The highest mark of the cultured and civilized man and woman is the practice of treating other human beings with kindness, courtesy, and respect. It cannot be expected of little children because they have not yet learned it. It cannot be expected of the uneducated boor, the simpleton, or the churl because he has no capacity for it. It cannot always be expected of the very aged because they have begun to lose their powers of discrimination. The approach of senility makes second childhood, like the first, speak what it thinks, whether the thought is worth anything or not. Those who are growing older have a problem that, with a little care, they can solve. One man wrote, "I find that as I grow older I no longer care what other people think of me." That was his confession that, for him, life was over. When we no longer care what people think of us, we are no longer very important. Regardless of age, we can continue as long as life lasts to have a genuine respect for people and care what happens to them.

Mary A. Burlington
 1510 1/2 Jules
 St. Joseph, Missouri

14042
 19
 h

Herald House

Offer Ends
 Dec. 31

TAKE ADVANTAGE OF

New Low Rates

now available for

Saints' Herald
 and
Daily Bread

both magazines, 1 year, just $4.50

If your subscription to either Saints' Herald or Daily Bread expires during November or December, 1949, renew your subscription now at these low combination rates! Renewals during next two months and new subscriptions will be accepted at this new low price. If your subscription expires later than December 31, 1949, be assured that this offer will be made to you when your subscription expires! Use coupon below for your order.

SPECIAL COMBINATION OFFER COUPON

My subscription to Daily Bread Saints' Herald (please check) expires during November—December, 1949. Please send me both magazines for one year at the combination rate of $4.50 per year.

NAME.....

ADDRESS.....

CITY..... STATE.....

CASH ENCLOSED

CHARGE

Independence,
 Missouri

THE SAINTS'

Herald

VOLUME 96

NOVEMBER 7, 1949

NUMBER 45

Montezuma Castle

Verde Valley, Arizona

Prehistoric Indian

Cliff Dwellings

Photo by Emma Boll

Evangelism and

THE EMPHASIS ON EVANGELISM is not exclusive, but inclusive. To be truly effective here is to be effective everywhere. To advance here is to advance all along the line. This is partly because sound evangelism seeks to enlist everyone who will help: ministers, teachers, parents, young people—everyone. It is partly because evangelism is an important aspect of everything we do: worship, study, service, tithing—everything. And it is partly because evangelism is the introductory phase of kingdom-building and provides the spirit and the impetus for growth everywhere: in our homes, at church school, in richer worship, in community service—everywhere. The issue is not evangelism or . . . but evangelism and

Introducing...

CYRIL GEORGE MESLEY, Kansas City, Missouri, (page 5) was born in Bairnsdale, Victoria, Australia, October 15, 1900. He began his church activities in the Richmond Branch at Melbourne, and was soon given charge of a small mission which had only five members. He took charge of his own service, played the hymn, offered the prayers, and then preached the sermon. He was also interested in civic work, temperance organizations, and Boy Scouts.

In May, 1924, he attended the Scouting Jamboree for the Empire held in England, and the World Jamboree held in Denmark. Following this he sailed for America and entered Graceland in November, 1924, as a student in religious education and liberal arts. As extra curricular activities he took up dramatics, forensic work, scouting, and cub work.

In 1927 he married Blanche Edwards. They have one son, Gordon Warwick.

Brother Mesley was ordained a priest in 1919, an elder in 1923, a high priest in 1930, an apostle in 1938. His first appointment was to the Kansas City Stake in 1929. In 1930 he became counselor to the stake president. His early work was in religious education and youth work in the stake. Later he served as pastor at Grandview, Kansas City, Kansas, and later as pastor at Centrai and president of Kansas City Stake. Soon after his ordination to the Twelve in 1938, he and his family left for Australia, where he served the church for eight years. He is now in charge of the Northwest field, including Alaska.

His hobbies are gardening and architecture.

CHARLES HIELD (page 8) last wrote for the Herald in the August 29 issue, at which time he was introduced.

GERALD GABRIEL (page 11) was introduced in the issue of April 23.

GEORGE KEITH SHOEMAKER, Columbia, Missouri, (page 20) was born in Des Moines, Iowa, April 13, 1923, where he was graduated from Roosevelt High School in 1941. He attended Graceland from 1941 to 1943, and received his bachelor's degree from Iowa State College in 1947 after two years in the U. S. Navy. He received his master's degree from Drake University last June, and is now attending the University of Missouri. He holds the rank of lieutenant (jg) in the Navy.

While at Drake he taught laboratory classes in physical science and acted as assistant to Dr. P. H. Riggs of the astronomy department. At the present time, in addition to his student activities, he is serving as vocational and educational counselor in the University of Missouri.

In 1947 he married Marjorie Robinson of Des Moines, who is now also enrolled as a student in the Missouri University.

Brother Shoemaker has been interested in young people's work and has done teaching in the church school. Recently he was elected to the Board of Ministry to College Students at their September conference in Independence.

THE SAINTS' HERALD

Volume 96

November 7, 1949

Number 45

EDITORS: The First Presidency: Israel A. Smith, F. Henry Edwards. ASSISTANTS: Leonard J. Lea, Associate Editor; Chris B. Hartshorn, Managing Editor; Kenneth L. Graham, Business Manager.

The Saints' Herald is the official publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, with headquarters at The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri, and is issued through the offices of Herald Publishing House, 103 South Osage Street, Independence, Missouri.

Entered as second-class matter at the post office at Independence, Missouri, under Act of March 3, 1879. Issued weekly at Independence, Missouri. Price, $3.50 per year and $1.75 for six months in advance in the U. S. A., its territories and possessions; Canada, $3.75 per year and $1.90 for six months; other countries, $4.50 per year. Notice of a change of address must be given three weeks ahead of the date that it is to become effective. Accepted for mailing at the special rate of postage provided for in section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized July 21, 1921. Printed in the United States of America.

News & Notes

WORK IN ALABAMA

Elder Jack A. Pray was the speaker for the group, September 11, at 7:30 p.m., for the first time since he became pastor of the Mobile Branch. He spoke to a large congregation at the home of Oscar Tillman, pastor of the Bayou La Batre group. There was a number of nonmembers present who had never heard the Restored Gospel before, and Brother Pray made his message very plain. The Saints of this group would appreciate the prayers of all Saints in behalf of the work of the kingdom in this place.—Reported by Irma Tillman.

APOSTLE HANSON AT STONE CHURCH

On the Sunday evenings, October 2 and 9, Apostle Paul Hanson presented illustrated slide lectures on the subject of "Ancient Civilizations of Peru and Bolivia."

ELBERT A. SMITH IN TEXAS

Presiding Patriarch Elbert A. Smith spent three weeks in Galveston and Houston, Texas, participating in services the last two Sundays in October and the first Sunday in November.

PRESIDENT EDWARDS AT HOME

President F. Henry Edwards was released from the hospital Friday, October 14, and is resting at home after an attack of pneumonia.

PRESIDENT SMITH ATTENDS CHURCH DEDICATIONS

On Sunday, October 16, the church in Skiatook, Oklahoma, was dedicated. President Israel A. Smith was there for the occasion and spoke at the 11:00 a.m. service. Also present were Apostle Reed Holmes, District President Victor Witte, and Bishop Leslie Kohlman. President Smith journeyed to Tulsa for the Sunday evening preaching service where he occupied the pulpit.

On the week end of October 23, he was in Owendale, Michigan, for the dedication of the church there.

APOSTLE SMITH TO OREGON

Apostle W. W. Smith left Independence for Portland, Oregon, October 17, after spending time in his area, the southern United States, and some time at Independence for Joint Council.

GIBBS IN IDAHO

Elder Arthur Gibbs held a successful series of missionary meetings at Slagle, Idaho, September 11 to 25. By the work of the local people and the instruction he gave, four people were baptized.

MUSIC NEWS

Franklyn S. Weddle announced that the Messiah choir for this year is unusually fine. There are forty-seven new voices this year; and a total of about 250 singers.

The first class in Music Appreciation was held October 13 from one to three in the afternoon in the music offices of the Auditorium. There will be six lessons between this time and Thanksgiving.

How to Listen to a Sermon

"Incline your ear, and come unto me: hear, and your soul shall live." Isaiah 55: 3.

The Art of Listening

You may think you know how to listen to a sermon. You have had extensive experience. You have held down many a hard pew seat for many a weary hour. Why should anybody try to tell you how to listen? But do you really know? Can you tell, two hours later, what was said and what text was used?

There is an art of listening. It takes skill and attention to be able to summarize in a few sentences what the preacher has to offer. Some people—it is possible for the preacher to spot them in the congregation—have the power of listening intelligently and creatively, and of thinking for themselves as the sermon goes along. Their eyes register when they agree or disagree, and the speaker feels it. These are the most interesting and stimulating listeners he can have.

The Critic in the Pew

You who occupy the pews on Sunday have an enviable and privileged position. You experience none of the pain of soul-searching and misery of the preacher, who spends hours trying to arrange something that will be worthy of your attention (he should try, anyway). You know nothing of his anxious prayers for guidance and help. You do not share his fears and uncertainties as he faces the congregation from the pulpit. You come, you sing hymns, you make an offering, you sit and listen. You judge and evaluate the man and his sermon. You criticize. But nobody ever gives you an examination to discover your competence as a listener.

All Kinds

Listeners include "all kinds and conditions of men," women, and children. A part of the congregation is dutiful, alert, intelligent, and listens to the sermon. A few men plan next week's business or go to sleep. Some women examine the new clothes of other women; they don't realize it, but this is what keeps them submerged. Children tear up hymnals, drop mother's small change on the floor, or cry.

One good woman, years ago, was observed listening to a poor sermon with shining eyes and parted lips; but her rapt attention was only an appearance. A friend asked her, "How can you enjoy such a dull sermon so much?" She replied, "Oh, I wasn't listening to him at all. I just took his text and planned the kind of sermon I would preach on it. I had a wonderful time." That is carrying creative listening a little too far. One ought to keep in touch with the preacher for courtesy, if for nothing else. But it is better to think of the text than let the mind wander at random far outside the church.

Why and How to Listen

You should go to church to get new and better ideas from the preacher. You, by yourself, cannot possibly think of all the great ideas in the world. You need help even to find them. You need to listen to others. The minister has been especially trained to help people like you. He is a specialist in the great moral, ethical, and spiritual literature of the world. A good preacher will use texts from the Bible that you have never found, and will interpret and apply them in ways that would never occur to you. A part of the value of every text is the way it is used.

Here is how to listen to a sermon to get the most out of it: (1) Take notes, always have a pencil with you, use your program margins if you have no paper; (2) Record the text and other notable Scriptures for further consideration, they will be useful many times; (3) Outline the preacher's main thoughts, and quote anything especially good he may say; (4) Write any good ideas that may come to you, independent of the sermon; these thoughts are an important part of the reward of listening. If you do not write them at the time, you forget them.

Shop Notes

The artist on a holiday visits the museum and looks at paintings. When a musician has a free evening, he goes to a concert. Your doctor on vacation visits a famous surgeon or hospital. So also when a preacher is not occupying a pulpit, he often goes to church to see what others are doing. The preacher who hears only his own sermons will soon go stale.

On a long distance phone the operator sometimes says, "Are you there?" The preacher looks at his congregation and counts noses; but can he tell what percentage are "there" in mind and spirit as well as in body? Not always.

Nobody can learn anything unless he is willing to listen. Nobody can listen effectively unless he is willing to make the effort to keep awake and reflect upon what he hears. Mind and spirit must be "alerted"—to use a term employed by the military in the late war. We need to push a button and ring a bell somewhere in our consciousness to make it come to attention. The important factor is receptivity. Some people hear three times what others do. Some lose by default, simply by not being "there."

Costly time and patient effort have gone into the planning of the service of the church and the sermon that is a part of it. Those people are best rewarded who faithfully try to get the most out of it. L. J. L.

E d i t o r i a l

A Fair Account

The Union Electric Company of St. Louis, Missouri, in the fall issue of their Quarterly, publishes a story about Nauvoo, the "Newest City" to be served by that company. It shows a number of pictures of the city and of Joseph Smith, early resident of Nauvoo. The account is free from the usual misrepresentations concerning the church and its founder. ISRAEL A. SMITH

Across the Desk

The following excerpts are from the letter of Elder J. D. Imrie of Norwood, South Australia:

At the moment I am laboring in and around Bendigo, Victoria, where we have a small but consecrated group of Saints thoroughly devoted to the church and to each other. By our combined efforts, we are enjoying a good response in homes to the presentation of our message. We look to the church to grow in this center, especially as coming months will see the erection here of the Saints' first, although modest, church building.

We have found the influence of Brother Davey spiritually stimulating and personally of much assistance.

My wife and I truly find joy in laboring as permitted in this field of endeavor and trust always that our efforts may be acceptable to the church, to her people, and to our God. We feel many times that we fall short but are conscious of the leadings of his Spirit and trust in its power to do good.

Bishop Elmer C. Evans, bishop of the Southern Michigan District, stated in a recent report to the conference of that district:

This, my twenty-third annual report is given to you assembled in district conference with a degree of pleasure and satisfaction. I have been in your service twenty-three years. We have labored together toward a definite goal, that of the redemption of Zion.

Perhaps one of the most valuable assets the church can possess is a faithful membership. Year after year I have seen many evidences of the sincerity of our people in observing the principle of the tithe and offering, and rendering service to the church and to one another. This everpresent faithfulness is indeed encouraging and tends to increase one's faith.

The law of the tithe and offering is part of the doctrine of the church. To the extent this doctrine is observed we can expect the church to be blessed and to receive as individuals the blessings of the material things of this life and eternal life in the world to come. In your study periods please read section 59 of the Doctrine and Covenants. This section contains a renewing of God's covenant with his people during the Restoration period.

It is rather difficult to divulge the extent of our progress. Because of our efforts, however, I am sure we have been abundantly blessed.

Through the Prophet Moses, God covenanting with the Children of Israel promised many, many blessings to those who kept his commandments. I am sure we can appreciate this portion of Scripture:

"My doctrine shall drop as the rain, my speech shall distil as the dew, as the small rain upon the tender herb, and as the showers upon the grass; because I will publish the name of the Lord; ascribe ye greatness unto our God."—Deuteronomy 32: 2, 3.

As God sends the moisture upon all mother earth, we, too, can expect such blessings if we are faithful in observing the doctrine of unselfishness in the giving of our tithes and offerings. The promises of our Creator are far beyond our expectations if we would only recognize God as the creator and owner of all things. We are only stewards over that which we possess.

"He who doeth the works of righteousness shall receive his reward, even peace in this world, and eternal life in the world to come."

It is our sincere prayer that each one of us—officer, solicitor and member,—will persistently strive to keep these commandments, this doctrine, that together we can enjoy the blessings that are promised to those who are faithful.

Elder Jack A. Pray writes from Mobile, Alabama:

We like the South very much, and the Saints have received us with all the graciousness and hospitality that is traditional. We have a good church plant in Mobile, and I am anxious for you to see it.

I understand that you will be with us in December for our winter district conference. The Saints are looking forward to your coming with great anticipation.

Tempest in Hall of Fame

From the current press we cull the following:

WASHINGTON (NANA)—The ghost of Brigham Young and his plural wives is haunting the U. S. capitol.

Young's new statue—the first for Utah—remains unwrapped on capitol hill, awaiting a final decision as to its location in the Hall of Fame. There is a red-hot controversy that has rocked the state of Utah and jarred Congress.

Mahonri Young, sculptor son of the famed Mormon church leader, made his own survey and urged that his father's likeness be placed in a corner back of pillars and next to a window.

A committee of Utah state legislators also was appointed and made a special trip to Washington. They selected a site in the circle of statues under the dome between Zebulon Vance of North Carolina and Alexander Stephens of Georgia, both secessionists.

The Utah legislators apparently did not understand the procedure, but the final decision rests with the joint Congressional committee of the library, with Senator Green of Rhode Island, as chairman.

The committee met recently and unanimously approved the site by the window.

This touched off an uproar in Utah. Many patrons of the state's most revered figure claim he is being pushed off in a corner. They are wiring and writing the joint committee to reconsider. Even the president of the church is reported to have sent an appeal.

Senator Watkins, (Rep. Utah) immediately sought out the statue of Young upon its arrival here and took a stand—for the benefit of photographers. He chose a spot for it between Georgia's Stephens and Vermont's Ethan Allen. This location, however, would necessitate the moving of Zebulon Vance over one spot, which North Carolina might not like.

In the past, the joint Congressional committee on the library generally has accepted the recommendations of state groups in locating their statues, although the sculptor has been consulted. For example, it is said that the spot in which Will Rogers was placed was chosen by Jo Davidson, the sculptor.

The question now is whether the joint committee on the library will reconsider. Meanwhile, Brigham Young sits in his box under the dome awaiting dedication ceremonies.

ISRAEL A. SMITH.

Alaskan Journey - Part I

By APOSTLE C. G. MESLEY

PROPHETIC OFFICE is a grave responsibility. Pronouncements and recommendations of a prophet must be intelligent, reasonable, and for the welfare of the whole body. Sometimes these convictions must take a step beyond apparent reasons into an unexplored realm of faith and divine guidance. Such were the leadings of President Israel A. Smith concerning ministry to the Saints in Alaska and exploration concerning the future of our work there. With Joint Council consideration and consent, these prophetic leadings were translated into action at 5:30 p.m., April 28. At 11:30 p.m. I was packed and entraining at Kansas City.

With Apostle Charles Hield, I went to Los Angeles on Sunday, May 1, ministering twice and visiting all the branches and missions in that wide-flung city. My old Kansas City Stake associate, Garland Tickemyer, was host and guide. Next day with George Njeim, Peter Whalley, Garland Tickemyer, and Charles Hield, I traveled up Highway No. 1 (Roosevelt Highway) along the Pacific Ocean to San Francisco; the day was bright and sunny, the hills ablaze with wild flowers and the scenery delightful. The combination of great bushes of blue and golden lupins, cobalt sea, Monterey Cypress and mountain road was too much for this flower lover and photographer. Every picture had to be inhaled as well as envisioned, so it was not long before I earned the nickname, "Ferdinand, the bull," said only as Charles Hield could say it.

At Berkeley we were domiciled with the pastor, Brother and Sister Alma Andrews. For the next ten days we were engaged in the 9:00 a.m.-9:30 p.m. sessions of the Regional Appointee Institute at the Berkeley church. It was a rare privilege to be associated with Brethren Rushton, Hield, McDowell, Hunker, and all the appointees in the area during this strenuous time of sittin' and learnin'.

Priesthood institutes at Salem, Oregon, with Bishop M. E. Lasater and at Seattle, Washington, with Apostle W. Wallace Smith, followed the appointee institute. They were interspersed with preaching and visiting in Yakima, Richland, Longview, Centralia, Washington; and Portland, Oregon. These were eventful days of busy ministry.

THE SKYLINER was ready to take off for Juneau, Alaska, at 7:30 a.m., Monday, May 30. I flew to save time and money and to make contacts accessible only by air. Like "climbing Jacob's ladder," the plane rose higher and higher until Seattle was lost in a bank of clouds as was all the scenery en route to Juneau. After a brief landing near Ketchikan, Alaska, we were soon bumping about in the air. A traveler cannot "feed the fish" in a plane, so he has to use the quart cartons provided and hope for an early landing. This we did. Landing was in Juneau about 1:30 p.m., a six-hour flight from Seattle.

Leaving the baggage at the city office, I went in search of church members to whom the Presidency had written. Memorial Day had closed the stores, and I could not locate any members, so I put up at the Gastineau Hotel, a quiet family hostel, on Main Street and began clearing through accumulating correspondence and drawing up plans for the remodeling of a Centralia, Washington, church building. Next day Brother Eckley Guerin was in his photo shop and Earl Warren at the plumbing contractors. The one-time church statistician, Carroll L. Olson, had a stipulation "diligent search" before he would change his records of membership, and we set out to meet his exacting requirements. It took two days to locate the whereabouts of the balance of our members on the statisticians list for Juneau. All of them were "outside," as the Alaskans speak of the U.S.A.

Fairbanks, Alaska, from the air.

Juneau is the capital city of Alaska. Its history dates back to the Russian occupation from 1794-1867. The latter is the date of Seward's "folly" (?) in the purchase of Alaska for the United States. Gold was discovered there in 1869, and since then 150 million dollars worth has been mined in this area alone. (Alaska cost U. S.A. $7,200,000.) Forest resources appear boundless, and the fishing industry is well established. Modern schools, hospitals, churches, and homes all clustered on a narrow ledge between Mt. Roberts and Gastineau Channel make Juneau of interest to the tourist. The territorial museum has a complete Eskimo collection of great interest for visitors and students. The curio shops would grace any great metropolis much larger than Juneau with its population of 7,500. Juneau's records aptly puncture most of the preconceived ideas about Alaska's being all in the frozen north. Twenty of the states in the United States have average January temperatures lower than Juneau with its record low of fifteen degrees.

During the search for members, I had happy associations with the Kiwanis Club, Ek and Laverne Guerin, (his "ready made" family includes three lovely little girls, a cocker, and Murge, the tortoise) and the Earl Warrens, who saw us off on the plane to Whitehorse, Yukon Territory, Canada.

THIS PLANE was a little kinder to my stomach and the clouds less obscuring as we covered the short flight over mountains, glaciers, braided rivers and interesting basin-like lakes, deep blue inside and pea-green outside like a weathered copper bowl. Brother Robert Allish, priest, met the plane and took me to his gift shop featuring elegant furs. New and lasting friendships were made and mutual acquaintances reviewed before the Allen Barnetts called in the late evening to take me up the hill to their home in the R.C.A.F. Camp. Sister Jean Barnett began the church school on the hill, and her struggle against great odds has had record in the Saints' Herald. Allen gives capable secretarial and visual aid support to the project. Sons Ronald and Douglas are active participants in all the work involved, and a capable corps of nonmember teachers assist in the teaching of the 100 pupils in this excellent school. Naturally the visiting missionary had a part in the Sunday program and enjoyed the contacts and experience. In late afternoon the three Latter Day Saint families in Whitehorse met at the Barnett home for a Communion service, followed after supper by a preaching service for them and nonmember friends. At the Communion, the infant daughters of Brother and Sister Ernest McKeever of Winnipeg, Canada, were blessed. The good spirit was enjoyed by all present.

Monday being a Canadian holiday (King's Birthday), I went picnicking with the McKeever family to Marsh Lake—just emerging from its winter ice, dined with the Allish family, and spent a happy evening with the Barnetts. It was a delightful and helpful week end of family ministry.

Whitehorse and vicinity were full of interest. The town carries some of the atmosphere of its Klondike gold rush experiences. Robert Service, the poet of the Yukon, lived there for many years. His cabin is preserved as is the huge boiler wherein "Sam McGee was finally thawed out in cremation." The Whitehorse Rapids and Miles Canyon, once the terror of the prospector en route to Dawson in the Klondike, are now but points of scenic beauty. The mighty Yukon is navigable from Whitehorse to its mouth in the Bering Sea 2,300 miles away to the north and west. Whitehorse is Mile 919 on the Alcan Highway from Dawson Creek, British Columbia, to Fairbanks, Alaska. Begun as a wartime emergency road in 1942, this stupendous feat of engineering winds over mountains, rivers, tundra, and plain for over 1,500 miles. It is now being civilianized for commerce and tourist traffic.

FROM WHITEHORSE I planned to go by bus along the Alcan Highway to Shaw Creek some eighty miles south of Fairbanks. The first lap of the journey was by bus to Dry

Anchorage, Alaska, Saints: (left to right, back row) Rodger F. Langdon, T/Sgt. Ted Fowler, Cecil A. Roley, (front row) Leota Langdon, Eva Tousley and daughter Jacquelyn, Georgia Harrison, and Lyda Roley. Photo by Captain Pershing Tousley, priest in charge of the group.

Creek near the Alaskan border. The bus driver was an old-timer with many reminiscences of the "caterpillar" mail run from Whitehorse to Dawson City. To get in the driver's seat he had to lift his stomach, a royal bulge, over the back of the seat and then push it down under the wheel. The stops were frequent for this was an all-purpose bus carrying supplies, mail, and passengers, so there was some passenger speculation as to what would happen if an extra pancake should block the mobile tummy in its up over-and-down underflow. Lonely homesteaders, A.C.S. soldiers hungry for home contacts, weary travelers, construction camps, trading posts, and groups of shy-eyed Indians all welcome the bus along its 265-mile journey to Dry Creek Lodge. The scenery en route was some times magnificent, some times monotonous. Along the fifty-mile parallel of Kluane Lake, it was beautiful.

At Dry Creek we were officially informed that the Alaskan section of the road had been "closed indefinitely." No bus was there to take us on. An indefinite stay at Dry Creek was unthinkable, so up came the trusty thumb. A United States health service nurse solicited my aid to her road-closed distress, so I thumbed for her a ride with two husky colonists of the Palmer settlement, and I secured a ride in an open jeep to Anchorage, some 500 miles away. My benefactor was a young GI from California, determined to search for the gold in "them thar hills." He hauled a trailer full of tools and canned goods (Californian, I presume). He carried a Luger for his protection, and before he tucked it under his pillow he took pains to let me know he could use it. I was more interested in his transportation than in his prunes and cash box.

JUNE IN ALASKA is ordinarily warm, but this June was "unusual." The rain broke all records and better. Blizzards were on the mountain passes. I wore everything I possessed, including my P.J.'s.

Fortunately the sun shone for those two days, so we avoided being dampened down before freezing. The scenery was magnificent. The Wrangell Range, with Mt. Sanford 16,200 feet, Mt. Wrangell 14,005 feet, and stately Mt. Drum 12,002 feet, stood eternal in its icy beauty. The thirty miles of winding road from the spectacular Sheep Mountain to Palmer follows the sweeping course of the Matanuska River. Its everwidening valley finally creates the fertile fields of the first large scale planned agricultural development of Alaska.

In 1935 two hundred families, following in the steps of many earlier settlers, colonized in this rich farm area of 300,000 acres. The early prospectors became the "sour-doughs," but these families of the soil from the Dakotas, Nebraska, and Minnesota are "colonists." The barns were Iowan in architecture. The fields were cleared with bulldozers that created strip farming with hillocks of decaying vegetation that later could be bulldozed flat again. Everywhere grain, vegetables, and berries hurried to grow in the long days of summer. Eggs brought $1.00 per dozen, milk 50c (and up) a quart, tomatoes 75c per pound, head lettuce 75c each, corn 17c per small ear. Cabbages grew as large as wash pans. Every farm had its little greenhouse to assure an early start or to grow sufficient tomatoes for home consumption. The Farmers' Co-operative Association does an annual business of $8,000,000.

ANCHORAGE, the largest city in Alaska, was flourishing in liquor, dust, and iniquity. The frontier town of 7,000 had war-mushroomed into a city of 20,000. It fully demonstrated Alaska's many extremes—people of sturdy pioneer stock and drifting wastrels—righteous respectability and staggering drunkenness—opulent movie palaces and dens of vice. Lovely homes and half-finished shacks were cheek to cheek. Anchorage had all Alaska's extremes on parade.

The Cecil Roleys had arranged for accommodations and were my unfailing helpers and supporters. Willard Thomas (Graceland '36) gave us every co-operation in a long search for members. As all mail is delivered either through private box or general delivery, street addresses were not known. If you had a William Martin on the members' list, you looked for him in the telephone directory, city directory, Credit Bureau, and Power and Light Company file then walked for miles to find out whether your William Martin was the W. P., W. S., W. A., or C. W. Martin whose address was available to you.

By Sunday, twenty-five members were contacted, and sixteen assembled for Communion and preaching service at the Anchorage Business College rooms. The Communion trays were Presbyterian, but the service was Latter Day Saint in planning and in Spirit.

A night was spent with the Dale Briggses in their partly-completed log ranch house at Mile 13. There Graceland's Kansas-meets-Boston marriage flowers in Alaska, and the family spirit of helpfulness and wide outlook is in keeping with the view from the picture "window" and the "open" fireplace. The Glen Briggses of the famous Hog Ranch, where ninety-seven brood sows were in production, were building a new log home alongside Briggs Creek.

On Sunday I visited for the first time a service in the Mormon church. About forty were present at the hall where they met, including several "Gentile" soldiers, the contacts of Mormon boys in the Army. I spoke to the Presbyterian Mariners Club, a young adult group, and had a rousing reception for an address to the Kiwanis Club. Cecil Roley is the Lieutenant Governor for Kiwanis in Alaska. After much searching, I finally located thirty-two members in Anchorage and arranged for regular meetings for study under Captain Pershing Tousley, priest, who arrived to take up military duties after we left Anchorage.

(Continued next week.)

Palenque

By APOSTLE CHARLES R. HIELD

This article, in the main, appears as published in the Pemex Travel Club Bulletin for September 1, 1949. Some minor editorial changes and amendments by the author have been made.

ONE OF THE MOST CULTURAL CITIES of the ancient Mayas is Palenque. Most archaeologists record that it has the best bas-relief stucco figures of any of the ruins. These reports caused us to wish to visit this famous ancient city.

There are several ways to reach the ruins. Today one can fly to Merida, or Campeche in Yucatan, and then go by railroad to the town of Palenque, and from the village out to the ruins on horseback. Another way would be to take a boat (the "Carman" makes regular runs) up the Usumacinta River from Villa Hermosa to Emiliano Zapata, from Emiliano Zapata by "jeep" or horseback to the village of Palenque, and thus by horse to the ancient site. A third way is to fly direct to Emiliano Zapata or Palenque village from Coatzacoalcos or Villa Hermosa.

It was the third method that we used. From Coatzacoalcos (Puerto Mexico, which is on the air route and the railroad) we obtained plane passage to Villa Hermosa. This city is a busy center of the banana business in the middle of a flat river-bottom country. It has splendid hotels, interesting plazas and parks. From Villa Hermosa we flew over the ever fascinating river country, noting with interest the little farms below with their corn, cane, and banana fields. It was an added thrill for us when our friendly pilots turned slightly off the course and flew along the foothills of the mountains until we came over the ruins of Palenque. The plane flew over the ruins two or three times, the pilots banking the wings so that we could get pictures of the ancient metropolis from the air. We landed at Emiliano Zapata, Tabasco, about forty miles away.

Here we were met by our good friend, Senor Enrique Fonz, with whom we had become acquainted three years before. Senor Fonz is the agent for the air line, secretary of the village, proprietor of a general store, an indefatigable worker for community welfare, besides being father of a splendid family. We shall always prize the friendship of this splendid man. We fell quite in love with his three children, particularly, Enrique, Jr.

Stone slabs in the Temple of the Law carved with glyphs. Apostles Hanson and Hield are in the background.

The village of Emiliano Zapata (formerly Monte Cristo) is a charming little river village. They were having a contest to choose a queen for their coming carnival, and we enjoyed very much taking part with the other citizens. We were glad to become acquainted with the president of the village, Gregorio Cabera Garcia, and the government engineer, Jorge Rubio Palacios, who was most helpful to us.

Ordinarily one can go by jeep the thirty-five miles to the village of Palenque. Enrique Fonz also manages that business. Because of recent rains, however, we had to go that distance on horseback, and we were fortunate to secure Prospero Fonz, a brother of Enrique, as a guide. We left at night, in order to avoid some of the heat of the day, stopping in the morning at the half-way station—Aguacata, for a breakfast of eggs, beans, fried bananas, and coffee. The journey is over a rolling terrain, with tall grass and scrub oak trees covering much of the area, making fine pasture land.

Temple of the Law

AT PALENQUE VILLAGE we rested part of the afternoon and stayed over the first night at the home of Senor Ernesto Rateike. He has a very homey place on the outskirts of the village and seems to enjoy life thoroughly. He keeps busy on his ranch with his cattle, but also finds time to read modern magazines and newspapers in his hammock on the front porch. He has a radio for world news, and a marvelous natural swimming pool a short distance from the house for his daily, refreshing swim. We enjoyed the Mexican food, but we will have to confess that when "Aunt Emma" (a sister to Senor Rateike) prepared a fine American chicken dinner with dressing, homemade bread, marmalade, and above all, a real lemon pie for desert, we ate it with great relish. We were deeply impressed that "Aunt Emma" said grace before we ate.

Early the next morning after Frank (or Pancho—one of the Rateike boys) had adjusted the length of the stirrup straps on our horses, we set out to cover the remaining seven or eight kilometers to the ruins. The first view one gets is from across a little valley, and one can but be impressed with the wonderful location for a city up there on the low plateau at the foot of the mountain range. Out in front extends the beautiful agricultural land with the ancient city, up out of the reach of possible floods, glistening in the early morning sun.

Temple of the Sun

This ancient Mayan city must have been very beautiful when it was inhabited years ago by thousands of people. The first structure one notices is the huge palace. It is located on a large square platform and encloses a number of courts, as well as a tower that originally must have been four or five stories high. While some of the rooms have fallen down, due to age and weather, there are enough left to give a good indication of the refinement and culture of the early Mayan civilization. Some of the beautiful stucco bas-reliefs are found in this building—men in short kiltlike dresses and women with beautiful long skirts that would do credit to our "new look."

Not far from the palace and facing north is the famous Temple of the Law. It is located on quite a high pyramid and gets its fame from the fact that on its interior walls are located a number of most skillfully carved slabs containing glyphs. It is also known as the Temple of the Inscriptions. One can but wonder what story these glyphs may tell some day. Will it be an account of their law, their history, or their religion? On the supporting columns at the front of the temple are located two of the stucco bas-relief figures, and, interesting to note, they hold small children in their arms. The quality, dignity, beauty, and culture of these bas-reliefs are marked contrast to the figures superimposed on some of the walls of the palace by a later society.

A short distance south and east of the palace is a gorgeous little temple on a small pyramid, known as the Temple of the Sun. This building was originally decorated on the outside with intricate designs. It has three sets of courts, an outer court, a middle court, and an inner room. On the back wall of this inner room are three huge carved stones. The center stone is occupied with a shield-shaped object on which is carved a face. This shield rests on two crossed lances with decorated handles. On each side of this center design stand two personages, probably priests, who hold small, grotesque human figures in their hands.

Pyramid and Main Palace

Apostle Hield in palace courtyard (showing stone figure of late epoch).

THE BUILDING that attracts the most attention is the huge pyramid and Temple of the Cross. This building also had beautiful exterior decorations, and is surmounted with a huge stone-bomb. This is probably to add height to the building and to help hold the roof in place. This temple likewise has three courts, but the three slabs originally located in the holy of holies have been removed, and are now given a place of honor at one end of the main exhibit hall of the National Museum in Mexico City. The central slab is carved with a large cross which is surmounted with a figure of the royal quetzal bird. A priest stands on each side of the cross and the one on the right holds in his outstretched hands a small recumbent human figure as if in the attitude of prayer or blessing over one arm of the cross. The other figure holds a staff, which resembles a young maize plant. On the outer edges are found rows of glyphs—a total of 232 of them. They must tell the story of the cross and the priests, though no one knows for sure. It is from this cross design on the center slab that the temple gets its name.

Further to the east and south is found the Temple of the Foliated Cross. It, too, has three courts, and the three slabs are still in place on the back wall of the inner court. The temple gets its name because the design has foliage entwined about the beams of the cross. Priests are also shown. One wears a belt in the form of a serpent with open jaws, while he holds aloft a small seated human figure with folded arms, wearing a peculiar headdress and face mask. The priest seems, by his attitude, to be performing some religious rite. There are 159 glyphs with this temple. One can but believe, as several archaeologists do, that these ancient Mayas had a knowledge of Christianity.

There are a number of other buildings in the area, one that once contained an outstanding stucco design of a man seated cross-legged on a tiger throne. It is called the Temple of the Tiger, or the Temple of the Beau-Relief. There is also the Temple of the Conde, and other pyramids with temples that are still covered with vegetation and dirt.

Some of these buildings show indications of occupancy by different cultures. In the broken wall of the Temple of the Conde some glyph covered stones of an earlier epoch have been exposed.

A sparkling little river flows through the center of the city, but where it runs through the main plaza, it has been covered over with a most skillfully executed stone archway.

In one of the courts of the palace one finds huge carved stone figures, which seem to belong to a more recent period. The foreheads of these figures are deformed, the faces coarse and lacking in refinement. One figure seems to indicate that this later culture may have indulged in phallic worship.

We appreciated very much the friendship and help of Agustin Alvarez the guide and his two nephews. We were allowed to swing our ham-

(Continued on page 19.)

Tablet of the Cross in the National Museum in Mexico City. Taken from the Temple of the Cross at Palenque.

Helping Men Own Farms

By GERALD GABRIEL

IN THE UNITED STATES about 300,000 farms and farm tracts changed hands voluntarily in the year 1946. Most of these were made available by farms for sale by absentee owners and farmers retiring from work or changing to other occupations.

The rural church can make use of those farms by helping its members or interested people to purchase them as they become available. This assistance does not necessarily need to be financial. However, some churches do have a "land purchase fund."

In an article in the Country Gentleman for February, 1943, William F. McDermott describes how Pastor Calvin Schnuckner built a community in Titonka, Iowa. In a period of six years, he lifted the percentage of owner-operated farms within his parish from 34 to 60 per cent. He increased church attendance from seventy to over 400; changed a run-down, leaky, mortgaged structure to a modern $35,000 edifice, and transformed a dying rural church into one that is very much alive. The Northern Baptists, the Church of the Brethren, and some others have a program by which they are helping men to own farms.

The "Helping Men Own Farms" program should consider first, helping the present members of a community who are tenants to purchase farms, and second helping to gather worthy families outside the community who are isolated from church privileges in their present community. A rural church with a small membership would do well to adopt such a program along with its missionary endeavor. It is in this gathering program that the rural church should review the community building attempts made in the past.

Perhaps a rural church adopting a "Helping Men Own Farms" program should first become concerned with the land. Good land is important in promoting a sound community development program. Good soil, good farms, and good living naturally follow each other. The following chart is from the National Planning Association Report Number 42 and is based on the census report of 1939. In County A the fertile prairie soils are predominantly brown and black silt and clay loam. In near-by County B the soils are generally poor grey and yellowish grey and grey silt loam. The soil of County A had twice as much organic matter and plant food as did that of County B.

As has been pointed out, good farms are the cheapest. The rural church that has a leader with some training in land appraisal has a better chance for progress. Co-operation can be had from government agencies. Material can be obtained from the state colleges of agriculture dealing with such matters. Also "Aids in Determining the Value of a Farm," Stencil 293; "Some Considerations in Buying a Farm," Circular 281; "Factors Affecting Farm Land Values in Missouri," Research Bulletin 229; "The Appraisal of Farm Buildings," Circular 213; and "Legal Safeguards in Buying a Farm," Circular 527, are good sources of information from the Missouri Agricultural Experiment Station. "Selecting a Farm in North Carolina," Circular No. 283, is an excellent publication from the North Carolina Experiment Station, and is so written that it is adaptable to all the United States. "Farming Opportunities in the Midwest," Extension Bulletin 325, is also a good bulletin from Purdue University in Indiana. Circular No. 743 entitled "The Farm Real Estate Situation 1944-45," and "Getting Established on the Land," DS 21, are both helpful publications from the United States Department of Agriculture in Washington, D. C.

FARMING IS NOW A BUSINESS. Many urban industries and businesses are started on much less capital than a farm requires. It is estimated that $20,000 to $30,000 are needed to purchase an equipped family-size farm today. The financial policy of the prospective farm should include sufficient capital to: (1) make a safe down payment, (2) have an adequate operating capital, and (3) to have enough reserve to protect the business in case of crop failure or other emergencies that may arise. Loans for worthy people from local banks or government loan agencies are being encouraged.

Once the step is taken toward ownership by down payment on a farm or renting a good farm, the church leader and member should be interested in good farm management, soil tests, cropping system based on these tests, adequate size units, herds and flocks, timely breeding, marketing programs, and thrifty spending. All these will increase the possibilities for paying on or buying the desirable farm. Farmers who have kept income and expense records, crop, livestock, and all other enterprise records, have increased their output and income year by year for the first five years of record-keeping. Bishop Ted Beck while at Lamoni, Iowa, organized 120 farm families in a record-keeping ring. Through co-operation with the county extension agent, he was able to secure the help of a specialist from the Agricultural Extension Department of Iowa State College. This specialist visited each of these 120 families for two hours each quarter. He gave them valuable advice on farm management based on these findings from their own records.

Monthly farm classes are held in Bishop Landsberg's community, as well as the daily agricultural classes during reunion. These classes in both cases are conducted by specialists from the State Agricultural College. The rural church leader will increase the ownership of land more rapidly if he is able either to help the members work out a "balanced farming plan" or help them join a "balanced farming ring."

Part-time farms have been resorted to by former farmers who work in some industry. A small acreage, a few chickens, maybe a cow, a truck crop, all add to the income of the family. This not only makes for more security during depression years, but it gives farm training to members of the family and increases their savings—therefore, a large,

(Continued on page 19.)

	COUNTY A High fertility	COUNTY B Low fertility
Average Value of Farm	$24,077.00	$4,043.00
Average Value of Land Per Acre	131.00	34.00
Average Size of Farms	183.7	120 acres
Value of farm products sold and used at home	$3,531.73	$ 965.79
Crop Yields Per Acre
Corn	54 bu.	34 bu.
Oats	31 bu.	18 bu.
Soybeans	28 bu.	12 bu.
Adults Attended High School	23.42%	7.80%
Adults Attended College	6.39%	3.73%

Christmas

• christmas is coming •

christmas is coming • christmas is coming • christmas is coming • christmas is coming • christmas is coming •

NEW FOR CHRISTMAS

IN THE LAND OF THE FEATHERED SERPENT

by Paul M. Hanson

One of our foremost students of Book of Mormon archæology, Apostle Paul M. Hanson, writes of his adventures and experiences in visiting the great ruins of past civilizations in America. Unlike his former book, this one deals with incidents and people of the present day. A charming, fascinating record in text and over 100 photographs. Ready December 1. $3

Jesus Christ Among the Ancient Americans

by Paul M. Hanson

$2

America's Lost Civilizations

by Harold I. Velt

This is an intensely interesting book about Book of Mormon lands. You'll find it literally packed with new and powerful proofs of Book of Mormon truth. It is illustrated with 20 photographs and drawings. $2

Missionary Sermon Studies

by F. Henry Edwards

Here are helpful foundation materials for fifty sermon topics chosen from among the fundamental doctrinal themes of our church faith and theology. They do not in any sense prescribe the character of the sermon nor limit the preacher. They make available to him, in most convenient form, the kind of texts and leading thoughts that he will need. This is Book Number 5 in the Priesthood Library. $2.50

Other Books in Priesthood Library:

- Restoration: A Study in Prophecy by Elbert A. Smith $2.25
- A Commentary on the Doctrine and Covenants by F. Henry Edwards $2.50
- Compendium of Faith and Doctrine by A. B. Phillips $2.25
- How to Increase Sunday Night Attendance by Herbert Scott $1.50

North of Heaven

by Biloine Whiting and Josephine Skelton

Here is a story of the followers of Alpheus Cutler and their trek to the place of prophecy where Father Cutler sent his people to wait the coming of the "Moses Man" who was to lead them back to Zion. Every RLDS family will want to read this fine story of the Cutlerites and of their beliefs and of the conversion to the Reorganization of a part of the original group who settled in Minnesota. $2.50

Other Storybooks:

- The Solid Rock by Gladys Mae Walter $1.75
- The Call at Evening by Jessie Ward LeBaron $1.25
- Joseph's City Beautiful by Mabel Sanford $1.50

Our Church's Story

A Pictorial Version of the Story of the Church by Henry Anderson

In cartoon picture form the story of our church is given. It begins with Young Joseph's bewilderment in trying to select a church to join, his going to the woods to seek God's advice, the organization of our church, the trials of the Saints, and finally the reorganization in 1860. 60c

The First Americans

A Pictorial Version of the Book of Mormon by Henry Anderson

This interesting and unusual book is the story of the Book of Mormon in cartoon pictures, beginning with Lehi's leaving Jerusalem and closing with the finishing of the records by Ether. The cover of the book is in full color. The book itself is black and white and may be used as a color book as well as a storybook. Something every child will treasure. 60c

THE THREE STANDARD BOOKS

Inspired Version of the Holy Scriptures

All bindings available

Cloth binding—a serviceable binding in a black pebble-grained cloth over stiff boards. The edges are sprinkled with a blue stain. This is the ideal binding for the student. It does not have family and personal record and presentation pages, nor is it available with a thumb index. $4.50

Limp leather binding—an attractive limp binding of split goatskin makes this Inspired Version semiflexible and easy to handle. The edges are gold over red stain, and the corners are rounded. This binding has family and personal record and presentation pages. $7; with thumb index, $8

Flexible leather binding—a beautiful flexible Morocco leather binding with overlapping covers, cloth lining, and gold over red edges. There is a ribbon marker and the gold embossed type on the cover makes this Bible a very attractive book. Presentation, family, and personal record pages. $9.50; with thumb index, $10.50

De luxe leather binding—has all the fine features of the flexible leather binding described above. Its beauty is further enhanced by an expertly finished, hand-tooled leather lining. $11; with thumb index, $12

Book of Mormon

Flexible leather binding to match the Inspired Version $5.75
Cloth binding $2

Doctrine and Covenants

Flexible leather binding to match the Inspired Version $5.50
Cloth binding $1.75

Inspired Version New Testament

Limp leather binding—$4; 10-24, $3.75 each; 25-49, $3.50 each; 50 or more, $3.25 each, plus postage.
Cloth binding—$2; 10-24, $1.75 each; 25-49, $1.50 each; 50 or more, $1.25 each, plus postage.

Large Type Book of Mormon

Cloth binding $5
Stiff leather binding with gold edges $10

• christmas is coming • christmas is coming • christmas is coming • christmas is coming •

Is Coming

• christmas is coming christmas is coming • christmas is coming • christmas is coming • christmas is coming

CHURCH MAGAZINES

SAINTS' HERALD

The official church magazine bringing you each week articles from leading church people, official notices from church headquarters, branch notes, home columns, and a special section for young people. A copy each week belongs in every church home. 1 year—$3.50; $3.75 in Canada; $4.50—other countries.

SPECIAL CHRISTMAS OFFERS:

Gift Subscriptions: 1st gift—$3.50; 2nd gift—$3; 3rd gift—$3. Combination, Saints' Herald and Daily Bread, 1 year each—4.50.

DAILY BREAD—

Our church's family devotions magazine. One page for each day's meditation—a scripture, prayer seed, a devotional reading, and a hymn meditation makes a wonderful gift for the whole family, comes once each month for a whole year. $1.50; $1.65—Canada; $1.85—other countries.

STEPPING STONES

is our 8-page story paper for junior and junior high children. A weekly with adventure stories, nature notes, puzzles, and jokes. A gift to come each week for 1 year. $1.25; $1.50—Canada; $1.75—other countries.

ZION'S HOPE

is our 4-page weekly story paper for the little people of kindergarten and primary age. Lots of illustrations and stories and poems. A gift to come each week for 1 year. $1; $1.25—Canada; $1.50—other countries.

A brand new GUIDE-LINES TO LEADERSHIP

beginning with the January, 1950, issue will be published every 2 months and will be divided into four sections: Priesthood, Women's Department, Church School, and Music. Subscription for 1 year (6 issues)—$1.50; $1.65—Canada; $1.85—other countries.

Ask for free gift cards.

Story of the Church

by Inez Smith Davis

Here is truly the story of the church, dramatic, filled with real people in living situations. Upon the social and religious background of the young American republic, it sketches the account of the experiences of Joseph Smith, the organization of the church in 1830, all of the intervening story between, and up to and including the modern history of the church. This book has proved its value through the steady demand for it by church members. $4.50

Book of Mormon Studies

by Thelona D. Stevens

This book directs the student in his reading and research of the Book of Mormon and supplementary sources. Some helpful side lights and comments by the author add to the permanent value of this book. $2

On Memory's Beam

by Elbert A. Smith

Here is a book that helps all to see, not only Brother Elbert's life, but a period in the development of the church, through his eyes, and with his kindness and comprehension. This book will take its place in the permanent literature of the church. $2

Between the Covers of the Book of Mormon

by Verda E. Bryant

In this lovely book for boys and girls, you will find 52 stories in consecutive arrangement taken from the narrative of the Book of Mormon. A gift for junior and junior-high ages. $1.25

Ministry in the Home

This is the second in a series of studies prepared under the supervision of the Department of Priesthood Education. It is published as a study text for use by the members of the priesthood, and covers "Ministry in Trouble and Sorrow," "Ministry to the Weak," "Ministry to the Young," and "Ministry to the Faithful." 50c

Building Latter Day Saint Family Life

Here are outlines for priesthood discussions on helping the family become socially responsible, economically sound, morally wholesome, and spiritually adequate. 50c

Through the West Door

by Roy A. Cheville

This book is a story of the vision and devotion of Graceland's founders, and the persistent effort of a president to gain recognition for the growing college. The perfect gift for Gracelanders, alums, and friends of our church college. $1.25

NEW SLIDE SETS

Jesus Christ Among the Ancient Americans

by Apostle Paul M. Hanson

This new set of missionary slides is the most authoritative material yet assembled on Book of Mormon Archæology. It consists of 40 slides, 36 in color and 4 in sepia, with a printed manual. Available December 1. $15

The Sacrament of the Lord's Supper

In the sacrament of the Lord's Supper, as in some other features of the gospel, we deal with a combination of physical symbols that relate to and express spiritual realities. The purpose of this aid is to help church members to a better understanding of the symbols and what they mean. 16 slides in full color and manual. Available November 18. $7

Ye Must Be Born Again

20 text slides with 8 color illustrations, including script. $6

The Gift of the Holy Spirit by the Laying on of Hands

15 colored slides with script. $6.50

christmas is coming • christmas is coming • christmas is coming • christmas is coming

Worship Suggestions for December

Theme for the Month: COME LET US ADORE HIM.

Theme Appreciation: A very rich heritage of beauty has grown up around the festival of Christmas, the celebration of Christ's birth. There is a depth of meaning underlying the wide range of festivity that gives solemnity even to the tinsel and show. Out of this heritage we find the inspiration and joy that come to us anew each year as it did of old when the first invitation was given, "O Come, Let Us Adore Him, Christ the Lord."

DECEMBER 4, 1949

THE ANGEL CHORUS SINGS

Picture: "Tidings of Great Joy," Plockhorst. Picture Interpretation: Christ and the Fine Arts, Maus, page 61.

Prelude: "Joy to the World," Saints' Hymnal, No. 170.

"Hark! the Herald Angels Sing," Saints' Hymnal, No. 136.

Call to Worship:

Ah! dearest Jesus, holy child,
Make thee a bed, soft, undefil'd,
Within my heart, that it may be
A quiet chamber kept for thee.

My heart for very joy doth leap,
My lips no more can silence keep;
I, too, must sing the joyful tongue,
That sweetest ancient cradle song,

"Glory to God in the highest heaven,
Who unto man his Son hath given."
—Martin Luther.

Leader: Ever since the time, centuries ago, when Christians began to celebrate the birth of Christ on a certain day, music and singing have been an important part of it—and rightly so, since this was the means of expressing joy that the angels used. Music is a universal language, and from all countries we gather our Christmas songs. One of the most joyful is "It Came Upon the Midnight Clear."

Hymn: "It Came Upon the Midnight Clear," Saints' Hymnal, No. 137.

Solo: "Christians Awake," Hymns for Junior Worship, No. 32 or "O Holy Night," by Adam.

Theme Thought: "The Message of the Angels." It was and ever will be a message of peace—the peace that passes our understanding. We still ask, "Can there be peace?" and the answer remains, "My peace, I leave with you." But only as his peace permeates the hearts of men can we establish "peace on earth."

Poem: "I Heard the Bells on Christmas Day," by Henry Wadsworth Longfellow.

Story: "When Christmas Comes," Newton, Christ and the Fine Arts, Maus, page 48, or "When the King Came," Hodges, Ibid., page 76.

Hymn: "Angels, From the Realms of Glory," Saints' Hymnal, No. 135.

Prayer: That God will help us rightly to remember the birth of Jesus, that we may share in the song of the angels, the gladness of the shepherds, and the worship of the Wise Men; that we may close the door of hate and open the door of love all over the world, giving kindness with every gift and good desires with every greeting. That God will deliver us from evil by the blessing Christ brings, teaching us to be merry with clean hearts. That the Christmas morning may make us happy to be God's children and the Christmas evening bring us to our beds with grateful thoughts, forgiving and forgiven, through Jesus Christ. (Thoughts adapted from Robert Louis Stevenson.)

Benediction: A prayer that the God of peace himself will give us peace at all times and in all ways.

DECEMBER 11, 1949

SHEPHERDS SEEK THE SAVIOR

Picture: "The Arrival of the Shepherds," Lerolle.

Prelude: "O Little Town of Bethlehem," Saints' Hymnal, No. 144.

Call to Worship:

Silent night, holy night, darkness flies, all is light;
Shepherds hear the angels sing, "Alleluia!
hail the King!
Christ the Savior is born,
Christ the Savior is born."
—Joseph Mohr, 1792.

Hymn: "While Humble Shepherds Watched Their Flocks," Saints' Hymnal, No. 139.

Prayer: Built on the thought that it was the humility of the shepherds which made them worthy to hear the angels' message and asking that we seek and be blessed with a humbleness of heart that the Christ may find room there.

Choral Scripture Reading:

Leader: And there were in the same country shepherds abiding in the field, keeping watch over their flock by night.

Girl: And lo, the angel of the Lord came upon them, and the glory of the Lord shone round about them; and they were sore afraid.

Boy: And the angel said unto them, Fear not: for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people.

Unison: For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Savior, which is Christ the Lord.

By MINERVA YERRINGTON

Leader: And this shall be a sign unto you; Ye shall find the babe wrapped in swaddling clothes, lying in a manger.

Girl: And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God, and saying, Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, goodwill to men.

Boy: And it came to pass, as the angels were gone away from them into heaven, the shepherds said one to another, Let us now go even unto Bethlehem, and see this thing which is come to pass, which the Lord hath made known unto us.

Unison: And they came with haste, and found Mary, and Joseph, and the babe lying in a manger.

Leader: And when they had seen it, they made known abroad the saying which was told them concerning the child.

Girl: And all they that heard it wondered at those things which were told them by the shepherds.

Boy: But Mary kept all these things, and pondered them in her heart.

Unison: And the shepherds returned, glorifying and praising God for all the things that they had heard and seen, as it was told unto them.

Picture Appreciation: Adapted from "The Arrival of the Shepherds," Christ and the Fine Arts, Maus, page 62.

The French artist, Lerolle, has given us in this picture of the "Nativity" the simplicity and ruggedness that makes it most natural and appealing. Notice the rough beams of the ceiling of the cave. See the dirt floor, the donkey standing by a tub of grain, and the piles of hay. See the shepherds in the doorway, too full of awe and wonder to enter immediately. One has dropped to his knee, another has raised his hand in amazement, and the younger in the rear has to stand on tiptoe for a better view of the little family. Mary, Joseph, and the baby are in the brightest part of the picture, but it is a natural light coming from the opening in the roof. Mary's attention is centered in the child, but Joseph turns to the shepherds.

Solo: "The First Noel," Saints' Hymnal, No. 146, verses 1, 2, and 4, or "The Shepherds' Carol," Hymns for Junior Worship.

Theme Thoughts: (To be developed by the speaker, not read.)

1. Wise Men saw a star, and shepherds heard the angels sing.

2. We have had a glimpse of what the world might be if we would but take the life of Jesus as a pattern for our own living.

Poem: "Long Years Ago," Leigh Brewer, Saints' Herald, November 6, 1948, or "The Shepherd Speaks," John Erskine, Christ and the Fine Arts, page 71.

Hymn: "Silent Night," Saints' Hymnal, No. 147.

Benediction: Including the plea that the Lord grant us that humbleness of heart which can make us worthy in his sight.

Other Stories: "The Angel and the Shepherds," Wallace, and "The Shepherds' Story," Gladden, both in Christ and the Fine Arts.

DECEMBER 18, 1949

WISE MEN FOLLOW THE STAR

Picture: "The Worship of the Magi," Hofmann.

Prelude: "We Three Kings," English carol.

Call and Worship: Chorus and verses 3, 4, hymn No. 142.

Introduction to Hymn: We have mentioned the rich heritage of Christmas music gathered from all countries and all ages. This morning we use one contributed by a poet of our own church, Elbert A. Smith, who wrote the words while his cousin, Audentia Anderson, composed the music. This hymn, "Starlight and Song," brings us the same beautiful, age-old picture that can be told in as many ways as there are poets to express it.

Hymn: "Starlight and Song," Saints' Hymnal, No. 148.

(A selected quartet might be used with the congregation joining in the final chorus.)

Prayer.

Scripture Reading:

And it came to pass also, that a new star did appear, according to the word.—III Nephi 1: 24.

Read all of Matthew 3: 1, 2, 7-11.

Theme Thoughts: There is a story told of a king's two sons. Each was given the charge of taking a sack of gold to the angel of Christ so that his work might be carried on. The one, disgruntled from the beginning, made haste and left his brother behind—refusing the beggar, ignoring the blind, passing by the foreigner and the needy children. The other stopped to lighten the burden of each unfortunate that he met until when he reached the destination he was himself spent, as well as the sack of gold which he had started with. The one opened his bag for the angel only to find that it had changed to a bag of stones. The other, presenting his empty sack, received the commendation, "Inasmuch as ye did it unto the least of these my brethren, ye did it unto me."

Special Music: "There's a Beautiful Star," New Hymnal for American Youth, or "Sing to the Star," Zion's Praises, No. 172, or "A Song of Joy," Zion's Praises, No. 191.

Stories:

"The Prophecy of Samuel," Book of Mormon, pages 600-602.

"The Star," Kingsley, Christ and the Fine Arts, page 83.

"The Other Wise Man," Henry van Dyke, Abridged in Zion's League Manual, Number II, page 53.

"The Gift," David DeForest Burrell, Saints' Herald, November 21, 1942.

Poems:

"Who Are the Wise Men," B. Y. Williams, Christ and the Fine Arts.

"The Gifts," Grace Noll Crowell.

"They Gave Him Their Treasure," Zion's League Manual, Number II, page 51.

Hymn: "As With Gladness Men of Old," Saints' Hymnal, No. 143.

Prayer.

Benediction.

DECEMBER 25, 1949

CHRIST IS BORN

Picture: "Sistine Madonna," Sanzio Raphael.

Picture Appreciation: Zion's League Manual, Number II, page 50.

Prelude: "The First Noel," Saints' Hymnal, No. 146.

"Away in a Manger," Ibid., No. 149.

Call to Worship:

Love came down at Christmas
Love all lovely, love divine;
Love was born at Christmas,
Stars and angels gave the sign.

—Christina G. Rossetti.

Response:

O Holy Child of Bethlehem, descend to us,
we pray;
Cast out our sin and enter in, be born in us today.
We hear the Christmas angels the great glad tidings tell;
Oh, come to us, abide with us, Our Lord
Immanuel.

(May be sung if desired—fourth stanza, Saints' Hymnal, No. 144.)

Hymn: "Oh, Come, All Ye Faithful," Saints' Hymnal, No. 145.

This is probably the oldest of our Christmas hymns. It has a dignity and grandeur that easily places it among the classics, and we know it was sung for centuries in the Latin tongue.

Prayer:

Scripture and Song:

Leader: The people that walked in darkness have seen a great light; they that dwell in the land of the shadow of death, upon them hath the light shined. . . . For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given; and the government shall be upon his shoulder; and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The mighty God, the everlasting Father; The Prince of Peace.—Isaiah 9: 2, 6.
Solo: Saints' Hymnal, No. 134 (Traveler)
Watchman, tell us of the night, what its signs of promise are.

Second Solo: (Watchman)

Traveler, o'er yon mountain's height, see that glory-beaming star.

Solo: (Traveler)

Watchman, doth its beauteous ray aught of joy or hope foretell?

Second Solo: (Watchman)

Traveler, yes, it brings the day, promised day of Israel.

Leader: And behold, he shall be born of Mary at Jerusalem, which is the land of our forefathers, she being a virgin, a precious and chosen vessel, who shall be overshadowed, and conceive by the power of the Holy Ghost, and bring forth a son, yea, even the Son of God.—Alma 5: 9.

Solo: (Divide the second stanza of "Watchman" as was the first.)

Leader: And she brought forth her firstborn son, and wrapped him in swaddling clothes and laid him in a manger: because there was no room for them in the inn. . . . For unto you is born this day in the city of David, a Savior, which is Christ the Lord.—Luke 2: 7, 11.

Solo: (Divide the third stanza of "Watchman" as was the first.)

Theme Appreciation: Christ was born to the world for a sublime purpose—that we might have a perfect pattern of life and win for ourselves salvation.

Though Christ a thousand times
In Bethlehem be born,
If he is not born in thee
Thy soul is all forlorn.

—Angelus Silesius,

Zion's League Manual, No. II

Solo: "To Us a Child of Hope Is Born," Saints' Hymnal, No. 140.

Hymn: "There's a Song in the Air," Saints' Hymnal, No. 138.

Prayer: May include these thoughts: We come with gratitude in our hearts for the gift of God's Son and the joy of the first Christmas. We deeply desire that God will help us to observe the occasion in a worthy manner, that in our giving we may reflect his Spirit and in our praise be mindful also of our living—that Christ may be born and dwell in our hearts continually.

Prayer: Including the thought that the Christian spirit is the Christmas spirit carried through the whole year, with a petition that we partake of it in abundance that our supply may not run low.

Responsive Reading: (Substitute singing quartet, if desired.)

Leader: It is a good thing to give thanks unto the Lord, and to sing praises unto thy name, O most High.

Group: Hark! the herald angels sing,
Glory to the newborn King;
Peace on earth, and mercy mild,
God and sinners reconciled!

Leader: To show forth thy loving kindness in the morning, and thy faithfulness every night.

Group: Joyful, all ye nations, rise,
Join the triumph of the skies;
With the angelic host proclaim,
Christ is born in Bethlehem.

Leader: O Lord, how great are thy works!
And thy thoughts are very deep.

Group: Hark! the herald angels sing,
Glory to the newborn King.

Question Time

Any sincere question from our readers will receive consideration from the editors. If it is of general interest, it will be referred to the Question Time panel, and the answer will be printed. Please keep the question short—fifty words or less should be sufficient. Your personal problems, the answers to which concern you alone, will be answered by letter. Address questions to Herald Editors rather than panel members. We shall try to take all questions in the order they are received. Be patient, there may be several ahead of yours. Only those questions sent by contributors will appear here.—EDITOR.

QUESTION

Is the member who fails to give up tobacco and coffee or tea actually infringing on any divine law in the sense that he or she is a discredit to God's church?

F. L.

Arizona

ANSWER

There is nothing I know of in the Bible which explicitly states that those who use tobacco or coffee are breaking a divine law. Perhaps the strongest statement in contemporary Scripture is that found in section 119 of the Doctrine and Covenants. While this section was addressed "to the elders of the church," our reference is taken from the third paragraph which begins with, "The elders and men of the church should . . . avoid the use of tobacco and be not addicted to strong drink in any form."

The Word of Wisdom (Doctrine and Covenants 86), which always enters into a discussion of this kind, states in the first paragraph that "strong drinks are not for the belly . . . tobacco is not for the body, neither for the belly, and is not good for man . . . hot drinks are not for the body or belly." Some will point out that one phrase of the foreword says the section is given "not by commandment or constraint." While this is true, we ought to give more emphasis to the clause which states that it was given "by revelation . . . showing forth the order and will of God."

There are many who contend that coffee and tea are included in the "hot drinks," while others believe that because of their potency as stimulants they could be classed as "strong drinks."

We are aware of the fact that doctors tell us that tobacco, coffee, and tea are harmful to the body. We believe that our Heavenly Father expects us to be diligent stewards of our physical tabernacles. We have been promised physical blessings if we abide by the laws of health. It would therefore seem to be an infringement upon the laws of eternal life to knowingly ignore or fail to comply with the principles pertaining thereto. By the same token, if we are guilty of infringing in any degree on the principles of life which God has unalterably set in force, we are to that degree a discredit to his church.

We would not ally ourselves with the faddists who place narrow interpretations on the Word of Wisdom and who condemn everyone with a different interpretation. To be sure there are many other laws of health that are equally important with the foregoing. It remains for every person to be responsible for his individual stewardship in the application of eternal laws in his life.

With the background of all we have said, let us not forget that part of Doctrine and Covenants 58:6 which says, "It is not meet that I should command in all things, for he that is compelled in all things, the same is a slothful and not a wise servant; wherefore he receiveth no reward . . . But he that doeth not anything until he is commanded, and receiveth a commandment with doubtful heart, and keepeth it with slothfulness, the same is damned."

A. Orlin Crowover.

QUESTION

Should we use unleavened bread and wine of our own make exclusively in our Communion service?

Missouri

P. W. M.

ANSWER

A good reference on this subject is Doctrine and Covenants 26:1.

It mattereth not what ye shall eat or what ye shall drink, when ye partake of the sacrament, if it so be that ye do it with an eye single to my glory; remembering unto the Father my body which was laid down for you, and my blood which was shed for the remission of your sins; wherefore a commandment I give unto you, that you shall not purchase wine, neither strong drink of your enemies; wherefore ye shall partake of none, except it is made new among you; yea, in this my Father's kingdom which shall be built upon the earth.

Another reference is Doctrine and Covenants 86:1: "This should be wine; yea, pure wine of the grape of the vine, of your own make."

From Volume 17 of the Herald, May 1, 1870, we quote the following from an article by Joseph Smith:

The emblems should be prepared beforehand and should be good, sweet bread and the pure wine of the grape, if wine is used. When wine is used it should be made by the Saints, of the pure juice of the grape. Water, or water poured upon raisins and then expressed, may be used in the place of wine, when wine cannot be had.

We know of nothing in the Scriptures that says we should use unleavened bread in our Communion service. It was a custom among the Jews to use unleavened bread, but it was also their custom to use fermented wine. Even though the Passover feast was most important in their religious life, they did not associate it with the Savior they never accepted. In all due respect to their beliefs, there seems to be no reason why we should be bound by the customs of a people who never accepted our Lord.

Quite aside from the issue of unleavened bread, it seems most desirable that our people shall bake their own bread, whenever practicable, as well as make their own wine. This not only assures that the emblems shall be fresh and pure, but the aesthetic and psychological value received by those who prepare them is great indeed. Many of our fine women have found joy and rich satisfaction in the preparation of the emblems and in the care of the Communion service.

A. ORLIN CROWOVER.

QUESTION

Is it proper for women to wear bathing caps to keep their hair dry when being baptized?

Kansas

W. A. C.

ANSWER

It would seem undesirable, if not improper, to wear bathing caps when being baptized. The aim in baptism, among other things, is not to keep dry, but to get wet.

Baptism is symbolic of a physical and spiritual cleansing, and there is no better way for one to be cleansed than by water coming in contact with all parts of his body.

Candidates for baptism have a very presentable appearance when they are attired in white and remain bareheaded.

If we are not careful, we might be tempted to alter the form and procedure in baptism and conceivably become victim to one of the substitute forms used in some of the other churches.

A. ORLIN CROWOVER.

Letters

Two Miracles

I was converted the first time I heard a sermon preached by a minister of the Reorganized Church. Although I didn't know everything about the church then, I felt the nearness of Christ and knew that he was calling for me through the elder. The day before I was baptized, I was thinking about "signs following the believer." As I desired a sign, one was given. A teakettle of boiling water was upset and the contents drenched my clothes. My mother began screaming and tearing my clothing off, but I told her, "I'm not burned." I felt no ill effects at all.

Once during a tornado and hailstorm, as I and the children were huddled in the cellar for protection, I kept thinking of two little pigs in an unprotected pen. After the storm subsided, I went out to the pen and was amazed to see them perfectly dry and unharmed. Large hailstones were banked against the sides of the pen, but none had hit the little pigs.

Recently we met at the home of Elder Buller in Parker, South Dakota, and listened to a sermon by Elder Hillman. It was an inspiring service and a real ministry to the isolated Saints. I thank the Lord that, despite my age, I am able to walk without "growing weary" and attend such meetings.

JESSIE M. BAILEY

Box 6
Sioux Falls, South Dakota

Letter of Testimony

I was born on a small farm in southern Sweden on February 25, 1871, and grew to young manhood there. When I finished public school at the age of fourteen, I was taught Luther's Catechism and Bible history by the parish priest. He was a sincere teacher, giving the best he had. Before I took Communion, he stressed the importance of my being worthy, and I well remember my earnest endeavor to be in an acceptable condition to receive a witness. I was much disappointed when I did not obtain what I was expecting.

When I was seventeen, I came with an older brother to America, locating first in St. Paul and later moving to Minneapolis. Life was not always pleasant, as I was ignorant of the English language and ill-equipped to compete with the older men in some of the hard labor I was required to do. Occasionally someone at the boardinghouse where I was staying would mention Joseph Smith and his gold Bible. Whenever I heard this, something seemed to whisper, "You will soon know more about it."

After my marriage I began to receive spiritual manifestations such as dreams and visions. I was working as a motorman on the street railways of Minneapolis when I was asked to pick a run for Saturday with an English-Canadian, Walter Tutty, who was a member of the Reorganized Church. He gave me a tract, and as soon as I started to read it, I knew I had found something different. I began to attend the preaching services held in private homes by various elders and was much impressed by what I heard. It was a happy day for me when I was baptized; everything seemed peaceful and harmonious. I had one unrighteous habit to get rid of, however. I had used tobacco ever since boyhood, and although I had tried several times to give it up, I was never successful. About a month after my baptism, I dreamed that I was putting something in my mouth which had a horrible taste. As I did so, I heard a voice say, "It is unclean." I knew that the unclean thing was tobacco, so on arising the next morning I went to the kitchen door and tossed out the tobacco I had. Since then I have not had the slightest desire to use it.

About ten years ago I had a remarkable vision. I seemed to be walking in a narrow passageway when a large personage with a heavy, rounded, black beard came toward me. I was seized with fear until he took my right hand. Then I was given to understand that it was the Savior, and my soul was filled with joy. When I read an article by Roy Weldon in the May 1, 1948, issue of the Herald, I found that natives of Mexico believe their God (Quetzalcoatl) to be a white man with a heavy, round beard. Harold Velt's article in the Herald for July 17, 1948, describes him as being a white man of great stature.

These descriptions fit the personage I saw, which makes my vision even more assuring. I believe I have seen the Savior as he appeared to the inhabitants of this continent, following his resurrection.

I can testify that the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints is indeed the true church of God, having an authoritative priesthood with all the gifts and blessings promised by the Father to those who keep his commandments.

ANTON J. PETERSON

4130 Bryant Avenue North
Minneapolis 12, Minnesota

Helped By Prayer

I want to thank all who remembered my husband in prayer. His health is much improved. God has been merciful to us, and I want to learn more about the church so that I can spend my life in his service. I ask an interest in the prayers of the Saints that I may be able to overcome my weaknesses and do the Master's will.

VELMA CLARK

The Plains, Ohio

From a Member in Jamaica

I have received the Herald since July, and I am thankful for it. No one here in Jamaica seems to have ever heard of the Reorganized Church. I find the Herald helpful and would not want to be without it. I particularly enjoy the sermons and letters. I am trying to tell others the gospel story, but it is hard to get them to believe God still reveals his will to men. I ask an interest in the prayers of the Saints.

IRKSIE LEILA YATES

6 Sullivan Avenue
Constant Spring Post Office
Jamaica,
British West Indies

Enjoys Reading "Herald"

I very much enjoy reading the articles in the Herald. They keep me informed of trends and events which I would not otherwise have a chance to find out about. There are no other members in this city, but I hope there soon will be. My wife and I attended the district conference at Buchanan, Michigan, and enjoyed it. We hope we shall be able to meet more often with the Saints and help in the work whenever we can.

Some of my friends have read The Call at Evening and spoken highly of it, even recommending it to their friends. Perhaps in this way I can let my light shine into the lives of others.

WAYNE BURGESS.

406 Kenwood
LaPorte, Indiana

Note of Appreciation

My children and I wish to express our appreciation for the prayers and other remembrances of the Saints during the illness and death of our husband and father, Guy H. Sevy.

MRS. G. H. SEVY AND FAMILY

Route 2
Independence, Missouri

From an Isolated Saint

We are isolated from our own church, so we attend the United Church. We try to do as one of our elders suggested—pick out the good and leave the rest. Elder W. J. Cornish was here last October for a week and was given permission to preach two nights in the United Church, the rest of the time in homes, but very few came to hear him. We were baptized in 1916 by Brother Wilson. We are glad to get the Herald; it is good to know the church is prospering in other places. May God bless all who are working for the cause of the Restored Gospel.

MR. AND MRS. J. W. SPARLING.

Spy Hill,
Saskatchewan,
Canada.

Needs Books for Missionary Work

I now have more than a hundred books that I lend to people as I walk through the country, checking the gas line (about 400 miles a month). I will appreciate receiving other church books and literature to use in this way if anyone cares to send such. Two people were baptized recently after reading some of these books.

I ask the Saints to remember me in prayer that I may have strength and spiritual guidance in my work, and that those dear to me may also receive guidance.

GEORGE H. ROBERTSON

120 West Sixth
Hutchinson, Kansas

In Praise of Reunion

The reunion at Wilburton was certainly an inspiration to all of us who attended. Last year the task of building Zion seemed impossible, but since reunion I sincerely feel that we can do it. Of course, I mean with God directing us as he is now.

MRS. HOMER NEECE

340 East Washington,
McAlister, Oklahoma

Correction

The second line of the first paragraph of the letter by Mrs. Mable Miller, which appeared on page 22 of the October 10 Herald, is incorrect. It should state that following the deaths of Mrs. Miller's husband George and Granville Andes, another family moved away from Wallowa, Oregon, leaving only one other member, Mrs. Miller, and her two children.

Will You Strike the First Blow?

YOU'VE MET the neighborhood bad boy, I'm sure. He may live across the street or up the block. He looks at you out of hostile eyes. He is suspicious of your smile and perhaps repays your kindness with a behind-your-back-run through your flowers on his bike. He seems always to be in trouble.

Perhaps you regard him with self-righteous indignation after such a brush with him and forbid your children to "have anything to do with that naughty child!" You feel your duty is done when you thus "protect" your youngster from what you consider a damaging social contact.

Have you thought of your own responsibility toward this little one? Have you stopped to realize that unless there is someone somewhere who cares enough to help, this belligerent child will grow into a warped, bitter, twisted individual—another problem for society?

Before you lash out at him in reproach, before you condemn him as a "bad boy," try to remember that the fault is not his. Somewhere in his environment things are not healthy or normal.

PHILLIP, our neighborhood bad boy, is a product of a broken home, a mother who drinks, and grandparents who fumblingly feel that the material things they give him will make him happy. He has a shiny bike, a shinier wagon. He has an electric train, a boat to sail in the lake, nice clothes. Yet he is a miserable, mixed-up little boy because there is no one who understands that he needs love and attention the worst way. No one wants to understand, really. It takes too much time.

He is seven now, big for his age, and intelligent. What will he be at seventeen? Will those shifty, sullen eyes look for something spectacular to do to startle the people he has grown to hate because they rejected him? Will he be another tragic headline in the newspaper in his bid for the attention he is starved for? Possibly. Or he may merely be another maladjusted person, bumbling through life, causing others misery and unhappiness that are still not nearly as deep as his own.

JUST NOW, as I look out my window, Phillip is backed against the house across the street—his house. Facing him from the sidewalk is a group of five children, some bigger than he. Some are throwing rocks, some hurling taunts. It would be hard to say which will hurt more. Phillip is trapped—much as a small animal hunted in the forest. It is terrible to be so alone, tragic to be so unwanted because we cannot make an adjustment such as the world feels we should.

And is this the way we want our children to behave? Do we, by our own actions, encourage this barbarism? Perhaps not consciously, but children are mimics, and this is the pattern which is spreading over the world. The many against the few. The strong bullying the weak.

A single kind word won't turn the trick. The deep-rooted suspicions of these unfortunate misfits take time to dissolve. The whole keynote of such little lives is mistrust—and why should it be otherwise? They have been denied so much love and understanding, have been

November

Mother Nature has changed her gorgeous frock for apparel more somber—monotones of grey, tan, and the in-between. Birds have careened their good-by; and squirrels have hidden those last nuts in countless places. Store-rooms bulge with summer wealth; fall chores are finished, and with the storm windows on and winter warmth arranged for, we get that cozy, tucked-in feeling.

We are ready for the day that may be "cold and dark and dreary." Given a fireplace, a comfy chair, our favorite magazine or book, and the day is lost—or is it?

It is good to have November sober because our thoughts are sober as we evaluate our many blessings. In the midst of peace and abundance, with bowed heads we ask in all humility for strength, good judgment, and clear-thinking to help us chart our course for another year.

—Lula Carmichael

By LOUISE SCOTT WRIGLEY

betrayed by those who should have given freely of such intangibles.

For the sake of our own children, for the sake of the safety of this child's future, we must try to understand and help. We shouldn't be discouraged if we seem to fail at first. We can assist these poorly adjusted children to find happiness, to assume a normal, healthy role in life. And isn't this a part of the Zioniac plan?

Picked From the Periodicals

By Aarona Kohlman

HERE ARE SOME suggestions for reading in the October magazines. Subject matter has a wide range, and almost anyone can find among these articles something of special interest.

If you need proof that new experiences, even fame, can begin at any age, read the refreshing article by artist Norman Rockwell, "Grandma Moses," in McCall's.

"How Does It Feel to Die?" McCall's, is not in the least morbid, but instead distinctly hopeful and reassuring. It is a symposium of the beliefs of several outstanding doctors.

"Lunches to Pack and Carry," Good Housekeeping, will be of great help to the many women who must prepare lunches.

For those who have a detailed interest in furniture and its history, there is a thirty-eight-page furniture chart in Good Housekeeping. It is good to save for reference.

"New Looks for Old," Parents' Magazine, should be used by any parent whose child needs plastic surgery done. It is informative and helpful.

"When Is a Child Secure?" Parents' Magazine, is good, sound reading for all parents.

"You Are Tougher Than You Think," American, should almost stop complaint about physical ailments.

If you have children, by all means read "Where Do Teen-agers Get Their Sex Education?" Ladies' Home Journal. Don't think it isn't talking about your child.

"Do Your Children Gripe About Chores?" Family Circle, gives practical suggestions for dealing with this ever-present problem.

The Home Column

Palenque

(Continued from page 10.)

mocks in a small cottage at night and were privileged to buy and eat our meals with the family. We were most courteously treated by this good caretaker.

It was with a sense of sadness that we stood on the highest pyramid and tried to imagine this beautiful city as it must have existed years ago. Some of the Mayas claim that this is the place that their bearded white God, Kukulcan, first appeared. The ruins themselves show different civilizations. Particularly is one impressed with an early civilization that had culture, refinement, and peace, with no indication of pagan worship. Could it be that the glyphs on the huge slabs in the Temple of the Law are the law given to the ancients by their Kukulcan, who they believe came down from the sky and lived among them for a period of time, teaching them industry, agriculture, love, brotherhood, stewardship, peace, etc.? Then one notices the changes in the decorations made by a later sinful and phallic worshipping people. Could this have been the cause of their destruction? Well might we learn a lesson from these empty ancient ruins, and build our civilization only upon the principles of Kukulcan—the Christ!

We returned to Mexico City as we had entered the area, by horse to Palenque village and Emiliano Zapata. From this latter town, we went again by plane to Villa Hermosa and Coatzacoalcos.

BESIDES THE THRILL of being on the site of these ancient cities, the trip gave us some contact with the jungle. The woods are alive with noise and movement—little chattering monkeys that swing from tree to tree as one approaches, a large number of beautiful birds, parrots, canaries, etc., some with huge bills. There are gorgeous wild flowers, including the orchid. The guide mentioned that there were a few mountain lions and snakes in the area, but we saw no live ones; we learned that they are rare and do not attack humans unless they are provoked or smell fresh blood. The sounds and sights in the jungle at night are well worth the experience—the chatter and whine of the little monkeys, the love-call roar of the huge saraguato monkey, and the reply by the female with her plaintive little bark, the twitter of birds, the ever-present firefly, the rustle of the leaves on the trees and the murmur of the little river as it runs over the stones. If there is a full moon, the experience is one never to be forgotten.

