" by G. M. White. Most to be honored—the mother who pushes her child out of the nest with gentle firmness, but doesn't forget to give him the passport of her love.

"Home Work for Parents" by George D. Stoddard, president of University of Illinois.

It is the home's task to integrate learning with living, to give it meaning.

"Mind Your Manners—Other People Do," by Louise Paine Benjamin. Excellent basic principles of good manners and why.

The American for June

"Ike's Silent Partner," by Malvina Stephenson and Ruth Greerup. Story of the devoted and intelligent wife of a great man.

"Food Front"—Some intriguing new things on this year's market.

The Family Circle for June

"Don't Be Scared Into Marriage" by Jean Nash. Marriage is not an end in itself for women any more than for men—only as it eventuates in successful living.

"Give the 8 to 12's a Break," by Kathleen Doyle. While there is much ado about toddlers and teen agers, these in-betweeners are neglected. What to do for them.

If your heart is not in religion, it is proof that religion is not in your heart.

www.LatterDayTruth.org

BOOKS

Maya Explorer

VICTOR WOLFGANG VON HAGEN,
University of Oklahoma Press.

(299 pages—324 with references)

REVIEWED BY ESTHER HELLER

A CENTURY AGO when such notables as Audubon, Cooper, Emerson, Hawthorne, Irving, Poe, Thoreau, Joseph Smith, and Noah Webster left their influence upon the American scene, one John Lloyd Stephens was exploring the ruins of Central America. Educated at New York's Columbia University, he was much influenced by Professor Charles Anthon. Years later, it was this professor who assisted Poe in his twelve-page review of Stephens' first book, Incidents of Travel in Arabia Petraea. Poe's article for the New York Review made Stephens famous.

Being a good speaker, Stephens first elected law as his profession and studied at Litchfield, Connecticut, but before having himself sworn in as "counselor at law," he announced to his family that he was going to take a long trip, far out west into the Illinois territory. The spirit of adventure was strong in John Lloyd Stephens, and this trip was only the beginning of almost a lifetime of exploring. His father, a prosperous merchant, was willing and able to finance his son's trips to England, Italy, Greece, Russia, Egypt, and Arabia. Stephens was the first American to visit Petra in Stony Arabia. After his return home, it was in the publishing house of Harper Brothers that a member of the firm fell into conversation with him and told him that travel books sold well and suggested that Stephens write a book about his travels. The result was Arabia Petraea, which paid so well that he was encouraged to write other books.

IT WAS JOHN R. BARTLETT of Bartlett and Welford's bookstore and an intimate friend of Stephens, who first influenced him to explore Central America. "By the beginning of the eighteenth century it was universally accepted in America that the Indian was the descendant of . . . Israel . . . there were arriving in America from London . . . huge folios that offered scientific proof that the Indians were Jews." Preparation for the expedition had been completed when the minister to Central America died. Stephens applied to President Van Buren for the place and was appointed. Fortunately, he had previously met Frederick Catherwood, an English architect interested in archaeological research, who agreed to accompany him. Catherwood's lithographs and accurate drawings add much to the interest of the book. At Belize, 4,000 of the 6,000 inhabitants were Negro, and there was no rigid demarcation between white and black. Here Stephens paid a visit of state to the colonies' superintendent, Colonel Archibald McDonald. The explorers found much to draw their attention away from their main interest, archaeology, namely the revolutions in Guatemala and the tropical diseases which plagued them at times. Once they were imprisoned briefly in a church at Comatan before being allowed to proceed to Copan.

For a thousand years, Copan had lain there covered by trees. Stephens and Catherwood entered through a maze of tropical undergrowth. Stones formed some kind of amphitheater, and in the distance was the ruin of a temple. They climbed over pyramids and discerned the shadows of great-sized monoliths. "What race in America had reached so great a height . . . as to be able to carve such sculptures?" Mayan agriculture revolved around corn as the staple. There were no machines, no draft animals. The unit of society was the clan. The Maya created a solar calendar, hieroglyphic writing, and temples of carved stone. Stephens bought the ruins of Copan for $50. These two explorers set the base for all future investigation.

At Palenque, Catherwood found the Mayan artist unusually restrained. This site seemed of later date. Stephens knew these carvings to be the same as at Copan. It was maddening to him not to be able to read them. The presence of a cross at Palenque seems to prove that Christians before Columbus lived in America. This fact will be of especial interest to readers who believe the Book of Mormon to be a true account of ancient civilizations on the American continent. Stephens writes, "Here were the remains of a cultivated, polished and peculiar people, who had passed through all the stages incident to the rise and fall of nations; reached their golden age, and perished . . . nothing ever impressed me more forcibly than . . . this once great and lovely city, overturned, desolate, and lost."

Dr. Samuel Cabot, a young ornithologist accompanied Stephens and Catherwood on their second expedition to Central America. They explored Merida, Uxmal, Kabah, Bolonchen, and Chichen Itza. To the trained eyes of Catherwood, unmistakable features in the ruins of these cities whispered that the civilization that had reared them had also erected the cities they first explored. Stephens and Catherwood spent an entire day within the Temple of Kulkulkan at Chichen Itza. Stephens believed the civilization of Yucatan to be entirely American built by Americans, and that they took nothing from Egypt, China, Greece, nor Carthage.

Stephens became president of the Panama Rail Road Company in 1850. He died in New York in 1852. (Available at Herald Publishing House.)

The Duke of Wellington, in 1851, shortly before he died: "I thank God I will be spared from seeing the consummation of ruin that is gathering around."—From Cavalcade.

That should be considered long which can be decided but once.—"Maxims" of Syrus.

Broken Promises - By Grace L. Krahl

The Betrayal of America in the Repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment

MANY FACTS AND FIGURES have been published showing the enormous increase in the use of beverage alcohol and the spread of robbery and crime that follow in its train—together with poverty, insanity, juvenile delinquency, broken homes, disease, and other human and economic waste. It may be of interest to look into the causes of this expanding traffic. Fifteen years of experience with the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment should show cause for its continuance or its abolishment.

Let us look at the promises contained in the repealed amendment:

"Temperance will be encouraged"

"The saloon shall not return either in its old form or in some modern guise"

"Taxes will be cut"

"Crime will be reduced"

All of these promises have been broken with devastating results which we hear and read every day.

1. Was it "encouraging temperance" when, during the war, the brewers in their journal came out with the exuberant statement: "This is the greatest opportunity ever given to the brewing industry. It gives us a chance to create an appetite among millions of boys who never knew the taste of beer." While in their glee they laughed and swept in the profits, many a mother wept and is still weeping over her lad who went away clean and sober and came back a drunkard. It is to be deplored that our government (for the people) permitted liquor to be sold in army camps; it was not so in the First World War.

2. "The saloon has not returned," but what an ignoble successor is the roadside tavern. There lingers in my memory the incident of a little boy standing outside a tavern, crying for his mother who was inside indulging in her favorite brand of liquor. And then another instance in which a baby slept in its carriage outside a tavern. The mother, another patron, was insensitive to the incongruous environment of her child, a potential statesman, a scientist, an educator—who knows?

3. The third promise that "Taxes will be cut" was believed at one time but is now known to be false. Repeal serves to increase taxes, both by adding a drink tax and by increasing taxes to administer regulatory laws. Taxes paid by alcoholic beverage industries are included in the retail price of the beverages and collected from the consumer.

4. Fourth, "Crime will be reduced." In addition to what we see and read, we have the national records as collected by the FBI which say that in 1932, the last year of prohibition, arrests for driving while intoxicated were 14,238; in 1946, there were 61,260. Drink has been found to be "a major factor in one third of all crime and plays a part in nearly every classification of crime." (From Research Bureau, National W. C. T. U.)

LET US TURN from this dark picture and take a view of a little country to the north which bears no scars of alcohol—Iceland. "Iceland is without a single jail or penitentiary or court, and has only one policeman. Their system of public schools is practically perfect, and every child ten years old can read. There are seminaries and colleges, newspapers and printing establishments. No liquor is permitted to be imported as all are total abstainers. There are 78,000 people on the island." (From the Fraternal Record.)

All of this shows what co-operation can do when people are determined to build their lives on ideals uncontaminated with beverages that demoralize and destroy human personality in its effectiveness. Ideals are preserving lives in Iceland.

We proposed in the forepart of this article to look into the causes of the increased use of alcoholic beverages; we shall do so briefly. The effort to add respectability to the beer bottle to compete with the milk bottle is an attempt to establish a close relationship between the two—that both are foods—and thus win more unthinking housewives not given to investigation to their patronage. It is a well-established fact that beer is not a food—it never built a tissue or a muscle. "It is a narcotic, makes nerves 'feel' less. Depresses the functions of the nervous system in direct ratio to the amount taken. Impairs the faculties—self-control, will, judgment, etc.—character traits. It is a protoplasmic poison." (From Syllabus in Alcohol Education, by Bertha Rachel Palmer.)

PICTORIAL ADVERTISING is having an insidious development in the increased use of beverage alcohol. The weakening of forces who have heretofore through their media refused advocacy of alcoholic beverages have now yielded to the appeal of the brewers and distillers for vast sums of money. McCalls Magazine, to be specific, a periodical devoted previously to the culture and refinements of the home in all of its departments has now deviated from its long standing policy in sending its vivid advertising of beverage alcohol straight into the homes of 18,000,000 subscribers. The scale of advertising rates classifies its cost at $11,770 for one insertion, and ten insertions are planned. "The most startling direct and lavish program of sales appeal the beer makers have ever undertaken." (Fred L. Squires, Research Director, National W. C. T. U.)

The magazines in our homes are invited guests; children linger with them and react to what they suggest. Mother subscribers to this magazine who are interested in preventing this treacherous, advancing evil—that is, glamorizing alcohol to youngsters as well as to oldsters—should register their protest to this publication. Holiday, a new magazine of the Curtis Publishing group, is displaying a tremendous page entry of liquor advertising and has a market of more than 75,000 high-income families. Credit should be given to those magazines that do not carry a line of alcohol beverage advertising. Among them are Country Gentleman, Ladies' Home Journal, and Saturday Evening Post. The Readers Digest carries no liquor advertising in a single one of its 10,000,000 homes it enters every month. Time, Inc., a group of publications including Life, Time, and Fortune, in 1946 accepted $8,000,000 worth of alcoholic beverage advertising. There are church periodicals, agricultural constituencies, and many others who ban from their columns all of this sort of advertising. With this co-operation, it is for the people to urge support of the Capper Bill now before Congress, or rather awaiting hearing. The Capper Bill reads: "To prevent transportation of alcoholic beverage advertising in interstate commerce and stop its broadcasting over the air." This bill, if put into effect, would stop the misleading "Home Life in America" series. Write your senators, c/o Senate Office Building, Washington, D. C.

THE INCREASE of women drinkers is the most critical problem connected with the sale of liquor, because it has so largely to do with the home. "Only the home can found a state," are the words of a sage. When the home dis-integrates, national perils await us.

We should be thankful for the organized women of our country who work constantly for better social conditions, chiefest perhaps is the Woman's Christian Temperance Union with its twenty departments of activity and whose broad platform of service is "For God and Home and Every Land." Frances E. Willard, founder of the W. C. T. U., once said, "The liquor traffic would destroy the church if it could. The church could destroy the liquor traffic if it would."

If the Apostle Paul were here, perhaps he would, by special privilege, allow me to boast about one thing in my personal life, if I said it humbly. I have been an incessant church-goer since childhood, but in all the years of my church-going, I do not recall ever having heard a sermon in one of our pulpits on "temperance" (total abstinence). I hope others have.

We as Latter Day Saints are so entrenched in the doctrine of total abstinence that it has doubtlessly been thought unnecessary to bore our congregations with something they already believe and adhere to. We believe the gospel, nevertheless, we have to be taught it over and over again. We surely do not believe that our church services are for ourselves alone. If we do not have any nonmembers attending our meetings, we are lacking the missionary spirit which is the very basis for our existence as a church. Perhaps a visitor, if there be one, is struggling with the temptation of drink and needs the help he might receive in a sermon on that subject. If we believe in total abstinence, why not assert that belief? Then there are our young people who are not as fortified as are we; they have to meet this temptation and need more than precept to give the right answers to liquor propaganda.

According to Freida S. Miller of the U. S. Woman's Bureau, thirty per cent of the nation's employees are women. They, too, come in contact with the liquor question. Perhaps many of them are in outside employment because of lack of support by the one who should be the breadwinner of the family, but on whom liquor has its hold. For a man takes a drink and then, all too often, drink takes the man. In 1945 there were 450,000 barmaids.

Notwithstanding all of the vast financial and political forces which opposed Prohibition and partially nullified its enforcement, let us look for a moment at the success of the dry era. During the decade of prohibition—1920-1930—177,000 saloons (all of them) were closed; the consumption of liquor was reduced approximately 80 per cent; the nation's debt decreased $9,000,000,000; the number of savings depositors increased from 9,079,000 to 12,735,000; the number of automobiles leaped from 9,232,000 to 24,115,000; enrollment in high schools increased 118 per cent, in colleges, 100 per cent; the total membership of Christian churches increased at the rate of 1,491,000 a year. This constituted the most prosperous decade in our national history. Yet these gigantic strides were made while the enforcement of the law was in the hands of its enemies.

Notwithstanding all these facts, the wets continue to repeat the falsehood that prohibition was a failure; and the most tragic fact is that many uninformed churchmen join in their chorus.

The fact is that the truth is coming to the surface, the tide has turned and prohibition is returning. Let him who doubts this statement meditate upon the following hard facts. During recent years, the dries have won hundreds of local option victories in eighteen states. Eleven thousand political units have voted against liquor, including one third of all the counties of the United States. Twenty-six million people now live in dry territory. The Anti-Saloon League is staging a come-back with affiliated organizations in most of the states. The Woman's Christian Temperance Union has more than 10,000 local organizations, and aims at a million membership. The religious denominations and young people's organizations are mobilizing for a fight to the finish.

THE AIM of the brewer and the distiller is "new recruits"; they follow the method of the church and the church school, that is, reaching into the home for the children, where they hope to recover their loss of those who have succumbed to alcoholism and to meet the opposition of dry forces working with increasing, organized strength to defeat the enemy who would entice our young into this peril.

What You Can Do to Protect and Fortify the Children

1. Have an altar of prayer in the home—if not already existing.
2. Give object lessons showing the action of water on food substances and the action of alcohol on the same substances. Send to National Publishing House, W. C. T. U., Evanston, Illinois, for further information.
3. Show lantern slides: "He went straight home," "He ran a race," and others.

Filmstrip: "It's the brain that counts." (This title was probably taken from an address by Dr. Charles Mayo of the Mayo Clinic, who said, "You can get along with a wooden leg, but you can't get along with a wooden head; it's the brain that counts.") Send to the Herald Publishing House, Independence, Missouri.

4. Use flannelgraph pictures, entertaining and informative. Send to W. C. T. U. Publishing House.
5. Present playlets. Send to W. C. T. U. Publishing House.
6. Chalk talks may be used, also, to show what bad habits will do. Send to W. C. T. U. Publishing House.

Of course, a projector will be needed for the film strips (perhaps this may be borrowed or rented) and a stereopticon lantern for the slides. Send for the catalogue of W. C. T. U. leaflets on Scientific Temperance Instruction.

THE WORK OF THE CHURCH is to change the hearts of men toward righteousness and the gospel. We, as church members, should unite with those forces that are trying with all of their strength to abolish this great hindrance of alcohol in preparation for the higher and better things of life.

Sometime ago, in a North Dakota wheat field, a little girl was lost. As night came, on, the neighbors joined in the search. Nearly all night they searched, but in vain, when someone suggested, "Let us go to the side of the field, join hands and march across." They did, and as the sun was bringing the blush to the eastern sky, someone stumbling over her body announced the rescue, but it was only to find that the little girl was dead. She had perished in the chill of the night. One of the group said, "Oh, that we had only joined hands sooner."

Religion in the School

As a boy, I went to school in the state of Illinois. Every morning our opening exercises started with the children repeating the Lord's Prayer and singing hymns, after which the teacher read a portion of the Scriptures. There was no trouble, as far as I can remember, so long as the teacher was a Protestant.

There was one street in our town commonly called Church Street. On every corner along that street there was a church; I went to mine on Sunday, and the other boys and girls went to theirs. On Monday, we all attended the same public school, where we took part in the same program. If I remember anything that was taught on Sunday, it was in harmony with what we learned on Monday. The most important thing we learned at church and at school was brotherly love.

The controversy came later when the teachers were not Protestants and either insisted on using their Bibles or slanting the teachings toward their beliefs. Any sectarian group is apt to do the same thing.

Whatever we do, we should recognize the rights of all other people as citizens of the community and treat them as friends.

C. J. LANT.

1717 Thomas Avenue
Santa Barbara, California

Sectarianism

Reaches for the School Child

- By Jeane Nelson

RELIGION HAS a definite place in the public schools, not as classroom indoctrination of any particular form of religion, but as a social and historical phenomenon taught with the same objectivity as other subjects. The churches have a separate and distinct role in religious instruction.

When the United States Office of Education found that "only a small proportion of the children throughout the country have even brief contact with church influence," religious leaders became alarmed, as well they might. But instead of facing it squarely and admitting that it might have resulted from their own inadequacy, the churches proposed an approach through the schools. Protestants led out with a "released time" movement which was unsuccessful at first, then spread rapidly during and after each World War, and which was later favored by the Roman Catholics. Released time was one hour each week during which children could be excused for religious instruction of their own choice. When this practice of using school time for religious instruction was declared unconstitutional last April by the Supreme Court in the McCollum case, eighty to 100 per cent of New York's Catholic children were participating while only fourteen per cent of the Protestant and five per cent of the Jewish children were taking part. This overwhelming majority of Catholic participation caused many Protestants to think they had made a mistake by instituting the idea. As a result, many of them began advocating a combined Protestant service "agreeable to all sectarian tastes and offensive to none," which could be held right in the public school. Those who advocate this are, of course, unconsciously looking upon the public school system as a Protestant institution. Other leaders would have the Bible read before classes or have all teachers and principals profess a belief in Christ before taking a position with public schools.

Surely those favoring either plan would not do so after careful and objective consideration of these points:

1. The public schools are not composed of Christians alone. Millions of school children in the United States are of faiths which do not accept the Christian Bible nor believe in Christ. Could anyone say that these children should be forced to listen to a Christian teacher reading a Christian Bible whether they wanted to or not? This would obviously be an unconstitutional practice. Would advocates of this be willing to have their children sit in schools where only the Koran was read, even with only a slight suggestion that it was "the word of God"? According to our democratic system, if the Bible is read, the Talmud, the Koran, and the Jewish Old Testament could also be read.

2. Small children are not capable of interpreting Biblical passages. Our own church sets the age of accountability at eight, and in most cases that is quite low. When the Bible is read in school, the reader will be forced to interpret it. Unless he is better qualified along that line than the average schoolteacher, the interpretation will not be up to the high standard of the churches. And it is more than likely that indoctrination will occur.

3. Friendly relations between the school children are not encouraged by programs which divide them into religious groups or bring attention to religious differences. It was pointed out that in New York, where the program is managed as efficiently as possible, the lining up of different denominations makes for division. In one school, when the Catholic children were leaving, others shouted, "There go those Micks." It is not hard to imagine that "Dirty Jew" found its way into their vocabularies as well. This is

Here Is the Writer

Jeane Nelson is a graduate of Graceland College (class of '46), and is now a senior at Washington University in St. Louis, Missouri. While at Graceland, she was co-editor of the "Tower" and a member of the Lambda Delta Sigma society. A psychology major, she spends part of her spare time doing club work at a Jewish community center. For a while, she was on the professional staff as recreation leader at the center, where it was her job to supervise 150 children of all races and religions. Her other hobby, she says, is "listening to music."

certainly not a democratic or Christian atmosphere!

4. Even where religious instruction is "voluntary," failure to participate is liable to brand a child as an outsider. "The school system is the one broad area left in our country where religious intolerance could be overcome," writes Mrs. Agnes E. Miller in the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. "It is the one place where the child is not yet primarily a Protestant, a Catholic, or a Jew, but an American among Americans. Our minimum obligation to children when they

www.LatterDayTruth.org

New Horizons

cross the threshold of a public school, is an integrated program that will bind them as comrades in a common life.

"Wherever the schools create a democratic, spiritual atmosphere in which the sense of universal brotherhood can reign, they build the ethical foundations that all religions the world over have in common and that are the very life of our American institution."

5. The released time and other voluntary religious instruction programs compete with the school program. If schools provide an attractive program at the same time that religious instruction is offered, the religious groups charge them with unfair competition, so the children who do not take the instruction are forced to mark time and do nothing. It is unpleasant situations such as these arising from competition that caused San Diego, California, to "abandon the program on petition of ten principles. It disrupted the regular work and school discipline for results that did not justify the administrative difficulty it created."

5. Repercussions of quarrels among the sects are apt to be felt in public schoolrooms. As Dr. Reinhold Niebuhr of Union Theological Seminary has stated, the war between sectarian groups is a "scandalous" exhibition. Their rival ambitions, mutual intolerance, and lack of confidence in the power of spirit, mind, and idea are not conducive to instilling democratic principles in the nation's youth. Whatever the moral inadequacies of our public schools may be, we must look closely before we state that the influence of religious groups in the schools has been ethically any more effective.

THE DECISION of the Supreme Court in declaring the released time program unconstitutional has had and will continue to have considerable effect on the type of religious education to be pursued in the United States. In the first place, it has arrested a step toward sectarian dictation to the public schools. It has made it clear that the wall between church and state must remain high and impregnable, for as Reverend C. H. Maehlman of the Colgate Divinity School states, "American public education, emancipated from sectarianism, is indirectly the only universal teacher of religious values in the United States."

The decision forces the churches to improve their religious education program and conciliate it with constitutional law. The Christian Century for April 28, 1948, states, "The released time decision should awaken Protestantism to a profound sense of its responsibility to re-examine its conventional religious education program and project it on a higher level of fruitfulness, adequacy and self-respect." To do this, the churches must

1. Revise their inadequate church school system as an agency of religious education.
2. Awaken parents to their responsibility in such education of their children.
3. Emphasize a different aspect of religious education in schools.

In the same issue, Christian Century defines two types of religious education. One type, as taught in parochial schools under released time, which is now constitutionally prohibited, is the "inculcation of religious attitudes and devotion, together with the indoctrination of particular beliefs." The other type is "the imparting of knowledge concerning religion," or the study of religion, as the study of political science. It is in this manner that re-

(Continued on page 22.)

The Trouble-Shooter

QUESTION: Why have our churches discontinued congregational prayers and testimonies in connection with the Communion service?

ANSWER: By Leonard Lea

Refer to the account of the first Communion service, or Lord's Supper, as it was instituted by Jesus (Luke 22: 15-20). If the account of what took place is complete, Jesus was the only one who offered prayer, and there were no testimonies. He continued, after serving the emblems to the disciples, to give them instruction, which may be considered a parallel to our present practice of having a pastoral talk.

The requirements for the Communion service in our church are given in Doctrine and Covenants 17: 22, 23. The instructions are quite specific. No mention is made of congregational prayers and testimonies. It would seem that if the Lord required a prayer meeting to go with the Communion service, here would have been the logical place to state so. If there is any other place in the Doctrine and Covenants where such a requirement is made, we would be grateful to have the reference called to our attention. Sometimes the Lord's Supper is served to the sick in hospitals or homes where prayer meetings would be impossible.

Having the two kinds of meetings together appears to have been a custom that was practiced for a time, without any special requirement that it should always be done so. There may be some places where the practice is advisable today. Most of our churches now find it inconvenient. It is the general practice to have a well-planned Communion service in the morning, with a prayer meeting in the afternoon.

The late President Frederick M. Smith spoke to the 1930 General Conference on this subject: "I have been pained not a little in the past to observe the careless and undignified manner in which this sacred rite has been administered at times among us—its beauty and meaning obscured in the dimness of the niche into which we have sidled it” (See Let Us Worship, by C. B. Hartshorn, page 161).

Wisdom on this matter was given to the church in Doctrine and Covenants 119: 5, “And the spirit saith further: Contention is unseemly; therefore, cease to contend respecting the sacrament.” People sometimes forget this part of the instruction in going on to the following phrases.

Another piece of instruction should be remembered: “The elders are to conduct the meetings as they are led by the Holy Ghost, according to the commandments and revelations of God.” In the government of our church, the office of elder is held by all members of the Melchisedec priesthood. According to their rank in office, they are in charge of the meetings, and all, eventually, under the First Presidency.

Sectarianism Reaches for the School Child

(Continued from page 21.)

Religion must be taught in the public schools. Failure to do so is as great a mistake as omitting courses in history, sociology, or philosophy. If children are taught at an early age the influence of religion and religious groups have had on the development of the world, they will not only gain a broad knowledge of literature, architecture, painting, and other cultural forms, but will be better equipped to make intelligent decisions in specific religious matters later.

IT IS JUST as important for the schools to examine and consider different forms of religion as it is for them to include the study of various types of government. The children acquire an understanding which leads to tolerance, and tolerance leads to better relations among all men. Unless youth, through the power of discrimination, learns to worship the great, the good and the enduring—unless it learns, for example, the social and spiritual experiences of a Lincoln—it will worship movie stars, heroes of the comic strips, and other superficial manifestations of society.