I expressed appreciation to Senor Fonz for the most cordial friendship of his village, and he replied that it is because of the legacy received from the ancient Mayas that they open their hearts to strangers and give them gifts. This they had done with the Spanish Conquerors but were not comprehended. Mr. Fonz presented me with a fur billfold, made out of the skin of the lake beaver. I shall always prize it as one of my most choice possessions, particularly because it recalls to my memory a charming little village, Emiliano Zapata, on the banks of the beautiful Usumacinto River, and its friendly inhabitants.

Forget-Me-Nots

Beside the gates of Paradise
There blooms a garden full of flowers,
The which she comes oftentimes to tend
And spend exceeding happy hours.
She plucks the blue forget-me-nots
And casts them on an earth-bound breeze,
That I, who never shall forget,
In evening prayer upon my knees
May feel them brush against my cheek,
Like finger tips, and hear her say,
"I wait beside the garden gate
Till God shall bid you come this way."

ELBERT A. SMITH.

Helping Men Own Farms

(Continued from page 11.)

full-time farm can be more quickly purchased. This plan has too often proved fatal to the family as far as the church is concerned. Those who attempt part-time farming along with their urban work too often lose sight of their one-time objectives. The extra work involved leaves less time for the church, extra income is invested on the little "show place," and too often the spare time is spent at week-end resorts. Those areas of part-time farmers surrounding our cities have in recent surveys proved to be the poorest church attenders.

THE "HELPING MEN OWN FARMS" program will be more successful in the community-building plan if there is some family selection made in these projects. The requirements should include: (1) Families with sufficient capital to purchase (or rent as a step toward ownership), equip, and develop the farm. It has been found that families who borrow for the initial payment are not the most successful. If a family really wants to farm, it should first learn to earn and save the down payment. This is an educational process, and provides discipline for carrying the load afterward. A double mortgage is in itself discouraging and the family is likely to lose everything. (2) Those interested should have had experience in farming, especially in that area and type of farming. They should be good, reliable, hard-working people. (3) The farm family should have a favorable attitude toward life (especially farm life) and the church. This includes those who have had successful marriage experiences, who are good neighbors and have the confidence of their present neighbors, who are tolerant and willing to compromise. (4) Young married families make the best adjustment when moved from one area to another; however, young people who do not display sufficient interest in rural life prove, too often, to be unstable. Older people find the adjustment more difficult to make.

The co-operative-minded family will help to make the community a better place in which to live by their mutual aid and by interest displayed in co-operative marketing and purchasing. Like the Jews who successfully built communities in Palestine, this church experiment needs: (1) ideological motives (2) a sense of historical mission, and (3) satisfactions of a spiritual character. These will contribute much to community-building for the rural church.

Theological Conflicts

By GEORGE SHOEMAKER

DO YOU HAVE to close your eyes to certain theological conflicts to be a Christian and a Latter Day Saint? Can you honestly weigh the probabilities of a theological question and come out with an answer which seems to have no Scriptural backing? And if your answer has no Scriptural backing, are you or should you be willing to defend it?

Let us look squarely into questions that have lost many members in the ranks of Christians in centuries past and will continue to do so in time to come unless we can find the "truth"—the truth which will stand the test of time and the best investigations of man.

For example: look to the story of the creation. By reading Genesis we know that Lucifer rebelled and became the devil who was to provide us with the "opposition in all things" (II Nephi 1: 81). But was Lucifer predestined to fall? The Scriptures say no! It was his own free agency that caused him to act as he did, and in doing so he took one third of the hosts of heaven with him. But even by rebelling against God, we find that he is bringing about the purposes of the creation. Was the devil so shortsighted he couldn't see that his rebellion was only going to help man exercise his God-given free agency? In effect, he offers us the powers of creativity by his "opposition in all things." But what about him? Did he think he could succeed against the forces of heaven? Was his a calculated risk? If it were, he is certain to come out on the short end of the deal because section 28 of the Doctrine and Covenants says so along with the Book of Revelation. Toynbee offers a little more food for thought along this line.

In Job, Faust, and the New Testament alike, it is suggested, or even declared outright, that the wager [between Lucifer and God] cannot be won by the Devil; that the Devil, in meddling with God's work, cannot frustrate but only serve the purpose of God, who remains master of the situation all the time and gives the Devil rope for the Devil to hang himself. Then has the Devil been cheated? Did God accept a wager which He knew He could not lose? That would be a hard saying; for if it were true, the whole transaction would have been a sham. An encounter which was no encounter could not produce the consequences of an encounter.¹

¹Arnold J. Toynbee, A Study of History, Abridgment by D. C. Somervell (New York: Oxford University Press, 1947), page 65.

In a little different vein we can reasonably assume that Lucifer can read II Nephi 1: 111-114 wherein we find these words:

And now, behold, if Adam had not transgressed, he would not have fallen; but he would have remained in the garden of Eden. And all things which were created must have remained in the same state which they were, after they were created; and they must have remained for ever, and had no end. And they would have had no children; wherefore, they would have remained in a state of innocence, having no joy, for they knew no misery; doing no good, for they knew no sin.

But behold, all things have been done in the wisdom of him who knoweth all things.

Surely the devil knew that by tempting Eve he was participating in the whole procreation of mankind, for the Book of Mormon says had not Eve been tempted she and Adam would have had no children and thus the plan of salvation would have been frustrated. The old devil apparently missed an opportunity there. He could have fouled things up good then by not tempting Eve, and he could have saved himself a lot of work because of the trouble he must go to now to keep us all in hot water.

ALL THIS LEADS us to wonder if God might not have created or predestined Lucifer to rebel. For had not Lucifer fallen, Christ would not have had to come to be our Mediator and Savior. Or suppose Christ at the last hour in Gethsemane had stolen away? Not likely, but a consideration. Would that ever have fouled things up! Peter and the remaining ten apostles weren't too certain that Jesus was the Christ anyway. But, of course, Christ submitted to the Crucifixion and by so doing caused man to worship him by attempting to emulate his actions and teachings ever since. All of this leads us to wonder if Christ, along with Moses and John the Baptist and a host of others (maybe even you and I), weren't predestined to a certain extent—at least as to the time they were born. Then the big question remains, what does this do to our free agency? Would this put free agency in jeopardy?

But let us consider another type of theological conflict. Reading the

New Horizons

Scriptures is done all too seldom by most of us today, but then we cannot help noting or overlooking a few seeming contradictions. For instance, in Section 23:2 we find a revelation to Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery.

"... go speedily unto the church which is in Colesville, Fayette, and Manchester, and they shall support thee; and I will bless them both spiritually and temporally; but if they receive thee not, I will send upon them a cursing instead of a blessing."

In this paragraph did the Lord wish to keep Joseph and Oliver from knowing the outcome of their journey? Was he not sure? Or could it be that Joseph's archaic language lends itself to a faulty interpretation today? At least it is confusing.

WE MUST take a stand for what we believe and understand, but admittedly we do have obstacles and problems. We should be a thinking people who are willing to tackle the most difficult problems through study, meditation, and prayer.

How many of the following problems have you wrestled with? I hope you meet with better success than I have had at times. If there are any you have not studied, why not do so now?

What is the nature of God? Is it naive to believe in a personal God?

Inspiration: what is it?

What shall we believe: evolution or the Genesis story—or are they the same?

How much do we know of God's purpose of creation?

Were Christ, Lucifer, Adam, Moses, John the Baptist, and Joseph Smith predestined to do the work they did? If so, how much or how little? Why? How does all mankind fit in between predestination and free agency?

It has been my sole purpose to stimulate thought and not stultify it. We gain spiritual stature only as we exercise our spiritual capacities.

Mrs. Missionary Serves Abroad

By BILOINE WHITING

(NOTE: This is the first in a series of articles on Europe by Biloine Whiting who is spending three months there. The next, "Report From Germany," will appear in this section soon.)

SO YOU WANT to marry a missionary! Before committing yourself to a life of Zion's League parties and playing branch hostess, follow for a week in the footsteps of two young women who have successfully combined the jobs of being wives, mothers, and missionaries.

At present both are living at Number 2, Annastraat, Rotterdam, Holland. Longest resident in the house (which is our largest piece of church property in Holland) is Mrs. Alma Theys, wife of Seventy Eugene Theys. While feeding year-old Sheryl her formula, Alma recited the history of her life in the mission house.

When Alma and Gene Theys and Al and Twyla Scherer arrived in Holland two years ago, they shared the corner mission property with a third Dutch family. The three families, which included two children, did all of their cooking on a two-burner hot plate. The kitchen, with the hot plate, was on the first floor, and Alma was on the second. Three times a day for six months she carried dishes and groceries for their meals down the stairs, cooked the meal, and carried it back upstairs where they ate in their own rooms.

Two families now live in the house. Downstairs Seventy and Mrs. Glen Johnson occupy a large living room, dining room, kitchen, and bedroom for themselves and their seven-year-old daughter, Glenda Fern. Also on the first floor is a mission room for meetings, a patio that doubles as an altar for weddings, and the mission office.

Alma and Gene Theys with their two children, Michael and Sheryl, live in four rooms on the second floor. On the third is a bedroom for travelers and a laundry. To the missionaries' wives, these accommodations seem luxurious. However, there is no hot running water, no refrigerator, only one bathroom for the whole house, and no central heating. The ceilings are about thirteen feet high, and each family has a stove that warms only one room. Shopping is not done in one weekly visit to a super-market. Instead, the two women must visit a green grocer for vegetables, a dry grocer for canned goods, a baker for bread, a butcher for meat, a store which sells cheese exclusively (without which no Dutch meal is complete), and a milk and eggs' store. Until late in September they had no sweeper with which to clean the rugs, and to add to the task of maintaining the house, they had to scrub the outside ledges under the windows once a week. It seems that scrubbing ledges is a neighborhood custom.

BESIDES REARING CHILDREN, keeping up the house, and learning the Dutch language, they have church duties as well. Alma takes the lead in planning weddings, decorating the mission room for the ceremony, and preparing punch for the reception. She used her own dishes for the serving until Anton Compier was married and gave eighty glasses to the mission house. Zion's League activities are held in the building as well as women's meetings and branch parties. In addition to the inevitable cleaning-up after such affairs, Alma often provides the food. Her rooms are decorated with drapes she made herself, and she makes many of her children's clothes.

In England, where Alice Johnson lived most of the past two years, she took on the duties of music director

Briefs

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI.—Dale Evan Armstrong, son of Elmer L. and Maxine (Webb) Armstrong was blessed Sunday morning at the Stone Church, October 16 by Elders L. J. Richards and Glaude Smith.

The White Mask Players presented to the community free of charge a fine performance of "Joan of Lorraine" on the nights of October 10, 11, 13, and 14. This was the first pre-Stone Church Little Theater as the first presentation of the season. Capacity crowds were present each night. Principle performers included Steven Black, Lea Black, Dan Belcher, Leslie Kohlman, Joe Crum, and Richard Maloney.

The elderly church women of Independence have organized themselves into a fellowship group, the Ladies' Zion Society.

PORT HOPE, MICHIGAN.—Patriarch J. J. Ledsworth baptized four persons into the church through the means of evangelistic services he held in the Huron Center Branch. Two of these services were preaching, and seven were cottage meetings. These services were also the means of refreshing all those who attended.

JOHNSON CITY, NEW YORK.—This branch accepted an invitation to enter the "Folk and Religious Festival" presented by various religious and cultural groups located in Binghamton, New York. This program and provided special music for each Sunday's service. A girl's trio met every week end in her home, and she conducted a mixed quartet as well as the choir. After she had revived the women's department, which had ceased to function during the war, the women met every week in her home. The Zion's League filled her time and her house every Monday evening, and when she wasn't preparing refreshments for the meetings, she was giving speeches at district women's meetings, coping with rationing, and caring for her three-story mission house.

Yet, if you are like these missionaries' wives, you would enjoy the job. You would make visitors feel they had an American home in a foreign country. You would provide a bit of Zion in countries where Zion is an almost unbelievable condition. And, despite the discomfort and discouragement, you would feel that you were daily participating in the greatest movement in the world.

was continued for two days to accommodate the huge crowd of people who attended.

The Sunday program was within keeping of the Sabbath Day. Each of the religious faiths took part, and each depicted in its exhibit an outstanding observance or doctrine. The religious exhibits, which were displayed across one end of a huge room, were colorful and explained without words the teachings of the various sects.

The display of our church was prominent but reserved. Seventy William Guthrie was in charge, being assisted by Elder Stanley Haues, pastor of the Johnson City Branch. On the left side of the display, the miniature church used by Brother Guthrie in many of his sermons, had a prominent place. The center was occupied by the Scripture of the "church that Christ built," as Latter Day Saints teach it. On the right side was an electric sign telling of God's purpose.

The church in Johnson City is nearing completion. In the latter part of November, Seventy William Guthrie will present a series of missionary sermons.—Reported by CLYDE PETERS.

DE KALB, ILLINOIS.—On October 9, R. F. Healey was ordained to the office of elder by Apostle D. T. Williams and L. L. Hadley of River Forest, and O. E. Turner of Sandwich, Illinois. Music on the vibra harp was played by Burdett Humes of Oswego.

BEAVERTON, MICHIGAN.—The Central Michigan young people held a conference at Beaverton, Michigan, on Saturday and Sunday, September 17 and 18. The theme of the conference was, "We Share With Christ." Conference personnel included, Seventy Virgil Billings of Traverse City, Evangelist George Booth of Carlton, District Young People's Leader Charles Fwining of West Branch, and District President Byron Doty of Gladwin.

Sixty-five young people were registered for the conference.—Reported by MRS. NELSON PROVOAST.

JUNIATA, MICHIGAN.—The business meeting of the Juniata group and the women's department was held in October, starting the year's program. In about a year there have been fifteen baptisms in the group. Elder E. S. Grinnell is pastor.—Reported by WILLIAM R. WELLS.

LONDON, ONTARIO, CANADA.—The September 25, 11:00 o'clock preaching service was broadcast over the local radio station CFPL. Pastor C. E. Muir preached the sermon. Music was provided by the choir under the direction of Raymond Neal. Elder Muir also conducted morning devotions over the same station, September 12, 13, 14.

October 8, 9, and 10 marked the 1949 Ontario Thanksgiving Youth Rally. President E. J. Gleazer, Junior, of Graceland College, was the guest speaker. The rally theme was, "We Share Our Blessings." President Gleazer spoke during the rally banquet on Saturday evening, and preached Sunday morning, and preached Sunday evening. Assisting were John Sheehy, pastor of Toronto Branch; Bishop J. E. Baldwin, Missionary Louis Zonker, and the district presidents. Apostle Farrow, the rally chairman, was unable to attend due to sickness.

Recreation under the direction of Louis Zonker and Elwood Smith was conducted on Monday morning in the local park. A dedication service was also conducted Monday morning. Harold Neal of Toronto was the rally musical director.

NEWTON, IOWA.—The annual election of officers was held Sunday morning, September 18. Elder Clyde E. McDonald of Des Moines was elected pastor. He chose Elders Ira Shippy and Ernest Kirlin as councilors.

Other officers are John Savage, director of church school; Melva Shippy, assistant church school director, and director of music; Blanche Shippy, women's leader; Ira Shippy, treasurer; Gladys Cooper, secretary; and Elsie McDonald, book steward.

Upon the recommendation of the pastor, the branch voted to move to the Lion's Club rooms across the street from the courthouse, south; upstairs over Nollen's Drugstore.

Dr. Joe Hull and Ray Taylor are board members for the club and helped in securing the rooms for the church. The rental is $15 per month, with utilities included.

On October 1, Elder and Mrs. McDonald moved the furniture to the meeting rooms and made them ready for services the first Sunday in October for the Communion service. Prayer services are held in the home of Brother and Sister Ira Shippy. All visiting Saints are invited to contact any of these members and join the group in worship.

BARBERTON, OHIO.—The branch held its annual business meeting in September, and the following officers were elected: W. W. Crispin, pastor; Elmer Harpley, church school director; Margaret Crispin, church secretary; Edith Bauer, director of music; Frank Milliser, church treasurer; Myra Bartrum, Zion's League leader. Teachers are: Delbert Tice, Bible; Alvin Jones, Sunshine class; Wyatt Patterson, young people; Lodema Spurrier, juniors; Charlotte Jones, primaries. Charlotte Jones is the leader of the women's department. Other officers are Capitola Anderson, Ethel Burkett, Annie Romig, and Margaret Crispin.—Reported by LODEMA A. SPURRIER.

HIBBARD, INDIANA.—The branch business meeting was held September 4. Elder Luther Troyer was in charge. Officers elected to serve during the coming year are: John Smelser, pastor; Mable Heblick, church school director; Amos Kersey, secretary and treasurer; Dollie Smelser, women's leader.

John Smelser was ordained to the office of elder on October 2. Elder Luther Troyer of Coldwater, Michigan, held a series of missionary meetings from October 2 to October 16.—Reported by MARGRETT KERSEY.

HUXFORD, ALABAMA.—District Missionary W. J. Breshears conducted a series of missionary meetings with the Huxford Branch, October 2-9. The following persons were baptized: Jesse O. Croley, Dehryl Croley, Loreta Mae Vickrey, Ottie Olivia Vickrey, Gwendaline Dreadin, and Carl Orian Dreadin.

On Sunday morning, October 9, Harold Graydon, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Vickrey, Sr., was blessed by Elders W. J. Breshears and T. F. Vickrey.

SAN LEANDRO, CALIFORNIA.—The mission had its annual business meeting in September. David C. Holden was chosen pastor for the coming year, and Lloyd Stewart was elected director of religious education. Mrs. F. A. Bower was elected president of the women's group, and Mr. I. Fields will be in charge of youth activities. Mrs. Rose Randall was the hostess to the congregation in her home. Alma Andrews, area pastor, officiated. Mrs. Randall was also chosen vice-president of the women's department and mission publicity chairman and Mrs. Ida Keough as secretary-treasurer of the women's group.—Reported by MRS. ROSE RANDALL.

Bulletin Board

Southern Indiana District Priesthood Institute

Dr. F. M. McDowell, Director of Priesthood Education, will conduct a priesthood institute at Louisville, Kentucky, on November 11, 12, and 13. Every member of the priesthood in Southern Indiana District is urged to attend. There will be a banquet for priesthood members and their wives during the institute.

W. WALLACE SMITH, Apostle in Charge

Books Wanted

Paul Kaiser, 723 East Colonial, Orlando, Florida, wants to purchase a copy of William H. Kelley's Presidency and Priesthood.

Owen Sound District Conference

The Owen Sound District conference will be held at Grand Valley, Ontario, on Sunday, October 30. Activities of the day will include a 9:30 a.m. prayer service, preaching at 11:00, and a business session at 2:30 p.m. (Standard Time).

GORDON FARROW,
District President

Glasses Found During College Students' Conference

A pair of glasses (flesh-colored plastic rims) in a soft leather case was found in the parking lot east of the Auditorium during the College Students' Conference. The owner may reclaim them by writing to the Office of the Presiding Bishopric, The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri.

Central Missouri Stake Conference

The annual Central Missouri Stake conference will be held at the church in Warrensburg on November 12 and 13. The only meeting on Saturday will be a banquet for priesthood members and their wives at 8 p.m. with Evangelist Elbert A. Smith as guest speaker. Sunday's activities will include a prayer service at 8:45 a.m.; a sermon by Apostle E. J. Gleazer at 10:45 with special music by the Buckner choir; dinner at noon, served by the women of Warrensburg; and the annual business session at 2:00 in the afternoon.

H. J. SIMONS,
Stake President

Notice to Members in North-Central California

Mrs. Roy Worthington, Box 147, Colfax, California, would like to contact other members who live in or near Colfax.

Kansas City Stake Women's Institute

The Kansas City Stake women's institute will be held on November 10 and 11. Features of institute are organ meditations at 9:30 a.m., prayer service at 9:45, classes from 11:00 to 12:00, sack lunch at noon, and a mass class on home decoration at 1:00 p.m. Registration is thirty-five cents. Children will be cared for.

MRS. CHARLES C. PETERSON,
Stake Women's Leader

Notice to Montana Members

Mrs. Don Baldwin, 3026 Sugar Avenue, Billings, Montana, would like to contact other Saints in or near Billings.

REQUEST FOR PRAYERS

Mrs. Iona Dustin, Rural Route 1, Weyerhauser, Wisconsin, requests prayers for her sister, Mrs. Cora Kern of Springbrook, Wisconsin, who is bedfast with a serious affliction. For years she has been partially blind and has had to wear an artificial limb.

Mrs. Laura Mae Tarney of Ft. Wayne, Indiana, requests prayers for her sister Irene Arnold of South Bend, Indiana, and herself. Both are at Mayo Clinic for treatment. Those wishing to write to them may address their correspondence to 24 Fifth Avenue Northwest, Rochester, Minnesota.

Prayers are requested for Elizabeth Rathmann, 109 South Willis, Independence, Missouri, who is seriously ill at the Independence Sanitarium.

ENGAGEMENTS

Laurel-Grahl

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Grahl of Port Huron, Michigan, announce the engagement of their daughter, Georgene Ruth, to Robert Russel Laurel, of Van Dyke, Michigan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Russel Laurel of Detroit, Michigan.

WEDDINGS

Van Buskirk-Combs

Trellis Clara Combs, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Combs of Ripley, Oklahoma, and Robert Francis Van Buskirk, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dan Van Buskirk, also of Ripley, were married October 15 at the bride's home, H. M. Elwell officiating. They are making their home in Pritchett, Colorado, where Mr. Van Buskirk is an instructor in the public school.

Barrett-Tabor

Nancy Ann Tabor, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold A. Tabor of Lamoni, Iowa, and James Thomas Barrett, also of Lamoni, were married June 19 at the Graceland Chapel. Elder John W. Banks read the double-ring ceremony. The bride was a student at Graceland in 1948-49. The couple are making their home in Iowa City where Mr. Barrett is a student at the University of Iowa.

Russell-Johnston

Earlene Johnston, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Earl Johnston of Brewton, Alabama, and Douglas McNair Russell, son of Charles H. Russell of Dillon, South Carolina, were married October 8 at the home of Elder and Mrs. J. G. Barnes in Pensacola, Florida, Elder Barnes officiating. The bride was a member of the 1948 graduating class at Graceland, and the groom a member of the 1947 graduating class at the University of South Carolina. They are making their home in Pensacola where Mr. Russell is employed.

Dawson-Scott

Carolyn Elizabeth Scott, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas G. Scott of Independence, Missouri, and Robert Joseph Dawson, son of Mrs. Nettie Kaye Dawson, also of Independence, were married September 4 at Stone Church. Bishop Walter N. Johnson performed the double-ring ceremony. They are making their home in Columbia, Missouri, where Mr. Dawson is a senior at the University of Missouri.

BIRTHS

Mr. and Mrs. John W. Banks of Midland, Michigan, announce the birth of a daughter, Deborah Ann, born August 24. Mrs. Banks is the former Corinne Tabor, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold A. Tabor of Lamoni, Iowa.

Seventy and Mrs. Edward Butterworth of Papeete, Tahiti, announce the birth of a daughter, Cheryl Jean, born September 4. Mrs. Butterworth is the former Lilly Raye Howard.

A son, David Michael, was born on June 10 to Mr. and Mrs. James King of Salem, Oregon. He was blessed at the Salem Branch on October 2 by Elders Charles H. Asher and George W. Speed.

DEATHS

WESTON.—Bernard D., only son of Mr. and Mrs. E. O. Weston, was born May 4, 1914, at Oelwein, Iowa, and died November 28, 1943, in an Army hospital in North Africa of a heart ailment. He grew up in Oelwein and attended the public schools there, later moving to Waterloo, Iowa, where he married Lucile Oltrogge; one son was born to them. He had been a member of the Reorganized Church since boyhood.

He is survived by his wife; his son, Bernard, Jr., whom he never got to see; and his parents. Memorial services were held March 8 at the Brant Funeral Home in Oelwein. Interment was in the Woodlawn Cemetery with full military honors.

POWERS.—SF/2c Roy W., son of Mr. and Mrs. John L. Powers, was born January 14, 1918, at McGregor, Iowa, and lost his life in the Pearl Harbor attack on December 7, 1941. With his parents, he moved to Oelwein, Iowa, as a child and lived there until he entered the Navy in 1937. He was baptized into the Reorganized Church at the age of eight and was a firm believer until death. In March, 1936, he was married to Wanda Chollett of Long Beach, California; two children were born to them.

He is survived by his wife; a daughter, Sharon; a son, Roy, Jr.; his parents, three sisters, and two brothers. Memorial services were held on July 20 at the Brant Funeral Home in Oelwein, Elder Evert McFarlane officiating. Burial was in the Woodlawn Cemetery at Oelwein with full military honors.

THORMAN.—Herman Henry Frederick, was born May 5, 1884, in Hamburg, Germany, and died October 7, 1949, at his home in California. As a young man, he served in the German Navy as a marine engineer. He was "shanghied" in Rotterdam, and when he regained consciousness he found himself on the deck of a vessel sailing for Hawaii. Here he came in contact with the church and was baptized by M. A. McConley. In 1918 he made his home in San Francisco, California, where he served as a deacon. On October 12, 1919, he married Ruth Lowe Griswold; three children were born to them. He was a man of integrity, and was uncompromising in his devotion to what he believed was right.

He is survived by his wife; two sons: John Frederick and William; and a daughter, Ruth Griswold. Funeral services were conducted by Elders J. W. Rushton and Alma C. Andrews and representatives of the Chapter of Knight Templars, of which Brother Thorman was a Sir Knight. Interment was in the Greenlawn Cemetery.

PETT.—George A., son of John and Mary Ann Ingram Pett, was born May 2, 1864, in Summit County, Utah, and died August 5, 1949, at his home in Woodbine, Iowa. He was baptized into the Reorganized Church on October 15, 1876, at Gallands Grove, Iowa. On May 9, 1889, he married Albina C. Crandall; seven children were born to them.

He is survived by his wife; four sons; two daughters; a brother, Frederick A., of Chicago, Illinois; a sister, Mrs. Ellen Young of Holden, Missouri; five grandchildren; and one great-grandchild. His oldest son died in infancy. Funeral services were held in Woodbine, Elders Clifford Cole and D. T. Williams officiating. Burial was in the Woodbine cemetery.

IN THIS ISSUE

EDITORIAL:

How to Listen to a Sermon	3
Tempest in Hall of Fame	4
Across the Desk	4

OFFICIAL:

A Fair Account	4
----------------	---

ARTICLES:

Alaskan Journey, Part I, Apostle C. G. Mesley	5
Palenque, by Apostle Charles R. Field	8
Helping Men Own Farms, by Gerald Gabriel	11
Worship Suggestions for December, by Minerva Yerrington	14
Question Time	16
Letters	17
Will You Strike the First Blow, by Louise Scott Wrigley	18
Picked From the Periodicals, by Aarona Kohlman	18
November, by Lula Carmichael	18
Theological Conflicts, by George Shoemaker	20
Mrs. Missionary Serves Abroad, by Biloine Whiting	21
Briefs	22
Bulletin Board	23
Book Review	24

P.S.

 FAIR PROSPECTS

Sister Rose McClincy of 215 Younglove Avenue, Santa Cruz, California, picked up a colorful phrase at the Pacific Grove reunion, "We heard that there were prospects and suspects." There are good people in the world who may be suspected of hungering for God more than their exteriors would indicate. Sister McClincy's letter goes on:

"There were one hundred or more union men and women at Pacific Grove the same days we were; they ate in one end of the dining room, and we in the other. The singing of our young people attracted them as the days went by, and the leader of the union group one day announced that we would now hear a quartet sing—two were saints and two sinners, Brother Tickemyer and one other, and two union members. It was beautiful. After several songs, we walked from the dining room; a gentle calm prevailed, and a friendliness was felt. I think some of them are diamonds, although a little in the rough, and they will not forget the occasion."

 WHYS AND WHEREFORES

Most of us are tired, probably because we used up the energy of a lifetime, principally in wasted effort, during our childhood.

When Junior is little, Dad preaches a gospel of authority, and enforces it with a paddle. But when Junior is tall and strong, Dad preaches a gospel of peace and conciliation, a philosophy of democracy and co-operation.

I once saw an old man (with a drink aboard) who threatened to give a young man a beating. He talked like an enemy. It sounded bad, but the youth was not scared; and when the old man swung at him he ducked. Then he gave the gaffer a little push, which sent him down. This shook the challenger, and when he arose he was singing a different tune. He explained, in a nice quaver, "I'm talking to you like a friend, now." The lad grinned and said, "You'd better." It was all over then.

 VIEWPOINT

A busy woman who is a successful mother, author, and teacher wrote to us recently: "There comes a time in reading your own copy when you can no longer judge it."

That is an observation that will come to all who make a serious attempt to write. The reason is that we write from the only viewpoint we have, with our characteristic mistakes, habits, and blank places in our information. Then when we try to judge we do so from the same viewpoint. The remedy is to ask someone else to judge our work. Several others are better than one.

Nobody is a good judge of his own work.

If you wish to be informed on any subject, do not be content to read a single book or the works of one author. It is better to read at least five or six different works. The truth is like a mountain, and needs to be seen from all sides before it is well understood.

In artillery firing and in anti-aircraft defense, the distance of the target can be ascertained by viewing it from two points through instruments and making calculations. Automatic range finders working on this principle greatly increase the accuracy of the fire.

Checking our judgment and information with others is a safe procedure, and will prevent many mistakes. Alone, one may be wrong. With others, there is a chance to be right.

Mary A. Burlington
1510½ Jules
St. Joseph, Missouri

14042
19
h

BOOK REVIEW

By Nora Moser

(NOTE: We make no attack on any religion. Every person has the right to believe as he is controlled by his conscience. However, the Roman Catholic Church as a religion is one thing, and as a militant, aggressive, active political machine quite another. We are free to canvass what it is doing in the field of statecraft.—ISRAEL A. SMITH.)

American Freedom and Catholic Power, by Paul Blanshard, Boston: The Beacon Press, 1949. $3.50. 306 pages.

THAT OFFICIAL POLICIES of the Roman Catholic Church in the United States are a serious threat to American freedom is the thesis of Mr. Blanshard, former head of New York City's Department of Investigation and Accounts under Mayor LaGuardia. The danger lies in the church's activities in education, medicine, politics, and other public affairs.

Catholic power is exercised by a strictly authoritarian hierarchy, taking its orders from Rome. The Vatican City in Rome is an alien temporal power whose political functions are indistinguishable from its religious functions. American Catholics contribute more money to Rome than all the rest of the church combined, yet Americans hold disproportionately few cardinalships and administrative posts in the central organization of the papacy. Democracy has no place in the Catholic scheme of things. Laymen do not have control even over physical property such as church and school buildings.

The extent of the problem is that the Catholic Church claims twenty-six million people in the United States, which is 18 per cent of the population and about three times as much as the membership of the largest single Protestant organization, the Methodist Church. In thirty-eight of our fifty largest cities, Catholics are in the majority. However, one hopeful sign is that only about forty-five per cent of Catholic children attend Catholic schools. Mr. Blanshard emphasizes again and again that he is attacking the Catholic hierarchy, not the Catholic people, and that many Catholics are finding it increasingly difficult to reconcile their democratic convictions with the philosophy of the church.

CATHOLIC POWER makes itself felt in the United States in various ways: in medicine in the many Catholic hospitals; in legislation expressing the Catholic views on divorce, birth control, sterilization of defectives, euthanasia, and venereal disease; in censorship of movies and publications; in real or threatened boycotts; and in the divisive effects of a separate educational system. Newspapers avoid offending the church, playing down crimes committed by priests, for example, and playing up mass spectacles staged by the church—the conversion of prominent persons, supposed miracles, actions of the American cardinals, and the fortunes of European Catholics persecuted by Communists.

The church's views on education include: that all Catholic children should attend Catholic schools, that teaching personnel should be members of religious orders, that all textbooks should be Catholic in viewpoint, that coeducation should not be allowed from the age of adolescence onward, and that the church, rather than the parents or the state, has the supreme mission of educator. The church is now fighting to get federal aid for "auxiliary services" in its schools—such services as bus transportation, textbooks, lunches, and health services. This would be an entering wedge, establishing a precedent for more complete public support of Catholic schools.

WHAT HAS THE CHURCH done in other countries? It is not necessary to dig up the past history of the Dark Ages, the Inquisition, and the conquest of Latin America. The papacy has supported the Fascism of Mussolini, Franco, and Peron. In several European nations today, the church is active in politics, openly telling its subjects which way to vote and holding the threat of excommunication over any who willingly become Communists.

The Catholic position is and has always been that it is the only true church and therefore no other church has a right to exist. Individuals have "freedom" to accept Catholicism but not freedom to refuse it. It seems pretty useless and even dangerous to try, in a spirit of tolerance and fair play, to compromise with the hierarchy, since it will accept all the concessions without reciprocating.

There are warnings for Latter Day Saints in this book. What is to be the church-state relationship in a Zion community? How would nonmembers be treated? What would be the political effect of a Latter Day Saint majority in, for example, Missouri? How much control does Independence exert over the church in Holland or in Tahiti?

www.LatterDayTruth.org

THE SAINTS'

Herald

Sunset on the Mississippi

*As seen from the old ferry.
"City of Nauvoo"
Looking towards Montrose, Iowa*

Photo by Raymona C. Thompson.

VOLUME 96

NOVEMBER 14, 1949

NUMBER 46

www.LatterDayTruth.org

These Times Demand . . .

There is a note of urgency in Christianity. The early Saints were pressed by this sense of urgency. Time was short, and there was no substitute for their message. Unless they were faithful in testimony—urgently faithful—all mankind would suffer irreparable loss. So characteristic was the conviction that we cannot understand the life and power of the early church unless we recognize it.

The pioneers of the Latter Day Restoration were pressed by a like sense of urgency. They too felt that time was short and that there was no substitute for their message. They too felt that unless they were faithful in testimony—urgently faithful—all mankind would suffer irreparable loss. And again, so characteristic was this conviction that we cannot understand the life and power of the early Restoration unless we recognize it.

Our times are no less momentous than any that have gone before. It is imperative, then, that we too shall be faithful—urgently.

Change in Editorship

It is a pleasure to introduce to the church the new editor of our youth paper, Stepping Stones, Mrs. Nephi C. (Emma M.) Phillips. We also take this occasion to express our appreciation to Sadi Moon Nagel who served in this capacity since August 3, 1947. Sister Nagel served well in this field, as well as assistant editor of church school literature and Herald reporter. Her cheerful personality will be missed by her co-workers as it will be by her many readers.

Emma Phillips is not a stranger to the readers of our church publications. She has written many articles for the Herald, Zion's Hope, Stepping Stones, and Daily Bread. She came to Independence in the spring of 1946 from Port Huron, Michigan, where she was baptized in 1931. She has long been active in church school work and girl activities. Her devotion to youth and her love of writing commend her to take over the responsibilities carried on so well by Sister Nagel who has resigned to be with her husband, who is now doing graduate work in Kansas University.

CHRIS B. HARTSHORN, Managing Editor of Church Publications.

Approved by Israel A. Smith

Introducing...

H. I. VELT (page 5) was introduced in the July 4, 1949, issue.

R. A. CHEVILLE (page 10) was introduced in the April 23, 1949, issue.

MARY AUDENTIA (SMITH) ANDERSON, Omaha, Nebraska, (page 16) was born and baptized in Plano, Illinois. She was graduated from Lamoni High School in 1888. She attended Western Normal College and Graceland College, graduating in the voice department in 1907. She was a teacher of piano in Graceland and gave private lessons for over thirty years.

She married Benjamin M. Anderson in 1891. They have four children: Bertha Audentia, Doris Zuleika, Duane Smith, and Lucy Rogene.

Her hobby is genealogy. She is author of the book, Ancestry and Posterity of Joseph Smith and Emma Hale.

Sister Anderson was general superintendent of the Department of Women from 1920 to 1923 and editor of the "Home Column" for many years; she also edited the music column. For five years she directed the Stone Church choir. She is an honorary member of the Lambda Delta Sigma of Graceland, a Daughter of the American Revolution, of which she was regent for two terms; president of the Daughters of Founders and Patriots of America, an officer of the Mayflower Society, a Daughter of the War of 1812, and a Daughter of the American Colonists. She is a teacher in the church school of Omaha Branch.

THE SAINTS' HERALD

Volume 96

November 14, 1949

Number 46

Editors: The First Presidency: Israel A. Smith, F. Henry Edwards. ASSISTANTS: Leonard J. Lea, Associate Editor; Chris B. Hartshorn, Managing Editor; Kenneth L. Graham, Business Manager.

The Saints' Herald is the official publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, with headquarters at The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri, and is issued through the offices of Herald Publishing House, 103 South Osage Street, Independence, Missouri.

Entered as second-class matter at the post office at Independence, Missouri, under Act of March 3, 1879. Issued weekly at Independence, Missouri. Price, $3.50 per year and $1.75 for six months in advance in the U. S. A., its territories and possessions; Canada, $3.75 per year and $1.90 for six months; other countries, $4.50 per year. Notice of a change of address must be given three weeks ahead of the date that it is to become effective. Accepted for mailing at the special rate of postage provided for in section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized July 21, 1921. Printed in the United States of America.

News & Notes

PRESIDENT EDWARDS IS BACK

President F. Henry Edwards, who has been recuperating at home from a siege of pneumonia, returned to the office at the Auditorium, Friday, October 28, for the first time in several weeks. He is still a little weak, but is feeling much better and comes regularly to his post now.

BAPTISMS AT YUMA, COLORADO

J. D. Curtis, the pastor at Colorado Springs, baptized fifteen people recently at Yuma, Colorado, after a series of missionary meetings.

EUGENE THEYS RECUPERATING

The church's missionary to Germany, Eugene Theys, underwent an operation for appendicitis at the British Military Hospital near Hanover, Germany. News from his family on October 27 says that he must remain in the hospital another week and then must stay with Saints in Hanover, before he can be permitted to start his trip home to Rotterdam. He is recovering nicely now after a few hard days.

MESSIAH BROADCAST TIME

Franklyn S. Weddle announced that the time for the Messiah broadcast will be Sunday evening, December 18, 10:30 to 12:00, Central Standard Time. It will be broadcast over the entire CBS system with musicians from the Kansas City Philharmonic providing the symphonic accompaniment.

OKLAHOMA CITY MEETING

On the week end of October 30 in Oklahoma City, Apostle Reed Holmes met with the district presidencies, pastors, and some of the associates from Kansas District, Central Oklahoma District, and Western Oklahoma District. The group discussed membership statistics of the church at large and of the district in particular. Their purpose was to determine what steps should be taken to improve the situation in the mission. They also discussed the general church and mission financial picture and the current missionary emphasis.

District presidents present were Ralph Wilt, Claude, Texas; Elbert Schmidt, Wichita, Kansas; and Victor J. Witte, Tulsa, Oklahoma. The Saints of Oklahoma City, with Richard Jones, pastor, were hosts to the group for the occasion. Members of the staff included, besides Apostle Holmes, Seventy William C. Haden and Bishop Walter N. Johnson. Apostle Holmes says the meeting was marked by a marvelous spirit of fraternity and a sense of mutual sharing.

One of the projects of the districts in that mission is to establish mission church schools where one or more families are together in a community, which in turn will be developed into missions and then branches.

DEDICATION OF BUCKNER CHURCH

Bishop Walter N. Johnson preached the dedicatory sermon Sunday morning, October 23, for the Buckner, Missouri, church. Also present were Stake President Harry Simons, and Stake Bishop Willard Becker. The church at Buckner is a cottage of fair proportions which has been remodeled to serve as a meeting place. This branch has had phenomenal growth since it bought the building in October, 1945. Already the meeting place is taxed to accommodate the congregation. The pastor is Roy A. Smith. The day before the dedication service, the branch held a sale by which they netted over $730 toward the building fund for a new church.

Men of Good Will

"With good will doing service." —Ephesians 6: 7.

Ideas of Personalities

Here is a question for the more serious readers who like a discussion with their friends: Which has been more important in shaping the world's history: great men or great ideas?

In such a discussion you may never reach an agreement, but you will exchange many a good thought and delight yourself in clarifying and expressing your own convictions on the way.

Some years ago a French author, Jules Romains, was writing a series of novels under the general title, Les hommes de bonne volonté (Men of Good Will), in which it was his purpose to make a contribution that would lead to the peace and stability of the world. Romains is the leading exponent of an idea that "the unifying principles in human groups are more significant than are personal individualities," a school of philosophy known as "unanimism."

Let us grant, if we may, that history furnishes a number of significant examples supporting that thesis. Independent of it, M. Romains has made a contribution to the thought of our times in the wording of his title.

"Men of Good Will"—how that phrase challenges us! We have always needed men of good will. The world desperately needs them now.

In obedience to the "Law of Love," could there be anything more truly satisfying, more richly rewarding, than to be a man (or woman) of good will? To leave knowledge in place of the world's ignorance, to leave comfort for its pain and brotherhood for its hate would be of all things the most noble and desirable service.

A Man on a Cross

It was a crucial hour when Jesus hung on the Cross. Would the church he founded survive the terrible shock, the disillusionment and sorrow brought by his death? Frightened disciples stood "afar off" in the last hours of his agony. When it was over, Peter declared he was going fishing, and little groups gathered here and there to discuss the momentous events of those days.

At that time it appeared to be a total disaster for the cause. Then when the tomb was opened, Peter and John, and a few faithful women were there to witness the miracle of the Resurrection. The answer to the question was to be given in the light of that event. The answer was to be given by those who had stood at the foot of the Cross, by those who went to the open tomb, and those who saw the resurrected Christ and heard his voice. They were the "Men of Good Will" of that day.

So great was their power and conviction in preaching that they converted others to carry on the work after them, and an increasing number of witnesses bore their testimony over an expanding area of the habitable earth. They went on in endless procession for two thousand years of time, to our own day. And such conversions and such witnessing will continue after we are gone and forgotten.

In a Wooden Coffin

Whatever the world may think of Joseph Smith, he brought a number of great and imperishable ideas to the world, not as an originator, but as a restorer: that the God who loved the world enough to give his Son for its salvation would continue to speak to his children when they would take the trouble to listen; that humanity could find welfare, peace, and righteousness in the kingdom of Christ; that the responsibility of spiritual and temporal stewardship lay upon all people who would contribute to the development of a better world.

The men who killed Joseph Smith at Carthage jail hoped thereby to stay his hand and silence his voice forever. It is written that ten thousand people went by his open wooden coffin to take a last look at his face. There were men and women of good will among that throng of people too.

The great question on that day of gloom and sorrow was: Did the work that Joseph Smith had established depend principally upon his personality, or was there in it some enduring principle of truth that would live on after him? Were the unifying principles of the gospel (to paraphrase Romains) more significant than the personal individuality of the man? Those who were responsible for his death could send his lifeless body to the grave. Could they also bury his work in that wooden coffin?

Time tests all things. A hundred years of history and more have given us the answer. The foundations upon which the gospel rests have proved strong enough for all the weight that could be put upon them.

We today can be men and women of good will in carrying forward that work. We can be the bearers of the message of truth. We can share in the glory of building the kingdom.

We live in a world of trouble and sorrow. Neither power nor money have been able to solve those problems without the Law of Love that Jesus proclaimed. The truth—and nothing but the truth—can set men free. Men and women of good will are called to be messengers of Christ in this cause.

L. J. L.

E d i t o r i a l

Travelogs

Graceland

IN VIEW OF THE FACT that I was a member of the first student body at Graceland College, I experience a feeling of regret that I did not keep closer touch with its activities. On two occasions only did I attend the annual home-coming. This year President Gleazer extended a cordial invitation to be present, but commitments already made prevented me from doing so.

On Sunday, September 18, however, I accepted an invitation from Doctor Cheville and addressed the student body at the first church service of the college year. It was a challenging spectacle to see Zimmerman Hall filled with students from most of the States, England, and islands of the sea. I tried to be equal to the opportunity and presented some considerations why they should increase their faith in the church, its origin, and beliefs. I greeted many I had met before, but more who were new to me as well as to Graceland campus.

New Albany Dedication

When Apostle W. Wallace Smith and I were in Louisville last March for the opening service in the new church tower, we made an agreement with Elder Chester Metcalf, president of the Southern Indiana District, to visit the New Albany Branch on September 25 and assist in the dedication of the church at that place.

Brother Wallace and I converged by different routes on the important day. I was met by Brother Metcalf and had breakfast at the church with some of the out-of-town Saints. Promptly at 10:00 a.m. the services began with Elder E. L. Fouts, pastor, in charge.

Floyd Gatrost gave the history of the work at New Albany; Pastor Fouts presented the deed to me for delivery to the Presiding Bishop; Brother Wallace offered the prayer of dedication, and I addressed the large congregation which overflowed into the lower auditorium.

Others who assisted in this service were Soloist George Maymon, W. O. Robertson, and District President Metcalf who offered the benediction.

Dinner was served by the women at noon, and at two o'clock Apostle Smith preached. At this hour, also, William G. Miller of Derby, Indiana, was ordained to the office of teacher by Elders Dwight Davis and Chester Metcalf.

In the evening Seventy Joseph H. Yager began a series of evangelistic services, and I listened with profit, after which Brother Metcalf took Wallace and me to Louisville, where we entrained for St. Louis and home, arriving safely late in the afternoon of Monday, September 26. The next day we rejoined other members in Joint Council sessions.

Omaha Mission

On Friday, October 7, Sister Smith and I went by car to Omaha for a series of enjoyable events. We stayed at the home of Elder Benjamin M. Anderson and wife, Audentia, my only remaining sister. The Saints, under the able management of Pastor Charles D. Neff, held their first fellowship banquet of the season (this was Friday evening) at the Omaha church. At the head table were Brother and Sister Neff, Brother and Sister Anderson, Patriarch Roll Scott, Brother and Sister Henry Constance, Sister Smith and I. I spoke to the Saints briefly, the affair being quite informal.

Sunday morning at 9:40 church school was held at Central Church where I addressed the teen-agers for a few minutes. At eleven o'clock I occupied at the worship service of which Pastor Neff was in charge, assisted by Elder Henry Constance. Central Church was comfortably filled.

Brother and Sister Neff and Sister Smith and I were the dinner guests of Brother and Sister Anderson at the Fontanelle Hotel.

The afternoon was spent in reflection at their home, and in the evening we went to a consecration meeting, its first service, and "open house" celebration at the South Omaha Mission, 2609 "D" Street. Here Brother Neff presided, assisted by Elders Carl Self and Guy Riley. Sister Bonita Sands sang a solo, "Bless This House." A quartet composed of Sisters Eunice Farber, Fae Gardner, Brethren Warren Farber, and Ray Bray, sang "Teach Me, O Lord." Sister Genevieve Sands was the pianist and Sister Gardner directed.

I spoke on the subject of churches and sacrifice.

The building we acquired a few years ago is well suited for the needs of the Saints, and I have confidence that this "spring of living faith" now re-established, will be successfully preserved under the care of Elder Neff and the Omaha Saints.

I was pleased to have this experience at Omaha and to be associated for the day with Elder Neff. Though rather inexperienced, he is carrying on like a veteran pastor and has splendid co-operation from Sister Neff, the former Frances Dillon of Holden, Missouri.

Monday, October 10, found us en route home, stopping at Council Bluffs to make a short visit to Sister Emma Beebe Sheehy whom we found quite ill and under the care of a nurse. She expressed pleasure that we called on her. Sister Smith has always had a strong friendship for this woman—the last of the Beebes, old time, faithful Saints.

We motored somewhat leisurely homeward and arrived safely just as the shades of evening were falling over Independence.

Skiatook Dedication

My next church visit was at Skiatook, Oklahoma, on Sunday, October 16. Apostle Reed Holmes and I left on the preceding day by late train from Kansas City. Arriving at Tulsa early in the morning, we were met by District President Victor J. Witte of Tulsa and Bishop L. W. Kohlman of Independence.

After breakfast at Tulsa we were driven by Elder Witte to Skiatook where we found prospects of a busy day and a good time. The Saints were gathering from all around, some of them from remote areas of the district. The local Saints were carefully shepherded by Elder Jess J. Davis.

Brother Holmes presided at the first meeting, a Communion service, speaking feelingly about "Our covenant with God." The emblems were served by Pastor Davis' well-organized assistants. District President Witte and Bishop Kohlman participated in this service.

At eleven o'clock after preliminary song and prayer, Charles Francis Lane's song, "I Will Lift Up Mine Eyes," was sung by the choir, Sister Floyd Foulke at the piano. I then spoke on a Restoration subject.

After this service the entire assembly, which filled the auditorium to overflowing into the basement, went to the Skiatook Municipal Hall, where the ladies served lunch.

In the afternoon, Elder Witte was in charge of the service of dedication. A history of the Skiatook Branch was read; the choir sang, "How Holy Is This Place"; and Bishop Kohlman gave a very fine message of dedication. I followed with the prayer of dedication, and Pastor Davis addressed the congregation. The hymn, "Consecration," was sung in closing.

Many visiting Saints were happy to assist the church at Skiatook in these dedication services, and all appeared to sense the import of the occasion. Elder John Stephens, who held the work together so long, reminisced about their struggles through the years.

Here, as everywhere in my travels, I met many sterling Saints who were enthusiastic about the church and fully capable of defending the work. This is as it should be with our people who are the trustees of Latter Day Saintism restored under God's direction.

ISRAEL A. SMITH

For This I Am Truly Thankful

By HAROLD I. VELT

WONDERFUL INDEED are the physical and material blessings of everyday life for which all should give thanks. Great are the miracles of nature and the developments made by man working with nature's God. Great are the miracles of modern scientific discovery and achievement. The imagination of the average man is staggered as he witnesses the unfolding of marvelous inventions the like of which was never known by man before.

There is a miracle, however, vastly greater in importance than any of these. It brings deeper appreciation of and joy in the physical and material blessings of life, but makes them secondary in importance, and subservient to the richer, spiritual values. It is a greater miracle than healing the sick, causing the lame to walk, the dumb to speak, the deaf to hear, the blind to see, or even raising the dead back to life. It is so rare that many living people have not witnessed it often—many not at all—though it is within the easy reach of every one. It is the miracle of transformation of sinful, selfish men and women into the unselfish Christlikeness. Greater still would be the development of groups of transformed men and women into a Zion society.

I am truly thankful to God for the knowledge of the fact that this is no idle dream—no mere Utopian ideal beyond the capacity of man to achieve. Just as surely as the compounding of certain chemicals will produce certain reactions, so will the proper proportions of the principles of prayer, faith, repentance, baptism, and general obedience to the teachings of Jesus bring miraculous results. The Lord spoke no idle words when to the Children of Israel of old he said, "Prove me now herewith . . . if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing that there shall not be room enough to receive it."—Malachi 3: 10.

I have witnessed this miracle of transformation many times and in many people. I thank God for this. I have seen communities at least partially transformed because of transformed people living within them. What a revelation of what could and some day will happen to the world!

BUT PERHAPS I cannot better illustrate this power of the miraculous than to give my personal testimony.

Having come under the influence of the restored gospel as a young man, I desired baptism into the church. I could see, after careful and prayerful investigation, that what I had considered adequate for salvation was indeed lacking. For one thing, it was now clear to me that valid baptism must be associated with faith and repentance. (I had exercised neither of these principles when christened in my babyhood.) Moreover I had come to see that true baptism represented our entering into covenant relationship with God, promising him to submit henceforth to his will, and the keeping of his commandments the rest of our days. Thanks to a wonderful mother, I had always tried to lead a clean, pure life, praying daily for necessary help and strength to do so. It was, therefore, not difficult to make that part of the promise in such a covenant required by baptism.

Yet there was something that was not easy in my case. My investigations had revealed to me that since the great latter-day restoration of gospel power and authority, God was again, through his spiritual gifts, calling men to places of trust in his ministry. What if he should call me to leave my farm and my money-making pursuits to become a missionary? I found it not easy to cast the thought aside. I would say to myself, "Surely the Lord knows better than to call me to be a missionary, for I am not capable."

But the Scripture would flash to my mind, "For ye see your calling, brethren, how that not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble are called, but God hath chosen the foolish things of the world to confound the wise; and God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things that are mighty . . . that no flesh should glory in his presence."—I Corinthians 1: 26, 27.

And I would recall the experience of Jeremiah when called, "Ah, Lord God, behold I cannot speak, for I am a child." But the Lord said unto him, "Say not, I am a child for thou shalt go to all that I shall send thee, and whatsoever I command thee thou shalt speak. Be not afraid of their faces for I am with thee to deliver thee, saith the Lord."—Jeremiah 1: 6-8.

THEN WHAT SHOULD I DO? If I should promise the Lord in baptism my willingness to do all he would have me do, and if he in turn should indicate his will that I should serve him as a missionary, what would I say? I had worked hard in order to make and save money. About 1,700 miles from my parents' home, I had bought an eighty-acre farm of virgin land, and took pride in fencing, clearing, and improving it. My ambitions of becoming well-to-do showed promise of early fulfillment. What now if I should be required to sacrifice those ambitions to go "without purse or script" and forever in this life be dependent upon God and those whom he would use to feed and clothe and give me money? I was not willing, I knew. I felt that the Lord knew I was not willing. Then, could I be saved without baptism? Jesus had said, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved."—Mark 16:16. Could I be saved by baptism unless I promised to serve as required by that ordinance? Again the answer was negative.

I sought refuge through prayer. Day by day I would say, "Lord, I want to do thy will and keep thy commandments and be baptized into thy church, but I trust, Lord, that thou wilt not call me to be a missionary." But my conscience troubled me. I knew I was praying selfishly not being willing to give up my ambitions for earthly possessions, should that be required of me. So I changed my prayer eventually to the following: "Lord, thou knowest my heart, and that I am not willing even to be a preacher, let alone to forsake all, should that be asked of me. I am willing to keep thy commandments otherwise, but Lord, should thou, by any chance, want me to be a missionary—seeing that thou dost call the weak and the foolish ones—please change my heart so that I will be willing to do whatever thou wouldst."

Believing the Lord would answer my prayer, I decided to ask for baptism, trusting either that he would not call me, or, should he do so, that he would change my heart so I would be willing. I was baptized in Queensland, Australia, on July 13, 1913. At the baptismal service

I was disappointed, having expected something of the promised manifestation of the Spirit. The confirmation service was held in the upper room of the home where lived the only family of Latter Day Saints in that vicinity. After the opening exercises, the head of that home—a hard-working country farmer (Elder C. A. Loving, Sr.)—laid hands upon my head, as is taught in the Scriptures (See Acts 8:19). Not a living person had known of my prayers to God, nor of the battle fought within myself; but under the powerful influence of the Spirit of God, together with the gifts of unknown tongues and interpretation, came the word of the Lord to me concerning the matter about which I had been praying. Under the same power a miracle of transformation so changed my heart that from that very moment instead of being unwilling, I was willing and anxious to arrange my affairs to be free for missionary appointment, for thus did the Lord direct. He had led me from my childhood to that very place so I might receive his gospel and carry it to my kindred and bring many souls to him, he said. The love of God and the transcendency of spiritual values above the values of material and temporal things were revealed to me at that time in a way which can never be erased from memory.

Within eighteen months of that day, I was back at my childhood home as a missionary. It has been my privilege to witness the conversion (from a lesser to this greater light) of my parents, my maternal grandmother, my two brothers and three sisters (all older than myself), at least eight aunts and uncles, many cousins (some second and third cousins) and many others, none of whom would likely have known the wonderful news of the restored gospel had I remained unwilling to submit wholly to the Lord's will. Since then it has been my privilege to tell the wonderful story to thousands farther afield and to witness miraculous transformation in hundreds of them who had faith to obey.

I THANK GOD I did not make the foolish mistake of being baptized with the reservation that I would stay with my ambitions for temporal possessions. What blessed experiences I would have missed in Australia, the Society Islands, United States, Canada, and Hawaii! At times trials have been heavy and hard to bear, but I thank God for these also. At one time (January 8, 1916) the Lord spoke to me: "Thou hast had deep trials and sufferings in spirit, also many perplexities, and these are not ended, but continue until my work of grace in your spirit is full."

Yes, throughout the years I have had to lean upon the Lord for support, and I expect always to have to do so, for the Lord has willed it that way. At times as I have left home and, wishing that I might not have to be thus separated from loved ones, I have silently repeated the words of Jesus, "Verily I say unto you, there is no man that hath left house, or parents, or brethren, or wife, or children, for the kingdom of God's sake, who shall not receive manifold more in this present time, and in the world to come, life everlasting."—Luke 18:28-30.

I thank God for the fulfillment of that promise to his servants, sometimes miraculously, always wonderfully. And I thank him for the assuring promise of the joyful reunion hereafter with those whose faithful labors have brought salvation to us, and with those whom we have been privileged to bring into the way of salvation through Christ.

Of course, all are not called to be appointee missionaries. Nevertheless, all are called to keep the whole law and be witnesses for Christ, whether under church appointment or not.

Upon this Thanksgiving occasion, let us give thanks to God for the rich blessings of the "more abundant life" that the Lord has placed within our reach. Let us thank and praise him for the miraculous change of heart that makes possible this "more abundant life" to all who trust and obey him.

Alaskan Journey - Part II - By C. G. MESLEY

FROM ANCHORAGE to Fairbanks, we journeyed by train. The Alaska railroad of 470 miles is owned by the United States government. Seward is the Southern Gateway to the interior and beginning of the line. In its first lap of 114 miles to Anchorage, some spectacular engineering was needed to match the spectacular scenery of the Kenai Peninsula. The 356 miles north to Fairbanks is equally interesting with expansive views of Matanuska Valley, locale of the Roosevelt Colony; snowclad Mt. McKinley, North America's highest peak (20,200 feet); Hurricane Gulch, a picturesque span 300 feet above the river; the tortuous Nenana River Canyon with the rail line clinging tenaciously to one side of the mountains; and finally the city of Fairbanks (population 9,000) on the winding Chena River. Originally scheduled as a two-day trip, present timetables list thrice-weekly trips from 8:30 a.m. to 10:30 p.m. the same day. However, with all the difficulties of a run-down roadbed that as yet does not match the modern Diesel-drawn streamliner, Aurora, the train rarely reaches Fairbanks on time. At one spot on our journey, a sliding mountain had moved the track twenty-eight feet sideways and thirteen and six-tenths feet lower than the engineers originally had planned.

Fairbanks was none too cordial at 12:30 a.m., but I finally found accommodations in a private home. Eva McGowan, a remarkable pioneer Irish woman and official hostess for Fairbanks, was responsible, not alone for me but for anyone who needed help in Fairbanks—at 12:30 a.m. or p.m. The next day's hunt for Saints on the record was quite disappointing. Finally I located Maxine Cothern in the University Extension Department Office. She arranged transportation eleven miles out to the Kenneth Campbells at Berry where the mammoth dredges of the Esther Gold Mining Company were busy in their restricted self-created ponds of rust-colored water. Before taking a pan to find gold in Alaska, a young prospector would need to see these dredges in action. Seven years are spent with powerful streams of water to wash away 135 feet of frozen overburden before the dredges take up one scoop of gold-bearing gravel on their endless chain of grasping buckets. The mine area (actually a wide and lengthy valley) is rich in archaeological lore, for prehistoric monsters have been found frozen whole in the tundra. We secured an interesting relic, a Pleistocene horse's hoof. Tiny as a Shetland pony's hoof, it presents tangible evidence of the once derided Book of Mormon mention of "horses" in the pre-Columbian era.

In rapid succession came the finding of the Martins, Pements, Christys, Calhouns, and Guntlers. By Sunday we had arranged for a Communion and blessing service. It was another happy experience for the Saints of the area. The days were spent in visiting and writing. On June 21 we witnessed the baseball game played by the light of the midnight sun, which set at 10:58 p.m. and rose at 1:27 a.m. The glow of colorful twilight never left the sky.

AMONG THE INTERESTING experiences that grew out of a Kiwanis meeting was my participation in a half-hour broadcast with four other men—the territory's largest liquor dealer; the Lutheran minister; Dr. Seaton, head of the million-dollar geo-physics project at the university; and a Nazarene missionary recently returned from China. This motley assembly—engaged in an Alaskan "Town Hall of the Air"—was typical of the citizenry of this "land of the midnight sun." I spent one morning with Dr. Oldroyd, University Extension Department Head and Mormon District President. He conducted me through the university with its museum full of interesting Eskimo artifacts. Dr. Oldroyd reports that the Extension Department has need of leaders in recreation, handcraft, horticulture, marketing, and 4H Club work. Any church member with a permanent desire to go to Alaska and having skills and experience in these fields should first communicate with me at the Auditorium.

Participants in "Town Hall of the Air" panel discussion: (left to right) The Reverend Carl Luther, Lutheran minister; Mr. Byron Gillam, president of the Fairbanks Kiwanis Club; Apostle Mesley; Mr. Don McClune, program director, KFAR, Fairbanks; Dr. J. Fitz, Nazarene missionary to China; and Dr. J. Seaton, Geo-Physics Institute, University of Alaska.

Seventy-six miles southeast on the Alcan Highway, Shaw Creek Lodge ministers to the needs of travelers. About three miles up Shaw Creek is the Fowler settlement. Julian Fowler met me at the lodge with a pair of rubber boots. These wore man-sized blisters on my heels in the walk through the woods and swamps to the Fowlers. The road they had brushed to their ranches was made impassable by the heaviest June rainfall in Alaska's weather records. The two Fowler families are among the territory's finest pioneers, and I was happy to pioneer with them as the first big red rooster to occupy their new log chicken house. The days were spent in talking of the gospel and one night in visiting the veterans-in-training farm class taught by a young Mormon elder. A mammoth clearing and building job lies ahead of the Fowlers, but the soil in the area is fertile, as evidenced by the excellent vegetable garden. Poultry farming is a profitable venture in Alaska, paying a net yearly profit of $7.50 to $13.50 per bird. Elder George Fowler returned home Saturday, and on Sunday a Communion and blessing service was enjoyed by the two isolated families. As I trudged out along the track on Monday morning, it seemed as though I were leaving home folks.

HITCHHIKING was the order of the day on Monday (no bus down to Anchorage until Thursday). In spite of road construction and heavy baggage, I made it to Copper Center, 190 miles south. This hospitable old historic lodge was being run by university graduates, and blooming in its store window was a wax plant from Australia. Delphiniums grew eight feet tall against many Alaskan homes along the way. A herd of buffalo was grazing on a river flat, and moose were plentiful.

The Fowlers of Shawcreek Lodge: Brother and Sister Julian Fowler; Sister and Elder George Fowler; Ronald and George, children of the Julian Fowlers.

From Copper Center I decided to take a bus to Valdez to view the justly famous Keystone Canyon. Superb views were had from Johnson Pass over the Chugach Range, and evidence of the terrific impact of snowslides was revealed in large trees whose tops had been twisted and snapped off while their trunks had been held rigid in the twenty-foot snowdrift. At another spot the huge steel girders of a bridge had been twisted and wrapped around great boulders by the snow in motion. Waterfalls along the canyon, the natural moraine gardens, and beaver dams in the valleys were all sources of interest. The bus broke down thirty-seven miles from Valdez, so up came the thumb again. I secured a ride into Valdez—Alaska's most northerly ice-free port—and out of it again. The weather was wretched for movie-taking, and I could not linger until it cleared.

At 11:30 p.m., after a 238-mile journey, I was trudging along Glenn Highway when a sleet and snow blizzard began its chilly fury. I walked back two miles to seek a cabin at "At-Last-A-House" Lodge, where I found two college chaps shivering on a porch without the wherewithall for a night's lodging. They were "thumb-hikers," too, so fellow feelings led me to share a cabin and fire with these two whose summer's fortune was not made in Alaska.

Early next day was a photographer's ideal, so the Husky sled teams at Tazlina Glacier Lodge were pictured and following them, scenes along the turbulent Matanuska River, the Talkeetna and Chugach Ranges, and the antics of two black bear cubs at Chicaloon. I made the 100 miles from Snowshoe Lake to Palmer in the back of an open truck. Even though it was June 28, the unusual weather provided another blizzard on Tahnetta Pass (3,327 feet), but the last thirty miles was crowded with scenery of breath-taking beauty.

At Palmer the hospitable home of the Archie Moffets was headquarters, and my stay was an enjoyable experience in church fellowship. Five members were contacted, and the previously described interesting social experiment of the early Roosevelt administration, the Matanuska Colonization Project, was viewed in action.

ANCHORAGE merited a second week end which was spent in personal contacts with the members and in looking up new members whose names had been supplied elsewhere in Alaska. We stayed with the Dale Briggs, visited with the Glen Briggs and neighbors, planned a service at the Cecil Roley home, and took in a gorgeous sunset across Turnagain Arm of Cook Inlet. The tides here are second only to those rising in the Bay of Fundy, Maine. We planned to spend the Fourth of July with the Briggs and neighbors, but train schedules to Seward did not permit it. As a Britisher from down under, I celebrated the patriotic holiday by attending the parade at Anchorage and then in traversing the spectacularly beautiful scenery of the Kenai Peninsula as the train made a loop-the-loop, twist-and-turn run to Seward.

There Sister Irwin Metcalfe, pioneer Saint, was making her home on the top floor of the Federal Building. Irwin, the deputy marshal for the area, met the train and was my interesting and considerate host. With Brother Mel Deck, Graceland Alumnus, he took me for a drive over the beautiful peninsula to a mining property near Hope, which to the casual observer might better have been named Last Hope. Mel Deck had several shots at a large black bear. The porcupines were plentiful, the famous Dall Sheep were in absentia, the food was satisfying, the company good, and the weather delightful. It was a grand trip. Next day Irwin arranged for the Territorial Road Patrol to take me over to Coopers Landing on the blue and turbulent Kenai River. Moose were plentiful that day. Kenai Lake, with its fringe of snow-capped peaks and wooded shore line surrounding its milky aquamarine waters, was as lovely as any lake I ever have seen. Lupins, columbines, bluebells, fireweed, and other wild flowers were blooming in profusion. I met the famous Alaska Nellie, who originally hailed from Weston, Platte County, Missouri. The Irwins and the Decks dined with me so that we could see more of each other, and it was with regret that I saw the "S. S. Aleutian" coming up the gray waters of the famous Resurrection Bay that cradles Seward in its chilly waters and magnificent scenery.

Sailing times on the "Aleutian" were set with the tides, so we shipped out of Seward at midnight. Early the next morning everyone was on deck to view the world famous Columbia Glacier in Prince William Sound. Born on the Chugach Range, birthplace of many other glaciers, this age-old river of ice flows four miles wide for forty miles. It ends abruptly at tide level in a pinnacled wall of blue ice, 300 feet of it visible above the floe-strewn waters of the sound. The steamer blew its whistle and the reverberations sent tons of ice slithering down the cliff wall of the glacier. Seconds later the sound of the breakaway came like a roll of thunder. Here was a revelation of the awe-inspiring majesty of God the Creator. Other glaciers in Alaska were larger by many miles but none could be more spectacularly interesting and beautiful.

ARRIVING AT VALDEZ I spent the afternoon and evening with Sister Lydia Searles and the Adventist doctor in the newly re-established hospital there. Cordover, fish-canning village on the Sound, gave us interesting glimpses of its major industry in full swing. Boatloads of freshly caught fish were pitchforked into the decapitating machine and within minutes they were traversing the canning line to the pressure cookers. Dozens of Eskimo and Indian workers, who had been flown in for the season, worked quickly and imperturbably while the tourists ignorantly questioned and commented their way along the line.

The Gulf of Alaska, normally a turbulent body of water, was in a kindly mood for the twenty-four hour journey before we entered Icy Straits to begin the trip through the justly famous "Inland Passage." Juneau was asleep at 2:00 a.m., but Brother Eckley Guerin was on the quay to meet me and extended again the hospitality of his home. Petersburg, in its spotless Norwegian atmosphere, was by-passed next day for the artistic and interesting Wrangell, which we reached after a fascinating voyage through the Wrangell Narrows. Totem Poles are characteristic of the southeastern Alaskan and Canadian shores of this area. Edward L. Keithahn, Curator of the Territorial Museum, has called these fascinating primitive sculptures "monuments in cedar." Some of them depict the age-old legends of the tribe; others display the heroic deeds of the chief families. Some are erected as ridicule poles to bring derision to an enemy or one who refuses to right a wrong. Such a totem

(Continued on page 23.)

Seward, Alaska, taken from Marathon Mountain. (Irwin Metcalfe Photo.)

I Visited the Rotterdam Branch

By ROY A. CHEVILLE

THAT FIRST SUNDAY in July I sensed I was in a strange land as I walked into the Rotterdam meeting place. At the entrance, the seal of the church identified the building. Even the seal was worded in an unfamiliar language. With me was Gene Theys, now my guide and manager. The ten o'clock meeting of the boys and girls was in session. A young man was speaking to them. Later I learned he was Jan de Mik. The pastor Jac de Ville rose to speak. Presently all eyes turned in my direction. I sensed he was referring to me. Gene Theys whispered that I would be expected to say something, that the pastor was announcing me. Here was to be my first experience with an interpreter, and I was not relishing the outlook. At an instant I sensed the power of language barriers.

A Song Can Do Wonders

Before I got to my feet, I detected that the pastor was announcing a song to be sung for me. Those Dutch boys and girls sang two stanzas of "Jesus Is Calling" in English. Something happened to me during that song. It linked me with them. It touched me, too, that they were dedicating it to me. I told them how this call of Jesus was extended to men all around the world in all languages. I pictured boys and girls in America with whom I had sung that very song. After I had blundered through my greeting, interpreted by the pastor, they sang a second song, "Onward to Zion," in English. To speak frankly, this song had never appealed to me. It had always sounded like a folk song of Stephen Foster's. That morning in Rotterdam it became more than this. It voiced the dreams and longings of our European Saints for the land beyond the ocean where the Gathering was to be centered. In an instant I thought of the responsibility we in this western land carry for those abroad.

In Another Tongue

The organ prelude to the service spoke a language familiar to me. It was a reed organ, foot propelled, but it was used to good advantage. As we ministers took our places, the organist was playing the pastoral air from Handel's Messiah. More than once I have heard music like this that can speak in any land. Then we went into the Dutch. The congregation sang, and I followed their Dutch pronunciation. They were singing in their tongue, "We Thank Thee, O God, for a Prophet." We remained standing for the invocation by A. Masterdyk. I could not know the words, but I could catch the spirit of it. When I caught my own name, I knew that he was praying for me and my part in the service. I knew then that prayer changes things. It was effecting a change in me.

I have always insisted on the basic difference between a congregation and an audience. In a congregation the minister in front is one of them, sustained by them. With the audience he, the orator or entertainer, is on the stage to present his wares to those before him. That morning I felt like a member of a congregation. As Anton Compier readily put my phrases into his native tongue, I found myself achieving rapport with my Dutch brethren and sisters. We were apart in language, but one in fraternity.

The Branch Holds a Social

"We've invited the branch to a social, and we want you to conduct it." This was a greeting of the Theys'. My first response was "No." I did not have the least idea how an American, who couldn't put together the simplest sentence in Dutch, could lead a branch social. The up-shot of it was that I promised to try. During those two days before the social, I listened and I asked questions. I wanted to discover the local customs, the sense of humor, and the possibilities of working through an interpreter.

Here was the plan I worked out. We would have a contest. Two sociable enthusiastic leaders would be captains. An interpreter would relay my plans to them. All properties would have to be right at hand. There would need to be an excess of events planned so if one did not go well, another could be substituted. They wanted some singing, but could an American lead Dutchmen? The one I decided to try was one I had introduced at a youth convention in Lamoni. We called it the "Youth Hallelujah Chorus." It could be done with two groups. Its only words were "Hallelujah, Praise Ye the Lord." To date I had found "Hallelujah" the same in all languages. With a little coaching I learned to say "Praise Ye the Lord" in Dutch. Then I worked on "How-do-you-do, Everybody."

That night those Dutch Saints played. They laughed. They tried any stunt suggested. They were at a loss when I gave marshmallows on a string with the game to see who could chew the string and get the marshmallow in his mouth. They went in "faith believing" and had a surprise when they discovered how sweet and delectable the marshmallow was. Teams carried small potatoes on knives while the teammates cheered. There were refreshments, too—punch made with "coolade" sent in gift packages to the mission house and cookies.

At the close I spoke for a few minutes. Saints who could play together as they did could work and worship together. I had seen them in preaching services and had shared the Lord's Supper with them. It took this relaxing social to catch the pulse of our fraternity. I saw people whose love for friendship had been restricted during the austere and dangerous days of the war now coming out with their true happy virtues. I thought of the counsel of a prophet of ancient America: "Men are that they might have joy." My heart was stirred as I spoke briefly in benediction. That night I longed to converse with them as we shook hands in parting. I sensed again the purpose of the gathering of our people in communities where they could play and pray and produce together.

With Fellow Ministers

My last night in Rotterdam, I met with the priesthood. I went without a thought of participation. I learned what I was to find out over and over again that on such a journey one must be a "minute man." I could never quite predict what the next request might be. I concluded, too, that I had to sense the spirit and minds of a group before I could contribute effectively to them. This night in Rotterdam as I entered the meeting place, I was told they were expecting me to speak. "About what do you wish me to speak?" I inquired. "Bear us your testimony," was the reply. I was to discover many a time that the people wanted to hear of my own experiences, my own convictions.

We were sitting in a circle. As I rose I looked at these Dutch brothers of mine. These were the ministers who had carried the load during dark days of war. These were the leaders who would push out into missionary work. I sensed that if these men shirked their stewardship, little could be expected in Holland. So I tried to tell them of my sense of calling. I pictured how two missionaries had been directed to come to my little community in central Iowa, how it had been indicated to them that they should seek me out and win me to the gospel. That was when I was a youth of sixteen. Then I came up to recent years. The God who had led me to the church was still enticing men toward goodness. Out of my vivid memory picture, I told of baptizing Sarah Kishimoto of Japanese ancestry, a student from Hawaii, in the Graceland fountain, and of other indications to me that certain youth should be invited to be baptized. This Universal Father was wanting to reach out to his children in Holland, and they were to be his spokesmen.

Officials Have to Be Interviewed

In Holland I came to know the necessity of keeping next to official quarters. I was to discover, too, how good a job our administrators had been doing. Money regulations, passport requirements, bulletins from religious affairs directors in the occupation zones—these and more have to be understood. One has to keep up to date. I found out too, what a complicated business it is to have in one's purse American dollars, English pounds, Dutch guilders, and French francs (with a Belgian coin for good measure) a sort of United Nations hodgepodge. To this was still to be added the marks of Western Germany. When we visited the occupational headquarters near The Hague to complete sanction for entering Germany, we had an advantage. Gene Theys had maintained friendly understanding and knew the procedures.

Off From the Mission House

The Mission House calls for no apology. It is well located on an advantageous corner in a good residential section. It was once the home of a practicing physician with quarters for office and residence. A providential chain of circumstances must have opened the way for our purchase of such a building in those postwar days when housing was so scarce. Recently the government has recognized it as a meeting place free from compulsions about housing. At first the Gene Theys and the Al Scherers lived in these headquarters. Since the necessitated return of the Scherers, the Glen Johnsons have moved to Rotterdam. From there Glen will work out to Britain, Holland, and elsewhere. That night of the branch social, I visioned the mission house as the headquarters for social service, reception, evangelism, publication distribution, and administration.

On Thursday, July 7, Gene Theys and I left for Germany. As we left the headquarters at Annastraat, a missionary's wife waved good-bye with a faith and courage that inspired me. The car was loaded with personal luggage, with books and clothes and food supplies for needy Saints. The car itself bears identifying insignia. On the front doors is painted the seal of the church in German. Above it in English is the caption, "Official Car." Many a time have I watched passers-by twist their necks to make out the wording. Sometimes Gene Theys has placed a receptacle on the door next to the sign with a few tracts enclosed. It was in this missionary car we left for the long awaited tour of Germany.

Yet I carried Holland with me in my heart.

EACH
WIN ONE!
to CHRIST
and

THE AUDITORIUM
The REORGANIZED
CHURCH of JESUS CHRIST
of Latter Day Saints

It's Christ

In Our Image

Character studies from the Old Testament selected from the King James Version by Houston Harte with 32 color paintings by Guy Rowe.

These striking portraits of the great characters of the Old Testament are among the most remarkable productions of religious art to come from the presses of a major publisher in a generation. The interpretations of these men and women who "walked with God" in ancient times show a penetrating understanding of human nature, a close acquaintance with the Holy Scriptures. The work is beautifully done, though the faces of the people are strong, elemental, and human. In vivid color, in incisive detail, the artist has recorded the hope, the fear, the passion, the danger felt by the leaders of the Children of Israel in their effort to acquire and preserve a homeland in the midst of hostile nations, and the determination to save Israel as the servants of the One God.—Leonard Lea. $10

Christmas

Edited by Randolph E. Haugan

The Christmas Gospel, new stories and legends, poetry, familiar and original art, and music are woven into each year's attractive family annual. Paper cover, $1; cloth cover $2

Yuletide

Edited by Randolph E. Haugan

This favorite holiday gift booklet is once again being published. Twenty-eight large size pages bring gay, colorful illustrations of Christmas topics, songs and poetry, with beautiful full-page photographs of winter scenes and art reproductions in color. Paper-bound 35c

Answer Without Ceasing

by Margaret Lee Runbeck

"I believe that for those who pray without ceasing, there is answer without ceasing." In "The Great Answer," Miss Runbeck showed us the effectiveness of faith and prayer through personal testaments during wartime. Now, out of the postwar world, she has brought together more of these intensely moving cases where faith has been restored, hearts uplifted, solutions reached, and strengths made stronger. This is a book of heroism and personal courage, of people who experience miracles in their daily lives. In many remarkable and dramatic ways, men and women find the rewards of prayer and a new complete way of life. $3

Prince of Egypt

by Dorothy Clarke Wilson

The author has chosen a theme of magnificent proportions. She has told a story against a background of the unmatched splendor and color prevailing at the height of Egypt's conquest and power. The Prince is Moses . . . not the bearded patriarch who was later to serve his outcast people, but Moses the young man . . . every inch the Egyptian nobleman he had been reared to be, flattered and worshiped as the foster brother of the divine Pharaoh. $3.50

The Home Book of Bible Quotations

Compiled by Burton Stevenson

A definitive work in a great field. Comprehensive, accurate, convenient, and durable, there are 20,000 entries, 1169 topics, 500,000 words, and 640 pages of a painstaking complete collection of the gems of the Bible. A wonderful gift for the Bible student. $6

Mary

by Sholem Asch

This is the simple story of a mother's love for her son and the great story of the Mother of our Savior. The story unfolds in the little town of Nazareth. We see Mary, demure and self-effacing, when Joseph seeks her in marriage. We see her emerge, through sacrifice and a profound faith, as a towering figure, acquainted with grief, but so imbued with wisdom and love for suffering humanity that she can transcend earthly sorrow. We come to understand the deep roots of the Christian story in the Jewish tradition, the ancient hope for the Messiah as foretold. $3.50

The Man From Nazareth

by Harry Emerson Fosdick

This work is the fruit of long and careful study of the Christian and Jewish literature of the time of Christ and of the emerging of the Christian church. It is the first book, on the basis of modern research, to picture Jesus as others saw him. $3

Christmas Time

Ask For Our
New 1950 Book
Catalog

FOR BOYS AND GIRLS

My Book About Jesus

by Esther Freivogle

To be read aloud to small children, this book consists of 8 stories about Jesus based on versions from Matthew, Mark, and Luke. 65c

And So the Wall Was Built

by Imogene M. McPherson

Parents who want their primary children to know something about the Old Testament will find this book a happy choice. It tells stories about some of the Jewish kings and prophets in such a way that youngsters can see what sort of people make good and wise leaders. 65c

Holiday for Helpers

by Dorothy Westlake Andrews

A group of children learn about the professional duties of their fathers' occupations, all of which involves an important service to the community. 65c

Good News to Tell

Primary children will meet many famous New Testament figures in this story of the beginning of the Christian church. 65c

Other Books in the Children's Hour Library at 65c

For Preschool Children

IN THE BEGINNING by Robbie Trent
DAVIE DECIDES by Dorothy W. Andrews
GOD'S WORLD AND JOHNNY by Dorothy W. Andrews
ONCE, LONG AGO by Mary Owen Bruce
A STAR SHONE by Robbie Trent

For Primary Children

A STORY THAT HAS NO END by Kate Ward
PEOPLE OF PROMISE by Elizabeth Honness
JESUS: STORIES FOR CHILDREN by James D. Smart
LET'S GO TO NAZARETH by Elizabeth Liggett Reed
THINE IS THE GLORY by Florence M. Taylor
GROWING PAINS by Florence M. Taylor

Sea Star

Orphan of Chincoteague

by Marguerite Henry

Here is another grand tale of the famed wild ponies of Chincoteague Island, told with all the charm and wholesome realism that have endeared the author's earlier books to young readers. It grew around a real happening—the finding of a tiny wild foal. $2.75

Christmas Puppy

by Bill and Bernard Martin

Children will love this humorous story and the romantic, colorful illustrations which follow the puppy from Santa's workshop to David's Christmas stocking. $1

FOR TEEN-AGERS

Last of the Wild Stallions

by Barlow Meyers

Once in many years there appears an animal story that is really great, that is timeless and universal in its appeal, that is packed with freshness, vitality, and action, that people of every age will read and remember. Such a book is this. $2.50

The Secret of the Hidden Room

by Alta Halverson Seymour

On the very first evening it becomes obvious that the old family farmhouse has an aura of mystery. Dad's tales of a hidden treasure and a secret room called the "glory hole" thrill Kelly Todd. What she does about this makes this a thrilling mystery story. $2.50

Treasure Bayou

by Frederick Nelson Litten

For teen-age boys, this business adventure story is a real "he-man's" book with a strong, action-filled plot and an authentic background of the oil drilling industry. $2.50

INDEPENDENCE,
MISSOURI

Question Time

Any sincere question from our readers will receive consideration from the editors. If it is of general interest, it will be referred to the Question Time panel, and the answer will be printed. Please keep the question short—fifty words or less should be sufficient. Your personal problems, the answers to which concern you alone, will be answered by letter. Address questions to Herald Editors rather than panel members. We shall try to take all questions in the order they are received. Be patient, there may be several ahead of yours. Only those questions sent by contributors will appear here.—EDITOR.