It is the duty of the public schools to provide an opportunity for every child to learn something of the great religions—their philosophy, their history, their influence. But it is the privilege of the church to instill in that child the understanding and deep spiritual values of the religion it chooses. Only by retaining its freedom from the state can the church retain the freedom to criticize, guide and uplift mankind.

Tracting and Visiting

(Continued from page 11.)

prayer—as has been stated, one cannot pray for a person without coming to love him. This is an excellent basis for the casual intimacy which leads to spiritual communion.

3. Tie the visit up to the functions of the church. In a new opening, make the visit a part of the campaign for the inauguration of regular church activities. In a branch, introduce the people to some particular phase of activity, a project, departmental activity, or fellowship in which they will be able to find expression.

Visiting is, after all, but one phase of personal evangelism. The success of this activity is grounded in the spiritual stability, concern, and fellowship with Christ about which we have already heard a great deal. You are a visitor, but Jesus is your companion. Introduce your host to him.

Celebrate Golden Wedding Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. William Shotton of Peoria, Illinois, observed their fiftieth wedding anniversary by holding open house at their home on Sunday, July 4. They were married on July 5, 1898, at Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, by Elder C. Ed. Miller, who was present for their anniversary reception. They have three sons: James A. of Cedar Rapids; Robert of Peoria; and Wilfred of Stockton, California; four daughters: Mrs. James Lawler of Peoria; Mrs. J. R. Hill of Omaha, Nebraska; Mrs. Herbert Hubler of Taylorville; and Mrs. Frank Smith of Galesburg; eleven grandchildren; and five great-grandchildren. Mrs. Shotton before her marriage was Lillie Barker of Fayette City, Pennsylvania.

Briefs

NOWATA, OKLAHOMA. — The thirtieth anniversary of the organization of the branch was observed on Sunday, June 27. Elder Lee Quick, who started the mission in 1910, was the guest speaker on this occasion. Mrs. W. T. Hayworth, clerk, presented the history of the branch. A basket dinner was served at noon in the park.

SACRAMENTO, CALIFORNIA.—The church school hour on Children's Day was devoted to a baptismal service over which Pastor Myron Schall presided. Twelve children were baptized by Priests Leroy Burdick and John Gann. They were confirmed at the 11 o'clock service. These new members are Billy Dean and Jana Lee Thomas, Barbara Jean Perkins, Edward Lynn and Richard Dale Nelson, Peggy Jean McReynolds; Timothy Marlin Tennehill, Clifford Wayne Witt, Shirley Claire Trimmer, Vincent Lee Christianson, Philip Arthur Beckett, and Darlena Dee Squires. Donna Belle Duncan was blessed by Evangelist William Dawson at this same service. Joyca Mae, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil A. Jacks, and Linda Elizabeth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bud Kantt, were blessed on June 6.

Sacramento Branch has purchased a Baldwin Electronic Organ which is to be dedicated on September 26. A non-member friend contributed fifty dollars to the organ fund.

Apostles Charles R. Hield and Paul M. Hanson recently visited in Sacramento. Each gave an inspiring ministry.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN DISTRICT.—A women's institute and priesthood meeting were held at Gaylord, Michigan, on May 29 and 30. The theme of the institute was “The Field Is White.” Apostle E. J. Gleazer and Elder Allen Schreur conducted the priesthood classes, and Mrs. Glada Crinzi instructed the women. The institute will be remembered for its well-balanced program and for the feeling of fellowship among the Saints.

BURBANK MISSION, SUNLAND, CALIFORNIA.—John Merlin Kirkpatrick, his daughter, Lois Mary Kirkpatrick, Gary Earl Mapes, and Richard Griner were baptized by Pastor E. E. Spencer on Sunday, June 6. The confirmation service was held on Children's Day. Junior worship services are now being conducted by Tom and Bell Colimnia at the 11 o'clock hour. These include song, prayer, church history stories and a brief sermon.

 NON-NEGOTIABLE

A friend spoke recently of a good woman, possessed of considerable property, who had died. "She owned twenty-one pieces of city property," he said. "A few days after the funeral, I drove around just to look at them. And I discovered that she hadn't taken one of them with her!"

 MOBILITY

In this day of engineering marvels, they can put anything on wheels. Yesterday there was something about the size of a small barn parked across the street. Inquiries came in as to whether the owner had a lease. The structure had two chimneys, which probably meant that it was a duplex. The housing shortage in the Midwest is indeed desperate, but this is the first time we have heard of two families being crowded into a single trailer cabin.

The editors have always wished for a mobile office, and this thing across the street gives us hope. Think of it—summer in Glacier National Park, January editorials from Florida, April articles from California, September thoughts from Maine, December holidays in Arizona! . . . Well, it costs nothing to wish, and why be stingy?

 SHEPHERD'S BOOK

Brother E. P. Darnell, of the Central Missouri Stake presidency, keeps what he calls a "Shepherd's Book." In this book he writes the names and addresses of people he is trying to help and convert. He consults the list often to see that he is not forgetting anybody. He remembers them in prayer; he writes to them; he visits them occasionally. And when good thoughts come to him, he writes these down, too, and sends them to these friends he wishes to help. Sometimes the book becomes filled up or worn out; then he must get a new one and continue the work. He does not know how many such books he has had. "It doesn't matter," he says. "I'm chiefly interested in the one I am working on now. God will take care of the old ones."

 THE COIK FALLACY

People who give directions do not always understand the complexity of what they are communicating. They think it a simple matter to get to the Hayden Planetarium because it is simple for them. When someone says, "You can't miss it," he really means, "I can't miss it." He is suffering from what has been called the COIK fallacy—Clear Only If Known. It's easy to get to the place you are inquiring about if you already know how to get there.—"The News Letter," Ohio State University.

 WORRY

Some friends met at dinner, and someone mentioned worry. One man said, "I never let anything worry me that worry will not help." In other words, worry only where it is useful.

Another man said, "I am cutting down the list of things that I will let make me unhappy. It helps. I do not let the weather make me unhappy any more. Many things that used to disturb and annoy me have been taken off the list, and they do not trouble me now."

Southern Saskatchewan District Conference

A special business session of the Southern Saskatchewan District will be held at Weyburn on August 5 and 6 for the purpose of electing delegates to General Conference. The annual district business meeting will be held at this time also. All members in the district are urged to attend.

CLIFF CARSON,
District President.

Northern Michigan District Conference

The Northern Michigan District will hold a special conference at the Park of the Pines on August 14 at 2:30 p.m. for the election of delegates to General Conference.

ALLEN SCHREUR,
District President.

Woodbine Reunion Canceled

Because of the surge of infantile paralysis, which seems to be on the increase in centers from which the Woodbine Reunion would draw its attendance, the reunion has been called off. We shall look forward to next year with the hope of realizing all that which has not materialized under our present arrangements.

D. T. WILLIAMS.

Books Wanted

Bruce MacGregor, 75 Government Road W., Kirkland Lake, Ontario, wants to obtain copies of Into the Latter Day Light by J. J. Cornish, and Sermons by R. C. Evans.

Wants to Contact Members

Elmer A. Kaler, Sr., chef at the Alex Johnson Hotel in Rapid City, South Dakota, invites any members who travel through the Black Hills to contact him.

REQUESTS FOR PRAYERS

Mollie Hildenbrand, 301 East Lake Street, Knox, Indiana, requests prayers that she may be healed, if it is God's will, of arthritis. Medical treatment has failed to help her.

Mrs. Ellen Mellinger, Box 23, Layton, Pennsylvania, asks the prayers of the Saints that she may regain her health.

WEDDINGSGreen-Settle

Mary Frances Settle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Settle of Indianapolis, Indiana, and Charles E. Green of Independence, Missouri, were married June 12 at the Reorganized Church in Indianapolis. Elder Arthur W. Gage performed the double-ring ceremony. The Greens are making their home in Independence.

Bronson-Hale

Mary Jane Hale, daughter of Mrs. Sarah Jane Hale of Grandview, Missouri, and Cpl. Gale Bronson, son of W. M. Bronson of Independence, Missouri, were married at the Reorganized Church in Grandview on June 20. High Priest Burr B. Bronson, uncle of the groom, read the double-ring ceremony. Cpl. Bronson returned to his base on June 24; Mrs. Bronson joined him on July 2. They are making their home in El Paso, Texas.

Wildermuth-Mussell

Marian R. Mussell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Mussell of Milwaukee, Wisconsin, and Blair L. Wildermuth, son of Mrs. Doris Wildermuth of Plano, Illinois, were united in marriage at the Reorganized Church in Milwaukee on June 19. President F. Henry Edwards read the double-ring ceremony. Both Mr. and Mrs. Wildermuth are graduates of Graceland College. Mr. Wildermuth is now attending Marquette University in Milwaukee.

BIRTHS

Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Witter of Lorain, Ohio, announce the birth of a son, Richard Douglas, born June 9. Mrs. Witter, the former June Steward, is a graduate of Graceland College.

A son, Kenard Dee, was born on June 21 to Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Junior Swift of Woodbine, Iowa. Mrs. Swift is the former Doris Baughman of Denison, Iowa.

DEATHS

TAYLOR.—Mary E. was born in Iroquois County, Illinois, on September 23, 1873, and died May 11, 1948, in DeRidder, Louisiana. Formerly a resident of Independence, Missouri, she arrived in Louisiana only three weeks before her death. She had been a member of the Reorganized Church since January, 1908.

She is survived by her husband, Charles S. Taylor of the home; two daughters: Mrs. Bessie Allen of Independence, and Mrs. Edith Cummings of DeRidder; two sons: George Lundy of Atlanta, Georgia, and Glenn Lundy of the home; two step-sons: Frank Taylor of Independence, and Dallas Taylor of the Navy, stationed in San Diego, California; two brothers: Henry Wirick of Nebraska, and John Wirick of Chicago, Illinois; three sisters: Mrs. Helen Lundy, Onarga, Illinois; Mrs. LeChetta Hartke, Wichita, Kansas; and Mrs. Bessie Morse, Streeter, Illinois; thirteen grandchildren; and twenty-three great-grandchildren.

RHODE.—Lucy Ann, daughter of George and Mary Ann Kemp, was born March 9, 1876, at Tabor, Iowa, and died at her home in Tabor on May 31, 1948, five months after she suffered a stroke. On October 7, 1896, she married Alonzo Lyman Rhode; six children were born to this marriage, one dying in infancy. She was baptized into the Reorganized Church on September 4, 1884, and remained a faithful member throughout her life.

She leaves her husband; two sons: Wayne A. and Harold T., all of Tabor; three daughters: Winifred Elefson of Teller, Alaska; Bernice McMahl of Bremerton, Washington; and Gerald Foster of Thurman, Iowa; her step-mother, Anna Kemp of Tabor; a brother, John Kemp of Glenwood, Iowa; and a half-sister, Mrs. Lulu McClenahan of Venango, Nebraska. Services were conducted by Elder Charles Fry at the Reeves Funeral Home in Tabor.

EXLEY.—Catherine Reber, was born September 4, 1874, at Assumption, Illinois, and died June 25, 1948, at the home of her son in California. On January 5, 1904, she was married to Henry L. Exley at Los Angeles, California; one son was born to this marriage. She united with the Reorganized Church on November 19, 1913, and was a charter member of the East Los Angeles congregation. Before its organization, she attended the church at Wall and Eleventh Streets. During her life, she served as superintendent of the church school and president of the Ladies' Aid; her kindly disposition and unflinching cheerfulness were always encouraging to her many friends. Mr. Exley died on October 27, 1946.

Besides her son, Laurence, who cared for her during her long illness, she leaves two sisters: Mrs. Sara Clark of Illinois and Mrs. Mary Werner of Wyoming; and one brother, Frank Reber of Illinois. The funeral was conducted in the chapel of the Rosehill Cemetery, Whittier, California, Pastor V. L. Lum and John W. Rushton officiating.

BALLINGER.—Catherin M., daughter of Hugh and Mary Leask, was born May 20, 1894, at Cameron, Missouri, and died June 12, 1948, at the Independence Sanitarium after a year's illness. She was baptized into the Reorganized Church on February 9, 1908, giving to it a lifetime of service. On November 10, 1913, she was married to Edward L. Ballinger in their home at Seiling, Oklahoma, where she resided the remainder of her life. Mr. Ballinger preceded her in death in 1936.

Surviving are two children, Mrs. Z. V. Gordon of Shattuck, Oklahoma, and Captain Eldon L. Ballinger of Fort Ord, California; two sisters: Mrs. Anna Hall and Mrs. Hattie Moore, both of Kansas City, Missouri; her brother, H. D. Leask of St. Joseph, Missouri; and three grandchildren. Funeral services were conducted at Seiling on June 15, Apostle D. T. Williams officiating, assisted by Elder L. D. Dyke. Burial was in the Seiling cemetery.

Mary A. Burlington
 1510½ Jules
 St. Joseph, Missouri

92867
 18
 h

DAVIE.—Janet Maria Clelland, was born March 22, 1888, in the township of Croft, district of Parry Sound, and died June 25, 1948, in the Saugeen Memorial Hospital at Southampton. She was baptized into the Reorganized Church on October 13, 1921, at Dundalk and remained a faithful member throughout her life. On November 22, 1916, she was married to Malcolm Davie, who survives her. She also leaves five sons: Thomes of London, Ontario; Leonard of Niagara Falls, Ontario; Jack of Port Elgin, Ontario; William of Cove, England; and Nelson of western Canada. Services were held at the Davey Funeral Home in Port Elgin, Elder H. A. Dayton officiating. Interment was in Woodland Cemetery at Port Elgin.

ATKINSON.—Louis, son of David and Harriet Atkinson, was born July 16, 1871, at Beetown, Wisconsin, and died at his home in Lancaster on June 6, 1948. He was married to Myrtle Alley on September 14, 1898, who preceded him in death on July 21, 1924. He then married Laura Blackbourn Thompson on November 22, 1930, who survives him. He had been a member of the Reorganized Church since his youth.

Besides his wife, he leaves a son, Raymond of Stockton, California; two daughters: Mrs. G. H. Faulk of Canton, Missouri, and Mrs. A. L. Burford of Canon City, Colorado; a step-daughter, Mrs. John Herd of Madison, Wisconsin; ten grandchildren; two great-grandchildren; and a sister, Sadie Bell of Aurora, Missouri. Services were held at the Goble and Weeden Funeral Home; Elder J. O. Dutton officiated.

BAGGERLY.—David H. son of Verdimon D. and Henrietta Sanders Baggerly, was born February 5, 1869, and died July 3, 1948, at St. Mary's Hospital, East St. Louis, Illinois. He was baptized into the Reorganized Church when he was about thirty years old; soon after his baptism, he was ordained a priest. He served as pastor of the Derby, Illinois, branch and was personally responsible for the erection of the church home there. His fine character won him many friends both in the church and community.

He is survived by two sisters: Mrs. Margaret E. Bruner, New Castle, Indiana, and Mrs. Anna Sodrell, Rome, Indiana; and a brother, James M. Baggerly, Orlando, Florida. Services were held at the Burwell church, High Priest H. W. Burwell and Elder Clark Glenn officiating. Burial was in the Derby cemetery.

Reunion Schedule-1948

Flint-Pt. Huron-Detroit-Windsor Kentucky & Tennessee Silver Lake	July 24-Aug. 1	Blue Water, Michigan
Chatham-London Cen. & So. Michigan	July 30-Aug. 8	Paris, Tennessee
Mo. Valley Maine So. California Northern Michigan Kirtland Reunion of the Ozarks Oklahoma W. Montana	July 31-Aug. 8	Everett, Washington
Arizona Arkansas & Louisiana Minnesota & Wisconsin Far West	July 31-Aug. 8	Erie Beach, Ontario, Canada
So. Indiana Eastern Michigan Idaho Des Moines	Aug. 6-Aug. 15	Liahona Park
Lamoni S. E. Illinois Eastern Colorado	Aug. 6-Aug. 15	Woodbine, Iowa
	Aug. 1-Aug. 8	Brooksville, Me.
	Aug. 7-Aug. 15	Pacific Palisades
	Aug. 7-Aug. 15	Park of the Pines
	Aug. 7-Aug. 15	Kirtland, Ohio
	Aug. 7-Aug. 15	Racine, Missouri
	Aug. 7-Aug. 15	Pawnee, Okla.
	Aug. 7-Aug. 15	Race Track, Montana
	Aug. 8-Aug. 15	Tucson, Arizona
	Aug. 9-Aug. 15	Clear Fork Cp., Hot Spgs., Ark.
	Aug. 9-Aug. 15	Chetek, Wisc.
	Aug. 12-Aug. 22	Stewartsville, Missouri
	Aug. 21-Aug. 29	Bedford, Ind.
	Aug. 14-Aug. 22	Cash, Michigan
	Aug. 14-Aug. 21	Hagerman, Idaho
	Aug. 15-Aug. 21	Guthrie Center, Iowa
	Aug. 15-Aug. 22	Lamoni, Iowa
	Aug. 20-Aug. 29	Brush Creek, Ill.
	Aug. 20-Aug. 29	Colorado Springs Colorado

North of Heaven

by

Bilaine Whiting

and

Josephine Skelton

$2.50

Here is the story of the followers of Alpheus Cutler and their trek to the "land between two lakes"—the place of prophecy where Father Cutler sent his people guided by Uncle Vet and Mr. Denna to build Clitherall and to wait the coming of the "Moses Man" who was to lead them back to Zion.

Every R.L.D.S. family will want to read this fine story of the Cutlerites and of their beliefs and of the conversion to the Reorganization of a part of the original group who settled in Minnesota.

Order from your Book Steward or from

HERALD PUBLISHING HOUSE

Independence, Mo.

Photo by Adelbert Bartlett

A Church on Mt. Zion

THE Saints Herald

VOLUME 95

JULY 31, 1948

NUMBER 31

www.LatterDayTruth.org

A Church in Jerusalem

AUDITORIUM NEWS

The contrast of bright sunlight and deep shadow exists everywhere in the dry atmosphere of the Near East. Not far from the teeming, noisy Bazaar section of the old walled city of Jerusalem, the inner court of the famous Church of St. James on Mount Zion offers a cool refuge from the glare of the sun on the bare cobblestones of the street. Mount Zion today is a veritable maze of narrow, vaulted passageways, many of them possibly unchanged for centuries.

Of this part of the city, the Prophet Isaiah declared (24: 23),

Then will the moon turn pale with confusion,
And the sun will hide in shame;
For the Lord of hosts will be king on Mount Zion,
And will reveal his glory before his elders in Jerusalem.

—The Bible, An American Translation, J. M. P. Smith.

When that prophecy is fulfilled, changes will have to take place that could easily be imagined, in the figurative language of Isaiah, to surprise the planets.

The history of a place seems to become a part of the people who live in it; and whether they realize it or not, its tragedies and trials, its passions and prejudices somehow penetrate into their minds and spirits, affecting their thoughts and lives.

There was One who wept over the city, "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets . . . how often would I have gathered thy children together . . . and ye would not!"

IN THIS ISSUE

EDITORIAL:

The Day of the Lord	3
Across the Desk	4

OFFICIAL:

Music for General Conference	4
--	---

ARTICLES:

Independence Sanitarium and Hospital Report	4
The Laying on of Hands, by Elbert A. Smith	5
The Descent of the Priesthood, by A. J. Corbett	8
In the Village of Serena, by Emma M. Phillips	10
Do You Enjoy Your Church? by John Blackmore	11
The Use of the Book of Mormon—Part 3, by Harold I. Velt	12
Weapons of Death or Tools of Life, by Ruth Selzer	13
Our Home Is Our Kingdom, by Esther Wilson Heller	14
Budget-Wise Club, Report by Mrs. D. A. Bolon	14
On Having Children, by Louise Wrigley	15
Why Camping? by Verda E. Bryant	16
Books	17
Introducing the Sorensens, by F. Edward Butterworth	17
Stars in Their Eyes, by Louise	18
Letters	19
Objective—Zion, by Robert H. Anderson	20
The Kingdom Way, a poem, by Naomi Russell	21
The Use of Talent, Answer by Leonard Lea	21
Briefs	22
Bulletin Board	23

APOSTLE E. J. GLEAZER has an answer to the old question, "Of what value are the reunions?" He replies, "Interest in the reunions in the past has stimulated the work in the districts and branches." This summer Apostle Gleazer will serve the four reunions of Michigan, which are among the largest in the church. President J. F. Garver is serving at the Blue Water reunion, and at the Liahona reunion at Sanford, Michigan; and also at Park of the Pines; Bishop W. N. Johnson at Blue Water; Apostle Paul M. Hanson at Blue Water and Park of the Pines; Bishop T. A. Beck at Liahona and Cash.

BAPTISMS are in the news in the field of Apostle Arthur A. Oakman. He reports that James Daugherty has baptized fifty-two persons since the first of the year. William Guthrie is doing excellent work in Southeastern Illinois district, and has baptized thirty-four since Easter. James Menzies has also done splendid work in the field.

In the Spring River district, William Patterson records the baptism of twenty-seven at Joplin, Missouri, fourteen at Rich Hill, twenty-one at Pittsburg, Kansas, and thirteen at Fairland, Oklahoma.

Joseph Baldwin has conducted a series recently in the First Chicago church. He has also held cottage meetings in the homes of two nonmembers. In Ashburn, Wisconsin, cottage meetings are also being held in the homes of nonmembers.

A FINE SUCCESS is reported for the Central Missouri Stake reunion at Odessa, under the leadership of President Ward A. Hougas and T. A. Beck. Only a partial report of activities is available, and of those who participated. Bishop G. L. DeLapp spoke to a crowd of more than 600 on the first Sunday. Good organization and a fine spirit featured the work of this reunion.

TWO NEW MISSIONS sponsored by Los Angeles Central church and actively supported by Pastor Garland E. Tickemyer, are carrying on with good advertising and publicity. Vermont Heights Mission meets at a private home at 11157 South Raymond, Los Angeles 44, with regular services at 9:30, 11, and 7:30 on Sunday, and midweek service at 7:30 on Wednesday. W. W. Powers is the pastor. Southgate Mission meets at the Women's Club Building, 10022 South California, Southgate. There are the three regular services on Sunday. Virgil Sheppard is the pastor. Members and friends who are in the vicinity of these missions are invited to attend and support them in their good efforts.

"SOUTHWEST MISSION ZION'S LEAGUER" is the title of a new publication for church young people in California and Arizona. Managing editors are Celia Schall and Bob Colville, 2201 K Street, Sacramento, California. Contributors include Roland Inlow, Vern Webb, Laurence MacDonald, Lawrence Schall, Bob Brown. Issues are 20c per copy, $1.20 for six issues, publication bi-monthly. Send orders to 2445 Forty-first Street, Sacramento, California. Magazine contains articles, news, biography, and humor. Writers and subscribers are wanted in all parts of the mission.

The Day of the Lord

IN BIBLE PROPHECIES, the critical times of history are sometimes referred to as "the day of the Lord." Many a prophecy is begun with the words, "And in that day . . ." Certainly, it is in the critical times of history that the purposes of God are worked out, to the wrecking of empires and the disappointment of the ambitions of evil men. And as we look back over history we can see that "the day of the Lord" has often been a day of destruction and change, of death for some, of release from bondage for others, and ultimately of new opportunity for the world to rebuild itself in better ways. That last item should not be forgotten, for it is one thing that gives value to the great events and upheavals of history. The opportunity to rebuild the world along better lines has been the most precious residue precipitated by the catalyst of time out of the violence of events. It is true that the major part of the opportunity has been lost or wasted, but some progress and benefit have been realized. Sometimes men have had a vision of God's purposes for them, and leaders with enough honesty and clarity of vision have been present to make the gains secure.

There has been a reviving interest among the people in the relationship of Bible prophecy to the present course of events. This is an appropriate time to remind people that a very good book on the subject has been published: Restoration, A Study in Prophecy, by Elbert A. Smith. And for those who have the book, now would be the time to read it carefully. People sometimes buy books, and put them away in their libraries, hoping thereby to acquire the knowledge and wisdom they contain. You can buy a book, but it is not really yours until you read it and understand it.

OF WHAT VALUE was all the suffering and sacrifice that it cost to destroy the evil powers of Mussolini, Tojo, and Hitler, if not to make the world a better place? Their destruction was worth-while, because it relieved the world of certain immediate dangers. But we have failed to realize the long-time benefits that should have been ours. It is useless to say who is to blame, and it would only result in futile argument. All we can hope for is that we may be able to do better another time.

As we consider the course of present events and the danger in them, it appears that we may be approaching another "day of the Lord." Evil is once more engaged in its old business of destroying itself, and, unfortunately, many good people and much valuable property with it, as usual. Good things and good people are unavoidably hurt when evil is destroyed. It is one of the prices we must pay for having perpetuated and tolerated the evil.

WE WISH, of course, that peace could come out of the present situation. Sadly, it does not seem possible. Too many of the people of the world are still kept in ignorance, and inflamed against other peoples by false propaganda. Too many peoples have the wrong ideas. And when they think, they cannot help thinking wrongly. That was impressed upon us at the close of the last war. American reporters rushed in to learn what the conquered peoples were thinking. They were dismayed to find that these people thought wrong. Why should we be surprised? They have been wrongly informed, wrongly taught. How else could they think? It will take a generation of learning for them to get into right ways of thinking.

This brings to mind the conviction that you cannot solve all problems with war. Everything intellectual, moral, and spiritual that was wrong at the beginning of the war was still wrong at the end of it. When the men of war step out, the men and women of peace must again step in to take up their good work. Doctors, teachers, missionaries, public servants, helpers and workers of all kinds are needed. God's purposes for his world cannot be most fully realized without them. The "day of the Lord" is just another day unless His servants are there to carry on his work.

THE CHURCH takes its place with the great reforming and constructive forces of the world society. It cannot do much in the grisly, terrible business of making war. It should not want to. During the war it can only give comfort and help. But when the war is over it can help to bind the peoples of the world together again in good, peaceful, helpful, and righteous relationships.

How does this affect us? We must love all peoples, of all races and nationalities. We must be fair to them, recognize them as equals and friends. It is only as we become the friends, the helpful friends, of the Japanese and German peoples that we can do any good for them, and make ourselves safe in this world. And we must always remember the wise distinction made by Paul:

We wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places.—Ephesians 6: 12.

These are the real evils of the world, the real things we must fight against, the things that will destroy us if we let them live. When the wars and troubles are over, we discover again as we have discovered so many times in the past that we must once more be the neighbors and friends of those with whom we have had misunderstanding and trouble. Out of the troubled events of the present time, if "the day of the Lord" should once again come to our world, let us remember these things.

L. J. L.

Editorial

Independence Sanitarium and Hospital

Student Nurse Recruitment Report

July 10, 1948

To date, fifteen students have been enrolled in the September class of the Independence Sanitarium and Hospital School of Nursing. The recruitment committee, which began its work in April of this year by cooperating at the local level with the national campaign, is well pleased with the results, so far. But, since the Sanitarium has facilities for a class of forty nursing students each year, the committee feels that these facilities should be used to full capacity and is appealing again to the church membership for aid in raising the 1948 class enrollment to forty students.

Some loan funds are available to students needing financial aid in attending nursing school. Information about these funds, and about the Sanitarium school may be had by sending a post card to Miss Nelle Morgan, R. N., Director of Nurses, Independence Sanitarium and Hospital, Independence, Missouri. Ask for the Nursing Packet, if you have not already sent for one, and for information about the loan funds.

Pastors and other church officers and workers, vocational counselors, and parents can profitably secure this information and direct it to young women in search of a personally satisfying and socially valuable occupation.

The 1948 Student Nurse Recruitment Committee, Grace E. Tousley, Secretary

Across the Desk

Elder M. A. Smith, Crescent, Iowa, writes:

On Children's Day, June 13, we baptized eleven new members in the Crescent Branch. Of this number, five are young mothers; the husbands of all except one are members of the church. We hope to bring him in soon. Others have expressed their willingness to come in.

This makes eighteen new members; this year for Crescent, credit for which is largely the results of the local priesthood work.

The following letter, recently received from Brother Alfred Urban, of Brandenburg, in the Russian Zone in Germany, will be of interest to many readers of the Herald. Brother Urban is one of our most promising young leaders in Germany:

To the First Presidency,
Dear Brothers:

The pictures which you sent me April 2 I have received and thank you from the bottom of my heart for them. We all were very happy about these pictures. Our young people are very enthusiastic about seeing the establishment of the church and its development through these pictures.

A short time ago we went to Berlin to greet Brother Theys, and we enjoyed a nice time together. On that Sunday over thirty people were baptized; Brother Theys had the privilege of baptizing some, too. At the confirmation, we all received wonderful blessings.

The other Sunday we had a baptism here in Brandenburg. In the morning at 7:30 we gathered at the water, and fifteen souls pledged to follow our Lord. Indeed we felt the heavens were opened and the Lord showered his blessings upon us. Also others have indicated that they would follow soon in baptism. At the confirmation, the gifts of the spirit were manifested and made our heart rejoice in spite of the terrible times in which we are living.

It was our joy to have Brother Smolny with us also and he related to us his experiences in 1924.

A great work lies before us but laborers are few. Brother Smolny promised that he would do as much as he could still do.

We are sorry that Brother Theys could not visit us here.

With greetings in the gospel, I remain your brother in the Lord,

Alfred Urban.

F. H. E.

OFFICIAL

Music for General Conference

OCTOBER 3-10, 1948

The following list of four anthems has been chosen for performance at General Conference in October. These four anthems will be sung by a mixed conference choir made up of singers throughout the church who are interested in preparing these numbers before they arrive at Conference. This preparation may be made in the local choirs of the church, but individuals who do not have the opportunity for singing in a choir are also urged to secure this music and learn it so they will be able to sing with us.

These anthems are all simple but effective, and we strongly recommend that choirs throughout the church secure them for their own local use. We will plan just two rehearsals during conference, and the choir will appear at two services.

We have been somewhat disappointed in the response to this part of the work in the past two conferences and hope that this year more people can find their way clear to participate. Following is the list of conference choir anthems:

"Grant Us Thy Peace," Mendelssohn, published by Neil A. Kjos Music Company, No. 5082 S.A.T.B., at 15c.

"Thy Kingdom Come, O Lord," F. M. Christiansen, published by Augsburg Publishing House, No. 209 S.A.T.B., at 10c.

"For Thou Art Righteous," Hugh Gordon, published by A. P. Schmidt Company, No. 1723 S.A.T.B., at 12c.

"Praise the Lord, Ye Heavens Adore Him," Prichard, arranged by Don Malin, published by C. C. Birchard and Company, No. 1475 S.A.B. with Descant, at 20c.

It will be noted that the last anthem is arranged for three parts, making it possible for smaller choirs to use all of the men on the so-called baritone part. This anthem is no less effective than straight four-part mixed. We suggest that the descant part on page six be sung by one or two sopranos if there is no children's choir available to sing it. If you have a children's choir, this is a very nice way to work it into an adult service.

FRANKLYN S. WEDDLE,
Director of Music.

THE SAINTS' HERALD

Volume 95

July 31, 1948

Number 31

EDITORS: The First Presidency: Israel A. Smith, John F. Garver, F. Henry Edwards.

ASSISTANTS: Leonard J. Lea, Managing Editor; Kenneth L. Graham, Business Manager.

The Saints' Herald is the official publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, with headquarters at The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri, and is issued through the offices of Herald Publishing House, 103 South Osage Street, Independence, Missouri.

Entered as second-class matter at the post office at Independence, Missouri, under Act of March 3, 1879. Issued weekly at Independence, Missouri. Price, $3.50 per year and $1.75 for six months in advance in the U. S. A., its territories and possessions; Canada, $3.75 per year and $1.90 for six months; other countries, $4.50 per year. Notice of a change of address must be given three weeks ahead of the date that it is to become effective. Accepted for mailing at the special rate of postage provided for in section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized July 21, 1921. Printed in the United States of America.

The Laying on of Hands

The antiquity and significance of the doctrine and its place in the ordinances of the church

By ELBERT A. SMITH

An address given at an institute of the members of the Melchisedec Priesthood in the Stone Church, January 29, 1948

TO THOSE not taught and traditioned as we have been, the doctrine of the laying on of hands may seem unimportant. They may marvel when they hear us sing:

Such principles as these we cherish,
The laying on of hands with the rest;
For not one single word shall perish
From the law designed to make men blest.

As a matter of fact, this doctrine is of great importance: First, because of its origin, which is divine, and because it is given a place among the principles of the doctrine of Christ (Hebrews 6: 1, 2); second, because of its association with the great spiritual experiences of Christian conversion, including confirmation into the church, the baptism of the Holy Spirit, ordination to the priesthood, the blessing of our children and the healing of our sick; third, because of its significance, which I will discuss presently.

The Antiquity of the Doctrine and Practice of the Laying on of Hands

This doctrine and ceremony goes far back in Bible history. Moses ordained Joshua by the laying on of hands (Numbers 27: 18, 20). Jacob conferred spiritual blessings upon his posterity by the laying on of hands. Melchisedec, the great high priest, blessed Abraham. At this point, we may get some light on the antiquity of the doctrine and practice of the laying on of hands. The King James Version of the Bible says that Melchisedec was a priest of the most high God, and was "without father, without mother, without descent, having neither beginning of days nor end of life." The Inspired Version makes it quite clear that it was the priesthood which Melchisedec held that was without beginning of days or end of years.

For this Melchisedec was ordained a priest after the order of the Son of God, which order was without father, without mother, without descent, having neither beginning of days, nor end of life. And all those who are ordained unto this priesthood are made like unto the Son of God, abiding a priest continually.—Hebrews 7: 3.

According to Doctrine and Covenants 104: 18, 19, this order of the priesthood, which is after the Order of the Priesthood of the Son of God, and which became known as the Melchisedec priesthood, was instituted in the days of Adam, and Adam ordained his son, Seth. The function of the laying on of hands is the prerogative of the Melchisedec priesthood, with one exception. Priests of the Aaronic order may ordain other priests, teachers, or deacons of that order (Doctrine and Covenants 17: 10). The Melchisedec priesthood, then, being a priesthood coexistent with Christ and also existing in the beginning with Adam, and the laying on of hands being primarily a function of this priesthood, we may presume that the doctrine and its practice went back through the ages whenever that priesthood was on earth since the days of Adam.

In the Christian dispensation, Christ himself sanctioned this doctrine by precept and by example. For instance, he healed the sick by the laying on of hands and, concerning his disciples, he said, "These signs shall follow them that believe," and added, "They shall lay hands on the sick and they shall recover."—Mark 16: 17, 18.

The Significance Symbolizing Power and Authority

The ordinance of the laying on of hands is highly symbolical of power and authority. In the third chapter of Habakkuk, we read, "God came from Teman and the Holy One from Mt. Paran . . . his brightness was as the light; and he had horns coming out of his hands: and there was the hiding of his power." That language is highly figurative. In ancient scriptures, the horn stood for authority and power; and in this scripture, the hiding of God's power was in his hand.

Man's power, to a great extent, is also in his hands. With his hands, he executes the designs and purposes of his mind and will. The hand wields the sword and holds the pen that signs the treaty of peace—if it is signed; it guides the plow or the tractor which pulls the plow; it wields the hammer, lays the brick, builds, plants, and reaps. In the arts, the power of the artist to paint the pictures, carve the statue, play the piano, is hidden in his hand.

The hand is a marvelously designed implement, enabling man to work out his will and maintain his dominion over all other creatures, as God said it was given man to do. The animals, even if they were given the intelligence of a man, would be hopelessly handicapped without hands. We may look with contempt upon the thumb, saying that our fingers are all thumbs when they are clumsy, but try to pick up a nail or sign your name or engage in any of the arts and crafts and industries without using your thumbs—even a sore thumb is better than none. Man's power to execute his will and maintain his dominion to the greatest extent is implemented by his hand.

The hand is also a symbol of authority in law and in state documents. When Abraham Lincoln wrote the Emancipation Proclamation, he closed with these words: "Upon this act . . . I invoke the considered judgment of mankind and the gracious favor of Almighty God. In Witness Whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed." So we say that the slaves were set free "by the hand of Abraham Lincoln."

Quite naturally the hands of the priesthood are used in the holy ordinances to express divine power and authority and also the authority of the church whose representatives the members of the priesthood are.

Next we may very well consider the spirit and the manner in which we shall administer in these sacred ordinances.

Handling Heavenly Things

The apostle, Joseph R. Lambert, used to caution the ministry: "Remember, when you officiate in the ordinances and sacraments of the church, you are handling heavenly things." Remembering that, we should officiate with dignity and reverence and order.

There are seven ordinances of the church, some of which are also sacraments: baptism, confirmation, the Lord's Supper, ordination, marriage, administration to the sick, and blessing, including blessing of children and the patriarchal blessing. The laying on of hands figures in four of these ordinances, namely, in confirmation, ordination, administration to the sick, and the conferring of blessings.

Paul once wrote: "Lay hands suddenly on no man."—I Timothy 5: 22. The context does not indicate what Paul had in mind when he wrote those words, but they do apply very well to the ordinance of the laying on of hands. There should be a period of preparation, in some instances long and in other instances of short duration, depending on the circumstances.

Ordinarily, there should be a period of some duration preceding ordination, giving opportunity for necessary instruction. This refers, of course, to normal times and conditions. In the early days of the Reorganization, E. C. Briggs, seventeen years of age, was baptized, confirmed, and ordained an elder the same day. He confirmed the divinity of the call through a long period of service, being an apostle forty-two years. The situation at the time justified the action taken in the case of Brother Briggs.

Confirmation

Under normal conditions, the confirmation service should be carefully planned and certainly should be orderly. If there are a number to be confirmed, an entire service may be devoted to the ceremony and might include a sermon on the significance of church membership, its responsibilities and opportunities; or the service may be a part of another meeting, as a prayer meeting. In any event, it should be made an outstanding part of the meeting.

Our first confirmation service publicly held was on April 6, 1830, in connection with the organization of the church and the first Communion service.

Confirmation is a sacrament. It is a part of that which Christ had in mind when he said, "You must be born of the water and of the Spirit." Through this baptism of the water and of the Spirit, the confirmed member comes into covenant relationship with God.

The service, including suitable hymns and prayers, may well include a charge to the one confirmed and a charge to the congregation. The congregation has a responsibility. It is idle to confirm a member and enroll him in a branch that is torn with contention or that is spiritually dead. One of the Apostles, preaching in a small branch, was told by the pastor, "We are glad to have you with us as a friend, but you know as well as I do that your place is out in the mission field and not in an organized branch." The Apostle replied, "When you get this branch into a condition of harmony and spiritual life so that it is prepared to receive and minister to baptized converts, I will gladly go out into the field and make converts for you to minister to as pastor."

In the New Testament Scriptures we have a very fine account of a confirmation service:

Now when the apostles which were at Jerusalem heard that Samaria received the word of God, they sent unto them Peter and John. Who, when they were come down, prayed for them, that they might receive the Holy Ghost: (For as yet he was fallen upon none of them; only they were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus.) Then laid they their hands on them, and they received the Holy Ghost.—Acts 8: 14-17.

In the confirmation service, the imposition of hands and the prayer of confirmation constitutes the high point of the service. The priesthood manual, pages 107, 108, has this comment:

The laying on of hands is essential to our church life and symbolizes union between man and God At these meetings the confirmation ordinance should not be relegated to a second place, but when at all possible should be made the center of thought, with hymns, scripture readings, sermon, and prayer all contributing to the sacredness of the occasion.

Ordination

Ordination may be considered as one of the sacraments. The man receiving the ordination certainly enters into a covenant (verbal or implicit) with God to represent him as a minister, also a covenant with the church, making the ceremony sacramental. As with confirmation, where there are a number to be ordained, or even one or two, there may be a special service, the ordination preceded or followed by a sermon on the significance of ordination and the work of the priesthood. In the history of the church, the first public ordination to the higher priesthood occurred at the meeting for the organization of the church and administration of the sacrament.

The Sermon on the Mount is considered by reliable historians as an ordination sermon. When we piece the accounts of the Gospels together, this is about what happened: Christ spent one whole night in prayer (Luke 6: 12). The time had come for him to begin the building of his church and the organization of the priesthood. When morning came, he selected from among his followers twelve men and "ordained" them apostles (Luke 6: 13; Mark 3: 14). That day he preached the Sermon on the Mount.

The multitude listened, but we may think of the sermon as primarily an ordination sermon. Much of it has a general application, but some of it specifically applied to the members of the priesthood. For example, when he said to them, "Take no thought what ye shall eat or what ye shall drink or put upon your bodies," he was not talking to farmers and mechanics and merchants and professional men who must organize their work and give thought to production that they and others may eat and be clothed and housed. It is their stewardship to do that very thing. He was speaking specifically to ordained men (in that instance, the apostles) whose business it was to go out in a spiritual ministry and trust God and the church to provide them with the material necessities of life.

Even if the ordination service be part of another service, it should be an important part. It may be arranged with suitable hymns, a prayer, a charge to those receiving ordination. Oliver Cowdery gave an impressive charge to the first apostles ordained in the history of the Restoration. Christ gave charges to his ministry—a pastoral charge to "Feed my sheep, feed my lambs," and a missionary charge, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." The high part of the service, of course, is the imposition of hands and the prayer of ordination.

IN THE New Testament Scriptures, we have a brief account of an impressive ordination service:

As they ministered to the Lord, and fasted, the Holy Ghost said, Separate me Barnabas and Saul for the work whereunto I have called them. And when they had fasted and prayed, and laid their hands on them, they sent them away.—Acts 13: 2, 3.

The Book of Moroni gives an account of ordination services to the Aaronic priesthood in Book of Mormon days:

The manner which the disciples, who were called the elders of the church, ordained priests and teachers.

After they had prayed unto the Father in the name of Christ, they laid their hands upon them, and said, In the name of Jesus Christ I ordain you to be a priest; (or if he be a teacher;) I ordain you to be a teacher, to preach repentance and remission of sins through Jesus Christ, by the endurance of faith on his name to the end. Amen.

And after this manner did they ordain priests and teachers, according to the gifts and callings of God unto men; and they ordained them by the power of the Holy Ghost, which was in them.—Moroni 3: 1-3.

The Priesthood Journal Supplement, July, 1938, had this comment on the ordination service:

The ordination service should be a special one, worshipful in nature and centering on the act of the laying on of hands . . . adequate preparation beforehand is essential. Responsible officers must prepare themselves spiritually. Every detail of the service should be carefully thought out. . . . Evidences of carelessness, haste, and crowding should be

S. S. Smith Passes

Samuel Stephen Smith, a member of the priesthood for forty-nine years, died July 12 at his home in Independence, Missouri. Brother Smith, who would have been seventy-three on September 5, spent thirty-five years under conference appointment in the mission field. He was ordained to the office of seventy in 1904 and served as secretary to the First Quorum of Seventy for many years. He was in charge of guide work at the Auditorium for nearly fifteen years. Due to ill health, he spent the past year at home, writing and studying. He was, as he had always prayed to be, "faithful to the end."

avoided. Procedure should not be too hard and fast, neither too mechanical. Care should be taken to avoid unwise length in prayers, statements, charges, and ordination prayers.

This caution against lengthy prayers should be heeded. We men of the priesthood often forget ourselves and pray too long in confirmations and ordinations and in administering to the sick, in prayer meetings and in the opening of preaching services. Sometimes we ruin the service by this lack of wisdom. Christ himself voiced a brief prayer, and said, "After this manner, pray ye." Let us not forget ourselves and the proprieties of the various occasions when we minister.

(To be continued next week.)

The Descent of the Priesthood

By A. J. Corbett

THE SCRIPTURES, both ancient and modern, provide no more entrancing study than that of the descent of the authoritative ministry of God among men, a work which began in the days when the fall of man made ministry an essential thing. The redemption of the human family after the fall was the chief work of God among men. Both the importance and the permanence of the redemptive work is stated in the fifth chapter of Genesis in the Inspired Version:

And thus the gospel began to be preached from the beginning, being declared by holy angels, sent forth from the presence of God; and by his own voice, and by the gift of the Holy Ghost. And thus all things were confirmed unto Adam by an holy ordinance; and the gospel preached, and a decree sent forth that it should be in the world until the end thereof; and thus it was. Amen.

Priesthood and its ministry began with Father Adam, and both the way of the new birth and the ministry of it were shown through and vested in him.

And it came to pass when the Lord had spoken with Adam our father, that Adam cried unto the Lord, and he was caught away by the Spirit of the Lord, and was carried down into the water, and was laid under the water, and was brought forth out of the water, and thus he was baptized. And the Spirit of God descended upon him, and thus he was born of the Spirit, and became quickened in the inner man. And he heard a voice out of heaven saying, Thou art baptized with fire and with the Holy Ghost; this is the record of the Father and the Son, from henceforth and forever; And thou art after the order of him who was without beginning of days or end of years, from all eternity to all eternity. Behold, thou art one in me, a son of God; and thus may all become my sons. Amen.—Genesis 6: 67-71. Inspired Version.

THIS WAS PURELY a Melchisedec priesthood ministerial calling and appointment, for of that ministry we read in subsequent history, "Why the first is called the Melchisedec priesthood, is because Melchisedec was such a great high priest: before his day it was called the holy priesthood, after the order of the Son of God; but out of respect or reverence to the name of the Supreme Being, to avoid the too frequent repetition of his name, they, the church, in ancient days, called that priesthood after Melchisedec, or the Melchisedec priesthood."—Doctrine and Covenants 104: 1.

When Adam received the appointment, "Thou art after the order of him who was without beginning of days or end of years, from all eternity, to all eternity," he also was told that he was "one in God and also a Son of God." This was his calling and ordination. He received his commission direct from the Father—from the Father above to the father of all mankind. Genesis 6:7, 8 says: "Now this same priesthood which was in the beginning, shall be in the end of the world also. Now this prophecy Adam spake as he was moved upon by the Holy Ghost."

Adam was, therefore, both a priest and a prophet; and it is recorded in the writings of our church that

Three years previous to the death of Adam, he called Seth, Enos, Cainan, Mahalaleel, Jared, Enoch, and Methuselah, who were all high priests, with the residue of his posterity, who were righteous, into the valley of Adam-ondi-Ahman, and there bestowed upon them his last blessing. And the Lord appeared unto them. And they rose up and blessed Adam, and called him Michael, the Prince, the Archangel. And the Lord administered comfort unto Adam, and said unto him, I have set thee to be at the head: a multitude of nations shall come of thee; and thou art a prince over them forever. And Adam stood up in the midst of the congregation, and notwithstanding he was bowed down with age, being full of the Holy Ghost, predicted whatsoever should befall his posterity unto the latest generation.—Doctrine and Covenants 104: 28, 29.

Abel, whose death is the first recorded in the Scriptures, was also a prophet and a priest. In a revelation given to the church on September, 1832, the Lord said:

which Abraham received the priesthood from Melchisedec; who received it through the lineage of his fathers, even till Noah; and from Noah till Enoch, through the lineage of their fathers; and from Enoch to Abel, who was slain by the conspiracy of his brother; who received the priesthood by the commandments of God, by the hand of his father Adam, who was the first man; which priesthood continueth in the church of God in all generations, and is without beginning of days or end of years.—Doctrine and Covenants 83: 2.

Jesus said Abel was a prophet when he made this statement: "That the blood of all the prophets which was shed from the foundation of the world may be required of this generation, from the blood of Abel unto the blood of Zacharias, who perished between the altar and the temple."

GOD STARTED the world out with a rich redemptive ministry. It consisted of a long line of high priests after the order of his Son and continued down through the years through the right lineage of the generations of men. From Adam to Noah was ten generations. These were all high priests and reached down through about 1,750 years of history. From Noah, the line continued in Shem. In later years the chosen line of Israel with its priesthood was Semitic. Japheth became the progenitor of the Gentile nations, Ham the progenitor of the Hamitic or black races. The lineage and descent of the priesthood was in the line of Shem. To him came the blessing of his father Noah. "And he [Noah] said, Cursed be Canaan; a servant of servants shall he be unto his brethren. And he said, Blessed be the Lord God of Shem; and Canaan shall be his servant. God shall enlarge Japheth, and he shall dwell in the tents of Shem; and Canaan shall be his servant."—Genesis 9: 29-31.

How richly this blessing was fulfilled in the generations that followed. The tenth chapter of Genesis names the direct line of descent from Noah, the father of Shem, down to Abraham. There were ten more generations in that line. "Blessed of the Lord be Shem," said Noah, and he became the progenitor of Abraham who was appointed by God to be the father of his chosen race. The birth of Christ is also shown from generation to generation, from Abraham to Joseph, in Matthew 1-16. Christ was in the line of Shem. Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, and the whole of the Aaronic and Levitical priesthoods of the Old Testament were in that same line. It continued down to John the Baptist, who was of the "course" of Abia (Luke 1: 5). Mary, the mother of Jesus, who was a cousin of Elizabeth, was born in the Semitic line. Luke said Elizabeth was a "daughter of Aaron" (chapter 1: 5). Even Jesus, after whom the priesthood was named in the beginning, was born in the "line" foreordained from the beginning. When he ultimately came into the world "he received not a fulness at first" but afterwards received it. Even Jesus waited for his appointment to the priesthood when in the flesh, for Hebrews 5: 4-10 says:

No man taketh this honor to himself, but he that is called of God, as was Aaron. So also Christ glorified not himself to be made a high priest; but he that said unto him, Thou art my Son, today have I begotten thee. Though he were a Son, yet learned he obedience by the things which he suffered. And being made perfect he became the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey him; called of God an high priest after the order of Melchisedec.

It seems from this quotation that even Jesus, who was and is the great high priest, first came in the flesh and qualified as all men must, both by lineage and preparation for a ministerial calling and appointment.

THE DESCENT of the priesthood was foreordained in specific families of men. They were all in the chosen line, and that same divine and unalterable rule governs authoritative ministry today. God told Adam that the "same priesthood that was in the beginning would be in the end of the world also." The time came in 1829 when an angel of God descended from heaven and restored the ministry of authority to men. This "messenger" said his name was John, the same who is called John the Baptist in the New Testament. He said the priesthood he was restoring would not be taken from the earth again.

That lineage was still the chief factor in the restoration of the priesthood to the earth in our time. We quote from Doctrine and Covenants 84: 3:

Therefore, thus saith the Lord unto you, with whom the priesthood hath continued through the lineage of your fathers, for ye are lawful heirs, according to the flesh, and have been hid from the world with Christ in God: therefore your life and the priesthood hath remained, and must remain, through you and your lineage, until the restoration of all things spoken by the mouths of all the holy prophets since the world began.