QUESTION

When we, as members of the church, decide to fast, should we abstain from food and water, or would it be permissible to take a drink of water occasionally?

New York

Mrs. P. B.

ANSWER

From the language found in Doctrine and Covenants 59:3 it would seem that the spirit in which we fast is more important than going without food or drink. "And on this day thou shalt do none other thing, only let thy food be prepared with singleness of heart, that thy fasting may be perfect; or in other words that thy joy might be full."

To abstain from food for one or more meals and then prepare a big feast and gormandize might rob us of the spiritual gain that otherwise might have been ours.

Because of individual temperaments, vitality, and health (or lack of it), it would not seem wise to try to make any hard and fast rules regarding fasting. Whether we should abstain fully or partially from food and liquids could best be determined by the individual. Keep in mind that our aim in fasting is to submerge the physical in order that the spiritual might be in the ascendancy. Any fast pursued with this thought in mind will pay big spiritual dividends. Whether your notion of fasting agrees with mine or not, the instruction in Doctrine and Covenants 119:7 will promote peace and harmony in the body. It says in part: "Be not harsh in judgment, but merciful in this, as in all other things."

JAMES F. KEIR.

QUESTION

What probably became of those saints who arose from their graves when Jesus was crucified as mentioned in Matthew 27:56? Do I read correctly that they appeared to many in Jerusalem after Christ's resurrection? Then what became of them? Are they with us today or did they go as spiritual bodies to heaven?

ANSWER

The text reads:

And the graves were opened, and the bodies of the saints which slept, arose, who were many, and came out of their graves. And after his resurrection, went into the holy city and appeared unto many.

Let us first determine who these saints resurrected at the time of the crucifixion of Christ were.

The Scriptures reveal that all who believed in Christ, obeyed his gospel, and lived righteously to the end of their days, from Adam's day down to the time of Christ's crucifixion and resurrection, were brought forth from the dead at that time. During the time their bodies laid in the grave, their spirits found a temporary waiting place with Christ in "heaven" or paradise. Of such obedient ones of his day, Enoch said, "The Holy Ghost fell on many, and they were caught up by the power of heaven into Zion."—Genesis 7:34. He also saw that holy city of Zion and said to the Lord, "Thou hast taken Zion to thine own bosom, from all thy creations."—Ibid., verse 38. And this is amplified in latter-day revelation: "I am the same which have taken the Zion of Enoch into mine own bosom; and verily I say, Even as many as have believed on my name, for I am Christ."—Doctrine and Covenants 38:1. Enoch and his city were translated and had no need of the resurrection.

Abinadi speaks more fully of this righteous group raised with Christ:

And there cometh a resurrection, even a first resurrection; yea, even a resurrection of those that have been, and who are, and who shall be, even until the resurrection of Christ; for so shall he be called. And now, the resurrection of all the prophets, and all those that have believed in their words, or all those that have kept the commandments of God, shall come forth in the first resurrection; therefore, they are the first resurrection. They are raised to dwell with God who has redeemed them: thus they have eternal life through Christ, who has broken the bands of death.—Mosiah 8:55, 56.

Alma describes the resting place of the departed righteous ones:

A state of happiness, which is called paradise; a state of rest; a state of peace, where they shall rest from all their troubles, and from all care; and sorrow. . . . There is a first resurrection; a resurrection of all those who have been, or who are, or who shall be, down to the resurrection of Christ from the dead, . . . from the days of Adam, down to the resurrection of Christ.—Alma 19:44-52.

This assembly of righteous souls, gathered through a period of four thousand years, must have constituted an almost innumerable host. It was this host which was raised from the dead with Christ. This resurrection was by no means limited to a few saints of that period and of the locality of Jerusalem.

Matthew's statement regarding the saints who were resurrected is that they "went into the holy city." Considering the greatness of their number, the city referred to could hardly have been Jerusalem. Had such a host appeared to living saints in that city, it is incredible that an event of such outstanding and unusual nature would have been passed over in silence by the New Testament writers. The name "holy city" could hardly refer to the Jerusalem which crucified its Lord, but to that city in heaven where only the righteous dwelt. Enoch favors this view in saying, "The saints arose, and were crowned at the right hand of the Son of Man, with crowns of glory."—Genesis 7:63. And Abinadi also, "They are raised to dwell with God."—Mosiah 8:57. They did not remain on earth, for all "these are they whom he shall bring with him, when he shall come in the clouds of heaven, to reign on the earth over his people."—Doctrine and Covenants 76:5.

CHARLES FRY.

QUESTION

"Adam fell that man might be." Does it mean that if Adam had not fallen there would have been no other men?

J. T.

Idaho

ANSWER

Had Adam heeded the instructions not to eat of the tree of life, he would have remained in a celestial condition where "they neither marry nor are given in marriage, but are as the angels in heaven." (See Matthew 22:30.) Nephi states:

And now, behold, if Adam had not transgressed, he would not have fallen; but he would have remained in the garden of Eden.

And all things which were created, must have remained in the same state which they were, after they were created; and they must have remained forever, and had no end. . . . and they would have had no children; wherefore, they would have remained in a state of innocence, having no joy, for they knew no misery; doing no good, for they knew no sin. But behold, all things have been done in the wisdom of him who knoweth all things.—II Nephi 1:111-114.

James F. Keir.

www.LatterDayTruth.org

Interesting Personalities:

Pat Livingston - High School "Senator"

EVERY year in Omaha, Nebraska, from each high school two junior girls are chosen to go to Girls' State, and five junior boys are sent to Boys' State. So it was that Pat Livingston—a tall, alert Zion's Leaguer in the Omaha Branch—found herself to be one of 250 girls on the campus of the University of Nebraska at Lincoln as a representative of Central High School. For one week, June 6 through 12, these girls, selected by the councilors in their own high schools, went through the paces of a unicameral senate. They heard lectures on city, county, and state government, and then set about putting their knowledge into practice. They held real campaigns and elections, and Pat Livingston ran and was elected to the office of lieutenant-governor.

In Nebraska the lieutenant-governor presides over the one-house legislature, the same as the speaker of the house presides in the two-house system of government of other states.

How could the girls get well enough acquainted in one week to vote for "governor" and other officers? If you know young people, you'll understand that in two days they got acquainted with those who lived in the same cottage, and through the lectures and mealtime sociability, they became familiar with names of others. Then in the big campaigns the candidates became quite well known. After Pat had made speeches and the other girls had seen her several times, they knew more about how to vote than most adults do when it comes to their own elections for civic officers.

At the same time the boys of Nebraska were attending Boy's State on the State Agricultural College Campus, also in Lincoln. Both Boy's State and Girls' State are sponsored by the American Legion, as are Boys' and Girls' Nations.

THE 250 girls and their twenty-five councilors voted for two girls to go to Washington, D. C., as Nebraska representatives at Girls' Nation. Pat Livingston was one of the two chosen and was in Washington, D. C., on July 21 for the opening of that grand event. Almost immediately the girls were placed arbitrarily on one of the two political parties, Federalists or Nationalists. Pat thought at first of running for the office of vice-president, but members of her party influenced her to run for the office of president. The campaign went on in full force, each party voting and revoting to narrow the field down to the final candidate to run in the final election. Pat Livingston was in the running down to the last vote when she lost the nomination to a young lady named Joy Daniel who represented the party and went on to become "president."

After the election the girls established themselves into a senate. Since two girls from each state in the nation were there they had just the right number for a full senate. The state of Mississippi had not sent any girls, but there were two representatives from the District of Panama who filled in. Pat was appointed sergeant at arms of the senate.

Their meetings were held in the Senate caucus room at the Capitol building. Most of the "governmental work" was done in the evenings, so the days were free for luncheon engagements and sight-seeing tours.

Pat, being from Nebraska, was invited with her fellow Nebraskan to have lunch one day with the Secretary of Navy, Francis Matthews, who is also from Nebraska.

ON the first Sunday she went with the other girls to the church services at Washington Cathedral. During the week they visited the Capitol building, the Supreme Court building, the FBI building, the Congressional Library, the Pentagon building, Mount Vernon, and Arlington Cemetery (where they placed a wreath on the grave of the unknown soldier).

They heard speeches from many dignitaries—about twelve of the Senators, Treasurer Georgia Neece Clark, Defense Secretary Johnson, Secretary of Navy Matthews, Vice-president Barkley, and the national president of the American Legion Auxiliary, Mrs. Hubert Good from Portland, Oregon. On Thursday they visited the White House where they filed by President Harry S. Truman and shook hands with him. They then went out on the lawn where the President gave a short talk. That noon they each had lunch with the Senators from their own states in the Senators' dining room. In the afternoon Vice-president Barkley came to the Senate caucus room and administered the oath of office to the girls.

Another meal that Pat enjoyed was the Nebraska Congressional breakfast in the Capitol's private dining room. There she ate with all the representatives and Senators from the state of Nebraska.

Pat explained that most all the speakers in their talks stressed the need of dependency upon God. One Senator remarked that he was glad to hear the girls in their campaign speeches quote from the Bible.

ABOUT Pat herself. She is interested in many things—in governmental work, of course, but especially in journalism, radio, and music. She is an active debater and has traveled into North Dakota and Minnesota on debate trips. She and her debate partner won the girls' Mo-Valley championship. She was at the national speech tournament held at Longmont, Colorado, where she entered in the oratorical division representing her district.

An interesting thing about the Boys' and Girls' State and Nation program as far as the Omaha church young people are concerned is that in the past three years five Zion's Leaguers have gone to State. In 1947 Marlin Constance, a young deacon, went to Boy's State, and Miss Bonita Sands went to Girls' State and Girls' Nation. In 1948 Bob Gilmore, also a deacon, went to Boys' State and Boys' Nation, and Ruth Ann Curtis went to Girls' State. This year Pat went to both State and Nation. That's an excellent record for our church young people, and one of which they are proud.

Pat is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Livingston and is a niece of Bishop and Mrs. Henry Livingston of Independence, Missouri.

—Sadi Moon Nagel.

I Witness for Christ Through My family

Convictions

IF I am truly convinced that this, the church of my choice, is "the only true and living church upon the face of the whole earth with which I, the Lord, am well pleased" (Doctrine and Covenants 1: 5), what place is there in my thoughts or my home for any other supreme interest? And what does it mean to have an "eye single to the glory of God"? His glory is intelligence, we are told, so it must mean that we should use our intellect at all times with him in mind and try to make every decision, be it great or small, in the light of the intelligence he has given us. The wisdom we thus exercise will be acceptable to him.

The deep convictions we have concerning our church will cause us to strive earnestly to plant them in the hearts of the children in our care. There they will provide a strong bulwark against the onslaught of evil forces and insure a means of development and the spiritual growth and understanding essential for all "children of the light." Thus our families will be identified with the revealed will and purpose of God and become instruments for good in his hands.

In the first human family, the parents, grieving for their sin and sincerely repenting, were given the blessed hope of being again restored to close and loving contact with their Father. They "taught these things to their children," and those who listened found and followed the joyous path back to God.

The prodigal son went forth from the spiritual security of a good home and spent his energies and resources in superficial pleasures. When the yearning love and prayers of his father prevailed, he was brought to a realization of his folly and perceived he had followed false instead of true thinking, erroneous instead of correct values. It was then he retraced his steps back to his real home and his father's arms, secure once more in its peace and rightness.

As we review this parable, its lesson should stir us deeply and make us more determined than ever that today's clamor of enticing voices and influences shall not deceive our precious ones. We must help them to evaluate life more truly than did the wandering son and turn their backs firmly upon the rosy, beckoning paths which lead only to sorrow and inevitable disillusionment. We should redouble our efforts to implant early in their lives the principles and deep convictions of truth we have discovered for ourselves and cherish so loyally. Let us remember that very early in the history of our church, the leaders were reprovved for neglect in this matter, because they were not teaching their children the principles of light and truth.

Commission

Children are never too young to be taught the simple "abc's" of gospel truths. If our eyes are constantly "single" and our minds alert to spiritual values, we can weave these beautiful, wonderful counsels into the simplest lessons. Even a small child can understand that the tender love of his Heavenly Father like, yet far greater than the love of his earthly parents is always near at hand and available to him. He may also be taught that this good Father is always pleased when his children obey him and do right. As we counsel, direct, or even reprove, we can accompany our words with some reverent expression of our own trust in God and our firm belief that he is interested in and guiding each one who is lined up on his side.

Our task is to instill in young people a real desire to be good witnesses for Christ and to merit his approval. They should be taught to regard the name, "Latter Day Saint," as a title to be worn both humbly and proudly—humbly in gratitude for the precious blessing of being nurtured in God's church; and proudly because baptism into this church challenges all the best qualities of mind and heart they possess or can acquire. Let them understand that it is a name to be honored by all who are privileged to wear it as is the name "sterling" on silver—a guarantee of high standards, loyally held and fearlessly exhibited to the world.

A sister in one of our branches was for a time the president of the Parent-Teacher Association of the school her children attended. One of the efficient and observing teachers told her, "I can always recognize a child who belongs to your church; his study habits, his intelligence, his sense of honesty and fair play, and his general conduct, all seem to set him apart from the others."

Our commission requires us not only to love God completely and to try to do his will; but also to acquaint others with the priceless treasures we have found in studying his word and being actively engaged in his service. Children can get some understanding of these satisfactions when they are told that we, as a church, have not only the Bible as a guide just as other churches have, but also the Book of Mormon and the Doctrine and Covenants. They learn to love these books as the contents are unfolded to them.

Many simple and impressive stories suitable for children of all ages can be found among the treasures in the Book of Mormon. As they expand in understanding, they learn to revere the wisdom and guidance found in the Scriptures given to our church. The knowledge that God speaks to his people today and here is a conviction that puts a firm platform under faith, and creates a trust and confidence which inspire obedience and activity in carrying out the purposes revealed. This is in sharp contrast to the belief that God spoke only in ages past through prophets and inspired messengers but does not do so today.

A high school lad in one of our branches was told by his mother, "You know, Son, there are some things that are wrong for you to do, which would not be wrong for your friends to do."

"Why, how's that? Isn't right always right, and wrong, wrong?"

"Well, look at it this way," said his mother. "Your friend John smokes. He does not know God has said that tobacco is not good for man; therefore he cannot be blamed so much for doing what he does not know God has condemned. But you have read the Doctrine and Covenants and have read the word of the Lord telling us that tobacco is not for the use of man. Therefore, should you use it, you would be going against God's expressed counsel and admonition, and that would be wrong for you."

Passing on Our Convictions to Our Children

Foremost must be put our own sincerity and consistent teaching by example as well as precept. Our own reverence for God can be expressed by the tone of voice we use when we pray, or mention his name. Even tiny children will close their eyes, bow their heads, or fold their hands when "Our Father" is addressed in blessing asked upon food or petition and praise around the family altar. God should never be held before them as a punisher, but always as a kind and loving protector who delights in caring for and guiding his obedient children.

www.LatterDayTruth.org

We should frequently tell the New Testament and Book of Mormon stories about Christ to our children, seeking always to link them and their needs closely to him and his gentle, wise counsel. As they mature in years and understanding, discussions of his teachings and their meaning and application to present daily life can be expanded to arrive at the fundamental truth and wisdom which ever lie at the heart of his ministry. Let our young people learn early that no earthly knowledge or scientific discovery can ever approach that of the humble Nazarene who was the very Creator of this world and all that is therein—the very Son of God who came in the flesh to show his lost and groping children the only way "back home."

Deeply ingrained reverence for God and Christ will show itself, whether in child or adult, in quiet and thoughtful attention at church services, worshipful attitude during prayer, participation in the moments of praise through song, and in cheerful and willing assistance in the work of the branch. As they learn to pray in the right spirit and discover for themselves the unfailing response from our Lord, ever "nearer than breathing, closer than hands or feet," their love for and devotion to him will grow. Through what may perhaps be turbulent years ahead, they will still find him their best and truest friend.

This love will extend to the whole Restoration Movement. The history of our church should have a prominent place in the education of our young people. It is unique in a world of platitudes, vital, alive, sufficient for the solving of problems in this hour of universal clamor and disturbance. As they come to realize its efficacy, their gratitude to God rises anew, and they find a sustaining hope and confidence in the new light that came into the world in 1830.

RESPECT FOR OUR CHURCH organization, its leaders, missionaries, teachers, and writers, should be a part of early training. It is said, "A prophet is not without honor except in his own country," and it is possible that our very close and friendly contact with our church officers may engender a familiarity which would blind us to their important calling. Some young people have fallen into the habit of addressing their parents and other older folks by first names. Occasionally this carries over to include our elders and missionaries—a habit of very questionable taste. Rather let us display in our homes, by a careful avoidance of such casual familiarity, a deep respect for these men called of God to represent him.

One sister in the last days of a long illness used to receive the very faithful ministry of an apostle. He always brought cheer and comfort with him, and before saying good-by would administer to her. She said, "One day I got to thinking how wonderful it would be if the apostle Paul, or the apostle Peter, were to come to my bedside and lay his hands in prayer upon my head. What a marvelous experience that would be! Then I suddenly realized that for many weeks I had been receiving the kind ministry of a living apostle—one as truly a representative of God as any disciple of old who labored with Christ in faraway Palestine, and my heart swelled with a new surge of grateful happiness!"

In our democratic way we may be prone to break down the lines which are drawn between groups or individuals by the conferring of special responsibilities and offices. Some have chosen at times to criticize our leaders to the injury of the church. None should be blind to glaring mistakes or flaws of character, even in leaders, but it is equally true that all should be appreciative of the virtues and achievements of those placed in positions of responsibility and should have unfailing respect for the offices so held. Since God has appointed leaders, he also has ordained that there should be followers.

In one family I knew years ago, there developed a spirit of unkind criticism which was freely expressed at table and in the family circle. Leaders in the community—the mayor, the sheriff, the town council—all came in for their share of scornful criticism. The result was that the children who heard these harping notes had no respect for the officers of the town or the church and no regard for the governmental process of election or the authority thereby conveyed. A pitiful result of this disregard for law was that one of the sons had to serve a term in prison.

Good and just men in positions of civil and ministerial authority should receive the respect and co-operation of all the people to whom they minister. This very respect for law and order is a safeguard for our children, as it shapes the social attitudes they are establishing. They early understand "teamwork" in play and games, in the duties of home and school, and this understanding should be enlarged to include teamwork in the church and branch.

At a turbulent conference in the '20's, a thoughtful sister bearing her testimony in a prayer meeting observed: "You know, I think our church organization is very much like a large, perfectly equipped automobile in which we are all riding toward a definite goal. At the wheel is the appointed and qualified driver, with a reliable road map to follow. And I am sure God does not expect any of us to do any back-seat driving."

Family Standards

Family unity is a powerful way of witnessing for Christ. Standards should be of the highest character and adhered to at all times without let-down or compromise. It is too easy to drift with the worldly current, and too difficult for the children whose grasp is still feeble to stem such a tide. The path of least resistance may seem inviting, but salvation does not come cheaply. It must be sought out by diligence, prayer, and study, and then labored for untiringly. Struggle and prayer over problems, seeking divine guidance and wisdom enlarges our spiritual perceptions, and the path becomes more clearly marked as we advance. Family devotional hours with ever-renewed voicing of our consecration to God and his ways is the best possible standard to raise about which our loved ones can rally. These moments can be made memorable. Great truths should be explained in simple terms. Children will learn early in life the value of prayer, they can be helped to understand that true prayer is not the "gimme" variety, and that in praying for patience, wisdom, and light, one should sincerely desire them for the blessing and benefit of others.

Stewardships

Children can learn about the stewardship of money, too. The small ones can find great satisfaction in tithing their pennies. As they advance in years, they can learn that their expanding powers and abilities to earn will be spiritualized by freely giving and sharing. Many contributions, though small individually, when combined are spiritualized as they are turned into channels of relief for the poor, for the building of needed churches, for sending missionaries out with the "glad tidings" of gospel hope, for the printing of quarterlies and other study material, and for promoting the cause of Zion in any way.

The Home Column

The family, more than any other group, can present to the world the testimony of a living faith, a witness of what the power of the gospel can do in the lives of ordinary people. It brings added luster to the glory of this latter day commission and speeds mightily the time when "Zion shall arise in her beauty," and "draw all nations unto her."

May we never falter nor weary of telling our children about this glorious objective and instilling a desire in their hearts to assist in the task.

The glory of God is intelligence, or, in other words, light and truth; . . . and I have commanded you to bring up your children in light and truth . . . set in order thy house . . . What I say unto one, I say unto all.—Doctrine and Covenants 90: 6, 7, 8.

Rainy Day Fun

With an eye toward rainy-day fun for your children, open some of your cans at the bottom, wash and save them with the labels intact. Also keep a couple of butter cartons, a cheese box, some egg containers, different sized sacks and shopping bags that are a trifle delapidated.

When the children get restless on a stay-inside morning, these come down off the shelf to be a basis for a wonderful game of "store" where the children can combine their imaginative playing with the "purchase" of the "real thing." It's twice as much fun that way.

—LOUISE.

Briefs

PROTON, ONTARIO.—During the summer there have been two children blessed and two baptismal services. Seven were baptized in the early summer, and five were baptized later when Elder Louis Zonker was visiting at the branch. Brother Zonker held a series of missionary services for two weeks in August.

On August 14, besides Elder Zonker, District President Gordon Farrow of Wiarton was present, also Alex Cadwell and Fred McLean of Guelph, Arthur Dunn of Elora, and Aubrey Mason of Wiarton. Brother Mason is working on plans for junior church services at each of the branches.

This fall a hydro-electric system was installed in the church, bringing electricity.—Reported by DELL BLACK.

NORTHEASTERN ILLINOIS DISTRICT.—Apostle D. T. Williams was the speaker at the annual conference held at the Mission Church, September 11. At the afternoon business meeting, credit cards and certificates were presented to those who had completed study work under the Christian Education and Leadership Training Curriculum. Classwork and a junior worship service, in charge of Cora Anderson and Ethel Malcor, were held in the lower auditorium for the children. Officers for the new year were elected. Lloyd Cleveland is the new district president. The names of Roy F. Healy and Robert Anderson were approved for ordination to the office of elder.

SAULT SAINT MARIE DISTRICT.—The Annual Conference of this district was held at Sault Ste Marie, Ontario, on October 16, with Apostle Percy Farrow in charge. Officers elected were Rex Stowe, district president; William A. Bushila, counselor; Vernon Charlton, counselor; Mrs. Beulah McKiddie, secretary; A. R. Nott, treasurer; Harvey Wagg, church school director; Mrs. Elizabeth Brown, women's department leader; Mrs. Oris C. Flood, musical director; Mrs. Dorothy Fletcher, young people's leader; and Miss Mary Evans, district historian.

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI.—Roy Cheville, of the Graceland College faculty, was the speaker at the Stone Church, October 30, at both the eight and eleven o'clock services. KMBC carried one-half hour of the Stone Church service at 11:00, and Brother Cheville's first ten minutes were broadcast. The Stone Church Choir directed by Paul Craig provided the musical setting, and Bethel Davis Knoche was organist.

The Stone Church Senior Zion's League has adopted as its theme for the year, "Strengthen the Arm of Service." A poster has been made to remind them of this theme. It has been made on it the words from King Benjamin, found in Mosiah 2:43. The president of the League for this year is Edgar Van Fleet. The League leader is Miss Doris Oakman.

At their regular meeting, October 23, the older people of the congregation were invited to present the program. It was recreation night at the League and these people, under the direction of Clayton Wolfe presented a Religio program. This program included quartet singing, stunts, readings, solos, and chalk talks. Good fellowship was felt between the Leaguers and their guests.

The League had a Halloween party in the Stone Church Annex on Saturday night, October 30. At present they are taking up collections for Thanksgiving baskets and collecting toys to mend for Christmas baskets. A recent addition to the curriculum for these Leaguers is a visit by small groups of the members to the home of Apostle Reed Holmes for informal discussions concerning the problems of the young people themselves. Pastor Glaude Smith has been giving talks to the League in their regular meetings, concerning the basic beliefs of the church.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, IOWA.—Elder H. I. Velt held a two-week series of meetings. Eleven new members were baptized, and more are expected to be baptized on November 20. There was a large attendance at every meeting. Slides and charts were used to illustrate the sermons.—Reported by V. D. RUCH.

LENNOX BRANCH, INGLEWOOD, CALIFORNIA.—Rally day was celebrated on September 25 with a special program and promotional exercises at the church school hour. Ninety-seven people attended the basket dinner held at the noon hour. Installation program for branch officers was held in the afternoon, and an installation program for Zion's League officers was held in the evening.

These officers were installed: H. R. Blake-man, pastor; Perry Woods, church school director; Jeannette Reeves, secretary and book steward; Glenn Lawson, financial secretary; Ralph Root, bishop's agent; Betty Stewart, music leader; Nellie Woods, adult supervisor; Bill Webb, young people's supervisor; Joyce Pearson, children's supervisor; Harriet Glaze, librarian and publicity agent; Henrietta Root, historian; Olive Harmon, drama leader, and Ray Webb, children's pastor.

Women's Department officers are Dorothy Slater, leader; Millie Rounds, assistant leader; June Birch, secretary-treasurer; Ruth Stoddard, program chairman; and Hazel DeHart, ways and means chairman.

Zion's League officers are Arlene Holmes, president; Frances Holmes, vice president; Leroy Green, secretary; Wanda Green, treasurer; and Darling June, historian.—Reported by HARRIET GLAZE.

ALMO, MICHIGAN.—Evangelist E. R. Carter of Lansing, Michigan, conducted one-week series of sermons, beginning October 9, at the local church. Services were well-attended. During the week thirteen patriarchal blessings were given by Evangelist Carter and reported by Mrs. Lucy Gulick.

BUCKNER, MISSOURI.—The Buckner group was organized April 29, 1945, with fourteen charter members. During the first eighteen months, the congregation grew to a membership of 112. A dedication service was held October 23, the sermon being given by Bishop Walter Johnson. Elder Sam Smith gave a history of the congregation. Those taking part in the dedication services were Elder J. J. Teeters, Bishop Willard Becker, Carlos Smith, Stake President H. J. Simons, Elder D. R. Hughes, and J. Charles Margargee. One hundred fifty-five persons attended the meeting.

OMAHA, NEBRASKA.—Elder Guy Riley has been appointed associate pastor by Elder Charles Neff, pastor of the branch. Elder Riley has many years of priesthood experience, including three years as pastor of the Fremont Mission. His present objective will be the South Omaha Mission, a new group sponsored by the branch.

OREGON DISTRICT.—The forty-sixth year of organization of this district is to be celebrated November 3 through 6. General church speakers and teachers include Bishop G. L. DeLapp, Apostle C. G. Mesley, Missionary E. R. Vest, and Mrs. Peggy Vest. Oregon District speakers and teachers are District President J. L. Verhei, Evangelist W. H. Barker, Bishop M. E. Lasater, and Evangelist Mark Yeoman. All meetings are scheduled to be held in the Washington Hall, East 8 and Burnside, except the Thursday night service which will be held at S. E. Portland Church, 72 and Rhone Streets.

SPRING RIVER DISTRICT.—Joplin, Missouri, Branch was host to the Spring River District Conference held October 8 and 9. The conference was opened Saturday evening by a panel discussion led by Apostle E. J. Gleazer, Elders John Blackmore, F. M. Bishop, and C. D. Wilson. On Sunday morning there was prayer service, and for the church school hour the group divided into four sections. Both the upper and lower auditoriums were filled for the eleven o'clock sermon by Apostle E. J. Gleazer.

Officers selected during the afternoon business session were John Blackmore, district president; C. D. Wilson and F. M. Bishop, counselors; E. G. Gilbert, church school director; Mrs. T. W. Bath, women's department leader; Mrs. C. E. Wilson, secretary; Norman W. Gray, treasurer and bishop's agent; Esther Heller, district examiner; Sam G. Landrum, statistician; J. Arthur Dixon, young people's leader; Inez Smith Davis, historian; and B. F. Kyser, auditor.

Recommendations were approved for the ordinations of Harry Shank to the office of elder and of Eldon L. Kastl and Theodore Linder to the office of priest. Twenty-five delegates were chosen to represent the district at General Conference in 1950.—Reported by LOIS SHIPLEY.

HOUSTON, TEXAS.—The Saints of Houston were grateful for the ministry of Patriarch Elbert A. Smith on September 25 and October 2. The spirit of his office emanated as he pronounced a father's blessing during the Communion service.

The following officers were selected at the annual election on August 31: Roy Vandell, pastor; Albert Banta and Lon Mitchell, counselors; Elsie Hedgwood, secretary; Buidette Root, treasurer; Beulah Bobbitt, music director; Fred Banta, church school director; Mrs. Crete Arnold, women's leader; Ora Lee Ambler, librarian; Mrs. Nell Fund, book steward; Clarence Wright, adult supervisor; Mrs. Vera Barksdale, young people's supervisor; Mrs. Dorothy Lilleux, children's supervisor; J. V. Suggs, junior church pastor; Jimmie Grubbs, church school secretary; Mrs. Lucile Crooker, publicity agent; and Lynn Mitchell was sustained as solicitor.

Brother and Sister Charles Tischer offered their home each Friday evening during the summer for social fellowship and for an evening of recreation, the proceeds of which have contributed considerably to the building fund.

Robert Allen and Joe Hitchcock are attending Texas A. and M. College; Elaine Wagner, Southwestern; Burdina Root, Bun Bobbit, Millard Payne, and Allen Williams, the University of Texas; Clarence Carter, Kelly Ballinger, Jimmie Grubbs, Elaine Spiller, Natalie Post, and Jerome Wagner, the University of Houston; Ethel Mae Dorrow and Elsie Hedgwood are in nurses' training at Herman Hospital.

Brother Arthur L. Funk will start a series of missionary sermons on November 6.

THE BURBANK, CALIFORNIA, CHURCH

IN MARCH, 1949, Pastor Edward Spencer, with the consent of the branch and of District President Garland E. Tickemyer, Bishop J. Stanley Kelley, and Apostle Charles R. Hield, arranged for the purchase of the Lutheran church on the corner of Elmwood and Sixth Street in Burbank. The purchase price was $14,000, of which the General Church agreed to loan $7,000 to the Burbank Saints for ten years at 1 per cent interest. Opening date of the new church home was set at March 20, and 200 letters were sent out to members and friends, announcing the service and stating the financial need. Response was generous, and on the opening evening the little chapel was well filled. The offering at this service totaled $350, bringing the amount in the building fund to $5,500—a gain of $1,255 since January 1.

Since the title to the building was placed in escrow until June 4, a concerted effort was made to raise the amount needed by that date. The women's department, members of the Van Nuys mission, the Lennox Branch, the Daughters of Zion, and the Zion's League sponsored projects and assisted in raising funds. To this was added the sacrificial offerings of the Saints, making possible the required payment in June.

The building is a substantial stucco structure with a tiled roof and stained glass windows. It has a well-kept lawn with ornamental trees and shrubs. The auditorium, with seating capacity of 250, has a raised chancel and baptismal font; there is also a pastor's study. These are carpeted with green and gray broadloom. There is also a nursery and kitchen.

THE BRANCH was organized on November 28, 1948, at the Women's Club House in Sunland, California, where services were then being held. Assisting in this meeting were President F. Henry Edwards, Apostles E. J. Gleazer and C. R. Hield, Evangelist Louis Ostertag, Bishop David Carmichael, District President G. E. Tickemyer, and John W. Rushton.

Membership has grown from ninety in 1945 to 174—a gain of 93½ per cent. There is an active women's department and a Daughters of Zion group, as well as a Zion's League. Junior worship services are conducted for the children, and on the Sunday preceding Communion, they have their own fellowship meeting.

Five men have recently been called to the priesthood and were ordained in October. They are Douglas Clark and Vernon Cline, elders; Edward Spencer, priest; Thomas Calamia, teacher, and John Kirkpatrick, deacon.

Salvation From Self

By CHARLES KORNMAN

Illustration by John Thoman

PSYCHIATRISTS and psychologists have uncovered several important truths in their efforts to rehabilitate patients who are recovering from sieges of mental illness. These patients are the unknowing recipients of what is known as positive psychology—the “sunny side of the street stuff,” the “silver lining” theology, the “things will be better” approach. And it works wonders. Medical journals record instance after instance of cases where a “positive approach” has worked cures in almost miraculous fashion.

Ministerial students, along with their training in homiletics and use of sepulchral tone qualities, are urged to be positive in their sermons. They are told that negativism has no place in the pulpit, that a “positive Christ” is the saving Christ, that a negative Christ is repulsive to many people.

But the fruits of “being positive” have gone further and deeper than perhaps any of us realize. The minister who stands behind the pulpit to proclaim the doctrine that man is sinful and that the gospel of repentance rests upon that assumption often finds himself one of the less popular group. Often he finds himself described as old-fashioned and nonprogressive.

We find ourselves in whole-hearted agreement with the “positiveness” of our age because it works, but if this positiveness oversteps its bounds—as indeed it often does—and suggests that man’s salvation lies within himself, then we must argue, and rightly so I think, that it has gone too far.

“The fact that they [the Scriptures] proclaim a gospel of redemption rests upon the assumption that in humanity as it stands there is something radically perverted, something which nothing but the action of God can remedy, something which forever disqualifies man from association with his Maker, and which robs him of his own best possibilities.”

PAUL, writing with prophetic inspiration, declared that the things which are not seen are clearly understood by the things which are! Now, if this be true—and we go on record as believing that it is—let us then proceed to construct the basis on which we make the declaration that man needs God—man as he is and God as He is. It would be easy but fallacious for us to suggest that here we have a thesis and an antithesis, and all we need is a synthesis. This would suggest a coalescence with changes on the part of both, but it is man that needs to be changed. God as he is is the God of heaven—and as such we feel it folly to attempt to prove that which has so much scriptural proof—we know he, “the true and living God,” spoke of his essence when he said, “Before Abraham was, I am.” “The testimony that ‘God is’ ought to be part of the warp and woof of saintly testimony.” We think we believe, but I wonder just how many of us really believe that “God is.”

Man as he is is the one who needs changing. He’s the one who is the cause of the gospel of redemption through which he can “become” his natural self. The gospel is constructed because the nature of man as he is demands it.

Man as he is! What a powerful

www.LatterDayTruth.org

creature, but how much more powerful he could be! How intelligent, but how much more so he ought to be! How rich in potentiality, but how poor in reality! How he stands in need of "having the image of God engraven upon his countenance!" His is the "song of redeeming love," but he contents himself through ignorance and pride with "things that die with the doing."

WHAT IS THE THING that dooms man—which forever "disqualifies him from association with his Maker?" Is it failure to pay his tithing? Is it failure to pray? Is it failure to obey the word of wisdom? These are sins, but they are but indications of a lack of certain appreciations on the part of the offender. Acts are not what condemn a person; the condemnation comes from the attitude which permits the godless awfulness of rebellion to exist. It is the will to do evil that is bad in people today—just as it has been in centuries past. It is the "moral use of power" for oneself. It is making oneself the "primary beneficiary in the possession of light." No matter what the description, that which man needs freedom from is self.

It was this "selfness" that made the Christ necessary. He came to demonstrate selfless living: "I can of mine own self do nothing; because I seek not mine own will, but the will of the Father who hath sent me." "Love ye me and love all people. Love as I have loved you."

Now that which produced the Christ was of necessity of God, since that which the Master did is granted unto men only under rigid specifications by that same God. "Ye must be born again" is more than just a play on words. Analogy it may be, but I challenge the best to describe better what happens when the Spirit of God works "this mighty change in a man's heart" or to design a better ordinance than baptism "to objectify the facts of repentance and remission of sins."

"And now behold, I ask of you, my brethren of the church, have ye

My Neighbor, My Friend

By RUTH MIDGORDEN GOODWIN

UNTIL LAST WINTER I had experienced only once before the emptiness of living away from friends. We had just moved from Iowa to Oklahoma, and the sight of oil wells pumping thrilled me with the excitement of this fabulous industry—but my heart hit bottom as I viewed the red, sticky clay of our new home region, so different from the beautiful black soil of Iowa farms.

It was a bad time to know no one except the secretary of the Chamber of Commerce and the bank president. For within a month, our expected wee one arrived, and we had to settle to the large chore of adjusting to a first baby, setting up our factory, and trying to make home-like a house for which we had no furniture except minimum essentials. Ask any woman how she'd like to come home from the hospital—weak, tired, and emotionally unstrung—to a house with bare floors, bare windows, and bare walls.

The two Latter Day Saint women in town who contacted me were busy—one with working outside her home and the other with nursing her family sick with whooping cough and colds. But they made the effort and warmed my lonely existence considerably. Yet as I watched my neighbors coming and going, I wished that some of them, too, would come to visit me. One did, on Christmas Eve she brought me a spiritually been born of God?" No man can bear the truth until he is the truth. "Our job is to live by and to become the truth that we find." For it is through understanding of what He stands for that man can come to stand for Him. And "...thus may all become my sons!"

plateful of warm, homemade cupcakes. But she was the only one.

Then spring came and thawed some of the chilliness of our neighbors. Gradually we became acquainted with some of them by managing to be outside when they went to work or when they mowed their lawns. They weren't particularly unfriendly people. Busy with their own long-time friends and their work, they had let the days slip by into months without meeting or calling on their new neighbors.

So I silently vowed that the next new people to move into our block would have me as a caller right away. And I made good my promise, visiting my neighbor on the north who was already growing lonely her second day in town. We traded chocolate chip cookies, pieces of freshly baked cake and viewpoints on child care. When she became suddenly and seriously ill a month after moving here, we were able to help care for her two preschool-age girls and to take her roses, her favorite flowers, from our own bushes. She had no sooner recovered when I became ill. Not having any flowers around her house—a rented one—she clipped my roses and brought them in for me to enjoy, baked peach cobbler and strawberry shortcake for me. And another neighbor whom I had visited when she too was new came every day to see if there was something she could do.

Perhaps as I make more friends and acquaintances or grow busier with details of homemaking, I will forget this lesson on friendliness, so vivid now. But I hope I shall always keep before me the knowledge that time spent in being friendly and in cheering the sick or lonely is never wasted.

New Horizons

West Virginia District Conference

A departmental conference will be held November 19 and 20 at the Wheeling church, 42 Jacob Street. The district presidency will be in charge, with Seventy Merle Guthrie as guest speaker. There will be special business session at 7:00 p.m. Saturday followed by a program in charge of the district musical director at 7:30. Sunday's schedule includes a 9:30 a.m. fellowship, sermon by Merle Guthrie at 11:00, church school program at 2:00 p.m., ordination service at 3:00, program by women's department at 4:00, bishop's agent's report at 7:00, and preaching at 7:30.

MAY R. GRIFFIN,
District Secretary

Books Wanted

Florence Minton, Route 3, Box 318, Independence, Missouri, (phone IN 8820) would like to purchase Beatrice Witherspoon, With the Church in the Early Day, and Into the Latter Day Light.

Heralds Wanted

Mrs. Howard Tuttle, 709 North Jefferson, Ionia, Michigan, wants to obtain the eight Heralds (May and June, 1948) containing the Weldon serial, "Other Sheep I Have Which Are Not of This Fold."

Southeastern Illinois District Conference

The Southeastern Illinois District Conference will be held in Mt. Vernon on November 20 (rather than November 6 as previously announced). The day's schedule is as follows: prayer service, 9:30 a.m., preaching 11:00, basket lunch at noon, business session for election of district officers and General Conference delegates, 2:00 p.m. Apostle E. J. Gleazer and Elder Sylvester Coleman are to be present. Reports should be sent to Mrs. Ruby Ellis, District Secretary, 519 South Twelfth Street, Mt. Vernon, Illinois.

Wants to Contact Saints

Fred W. Cadow, Route 3, San Benita, Texas, would like to contact any members living in or near there.

REQUEST FOR PRAYERS

Prayers are requested for Ruth and Kate Atkinson of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

Molly K. Ramshaw, Lamoni, Iowa, expresses her thanks to all who have remembered her in prayer and sent cards or letters. She asks for continued prayers as she is to undergo surgery soon.

WEDDINGS

Hinderks-Box

Mrs. Violet J. Box of Tulsa, Oklahoma, and Elder Frank L. Hinderks of Stewartsville, Missouri, were married at the home of the bride's sister, Margaret B. Wilke, in Independence, Missouri, on October 30, Elder Emery E. Jennings officiating. Following the wedding reception, they left for a honeymoon in the East after which they will make their home north of Stewartsville, Missouri, where Elder Hinderks is pastor.

Testerman-Young

Virginia Young, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Young of Independence, Missouri, and Lewis Testerman, son of Mrs. Etta Stone, were married October 15 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Testerman in Independence. Elder Sanford Downs officiating. They are making their home in St. Joseph.

BIRTHS

A son, Jeffrey Lynn, was born on August 13 to Mr. and Mrs. Eldon Simmons of Detroit, Michigan. Mrs. Simmons is the former Lee Green. Both parents are graduates of Graceland College.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph G. Wilcox of Detroit, Michigan, announce the birth of a son, Kent George, born July 20. He was blessed in the Pontiac church on September 18 by Elders R. D. Davis and R. Hulise.

A daughter, Marsha Jean was born June 2 to Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Cunningham of Fremont, Ohio. She was blessed on September 11 at Oak Harbor, Ohio, by Elders Ray Ashenhurst and Walter Wirebaugh, her maternal grandfather. Mrs. Cunningham is the former Laurene Wirebaugh, R.N.

DEATHS

PIM.—Ernie Lou, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Norman L. Pim of Odessa, Texas, was born October 2, 1949 in a Vernon, Texas, hospital. (Date of death not given.) Grave-side services for the infant were conducted in the Davidson, Oklahoma, cemetery by Elders Ray Carrow and Robert Bunch. Mrs. Pim, the former Valeria Parker of Davidson, was graduated from Graceland College in 1927.

DAVIS.—Violet Gertrude, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Irvin Sauvain, was born March 25, 1887, at Esbon, Kansas, and died August 15, 1949, at the home of her sister, Mrs. Leah William, in Fort Scott, Kansas. She was married to Homer Thomas Davis on December 24, 1907; two children were born to them. She had been a member of the Reorganized Church since January 27, 1935, and was also a member of the Community Improvement Club.

She is survived by her husband; a daughter, Mrs. Mildred A. Davidson of Foster, Missouri; three grandchildren; four sisters: Mrs. Ruth Kay, Hume, Missouri; Mrs. Bertha Ayers, Mrs. E. L. Williams, and Mrs. Lavon Pryor, Fort Scott; and three brothers: Ort Sauvain, Woodbine, Iowa; Donald Sauvain, St. Paul, Minnesota; and Walter Sauvain, Fort Scott. A son and two sisters preceded her in death. Elder Dale Crown, assisted by C. C. Martin, conducted the funeral services at Cheney Memorial Chapel. Interment was in the Lath Branch Cemetery.

SCOTT.—John Thomas, son of Moses K. and Mary Hill Scott, was born at Scottsville, Indiana, on December 6, 1866, and died October 23, 1949, at Centennial Hospital in California. He spent fifty-six years of his life in Indiana, during which time he served as postmaster of Valparaiso for eight years. On December 13, 1885 he married Leora Miller; five children were born to them. Their first son died in infancy, and their twin sons, Harold and Earl, died in the 1930's. John Scott was baptized into the Reorganized Church in March, 1890; was ordained a priest on October 27, 1901; and was later ordained an elder. He was influential in establishing the churches at Louisville, Kentucky; and Burnville, Indiana. He was a faithful and efficient minister, loyally serving wherever needed. He was teaching a church school class when stricken with what proved to be his fatal illness.

He is survived by his wife, Leora; two daughters: Mrs. McGuire of Montebello, California, and Mrs. R. T. French of Glendale, California; a sister: Minnie Relender of New Albany, Indiana; a half brother, Joseph Scott of Kingsville, Texas, and three grandchildren. Funeral services were conducted by John W. Rushton and Fred A. Smith at the Pierce Brothers Chapel in Los Angeles. Interment was in Inglewood Cemetery.

RUBY.—William Arthur, was born May 27, 1881, at Omaha, Nebraska, and died unexpectedly at his work October 24, 1949, in Council Bluffs, Iowa. He had been a member of the Reorganized Church since June 27, 1927.

He is survived by his wife, Margaret, of Council Bluffs; two sons: Elmer William and Barton both of Council Bluffs; eleven daughters: Mrs. Marie Beckner, Mrs. Florence McNeal, Mrs. Alice Jones, Mrs. Lucille Petry, Mrs. Manda Bevington, Mrs. Violet Piazza, Mrs. Gladys Waffle, all of Council Bluffs; Mrs. Eliza Yanish and Mrs. Marjorie Yanish of Grand Forks, Minnesota; Mrs. Ethel Pries of Mondak, Iowa, and Mrs. Ruby Terry of El Monte, California; one brother, Fred Ruby of Fisher, Minnesota; forty-four grandchildren; and twelve great-grandchildren. Funeral services were held at the Woodring Mortuary in Council Bluffs, Elder V. D. Ruch officiating. Burial was in the Crescent, Iowa, cemetery.

McINTOSH.—Caldwell, was born September 15, 1871, at Honeycreek, Iowa, and died October 11, 1949, at the Mother of Grace Hospital in Gregory, South Dakota. He was married in 1892 to Eliza Allen; eight children were born to them. Mrs. McIntosh and five of the children preceded him in death. He was a member of the Reorganized Church.

Surviving are two daughters: Katherine Pruitt and Edna Mahan, and a son, Riley McIntosh, all of Council Bluffs; a brother, William McIntosh of Honeycreek; a sister, Rose Points of Woodbine, Iowa; twenty-eight grandchildren; and thirty-one great-grandchildren. Funeral services were conducted by Elder V. D. Ruch at the Woodring Mortuary in Council Bluffs. Interment was in the Allen Cemetery near Honeycreek.

WHIPPLE.—Thomas Geer, son of Timothy and Lucy Ann Geer Whipple, was born December 8, 1867, at Quakertown, Ledyard, Connecticut, and died July 29, 1949, at his home in Groton, Connecticut, following two years of illness. He was baptized into the Reorganized Church on April 5, 1892, despite the protests of his family. On October 19, 1919, he was ordained a priest, which office he held the remainder of his life. He helped to establish the New London Branch and was a pioneer in spreading the gospel in that area. A builder and contractor by trade, he built the chapel at Providence, Rhode Island, during the two years he lived in that city. On November 22, 1888, he married Lillian Phillips; six children were born to them. Mrs. Whipple died on October 3, 1930, and a son, Philip Thomas, died on November 15, 1946. In March, 1932, he married Carrie Northrop Geer, who gave him loving and patient care during his long illness.

He is survived by his wife, Carrie; two daughters: Mrs. Lillian Crandall and Mrs. Florence Simmons of Independence, Missouri; three sons: Francis Harold of Ledyard, Connecticut; John Elijah of Rumford, Rhode Island; and Alma Timothy of Independence; seventeen grandchildren; and twenty great-grandchildren. Funeral services were held in New London, Elder Donald Crowell officiating. Interment was in the family lot, Star Cemetery, Groton.

PARKER.—Theophilus Windsor (O. W.), son of Montague W. and Suzanna Reese Parker, was born December 12, 1875, in St. Louis, Missouri, and died October 8, 1949, at the Independence Sanitarium following a year and a half of illness. In 1882, he moved with his mother and grandparents to Pleasanton, Iowa, where he grew up and received his early education. Later he took his business training at Stanberry College. He was first employed by a Pleasanton store, then by the K. and W. Railroad (Burlington). On May 11, 1902, he married Bessie Ethel Leeper, and in 1908, he with his wife and family moved to Lamoni. One year later he was employed by the Herald Publishing House as bookkeeper—the beginning of a business career which lasted until his retirement on August 10, 1949. During those forty years he served as acting business manager, treasurer, and production manager. He was baptized a member of the Reorganized Church on July 12, 1885, by W. W. Blair and ordained to the office of teacher on July 27, 1902. He had made his home in Independence since 1921 when the Herald Publishing House was moved here from Lamoni.

He is survived by his wife, Bessie; three sons: Montague L. and Paul O., both of Independence, and O. W., Jr., of Canyon, Texas; a daughter, Mrs. Camille Wilhelmsen, of Independence; and three grandchildren. Funeral services were held at the Stone Church, Elder Glaude A. Smith officiating. He was assisted by Elders Charles Graham and Arthur Stoff. Interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery.

FWLDER.—David O., son of Joshua and Mary Fowler, was born March 10, 1887, at Deer Creek, Maryland, and died at his home in Springfield, Massachusetts, on April 13, 1949. He was baptized into the Reorganized Church on December 7, 1902, and on August 22, 1911, was married to Marion Moulton; one son was born to them. In 1923 they moved from Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, to Springfield and were isolated from the church until about 1940 when other Saints moved into that area and a small mission was started. Brother Fowler served the church as a teacher from May 3, 1942, until his death.

He is survived by his wife, Marion, and his son, Samuel David Fowler, both of Springfield; a brother, Robert Fowler of Grand Rapids, Michigan; and two sisters: Mrs. Ruby Volz and Miss Phebe Fowler, both of Philadelphia. Services were held at the O'Donnell Funeral Chapel in Springfield, Elders James Barton and Archie Beggs officiating. Interment was in the Brookfield, Massachusetts, cemetery.

Alaskan Journey

(Continued from page 9.)

BURTON.—Dr. Benjamin Otto, was born October 26, 1868, at Bentonsport, Iowa, and died October 13, 1949, at Mercy Hospital in Council Bluffs, Iowa, following several months of illness. He was a life-long resident of Iowa and had lived more than thirty-five years in Council Bluffs where he practiced osteopathy. Following his retirement four years ago, he had made his home with his son. He was married on December 30, 1890, to Minnie Alva Seward; two children were born to them. His wife preceded him in death on July 10, 1937, and his daughter, Edith, died a few years ago. He had been a member of the Reorganized Church since February 7, 1909.

His only immediate survivor is his son, Stanley Burton, of Council Bluffs. Funeral services were conducted by Elder V. D. Ruch at the Woodring Mortuary. Interment was in Walnut Hill Cemetery, Council Bluffs.

BOWERS.—Jeanette Gene, daughter of A. Z. and Sarah Rudd, was born December 30, 1884, at Dow City, Iowa, and died October 9, 1949, at her home in El Monte, California. She was married on August 19, 1903, to Benton M. Bowers, Sr.; nine children were born to them. She had been a member of the Reorganized Church since October 11, 1893.

She is survived by her husband Benton; two sons; Frederick A. and Benton M., Jr.; two daughters; Vinnie B. Roach and Juanita J. Bowers; five grandchildren; and a sister, Mrs. Alta Crawford. Five children preceded her in death. Funeral services were held at the Schand Mortuary in El Monte, Elders V. L. Lum and Lynn E. Smith officiating. Interment was in the Rose Hills Memorial Park in Whittier, California.

BECKETT.—William Raymond, son of Elder and Mrs. William T. Beckett, was born August 25, 1904, and was killed October 10, 1949, at the door of his home in Placerville, California, when the gun he was carrying to go deer hunting fell from his arm and discharged. He was baptized into the Reorganized Church on November 30, 1916, and was later ordained to the office of priest. In this capacity he served his church honorably and well. He was first married to Wilma Melchoir; three children were born to them. Following her death on March 4, 1934, he married Hazel Scheller; one son was born to this union.

He is survived by his wife, Hazel; two daughters: Mrs. Joyce Koski and Janice Beckett of Placerville; two sons: William R., Jr., of the United States Navy, and Phillip Beckett of Placerville, his parents of Post Oak, Missouri; five brothers: Orval of Placerville; LaVerne of Gold Run, California; Joe of Omo Ranch, California; Loren of Post Oak; and Robert of Stella, Nebraska; three sisters: Mrs. L. G. Hutchinson of Post Oak; Mrs. H. L. Highland of Denver, Colorado; and Mrs. Herschel Damitz of Sacramento, California; and one grandson. Funeral services were conducted at Memory Chapel in Placerville, Evangelist W. H. Dawson officiating. Interment was in the new Coloma Street Cemetery in Placerville.

SCHMIDT.—Margaret M., was born on September 28, 1879, at Bay City, Michigan, and died at the Saginaw Osteopathic Hospital, Saginaw, Michigan, (date of death not given). She was married to William Schmidt on June 18, 1912. She was a member of the Reorganized Church.

Besides her husband she leaves a sister, Mrs. Anna M. Diehl of Bay City. Funeral services were held at the Case Chapel, Elder Lewis Grice officiating. Burial was in Forest Lawn Cemetery.

GUTHRIE.—Nora E., widow of the late Elder William A. Guthrie, was born September 9, 1875, and died August 7, 1949. She united with the Reorganized Church over fifty years ago and remained a faithful member throughout her life. Her home was always open to missionaries, friends, and neighbors as well as to her family. Her husband preceded her in death on January 2, 1946.

Surviving are seven daughters: Mrs. Verna Ford of White Hall, Illinois; Mrs. Violet Hunter, now en route to Athens, Greece; Mrs. Vera Flowers of St. Louis, Missouri; Mrs. Bernita DeLany of East St. Louis, Illinois; and Mrs. Irma Campbell, Mrs. Carol Thomas, and Mrs. Gay Weaver of Pleasant Hill, Illinois; three sons: Forrest and Oral of Pleasant Hill, and Leonard of Nebo, Illinois; twenty-four grandchildren, nineteen great-grandchildren; three sisters: Mrs. Ada Guthrie of Pearl, Illinois; Mrs. Orpha Sidwell, and Mrs. Clyde Ford of Nebo; and two brothers: Ray and Orla Johnson of Nebo. Funeral services were conducted by Seventy James S. Menzies.

appears on Chief Shakes Island at Wrangell. It depicts three grotesque frogs seated on a horizontal pole. It is recorded that three wanton women left one tribe to live with three men in the Shake's tribe. After some time a request for the original tribe to pay board and room was presented and scornfully rejected by the tribe that had cut off the wicked ladies. Unsatisfied by the reply to this "account rendered," the Shake's chief planned a ridicule totem pole, using the frog, chief totem figure of the defaulting tribe. So the three ludicrous frogs representing the three ladies of questionable morals remained up for all to see until the other chief paid the account and as a penalty purchased the totem pole so offensive to his people's honor.

Ketchikan was the last Alaskan port of call. I arrived there at 2:00 a. m.—a little early for a pastoral call on the two sisters who live there. I managed to contact one by phone before sailing south past countless islands and many miles of pine-clad shore line to Seattle, Washington.

ALASKA gave me many opportunities to visit with ministers of other churches. They face the tremendous odds of a pioneer territory, one half of its population being of three hardy and primitive races—the Eskimo, Indian, and Aleut. Many of the Caucasian other half were transients, and all of the 100,000 people were scattered across a vast area equal to one fifth of the United States.

The territorial government has a Senate of sixteen members and a House of Representative of twenty-four members, with a governor and secretary of Alaska appointed by the President. The variety of climate and resources of this vast area of 586,400 square miles cannot be summarized in one article.

Before visiting Alaska or making plans to settle there, one should secure accurate information from the offices of the Alaska Railroad, Anchorage, Alaska; the Chambers of Commerce in Anchorage, Fairbanks, Juneau, or The Alaska Development Board in Juneau. Saints with a desire to make either permanent or temporary moves to Alaska should consult the First Presidency or Presiding Bishopric.

The church has over ninety members in Alaska. The thirty Saints in the Anchorage area have organized for regular meetings. The Fairbanks area has eighteen, and meetings are planned. A regular mail contact is proposed for all the scattered members. Alaska presents a situation in which the need for the Restored Gospel is great, and the need for dependable and tested leadership is evident.

Those who read this article are urged to help meet the needs here and elsewhere by their consistent compliance with the financial law and to the quickening local missionary program of the church. They may not be among "those sent," but they can help to make possible "the sending" and thus have a part in a well-planned and supported program to carry the banner of Christ into all the world for a witness.

IN THIS ISSUE

EDITORIAL:

Men of Good Will.....	3
Travelog	4

ARTICLES:

For This I Am Truly Thankful, by Harold I. Vett.....	5
Alaskan Journey, Part II, by C. G. Mesley.....	7
I Visited the Rotterdam Branch, by Roy A. Cheville.....	10
Question Time.....	14
Interesting Personalities: Pat Livingston.....	15
I Witness for Christ Through My Family, by Audentia Anderson.....	16
Briefs.....	18
The Burbank, California, Church.....	19
Salvation From Self, by Charles Korman.....	20
My Neighbor, My Friend, by Ruth Midgorden Goodwin.....	21
Faith to Be Healed, by Chris B. Hartshorn.....	24
Bulletin Board.....	22

P.S.

* LAMONI AND GRACELAND

A return trip to Lamoni, for a former resident, is a spiritual pilgrimage. The place is like a shrine. The people who have lived and died there, and those who live and work there today, have given it a distinctive character. One feels a sense of leisure in the ample spaces about the homes, under tall trees, on wide lawns. There is peace in the homes, friendliness in the stores Yes, they are still holding church services in the Coliseum, but the Building Committee is about ready to go into action, and you may hear good news any day now. They now plan to build near the site of the old Brick Church, a beautiful location. J. C. Bergman, instructor in modern languages at Graceland, has made a personal stewardship of decorating the Coliseum with flowers, plants, and foliage, for each Sunday's services. He has done it for years now, a splendid work, greatly appreciated. . . . You get a warm welcome from Stake President Robert S. Farnham and Bishop Lewis Landsberg in the Stake Offices at the intersection of the principal streets of the town. They have a fine library of church books. The church has a unique opportunity to make a community representative of our best ideals in Lamoni.

Graceland holds special Sunday morning services on the College Campus for the large body of students. It will save many a cold and protect the health of the young people in the winter. Joint services are held downtown Sunday evening.

The Graceland Campus is undergoing a transformation. The Greater Graceland of which we dreamed and sang so long is arriving. The Student Center, a splendid modern building, pushing toward completion, is on the main plot of ground just northeast of the Ad Building. The two will make an interesting contrast: the ornamental gingerbread of the Nineties, and the functional simplicity of space and line of the Nineteen Forties. On seeing them recently an alumna commented, "I wouldn't give up the Ad Building for anything, but I like the modern too. Why shouldn't the campus represent the progress of architecture in our times? I don't believe in being regimented by any past period." That philosophy should bring peace between the lovers of the traditional and the modern, if they want it. . . . Kelley Hall is giving good service with large classrooms, and a number of offices for the faculty. There's something that has been neglected, and more are needed: offices for the faculty for their libraries, supplies, records, equipment, and for the consultation and interviews that are an important part of modern higher education. Offices need not be big, but they should be private. . . . The landscape gardening done at Graceland some years ago is now paying fine dividends in beauty. The new steam and power plant is a great addition. . . . The Lamoni community contributes much to the work of the Graceland community, furnishing rooms for students, hospitality, friendship, and a fine Christian influence. And the Graceland community contributes much to Lamoni. Isn't it always a privilege and a source of happiness to have so many fine young people about? It would be a dead world without them.

Faith to Be Healed

BELIEF IN DIVINE HEALING is as old as history. In times of critical sickness or extreme dangers, even men who make no pretensions of religion are apt to call on God for help. "Man's extremity is God's opportunity"—and He uses it.

The early day Saints were told: "In the day of their peace they esteemed lightly my counsel; but in the day of their trouble, of necessity they feel after me."—Doctrine and Covenants 98: 3. The Lord condemned them for their contentions, envyings, lusts, and covetous desires, saying, "For these things they polluted their inheritances."

Frequently it is the consciousness of our own shortcomings which keeps us from coming to God in faith. And by the same reason after we have received our blessings, we are inclined to go our way like the nine lepers who were cleansed, without returning to thank the Lord for his goodness and by our testimonies to make it a little easier for others to have faith in the power of God. Then too, there is another reason why Latter Day Saints frequently fail to bear testimony to the world of the power and goodness of God. So many times we are regarded by our associates as being a peculiar people that we often find it more convenient to take refuge in silence. Instead of discussing our beliefs and blessings with our business associates and social acquaintances, we use such smug sayings as "God knows my heart" or "Cast not your pearls before swine."

It is not true, however, that belief in divine healing is peculiar to our own church. In the teachings and practices of most Christian religions, there is an avowed faith in the power of God to heal our bodies as well as our souls. So why should we hesitate to join in this chorus? It may be true that these things are not commonly spoken of in the parlor or at the workbench, but, nevertheless, as you read the literature of most denominations you will notice claims of such divine favors. We thought the following, taken from the Christian Herald of September, 1949, and quoted by permission of its editor, Daniel A. Poling, would interest our people.

QUESTION:

I am a young mother thirty-six years old. I have five beautiful children, the eldest not quite six and the youngest not a year old. I am overwhelmed with grief. Medical science can do nothing for me. Do you think that God can and will? Surely he does not wish me to leave my babies now. Is this evil thing sent upon me because of past sins?

ANSWER:

The answer to that last question is "No," absolutely "No." Also the letter of this anguished mother makes unmistakably clear the fact that God has forgiven her—and he had much less to forgive in her case than in so many others. I believe and know that "as is my faith so it will be unto me." I have already put this mother at the heart of my prayer and have invited others to unite with me in prayer for her.

Alexis Carrel, author of Man the Unknown, who was one of the world's greatest physicists and a Nobel prize winner, tells of how he saw a cancer crystallize and disappear as the result of faith. He did not suggest that the physician and surgeon be dismissed, but he did say that beyond surgery and medicine the Great Physician can and does "operate." But this must be added: physical recovery is never the greatest thing; physical existence is but the beginning. We shall pray for this mother "in God's will," but never let it be forgotten that when God's answer is "no," his "no" is better for us than any other "yes."

This mother's problem is not a foreign nor isolated type. It is human and sincere. Dr. Poling's answer is clear, beautiful, and sound.

CHRIS B. HARTSHORN

THE SAINTS'

Herald

Isaac N. White

December 27, 1841—

December 3, 1925

Soldier, 1862

Schoolteacher, 1864

Seventy, 1886

President of Seventy, 1888

Apostle, 1897

Patriarch, 1913

(See Page 12.)

Bread Daily

WHILE RIDING a Chicago-bound train, September 23, I was reading the worship service in Daily Bread, "The Choice Is Ours." It carries a great spiritual challenge. As I meditated upon it, there came clearer light on my relationship to God. "Why doesn't God make us want to study?" asks the author. We have plenty of direction: "Study to show thyself approved . . ." "Study all good books . . ." yet so few do a serious job of it. "Why wait for a divine push to remind us to study?" asked Sister Baker.

The train sped on and on, but the question stuck in my mind. Yes, God doesn't force us; the choice is ours. On our decision we stand or fall; win or lose. Here was a challenge big enough for one day, so I closed my booklet and meditated.

Some, I learn, get their copy of Daily Bread three weeks before the month starts, and read it all through as they might read the Herald. Jesus taught us to pray, "Give us this day our daily bread." The Hebrews received their manna in the wilderness day by day. They could not save work by gathering a month's supply at a time. Neither can man store up his spiritual food so that monthly or Sunday feedings are sufficient for Christian growth. Reptiles in the zoo are fed weekly, and animals in hibernation go without food for months. The attendants at the reptile house in the St. Louis, Missouri, Zoo resorted to forced feeding of the great anaconda about once a month for a while. He preferred his own way of getting his food.

Man needs his bread daily—spiritually and physically. He may refuse to eat, or he may gorge himself. The choice is his; God invites him, but never resorts to force feeding. He treats us as intelligent men, not as animals.

Introducing...

JOHN W. RUSHTON (page 5) was introduced in the Herald of April 9, 1949.

D. O. CHESWORTH (page 8) was introduced in the Herald of July 25, 1949.

JOHN ROSCOE GRICE, Port Huron, Michigan, (page 9) was born at Forester, Michigan, October 16, 1888, and was baptized May 15, 1907, at East Fremont, Michigan. The next year he married Sarah Wolsey Harvey. Following her death, he married Verna Moffat. Elder Grice is the father of seven children: Helen Adel Cummins, Harvey Howard, John Ivan, Vivian Ardyce Frizzell, Vida Eleanor, William Max, Wanda Eileen Hanton.

Prior to his entry into the mission field in April of 1913, he labored in turn as a farmer, machinist, and sheet-metal worker, Buick factory worker, mercantile businessman, and postal clerk. He is an honorary member of the Lion's Club of St. Clair, Michigan.

Brother Grice was ordained a priest in 1909, an elder in 1912, a seventy in 1915, a high priest and evangelist in 1946.

THE SAINTS' HERALD

Volume 96

November 21, 1949

Number 47

EDITORS: The First Presidency: Israel A. Smith, F. Henry Edwards. ASSISTANTS: Leonard J. Lea, Associate Editor; Chris B. Hartshorn, Managing Editor; Kenneth L. Graham, Business Manager.

The Saints' Herald is the official publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, with headquarters at The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri, and is issued through the offices of Herald Publishing House, 103 South Osage Street, Independence, Missouri.

Entered as second-class matter at the post office at Independence, Missouri, under Act of March 3, 1879. Issued weekly at Independence, Missouri. Price, $3.50 per year and $1.75 for six months in advance in the U. S. A., its territories and possessions; Canada, $3.75 per year and $1.90 for six months; other countries, $4.50 per year. Notice of a change of address must be given three weeks ahead of the date that it is to become effective. Accepted for mailing at the special rate of postage provided for in section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized July 21, 1921. Printed in the United States of America.

News & Notes

EUGENE THEYS

Word has been received that Seventy Eugene Theys was released from the British Military Hospital in Hannover on Friday, November 4. He is now recuperating at his home in Rotterdam, Holland.

ZION'S LEAGUE NEWS

Fourteen of the church leagues of Independence have entered plays in the City-Wide Zion's League play contest. The White Masque players are helping many of the Leagues by supplying directors. The plays are given ratings according to their merit.

E. Y. HUNKER AND JOHN DARLING RETURN

During their visit in western Canada, Seventy Hunker and Elder Darling visited Saskatoon, Ribstone, Porcupine Plain, Arland-Senlac (commonly known as Cornish Settlement), Edmonton, Regina, Lethridge, and Calgary. At Porcupine Plain, a new country just opened for settlement, they met Mr. and Mrs. M. Carsen Oisen and encouraged them with their plan for starting a church school. At Cornish Settlement they found that the people, although hard pressed by economic conditions, were much alive spiritually. Such good progress is being made in the building of the Edmonton church it is expected that the lower auditorium will be in use by November 20. The groups in Saskatoon and Calgary are also working on their building fund for enlargements of their present churches. Brother Hunker remarks, "There is fine promise for future development in the central points of the prairie provinces of Canada."

REPORT ON WICHITA, KANSAS, CHURCH BUILDING

Apostle Reed M. Holmes, who has just returned from the Kansas District Semi-annual conference, reports that an active building committee is directing the building of the new church. The basement has been completed, and rapid progress is being made on the structure of the church. A large proportion of the work is volunteer labor by the people. Brother Holmes claims, "Nearly every night is work night for the Saints." The contractor, Al Seery, is a member of the church. While the church is being built, the Wichita Branch is meeting in the gymnasium of the Bethany Methodist Church.

"PREPARATION DAY"

The second of a series of eight monthly meetings, known as "Preparation Day," was held by the R. L. D. S. women of Independence in the Walnut Park Church on November 3. Mrs. Paul Kelsey, assistant women's leader, was chairman of the day's activities. Elder Fred Davies, Walnut Park, pastor, was the guest speaker.

The noon hour was a social period in the lower auditorium of the church. Speakers for the afternoon classes were Mrs. C. C. Peterson, Elder Albert Scherer, Mrs. Myron McConley, and Mrs. Fred Stevens. There was a nursery for preschool children.

This series of meetings, planned by the City-wide Women's Council, is developed around the theme: "A Zion Home is Missionary-Minded."

(Continued on page 7.)

We Ought to Be Thankful!

"For in the days of David and Asaph there was a chief of the singers, and songs of praise and thanksgiving to God."

—Nehemiah 12: 46.

Thanksgiving Is Old

Thanksgiving is very old. How old we do not know. There are hymns of thanksgiving and praise in some of the older non-Christian religious literature. The Children of Israel held a great ceremonial of thanksgiving to Jehovah on the eastern shore of the Red Sea after their escape from the Egyptians. They often worshiped and gave thanks after their victories over their enemies. Nehemiah, quoted above, traces the custom back to the days of David the king. The Psalms are full of words of thanksgiving.

The notion prevailing among some Americans (U.S.A.) that we invented Thanksgiving Day is clearly erroneous. The first Thanksgiving celebrated on the soil of America was observed by good English men and women who, though somewhat restless and quite discontented with their sovereign, were nevertheless loyal subjects of that irate Scot on the throne of England, His Majesty, James I.

Thanksgiving is old. It is universal. We are privileged to share it with all the people of the world. Isn't that good enough for us?

Thankful for What?

The people of the United States, who celebrate Thanksgiving Day on November 24, should be very grateful for abundant material blessings. Perhaps our fault is enjoying these blessings rather selfishly more than we should and being thankful for them too little and too infrequently.

During the last depression Will Rogers remarked, "This is the only country in the world where the bread lines are standing in wheat up to their knees."

Has it occurred to us to wonder what other peoples have to be thankful for? What about Britain, France, the Netherlands, Norway, Germany, Denmark, Czechoslovakia? It is not only the ruin of war that troubles them; they have economic maladjustments that seem almost impossible to remedy. Some are under political oppression very grievous to bear.

We should be thankful for material blessings, of course; but there are greater things to remember.

Thankful for Sunday

Have you ever been thankful for Sunday and all that it means? If one were to take a single day in his life and make a list of all the things in it for which he gave thanks, it would make quite a book. My Sunday is not very different from yours. Let's go down the list together.

Sunday school at 9:30. Here are the classes of lovely children, clean, beautiful, and in good health. What brightness they add to our gathering. We are very thankful for them. We are thankful for the adult classes of good people, the parents and friends. We are thankful for a faithful pastor, and for all the priesthood members who assist him. We are thankful for the teachers and the women workers.

While classes are going on, a call comes for administration. A sister has been through a serious illness; she is now in severe pain. Two of the elders go. They find the mother with her. They bring what cheer and courage they can. Then they anoint and pray for her. A blessing of relief is given, and peace and strength come to the patient. We are thankful to God for his love and mercy, which can bring comfort and help to the sick. We are thankful, too, for the doctors, the hospital, the staffs who have helped to save the life of this good woman.

At church there is a beautiful service and a fine sermon by an able young man. He revives our hopes and challenges us to a course of action. We know there is work to be done, and we will help to do it. God is blessing his people.

Thankful for Home

After church on Sunday we sit down to a tasty dinner. How thankful we are for our home. God has been good to us. Life has been good to us. Our blessings, we think, are greater than we could deserve. Here we have happiness and peace.

After the dinner dishes are done, we sit down to relax. There are magazines to open, some of them with beautiful pictures. One can be grateful that God has given to certain artists, past and present, remarkable powers to see life as rich and beautiful as it is, and to show it to us more clearly than we could see it for ourselves.

There is a new book, a volume rich in thought, learning, and wisdom. One is thankful for the masterminds of literature who can write so that the rest of us may learn and understand.

Then it is two o'clock—time to turn on the radio. The New York Philharmonic Orchestra is playing Beethoven's Sixth, the Pastoral Symphony. We are no great highbrows in music so feel perfectly comfortable in enjoying this lovely and melodious composition that charms us completely. We are thankful to God for music—the speech of heaven and the language of eternity. We are grateful for

(Continued on page 7.)

Editorial

Official

Attention of the church membership and of branch and district presidents is again called to the recorded devotional services now available for placement on local radio stations. Seven series of six programs each are now available, with hymns played on the Stone Church organ by Bethel Knoche; sermon and Scripture reading by Evan Fry, Radio Minister for the church, and announcements by Stephen Black. Each program is concluded in fourteen minutes ten seconds, leaving twenty seconds for a local announcement to be supplied over organ background, which continues until 14:45 for extended fade-out if desired.

These transcriptions are sixteen inch, instantaneous cut on acetate, 33 $\frac{1}{3}$ RPM Lateral cut, N.A.B. standard, inside out.

Rental charges are $2.00 per record ($1.00 per program) plus transportation and insurance charges from Independence to point of broadcast and return. Two scripts of each sermon are included free with each record. Mimeographed scripts of each sermon for distribution to listeners are available at nominal cost.

Address orders or inquiries to the Radio Department, Auditorium Building, Independence, Missouri, giving your name and address, name and address of the branch pastor, name of the branch, station call letters, frequency, power, and location.

Here are ready-made package programs which should be on radio stations throughout the country. No local group can afford to produce its own radio program when the cost of these recordings is so low. Contact your radio station, and if you can place several of these devotional programs, write the Radio Department today.

FRANKLYN S. WEDDLE,
Director of Radio.

Across the Desk

Elder E. E. Jennings, President of the Far West Stake, makes the following interesting comment concerning our work at Liberty, Missouri:

You will recall that Liberty congregation was organized in June, 1948. It now looks as if the Liberty group has developed into a stable and permanent congregation under the leadership of Brother Lloyd Siebert. In fact, the members have started a building fund. We must strive to build a new chapel there and then extend our missionary work to points in and around Liberty, which is the county seat of Clay County. Brother Siebert and I have discussed the possibility of starting a mission at Excelsior Springs.

By the help of our Heavenly Father, we will really establish ourselves in places that drove our forebears out. Thus far the people in Liberty and surrounding country have received us very well.

From a letter by Elder Herbert A. Lynn, dated October 26:

The Chico (California) Branch is growing. We recently had eight baptisms there. Several families were represented in this number, and those baptized ranged in age from eight to sixty-two years. We feel that this indicates a stronger branch in the years to come.

Brother and Sister Dewey McNamara of Arnold's Park, Iowa, express appreciation for The Reminder. We are pleased to excerpt the following from their letter:

We were really thrilled to receive one of the first copies of The Reminder, which came to us from Clifford Cole at Woodbine, Iowa. We have never met Brother Cole and don't know how he got our names, nevertheless we were most happy to receive this copy.

While we take the Herald and have a subscription to Daily Bread, it makes us feel we aren't entirely forgotten when you good people take the time to contact us, especially through this little paper.

HAWAIIAN WELCOME

The welcoming committee which greeted Apostle Charles R. Hield and Mrs. Henry Inouye on their arrival at the Honolulu Airport on October 17 "said it with flowers." Mrs. Inouye, supervisor of women in Honolulu, was returning to her home after attending the wedding of her son, Henry, Jr., who was married September 30 at Independence, Missouri. Apostle Hield, who is in charge of the Hawaiian Mission, will visit Saints on the islands of Oahu, Hawaii, Molokai, Maui, and Lanai before returning to Independence in early December.

Thanksgiving

Based on a sermon preached at the First San Francisco Church.

By JOHN W. RUSHTON

Scripture Reading: Psalm 103.

Texts: Giving thanks always for all things unto God and the Father in the name of our Lord, Jesus Christ.—Ephesians 5:20.

For what thanksgiving on your behalf can we possibly offer to God in return for all the joy which fills our souls before our God for you.—I Thessalonians 3:9.

IT IS FITTING we should join with the nations in general and public expressions of gratitude to Almighty God for his manifold benefits to us and all mankind. Since the first harvest was garnered by the fathers of our nation, this lifting up of the soul in prayer and thanksgiving has characterized our nation at this season of the year. The harvest is safely garnered; nature's varied bounty again has provided for our needs. Though there are some parts of our world where, through circumstances not always traceable to nature's failure, there is a lack, yet as a generous mother she has provided enough and to spare for us all. We heartily thank God for his unstinted gifts by which not only our recurring needs are met, but also out of our abundance we are able to give to meet the needs of others; many who are the victims of war and its concomitant evils.

Despite "man's inhumanity to man" and the many dark shadows which mar the face of our fair earth, the brightness of hope breaks through, and promise of the better days to come alleviates the tragic gloom of the present. With gratitude we echo the Psalmist in blessing God as we recount his unfailing benefits to the children of men.

It is axiomatic that gratitude has been recognized as the source of refinement in human character which even in Aesop's days found expression in the proverb: "Gratitude is the sign of noble souls." And, among the gems of wisdom with which Dr. Johnson enriched English literature is the following: "Gratitude is the fruit of great cultivation; you do not find it among gross people." Truly a thankful disposition is the foundation of a cultured life. It is not surprising therefore to find in religion that praise and thanksgiving have such an important place in the language and literature of the church through all the ages.

We recall also, it is equally axiomatic that ingratitude has been identified as the worst of defects in human nature. Shakespeare's tragedy of "King Lear" has its root in the well-known lines—"Ingratitude thou marble-hearted fiend. How sharper than a serpent's tongue it is to have a thankless child." In his "Twelfth Night," ingratitude is again identified as the basest of all human frailties:

I hate ingratitude more in a man
Than lying, vainness, babbling drunkenness,
Or any taint of vice whose strong corruption
Inhabits our frail blood.

IT IS NOT AN ACCIDENT or political conceit which inspired the founders of America to set aside a special season of thanksgiving to Almighty God for his manifold mercies; and it is symbolical of innate spiritual worth which has inspired our nation to follow for more than three centuries the lead they gave. Today in reverent contemplation of his providence, we join the millions who lift up their voices and sing:

Come, ye thankful people, come,
Raise the song of harvest home!

When all the world seems to have lost its way, and we do not understand each other's thoughts and words, we may at least make a beginning by learning the elementary courtesies of daily life of which thanks for benefits enjoyed is one. It is significant that a recent analysis of the cause of so many traffic accidents shows that even more than drunkenness, a lack of ordinary courtesy is the greatest cause of such tragedies. A thankful person is a courteous person. Such people have the foundation of nobility.