John the Baptist, who gave the ministry to Joseph Smith, was a lineal descendant of Aaron. Although nearly a thousand years separated John and Abia, the line was preserved. Abia was a son of Eleazer the son of Aaron. The passage of time did not rescind the law of lineage which is really the authoritative and only lawful line of ministry. Aaron was a descendant of Levi to whom priestly calling was given as an entire tribe or family of Jacob. God made Levi "his firstborn." That divine choice consecrated the Levites as the ministering family of Israel throughout their generations. Aaron was a Levite, the grandson of Levi.

GOD HAS MADE a new "firstborn" choice for the last days—that is, for the time in which we live. In this Restoration Movement, he has said the lineage or descent of the priesthood "hath continued," and when the Prophet Jeremiah (31: 6-9) spoke of the gathering time of Jacob, he said, "They shall come with weeping, and with supplications will I lead them; I will cause them to walk by the rivers of waters in a straight way, wherein they shall not stumble; for I am a father to Israel, and Ephraim is my firstborn." Ephraim, as the first-born of God in the last days, will be as Levi, the first-born of God in the days of Israel. Both these tribes are Semitic. They are both in the line of ministerial or priesthood descent. The Jews were to Israel as was its priesthood; but in the day of the Restoration, the ministry is to all the world. Ephraim is scattered among all peoples. Hosea said, "he is sown among the nations" and "he has raised altars to sin" (wrong worship). But, said the prophet, "I [God] have written to him the great things of my law, and they were accounted as a strange thing." Thus the "stick of Ephraim" has come forth to search out "the sheep," who, Jesus said, would hear his voice and follow him. As a descendant "of that Joseph who was sold into Egypt," Joseph Smith was an Ephraimite. No wonder the Lord told the founders of the church today that they were lawful heirs "according to the flesh."

God has covenanted these things with the great men of the priesthood from the beginning of time. To Enoch he said:

That he would call upon the children of Noah; and he sent forth an unalterable decree, that a remnant of his seed should always be found among all nations, while the earth should stand. And the Lord said, Blessed is he through whose seed Messiah shall come.—Genesis 7: 58, 59.

Every soul upon the earth today is of the seed of Noah through some one of his three sons, but "the seed" through whom Messiah would come was Shem. The remnant of them

(Continued on page 13.)

In the Village of Serena

By Emma M. Phillips

THE VILLAGE OF SERENA is a typical village of Ireland, except for one thing—the legend concerning its playground. The churches, houses, schools, and people are quite the same as those in other Irish villages, but the playground is decidedly different. The most outstanding feature about it is the large stone cross that stands dominatingly in one corner. On one end of the horizontal bar of the cross is carved a wreath of thorns; on the other end is carved a wreath of wild flowers.

The serenity of the cross does not seem to disturb the hilarity of those on the playground. From wee toddlers to gray-haired grandparents, there is always someone enjoying a vigorous romp or jovial laugh near the cross. Winter and summer the inhabitants of Serena make a special effort to have continuous merriment upon this piece of land. They believe the legend, and perhaps they are justified in their belief.

THE LEGEND relates that many years ago when Saint Patrick was trying to establish Christianity in Ireland, a certain priest—a follower of Patrick—moved into the village of Serena. He appeared to be an ordinary man: medium height, plain features, brown hair, quiet eyes. In a short time, however, this man became the most domineering person of the village—a person who knew the strategy of making others do only as he desired. Such a man was Priest Moses.

Consequently, his coming brought about many changes in the village of Serena. Old men, who had once sat leisurely around in the cool of the evening and argued over the minute details of the gospel, now closed the Bible with a resounding thud and remarked, "If Priest Moses says it is that way, we need delve no further into the question." Parents, who had once pushed the furniture to the sides of the room and romped hilariously on the cleared floor with their children, now directed them to the supervised playground in the center of the village. The parents, in turn, dutifully studied the stern "Creed of Behavior" that Priest Moses had prepared for them. The young people, who had once greeted one another with loud shouts from streets and windows, now sneaked across the fields to another village where laughter was permitted. The children, under constant stern supervision, forgot how to think by themselves. They followed Priest Moses around compliantly, their languid eyes revealing no gleam of enthusiasm.

BUT ON A CERTAIN balmy afternoon in spring, shouts of pure enjoyment arose from the playground. The adults, partly because of shame and partly because of curiosity, thrust their heads from windows and doors to investigate the cause of the hilarity. What was making the children be so noisy? Just because Priest Moses was away investigating the action of the youth of Serena in the next village, the children should not neglect the pious mode of living that had been instilled into their lives. They should not take advantage of his absence.

As the adults watched, their eyes grew wide with amazement. Not only were the children running about the playground, shouting and waving their arms, but two young men were running about with them. They seemed to be playing the ever-old game of tag, for they were running in all directions at one time. The playground was in a happy state of confusion. There was stumbling and tumbling and falling and bumping. What seemed more astonishing to the adults was the fact that the two men and some of the children wore garlands of wild flowers about their heads.

The adults of Serena, their tongues laden with harsh, censuring abuse, rushed to the edge of the playground and called to the two men. When the men casually turned and waved a friendly greeting to the adults, it became evident that they were strangers to the village. They must have been strangers from a far distant land, for their clothing was different. One wore a loose brown tunic, knee length and tied at the waist with a piece of rope. The other wore a long white garment, the soiled hemline of which revealed that he must have walked far on a dusty road.

THE LEGEND claims the boldest man among the adults leaned on the fence of the playground and shouted, "What are you doing with the children?"

"We are teaching them to love living," called both men as if with one voice and one heart.

"You come off the playground immediately. Stop creating such a noise," the boldest man admonished. "Priest Moses would consider this an evil."

"Nay," retorted the stranger in the long, white garment, as he adjusted his crown of flowers. "You come on the playground and learn some of the simple things that are used in building the more abundant life."

As the boldest man hesitated, a new wave of merriment seemed to encompass the children, brightening their eyes and adding fresh color to their cheeks. The bewildered adults, led by the boldest man, slowly made their way toward the gate of the playground. The laughter did sound inviting. But before they reached the gate, Priest Moses returned and strode onto the playground. He planted his ordinary body in front of the two strangers and demanded, "What are you doing on this playground?"

The man in the brown tunic smiled, "We are preaching a sermon."

"Sermon," shouted Priest Moses, and the veins of his temples throbbed with sudden anger. "Sermons are preached with words not with a loud confusion."

The youth in the white garment shook his head in an annoyed manner. "Sermons for children that are preached with words need recording to be remembered. Sermons that are preached with laughter and smiles are treasured in the hearts of children."

Since such words were beyond the understanding of Priest Moses, he turned to the other stranger with the rebuke, "Who are you? Why do you wear such ridiculous clothes?"

"These are not ridiculous clothes," the youth defended himself. "I am a fisherman by trade, and I wear the clothes of my trade. As for my name, it is John—some call me John, the Beloved."

Priest Moses looked sneeringly at the wreath of wild flowers. "Only a demented man would love such a character as you."

The youth lifted his head sharply, but there was no sign of anger on his face. As he turned to his companion, he said, "My friend here loves me."

"He is also a demented man," and the sneer of Priest Moses increased as he turned to the other stranger, "And, you fool under a wreath of wild flowers, what is your name?"

"I am called Jesus."

AT THE SOUND of the name, Priest Moses waved his arms about violently and shouted, "That is a sacrilege. You two have done enough damage to this peaceful village. You have brought an unholy atmosphere. Take those flowers from your unworthy heads and be gone with you. Never again let either of you enter this village."

The strangers stood firm, "You do wrong in your teachings. People should enjoy life."

"Don't tell me how to conduct my business. I am learned in the Bible. I know what I am doing. Now, leave immediately."

Both strangers took the wreaths of flowers from their heads, and dropped them to the ground before the priest. Then turning, they walked slowly from the playground, down the road and away. And as the complacent priest and saddened children and the bewildered adults watched them leave, they seemed to vision that they had seen these two strangers before.

When Priest Moses stooped to pick up the unwanted wreaths of flowers, the unusual happened. Before him on the ground lay two wreaths, one a bright ring of wild flowers, one a blood-stained crown of thorns. The priest gave a sudden gasp and fell to his knees as he realized what a crime he had committed. Jesus—his Savior, Jesus—had visited him personally, and he had rejected his admonition. With a cry of "Forgive me, Master," he clutched the two wreaths and started down the road after his two heavenly visitors.

JUST WHAT happened to the priest from then on seems to be a matter of confusion. One version of the legend claims he hid himself in a monastery in France. The other version insists he became one of those impetuous ghost characters of Great Britain and roams the countryside shouting, "Forgive me, Master."

But concerning the village of Serena, there is only one version. The inhabitants returned to their happy normal state. And to make certain that no one would ever again impress upon the village the theory that a sordid, rigid life is the only true religious way, they erected the stone cross on the playground. There it stands to this day, and about it are frolicking the descendants of the early inhabitants of Serena. They are both happy and righteous at the same time.

Do You Enjoy Your Church?

DO YOU ENJOY your church? The query suggests many thoughts. To enjoy your church, there must be union of your mind and spirit with the thinking and spirit of the church. There must somehow be a feeling of reciprocity between you as an individual and the collective life of the church. No one can live entirely alone or with a permanent mood of isolation and gain joy out of his church life. God evidently created his church so that we might reach heaven by learning how to live together in the bonds of love and fellowship.

Church life demands co-operation on the part of the whole congregation. Everybody is expected to make his contribution in some field of the total activity. It is not the pastor's church or the property of the prominent members. It is the church of the retiring, the meek, the very humble member as well as the church of the talkative, the prominent, and the forward. The church belongs to all the members, and all must participate if they are to enjoy their church life. The extent to which each one fuses his life with the total life of the church is the extent to which he will enjoy the church.

Do you enjoy your worship? To enjoy the worship experience in your church, there must be preparation on the part of all members. The spirit of "rugged individualism" on the part of some member will most probably ruin the worship experience for others. The worship service of the church is a co-operative, collective activity. Each participating member, to enjoy the collective worship experience, must co-operate in the refinement of the service and fuse his mood into the mood of the worshipping group. The spirit of unity is an essential in the worship of the church and in its enjoyment.

Do you enjoy the multiple friendships of your church? Here again the co-operative spirit is essential. To enjoy friendships, an individual must be a friend to others.

Perhaps you do not agree with everything that is done at church. That should not interfere with your enjoyment of your church, its services, and its rich friendships.

If you are not enjoying your church life, examine the extent of your creative co-operation in the services, the quality of your friendliness to others, and the manner of your participation. Then join your church in spirit, and you will find happiness unmeasured in your church life.

—John Blackmore, Omaha Ray-O-Lite.

The Use of the Book of Mormon in Missionary Work - Part 3

Substance of lecture given at Convention of Twelve and Seventy, Kansas City, Missouri, January 3-9, 1948

Helpful Hints

IN USING the Book of Mormon and the evidences of its divine mission, it is wise always to keep to the fore, and rather emphatically so, that one's main objective is not merely to prove the book true, but to bring valuable additional help in proving the vital facts concerning the resurrected Jesus and his teachings to a needy world.

Where prejudice is strong (as it is in many places) against even the name of the book, it may be well, at least much of the time, to speak of it as "The Nephite Record," or "The Record of Joseph," "The Sacred Record of Ancient America," being sure, however, to leave no doubt as to what book is being referred to.

Rather than assuming a defensive attitude—as one might do, for instance, in showing the book does not teach polygamy—it is better to affirmatively use the book to show the dire consequences of wrong relationships in marriage and the home. From the Book of Mormon, it may actually be shown that polygamy with its kindred evils was the chief cause of the downfall and final utter destruction of the mighty Nephite nation (Jacob 2: 30-57).

The Lamanites, on the other hand, were not utterly destroyed because they had not forgotten the commandments of the Lord that they should have "save it were one wife" (verses 54-57).

To Confound False Doctrine

In Ezekiel 37: 15-20, it is stated that the "Stick of Joseph" and the "Stick of Judah" shall be put together into one stick, and they shall be one in God's hand. In II Nephi 2: 19-21, it is likewise said that the writings of Joseph and the writings of Judah "shall grow together." Then follows the purpose they shall accomplish as one in God's hand: "Unto the confounding of false doctrines, and laying down of contentions, and establishing peace."

Obviously, the Lord intends that we should use the Bible and the Book of Mormon together in this very way and for this very purpose. The Lord wants the world to know for instance that "sprinkling" or "pouring" in christening is false doctrine (Matthew 3; John 3; Acts 8; etc., with III Nephi [the son] 5: 21-26).

God wants the world to know that the baptizing of babies or little children incapable of faith and repentance is not only false doctrine but a solemn mockery before him (Mark 16: 16; Acts 2: 38; Moroni 8: 8-12).

He wants the world to know that any form of baptism which does not accomplish more than the physical act is not acceptable to him (compare John 3: 5-7; Matthew 3: 8-10; Mosiah 9: 41-44). These illustrate how the two books may be used as one in God's hand for his wise purposes. This method provides a valuable approach to the one already mentioned on the subject of marriage. The false doctrine of polygamy is confounded and the true doctrine established by using first the Bible (Matthew 19: 5; Malachi 2: 14, 15); then the Book of Mormon (Jacob 2: 30-57).

Similarly other doctrinal subjects may be used, comparing the writings of the Jews with the writings of the Josephites. This method has proved of inestimable value in missionary work, especially when assisted by visual aids. Prejudice in many cases gives place to enthusiasm and conversion.

By Seventy Harold I. Velt

Possibilities

The valuable approaches that can be made to Christ and the fundamentals of his gospel of grace through the Book of Mormon and its connecting evidences have undoubtedly a greater place in the church of the future than we have yet understood.

The possibilities for development are tremendous. In publicity value alone, it has been proved over many years that an approach to the subject through archæology, with its growing fields of human interest, surpasses any other known way of securing the attention of strangers and the revivifying of careless members. We have seen churches and halls filled where we have been told it could not be done.

We have witnessed the conversion of infidels, skeptics, heathens, and Jews, some of whom have testified that they thought they would not have been won to Christianity through any other means. Apparently it catches the attention of a Jew almost immediately when, after questioning him about his knowledge of the whereabouts of the descendants of Joseph, one relates the interesting Jewish prophecies concerning Joseph and the evidences of archæology that the people of Israel occupied America, and that they were visited by the resurrected Christ. The infidel, skeptic, or heathen is disarmed by the startling facts that Jesus, after being crucified in Palestine, appeared miraculously in Ancient America. Combining the Book of Mormon with the Bible, archaeology, and Indian tradition, we have the strongest case for the fact of the resurrection of Jesus and his Messiahship. This is exactly what the poor, suffering world stands in need of today. Let us never slacken our missionary efforts in using this powerful instrument toward "the convincing of Jew and Gentile that Jesus is the Christ, the Eternal God."

Descent of the Priesthood

(Continued from page 9.)

would be found among all nations. The tribe of Ephraim is thus scattered. That ancient covenant was made much clearer when God gave it to Noah:

And the bow shall be in the cloud; and I will look upon it, that I may remember the everlasting covenant, which I made unto thy father Enoch; that when men should keep all my commandments, Zion should again come upon the earth, the city of Enoch that I have caught up unto myself. And this is mine everlasting covenant, that when thy posterity shall embrace the truth, and look upward, then shall Zion look downward, and all the heavens shall shake with gladness, and the earth shall tremble with joy; And the general assembly of the church of the first-born shall come down out of heaven, and possess the earth, and shall have place until the end come.—Genesis 9: 21-23.

THE WHOLE SUBSTANCE of these wonderful promises is based on the lineal righteousness of the men to whom they were made. Ephraim was to be the first-born in the days of the coming of the church of the first-born from heaven. The whole of the covenant with all its rich fulfillment is centered in the building of Zion on earth and the return of Zion from heaven. Only a divine ministry can understand and teach these things. They belong authoritatively to the "seed" who are in the priesthood line, and to all those who, through their ministry, are found faithful to the covenant they make with God.

Weapons of Death or Tools of Life - By Ruth Selzer

SHORTLY AFTER WORLD WAR I, I remember hearing this remark, "If there is a God, why does he allow wars to happen?" Recently I heard much the same remark referring to the atomic bombs, hunger, and devastation—"Why does God allow such vast and overspreading evil?" In other words, we cry, "Why doesn't God change things and make life easy for us? If he doesn't, we can't love him."

When we were children, we believed our fathers and mothers could change things in the twinkling of an eye for us, and they usually did. Regardless of the situation in which we found ourselves, their ever-willing hands came to our rescue. Mother's kiss on a bump was magic in its relief. Father could always repair a broken toy. One day tragedy really hit us—our dog died. That was something father could not fix—a law of God had been disobeyed. Mother comforted us by telling us some day maybe we would see our "Poochie" again. Our little minds began to wonder about this God—our Heavenly Father.

As we grew into adolescence, we really became confused, for by that time we had learned there were many things Father could not fix and many heartaches Mother could not soothe. We began to learn that God has established natural laws in the universe which he expects to be obeyed, and that he has given us minds and expects us to use them. We learned, also, that even though we might not have disobeyed a law, if our associates did, we suffered quite as much as they. So we developed a mature understanding of God's law and order here upon the earth. That is, if we really grew up, and, if we were smart, we didn't get too many scars in the process of learning it.

GOD HAS GIVEN us this massive earth on which to dwell. Here we have all we need to survive happily. We have flowing oil and black coal for comfort, water power to give us light, veins of glittering gold and silver, and rich soil to produce the food we eat. He has also set forth rules governing the use of these gifts. Twice, recently, we got careless—we disobeyed some of these rules, we refused to use these gifts to build a better world. We armed ships, we made ammunition, we developed machines that kill. Dare we run to God to wipe away our misdeeds? Dare we expect him to shield us from the inevitable consequences of our own folly? This is purely childish reasoning.

Indeed, God must weep when he sees how we suffer. But what kind of a Father would he be if he broke his laws, abolished moral principles, and made a liar out of himself? Furthermore, we would be mere robots, brainless creatures, ever incapable of building his kingdom on the earth.

Now God has given us the key to unlock the door to his house of energy. Another gift, yes, but again there are laws governing its use. Within the secret of the atom is the power of life and death for us all. Will we choose this time the weapons of death or the tools of life?

The man who can't think is an idiot; the man who won't think, a fool; and the man who dare not think, a slave.—Ingersoll.

The man who is always having to decide NOT to do something, seldom has time to DO anything.

Our Home Is Our Kingdom

By Esther Wilson Heller

BE IT MANSION or small apartment, our home is the place in all the world where we would rather be. It holds so many possibilities for work and play, study and meditation, communion with God and self-expression. My house is my workshop. Here I can make clean the clothing we wear. I can make wearable that which was torn or worn. I can sew and make something useful from that which was useless. I can preserve for later use the foods from our garden. I can prepare nourishing food for my family and friends. I can try new recipes and experiment with this and that. I have the privilege of using the Word of Wisdom for a guide in our own home. I believe it is my responsibility to see that nothing unhealthful is served in our home.

In our home, we can entertain friends and exchange ideas with them. We can learn something from each person who sets foot in our house. We can provide an evening of fun for the different age groups in the church. We can entertain small nieces and nephews and help to guide them in the way they should go. We can make others comfortable and happy. We can provide food and shelter for missionaries who are about the Father's business. It is a part of our stewardship, and we accept it gladly.

Our home has in it the books and magazines we like to read—many good ones in addition to the church publications. There is never a lack of good reading material at our house. In the quiet of our home, we can study and learn. We can read the Three Books. We can take advantage of the opportunity offered by our church to know the interpretation put upon our Scriptures by inspired men and women. Every time we study, we feel the need of more study.

Music is a necessity in our home. We ourselves are not experts in producing it, but we do have some favorites that we like to play on the piano. We can give way to our feelings and sing, "Joy to the World" whether the month is December or June. Our church young people love to sing whenever they get together. Then there is the radio, which often brings us good programs.

OCASIONALLY we take time for a game of croquet or a picnic in our cool, green back yard. Here we can also watch the hummingbirds flit about the iris or four-o'clocks. We can listen to the saucy little wrens scold us if we get too close to their house. The whole family enjoys such an outing. Sometimes it is just a tea party for Gordon, Bruce, and Patricia.

Our home is a place of self-expression for us. The furniture and decorations please us, for we selected them. The pictures are the ones we want and they are in the places where we want them. I can even hang up one of my own "masterpieces." If our ideas change, we can rearrange things to suit ourselves. If I want the inside of my kitchen cupboards painted yellow, I can have them so. I can even complain about the food, for I prepared it myself! In no other place on earth are we so unhampered and free as in our own home. We love it and enjoy being in it. This is not to say that everything is perfect in our home; we are constantly working to make it more convenient, more comfortable, more beautiful. It is a place of endless possibilities for living a more abundant life. Our home is our kingdom, and we hope that it will have a part in the building of God's kingdom.

Budget-Wise Club

A Report by Mrs. D. A. Bolon

SEVERAL OF OUR members have consented to tell the club and our guests, the Home Column readers, how they have been garment wise this spring.

Joan is wearing a brown costume on which she has received many compliments from her friends.

Because the club members are eager to learn of her creative cleverness in working out this costume, Joan has offered to give us the details as the first report from our "Budget-wise Club."

Joan:

Several of the club members know that I bought this brown wool suit in a July sale in 1946. As purchased, it had a medium brown jacket, and a straight line skirt with a kick pleat in the back and front, made of slightly larger brown and white checks than that of the flare skirt I am now wearing.

The original skirt was far too short for 1948 wear, and I couldn't find any material to match it. One of my grade school nieces could wear it, so I gave it to her.

As has been suggested, the suit was rather inexpensive and was chiefly suitable for travel, vacationing in the country, week-night wear, and shopping. I hoped to reclaim it for those purposes this year.

The jacket, as purchased, was bound around the collar, lapels, down the front and side fronts to underarm side seam (lower edge of jacket) with checked material to match the skirt, as also were the pockets.

I had the time and inclination to work, and I had on hand a good four-gore flare skirt of brown and white wool, slightly smaller checks, which was too short for 1948 wear. I had made this skirt and had a fairly large piece of the material left. I let down the hem of this skirt and pressed it well. I then laid the skirt on the cutting table, folded at the center front and center back

a home column feature

seams. I folded to double thickness the reserve piece of checked material and pinned it carefully to the skirt edge and cut by the skirt edge to same circular curve as the lower skirt edge, both the back and the front gore extension, allowing plenty of material for seams and flare for each. Next I measured down from this upper edge of gore extension three and three-quarter inches, marking every inch from seam to seam of each extension to get the correct length for gore extension and the correct curve and flare for lower edge. When all four pieces were cut, I applied each in a (wrong side of garment) plain seam to the lower edge of the skirt, matched front, back and side seams perfectly with skirt seams, and scaled to proper flare for each seam; I stitched the seams, then pressed them flat and faced the skirt (to wrong side) with one and one half inch brown rayon hem facing, finishing the hem by hand.

I then cleaned and pressed the skirt and found that the extension was scarcely noticeable in the checked material of the skirt. I then removed the binding from the jacket and rebound with the material to match the flare skirt. The jacket was rather long, and as the shorter jacket length is more becoming with a longer flare skirt, I shortened the jacket an inch, since I could do so without throwing the pockets out of line. Also, I did not rebind the lower edge of the side fronts of the jacket, as I decided this would decrease the apparent height of a wearer of average height, when the jacket was worn with the flare skirt.

I bought an inexpensive dark brown felt hat with touches of white in the trim, an inexpensive pair of brown gloves, tone scarf, and made a rayon poplin blouse (either tuck in or not). I had the brown plastic patent purse and brown shoes which complete the costume.

My total cash output was between nine and ten dollars, and here is my shopping and vacation costume in the 1948 mode.

On Having Children

By Louise Wrigley

WHENEVER I FEEL a little sorry for myself because my child is being difficult or because household tasks are harrassing me, I think of my neighbor who has a bigger house and four children. Then, when I remember how much she enjoys her children, I feel sorry for myself because I don't have three more!

Lynn fascinates me. She never gets excited or upset with her youngsters, though they get into every bit as much mischief as any other four could. She treats them kindly and with the same respect you would accord adults. She has an easy, unhurried manner with them. She never hurries them outside to play or in the other room so they won't bother her. For her children aren't a bother to her . . . they're a pleasure! She is certainly a welcome change from the haranguing mothers one contacts every day.

The odd thing is that Lynn wasn't born with a perfect disposition. She has an Irish temper, but it never strikes out against those she loves. Nor does it strike out unjustly. She is self-disciplined. She corrects her children but without shouting at them. She guides their play skillfully but without "bossing" them. She never seems to interfere, yet they treat the other children courteously for the most part and don't wander far from the back doorstep. It is easy for her to show her children how to be kind and fair and tolerant, because she has learned how herself. How many of us have not!

CHILDREN ARE not innately mean or vicious or sneaky or willful or any of the things which they turn out to be because of their parents. That's a rather shocking thing to say, for many parents who have that kind of children are sure they are being model mothers and fathers. If your children do things behind your back, it's because you have not seen to it that they felt free to do things before you. They have come to fear parental wrath rather than to expect calm parental discussion and understanding. Whipping or scolding them when you are angry and shocked doesn't mean they will stop. It only means that you won't know what is going on, which makes the situation worse than ever.

Lynn pays attention when her children talk to her. That's a habit worth cultivating, lest you agree absently with something Susie says, only to find her cutting up your best dress to make doll clothes. And isn't it maddening to tell a child something, only to find he isn't listening? Well, it must seem so to him, too, when he is trying to tell you something.

I HAVE GONE into Lynn's house at noon to find the baby's washing just in the tubs. She says with her sweet smile, "I'm a little late this morning. The children wanted some fudge, so I stopped to make some for them." What a marvelous treasure these children have in a mother who will put off her "necessary work" to make fudge.

They often come bounding into the house, seeking her, waiting for her approval. "See, Mommy, I caught a tadpole, a real live one!" There is no rebuke for Eileen because her dress is wet and her hands grimy. Lynn wouldn't spoil the magic of that tiny, wiggling tadpole which so fascinates her five-year-old. She keeps her peace, preserving the thrill of that discovery forever.

And her children look at her with a light in their eyes. Even now they sense, somehow, that she is "special." To see her with them brings to mind the thought, "Love and understanding like this would heal all the hurts of the world."

Why Camping?

BY VERDA E. BRYANT

I HAVE JUST RETURNED from a week of camping with the Oriole Girls at Gardner Lake, Excelsior Springs, Missouri. In the first session of Camp Oececa, there were seventy-one girls between the ages of eleven and sixteen. Seventy-five more girls enjoyed camp privileges during the second session.

Camp is a magic word to many youngsters. As a child, I was convinced that camping must be the acme of fun. I read the ads and longed to attend, but circumstances prevented my experiencing camp life until three years ago when I joined the staff of Camp Oececa. Camp is still a magic word to me, and I am most happy to be on the staff.

To most of the Orioles attending camp, it is an opportunity for fun. Many parents and observers consider camping in this light alone. While major emphasis is placed upon having a good time, camping reaches far deeper into the lives of these young adolescents.

The Oriole usually earns most of her camp fee. During the winter months, the girls hold bake sales, collect papers, present dramatical productions and entertainments, sell various notions, baby-sit, wait tables, and check hats at local banquets, and in dozens of other ways increase their camp funds. Through these various Oriole group-sponsored activities, the girls gain experiences in various fields which would be difficult to learn otherwise.

CAMP EXPERIENCES knit the girls of the church together as they work, play, study, and worship. They learn that there is a time for work, for play, and for worship; and throughout all camping experiences, they feel a closeness to God through their fellowship. To the casual observer, camp may seem ninety-eight per cent nonsense, but the ability of youngsters to "transish" from the nonsensical to the serious is amazing.

Camping at a church camp is an outstanding experience to many girls as was evidenced by their testimonies at fellowship service. Aside from the usual run of experience of the girls, I saw (during the first session of Camp Oececa this year) two outstanding examples of what camping can do for girls.

I served in the capacity of boating instructor. Girls learn to handle the rowboats on the beautiful lake under camp conditions (with strict regulations). They also learn something about operating boats under other conditions and are taught to recognize the difference between fun with safety and foolhardiness.

During the three years I have served in this capacity, I have worked with girls who had a knack of rowing and girls who just knew they could never learn. Always I urge them on, assuring them that they can learn if only they keep at it. By putting the timid ones out in a boat alone, with a few commands called from the shore when necessary, every girl who has attempted to row has developed a skill to some degree.

However, this year I almost despaired that one girl would ever learn. She seemed hopelessly unable to handle the boat. She appeared to have no co-ordination between her two hands and little ability to make her hands do what her mind wanted them to do. She wanted to give up, but I kept urging her on, telling her that I had yet to see a girl who couldn't row a boat. Finally I climbed into the boat with her, held the oars just below her hands, and helped her with the rhythm. She gained a little confidence then and practiced not only during class time but during free time; at the end of the camp I was happy to be able to pass her and to compliment her on her excellent job of rowing and pivoting. If this girl learned nothing else, she achieved a co-ordination between mind and hands which should help her throughout life.

ANOTHER GIRL came to class the first day with an "I don't care" attitude written all over her face. Her eyes wore the glassy stare of boredom, and her mind was far from camp. She didn't want to row, she didn't even care to ride with someone else at the oars. I wondered if someone had prevailed upon her to come to camp, as she was definitely belligerent and with no desire to cooperate or enjoy the experience.

I saw that girl become interested, saw the look of boredom pass from her eyes, and was thrilled with her excitement and pleasure and the sparkle in her eyes, when I assured her she had passed all requirements and would receive her boating badge. Something happened to her. The week at Camp Oececa may be a turning point in her life, and I'd like to keep in touch with her and observe her advancement.

CAMPING FOR THE GIRLS is fun; for the staff, it is WORK. It means braving the hot sun six or seven hours a day, keeping on your toes constantly to be at least one jump ahead of them, biting your tongue to keep from losing patience with their adolescent silliness, and carrying on when every muscle of your body cries for rest. Yes, it is work, but it is experiences like these that makes the job of the leader worth everything.

Not for anything would I exchange my camping experiences for an easy chair, a pitcher of ice-cold lemonade, a fan blowing a brisk breeze, and a good book; though after a camping experience is over, they do serve as a refreshing interlude.

BOOKS

Introducing the Sorensens

Sermon Stories of Faith and Hope, by William L. Stidger, Abingdon-Cokesbury Press, 1948, 154 pages, price $1.50.

The collector of this volume of stories is a well-known church leader, writer, speaker, and editor. Previous volumes of collected stories have been very popular. There are nearly one hundred stories in this volume, and speakers are sure to find in some of them good illustrations for use in church work.

Poems for the Great Days, edited by Thomas Curtis Clark and Robert Earle Clark, Abingdon-Cokesbury Press, 1948, 245 pages, price $2.50.

This anthology is organized around the great holidays and festivals of the year, including New Year's, Lincoln's and Washington's birthdays, Easter, Arbor Day, Mother's Day, Memorial Day, Flag Day, Independence Day, Thanksgiving, Christmas, and others. There is a good index, well classified. Thomas Curtis Clark is the greatest and best-known American editor of religious verse. With his son's assistance, he has done a good work in preparing this volume. It will be useful to program builders and speakers in church work.

Protestant Church Building, by William H. Leach, Abingdon-Cokesbury Press, 1948, illustrated 188 pages, price $3.00.

The author of this book is founder and editor of the excellent magazine, Church Management. He has written and published a number of valuable and practical works centering around the management and leadership of churches. This is an excellent book to add to the library and is splendid research material for any congregation that is considering the building of a new church. It includes about fifty pictures and drawings with chapters on plans, finances, committee work, money raising, and other important matters.

AUSTRALIA HAS produced some of our best church leaders to occupy in the highest quorums of the church. "Viv" and "Gwen" are products of which Australia may well be proud. They, with their family, are now performing a distinctive ministry in French Oceania.

Vivian is one of the fine young Australian leaders who was selected and trained by Apostle George Mesley. A few months after his arrival in Tahiti, he was ordained a seventy under the hands of the apostle who selected and trained him. His devotion to the church and his diligence in service have endeared him to us who have enjoyed his friendship and who have shared in ministering to the Saints in our most tropical mission.

Gwen, his capable companion, has faithfully assisted and encouraged him. Her talent of music has been an invaluable aid, for much of the ministry demanded by the native Saints lies in this category. She is a graduate nurse and is consequently engaged in an added ministry to the afflicted and infirm. Her cheerful countenance and understanding disposition have also endeared her to us who have labored together in Tahiti.

Their oldest daughter, Beth, was not yet three when they arrived in Tahiti. But, because of contact with her native playmates, she was soon speaking the native language more fluently than her mother tongue. Marvia, the youngest daughter, was born at Tahiti.

This Man and This Woman, by Frederick W. Brink, Association Press, 1948, 79 pages, price $1.50.

Here is a new book in a field in which some good publications have already appeared. This new volume stands high in the group and brings some new thoughts that will be valuable. There is an especially im-

Vivian and Gwen with their two daughters, Beth and Marvia.

With this addition to the family, there arose a need for larger living quarters and for more modern living facilities. Therefore, without disturbing the lovely bougainvillea vine which covered the west side of the house, a sun porch and bath were added.

Brother Sorensen and his family are due to arrive in America the fore part of next year. We commend them to you for the fine quality of ministry they have rendered in Tahiti, and for the deep sense of responsibility and devotion they hold for the church.

SEVENTY F. EDW. BUTTERWORTH

portant chapter for people of different religious faiths who are planning to get married. It is an excellent book for young people to read before they seriously consider becoming engaged and will still be helpful for those who are planning to get married.

STARS IN THEIR EYES

While dining out the other noon, I noticed three business men sitting around a table. One mentioned his wife in an "Oh-I-tolerate-her" tone. The other two smiled knowingly and said, "Oh, wives are all like that." This seemed to put all wives in one bracket and not a very intelligent one at that.

It's also common to hear a woman say, "My husband? Oh, him," dismissing him with a shrug or a laugh.

You know what we need? More men who publicly appreciate their wives and more wives with stars in their eyes when they talk about their husbands.

—LOUISE

IS IT REALLY NECESSARY for romance to fade and die after the honeymoon is over? Must two people, who found heaven in each other's company while they were courting, see their bright dreams of happiness fade like mist and be replaced by the dullness of routine devoid of charm?

There are stars in a girl's eyes on her wedding day. Is it possible for a man to keep those stars shining there the next month, the next year, and ten years later?

Some men and women are able to do it. Some love each other more deeply and devotedly, more thrillingly and excitingly after marriage than before, increasing their love with the years. How do they do it? Following are some hints given by various people:

1. Keep Love Alive. One fine old gentleman said, "When I married Fanny, I decided I was going to love her as hard as I could all the rest of my life. It has worked wonderfully!"

Say to your wife, "I love you, Dear," many times a day, and always at least once. That will help to convince both of you. You can control love—it does not need to control you. Never ask yourself if you still love your wife—assert to yourself every morning that you do. And you will.

2. Help Your Wife. Unless you are sick, never sit resting while she has to be on her feet working. Help with the dishes. Help with the housework. It will make her love and appreciate you. It will also make you love her more because you are helping her.

3. Speak Words of Praise. Thank her for a good lunch or dinner or even a little breakfast. Thank her for what she does for you. Be grateful. Gratitude is a fine help to produce happiness for both of you. Thank her often for saying "Yes," and for coming into your life to make you happy.

4. Protect Her Feelings in Public. Never criticize her before others, even in fun. Do not tease nor taunt her. Do not say untrue things, even in humorous exaggeration. Let it be known to the world that you love and appreciate your wife, and she will be proud and happy to acknowledge to all that you are a good husband. Pay no attention to the other couples who "razz" and criticize each other; do not be like them. Theirs is an abnormal, unhappy situation. Yours can be different.

5. Be Considerate. Remember the different physical and biological conditions she has to meet, the special problems and burdens that put a strain on her emotional life, and make generous allowances.

6. Keep Courting. Never get the idea that she is your permanent property or that her love is your right. Try to win her love afresh every day. You can't have any fun this summer just by remembering last summer's fishing trip. You want to feel the rod in your hand, the cool spray of the water, the tugging tension on the line now. So it is with love. Yesterday's courting is a beautiful memory. It is the tight hug, the tingling warm kiss you give today that really counts. It means little that you loved yesterday, unless you love today. Love her now.

7. Give her many happy little surprises. Unpleasant surprises are bad. The pleasant ones build up a fund of love and appreciation. Remember her birthday, the anniversaries, the holidays. And sometimes bring her something just because you love her. Celebrate because you like to celebrate.

8. Build up her self-esteem. Some poor husbands have belittled wonderful and beautiful girls until they became nagging harridans; then felt abused. Other husbands build up a humble little wife until she is radiant with beauty and happiness. Why live with a discouraged kitchen slavey when you can live with a queen of a woman? For every woman is potentially a queen at heart, if her husband will behave like a king to her. Unwillingly she becomes plain and ordinary.

9. Remember that your wife is God's daughter, and that you are responsible to him for her welfare and happiness. And make God your partner in your home. Make the church a part of your home life. No marriage is complete without religion, without Christ.

10. Live every day as if it were to be your last day together. Who knows when death will come and take your companion away? Then you will realize how wonderful she was. Do not wait until eternity to do something for her. Do it now. Do it today.

LETTERS

I Married Into the Church

TWELVE YEARS AGO I was married to Maxine Goold, a devout member of the church. Although her parents frequently moved to places where she was not privileged to attend her own church, the doctrine and gospel of the church were so instilled in her that the absence from the organization did not in the least weaken her love for or understanding of the Restored Gospel. This can largely be attributed to her parents who were immovable in this faith. The graces and principles of this belief were made manifest and glorified in her deeds and actions.

On my side of this marital union, there was a college graduate who had been reared in a well-known Protestant denomination. Also I was a little her senior in years. With these supposed assets to my advantage, I thought in due time that my wife could be converted to a more liberal religion in which I believed. I did not know at the time that I was up against a brick wall of character, beliefs, and doctrine, and a living witness built upon the doctrine and gospel of Jesus Christ himself.

I had the very common American conception of religion and the broad and open-minded belief that religious doctrine was a concept within one's mind suitable to his attributes; that persons of varying degrees of intellect and spiritual make-up could easily be fitted into some denomination which best suited their particular characteristics; and that all denominations were preaching about the same Christ. I thought that was sufficient. I early learned that one could not settle these doctrinal differences by the Bible, due to its lack of clearness on many points. Also I knew many devout men of learning had spent life times of study of the Scriptures and had each arrived at different answers. I came to believe that the Scriptures were purposely versatile and mysterious, designed to fulfill the Creator's design for reaching the greatest multitude of humanity; and that we must therefore accept our Christ in some denomination which coincides with our concept of him, and there find our task and labor. Here let me state that I was innocently following the light to which I had access and the interpretations of sincere men. This, to say the least, is a liberal view in keeping with the American way, is it not?

Such were the two religious backgrounds that were brought together at our marriage.

My conversion to the church was a long and slow process, culminating, I feel, by the hand of God. The Saints fit poorly into my self-styled idea of religion. They were a "sect" claiming to have the only true gospel of Christ. I considered them cliquish, self-centered, and many times aloof. Possibly some of my conceptions of this people would best not bear repeating. Although religion was not a great source of contention in our lives, yet at many times there were long and argumentative discussions. Yet constantly in these exchanges of views there was that strong brick wall on my wife's side that would not give or be moved an inch. My wife's best argument was her life itself and her sound logic, which at that time I would not see. At each of the verbal clashes possibly a little more of her reasoning would rub off on me than I suspected. She would more graciously attend my church with me; then I would return the favor. I agreed that our children could be blessed in her church, but I was determined that they should be taught liberally so that when they reached the age of accountability, they could join the church of their choice.

This period of religious differences went on until December, 1946. At that time Glen Johnson and Leslie Kohlman asked if they might hold cottage meetings at our home. They stated they felt they were called to explain the gospel to me. I agreed to these meetings. At these meetings there were others present, and before many meetings had been held, I found myself trying to explain the Restoration to the others. From that time on the change that came over me I attribute to the working of the Holy Spirit in me through the ministry of these called men of God. A mental conversion would have left many doubts and reservations and would have come slowly. The suddenness and clearness of the gospel which was revealed to me, the washing away of all doubts and prejudices that come through the ordinances of baptism and the laying on of hands by authorized ministers, still astound me. My son, at that time eight years old, was baptized with me. That was a holy occasion for me to see him precede me into the waters of baptism.

From that time on I have read and understood with seemingly divine understanding. I have sat up many nights past midnight and read the Bible, because there were so many more truths revealed that I could not see before. My faith is now founded in Christ's authorized church, the only organization in the world today preaching the original gospel which was first delivered to the Saints by Christ some two thousand years ago. We see now the futility of man's intellect in trying to formulate doctrine or interpret the Bible, when it is so marvelously revealed by our submissiveness to God's holy word as recorded in the Three Standard Books. The assurance of these truths made manifest by the Holy Spirit gives us such anchorage in the Restoration Movement, that there remains but one set course of action, namely, the transforming of these principles of the gospel into our actions of service to humanity in the furtherance of the gospel of the kingdom here upon this earth.

I shall never cease to give thanks to our Heavenly Father for the fact that it happened that I married a Saint who stood firm in her belief until we now see eye to eye. Or did it "just happen" that I married a Saint?

C. R. AUXIER.

4111 South Norfolk
Tulsa, Oklahoma

Missionary Work

EDITORIAL NOTE: Apostle D. T. Williams has received and made available to us a very interesting letter relating to the work of Elder Clyde McDonald in the Des Moines District. The letter from Brother McDonald, dated May 22, reports his activities. Extracts follow:

In addition to the responsibility of pastor of the Fort Des Moines Mission, I have a group of nonmembers in the territory where I sell goods who are reading the church books and tracts. This month I gave a Book of Mormon to a young Catholic woman and presented the same book in the German language to a German family. Likewise, the Book of Mormon was made available to a Swedish family. I have six copies of The Call at Evening, which I use in missionary work, now in the hands of nonmembers.

A good Methodist couple have purchased from me a Book of Mormon and a copy of Brother Hanson's Jesus Christ Among Ancient Americans.

There is a rural church about five miles southwest of Newton where three of our missionaries preached several years ago and where I have continued to minister since that time. The church has been redecorated inside and repainted outside and offers a splendid opportunity for us to spread the gospel in that community. The leaders there have asked me to either preach at this church on Sunday nights or have one of our ministers come if I am not available. They are not members of the church. On the night of May 9, there were over 100 people there. There were fifty attending last Sunday night. The difference in the attendance was largely due to sickness in their neighborhood on the last evening named.

There is splendid encouragement in such reports, which are very welcome for publication.

Objective—Zion

By ROBERT H. ANDERSON

IN THE VERNACULAR of the race track, we find the term "also ran" used to denote a horse that entered the race but failed to finish among the winners. The names of some horses appear there quite frequently; others seem to be able to avoid such ignominious mention with a seemingly planned regularity. So it is in other fields of sport where perennial champions are groomed not by accident, but by careful, planned preparation; so it is in business where "also rans" are as commonplace as grass on the front lawn; so also in the business of living do men and women fail to become champions and are listed only as "also rans." Their excuses and alibis are known to us all—perhaps we've even indulged ourselves—yet nowhere in the hallowed halls of the champions do we hear their echo, although many have had good reason, many have been tempted.

SEVERAL YEARS AGO, a town in Kansas held a great celebration in honor of the return of its local hero, who was also by this time an athlete known around the world. As he rode through the town in the back of an open car, flowers and confetti were showered upon the modest youth. Soon it was over, and all that was left of the spectacle was the gay residue that littered the streets. That night two figures moved through the debris, silently removing the vestiges of the happy moments that had transpired earlier in the day. One of them was an old man, the other a young man who sometimes walked with a slight limp. His face bore a strange resemblance to the youth who had ridden in the car and was cheered by the gathered throng. Now he moved his broom through the tangled confetti thrown there in his honor, helping his father clear the streets. His father smiled as he proudly watched his son, because he knew that the laurels showered on him were well deserved; he knew that no alibi had made his son the champion he now was. Only too well did he remember the day his son was dragged from a burning schoolhouse, his other son killed by flaming gasoline. He remembered the doctor's report as he inspected the lad's badly burned legs, "He may never walk again!" He remembered the hours spent massaging life-giving circulation back into those scarred limbs; the day he tried his first step—and fell flat. He remembered that with a champion's courage the boy did walk; then he ran, slowly at first, trying to build up the tissue and muscle burned in the fire; then more rapidly until he discovered that he was running faster and farther than his friends who ran with him. Finally he had seen that same courage and determination bring to his son the olive wreath of an Olympic champion. Armed with one of the world's most legitimate excuses, Glenn Cunningham never used it, and Glenn Cunningham was never an "also ran."

IN OUR CHURCH today there is an earnest need for men of championship caliber. As a church, we can no longer—if we ever could—afford to be "also rans." Our mission in its urgency demands that we become wearers of the "olive wreath" in any field or specialization that the building of the kingdom demands, not for the sake of honor and boasting, but because the competition of the twentieth century world makes it a necessity, if we are to progress toward the phantom towers of Zion still shrouded by mists of second-rate contentment.

To do this tremendous job, we need not depart upon a campaign to find new men; the man and woman power potential already listed on our rolls is great enough to start the job—if enough of us light within ourselves the competitive fire that burned in the heart of Glenn Cunningham. But even before we can do that, some of us may need to sell ourselves on the importance and magnitude of our job as messengers of God. Once this is done, all that remains is the practice and knowledge of the fundamentals we must absorb before competency in anything can be gained. As mentioned before, the strain of modern competi-

Armed with one of the world's most legitimate excuses, Glenn Cunningham never used it . . . he was never an "also ran."

New Horizons

tion sets the standard of the would-be champion upon a high strata—so high in fact that in numerous fields today we find many men of nearly equal ability. When competition reaches such a pitch, the only difference between the champion and the pack may be the fighting heart of the one who strives the hardest for the grand prize. Have we not in our church a prize worth the extra strain—the extra push it takes to reach the top? In our striving, we might well apply Christ's teaching and go the second mile beyond what normally might be expected of us.

Of supreme importance to our church's reputation is the conduct of our winners. Merely to win is not enough. Grantland Rice stated it simply and yet so magnificently when he wrote, "It matters not if you lost or won but how you played the game." A true champion is never tried until his mettle has been tested in defeat, for it is no sin to be a loser if your best striving has failed to win the coveted prize; the sin is upon the head of the one who complacently remains content with the second best—the one, who seeing his failing, still remains an "also ran."

The Kingdom Way

Let my dream of Zion be fulfilled each day

In some good work,
Not in the planning of a golden street
Or temple spire,
But in the building of a soul.

Where there is hunger,
Let me first take bread,
Then lead the way to fellowship
Within the House of God.

Where there is sorrow,
Let me take the hope of brighter days
To be.

Where there is doubt,
Let me take the faith that sees men through
Life's sorest trials.
And where the seeds of hate grow strong,
Let me take love.

This I would do each day
And find my dream of Zion in the hearts
Of those I serve. —NAOMI RUSSELL.

The Trouble-Shooter

The Use of Talent

QUESTION: If one is gifted in a field of creative art, such as music, art, writing, dramatics, etc., is it better that he should seek to "reach the top" in a professional way or devote all his time and energy (insofar as possible) to making contributions to the church?

ANSWER: By Leonard Lea

There are several important factors to be considered here, which will be discussed separately below.

1. The potential artist should first attempt to obtain an accurate estimate of the degree and quality of his gift. In every field of art there are a very few who have the capacity to "reach the top." But for every such top-quality artist, there are thousands who have fine talents, which will not be recognized by the world, but which can be used for the good of humanity in local social groups, in churches, and in other places. The genius should devote his full time to music, art, etc. The person of talent will be justified in making it a hobby, but might only break his heart in attempting to make a living with it.

2. Whether you are a potential genius or just a person of talent, you will find the best development and happiness by exercising your gift (serving humanity) on every occasion possible. If you are a genius, the church will help to provide for you a good training ground. If you are a person of talent, the church will greatly benefit by your part-time service, and you will find development in self-expression.

3. Nobody, either of the genius or talent type, ever suffered for serving the church. Church groups, in return for his service and through friendship, often furnish the money and the opportunity for genius to win his great opportunity. They give wholesome criticisms and help. They provide an audience, often more sympathetic and constructive than a worldly audience. A small church group helped Marian Anderson get started on her way. Some of her greatest songs are those she learned and sang at that little church. Her love and gratitude go back to them. This is true of many another artist.

4. A great talent, or genius, is the gift of God. No man or woman can make it. But he can improve it. Where could the artist better show his gratitude than in either a part-time or full-time service to the church?

5. Every man and woman owes something to the church, something to his family, and something to society. It is good when he distributes his gifts around to all of them.

6. The artist must live. It costs him money to train his talents. The business and professional people are rewarded for their abilities and services; they also give much free community service. So it should be with the artist. He must sell his service where he can to support life and train himself. But he also has something to give, which will make the world a better and happier place.

7. Every person, the artist as well as the worker and professional person, should recognize the great moral order of the universe. He should not sell his talent for evil causes. He should not prostitute himself by devoting his talents to something in which he does not believe. He should not use his gift to exploit or hurt humanity. He should remember that God gave him his talent to do good. One way he can do this is to keep in touch with the church and serve it.

8. Every artist should "reach the top" in developing his talents to their very best, whether he serves the church or the world.

NELSONVILLE, OHIO.—A combined baptismal service for the Nelsonville and The Plains congregations was held at 9:30 on the morning of June 27. Eight new members, five from Nelsonville and three from The Plains, united with the church at this time. The confirmation service was held the following Sunday.

Joseph Edward, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Grubb, and Jane Elizabeth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Boyd Bungarner, were blessed on April 11.

BENTLEY, MICHIGAN.—Sally Jo and John, Jr., daughter and son of Mr. and Mrs. John Griffeth of Bentley, were blessed by Elders John Banks and Grant Yarrington of Midland, Michigan.

TUCSON, ARIZONA.—A retreat was held in the mountains near Oracle, Arizona, on May 14, 15, and 16. Apostles C. R. Hield and W. W. Smith were the speakers. Forty young people from Phoenix and Tucson attended the three-day session.

JOHNSON CITY, NEW YORK.—Eight persons were baptized at a special service on Sunday, June 20. Although the church building is not yet completed, the font was finished especially for this service. The new members are Karl Knapp, Irene Hackulich, James Rich, Dorothy Fish, Donald Peters, Shirley Peters, Michael Hackulich, and Mrs. James Knapp. This makes a membership increase of twenty-five per cent, one of the seven goals set by the branch for 1948.

The church is being built in one of the finest sections of the Triple Cities (Binghamton, Johnson City, and Endicott). The basement is to be completed by the end of the summer, labor being provided by the membership. A ten-year program has been approved for raising funds to complete the main auditorium.