FOR WHAT shall we be grateful? It would be trite and tedious to catalogue all the blessings for which we should say "thank you." We would not evaluate a character who could find virtue only in self-gratification. To be thankful only for the things which please oneself would be essentially selfish. It is childish to accept with thankfulness only what pleases and treat with contumely or even resistance those things which deny self-will. We know that often that which parental wisdom and love deny is more beneficial than the favors granted. Our Lord advises us that as earthly parents know how to give good gifts to their children, the Heavenly Father would grant his Holy Spirit to his children in even greater abundance. Must we not believe that because he is good and loves, all that he gives and does for us ultimately will prove to be the best that could be done for us? If these premises are accepted, St. Paul's admonition that in "everything" we should give thanks is not an exaggeration but a logical conclusion. "Always and for everything!"—Weymouth version. "At all times and in all places!"—Moffatt. "At all times for all things."—Inspired Version. The meaning is clear. Always for everything we should be thankful. To the Thessalonians as well as to the Ephesians, the apostle writes the same. He did not change this feature of his religious philosophy, for the Thessalonian letter was his first, and Ephesians was his matured Christology: "In everything give thanks; for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus concerning you."

Weymouth's translation reads, "In every circumstance of life be thankful."

THE CONDITIONING CLAUSE is, "This is the will of God concerning you." If our life is conditioned in the will of God, then no matter what the circumstances all must ultimately be well. This is worked out in fuller detail by the apostle in the Roman letter: "What can ever part us from the love of God?" And he catalogues affliction, distress, persecution, hunger, nakedness, danger or sword. Exultingly he answers, "Nay, in all these we are more than conquerors," and is established in the assurance that neither "death, life, evil powers above or below, present or to come—nothing can separate us from the love of God" (Romans 8: 35-39). This supports the assertion of faith, "All things work together for good to those who love God and are called according to his purpose."—Romans 8: 28-30.

We summarize: This universe belongs to God who has planned the "far-off, divine event" when the whole of creation shall be subservient to his will and thus glorify him in all its workings and manifestations (Ephesians 1: 15-23). All things, including conflict, pain, suffering, frustration and even death are parts of the process by which human character is purified, refined and finally glorified.

We can endorse the meaning of the American poetess, Helen Hunt Jackson, when she sings:

Is it true, O Christ in heaven,
The highest suffer most;
And the mark of rank in Nature
Is capacity for pain?

In his book, The Problem of Pain, C. B. Lewis gives us another clue to the meaning of life's perplexities when he writes:

The only purpose of the book is to solve the intellectual problems raised by suffering; for the far higher task of teaching fortitude and patience I was never fool enough to suppose myself qualified, nor have I anything to offer my readers except my conviction that when pain is to be borne, a little courage helps more than much knowledge, a little human sympathy more than much courage, and the least tincture of the love of God more than all.

It is natural to feel thankful for those experiences which have contributed immediately to our satisfactions, pleasures, and gains. This, however, is interpreting happiness in terms of hedonism, as though all life's values were in eating, drinking, physical comfort, profits, and pleasures. A little reflection will show that this is not true, but that heroism and nobility of character and all the real values of life are produced and developed through stern self-discipline, self-denial, and sacrifice. It is a truism that the search for direct happiness is futile and at most is a by-product of embracing "stern duty." The ancient Psalmist realized this when he prayed, "Teach me the joy of sacrifice."

THIS THANKSGIVING DAY we are grateful for the lesson being learned by nations and communities as well as individuals that through "travail" (birth pangs, toil, laborious effort) sonship with God is being demonstrated. The present social, economic, and political anguish of our world is passing into a new life in which the family of God upon earth is being developed. In this we can see the truth which was in St. Paul's saying, "I can find joy amid my sufferings for you, and fill up in my own person whatever is lacking in Christ's afflictions on behalf of his body which is the church."—Colossians 1: 24. So also is Reverend George MacDonald's witness to the same truth, which lifts Christian experience above logic into the realm of testimony, "The Son of God suffered unto death, not that men might not suffer, but that their sufferings might be like his."—Unspoken Sermons, quoted by C. B. Lewis. It is not possible to conceive of a greater compliment than to be selected to share the suffering of a noble character whose sacrifices are for the benefitting of others.

Is it raining, little flower?
Be glad of rain.
Too much sun would wither thee,
'Twill shine again,
The sky is very black 'tis true,
But just behind it shines
The blue.

Art thou weary, tender heart?
Be glad of pain;
In sorrow the sweetest things will grow
As flowers in the rain.
God watches and thou wilt have sun
When the clouds their perfect work
Have done.

—Anonymous.

IT IS TRUE that we possess only what we share with others or can give away. This is the measure of our real worth. In this our great land, so favored of nature with its measureless endowments, the precious things of heaven, the treasures of the dew, the precious fruits of the gifts of sun, moon, and stars, the lavish wealth of the ancient mountains, the fecundity of the valleys with their laughing greeneries, we render our most grateful thanks. And we express this thanks best by doing with our stewardship that which we know is in the great heart of the Donor. We are thankful not only for the gifts to us, but also for the opportunity to share with others and help to alleviate their sorrow, distresses, and losses by the generosity of spirit which is "likest God."

In all that makes for the beauty of our earth and humanity revealing the brotherhood of man, adumbrating the coming kingdom; for light and shadows, for rain and sunshine, for sacrifice and joy, Good Lord, we are thankful! In this litany of praise, we all join on this glad day.

HOW CAN WE BEST GIVE our "thanksgiving"—in what way can we show our gratitude?

The most direct and simple answer to this question perhaps is this: "If this is my Father's world, and if he is graciously sharing with us as 'fellow laborers' this universe with its vast and varied content belonging to him, then we, as stewards or trustees, must assume the responsibilities as well as claim the privileges. At least we must intelligently and loyally seek to achieve his purposes."

As we seek to give gifts to our children that they can enjoy most and are gratified by their appreciation in the way in which the gifts are treated, so our Heavenly Father gives to us as his children with understanding. However until we learn to use his gifts in the way he desires, it may be that they will prove baffling and even hurtful to us. Through bewilderment, frustration, and pain we are ministered to and taught to use them in harmony with his ends. As Ehrlich the scientist failed 605 times before his specific Salvarsan was produced, and as the Curies had their long and heart-breaking failures before radium was discovered, so we may at least follow the example of the Negro scientist, Dr. Carver, who said, "I mix my prayers with my labors and sometimes God is pleased to bless the results."

Indeed, there is no other way to thank God effectively than to strive to live our lives in such a manner that the Giver of all good may find his purpose being accomplished in us, "whose meat and drink is to do my Father's will"—which was the purpose of our Lord—even though that means draining the cup of suffering to the bitter dregs. Our prayer shall be, "Grant that in the midst of pain we may find thee."

We Ought to Be Thankful

(Continued from page 3.)

Beethoven and Brahms, for Bach and Wagner, for poor despairing Tschai-kovsky and somber, brooding Sibelius; for the bright beauty of Mendelssohn and the exquisite melancholy of Chopin, for the genius of Haydn and the majesty of Handel, for everything from the organ-grinder delights of Verdi to the alpine rumblings of Richard Strauss, and a thousand others.

Let Us Be Thankful

We ought to be thankful. For all we have we are the luckiest people in the world. We live in the greatest age, even considering the atom bomb!

The greatness of this age is the fact that we still have a chance to make this one world—one in Christ. We have a chance to help bring peace on earth. We have a chance, if we will take it, to share the great blessings of life with all the other people of the world.

Let us be thankful in a better way than merely stuffing ourselves on Thanksgiving Day. We should worship. We should praise God. And we should try to lift ourselves up to become better than we are. Even the good animals show gratitude. A man should at least do as well as a beast. Gratitude marks all the higher qualities of mind, soul, and spirit. Let us thank God in order that we may be worthy to be his children.

L. J. L.

NEWS AND NOTES

(Continued from page 2.)

KANSAS DISTRICT SEMI-ANNUAL CONFERENCE

General personnel at the Kansas District Semi-annual Conference, which was held in El Dorado, Kansas, were Elder Myron F. La-Pointe, Seventy J. Charles May, and Apostle Reed Holmes. Elder E. A. Schmidt presided over the meeting. An important matter of the conference was the unified budget recently adopted by the district. An unusual feature of the conference was that it was held in El Dorado which is a mission.

ELDERS SCHOOL IN INDEPENDENCE

The second unit of the Elders School will begin November 29 at Liberty Street Church. The first unit closed three weeks ago with an average attendance of 120.

STONE CHURCH NEWS

Four members of the new Blue Ridge Mission were recently baptized in the font at the Stone Church.

SERVICE AT GUDGELL PARK

Elder Glen Sivits, missionary supervisor of Kansas City Stake, will hold a series of missionary meetings at Gudgell Park.

NEW ORGAN

A new Baldwin organ has been installed in the Liberty Street Church in Independence, Missouri.

PRESIDENT SMITH AT CHURCH DEDICATION

On Sunday morning, October 23, President Israel A. Smith preached the dedicatory sermon for the Owendale, Michigan, church. In the evening he preached in Detroit at the last meeting of the Detroit-Windsor District Conference.

FREDERICK H. JOHNSON DIES

Brother Frederick H. Johnson, who for many years was a prominent official with the Milwaukee Railroad Company at Chicago, died at the McNeal Memorial Hospital, Berwyn, Illinois, on Sunday, October 23. He leaves his wife, Grace Cobb Johnson, a sister of the deceased wife of the late President Frederick M. Smith, and son Byron C. Johnson, 25 South Kensington Avenue, La Grange, Illinois.

LAMONI, IOWA. — Graceland's Amateur Radio Club has been officially organized and is demonstrating its service to the school and community by opening a series of classes on radio theory and code. The first topic to be undertaken by the instructor, Charles Irwin, will be basic electrical fundamentals. A tape machine is available for code instruction. The club is building a "ham shack" to house the amateur radio equipment of the the new station, WOYO.

The Graceland Players presented "Arsenic and Old Lace" in Zimmerman Hall, October 14, under the direction of Roscoe Faunce. Those taking part were Shirley Highland, Maxalene Hursh, Clarke Ballinger, Lloyd Hurshman, Frank Hanna, Don Potts, Dick Dunlap, Ted Traver, and Ron Krahl.

The first assembly was held in the shell of the Memorial Student Center Building during the Home-coming celebration. A third generation Gracelanders, Oneida Archibald of St. Louis, Missouri, cut the ribbons, admitting homecomers to the interior of the structure. With her was her grandfather, Ed Belle, who attended Graceland in 1895.

Give Thanks Unto the Lord

THE FOLLOWING is from a prayer of thanksgiving offered by Elder Orson Hyde on October 24, 1841, at the Mount of Olives:

Though thy servant is now far from his home and the land bedewed with his earliest tear, yet he remembers, O Lord, his friends who are there, and family, whom for thy sake he has left. Though poverty and privation be our earthly lot, yet ah! do thou richly endow us with an inheritance where moth and rust do not corrupt, and where thieves do not break through and steal. The hands that have fed, clothed, or shown favor unto the family of thy servant in his absence, or that shall hereafter do so, let them not lose their reward, but let a special blessing rest upon them, and in thy kingdom let them have an inheritance when thou shall come to be glorified in this society. Do thou also look with favor upon all those through whose liberality I have been enabled to come to this land; and in the day when thou shalt reward all people according to their works, let these also not be passed by or forgotten but in time let them be in readiness to enjoy the glory of those mansions which Jesus has gone to prepare.

I have been repeatedly blessed by the sincerity of this petition and often return to it in the first volume of Church History, gaining a fuller appreciation of the task before us as I read the complete prayer. At Thanksgiving time we often permit our thoughts to center on those with whom we have enjoyed pleasant associations and those who have needed our attention and prayers. When others have received blessings, we have enjoyed our own Thanksgiving celebration more.

For three and one-half years I have been traveling long the eastern seaboard from Caribou and Washburn, Maine, on the northeastern border of my assignment to Portsmouth, Virginia, on the southern. At each Thanksgiving season, it seems to be a good time for a traveling appointee to meditate upon the spirit of the Saints who share their blessings with those who are called by the church to serve in full-time capacity. Many happy memories flood my mind as I remember the many members who have participated in this capacity. I should like to share with you some of the experiences of the Saints in Maine.

By BISHOP D. O. CHESWORTH

IN AROOSTOOK COUNTY, the heart of the potato country, there are two families of Saints; one living in Caribou and the other at Washburn. The Norton family consists of Sister Velma, who, despite her paralyzed condition, cares for the home duties. She also keeps up the correspondence which includes remembering the church with the family tithing and special offerings. The annual tithing statement is always reported on time. Despite their isolation from attendance at their church, they are constantly thinking of the welfare of the great Restoration Movement. Sister Verna teaches school and in addition to that has many home hobbies. Brother Ralph manages the farm and, needless to say, is usually busy, particularly at harvesting time.

Letters from Caribou always contain a friendliness which is genuine. Herald readers may enjoy some of the quotations from these letters: "We enjoyed very much meeting you. Grass is just getting green here (May 7). Leaf buds are just swelling on the trees. We have not planted yet, but have done a little work in preparing the ground. Verna is setting shrubbery every spare minute she can get. The world hereabouts is not yet green enough to be pretty. Hope sometime you will be able to see Aroostook when it is more beautiful than when you came. Hope you and yours are well and all goes well with your work."

Though separated from branch privileges by two hundred miles, the spirit of consecration dwells in the home of these people, and from their labors and talents come material means to support the church.

THE OTHER FAMILY of Saints, the Henry Russells, is at Washburn, not far distant from Caribou. Each year at the Maine Reunion we look for these good people. Their presence spells joy and success. As a result of my transfer to the southland for the summer months this year, I missed seeing the Jeep Station Wagon on the reunion grounds in Maine, which car constantly reminds us that the reunion is being supported by the Russells. There are four other members of this family and, though active during their earlier years in the community Baptist Church, each has been baptized a member of the Restored Church. Today one, Sister Cecil Ettinger, serves as a companion of our missionary to Nauvoo. Brother and Sister Russell, in conjunction with their son Maurice, operate a grocery and meat business here and are highly respected by the local citizens. They too remember the church, pay their tithing, and assist in a general way as requests come from the Jonesport Branch. Though distance separates us, Aroostook holds for me a "human interest" memory. May it please our Heavenly Father to bless these families continually and to bless the missionary efforts of Elders D. E. Harvey who is scheduled to labor there this month.

In addition to these families I am grateful for the experiences with the fishermen of Maine. I have so often thought and sung these words when leaving the state, "Blest be the tie that binds our hearts in Christian love." With many other enjoyable experiences at this Thanksgiving time, I am deeply grateful for three lobster fishermen who labor daily in the same waters. They are Brother Charles Lenfestey (known to many as "Uncle Charley"), his son Farrell, our Beals pastor, and Brother Erwin Alley. These three particularly have ministered to me in many ways: the clasp of the hand in silence, the sharing of experiences aboard their boats, living in their camps, the sympathetic consideration when their guest was seasick, the willingness to abide by the plan of stewardship as taught by the church in the filing of the financial statement and payment of tithes, the regular attendance at services during my forty sermons in their meeting place, and surely not the least, their public utterances of prayer in the house of the Lord.

These are men of the seas, year-round fishermen. They are likewise year-round disciples. Their homes are constantly open to the missionary, and their hospitality is unexcelled. They are men of God, not proclaimed by men, not known in the leading councils of the church, but definitely known by a kind Heavenly Father who is never very far from any of us. They represent many other fishermen who are devoted; their contribution is not minimized by their omission from this Thanksgiving message. Thank God for these men and others like them. May they ever serve the church. Thank God for those who have helped make them the men they are. We have sung so often, "God send us men whose aim 'twill be to live out the laws of right in every thought and word and deed." For these and many whom they represent at this Thanksgiving time, we are deeply grateful. We would remember the many who labor consistently for the church.

In the thought of Orson Hyde's prayer at the Mount of Olives, "Though poverty and privation be our earthly lot, do thou richly endow us with an inheritance that shall survive. Also look with favor on all those through whose liberality we are enabled to continue in this work. Let these not be forgotten but in time let them be in readiness to enjoy the glory of those mansions which Jesus has prepared."

The Miracle of the Thanksgiving Feast

By JOHN R. GRICE

THIS HAPPENED between thirty-five and forty years ago at the Independence, Missouri, Second Church, during the lean years when there was but little of the good things of life to be had. Old Brother Hugh Goold was then pastor. Sister Mary Larson, a member of the branch, was riding between Independence and Kansas City when the Spirit of God, which warms and enlightens the soul, came upon her and said, "Give a Thanksgiving dinner at the church." It impressed her so forcibly that she told her experience to the pastor, who likewise felt impressed and said to her, "Yes, go ahead."

Knowing that things were not plentiful, she asked, "How will I do it?" and he replied, "You and my wife bake, and we will invite the people in and have a Thanksgiving dinner."

They went about in the neighborhood and invited everyone, but some said, "we would like very much to come, but we haven't anything to bring."

"Never mind," they said, "You come anyway, even if you have nothing to bring."

Before the great day, Sister Larson commenced to bake, as did the pastor's wife. Meeting later with Sister Goold, Sister Larson said, "You know, Sister Goold, something peculiar happened to me. When I was through baking tonight, I had just as much of lard and other things as I did when I commenced baking this morning," and Sister Goold replied, "Well, do you know, the same thing happened to me!" and they rejoiced that the good spirit had blessed them thus.

Thanksgiving Day came. The church was full, and the speaker of the hour was busy telling the story of the gospel, when Brother Goold came into the hall (Curtis Hall), where the ladies were busy preparing the tables and getting the meal ready, to see how they were getting along. Knowing that the church was full, there being 200 or more gathered there, the women said, "Brother Goold, we haven't enough food to feed all that vast number of people." Brother Goold replied, "We will bow our heads and ask the Lord to bless the food, and maybe there will be enough for all."

In August, 1948, I went with Sister Larson, and Brother and Sister Neil C. Ross of 1308 West 27th Street, Independence, Missouri, to visit Brother and Sister Goold in Kansas City, Missouri, to verify the experience as it was related to me by Sister Larson. They both testified that Brother Goold bowed his head, as did the women who were present with him, and asked God's blessing on the food, and that when they opened their eyes and lifted their heads, lo, the tables were laden, and there were all the trimmings necessary and that go with a Thanksgiving dinner. Along with the fowl there were grapes and bananas and other fruits, and the tables groaned with the load of good things provided.

After all were fed, these good people scarcely dare say just how many baskets were taken up, but they did say that "there was so much left after such a blessing from on high, that they dared not let it go to waste, and that a great many baskets were taken to those who had need."

Saints, young and old, let us take courage. God is just the same today as he has ever been. The miracle of the "loaves and fishes" has had its counterpart in many ways in our day and time as many can testify. The God of Israel still lives and is interested in the needs of his people and hears the cry of those who are ready to give from their store to those less fortunate, however meager that store may be.

I Lived With Saints in Germany

By ROY CHEVILLE

THURSDAY AFTERNOON, July 7, the gates closed behind us on the border line out of Holland. Gene Theys and I were in Germany. We were heading toward Hannover. It hardly seemed true. My long-hoped-for dream was coming to pass. Hours of travel along highways and through villages made me ready to meet our German Saints. In early evening we stopped by an apartment building at the edge of the city. We were at the Franz Beil home. Rather stiffly I went through the handshaking and greeting, for my limited German was not proving very effective. I smiled and nodded through the evening meal.

This First Time in Homes

M. A. McConley, Blair Jensen, and Gene Theys had been in Germany on three tours. They had entered under the direction of the religious affairs administrations. They had stayed at the quarters sponsored by them. Let it be said that our representatives have been treated with courtesy and consideration. Now for the first time we were to stay in the homes of our people. Two canvas cots had been purchased, for it was known that beds and bedding were scarce among our members. And housing was at a premium. I felt myself privileged to be invited into the homes of our people to enjoy their heartfelt hospitality.

A Pentecostal Hour

Friday night I met with the Saints of Hannover Branch. They assembled in a room of a public school building. Here was one of the oldest and most stable groups in Germany. Franz Beil, their pastor, presided with efficiency and distinction. While the war raged he kept his flock together. That night I preached my first sermon to a German congregation. Kurt Zacharias had come down from Hamburg to interpret.

That night my text was a classic quotation that took on new meaning just then: "Our gospel came not in word only, but also in power and in the Holy Ghost, and in much assurance." I went home that night with a larger circle of brotherhood. The next night I spoke in Braunschweig. Again the branch was meeting in a schoolhouse. By this time I was getting more accustomed to speaking through an interpreter. I am sure it was getting easier for Kurt Zacharias, too, as I was coming to discover the length of phrases and the concepts of the language.

It was Sunday morning again in the Hannover Branch where I shared in a service I shall ever remember. At ten o'clock Gene Theys spoke to the adults, the junior members were in their own session. Brother Huhold interpreted. At eleven all returned. There was a vocal duet, a recitation, a musical trio by the boys and girls. This included them in the congregation, too. As my sermon unfolded, an increasing spiritual endowment attended. The last ten minutes built up to a prophetic experience. Many a time has my soul been stirred with prophetic insight, but I have always expressed whatever the message was without specific ascribing to Divinity. This time the impulsion was so strong that it was comparatively easy to speak. I stood a little in front and to the side of Brother Zacharias. As we went along in this latter part, he paused for a while in the interpretation and then continued. The same spirit had gripped him, and he had stopped under the overwhelming power of its presence. Here had come an unusual testimony to both of us. I sensed then how surely God was with us. The congregation also felt this rare spiritual unction. There was a prayer of benediction. Then the congregation sang, "Gott mit euch, bis wir uns wiedersehen" (God Be With You). Voices sounded with the resonant quality of those deeply moved. If there ever had been any apprehension about the brotherhood of those of different cultures, it was gone. We were one. I sang and paused when too moved for singing through the four stanzas.

We stood at the door as the congregation left. As I recall there were ninety-seven of them. How I wished I could speak with them! They felt the same. As best they could, they wished me Godspeed. Handclasps and smiles spoke eloquently of the fraternity we shared. That morning we met God together.

Out of Poland

That Sunday afternoon we drove out to Springe, a village a few miles from Hannover. When members fled out of Poland, they wandered westward. Always they tried to find somewhere in which a branch was located. So some came near Hannover. They had lost everything. Here they were trying to start over again. August Weber, an elder of Hannover has charge of this group and is throwing his energies and kindly spirit into his mission. We called on a family. Here was the common story—a brother, a husband gefallen or still not found. Here I saw the power of the gospel. It was the beacon light and source of comfort through these dark days. Small wonder, then, that I had chosen to speak on the text, "We are saved through hope." Again we were in a schoolhouse. They were not singing of their dark days. Hopefully the congregation sang, "Wir danken dir, Herr, für Propheten." (We Thank Thee, O God, For a Prophet.) Their clothes and demeanor bespoke the hard times they had gone through. Standing at such a time a preacher's heart goes out, and he longs to minister to his people. That night I was emotionally fatigued. I had given all I had. And what a glorious day!

An Outpost at Cassel

Monday, July 11, we moved on toward the Ruhr. En route we stopped at a small village. Gene Theys had the name of a young mother who wanted a baby blessed. She had come out of the eastern region and married a young man of this neighborhood. She had a deep-seated faith and hoped that some opening would be possible. It is out of such contacts that the work has expanded in Germany. In a simple village home the mother, the child, the grandmother, Gene Theys, Franz Beil, and I held a service of blessing. The coming of the car with two Americans had been quite an event in the village. All the children gathered round.

It was in Cassel I sensed deeply the ravages of air warfare. Some estimates say 87 per cent of the city was destroyed. All this had come fairly late in the history of the war. We stopped before a five- or six-story building. One end had been blown away. Another area was in shambles. Here on the second floor lived the Becker family and their son. How fervently they greeted "Bruder Theys!" Phoenixlike the gospel was prompting new life to rise out of the ashes of yesterday. This Becker family stands out as an inspiration to me. The father had held a good prewar position. He was in the Nazi party, as many of our good quality members were, for its early idealism had appealed to them. He had suffered badly in the days of occupation, for he had been mistaken for a high official of the Nazi regime who carried the same name. When every hope seemed gone for both him and his wife, a pamphlet of the church came to them in a letter from America. They read it and reread it, and he made his way to Hannover to make contact with the church. Many a letter from America has opened the way for our missionaries there.

In brief, the Beckers were baptized. They knew what this gospel had brought to them. They set out to share it with others. Here I saw the genuine evangelistic spirit of the church. In due time he had been ordained and had gathered a small group of neighbors to meetings in his living room. A few weeks before we arrived, a young couple on the floor below had been baptized. It was this group of neighbors that came together at 7:30 on Monday evening. That night I preached, with Kurt Zacharias interpreting. By 8:40 the service was over, but as soon as the benediction was pronounced all sat down. They evidenced no intention of leaving.

Gene Theys suggested I lead some singing. With a German hymnbook I could get along very well. Only five of the group of twenty-four were members of the church, and they were recent additions. Our songs and hymns were new. I selected one with an easy melody—"In the Light." We start it with the affirmation, "'Tis a glorious thing to be in the light." They sang it over and over. We interspersed talking and testifying with the singing. At about eleven o'clock we concluded it was time for all to go. I saw that night the hunger for sociability and the response to brotherliness. The gospel can save the German people from despair and a sense of futility. And it must be brought not in word only, but in friends who breath its dynamic love. The next night Franz Beil preached, but I came prepared for singing or talking. In some ways, the post-preaching meeting was more significant than the scheduled service.

Next day we went calling. Brother Becker took us into homes of "prospects." It was easy to detect the high regard in which they held him. A letter of last week informs me that six have been baptized since our visit. In Cassel I saw the need of developing a hymnbook for Germany. This became more apparent as I went on and found a complexity of old books, mimeographed sheets, and so on. I saw most what one family afire with faith in the gospel can do.

Another Schoolhouse at Offenbach

We were two nights at Offenbach near Frankfurt-am-Main. Again I spoke the first night and Franz Beil the second. On the second row sat a young husband and wife. They listened intently. Somehow I found my words going in his direction. I discovered she had fled from the eastern zone after harrowing experiences with Russian soldiers. She had been a member of the church and on escape had come westward to find some branch of the church. Here she had met and married the young man who appeared so interested. In homes of long-time members, I found a great concern to learn of the church in America. How I wished that I might speak fluent German!

Pictures of German life remain with me. We sat under the trees in the garden of the Fidelak family and ate the noon meal. That conversation with Kurt Zacharias interpreting ran the range from church court procedure to the housing of our members. A lad's accordion and the folk songs we sang breathed the spirit of the German people. These hours brought me near to the lives of our members. The offer of a handful of cherries out of the garden, the curtsies of flaxen-haired girls with pigtailed, the singing of "The Ninety and Nine" by a trio of children, the handshake of an elderly couple who had waited long for a revival of the branch, the piece of coffee cake offered in a pastoral call—these live in memory.

Nurnberg, New Life in an Old City

As we approached Nürnberg I thought of the trials of war leaders after the war. Indeed we passed the buildings where these were held. My mind went back to times prior to these incidents. Nürnberg was the center of old Germanic culture. The walls of the city, now severely damaged, the castle stronghold in the heart of the city, and the winding

(Continued on page 14.)

"In the Power of the Spirit"

The Life and Ministry of Isaac N. White.

*Time, like an ever-rolling stream,
Bears all its sons away.*

—Isaac Watts.

TIME MOVES SWIFTLY ONWARD, leaving behind it many a noble life forgotten and many a heroic deed buried in the pages of history. It touches the heart to read of someone who, seldom remembered now, served bravely and well during his life, winning the love and esteem of thousands. One trusts that somewhere in eternity there is an Angel of Remembrance who will see that these good people and their works are not utterly forgotten.

The name of Isaac N. White shines brightly in the history of the Reorganization for a ministry that lasted for fifty-seven years. The ranks of those who knew him personally are thinning out now, but he remains in their memories as they stand to bear their testimonies and relate the beautiful experiences of our "age of faith."

Isaac White was born in Lawrence County, Ohio, December 27, 1841. In his autobiography in the Journal of History, he describes the pioneer experience of the family as they traveled westward in search of land and opportunity. . . . In the winter of 1855 in Iowa, while driving his father's threshing machine, his foot slipped into a gear and was crushed. It was amputated, and he wore a wooden leg from that time.

In 1856 the family moved to a farm three miles from Gallatin, Missouri, where he attended a district school until he was sixteen; he also attended the Gallatin Academy for a time. Reaching maturity, he left home to make his own way, secured a certificate at Keokuk, Iowa, and taught a country school. It was here, to prevent his mail from being mixed with an uncle's, that he added "N" to his name. For a short time he attended Bowen's College at Hopkinton, Iowa, but quit when funds ran out.

DESPITE HIS CRIPPLED LEG, he served for a time as chief cook of Company K of the Seventeenth Iowa Infantry in the Civil War. Released, he taught school in Harrison County, Iowa, for five successive terms. In the spring of 1864, while he was teaching at Grand River College, Edenburg, Missouri, there was some bushwhacking and marauding going on. He joined the home militia and helped fight a running battle with Quantrill and 400 of his raiders. He was seeking religious truth, and in those dangerous times prayed, "O God, let me live until I am satisfied with religion." He received an audible answer, which assured him.

After studying at Western College in Iowa, he married Miss Emily Trussell on August 16, 1865. She had nursed him through a serious illness. They lived in Topeka, Kansas, then returned to Gallatin, where a son, Alfred Delbert, was born on June 5, 1866, and a daughter, Eva Eldora, was born October 22, 1867.

In September, 1867, he heard his first sermons by one of the church missionaries, Gordon E. Deuel. He resisted the appeal of the gospel, but was strongly attracted to its truth. Prejudice was strong in the community. His conversion was aided by a night vision in which a voice spoke to him and said, "These are my people; this is the true and living church." In that vision he saw a stranger baptizing him, and saw that man in the flesh for the first time in Newton, Iowa, the next day. He was John X. Davis. Isaac White was baptized March 2, 1868 and on August 9 was ordained a priest. His wife followed him in baptism on October 11 and always supported him in his church work.

He began his ministry immediately, while making a living. In 1869 he was holding cottage meetings, and serving as priest of the Newton Branch. In 1870 he was helping his brother David C. in a grocery business, telling the gospel story to customers who would listen. On October 23 he was ordained an elder. For a time he was president of Newton Branch. By 1885 he had organized the Edenville Branch.

He first went into the field as a minister as president of the Des Moines District. In 1885 he accepted General Conference appointment to western Iowa. He was ordained a seventy on April 10, 1886, and a President of Seventy on April 14, 1888, at Independence, where he was one of several to make a short speech at the laying of the cornerstone of the Stone Church.

BROTHER WHITE was ordained an apostle on April 12, 1897, at Lamoni. He engaged in many debates for the church, including some with the redoubtable Clark Braden.

In 1912 Brother White suffered from ill health. He was retired from the Quorum of Twelve and ordained a patriarch on April 14, 1913. He rendered a strong spiritual ministry to the Saints until later years when he could no longer serve. He died December 3, 1925.

Brother White was a strong debater and a valiant defender of the church. His was a ministry of faith which brought comfort and strength to great numbers of church people.

L. J. L.

Question Time

Any sincere question from our readers will receive consideration from the editors. If it is of general interest, it will be referred to the Question Time panel, and the answer will be printed. Please keep the question short—fifty words or less should be sufficient. Your personal problems, the answers to which concern you alone, will be answered by letter. Address questions to Herald Editors rather than panel members. We shall try to take all questions in the order they are received. Be patient, there may be several ahead of yours. Only signed questions sent by contributors will appear here.—EDITOR.

QUESTION

What is the origin of the statement, "If this people do not establish Zion, God will raise up a people who will"?

Mrs. L. S.

Illinois

ANSWER

No doubt the origin of this thought is found in a letter written to William W. Phelps by Joseph Smith, Jr., on January 14, 1833, and recorded in Church History, Volume 1, pages 265 to 272, part of which reads as follows: "For if Zion will not purify herself so as to be approved of in all things in his sight, he will seek another people: for his work will go on until Israel is gathered, and they who will not hear his voice must expect to feel his wrath."

James F. Keir.

QUESTION

Were there other human beings on earth at the time Adam was created?

J. T.

Idaho

ANSWER

No. The Inspired Version of the Bible reads: "And I, the Lord God, formed man from the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul; the first flesh upon the earth, and the first man also."—Genesis 2: 8.

James F. Keir.

QUESTION

Does the vision to Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery (Church History, Volume II, page 47) which says, "committed unto us the keys of the gathering of Israel from the four parts of the earth, and the leading of the ten tribes from the land of the north," mean that the Lord will actually raise up these men who are now dead to do this work?

Mrs. C. S.

California

ANSWER

We do not so understand. The keys, or authority, or power to accomplish this work, while given to these men, was given them not as individuals but as officers and representatives of the church. These keys continue with the church, being officially held by its leading men constituting the presidency. The Lord has said that the keys of the kingdom which were given to Joseph Smith, Jr., the first head of the church in latter days, "belongeth always to the presidency of the high priesthood," or the presidency of the church (Doctrine and Covenants 80: 1).

These keys come down by succession from generation to generation, except when the church dies out through apostasy. Then they are reserved by the Lord in heaven, but sent down again when the church is re-established, as was the case in 1830. These Scriptures are to the point:

The keys of this kingdom shall never be taken from you, . . . nevertheless, through you shall the oracles be given to another; yea, even unto the church.—Doctrine and Covenants 87: 2.

The keys of the dispensation which ye have received, have come down from the fathers; and last of all, being sent down from heaven unto you.—Doctrine and Covenants 105: 12.

Sidney Rigdon and Frederick G. Williams . . . are accounted as equal with thee in holding the keys of this last kingdom.—Doctrine and Covenants 87: 3.

The responsibility of performing the work of the church as entrusted to the church by God falls primarily upon the leaders who work with the cooperation of the church. But the responsibility is theirs only as long as they live and are in office; when they die, it remains with the church and passes to the one chosen and ordained successor in office. The responsibility is not so much personal as it is official, and it follows with the office. The Lord recognizes the share which the church has in relation to the important work of the gathering of Israel which is yet to be done:

The word of the Lord concerning his church established in the last days for the restoration of his people, as he has spoken by the mouth of his prophets, and for the gathering of his saints to stand upon Mount Zion.—Doctrine and Covenants 83: 1.

The keys are with the church and its officers. The officers change, but the church is constant. Though generations pass from this scene of action, they retain their priesthood authority, but the earthly tasks remain for the church to execute under its succeeding officers. The power is in the church though waiting the appointed time for the gathering of Israel including the ten tribes. When that day comes, the work will be carried out under the Lord's direction by the church with its prophet at the head.

Charles Fry.

QUESTION

Will you please explain the twenty-eighth verse of the twenty-sixth chapter of Matthew? Does this mean that our sins are remitted each time we partake of the Lord's Supper, or just what does it mean?

Mrs. P. B.

New York

ANSWER

The "many" here referred to no doubt are they who repent and are baptized for the remission of their sins, and who are then entitled to partake of the Lord's Supper.

However in nothing is the mercy of God more in evidence than in his willingness to receive and forgive the erring one who truly repents. "Return unto me and I will return unto you, saith the Lord of Hosts."—Malachi 3: 7.

The Communion service offers an opportunity for introspection. "But let a man examine himself, and so let him eat of that bread and drink of that cup."—I Corinthians 11: 28.

There is no place where true repentance does not meet with divine favor.

When, in a repentant attitude, we partake of the emblems which typify the body and blood of Christ, which privilege is extended only to the baptized believer (III Nephi 8: 61, 62), our sins are forgiven.

They are forgiven, not because we partake of the bread and wine, but because of our worthiness; and that worthiness is evidenced by the fact that we are repentant and willing to take upon us the name of Christ and always remember him and keep his commandments which he has given us.—Doctrine and Covenants 17: 22.

—James F. Keir.

I Lived With Saints in Germany

(Continued from page 11.)

streets gave evidence of the feudal days when this city was the heart of a medieval culture. We rode past the churches and cemeteries of yester years and stopped before the apartment where the George Baier family lives. This in itself spoke of our fellowship with a new movement.

The story of the conversion of the Baier family has been told in the Herald this year. Both Brother and Sister Baier are well educated and excellent linguists. Mrs. Baier had come to interpret the sermons of Eugene Theys. She remained to be baptized with her husband. Now he is the pastor of the branch. Other new blood came into the group with the interesting problem of joining those of former times and of new days. A recent letter reports eleven baptisms in August.

Saturday night I spoke to a women's meeting with Sister Baier presiding and interpreting. What should a stranger from America talk about? I decided to paint word pictures of women of the church I have known. They were friendly portraits with sketches of character that let them get acquainted with other Saints. Some were humble folk not known to the church. Some were better known, such as Pauline Arnson. This meeting broke the ice, and I was at home in Nürnberg. I could write a roster of the many good members I came to know here with their friendly consideration for us. I could describe, too, the problems that I observed in a branch just growing up with members trying to learn the way. I have always interpreted the branch as a laboratory in saintly living. As we get this viewpoint, we plan to take strains and differences as well as harmonies in our relationships. I saw Nürnberg as a branch in the business of growing up. Let's have more.

Out on the Frontier

Out in eastern Bavaria is the village of Winzer. When Germans were deported from Breslau by the Russians, some came to this little town in the American zone. Administrators had assigned them to rooms in local houses. Here they were without hope or prospect of home. A very small allowance came from the government. Among those who came were Oskar Prescha and wife. Once they, as other refugees, had possessed a house and held employment. About the only thing of consequence the Preschas brought was their faith in the Restoration and a few church books. He had made contact with elders from Augsburg who had come down to minister. Twelve others had been baptized—others who had come from around Breslau. These were of the Evangelical faith and found themselves now in the midst of a Roman Catholic stronghold. They were meeting in the small living quarters of one of the families, yet the largest room available.

It was to this group Eugene Theys, Franz Beil, and I drove on Tuesday, July 19. This was the first visit for appointees of the General Church. Here was frontier territory. A man of perhaps sixty years met us on the street. He was Brother Prescha. He had spotted the seal on the car. We were escorted to the hilltop overlooking the town to the one room in which the Preschas lived. At first view the outlook was not promising. As we talked and pieced together their story, appreciation grew. It was he who had pushed the mission. He had made a record of members. He had kept account of every pfennig turned into their funds. He sought no office. Our appreciation grew more as we went into homes that afternoon and witnessed their needs and sensed the assurance the gospel was bringing them. It seemed to be their one hope in an otherwise hopeless world.

Thursday night, we sang together at first. These were newcomers with very few hymnbooks. So we sang familiar German hymns with one or two of our own they had learned. Six, recently baptized some weeks before, had not been confirmed. One of these, a young widowed mother with three children, we visited in her home and confirmed her as she lay ill in bed. The other five were confirmed at this evening meeting. I was spokesman for one man. I began with a salutation in German and the rest in English. My heart went out to this candidate beyond my words. He had come back from servitude labor in Leningrad, released because his health was too broken to continue. All the problems of family and livelihood, need for a new hold on life, and understanding the newly accepted gospel rose before him. I could say with Tennyson, "Would that my tongue could utter the thoughts that arise in me!" Franz Beil preached. I don't know what we would have done without him, for Kurt Zacharias had left us at Offenbach and here no one spoke English, not even Brother Beil.

At the close of the service, we were saying farewell. Then we discovered they had planned a meeting for the next morning. They wanted to receive the Lord's Supper. Of course we would stay. At 8:30 a handful of us stood by the bank of the river which flowed near the town. Three women were to be baptized. They had managed to procure three white dresses of assorted designs, but nevertheless white. The voice of Franz Beil came across the water as he gave the baptismal salutation. It rang out to me in clear German. Authority to represent God is not limited to any language. We sang, "Nearer, My God, to Thee," and I realized that this nearness knows no linguistic barrier. At the meeting these three were confirmed. Then came the service of the emblems. We used water—there was no wine. We used small rolls of bread. They were laid on a clean white cloth, the best available. There was opportunity for a few testimonies. I was stirred through and through as Brother Prescha spoke.

I could catch enough of the German to get the general idea. He had hoped and prayed for help to come that the church might be established in Winzer. Now for the first time came a representative of the General Church. Now a mission was to be established. Emotion moved his voice, and a few tears flowed down his cheeks. It was the expression of deep gratitude. I found myself going out in prayer for this little group of seventeen members in faraway Bavaria. We shook hands. It seemed to me in Germany we made the rounds several times in saying, "Auf Wiedersehen." The last thing we did was to line up the congregation for a picture. Eugene Theys is making a collection of scenes. They were thrilled at the "photo." They remained standing together as we drove away, waving good-by. I wondered if their hearts were in their throats as was mine. I do not need a photograph for memory. The picture of these Winzer refugees stays with me in haunting reminiscence.

With a Bavarian Branch

By way of Munich we came to Augsburg. This city has made religious history. Now a small branch of ours is struggling to get on its feet. It can add its distinctive and needed contribution. Here Bavaria is strong in Roman Catholicism. We have given so little supervision in the past, not enough to keep the members in healthy relationship with the church at large. Without this, ideas and patterns of action tend to get grooved in provincialism. It is easy to believe that a procedure followed for twenty-five years is outlined and prescribed in the Doctrine and Covenants. More than one group needs to be saved from itself. So in Augsburg we saw again two vital needs: effective local leadership, and adequate relationship with the larger fellowship of the church. Augsburg clinched this conviction.

In Germany we met in school-houses or in a social room of an inn. In Augsburg we met in the latter. Over and over again a secular room was transformed into a meeting place by an artistic touch. Here a table was covered with a white cloth. On this was placed a lectern over which was a cloth carrying the seal of the church. Flowers were festooned about the table. In my greeting I thanked them for their thoughtful planning in effecting such a transformation. When the hymn singing began, I became quite unaware of the type of place in which we were meeting.

That first night the mission president, Eugene Theys, procured a professional interpreter. He had some things he wanted said with clarity and certainty. I follow intently the work of interpreters. Some give a very free translation, others a rather exact one. The good carry the mood and emphasis of a speaker; the lesser ones say words. Of course Franz Beil needed no one to assist him. I hope that in each branch we can set up classes in English, so our people may have vital contact with us in America and with our literature. There is another side to the picture. We in English-speaking countries might set ourselves to communicating with others in their language.

In Augsburg one can see so many touches of Bavarian life. One night we took the local pastor and wife for refreshments in a garden. The lights under the trees, the orchestra playing German music, and the quietness of the evening combined to achieve the setting one reads about in books. Saturday evening after the service, Gene and I went to hear the latter part of the concert by the Yale University Glee Club. I had heard them in Oxford and hoped I would meet them again on the Continent.

It Is Wiederschien

On Sunday morning the missionary car left Augsburg. Gene Theys was going on to Basle, Switzerland, with me. There I would take the train across western France for Calais and back to England. At Stuttgart we were to leave Franz Beil. There a new opening was to be effected, and Brother Beil was to look up the members residing in the area in readiness for the return of Brother Theys. Always this mission president was looking for "prospects." He carried in his car a card file with names of members and acquaintances. Many of these had come from Saints in America. As he drove to a city he would look to see if any "prospects" were living there. Franz Beil was well fitted to do this frontier work. He was taking his vacation time for this missionary tour. The central figure in getting the church underway in Stuttgart was a dentist who had been baptized in eastern Germany several years before. When Franz Beil and I parted at Stuttgart, both of us had to leave unsaid what was in our hearts. I shook his hand and said in German, "You will always be my brother in Christ."

The work moves forward in Germany. There is nothing spectacular about it. There is no "too sudden" growth as in England in 1837 and after. Gradually the several branches are being brought into a working unity. To date each has lived in its own area. Separation of east and west with occupational barriers creates a difficulty. The problems are many, but growth continues. By the close of this year we will have approximately 1,400 members.

I am still living with the Saints of Germany. The Spirit of God cemented our fellowship.

*Each One
...Win One!*

TELLING HIM
ABOUT THE GOSPEL
of the
KINGDOM

The REORGANIZED
CHURCH of JESUS CHRIST
of Latter Day Saints

It's Our Own Fault - By NAOMI RUSSELL

EVERY GOOD CHRISTIAN bemoans the fact that each day liquor and tobacco interests sell more and more people on the idea that unless they light up, relax, and start living "graciously" with Chesterfields or Luckies or Four Roses or Blatz Beer they're not very sharp. And people—being disgustingly human—fall for it. They don't bother to analyze the shrewd advertising psychology back of these sales campaigns—they don't stop to figure out the simple fact that the tobacco growers and brewers aren't really interested in making poor, frustrated people more socially acceptable—that they're actually only wanting bigger and faster sales. So teen-agers and great-grandparents alike spend staggering sums in an attempt to find the better life via nicotine and alcohol, while the churches of the nation close their doors six days a week to the masses who might be tempted to try religion if they were but sold on the idea.

Take a look at the back page of any slick magazine or any billboard that's designed to sell "escapes" from the dull routine of ordinary living. You'll find the cream of the crop in glamour and appeal—suave, well-dressed men; smiling, starry-eyed women. And the idea projects itself that the reason they're that way is because they are patrons of the product advertised.

Now take a look at the other side of the picture—church advertising. Have you ever seen a sign along any highway or on the back of any popular magazine which features an attractive man or woman wearing a satisfied look because he or she is actively engaged in serving the Lord? If you find any along-the-road advertising at all, it's apt to be a "Jesus Saves" or "The Churches of Centerville Welcome You" painted on an unobtrusive little sign and nailed to a fence post somewhere.

CONSIDER THE POSSIBILITIES of a billboard ad in full color showing young Mr. and Mrs. Christian taking several preschoolers and a babe-in-arms to church with the caption: "We always take the children, too." Following this is a plug for the nursery—with the suggestion that it's better than hiring a baby sitter—and the kindergarten. Almost any young parents would welcome a couple of hours away from the kiddies, and the church that can provide them such "leisure time" stands a good chance of signing them up for life. Some churches do have excellent nursery and kindergarten facilities, but I've never yet seen one advertise them. If theaters had such "accommodations," you can bet they'd be telling the world about it—probably in neon.

Also consider the possibilities of a sign inviting the general public to drop by the "church with the open doors" any evening from five to six for an hour of organ meditations. Many people who profess no interest whatsoever in religion have a real appreciation for good music. The church that can provide such a service regularly is taking a long step toward building good public relations—provided it advertises. The best music in the world will go to waste if no one knows about it.

No up-and-coming congregation will neglect its social appeal either. The sign that features a tennis court or ball diamond along with its invitation to attend junior league is going to catch the eye of more than one energetic youngster looking for a place to spend his time and energy. Once he joins the ball team, he'll be in a mood to do other things with the "church" gang.

There's a vast field for selling religion, but it takes advertising. Perhaps that's what the Master Salesman meant when he spoke of hiding one's candle under a bushel.

Christ used some dynamic tactics in publicizing his ministry. He began with the wedding feast at Cana and carried right on through until his death with casting out devils, healing the sick, and restoring life to dead bodies. Again there is the miracle of the loaves and fishes—how better could he have demonstrated the power of God to his hungry listeners than by feeding them all from one small lunch basket? He satisfied their physical appetites and then fed their souls. He gave them first what they wanted, then what they needed.

THE TROUBLE with our missionary campaigning is that we won't take people for what they are. We won't stoop to appeal to them on the grounds they can appreciate. We won't admit that for the most part they're selfish, pleasure-loving, irresponsible human beings, and start working with them on that basis. We assume they're intellectual, studious, nonpassionate, and capable of grasping the whole plan of salvation from the very beginning. So we invite them to church with obscure little signs that do nothing to their emotions, and, if they happen to come, we preach to them about what they should do for the church rather than what the church wants to do for them. A few strong-minded ones can take it, and so we manage to win a convert now and then, but for every convert to religion, there are three converts to "the world."

A lot of people don't particularly care whether or not they're "saved." Church attendance to them is synonymous with boredom, and they'd rather be wrong than bored. Until we appraise these potential converts for what they are rather than what we'd like for them to be and design a method as subtle as the tobacco-liquor men for winning their patronage, we're in no position to compete. We have to appeal to basic human wants. People want to be sure of getting something that will please them out of whatever they spend their dollars for. Too often it's ultimately a thick head and a bad taste in their mouths, but they get—or think they get—sufficient pleasure out of their indulgence to justify further foolish spending. They can't see much point in going to church and putting money in the collection basket and not getting any "thrill" out of it. Granted, there is a lot of satisfaction to be derived from Christian living, but people have to be educated to look for it. Until that education is complete, the masses must be sold on the idea that here is something worth working and waiting for. Those of little comprehension may have to be entertained at first until their loyalty is won. Then they have to be made to see how much better their lives will eventually be if they follow the plan of salvation. When they have this picture firmly in mind and are convinced it's the most satisfying thing to do, they'll be willing to "join up."

BILLBOARD ADVERTISING

ADVERTISING that pays off is expensive. It takes brains and money. It takes time and a real understanding of sales psychology. Don't ever think the makers of Chesterfields and Luckies and Four Roses and Blatz Beer haven't paid the price. They've paid plenty, but they're reaping the profit. They've made millions of men and women (and, unfortunately, boys and girls) think they can't live happily without smoking and drinking. It's up to the churches now to make those same people think they can't live happily without being Christians. In fact, religious advertising and salesmanship have to be so good that all other products will look like bad buys when compared to what the church offers. If we who profess to be Christians aren't able—with the help of God—to do this, it's our own fault that "the world" claims our prospective customers.

THERE IS AVAILABLE to the church a medium of advertising which is not generally known. This is poster panel (billboard) advertising. It is the policy of outdoor advertising companies to make special rates to churches in the winter. Some agencies do this gratis; others charge a service fee for hanging the poster. Of course the church must pay for the advertisement and whatever imprinting is done. If enough branches would become interested, these posters could be bought in large quantities, thus reducing the individual cost considerably. If the value of this kind of advertising is questioned, one has only to remember that the largest selling nickel drink in America has spent more for outdoor advertising than any other medium.

This should not exclude newspaper publicity, however; the local newspaper can accomplish certain things nothing else can. But anything that keeps the name of the church before the public in an honorable way should be used. Poster advertising may not fill a church, but it does help public relations.

For the past several years, the Reorganized Church in Chariton, Iowa, has used this type of advertising. It has been one of the contributing factors in making the church well-known in the community.

Our pastors may do well to contact the local representative of an outdoor advertising firm on the possibilities of highly favorable rates in the winter season. The Outdoor Advertising Association of America has expressed itself favorably on this type of community service, however actual terms and arrangements will have to be worked out in your own locality.

—JOHN BLACKSTOCK.

www.LatterDayTruth.org

Thanksgiving - A Holy Day

THE WOMAN in brown plaid gingham sat in front of the fireplace mending. Now and then she would lay her work down, lean forward, pick up the poker and prod the coals to make them burn more brightly, for winter was everywhere.

Not far away her husband worked at the table. Now he looked up from the pile of books spread out before him. His eyes were upon her, but his gaze was far away. "Day before yesterday was Thanksgiving in America," he said.

There was a moment of silence, then his wife answered slowly, "Why, so it was! I had forgotten."

It wasn't strange that they had forgotten. In this faraway land, there was no reminder.

Again there was silence except for the crackle of the flames on the grate. Even the mending was forgotten. The man had gone on with his studies, but the mind of his wife had spanned the sea to Thanksgiving, the great American holiday. Christmas and Easter were holidays, but they were holy days as well. They were most important. Should Thanksgiving mean as much to a people who loved the Master and were trying to be like him? What could make it a really great day?

Thanksgiving had begun in the spirit of praise and gratitude. The people in those early days had been grateful that their barest needs had been supplied. In the midst of what today we would term poverty, they had paused to recount their blessings and give thanks to a God who heard their prayers and spared their lives. It is recorded that there was not a single family among them who had not lost a dear one during the rigors of the previous winter; yet they gave thanks. When they had given their thanks, they dined upon the fruit of their own labor and then went back to work.

THE MIND OF THE WOMAN moved forward toward the Zion that is to be. Yes, that was the spirit which would make it possible. But could it be gained through the activities of one day? No! The spirit of thanksgiving was clearly not a gift from heaven that descended and abode upon one for that occasion. Like faith it would have to be lived and taught daily. If one day was set apart in which true thanks would be offered, one must have practiced the art of being thankful all the year. To see the hand of the Lord even in trials and to be able to thank him for them would evidence real progress in Zion's living.

Then those Pilgrims of old had served a meal as a part of their services for that day. The food had been raised or provided through the labors of their own hands. How fine it would be if each member of the family could have his own little plot of ground in which to raise something to contribute to the dinner! Years ago, when the Master was crucified, the earth had cried out in pain, and much of it had been laid waste; in the day of Zion's perfection, it would be made beautiful once more by a beautiful people. Thus, as they labored during the summer to produce these vegetables in a beautiful little garden, would they not be working for Zion?

COMING CLOSER to Thanksgiving Day itself, would it not be well to begin the days of that week with the reading and discussion of some of the outstanding stories of thanks? For example:

SUNDAY: Thanksgiving Day for the Jaredites: Ether 3: 1-15.

By ELVA OAKMAN

MONDAY: Thanksgiving Day for the Israelites: Ezra 3: 10-13. (The beautiful temple had been utterly destroyed because of their wickedness, now they had repented, and under the greatest difficulties many of them had gathered in Jerusalem to begin rebuilding it.)

TUESDAY: Thanksgiving Day for the Nephites: III Nephi 5: 1-17. (What had preceded this?)

WEDNESDAY: The Hawaiian Saints celebrate Thanksgiving: The Story of the Church, third edition, page 469 to the top of page 471.

THURSDAY: The Thanksgiving Day that is to be: Doctrine and Covenants 110: 22. (Remember, Joseph Smith was in hiding when he wrote this and knew he would soon be martyred.)

Thanksgiving Day itself would of course begin with family worship at the dawn of day. What richness of understanding could come to the group as each member recounted his blessings of the previous year. Even the trials could be talked over with a desire to understand how they might be blessings in disguise. In this spirit, prayers of real gratitude would be offered.

If the trials have been many, the story of the writing of hymn No. 427, "Now Thank We All Our God," should be told. During a period of famine and plague, Martin Rinkart, the only minister left in the city of Eilenberg, Saxony, had buried four thousand people in one year. They were people he loved and had labored among, yet he was able to write:

Now thank we all our God, with heart and hands and voices,
Who wondrous things hath done, in whom his world rejoices;
Who, from our mothers' arms hath blessed us on our way
With countless gifts of love, and still is ours today.

The Home Column

If we can sing that song in the spirit in which it was written, our hearts will be lifted up.

If members of the family have been making preparation for the day through the work of their own hands, they will want to sing, "We Plow the Field." (Saints Hymnal, No. 429). The imagery is lovely. Who cannot vision the Master pausing to paint the wayside flower or light the evening star? It ends in the spirit of humility necessary for everyone.

If there is a service at the church the whole family should attend together. No one will have to stay home to prepare the meal, for it will be a simple one prepared with singleness of heart as befits a day of worship and praise, shared with those who have real need. It will be the sort of meal upon which God's blessing can be especially asked.

Thanksgiving afternoon! If the winter snows have not already set in, will it not be in keeping with the day to make the yard tidy and ready for its winter blanket? Then there are people all about who need help—some physical, some spiritual help; and some need to hear the gospel story. Perhaps they could be called on or written to. At least some way should be found in which to show thanks for God's goodness, for true praise is always clothed in service.

Yes! one day Zion will be built by people who have learned the art of thanks-giving.

THE WOMAN in the brown plaid gingham dress, sitting before the fireplace in the faraway land smiled to herself as she picked up the mending from her lap and began work anew. Her husband looked up from his books and their eyes met. "What's up?" he asked with interest.

"I was just thinking, my dear," she answered, "we are going to begin now to get ready to observe Thanksgiving next year even in a foreign land."

Christmas Programs

Helps

Standard Christmas Book No. 6

A 48-page collection of material to help you prepare a better Christmas program this year. Included is the full-length pageant, "An House Built Unto David," by J. H. Shonkwiler; choice recitations, poems, dialogues, playlets, tableaux, songs, etc. A book that every Christmas program committee should have.

Price, 30c

Practical Christmas Helper No. 3

A 32-page booklet of useful program helps, including songs, recitations, exercises, dialogues, and pantomimes. In addition to material for children, there are several pages prepared for young people's groups; also a number of Christmas decoration suggestions.

Price, 25c

Standard Christmas Book No. 7

Brand new, 48-page compilation of Christmas program material for every Bible school and church. The contents include a 45-minute pageant, 25-minute pantomime, 30-minute play for an all-male cast, a complete program for the departments of the church school, a children's program with recitations and songs, and a program in picture, Scripture, and song correlated with the "Life of Christ Visualized" film strips.

Price, 30c

Standard Christmas Book No. 8

A new compilation of program material for Christmas, 1949. Contains two short plays by W. A. Poovey. "The King Who Abolished Christmas," a play for children, presents the troubles encountered by a king who tried to abolish Christmas observance. "Soldiers of the King," a play for young people and adults, portrays two Roman soldiers as they take the census at Bethlehem during events of the first Christmas. They are converted and worship the Christ child along with the Wise Men. Also contains a verse play by Ida Lee Wolf Vonk and a wealth of miscellaneous recitations for children to help build a children's program. 48 pages.

Price, 35c

Programs

Christmas Program Builder No. 3

Most recent of this popular series. Fifty-six pages of clever, interesting, and artistically written material for various age groups, including 21 musical numbers.

Price, 35c

SEE OUR CHURCH SUPPLY CATALOG
FOR MORE PROGRAMS

Christmas Program Builder No. 2

A helpful selection of program material that is classified in the different age groups with a section of new and original songs. Here is a booklet with a full range of recitations and exercises, pantomimes, simple dramatic presentations, stories, songs, and even some decoration ideas.

Price, 35c

Christmas Program Builder No. 1

Just the material you want for a new and different Christmas program with songs, readings, exercises, and playlets. A feature is the 21-page section of music introducing solos for children, unison and two-part class songs, trios for women, and a male quartet.

Price, 35c

Eureka Christmas Recitations No. 5

Program material for kindergarten, primaries, and juniors, and songs, pageants, pantomimes, and special features for junior highs.

Price, 35c

The Christmas Story

By Rita Benton

One act, 8 men, 2 women, 4 children, 1 baby, 40 minutes. Play with music. A simple presentation of the story of the Nativity.

Price, 25c

Carols

Christmas Carols Old and New, Revised Edition

A handbook of Yule songs and carols for group singing compiled by Haldor Lillenas, Mus.D. Here are words and music of the 34 most popular Christmas songs of 6 nations, and of 23 inspiring new numbers—57 in all.

Price each, 35c

Christmas Carols and Hymns

This is a small booklet with a paper cover which includes 17 of the old favorite Christmas carols.

Price each, 10c

Independence,
Missouri

Report From Germany

By BILOINE WHITING

Before you sit down to your annual Thanksgiving dinner, take time to read this account of a few brave people who, despite the ravages of war, have found the will to go on living because of the hope the gospel holds for them. You should have no difficulty "returning grace" after reading their story.

HAMBURG, GERMANY, is a city of the dead. Men, women, and children lie in mass graves of 20,000 on the outskirts of the city, or sleep, still undiscovered, beneath tons of rubble. Their tombstones are hollow apartment buildings—walls sheared away to expose bathtubs hanging from top floors by their iron plumbing.

The city officials claim that Hamburg has been "cleared," pointing to the fact that for a year cars running on special rails in the streets have shuttled back and forth to the country, carrying away trainloads of rubble a day. It is true that the streets are now open for traffic, but acres and acres of ruins are still an unbelievable wilderness of jagged walls, lone chimneys, and high mounds of brick and twisted steel. Streetcars in Hamburg clang for miles past broken buildings, looking with their one wall like stage sets for a Greek tragedy. A few children scramble over the heaps of masonry searching for treasures. Here and there a man in a cast-off green German uniform hunts bricks for his house, while in some places passers-by turn away to avoid the odor of the dead who still lie in their bomb shelters.

Living in this city that is a tomb are about twenty-five Latter Day Saints; fourteen of them new members. Their leader and the only elder in the mission is Kurt Zacharias, a small, energetic man who looks much younger than his forty-three years. He and his Australian wife, Hetty, conduct the church services, lead the Wednesday prayer meetings, and teach an English language class for the Saints on Thursday evenings. Although they have been members of the church for less than two years, their two-room apartment on the outskirts of the city is a haven for missionaries.

Kurt, a woodcarver by trade, had left Germany when he was twenty to go to Australia to work. Life on the island continent was agreeable to him; he learned the language, married an Australian girl, and by 1939 had saved enough to open a woodworking shop of his own in Brisbane. Then war came, and the day after the declaration at 6 a.m., Kurt was arrested as a "desperate and dangerous Nazi." For three days he was held in jail before being sent to a barbed wire enclosed internment camp—his only crime that of having been born in Germany. Here he was held for six and one-half years, suffering the loss of his business, such indignities as being marched through the streets of an Australian city under armed guard and in handcuffs, and the sorrow of not seeing his wife for six years. Life in the camp was such that some men lost their minds, while others hanged themselves with their belts.

ALTHOUGH THE WAR ended in 1945, Kurt was not released from the camp until March, 1946. Almost a year later—in November, 1946—Hetty's mother became ill and her brother, a member of the church, asked the elders to visit the sick woman. The sacrifice of the elders and the kindness of the Zion's League in Brisbane made a deep impression on the Zacharias and, as Kurt said, "I felt obligated to pay a visit to their church." On that first visit they made friends. They accepted the invitation to join the choir, and in May began attending a baptismal class which ended with their baptism in November. On the day after Kurt's baptism, he received notice from the government that he was to be deported and must leave Australia, his home for twenty years, within three days. When Kurt reported this to the elders, they immediately began working to keep him in the country. Elder A. E. Loving sent telegrams to government officials to attempt to change the order. Church members drew up petitions which were sent to the government. The newspapers printed his story, but the best that could be obtained was a postponement. At the confirmation service, Kurt was spoken to by the gift of tongues and told that it was God's will for him to go to Germany. Both he and his wife Hetty received assurance that in Germany they would have enough to eat and to wear, and especially that Kurt was not to fear what foreign governments could do to him.

On their last night in Brisbane, Kurt had just lain down to rest when he heard a voice like the sound of a bell say to him in the German tongue, "Come." "Instantly," he related, "my whole being was electrified, and I sat up trembling under the influence of the Spirit of God. From that instant I lost the bitterness I had felt at being deported and stopped fighting against it as I had been doing with all my strength."

The completeness of their change of attitude is revealed in the letter they sent to the Brisbane Saints after their departure from Australia.

"Hetty and I both feel," Kurt wrote, "that during that last half hour before our final departure we experienced the saddest and at the same time the happiest moments of all our previous lives. Sad because we were about to leave the land we both love, but immeasurably glad to have such marvelous friends. Oh, brothers and sisters, you have given us a new life; you have shown us the way to eternal happiness. Had I never known you, Hetty and I would be leaving Australia now in bitterness and resentment. But God did not let us fall. All along his watchfulness and guiding hand have led us until we were able to enter his kingdom, and only last night God's voice called to me. And this our covenant is sealed. This, dear Saints, brothers and sisters, is my testimony to you. Please accept our deepest gratitude for all you have done for us. We are overwhelmed . . ."

THEIR FIRST HOME in Germany was a displaced person's camp. From here they went by truck to Hamburg in January, 1948. Kurt's first home-coming in over twenty years was in the middle of the night. The truck became lost in the maze of ruins and drove for six hours through the bombed wreckage, and a thick odor of the dead penetrated even the cab of the truck. It was morning before they found one who could direct them out of the fields of wreckage to the home of Kurt's sister. One of the mementos with which she greeted him was a gold watch melted down to a shapeless lump. It was found on his father when his charred remains were removed from the cellar in which he and his wife were burned to death. Both are now buried in a mass grave of 20,000, the victims of one night's bombing. His only brother, a pilot, had been missing, he found, since 1943.

New Horizons

www.LatterDayTruth.org

Kurt and Hetty had been in Germany for about two months when they received a list of addresses and names of German Saints from Elder Gene Theys and Apostle Myron McConley. Immediately he began looking for them, and, though he was a stranger, the Saints looked upon him as their leader. When Elder Theys and Apostle McConley arrived in Germany to build up the missions, Kurt traveled with them as interpreter. At Kurt's suggestion, the Hamburg Saints—six in all—met Thursdays for a study class. Before long, they found friends to invite to the class, and Kurt had been ordained for five months when he baptized his first new member. At this writing (October, 1949) Kurt has baptized fourteen new members into the branch. They meet in the music building of the University of Hamburg for Sunday services, the weekly English class, and prayer meeting. Besides his work with the branch in Hamburg, Kurt also ministers to the group at Elmshorn, over an hour's train ride from his home, and has traveled approximately 3,000 miles interpreting for other ministers of the church.

Except for the difference in language, American Saints would feel very much at home in the Hamburg Branch. The affection with which the Saints greet each other puts aside all barriers, and church hymns sung in German have a familiar ring. The Hamburg hymnals, mimeographed and bound for the branch by the tireless Zachariases, contain thirty-five German-American hymns. On the front, in neat letters, is printed Reorganisierte Kirche Jesu Christi der Heiligen der Letzten Tage.

TYPICAL of the new members baptized into the branch is Mrs. Friedel Przygoda who was confirmed late in September. Twice her home was destroyed while she and her two children huddled in shelters. Of her second home, only one wall was left standing.

Passing it one day she had the disturbing experience of noticing a bit of her kitchen curtain, still fastened to the wall, flapping at her in the breeze.

The branches at Elmshorn and Uetersen were founded between the two wars by Brothers Henry Shaefer and Friedrich Paasch. Leader of the branch at Uetersen now is Friedrich's son, Arthur, who was wounded in Russia and had part of his foot frozen off.

The devotion of the Saints at Elmshorn and their gratefulness for the food and clothing packages sent by the church are touching to a visitor. Sister Meta Sass, of Glamweg 58, Elmshorn, the branch secretary, wept as she remembered the parcels. While working as secretary for the branch, Sister Sass handled correspondence with Brother Yens W. Blume of Copenhagen, Denmark. Brother Blume had read of the Elmshorn Branch in the Herald, and upon learning that a sister had lived in Denmark, began corresponding with her. Finally Brother Blume wrote the church secretary, asking the branch to accompany him to a conference that was to be held this fall in Hannover where they could all meet each other. Sister Sass wrote back telling him of the poor condition of the Saints and that they could not consider a trip to Hannover since they lacked even the rental money for the hall where they had been meeting.

By return mail a letter came from the brother in Sweden in which was inclosed the fifty German marks he had saved for his trip as well as fifty more Swedish kronen. Instructions in the letter were for the Saints to use the vacation money for rental on the church hall.

Also of Elmshorn is Sister Martha Rathcke, a widow, who lives with her crippled son in a small house built in the back yard of her former home, which was destroyed by bombs. When her house fell, she lost all of her household furnishings as well as clothing for herself and her son. Now, thanks to packages sent by the J. Ballantyne family of Eagleville, Missouri, and the W. H. Eliasons of Leon, Iowa, she has curtains on the windows, tablecloths, and can serve her guests cider made with American brown sugar. Her small, tidy home was built from bricks she collected herself, and she supports her family by working as a seamstress.

AMONG THE MOST REMARKABLE OF experiences of the Elmshorn Saints are those of Wilhelm Lentfer, leader of the branch, and his wife Emma. Emma had been a member of the church before the war and for years had tried to interest her husband in the work, but with no success. In 1934 Wilhelm was interned in a German concentration camp where for four years he endured treatment so harsh that several ribs were broken. In 1938, instead of regaining his freedom, he was drafted into the German army where he fought until he was captured in Africa by the Americans and sent to a prisoner of war camp in Illinois.

In the meantime his wife Emma, under social stigma and ill-treatment in the town because of her husband's beliefs, was forced to work as a cleaning woman in the automobile agency where Meta Sass, then not a member, worked. One day, while going about her work, Emma overheard Meta Sass give comfort to a bereaved parent over the telephone. It occurred to her then that here was a woman to whom she could tell the gospel.

In secret the two women met to discuss the church. They were forced to keep their conversations private because of the suspicion that would have attached itself to Meta if she were found talking with an internee's wife. Later a young Russian slave laborer joined the women, and Emma taught the two of them the story of the gospel. Soon after the war Meta and Alex Sissojew were baptized into the church. Alex was later ordained a priest; upon returning to Russia, he took with him a copy of the Book of Mormon which he hopes to translate into Russian.

Living in an American prisoner-of-war camp gave Emma's husband his first chance to study the Bible. The things he read seemed to agree with what he could remember Emma as having said about her church, and some months after returning to Germany he began attending the study classes held each week by his wife. The classes eventually led to his conversion, baptism, and ordination as leader of the branch.

IN HANNOVER, where we have one of our largest branches, the Saints met every Sunday during the war. They were held together largely through the efforts of Elder Franz Beil. Early in the war, Brother Beil had the foresight to bury the family silverware, crystal, and most of their dishes in their garden. Later, when their home was bombed most of their furniture was destroyed or damaged, but the cache in the garden was safe.

August Weber, pastor at Springer, was trapped for five hours in his basement after a raid and was in constant danger from a gas explosion. His son has never been found.

Wilhelm Kreisle of Nürnberg gave a pair of shoes to a slave laborer in Germany. For this act of kindness he was sentenced to four years in concentration camps, one of them Dachau where he lived in daily terror of having his name called for execution.

These experiences of a few of our church members in Germany are not extreme or unusual. Other members watched their parents being burned alive in cellars while they stood by helpless to aid them. All experienced the cold winter of 1947 when they stayed in bed to keep warm, and many of the Saints were kept from actual starvation by the food parcels sent from America.

The church in Germany, according to Blair Jensen, can be compared to the early days of the Latter Day Saint movement in America. Members of only a few months bring in converts, while men new to the faith are ordained to the priesthood. Attendance at services is consistent, and the membership contains a high percentage of skilled and professional people. The characteristic of the people most noticeable to a visitor is the love the members have for each other. The Saints seem shadowed by a sense of loss and so cling to each other while they can.

Even after a short visit it is easy to recognize that Germany is a defeated country. The faces of the men are tired; the women have lost the desire to remain attractive. Only the children, clad in garments either too large or too small, are animated and happy. Although food is rationed in Germany, there seems to be no shortage. Only in isolated situations are people going hungry. Housing is bad (family of seven Saints live in one room), but so much building is going on that soon most families will have more room. The biggest problem now is unemployment. Even with clothing and food in the stores, many of our Saints have no money to buy what they need.

DESPITE THE SUFFERING of the German common people during and after the war, they are not bitter. Those who lost loved ones in Allied bombing raids and might be excused for harboring feelings of hatred toward the victors are resigned and almost philosophical about what had happened to them. Members and non-members alike say simply that their grief was caused by "the war" and let it go at that. The dominant feeling is one of resignation. On the busses the passengers do not even lift their heads to gaze at the sheared off buildings as they pass.

Only at a mass grave near Hamburg did I see a display of emotion. The grave is laid out in the shape of a large cross, and around the edge survivors have placed wooden crosses inscribed with the names of their loved ones buried someplace in the grave. On a cold afternoon in October, an old woman in a black coat with one empty sleeve searched among the crosses. When she found the one she was looking for, she placed a handful of flowers at the base and then stood staring as if she could see into the grave, occasionally dabbing with her handkerchief at the tears that dripped onto her coat. At last she left, and, curious to know who the flowers commemorated, I bent over the cross. Printed in crooked German letters across the wood were the names of a man, four children, and the one word, "Why?"

Thanksgiving

We thank thee, Lord, for this good earth,
The sunshine and the rain;
We thank thee for the flocks and herds,
The fruit and garnered grain.

We thank thee, Lord, that we can take
Vast riches from thy hand;
The wonders of the earth that make
Abundance in our land.

We would not selfish be, dear Lord,
With blessings that we hold;
But share with neighbor lands in need,
Our garments, food, and gold.

We know in other lands they pray,
Whose hearts are good and true;
Help us to feed and comfort them,
Their faith and strength renew.

Thy bounty makes our nation great,
And grateful hearts proclaim
Thanksgiving unto thee, dear Lord,
We praise thy holy name.

—MABEL WILLIAMS CRAYNE.

Bulletin Board

Idaho District Youth Conference

The Zion's Leaguers and Young Adults of Idaho District are invited to attend the conference being held at Rupert, Idaho, on November 26 and 27. The conference will begin at 2:00 p.m. Saturday and close with a dedication service at 11:00 a.m. Sunday. Separate business sessions will be held for the two groups so that plans for the coming spring and summer may be discussed. Seventy E. Y. Hunker and district officers will lead the class sessions. Lodging will be provided by the members of Rupert.

PHILIP W. MOORE,
District President

Rock Island District Conference

The annual fall conference of Rock Island District will be held on November 20 at the Masonic Temple, 420 Eighteenth Street, in Rock Island, Illinois. The day's schedule is as follows: general prayer service, 9:00 a.m.; sermon by Apostle D. T. Williams, 11:00; business session (and election of delegates for General Conference) 2:30 p.m.

On Saturday, November 19, there will be a workers' conference at the Rock Island Church, Eighteen Avenue and Tenth Street. Apostle Reed M. Holmes of the Department of Religious Education will conduct morning, afternoon, and evening classes, beginning at 10:00 a.m. All church school workers and other interested members are urged to attend. Those who need overnight accommodations may contact Mrs. George C. Shippy, 1310 East Eleventh Street, Davenport, Iowa.

CORRECTION

H. I. Letchworth, author of "Concerning the Divinity of the Book of Mormon," which appeared in the October 10 Herald, wishes to correct the statement made in paragraph one, column three concerning the date of publication of The Works of Josephus in English. The first English translation was by Wiston in 1737, rather than 1898 as stated in the article. However, the translation was revised in 1889-90 by A. R. Shilleto.

REQUEST FOR PRAYERS

Mrs. Ethel Sheppard, 203 West Church Street, Lexington, Tennessee, requests prayers for the spiritual welfare of her family. She would particularly appreciate having the Saints fast and pray with her on November 20.

Prayers are requested for Mrs. John W. Petterson, 2312 Hainsworth Avenue, North Riverside, Illinois, who will undergo a serious operation soon.

Mrs. Harve Culp, McDermott, Ohio, who has recently lost her husband, requests the prayers of the Saints. She is seventy-two years old.

Prayers are requested for Hazel Cornish Stevens of Newberry, Michigan, who is afflicted with cancer.

WEDDINGS

Swoffer-Fifield

Mrs. Grace Fifield of Independence, Missouri, and Herbert C. Swoffer of Croswell, Michigan, were married October 1 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Gault in Independence. The wedding was performed by Elder Charles Graham. They are making their home in Croswell where Mr. Swoffer is pastor.

BIRTHS

Mr. and Mrs. Bert H. Sartwell of Independence, Missouri, announce the birth of a daughter, Theresa Denice, born September 27 at the Independence Sanitarium. Mrs. Sartwell is the former "Mickey" Moorman.

Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Barlow of Mobile, Alabama, announce the birth of twin daughters, Pamela Sue and Patricia Ann, born October 15. Mrs. Barlow is the former Alice Ruth Garrett of Bay Minette, Alabama.

Elder and Mrs. Donald V. Lents of Independence, Missouri, announce the birth of a son, Don Glaude, born November 4. Mrs. Lents is the former Helen Draper.

A son, Thomas Royal, was born on November 6 to Mr. and Mrs. Omar L. Nunn of Warrensburg, Missouri.

DEATHS

ULTICAN.—William Patrick was born on December 31, 1875, at Chippewa Falls, Wisconsin, and died on November 3, 1949, in Independence, Missouri. He was married to Ella La More on November 4, 1897, at Cloquet, Minnesota; eleven children were born to them. In 1908 the family moved to Blackfoot, Idaho. While moving, one of their sons died. A minister of the Reorganized Church preached the funeral sermon—the first sermon of this faith they had ever heard. A Catholic by birth, Mr. Utican was slow to accept the Restored Gospel but on August 17, 1908, he was baptized into the Reorganized Church at Blackfoot, even though isolated from church privileges there. In 1916 the family moved to Hagerman, Idaho, and lived there for over thirty years. All of the children joined the church and one son Thomas James, is now pastor of the Rupert, Idaho, Branch. Early in 1947, Brother and Sister Utican moved to Independence. Had he lived one day longer they would have celebrated their fifty-second wedding anniversary.

He is survived by his wife, Ella; five sons: William Patrick, Jr., and George Joseph of Tuttle, Idaho; Leon L. of Chico, California; Thomas James of Rupert; and Lawrence Spencer of King Hill, Idaho; three daughters: Mrs. Ella Winholtz and Mrs. Mary Reimer of Independence, and Mrs. Geraldine French of Tuttle; one sister, Mrs. Warren Peterman of Cloquet, Michigan; and seventeen grandchildren. Funeral services were held at the Roland Speaks Chapel in Independence with Elders Glaude Smith and Charles H. Johnson officiating, after which the body was sent to Hagerman where graveside services were conducted by the I.O.O.F.

AUSTIN.—Charles C., son of N. E. and Lucy Austin, died April 13, 1949, at the age of sixty-five. He was married to Addie H. Hawes on January 1, 1907, at Condon, Oregon. They made their home in Condon and Spray for a number of years and then moved to Hood River, Oregon, where they were residing at the time of Mr. Austin's death.

He is survived by his wife; two sons: Floyd and Fred; three brothers: Henry F. of Canada; Staryl C. of Salem, Oregon, and Kleoh W. of Eureka, California; and five sisters: Mrs. Edna Hawers of Hood River; Madge Johnson and Vivean Hanson of Portland, Oregon; Bess Hamrick of The Dalles, Oregon; and Gladys Chambers of Condon. Funeral services were conducted by Evangelist Walter Barker at the A. J. Rose Mortuary. Interment was in the Rose City Cemetery in Portland.

TINKER.—William Russell, son of Bruce and Virginia Tinker of Kennett, Missouri, was born October 19, 1922, and died August 26, 1949. He was baptized into the Reorganized Church on September 18, 1932, at Williamsville, Missouri, and on March 19, 1945, was married to Melva Louise Jones.

He is survived by his wife; a son, William Russell, Jr.; his parents; four sisters: Marjorie Malone of St. Louis, Missouri; Edna Salter and Flora Salter of Kennett; and Hilda Salter of Santa Monica, California. A daughter died in infancy. Funeral services were held at Kennett, Elders Clarence Archibald and Orlin Phillips officiating. Burial was in Oak Ridge Cemetery in Kennett.

BRUNDAGE.—George Russell, was born in DeGrasse, New York, on October 2, 1876, and died in Seattle, Washington, on October 25, 1949, after a long illness. He enlisted in Company "K" of the United States Infantry on June 3, 1899, and served in the Philippines from August 25, 1899, to March 18, 1902. Returning to the States, he reenlisted for two years. On January 4, 1911, he was married to Mae Shippey in Bellingham, Washington, and on May 31, 1914, was baptized into the Reorganized Church. Early in 1917 he was ordained a priest, and on October 4 of the same year he was ordained an elder. For two years he served in the mission field and for two years was vice-president of the Seattle-British Columbia District. He also served as president of the Religio and branch president of Bellingham Branch. Moving to Everett, Washington, in 1921, he served as pastor of the branch there three different times between 1924 and 1946. He helped build the first church in that city and was chairman of the building committee which planned the new church.

He is survived by his wife, Mae, of Everett; a son, Charles Russell of Springfield, Oregon; a daughter, Mrs. Fred Scott of Burton, Washington; a sister, Mrs. Edwin Morgan of Canton, New York; and four grandchildren. Funeral services were conducted by Elders Granville Swenson and Elliott Gilberts at the church in Everett, and by the John Wannebo Camp Number Nine of the United Spanish War Veterans at the graveside. Interment was in Cypress Lawn Memorial Park.

NEWKIRK.—Roy Ellsworth, son of David and Rose Robb Newkirk, was born February 12, 1865, at Blanchardville, Wisconsin, and died October 28, 1949, at Santa Barbara, California. He moved to California in 1890, making his home in Santa Barbara in 1925. For several years he served as pastor of the Santa Barbara Branch and with his wife made a valuable contribution to the advancement of the work in that area. By trade he was a building contractor.

He is survived by his wife, Hattie Lytle Newkirk, and a daughter, Mrs. C. W. Heth, both of Santa Barbara; two sons: Ernest L. of Los Angeles, California, and Wayne V. of Detroit, Michigan; a brother, James Newkirk of Elizabeth, Illinois; four grandchildren; and twelve great-grandchildren. Funeral services were held at the Welch and Ryce Chapel, Evangelist Louis J. Ostertag officiating. Interment was in the Santa Barbara cemetery.

CORBIN.—Laura Merie, was born in Nevada, Iowa, and died October 4, 1949, in Nevada at the age of forty-two, following a long illness. She had been a member of the Reorganized Church since 1921. Throughout her life she remained a firm believer in God and the church. Funeral services were held at the Reorganized Church, Elders Robert Nutgrass and Charlie Lehman officiating.

HEIDE.—Amos William, was born June 21, 1879, at Fulton, Iowa, and died October 6, 1949, at his home in Maquoketa, Iowa. He had been a member of the Reorganized Church since childhood and for the past nine years served as branch president of the Fulton congregation.

He is survived by his wife, six children, and fifteen grandchildren. Funeral services were held at the church in Fulton, Elders Lyle W. Woodstock and J. C. Stiegel officiating.

IN THIS ISSUE

EDITORIAL:
We Ought to Be Thankful.....	3
Across the Desk.....	4
OFFICIAL:
Recordings.....	4
ARTICLES:
Thanksgiving, by John W. Rushton.....	5
Give Thanks Unto the Lord, by D. O. Chesworth.....	8
The Miracle of the Thanksgiving Feast, by John R. Grice.....	9
I Lived With Saints in Germany, by Roy Cheville.....	10
In the Power of the Spirit—Isaac N. White.....	12
Question Time.....	13
It's Our Own Fault, by Naomi Russell.....	16
Billboard Advertising, by John Blackstock.....	17
Thanksgiving—A Holy Day, by Elva Oakman.....	18
Report From Germany, by Bilots Whiting.....	20
Thanksgiving, a poem, by Mabel Williams Crayne.....	22
Bulletin Board.....	23

P.S.

Mary A. Burlington
1510½ Jules
St. Joseph, Missouri

14042
19
h

 ACCOLADE

The high point of all honorable experiences is when somebody's nice baby holds out its arms to come to you; or when the child of your friends begins to call you "uncle" of its own accord.

 GERSHWIN

Like him or not, if you listen to music at all, sooner or later you will have to hear some of George Gershwin's compositions. Conductors will force him upon you. . . . There was one of his pieces on the radio the other day, Concerto in F. It contained a surprise: at one point there was a pretty melody, really sweet. I'll hear that one again.

To like a man, we should try to understand him. What is the explanation of Gershwin? In the 1920's and 30's men and women seemed like pawns of fate. People saw little purpose in life. A composer reflects something of the spirit of his times. Gershwin gave expression to the casual mood, the floating emotional state, like that of a personality moving on the sea of life, a chip riding the crest of a flood, now moving swiftly down the river, now plunging over a waterfall, now loitering in a wide slow eddy, now moving helplessly out to sea. A man is a leaf on a tree, fluttering in a gale. Life is a comic drama, repeated over and over again on a big electric sign, in a million candle power, above Broadway. Love is an illusion of moonlight in a cloudy sky. Happiness is a wisp of haunting melody, soon drowned in the heckling cacophony of life. Death is a storm rising up out of the sea, and blotting out everything. . . . Okay, now—what does Gershwin mean to you?

 UNDERSTANDING

A good way to understand how sick people feel is to be sick, good and hard, yourself.

 THE RELIGION OF ATHEISM

One of our editors recently said of a certain university instructor, "He thinks he has no religion, but he has. It appears everywhere in his teaching. It is the religion of atheism."

"The religion of atheism." How true the phrase is. It has its multitudes of priests preaching every day. It holds services wherever one of them is speaking.

It has its credo, "I believe that there is no God, but blind chance fumbling with the material creation. I believe in Science, no matter how often it has been wrong, no matter how it contradicts itself. I believe there is no intelligence greater than man's intelligence."

It has its gospel: That there is no morality. That there is no immortality nor spiritual life. That anything goes if you can get away with it. That there is no punishment for sin, no reward for virtue. That we are no more than animals, and there is no eternal purpose in our existence.

That, briefly, is the religion of atheism. It has its superstitions, its prejudices, its closed minds, its foolish enthusiasms, and its unreasonable hates just as any other religion.

The Bible provides a pithy commentary on this religion, "The fool hath said in his heart, There is no God."—Psalm 14: 1.

Herald House

SUBSCRIBE TODAY!

Every Church Family Needs . . .

Saints' Herald
and
Daily Bread

both magazines, 1 year, now just $4.50

With this new low combination price, every church family can afford to have both of these inspiring magazines in their home. So why delay—subscribe to SAINTS' HERALD and DAILY BREAD right away. Note: this offer applies only to new subscribers . . . and to renewing subscribers whose subscriptions expire during the next two months! Use coupon below . . . order today!

SPECIAL COMBINATION OFFER COUPON

My subscription to Daily Bread Saints' Herald (please check) expires during November–December, 1949. Please send me both magazines for one year at the combination rate of $4.50 per year.

NAME.....

ADDRESS.....

CITY..... STATE.....

CASH ENCLOSED

CHARGE

Independence,
Missouri

THE SAINTS'

Herald

The Women's Center Building

A City-wide Workshop for all Congregations in the Center Place

(See page 15.)

Photo by C. Ed Miller

Signal Lights

"There's a traffic light ahead—you'll soon be on it!" Do you react to those red, yellow, green signals automatically and reluctantly when you see them, or consciously, alert to every possible danger? Does the yellow light make you cautious or a daredevil?

Many drivers accept the red and green lights as final and positive in their implications but are uncertain, unconcerned, or irritated by the amber. Why does it affect drivers that way? Of course, roads and cars are built for travel, and men are impatient. Nature hates a vacuum, and men hate suspense and inaction. But that yellow on the highway, like the yellow on the back of spiders and snakes, is a warning of the danger which awaits the heedless and impatient. For the aged and the youth, rich and poor, there are traffic lights ahead.

Introducing...

DR. E. V. SHUTE (page 5) was introduced in the Herald of October 3, 1949.

VERDA E. BRYANT (page 11) was introduced in the Herald of April 23, 1949.

NORA MOSER (page 12) was introduced in the Herald of August 14, 1948, in "New Horizons."

WILLIE C. ADAMS, SR., Chariton, Iowa, (page 13) was born near Bemidji, Minnesota, March 26, 1903, and baptized at Dunn Center, North Dakota, in 1915. He married Marie Elizabeth Jessen in 1928. They have six children: Agnes Adell, 20, now attending Graceland; Beverly Jean, 19; Willie C., Jr., 17; Marie Dolores, 16; Alpha Eileen, 14; Lawrence Guy, 12.

Brother Adams attended Graceland College in 1925, and has had some correspondence college work since then. He was active as a coal miner from 1926 to 1936. Following this he worked on the Fort Peck Dam in Montana, and in 1937 began work in the copper mines and granite quarries of Montana. In 1945 he moved to Chariton, and is now employed as bill poster for an outdoor advertising company.

He was ordained to the office of deacon in 1943. His hobbies are gardening, woodwork, and photography.

DAVID HYRUM SCHMIDT, Stewartville, Missouri, (page 13) was born in Wasatch, Summit County, Utah, on March 31, 1873, and was baptized in 1887 near Stewartville. In 1920 he was married to Daisy M. Beach.

By vocation he has worked at common labor, farming, painting, and paper-hanging.

JOSEPH C. MORRIS, Bellflower, California, (page 14) was born June 25, 1879, near Salina, Kansas. In 1900 he married Rose May Watson. They have one daughter, Mrs. Bessie Irene Gisel.

Brother Morris worked as a contractor and prospector in the mining districts of Southwestern Missouri and Oklahoma until he became a tuberculosis patient and went to Phoenix, Arizona, in 1939.

While his wife and daughter have belonged to the church for many years, Brother Morris was not baptized until 1948 at Long Beach, California. He states: "Since joining the church I have gained thirty pounds, and my tuberculosis is inactive, for which I am very thankful."

IVA HUNTER, Independence, Missouri (page 15) was born and baptized in Isabella County, Michigan. In 1920 she married James G. Hunter, who died in 1928. She has two daughters: Mrs. Arlee Rae Leigh, R.N., and Mrs. Betty Jane Fogler. Both daughters attended Graceland.

Mrs. Hunter attended high school with her daughters at Big Rapids, Michigan, and later took a business training night course at Baker University. She was employed for twenty years by the Chevrolet Company at Flint, Michigan.

Coming to Independence eight years ago, she served as Stone Church church school secretary for one year, and then became secretary to the pastor and matron of the Women's Center.

THE SAINTS' HERALD

Volume 96

November 28, 1949

Number 48

Editors: The First Presidency: Israel A. Smith, F. Henry Edwards. ASSISTANTS: Leonard J. Lea, Associate Editor; Chris E. Hartshorn, Managing Editor; Kenneth L. Graham, Business Manager.

The Saints' Herald is the official publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, with headquarters at The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri, and is issued through the offices of Herald Publishing House, 103 South Osage Street, Independence, Missouri.

Entered as second-class matter at the post office at Independence, Missouri, under Act of March 3, 1879. Issued weekly at Independence, Missouri. Price, $3.50 per year and $1.75 for six months in advance in the U. S. A., its territories and possessions; Canada, $3.75 per year and $1.90 for six months; other countries, $4.50 per year. Notice of a change of address must be given three weeks ahead of the date that it is to become effective. Accepted for mailing at the special rate of postage provided for in section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized July 21, 1921. Printed in the United States of America.

News & Notes

ISRAEL A. SMITH IN UTAH

At the invitation of Russell F. Ralston, president of the Utah and Western Colorado District, President Smith left Independence on November 11 to attend the conference being held in Provo, Utah. He has also been invited by the authorities of the Utah Church to speak in one of their tabernacles.

PRESIDENT EDWARDS ON TRIP

President Edwards left Independence on November 13 for Michigan and Ontario to engage in general church work there for a few days.

ATTEND UNITED NATIONS MEETING

On November 8, Apostle D. T. Williams visited the State Department at Washington, D. C., where he attended the conference dealing with the Declaration of Human Rights in the United Nations. Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt was the first speaker on the panel discussion. Apostle Williams reports, "As a result of this meeting, I had a clearer, wiser view of the vast problem humanity faces in an attempt to bring about a united world." Apostle Maurice Draper, who was appointed by the church presidency to represent the church at this conference, invited Brother Williams to the meeting.

While in Washington, D. C., Brother Williams spoke at the banquet for the home-coming services of the branch, and presented the Sunday evening sermon.

APOSTLE GLEAZER

Apostle Gleazer attended the home-coming services held in Belleville, Illinois, the week end of October 30. On November 5 and 6 he was in Taylorville, Illinois, to attend the priesthood institute and the Central Illinois District conference.

On November 13 he attended the Central Missouri conference at Warrensburg. Two men, Ezra Methland and Homer Ferguson, were appointed as counselors to the stake president, H. J. Simons. Otho Clark was appointed counselor to Bishop Willard Becker.

DES MOINES

Bishop Livingston and Apostle D. T. Williams attended the home-coming held November 12-13. Brother Livingston spoke at the morning and evening services. Brother Williams was in charge of the prayer service and held a class on the subject, "Each One Win One."

APOSTLE HOLMES IN DENVER

Several pastors from the neighboring districts were among the large crowd of Saints who enjoyed the services of Apostle Holmes when he visited the Denver Branch, November 12-13. In the afternoon there was a discussion of the statistical analysis of the church, particularly of the Eastern Colorado District. The analysis was drawn from the Joint Council report.

PRIESTHOOD INSTITUTES

Floyd M. McDowell, Superintendent of Priesthood Education, returned November 15 from a series of priesthood institutes held in Ohio, Pennsylvania, and Kentucky. Apostle P. E. Farrow was with him during most of the fifty sessions of the institutes.

ATTEND CONFERENCES

Bishop DeLapp and Apostle Mesley attended the Oregon District conference at Portland, the British Columbia District conference at New Westminster, and the Seattle District conference at Seattle. At a number of places where they held one-evening services, Apostle Mesley showed slides of his Alaskan journey.

God Was There

So Jacob came to Luz, which is in the land of Canaan, that is, Beth-el, he and all the people that were with him. And he built there an altar, and called the place El-beth-el: because God there appeared unto him. —Genesis 35: 6, 7.

Man and God

Jacob will be known forever as a witness of the fact that God appeared to him at Beth-el. It must have been a glorious experience for Jacob to be there, but it was not he who imparted the glory to the event. Both he and Beth-el would be forgotten if God had not appeared.

Moses is important as a witness of the burning bush. For him, too, it must have been an experience that could not be described in human language. But it was not Moses who caused the bush to burn.

Peter, James, and John were witnesses of the glory of the Transfiguration, but they were not the principal persons present. The Lord Jesus, Moses, and Elias overshadowed them. It never occurred to the Gospel writers to lose sight of the relative importance of persons. They kept their sense of proportion.

Joseph Smith went into the grove to be alone for prayer, a very humble young man seeking light and help. That incident, like thousands of others of a similar kind in the lives of men, might have passed without being noted in any record, except for one fact: God and Christ were there. It was indeed a marvelous experience for Joseph to be there as witness. But the power and glory of that occasion came from the Father and the Son. Joseph himself never forgot that.

It is very important for us to keep our attention on the main things. We are concerned with God and Christ primarily, with prophets secondarily. A Mohammedan may declare, "There is no God but Allah, and Mohammed is his prophet." It is not the Christian purpose to deify a prophet, but to bear testimony of Christ. Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon declared, "This is the testimony, last of all, which we give of him, that he lives; for we saw him, even on the right hand of God." And that should be the burden of the testimony of the gospel in these latter days. As Daniel said to King Nebuchadnezzar, "There is a God in heaven." He reveals himself to men. All our faith points to God. Jesus Christ, the Savior, stands at the center of the work.

The Main Person

Two ministers, one young, one older, met. The young man was telling of a great convention he had attended, the big things that had happened, and the many prominent persons who were present. He was very enthusiastic, but nothing had touched his soul. He might as well have gone to a circus or a political rally.

The older man listened for a while, then said, "That's very fine. But tell me—was God there?"

Throughout all our Christian testimony, it is good for us to remember persons and events. But we must keep them in mind in the order of their relative importance. God is always number one. No meeting is a success unless he is there.

Were You There?

Most of us have heard the spiritual, "Were you there when they crucified my Lord?" People generally love it. But, as many soloists present it, it is only a song—beautiful, and nothing more.

One Sunday we had a different experience with it. A visiting vocal artist, a colored member from the East, sang this spiritual at Stone Church. There was something different, even portentous and solemn, about it. It seemed to us that as she sang she stood in spirit on Calvary, looking at Jesus as he died on the Cross. The poignancy, the tragedy, the sorrow of the Crucifixion filled her heart. And because she stood at the foot of the cross, she lifted us up there beside her, so that we felt it, too.

"Were you there?" ceased at that moment to be a song and became an experience—one not to be forgotten. But our feeling of being witnesses, in a sense, was surpassed by the impression of the presence of the Lord.

In a sense we can never understand the meaning of Christianity unless we take a spiritual pilgrimage to Calvary to see Jesus on the cross. It is only the words of a story until we do so. Once we have done that, it is a living reality.

Some years ago Ernest Findlay Scott wrote:

There is something within us which insists that we are made for God, that we are subject to God's law, that our action is meaningless unless we can relate it somehow to the divine purpose

Religion is rooted in this conviction that the knowledge of God is the most imperative of all our needs, since only by knowing God can we know ourselves.*

The human heart has hopes and dreams that can never be fulfilled in terms of the things of this earth; it has aspirations whose only proper place is the broad stage of eternity. Our life is a pilgrimage that cannot end until it brings us back into the presence of God.

L. J. L.

The New Testament Idea of Revelation*, Scribners, 1935.

E d i t o r i a l

The Communion Covenant

BY ISRAEL A. SMITH

FROM SEVERAL SOURCES comes evidence that some of our priesthood members have served the emblems of the Lord's Supper to non-member children and adults. This is surprising and disturbing, as there is no excuse for our ministers to ignore our close Communion doctrine. It only indicates that we must be ever on the alert to keep our educational program moving; otherwise, the church laws may be superseded by the traditions of men.

Doubtless, there is a temptation to feel that all children and the adults who by their association and profession acknowledge Christ as their Savior should not be excluded from the Lord's Supper. However, on the same basis of reasoning, there is no reason for the Restoration Movement if mere profession of faith is to be accepted for compliance with the laws which identify us with the church for which Christ gave his life.

There may be a tendency to feel that in this modern democratic age close communionists are putting themselves in an exclusive group, smug in their satisfaction of being better than other professed Christians when they refuse to serve the Communion to other professed Christians. To such it might give some satisfaction to reflect that we find ourselves with the majority on this issue. The Catholics, Brethern, Lutherans, Episcopalians, and other smaller Christian groups do not serve open Communion. It is more common for the minority group to defend their position than for the majority to be on the defensive. Doubtless, the convictions of this majority group are based on Scripture and historical traditions. In addition to that, Latter Day Saints have some very definite instructions and even some direct commandments in the Doctrine and Covenants and Book of Mormon which should stabilize our close Communion doctrine. How can non-members, who are sincere, kneel with us in the blessing prayers which solemnly "witness that they are willing to take upon them the name of thy Son" unless they have actually done so through baptism into his church? This is exactly what Paul meant when he said, "He that eateth and drinketh unworthily, eateth and drinketh damnation to himself not discerning the Lord's body" [the church].—I Corinthians 11: 29.

On this subject, the Presidency as editors and other church leaders have always spoken unequivocally. We are reprinting some of their statements which we commend for a careful reading. We cannot improve upon them, nor do we have any desire to modify them.

Shall We Serve the Communion to Nonmembers?

(Excerpts from Saints' Herald)

Volume 40, page 84, February 11, 1893, Joseph Smith and W. W. Blair, editors:

A brother asks if it is lawful and proper to give the sacrament to unbaptized children, and we reply that it is restricted to members of the church who "art worthy of it" as set forth in Doctrine and Covenants 17: 18-22. The conditions required in the above text cannot be fulfilled by an unbaptized child; therefore such child should not be given the sacrament. And to this agree the teachings of Saint Paul, I Corinthians 11: 23-29.

Paul commended the Saints in being careful and particular in respect to the proper institutions of the church, and we should be admonished thereby, for he says, "Be ye followers of me, even as I am also of Christ. Now I pray you, brethren, that ye remember me in all things, and keep the ordinances, as I delivered them to you."—I Corinthians 11: 1, 2.

Volume 45, page 726, November 16, 1898, Joseph Smith, editor in "Questions and Answers," column:

Do you think it lawful to administer the sacrament to children ten to twelve years of age who have never been baptized?

Paul was of the opinion that there were some things which were "lawful" but not "expedient." The sacrament (the bread and the wine) is for baptized believers—those who are capable of discerning the Lord's body. No others are contemplated in the instructions in either the New Testament or the Doctrine and Covenants. We have no authority for the giving of the emblems to the children who have not yet reached the age to obey, or unbaptized persons, either children or adults, who have reached such age.

If, therefore, the statements in the law which make it lawful to administer the sacrament to specified persons, or those specifically named, make it unlawful to permit others not so named to partake, it is unlawful.

We are of the opinion that the administration to such persons as those described in the question is not provided for, and for that reason, it ought not to be done.

Volume 50, page 593, July 1, 1903, Joseph Smith and Frederick M. Smith, editors. Editorial:

Will you please give some instructions on taking the sacrament? Should those who do not belong to the church be invited to partake? If not, what is the meaning of Doctrine and Covenants 46: 2?

In the Herald for May 1, 1870, page 272, the editor gave some thoughts on the "sacrament" and in it uses the following language: "The person passing the emblems should not permit unbaptized persons, nor members of the church against whom charges are made for which they are to be tried, to partake if they know them."

This is in harmony with the instructions thereon given in Doctrine and Covenants 46: 1, 2.

Volume 53, page 1004, October 17, 1906. Joseph Smith, editor; Elbert A. Smith, associate editor. Article entitled, "Are We Close Communion?"

If by this question it is intended to ask, "Do you as a church administer to and partake of the sacramental emblems, bread and wine, with other religious bodies," we answer, "No." Our reason for thus answering is that we are commanded not to let communicants partake unworthily—if unworthiness in part is the failure to discern in the body, the Lord's body or, in other words, the church acknowledged of Christ as his.

As a people we are commanded not to cast anyone out of our prayer and sacrament meetings; but this does not justify us in giving to them those emblems in the partaking of which we solemnly assure the Lord and each other that we are willing to take upon us the name of Christ, to remember him, to keep his commandments, in order that we may have his Spirit to be with us. Whoever should partake with us in this covenant, by eating and drinking of the bread and wine, would by such act of partaking also be virtually assenting that the church by whose officers the emblems were offered and administered was the Church of Christ, and the officers administering were acting in their proper places and authorized to officiate in the name of the church and Christ. This acknowledgment we have not the right to demand or permit them to make without the previous baptism which the word of God requires; hence the wisdom of the church in not permitting those not of the faith into which we have been baptized to partake of the sacrament with us; and as a consequence to decline to partake with them in their love feasts or sacrament meetings.

Volume 85, October 15, 1938, by A. B. Phillips.

The sacrament is essentially a memorial of the Christian covenant as previously entered into between God and the repentant believer. Only members therefore should be permitted to receive it, and scriptural cautions are given which warn against its administration in cases of unworthiness.

The Book of Mormon shows that Jesus limited the sacrament to the membership when instructing his disciples in the matter, and this is commanded. "Give it unto the people of my church, unto all those who shall believe and be baptized in my name."—III Nephi 8: 32.

Moroni also states that the sacrament was administered "unto the church" as Jesus had commanded. Also III Nephi 8: 62 gives his command.

Adventure Toward Social Security

A lecture delivered at the College Youth Conference, Independence, Missouri, September 8, 1949.

By E. V. SHUTE

READING: Luke 16: 18-30

LET US PROJECT OURSELVES back into the year 490 B.C. It is Athens—Athens in dismay and consternation. The Persians in great force, under King Darius, are approaching from the sea. They have just burned Eritrea, the approach to the city, after putting down the Ionian allies of Athens, and are being guided by Hippias, the old Athenian aristocrat who understands all the weaknesses of his home city. Messengers have been sent in desperate haste to beg Sparta to come to the rescue. But jealous, stupid, valiant Sparta is always slow to respond. The total army Athens can put into the field will be no more than 10,000 men, and they must face at least twice that number of Persians.

But among the 10,000 men is Miltiades, a man of military experience and undaunted resolution, and he urges his fellow citizens to advance upon the larger army and not wait for a siege. When they accept the advice, however, and—with a few Platean allies—do come out from behind their hills to look down on the hundreds of Persian ships and the great foreign army encamped on the plain of Marathon, these militiamen are chilled with apprehension. How can they save the day and their city?

Miltiades is not at a loss, however. The Athenians wait till the confident and impatient Persians are compelled to advance, then they advance in their turn, although exposed to a hail of arrows, and charge to close quarters with their short spears. As everyone knows, Marathon becomes a great European victory, and Asia is turned back for a generation. Athens' safety has been secured by Miltiades' daring leadership.

A hundred fifty years later Alexander's campaigns against the same enemy were really punitive, meant to turn back forever the successive inroads of the Persians by crushing their power at its source. It seemed the only way to achieve security, although it involved the most hazardous military adventure ever undertaken up to that time—something equaled later, perhaps, only by Hannibal's assault on Italy, or by the exploits of Clive in India, or the landings in the Mediterranean or Normandy in this last war.

BUT THESE were not the only instances of adventure toward social security, for what else is implied in the story of Joseph taking his people into Egypt, or in the stories of the Book of Judges—one long sequence of desperate adventures designed to achieve security. Indeed, every war is pointed to that end. We have just experienced the last of a long series of these. Is it not strange that security is so elusive and always has to be won over again?

If I may change my analogy very slightly, a man courts a girl in order to achieve the security of marriage. But every man has to undertake the old adventure anew, and security is something he does not always win, at least in Nevada.

Community adventures toward security can fail, as in our own history at Nauvoo, in Robert Owens' Community, the Shakers, the Oneida group, or in the moves of the Japanese war lords in our own time. Or they can be very risky undertakings, indeed, as in modern England.

So, great states, families, businessmen, professional men, even the man who hires on an untried job or buys a house or a washer on the installment plan—all adventure toward security. Why, then, is security so desired? Because among other things it is so elusive, like the pot of gold at the rainbow's end or the million dollars we'd like to make or the title of duke or winning a Hollywood glamour girl. Probably no one has ever found security. It is a myth, like the golden fleece or the apples of Hesperides.

The millionaire crashes or loses his wife or can't get into the club he cares for. The duke is so bored he goes to Monte Carlo to learn the wonderful new game of "craps," meeting there a score of dukes already very unnecessary, and even an exiled king or two. The Hollywood glamour girl turns out to be an ignorant, climbing, gold-digging hussy created by her studio and press agent, who tomorrow may lose her hold on the public or quarrel with her employer or have her adopted child kidnaped. You've never met the man who had security. For if he had the social graces, wealth, and power the word connotes, he probably had not the body to match it, and quivered before a physician reading his blood pressure or dieting him for his diabetes or warning him about his heart or tobacco.

Nations, like men, play perpetual little games to gain security, even those possessing uranium and a stock pile of bombs—or those living in a chronically successful and brave little island near Europe, or those living nearer Communism on the Continent. Security is always and everywhere a mirage, and social security is as unreal in its full realization as any sweet but naïve dream can ever be.

WHAT WE REALLY SEEK is a respectable measure of it, some fair approximation, some realizable fraction. We want a home, a wife, or husband, a family, a decent salary, a car, some money for clothes and movies, and so on. We want to feel we are doing a constructive job, filling a proper and flattering role, being a good citizen, winning promotions, raises, and increasing respect in church and city or state. These are the justifiable ideals of good citizens.

But even our own short experience indicates that bust follows boom, that unemployment of a large portion of our citizenry can be regarded as normal or even desirable, as a recent issue of The Economist has it. We know that war disrupts our best plans, as well as the new inventions that modify old patterns of production such as tractors upsetting makers of horse harness, scarcities of raw materials as of oil or coal, changes of habits as when men stop wearing straw hats or women discard hatpins, and so on. Even in the professions it is possible that the control of tooth decay by one of several agents may upset the old family extractionist, or that state control of the legal profession may stop ambulance-chasing or substitute more reconciliations for divorce suits. There just is no complete social security, and an attempt to achieve it is always an adventure apt to end in frustration.

Adventure is risk, and, by a sound economic law, profit varies directly as risk. Because security is a desirable ideal, everyone risks for it—risks his life, his education, his marriage, his children, his car—risks everything. Adventure lures you. Here may be the boy you've been looking for or the stimulus you've been seeking or a directive or piece of advice to alter your whole scheme of living. But really all we have to offer you is adventure and risk—not quite "blood, sweat, and tears," but study, perseverance, and your brief chance for the best kind of life. "What we have, give we unto thee."

There is the security of sleep or apathy or ignorance. But this is security only if no vigilant man arises who wants what you have. Then there is the security that comes with alertness, that keeps its armor bright, its fleet in wraps, and builds up well-advertised bomb piles—admitting that this, too, never brings final security. Such security as this last implies adventure in the offing and is stamped with it as the security of a coin is stamped with the motto of the high American adventure "e pluribus unum"—something that cost you a revolution and a civil war, the Louisiana Purchase, the price of Alaska, and several international wrangles before boundary commissions.

TO BE GOD IS THE ultimate in security, the serene and perfect achievement of all conceivable goals. Yet God himself chose an adventure, and we are it. Giving us freedom, he made us unpredictable. He knew our lives would be a conundrum no human reason could adequately illuminate, so he sent Jesus to share our adventure and show us a safe way through it. He did so by revealing the paradoxes of our situation—that he who gave most kept most, that he who lost his life or held it at hazard enjoyed it most intensely, that the best things were not what you had but what you were, that only in good strife lay peace and contentment, that love was greater than life or power or death, that victory did not come by retaliation, and that nothing but his kind of life and its values were eternal. Every item in his teaching called to an adventure, but the end of the adventure was a solid and eternal kind of security, "built on a rock," having God for a partner, feeling the steady pull in the same yoke of Jesus, the "Comforter." The Holy Ghost need never have been called that had he not left us to the life of hazard that he himself had first tasted and shared.

Jesus has always called men to adventure, perhaps because he asked them to follow him. Think of the adventure he lived! Singly he set up his challenge to both the priestcraft of his country and the might of its conquerors, the Romans. He chose brave but uncomprehending companions and roamed the countryside like an unarmed Robin Hood. He taught men a doctrine so subversive that it has rocked the world ever since, and revealed an authority so challenging it must run headlong into every other authority and so displace or alter it. He decreed a discipline so rigid that the members of his band forever fell short of it, as have all his soldiers since, and led them so steadfastly toward a logical collision with the received opinions of men that in the end the boldest of his people dared not follow except "afar-off." Had he been armed he would have been a figure of romance, but he wore no helmet, and the first spear he encountered pierced his side. Had he eloped with Mary Magdalene or rescued her nude from the slave block, he would long have been sung by troubadours, but he had no love affairs except with all men, especially all lowly and oppressed men. Had he struggled with his country's tyrants as frankly as Mazzini or Hereward the Wake, he would have lived in story as a great patriot. But he subtly implanted in men's minds the forces that resistlessly overthrew and destroyed evil. Nevertheless he was incredibly brave and the most enduringly romantic figure in history. It's perhaps a mistake that he has not been taught more often from that point of view—at least to young folk.

Jesus recognized the difficulties he posed for his followers: "Sell that thou hast and come and follow me." "Think not that I am come to send peace on earth." "If any man come to me and hate not his father." "I come not to send peace but a sword." He never promised ease or security of the type that brings big bank balances or Newport houses or membership in the country club. Presumably he has not changed since and still offers no such guarantee.

The rich young ruler was perhaps the best human opportunity that ever presented itself to Jesus. He must have been very influential, and at the same time respected by the writers of the Gospels even decades later, for he remains anonymous. If he had joined the disciples, they would at once have gained great prestige and even a hearing in high quarters.

He was as good as he was powerful; he had an acutely sensitive conscience and, under Jesus' close guidance, might have taken the place Paul filled years later. When he came to question Jesus, he was undoubtedly and obviously the superior of any of the disciples then attending the Master. Even they conceded that without jealousy! Yet Jesus chose not to win him for a disciple but to set him the only condition he could not accept, to the frank consternation of the twelve. He deliberately asked the young man to forsake social security for adventure. When the apostles remonstrated, he reminded them that they who followed him should "receive manifold more in this present time, and in the world to come." Did you ever think of the state of mind of that fine young man in the years after—the man who refused company with Jesus? When he looked at his acres, his herds, his houses, his rings, do you think he valued his security as highly as the lost opportunity of his youth?

NOW I BEGIN to come to grips with my problem and leave the safe and pleasant generalities everyone likes to hear. I am glad I belong to a religious sect where one may still issue and meet challenges, where challenges get a fair hearing and may achieve something, where all is not fatally and for all time os-sified in a pious but deadly tradition. We are a striving group, and I am proud to strive in my small place in your ranks.

To Jesus' kind of adventure you are called. This challenge is to the young, to the daring, the trained, and disciplined. Since it is so difficult to win in his way, it remains worth trying. I would not insult your powers with easier tasks. Heroes come to light in storming Okinawa, not while loafing on the beach at Waikiki. And I'm impressed with the story of the selection of Gideon's army. God selects only the wary and prepared and venturesome to storm the ramparts of evil. The rest may go home and await the liberation that braver men win for them. It's in the hope of finding heroes among you that I speak of adventure. Of course, it has no interest for humdrum minds—but there must be here and there among you minds not yet committed to the easy, conventional, and finally unrewarding and disillusioning pattern of life.

It is so easy to make our life fall into a monotonous pattern which is not obedience to God but an illusion of service. I question, for example, if he regards his perfect work in us as a sequence of reunions, sermons, reading the Herald, visiting Kirtland, and sitting on delegations to a biennial conference. All that is good and needful, but that is what is wrong with it. It is just good. We are surely interested in discovering what is better or best. And we will never find what conductors we have till we put men to work learning scales and doing five-finger exercises. We may possess flowers in our own yard never yet allowed to bloom because everyone has been too busy meeting people on the front porch to water the seed.

We are looking for disagreeing, but not disagreeable men, I presume—optimists, men patient as spiders and persistent as waves at sea, men who think that the time is always ripe now. I have heard occasionally that we do not have the men, money, or opportunities now. Could it be that while we looked around for these things they were already in our hands but unregarded? I have heard that we need men of experience—but I have never found out how we get men of experience except by catching them young and letting them try. So often my seniors in medicine have quoted their "experience" to controvert me, and now that I myself am twenty-two years graduated, I could perhaps use the same old counter, but I remember that experience can all be wrong and never grow into skill. The appeal to experience is faulty—and notably so in the atomic world where no one has experience. If Latter Day Saints really held experience highly, they would never feel the need of revelation from above. We need men of talent who have not yet been blunted by experience, and we always need them now.

No country ever possessed as much as this one—all "the good things of the everlasting hills." No age ever offered such comfort and such easy pleasure in car or radio or television or food or clothes or travel. No age has ever seen a country as full of search for the unattained, so dissatisfied, so eager for what is just over the next hill. Could it really be true that men by seeking do not find out God, or the greatest good, and that by thinking we add not a cubit to our stature?

WHAT I AM REALLY SAYING is that this is like crossing a street. There is some sort of safety on either side, and you can easily be killed in leaving the one for the other. But someone who has crossed can surely call back to you: "Come on over. It was fun getting here, and I like this side." But I am keenly aware that if the church refuses the adventure to which this conference calls you, you could separate yourselves from it in crossing that street. The church, too, must be infected with not only the ceremony but the spirit of Joseph Smith's adventure if it is to take its place at the growing edge of things. We need a church that stretches but keeps its feet on the ground.

Everyone who has interned in a big hospital knows that dangerous malady called "hospitalitis." The best lads stay on year after year, become more and more conscious of their ignorance and the size of the discipline they face, and become increasingly timid about entering active practice. Some of these fellows must actually be kicked out and into the business of living. One can be paralyzed by difficulties that fade away before a bold onslaught or fear to cross a pasture because of the bulls that feed in another and distant field. I read recently of the three Boy Scouts who reported their good deed for the day, that of helping an old lady across the street. "But why did it require three of you," asked the Scoutmaster. "Oh," said they, "she didn't want to go across."

HOW SHALL WE REACH social security: by trial and error, with some small degree of wisdom and planning, but certainly only after trial, with difficulty and failures and disillusionments, with dear and disappointed comrades dropping out or even actively joining the opposition; by many adjustments—in salary, power, and place, roles we play, location, and so on; but by beginning! We must go on by trying all things, and holding fast to that which is good—as we undertake marriage, by starting it, not knowing if we can support the girl in ten years or if we will have six or sixteen children by then to add to our presently unmeasured burden.

I would not ask you to share any monotonous perfection for that would also be perfect boredom. But an adventurous, hopeful, growing, ever brighter achievement should enlist you and has unique opportunities and challenges for you.

Assuredly, the effort to initiate a realized Zion will arouse intense opposition from those who have always accorded it lip service only. The experimenters will be dangerous people or self-seeking or conceited or even apostates. Their first steps will be called premature, rash, foolish; and if they go on they will alienate and perhaps disaffect many of those now regarded as church stalwarts. But that could be part of the "sifting" process revelation has warned us of. I often ask myself this dreadful question as I look about at the fine men who have either left us or at least are no longer active with us, "Is the church membership that has thus lapsed not at least as good in God's eyes as the church group that remains?" Perhaps it was even more devoted!

THE INEVITABLE CONSERVATIVES in any church like ours must be warned that the progressive group has its rights too—its place in the light as well, its fellowship with Christ to win also. If the "liberals"—if I may appropriate such a contested designation—concede stand-patters a right to their opinions and activities or lack of them, the "ginger group" demands an equal tolerance in God's name. Anything less is as unchristian as futile. What divisions or separations may ensue must rest squarely on the conscience of those who "keep the faith"—and so little else. I speak plainly. Perhaps this sort of conference is the proper setting for plain speech.

IF I WERE NOT in this church I would be a Quaker. Quakers do such noble and brave things. But, on the other hand, their great record shows one how futile it is to tinker with things as they are. They bring such brains, such devotion and integrity, and even so much wealth to bear on the great problems of our world. But how little they have to show for the most intelligent humanitarianism of our day! Surely this indicates that it is not reformation the world needs but restoration—in the social-economic sphere as well as in doctrine. And that is Zion—a much different thing.

To be very specific—to what sort of adventures are you here called?

Many of them are being outlined at this conference and will evolve from its successors perhaps. How shall dentists, engineers, or architects make a real contribution to the Zion community and yet realize what is best in personal and professional opportunities? When and where and how shall they begin? Indeed that could be taken as the theme of such a conference as this. What shall be the controls of Zion, and what are the conditions of our integration in it? What do we sacrifice for what gains? What are we to think of the relations of science and theology, of the data and methods of revelation, and the related experiences of our day-to-day lives? Toward what realizable objectives shall we work now, next year, and in ten years? What do we do in war and on invasion, in class and labor struggles, and under atomic attack? What shall we do in literature, art, medicine, and music in the new society so long held up before us and toward which we will strive if it can be made practical, desirable, and realizable? What about courtship, divorce, and birth control in Zion? What about delinquency, crime, social maladjustment, and race relations of all the types to be gathered here? What about punishment and exile and expulsions in a community living under American law? What about such business organizations and farm developments as can attract both Austrians and Australians to Zion?

Are not all these adventures of the mind enormous hazards of living in which men will be called to risk family, future, bankroll, and perhaps even life? A Jewish friend of mine said to me two weeks ago: "There is no obstacle humans can devise that human ingenuity cannot surmount." I think even more of God's ingenuity and the power of his purpose in Zion.

FOR WHAT SECURITY? Assuredly not for the biggest bank account or business role or to be national president of Lion's or manager of
(Continued on page 22.)

I found the Church Through Suffering

By FRIDOLIN BECKER

The Author in 1947

(Editor's Note: The following article was sent in by Elder Eugene A. Theys. He states that Brother Becker was ordained a priest last April, and was to be ordained an elder October 16. Brother Becker does not speak or write English; therefore, this article is a translation which, with editorial help, has been put in its present form.)

DURING THE YEAR OF WAR, 1943, a heavy air raid hit Kassel, province of Hesse. The central parts were reduced to rubble. Thousands were killed. Children were screaming frightfully for lost parents. Mothers were yelling madly for missing children. The sight of the people suffocated by smoke and fumes was appalling. It cannot be described in words at all. The reality of things was a thousand times more horrible. As it was, I saw both my eighty-year-old father and mother being burned alive. We had already saved thirty people and had succeeded in breaking our way through a number of basements right to the cellar in which my parents had found refuge. We had actually come up to a distance of six meters from my parents when I was suddenly gripped and pulled back at the very moment that the wall of the cellar gave way and came down in front of us with a crash. In another split second, and I too would have been doomed. We kept working on and on throughout the night, but in vain.

The fury of war stalked on, and hecatombs of soldiers and civilians were its results. Due to the continual air raids and the ceaseless stays in damp shelters, our youngest son, Manfred, fell ill. In the course of a heavy raid during which a neighbor's house was destroyed, he fainted from fright. Following ten days of unconsciousness, he died at the age of five and a half years. We had already lost a son, age seven, in 1942. On April 8, 1945, we lost our home during the last heavy air raid.

Yet grief and sorrow were still to continue in our lives. Because I left the Nazi party, I was dismissed from my employment, denounced, and arrested by German police on November 27, 1945. They finally dragged me to the local headquarters of the American Counter Intelligence Corps. I was knocked down five minutes after being arrested and left lying unconscious. Subsequently, I was delivered up to the police and, shortly after, to the penitentiary at Kassel-Wehlheiden! From there I was committed to the internment camps at Schreufa and Darmstadt. It was only after eight months had elapsed that I was given my first trial. On this occasion, I was informed that the charges raised against me were unfounded, and I was going to be released. Naturally, my family was overjoyed when I reached home again. Unfortunately, I could not celebrate my silver wedding at home, as I was still under arrest on that date.

AT THE TIME of my arrest and internment, my wife's brother, Fritz Rathmann and his wife, Ida, Independence, Missouri, again contacted us, resuming connections that had been broken off at the beginning of the war. Kind letters and generous parcels of relief reached us from across the ocean. This was the first charity we received in our distress. But the satisfaction to be restored to my family was not to last long. Much greater sufferings and infinitely more terrible cares were yet to follow.

At 2:00 a.m. in the morning of February 23, 1947, my family and I were dragged out of bed by four armed CIC officers after the front door had been broken open. We were forced to stay in the kitchen despite my protest that I was ill. We were not allowed to carry on any conversation. The dwelling was searched minutely by the officers. We were not permitted to assist in the search. I was again arrested, and for months my family did not hear anything from me or about me.

I was held in solitary confinement at American Army Headquarters in Oberursel. This was the most terrible period of my life. I would rather not write anything about it. I wonder how I got over and lived through these months of solitary confinement despite an injury in the head from the First World War which causes me chronic trouble. Because of my firm belief in God, I was given the blessing to be released on April 18, 1947, and sent home after months of hardships and fatigue. Once again my arrest had been based on lies, untruths, and mistaken identity. After my release and return home, I lay unconscious for several hours on many days.

Faced with ineffable misery, my wife told her brother, Fritz Rathmann, at Independence of her difficulties. Help from those quarters was not waited for in vain. The letters from our relatives in the United States—particularly from Ida Rathmann and her mother, Emily Schmidt of Chicago—contributed immensely to console us when distress threatened to overpower us. It is only the help from beyond the ocean and the kind and faith-inspiring letters of these three relatives that kept my family alive. They had already twice been on the verge of death.

The letters from Independence and Chicago, as also those from Lieschen Bock at Hannover were always full of love and spiritual help. Never was anything found in them intended to convert us to their religion. But we read "between the lines" what profound faith these people had enshrined in their hearts. In their cases, religion was not preached but manifested practically. And thus I was gripped by the desire to learn to know their church—the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. As a result of this study, something occurred to me that I had previously thought to be utterly impossible. I came to see and to recognize the gospel in its true purity and genuineness.

I CONTINUED TO STUDY all the writings made accessible to me on the new church. It was as though a pale light quite suddenly emerged at a far distance out of what had seemed to be complete darkness. I began to write down everything important concerning this church, its faith, its doctrines, its priesthood—Melchisedec and Aaronic—and its organization. In the course of these studies, I found that the doctrines in question in no wise departed from the facts of the gospel. I also learned for a certainty that the six fundamental principles of the gospel had either been twisted or neglected by the other churches or denominations, or that heretical additions had been made to them. I further realized that there had been an apostasy, and that through continued revelation the gospel was restored by Joseph Smith.

Having written down these facts, I went to Hannover in order to enlarge my knowledge through association with the congregation. I then returned to Kassel, enriched inwardly and also provided with more writings for study. Along with my family, I studied daily the writings of the Book of Mormon and the Book of Doctrine and Covenants. As we studied, our faith grew more and more intense. We felt that God in heaven was taking us away from the stony path along which we had formerly walked. We also desecrated the narrow road with the narrow gate, through which alone we can hope to be afforded eternal bliss some day. Words fail me to put down everything.

At long last, we heard through Lieschen Bock that a baptismal service had been arranged at Hannover on December 21, 1947. There was no hesitation for us. Due to a serious inflammation of the vertebral column, I had been strictly forbidden by doctors to go into the water, yet, we were going to get baptized in winter. Was that not likely to result in bad consequences for my health? No! This was unshakable in my mind, for it says in the Bible: "Thy faith has made thee whole." When this faith in Jesus Christ is unshakable so as to be deeply rooted in one's heart, no harm can be done to him.

Rolf, Marta, and Fridolin Becker, 1949

Thus, my wife, our son Rolf, and I along with six others were baptized at Hannover on December 21, 1947, despite the fact that we had to cut the ice to get to the water. Since our baptism and reception of the Holy Spirit, a transformation has been going on within us. The fruits of the Spirit grow in our hearts, and although Jesus may be far away from us, he is yet always with us through the Holy Spirit and with his blessing. Indeed, we could bear lots of witnesses to the love of God.

At this moment I am resolved for myself and my people to communicate wherever I can, and at all times, our faith, our happiness, and peace of heart to those who are seeking the true word of God with honest hearts.

Some thirty-five years ago, I had contemplated entering a monastery and, subsequently, doing missionary work. Today, I am working in the vineyard of God and am engaged, in common with my family, in propagating the true gospel of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

My Prayer

Give me an understanding heart,
A heart of love to see
That I may glimpse another's doubt,
And lift him up to thee.

A heart that judgeth not, O God
Another soul of sin,
But rather reaches out to help
And bring that lost soul in.

Yes, Lord, I seek to understand
To show in truth and deed
Thy love for mankind everywhere,
To fill its longing need.

Let thy love motivate my soul
Let faith abide in me,
Give me an understanding heart,
That I may work for thee.

LUCILLE OLIVER

Five Years in Zion - By VERDA E. BRYANT

FIVE YEARS AGO we drove into Independence, passed the Auditorium and Stone Church, and thrilled at the prospect of making this city our future home. It has been a good five years; we have been happy, and the Lord has blessed us abundantly.

With the Latter Day Saint philosophy as it is, most members of the church harbor a hope of someday living here. Out of my five years' experience in the Center Place, what can I say to those who consider gathering to Zion and wonder what they can expect to find here? There is a difference between gathering to Zion and moving to Independence, Missouri. Anyone can move to Independence by packing up, moving, and arriving; but to "gather to Zion" is to come through contact with and on the advice of the Bishop of the church.

Independence is the headquarters of the Church of Jesus Christ. You can see the hand of God working with his people constantly—if you look for it—operating quietly and determinedly, steadfastly making progress though it sometimes seems slow.

While the Lord's anointed makes his headquarters here, Satan also uses this place as the seat of his authority, for where there are those striving to work for Christ, there the devil may be found putting forth his best efforts to thwart the good purposes, obstinately determined that the purposes of Christ shall not be wrought out.

The ideas that people away from here have concerning Independence are as many and varied as are the people themselves, and the impressions of the place among those who come are as manifold. Almost everyone coming here expects to find perfection in varying degrees, some almost literally expect the streets to be "paved with gold."

Independence is a normal Midwestern city of approximately 40,000 people. It is known as a church-going city with about thirty-five churches of which sixteen are our own. Our church is represented in the Ministerial Alliance and we co-operate with the other denominations in city-wide training programs and religious services at Easter, Christmas, and other times during the year. This has promoted good will between Latter Day Saints and members of the other churches.

Our school system is about average, though there are those who will tell you its standards are disgracefully low, while others think it is wonderful—depending, I suppose, upon what they have been accustomed to in other places. Schools here, as throughout the country, are overcrowded, but plans are in working order to alleviate this situation.

The shopping center "around the square" is convenient and adequate, though somewhat smaller than one might expect in a city of this size. This is doubtlessly due to the fact that Independence is almost a suburb of Kansas City, and a thirty-minute bus ride will take you to the heart of that city.

Independence has its share of drive-ins, theaters, recreation (both good and questionable), and liquor stores. While you can buy a glass of beer at almost any hour of the day or night, you find it pretty hard to buy an ice cream cone after seeing a movie.

Independence has numerous small industries which provide employment to many and which manufacture a variety of things from soda pop to harvesting machinery.

The hands of the clock go around, giving us twenty-four hours each day; babies are born and loved ones pass on in Zion. Independence is much like a thousand other such cities—but there is a difference!

In Independence there are 9,000 Latter Day Saints, and that puts it in a class all by itself. There are 9,000 men, women, and children who believe (to some extent at least) that their town shall someday be Zion, the perfected city and abode of Christ.

These 9,000 people are cemented in bonds of one basic belief, yet they remind me of a sign I once saw on the front of a store—"The Everything Shop. You name it, we have it." There are the friendly people and some who are almost hostile; there are those who contribute to the good of the community and church and those who think the world owes them a living. There are the happy and the sad, the good and the bad, the weak and the strong, the rejoicers and the lamenters, the rich and the poor, the givers and the takers, the workers and the loafers, the co-operative and the dissenting. You name it—we have it.

LATTER DAY SAINTS in Independence, though bonded by the same brotherhood as those elsewhere, are different in their fellowship because of their numbers. This is perhaps the most surprising and disappointing knowledge a newcomer meets. Away from the Center Place the words, "I am a Latter Day Saint," are as a password to admit one into immediate companionship with another Saint who will treat the newcomer as a long-lost brother. (Swindlers have been known to capitalize on this worldwide brotherhood, and unsuspecting Saints have at times been cheated by frauds posing as church members.)

Here in Independence it is different. You are a Latter Day Saint—so are 9,000 other people! A person is not so completely and immediately accepted here just because he is a member of the church. Our people are moving to Independence every day, and newcomers are no novelty—which fact has a tendency to make some people believe that the Saints here are not so friendly.

However, if the people where you now live are friendly, considerate, and co-operative, you will find just such people here. If you are happy, work in your branch, and have lots of friends, you will find happiness, work, and friends here. However, if you can't get along with the folks where you are, you probably won't get along with them here either.

Independence affords a good environment among Latter Day Saints for their children. They can find many friends among church members, but it is a mistake to move to Independence simply because children are in with the wrong crowd where they are. There are plenty of wrong crowds in Independence, and merely living here is not going to keep youngsters in the straight and narrow way. Away from Independence we can tell our children, "Latter Day Saints don't act that way," but here they will come back at us with "Some of them do."

HERE IS SOME ADVICE for those who come to Independence:

Contact the Bishop prior to making the change and accept his advice. He knows the situation here and can find out about the situation where you are.

Make yourself known to those you come in contact with here. Be willing to go out of your way to extend the hand of fellowship. Attend as many of the services as you possibly can, and stick around a while afterward to meet people.

Expect that Zion needs your time and talents, and be prepared to give them. Don't feel inferior because well-known people are working here. They can do only so much, and, as time goes on, more and more jobs are open for people

(Continued on page 14.)

As I See It

A department for replies to debatable topics printed in the Herald. The views expressed here do not necessarily reflect church policy nor commit the Herald or its editors. Our limited space will not permit us to print many articles on the same subject.—EDITORS

Modern Social Work

By Nora Moser

I AM SOMEWHAT CONFUSED by the article, "Is Social Security Good for Us?" The title indicates that the writer is against social security, but the article itself says nothing about the nationwide federal-state programs of Old Age and Survivors' Insurance and Unemployment Insurance which constitute what is usually meant by the term, "social security."

The text of the article extols the moral benefits experienced by the giver of direct person-to-person charity, which I do not deny in the least. The article is against organized charity and stoutly deplores taxation for charitable purposes and even for the "best social purpose ever conceived." This latter is an excessively broad statement; education, defense, and the maintenance of law and order are some of the best social purposes and are traditionally functions of government, supported by taxation.

Social security, as I have defined it, is not charity. The familiar 1 per cent deduction from pay envelopes is the employee's contribution to the Old Age and Survivors' Insurance fund. The employer makes a like contribution, which is merely an addition to the payroll bill as far as he is concerned. When the employee retires, he receives benefits on the basis of his previous contributions, just as if he had bought an annuity; this is a legal right, not charity. The employer pays a payroll tax to the State Unemployment Insurance Fund, another addition to his wage bill. When a worker becomes unemployed, he is legally entitled to compensation and receives it without the long delays and embarrassing investigation he would face if he had to turn to charity. The fact that the worker receives these two kinds of payments as a legal right is a moral boost to his self-respect; this, I think, outweighs the moral dividend derived by a patronizing dispenser of direct charity.

THE MAIN PART of the article, as nearly as I can see, is an argument against organized social work and public welfare activities, which include assistance for the needy, the aged, widows, dependent children, the blind, etc. The writer looks nostalgically back to the "good old days" when America was in the making. It is true that in those days charity was mostly direct, person to person, what there was of it. Those were the days when the population was very small in comparison with the resources of the country. The general pattern of life was the almost self-sufficient farmstead. If things went bad, there was always new land opening up in the West.

The standard of living was much lower in those days than it is now, but housekeeping was conducted on a much wider margin. By this I mean that food supplies were laid in on a full-season basis, and lofts and barns, as well as the floor, were counted as sleeping space. If a stranger dropped in for the night or a maiden aunt came to stay six weeks, food and lodging were no problem. Today food is bought on a day-to-day or week-to-week basis. An extra mouth makes an immediate increase in the food budget. Housing is so tight that putting up visitors is often impossible.

For a passing stranger to ask shelter for the night is now unheard of in cities and very rare in most of the country. The maiden aunt's long visit was usually an exchange of labor in the household industries for room and board—thus a mutually advantageous arrangement and not very much a charitable act. Today there are few household industries and little opportunity for practical employment of an extra woman in the home except where the mother works outside. In those early days orphans and children of improvident families found other homes easily—a sound economic investment because of their present or potential value as farm laborers.

Today, as a result of greatly increased density of population, urbanization, and industrialization dating from the industrial revolution, we are not primarily a nation of self-sufficient farmsteads but a highly interdependent society of wage earners living on a payday-to-payday basis. The loss of the breadwinner's job has a prompt effect on the family. The closing of a factory may throw most of a town out of work. Such a situation demands large-scale relief. The few unaffected people in the town can't be good neighbors to the host of needy, no matter how willing they are. The dislocations on a national scale of a depression like that of the Thirties cannot conceivably be relieved by purely voluntary, individual charity.

Where population is sparse, everyone knows his neighbors and feels for them in time of adversity. There are ties of blood and long association. If one household in such an area is washed out by a flood, the neighbors are usually able and willing to chip in and replace the lost goods. In densely populated, relatively transient areas such as modern cities, one knows few of his neighbors and is not strongly attached to them by kin or custom. If part of a town, hundreds of families perhaps, is washed out, not only is the need greater in proportion to the size of the community, but the sympathy felt by the more fortunate is less. Organized charity is absolutely necessary.

NOW OF COURSE the wells of sympathy are not dried up. Rather, the sympathy flows in different channels. The victims of a spectacular, well-publicized disaster will receive aid from perfect strangers all over the country. Gifts pour in to various celebrities, the President, Princess Elizabeth, and even fictitious characters of radio soap operas. During and since the war Americans have given huge quantities in direct gifts to European families, as well as in contributions to private charitable organizations. As a nation we contributed generously to the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration. Some would include Lend-Lease and the Economic Co-operation Administration as charity with a coloration of self-interest.

In the past half century or so, charitable institutions such as those included in the Community Chest have grown far beyond the provision of mere subsistence to the needy. The activities of Boy and Girl Scouts, Y.M.C.A. and Y.W.C.A., and USO, and others extend into education, recreation, counseling, health, and other specialized fields which could not be undertaken by private individuals. A basket of groceries on Thanksgiving is fine, as far as it goes. Modern social work envisages the whole man, the whole family, the whole society.

We Need "Social Security" Plus

By Willie C. Adams, Sr.

CHRIST, in his ministry, was concerned about the less fortunate members of society. He performed miracles to relieve suffering humanity. He told the rich young man to give to the poor. Even in our day the church has received instruction as to the welfare of its members in such words as "to every man as he has need."

Down through the ages, acts of charity have been administered in various ways. At times it has been left to chance wherein some were cared for while others were not. Today we are trying to be efficient and consistent in the things we do. And too, as civilization progresses or advances, it becomes increasingly complicated. New problems are constantly arising. Out of these problems, we the people enacted, in congress, the Social Security Law of Old-age pensions. Granted this is not as good as it could be, but it is the best we could get under the circumstances.

God inspired men in the setting up of this government, so we should not condemn our form of government or the principle by which our laws are enacted. If error exists, then it is not the form or principle, but the people who are wrong. No organization is any better than the people of which it is composed, be it national, local, political, social, or religious. In order to correct the wrongs that exist, we must correct the attitudes and thinking of the people. This cannot be done overnight. As a church we have been instructed to be obedient to the laws of the country and to elect honest, upright men to public office.

During the depression years many people, both young and old, were jobless. This was one problem among many. The Social Security Law enacted at that time was intended to relieve the situation. No one ever claimed it was perfect, but it is what the majority were in favor of. Should we discard it or condemn it because it is not perfect? The automobile is not yet a perfect machine even after years of improvement, but who would discard it and return to the horse and buggy?

GOD IS CONCERNED about the salvation and eternal life of all men—not just the members of our church. He is equally interested in all people of these United States, England, Russia, Germany, Japan, and every other nation. We can build Zion only by living together in a brotherhood. Among other things, we must be concerned about the "have-nots" in this world of ours. It takes money to run any organization wherein money is used as a means of exchange. Under our laws, taxation is the only source of governmental revenue. Those who "have" must supply the needs of those that do not have. This is a principle of civilization and Christianity. If the revenue is used improperly, should we condemn the system or the people? In our church, under the principle of stewardships, the "have-nots" are to be cared for from the storehouse which is to be replenished by those who "have." The source of revenue is to be voluntary. (Note—is to be, we don't have it yet.) This is the ideal for which we strive. Are we to wait till some superhuman being dumps this in our lap? Or are we going to do something about it here and now, and then improve on our mistakes till we achieve the ultimate goal?

A MAN OF MEANS can build a factory, erect buildings, and provide equipment, but it takes people to produce a product. The quality will depend on the attitude of the people who produce it. God has provided the plan of salvation and supplied the equipment (the resources of the earth). Now he awaits a people to produce the product—Christian living. We cannot draw a circle around our church and expect to gain salvation by ourselves. It is necessary that we be concerned about all of society. God will not dictate every last detail. He left some things for us to do for ourselves. "Social Security Laws"? We must build Zion. We must work out our salvation. We must start where we are with the problems before us if we expect to reach the place we wish to go.

The American People Need Social Security

By D. H. Schmidt

IN ORDER for us to more nearly approach our ideal of freedom from want, we need a social security program that will provide for all the needy who are not otherwise aided.

We are ignoble if we allow others to support us when we can support ourselves. The workers and employers laying by for retirement time in our present government social security setup by no means solve the problem. When an employer has paid his worker according to agreement, he is under no special obligation for the workers' future.

Those getting better wages over a longer period need future security the least; they can carry insurance and in other ways prepare for the future. Every system that enlarges the inequality among people should be rejected. Our aim should be to supplant it with something that will make for greater equality of opportunity.

We need one nationwide plan to take the place of a-hundred-and-one kinds of aids and pensions we now have, and we must have some equal, just, and adequate means of raising the funds. We must also have a system of equal distribution based on the degree of each receiver's need. Last, but not least, we should establish a better economic setup to afford a greater amount of opportunity to a larger number of people and help them to become self-supporting.

These things are all embodied in the church's stewardship organization program which we are striving toward. However, this obligation does not relieve us from our obligation of doing what we can toward establishing these same principles in our government.

In addition to any organized social security, we greatly need the personal ministrations, each of us ministering to the need of our neighbor, helping him up to, not beyond, our standard.

A proper security program can hardly be set up without revamping our present economic structure; the funds can hardly be provided with our great debt and our present tax system.

TAXATION, to be just and equal, must be based upon the payer's ability—"For unto whomsoever much is given, of him shall much be required." The amount of a man's net capital and net income pitted against the total amount to be raised determines what he should pay. If A's capital and net income are four times as much as B's, A should pay four times as much of the public expense.

We now have many kinds of taxes not based upon the payer's ability; these are unnecessary and restrict progress. The tax that curtails opportunity and retards prosperity makes for less and less tax funds in the future.

In providing social funds (and all other), we should avoid debt and accumulate reserves, with taxes levied on surpluses and net income. Only when a man's future is secure can he or anyone else determine which of his possessions are surplus. The same system guarantees his family against want, thus making it unnecessary for him to provide their future when they become of age or are left to provide for themselves.

The critic may say that cutting down an individual's possessions to what he currently needs would prevent corporations and businesses from making necessary growth. However, I believe the larger businesses can be managed as co-operatives, or mutuals, or in some cases put under municipal or state control.

Too much private control fosters monopoly and the concentration of wealth, land, and business into a few hands; this is the economic curse of the world. The socialistic institutions such as co-operatives, mutuals, and corporations owned and controlled by a number of people modify and prevent many evils which result from unlimited capitalism.

Free competition, chiseling in by anyone in any business, and taxation of surpluses go far in preventing the abuse of monopolies. The distribution of social security funds should be under the management of representatives of the people, who should see to it that these funds are allotted without favoritism, each person receiving according to the degree of his need, the amount being gauged by the funds available.

On Social Security

By J. C. Morris

FROM A SPIRITUAL STANDPOINT, I agree with the article, "Is Social Security Good for Us?" if applied seventy-five or a hundred years ago. But times have changed. I am past seventy now and can remember when most people lived on farms or depended on the farmer for a living. At that time families were large. Ten or more children were common (I am one of nine). Almost everything needed for the family was raised on the farm. Sugar, salt, coffee, and shoes were about all that had to be bought. I can remember my mother and grandmother talking about carding and spinning.

A man and team could take care of about forty acres of corn if there weren't too many rocks or stumps. Such a man was really old if he lived to be fifty-five or sixty. If he did reach that age, no one was out much by keeping him. His sons and daughters married in the neighborhood and generally stayed close by. Usually one of the boys remained on the home place till the old folks died. Then the place was divided up or sold, and perhaps some or all of the children moved to town. Came this age of inventions, and the boy who remained on the farm could do as much with his tractor and other labor-saving tools in eight hours as his dad could do in a week. A lot of the boys who went to town got rich. But the ones who did not get rich, grew old, and after they were too old to work, they became a problem. Their rich brothers and other relatives did not want to keep them. Then the "poor farm" was brought into existence, and all the taxpayers paid the bill. The politicians used it (as they are using the old-age pensions now), until it got so corrupt something had to be done. Now we have Federal Social Security and State Old Age Pensions. I am not going to say what the outcome will be, because I don't know. I wonder if we will go on to destruction as other civilizations have, or if we will use the knowledge given us since the Restoration in 1830 to prepare for the millennium as the Lord intended. At any rate, the old folks must eat. Some plan must be found similar, I think, to the plan the church has for its superannuated missionaries. I know it is better to give than to receive. I have always dreaded having to take favors, especially from my children. I do not feel this way about social security which I am getting. I paid in to it when I was working, and I consider it as insurance which is paid up. The only objection I have is that it's not enough to live on.

Five Years in Zion

(Continued from page 11.)

to fill. People already here fall into three classes: those who are already up to their eyebrows in work, those who have responsibilities which really prevent them from doing church work, and those who won't work. Growth in the work in Independence depends a great deal upon the influx of new workers.

Accept the first job offered you for which you are at least partially qualified, even though it may not be exactly to your talents and abilities. It will prove to bridge the gap until a place opens for you to get into your own field. Independence is a good place to die spiritually, for it seems as though you are lost in a sea of membership. To those coming from small branches, the number here is often staggering. Unless one gets into the swing of things quickly, there is danger of a spiritual relapse which follows inactivity.

Plant yourself immediately in one of the congregations so that you have a sense of belonging; don't float from one congregation to another. We have those who follow speakers, who have no loyalty to any group, and they are feeding upon the cream. Most of the nourishment is in the milk of belonging and serving in a group.

Remember that Satan is going to try his best to get to you first when you arrive. He is going to try to make you dissatisfied, unhappy, and resentful.

These are among his chief weapons in fighting the cause of Christ.

There may be well-meaning church members who will "inform" you of all the gossip concerning the city, the church, the administration, and the officials; ninety-nine per cent of it isn't true, and the devil is using these "helpful" people to undermine your faith. Church officials are human, and they may make mistakes, but that does not prevent them from being servants of God, attempting to do the best they know how in his service.

INDEPENDENCE is a wonderful place to live. Nowhere else is there such opportunity for serving God, for specialization in fields especially suited to you, for a chance to lift yourself by your own bootstraps, for wholesome lasting friendships, and for downright abundant living.

I am really satisfied here and would not want to live elsewhere. We have problems here; you have problems there. The only difference is that the problems there are yours and the problems here are ours. We know that Zion is not yet perfect, that we have a long way to go, and that it is going to take many willing hands to complete the task which the Lord has set before us.

Coming to Zion is not going to solve anyone's difficulties, because people are much the same no matter where they live; but fellowship with those who are striving toward the same end lightens one's troubles and gives impetus and purpose to the struggle.

Zion will be a reality if those who come to Independence combine their efforts with ours with determination to make that dream come true.

*Each One
Win One!*

TELLING HIM
ABOUT THE GOSPEL
of the
KINGDOM

The REORGANIZED
CHURCH of JESUS CHRIST
of Latter Day Saints

www.LatterDayTruth.org

The Women's Center Building — By MRS. IVA HUNTER

THE WOMEN'S CENTER, located at 1034 West Lexington Street, is a city-wide workshop and social center for all departments of the sixteen Reorganized Latter Day Saint congregations in Independence.

Its central location makes it a convenient place for the women to meet and discuss their mutual interests and to plan and complete co-operative projects.

Although the primary purpose of the Center is to serve the women's organizations of the church, it has been made available for city-wide activities such as priesthood training classes, preordination classes, and classes in English and speech sponsored by the University of Kansas Extension Bureau with Sister F. Henry Edwards as instructor. Sister Edwards says, "Our priesthood should not only know what to say but also how to say it."

The spacious reception room affords an ideal place for family gatherings, private weddings, receptions, and showers. Family night (when members of one of the pastoral groups in the Independence area gather for supper and a social evening) is also held here.

On the second Tuesday of each month, the pastors of various denominations in the city meet at the Center for an early morning breakfast under the auspices of the Ministerial Alliance of Independence. Here community projects are planned, and a friendly fellowship is enjoyed by the ministers of all the Protestant churches.

Each Sunday morning a class of about ninety people meet with Thelona Stevens to study the Bible and Book of Mormon. One Sunday a month members of the city-wide Oriole and Blue Bird Council hold a meeting. The Stone Church church school teachers also meet one Sunday afternoon a month to discuss their problems and plan for better methods of teaching.

THE STONE CHURCH CONGREGATION rents office space in the Center for its pastor and church school director. At present the Stone Church secretary, Mrs. Iva Hunter, serves as matron as well as chairman of the board of management for the building.

The Needlecraft Department, a general church organization, occupies the basement. Here the elderly ladies come each Wednesday to spend the day making various items of fancywork. Always on these days one can hear the cheerful hum of conversation as the ladies work. Interested friends from all over the country send needlecraft articles to add to those made here; these are sold at the General Conference bazaar. The proceeds from sales are used for missionary work at home and abroad. The women are very happy in this work, and it permits them to make a worth-while contribution to the church as they grow older and have more leisure time.

During General Conference the basement is transformed into a dormitory. Its nearness to the Auditorium makes it very desirable for elderly ladies who need a quiet place to rest throughout the day. The cots are rented months ahead of Conference, and women from all over the United States and Canada become acquainted and renew friendship as they meet here.

Many other social activities are carried on in the building during conference. It affords a place where friends can meet, and where family groups can hold reunions. Members of the Council of Twelve and their wives met last conference for a social evening. Hostesses are provided at the house everyday during conference to see that visitors are assisted and made comfortable.

THE MANAGEMENT of the Women's Center Building is under the direction of a board of five members chosen from the sixteen Reorganized Latter Day Saint congregations of the city. It consists of a chairman of the board of management, secretary-treasurer, manager of finance, manager of house maintenance, and manager of policy and good will. This board is selected for a term of one year by the Executive Committee of Women in Zion and the pastor in Zion.

The newly-elected members of the board of management for the coming year are: Mrs. Fred O. Davies from Walnut Park, chairman of the board; Miss Eleanor Shirk of Liberty Street Church, secretary-treasurer; Mrs. P. R. Burton from the Stone Church congregation, manager of house maintenance;

(Continued on page 19.)

Herald House

is pleased to announce its appointment as an authorized dealer for

Model AP-1 $64.50

Viewlex
projectors

The projector with the high efficiency ASPHERIC condenser system. The use of an aspheric condenser lens results in such an increase in efficiency that the 150 watt lamp in this machine results in a screen image brighter than many 300 watt projectors, while the 300 watt models give an image equal to other machines using a 500 watt lamp. The model illustrated is particularly adapted to cottage meeting and personal contact work, since screen and projector are self contained in one case. It is equipped with a 2" for short throws, but a 5" lens is available for use with a larger screen. Other accessories include a 7" lens and a translucent screen for use in place of the built in opaque screen. The use of the translucent screen allows the audience to sit on the opposite side of the screen from the projector where the operator can face them. A folder describing all 10 models of Viewlex projectors will be sent on request.

WRITE TO
Audio-Visual Dept.

herald house

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI

Question Time

Any sincere question from our readers will receive consideration from the editors. If it is of general interest, it will be referred to the Question Time panel, and the answer will be printed. Please keep the question short—fifty words or less should be sufficient. Your personal problems, the answers to which concern you alone, will be answered by letter. Address questions to Herald Editors rather than panel members. We shall try to take all questions in the order they are received. Be patient, there may be several ahead of yours. Only signed questions sent by contributors will appear here.—EDITOR.

QUESTION

Have the 144,000 mentioned in Revelation 14:1-3 been redeemed? Does it apply to Latter Day Saints or to former-day saints? If it applies to Latter Day Saints, will it not be as the five wise and the five foolish virgins?

A. C. R.

Missouri

ANSWER

The prophecy evidently points to the future, that is, it is as yet unfulfilled, for it refers to the time when the Lamb, Christ, shall "stand on the Mount Zion, and with him a hundred forty and four thousand." Mount Zion to which place Jesus will come, is to be on the earth (Isaiah 59:20), and this is where the 144,000 will be gathered. A song was heard from heaven, but no one could learn that song but this great group, for they "were redeemed from the earth."

These were righteous men who followed Christ, were redeemed from among men, and were "the first fruits unto God." This group seems to correspond to the elect who are to be gathered from every part of the earth to Zion in the last days. Christ will receive them because they have accepted and obeyed his gospel. They may not constitute all the elect, for they "are the first fruits."

If this group is the same as the 144,000 mentioned in chapter seven, which seems probable, then these are the servants of God who were sealed against the time of judgment upon the earth. After John had seen these in the vision, he saw also "a great multitude which no man could number, of all nations, and kindreds, and people, and tongues," which stood before the throne in white robes (the chapter shows that these also were on the earth). As to what these were, the angel said, "These are they which have come out of great tribulation, and have washed their robes, and made them white in the blood of the lamb."

QUESTION

Was the prophecy to Parley P. Pratt as regards his mission to Canada in 1836 ever fulfilled? It reads: "From things growing out of this mission shall the fullness of the gospel spread to England."—Chapter XXVI of The Story of the Church.

L. J.

Missouri

ANSWER

Perhaps the following connection with the prophecy might be made, as growing out of the Canada mission, with English missions of some elders:

In 1834 James Blakeslee baptized and ordained John Cairns in Ontario, who later went on a mission to Scotland, his native land.

In the summer of 1836 Parley P. Pratt baptized John Taylor, Isaac Russell, and Joseph Fielding at Toronto.

About June 1, 1837, Heber C. Kimball was set apart to preside over a mission to England, and Isaac Russell and Joseph Fielding were among those appointed to go with him, which they did.

In 1839 and 1840 John Taylor fulfilled a mission to England.

Possibly a similar connection may have developed from the labors of John E. Page in Canada in 1836-1837, who baptized over 600 in that period. But I do not recall any such.

Charles Fry

A. B. Phillips.

The Ministers Manual

(Doran's)

For 25 years, this annual source book for the busy minister has supplied him with suggestions of sermon outlines, orders of services, illustrations, material for special days, suggested texts and themes, guides for church departments and activities—a wealth of material for all occasions. This Silver Anniversary Edition is marked by a special supplement containing outlines of the five best sermons and the ten best illustrations to appear in the past 25 years. In addition, a completely new section has been added which provides inspirational material for the observance of the Lord's Supper.

$2.50

Herald House

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI

Briefs

DANVILLE, ILLINOIS.—District President Arthur Hanson of Taylorville, Illinois, was in charge of the business meeting held October 23. New officers for the coming year are W. D. Poore, pastor; Max Matthew, church school supervisor; Ruby Elledge, secretary; Ralph W. Poore, treasurer; Mary Altman, historian; Frederick Collins, librarian; Betty Poore, musical director; James Elledge, book steward and Zion's League leader; and Florence Bell, women's department leader.

This mission has grown considerably during the two years it has been organized.

SEATTLE, WASHINGTON.—Seattle District conference convened at the First Church Saturday and Sunday, October 22 and 23. It was the largest conference held in this area in recent years. Apostle C. G. Mesley conducted Saturday afternoon and evening classes on "Functions of the Holy Spirit." Sunday he directed a general adult class at the church school hour. Bishop DeLapp met with the district priesthood Saturday evening and spoke to the youth of the district at the church school hour. Bishop DeLapp was also guest speaker at the 11:00 a.m. service.

The conference business session convened Sunday afternoon. Reports of district officers were received, the new district budget was considered and approved, several calls to priesthood were acted upon, and new officers were elected for the coming year. G. L. Swenson was re-elected district president, and he appointed as his counselor Ray Sowers of Tacoma and Paul Wellington of Seattle. Other officers elected were: Roy Stearns, secretary; Paul Duvic, treasurer; Clarence Johnson, youth leader; Eva Lundeen, women's leader; Melva Crum, music director; Wana McDole, religious education director; Loren McDole, auditor; Mrs. W. W. Belcher, historian; and A. W. Lundeen, pastor to isolated Saints.

Nearly 350 participated in the various services on Sunday 23. The First Church was host to visiting Saints at a basket lunch at the noon hour. Apostle Mesley and Bishop DeLapp completed their stay in the Seattle area by speaking Sunday and Monday nights at Seattle Second, Bremerton, Everett, and Puyallup churches.—Reported by PAUL A. WELLINGTON.

SASKATOON, SASKATCHEWAN.—An educational institute and conference of the North Saskatchewan District was held in Saskatoon on October 14, 15, and 16. Seventy E. Y. Hunker, High Priest John R. Darling, associate director of religious education, and District President E. A. Ledsworth were in attendance.

The institute opened with classwork led by Brother Darling. Saturday forenoon and afternoon Zion's League and the adult group were instructed separately by Brethren Hunker and Darling. Each morning a fifteen minute worship service preceded the prayer meeting. After church school on Sunday, the entire assembly met in the upper auditorium for Communion service. Elder Darling was the speaker Sunday evening. The Daughters of Zion were caterers at a banquet held Saturday evening.

At the business meeting on Saturday, it was decided to hold a joint reunion of the North and South Saskatchewan Districts with the district presidents, treasurers, and bishop's agents in charge of arrangements. Members of the district were to be given an opportunity to contribute to the building fund of the Saskatoon Branch. The appointment of Mrs. C. E. Diggle as district historian was confirmed.

David Hitchings and Bruce Waddell were baptized October 30. Both were confirmed by Elder Gendron. Peter Harder, Ambrose Skinner, and Kenneth Fisher were ordained to the office of priest. William Hall was ordained to the office of deacon.—Reported by MRS. C. E. DIGGLE.

EVERETT, WASHINGTON.—Margaret Ann, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Wilbur, was blessed on October 30 by Elders Granville Swenson and Elliott Gilberts. The children of Mr. and Mrs. James Blanchard were blessed on June 19 by Elder Elliott Gilberts and Seventy Arthur F. Gibbs. Patricia Luceda Pearson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Pearson of Lake Stevens, Washington, was blessed January 18 in Everett by Elder Elliott Gilberts and Elder Carl Crum.—Reported by HELEN GILBERTS.

LONDON DISTRICT CONFERENCE.—The conference convened in Stratford on October 23. New officers for the coming year are C. E. Muir, district president; H. Schlottbauer and William Leney, counselors; Russell Atkins, district church school director; William Moore, Zion's League supervisor; Mrs. B. McMaster, director of women; Ida Bayne, district secretary; Clarence Weeks, treasurer; Winnifred McCoy, district chorister; and Arlo Hodgson, historian. Ronald Armstrong's call to the office of deacon was approved. Bishop J. C. Dent was elected an honorary member of the reunion committee. A recommendation for the adoption of a proposed budget and a modified system of raising district funds was approved.

FAIRVIEW, MONTANA.—In October Elder Philip Moore held a two-week series of missionary services, the first that had been held in Fairview for over eighteen years. Members from Williston, Culbertson, Savage, and Andes attended the meetings. Church workers took attractive folders announcing the missionary series to every house in Fairview.

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLORADO.—The annual branch business meeting was held on September 15, and the following officers were elected: Elder J. D. Curtis, pastor; Elder C. D. Liggett, associate pastor; Lorraine Hammer, branch secretary; Bob Matthews, church school director; Myrtle Stephenson, children's supervisor; Lorraine Hammer, junior church; Nellie Grace Olsen, church school secretary; Thelma Gardner, organist; Lorraine Nelson, chorister; and Dorothy Brown, publicity agent and book steward.

On the night of October 7, the Women's Study Group held their installation meeting with a candlelight service as the high light of the evening. The pastor requested that it be repeated the following Sunday night for the benefit of the congregation. Lorraine Hammer was installed as president; Emma Jean Hobart as vice-president; Ethel Robinson as treasurer, and Helen Matthews as friendly visitor.

The women's department held their installation service at the home of Mrs. Worthy Poe on Thursday, October 13, at two o'clock. The pastor, Brother Curtis, was the principal speaker. Sister Poe is president, Myrtle Stephenson, vice-president; Hazel Miller, secretary, and Grace Brown, treasurer.

Harold Lee Ulrich, three-month-old son of Brother and Sister Jimmy Ulrich was blessed October 9 by Elders Curtis and Liggett.

Brother J. D. Curtis, recently completed a two-weeks' series of meetings at Yuma, Colorado, baptizing fifteen and blessing seven children. Brother Ernest Crownover of Denver, councilor to District President Ward A. Hougas, was speaker at the evening service on October 23.

On October 30 several members of the La Junta Branch were present. Following the morning service, District Missionary Houston Hobart baptized three: Mrs. Bear, Mrs. Leake, and Kenneth Bridges.—Reported by DOROTHY BROWN.

MARY By Sholem Asch

"Mary" is the simple story of a mother's love for her son and the great story of the Mother of our Savior. The story unfolds in the little town of Nazareth. We see Mary, demure and self-effacing, when Joseph seeks her in marriage. We see her emerge, through sacrifice and a profound faith, as a towering figure, acquainted with grief, but so imbued with wisdom and love for suffering humanity that she can transcend earthly sorrow. We come to understand the deep roots of the Christian story in the Jewish tradition, the ancient hope for the Messiah as foretold by the prophets.

$3.50

INDEPENDENCE, MO.

Greetings from the Land of the Southern Cross

By MABEL DAVEY

SOMETIMES the dreams of childhood are more fully realized than we anticipate. As children in school we were sometimes required by the teacher to take an imaginary journey to a distant land and to write of the things we would expect to see and find there. If given a choice of my destination, I always chose Australia.

It has been a year now since we left Independence to come to our new mission in Australia. The time has gone quickly, and we have enjoyed our stay with our southern brother and sisters. Now we would like to bring the season's greetings from the women "over here" to the women "over there," and to all wherever the Herald may go.

It has been a pleasure to meet these Australian sisters and work with them. Wherever we go, we find loyal, hard-working, and consecrated groups of women—women who have the hopes and ideals of Zion deeply imbedded in their hearts and homes; women who are looking forward to the day when that ideal will be realized in all its fullness and beauty. Even though they are thousands of miles from Independence, I find that same good spirit in their midst. It is another proof of the divinity of this work.

They join with me in wishing everyone the peace and blessing long associated with this time of the year.

★★ ★★ ★★ ★★

Friends From Australia

By PAULINE ARNSON

SISTER ROSCOE DAVEY, wife of the apostle in charge of the Australasian Mission, thoughtfully inclosed, in a recent letter to the General

Women's office, the accompanying picture of a group of Australian women workers. We received it with a great deal of pleasure and felt that others would be happy to see it. Though separated by thousands of miles, we are not strangers, for all of us are engaged in doing some part of the work of the church and are united by our mutual interests and hopes.

Sister Davey sent the name of each woman and a line description. Sister Blanche Mesley has added some further information to help introduce these women to Herald readers. I am happy to present them to you. It is encouraging to realize that all over the world where the gospel message has been taken are women working to rear their children properly and to raise the standards of their homes and the qualities of their individual lives so that they will measure up to the standard given by the Master.