CAMAS, WASHINGTON.—Elder Leonard S. Rhodes, pastor of the Camas Branch, reports a fine attendance at the special services for new members baptized since 1935, at which twenty-one of the forty baptized were present. Brother Rhodes secured a report and picture on the front page of the Post-Record of Camas and Washougal, issue of July 1. A photo of Israel A. Smith, president of the church, was given to each of the twenty-one new members. Meetings are held in the I. O. O. F. Hall in Camas.

Isolated Members

Mr. and Mrs. Harl Kitchings of Shoshoni, Wyoming, would like to contact any other members who may be living in or near Shoshoni.

Iowa-Nebraska Youth Camp Cancelled

Because of a polio epidemic in western Iowa and eastern Nebraska, the youth camp that was to have been held at Camp Sheldon near Columbus, Nebraska, August 20 to 25, has been cancelled. It was with deep regret that the committee found it necessary to make this decision, and it is hoped the camp may be held next year.

V. D. RUCH,
Secretary for the Committee.

Vermont Heights Mission

A new mission has been organized in the southern part of Los Angeles, California, to be known as the Vermont Heights Mission. There were thirty-six people present for the opening service on Sunday, July 11. Services are held in the spacious dining room of the Ray Ball home at 11157 South Raymond Avenue, Los Angeles 43, California. The mission is sponsored by the Central Congregation of Los Angeles. A very active visitation program is being carried on under the direction of the mission pastor, W. W. Powers, and G. E. Tickemyer, pastor of Central Church. If you have friends or relatives in this area, please notify mission officers at the above address, and we will call on them.

Southern Saskatchewan District Conference

A special business session of the Southern Saskatchewan District will be held at Weyburn on August 5 and 6 for the purpose of electing delegates to General Conference. The annual district business meeting will be held at this time also. All members in the district are urged to attend.

CLIFF CARSON,
District President.

REQUESTS FOR PRAYERS

Galen C. Thurston, 219 Eleventh Avenue, Valley City, North Dakota, asks the prayers of the Saints for the spiritual welfare of his family.

Mrs. J. K. Simmons, Rural Route 3, Anadarko, Oklahoma, requests prayers for her husband, who has a heart ailment; for her family, and for herself. She also asks the Saints to pray that they may have a leader for their group so that services may be held regularly.

Mrs. Anna Samuel, Lapeer State Home, Cottage 30, Lapeer, Michigan, asks the prayers of the Saints that she may be relieved of a nervous affliction. She would also appreciate having members of the church visit her and write to her.

WEDDINGS

Roark-Lewis

Virginia Jean Lewis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. E. Lewis of Everton, Missouri, and Raymond H. Roark, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Roark of Roggen, Colorado, were married June 30 at the Reorganized Church in Denver, Colorado. Elder E. J. Williams read the double-ring ceremony. They are making their home near Roggen.

Swain-Nunamaker

Mary Lou Nunamaker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Nunamaker of Temple City, California, and William Nichol Swain, son of Mr. and Mrs. William C. Swain of South Pasadena, California, were married July 11 at the Temple City Community Church. Elder Blaine Bender read the double-ring ceremony. They will make their home in Temple City.

Guffy-Thomas

Jean Thomas, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Thomas of Cleveland, Ohio, and James Guffy, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Guffy, also of Cleveland, were married June 5 at the Reorganized Church in Cleveland. Patriarch Richard Baldwin, great-uncle of the bride, performed the ceremony. The couple will make their home in Cleveland.

Dennis-Johnsen

Lena Mae Johnsen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis N. Johnsen of Mansfield, Washington, and Harry A. Dennis, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. I. Dennis of Hagerman, Idaho, were married July 7 in the Methodist Church in Mansfield. Elder Harold Condit, cousin of the groom, performed the double-ring ceremony. The couple will make their home in Des Moines, Iowa, where Mr. Dennis will continue his schooling.

BIRTHS

A son, Lawrence Dean, was born on July 13 to Mr. and Mrs. Clifford A. Cole of Woodbine, Iowa. Mr. Cole is president of the Northwestern Iowa District.

Mr. and Mrs. William D. Poore of Urbana, Illinois, announce the birth of a daughter, Kandis Diane, born May 30. She will be blessed soon in the Danville Mission by Arthur Henson.

A daughter, Patricia Ardeen, was born on May 18 to Seventy and Mrs. Philip W. Moore of Spokane, Washington.

Mr. and Mrs. Si Anderson of Ames, Iowa, announce the birth of a son, Eldon Eugene, born June 26. Mrs. Anderson is the former Helen Durkee of Appleton, Wisconsin.

Mr. and Mrs. Rodney Carpenter of Vancouver, Washington, announce the birth of a daughter, Vicki Lee, born June 21. Mrs. Carpenter was formerly Carlo Black of University Park, Maryland.

Mr. and Mrs. Don Blair of Vancouver, Washington, announce the birth of a son, Timothy Triston, born June 10. Mrs. Blair is the former Mary Chapman.

A daughter, Constance Louise, was born on May 9 to Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Coleman of Spokane, Washington. Mrs. Coleman is the former Doris Kinney.

DEATHS

HEWITT.—Anthony R., died at the age of sixty-four rather than sixty-three, as stated in the original death notice.

ALLEN.—Pearl, daughter of Joseph and Anna Coon, was born May 9, 1886, in Antelope County, Nebraska, and died June 8, 1948, at Lincoln, Nebraska. She was baptized a member of the Reorganized Church on May 31, 1896, and remained faithful to her covenant until death. In January, 1902, she was married to William H. Allen; two daughters were born to them. Mrs. Allen was interested in people and was always glad to serve her neighbors, friends, and church whenever she could help.

She is survived by her husband; two daughters: Mrs. A. J. Kazenecki and Veva M. Allen, both of Lincoln; a sister, Mrs. Warren Smith of Clearwater, Nebraska; two brothers: Chauncey Coon of Royal, Nebraska, and Frank Coon of Kent, Washington; and two grandchildren.

ATWOOD.—Margaret Ellen, was born in Lock Haven, Pennsylvania, on May 6, 1855, and died at her home in Du Bois, Pennsylvania, on July 6, 1948. She had been a member of the Reorganized Church for many years.

She is survived by three daughters: Mrs. Carrie Dyke of Du Bois; Mrs. Bertha Shank of Kirtland, Ohio; and Mrs. Jessie Glick of Baltimore, Maryland. Funeral services were conducted by Elder E. H. Brennan. Interment was in the Morningside Cemetery.

P. S.

WARD.—Caroline, daughter of William and Caroline Cooper, was born November 26, 1874, at Leetonia, Ohio, and died July 7, 1948, following a heart attack, at her home in Long Beach, California. She was married to Thomas Ward on September 25, 1892; four children were born to them. On Christmas Day, 1887, she was baptized into the Reorganized Church. Moving to Long Beach in 1932, she worked devotedly in the church school and women's department. Following the death of her husband several years ago, she lived quietly and independently in her own home until her passing.

Surviving are three sons: Herbert R., Gilbert R., and Ernest L., all of Long Beach; a daughter, Mrs. Jennie Helen Hursh of Rich Hill, Missouri; a brother, John Franklin Cooper; twelve grandchildren, and seven great-grandchildren. The funeral was conducted by John W. Rushton at Mottell's Chapel. Interment was in the Sunnyside Memorial Park.

MANSSELL.—Eva Beyers, was born August 19, 1870, in Belmont County, Ohio, and died June 24, 1948, at the Rickly Memorial Hospital of the Ohio Masonic Home. She was baptized into the Reorganized Church on November 4, 1928, at New Philadelphia, Ohio, where she retained membership until she entered the Masonic Home in 1940. Elder Orval M. Hooten conducted the funeral service at the hospital chapel. The body was then sent to New Philadelphia, where Elder John Carlisle officiated at the second service.

McMAHAN.—Peter G., was born September 18, 1876, and died June 27, 1947, at Tunnel Hill, Illinois. He was baptized into the Reorganized Church on March 24, 1895, and on February 12, 1898, was ordained a priest. On February 9, 1907, he was ordained to the office of elder. He served as pastor of the Tunnel Hill Branch for many years and was active in church work as long as he was physically able. He was married to Emma Webb in September, 1896.

Surviving are his wife, six children, seven grandchildren, and two great-grandchildren. Interment was in the Webb Cemetery near Tunnel Hill.

COBERLY.—Foster C., was born January 26, 1876, in Fort Scott, Kansas, and died July 8, 1948, in Phoenix, Arizona. He was baptized into the Reorganized Church in March, 1897, at Fort Scott. Moving to Phoenix in 1920, he was ordained an elder in 1923 and served as pastor of Phoenix Branch intermittently over a period of nine years. He will be remembered by his friends for his particular spiritual gift—that of healing. Many miraculous healings were experienced under his hands as he administered to the sick. His first wife and two of the three sons born to that marriage preceded him in death. In 1904, he was married to Cora B. Crayne; seven of the eight children born to them survive.

He leaves his wife, Cora; a son, L. L. Coberly of Independence, Missouri; seven daughters: Mrs. C. C. Barrington, Mrs. Audrey Smith, Mrs. H. G. Ellis, Mrs. M. T. Speer, and Mrs. W. H. Theis of Phoenix; Mrs. S. R. Stevens and Miss Viola Coberly of Los Angeles, California; two brothers; two sisters; twenty-one grandchildren; and two great-grandchildren. Elder Paul W. Bear was in charge of the funeral service.

JONES.—Flora, was born March 27, 1870, in Illinois, and died July 13, 1948, in Kansas. She was married to F. M. Jones on August 17, 1890, and was baptized into the Reorganized Church in 1918 by Elder Lee Quick. Besides her husband, she leaves two sons: Floyd and Marion Jones; and two daughters: Mrs. Myrtle Muzum and Mrs. Opal Myrick. Funeral services were held at the Reorganized Church in Mapleton, Kansas, Pastor Lee Quick officiating. Interment was in the family lot in Mapleton.

WISMER.—Theodore A., son of Enos and Jemima Young Wismer, was born November 27, 1868, in Pickering and died in his eightieth year at his home on the fourth concession. As a young man he settled in the Maidstone district and, thirty-four years ago, bought the Fred Sunderland farm on the fourth concession where he resided the remainder of his life. On August 7, 1888, he married Georgiana Copeland of Essex; eight children were born to them. A son, Theodore E., died in 1906, and a daughter, Arvela G., died in 1915. Brother Wismer was pastor of the local congregation for a number of years. Out of respect for his ministry, all the members of his family and the men and women of the branch marched from his home, following a brief service, to the church, where the main service was held. This gesture was in recognition of the many trips he had made over the same route. Elder Carl Nicholson and Irving Jones officiated at the funeral.

He is survived by his wife; two daughters: Mrs. J. N. Trimble of Amherstburg, and Mrs. Allen Craig of Anderson; four sons: Enos E. of the home, Cecil L. of Benton Harbor, Michigan, William W. of Toledo, and T. Darwin of Anderdon; twenty-one grandchildren; sixteen great-grandchildren; a sister, Mrs. Alice Loucks of Essex; and two brothers: Joseph Wismer of Toronto, and Clarence Young of Oshawa. Burial was in the North Ridge Cemetery.

WEBBE.—Julia M., daughter of William and Maria Smeed, was born October 7, 1862, at Brooklyn in Cuyahoga County, and died June 19, 1948, at her home in Kirtland, Ohio. She was married to Frank C. Webbe at Cleveland, Ohio, on July 14, 1898; two children were born to them. A daughter died in infancy. Mrs. Webbe was baptized into the Reorganized Church in 1907. She was an active member of the Temple congregation for twenty-four years. On May 14 of this year, she suffered a fractured hip and was taken to St. Luke's Hospital; six days after leaving the hospital, she died.

She is survived by her husband; a son, William of Kirtland; and a granddaughter. Funeral services were held at the Temple; Elder E. R. Curry gave the sermon, and Elder E. A. Webbe offered the prayer. Interment was in the South Kirtland Cemetery.

POOL.—Bessie Emogene, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Nash, was born May 8, 1885, at Elk City, Kansas, and died June 8, 1948, at the Hill Crest Hospital in Tulsa, Oklahoma, following a long illness. She was married to John H. Pool on June 26, 1907; seven children were born to them. A daughter and two sons preceded her in death. She united with the Reorganized Church on March 23, 1924, and was one of the faithful workers in Skiatook Branch, where she served as secretary and treasurer of the women's department. Her friendly personality and attractive home drew many to her.

She is survived by her husband; two sons: Carl H. of Coulee Dam, Washington; and John H., Jr., with the Navy in China; and two daughters: Carman E. Sanford of Kennewick, Washington; and Gertrude L. Gibson of West Minster, Colorado. Pastor W. P. Rumsey was in charge of the funeral service. Interment was in the Collinsville cemetery.

WINEGARDEN.—James Franklin, was born September 20, 1883, in Ontario, Canada, and died June 17, 1948, at Parkwood Hospital, London, Ontario. He had been a member of the Reorganized Church since July 26, 1896.

He is survived by his wife, Lily; a son, Kenneth James Winegarden; a daughter, Lillian Wallis; and two grandsons. Services were held at the Harrison and Skinner Funeral Home in London. Interment was in the Mount Pleasant Cemetery in London.

Reunion Schedule-1948

Silver Lake	July 30-Aug. 8	Everett, Washington
Chatham-London Cen. & So. Michigan	July 30-Aug. 8	Erle Beach, Ontario, Canada
Mo. Valley	July 31-Aug. 8	Liahona Park
Maine	July 31-Aug. 8	Woodbine, Iowa
So. California	July 31-Aug. 8	Brooksville, Me. Pacific Palisades
Northern Michigan	Aug. 6-Aug. 15	Park of the Pines
Kirtland	Aug. 6-Aug. 15	Kirtland, Ohio
Reunion of the Ozarks	Aug. 1-Aug. 8	Racine, Missouri
Oklahoma	Aug. 7-Aug. 15	Pawnee, Okla.
W. Montana	Aug. 7-Aug. 15	Race Track, Montana
Arizona	Aug. 8-Aug. 15	Tucson, Arizona
Arkansas & Louisiana	Aug. 9-Aug. 15	Clear Fork Cp., Hot Spgs., Ark.
Wisconsin	Aug. 9-Aug. 15	Chetek, Wisc.
Far West	Aug. 12-Aug. 22	Stewartsville, Missouri
Eastern Michigan	Aug. 14-Aug. 22	Cash, Michigan
Idaho	Aug. 14-Aug. 21	Hagerman, Idaho
Des Moines	Aug. 15-Aug. 21	Guthrie Center, Iowa
Lamoni	Aug. 15-Aug. 22	Lamoni, Iowa
S. E. Illinois	Aug. 20-Aug. 29	Brush Creek, Ill.
Eastern Colorado	Aug. 20-Aug. 29	Colorado Springs
So. Indiana	Aug. 21-Aug. 29	Bedford, Ind.

* TO OUR PHOTOGRAPHERS

We have been very glad and appreciative of the fact that since we have had illustrated covers on the "Herald," our own church photographers and their friends have been able to supply us with many fine pictures. This has greatly assisted in our work, and some of our finest pictures have come from our own people. The late President Frederick M. Smith was very much interested in photography, and himself took some excellent pictures, giving encouragement to progress in this field.

For making good cover pictures, we need good, large prints (eight by ten inches is ideal) with clear definition of detail and contrast of light. The camera man should also watch the composition of the picture, being careful to exclude merely casual autos, animals, and assorted unartistic pedestrians. Background is always important.

For the next year, we would like to have more pictures identified with church scenes: artistic views of local church buildings and grounds, historical spots, etc. We can also use a number of good seasonal, nature pictures, and pictures of buildings of general interest. Human interest pictures of quality are also welcome, in which good posture and composition are very important.

We like to have a few good pictures representing the work of outstanding local photographers and different parts of the country, especially where the church people are located.

* CONTRIBUTION

It was Wednesday evening, and I was in a prayer meeting, as I often am. This time I was in charge. I tried to present a theme for the consideration of the people. Somewhere I must have made a mistake, because it didn't take very well, and the testimonies wandered in a circle.

Then a young man stood up, took the theme and made something very fine, thoughtful, and beautiful out of it. The people were blessed because he was there, and I was very grateful to him.

How often it seems that God is looking out for his work. When we fail, he sends some of his other servants along to help us, and blessings come to his people.

And when things are not going too well, remember that it may be God's will to send you to help out. Do your part, and the people will be blessed through you.

* THE BETTER GIFT

I have a friend who, whenever he visits me, always leaves a good or encouraging thought. No matter how long he stays, it is never long enough, and I often wish I could think of something that could persuade him to remain and talk. I enjoy his gifts—good thoughts—more than any other kind of gift I could receive.

Another friend always wakes me up with questions. His visits are exciting experiences, in which he seeks to discover what I know or what I have thought about something. I always try hard, because I value his friendship, and I don't want to make a worse impression on him than I should. When he leaves I am always better than when he came, because he has made me become my better self.

Mary A. Burlington
1510½ Jules
St. Joseph, Missouri

92867
18
h

THE FIRST POSTWAR

Conference Daily Herald

Mailed Every Day of General Conference Straight to Your Home

8 ISSUES -- ONLY $1

If you can't come to Conference in person, the Daily will keep you well informed about every part of this important week.

We want our mailing list made up as early as possible, so send in the coupon with your subscription today!

The Daily will include:

- latest news on appointments
- special business meeting reports
- business session minutes
- interesting reports of classwork
- photographs of important events

Send Me	DATE
The Conference Daily Herald 8 ISSUES — JUST $1
Name
Address
City	Zone State
<input type="checkbox"/> Cash Enclosed	<input type="checkbox"/> Charge My Account

Order from your Book Steward or direct from

Herald House

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI

Woodland Sanctuary

ONION CREEK

SAN ANTONIO, TEXAS

Photo by Rouss Eastham

THE Saints Herald

VOLUME 95

AUGUST 7, 1948

NUMBER 32

www.LatterDayTruth.org

Bargain Hunter

Can I get a discount, Lord,
On my religion?
I came in late and I don't use it much—
Sometimes not even once a week.

I'm not as steady a customer as some—
So surely it shouldn't cost me
Quite as much.

There's nothing new about it—
Lots of people have one just like it,
Only richer-looking.
And then I only use it
When the folks are sick,
Or when I've had a real bad year.

Why should I pay full price?
It seems to me You'd knock a little off
Under the circumstances.

What's that You say?
A bargain's never a bargain.
And I will get no more Than I pay for?
You're a hard taskmaster, Lord!

—LOUISE WRIGLEY

AUDITORIUM NEWS

ALMER W. SHEEHY, pastor at London, Ontario, reports the invitation of the Ministerial Association to broadcast the 11 a.m. service of the London Church on July 18. Total time used was 68 minutes, and many gratifying comments were received. This was the first invitation, and it is hoped that other opportunities will be given.

APOSTLE M. A. McCONLEY and Mrs. McConley returned from Holland to England on June 21, according to a letter from Glen H. Johnson, Seventy, who is located at the Mission Headquarters at 170 Gravelly Hill, Birmingham, England. They will leave for the United States on August 13.

JOHN BLACKSTOCK, in a report to the First Presidency, wrote that the baptism of three more persons in the Chariton, Iowa, Branch brought the six-months total to twelve, the best ever done in that place. Brother Blackstock has been using visual aids successfully in his missionary work, and believes that they should be used more extensively in future missionary work.

BROTHER HERMANN PEISKER, who is still at the Independence Sanitarium recuperating from an operation on July 13 for a kidney ailment, is still very weak but has made a slight improvement in his condition. The prayers of the Saints are still requested in his behalf. On the morning of July 27, Sister Peisker arrived at Kansas City on a Constellation plane to be with Brother Peisker. She will rest and make her headquarters at the home of Brother and Sister H. I. Velt at 127 South Chrysler Street, Independence, and will also visit Apostle and Mrs. C. G. Mesley at 1016 Glenwood, Independence.

Brother Peisker has been acting president of the Australian Mission of the church. He is here to visit the church in the United States and to attend the General Conference.

Brother Don Alberts of Australia is also here with him to visit the churches and the General Conference.

APOSTLE D. BLAIR JENSEN and his family are to sail October 22 on the ship "Queen Elizabeth" for his coming work in the European Mission. Church members and friends who wish to reach the family after that date will be able to do so by writing them at the Mission Headquarters at 170 Gravelly Hill, Erdington, Birmingham, England. The prayers of church people will go with Brother Jensen for his success in this heavy responsibility.

THE PORT ELGIN, Ontario, reunion grounds has a fine piece of news, according to Apostle D. Blair Jensen, who announces that enough contributions have been received to clear the property of debt this year. Congratulations to the officers and members who have made this achievement possible.

ALMA ANDREWS, pastor of East Bay Branch, California, is successfully promoting a mission at San Leandro. The Berkeley people are giving fine support. There is some hope of an effort for a mission at near-by Richmond.

IN THIS ISSUE

EDITORIAL:
Don't Stop Me	3
Across the Desk	4
OFFICIAL:
Official Notice	4
General Conference Daily	4
ARTICLES:
Memorial Library	4
The Enemy of Constitutional Government, by Apostle D. T. Williams	5
Keeping the Faith, by John Blackmore	7
Why Go to Church, by A. W. Sheehy	7
The Laying on of Hands, by Elbert A. Smith	8
The Mirror of Life, by Ruby Tinkham	10
Courage, by Ted Linder	11
Distinctive Functions of the Seventy, by Seventy Percy E. Farrow	12
Worship Suggestions for September, by Katherine H. Wilson	16
Food for Thought, by B. Mildred Nelson	18
Reminiscences, by Mrs. Israel A. Smith	19
Fisherman's Shrine, by B. Whiting and J. Skelton	20
At Home in Holland, by Twyla V. Scherer	21
Letters	22
Bulletin Board	23

Don't Stop Me

YOU HAVE OFTEN heard a man say, when he was about to begin the telling of a story, "Stop me if you've heard this one." Just try to stop him. He plunges on before anybody can utter a syllable.

Recently, in a group of friends, I heard a man who quite frankly and happily departed from the usual formula. Beginning his story, he said, "Don't stop me if you've heard this one, because I enjoy telling it!" He told it so well, and enjoyed telling it so much, that even those of us who had heard it before enjoyed hearing it again.

There is real humanity in the hymn that contains the lines:

I love to tell the story
Of Jesus and his love.

Everybody has some experience or story he likes to tell, and it is usually his best one. He is often delighted when he discovers somebody who hasn't heard it. At the slightest hint, he is off like a merry-go-round, whirling its painted wooden horses in the familiar circle, and piping the old melodious tunes.

I still believe, as many people do, in "The Greatest Story Ever Told," and I enjoy the people who love to tell the great story of the Christ. If we only knew it, many persons who have nothing to say for themselves, could find new life, usefulness, and happiness in telling "The old, old story."

AS FRIENDS become older, they tend to keep repeating certain stories, adding little increments of drama and emphasis as time goes on, until the tales that began quite modestly years ago are transformed and embellished into sagas and epics. You know them, and you have heard the stories. . . . I have one good friend who reviews his trips around the world and his acquaintance with famous men every time he comes into the office. I have acquired my "sea legs" vicariously, just listening to him. I know the stories so well I could join him and make a duet of the recital. . . .

Once I managed to get in a word, "Yes, Brother, you told me that one." Surprised and disappointed, he said, "Did I?" "Yes. Several times," I replied firmly. "All right," he said, smiling and relaxing, and went right ahead and told it to me again!

Well, that made him a good missionary. He told the Greatest Story again and again.

THIS ONE concerns a man whose faith had slipped, and it was showing. Someone mentioned personal missionary work to him, and he declared, rather emphatically, "These are not the times to discuss religion with anybody."

That statement is highly debatable. But it was apparent that he was not the man, in his then current mood, to talk religion with anybody. It takes a quality of manhood and womanhood—faith, resolution, and courage—to talk religion in these days. And there are many people today who need religion as they need nothing else; it is the only thing that can do them any good.

Some schoolteachers were talking. "What is the matter with us? Why are we so restless and dissatisfied?" one of them asked. Another replied, "I know what is wrong with us. We haven't any religion. We need to join a church and get some religion." So they went to church, and it helped them very much.

DO WE TALK LIKE PREACHERS? I asked a friend. Sometimes I think that my years of preaching and pastoral work have marked me, and changed my way of talking so that anybody can tell in an instant what I am. And I have been afraid that it has turned some people away from me. People will talk to gamblers, thieves, liars, crooks, drunkards and sinners; but if they are minded to accept such persons, they turn away from ministers. Perhaps it is because we live in different worlds.

My friend replied, "I met a man traveling in Idaho, and we were talking of that point. He said, 'I never lose an opportunity to witness.'" Some good seed may fall upon stony ground, and some testimonies may fall upon ears that are as deaf as stone, but it is a great thing always to be able to bear witness of Christ.

LOOK BENEATH the surface of a man, and somewhere under it you will find something in him that God loves. If you don't find it at first, keep your eyes open—you never know when the evidence of it may appear. Concentrate upon that.