(Left to right, top row): Ada Waugh (Mrs. Andy)—Leader of women at Campsie Branch, one of the four congregations in Sidney. She is a little English lady, capable and devoted to the church.

Dorothy Rawson (Mrs. Fred)—Leader of women at Balmain Branch. She is a fine person with a willing spirit. She has a lovely family and is a diligent worker.

Florence Peisker (Mrs. Hermann)—Leader of women at Leichhardt Branch. She is a real pal, a devoted Saint, a fine mother with a love of home and family. Her daughter is the wife of church appointee, Alvin F. Burdekin.

Mabel Davey (Mrs. Roscoe)—She describes herself as a "foreigner." She is a real Latter Day Saint—efficient, witty, lovable, and a helpmate to her husband.

Gertrude Potter (Mrs. Floyd)—Leader of the young women's circle in Balmain. She is the wife of a missionary, and the mother of two fine children.

Gloria Prescott (Mrs. Milton)—She is a potential leader and willing to do anything to help the church.

Dorothy Davies (Mrs. Everett)—Leader of women of the Guilford Branch. She is a good and capable worker. Her family is of German extraction, and she is an expert with the needle, specializing in fine needlework. She crocheted the Communion cloth which was displayed at the Australian exhibition last Conference.

Jean Dalziel (Mrs. Les)—Assistant leader of young women at Balmain. She is very capable and lovable.

Jean Aiken—Attends Guilford. One of a large family, she is quiet but brilliant.

(Left to right, bottom row): Pauline Allen (Mrs. Jes)—Young women's leader at Leichhardt. She is the granddaughter of Brother and Sister Seaberg of Norwegian extraction whose home was headquarters for Glaud Rodger and Charles Wandell, when they were in Australia. Her father, Elder Vic Seaberg, and her mother traveled sixty miles each way to take the gospel to scattered Saints in the Blue Mountains for many years.

The Home Column

Lillie Turnock (Mrs. Joseph)—Leader of women at Wallsend. She is a real live wire, artistic and devoted. For many years she gathered up children from her own area and conducted a church school.

Carrie Delofski (Mrs. Ted)—Another potential leader in Balmain. She was formerly a captain in the Salvation Army and was converted by her husband, a true Latter Day Saint, who met her while he was assigned to her area. She is one of the earth's rare souls who had made Jesus her Lord before she knew of the gospel. The Delofski's are of Polish descent.

Nance Parks (Mrs. Ted)—In charge of the women's work of the whole mission and General Council representative. She has been a gentle and faithful kindergarten teacher for years. During the Mesley's sojourn in Australia she did not miss a meeting. She is also the possessor of a lovely soprano voice.

Joyce Anderson (Mrs. Bill)—A convert during the war—regal, intelligent, and faithful. Her husband was a pilot between Australia, England, and America.

The Women's Center Building

(Continued from page 15.)

Mrs. Roy Thrutchley of South Crysler Church, manager of finance; and Mrs. Maurice L. Draper of the West College Church, manager of policy and good will.

A great many changes have taken place in this building since it was remodeled and established in October, 1945. Among some of the recent ones are the purchase of a new linoleum floor covering throughout the house, two new Lawson style davenport for the reception room, a new Chambers gas range for the kitchen, three new banquet tables, table linen, and silverware for one hundred place settings.

Though much progress has been made, there are many things yet to be done to complete the work planned. However, it is believed the Women's Center Building is quite adequately serving "most of the people most of the time."

Letters

Growth of Pensacola Branch

I have lived in Pensacola for several years and watched the little group of Saints here grow until the meeting place they occupy is inadequate. The members are planning to build a new church and have a sizeable building fund. I know this branch has a bright future. About half the members are young people, and the pastor, Elder Bruce Jones, is a very capable minister. All seem very sincere and desirous of working closer with each other and with God.

WALTER L. CLARK, SR.

3011 West Lloyd Street
Pensacola, Florida

We Were Isolated

The term, "isolated Saints" has become quite familiar among Latter Day Saints—isolated members are those who live some distance from a church and feel they are forgotten. Here is the story of how a group of Saints in Northern Iowa and Southern Minnesota have become "un-isolated."

For several years there has been a spark of "Saintism" over at a little town named Burt, Iowa. Two or three families belonged to the church, but they found the drive of fifty miles a little too far to attend the Mallard Branch very often. In May of this year their dreams were partially fulfilled when a church school was organized under the direction of Elder Clifford Cole, the district president from Woodbine. They meet in a home, but every Sunday at least some of the six families are present for classwork. Now they can dare to hope for a church being built some day in their town.

That isn't all the story, however. About four years ago two church families at Superior, Iowa, were found through a conversation that took place between a patient at the Sanitarium and a student nurse from Mallard. These two women later contacted two families of Saints at Arnold's Park, Iowa.

Then last spring, B. T. Fish, pastor of Mallard Branch, was married to Luella Topham from Shenandoah, Iowa. She had a friend at Jackson, Minnesota, who also was an "isolated Saint" (Jackson is nearly seventy miles from Mallard). One day when Mrs. Fish and Mrs. Arvid Peterson, the member from Minnesota, were visiting, they decided it would be nice for the women they knew to meet and get acquainted. They thought they could possibly meet every few weeks.

So through their efforts, ten women met last June at the home of Mrs. Wayne Small at Superior. Everyone enjoyed the fellowship so much it was no question that they would meet again. Each month since then, on the third Thursday, they have met. In place of the August meeting, plans were made for a picnic at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Homer Jackson in Arnold's Park. Brother Livingston of Omaha gave an interesting talk to the group of forty-five about the church and its organization.

Now plans are being made for another family group meeting which will be a Christmas program at the church in Mallard. Through the months since this group has been organized, several other families have been found through the Herald or other means. If the group can grasp the optimistic and energetic personality of its chairman, Mrs. Cecile Peterson, it will become a true Zionie group.

The story hasn't ended yet, though, for one of the families at Arnold's Park is the McNamaras, formerly of Independence, Missouri. D. S. McNamara is an elder, so the families from there, Superior, and Jackson are going to organize and have their own church school.

We hope these little "isolated groups" will grow and find an important spot on the map of our church.

MRS. KENNETH H. BOLIE.

Burt, Iowa.

A Divine Healing

I wish to testify of God's blessing to me one night when I was alone. I had a severe pain in my head and would have sent for the elders, but there were none near enough to come, so I just prayed for God to help me. Then I fell asleep. When I awoke, I felt a hand on my head, although no one was near. I realized then that a heavenly being had come to bless me.

I am isolated from the church and will be seventy-eight my next birthday. I am caring for two small grandchildren and trying to teach them about the gospel. I was baptized forty years ago after hearing Elim Erwin preach the Gospel Message in a schoolhouse. I would be glad to have some used quarterlies for a boy and girl in high school. I will send my Heralds to anyone who needs them.

Please pray for me and for my son, Clyde Jarvis, that God may help him in the way he needs to be helped.

MARY L. JARVIS.

Route 4, Box 203
Blanchard, Oklahoma

Letter From Hawaii

I read the articles in the Historical Buildings Issue with interest because I was privileged to visit them while I was in the States prior to the last General Conference. My traveling companions and I were shown through Kirtland Temple by Elder Ray Ashenurst and enjoyed an early morning worship there. Later we met in his home for breakfast with his family and friends. At Nauvoo we were shown through the different buildings by Brother Williams, the caretaker. We greatly appreciated his hospitality. As we looked at the three graves, we thought of the wonderful history of the Restored Church and the faith of those who helped to build it. At Independence we were shown through the Auditorium by Apostle Hield, who is now ministering to the Saints in Hawaii. During Conference I met President Israel Smith and other church officers. At first I thought I would feel that I was just "sitting in" on the meetings, but when I read over the program drawn up for those in attendance I realized that if I but wanted to participate I could receive much. This strengthened me and brought a better understanding and appreciation of the gospel. I especially enjoyed visiting the Campus shop. It was pleasant to meet with the Saints in their homes; memories of these meetings will be long cherished in our hearts. I am thankful, too, for God's protection during our travels. I went, I saw, I received, and I can testify that the good things I witnessed were of God.

VIOLA PAGAT

529 Kauhane Street
Honolulu, Territory of Hawaii

Born To Be Free -

By ROBERT H. ANDERSON

IS LIFE SO DEAR and peace so sweet as to be purchased with the price of chains and slavery? Forbid it, Almighty God! I know not what course others may take, but as for me give me liberty or give me death!" Thus spoke the American patriot, Patrick Henry, before the Virginia House of Burgesses at a time when the choice of a nation lay between meek submission and consequent exploitation or a lengthy struggle to free itself from oppressive tyranny. We need not record the end result of the way the choice was eventually and painfully decided, for we live to enjoy the blessings with which our colonial fathers endowed us; but it remains for us to observe the principles of nature which motivated Patrick Henry, John Adams, and others to risk their lives and relative security in an uncertain struggle for freedom—the wisp of invitation that has lured and eluded man through ages of living as he has recorded his experiences.

Many years before, the Apostle Paul wrote to the churches in Galatia and urged them to break the confining shackles of the narrow observance of law in order that they might become children of the free. He drew a comparison between Ishmael and Isaac, one the son of a bond-woman, the other of a free woman unshackled by responsibility to an ignoble cause. Therefore his advice to them was to "stand fast in the liberty wherewith Christ has made us free, and be not entangled again with the yoke of bondage."

What then is this freedom with which our Savior endowed us? Certainly its principles cannot be evident to all the people of the world, or men long since would have applied them to end the slavery and petty jealousy that have continued to haunt us—then with bows and arrows and swords of crude steel, now with atom bombs and tremendous navies that navigate in the celestial domain of the stars and planets. Paul pointed out to the Galatians that the essence of this new-found freedom was a simple thing called love which, in its purified form, overcame all boundaries of color, class, or belief in its service to other men. Love and service motivated and nurtured become then the foundation of freedom for the Latter Day Saint in his group relations and in his social intercourse outside the church's fellowship. "A simple thing," you say. Yes, simple but not easy.

WHAT A WONDERFUL gift this freedom founded by love is, but what does it do for a man that makes him in reality free? In the first place, love in its finest, truest form as exemplified by Jesus of Nazareth is outreaching in its effect. Nothing in this world can be as narrowing, confining, and enslaving as self-love. Witness its ravages. Man's jealous search for gain and wealth goes on at a ruthless pace. Men amass huge fortunes for themselves while thousands starve or are trampled underfoot by their greedy, bloody boots. These same men die slowly in their souls because they refuse to share their material wealth with others; they co-operate only when they see gain for themselves. Man's growth inward sets in motion the vicious circle which in turn affects all phases of his life and morality. Goldsmith penned the essence of the truth when he wrote a searching condemnation of the greed that destroyed the soul of a village and left only the shattered form of material value—

Ill fares the land to hastening ills a prey,
Where wealth accumulates and men decay.

Contrast with this the life lived by the Christ. Although he is often pictured as the man of sorrows, we know his grief came not from distaste of life, but because of his compassion when others failed to see the freedom of mind and outwardly directed action his living exemplified. His path was free because he had the plan and had tapped the ceaseless source of inward power necessary to realize the ultimate in attainment. He was not bound, burdened, and hamstrung by fears or pangs of conscience. His purpose refused to be swayed by the vacillating whims of men, for as one observant author put it, "Conscience is in most men the expectation of the opinions of others." The freedom of soul of the Master of Galilee smiled through a triumphant faith that is never born of inward subjugation and continues to smile in spite of outward inconveniences.

This ability to enjoy the freedom of inward right in the face of outward hardship is vividly recalled in the past history of our church. The fight for freedom went on in the lives of those early members just as it did in the lives of the men who suffered the cold of Valley Forge that the torch of a free America might be kindled. In both cases the heritage left in our hands is a rich and a glorious one, painted by the blood, sweat, and tears of thousands of outward-seeing souls to whom freedom in all its meanings is the cornerstone of abundant living.

A RENOWNED STATESMAN once said that the price of freedom is eternal vigilance. A heritage dearly won by one generation often lapses into disuse and atrophy in the hands of the next. Our America, faced with the threat of the worldwide spread of Communism, is waking to find its position endangered in a way never thought possible. It is finding, too, that the principles of freedom for which Patrick Henry was willing to give his life have come to be taken for granted and even forgotten by men seeking self-gain and glory. Freedom can live only in the souls of men who seek to perpetuate and protect it. The freedom of Christ also lives in the souls of men who seek to protect it by standards set by the Master himself. Just as the new government of the United States saw fit to draw up the Constitution to govern and protect the rights of the citizens individually and collectively, so the government of the kingdom must maintain rules within which the new-found freedom may function with ultimate benefit to all.

In spite of the glorious promise of freedom which is tendered to those who accept the challenge, there are many who fail, even yet, to avail themselves of its benefits. Little do we realize that any compromise must necessarily dim the light of liberty in our lives. Our ways of compromise are endless and often ingenious as we seek to lessen the responsibility of citizenship in a free environment. The parable of the lost talent has a modern corollary in the young man or woman who passes over lightly the things of prime importance in order to maintain a last grip on the material things of second-run worth, probably not realizing that the best never associates with the element of enslaving distraction.

There are those of us who still try to nibble here and dabble there while expecting the promise of eternity; we go to church, or attend youth camp or fellowship when it is convenient or when it seems the thing to do in order to maintain social standing, but when the pressure comes from the other side, it becomes easy to say, "Let the other fellows do it; they are always there." We would scarcely expect an employee of ours to play cards at his lathe or sewing machine. Is it any more reasonable to expect the freedom of an outwardly directed life while we still seek after the pleasures of a vain and selfish world? Not long ago Reed Holmes summed up the situation when he said: "They want to be free, and yet they cannot see that in the kingdom is the greatest freedom man can know."

We are born to be free, and in the exercise of love and service in a cause greater than ourselves, we may know the true fulfillment of this promise. A good religion does not bind us nor cause us to spend our lives in mournful sacrifice. Instead it transforms our lives in such a way that the things which should be done become not a drudging task, but an integral part of living which brings joy in action rather than a feeling of compulsion because omission or commission may bring fearful retribution.

Patrick Henry loved and fought for freedom. Men and women of our church who give completely of themselves are finding the joy of a great freedom. You, too, are born to be free!

Invitation to "New Horizons" Readers

Would you like to be a Story Missionary for the church? You can if you want to. Just write a story of about 1,000 words for Stepping Stones. Stories of true experiences are very welcome. Remember the age of readers ranges from nine to sixteen years. Remember that Stepping Stones goes into many nonmember homes, and into many lands of the world. If you can't be a missionary in a distant field, you can be a Story Missionary on your own doorstep. Begin now to plan a story for the young readers of church publications.

EMMA M. PHILLIPS,
Editor, Stepping Stones

New Horizons

Adventure Toward Social Security

(Continued from page 8.)

Alcoa, or U. S. Steel or Rexall drugs. Not to be generals or air marshals or directors of the Oak Ridge Laboratories. Not for huge Elizabethan houses or Georgian churches like those in Boston or riding clubs or Cadillacs. But for the serene mind, the integrated view and personality, the sense of worth-whileness, of being God's creation, of having a spiritual adjustment to living, of worrying less about street gangs, sex movies, Reno divorces, broken homes, and adventures on every dirty Rue Pigalle. For a security to be found nowhere else in the world—and only here if you and yours can make it—a security never achieved since the days of Enoch, but the lofty security God could feel even on the Cross or when leaving his pitiful few to light up the torches of centuries of Christianity. "Not as the world giveth—"

Assuredly there is nothing new under the sun. For what am I calling you to but the ancient security of the tribe? What is Zion but a theocratic tribe, functioning much as ancient Israel did under the patriarch? Or could I be urging you to join Plato's Republic? One of the strange fetishes of our day is that only new things are worth-while—only the abstractionists since Picasso, the writers since Hemingway, the sculptors since Epstein, the philosophers since Sartre. Now what does this mean? It implies that yesterday's novelties were inadequate yesterday too, should have been recognized as such then, and of course now should be discarded. What, therefore, of permanence can there be in the act or thought of this day if tomorrow it too will be passé? Such a feverish dissatisfaction with solid achievement and old and tried things is mentally unendurable and socially disintegrative. From such silliness I do not hesitate to recall you to the ancient and hallowed security of the tribe—God's tribe this time, be it remembered. One of the greatest difficulties in the situation I have laid before you is the prime basis of this conference. You are not being conducted into a uniformed army for a definite campaign. You are your own general and your own army, as were the first pioneers reaching Independence. You are the Dr. Whitman, the Kit Carson, the Major Powell. You build the plows or fleet and at the same time lay out the strategy. I would you had ahead of you no security, but a supreme task.

IF YOU ACCUSE ME of being idealistic and impractical—as one or perhaps two of you are sure to do—let me remind you that idealism is the only capital which never fails, the only motor that always runs, whereas the "practical" man is so often a bankrupt. Ideals move men to accomplish so many foolish but enduring things—from the Marshal Plan to the Italian elections—from Jesus to Paul to Brebeuf to Joseph Smith. Admittedly practical wisdom must be mixed into it as a kind of flavoring, but let's not take the sugar for the coffee or the gravy for the meat. Idealism is the main dish of Latter Day Saints. Without it you are wasting your time here and should be back at school drilling out tooth decay or studying the structural stress on bridge spans. But should the more persistent idealists among us go on to win social security by adventure, we may greet you some time when you come back to us with the words Henry IV used to the tardy Crillon after a great victory: "Hang yourself, brave Crillon! We fought at Arques, and you were not there."

And now I should like to quote some verses from my favorite poet, A. E. Housman:

O youth whose heart is right,
Whose loins are girt to gain
The hell-defended height
Where virtue beckons plain;

Who seest the stark array
And hast not stayed to count
But singly wilt assay
The many-cannoned mount;

Well is thy war begun;
Endure, be strong, and strive;
But think not, O my son,
To save thy soul alive.
—From "The Sage to the Young Man."

VICTOR HUGO once said, "Nothing in all this world is so powerful as an idea whose time has come." Perhaps the time to start Zion is upon us. If you recall the admonition of modern revelation (Section 58) it was to begin with such folk as you may be! "A supper of the house of the Lord, well prepared, unto which all nations shall be invited. Firstly, the rich and the learned, the wise and the noble; and after that cometh the day of my power." And in the same section, "Men should be anxiously engaged in a good cause, and do many things of their own free will, and bring to pass much righteousness; for the power is in them." If I am addressing the learned and the wise, let me urge them to become anxiously engaged in this great cause.

If we saw a champion heavyweight continually flexing his muscles and shadow-boxing and boasting he was the best there was, we'd say, "Prove it." If he merely kept on showing us that by measurement he had the same biceps the first champion had, fought in the same style as his master, wore the same shoes in the ring, ate the same bread and wine, we would get impatient and say: "Stop shadow-boxing. Hit a real man." Let this church now get into the ring and fight, even if the opponent is worthy of our best and will give us many a hard knock, foul or fair. We cannot be afraid.

The olive wreath has become the symbol of peace. That emblem dates from Roman days, of course. But Aldous Huxley reminds us that among the Romans it was given to conquerors celebrating triumphs after victory. In other words, the olive wreath commemorates security after adventure. So now I call you to the grandest adventure life can offer—the best kind of living with others of like mind. Who among you will earn his olive wreath?

Bulletin Board

Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, District Conference

The Pittsburgh District conference will be held at the Fayette City church on December 10 and 11. Seventy Merle Guthrie is to be present. At 7:30 p.m. Saturday, a district League program will be given in the main auditorium while a priesthood meeting is conducted in the lower auditorium. Sunday's activities are to be as follows: 9:30 a.m. prayer service, 11:00 sermon by Merle Guthrie; lunch; 1:15 p.m., teacher's meeting, 2:00 Don R. Ross musicale, and 7:30 preaching. Theme of the conference is "Our Gift."

HENRY M. WINSHIP,
District President

Gulf States District Conference

The annual Gulf States District winter conference will be held at the church in Mobile, Alabama, (1200 Baltimore Street) on December 10 and 11. The conference theme, "Serve Where You Are," is a follow-up of the reunion theme, "Each One Win One." President Israel A. Smith and Apostle W. Wallace Smith are to be present. The conference program is as follows. Saturday: 10:00-12:00 a.m., worship and classwork; 2:00-5:00 p.m., departmental workshops; 7:00, banquet. Sunday: 8:00 a.m., prayer service; 9:30, classwork; 10:45, address by President Smith; 1:30 p.m., district business meeting. Reservations for the banquet should be made with Jack A. Pray, 1204 Baltimore, Mobile, not later than December 7 (tickets $1.25). Arrangements for overnight lodging may also be made with Elder Pray.

Each branch should send the district president a list of members who plan to attend General Conference so that a mimeographed ballot may be prepared before the business session at which Conference delegates will be chosen.

W. J. BRESHEARS,
District President.

REQUEST FOR PRAYERS

E. J. Lankford, Box 115, Ferris, Illinois, asks to be remembered in the prayers of the Saints. He fell recently, hurting his back and side.

Mrs. James Howk, Jr., of Avoca, Nebraska, requests prayers for Jay St. John of Avoca who has been bedfast for seven years and suggests that if there are elders in that vicinity he would appreciate a visit from them. She also requests prayers for Monia A. Silberquist, a wheel-chair invalid of Brooklyn, New York, and James Drury, a semi-invalid of Gothenburg, Nebraska.

WEDDINGS

Sharp-Conditt

Tresa Mae Conditt, daughter of Elder and Mrs. Silas Conditt of Hagerman, Idaho, and Albert L. Sharp, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Sharp of Butler, Missouri, were married October 23 at the Reorganized Church in Hagerman. The bride's father read the double-ring ceremony. Mrs. Sharp, a graduate of Graceland College and Drake University, has taught school in Portland, Oregon, the past two years. Mr. Sharp is vice-president of the Bushere-Lewis Automotive Service. They are making their home in Portland.

Mason-McKay

Helen Grace McKay, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earl B. McKay, and Hugh Russell Mason of Toronto, Ontario, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Mason of Ottawa, Ontario, were married October 29 at the Reorganized Church in Toronto, Elder J. L. Prentice officiating. They are making their home in Toronto.

BIRTHS

Mr. and Mrs. Stow E. Symon of Pontiac, Illinois, announce the birth of a son, Phillip Keith, born October 23.

Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Mosher of San Miguel, California, announce the birth of a son, Bruce Allen, born September 22. Mrs. Mosher is the former Myrtle Greene of Durham, California.

Mr. and Mrs. L. T. Wiggins of Atlanta, Georgia, announce the birth of a daughter, Nancy Irene, born September 26 at Piedmont Hospital in Atlanta. Mrs. Wiggins is the former Laverna Martin, daughter of Elder J. E. Martin of Independence, Missouri.

A daughter, Margie Ilene, was born to Mr. and Mrs. Robert Reigleman of Transfer, Pennsylvania, on October 8. She was blessed on October 30 by Elders LaMont McDowell and Glenn Reichard.

A daughter, Sue Ann, was born on September 10 to Mr. and Mrs. John F. Jordan of Transfer, Pennsylvania. She was blessed on October 30 by her maternal grandfather, Elder Glenn Reichard, and Elder LaMont McDowell. Mrs. Jordan is the former Doris Reichard.

A daughter, Rebecca Jean, was born on October 26 to Mr. and Mrs. Wallace W. Wells at the Independence Sanitarium. Mrs. Wells is the former L'Nora Cross. Both parents are graduates of Graceland College.

Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Daugherty of Independence, Missouri, announce the birth of a daughter, Jeri Lynn, born November 7 at the Independence Sanitarium. Mrs. Daugherty is the former Millicent Drummond of Odessa, Missouri.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Doster of Independence, Missouri, announce the birth of a son, Lawrence Edward, born November 4 at the Independence Sanitarium. Mrs. Doster is the former Rebecca Salonimer of Detroit, Michigan.

A son, Allen Lynn, was born September 20 to Mr. and Mrs. Dick Marolf of Goodland, Kansas. He was blessed October 2 by Elders J. R. Graybill and J. Charles May.

DEATHS

KETCHUM.—George Riley, was born near Iatan, Missouri, on August 27, 1870, and died at his home in Independence, Missouri, on October 23, 1949. On March 2, 1894, he was married to Phoebe Elizabeth Thatcher at Effingham, Kansas. In 1895, they moved to Atchinson, Kansas, where he operated a general repair shop until moving to Independence in 1910. Here he continued in the same line of business until 1942 when failing health forced him to retire. He was baptized into the Reorganized Church on June 17, 1894, ordained a teacher on December 14, 1903, and an elder on May 30, 1909. Following the death of his wife Phoebe, he was married in 1933 to Martha Stegeman, who was his faithful and devoted companion during the remaining years of his life.

He is survived by his wife, Martha; three sons: George Watson of Harrisonville, Missouri; Isaac Newton and William Albert of Independence; four daughters: Mrs. Sarah Elizabeth Brown of Harrisonville, Missouri; Mrs. Gladys Irene Williamson, Mrs. Florence Mildred Swihart and Mrs. Edna Mae Stark of Independence; twenty-two grandchildren; and eight great-grandchildren. Three children preceded him in death. Funeral services were held at the Roland Speaks Chapel, Elders Glaude A. Smith and William F. Bolinger officiating. Interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery.

WIVEL.—Edward, son of Levi and Sarah Wivel, was born at Marshall, Illinois, on September 5, 1872, and died at his home in Independence, Missouri, on October 24, 1949, following a long illness. At the age of twenty-five, he homesteaded in Cherokee, Oklahoma, and lived the life of a pioneer for over eight years. Since 1910 he had made his home in Missouri. On October 9, 1922, he married Adabel Wilson, and five years ago moved to Independence. He here learned of the Restored Gospel and joined the Reorganized Church on December 16, 1945.

He is survived by his wife, Adabel; a son, Ernest Keifer; a daughter, Mrs. Velma Myers of Miami, Florida; six stepsons; a stepdaughter; a brother, Charles Wivel of Oklahoma City, Oklahoma; four sisters: Mrs. Alice Plaskett of Guthrie, Oklahoma; Mrs. Annie Hedricks of Oklahoma City; Mrs. Nellie Hampton of Edinburg, Texas; and Mrs. Ruth L. Black of Laverna, Oklahoma. Funeral services were held at the George C. Carson Chapel, Elder Glaude A. Smith officiating. Interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery.

PETERSON.—Bert Emanuel, was born June 17, 1875, at Avoca, Iowa, and died October 23, 1949, at the Independence Sanitarium. He was baptized into the Reorganized Church on March 25, 1884, and was ordained a deacon on August 11, 1906. Moving to Independence in 1897, he served as head deacon at Stone Church for many years. On June 17, 1898, he was married to Margaret Friend at the Stone Church. For forty years he was in the feed and grain business in Independence, resigning eight years ago when he became ill.

He is survived by his wife, Margaret; two sons: Kenneth, who is engaged in railroad work in Montana, and Earl of Lake Lotawana, Missouri; a brother, E. O. Peterson of Kansas City, Missouri; a sister: Mrs. Lois Stevenson of Independence; and two grandchildren. Funeral services were conducted by Elders Glaude A. Smith and Arthur E. Stoff at the George C. Carson Chapel. Interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery.

FOREST.—Rebecca Elizabeth, daughter of the late Jasper and Rebecca Wixom, was born April 14, 1872, in San Bernardino, California, and died November 1, 1949, at Glendale, California. She was an active member of the South Pasadena Branch until the time of her illness.

Surviving are two sons: Clarence L. Forest of Alhambra, California, and Walter G. Forest of Los Angeles, California. She also leaves one grandson. Funeral services were conducted by Elder George H. Wixom at San Bernardino. Burial was in the San Bernardino city cemetery.

SMITH.—John W., was born August 6, 1890, in Huron County, Michigan, and died November 5, 1949, at the University Hospital, Ann Arbor, Michigan. On December 16, 1913, he was married to Hazel G. Stewart; six children were born to them. He was baptized into the Reorganized Church in August, 1921, and was ordained a deacon in July, 1929. A daughter, Dorothy, and a son, Keith, preceded him in death.

He is survived by his wife, Hazel; three daughters: Mrs. Helen Crooker and Mrs. Wanda Williams of Detroit, Michigan; and Jean of Port Huron, Michigan; and a son, Earl Elwood of Chatham, Ontario. Funeral services were conducted at the Baptist Church at Harbor Beach, Michigan, Elders James Phillips and Trayton Rich officiating. Interment was in the Rock Falls Cemetery.

IN THIS ISSUE

EDITORIAL:

God Was There.....	3
The Communion Covenant, by Israel A. Smith.....	4

ARTICLES:

Adventure Toward Social Security, by E. V. Shute.....	5
I Found the Church Through Suffering, by Fridolin Becker.....	9
Five Years In Zion, by Verda E. Bryant.....	11
As I See It:
Modern Social Work, by Nora Moser.....	12
We Need "Social Security" Plus, by Willie C. Adams, Sr.....	13
The American People Need Social Security, D. H. Schmidt.....	13
On Social Security, by J. C. Morris.....	14
The Women's Center Building, by Mrs. Iva Hunier.....	15
Question Time.....	16
Greetings.....	17
Greetings From the Land of the Southern Cross, by Mabel Davey.....	18
Letters.....	19
Born To Be Free, by Robert H. Anderson.....	20
Bulletin Board.....	23

P.S.

 POSITIVE AND NEGATIVE

There are some questions on which we must be negative to save life: sin, crime, liquor, gambling, injustice, inequality. But let us remember that the great work of the world is not done in the negative camps; it is done by the marching and working armies of affirmative people.

PEOPLE

For years you have seen billboards with the slogan, "Join the Navy and see the world." Some lads claim it's, "Join the Navy and you see the Navy," but there may be some prejudice in that statement. But here's one that works, "Ride the bus and see the people." A bus holds an odd little community of people for thirty minutes; they have one thing in common—a desire to get somewhere. In that brief time they reveal much about themselves by how they look and what they do.

A Sunday morning bus ride is especially interesting. A young mother reviews the Sunday school lesson with her seven-year-old daughter, hoping to finish before the bus drops them at the church. A woman in her later twenties, obviously a worker, reads an inexpensive edition of the Bible. A young man with a suitcase checks the time, worried whether he will make his train. A fine elderly woman with a sweet voice, on her way to church with a friend, talks of the beauty of the woods about her home, the encroachments of city sounds and traffic. A chap obviously still at a low ebb after "a night out" finds life "flat, stale, and unprofitable." But a young woman looks out the window at the beauty of the blue sky, the golden sunshine, and the autumn colors on the trees. Then there is an older man in badly soiled clothing, with a smelly pipe and a disgruntled look; he has apparently just given up.

Quite obviously, those who are going to church—and you can tell it plain as day—have all the better of it. They are happier, neater, more thrifty looking, and better adjusted to life. A good religion makes life better for people.

 HOW TO WRITE

It may be easy for you, but it's hard for me. This is how most writing is done. . . . The piece I was working on began with a fleeting, bright little idea (at least I thought it was) that I jotted down on a scrap of paper. Later in the day when I had time, I sat down at the typewriter to finish it. The first draft was awkward, and the thoughts came in the wrong order. I marked them and tried again, but the second time phrasing was poor, with weak choices in vocabulary. On the third draft I had expanded too much and had to cut it down. The fourth was spotted with corrections and additions I had not thought of before. More of the same on the fifth, and on the sixth I had to clamp down on myself and say "This has gone far enough!" Even so, it might have been better if I had gone on to a seventh or eighth draft.

Writing is getting ideas and inspirations down on paper as soon as they come to you, before you lose them, which you often do. Never mind the form—at first. "Write at white heat, revise in cold ruthlessness," say the experienced writers. Catching the inspirations is fun; polishing them and finishing them up into something literary and useful is work. Never be content with the early drafts of your work; they are such poor parodies of the finished product they could be if you labor on them.

Mary A. Burlington
1510 1/2 Jules
St. Joseph, Missouri

14042
19
h

Announcing . . .

Special Christmas Gift Rates

on the

Saints' Herald

It's time to start thinking about Christmas gifts . . . and a wonderful gift for any of your friends is a year's subscription to the Herald. Save time and money by ordering gift subscriptions now! Our special gift rates save you up to 50c a subscription over regular rates! And we'll send a beautiful gift card with your name on it direct to your friends' homes. Make your Christmas gift list out now . . . fill in the blanks below and send your order today! Give the Saints' Herald this Christmas!

My gift card should read From . . .

Name

Address

City State

I enclose $..... Charge my account

Send one year of SAINTS' HERALD as my gift to:

Name

Address

City State

Name

Address

City State

One Subscription

(your own, new or renewal, or one gift)	$3.50
Canada	$3.75
Second Subscription	$3.00
Canada	$3.25
Each Additional Subscription	$3.00
Canada	$3.25

THE SAINTS'

Herald

... Representing the Youth of the Church found in every assembly.

*In the Background of their
"New Horizons" will usually be found the Church*

Edwin J. Cotterell Photo

VOLUME 96

DECEMBER 5, 1949

NUMBER 49

www.LatterDayTruth.org

December Tenth

THIS WEEK THE THIRTY-FIFTH ANNIVERSARY of the death of Joseph Smith III, the second president and prophet of the Restoration, will occur. Death came to this honored citizen, beloved leader, and faithful servant of God on December 10, 1914. On December 16 all twenty-four pages of the Saints' Herald were edged in black. The church was in mourning. Citizens of the community where he spent the last eight years of his life paid tribute to the leader who had taught them to be tolerant of his religion.

He was born November 6, 1832, and was the oldest living son of Joseph, Jr., and Emma Hale Smith. He died after a long illness in his eighty-third year. Nearly four years prior to his death, he addressed sealed letters to his oldest son, Frederick M. and Presiding Bishop E. L. Kelley to be opened at the time of his passing. They contained his wishes for the funeral services. They were characteristic of the man, so humble and sensible, so full of regard for others as to deserve mention. Summarizing these he desired:

1. An inexpensive funeral; a black casket such as used by those buried from the Saints' Home.
2. No ostentation or drapings of the church, carriages, or shroud.
3. No great floral displays. If death occurred in the season of flowers, a single wreath of native grown flowers would be sufficient.
4. No elaborate song service. A choir or group of selected singers using the hymns would please him.
5. That the preacher and those having charge be left to the branch authorities. All other arrangements not specifically mentioned were left to the two addressed in the letter and the branch officers.

It is another evidence that greatness has an affinity for simplicity and humility.

Introducing...

G. LESLIE DELAPP (page 5) was introduced in the Herald of May 21, 1949.

F. CARL MESLE, JR., Independence, Missouri, (page 11) was born in Oneida, New York, October 14, 1914. He was graduated from Sherrill High School, New York, in 1932, from Graceland College in 1936, and from the University of Iowa in 1937. He attended National Training School for the Boy Scouts of America in Mendham, New Jersey, in 1947.

In 1941 he married Miss Kathalea Sprague. They have two daughters: Sharon Kay, 5, and Catharine Ann, 3.

Brother Mesle was Assistant Scout Executive in Camden, New Jersey, from 1938 to 1940. Following this he came to Kansas City for six months as Field Scout Executive. Then he entered the United States Army, and served until 1946 in the 110th Engineering Corps as second lieutenant. He was assigned to the staff and faculty at the school in Fort Belvoir, Virginia, as assistant personnel adjutant. In 1944 he was assigned to the Washington, D. C. office of the chief of engineers, with the rank of captain in the Public Relations Division. When he was discharged in 1945, he was major of the Engineers' Reserve Corps.

Brother Mesle returned to his Field Scout Executive work in Kansas City in 1946, where he worked until he entered church service in September, 1947. He is a member of the Society of American Military Engineers, the Reserve Officers' Association, the American Camping Association, and the Kiwanis Club.

Brother Mesle was ordained a priest in 1935 and an elder in 1940. He is now under Conference appointment as the director of young people in the Independence area.

JOHN T. PUCKETT, Independence, Missouri, (page 15) was born May 23, 1920, in Mansfield, Tennessee. He was graduated from McKenzie High School, Tennessee, in 1938. The next year he attended the Andrew Jackson University at Nashville, Tennessee.

He married Marcine Marlow in 1941. They have one daughter, Janifia Carol, aged six.

Brother Puckett worked as a bookkeeper from 1939 to 1941, and was with the J. C. Penney Stores from 1941 to 1943, when he entered the service with the United States Fifth Army, serving in Italy, where he received the Purple Heart. At the time of his discharge in 1945, he returned to the J. C. Penney Store in Independence, where he worked until he entered church service in October, 1948.

Brother Puckett was ordained a deacon in 1946, a priest in 1947, and an elder in 1948. He is now working as missionary in Central Missouri Stake.

THE SAINTS' HERALD

Volume 96

December 5, 1949

Number 49

EDITORS: The First Presidency: Israel A. Smith, F. Henry Edwards. ASSISTANTS: Leonard J. Lea, Associate Editor; Chris B. Hartshorn, Managing Editor; Kenneth L. Graham, Business Manager.

The Saints' Herald is the official publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, with headquarters at The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri, and is issued through the offices of Herald Publishing House, 103 South Osage Street, Independence, Missouri.

Entered as second-class matter at the post office at Independence, Missouri, under Act of March 3, 1879. Issued weekly at Independence, Missouri. Price, $3.50 per year and $1.75 for six months in advance in the U. S. A., its territories and possessions; Canada, $3.75 per year and $1.90 for six months; other countries, $4.50 per year. Notice of a change of address must be given three weeks ahead of the date that it is to become effective. Accepted for mailing at the special rate of postage provided for in section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized July 21, 1921. Printed in the United States of America.

News & Notes

GRANDSON OF THE MARTYR

Frederick A. Smith, oldest living grandson of Joseph Smith, the Martyr, visited branches of the church in Los Angeles in October. His home is in Independence, Missouri. Most of his childhood, until he was sixteen years of age, was spent at the home of Emma Smith. During his visit in Los Angeles, he related many interesting facts about Emma and Joseph Smith.

SOLOISTS FOR "THE MESSIAH"

The soloists for the KMBC broadcast on the evening of December 18 will be Josephine Crinklaw Mader, soprano, Kansas City, Kansas; Harriet Porter Moore, contralto, Des Moines, Iowa; Garland Tickemyer, tenor, Los Angeles, California; and John Macdonald, bass, Chicago, Illinois. The soloists for the December 25 performance in the Auditorium will be Elizabeth Vaughn, soprano, Kansas City, Kansas; Jeanette Nichols, contralto, Independence; Donald Pypier, tenor, Independence, and Herbert Lively, bass, Kansas City, Missouri. Carl Mesle is in charge of publicity for the choir.

Hans Schweiger, director of the Kansas City Philharmonic Orchestra, visited the chorus November 13 while they were rehearsing in the Auditorium. Mr. Schweiger will be the conductor when the oratorio is presented in the Kansas City Municipal Auditorium.

ZION'S LEAGUE

The first three one-act plays in the City-Wide Zion's League Drama Festival were presented by the Liberty Street, the Second Church, and the Stone Church Senior League in the Stone Church Little Theater on November 14.

At the consecration service held by the Zion's League of Second Church, the new officers for the coming year were installed by a very impressive ceremony. Communion was served from linen-covered tables arranged to form a large white cross. A white-draped chair for the Unseen Guest was at the head of the tables. On the tables, besides the Communion emblems and the white candles, were a symbolic loaf of bread and a cup of wine.

DEATH OF JOHN DARLING'S MOTHER

Mrs. Ida J. Darling, 73, died November 11, at her Independence home. Elder Glaude A. Smith, Stone Church pastor, officiated at the funeral services Sunday, November 13, in the Roland R. Speaks chapel. She was a member of the National Educational Association and the Kansas State Teacher's Association.

RADIO BROADCAST

Elder Ward A. Hougas, president of the Quorum of High Priests, spoke on "The Minister's Hour" over KVOD in Denver on November 13.

GOMER T. GRIFFITHS

According to a report received from his wife, Gomer T. Griffiths condition is no better. He is gradually growing weaker, and is in constant pain.

MISSIONARY SERVICES IN ZION

Missionary Glen F. Sivits conducted a week of services November 13-20 in Gudgeon Park Church. Charles V. Graham, pastor in Zion, conducted a week of services in November at Liberty Street Church.

The Broken Home

"The rod and reproof give wisdom: but a child left to himself bringeth his mother to shame." —Proverbs 29: 15.

Irresponsible Husbands

Here is one of those points of anxiety which cause distress of mind and spirit. You have seen them as we have—fine young mothers working to support a child or two because husbands have proved unfaithful or incompetent for the responsibilities of marriage and home life. It is quite general that when a home is broken, the mother takes the child and the responsibility for its care, while the father blithely abandons them and goes on his way to another love, and perhaps to another betrayal.

The high divorce rate is more than a matter of statistics. For the people to whom it happens, it is often a personal tragedy. In any marriage people make great investments of life, affection, emotion, time, and loyalty in each other. A divorce is declaring bankruptcy on a part of life. One cannot reclaim any of that investment.

In fairness, it must be admitted that the husbands are not always to blame. Some good men have been shamefully treated by faithless wives. But quite often it is the other way, and the burden and suffering from a broken home are very hard on women.

Suffering Wives

The whole tragedy of failing marriages is not written in terms of divorce. There are the women who stay at home, faithful to their bond, enduring abuse, drunkenness, and infidelity from their husbands.

Many of the divorced mothers are fine, clean, good young women, and deserve a much better fate than their wandering husbands have given them. To have to carry alone the burden of supporting and rearing a child—a burden that was meant for two—is bad enough. But to be consigned to a life of loneliness, sometimes with no particular hope of happiness, is discouraging.

It could have been different. It could have been better. The mothers and fathers of this generation could have made it better. It is too bad they didn't. The parents of these wayward sons could have made them better men.

Causes

Tracing causes is sometimes difficult. Your troubles today may be partly a result of some experience of your parents or grandparents. Another generation must share responsibility for what is happening in our homes.

Following the First World War, parents let the young people "cut loose." They had raised their families on the philosophy that "children must be allowed to express themselves; they must not be inhibited." They might get a complex. From the kindergartens up, there was a theory of "no spanking," no discipline.

As this generation of youngsters grew up, moral standards degenerated, and there was a period of wildness known as "the flapper age." Some leaders asked, "What will the harvest be?"

Now we know the answer to that question. We have it in the records of the divorce courts, in broken hearts and frustrated lives, among thousands of orphaned and maladjusted children and abandoned wives.

Specific causes of the breaking of many homes will include some of these: lack of self-control, immaturity and childish conduct by adults, selfishness, gambling, extravagance, drinking, lack of proper knowledge of sex life, stubbornness, ignorance, and cruelty.

Remedies

Turn back to the young women who are victims of divorce, and to others of their generation who sympathize with them and understand something of the problem they have faced. Here is a group of women who in one generation could turn the trend in an opposite direction. One generation of mothers could give their children a training in character and personality development that would produce young men and women who would approach marriage with knowledge and understanding, and achieve a better average of success than we have had for some time.

Not all of the responsibility can or should be placed upon these young mothers. They will need all possible help. Their strongest ally, if they take up this work, will be the church; but they must go to church and take their children, if the church is to help. They will need the help of the schools. They will need the help of civic responsibility in the enforcement of the law.

We should not look for miracles, but neither should we be without hope in the face of a difficult situation. If one mother would say within her own soul, "I will raise my son to be a good husband to some other woman's daughter," she could assure the stability of one home. If one mother would determine, "I will raise my daughter to be a good wife," it would be as important at least as raising a piano player, a singer, or an international relations expert—and a home failure.

One generation of young women might not bring perfection, but they could make a tremendous difference. With the help of the church, and all good forces of society, they could do it.

L. J. L.

E d i t o r i a l

"The Messiah"

ARRANGEMENTS have been completed with the Columbia Broadcasting System, station KMBC of Kansas City, and the Messiah Choir of Independence, Missouri, for the eleventh network broadcast of Handel's The Messiah on the Columbia Network. The broadcast will originate from the Muehlebach Hotel in Kansas City, and will be heard over the Columbia Network on Sunday night, December 18, from 10:30 to 12:00 midnight, Central Standard Time. In the Eastern Time zone, this will be from 11:30 p.m. to 1:00 a.m., in the Mountain Time zone, 9:30 to 11:00 p.m., and in the Pacific Time zone, 8:30 to 10:00 p.m.

Soloists for this radio performance will be Josephine Crinklaw Mader of Kansas City, Missouri, soprano; Harriet Porter Moore of Des Moines, Iowa, contralto; Garland Tickemyer of Los Angeles, California, tenor; and John McDonald of Chicago, Illinois, bass. Accompaniment will be played by forty-three selected musicians from the Kansas City Philharmonic Orchestra. The entire performance will be under the direction of Mr. Franklyn S. Weddle.

This nation-wide broadcast of The Messiah by a choir composed largely of our own church members promises to be of superlative quality. The 280 voice chorus, with a tradition of thirty-two annual performances in Independence during the Christmas season, has been rehearsing this year since October 2.

The Columbia network broadcast on December 18 will offer a rare opportunity to church members throughout the nation to call the attention of their neighbors and friends to a notable musical achievement of the church. But unless every member, everywhere does publicize and capitalize on this broadcast in every possible way, much of the potential good will be lost.

Local branches and members can help in several ways to make this broadcast effective in their neighborhoods. They should inquire of their nearest CBS station whether or not this broadcast will be carried locally, and if for any reason the local station cannot carry it at the hour it is supplied by the network, suggest the possibility of a "delayed broadcast" by means of tape recording or electrical transcription for the accommodation of church members and listeners in that territory. We have been informed that the network is open to carry this broadcast in all time zones this year, but many local stations may have local commercial or other commitments at the hour of broadcast which would have to be moved or canceled in order to take The Messiah at the time it was carried on the network. A "delayed broadcast" would solve this problem, if the station was sure that enough local listeners were interested to make it worth the trouble.

When it is found that the station in a territory will carry The Messiah, and at what time, newspaper ads and stories calling attention to the broadcast should be arranged for by the branch. All members can mail post cards and letters to their friends, to music and civic leaders, ministers, women's clubs, music clubs, music teachers in schools and colleges, or anyone else that might be interested. An effort is being made to provide neat and dignified invitation cards for such mailing. These will be made available through the pastor of each branch.

Another way to publicize the broadcast is by organizing a "listening party" for friends and neighbors. The event may be stressed as one aspect of Latter Day Saint Christmas observance. Simple refreshments make an added attraction to the evening. People enjoy listening to good music together, and such an evening would open the way for questions and much favorable publicity for the church.

This broadcast is accepted by CBS as a sustaining feature, without any charge for the stations' time or facilities. The General Church, through conference appropriation, is meeting the numerous other expenses of the broadcast. Let every good church member do his share to help realize the greatest possible returns from this investment.

The Messiah Choir has been invited to join a mass choir for a rendition of The Messiah in the main arena of Kansas City's big Municipal Auditorium on the evening of December 5. This performance will be accompanied by the full Kansas City Philharmonic and conducted by Hans Schweiger, the Philharmonic's popular maestro. The thirty-third annual performance of The Messiah in Independence will be given in our own Auditorium on Christmas night, December 25, under the direction of Mr. Weddle, accompanied by the Independence Symphony.

The Fort Wayne, Indiana, Church

The Fort Wayne Church had its beginning in 1924 when Elder Harrington organized a Sunday school. Twelve years later, on February 14, 1936, the branch was organized, and on April 25, 1946, the church was dedicated. There have been three pastors: Elders Samuel Nichols, Jack Pray, and Earl Burt, who is now serving his fourth term. Four new members have been baptized so far this year, and there are many signs of growing unity and spirituality.

The Test of Discipleship

By PRESIDING BISHOP

G. L. DeLAPP

A Campus Sermon Given August 14, 1949

I WISH to call to your attention this evening a portion of the fourteenth chapter of Luke. This is a story known to all of us. I think I have heard it ever since I was a boy. Probably every Latter Day Saint has heard it many times. And yet, every time I read it, I find some new meaning in it.

Then said he unto him, A certain man made a great supper, and bade many: And sent his servant at supper time to say to them that were bidden, Come: for all things are now ready. And they all with one consent began to make excuse. The first said unto him, I have bought a piece of ground, and I must needs go and see it: I pray thee have me excused. And another said, I have bought five yoke of oxen, and I go to prove them: I pray thee have me excused. And another said, I have married a wife, and therefore I cannot come.

So that servant came, and shewed his lord these things. Then the master of the house being angry said to his servant, Go out quickly into the streets and lanes of the city, and bring in hither the poor, and the maimed, and the halt, and the blind.

And the servant said, Lord, it is done as thou hast commanded and yet there is room. And the lord said unto the servant, Go out into the highways and hedges, and compel them to come in, that my house may be filled. For I say unto you, That none of those men which were bidden shall taste of my supper.

And there went great multitudes with him: and he turned, and said unto them, If any man come to me, and hate not his father, and mother, and wife, and children, and brethren, and sisters, yea, and his own life also, he cannot be my disciple. And whosoever does not bear his cross, and come after me, cannot be my disciple. For which of you, intending to build a tower, sitteth not down first, and counteth the cost, whether he have sufficient to finish it? Lest haply, after he hath laid the foundation, and is not able to finish it, all that behold it begin to mock him, Saying, This man began to build, and was not able to finish.

This week I have had some rather interesting experiences. It has been a week when I have had to drop momentarily part of the administrative problems which have come to me and are a part of my responsibility to do some ministerial work which is just a little out of the ordinary for me. I had the opportunity to do some personal ministry, and I did a little thinking as I had opportunity. I thought it would be a good chance to evaluate again some of the fundamentals of the church, to go back in time and to re-evaluate those experiences, to ask myself some questions, and to honestly give the answers.

One of the questions I asked myself was, "Do I believe in the church as the Church of Jesus Christ?" I gave that serious thought, for in the busy course of life one may develop a pattern which becomes routine—sometimes commonplace. As I had the opportunity to meditate, this seemed to me to be an important question. I went back to those days when I used to listen to some of the ministers of the church tell about the kingdom of God, which is Zion, and express the hope that the time would come in their experience when there would be a realization of those hopes.

I REMEMBER that as a boy I was filled with a keen desire and a hope that somehow, someday, the people who made up the Church of Jesus Christ would fully realize their hopes and ambitions. Remembering those days, I asked myself, "Do I still believe that those hopes and dreams can be realized in the world in which we live?" Honestly and sincerely I say today that I believe it is within the range of the ability of this church to build the kingdom of God here upon the earth. I wanted to be sincere; I wanted to be honest; so I meditated on that—not just a few moments, but during the hours I had for quiet contemplation—and I came very definitely to the same conclusion I came to when I was a boy: this is the Church of Jesus Christ, and there is power resident within it to build God's kingdom in these latter days.

Then I asked myself, "This being so, am I willing to pay the price of discipleship to make possible the realization of the kingdom of God in these days?" That, too, was a serious question, because one does not commit himself on such matters without due consideration of friends, family, and all that makes life worthwhile. So again after careful meditation I found the answer, "Yes, with the help of Almighty God I trust there may come to me the power to be a true disciple of Jesus Christ, our Lord and Savior."

Today I had another interesting experience. It was quite warm as I spoke this morning at the Stewartsville Reunion; yet the people were receptive and attentive to that which it was my privilege to tell them as a minister of Jesus Christ, and I found that in the telling, I didn't feel like mincing words or holding back. I didn't count too much the cost of the effect it might have on individuals who thought I might be a little severe or harsh. After that service a friend of mine came to me and said, "You turned the heat on, didn't you?" and I said, "It was warm, wasn't it?" He said, "I don't mean the temperature; I mean the content."

Another person commented, "You shouldn't make apology for what you said." And I answered, "I'm not making any apology. I didn't make any apology during my sermon, and I'm not making apology after the sermon."

I felt we were blessed as we met together, and that there was a degree of God's Holy Spirit present.

I WANT TO TALK now a little bit about this business of discipleship, the costs, responsibilities, opportunities, and what it holds for us in the future. There is a great diversity of thought respecting that which is required by our Lord to become a disciple—one who follows him both in profession and action. It has been pointed out in previous sermons that there are some who feel that salvation is to be achieved by the mere act of vocal expression of a desire to be saved. There may be some few Latter Day Saints who have similar ideas; these members, of course, have not come to a full understanding of the law and purpose of the church, nor do they sense the real meaning and significance of true discipleship.

As we give consideration to the obligations we have in this connection, it is highly essential that we examine the purpose of the church—its goals and objectives which have been established by revelation and the enactment of the members in General Conferences and by administrative interpretation by officers who point the direction in which the church is to go in the attainment of these goals. In the broad sense, they are goals of evangelization—world-wide evangelization—and the establishment of Zion. These have been clearly enunciated in the revelations coming to the church which brought forth a restoration of the gospel in these latter days. And when we talk of the restoration of the gospel of Jesus Christ, we are talking about one of the greatest things that has ever happened since the beginning of time. Therefore, we ought to think in terms of our own responsibility relative to what this restoration means to us.

It is my purpose now to again evaluate that which has come to us and to apply the yardstick of individual participation and contribution to the achievement of those goals as a test of true discipleship as followers of Jesus Christ.

As we have met together in the past, we have been lifted in imagination and in envisionment to see the beauty of the coming kingdom. Such ability to envision is not only desirable but required for the accomplishment of the divine purpose in us. Unless we have such vision, we cannot understand the goals which lie ahead of us. I come not to criticize those times when we have been lifted up to visualize the beauties of the kingdom, but rather to build upon what we have seen in such envisionment and to re-emphasize the act that we must utilize this ability—this sense of imagination—to bring us closer to our goals.

But just as it is essential to comprehend the inherent possibilities of a functioning church in the field of evangelization and community building, so it is essential that we understand the processes by which these goals are to be attained. Herein lies the real test imposed upon every member of the church, for while there is unity and common understanding of the beauties of the kingdom, there is not unity and understanding of the degree of responsibility of each member in attaining these ideal conditions; nor is there willingness on the part of more than a very small minority of the membership to assume the burden of responsibilities which must necessarily be discharged if these goals are to be realized within our generation. I am speaking affirmatively now, for I believe that even with this small minority it is possible to develop a power within the church which will make it move forward as never before in our experience.

THE SCRIPTURE I read appears in some respects to be a rather harsh statement of the demands made of those who will be disciples of our Lord and Savior. The King James Version states without qualification, "If any man come to me, and hate not his father, and mother, and wife, and children, and brethren, and sisters, yea, and his own life, he cannot be my disciple." I turned rather hopefully to examine the Inspired Version, thinking there might be some considerable modification of this imperative; but in substance it is the same with only these qualifying phrases added: ". . . or in other words, is afraid to lay down his life for my sake." As you read that you find it is indeed an explanatory statement, for God does not expect men to forsake family and friends, but he does expect a consecration of life itself (if in the final analysis there should be required a choice between one's family and his God) which would be made in the advancement of the work of God—not that God would require it, but that there must be evidence of devotion if one is to be a true disciple of Jesus Christ. Need we ask whether that would be a requisite? All we have to do is to go back in the life of our Lord and Savior to that occasion when he carried the cross up the hill. There, as he was placed upon the cross, he had the power to change the destiny of men but he yielded in obedience to his Heavenly Father and gave his life that men might have life. The first test for one who would be a true disciple of Jesus is that of complete loyalty and submission of life itself to His way of living.

There are some other exceptionally strong statements which indicate that the business of discipleship is a most serious responsibility.

And hereby we do know that we know him, if we keep his commandments. He that saith, I know him, and keepeth not his commandments, is a liar, and the truth is not in him.—I John 2: 3, 4.

With this as a background, let us examine briefly the responsibilities which are ours individually in attaining the goals which have been established as being essential to the fulfilling of God's work in these latter days. That it is important we seek to understand these responsibilities is clearly shown in the revelation given to the church through our late president, Frederick M. Smith (Section 136, Doctrine and Covenants). Our present president concurs in that which has been presented here as he has administered the work of the church:

The movements towards better understanding of ministerial responsibilities, duties, and goals, and towards unity of endeavor in teaching, preaching, evangelizing, and the perfecting of the Saints, are pleasing to the Lord. Contentions, bickerings, and strife are unseemly, hinder the work of the church, and should not find place among the Saints. Only in the peace of fraternity and the unity of those caught up in the spirit of Zion redemption can the work of the Lord be accomplished. To this task let the church devote its energies.

In section 1 of the Doctrine and Covenants we find the following:

Wherefore I the Lord, knowing the calamity which should come upon the inhabitants of the earth, called upon my servant Joseph Smith, Jr., and spake unto him from heaven, and gave him commandments, and also gave commandments to others, that they should proclaim these things unto the world; and all this that it might be fulfilled, which was written by the prophets; the weak things of the world shall come forth and break down the mighty and strong ones, that man should not counsel his fellowman, neither trust in the arm of flesh, but that every man might speak in the name of God the Lord, even the Savior of the world; that faith also might increase in the earth; that mine everlasting covenant might be established; that the fullness of my gospel might be proclaimed by the weak and the simple, unto the ends of the world, and before kings and rulers.

What could be clearer evidence of the responsibility we have of preaching the gospel throughout the world than is given herein? And what clearer evidence do we have that this is the responsibility of every member of the church, for none are excluded? It doesn't require the great minds of the universe to preach the gospel of Jesus Christ. It requires those who, through the spirit and the confirmation of that spirit, have come to an understanding of divine purpose and have moved forward, and through the exemplification of those attributes have given evidence of the fact that there is a way of life which is different from any we have experienced. Everyone who professes to be a disciple of our Lord and Savior can do this.

In Section 11, paragraph 3, is a commandment which should be fully understood by those who profess true discipleship.

Now, as you have asked, behold, I say unto you, Keep my commandments, and seek to bring forth and establish the cause of Zion.

RELATED TO THESE BROAD GOALS of the church, and in harmony with them, are intermediate goals which can be achieved in just the proportion that individual members accept the challenge as disciples and yield obedience to the divine way of life. In our missionary endeavors (which include administrative, pastoral, missionary, evangelical, and departmental work of the church) we are maintaining a force of men totaling over 140 in number whose primary purpose is that of conveying by precept and example the fundamentals of the gospel. To maintain such a corps of workers the first six months of 1949 cost the church over $186,000 for family allowances and retirement reserves, plus approximately $106,000 for elders' traveling, personal, official, and medical expenses. Such costs cover the work of the church from the Australasian and Society Islands Missions up through and including the United States and Canada and across the waters to the British and the European Missions.

I have been thinking about those missions abroad, and wondering if somehow we could always convey to them an understanding of the fact that the church stands with them and for them. Once in a while we get a heartfelt letter from these men in foreign fields. It is not an easy responsibility for them to be away from their country in days such as we are experiencing now throughout the world. My heart goes out to them, and I wish it were possible for me to convey to them the knowledge which I know is the truth—that the church does stand with them and for them and is seeking to further the work for which they are giving their lives.

Such broad operations are made possible because there are some in the church who accept the responsibility of true discipleship and others have contributed in part or assumed only a portion of the responsibility required of a true disciple. Now here is a practical test that you can make for yourself of the vocal expressions which undoubtedly have been made by all who have a desire to be obedient and truly follow their Lord and Savior. Are you one of the 8.7 per cent who have filed a financial statement? I can't answer that question for you. I can't answer that question for anyone in the church. We can always go to our files, but the question I am asking is, "Are you one of the 8.7 per cent of the church members who have evidenced the fact that they believe in Jesus Christ the risen Lord, and that they are stewards, and have acknowledged their stewardship by filing a financial statement?"

Or are you one of the 24.8 per cent who have contributed tithes and offerings to the church in 1949? Or are you postponing the date for realization of the goals of the church we have envisioned?

SYMBOLIC of one of the great goals of the church is this meeting of members, which is substantial evidence that the process of the Gathering is going on. And the Gathering is a divine process, for here we find people from many districts and branches from outlying areas. Would it be unfair to ask that we here again apply the test of true discipleship in the raising of the query as to the extent to which compliance has been made or given to the financial law of the church and to the law of the Gathering?

And let the work of the gathering be not in haste, nor by flight, but let it be done as it shall be counseled by the elders of the church at the conferences, according to the knowledge which they receive from time to time.

It would be well for us to consider the admonition given to the Saints in the early days:

Behold, I say unto you, Were it not for the transgressions of my people, speaking concerning the church and not individuals, they might have been redeemed even now; but, behold, they have not learned to be obedient to the things which I require at their hands, but are full of all manner of evil, and do not impart of their substance, as becometh saints, to the poor and afflicted among them, and are not united according to the union required by the law of the celestial kingdom; and Zion can not be built up unless it is by the principles of the law of the celestial kingdom, otherwise I can not receive her unto myself; and my people must needs be chastened until they learn obedience, if it must needs be, by the things which they suffer.— Doctrine and Covenants 102: 2.

In view of our individual record, how have we measured up to the test of the celestial law? That law comprehends compliance with both spiritual and temporal laws. The church is attempting to direct the gathering of its people to the communities within these stakes where they can be ministered to and have the opportunity to associate and work with those of like faith. We find that in many instances individuals come here without preparation, without consulting the proper authorities, without receiving the benefit of ministry available. This is not said in criticism but in the hope that somehow there may be conveyed to our people throughout the church the significance of the basic law of the Gathering with which it is essential we comply. This is not because we, the general church officials responsible for teaching the law have asked for compliance, but because we believe that compliance with the law is essential to the salvation of our people. That is our only concern. We do our best to minister to whoever comes within the borders of Zion or any of the stakes, whether they come in harmony with the law or not. It is our responsibility to minister to them, but let us keep in mind that there has been given a divine law which, if we obey, will surely move forward the process of the Gathering to a greater degree than we have ever experienced before in our history. Why? Because the Gathering is a divine process, essential to the salvation of men everywhere. But compliance with law is essential to a successful gathering.

THE GOALS related to the Gathering include those of group stewardships, which can be achieved only as members respond to the law. This principle was included in Section 42: 14:

Thou shalt stand in the place of thy stewardship; thou shalt not take thy brother's garment; thou shalt pay for that which thou shalt receive of thy brother; and if thou obtainest more than that which would be for thy support, thou shalt give it unto my storehouse, that all things may be done according to that which I have said.

Another commandment was also given:

Behold this is what the Lord requires of every man in his stewardship, even as I, the Lord, have appointed, or shall hereafter appoint unto any man. And, behold, none are exempt from this law who belong to the church of the living God.—Doctrine and Covenants 70: 3.

These seem to me to be mighty important requirements of those who would be true disciples, but even these do not make up the complete requirements for we find elaboration of many other qualities by the writers of the New Testament. In the Second Epistle of Peter, chapter 1, we find this:

Besides this, giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue, and to virtue, knowledge;

And to knowledge, temperance; and to temperance, patience; and to patience, godliness;

And to godliness, brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness, charity. For if these things be in you, and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ.

But he that lacketh these things is blind and cannot see afar off, and hath forgotten that he was purged from his old sins.

Are these qualifications beyond the ability of men to achieve? Are we setting the standards so high that they are beyond the ability of the human mind and the soul to comprehend and comply with? Keep in mind that we are called to a great task—the task of building the kingdom of God—we are called to be true disciples of our Lord and Savior. There can be no kingdom without true discipleship, and if we look in our minds' eye to the coming kingdom as we yearn for the completion of long-time goals—we find there are immediate goals also. The stone work on the Auditorium is in process of being placed only on the upper part of the structure. The interior is unfinished, as is also the stone work on front and sides. There is a need for the enlargement of the Independence Sanitarium and Hospital facilities, for we must think in terms of a gathering of God's people with a health center adequate for the needs of an ever-increasing membership. We must think of the need for enlarging our institutions for the care of the aged. We must plan for strengthening and extending our educational institution. We see in such developments a partial realization of our hopes and aspirations. Is it not fitting that at the same time we evaluate our own relationship to the total movement and measure our individual progress by applying some of the tests to which I have called your attention? These tests are not man-imposed. They are the requisites set up by our Lord when he moved among men. And he has made his will known to us in these latter days in revelations accepted as the law and the doctrine, which have defined the philosophy of the church.

If this seems harsh language, it is not the Master which makes it so; it is the irrefutable fact that compliance with law is essential to progress and salvation. There can be no salvation without such compliance. This is most clearly portrayed in the tenth chapter of Mark:

And when he was gone forth into the way, there came one running, and kneeled to him, and asked him, Good Master, what shall I do that I may inherit eternal life?

And Jesus said unto him, Why callest thou me good? None is good but one, and that is God.

Thou knowest the commandments, Do not commit adultery; do not kill; do not steal; do not bear false witness; defraud not; honor thy father and thy mother.

And the man answered and said unto him, Master, all these have I observed from my youth.

Then Jesus beholding him, loved him, and said unto him, One thing thou lackest;

Go thy way, sell whatsoever thou hast, and give to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven; and come, take up the cross, and follow me.

And the man was sad at that saying, and went away grieved; for he had great possessions.

And Jesus looked around about and said unto his disciples, How hardly shall they that have riches enter into the kingdom of my Father!

ONE OF THE FUNDAMENTALS of the Restoration Movement is the doctrine of stewardships. Its principles have been discussed throughout the church for many decades; and there is a growing understanding of its application to daily life. From the figures I have given at this time, it is obvious there is a need for further discussing and teaching this principle. This is evidenced by the fact that there are still many people professing membership in the church who have failed to comply with the elementary steps.

Jesus used many illustrations to emphasize the responsibility that men have as stewards to God and their fellow men. For one who would be a disciple, there is a need to develop an appreciation of the importance God has placed upon man's stewardship. Jesus also taught and, through his life, death, and resurrection, gave evidence of the eternal qualities inherent in man. It is vitally important for us to appreciate the fact that God is eternal and deals with his creation on such a basis.

This is clearly indicated in a vision given to Joseph Smith:

Hear, O ye heavens, and give ear, O earth, and rejoice ye inhabitants thereof, for the Lord is God, and beside him there is no Savior; great is his wisdom; marvelous are his ways; and the extent of his doings, none can find out; his purposes fail not, neither are there any who can stay his hand; from eternity to eternity he is the same, and his years never fail.—Doctrine and Covenants 76: 1.

The responsibility of men is clearly set forth:

... and it is required of the Lord, at the hand of every steward, to render an account of his stewardship both in time and in eternity. For he who is faithful and wise in time is accounted worthy to inherit the mansions prepared for them of my Father.—Doctrine and Covenants 72: 1.

Thus we see the need for developing an understanding of the divine purpose and of substantiating our beliefs that an individual has a part to contribute in the fulfillment of that purpose.

THE CHURCH challenges men to repentance. Repentance is the creative and continuous growth made possible through the process of the gathering movement of the church, through the organization of the storèhouse and the acquisition of inheritances. It is our individual and collective responsibility to accept this challenge.

Do I believe in the potential power of this church to establish the kingdom of God? With all my heart and soul I believe there is resident within us the power so to do.

Let us not lose sight of the beauty of the kingdom as we envision it. Let us not for one moment think it is not essential for us to have these visions of beautiful Zion, for such has been the hope and dream of men down through the ages. But we must also keep in mind that it is within our ability to achieve these dreams, to make them real and purposeful. The extent of our desire will be evidenced by the measure of our responsiveness to divine law; the filing of our financial statements, the paying of our tithing, the giving of our offerings, and the consecration of time, talents, and resources will determine the measure of our progress.

And here is an appeal to the youth of the church. When we put up the standards of discipleship, it may seem terrifically difficult because there are so many things which attract our attention and give so much in pleasures. By way of testimony I can say that all the world has to offer today is of little value in comparison with the joy and the satisfaction that comes to one who consecrates life and talents to a great cause and loses himself therein. We need the brains, the power that is resident within the youth of the church. We need the resources young people can bring to the church in the years ahead.

Above all, the world needs a Zion—the kind of Zion that we have dreamed about and for which we have prayed.

I Was at Home in the British Mission

By ROY CHEVILLE

ON MONDAY, JUNE 6, I landed at Northolt airport outside London and went by train to Birmingham. At six o'clock the railway station was crowded with passengers. An elderly man spotted me as an American and offered to show me to a tram. It seemed to me the English could detect me as an American a block away. I was to take the tram to the mission house where the Jensens resided. I peered out the window as I neared 170 Gravelly Hill. On the right side I spotted a house of good proportions with a sign which read, "The Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints." That sign fairly leaped out to meet me. It was my welcoming committee in a strange land.

Our Mission Building

The church owns three mission houses in England—a two-family flat in Manchester, a single dwelling house in Nuneaton, and a larger property in Birmingham. It was imperative that the church purchase these for our missionaries to have places to live. This one in Birmingham was the headquarters of the European Mission. It is a three-story residence house of brick. On the first floor is the meeting place of the Birmingham Branch; on the second and third floors are the living quarters for the Jensen family. Thus our properties provide residence for four families.

A Home Branch

Through my twelve weeks in Europe Birmingham was to be my "home branch." The Jensens insisted on my making their home my headquarters. They did everything I could wish to make my stay comfortable and profitable. This was true of the members of the church everywhere. On Sunday, June 12, I stepped through the curtains of the Birmingham meeting hall to the rostrum. Eyes met eyes. The English were wondering what the visiting American would be like. I was thinking much the same of them. I recognized three or four faces of those I had met at General Conference. I began to see this biennial assembly as a possible world conference, something quite beyond American proportions. Several days before this first Sunday I had chosen to speak on the text, "Stand fast in the Lord." On Friday I was encouraged when I saw this on a sign near the ruins of the bombed Coventry Cathedral. That Sunday morning I spoke with more than usual liberty and conviction. By the time the service came to a close, they and I had found one another. We were brothers and sisters.

A Women's Conference

On the next Saturday I returned to Birmingham for a conference of the women of the southern district. Visitors came from the northern district so it was almost a mission gathering. Mrs. Cyrus Allen of the well-known Edwards family was the director. With dignity, efficiency, and gracious friendliness she presided. Here was an opportunity to weld together the several branches into a sense of community. I recall the testimony of one sister who lived, as we say, in a "scattered condition." She was thrilled as she saw in public the name of the church on the sign of the mission house. During the war this kind of thing had been impossible. Now these women ate, worshiped, chatted, and testified together. Perhaps the high point for me was in the afternoon meeting when representatives told of the women's work in their branches. I sat in a corner of the congregation listening intently and stirred with the spiritual presence that joined me to them all.

There were those touches that made the meeting typically English. I found over and over again how a theme or a Scripture reading or a hymn of universal appeal could fit into a local setting. Saturday supper was "tea." This meant that tea was served, not punch or coolade, but warm tea. The women of Birmingham gave a play that had been given at the last General Conference. Here it had some English and a bit of Welsh phrasing with a few names changed for the English setting. There was no early morning meeting, for the trams do not run early enough. The flowers—lupins, roses, and ferns—came from an English garden. They graced the sanctuary as peonies would at home in Iowa at that time. Yet throughout were the tones that made it Latter Day Saint.

A Visiting Day in Oxford

One Sunday I planned to be my visiting day. I spent the last week end of June in Oxford town. This fortnight in Oxford was a dream once considered too high for my blood. Those weeks in and about this classic university town are treasured beyond what words can express. Here is a center of Anglicanism with churches of the several slants high church, low church, broad church. I wanted to learn firsthand of these, so I attended valedictory services, vespers, holy day meetings, and even a service for divine healing. I heard organs, choirs, cantors, and preachers. In all I was graciously received, even being asked if I wanted the laying on of hands for health. I confess that at times I wanted to jerk down the tablets and statues to the dead and shout out a message to the living.

That Sunday gave a varied church diet. First I observed an ordination in the cathedral of Christ Church College with the Bishop of Oxford presiding. At eleven I went to the Memorial Methodist Church. It was here in Oxford that the Wesleys formed the Holy Club and initiated the movement that was to eventuate in Methodism. I found the Methodists still use more hymns in their services than most sects. In the afternoon I visited Sunday schools. Twice I was asked to give a word of greeting from America. The Sunday school functions somewhat differently in England than in America. It is still a school for boys and girls to fourteen or fifteen. On the whole, I found it comparatively disassociated from the church. It appears to me that one of the fruitful fields of evangelism before us would be an educational program or church school conducted as an integral part of the church in action.

I had found in the newspaper the previous day an announcement of a meeting of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints in Summertown, a suburb of Oxford, so I went out exploring and found the place. I arrived as Sunday school was closing. Their reception was gracious and friendly. Two young elders from America were a change. I stayed for their service of the Lord's Supper. In Paris I had found the address of a meeting place and had traced it only to find the quarters had moved. At least in England I could join in singing "Redeemer of Israel" with this small congregation.

I hurried from the Mormon meeting back to Oxford to attend a service of the Friends (Quakers). A Dr. Liepmann, just returned from Stuttgart, was to speak on "Youth in the New Germany." By this time I was sure of getting into Germany and wanted to glean all I could to prepare me. When I entered the meeting place, a few score of persons were sitting in the quiet of the evening. The opening carried the utmost simplicity. Dr. Liepmann told his story directly and analytically. In the question period I asked what kind of religion would find response in German youth. "The inherited religions have not met the needs of the day. They are too medieval, too depressive." "And what kind of religion will service them?" I continued. "One that gives a sense of personal worth; one that lets them feel somebody cares for them, one with warmth and fraternity," he summarized. I walked down the streets after the service with a conviction that all these were inherent in the gospel we carried to them. The question I asked myself was this: "Can we portray this and exhibit our gospel in its spiritual possibilities?" I walked a long time, thinking over the wide diversities of religious meetings of this day in England. They became a call to re-examine the faith to which I gave my allegiance. More and more I saw the need for it.

Return to England

Blair Jensen returned to England, July 26, after a six weeks' tour in Scandinavia with Glen Johnson. I came back the next night after almost four weeks in Germany and Holland. Right then we had a conference on missions abroad. The next day we began talking early in the morning, took time out for meals, returned to resume our talking and continued until late at night. There was so much to compare. On that day was fulfilled the promise that where two or three are gathered in the name of the Lord, his Spirit will be there. Some of the outstanding testimony meetings of my life have been in these fraternal conversations when a rapport is established not always possible in a large congregation.

Mission Day at Nuneaton

July 31 was Mission Day for Britain. This was to take the place of the reunion, canceled this year for want of adequate quarters. Nuneaton, selected for it, was fairly centrally located between the northern and southern districts. Here lived Frank Fry, now serving as president of both districts. Here the Coggan family would do the catering. Here adequate halls could be rented. The date was set on a Sunday just before a "bank holiday" on Monday. This would assist those who had to travel long distances. For weeks the branches had been planning. Bus loads came from Enfield, Manchester, and Birmingham. Clay Cross, Wigam, and Stockport were names heard during the day. A small delegation came from Wales. Here one saw the overview of the "Saints in action."

In the early afternoon I was to talk to a youth class. From remarks I gathered, I was not to expect too much; England does not have many young people. We went to a corner of the dining room. Trevor Norton of Birmingham opened the meeting and set a high tone. In traveling I am sensitive to the difference between actually taking charge of a meeting and presiding perfunctorily. The true presider has his hand on details. He builds an atmosphere. Some sixty or more English youth sat before me. That day I threw my best into a discussion of "What Youth Can Contribute to the Church" with application to Britain. It is my firm conviction that a healthy church must have every age group in sound proportions. The response of these young people in attention, comment, and song voiced a new expectancy for the mission. Let them be mobilized into an effective youth program! As I write this, I learn that Harry Black of Stockport, England, is on the Atlantic en route to Graceland. This coming of English youth to our college expands our sights to see the church in all the world.

That evening I was to preach the closing sermon at six-thirty. I realized these people had come long distances. What happened to them would affect the vitality of the mission. So I tried to make adequate preparation in heart and mind. I told them how Paul had gone into the Gentile world and found a larger brotherhood, how when questioned by fellow Jews for admitting non-Hebrews, he testified that the Spirit of God had come to these converts in testimony of their acceptance. Now two millenniums later I had traveled into lands of diverse cultures and tongues and nationalities and found myself joined by the Spirit of God to brothers of Britain, Holland, and Germany. This same stimulating unction blended the congregation. I had told of teaching the hymn, "'Tis a Glorious Thing to Be in the Light," to the Saints in Germany. For the closing hymn these British Saints sang this same testimony. Their voices were vibrant with spiritual warmth, and the service ended with true benediction.

Near Land's End

Just after Nuneaton Mission Day we made a visit to Cornwall in southwestern England. Blair Jensen, Frank Fry, Blair Jensen, Jr., and I made the journey. Down in Marazion, next to Penzance, a church opening has been made in recent months. There for several years lived Mrs. Ezekiel Allen. Returned from Canada she lived in this far-from-a-branch village. She talked to her neighbors of the gospel. Last year she died, and the sermon Frank Fry preached at her funeral service effected the opening she had longed to make for years. A few have been baptized. One evening in the small living room of Kenneth Hughes, who was converted after the death of Sister Allen, we held a service. There were a dozen as I bore testimony in sermon. Next morning one of the neighbors said she was ready for baptism. By now she has probably made her baptismal covenant in the ocean waters at Marazion's beach. Here was one of the growing points out in the frontier. I found myself thinking of the chain of openings needed to link this distant place with growing branches. A glance at the map of England reminds one of the necessity of building with an operative plan.

In Llanelly

The story of our church contains many a chapter about the gospel in Wales. I had read how it spread rapidly in the southern part. Even now tales are extant about the number of Welshmen who once belonged to the church. More recently dark days have fallen upon us. The strains over Utahism gave a setback. The shortage of man power in the early Reorganization retarded us. Then came 1925 and inroads of Hedrickite elders. Many here considered that we might as well sign off Wales as a possibility. During the recent months a change has taken place. Sometimes administrative firmness can silence quarreling leaders. Certainly pastoral warmth can breathe new hope. Right proudly then could Walter Corley, president of the branch, report that the first baptisms had taken place in Wales since fifteen years ago.

One listens in amazement at Welsh names. One practices with sense of futility on Welsh sounds. But one listens with rapture when a Welsh congregation sings. When Brother Phillips prayed in his native tongue, I could not understand his words, but I felt he must be talking face-to-face with his Father. We broke bread at the Lord's table. We sang the old familiar songs. We preached of God at work in today's world. We sat after the evening meal and talked. I left Wales with the conviction that a revival was taking place and that the hills would yet echo with the songs of the Restoration.

The Last Sunday: Enfield

Our church in the metropolitan area of London is in Enfield, a suburb town. I had stopped there on my way to Holland and spent three delightful days in the Worth home. One evening I met with the Enfield Zion's League. Now I was to be in the home of the Frank Schofield's. Saturday afternoon the League had a "ramble." This is a hike of generous length through the English countryside. I think the English are less bound by cars than Americans. This walk led back to tea at the church and a vesper service in the sanctuary. Sunday brought the at-home fellowship through a busy day. The Enfield Branch is not content to hold services to fill out a schedule. Their leaders are endeavoring to vision objectives and to set up goals.

These Make England, Too

These six weeks in England include more than meetings. There is that trip with the Merediths to Warwick Castle, to Stratford-on-Avon to the Shakespeare buildings and memorial theatre, to the Avon River to punt in those flat-bottomed boats. There are those two glorious weeks in Oxrd town in and about the classic halls of the University. There are those days of wandering through London from the Tower and St. Paul's to Westminster. There is the ride through the Black Country where we stopped to greet the countrymen. There is the visit to Gloucester Cathedral and the silent respect to the ruins left of Coventry Cathedral. There are the walks out into the English fields for conversation with farmers at work. There are the rides on the railways with exchange of views on English politics and social reform. There is the dock at Plymouth with the stone marking the departure of the "Mayflower." Then there are all those hundreds of courtesies extended. Not once in these weeks did I receive a rebuff or discourtesy.

At a Distance

My last glimpse of England was from the window high above as my plane crossed from Paris to Shannon, Ireland. I looked out to say a silent farewell. It was more of a benediction on my brothers and sisters. Their country is going through a very apparent transition. In such a time the social problems are pressing. Yet such a time has opportunity for our church. Somehow I feel our strength in Britain has been overrated. I also feel that our possibilities are underrated.

These British Saints received me well. With them I felt the endowing spirit that could join us. With these days so vivid in my soul, I must arise to declare the universality of our fellowship. This is no formal statement; I make it out of the rich experience of the summer. I now renew the prayer I reflected as I lost sight of England: God bless our European Mission!