A man stood in my office, wanting to talk to me about something that he thought I knew. The world had put its hand upon him, and he was tired, looking as if he saw little in life except the one beautiful thing that had awakened his mind. He looked like one coming out of a dull and dreamless sleep, when someone put the window shades up and let the sun into the room. He had lived with worldly people. There were the stains of nicotine upon his fingers, and the stale, acrid odor of the smoke upon his breath. And if I was not mistaken, he had lifted the glass, too, seeking oblivion. But for it all he was not a bad man; simply a misguided one. As he talked, something fine appeared in him, some quality of mind and spirit, something of his youth that a carnal world had not yet succeeded in killing in him, something that had survived. It was that something that God loved.

Don't stop me. I have put that man on my Shepherd's List. If I can reach him again, I will. When I saw what God loved in him, I loved it too, because it is good. Perhaps it will grow, bring him happiness, and save his soul from the deadly gloom that the world has cast over him.

L. J. L.

Editorial

Memorial Library

At the General Conference of 1947 the following recommendation of the Board of Appropriations was approved:

That the Appropriations Committee approve the raising of $250,000 within the next five years to finance a memorial for the late President Frederick Madison Smith.

together with the following report of the committee which had been appointed to bring a recommendation to the Conference in regard to the memorial:

1. It is our opinion that a memorial for a leader of such character as the late president should possess certain attributes commensurate with his qualities. It should to a certain extent represent his interests; and it must have dignity, beauty, and permanence. These requirements would be best met, it seems to us, by a public building.

2. At the same time, it does not seem expedient in view of the many needs of the church and its institutions, to divert funds for building purposes, unless such a building, in addition to the memorial character, be capable of filling some immediate and urgent need.

3. After considering these requirements, we suggest that the memorial for the late president consist of a building to be known as the Frederick Madison Smith Memorial Library, located on the campus of Graceland College, at Lamoni, Iowa.

4. The funds necessary for this purpose may be obtained by subscription. It is estimated that the cost of a suitable building of this nature, at present price levels, would be in the neighborhood of $250,000 which may be raised over a period of five years, if necessary.

5. It is our belief that a memorial library, housing as it does the fruit of the wisdom of the past, and dedicated to the use of the young people of the church, who are the hope and promise of its future, will stand perpetually as a tribute to a leader who worked and dreamed for the future of our church, and who devoted his life to the justification of his faith.

Inasmuch as there have been some few inquiries relative to the status of this project, we are taking this opportunity to bring to the attention of the membership the action which was taken.

Because of other needs of the College being placed in the foreground, such as the project to raise funds for the Student Center Building, it has not been deemed advisable by the General Church officers concerned to place emphasis upon the raising of funds for the memorial in this interim conference period. It is suggested, however, that those who have special interest in this project feel free to make contributions toward it. Such contributions when received will be placed in a separate fund in harmony with the intent of the resolution.

Respectfully submitted,
THE PRESIDING BISHOPRIC,
By G. L. DeLapp.

Across the Desk

From Elder G. E. Tickemyer, Los Angeles, California, July 12:

I am pleased to advise you that the first services of our new mission in South Los Angeles, which chooses to be known as the Vermont Heights Mission, were held yesterday, July 11. There were thirty-two present for Sunday School and thirty-six for the morning preaching service. Elder Glen Davis delivered the morning sermon; the officers spoke highly of it. There were sixteen present in the evening, and I was the speaker.

Services are held in the spacious dining room of Brother and Sister Ray Ball. All of the furniture was removed, a radio cabinet was used for a pulpit and chairs and songbooks were furnished by Central Church. The offering for the day was about $25. Of special note with regard to those present is the fact that the number included fourteen children, bearing out our prediction that this area would produce more children than either of our other missions.

A great deal of enthusiasm was manifested in the first meetings; the beginning is more auspicious than that of either of our other missions. We hope it portends

OFFICIAL

Official Notice

We very much need the following to complete our files:

Millennial Star, Volumes 20, 23, 24, 25 to 27, 29 to 34, 45 to 61, and 65 up to date. These are the years 1858, 1861 to 1865, 1867 to 1872, 1883 to 1899, 1903 to date.

Journal of Discourses, Volumes 7 to 13, 16, 17, 24 to 28. These are the years 1860 to 1871, 1874 to 1875, 1884 to 1888.

Anyone having any of the foregoing who can part with them will please communicate with us at the Auditorium in Independence, Missouri. THE FIRST PRESIDENCY,
By Israel A. Smith

General Conference Daily

We are pleased to announce that there will be published a Daily Herald covering the next General Conference period. There will be a thirty-two page issue for Saturday and Sunday, October 2 and 3; a thirty-two page issue for Monday, October 4; sixteen page issues for October 5 and October 6; thereafter eight page issues for October 7, 8, 9, and 11.

The cost will be $1.00, and we urge the Saints everywhere to subscribe, as we expect the Conference to be a momentous one.

THE FIRST PRESIDENCY,
By Israel A. Smith

rapid growth.

Elder W. W. Powers is in charge of this mission. You will be interested to know that attendance at the other missions yesterday numbered: Venice, thirty-four; South East, forty. This makes a total of 110 in attendance at the missions.

ISRAEL A. SMITH

THE SAINTS' HERALD

Volume 95

August 7, 1948

Number 32

Editors: The First Presidency: Israel A. Smith, John F. Garver, F. Henry Edwards.
ASSISTANTS: Leonard J. Lea, Managing Editor; Kenneth L. Graham, Business Manager.
The Saints' Herald is the official publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, with headquarters at The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri, and is issued through the offices of Herald Publishing House, 103 South Osage Street, Independence, Missouri.
Entered as second-class matter at the post office at Independence, Missouri, under Act of March 3, 1879. Issued weekly at Independence, Missouri. Price, $3.50 per year and $1.75 for six months in advance in the U. S. A., its territories and possessions; Canada, $3.75 per year and $1.90 for six months; other countries, $4.50 per year. Notice of a change of address must be given three weeks ahead of the date that it is to become effective. Accepted for mailing at the special rate of postage provided for in section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized July 21, 1921. Printed in the United States of America.

The Enemy of Constitutional Government

By Apostle D. T. Williams

YOU WILL SEARCH in vain through the official pronouncements of any Communistic regime for a favorable reference to God as the Ruler of the Universe, the Creator of the World, or the Father of Mankind. God pulls no weight with the denizens of darkness. "In Gog we trust" might well be accepted as a substitute in Communistic parlance for democracy's homage, "In God we Trust."

We have sought to show in other contributions to these pages the relationship between Gog of the prophecy of Ezekiel (thirty-eighth and thirty-ninth chapters) and the mighty power of Communism which is now sweeping over the face of the earth as a black and foreboding shadow, threatening all that has to do with God or godliness. Quite in contrast with the democracies of the earth, which make provision for religious freedom, this awesome power makes every effort to sweep God from His throne and make Gog the ruler of all mankind.

True it is that our democracies come far short of the true worship of God; so short indeed that at times we wonder at the Divine Patience which endures our evil ways and allows us to go on in the wickedness of our darkened minds. Surely we must come eventually to the day when we will see what graciousness there is in the heart of our Heavenly Father which indites this word of revelation: "The times of this ignorance God winked at, but now commandeth all men everywhere to repent."—Acts 17: 30. Either that, or we will suffer the results of our sins at the hands of a just and worthy Judge.

However, in contrast with the unwillingness of Gog to give credit or praise to Divinity, listen to these phrases from the Declaration of Independence, which official document initiated for us the liberties which we enjoy in America today:

When in the course of human events, it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bonds which have connected them with another, and to assume among the powers of the earth, the separate and equal station to which the laws of nature and nature's God entitle them, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation

We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. . . .

We, therefore, the representatives of the United States of America, in General Congress assembled, appealing to the Supreme Judge of the World for the rectitude of our intentions with a firm reliance on the protection of Divine Providence, we mutually pledge to each other our lives, our fortunes, and our sacred honor.

"Nature's God," "the Creator," "the supreme Judge of the World," "Divine Providence," thus to their Lord in heaven did the framers of American liberties render their homage in this initial declaration of their political hopes.

IN A FEW YEARS after the acceptance of the Declaration of Independence, and when the struggling states were freed, there came the constitution of the new nation. The first article of the Bill of Rights asserts, "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof."

Thus the freedom to worship God according to the dictates of one's conscience was guaranteed, as were all the "exercises" of religion. But not only this, there was also freedom, too, for those who had no religious beliefs and who might wish to expound on their feelings about Divinity. How different is this from Article 124 of the Constitution of Communism, in which only "freedom of worship" is allowed, in which, also, there has been issued a supporting edict to atheism, making it unlawful for parents to teach religion to their children until they are eighteen years of age.

It is enlightening to observe upon the other hand that no such obstacle is placed in the way of "anti-religious propaganda." Rather, such propaganda is conspicuously fostered by this Constitution. Thus, through the formative period of human existence, training under Communism to worship God is prohibited, but training in which the plastic mind is set against God is encouraged and facilitated by the powers of the State. Should not Christian people in our own land be ashamed to promulgate a state of affairs in which such conditions are not only countenanced, but also encouraged?

SUPPORTING THE CONSTITUTION of the United States as an instrument of liberty, we have this enlightening statement from latter-day revelation:

It is my will that they [God's people] should continue to importune for redress, and redemption, by the hands of those who are placed as rulers, and are in authority over you, according to the laws and constitution of the people which I have suffered to be established, and should be maintained for the rights and protection of all flesh, according to just and holy principles, that every man may act in doctrine, and principle pertaining to futurity, according to the moral agency which I have given unto them, that every man may be accountable for his own sins in the day of judgment. Therefore, it is not right that any man should be in bondage one to another. And for this purpose have I established the constitution of this land, by the hands of wise men whom I raised up unto this very purpose, and redeemed the land by the shedding of blood.—Doctrine and Covenants 98: 10.

This is so plain "that a wayfaring man, though a fool, need not err therein." That God gives his acquiescence to a constitution protecting the rights of all to worship and exercise their religious beliefs should not be surprising. The fact is that anything to the contrary would be illogical and a movement in complete reversal to all previous stands of God from before the creation of the world.

Jesus never said, "You shall know the truth and be in bondage as a result of its observance." He did say, "You shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free And if the Son shall make you free, you shall be free indeed." This is not to be a pseudo freedom, but a genuine liberty—"free indeed." Even our democracies do not bestow this fullness of free agency and, therefore, under them we are not yet free indeed. However, the democratic way of life is a contribution to the brightening hope of liberty for the future of mankind and should have our fullest support as a genuine movement toward human freedom.

THIS CAN NOT be said of Communism which fosters bondage for the vast proportions of the population. As I have indicated before in these articles, nothing I say should be interpreted as a condemnation of any people, for it is the shackles of all which we would seek to break. Under Communism, it is not the people who rule. In its sorry lands, only three per cent belong to the "party." The only candidates the people can vote for are those approved by the party line, and even the names of these are dictated from above.

These factors make any boasted liberty under Communism a farce of the first water. Just as the freedom to read is hedged about by the serfdom of having to write to please the dictatorship, so the people have just one line in their political activity to follow—the line approved by those who hold them in bondage.

But Gog is not satisfied with holding only his own in the grip of his iron talons and infecting them with his venom; he seeks other lands to conquer and other liberties to destroy. Witness in this connection the plight of innocent Finland. Also notice the fate of Latvia as graphically pictured in two statements in the Latvian Information Bulletin for 1941:

The religious persecution has started as soon as the Bolshevik regime has been introduced by the invaders.

Churches have been transformed in many cases into movies, or clubs for the Communist organizations.

Only in a few of them is divine service permitted, and during the service armed militia enter in order to supervise the services.

Some of the clergymen have been tortured to death.

And notice again from the same source:

Divine services have been seriously curtailed and are permitted only in a few instances.

Even then, services are often interrupted and interfered with by the militiamen and their Communist provocateurs who smoke during services and make offending and sacrilegious remarks.

Many clergymen have been jailed, tortured, put to hard labor in concentration camps and deported.

According to the best available and verified accounts, more than ten thousand representatives of religious, political, and cultural life in Latvia have been torn from their homes and families and deported to Siberia and Central Asia.

Under such circumstances, there can be no freedom for the religious function. This is the tyranny of those who know no freedom. For such, liberty has no meaning. They have no free agency at home; why should they recognize any abroad?

THANK GOD for our Constitution and its guarantees of freedom! If we at times abuse the privileges it grants, may God discipline us until we shall see our way more clearly and follow it more attentively.

Despite the fact that some bemoan the ancient vintage of this document, Divinity has placed upon it, as we have observed, the stamp of approval. England's grand old man, William Everett Gladstone, said of it, "It is the greatest piece of work ever struck off at a given time by the hand of man." And William Pitt, a mastermind of political science, gave expression to his sentiment when he said, "It will be the wonder and admiration of all future generations and the model of all future constitutions." These evaluations have proved to be true.

When, after weeks of conferences, our Constitutional Convention meeting in Philadelphia had made no progress worthy the name and the delegates were about ready to depart in defeat and disgust, Benjamin Franklin spoke out of the maturity of his great wisdom:

"Mr. President, the small progress we have made is, methinks, a melancholy proof of the imperfection of the human understanding. We have gone back to ancient history for models of government and examined the different forms of those republics which having been originally formed, with the seeds of their own dissolutions, and which now no longer exist, and we have viewed modern states all around Europe, but find none of these constitutions suitable in our circumstances."

Franklin, having continued at some length, then asked the following question: "How has it happened, sir, that we have not hitherto once thought of humbly applying to the Father of Lights to illuminate our understanding?"

"I have lived a long time, and the longer I live, the more convincing proofs I see of this truth, that God governs in the affairs of men. And if a sparrow cannot fall to the ground without his notice, is it probable that an empire can rise without his aid?"

"I therefore beg leave to move," said Franklin in conclusion, "that hereafter prayers, imploring the assistance of Heaven and its blessing on our deliberations, be held in this assembly every morning before we proceed to business, and that one or more of the clergy of this city be requested to officiate in that service."

From that hour on, the framers of our liberties began to make such progress as to justify the eloquent appeal of this grand old man of American freedom to "The Father of Lights."

Under the divine motivation, these fine and talented men were now coming into the limelight of God's favor. The fruitage of their effort has resulted in our liberties and in a constitution which generates hope of freedom for all the world.

It was of these men God said through the latter-day prophet, "I established the Constitution . . . by the hands of wise men whom I raised up unto this very purpose."—Doctrine and Covenants 98: 10.

Gog's government has not been inspired by any such benign influences. Thus we see how government by God and government by Gog must eventually stand in the sternest opposition to each other. When, in future years, our children will read the history of Gog's destruction, they can pray with faith believing in God's government, "Thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as it is done in heaven."

Keeping the Faith

Let us not be weary in well-doing.

We cannot fall in love with a shadow. Our loves and our loyalties must find their expression attached to permanent things and values. We cannot win others to the church if its influence is merely a shadow in our own lives. The "good" the church teaches must become personalized in our everyday living if we are to experience the kingdom of God. When the early Christians talked and sang about Jesus as the Savior of mankind, it was not mere sentimentalism; it was hard realism and a stern consciousness that only in the Gospel of Christ could the world and the individual find lasting happiness. Christ, the incarnation of all that is good, is indispensable if the world would find peace and the individual security and happiness.

What was true of Christ becomes the obligation of the disciple. If the Saint would personalize his ideals, he must be prepared to make them potent by the background of his own life. Keeping the faith envisages an intelligent dedication of self to the higher value of life.

Today there is much uncertainty in this tired world. People everywhere are crying for peace and hoping for security. Nevertheless, the struggle for supremacy goes on among the nations. We now call it the "cold war," a "war of nerves"; we may better call it the prelude to a hot war. The international struggle in Berlin is a very tangible prophecy of what the future will bring to the nations.

The Saints must be prepared to make the contribution of their own suffering and sacrifice to God and the church. Christ died that his gospel might live. He suffered that his idealism might become the idealism of men. Christ gave his life for the greater victory of a Christianized world. In the same measure, the Saint must be prepared to make greater sacrifices for God and the church. Only through the path of willing work for God can we hope to receive his protection and help in the impending struggle of races, nations and peoples. May God help us to see the writing on the wall and serve him in his church.

—John Blackmore, in Omaha Ray-O-Lite.

Why Go to Church?

Church-going can be an adventure, not a chore. It can give us the chance to range the universe in thought—and the world in service. It can refresh us physically, stimulate us mentally, and quicken us spiritually. At church, we have the opportunity to meet new friends, renew contact with old ones, and sense the vital power of social interaction as a condition of true spiritual health.

Attending church, we also find a new world contact. We can appreciate the centrality of Christ and the universality of his message as in no other place. With the Apostle Peter, we can be assured that God is not "a respecter of persons."

When we worship at church, we find our vision clears and our perspective is corrected; the spiritual nature of the gospel brings our life and purpose back into sharp focus—back from the many distortions and conflicts of modern living.

When we attend church, we are a part of a going institution. In the last few years we have witnessed the failure of great institutions—even nations—but the church remained; weaker than it should be, but strong nonetheless. "The church's one foundation" ever remains "Jesus Christ, her Lord."

And parents, children are great copyists. Do you want them to acquire the habit of going to church? If so, go yourself.

—By A. W. Sheehy, in London, Ontario, Church Bulletin

The Laying on of Hands

The antiquity and significance of the doctrine and its place in the ordinances of the church

By ELBERT A. SMITH

An address given at an institute of the members of the Melchisedec Priesthood in the Stone Church, January 29, 1948

(Continued from last week.)

Preordination Classes

IN YEARS GONE by not enough attention was given to preparing men for their ministry. They were ordained and left to learn, sometimes, in the hard school of experience. Some years ago I was addressing a group of the priesthood in Pittsburg, Kansas. I was not very well acquainted at the time in that branch, and to illustrate that which I have just mentioned, I chose at random the name of John Jones, and remarked that in years gone by we ordained John Jones an elder. Presently there was a baptism to be administered, and John Jones, though he had witnessed baptisms, found himself at a loss as to the procedure. Presently there was a call for him to solemnize a marriage. Perhaps he had never attended a public wedding or any wedding except his own, and he would have a hazy recollection of just what happened during his own marriage service. He did not know how to make the service binding, impressive, reverential, dignified, and beautiful.

I went on at some length regarding John Jones, drawing from my own experiences. At the close of the service, a genial, ruddy-faced gentleman came to the stand, grabbed my hand and said, "I am John Jones. Everything that you told happened to me and more." So evidently my illustration was not overdrawn.

Of later years we have given considerable attention to helping men prepare for their service following ordination. For example, in Independence, Missouri, we have now thirteen organized congregations and a number of missions, which presently will be organized congregations. With such a large membership, there are numbers of ordinations periodically, and groups of the men to be ordained to various grades of the priesthood are called together in a preordination class. Over a period of about fifteen Sundays, they are given instructions not only concerning their message, the doctrinal beliefs of the church, its sacraments and ordinances, but also the methods of officiating in the ordinances, functioning of visiting and administrative officers.

And, by the way, following the ordinations, attention is given to assigning to the individual worker specific tasks and helping him to get started. This has reduced the number of men who fail to apply themselves to the work of the ministry to which they have been ordained and has helped them to enter upon a more satisfactory service.

Administration to the Sick

CHRIST HIMSELF administered to the sick by the laying on of hands:

Now when the sun was setting, all they that had any sick with divers diseases brought them unto him; and he laid his hands on every one of them, and healed them. (Luke 4: 40.)

In this ordinance, there may be emergencies which permit little or no preparation. I recall instances when I have been asked to administer to those in a critical stage of illness; although there had to be haste, there was an instant and immediate healing and permanent recovery. As a rule, there may be some preparation. The family may pray and fast, or the group, or the congregation. This is a service which should be held in the home or in the hospital room, where practical, and not ordinarily during or after a regular church service. There are reasons for this. In a public meeting there may be those present who are not spiritually attuned to the occasion. Christ himself sometimes banished people from the room before he administered to the sick. And further, when one is administered to in public, sometimes others who had not previously thought of asking for administration or made any preparation or had any special need suddenly feel urged to call for administration.

One elder may administer when two are not available, but it is usual to have at least two elders. James said, "They shall send for the elders." By prearrangement, one has charge of the service, usually the senior in age or in rank, or as may be agreed upon. One anoints with oil, and the prayer of anointing should be brief. The burden of the prayer is left to the one who confirms the anointing and both (or all) impose their hands during this prayer. This service should not be too brief, nor too long. Good judgment should govern. Do not forget, we have been cautioned in the Book of Covenants 125: 15 against prophesying over those to whom we administer.

THE SERVICE should be quiet and orderly with no loud talking or shouting in prayer. Elder Frederick A. Smith was one time called to administer to a sister who was very ill in a hospital. Her physician was not a member of the church, and he rather objected to the ordinance. He feared there would be some loud and boisterous incantation or something of the sort that would be injurious to his patient. Brother Fred

www.LatterDayTruth.org

A. assured him to the contrary, and said, "Take this woman's pulse and her temperature, and take them again after the ordinance; if you find them worse, we will not trouble you again." After the quiet and orderly ceremony, the doctor found both pulse and temperature improved. After that, he was very glad to have the elders administer to his patients.

In administering to little children, the admonition against laying on hands suddenly should be observed. Sometimes they resist and fight against the imposition of hands. They should be approached rather casually. Talk with the family, let them see that you are friends of the family. Win children's confidence by talking with them, asking questions, showing them something of interest. This may be an occasion when one elder at the first can function better than several.

The Use of the Oil Internally or in External Applications

WE COME NOW to a question on which I have given some thought and upon which I am not presuming to give a ruling. In the past, more than at present, our elders in administering to the sick have given oil internally or applied it externally to injuries or sores. I have some reservations at that point.

The historic and traditional method in administering to the sick is to anoint the head with oil, and ordinarily that would seem to be ceremonially sufficient so far as the matter of anointing goes. Healing comes through the imposition of hands, anointing with oil, and the prayer of faith. If the oil is given internally or the body anointed externally, it may be because of some belief in the medicinal qualities of the oil. Probably the oil does have those qualities, but I have been told by competent physicians that there are internal disorders that are made worse rather than better through the taking of oil; that there are wounds on the surface of the body that in certain stages are made worse by applying oil; and rashes, such as eczema, that are irritated by oil.

When we go beyond the anointing of the head ceremonially and give oil internally or anoint the body with it, we seem to be getting into the field of medication, which is not our field, and we may not be qualified to prescribe and know the disorders which may naturally be helped by the application of oil, nor are we under the civil law at liberty to prescribe to the sick—even to prescribe our own favorite remedies.

PRESIDENT JOSEPH SMITH did at one time suggest that in cases of critical illness, as in severe fevers, the body might be anointed with oil (Saints' Herald, June 29, 1904). He cautioned that while the elders might then anoint the bodies of men or boys some woman should anoint the body of a woman. In view of the observations already made, it would seem wise to consult the physician in charge of the case, if there be one, before prescribing the use of the oil internally or externally, beyond the symbolical use of oil in anointing the head.

On this matter of administration to the sick, the Pastoral Manual, page 112, has this to say:

Wisdom would indicate that observance of this ceremony should not be made spectacular, but carried out with simplicity in keeping with the place and conditions existing at the time. A quiet place free from intrusion and disturbance should be selected. The approach to God should not be made in haste but with a serenity and poise that bespeak faith in him and in his ordinances.

The Blessing of Children

IN MARK 10, verses 13 to 16, we have the account of Christ's blessing little children. This ceremony is one of the most significant and beautiful of ceremonies involving the laying on of hands. Like the other services mentioned, an entire meeting may be given over to the ceremony, or it may be a part of a regular service, but it should not be a hurried, informal, hasty affair. It has become the custom for both father and mother to bring the baby to the altar, and usually a charge is given to the parents. The elders administering should have knowledge of the service beforehand and have some agreement as to the order of procedure, positions that they shall take in reference to the altar and the parents; and the one to give the blessing must have in mind the name of the child. I learned this latter lesson the hard way.

Years ago when speaking in a distant branch, I was called upon to bless a baby. With the elder assisting, I took my stand on the platform; the father brought the baby forward and delivered it to my keeping. I inquired the name of the baby. The father flushed in a very embarrassed manner and then said that he had forgotten it; and so while I held the baby he went to the rear of the church, inquired the name of the baby from the mother, and returned. The baby had a nickname and that was all the father could think of at the moment.

It has been observed that if a baby is held in a sitting posture, facing the audience, he is less likely to cry.

In this ordinance, as in others, let us remember that we are functioning in the stead of Christ, a most sacred relationship.

The Patriarchal Blessing

THIS IS NOT ordinarily a public service. There have been some instances when a public service was devoted to the giving of patriarchal blessings, but it had best be in a private place—a quiet place with suitable environment. It seems wise that there should be but a few present, close relatives or personal friends, because the patriarchal blessing may include counsel of a very personal nature, sometimes even rebuke.

This is one of the ordinances in which hands should not be laid on suddenly. Unfortunately, it is not always possible to have a satisfactory period of preparation. People may have come from a distance and have only the one day in which to pre-

(Continued on page 22.)

The Mirror of Life

By RUBY TINKHAM

PERHAPS YOU have heard the story of the beautiful young prince who came before the mirror to admire himself and found that he was looking into the mirror of life which showed him exactly how he looked to other people. It was not a pleasant sight. He turned and twisted his handsome body in order to again acquaint himself with the familiar sight of his beautiful head, his superb physique, and the costly jewels and rich clothing he habitually wore. It was to no avail. All he could see was a crippled body and a deformed mind. Finally he sat down and cried. When he had exhausted himself he fell asleep and had a marvelous dream in which he was constantly seeking the finer things in life.