Church-Sponsored Scout Troops

By CARL MESLE

Note: This report will be of interest to Scouts and Scout leaders throughout the church. Elder Carl Mesle, who submits it, was Chairman of the Protestant Discussion Group.

EARLY THIS FALL some thirty youth leaders representing over twenty national organizations met at the National Training School of the Boy Scouts of America on the beautiful Schiff Reservation near Mendham, New Jersey, to discuss the relation of their organizations to the Boy Scouts of America.

Almer Sheehy of Boston, president of the Southern New England District, and I were named to represent our church at this conference. Other organizations represented included six different Protestant churches, several different Catholic organizations, the National Jewish Welfare Board, six farm organizations, three civic groups, two fraternal, and one educational organization.

The conference was called by the Relationships Division of the Boy Scouts of America in an experimental effort to determine the problems and successes of those groups which used the programs of the Boy Scouts of America. It was a challenge to meet with these men who represented organizations with a membership in the United States of America of nearly fifty million persons.

From the beginning there was a spiritual emphasis to the conference—an emphasis not altogether understood at first by all the leaders from the nonchurch organizations. As the conference progressed, however, it was made clear by the leaders of Scouting that all groups using the program were expected to give leadership to the spiritual development of the boys in the Scouting programs. The conference was maintained on a high plane of fellowship and understanding and marked a milestone not only in Scout institutional relationships but also in interchurch and interorganizational understanding.

Throughout the conference, Scouting leaders effectively presented the resources of Scouting in the areas of leadership, organization, training, and programming that are available to all agencies using the program. At the same time an honest effort was made to determine from those who represented the "customers" of Scouting the needs and wishes of those customers which might better be served through changes in Scouting procedures.

DR. WYLAND, chairman of the Relationships Division of the Boy Scouts of America, who has addressed our own

General Conference, defined the partnership relation which exists between those organizations using the Scout program and the Boy Scouts of America as a two-way street: (1) that of Scouting, which represents the line of authority and service for the program, and (2) that of the chartered institutions, including our local churches, which represents the line of ownership and responsibility for Scout units.

Dr. Wyland pointed out that there are seventy thousand units in America operated by chartered institutions in the following classifications:

(1) Churches and synagogues	34,000
(2) Civic Groups	18,000
(3) Schools	12,000
(4) Groups of Citizens	8,000

"It is a poor partnership," Dr. Wyland stated, "which doesn't profit both partners." Describing the partnership that exists between the Boy Scouts of America and the chartered institutions, he gave several illustrations of how the chartered institutions profited, the most impressive of which was in the field of church awards to Scouts. Some 24,000 Catholic boys have received awards since 1941, with more than 1,000 of these boys repaying the institution by entering training for the priesthood. In contrast, though having many more Scouts, only 3,000 Protestant awards have been presented since 1945; no record is kept of how many of those boys may have entered the ministry. Since March, 1946, twenty-seven Scouts have qualified for the religious award offered by our church.

In answer to a query by the representative of the Methodist Church which reflected the Methodist Boards questioning of the merit of giving recognition for doing good and particularly for religious effort, Dr. Wyland listed the many different awards that are given men and organizations on all levels, which, while serving only as symbols of services performed, do act as incentives to good deeds. A few of these are Phi Beta Kappa keys, educational degrees symbolized in many colored capes, military medals, and the wartime industrial "E's."

(Continued on page 17.)

Pioneers of the Restoration

Description on the Following Page

"Sic Transit"

THE COMPLETE LATIN sentence is Sic transit gloria mundi—so passes away the glory of the world, meaning, of course, that man's mortal tenure is indeed very limited.

We have recently been reminded of "man's little hour" in the sun by a picture which lately came into our possession. It was arranged by the Ensign Publishing House, William Crick, owner, and copyrighted in 1897. We take pleasure in reproducing it in this issue of the Herald. Since the original is about twenty-four by thirty-six inches, we are forced to reduce it very much.

This picture brought into one photographs of the leading men of the church living and active in 1897, as well as some of those men and women who were identified with the church in an early day. We invite our readers to examine it closely. Here are the names of the persons shown.

Across the top are the pictures of the Council of Twelve Apostles (from left to right): John W. Wight, Isaac N. White, Joseph Luff, Joseph R. Lambert, James Caffall, Edwin C. Briggs, Herman C. Smith, John H. Lake, William H. Kelley, James W. Gillen, Gomer T. Griffiths, and R. C. Evans.

Immediately below are the Presidents of Seventy: John C. Foss, Columbus Scott, John T. Davies, Duncan Campbell, James J. McKiernan, Francis M. Sheehy, and R. J. Anthony.

At the left are shown the church recorder, Henry A. Stebbins (at top); the church secretary, Richard S. Salyards (middle); and Frederick M. Smith (below) who was even then serving as church librarian and in other capacities.

In the middle, across the center, are the three witnesses to the Book of Mormon: Oliver Cowdery, David Whitmer, and Martin Harris.

Next, and to the right, are Joseph and Hyrum Smith (upper); then the late President Joseph Smith, with Counselor Alexander H. Smith (below) who was also Presiding Evangelist, and Counselor Edmund L. Kelley (who was also Presiding Bishop); and George H. Hilliard and Edwin A. Blakeslee, counselors to Bishop Kelley.

At the right of this middle row are Lucy Mack Smith, mother of the Prophet, at the top; Emma Smith, his wife, at the center; and Catherine Smith Salisbury, a sister of the Prophet, at the bottom. "Aunt Catherine," as she was affectionately known, was the only surviving member of the original Smith family when the picture was made.

The seven men in the row below represent various offices in the priesthood. Left to right they are: Alfred White, elder; Joseph F. Burton, seventy; William H. Garrett, high priest; Israel L. Rogers (former Presiding Bishop); David J. Krahl, priest; F. W. Barbee, teacher; and J. A. McGuire, deacon.

On the bottom row are members of the Standing High Council, left to right; James H. Peters, Charles E. Butterworth, Calvin A. Beebe, Robert M. Elvin, John A. Robinson, Charles Derry, David Dancer, Asa S. Cochran, John A. Chisnall, Frederick G. Pitt, William Anderson, and James C. Crabb.

At lower left is Frank Criley, Business Manager of the Herald Publishing House. At the lower right is William Crick, publisher of the Ensign.

Other pictures, beginning at top left are: Hill Cumorah, Brick Church at Lamoni, Stone Church at Independence (2), Old Folks Home at Lamoni, Graceland College, Nauvoo Temple (left below), Herald Office at Lamoni, Ensign Office at Independence, and Kirtland Temple. The Three Books and the gospel ship, "Evanelia," are also shown.

NOW HERE is an explanation of our heading: only one of all these persons living in 1897—fifty-two years ago—is living today; he is the grand old gospel warrior, Gomer T. Griffiths, who is shown second from the right among the apostles.

Brother Griffiths, ninety-three years old and an invalid from age and illness is sorely afflicted by the "archers" of Father Time. He is cared for by a faithful companion at his home in Kirtland, Ohio, awaiting calmly and confidently the final summons. Truly he can say, as did Paul, "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith." And we who have known him so long can surely add: "Henceforth there is laid up for him a crown of righteousness."

Sic transit gloria mundi—the glory of the world passes; but the glory of righteousness lies ahead.

ISRAEL A. SMITH.

NOTE: If any Herald readers desire to do so, they may send Brother Griffiths cards or letters of greeting. His address is Kirtland Hills, Willoughby, Ohio.

Superannuated

Ever since I passed my thirty-fifth birthday, I have been superannuated in the minds of some employers. They didn't say, "You're above the hiring age," but the job went to a younger man. It seemed so ridiculous! Only yesterday these same industrialists turned down my applications because, "We need a man of more experience."

Life is like that—too young or too old to meet the requirements. But I have never been out of work for more than a week or two. Good jobs and fair ladies are not won by the fainthearted. Like many of my brethren, I won't like it when my final superannuation comes, and Father Time is the only one who will make it stick.

C.B.H.

Missionary Techniques for the Layman

O ye that embark in the service of God, see that ye serve him with all your heart, might, mind, and strength . . . if ye have the desire to serve God, ye are called to the work, for, behold, the field is white already to harvest.—Doctrine and Covenants 4: 1.

EACH MEMBER of the church, regardless of race, color, or profession is called to serve. The housewife, student, doctor, laborer, and farmer are all called to win a member for Christ. Your membership in his church makes you custodian of his gospel. It is your responsibility to win your neighbor, friends, in-laws, husband, or wife. Here is how you can do it. Be friendly, prayerful, and lovable; be of service, and manifest a clean heart.

The problem of the church in general is the problem of friendships. The church has always been dependent upon its friends. The larger the church gets, the greater its circle of friends must be if it is to survive.

Each layman is a public relations representative of the church. You are Christ's good-will ambassadors. Each of us needs friends on life's journey. It is not much fun traveling alone, and we need at least one good friend to share life with us. The shuttling back and forth of friendships between ourselves and others, enables us to grow, add virtues, correct weaknesses, and build a more complete life. The sharing of the high goals of the gospel with good friends is the basis of godly living, which is Zion. Life's journey can become a very lonely affair for people who refuse to share the gospel with others, especially selfish and artificial folk. About the saddest words to be spoken of anyone is, "He is friendless and forsaken." About the highest praise is, "He is a friend of God and man."

MANY TIMES the question has been asked, "Should we cultivate friends outside the church?" I have listened to testimonies of our own people thanking God that all the friends they have are in the church. If this be the case with you, then you are poverty stricken, and the church will die when you pass on. A revelation was given to the church as early as April, 1832, concerning this: "And now, verily I say unto you, this is wisdom, make unto yourself friends with the mammon of unrighteousness [or the world], and they will not destroy you."—Doctrine and Covenants 81: 6. Our problem as individuals is to cultivate deep and abiding friends.

The newspapers are full of problems: health, family life, finding the right job, unemployment, running a big business, government, citizenship, and world peace. Deeper insight shows that the real problem arises where human fellowship is involved. We are living in a world of people, and, if we fail here, it doesn't matter how else we succeed—we are still a failure. Anyone who has solved the problem of friendships has solved the problem of his own inner self. One who has learned to share, love, appreciate, and enjoy others is more contented at work and happier at play. He has enriched his joys and erased his sorrows. In a thousand ways the problem of life and the church is the problem of making friends. One who has solved this has lost himself that others might live.

THE BASIC TECHNIQUE for building friends and winning them to the church is self-giving, not self-getting. Learn to live with and for others. Self-giving forbids pretense and artificiality. If we lack friends who are interested in the church, it does not have to be so, because, through lack of knowledge, selfishness, or neglect, we fail to choose them and share the gospel with them. Our Lord stressed this upon a number of occasions. After he cast out the devils from legion, he requested, "Go home to thy friends and tell them how great things the Lord hath done for thee, and hath had compassion on thee."—Mark 5: 16. In the parable of the lost sheep, when the shepherd came home, he called his friends and neighbors together, asking them to rejoice with him because he had found his sheep (Luke 15: 4-9).

By JAMES DAUGHERTY

Without exception, I have found in my missionary experiences, that the people who are baptized into the church and make the best members are those who have had the gospel shared with them by some friend who is a church member. I know of no better method for a layman to make a contribution to the church than to share the gospel with his friends.

TECHNIQUE FOR EACH ONE TO WIN ONE

a. Prayer

The greatest thing you can do for your friends is to pray for them. Prayer will open up the avenue of approach. Prayer will give you the insight and power to move them to God. "And the Lord turned the captivity of Job when he prayed for his friends, also gave Job twice as much as he had before."—Job 42: 10.

b. Love

Love is living good will, with impulse to share with another. It is the attribute of the divine nature of God. In loving your friends, you cultivate the possibility of pain. If they suffer, you suffer with them; if they go wrong, you suffer for them. "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another."

c. Purity

"What you are speaks so loud I can't hear what you say?" is very true in winning members to the church. Purity has to do with the heart. You must prepare your heart to receive the word of the Lord before you can effectively impart it to others. You must have a desire in your heart to win your friends before you can even touch them.

"If ye have a desire to serve God, ye are called to the work."

d. Service

Service is the outward expression of the inward graces. It must be aggressive earnestness in winning men to Christ. Service means self-surrender. You willingly give yourself to Christ and your fellow men. You serve unselfishly in bringing your friends to the church.

"They seek not to establish righteousness, but every man walketh in his own way, and after his own God, whose image is in the likeness of the world."—Doctrine and Covenants 1: 3.

These four principles are irresistible in converting people to the church. When we refuse to tell our friends, we seal Christ's body in the tomb. When we share the gospel with our friends, Christ lives again and again because he lives in every reborn heart.

*Each One
Win One!*

The REORGANIZED
CHURCH of JESUS CHRIST
of Latter Day Saints

TELLING HIM
ABOUT THE GOSPEL
of the
KINGDOM

All Are Called

By JOHN T. PUCKETT

Prosecute the missionary work in this land and abroad so far and so widely as you may. All are called according to the gifts of God unto them; and to the intent that all may labor together, let him that laboreth in the ministry and him that toileth in the affairs of the men of business and of work labor together with God for the accomplishment of the work intrusted to all.—Doctrine and Covenants 119:8.

AS WE recognize the apparent needs of the church, we are made to realize somewhat the purpose of God in our creation. As we look about us, we are made to realize the great responsibility we share with the Lord in bringing the message of love into the hearts of our fellow men.

When we understand that as members of the church of the living God, we have been granted the greatest of all privileges, we will be unable to rest until we have in some way shared it with others. It is our responsibility to share the "news of the kingdom" with our friends and associations.

Must Be in Action

We cannot guide an automobile down the highway unless it is in motion. As long as it is still and we aren't able to set it in motion, we can't guide it to our destination. So it is with the business of building the kingdom. If we want to be a tool in the hands of God, we must set ourselves in motion so that we can be guided by his Spirit. Knowing the theory of the operation of the auto is fine, but there comes a time when that theory must be put into operation if the automobile is to be of value. There comes a time in our spiritual lives when we must demonstrate the theory—a time when we must stop theorizing and start practicing.

As we set ourselves in motion and seek divine guidance, we shall see opened up before us many avenues through which we will be able to bring the gospel to others. "If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not; and it shall be given him."—James 1: 5. Herein lies the keynote of the Restoration Movement—the message we are to bring to the world.

Gaining a Hearing

There are many ways to gain a hearing for the gospel with good people outside the church. In making our initial contact with a prospective member, we must be very careful not to say anything which will cause him to think we are trying "to push our religion upon him." We must gradually but surely shift his interest from that of everyday affairs to the things of the spirit. This may easily be done by watching the opportune time in the conversation to connect the things of the spirit with everyday living. By our conversation we must create in the hearts of people a desire to become better acquainted with God. We must, by our sincere concern for the souls of mankind, convince our friends (not "nonmembers") that we are genuinely interested in seeing them enjoy the better things of life which are made possible only through the gospel of Jesus Christ. We must approach them in the spirit of humility, with prayer and sincerity of heart, with a desire to bring them something that will fill the needs of life and cause them to see the purpose of their creation.

Study the Prospect

We must seek to understand our friends and by so doing win their confidence and respect. To be able to sell an article, the salesman first must win the confidence of his customer so that he will believe the article is of value to him.

We must be able to converse intelligently with our friends on those subjects most interesting to them. Many times this will open up the way for the gospel story to be told. It should be told in terms they understand.

Sociability Important

We must "socialize" with our friends if we expect to interest them in our religion. We cannot "win one" to Christ and his church by being isolationists. We must let our light shine to penetrate the darkness about us so as to guide those who do not have the light. Sometimes we so absorb the light into our own lives that we fail to be guided by its beautiful rays to someone who stands in need. "He hath sent me to bind up the broken-hearted, to proclaim liberty to the captives, and the opening of the prison to them that are bound."—Isaiah 61:1. To fulfill this commission, we must become, along with Christ, a great social worker. We must make use of the very smallest opportunity to show our concern for humanity. In doing this we must make sure there is nothing in our own lives that would hinder interested prospects from wanting to know more of the "kingdom way of life."

Prayer Essential

We should pray for wisdom at all times that God may direct us in our endeavor to be of service. The prospect should pray, too. "I exhort, therefore, that prayers be made for all men; for this is good and acceptable in the sight of God our Savior, who will have all men to be saved, and to come unto the knowledge of the truth."—I Timothy 2:1-4. When we have won our friend's confidence and admiration, he will be ready to listen to the gospel in detail. It has been said that the difference between an actor and an artist is that the actor only acts his part while the artist is a part of the act. To be a missionary for Christ, we must be a part of our act. We must be ever giving and forget the gift. Being a missionary for Christ involves the work of love for humanity, in and through Jesus Christ, and sharing with people his grace through all forms of service. When we make it our mission to be of service to others, we will find that we are being of the greatest service to ourselves.

It is imperative that to implement the needs of the church and bring souls to Christ we unite together and accept the responsibility of witnessing. The field is large and the time opportune. "Let the missionary work be prosecuted with great vigor."—Doctrine and Covenants 134:5. So let us "join in fasting and mighty prayer in behalf of the welfare of the souls of man." Unless we bring joy and happiness into the lives of others, we are entitled to very little ourselves.

Missionary Tips

By Nellie Martin

I HAVE OFTEN BEEN asked for my method of getting the gospel before people. I can't say I have a special method. I try to prepare myself to present the cause to others. I fast and then go to places where people congregate such as large hotels, bus stations, and depots. I take with me some booklets (I use this term since some people do not like the name "tracts") and when I am seated, I ask the Divine One to send someone to sit near me that I may tell the old, old story to. Often someone does come; at other times I must search for a listener. If a person is talkative, I can soon get to the subject of religion. If a mother seems interested but is distracted by small children who want her attention, I take from my bag two little animal books. When they have finished with one, I give them the other. This keeps them still longer and gives me a better chance to talk to the mother.

To be a good missionary, one must be posted in the Scriptures and history so he can quote passages without hunting them up. Anger, gossip, and ill remarks about other churches should never find place in the conversation.

In teaching music, I have had many chances to present the divine law. Also when I taught church school I had many opportunities. Fourteen in Independence who have attended two of my classes have been baptized. In looking over my book, I find I have the names of 651 persons to whom I have presented the gospel since I came to the Center Place. I expect to have seven hundred soon.

Thrilling Gift
For Youngsters!

Storiview Albums

Life-Like 3-Dimensional
Full-Color Picture Stories

OTHER ADVENTURE ALBUMS

★ Great Cities — U. S. A.

★ Great Wonders — U. S. A.

Four wonderful sets of beautiful Storiviews, each showing and telling a complete story. Boys and girls of all ages will love them. Entertaining, educational, inexpensive.

Complete Albums $2.00 each

STORI-VIEWER

For viewing Storiviews. Sturdy plastic, small, light, no moving parts.

$1.50 Each

Ask for complete list of Storiviews and Albums

herald house

Independence, Mo.

Church-Sponsored Scout Troops

(Continued from page 11.)

In relation to questions asked about the failure of some local councils to represent Scouting to the institution the same way it is represented on the national level, Dr. Wyland pointed out that, with a constant turnover of the 2,400 professional Scout leaders now in the field, it is quite logical that many of these men do not yet completely understand this relationship. To help rectify this, the training division is now incorporating in its professional training a greater emphasis on church relationships as well as more information on the methods of approach to churches. In addition, a new Relationships Manual, which will go to all local councils, is under preparation and will be in the field soon.

To answer the question regarding Sunday activities of Scouts Dr. Wyland said, "The Boy Scout Council has no more right to draw twenty-four troops out on Sunday for a Camporee without consulting the church authorities than they do to pull them out of school to fight fire or march in a parade without consulting the school authorities." We were reminded, however, that district and council activities are usually planned by committees which include church representatives.

ON THE first full day the groups were broken up into interest panels. In the Protestant group panel it soon became evident that the dominant question was, "How might the churches most effectively spiritualize Scouting for all of the boys in their church troops?" It was pointed out that there are two types of troops—the "closed" troop, which is limited to members of the sponsoring church in which indoctrination is permissible, and the "open" troop, which, because it may include boys of many faiths, should be conducted without denomination indoctrination but with a very definite religious emphasis. This emphasis should include a responsibility for the spiritual outlook of all boys of the troop as well as provide an opportunity for a missionary outreach to all boys not affiliated with a church. Further discussion brought out:

- (1) That a church troop belongs to the pastor and the church.
- (2) That more help may be needed for Scoutmasters to use in emphasizing spiritual values in the program;
- (3) That more time and attention should be given by troop leadership to the religious award program;

- (4) That after all is said and done, the quality of the religious experience of the boys in the troop will be markedly influenced by the spiritual quality and skill of the man or men in charge of the troop.
- (5) That all of these factors are the responsibility of the church acting through the Troop Committee which it appoints and which is responsible to the church.

On the second day of the seminar, the Catholic and Jewish representatives were invited into the Protestant discussion group, and on the third day we joined with the rural and civic groups. Out of the discussions came these recommendations to the Boy Scouts of America:

- (1) That they strengthen in the basic Scouting literature and leadership training materials the idea of the partnership relation.
- (2) That throughout the Scouting organization more of an ear be given to the customers of Scouting. For example, it was suggested that, on the regional level, leading church men be invited into regional meetings to present and discuss the problems of the church in relation to Scouting in that area.
- (3) That the Relationships Division maintain a closer tie with the youth leaders and boys work directors of the various institutions using Scouting.

As part of the suggested service, it was requested that these officers be supplied with copies of pertinent publications put out by Scouting.

IN TURN, these suggestions were made by the group and by the Boy Scouts of America for our consideration:

- (1) We should give more attention to spiritualizing the boys' camp experiences through the maintenance of camp chaplain service. (Catholics now offer this service to Catholic boys in council camps throughout most of the country.)
- (2) A poster was shown which, when approved by all church bodies, will be offered as the beginning of a publicity program to all troops, particularly those under community and civic sponsorship which will draw the attention of the boys to the religious awards of all the faiths.
- (3) It was suggested that the churches better define their channels and develop their program for educating their church leaders, pastors, et cetera, to a more complete acceptance and a wiser use of the Scout program in the interest of the church.

- (4) Locally, the churches were invited to take the initiative in contacting the council office to clarify their problems and to request council service toward their solution.
- (5) The local church should make more effective use of its institutional representative—the man appointed by the church to represent the church on the District Committee and local Council of Scouting; he also represents Scouting to the church, co-ordinating the activities of the Scout units of the church with the total church program.

Among the invited guests who spoke to us and participated in our discussions were Mr. Ray Miller, public relations counselor to the United Nations who contrasted materialistic religions with the spiritual force of Christianity; a Mr. Davidson, financial advisor to large corporations; he related his moving experience in taking God into his partnership—a relationship which helped him to grow from a "Kentucky failure" to a world-record insurance salesman who also gives outstanding service in his own community; and Dr. Shuck, Chief Scout Executive, who told of his experiences as a Scoutmaster, and who confirmed the desire of Scouting to maintain a partnership relation with the institutions it serves.

A valuable feature of the conference was the daily "Know Your Neighbor" series at which representatives told briefly of their work and of the relation of their church or organization to Scouting. Both Brother Sheehy and I spoke in this series.

Another interesting point revealed by the conference was the fact that our church college, Graceland, is one of forty-three educational institutions in America providing an accredited course in Scout leadership. Graceland was also one of the first junior colleges to organize a chapter of Alpha Phi Omega, a club made up of former Scouts who pledge themselves to serve their school.

The benefits of this conference to our church and to the work of the Master will accrue only as we apply the lessons learned in adapting this splendid boys' program to our own uses, and through Scouting provide boys with our own spiritual philosophy as reflected in the lives of Scout leaders who are devoted to the message of the Restoration and to the building of the kingdom of God on earth.

The Secret of Beauty - By LAURA WILLARD

IN READING a beauty magazine recently, I found a number of exercises for improving the figure. The results promised read something like this: "Fifteen minutes a day will make your hips smaller; five minutes a day will reduce your double chin." Then there were pages on how to wear clothes, dress hair, and apply make-up. All these things, if not overemphasized, are good. It is important for us to be well-groomed and to find an acceptable place in society, but there is one thing the fashion experts have forgotten. They have said nothing about God.

We may take time out for our beauty exercises, but if we do not take time to ask God's direction each day, our trim figures and painted faces will count for little.

Unless we seek God every day, we may soon begin to worry, complain, become selfish, and—worst of all—start finding fault with our family, neighbors, and associates. Day after day, these personality weaknesses will etch lines of discontent and unhappiness upon our faces. People will avoid us. We will be alone and friendless.

WOULD YOU LIKE to be really beautiful? Then turn to God. He will help you to bear your trouble and cares. You may find added responsibilities, but they will be happy ones. You will forget your worries when you realize that other people have them too. As days and years go by, you will find your problems often work out for the best, and you will grow from the experience.

If you seek God you won't be able to complain—you will be too busy thanking him for the things you have. You will want to serve him, and this service will lift you above the monotony of your surroundings.

You will make your home comfortable, but you won't take time to fret over your housekeeping. Your family will appreciate your change in attitude and perhaps be willing to help with the chores that must be done.

You will have no time for gossip, and your thinking will be directed into happy channels. You will be friendly, and others will enjoy being with you. Children will not be afraid of you and, being unafraid, will mind better. You will discover hidden talents which can be put to use in your church and community.

You will not have to worry much about your figure, face, hair-do, or clothes; people will think of you as beautiful because they like you. The old statement, "Beauty is as beauty does," is very true.

The secret of your beauty lies not in exercises, but in asking God's direction each day, then following it. Your body will be refreshed for the tasks you must do. Your eyes will have added sparkle, and you will smile often.

The only way to cultivate true beauty is God's way.

December

We've saved the best 'til the last—here's December. Mother Nature has put all her children to bed and tucked them in with a snowy white comforter. (We hope she will use the snowy white one this year.)

December is so busy, so happy, so exciting, it's gone almost before we know it. Whether we have Christmas packages wrapped before November ends, or whether December jostles us into remembering that we must get busy, it's still fun.

May the gift for our dearest loved one, our neighbor, and the needy be accompanied with the same love that prompted the first Christmas gift, and may they all fit.

Then comes the Christmas greetings—especially that note from an almost forgotten friend, the one that leaves a warm glow in the heart and lasts long after the season is over. Christmas cards are so cheery, so friendly; may no monthly bill rear its ugly head up among yours.

December is home month. The Romans made Vesta, goddess of the hearth, the special deity of the month. Today the warmth and glow of a hearth fire are symbolic of family life and love; at Christmas time we light our hearth fires, put candles in our windows, and decorate our Christmas trees, remembering that we are honoring the birthday of Him who was sent to be the light of the world. It is good the year ends with peace on earth and good will to men.

It's been a nice year, hasn't it? Bye now.

—Lula Carmichael.

Future Features

Many "Herald" readers will be happy to learn that this Column will carry a series of Christmas stories showing how this holiday is observed in lands abroad. Denmark, Holland, Germany, England, Australia, Hawaii, and the South Seas will tell their stories. Don't miss them.

Recipe for a Happy Day

Take a little dash of cold water,
A little leaven of prayer,
A little bit of sunshine gold,
Dissolved in morning air,
Add to your meal some merriment,
And thought for kith and kin,
And then, as a prime ingredient
A plenty of work thrown in,
Flavor it all with essence of love,
And a dash of play,
Let the dear old Book and a glance above

Complete the well-spent day.

—Unknown.

The Home Column

Picked From the Periodicals

By Aarona Booker Kohlman

There is an abundance of interesting material in November magazines. Many features look toward Christmas with ideas for gifts and decorating. Food naturally holds a prominent place.

"Latest Weapon Against Cancer," Women's Home Companion, discusses an important aid to cancer research and treatment, although it is not a cure. Read it if anyone you know has cancer.

"Is Prejudice Poisoning Our Kids," Woman's Home Companion, is an article we wish our women did not need to read. However, as we are not free from the taint of prejudice, by all means read this enlightening account of actual research on the problem.

"New Ways to Fight Anemia," Woman's Home Companion, discusses new hope for anemics in drugs, prevention, and precise diagnosis.

"Susan Makes Cream Puffs," Good Housekeeping, should raise your rating as cook, if you will follow the easy, illustrated directions.

"Club or Church Suppers," Good Housekeeping, is the best help offered in any magazine for a long time for the many women who must take responsibility for serving large groups of people. Both recipes and the steps necessary for organizing such an undertaking are given. Every group of women should save this for reference.

If you think you can't sew, read "Putting a Pattern Together," Good Housekeeping, then follow carefully, and the results should be very satisfactory. Any seamstress might find new ideas in this.

"America Builds Its Own," and "How to Look at a House," American Home, offer help for those who plan to do their own building, or who plan to buy a house. By following these suggestions, they may avoid mistakes that would be difficult or impossible to correct.

If you have a teen-ager, it might pay you to read "Teen-Age Cruelty," Ladies' Home Journal, which is one section of the monthly feature, "Profile of Youth," mentioned in a previous column. Do a little checking up of your own.

"What America Means to Me," American Magazine, is a stimulating article by a former Kamikaze pilot who is now attending college in this country. He makes one hopeful of what can be done in bringing former enemies to understanding.

"Have You a Young Feeding Problem?" Parents' Magazine, deals with that old problem so many parents face. By knowing the facts, you can avoid worry.

"New Facts About Colds," Parents' Magazine, presents a new factor, the psychological, to be considered in fighting this common ailment.

"Derbies Are Male," Woman's Day, is a delightful discussion of fashions, both masculine and feminine, by a man who mixes fact and humor very skillfully. Women especially will enjoy it, for this author exposes some of the inconsistencies of the men regarding fashion.

"Gifts You Make," Woman's Day, is recommended, as all the directions for the articles shown are right in the magazine. No patterns have to be ordered.

"How's Your Blood Pressure?" Family Circle, presents some new aspects of this subject. As many people have incorrect ideas about blood pressure, this is good material for becoming correctly informed.

Herald House

is pleased to announce its appointment as an authorized dealer for

Viewlex

projectors

Model AP-1 $64.50

500 watt lamp. The model illustrated is particularly adapted to cottage meeting and personal contact work, since screen and projector are self contained in one case. It is equipped with a 2" for short throws, but a 5" lens is available for use with a larger screen. Other accessories include a 7" lens and a translucent screen for use in place of the built in opaque screen. The use of the translucent screen allows the audience to sit on the opposite side of the screen from the projector where the operator can face them. A folder describing all 10 models of Viewlex projectors will be sent on request.

WRITE TO

Audio-Visual Dept.

herald house

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI

The Devil's Business

By STEPHEN BLACK

THE DEVIL'S BUSINESS is nobody's business; yet it is everybody's business. This statement at first seems contradictory; nevertheless it is true. When a fellow human being or a tool or a piece of land or an instrument or an animal is neglected and unheeded—when nobody cares what happens to a person or a thing, and no one makes it his business to see that proper care and interest are given to that person or thing—the devil immediately takes over and makes it his business to destroy or corrupt. Soon the person nobody cares about is useless to society, and the things that are neglected waste away until they are no longer useful and cannot fulfill the purpose for which they were made. As long as we use a thing well and take care of it, it will produce the desired results. But if we have something of value and do not use it or take proper care of it, it will soon lose its usefulness. When this happens, the devil is ready to take over. Neglected business becomes the devil's business simply because it has become nobody's business.

Recently I read of a report that the Finnish courts have upheld the title of a will of an Atheist, who bequeathed his farm on his deathbed to the devil. In accordance with the finding of the court, the wish of the deceased is to be carried out by leaving the land absolutely untouched by human hands and allowing it to revert to a wilderness condition. Surely this was an appropriate interpretation, for if we let a farm or a piece of property go untended, it goes to the devil in a hurry. Obviously the Atheist got his wish.

NOT MANY MILES from my boyhood home was a very beautiful golf course. It was laid out by one of the country's leading landscape architects at a cost of hundreds of thousands of dollars and was rated as one of the five leading courses in the entire country. During the depression the country club had financial difficulty and the golf course was returned to the owners of the land. These owners could not agree as to the destiny of this piece of beautiful property, so it was just left to grow wild. A few years ago I went out to see the place which I remembered so well from my youth and found that the fine golf course existed only in my memory, for it had returned to the wild condition in which the architect found it when he began its transformation many years before. Once again neglect, resulting from disagreement, caused a spot of beauty to be left to the devil, and, as always, he was ready to take over. When I saw this beautiful spot grown up in weeds, I could understand the feelings Oliver Goldsmith expressed in his poem, "The Deserted Village." I could see how greed and selfishness play into the hands of the devil. I could see how the world could be changed into a wilderness if enough people followed the philosophy of "I don't care."

The greatest of difficulty is that we let things much more valuable than farms or golf courses go to the devil because of neglect. Many things—our homes, our jobs, our children—are apt to become the devil's business if we neglect them and just let them "run wild." Jesus commanded us to love as he loved; if we do this, neither our dear ones nor our possessions will become the devil's business. However there is great danger that our church, our school, our community, our nation, and even the world will become totally lost because of our neglect and disinterest. Each of us has a responsibility to God. Each of us has a special purpose in his plan of salvation, but it is necessary that we make God's business our business.

LET GEORGE DO IT" is another way of building up the devil's business. Every time we shift one of our responsibilities to someone else, we are opening shop for the devil within our own personalities. We are destroying the reserves and strength that might be ours to help us resist temptations—temptations that are sure to come when we least expect them. When we shirk a responsibility that is ours, we lose the blessing of growth, the joy of serving, and the power that comes to us as we complete each task. If we don't want to encourage the devil in his work, we should break the "Let George do it" habit and never refuse to serve if it is within our capabilities to do the task before us. And we must keep in mind that there are many tasks we can do if we have the courage to try. When we refuse to try, we also help the devil in his business. Let's do the job ourselves, even if we think we can't. Let's have the pleasure of trying, for even if we fail, we will be active and learn from the experience.

WHEN JESUS was ready to start his ministry, he was led by the Spirit into the wilderness to be with God. After he had fasted forty days and forty nights and had communed with God, he was hungry. It was an opportune time, the devil thought, to tempt him by saying, "If thou be the Son of God, command these stones to be made bread." Only those who have gone hungry can appreciate what a temptation this was, but Jesus had the reserve to meet even this great temptation, for he said to the devil, "It is written, Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth from the mouth of God." When Satan reminded him that he had nothing to fear, for it was also written that the Father would give his angels charge over him and bear him up if he should fall against a stone, Jesus answered, "Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God." After the devil had shown him the riches of the world, he said to Jesus, "All these things will I give unto thee if thou wilt fall down and worship me." And said Jesus unto him, "Get thee hence, Satan, for it is written thou shalt worship the Lord thy God and him only shalt thou serve." To resist this temptation Jesus needed certain reserves of power. These came from doing the work of his Father from an early age.

To resist evil we must do good. We must take positive action and be good for something. We must use our talents for good; if we do, they will grow, and we will be helping the Master in his work of building the kingdom.

WHEN YOU SEE a house with a nice coat of paint and well-kept yard, do you ever think, "Somebody loves that house"? Or when you see clean, well-mannered children, do you think, "Somebody loves them"? Does your church have the appearance of being loved? If it does, is there unity within the congregation? Wherever there is strife or neglect, wherever there are talents or materials that could be used and are not being used to help build the kingdom of God, the devil is doing his very best to set up a thriving business. Let's not help him with his evil work. Let's follow the example of the Master and be about our Father's business. Let's tend to our work by living righteously and creatively, for only through righteous and creative living can we upset the devil's plans and dissipate his power.

People Are Mirrors

But Christ Is the Light of the World

By WILLIAM SEARLES

IN THUMBING THROUGH one of my S. A. E. Journals on engineering, I found an editorial entitled "People Are Mirrors" by Norman G. Shidle, which reads as follows:

People are mirrors It isn't really hard to see ourselves as others see us—if we want to. When we open our mind's eye we usually see reflected in the faces, actions, and words of associates much of what they see in us.

Tense, hurried questions provoke tense, hurried answers When we get many such answers, it is a good guess people are thinking of us as tense and hurried.

Do we find others interested in our work, our problems, our troubles? Then people are probably thinking of us as interested in theirs and vice versa.

Even the chosen few who have gained inward peace, inward harmony, may not be seen as comfortable, balanced persons with whom to work and play unless they try actively to reproduce that harmony about them.

Some folks find confidences thrust upon them by strangers as well as by friends. Others find the same people tight-lipped, hard to draw out People are mirrors.

If we don't like what we see, the answer may lie right in ourselves. "If a tire is too soft," says Howard Brinton, "we say the outer pressure is greater than the inner pressure—and we remedy the difficulty by increasing the inner pressure. It would be possible to inflate the tire by lessening the outer pressure, but this could be done only under highly specialized circumstances So, a person being overwhelmed by outside pressures can meet them best by increasing his inner dimensions."

. . . . And change in our "inner dimensions" is likely to be mirrored pretty faithfully by reactions of those with whom we do business.

With the permission of this gentleman, I'll paraphrase his thoughts.

Christ was and is the light of the world. It isn't hard for us to see him as others saw him—if we want to. When we open our mind's eye, we see reflected in the feeling, actions, and words of his associates much of what they saw in him.

Tense, hurried questions received tender, loving answers When they got many such answers, it is easy to see how they were thinking on the prophetic divinity of his person.

They found Christ interested in their work, their problems, their troubles. In turn they were interested in the deep, soul-satisfying lessons he was bringing them.

Even the Master who had gained his peace and had come on to perfection could not be seen as complete unless he fulfilled his earthly mission of bringing men back to God through the gateway of salvation.

He found some men thirsting and eager for the light he could bring them. Others drew back into the shadows of darkness that covered them.

Christ is the light of the world.

Many of the disciples failed to understand what they saw. The answer lay in their hearts as the revelation of the true personage of Christ came to them. If a soul has succumbed to the power of evil, the power of evil was greater than the power of light. We may remedy the difficulty by increasing the power of light through love in the soul. It would be possible to restore the overcome soul by removing the power of evil and destroying the right of free agency thereby, but this is contrary to the will of God. So the restoration of the soul is accomplished by the ever-increasing revelation of Christ to that soul.

The guardian influence of the divine will in the disciples' lives resulted in the preaching of the gospel throughout the then known world and the converting of many to it.

The guardian influence of the divine will in our lives should result in an ever-increasing missionary effort on our part and the true conducting of many souls into the kingdom of God.

Yes, people are mirrors that should reflect the light of the world.

New Horizons

Briefs

BRUSH CREEK REUNION.—Elder Sylvester R. Coleman opened the formal activities of this reunion Saturday evening, August 13. Brother Coleman is the president of the Southeastern Illinois District.

Among facilities available on the reunion grounds is the new combination dining hall and dormitory. The second floor has been spaced to house thirty-five girls. The old dining hall was used as a nursery and business house for teacher's meetings.

Apostle E. J. Gleazer led the daily prayer services. General classwork and lecture period was led by Bishop Leslie W. Kohlman. At eleven o'clock Elder Coleman and Seventy James Menzies taught two classes.

Mrs. Sylvester Coleman and Brother W. W. Calvin led the children's activities in the white church. The women's division was under the leadership of Ruth Wildermuth of Plano, Illinois.

Bishop Kohlman led the evensongs. The young people had their own prayer services each Sunday morning and participated extensively in the general services. R. Edwin Browne from Graceland College conducted Graceland program on the last Wednesday night.

Apostle E. J. Gleazer preached the evening sermons.—Reported by RUBY SLOAN.

LAMONI, IOWA.—On October 16 a ground-breaking ceremony was held for the new church building. Apostle E. J. Gleazer, representing the General Church, spoke to the congregation. Apostle Paul M. Hanson representing the First Presidency, turned the first spadeful of dirt. Bishop Walter N. Johnson, representing the Presiding Bishopric, turned the second spadeful of dirt. Other people, representing various organized groups within the church and community, also broke ground with the silver-plated shovel. On October 17, the actual construction of the new building began.

The Blue Ridge Mission Church Home

The Blue Ridge Mission of Independence, Missouri, was opened August 24, 1949, by Elder L. J. Richards in the home of Brother and Sister Jay Bowser. Thirty-two were present at the initial meeting when these officers were elected: Alice Smith and Leita Rauh, beginner supervisors; Mrs. Dorothea Stewart, primary supervisor; Russell Resch, junior supervisor; Ernest Rauh, adult supervisor; Mrs. Glen Smith, pianist.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl G. Crawford, of Elyria, Ohio, have rented their home to the mission for meetings. The house, located on one of the highest points in Jackson County, has a 200 foot frontage and has three acres of ground. The upstairs is large enough to accommodate seven classes. The living room and dining room, joined by an archway, are used for the main worship room. The full basement, equipped with a gas furnace and an automatic hot water heater, can also be used for classes. The large double garage is used as the meeting place for two classes. Hymnals and metal chairs have been purchased, and a grand piano has been given by Brother and Sister E. O. Petre.

At the grand opening, held October 23, there were 124 people present. One adult has been baptized and several more are ready for baptism in this fast-growing mission.

FAIRVIEW, MONTANA.—Seventy Philip Moore held a two-weeks' series of missionary meetings at the Fairview Branch from September 25 to October 9. They were well attended. It was the first missionary series held in eighteen years at this place. There was an average of over twenty in attendance throughout the services.—Reported by DONIAN HILLMAN.

NORTHWESTERN OHIO DISTRICT.—The annual conference, in charge of District President Alvin Wadsworth, convened at Toledo, October 15 and 16. On Saturday evening the Zion's Leagues, under the supervision of Young People's Leader Edgar Robertson, held a candlelight service at which the officers and supervisors of the Leagues of the several branches were installed. They were introduced by Sister Etelka White of Toledo, while Elder John Booth of Columbus gave the charge. Brother Joseph Willmarth of Toledo played a violin solo, "Romance," by Wieniawski. Following the installation service, Elder Ray Ashenhurst of Kirtland preached. Brother Gerard Willmarth of Toledo sang a tenor solo, "God Lives in My Heart."

Sunday morning at 9 o'clock the Saints met for a service in charge of Elders John Booth and Alvin Wadsworth. The theme, "Witness for Christ," was borne out in prayer and testimony. The fine spirit of unity present carried over into the business meeting that followed.

The following district officers were chosen: Alvin Wadsworth, district president; Etelka White, secretary and church school director; Harry Reis, treasurer; Edgar Robertson, young people's leader; Margery Wadsworth, women's leader; Matthew Liston, musical director; Marian Willmarth, publicity agent; Ruth Smith, historian; Lloyd Lynn, Matthew Liston, Clarence Holmes, auditors; Clarence Holmes, Bishop's agent.

Delegates to the General Conference were chosen.

Dinner was served in the basement of the church by the women of Toledo Branch. A song service, followed by preaching by Elder Booth concluded the conference.—Reported by MARIAN WILLMARTH.

JUST OFF
THE PRESS!

Book Catalog For 1950

ORDER YOUR COPY NOW

INDEPENDENCE, MO.

Bulletin Board

Notice to Members in Vancouver, Washington

Mr. and Mrs. Fuller of Ava, Missouri, will appreciate having members in Vancouver visit their son, Dennis Fuller, who is a patient in Ward 17 of the Veteran's Hospital there.

Wants Priesthood to Contact Sister

Maria Karlstrom, Gotgalan F F, Stockholm, Sweden, will appreciate having members of the priesthood visit her sister, Mrs. Agnes Karlson (age sixty) Route 1, Concrete, Washington.

BOOKS WANTED

E. Y. Rawlins, 221 West Farmer, Independence, Missouri, would like to purchase a copy of the Parson's Textbook.

Mrs. Delpha Marsteller, Butler, Missouri, needs a copy of Carlyle Kueffer's Stories of Our Hymns.

QUARTERLY WANTED

Crawford G. David, 5035 Stratford Road, Los Angeles 42, California, wants a copy of quarterly 761-A, The Divine Purpose in Us.

REQUEST FOR PRAYERS

Mrs. Myrtle LaMaster, Gillette, Wyoming, requests prayers for herself and her afflicted daughter.

Prayers are requested for Harvard L. Dodgett at the Saints' Home in Lamoni, Iowa.

Prayers are requested for Lily Goodwin of Long Island, New York, who is seriously ill in a hospital. Although nonmembers, she and her family are interested in the church.

BIRTHS

A son, Michael William, was born October 13 to Mr. and Mrs. Charles McClain of Detroit, Michigan. Mrs. McClain is the former Yvonne Mousseau.

Mr. and Mrs. William Johnson of Detroit, Michigan, announce the birth of a son, David Lee, born October 16.

Mr. and Mrs. William Stewart of Detroit, Michigan, announce the birth of a son, Jeffery William, born October 18.

Mr. and Mrs. James B. Holliday of Detroit, Michigan, announce the birth of a son, Darryl Ross, born September 18. Mrs. Holliday is the former Dora Belle McKinney, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. W. McKinney of Marion, Illinois.

Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Anders, Jr., announce the birth of a son, Martin Dale, born November 17 at Cedar Rapids, Iowa. Mrs. Anders is the former Lahonta Davis, daughter of Leslie Davis of Moline, Illinois.

A son, Donald Wesley, was born August 11 to Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Cottle of Independence, Missouri. Mrs. Cottle, the former Jean Pederson, attended Graceland College in 1946-47.

Mr. and Mrs. Russell L. McCarroll of Blue Springs, Missouri, announce the birth of a son, Russell Wayne, born November 9 at the Independence Sanitarium. Mrs. McCarroll is the former Helen Campbell.

DEATHS

PALMER.—Dan Wilkinson, was born near Logan, Iowa, and baptized into the Reorganized Church in January, 1890. He was ordained an elder in 1891 in Cedar County, Missouri, and did missionary work in Missouri, Iowa, South Dakota, and Colorado. He died on August 1, 1949, at Warsaw, Missouri.

He is survived by his wife, Mary; five sons: Sherman, Floyd, Wayne, Fred, and Doane; a daughter, Dolpha, of ElMonte, California; eight grandchildren, and three great-grandchildren. Interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery, Independence, Missouri.

BROWN.—John Alexander, was born January 20, 1876, and died May 9, 1949, at Alderwood Manor, Washington. He was converted to the Reorganized Church as a young man when he lived in Independence, Missouri. Later he moved to Washington where he attended first Seattle Branch and then Everett Branch.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Effie Brown; three daughters: Mrs. Bessie Van Dyke and Mrs. Evelyn Sewell of Kansas City, Kansas, and Mrs. Viva Peters of Enumclaw, Washington; two sisters: Mrs. Drucilla Routh and Mrs. Rose Lyons of Neodesha, Kansas; eight grandchildren; and eight great-grandchildren. Funeral services were held at Everett, Washington, Elder Carl Crum officiating. Interment was in Evergreen Cemetery in Seattle.

STUYVESANT.—Roy Glenn, was born December 12, 1919, and died October 3, 1949, at Greenville, Pennsylvania, following an accident which occurred while he was at work. He was baptized a member of the Reorganized Church on June 16, 1948, and had held the office of deacon since April 13, 1949.

He is survived by his wife, Jeanie, and two sons: Darroll and Richard.

ETTINGER.—William James, son of Hugh and Amelia Turpel Ettinger, was born March 3, 1883, in Memphis, Tennessee, and died November 11 at Wadsworth Hospital, Wadsworth, Kansas. He was educated in Portland, Maine, and came to the Middle West in 1913. On April 30, 1917, he married Rowena Nesbitt, and on February 7, 1921, was baptized a member of the Reorganized Church. He was a veteran of World War I, having served as a sergeant in Battery A, Sixth Regiment.

He is survived by his wife, Rowena of Independence, Missouri; two sons: John William of Springfield, Missouri, and Don Nesbitt of New York City; and a daughter, Gloria Gibb of Spokane, Washington. Apostle D. T. Williams conducted the funeral service. Interment was in Woodlawn Cemetery.

TONAHILL.—Albert More, was born October 30, 1859, in Carroll County, Mississippi, and died November 10, 1949. On April 3, 1894, he married Cora Elizabeth White, daughter of I. N. White. In 1898 they made their home in Independence, Missouri, where on September 24, 1899, he was baptized into the Reorganized Church. He was a member of Stone Church congregation and attended services faithfully until ill health prevented his doing so. In 1910 he joined the Independence Police Force, and was captain for twenty-nine years, retiring from active duty in 1939.

He is survived by his wife, Cora, of the home; a son, Forest B. Tonahill of San Diego, California; two sisters: Mrs. Della Holland and Mrs. Bettie Woods of Dallas, Texas; three brothers: Edgar of Whitney, Texas; Joseph of Palestine, Texas; and Benjamin of Hillsboro, Texas; five grandchildren; and five great-grandchildren. Funeral services were conducted by Elders Glaude A. Smith and Joseph White at the George Carson Funeral Chapel in Independence. Interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery.

ZIEGENHORN.—Theodore E., was born December 8, 1863, in Alsace-Lorraine, France, and died November 13, 1949, near Jonesboro, Arkansas. He was baptized into the Reorganized Church on July 28, 1918, and remained a faithful member until his death. On January 1, 1894, he was married to Ida Keller; thirteen children were born to them. Mrs. Ziegenhorn died March 16, 1946, and five of his children preceded him in death.

Surviving are five daughters: Mrs. J. M.

Brownfill of Datto, Arkansas; Mrs. J. H. Greer of Grain Valley, Missouri; Mrs. Harry White, Mrs. Tillie Kieffer, and Mrs. Lorne Schisler of Weiner, Arkansas; three sons: Lorin and Clifton of Earle, Arkansas, and Oral of Wynne, Arkansas; seventeen grandchildren; and two great-grandchildren. Funeral services were held in the Christain Church in Weiner, L. G. Holloway and Giles Turner officiating. Burial was in Weiner Cemetery.

CORLEY.—Amelia, daughter of John and Elizabeth Beam, was born March 19, 1901, at Alamogordo, New Mexico, and died November 12, 1949, at her home in Los Alamitos, California. She was married on July 4, 1916, to Alva O. Corley; six children were born to them. She had been a member of the Reorganized Church since January 25, 1915.

She is survived by husband, Alva; one son, Robert; two daughters: Dorothy Johnson and Ruth Corley; four grandchildren; her father; a sister, Lydia B. Johnson; and a brother, Jesse Beam. Three children preceded her in death. Funeral services were held at the Reorganized Church in Long Beach, California, Elders J. P. Davis and R. C. Leibold officiating. Interment was in the Westminster Memorial Park, Westminster, California.

DARLING.—Ida Josephine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Ringle, was born November 4, 1876, near Canton, Ohio, and died November 11, 1949, at the home of her son, John R. Darling, in Independence, Missouri. In her early youth she moved with her parents to Cherryvale, Kansas; here she grew to womanhood and in 1898 married P. A. Darling. Two sons were born to them: Lawrence, who died in infancy, and John. Mrs. Darling was baptized into the Reorganized Church on July 9, 1944. She was also a member of the Eastern Star Lodge. For a number of years she taught school in Cherryvale. She belonged to the National Education Association and the Kansas State Teacher's Association, of which she was made an honorary life member in 1943. Two years ago she suffered a stroke from which she never fully recovered.

Her only immediate survivors are her son, John, and grandson, John, Jr. Funeral services were conducted on November 13 at the Roland Speaks Chapel in Independence by Elders Glaude A. Smith and A. Neal Deaver, and on November 14 at the Presbyterian Church in Cherryvale, Elder Smith again officiating. Burial was in Fairview Cemetery in Cherryvale.

RAVEILL.—Thomas Wesley, son of Isaac and Elizabeth Ravell, was born December 3, 1863, at Listowell, Ontario, and died November 13, 1949, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Uella McDonough in Warrensburg, Missouri. He was married to Mary Olive Allen on February 17, 1886; five children were born to them. He was baptized into the Reorganized Church on December 12, 1899, and ordained an elder on August 12, 1906. In March, 1901, he and his wife and family moved to Post Oak, Missouri, then to Warrensburg, and in 1924 to Independence. Mrs. Ravell died on February 26, 1949.

Surviving are three sons: Earl of Hickman Mills, Missouri; George of Tulsa, Oklahoma, and Edgar of Warrensburg; a daughter, Uella; two brothers: Edgar of Jacobson, Minnesota, and John of Junction City, Oregon; two sisters: Mrs. Julia Lentz of Lomita, California, and Mrs. Ida Collins of Junction City; nine grandchildren; and five great-grandchildren. One son, Arnet, died in 1919. Funeral services were held at the Roland Speaks Chapel in Independence. Elders Glaude A. Smith and J. T. Mader officiating. Interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery.

IN THIS ISSUE

EDITORIAL:
The Broken Home	3
OFFICIAL:
"The Messiah"	4
ARTICLES:
The Test of Discipleship, by Bishop G. L. DeLapp	5
I Was at Home in the British Mission, by Roy Cheville	9
Church-Sponsored Scout Troops, by Carl Meste	11
"Sic Transit," by Israel A. Smith	13
Missionary Techniques for the Layman, by James Daugherty	14
All Are Called, by John T. Puckett	15
Missionary Tips, by Nellie Martin	16
The Secret of Beauty, by Laura Willard	18
Picked From the Periodicals, by Aaron Booker Kohlman	19
The Devil's Business, by Stephen Black	20
People Are Mirrors, by William Searles	21
Briefs	22
Bulletin Board	23

P.S.

 MORE ON "THE MANSION HOUSE"

A letter from Glen H. Johnson, church appointee in England and Holland, brings an interesting comment on a question asked here:

"The Lord Mayor of London lives in a building called the Mansion House. This is just across from the Bank of England . . . Yesterday Raymond Gunn of Fort Madison, Iowa, and I saw the Lord Mayor's parade. It always rains on the Lord Mayor's Day, and the weather repeated the performance again this year. The first number the band played was, 'It Ain't Gonna Rain No More.' Imagine that! They played it in a pouring rain. A good show!"

 REMEDIAL JUSTICE

Very recently a Kansas City judge tried to put some sense into the head of a man on trial. While drunk, the man had hit and seriously injured a pedestrian, which will cost months of suffering and endless expense. There was a clear account of the accident in the newspaper, and the judge required the prisoner to read every word of it before the court and witnesses. The man did so haltingly and unwillingly, but he was forced to go through with it to the end. Thus he was obliged to review and recognize the enormity of his own deed.

So many reckless drivers never read the papers about car accidents. So many drunkards never read anything about liquor or alcohol. The schools teach them to read, but they never do it unless they are forced. If every drunkard and reckless driver were required to read in public a clear statement of the sordid details of his offense, we might see a reduction in traffic fatalities and trouble from liquor.

 A MISSIONARY SHIRT

A new nylon shirt on the market should make life simpler and happier for our missionaries. Wherever they go, there is the problem of shirts, the need of enough clean white ones, the laundering of the soiled ones. This nylon shirt can be washed and rinsed in luke warm or cool water in any washbowl and hung on a clean coat hanger to dry. It never needs ironing, and should not have a hot iron applied to it. Because the fiber is smooth, dirt is removed easily. Because it does not absorb moisture, it dries in an hour. The traveling man may take only the one he is wearing, wash it at night when he goes to bed, and put it on in the morning clean and fresh. Only trouble is that one costs nine dollars, but that is saved in laundry bills and in the rough usage that shortens the life of a cotton shirt.

 NOTES

The hard bread of adversity must be cut very thin to be appreciated.

Discouragement and unhappiness often come from a sick or tired body, rather than from the mind or external conditions.

Much depends on how you set up your emotional tone and feelings for the day. If you lead with a smile, determined to like people, enjoy your work, and look for beauty in the world, it can be a wonderful day. But if you let yourself be critical, think ill of other people, keep your eyes on the ground, and observe only the ugly things, you can make yourself very miserable.

We Repeat . . .

Special
Christmas Gift Rates

on the

Saints' Herald

It's time to start thinking about Christmas gifts . . . and a wonderful gift for any of your friends is a year's subscription to the Herald. Save time and money by ordering gift subscriptions now! Our special gift rates save you up to 50c a subscription over regular rates! And we'll send a beautiful gift card with your name on it direct to your friends' homes. Make your Christmas gift list out now . . . fill in the blanks below and send your order today! Give the Saints' Herald this Christmas!

My gift card should read: From

Name

Address

City State

I enclose $..... Charge my account

Send one year of SAINTS' HERALD as my gift to:

Name

Address

City State

Name

Address

City State

Name

Address

City State

ONE SUBSCRIPTION (your own, new or renewal, or one gift)	$3.50
CANADA	$3.75
EACH ADDITIONAL GIFT SUBSCRIPTION	$3.00
CANADA	$3.25

THE SAINTS'

Herald

VOLUME 96

DECEMBER 12, 1949

NUMBER 50

*He who ascends to the Mountaintops,
Shall find
The loftiest peaks most wrapped
In clouds and snow.*

—Lord Byron

Photo by Mrs. Daniel Binns

Guest Editorial

This week the Herald presents Apostle Reed M. Holmes as guest editor. The vicious use of money to pervert a nation to the slavery of appetite and habit is the subject he discusses. Newspapers, magazines, the movies, and radio are grabbing for the millions which are available to tobacco companies for advertising. They are biased witnesses. Latter Day Saints needn't quibble about cigarettes not being as harmful as liquor—they usually go together and sleep in the same bed. It does not matter which forms the opening wedge. We should know that "tobacco . . . is not good for man." Period, and that's that. Don't let the "Trojan Horse" throw you or your son and daughter.

December 15

Forty years of service will be completed by the "Sanitarium" this week. An overflow crowd gathered in the reception room on the first floor of the original building for the formal opening services in 1909. President F. M. Smith presided over the meeting which began at 2:30 p.m. with the singing of the hymn, "Guide Us, O Thou Great Jehovah." Elder W. H. Garrett, of the stake presidency, gave the invocation. The opening speech was made by Bishop E. L. Kelley.

Mayor Llewellyn Jones spoke feelingly in appreciation of the institution. Heman C. Smith read a paper tracing the history of the project up to that date. After a duet by Myra Brackenbury and Violet Hughes, Elbert A. Smith spoke on combining the spiritual and physical methods in treatment of the sick.

Dr. Joseph Luff, church physician, was the next speaker. He told of his refusal to take over the management of the Sanitarium until he had received divine evidence that it was the Lord's will. This direction came only two days before. "My first thought is to make this a spiritual house. My first duty in it is as a minister and servant of Jesus Christ. My second business will be to perform and direct such medical services as I believe to be consistently supplementary to the great divine thought as I have been made to digest it and assimilate it within myself."

He pledged to all doctors, ministers, and persons, of whatever school or faith, the fullest co-operation and promised that every facility of the institution would be available for their benefit.

Dr. N. P. Wood and Dr. Joseph Mather followed with their tributes. The final speaker was William Southern, Jr., editor of the Independence Examiner. Editors have a way of getting the last word.

The board of trustees was composed of F. M. Smith, E. L. Kelley, George Harrington, George H. Hilliard, Ellis Short, Roderick May, and Joseph Luff.

News & Notes

ZION'S LEAGUE

Fourteen plays were presented at the Stone Church Little Theatre during the nineteenth Annual Zion's League Drama Festival held in November. The Stone Church Teen-Age League, the College Street Teen-Age League, and the Enoch Hill League won "A" ratings. Carl Mesle was in charge of the week's activities. Play judges were Mrs. Estella Moore, Mrs. Nina Maloney, and Mrs. Maurine Crownover. Certificates of merit were awarded to all Leagues participating in the play contest.

ZION'S LEAGUE

City-wide Zion's League held a Thanksgiving Communion service at Walnut Park Church on the evening of November 23. This service was planned by the city-wide League Worship Commission with Miss Bernie Fleeharty in charge assisted by the local League worship chairmen. The Communion talk and invitational prayer were by Apostle Reed Holmes, the call to worship by Joe Crum. Two vocal selections were sung by Bob Sparks, and the statement of purpose was given by Carl Mesle.

Testimonial talks were given by three people: Bill Whenham representing Teen-age Zion's League, Elaine Parks representing Senior Zion's League, and Ray Zinser representing the college and university students. Ceberth Young was in charge of the ushering.

There was an attendance of 350 Leaguers and visiting college and university students at this service.

MUSIC

The Community Music Association of Independence, which includes many R. L. D. S. members, presented a concert by the Trapp Family, famous Austrian singers, at the Memorial Building, November 28. The program was divided into five sections, each featuring a special class of song and music. Several unique and ancient musical instruments were used during the concert. Almost 1,200 people attended the program.

PRIESTHOOD TRAINING

The Priesthood School in Zion began November 29, the Aaronic priesthood meeting in the Stone Church and Bartholomew Hall, and the Melchisedec priesthood meeting in the Liberty Street Church.

The Aaronic priesthood meeting is under the direction of Bishop Harold Cackler, and the instructors are A. K. Dille, Don Lents, and Leslie Kohlman, and Elder Glaude Smith. Subjects of discussion will be "Ministry of the Priesthood," "Ministry to the Erring," and "Ushering."

The Melchisedec priesthood meeting is under the direction of Elder Dan Sorden, and the instructors are A. K. Dilly, Don Lents, and Lloyd Bland. The subject of discussion is "Ministry in the Home."

ANNOUNCEMENTS FOR "THE MESSIAH"

Carl Mesle, city-wide supervisor of young people's activities, is attempting to send announcements of the radio performance of "The Messiah" to all district presidents, branch presidents, and church appointees in time for them to make announcements in their own immediate communities. This is a large task and could not be accomplished if it were not for the willing assistance of the service commission of the Zion's Leagues of Independence.

THE SAINTS' HERALD

Volume 96

December 12, 1949

Number 50

EDITORS: The First Presidency; Israel A. Smith, F. Henry Edwards. ASSISTANTS: Leonard J. Lea, Associate Editor; Chris E. Hartshorn, Managing Editor; Kenneth L. Graham, Business Manager.

The Saints' Herald is the official publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, with headquarters at The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri, and is issued through the offices of Herald Publishing House, 103 South Osage Street, Independence, Missouri.

Entered as second-class matter at the post office at Independence, Missouri, under Act of March 3, 1879. Issued weekly at Independence, Missouri. Price, $3.50 per year and $1.75 for six months in advance in the U. S. A., its territories and possessions; Canada, $3.75 per year and $1.90 for six months; other countries, $4.50 per year. Notice of a change of address must be given three weeks ahead of the date that it is to become effective. Accepted for mailing at the special rate of postage provided for in section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized July 21, 1921. Printed in the United States of America.

Another Trojan Horse

IF THE TOBACCO PEOPLE have their way, it will only be a question of time. Until what? Until all the kids on the block will be smoking—including your own! One of the slickest selling jobs in history has succeeded. In the words of the cigarette advertisers, "An ancient prejudice has been removed." It is now considered quite ladylike and proper to be pictured with cigarette in hand and with smoke exhaling from the mouth and nostrils. Smoking for women wicked? It is being done! And that for some is the only test of morality.

Men have been conquered, and now women too. What field is left to conquer? In the mind of the cigarette manufacturer, the best field of all—our children. Let the habit start early and tobacco has them for life. The inveterate chain smoker is the manufacturers' "ideal man."

So a Trojan horse has been contrived. Liggett & Myers has a scheme for recruiting high school smokers. Any high school can secure, free of charge, eight-page football programs in color. There are action pictures, and, of course, a big center-spread advertisement for Chesterfield. These are free if the high school agrees to use them throughout the season. Repetition is still good advertising practice.

At first there is no mention of advertising—just the appeal to the economy-wise principal or coach. The program has the feel of the big-time game. In truth, it is like the college program. The Trojan horse has already released his contents in the universities. "Voted Tops in American Colleges" is a familiar ad headline.

The makers of Chesterfields want and expect results. A load of money is being spent. They want more recruits for the nicotine parade. They want your children.

REMEMBER the sly transition from the glamorous Turkish women on advertisements to the smart set pictures of today, with women smoking and being offered cigarettes by approving men? Equally sly transitions will be made, using our youth.

Many high schools have already been seduced into this inconsistency of stressing athletic programs for health while courting the Trojan scheme to destroy health.

Let's love our children a little more. We can encourage them to stand firm against the invitation of friends to smoke. In other ways we can make "no-smoking" the ideal. But we need to go beyond this. Isn't it good Latter Day Saintism to stand up for the right in our communities? If our community has fallen for this tobacco propaganda we should speak up against it. We should let the tobacco concerns know they are up against some sales resistance in "our town."

Maybe this sounds like small stuff to you. There is a world to evangelize and a Zion to build. Well, dollars are still made of pennies and bombs are made of atoms. Zion will be made of children.

I believe there are some exterior signs of our Sainthood which ought to mark us as a peculiar people. These can be symbols of our larger integrity and righteousness. When the majority choose to smoke, it is peculiar not to smoke. We can be a peculiar people in this and many other ways.

Of some things we need to be intolerant. Frankly, I am prejudiced against this attack on your children and mine.

R. M. H.

Tobacco Advertising Is Misleading

I have always opposed the pernicious advertising that extols the "benefits" of tobacco using. While I was training for my second fight with Jack Dempsey, I was offered $15,000 to endorse a certain brand of cigarettes. I didn't want to be rude, so in declining, I merely said I didn't smoke. Next day the advertising man came back with another offer—$12,000 if I would let my picture be used with the statement that "Stinkies must be good, because all my friends smoke them." That compelled me to say what I thought—that cigarettes were a foul pestilence and that advertising which promoted their use was a national menace.

I am here reminded of the Metropolitan Opera tenor whose picture was blazoned on billboards with this joyful declamation: "Gaspies Do Not Hurt My Throat." When asked about it, he laughed and replied, "It is true: Gaspies never hurt my throat—I don't smoke." Such misleading advertising I cannot rap too hard. It is dangerous, particularly to our 35,000,000 young people.—GENE TUNNEY. (Used by permission of the author and Reader's Digest.)

Smoking Is Chicago's Greatest Fire Hazard

Careless smoking resulted in greater loss of life and property in Chicago last year than any other fire cause, according to a release from the Greater Chicago Safety Council.

Smokers' materials touched off almost 3,000 blazes, which was 22 per cent of all fires in the city during 1948. Smoking in bed and tossing away lighted matches before extinguishing them were cited as chief reasons why smokers caused so many fires.—Union Signal.

E d i t o r i a l

Des Moines Choir to Broadcast "The Messiah"

The Des Moines (Iowa) Branch Choir, composed of 125 voices, accompanied by the Graceland College Symphony Orchestra, will broadcast Handel's The Messiah over Station WHO (1040 kilocycles), National Broadcasting Company, on Sunday evening, December 11, at 11:00 o'clock.

Wilbur Chandler will direct, and Lucian Stark will be at the organ. Soloists are Mrs. Norma Van Zee, soprano; Miss Shirley Mason, contralto; Mr. Henry Anderson of Graceland College, tenor; and Mr. Olaf C. Lund, bass.

HERBERT M. SCOTT,
Pastor, Des Moines Branch

Agricultural Courses at Graceland

Graceland College wants to know how many young men and women of the church would enroll in agriculture if such a course were established at the college.

For several years college officials have been aware of a demand for an agricultural course and have looked forward to the time when it could be offered. Now, they believe it would be possible to establish a two-year agricultural curriculum if the demand for such warrants its establishment.

As now visioned, the curriculum would be designed particularly for students who would be entering farming as a vocation after their two-year Graceland experience. Providing the demand warrants such a move, the College hopes to establish the course beginning with next year's term—in September, 1950.

The course would be similar to those offered at schools of agriculture but specifically designed for Graceland's clientele. Graceland is admirably located for such a program—near the center of America's farm belt with its widely divergent types of agriculture. The Graceland farms adjacent to the campus would be utilized for the course.

High school students and others who would be interested in enrolling in a two-year curriculum in agriculture at Graceland College either next fall or later are urged to write the Director of Public Relations, Graceland College, Lamoni, Iowa, expressing their interest.

R. EDWIN BROWNE, Director of Public Relations.

Work on the Auditorium

Contractor Harold McClain (with the trowel) preparing the surface to place another slab of Bedford limestone on the upper part of the building. These stones weigh approximately twelve hundred pounds and are 4'1" x 5'7" x 4" in size. Two men on top of the thirty-two foot derrick lift the stone with a winch while the foreman (standing) guides it into place.

A pylon which has all the facing stone in place. This one is in the middle of the circular part of the building to the west side. Only the exterior walls above the office level of the Auditorium are being finished in the present project. After these walls are completed, the flat roof will be resurfaced and the dome reconditions. Other details of the work will be found in the Herald of October 17.

Guide Lines Enlargement

Beginning with the January issue, Guide Lines to Leadership will be published alternate months instead of quarterly, as heretofore. At the same time the field of Guide Lines will be enlarged to include material of interest in all areas of church endeavor: priesthood, women's leaders, religious education workers, Zion's League supervisors, music directors, et cetera.

Major editorial responsibility will be carried by C. B. Hartshorn and Naomi Russell, who will work in close association with the Presidency and Elder Floyd M. McDowell, Director of Priesthood Education; Elder Reed Holmes of the Department of Religious Education; and Sister Pauline Arnsion of the Department of Women.

We are pleased to announce this improved service to those who share between them the burden of local leadership. We hope and believe that Guide Lines will soon be more welcome than ever as a bearer of tested and inspiring leadership counsel.

The subscription price is $1.50.

THE FIRST PRESIDENCY,
By F. Henry Edwards

www.LatterDayTruth.org

The Unobserved Kingdom

By CHRIS B. HARTSHORN

A sermon preached at Walnut Park Church, Independence, Missouri, October 16, 1949. Recorded by Milo Barnhart

And when he was demanded of the Pharisees, when the kingdom of God should come, he answered them, The kingdom of God cometh not with observation; neither shall they say, Lo, here! or Lo, there! For behold the kingdom of God has already come unto you.—Luke 17: 20, 21. Read also Luke 7: 19-22 in connection with these passages.

come and his will be done even on earth as in heaven.

We must know first what we are trying to build and have a unity of opinion as to the goal we are trying to reach. I hope I may be of help to some who are having problems with the concept of the kingdom of God here upon earth.

WHEN THE CHURCH was in its infancy, there came to it a group from another organization that had been practicing a type of community life. They called themselves "The Family." Joseph Smith said this group practiced "the common stock principle." In Church History, on page 169 of the first volume, is an extract from The Times and Seasons of his day, in which he says, "that the common stock in what was the family was readily abandoned by us for the more perfect law, and the false spirits were discerned and rejected by the light of revelation." From the days of Pentecost, when a small group of people seemed to be living in a communal state and using a common treasury, up until recent years, good Christian men and women have been trying to imitate what they interpreted as being a part of the gospel of Christ in operation as recorded in the second chapter of Acts. However, it only illustrates what Joseph said in this remark quoted from the Times and Seasons—that there was need for more light. In all of Paul's epistles, and the general epistles to the church written by James, Peter, and John, one cannot find a repetition nor any mention of this idea. So far as we know, the common-stock principle was in the picture of the New Testament church only momentarily, and it has not been in the picture of the Restoration Movement.

When the disciples were on their way to Emmaus on the third day after the Crucifixion, a stranger joined them. He heard them saying, "We thought it had been he who would have redeemed Israel" (Luke 24: 20). Their grief and disappointment expressed in those words arrested the attention of the stranger who joined them on this road. Then he asked them more particularly about the cause of their lament. I think we have those in our own day and time who are saying much the same concerning our past leaders, Joseph Smith III and Frederick M. Smith, "We thought it had been he who would have redeemed Zion." Some have been discouraged. Some have said they have been disillusioned because they had thought of Zion, the kingdom of God, in a way that had not been realized under the leadership of those two great men.

Now, I do not think we need to feel this way. It's not at all impossible that these men responded to the needs of their day the best they could. The prophet discerns the needs of the times and goes ahead. If he goes too far, he loses the people. We only observe the conditions

A MIDDLE-AGED MAN came to our church in Des Moines, Iowa, and introduced himself. He was from a neighboring church which had the title, "Church of God," on the building. He wanted me to answer one question for him. "Is there a difference between the kingdom of heaven and the kingdom of God?" And I told him, "None that I knew of." That was all he wanted to know. He was evidently not too well-satisfied, for in his mind there was a great difference.

Perhaps it was a good question; perhaps he was just meticulous, finding points of difference over a word. But in Latter Day Saint terminology we add some other terms which seem to have very much the same significance—"Zion and the redemption of Zion." In all these terms we are perhaps thinking about one and the same thing. There may be some minor differences, but as yet I haven't been able to make the distinction in my own thinking.

Many of you are familiar with the Negro spiritual, which has a line in it, "All that's talking about heaven ain't going there." Well, I think a great many who are talking about Zion or the kingdom of heaven have something of the same problem. No man can build that which he cannot conceive, and one of our first problems is building the kingdom of God here upon earth, as Jesus taught us to pray that his kingdom should as they are, and often, when we fail to realize certain goals that we fix in our own thinking, we become discouraged. William J. Lampton wrote a verse he entitled, "He Is Not Unworthy." I commend the sentiment to you in connection with the progress the church has made, for in the mind of any unbiased nonprejudiced investigator, the church has made great progress. Sometimes it is obscured because we have our eye on a high goal whereas we are following along down close to earth.

If one has failed to reach the end he sought,
If out of effort no great good is wrought,
It is not failure if the object be the betterment of man.
For all that he has done and suffered to attain
Is but gain to those who follow on,
Seeking to attain the end he sought.
His efforts, they will find, are but guideposts on the way
To that accomplishment which he for some wise purpose could not be the factor in.
There is need of unsuccessful effort,
'Tis the seed whose mission is to lie beneath the soil
That grows the laurel wreath.
And he is not unworthy who falls
Struggling manfully to do what must be done in dire distress
That others may attain success.

I THINK OF EDISON. All of you have read about some of his inventing experiments, how many times he tried and failed to make a battery. When accused of being wasteful of money and effort, he replied that he had succeeded in finding many ways that wouldn't work. But he finally found a way that would work. I think we ought, therefore, to be encouraged in the progress we have made. We have found a lot of things that wouldn't work. I'm sure those of you who have been around Independence any length of time can recall some experiments we have made which were not highly successful, but they were not failures either because they pointed out some ways we can avoid mistakes.

In my youth, I heard several prophecies given by some of the stalwarts of the church in which they used this expression many times: "The coming of the Lord is near at hand, even nearer than you think." In the mind of a boy, it was a long time from New Year to Christmas, and when they told about Christ's coming being nearer than I thought, they didn't know my mind. It has seemed a long time, and Christ isn't here yet, but I'm not discouraged. I think I can see more clearly why he hasn't come. Perhaps at that he will get here before some of us are ready.

The Apostle Paul, in his experiences came in contact with a group of Saints in Thessalonica who were taking too literally the promise of Jesus' return. As a result, many of them were selling their possessions, and, like the Adventists a few years ago, they were putting on their best robes, expecting any day that the Lord would come, and that as a result of his coming, they would no longer need to work. If you'll read II Thessalonians 2: 10, you'll find that Paul was trying to meet this situation. "Now we beseech you, brethren, by the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, and by our gathering together unto him, that ye be not soon shaken in mind nor troubled by letter [Others had been writing to them and stirring them up with expectations which were not justified.], except ye receive it from us; neither by spirit nor by word, as that the day of Christ is at hand. Let no man deceive you by any means; for there shall come a falling away first" In the ninth verse he repeats that very same thing. "Yea, the Lord, even Jesus, whose coming is not until after there come a falling away, by the working of Satan with all the powers, and signs and like wonders." A rule laid down (this is in the third chapter and the tenth verse) that "if any would not work, neither should he eat."

A rather strong statement, but necessary because of their misunderstanding. Here they were, waiting for the Christ. They wanted a kingdom of God, ready-made, handed down from heaven. And he was telling them of many things to transpire before that takes place.

IN 1909 I attended the first General Conference that I could stay all the way through. They spent three days discussing the auditing committee's report. On the eighteenth day of April, 1909, a revelation was given to the church which I think we need to read and reread, because it has to do with this matter of the kingdom of heaven. It is Section 128. In paragraph four these people were told that they were to consult with the elders and the Bishop before removing into those regions, and that such removal may best be accomplished through having all things prepared before. In the fifth paragraph the Lord states that this should not proceed faster than the people where they were moving were willing to receive them; for he says that only as many are to gather "in one region as may be practical and profitable and in accordance with the feelings of the people under the laws existing in the places where such settlements are to be made."

In the eighth paragraph of this same section he calls our attention to this:

That these organizations contemplated in the law may be effected and the benefits to be derived therefrom be enjoyed by the Saints, in such enjoyment they cannot withdraw themselves so completely from the qualified dependents upon their Gentile neighbors surrounding them as to be entirely free from intercommunication with them.

Here are pictures of the kingdom of God which we need to see. We must live with our Gentile neighbors and have them esteem us as children of God.

Three weeks ago yesterday I was in Chicago. We had a conference group to discuss certain matters concerning the church and its program. We got down to one problem that those present seemed to be very interested in. They asked, "What can we do to get the church going on a Zion program?" Well, that's a rather difficult question. I wonder how you would answer it? I'm not too sure I gave the best answer, but I did point out some things that were implied in their question. They wished to be directed in certain specific work and given certain assignments they might do in the program of building Zion. Many feel that way. They are waiting for some economic demonstrations they can point to and say, "This is Zion. Now Zion is redeemed. Now we're working in Zion." Well, if the kingdom of God consists of wood, stone, projects, land, and things like that, then perhaps this is right.

When the young ruler came to Jesus and said to him, "Good Master, what good thing can I do that I might inherit eternal life?" he had the same question, practically, that was asked of me. What thing can I do? Now does Zion consist of doing one thing? If so, what kind of a thing? Many people are asking that question.

I hold in great respect my brethren who make it their primary concern to find out what one thing they can do that will advance the cause of Zion. They are my brethren. I am not trying to discourage nor disparage their work, but I do ask the right to give my own interpretation and emphasis to the building of the kingdom, and I don't think that any type of economic unit is a prerequisite to having the kingdom of God. I stand with those who believe that the thing I do is secondary and not primary in emphasis. I'm going to try to spend the rest of the hour telling you why.

I WANT TO READ to you from the writings of Matthew as he records Jesus' statement:

Therefore take no thought, saying, What shall we eat? or what shall we drink? or wherewithal shall we be clothed? Why is it that ye murmur among yourselves saying, We cannot obey thy word because we have not all these things, and seek to excuse themselves, saying, that, After all these things do the Gentiles seek. Behold I say unto you that your heavenly Father knoweth that ye have need of all these things. Wherefore, seek not the things of this world, but seek ye first to build up the kingdom of God, and to establish his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you.—Matthew 6: 35-39.

Now if Jesus had conceived that our method of getting things to eat and raiment to put on were primary, I do not believe he would have made that statement. Don't worry about things—your Heavenly Father knows you have need of them—but seek ye first to establish the kingdom of God and his righteousness.

We have to work and communicate with our Gentile neighbors in the Gathering Movement. In Section 128 the Lord went on to say that in carrying into operation the details of organization, the Saints are "to be in the world but not of it, living and acting honestly and honorably before God and in the sight of men using the things of this world in the manner designed of God, that the places where they occupy may shine of Zion, the redeemed of the Lord."

The revelation given to us in 1947, known as Section 140, has further application of this same thought. It has been quoted many times in part, and I want to repeat just that part.

The work of preparation and the perfection of my Saints go forward slowly, and Zionic conditions are no further away nor any closer than the spiritual condition of my people justifies, but my word shall not fail, neither will my promises, for the foundation of the Lord standeth sure.

Never were truer words spoken, and no prophet ever uttered more sublime thoughts. In the conditions that surround us, it's the spiritual condition we need to pay attention to.

I have not said that economic units do not play their part. I think it is important how we make our living, but if we will live honorably and honestly among our fellow men, we will develop a spiritual condition that will bring Zion near to us. I'm concerned that our Gathering Movement has not been more efficient. I'm seriously concerned about it. But our greatest lack is in growth in personal righteousness. This is the same lack that existed here when the Saints tried their first experiment in 1831. In December of the year, after they had been driven out in the month just preceding, the Lord told them what their trouble was. That too has been given in your hearing many times, but I want to remind you just once more that he does not charge them with failure to establish group stewardships or economic units for making their living and for advancing the cause of the church. The thing troubling the Saints most at that time, as it is today, is summed up in this third paragraph:

Behold, I say unto you, there were jarrings, and contentions, and envyings, and strife, and lustful and covetous desires among them; [How could God build Zion with such a people?] therefore, by these things they polluted their inheritances.