When he awoke he looked exactly as he always had before, but the dream still troubled him, so he made a long journey to an old wise man who lived on the border of his kingdom. This man told him the meaning of his dream. It meant that he had within him the possibilities of attaining all greatness, but that he had hidden these qualities under the trappings of superficial luxury.

When the prince asked how he might attain these wondrous qualities that seemed so desirable in his dream, the old man replied, "You must share all your wealth with your less fortunate subjects and become their servant instead of their master."

The young prince gasped in dismay and replied angrily, "Then I shall become a pauper and none will love or respect me!"

The old man pondered a while, not knowing how the young prince would take his next words, for he was well aware that the prince was in search of an easy way and would not tolerate a difficult and long-suffering path filled with disappointments and hardships.

"Your wealth has blinded you to the truth," he resumed quietly. "The good things in life must be bought and paid for just like your jewels and fine horses. In the dream, you were on a successful journey in which you developed all the virtues known to mankind. When you looked into the mirror of life, you saw yourself without these virtues, and you despised your image. These virtues which you are so anxious to possess because they bring everlasting happiness must be paid for in self-sacrifice and service to your brethren."

The young prince went away in sorrow. He had no intention of sharing his wealth and costly possessions with a multitude of beggars and poverty-stricken children who could not appreciate good because they had never known it.

The story is very familiar to us because it is so apt. The qualities of patience, brotherly kindness, and charity are admired and respected by all. On other people they look good! How they acquired them is another story, and sometimes we are not interested in that story because it might be full of tragedy and suffering which would make us feel a little ashamed of our own imperfections.

IT WOULD be nice if we could go into a store and say to the clerk, "Please, give me some patience. The Lord knows I need it badly enough with Junior acting up as he has these past few days." Then we would heave a big sigh and expect the clerk to look at us sympathetically.

Would you be willing to sell something you cherished dearly in order to tide your best friend over a rough spot? Or would that be paying too big a price for a little thing like brotherly-kindness?

...Would it be too difficult for you to say a kind word about some irresponsible person who needed help in the face of derogatory remarks from all your best friends? Maybe that would be paying too high a price for charity.

I keep thinking how generous and understanding Christ was to the adulteress. I keep remembering how earnest and patient he was with the woman at the well. Most of all, I keep remembering how tender and forgiving he was to Peter after the big, violent man had denied him.

Are we really Christ's followers? Do we exemplify all these qualities that he was so careful to charge us with? Are we willing to sell all the elaborate trappings of superficial luxury to buy the things he has promised us? Or are they worth it?

DON'T CLOSE YOUR eyes to sin or ignore it—instead, take a good look at it and then be glad that God gave you the opportunity to choose for yourself. But remember, too, while you are making your decision that (like the young prince) you will be responsible later to him not only for your own condition but also for the effect it has on all the other people that touch your life. This is one of the gravest decisions we have to make—"Will this thing I am about to do hurt anyone?"

How often have you told yourself, "It can't do any harm—it won't hurt anyone but me"? All the time you knew you were deceiving yourself, for sin has a way of accumulating until we have not only suffered ourselves but done irreparable damage to the ones we love and denied society the right to our best services.

The Prodigal Son probably thought he was hurting no one but himself when he went on his exploration in riotous living. How surprised and shamed he must have felt when he returned and saw how his father had aged and suffered while he was away. No doubt after his return he also saw other wastes that could have been prevented in his father's house had he chosen to stay at home and share the responsibility.

God made us dependent upon each other purposely. How else could he have made us concerned about the salvation of each other if we did not share the good and suffer with the bad?

MEN HAVE fought for ages to preserve freedom because they considered it a priceless heritage not to be denied any man. Yet, at the very same time they segregate their schools and homes, show partiality in employment, restrict their clubs and hotels, and call themselves impartial. There was a Man once who pointed out these very same evils to the Pharisees and Saducees. They didn't listen either!

Every so often God permits us to have a good, clear picture of what we really are (like the young prince) and then he magnanimously shows us our potential possibilities for good. How many times have you felt this influence and then turned away to become indifferent?

I preach tolerance to my daughter and then find myself making excuses for not inviting the only colored girl in her class to a party.

I teach my class that obeying part of the law is no excuse for disobeying or ignoring the rest of the law. And yet, I am guilty of taking my time to pay my tithing.

I talk about the urgency of conveying to every soul within our reach the everlasting gospel, and yet I allowed my neighbor to become baptized into another church without taking upon myself the responsibility of at least having her consider my faith.

Every day I can think of instances in which I have failed miserably to trade my desire for worldly pleasures for the most solid virtues that I hope to inherit later. Maybe I am afraid like the young prince that then nobody would love or respect me anymore, and I would become a pauper like Christ!

Worry is a complete circle of inefficient thought, whirling about a pivot of fear.

Courage

By TED LINDER

COMING AROUND the corner of the house, she saw him standing by the woodpile, hands in pockets, gazing over the field of corn. The rustle of its dry, yellow leaves came gently to her ears as she stood watching his strong, wind-burned face. There was strength in that face, honesty and courage, too.

Finally she spoke, "You were long returning, John." It was more of a simple statement than a reprimand.

He turned and gave her a long, searching glance.

"I stopped to preach at a village on my way home, Mary."

"Were there many converts?"

"Five," he answered. "Five fine people."

"And the conference. How was it?"

"Outstanding," he said.

She moved closer. He put his arms around her.

"I love you, Mary," he said in his gentle voice. "I love you very much."

She kissed his lips. There was warmth and strength in the kiss. He buried his face in her hair and held her a long time in his embrace. With one arm around her shoulders, he turned again toward the field of corn.

"I'll cut some poles and build a place to stack the corn there by the cow and horse shed, so it will be handy for winter."

She looked deep into his eyes, and she knew.

"The cow will be going dry in March, but you'll get all the milk you can use until then," he added.

"I dug the potatoes while you were gone," she said. "I can bury the turnips later before snow falls."

His arm gripped her shoulder until it hurt. She knew he was fighting back the tears. Men hated to cry in the presence of anyone. For some reason, she had realized what was coming, and her own tears were dried into her pillow long before his return from the church conference.

Why, why was it so hard to bear? A year together, the next—what of the next year? His loving arms, tender and warm then—then six months or a year—gone. Other women had a home, not just a cabin in the wilderness. Other women had their husbands with them all the time.

Loneliness. Snow—endless snow drifting against the cabin, making the silence more silent. Endless nights of rolling and tossing, wondering and worrying about him. Then the lagging mails—weeks going by without hearing from him.

FOR A MOMENT bitterness had filled her heart—a little bit of selfishness to have and keep her husband with her always. Then she thought, "But he must get lonely, too. The winter snow probably makes him think of home and wood that needs cutting, of land that needs clearing, and of the endless tasks he has left for me to do."

In her heart she offered a quick prayer of repentance for her selfishness. He must never know her evil thoughts. After all, every woman did not have a missionary husband.

"When will you be leaving?" None of the bitterness of a moment ago was in her voice.

"Brother Joseph wants me to leave in three more weeks," he answered. "I'll be going west this time—into Utah and Nevada."

She caught her breath. "That will mean a year or more away from home."

"Yes."

She looked at the threadbare suit he had on.

"You'll need a new suit," she said. "We can sell the cow to get the money for it."

He looked sharply at her.

"No, Mary, not the cow. You will be needing her this winter. A lot can happen in three weeks. We'll

(Continued on page 23.)

Distinctive Functions of the Seventy

Substance of a lecture presented at the Convention of Twelve and Seventy, Kansas City, Missouri, January 3 to 9, 1948.

BY SEVENTY PERCY E. FARROW

I AM ASSUMING that the intended meaning of the topic, "Distinctive Functions of the Seventy," relates to that which is clearly defined, or to that which is unmistakably known to be the functions of the seventy in performing the duties of their office and calling as ministers of the gospel of Christ. While I shall attempt to make an analysis of the historic background of the seventy, it is not my purpose to draw speculative ideas therefrom, but rather to use such material as may be available to help in clarifying the purpose and function of this important ministry in the church of our Lord today. To omit any reference to this historic setting, which to some may seem to be a little obscure, would, in my estimation, be doing a grave injustice to the subject. The soundness of conclusions reached, in analyzing any question, would be proportionate in a large measure with the breadth of the survey or review of the subject.

We must not lose sight of the fact that certain functions of the ministry are shared alike and are basic to all callings in the priesthood.

And he gave some, apostles, and some, prophets; and some, evangelists; and some, pastors and teachers; for the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ.

This quotation, with its context, emphasizes that the chief function of the ministry in its varied capacities is to edify the body of Christ, his church, by working according to the gifts and callings of God to men. Further elaboration on this principle is contained in the often quoted statement in Doctrine and Covenants 119: 8:

All are called according to the gifts of God unto them; and to the intent that all may labor together, let him that laboreth in the ministry and him that toileth in the affairs of the men of business and of work, labor together with God for the accomplishment of the work intrusted to all.

THE FIRST clearly indicated duty of the seventies, therefore, would be to co-ordinate their ministry with the basic functions of the rest of the ministry of the church. Anything apart from this would be unsuccessful, because it would not carry with it the true spirit of ministry into the church of Christ. It is of value to note that this spirit centers first in soul-saving, and second in kingdom-building. The saving of souls, we understand, is a shepherding ministry. It partakes of the heart and soul of the Good Shepherd, who laid down his life for the sheep and who also sought after the lost sheep to guide them into the safety of the fold. Kingdom-building aims at the guiding and building of lives which have been won to Christ into an organized system of righteousness established to enable men to live upon the earth according to the will of God. A true seventy will continually intensify his efforts to develop all of the gifts and abilities with which he is endowed in order to qualify for this essential work.

In spite of the foregoing recognition we have given to the importance of the seventy sharing in the basic responsibilities enjoined upon all men of the ministry, we must not overlook certain functions that are peculiar to especially chosen groups. To overlook these would be as dangerous to the successful operation of the church as it would be to overemphasize them to the exclusion of the essential foresight previously mentioned. It is necessary that we understand these functions which are distinctly the functions of the seventy, not only as they may relate to the seventies in their work, but also as these functions, in spite of their distinctiveness, may correlate to the distinctive functions that pertain to other groups or quorums. This principle is given special attention by the Apostle Paul in the following quotation:

For as the body is one, and hath many members, and all the members of that one body, being many, are one body: so also is Christ. . . . But now hath God set the members every one of them in the body, as it hath pleased him. . . . And God hath set some in the church, first apostles, secondarily prophets, thirdly teachers, after that miracles, then gifts of healings, helps, governments, diversities of tongues. Are all apostles? are all prophets? are all teachers? are all workers of miracles?

These verses are interspersed with simple yet outstanding reasoning, which centers in an emphasis upon the need for each separate member within the body. The successful operation of the body is dependent upon the contribution of each member as it performs its specific work in relation to the total operation of the body itself. Since the office of seventy is an important divine appointment, its specific functions are imperative to the success of the church in its divinely appointed mission.

Functions of the Seventy in the Jewish Church

TO ASCERTAIN what these specific duties are, let us turn our attention to the history of the church which records the instructions given to, and the experiences had by, the men who have occupied therein. I think we are all in agreement regarding the similarity between the church in Moses' time and the church which was established in the time of our Lord. Moses was admonished to see that he made all things according to the pattern which was shown him in the mount. While this applies specifically to the building of the tabernacle, the principle would apply also to the building of the church. The significance of the spiritual endowment of the Mosaic church is attested to by Paul in his writings to the Corinthians:

Moreover brethren I would not that ye should be ignorant, how that all our fathers were under the cloud and all passed through the sea; and were all baptized unto Moses in the cloud and in the sea; and did all eat the same spiritual meat; and did all drink the same spiritual drink; for they drank of that spiritual rock that followed them; and that rock was Christ.

The revelations of God to the children of Israel in Moses' time contained the same testimony that was given to the New Testament church—that is that Jesus is Christ.

That there was an order of the seventy in Moses' time, there is no doubt. When a careful study is made of those passages referring to the seventy of that time, their duties stand out clearly in the light of the previously mentioned spiritual endowment of the church. Reference is made to the participation the seventy had in this spiritual endowment in Exodus, chapter twenty-four.

And he said unto Moses, come up unto the Lord, thou and Aaron, Nadab, and Abihu, and seventy of the elders of Israel; And worship ye afar off. Then went up Moses and Aaron, Nadab and Abihu and seventy of the elders of Israel; And they saw the God of Israel.

Three things are noteworthy here: 1. There was an order of the seventy at that time. 2. Seventy elders were selected to accompany Moses and to participate in divine worship as he went up into the mountain to receive revelation from God. 3. These seventy elders saw God, and thus would become witnesses to the fact that he appeared to Moses. Theirs was a witnessing ministry.

FURTHER REFERENCE is made to the seventy in Numbers, chapter eleven. What is recorded there concerning the seventy no doubt is the account of an ordination service in the tabernacle, though it is not so stated. It stresses the bestowing of unusual spiritual power by which they were to assist Moses in both government and ministry. It is interesting to observe that the choosing of the seventy then grew out of a need for their ministry and corresponds with the circumstances surrounding the choosing of the seventy both in the time of Christ and now. There is little doubt it was to fill an urgent need for more ministers that prompted Jesus to organize the seventy in the church of his time. This need for ministry, according to the Doctrine and Covenants, should govern in the number of quorums of the seventy up to a complete body of seven quorums. The urgency of the need in Christ's time was expressed in his instructions to the seventy he chose: "Pray ye the Lord of the harvest, that he would send forth laborers into the harvest." The urgency in Moses' time is expressed in his prayer: "I am not able to bear all this people alone."

Concerning this tabernacle ceremony and the preparation thereof, I quote:

And the Lord said unto Moses, Gather unto me seventy of the men of the elders of Israel, whom thou knowest to be elders of the people, and officers over them; and bring them unto the tabernacle of the congregation that they may stand there with thee. And I will come down and talk with thee there; and I will take of the spirit which is upon thee, and will put it on them, and they shall bear the burden of the people with thee, that thou bear it not thyself alone. . . .

And Moses went out and told the people the words of the Lord and gathered the seventy men of the elders of the people, and set them round about the tabernacle. And the Lord came down in a cloud and spake unto him, and took the spirit that was upon him, and gave it unto the seventy elders; and it came to pass that when the spirit rested upon them, they prophesied and did not cease.

More extensive reading of this chapter would prove both interesting and profitable, but from what I have quoted, several things stand out clearly regarding the seventy: (1) They were set apart for a very important ministry. (2) They were set apart with a special endowment ceremony in the tabernacle. (3) They received the spirit of prophecy which was enjoyed by Moses. They may have become subprophets in the prophetic order of that church. (4) They were chosen from among the elders, who were known to be officers—men of good repute, as is the instruction in Doctrine and Covenants 121: 5. (5) They were to share in the ministry with Moses the prophet, by bearing the burden of the people with him. (6) There must have been a close association in their ministry with the presidency of the church in that day. It would seem reasonable to suppose that there must have been council meetings in which these seventy and the presidency would share in the problems of the spiritual as well as the temporal government of the people.

IT IS INTERESTING to observe that the same spirit of prophecy which rested upon Moses was given to these seventy. I shall not discuss the full meaning of the word prophecy and what it may have indicated in this instance. We do remember, however, that Paul said, "He that prophesieth edifieth the church," and that John the revelator said, "The testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy." Moses truly was the prophet chosen to receive and interpret the word of God for the people. The seventy elders shared in the same spirit of prophecy, no doubt, as they carried out their functions of ministering to the people in prophetic preaching and teaching. Their ministry was, perhaps, as much in prophetic preaching and teaching the word of God as it was in the prolific use of "Thus saith the Spirit" and should be considered in the fuller meaning of the spirit of prophecy, however it may have been introduced, as the testimony of Jesus.

This extended survey leaves no doubt that the duties of the first seventy corresponded with those of the seventy in New Testament times and today. This will become even more clear as we proceed to scan these later periods for evidence.

The Seventy in the New Testament Church

THE ONLY DIRECT REFERENCE to the seventy in the New Testament church is made by St. Luke. We are greatly indebted to God for giving the church of that day such an able historian, for most if not all Bible commentators agree that St. Luke's account of the gospel is the most complete and also the most scholarly. Smith's Bible Dictionary suggests that St. Luke may have been himself one of the seventy.

The notes on the tenth chapter of St. Luke in Adam Clark's Commentary contain these comments:

Our blessed Lord formed everything in his church after the model of the Jewish Church; and why? Because it was the pattern shown by God himself, the divine form which pointed out the heavenly substance which now began to be established in its place. As he before had chosen twelve apostles, in reference to the twelve patriarchs who were the chief of the twelve tribes, as the heads of the Jewish Church, he now publicly appointed seventy others, as Moses did the seventy elders whom he associated with himself to assist in the government of the people.

Further comment on the above is scarcely necessary. I have included it here to support my belief that Jesus did conform to the pattern of the Jewish Church when he established the New Testament order of the church, both in the choosing of the twelve and the seventy.

The beginning of the appointment of the seventy as recorded by St. Luke reads thus:

After these things the Lord appointed other seventy also, and sent them two by two into every city and place, whither he himself would come. Therefore he said unto them, The harvest truly is great, but the laborers are few: Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he would send forth laborers into the harvest.

No text or passage of Scripture should be interpreted without considering carefully its context. In this instance the ninth chapter of St. Luke closes with the Lord's calling on certain men to follow after him. He was no doubt searching after seventy material. This is indeed interesting in the light of the commission that he gave to the seventy. They, too, were to be concerned about finding laborers. They were to pray that the Lord would send laborers into the harvest. In addition to this, their commission entailed the following instructions: (1) They were to go two by two, into every city and place. (2) They were to be advance agents: "Whither he himself would come." (3) They were to take neither purse nor scrip. (4) They were to choose a house in which to remain, and were to eat and drink such things as were given them. (5) They were to heal the sick. (6) They were to proclaim that the kingdom of God was nigh. (7) They were to proclaim against those places and cities that would not receive them.

As they followed these instructions, they received great power, saying that even the devils were subject to them. When they returned from their first missionary journey, Jesus rejoiced in their success, increased their power, and then offered a prayer of thanksgiving to God. Members of the seventy today would do well to frequently read this chapter and religiously set themselves to the task of qualifying to carry out its injunctions.

WE HAVE HERETOFORE NOTED that the endowment of the seventy in the Jewish church, before the time of Christ was rather distinctly a prophetic endowment of the Spirit of God. I have wondered if this may be that which was in Paul's mind when he so frequently associated the apostles and prophets in his writings. Where this association appears in his writings, prophets are always mentioned by him after the apostles. If his reference to prophets meant the First Presidency, it would be natural that he would mention it first. The First Presidency of that day was indeed an extension of the apostleship, as was expressed in the revelation of 1946 calling two of the apostles into the presidency now. "Their apostleship is extended in presidency." This idea also fits better into the history of the choosing of the seventy, for as St. Paul puts it, "God hath set some in the church, first apostles, secondarily prophets." The apostles were chosen by Jesus first and the seventy were chosen second. The fact that Paul was an educated Jewish rabbi accounts for his having an understanding of the special functions of the ministry in the ancient church better than most of his brethren had. When we consider that he is the only New Testament writer who places the apostles and prophets in this order, it would seem to add some strength to the idea.

The fact that the seventies were men recognized in the ancient Jewish church as being endowed with the spirit of prophecy conforms with their ministry under the injunction of Jesus to proclaim that the kingdom of God is come. What message is more filled with the spirit of prophecy than the message which declares the news of the kingdom of God? Who needs a greater endowment of the special operation of the spirit of prophecy than the advance agents who go into unbroken fields proclaiming this message? In the Jewish Church, the seventies were witnesses to the reality of God. They saw him. In the New Testament Church they, with the apostles, testified that Jesus is Christ, for they had seen him both before and after his resurrection. Their commission combined prophetic with witnessing functions.

The Seventy in the Restoration

IT IS QUITE APPARENT that our knowledge of the seventies is gained as we fit together piece by piece their history developing out of their installations and functionings within the church each time God moved to establish his kingdom on the earth. If the record does seem a bit obscure on some points, the fact that there were seventies at each of these periods confirms their importance to the church. If, as we say, the record is obscure, the purpose of Latter Day revelation is to bring the church "out of obscurity and out of darkness." Hence it is not only natural but necessary that both the functions and the organization of the seventy should receive its share of attention in present-day revelations. According to our church history, provision was made for the choosing of seventies in visions and revelations given to Joseph Smith. This has reference to section 104 of the Doctrine and Covenants. The organization of the first quorum began February 28, 1835.

At the same time, provision was made for the organization of the Council of Presidents of Seventy:

It is according to the vision, showing the order of the seventy that they should have seven presidents to preside over them, chosen out of the number of the seventy, and the seventh president of these presidents is to preside over the six; and these seven presidents are to choose other seventy besides the first seventy, to whom they belong, and to preside over them; and also other seventy until seven times seventy, if the labor in the vineyard of necessity requires it.

A discussion of the functions of the seventy would not be complete without giving consideration to the functions of this council which is a part of the seventy organization.

THE PRECEDING QUOTATION specifies that the number of men composing this council is to be seven, and that they are designated as Presidents of the Seventy. They are not counselors to a president, nor are they vice-presidents. This is a council of presidents, with one selected from their number to be their president. They are not chosen to be his counselors, nor are they chosen as vice-presidents to their president, but their president is chosen from men of the council who are already presidents to preside over them in their council functions. These presidents are to be chosen from the seventy and are to belong to the First Quorum of the Seventy.

Since they are designated as presidents, it follows that one of their functions must be to preside. Provision for this is made in the revelations. Without quoting extensively from these revelations, I would say that their functions may be either in presiding as individuals, where choice by quorum action warrants, or they may preside over the total body of the seventy when the seventies meet together as a body. The second function of this council is to select men for ordination to the seventy, as is indicated in the quotation already given from the law. The third function is that the presidents extant may select, with the approval of the body of the seventy and the church, members from the seventies to fill vacancies occurring in their own council.

BOTH THE ORGANIZATION and functions of the Council of Presidents of Seventy seem to be unique. This is the only instance in the church where such a council of presidents is formed; especially in which one of their number is selected to preside over them, and in which they as individual presidents may preside over separate quorums. Further, there is no other instance where a council of presidents, as such, may preside over a body of several quorums meeting together. Other quorums of the ministry usually are presided over by a president and two counselors. This in itself would attach some special significance to the functions of the seventy as one of the councils of the church.

It may be well to observe that the work of the Council of Presidents of Seventy involves presiding direction over the quorums and the Council of the Seventy only when they meet in quorum or council capacity. The work of the seventy in the field is under the direction and at the call of the twelve apostles. On the other hand, the duties of the twelve in relation to the seventy in no way involves presiding authority over them while they are assembled in quorums or in council capacities. It is then that the Presidents of Seventy take over. One can see the wisdom in this since the twelve themselves form a separate major council of the church. In the field, the Presidents of Seventy are under the direction of the twelve as are the members of the seventy who do not belong to the Council of the Presidents of Seventy.

The duties of the seventy apart from the Council of Presidents and as set forth at the time of their organization is expressed thus:

The seventy are to act in the name of the Lord, under the direction of the twelve, or the traveling high council, in building up the church, and regulating all the affairs of the same, in all nations. First unto the Gentiles and then to the Jews.

And in giving further direction to the twelve regarding their work, it was stated:

It is the duty of the traveling high council to call upon the seventy when they need assistance, to fill the several calls for preaching and administering the gospel, instead of any others.

This indicates that the seventies are to act under the direction of and in association with the twelve, to assist the twelve in their duties. This naturally requires that the seventy in their field of ministry carry with them and exercise the spirit of the apostleship. The extent as well as the limitations of their apostleship are given in Doctrine and Covenants 120: 3:

The seventy when traveling by the voice of the church, or sent to minister the word where the twelve cannot go, are in the powers of their ministrations apostles, those sent, and in meetings where no organization exists should preside if no member of the Twelve or Presidency be present.

Perhaps no statement than that which follows has in it more of justice and the quality of exercising good judgment.

The traveling presiding councils of the church being made by the law, their calling and the voice of the church the directing, regulating and advising authorities of the church, and representing it abroad, should when present in either district or branch be regarded and considered as the leading representative authorities of the church, and be respected as such, their counsel and advice be sought and respected when given; and in cases of conflict, or extremity, their decision should be listened to and regarded, subject to the appeal and adjudication provided for in the law.

It has been the concensus of opinion that the councils referred to here are the twelve and the seventy. The right of the seventy to so function would be in the nature of his work as an assistant to the apostle, and should be exercised in judgment and in justice as he is delegated either by the nature of his appointment if he is sent by the church to represent the apostle, or under the direction of the twelve when sent by the twelve. This would properly recognize at all times the twelve as the second presidency of the church.

I WISH TO QUOTE, in connection with the duties of the seventies, the statement of Joseph Smith III as published in the Saints' Herald for May 1, 1866:

The seventy are a body of elders set apart for the work of the ministry as a traveling quorum, working under the more immediate call of the twelve, to preach the word, build up churches, officiate in the various directions necessary in the spreading of the gospel, and all acts that an elder may do by virtue of his office as such elder, a seventy may do. But there are certain conditions that require a seventy to travel, as an especial witness, that are not binding upon the body of the elders.

There can be by the law seven quorums of seventy, seemingly too small a number for evangelization purposes; and yet when we consider the number of elders there may be in the church, we are forced to acknowledge that God is wiser than man, and does not wish to cumber the legislative bodies of the church with too great numbers.