Read the rest of it. It says that in the days of their prosperity they were slow to "hearken unto me," but in their days of adversity, when the hands of their Gentile neighbors were raised against them and they were driven from their homes, then "of necessity they feel after me."

It is my concern then that our people take more seriously this matter of personal righteousness. I'm not worried about these brethren who differ from me on the matter of whether it's primary or secondary in importance. It's in the picture that we must organize ourselves and establish our stewardship, but the spirit of the thing is important. There's no one "good thing" in the whole picture. These brethren are not working against Zion because they put as primary that which I think is secondary. The people who concern me are those who have come to Zion to please their wife, or just the reverse. Maybe the husband belongs, and the wife doesn't care anything about our Zionic ideals. Or maybe the children of the second or third generation are careless. There are nine thousand people listed on our records as being Latter Day Saints. Our churches will hold only about four thousand of them, yet even at our best services we usually have room for a few more. Now there are a great many here who have "named the name" but are doing nothing about it, and they're the ones who are going to bring our inheritance into disrepute if they are not very careful. I'm heartened by the priesthood movement to visit in the homes of these people and get them to see the importance of putting first their own living in righteousness.

I HEARD Percy R. Hayward in a talk nearly two years ago tell that soon after he had become a minister he returned to his boyhood home up in Nova Scotia. Sunday came while he was on a little island in the Bay of Fundy. He went to church and was asked to preach a sermon, and he did—the only one he had prepared. Then he went a hundred miles up the river where his folk lived, and the following Sunday he was asked to preach. Well, he thought nobody would be there who had heard this sermon, so he would preach the same sermon he used the previous Sunday. As he went into the pulpit, too late to shift his program, he saw one old man who had been down at the church on the island. But he went ahead and preached the sermon and at the close he went to this old gentleman, held out his hand, and apologized for causing him the pain of having to listen to the same subject again. The old gentleman patted him on the shoulder and said, "Now, just don't let that worry you at all. I didn't believe it when you said it the first time, and I don't believe it yet."

I think something like this happens among Latter Day Saints when we preach the necessity of disciplining ourselves, of making first the kingdom of God and establishing his righteousness with all these other things that are necessary being added. A brother said to me not long ago, "The kingdom quality of life is more than personal righteousness. If it weren't, the world wouldn't need Latter Day Saintism. All churches are talking about personal righteousness." There's some truth in that, but there is a challenge in this church on the basis of personal righteousness, the quality of life, the kingdom quality of life, that no other church has. I don't think it's found primarily in matters of land or wood or stone. Those are secondary in importance. The primary thing is to be so devoted to Jesus Christ that being known in this community as Latter Day Saints will stand for something. We're a little bit different in righteousness, in the qualities of life, than many of those who have not found the gospel.

Many denominations have given this secondary emphasis that I have mentioned and claimed that the most important thing in religion is a community of people, who, because of some peculiarities of their form of organization, or their dress, or beliefs which they present to the world are the children of God. And I refer to the Shakers, the Seventh-Day Adventists, the Mennonites, and the Mormons. And by a great many criteria these people in their devotion, in their sacrifice, in their accomplishments in economic success can outshine us. We do not cast any aspersions against them, but I don't believe you can prove where God's divine favor rests on that basis alone.

Jehovah's Witnesses tell us that Christ came to the earth again in 1874 and that he was "enthroned King of Kings" in 1914. We're living in the millennium. Did you know that? They'll tell us we are. Well, that was right at the beginning of the First World War, and we've had another terrible holocaust since then. If Christ is living here now, what about that little season at the end of the millennium? What's going to be turned loose on us then?

When Nicodemus came to the Master and asked him the way of life, Jesus laid down the rule, "Ye must be born again." Except we're born of the water and of the Spirit, we cannot even see the kingdom. The trouble with too many is that they cannot even see the kingdom of God, because they haven't been born of the Spirit. To them it is material; it is matters of association and organization. But our text says "the kingdom of God cometh not with observation." It's not something you can put your finger on and say, "Now we have it," or "we don't have it." It's a constant fight against the devil and the forces of evil that would discourage us and cause us to follow after the ways of the world.

SAINTS AND FRIENDS, let's not longer halt between two opinions. Make Jesus your Lord. He is in this work. We've made great progress since that conference when we spent three days arguing about an auditing committee report. We have made some progress in developing our economic units, in getting people prepared for stewardship, in living together in the gathering movement. If the day does not come soon when the bishop will see fit to place some capital at the disposal of certain persons to work out experiments they may wish to try, that's not any reason why we should be discouraged. That might not bring Zion any closer than it is right now. It's "the spiritual condition of my people" that determines the distance away from Zion's redemption.

I want to close with an incident that happened in my life when I was a young priest doing visiting work in the church. Brother Keir and I went to a home in the city of Chicago to visit a wife and mother who belonged to the church. The father was a teamster, and, like a great many teamsters who had to drive horses and mules, he was a bit profane. He was also a little profane with his family when it came to things religious. He had no time for the church. We hadn't been in the home very long until he made his presence felt—not in a very good way. He wasn't the courteous host we had hoped to find. He was grumbling around, calling his wife's attention away from the meeting we

(Continued on page 22.)

On Fixing Responsibility

By KAY McNEIL

THE COMPLEXITY of our modern way of life often leads us to an oversimplification of our duties as citizens; we sometimes tend to feel that if we ourselves are good, honest, and industrious, we have performed everything that could be expected of us. "We mind our own business" to such an extent that if the weather happens to be uncomfortable, or something makes it inconvenient, we do not even bother to vote. Yet, because we do live in a republic, and for better or worse, votes are counted, we have a great responsibility in the matter which we cannot escape. Inexorably, responsibility for events which transpire in a republic must be laid upon the shoulders of the voters.

"I Don't Care if It Never Rains Again"

A little group of Latter Day Saint young people sat in shocked silence when a girl from the city, also a Latter Day Saint, told them she wasn't interested in the weather. It was during a drouth period in the thirties.

Finally one recovered sufficiently to answer:

"I'm glad the rest of our church people in the cities are not as hard-hearted as you. Do you want us to starve? Where do you think our food is coming from if it doesn't rain and the crops fail?"

The girl who didn't care if it never rained again merely shrugged. "You can do as my folks do," she said, "you can get your food from the grocery stores."

She was only sixteen and had given the food problem little thought. She had not figured how the stores would stock their shelves if the general drouth continued. Hers was an extreme example of the stupidity which says that misfortune can strike some, and not, in some way, affect others. So long as she was "good," she reasoned, and managed to do her work well, there would automatically be food for her to buy.

Is It My Business if Other People Drink?

I don't believe in drinking strong drinks myself. After all, the Doctrine and Covenants plainly says we should not indulge. How does other people's drinking concern me?

Like other people, I often ride in cars and on buses. I've taken particular note of accidents lately, and it is appalling how often one of the drivers involved is under the influence of liquor. Your own daily newspaper will bear out the truth of this statement. Altogether too many accidents are the result of a driver who miscalculated his ability to drive safely after a few drinks. Many victims are school-age children. I have a little girl in the fourth grade.

My sons will at times be offered intoxicating drinks at social or business functions, and it may be hard for them to refuse. It will be made to seem almost a breach of etiquette to say "no." That their negative answer will bring them more praise than censure from the best people will not make it much easier for them at the time. My daughter, I hope, will attend school beyond the comparative safety of high school and Graceland. What will she meet in university life? I've asked some of our frank young people about this. They seem to agree that only a small minority do not smoke and drink. The victims of drink are not all killed or maimed physically.

My Neighbor's Child

I am always interested in my neighbor's children, for anybody in the world is a potential neighbor. Not long ago I heard a child scream. It was time for the youngsters to be coming home from school, and my own second-grader had not arrived. Putting on my coat, I went to investigate the disturbance which seemed to be growing worse. I found a number of children, my own among them, surrounding a bedraggled and forlorn looking little girl; they were pelting her with sticks and little chunks of mud. The majority of these children were in a church school class I had taught one time.

"We didn't hurt her," they defended themselves. "We just hit her on the coat, and it was already torn and dirty. We wanted to hear her yell. She yells so funny."

My own child was asked to apologize. She did so, reluctantly, and the rest disappeared. We walked with the little girl until we came to our home. I found what her name was, and that she lived only five or six blocks from us. I asked her to come in and get warm and let me clean some of the mud from her coat, but she only looked at me in a dumb, unbelieving way and walked on.

I could not forget her. Where had I seen such big, sad eyes in such a thin face? Suddenly I knew that she reminded me of a picture I had seen of a little Jewish boy whose parents had died in a concentration camp. I found out more about the family the next day. The father was a good worker and earned a reasonably good wage, enough to have kept his family of six comfortably. But he spent most of it in a local tavern. He brought some of the beer home, too. The first words the eighteen-month-old baby learned to say were couched in a sentence: "Pass the beer."

I called on the mother. Their home was a three-room shack which an old-age pensioner shared with them in return for the care which the mother gave him. The rooms were as clean as one could possibly expect when a mother has five small children, no conveniences, and water must be carried from a distance.

My little girl had been admiring the whisky and beer advertisements in a woman's magazine. So that evening I made an errand to this home where beer shed its "glow of hospitality" and took her along.

Their meager supper was just ready, so we did not stay long. The kerosene lamp did not give much light, but it was enough for her to see the contrast between her home and theirs.

"Mommy," she said to me on the way home, "I'll be nice to that little girl after this." She was silent a moment. I mentioned that the little girl's father spent his money for beer. By and by she spoke again.

"Mommy, those people that write the ads in that magazine don't really know where beer belongs, do they?"

Yes, "Beer belongs—" but where?

Shortly after this I busied myself helping the W.C.T.U. circulate a petition which would be sent to the state legislature, urging the passing of a local option bill. I decided I would do everything I could to help get the taverns out of our town. Then some Christmas, instead of the basket of food our community sends them, perhaps we can give these children back their father.

Not an Isolated Case

If any reader thinks the preceding story represents an extreme case, let him note the daily papers continuously with the thought in mind of checking on similar tragic circumstances. Last night I ran through our local daily, The News-Democrat, with this idea uppermost.

The entire first column was devoted to the story of one Mr. Thomas, the father of seven small children, who had been sentenced to prison for the term of two to four years. The case concerned the fatal shooting of another man in a tavern called "Toddle Inn" (and we can't laugh because they stagger out) in East St. Louis. Mr. Thomas had been a railroad fireman, but hadn't worked for a long time. At the time of the shooting, he had been made bouncer at the tavern, where he spent much of his time and money. In this occupation, it seems he carried a gun; he maintained in his defense that he was jostled "during a me-lee," and the gun went off accidentally. The head of the American Legion petitioned that the court grant probation, speaking highly of some of the man's qualities; and a grocer who had known him for ten years said he was good to his family. But others testified that he brought very little of his insurance check home; that the taverns got the most of the money; and that the man himself spent little of his time at home.

When Mr. Thomas was sentenced, Mrs. Thomas, a trained nurse, and mother of a premature infant who is in an oxygen tent in St. Mary's hospital, broke down and wept.

So much for column number one.

Headlined on columns two and three of the front page is the story of Andrew Betts, a negro laborer, who drew his pay one evening and went directly to a tavern, where he drank steadily. (They knew he was "a mean man when drunk," yet the liquor was made available to him.) After a time, Betts grew excited, drew his gun and brandished it around. The tavern operator called the police, and when they tried to arrest him, Betts, more excited than ever, fired repeatedly killing two of the officers of the law.

"I was scared and drunk," he said afterwards, and that he spoke truly is evidenced by the fact that he chose to hide in the vault of a latrine, where he sank in filth to his shoulders. No sane person would think of such a thing, but the death sentence is being asked for him.

On page nine is a story of an unemployed trucker who bought and resold whisky to teen-agers on a dime a bottle commission basis in order to finance his own drinking. He was sentenced to six months. A short item, but it may have a number of sequels throughout the years. What of those teen-agers? Six months are soon over. What will the trucker do then?

On the back page we find a story of the "Taverns' case over gambling." The taverns want the liquor commission to be restrained "from denying liquor licenses to saloons suspected of harboring gambling."

"The temporary injunction sought by the tavern owners would prohibit the liquor commission from inquiring into the qualifications of a license applicant."

There's a good item on page one also. It's about the state of Oklahoma, the state that for the sixth time has defeated the "wets," and is preparing to rid itself of all bootleggers and even of the weak beer that is still legal there.

Next we find an item about a man who knew something about fixing responsibility. His brother had assaulted him while crazed with drink, but instead of blaming his brother, the man is bringing suit against the tavern operator who sold the liquor. What about the society that tolerated the tavern?

All of these news stories were in the daily dated September 28, 1949. Some issues do not have so much news concerning liquor; but if you watch any city daily for a few days, you will find many such items. Add to these the drab stories you can easily unearth yourself of warped personalities, unhappy homes, undernourished and poorly-clothed children, and you cannot help sensing that the sales of intoxicants is like a cancerous growth, sapping the strength and morale of our citizenry. History tells us over and over that more nations fall because of internal decay than from all other causes. If we would be true patriots, we must strike hard at the insidious evils that so often masquerade under a cloak of respectability.

"Men of Distinction"

Probably many of you have read the clever editorials in the Christian Science Monitor concerning the "men of distinction" who drink. Wet interests are definitely roiled. It is to be hoped that they will develop a mental complex which will prevent them from further attempts to glamorize the consumption of liquor.

"The United States Commerce Department reports that Americans spent $9,600,000 for alcoholic drinks in 1947." If this money could have been used for our public school system, the horde of youngsters now coming on might be given a better educational opportunity. Yes, the government does collect a tax on these sales, but is the tax net profit? What of the reduction in earning power, and, hence, in tax returns from other sources? What of money paid out in aid to families of resulting derelicts? What of the weakened bodies and characters of the young people who may be called upon to stand between us and disaster in some future war, perhaps against an enemy numerically many times stronger? What of the thousands of lives crushed and ruined by the disease of alcoholism? Consider the sorrow, the insanity, the incompetence, the wrong channeling of our financial and economic assets, and then think whether or not we are adding enough to our national treasury to justify a continuance of this industry from any point of view.

If you know any man of distinction who drinks, it is suggested that you observe him for a while and see what happens to his personality and life before following his example.

Is It Smart to Drink?

The clever advertising of the brewing companies would have us think so. In the ads, liquor is always served under the most pleasant circumstances—in the glow of firelight or the peace of a rose garden at twilight or other beautiful settings. The appointments of the room or garden are always luxurious, charming, and colorful. The people who drink are full of poise and self-control, and a fine glow of friendliness broods over the scene.

Story writers have added their talents to that of artists in furthering the cause of the brewers. I realized this more fully than ever when, not long ago, I had to analyze the short stories in several current magazines as an assignment in a course in short-story writing from a state university. To my chagrin, one of my favorite magazines, which I had thought good because of the informative articles and had encouraged my own young people to read, had no single short story in which the leading characters did not drink or smoke or both—usually both—and the drinking was not moderate in many cases. Now and then a character would admit, laughingly, that he was "a little high." Seldom does one admit that he has been drunk. He intends to drink only moderately, to relax himself, to enhance a social occasion. ("First the silken cord, then the hempen rope.")

If one delves into the literature put out by brewers for tavern operators, he becomes increasingly aware that the brewers are fully cognizant of the fact that a taste for liquor, once acquired, means increasingly large sales.

The thoughtful reading of the stories in some of our best slick paper publications, even more than the consideration of some of the moving pictures I've seen, has convinced me that we are going to have to be very alert if we save our youth from these evils. A person becomes what his philosophy makes him, and vast interests are very much alert, very busy, and very willing to pay huge dividends to others who will aid them in shaping the philosophies of our young people and bending them to their own profit.

Is it smart to let anyone make up your mind for you? Is it indeed smart to drink? Many physicians do not think
(Continued on page 19.)

Interesting Personalities:

Nellie Martin

Missionary Teacher

SISTER MARTIN, when you get as old as I am, you won't be walking gingerly up the street, swinging your arms like a high school girl," remarked a quivering old woman to Mrs. Nellie Martin.

Mrs. Martin opened her blue eyes very wide and looked pityingly at her friend. "How old are you?" she asked.

"Sixty-two," was the answer.

"Good-by; I'm eighty-one." That was two years ago.

"I don't have time to wail about my age," she says. "I want to spend the rest of my life serving my people, and that's why I have so much to do." This neat, white-haired, little woman of eighty-three years seems to have spent most of her life so far doing just that. Today she teaches piano and violin to more students in Independence (mostly among children of our church families) than she can handle easily. She walks all over the city to give her lessons, because she gave her own piano away.

She always carries her little handbag in which she places church tracts. "I never go out of my home without organizing some tracts." Often she fasts and prays before leaving her apartment, asking that if there is anyone she should help she wants to be able to do so.

Nellie Martin has a long background in the church. Her grandmother was driven out of Independence in "the purge." Her fund of true stories has made the gospel live for young people throughout many years.

Telling the story and living the gospel has not always been easy. One Monday, many years ago, she sat in a china-painting class. The ladies had been telling about the church services they attended the day before, and one woman said, "Everyone has told where she has been except you, Mrs. Martin." When Sister Martin told that she was a Reorganized Latter Day Saint, she started a two-and-a-half-year "program" of ill remarks about the church from her classmates. But she didn't give up the china-painting course until it was finished.

SHE WENT to Simpson College in Indianola, Iowa, for two and a half years and to Highland Park College in Des Moines, Iowa, for a year and nine months. Her interest was music but she learned enough of arts and science to enable her to teach fifteen terms of school, including all the grades. She went to the St. Louis College of Music, studying the progressive series and fourteen instruments. She can play all strings and keys, including the organ. She began teaching music regularly at eighteen and has been doing so ever since. With a degree of pride she occasionally shows a student one or two of her seventeen volumes of gracefully handwritten "Theory of Music" covering fields of study from Palestrina to the minor seventh. She still "out-fingers" any of her students on their piano exercises.

Of her students in Iowa, sixty-four were baptized into the church. Since moving to Independence, Missouri, fifteen years ago, she has given fourteen pupils to the church. Besides telling the gospel to her students, she has a book—her most recent one, she notes—with the names of about 700 people to whom she has told the gospel story in the past fifteen years. Many of these people she has met on her travels and with most of them she has had no contact since. However, she has learned on occasion that persons to whom she has thus talked have contacted our church people in their home towns, as she encourages them to do, and many have become members of the church. She likes to go to such places as hotel lobbies and talk to people who open a conversation. She has given away hundreds of tracts in hotel lobbies and on trains. Her little handbag is always ready.

WHAT IS HER METHOD of talking to people about the church? "In the first place," she says, "I don't walk up to people and hand them a tract. I fast and pray before I go from my home—prepare myself to meet people. I don't begin my conversations by talking to people about religion. I visit with the person and find his interests. As soon as the opportunity presents itself on the subject of religion, which is often the case, I begin gradually, waiting for the right time to say what I want to."

At eighty-three her eyes are good, and she reads much. Her knowledge of the Scriptures is one of her strongest supports when she speaks to others about the church—she knows what she is talking about.

The mind of this woman is fortified not only by the Scriptures, but by many other things of worth. When others talk about their churches, they find she knows as much or more about them than they do. When they express their interest in any field, whether it be art or politics, they find an informed conversationalist.

Her sense of humor is sly and she is modest. Once an acquaintance said, "Nellie, aren't you sorry you didn't learn something besides music when you were young?"

"I suppose you're right," answered Sister Martin. When the luscious apple pie was served for dessert a friend said, "Mrs. Martin baked it." When the acquaintance admired her dress, the friend said, "Nellie made it."

Her students and many of her friends have oil paintings she has made in their living rooms. Today on the walls of her apartment hang many such paintings in the process of completion. It's part of her service to "her people," just as is her excellent music instruction respected today by musicians in Independence.

She has composed hymns and popular songs, has played the organ in many churches, taught church school classes, and given lectures on art, music, religion, and politics.

She is the mother of three daughters who are all professional women. One is in Seattle, an art critic for a china company; one is a schoolteacher in Los Angeles; and one is a registered nurse in Topeka, Kansas.

Asked where she gets her robust health, she looks at you as if you should know better. "I follow the Word of Wisdom. I go to bed early and get up early, get lots of exercise, and eat properly. Never touch tea and coffee—and don't eat too much—enough, but not too much."

Serving and living happily, this woman of many talents and many friends finds the years over eighty as full and fascinating as the years before.—By SADI MOON NAGEL.

The First Messiah Choir

IT WAS THIS CHORUS of 130 voices which first sang The Messiah for the April Conference of 1916 under the direction of Albert N. Hoxie. The nucleus of the group was formed by the Stone Church choir and other Independence singers who had been trained by Mrs. George H. Hulmes.

The following December 28, when the first Christmas presentation was given under the direction of Mrs. Hulmes, the conference visitors who sang with the April group were of course, not present, but other singers had been added to make the group total 160.

No picture was ever taken of the December group and no printed program or official list of the singers in this April group is now available. Therefore, while the two groups were not exactly the same, this picture is the nearest approximation of a picture of the "first" Messiah Choir that can be had thirty-three years later. Several people are not now identifiable, in most instances because they were conference visitors and not well known to the people available in Independence to check this photograph. If Herald readers can supply any of the missing names, or correct any identifications made, Messiah Choir officials would like to receive them in order to complete their list for historical purposes. Address correspondence to Messiah Choir, The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri.

Front Row: B. R. McGuire, George Deane, tenor soloist; Mrs. Wallace N. Robinson, soprano soloist; Albert N. Hoxie, Director; Ed Bell, Ethel Kinnaman, contralto soloist; Paul N. Craig, bass soloist.

Second Row: Walter W. Smith, John Zimmermann, Jr., Charles Chase, Douglas Flanders, Eugene Christy, ———, H. E. Moler, George H. Hulmes, Levi Burrus, Joseph G. Smith, John Dowker.

Third Row, Men: R. Bachelor, ———, A. O. Hodges, ———, Clarence Resch, Harvey Anderson, Mark Siegfried, Jess Roberts, Will Zimmerman, Charles Shepherd, William Gaulter, R. L. Brackenbury, T. J. Elliott.

Back Row, Men: George Bartholemew, Jack Custead, D. J. Krahl, Russell Hunt, ———, Arthur B. Church, Harry Barto.

Pianists: Ruth McMullen (left), Mary Kinnaman (right); Organist, Amy Winning.

Soprano (left side) Front Row: Mrs. Joseph Mather; Second Row, Doris Anderson, Nell Kelley, Henrietta Campbell, Lila Sterrett, ——— (Hidden); Third Row,

Soprano (left side) Front Row: Mrs. Joseph Mather; Second Row, Doris Anderson, Nell Kelley, Henrietta Campbell, Lila Sterrett, _____ (Hidden); Third Row, Gertie Clow, Mrs. George H. Hulmes, Ruth Fisher, Mrs. Ed Bell, Gladys Closson, Della Mae Cox, Fernell Briggs, _____, Mrs. A. G. Haberlein, Blanche Allen Needham, Carrie Barbee; Fourth Row, Mary Steele, Lilly Belle Allen, Pearl Flanders, Melissa Etzenhouser, Birdie Sterrett, Belle Beal, Ethel Blake, Mrs. Orlin Blake, _____, Mrs. R. L. Brackenbury, Louise Farr, Marcine Smith; Fifth Row, _____, _____, Dorothy Rushton, Mildred Mather, _____, _____, _____, Bessie Nesbitt; Sixth (Back) Row, Jeanette Craig, Hettie Harvey, _____, Bertha Steele, Anne Hicks, Mrs. Bush, _____, _____.

Alto (right side) First Row: Audentia Anderson, Louise Robinson, Madge Nesbitt, Second Row, Gladys Newton, Louise Geisch, Emma Smith, Vivian Weed, Mrs. Alma Rannie; Third Row, _____, Jeanette Myers, Mrs. Rufus Smith, Amy Parker, Velma Brocaw, Grace Koehler, Grace Taylor; Fourth Row, _____, Mrs. John Isaacs, Martha Warnock, Lillian Zimmerman, Alice Smith, _____, Jessie Stewart, Mrs. William Anderson, Edith Orrick, Gladys Elliott, Ola Stobaugh, Lulu Lentell; Fifth Row, Pearl Hobart, Mrs. Albert Knowlton, Flo McNichols, Myra Brackenbury, Nell Brocaw, Irene Brackenbury, Hazel Brackenbury, Mrs. Reese Wells, Delpha Lewis; Sixth (Back) Row, Mrs. L. E. Hills, _____, Mrs. Mark Smith, Nena Young, Ruth Holman.

Messiah Choir 1916-1949

THE MESSIAH CHOIR of Independence, Missouri, owes its existence to the vision and foresight of one woman who, during the Christmas season of 1916, looked down the years and envisioned a chorus which would sing The Messiah at each Christmas season, adding to its tradition and its musicianship with each succeeding year of performance.

During the early months of 1916, Mrs. George H. Hulmes, or "Cordie" as she is still called by almost everybody who knows her, was director of the Stone Church Choir. At the suggestion of Albert N. Hoxie she recruited, organized, and trained a group of 160 singers, who then sang The Messiah under the direction of Brother Hoxie for the General Conference in April. Three performances were necessary to accommodate all of the conference crowds who desired to hear this oratorio. This was the beginning of the Messiah Choir.

In the fall of that same year, Mr. Earl Rosenberg, director of the Kansas City Symphony Chorus, issued an invitation to this group of Independence singers to join in a production of The Messiah in old Convention Hall in Kansas City. The invitation was accepted, and long in advance of the date of performance, the ticket sales in Kansas City indicated that there would be a sell-out crowd. People seemed to be hungry to hear the spiritual and musical message of The Messiah during that time of stress and war.

Mrs. Hulmes found an idea slowly taking shape in her mind. She had a chorus of 160 voices.

Soloists were available. Why not provide an Independence performance of The Messiah as a Christmas gift to the community and repeat it every year until it became traditional? The plan found instant favor with the chorus members. Mrs. Wallace N. Robinson, Mrs. Ella Van Huff, Mr. George Deane, and Mr. Paul N. Craig were chosen as soloists, and the first Christmas performance was given in the Stone Church on the night of December 28, 1916. Mrs. Hulmes was the director, Miss Amy Winning the organist, and Miss Ruth McMullin and Mr. Robert Miller, pianists. There was no admission charge; not even a collection was taken since the chorus wanted this to be a Christmas gift to the community. Incidental expenses were met by a small assessment of the chorus membership.

The following evening the Independence group joined with other singers in Convention Hall where The Messiah was greeted by a crowd that packed the hall; many stood, and almost a thousand were turned away because there was not even standing room inside.

Each year since then (with the single exception of 1920, when health regulations prohibited a performance because of a threatened smallpox epidemic) the tradition first envisioned and begun by Mrs. Hulmes has been carried forward with another Yuletide performance of The Messiah. This year will mark the thirty-third annual presentation. Mrs. Hulmes continued with the group until 1923, when she yielded the baton to Paul Craig. Mr. Craig continued as director for twenty years, or until the 1943 performance, when he was succeeded by Mr. Franklyn Weddle. Mr. Hulmes has served as business manager and president of the organization throughout the thirty-three years. Robert Miller was organist for twenty-five of the thirty-three performances, and many other people have established enviable records for continued service. Nine charter members still continue to sing with the chorus: Mr. and Mrs. George H. Hulmes, Mrs. Elizabeth Phillips, Mrs. Cleo Salisbury, Mr. Clarence Resch, Mrs. Alice Smith Edwards, Mrs. Corrine Haines French, Paul Craig, and Zaide Bush Young. The registration this year totals 280 singers, mostly from Independence and Kansas City but some from other towns thirty to sixty miles away.

This year, for the eleventh time, the Messiah Choir will be heard by a nation-wide audience over the Columbia Broadcasting System from 10:30 to 12:00 midnight, Central Standard Time, on the evening of Sunday, December 18. The accompaniments for this performance will be played by forty-three selected musicians from the Kansas City Philharmonic Orchestra; Mr. Weddle will direct. Soloists will be Josephine Crinklaw Mader, soprano; Harriett Porter Moore, contralto; Garland Tickemyer, tenor; and John Macdonald, bass. The traditional performance for the people of Independence will be given in The Auditorium on Christmas night, accompanied by the Independence Symphony Orchestra. Soloists for this performance will be Elizabeth Wilkinson Vaughn, soprano; Donald Pyper, tenor; Jeanette Nichols, contralto; and Herbert Lively, bass.

AS I SEE IT

A department for replies to debatable topics printed in the Herald. The views expressed here do not necessarily reflect church policy nor commit the Herald or its editors. Our limited space does not permit us to print many articles on the same topic.

—EDITORS.

The Land Shadowing With Wings

By C. ED MILLER

THIS ARTICLE is written in defense of the interpretation made by many of the brethren that Isaiah 18: 1-3 refers to the continents of North and South America. We will term this the "standard" interpretation. Some new material and the accompanying map will be offered to substantiate this analysis.

The subject seems to be a favorite one with the Herald writers. That erudite, optimistic, eighty-eight-year-old elder with the youthful mind, C. J. Hunt, wrote an article captioned, "America in Prophecy," which was published in the issue of August 14, 1948. He quotes from Presbyterian Reverend R. C. Shimeall's book, The Second Coming of Christ, as follows: "This passage, Isaiah 18: 1, instead of 'woe to' should read Ho! the land of shadowing wings, et cetera. This prophecy . . . can refer to none other so emphatically as to the U. S. A."

Whether the word is translated woe or ho makes no difference to the affirmative, but if translated ho as a salutation instead of a curse, it makes a lot of difference to the negative.

Our church historian, Elder A. B. Phillips, sent me the following:

Woe. The same Hebrew word is used in Isaiah 29: 1, 15 and 30: 1. Strong's Exhaustive Concordance renders it, Oh! Ah, Ho, O, Woe. It is akin to "Owy" and has something of the sense of an exclamation or an interjection, sometimes of lamentation, or crying for, or desire; hence has a rather wide use as such terms at times have in English usage.

The Hebrew version of the Masoretic Text renders the word Ab as does the American Revised rendering.

Rabbi Isaac Leeser, of Philadelphia, translator of the Hebrew Bible, says the prophecy in the eighteenth chapter of Isaiah, "Ho to the land with spreading wings" is a prophecy relating to America. In the July 25, 1949, Herald is an article, "Choice Above all Other Lands," which contains much original material the editor commends highly. In the September 19, 1949, Herald in "Question Time" the following is asked: "What is the basis for our interpretation of the land shadowing with wings as applied to America?" Bishop James F. Keir supplies some very convincing Bible texts to support the "standard" interpretation.

IN THE OCTOBER 31, 1949, Herald is a well-written article on "The Land Shadowing With Wings." The material is very skillfully arranged, but its premise is faulty, and thus arrives at erroneous conclusions, as we shall prove. This article challenges the "standard" interpretation of the text and contains this surprising assertion: "There is nothing in the prophecy to indicate that Joseph's Land was 'the land shadowing with wings.'"

It is well for all of us to remember cautious Bobby Burns' counsel.

In 1897 the Christian Publishing Company printed a book written by the Reverend D. H. Bays, minister of the Christian (sometimes called Campbellite) church. The book is an attack against the Reorganized Church and its tenets. Alexander Campbell never was reconciled to the fact that the Lord used the very young man, Joseph Smith, to restore the gospel instead of himself. In 1837, seven years after the Lord had restored the gospel through angelic authority, Campbell wrote in his Millennial Harbinger, "We have had the Gospel and Christianity restored on paper and in speech; we want to see them living, moving, and acting on the stage of time on a larger scale and with more brilliant light and power than has hitherto appeared." Reverend Bays tries to negate our standard interpretation the "land shadowing with wings." He makes this concession:

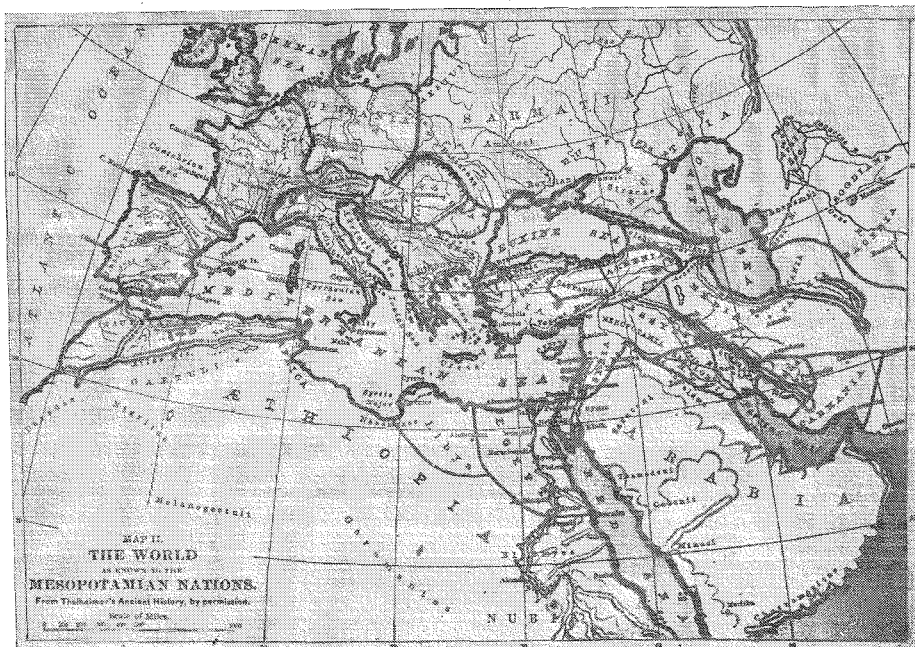

If the country described in Isaiah 18: 1 as "the land shadowing with wings" be America, and if the twenty-ninth chapter relates to events that were to transpire on this continent, and which as a matter of fact, did take place as predicted, then all candid people will readily concede the fact that the Book of Mormon is probably true.

Later he contends if the interpretation advocated by some of the Latter Day Saint ministers is false, then the Book of Mormon is not true. Neither the Bible nor the Book of Mormon stand or fall upon certain men's interpretations of certain texts. We quote Bays again:

Woe to the land shadowing with wings which is beyond the rivers of Ethiopia. [Italics his.] The land here described lies beyond the rivers of Ethiopia from Palestine, where the prophet resided. What direction is Ethiopia from Jerusalem? Directly South, as may be seen by any good map of Africa. The "rivers of Ethiopia" are the rivers of Africa. Hence the land described is Egypt, not America.

It is thus shown to be simply impossible that America can be "the land shadowing with wings" for the very cogent reason that the land thus described lies south of Palestine, while America, as every schoolboy knows, is directly west.

There is something else every intelligent schoolboy knows about the facts of geography, that is, geography changes through the years. The writer of the article, "The Land Shadowing With Wings" (Herald, October 31, 1949) makes the same mistake as Bays. He thinks the land referred to is Egypt, not America. Isaiah was referring to geography as he knew it. He was living about 700 B.C., in the days when the Assyrian nation was in existence. Thalheimer and Ridpath both locate Ethiopia in the northern part of Africa west of the river Nile and its tributaries. Bays admits that the rivers of Ethiopia refer to the Nile and its tributaries. A straight line from Jerusalem west to the Nile is about 325 miles. The tributaries of the Nile are spread out like a fan about 180 miles in width.

This assertion is made in the article referred to:

There is nothing in the prophecy to indicate that Joseph's Land was the "land shadowing with wings." However, because North, South, and Central America form the image of a great bird or something like the outstretched wings of a great Eagle, it is easy to believe that the prophecy refers to the Americas.

For over a hundred years many of our able ministers believed there was something in the prophecy to indicate that Joseph's Land was "the land shadowing with wings." The writer admits it was easy to believe that the prophecy refers to the Americas. It is easy to believe because the facts of geography unerringly point to the Americas.

The question to be settled is, Where did the geography of Isaiah's day locate Ethiopia? Now look at the map published by Ridpath and Thalheimer. All of the northern part of Africa was represented as being known as Ethiopia. What a colossal blunder Bays et al make in basing their arguments on modern geography.

While Chamber's and Johnson's encyclopedias locate the people of Ethiopia as occupying a land beyond the southern parts of the known world, the more ancient Assyrian maps make it definite; Ethiopia was located in the northern part of Africa. Isaiah, in vision, looking across the Nile's many tributaries over the land of Ethiopia, saw a land not as modern geography shows it in colors divided off into countries and states but in silhouette having the appearance of the shadow of a great bird. Yes, it is easy to believe, when the facts of geography are appealed to.

The writer says, "Let us not forget that the king of Assyria and his people were called 'the rivers.'" Whether we use hyperbole or spiritualize the prophecy, the interpretation is the same. We will quote the prophecy, substituting people instead of rivers. "Ho to the land shadowing with wings which is beyond the people of Ethiopia." The prophecy still points to the Americas. The map shows that Africa bears the same relation to Ethiopia that Rhode Island does to the United States. It was anciently a small state in the then-known continent of Ethiopia, and the people were known as Ethiopians (as pointed out by the encyclopedias).

Please examine map number 1 closely. Above T H in the word, Ethiopia, is a small land called Africa. Instead of the continent's being known as Africa, it was called Ethiopia. There are a few rivers discharging into the Mediterranean on the north and a few flowing into the Atlantic Ocean on the extreme west. "Unto the utmost bounds of the everlasting hills," over the "wall," the "sea," we then come to Joseph's Land, "the land shadowing with wings."

Quite a number of years ago a Captain Arthur McGray visualized the American eagle protecting North and South America. See cut number 2. This was published in the National Magazine (not the National Geographic). The title of the cut was "Coming events cast their shadows before." The Monroe Doctrine, the Good Neighbor Policy, and now the Atlantic Pact, fulfill Captain Arthur McGray's prophecy.

Here are some historical items to consider. Thalheimer gave his original map this title, "Map of the world as known to the Assyrians." Isaiah was in Palestine when he delivered the prophecy under consideration. Palestine was known as Phoenicia and Syria (see map). Adjacent nations were Mesopotamia and Assyria. The Assyrian nation was in existence from 1400 to 625 B.C. In that period Ethiopia was located in the northern part of what a modern geography calls Africa. So the inspired young prophet was living during the period illustrated by the map. Knowledge of Africa was very limited among the ancients, as is revealed by early writings and maps. Rome, after 146 B.C., had a province called Africa of varying extent reaching from Mauretania to Egypt along the Mediterranean.

Elder J. W. A. Bailey calls attention to an editorial by the late "Brother Joseph" Smith in the Herald, Volume 44, page 549, endorsing Reverend R. C. Shimeall's interpretation of Isaiah 18:1 as being America.

All honor to those pioneer ministers who gave us the proper interpretation of Deuteronomy 33, and Isaiah 18 and 29.

Christmas

Edited by

Randolph E. Haugan

The Christmas Gospel, new stories and legends, poetry, familiar and original art, and music are woven into each year's attractive family annual. Paper cover, $1; cloth cover $2

Herald House

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI

Christmas Customs

INTRODUCTION

Early in October air mail letters were dispatched to countries where church members live, asking that an article be prepared for the Herald describing Christmas customs in their land. There has been a splendid response to this request. Articles haven't come in yet from all places, but sufficient time may not have been allowed.

Although customs differ in many lands, the same spirit of worship of the Christ abides in the hearts of people. Thinking of them and their customs at Christmas time should bring them near us and strengthen the bond of brotherhood we find in the gospel.

CHRISTMAS IN HAWAII

By ERIEL MILLER

CHRISTMAS COMES TO HAWAII with the same joyous celebration of the Nativity, the same Santa Claus, and the same lighted trees it brings to the United States. The first New England missionaries gave a strictly biblical interpretation of Christmas to the Hawaiians and frowned on any nonreligious celebration. These naturally happy and generous people, however, soon adopted the custom of giving gifts and exchanging hospitality at Christmas instead of at New Year as had been the custom. This was officially recognized in 1857 when King Kamehameha instituted a law proclaiming a national holiday to celebrate both Thanksgiving and Christmas on the same day. This probably accounts for the current custom of celebrating from Thanksgiving to New Year.

The spirit of Christmas is shared by all—Filipino, Portuguese, American, Korean, Chinese, and Japanese alike. Although the older Oriental people keep the Buddhist tradition by exchanging gifts and hospitality at New Year's to show appreciation of the past year's blessings, the younger people follow the customs of their school friends and associates by celebrating the Christmas holiday.

Christmas comes early to Hawaii. Immediately after Thanksgiving, Santa packs his sleigh and travels south to Honolulu. Leaving his reindeers to rest up for Christmas Eve, he comes ashore on his surfboard loaded with dolls and trains and toys to delight the hearts of the many children of Hawaii. He is greeted by a night parade attended by both grown-ups and little folks, and he is escorted to Sears where he holds court till the very eve of Christmas. He takes time off on several evenings to visit our churches for Christmas plays and leaves a treat of apples, oranges, and candies.

SINCE CHRISTMAS is celebrated in the home, there is no formal church service on Christmas Day, except when it falls on Sunday. On Christmas Eve many people invite Santa to pay a personal visit while the children are still awake, and that merry menehune (fairy) delights the children by calling them by name and delivering gifts which are immediately opened. In addition to these sounds of merrymaking within the home, the sweet voices of the young people can be heard, caroling to the shut-ins and older people. Not many children hang up their stockings, for the children wear only ankle socks which are not adequate for this purpose. When morning comes, there are apples, nuts, and candies to spoil the appetite for a turkey dinner. After the bird is popped into the oven, there are lots of things to do—some go to Waikiki for a swim—others go to Tantalus hills for ti-leaf sliding—still others go to the theaters which are usually crowded—and many stay at home to enjoy their lighted trees, games, and friends who drop in.

The Chamber of Commerce dresses up the center of town with festoons of gaily colored lights, huge bells, wreaths, and miles of silver rope. The large department stores vie with each other to have the most Christmas spirit in their window displays. Each home has a tree decorated with lights, colored balls, and gifts.

The whole community eagerly awaits the Roosevelt High School's A Cappella Choir's recital of carols and Central Union Church's The Messiah by Handel. The Reorganized Church choir also contributes to the spirit of Christmas by presenting cantatas. As one goes to participate in this celebration of Christ's birth, the emerald lawns, the flaming red poinsettia hedges, the hibiscus bushes, the many-hued crotons, the heavy scent of ginger blossoms, and the stately royal palms etched against the blue, blue, sky, remind him that on such a night as this God's greatest gift was given to the world—Jesus, the Savior.

What a thrill it is to see the people of all races worshipping together in the melting pot of the Pacific, disproving the old adage, "East is East, and West is West, and never the twain shall meet."

CHRISTMAS IN AUSTRALIA

By MRS. NORMAN SMITH

IN AUSTRALIA, Christmas preparations begin early in November, for Christmas is the most festive and celebrated of all days. One family begins by gathering dried fruits (sultanas, raisins, currants, cherries), threepences, and sixpences for the large white iced Christmas cake and the hot plum pudding. These are made at least a month ahead. Children keep their eyes open for a small pine tree growing on the bank of the river or for a suitable branch from a tall tree. One or the other is cut and brought home during the Christmas week and kept fresh in a bucket of sand. Streamers of gaily colored paper are cut and hung early in December in the room where the Christmas dinner and tea are to be served. Balloons, tinsel, glass balls and bells, silver and gold stars are made ready for the tree.

As the great day approaches in the middle of the hot Australian summer, one looks for the brilliantly red Christmas bush and the red and yellow Christmas bells with their slender green stalks. Vases are filled with these, and special pieces are put aside for decorating the Christmas cake and pudding. The lovely green tree has been brought into the lounge room and decorated. Presents are unearthed and hung on its branches or placed at the foot of the tree. While the children sleep, neighbors drop by on Christmas Eve to enjoy its beauty with the grown-ups.

On Christmas Eve pillow slips are placed on chairs in the room where the Christmas tree stands. In one home this custom has not varied in sixteen years. In other homes they are hung at the foot of the beds. Notes are pinned on the pillow slips for Father Christmas (Santa) and his helpers. A glass of lemonade and a piece of cake are left on the table as a gesture of good will for him. It is one night of the year when bed is a welcome place; for the earlier one goes to bed the quicker morning comes, and around about four-thirty a general awakening begins. The tree laden with its gifts is left untouched until after the evening meal.

The Home Column

EARLY IN THE MORNING, the pudding with its threepences, sixpences, and charms is placed in the boiler to bubble and stream. The table is set, and the frosted Christmas cake is given the place of honor in the center. Chairs are placed around the table, with one for the Unseen Guest, and all is ready for the family dinner of roast fowl, green peas and beans, baked potatoes, plum pudding and custard. In the afternoon it gets hotter and hotter, and the family drifts off to seek the coolest spots.

In the afternoon mother starts preparations for the evening tea, for this is the time of open house for friends and relatives. The big table with its white cloth, white cake, and Father Christmas candle is used once more. This time it is laden with sweets, bowls of red and black cherries, small cakes and sandwiches. There is much laughter and chatter, and then a sudden hush as the littlest one demands that the candle be lighted and the cake cut. Lights are dimmed, and someone starts singing, "Happy birthday, dear Jesus" or "Happy Christmas to you." After lights are on again and ice cream is served, everyone files into the lounge room to the waiting Christmas tree. It is mother's and father's privilege to take the gifts from the tree, starting with the small surprise packets for the neighboring children.

Everyone is tired as excitement has been high throughout the day, so all relax. One of the children recites a poem, a couple sing, then someone suggests it is time for home and rest. Visitors are wished good luck and godspeed. The children go to bed, and Mum and Dad gather up the crumpled wrappings and talk over the day's activities.

Yes, it has been a happy Christmas Day spent by an ordinary Australian family.

CHRISTMAS IN ENGLAND

BY POMME ALLEN

SCARCELY have the summer holidays passed before the people of England begin to think about Christmas with its festivities.

The early days of October bring vitality to the shops, with their gay decorations of tinsel, glittering baubles, small images of Father Christmas, dainty fairies, and bright Christmas trees.

Ordinary wares are wrapped in cellophane and ribbon, while brightly colored festoons are draped across ceilings and walls. Everything assumes a festive air.

A feeling of suppressed excitement pervades the whole atmosphere as small children gaze rapturously into magic windows, and parents nod wisely as they listen to breathless explanations.

Money has been carefully hoarded for many weeks and as Christmas approaches, gaily-wrapped gifts are hidden away with smiles and whispers, and an element of sweet mystery enters the air.

Stores have been garnered carefully by Mother in readiness for the making of the traditional plum pudding and mincemeat. These consist of raisins, currants, peel, sultanas, eggs, prunes, figs, dates, apples, lemons, sugar, etc., and when the preparation begins, everyone knows that Christmas is a very real thing.

As the mixture for the pudding grows in the large bowl, each member of the family has a turn at "stirring" and much laughter and sentiment go into the making of it. Each, as he stirs, is convinced that Mother makes the best Christmas pudding in the whole world.

The mincemeat consists of apples, suet, raisins, currants, sultanas, sugar, peel, almonds, and spices, all finely cut by the mincing machine and packed into jars and sealed down.

Just before Christmas, Mother makes little pies and fills them with mincemeat and stores them in a tin, ready for the important day when friends will call and pass the compliments of the season.

A WEEK BEFORE CHRISTMAS, holly and mistletoe take pride of place among the decorations. Mistletoe is placed in an unobtrusive position, for the "penalty" of being found under it is the price of a kiss.

A large Christmas tree (fir) is gaily decorated with tinsel and glittering trifles, complete with a beautiful star at the top and loaded with small presents. This is placed in a large room to await the oncoming festivities.

Christmas Eve is crowded with last-minute activities. The air is cold, and often a thin layer of snow covers the earth. England loves the traditional white Christmas. Good fellowship and geniality prevail. People are hurrying homeward loaded with parcels. Only a few turkeys and geese remain in the shops for late buyers. Christmas cards have been replaced by calendars and New Year's greeting. Soon the shops will be closing and their owners joining the stream of homeward bound people.

All members of the family try to be at home for this day, so Christmas Eve is a time for reunions. These are made more sweet by the sound of carols drifting across the frosty air and the peal of the bells calling worshippers to church to pay homage to that first Christmas babe.

The children are anxiously borrowing stockings from the largest member of the family to hang at the foot of their beds, for tonight Father Christmas will come and fill the stockings of each good child with wonderful presents. Tonight they will go to bed without reluctance and will try hard to be sound asleep before the appointed hour, for "Father Christmas visits no child who is awake."

Father keeps busy stoking up the fires and handing out innumerable glasses of "pop" (soft drinks). Mother bustles around, performing endless jobs. And supper, consisting of pork pie, pickles, cold roast beef, tomatoes, celery, and mince pie, is an exciting hilarious affair.

At last everyone has retired for the night—everyone, that is, except Father and Mother, who have to make arrangements for the reception of Father Christmas and insure that nothing impedes his progress.

BEFORE LIGHT BREAKS over the world on Christmas morning, life is astir. Squeals, chuckles, oohs! and ahs! are heard in varying intensity from various parts of the house. Mother, who seems to have been asleep only five minutes, is wakened by the littlest one sitting on her chest and loudly explaining the intricacies of his new potato gun, while sister staggers around loaded with presents left by Father Christmas.

Father, knowing that further rest is impossible, goes downstairs and returns soon with steaming cups of tea, which are gratefully accepted, especially by Grandma, who is still half asleep.

The children, having aroused the whole household, go to various corners to enjoy their treasures, and the older members of the family arise to greet each other and enjoy the radiant happiness of home.

Thoughts of that first Christmas, nearly 2,000 years ago enter each heart and are quickly made audible by the singing of carols. These begin with father's resonant bass and are supported by the quavering tones of Grandma, as birdlike she goes about the house.

Breakfast is light and quickly passed in readiness for Christmas dinner.

If possible, Father has procured a turkey or goose or fowl which has been stuffed with forcemeat containing thyme and other herbs, sausage, suet, eggs, and bread crumbs. This sizzles in the oven, while the plum pudding steams merrily away on the hob at the side of the fire.

In the good old days, a fine piece of pork and a good round of prime English beef, complete with sage and onions and roast potatoes, accompanied the poultry, but we are fortunate if we can

(Continued on page 22.)

Briefs

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI.—The campus recreational grounds and equipment erected for the church young people during the past two years is proving to be popular even now for students of William Chrisman High School, according to Carl Mesle, city-wide youth director. The girl's gym classes use the grounds and equipment for everything but archery. That means softball, tennis, volleyball, croquet, and horseshoes. There are fifty girls signed up for tennis, using the two tennis courts. The boys of the high school use the field for calisthenics. All this material is being used by the school without charge.

Fourteen plays have been registered for the annual city-wide drama festival to be held November 14 to 18. Each Zion's League is eligible to enter one. The White Mask Players are providing their talent as director this year.

Basketball teams, both girls' and boys', are using the Auditorium gymnasium for practice in preparation for the opening of the season later this winter. These teams are all part of the interchurch league, and most of them are our own young people.

The new Blue Ridge Mission southwest of Independence held the dedication of their meeting place, a large modern house, on Sunday, October 23. This was the second Sunday in which they met in the building, and the total attendance was 124. The previous Sunday there were seventy-four present. Louis J. Richards is the missionary-pastor. One person has already been baptized, and there are four people now ready for baptism.

A meeting was held Tuesday evening of all pastors, group elders, associate pastors, and missionary men under the leadership of city-wide supervising pastor, Charles V. Graham. The purpose of the meeting was to assign one missionary man to work with each group elder in each pastoral group in Independence. There are seventy groups and thus there will be seventy missionary men active. These men will work in close co-operation with the group elder, thus providing a missionary arm as well as a pastoral arm.

The local performance of the Messiah by the Messiah choir is scheduled for December 25, Sunday evening in the Auditorium. The Independence Symphony Orchestra will provide the accompaniment. Soloists will be: soprano, Elizabeth Vaughn; contralto, Jeanette Nichols; tenor, Donald Pyper; and bass, Herbert Lively. This will be the thirty-third annual local performance of the Messiah.

On Sunday, October 23, there were three baptisms held at the Stone Church: Kathleen Frances Kohlman, Mary Jane Heinrich, and Bertha Mae Beck. They took place Sunday afternoon in the baptismal font, with Pastor Glaude Smith officiating.

The Study Class at Rest Haven entertained a few friends October 19 on their second anniversary. Bertha Thompson furnished music. Humorous readings were given by Helen Weeks and Bertha Thompson. The principle entertainment was a Bible quiz, conducted by Nina Davison, the prize for the side having the most points was a box of homemade fudge.

Refreshments of punch and cake were served. The plan for future study is the courses furnished by the church for adults. The class just finished the course of Book of Mormon Studies.—Reported by AGGIE ADAMS.

DUNN CENTER, NORTH DAKOTA.—Seventy Philip W. Moore of Spokane, Washington, presented a series of illustrated missionary sermons from October 12 to 23. A large number of nonmembers were present at the meetings.

KENNETT, MISSOURI.—Dale Riley Hawkins, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Hawkins, was blessed October 23 by Elder J. A. Phillips and J. M. Smith.

FLINT, MICHIGAN.—At the branch business meeting, held September 12, these officers were elected: Elder R. Melvin Russell, president and city pastor; Elders Arthur Slater and Glen Hardy, associate pastors; Louis Green, secretary and statistician; Henry Hartlyer, treasurer; Allen Pohly, auditor; Eugene Everheart, music supervisor; Elder Earnest Wecker, Zion's League supervisor; Sister Lillian Swift, leader of women's department; Brother Eri Irwin and Brother Grigg-Poole, custodian deacons.

At the baptismal service, held September 18, these people were baptized: Betty Sue Heaveland, Patricia Roe Heaveland, Arnold E. Vanderkarr, Charlotte Ann Curry, and Carol Jo Smith.

Michial Dwight, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Benz, was blessed September 18 by Elders A. Slater and W. R. Kapnick. Juanita Sue, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Easlick, was blessed October 9 by Elders W. R. Kapnick and A. Slater.

Brother Glen Hardy was called to the office of elder.—Reported by ETTIE YOUNGS.

CHICAGO, ILLINOIS.—Elder G. Wayne Smith baptized Sylvester and Helen Pluzynski and son, Edward, at the Central Branch, Chicago, recently.

SOMERVILLE, MASSACHUSETTS.—Over 200 guests attended the open house held at the new nine-room parsonage October 16. The committee in charge of this enterprise were Ralph Herrick, chairman; Albert Fisher, Wallace Carter, Ralph Hardy, Eugene Carter, Urban Black, Vivian Sheehy, M. C. Fisher, Jr., and Sanford Fisher. The exterior of the parsonage has recently been painted.

Elder John F. Sheehy spoke on October 16 and 19.

STRATFORD, ONTARIO.—The objective of $100.00 for the Christmas offering of 1948 was reached by October 17, and exceeded at the end of the year by $36.45. The objective of $125.00 for the Christmas offering of 1949 was reached by October 16, and is expected to be exceeded at the end of the year by about $35.00. In 1948 the attendance increased to seventy-five, and at present it has increased to eighty-two members.—Reported by GORDON ROBINSON.

CAMERON, MISSOURI.—Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Winans celebrated their golden wedding anniversary on November 6 by holding open house. They have made their home in Cameron for 16 years. They have 6 children, 13 grandchildren, and 3 great-grandchildren. The guest book for the day showed that 29 members of their immediate family were present.

KIRTLAND, OHIO.—Brother and Sister D. P. Davies celebrated their golden wedding anniversary by holding open house in the Chestnut Room of the Kirtland auditorium on October 23. Among the 165 guests were their seven children and thirteen grandchildren. Brother and Sister Davies have been members of the Kirtland Branch since 1924, when they transferred from The Plains, Ohio.—Reported by W. A. SMITH.

DES MOINES, IOWA.—Randy Butch Carlson, born April 6, 1949, son of Lowell C. and Evelyn (Milledge) Carlson was blessed by Elders Marion Pease and Herbert M. Scott November 6.

JUNIATA, MICHIGAN.—The annual supper and bazaar sponsored by the women's department netted $254.00. New chairs and other basement equipment are being purchased.—Reported by WILLIAM R. WELLS.

Each One
Win One Tract
Packet

$1

Contains one each:

- Joseph Smith Tells His Own Story
- Church Membership Is Important
- Latter Day Saints and What They Believe
- What Is Christ's Church?
- The Book of Mormon, an Introductory Survey
- Faith of Our Fathers
- What Latter Day Saints Believe About God
- Doctrinal References
- Busy Man 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7

herald house

Independence, Mo.

Letters

From a Utah Member

I'm grateful that the Lord has brought me into the truth and given me the inspiration to help with the work of this church. Even if I should be persecuted, it would be well, for if we suffer with him, we shall eventually reign with him. I dedicate all that I am and have to God, praying that he will give me courage to stand for him and his Son at all times.

R. C. MOORE.

528½ West Second South
Salt Lake City, Utah.

Interested in Charts

Charts are my hobby. I have drawn up a set which I call, "System of Creation." These show all biblical cycles of time. I would like to exchange views on charts with others who are interested in them.

N. L. ARD

129 West Erie
Chicago, Illinois

Tribute to E. F. Robertson

Recently as I was preparing a sermon, I found some notes written by Elder E. F. Robertson, former missionary to Southern Indiana District. He was a strong defender of the faith at any time and before anybody. Even since his death on October 24, 1947, I have continued to receive inspiration from the ministry he gave. His counsel was always good, and his interpretations of doctrine were sound. I am grateful to have had the privilege of working with him. I miss his association, but the advice he gave me is still proving helpful. His conception of the gospel plan was well worth accepting.

ARTHUR W. GAGE.

1141 West Thirty-third Street
Indianapolis, Indiana

From "Daily Bread" Readers

We like the publication Daily Bread very much. It gives us a new start each day with spiritual things to think about while we do our daily tasks.

MRS. HERBERT ATKINS.

Mound City, Kansas

Congratulations on the fine publication, Daily Bread. I don't know why we haven't had it before.

MRS. WARD L. CHRISTY.

10349 Arminta Street
Sun Valley, California

Missouri Girls' State Representatives

I read the article about Pat Livingston, high school "senator," with much interest. The Butler, Missouri, Branch has been represented at Missouri Girls' State the last two years. In 1948 my daughter, Helen, was chosen to the convention held on the campus of William Woods College at Fulton, Missouri. This spring Alice Elefson, then a senior in high school, was selected. She is now attending Graceland College.

MRS. H. A. BRUNS.

312 South Mechanic
Butler, Missouri

The Time Is Short

On all hands we hear the cry, "Repent." We were told at the last General Conference the time was growing short. Some say God's days are a thousand years—and that some day, hundreds of years from now, Jesus will come. What do we as Reorganized Latter Day Saints believe? If we heed God's warning, we know in our hearts and our minds that he means just what he says. The time is short for all we must accomplish.

What can we do about it? First, we can kneel and take God into our confidence. We can ask him for guidance, inspiration, and enlightenment. We can be filled with determination to turn over a new leaf and leave our old selves behind—for we know he has work for us to do. All we need is to be willing and the way will be shown us. We must choose Christ as our Master and sever any worldly bondages that hinder our progress. We can fast. We can study. We can meditate and be filled with a desire for self-improvement and eagerness to sacrifice when need be. We can give to others what knowledge we may gain. We must keep Sunday holy and give it to God as his day, whether we are able to attend church or not. Let us be true Saints and give up worldly pleasures.

The Church Member's Manual tells us that we must have a passionate conviction of the need of God in the lives of men and women. If this conviction is present, the compulsion will be to share this divine knowledge with all.

MRS. DON BALDWIN.

3026 Sugar Avenue
Billings, Montana

In Fixing Responsibility

(Continued from page 10.)

it is. Among them is Dr. Daniel C. Dennett, M. D., of Winchester, Massachusetts, who writes, in the Christian Science Monitor of September 15:

"At the time of the first world war, when the canteens were prohibited from selling liquor to the soldiers, the outstanding president of Harvard University, the late Charles W. Elliott, said he thought it was time for him to stop indulgence forbidden to the defenders of our country. In his book, A Late Harvest, he writes:

It is only since 1917 that I have been a total abstainer, but that is now six years ago, and I want to testify here, now, that by adopting total abstinence after having had the opposite habit for over seventy years, one loses no joys that are worth having, and there is no joy-killing about it. On the contrary, I enjoy social life and work life more since I ceased to take any alcohol than I did before.

The superintendent of a large hospital for the insane, in an address before our medical society, said he became a total abstainer when he found from the study of case histories what a large number of the inmates were there as a result of alcoholism.

I submit that the use of any beverage that does more harm than good . . . that slows nerve reaction and physical power, and for that reason is not allowed athletes whose success depends upon the greatest possible strength and agility; and that even in moderate use may lead to excessive use with all its attendant dangers—the use of that beverage is not sane.

By alluring advertising and beguiling propaganda, the distillers have greatly increased the sale and consumption of liquor and therefore, they are responsible for the increased crime, disease, and unhappiness resulting from it.

It would seem the really "smart" thing to do is listen to men of distinction like Mr. Elliott of Harvard who found it better to abstain completely, and to take the advice of medical men such as Dr. Dennett, who have had many occasions to see the final and dismal results of drinking in the wreckage that comes to them crying for help.

Saints' Herald and Daily Bread

both magazines, 1 year, now just $4.50
(to one address)

CANADA — $4.90

Order From HERALD HOUSE

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI

The Good Samaritan of Latter Days

A talk given at Central Church in Chicago, Illinois.

By RAY ZINSER

And Jesus answering, said, A certain man went down from Jerusalem to Jericho, and fell among thieves, who stripped him of his raiment and wounded him, and departed, leaving him half dead.

And by chance, there came down a certain priest that way; and when he saw him, he passed by on the other side of the way.

And likewise a Levite, when he was at the place, came and looked upon him, and passed by on the other side of the way; for they desired in their hearts that it might not be known that they had seen him.

But a certain Samaritan, as he journeyed, came where he was; and when he saw him, he had compassion on him.

And he went to him, and bound up his wounds, pouring in oil and wine, and set him on his own beast, and brought him to an inn, and took care of him.

DRAMATICALLY STATED in this Scripture is the phrase, "he had compassion on him." This compassion manifested by the Good Samaritan was far more than pity or sorrow; it was an active and realistic concern for the welfare of his "brother." The Samaritan reacted to the situation as if he were going through that very same experience. In formal usage, this compassion was an act of empathy. In less formal usage, this compassion was merely entering into the experience of another as though it were a real experience.

My fundamental postulate is that the good Samaritan of the latter days is one who has compassion for all people without regard to race, creed, color, or national origin. My second postulate is that only through true compassion can men learn to live together in mutual respect, mutual concern, mutual co-operation, and mutual honor, thereby aiding significantly in the establishment of the kingdom of God on earth.

It is not enough to feel sorry and have pity for one who is a member of a minority group. One must live vicariously with these members and share intimately empathically so that compassion is translated to genuine and active regard for all others.

Difficulties in Entering Into Empathy

Many of us encounter difficulties in entering into the experience of the other person; that is, many of us have difficulty in imagining ourselves in the role of the other. These difficulties are usually based in some way upon the wide differences of personality, color, race, culture, ways of doing, religion, politics, income, vocation, and habit patterns.

Because of these difficulties, we tend to become self-centered, ethnocentric, or tribalistic as we look at others unlike ourselves. We develop a fond attachment to those characteristics which only we have in our own particular type or group.

Here Is the Writer

Raymond D. Zinser, a native of Ware, Texas, is a graduate of Graceland College class of '42. From 1943-45 he did correspondence work with the University of Iowa, and in 1946-47 attended the University of Chicago, from which he received his M.A. degree. During the summer of 1948 he taught at Wayne University in Detroit. At present he is teaching sociology at Graceland and working on his Ph.D. He has been a member of the Reorganized Church since 1941 when he was "baptized in a tank in the basement of Lamoni Coliseum." The establishment of Zion communities is chief among his special interests; in fact, he considers it both avocation and vocation.

We thereby tend to regard our own type or group as superior either implicitly or explicitly. Our self-centeredness may even become so provincial that we develop a fond attachment to a small clique of our own group and thereby exclude others of our own group from significant relationships.

These differences tend to make us "conscious of our own kind" and set up false assumptions of superiority and of their counterparts: inferiority, taboo, castigation, discrimination, and prejudice.

We tend not to communicate with these un-like-us people. Thus we develop social and spiritual blindness. Without communication and a set of meaningful experiences with people unlike us, we tend to become suspicious, hostile, prejudiced, and antagonistic towards them.

Patterns of blindness (prejudice, discrimination, superiority complexes, etc.) invite us to refuse to co-operate, communicate, or understand, and to refuse to take the role of the other or enter into his experience as if it were our own. By our deliberate design, we refuse to have meaningful experiences and relationships with members of minority groups, thus compassion or empathy is found wanting.

What Are the Possibilities?

The Restoration message which positively promotes a distinctive way of life for all people can be supported by four action patterns as possibilities for good Samaritans of the latter days.

To begin with, we have the possibility of obtaining the latest scientific data and evidence concerning people of different external characteristics and cultural patterns.

Again we have the possibility of understanding the nature of hostility, aggression, prejudice, and conflict with others not like ourselves.

We also have the possibility of establishing communication and meaningful experiences with others of contrasting differences. In this category we can add those of our own group from whom we isolate ourselves.

And last we can make ourselves accessible to the great source of love and inspiration resident in God whose concern is for effective, happy, and complete living for all people, without regard to race, creed, color or national origin.

Through these action patterns we may develop an incipient compassion and a developing concern for all people. Thus, we learn to live together in mutual respect, concern, co-operation, and honor.

Qualities Necessary for Compassion

Certain qualities are necessary for the development of compassion or empathy. Physical and mental health are basic in our developmental program. Social sensitivity and social awareness also are qualities of supreme worth. Occupational, residential, and educational opportunities must be extended to all people regardless of race, color, creed, or cultural differences. By deliberate design we must develop qualities of concern, co-operation, and habit patterns of respect.

New Horizons

Our present society dramatically portrays the lack of the basic qualities just mentioned. Selfishness and greed and materialistic values of modern culture are paramount. Anonymity only adds to the indifference or antagonism. Under existing conditions, most of us grow up to accept prejudice and discrimination patterns of living just as "normally" as we learn to accept other parts of our culture.

We learn to hate the Negro, we learn to hate the Jew, we learn to hate the Oriental, and we learn to hate many of the other minority groups. At birth all people are completely free of prejudice only to be socially indoctrinated with hate, prejudice, and discrimination patterns. Whether implicit or explicit these patterns are dramatically and dynamically influential as impacts on our personality.

Unequal distribution of wealth and income in modern society adds to the discriminatory patterns as minority group members compete in economic and social activities of the day. Difficulties of gaining education and competencies are extra burdens on minority group members. Remunerative vocations equal to individual abilities are rarely made available to minority group members. These conditions add again to the difficulty for the subservient minority members to share meaningfully with the dominant majority members.

Role of Latter Day Saintism

Joseph Smith delivered to the world in 1830 a reaffirmation of Christian principles which have the possibility of being carried out in action. Latter Day Saintism claims to have "restored" the possibilities or channels for "right relationships" of man with man, and of man with God. Man must be right with God to be in right relationships, and man cannot be right with God when he is not right with his fellow men, which includes every color shade and cultural difference.

I like to interpret Latter Day Saintism as having some basic objectives and purposes along this line:

1. To provide each man with the opportunity to develop his capacities to the fullest possible extent.
2. To provide each man with the knowledge, tools, experiences, etc., to develop compassion for all men.

3. To provide each man with the opportunity for the greatest possible release of creative power.
4. To provide each man with increasingly significant contacts with divine power.
5. To establish Zion and evangelize in the world.

Latter Day Saintism does not pretend in any way by principle to confine its message of restoration to the Caucasian group. Rather, it is sounded for the Indian, the Negro, the Oriental, and for any and all who will listen and comply.

Unfortunately, the church and its objectives suffer from incomplete interpretation which many of us give to the multi-racial and multi-cultural interaction patterns possible.

Zion—the Community Laboratory

The Restoration message of Joseph Smith declared unequivocally that right relationships of all men living together could be made possible in Zion communities. The Zion community as interpreted by the prophet of the Restoration seeks to establish a social-political-economic-spiritual unification for all people.

By making possible equal access to the basic necessities of life for all men, Zion provides for physical and mental health, motivation for social sensitivity, and social awareness, and makes possible educational, occupational, and residential opportunities for all. Zion, above all else, proposes to establish a cultural pattern which incorporates mutual respect, concern, co-operation, and honor in habit patterns of righteous living.

Through developing such community projects, Latter Day Saintism will be able to extend its influence world-wide. The gospel of the Restoration can then be preached more by practical laboratory experience than from the pulpit. The message of practical demonstration of Christian living will be the most dramatic and dynamic message heard in a tense, hostile, war-conscious, frustrated, commercially-minded world.

It is not idle dreaming to anticipate that Zion communities, through practical demonstration and with their tremendous reservoir of spiritual dynamics, will motivate other people to live righteously and to bring those of all races, colors, creeds, and national origins into Christian fellowship.

Personal Testimony

Evidence of a commanding nature has come to me through scientific evidence substantiated by spiritual insight. This dual testimony is presented for your consideration.

As a sociologist, I have studied human personality, social organization, race characteristics, prejudice, discrimination, hostility, etc. In addition I have studied social planning for possible community action patterns. From the total investigative areas utilized I have received a profound conviction of the possibilities of Zion communities and the possibilities for the development of compassion for all people so that these communities may be actively and practically demonstrated.

Through the years there has come to me the testimony of the spiritual confirmation of the possibilities of the Restoration Movement. There has come the testimony of the uniqueness of the Restoration message with that uniqueness tied up with the motivation for kingdoms on earth. There has come the testimony of God's creative purposes on earth not only in the physical and biological areas but in the area of human interaction and human community integration.

Spiritual confirmation motivates me to strenuously support the development of Zion communities. Spiritual confirmation also compels me to place an equality on all people without regard to color, race, national origin, or cultural differences. The nature of both the scientific and spiritual confirmation is overwhelming and cannot be ignored.

Thus, the good Samaritan of the Latter Days is the one who has compassion for all people. Only through exercising compassion can all men learn to live together with each other in mutual respect, concern, co-operation, and honor, thereby aiding significantly in the establishment of the kingdom of God on earth, even Zion.

*Each One
...Win One!*

TELLING HIM
ABOUT THE GOSPEL
of the
KINGDOM

The REORGANIZED
CHURCH of JESUS CHRIST
of Latter Day Saints

Christmas Customs

(Continued from page 17.)

procure poultry for this special occasion and thus save our precious meat ration.

The vegetables, sprouts, carrots, parsnips, etc., are all prepared. The table is laid. Father is kept busy banking up the fires. Grandma, in her corner by the fire, is recounting Christmases of long ago to the littlest one. Friends pop in and out to give each other the compliments of the season, but at last, the signal is given that dinner is ready.

With laughter all make their way to the table and take their appointed places, with Father at the head and Mother at the foot.

A blessing is asked on the food and as they bow their heads, all give thanks for the good things of life and their "togetherness." Grandma, with a faraway look, adds a specially quiet and reverent "Amen."

Dinner is followed by plum pudding served by Mother amid cheers from the family. The pudding reflects the gaiety of the season by wearing a sprig of red-berried holly on its top. Sauces of various kinds support the pudding which in turn is followed by mince pie.

NO ONE FAILS to listen to the broadcast of the King at 3:00 p.m. on Christmas Day. The fire is bright and glowing, casting welcoming lights over the warm room, as all sit in readiness for the comforting, assuring voice of His Majesty, the King of England.

As he speaks, they think of their loved ones in foreign lands, who will also be listening to the beloved voice.

This feeling of togetherness has a wonderfully softening effect on their spirits, and tears trickle unobtrusively down many cheeks as memories and love flow out across the sea.

It is evening and Grandma in her chair by the fire is gently nodding, happy to be in the heart of her family and reliving memories that are sweet to her. The children are playing quietly, and the radio tells of parties and festivities and Christmas greetings from all over the world.

Gradually members of the family change into festive attire suitable for Christmas night, and sounds from the kitchen proclaim the proximity of late tea.

The dining room now assumes its most gala air. The table is laden with sparkling glass and china. Beautiful Christmas flowers, with their trailing greenery add luster and grace. The only light is the soft glow diffused from colored candles placed in silver stands at various intervals along the table. Taking pride of place is the iced Christmas cake resplendent with robins, gnomes, holly, and Father Christmas. Trifle, jellies, and fruit twinkle in the soft light, and at the side of each plate lies a cracker which must be pulled with one's neighbor. This causes much merriment, as they explode with the pulling, revealing queer hats, false noses, huge moustaches, mottoes, jewels, etc.

These are promptly worn by their owners, and Father, at the head of the table, is majestic in a small hat with a large feather on his shining bald head. He has difficulty in speaking clearly as he asks for the trifle under the difficult manipulation of a huge red nose, supported by a villainous moustache. He is probably consoling himself that the dapper little businessman next door is in similar garb!

Lastly comes Christmas night with its traditional games of tiddlywinks (at which Grandma cheats atrociously!) and draughts, with father still champion. Each member of the family contributes toward the entertainment, and Father (with his arm around Mother) sings the duets which charmed her in their youth, while the thin, sweet voice of Grandma tremulously joins the others in carols that never grow old.

Daughter is now old enough to take Mother's place at the piano, and as she marshals "Junior" to the music, he makes no protest, although his mouth is full of nuts.

He stands beside his sister and sings in a clear voice "I Know That My Redeemer Liveth."

Tired but happy, all members of the family look around their English home, full of the spirit of good will toward men, and their hearts send up a prayer of thankfulness and dedication to Christ in heaven, who has placed their feet in such pleasant paths.

The Unobserved Kingdom

(Continued from page 8.)

were holding, and we could tell she was deeply concerned. She didn't know what was going to happen next. Pretty soon he came in, and we noticed that his teeth had been rotted off with tobacco. He told us in very unmistakable terms that we were not welcome there. We immediately stood, apologized for intruding, and backed away, hoping some good would come from our efforts to try to help the home.

There's a very beautiful sequel to this episode. I wouldn't tell the story because of its unpleasantness. That thing worked on the man's heart and mind, and within a year's time he felt repentant. He began to study his wife's religion, and he found out that he was the most miserable man in the city of Chicago. He turned from his evil ways of serving the devil and gave his life to Christ. About four years later he was called to the office of priest. He went up in the northern part of the state of Wisconsin and there he served as leader of a small group of Saints.

If I've ever seen a demonstration of the devil's being cast out of a man, I think that was it. I have been told of incidences in which an evil spirit would possess a man until he would go through contortions, and when the devil was cast out by the power of God exercised through the elders, this evil spirit would go out with screeches and vituperation. But here is a picture that is just a natural thing. Sometimes we have to go through terrible experiences to see the beauty of this gospel, but once it gets a hold it can work wonders. It can drive from the heart of a man the devil who would throw God's servants out of his home, and inspire him to make restitution by visiting the homes of people, helping them to see the light of God. There's a statement in the Scripture, "When I by the Spirit of God cast out devils, then is the kingdom of God come unto you." And that's happening every day.

Let us make Jesus our Lord.

www.LatterDayTruth.org

1950 Book Catalog

Sent Free on Request

herald house
INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI

Organization of Southern Oregon Mission

All members in southern Oregon are invited to attend the mission organization meeting to be held at Medford on Sunday, December 11, at the Seventh Day Adventist Church. Activities will include church school, Communion, preaching, and a baptismal confirmation service. Everyone planning to remain the full day should bring a basket lunch. James Davidson, 1046 Shafer Lane, Medford, is the pastor. Assisting him will be Elder and Mrs. Ted Schuld of Klamath Falls and District President and Mrs. J. L. Verhei of Portland.

REQUEST FOR PRAYERS

Thomas Walmsley, Box 387, Yerington, Nevada, an isolated Saint who does not have the privilege of administration, asks for prayers that he may be relieved of an affliction which doctors say is incurable.

Mrs. Hazel McCarty, 525 Blue Ridge, Kansas City 3, Missouri, requests prayers that she may receive the physical blessing she needs.

Prayers are requested for Judy Snodgrass, daughter of Mrs. Ruth Snodgrass, 1316 West Taylor, Bloomington, Illinois, who has been hospitalized for treatment. Due to a glandular disturbance eleven-year-old Judy weighs 214 pounds and is still gaining.

ENGAGEMENTS

Greene-Salter

Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Salter of Mobile, Alabama, announce the engagement of their daughter, Marzelle, to Brewton Greene, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Brewton Greene, also of Mobile. The wedding will take place in December.

WEDDINGS

Mitchell-Sheppard

Lucille Anne Sheppard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Sheppard of Geneseo, Illinois, and Donald Lee Mitchell were married October 23 at the Reorganized Church in Moline, Illinois, Elder Lyle W. Woodstock officiating. They are making their home in Moline.

Creviston-Richmann

Sergeant Robert Creviston, son of William and Opal Creviston of Poplar Bluff, Missouri, and Helen Louise Richmann, daughter of George and Mable Richmann of Indianapolis, Indiana, were married August 7 at the Reorganized Church in Indianapolis. Evangelist Arthur W. Gage officiated.

(Note: This is a correction of the announcement printed in the October 3 issue.)

McClusky-Abrahams

Charlotte Abrahams, daughter of Mrs. Ellen Abrahams, and Robert McClusky, son of Mr. and Mrs. John McClusky, were married October 23 at the First Reorganized Church in San Francisco, California. The bride attended Graceland College in 1948-49.

Smith-Nelson

Bertha Mildred Nelson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alma Nelson of Guilford, Missouri, and Delbert D. Smith, son of Mrs. Howard Smith of Butler, Missouri, were married September 18 at the Reorganized Church in Guilford, Ronald Smith, brother of the groom, officiating. They are making their home in Ames, Iowa, where Mrs. Smith is employed as a nutritionist in the Iowa State College Extension service and Mr. Smith is doing graduate work in sociology.

McGraw-DeLapp

Cicely Anne DeLapp, daughter of Bishop and Mrs. George Leslie DeLapp of Independence, Missouri, and Robert Paul McGraw, son of Mrs. Mabel McGraw of Miami, Florida, were married at the Stone Church on November 25. The double-ring ceremony was read by the bride's father. The bride has been a student in the School of Architecture at Washington University in St. Louis. The groom is a graduate of Graceland College and attended Washington University last year. They are making their home in Independence, and he will continue his studies at the University of Kansas City.

Amick-Archibald

Eldorado Archibald, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence L. Archibald of St. Louis, Missouri, and Walter Mason Amick, son of Mrs. Ethel Amick of Independence, Missouri, were married November 26 at the Reorganized Church in St. Louis, High Priest Frank McDonald officiating. They are making their home in St. Louis.

BIRTHS

Mr. and Mrs. Loren Amos of Independence, Missouri, announce the birth of a son, Stephen Michael, born November 25 at the Independence Sanitarium. Mrs. Amos is the former Evelyn Preston.

Mr. and Mrs. Basil T. Higginbotham of Phoenix, Arizona, announce the birth of a son, David Basil, born August 16. Mrs. Higginbotham is the former Wilma Carlson of Three Forks, Montana.

Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Cook of St. Joseph, Missouri, announce the birth of a daughter, Judith K., born October 21. Mrs. Cook is the former Barbara Simpson.

A daughter, Darlene Saye, was born October 17 to Mr. and Mrs. Vincent DeLuca of Monessen, Pennsylvania. Mrs. DeLuca is the former Phyllis Wentzel.

A son, Dennis Wayne, was born August 25 to Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Dunfield of Flint, Michigan. He was blessed on November 20 by Elders Arthur Slater and R. Melvin Russell. Mrs. Dunfield, the former Wanda Harris, is a graduate of Graceland College, class of '46.

A daughter, Sarah Louise, was born on October 29 to Mr. and Mrs. James Bradford of Belle Vernon, Pennsylvania.

DEATHS

HUNT.—Anna Cecilia, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hans Hunger, was born in Germany on April 1, 1869, and died November 17, 1949, at Lincoln, Nebraska. She moved to the United States when she was twenty-three years old, settling in Holt County, Nebraska. On September 13, 1901 she was married to John J. Hunt; two children were born to them. Mr. Hunt preceded his wife in death on November 16, 1940, after which she made her home with her children. She was a devoted member of the Reorganized Church.

Surviving are two daughters: Mrs. Francis Schunk and Mrs. Clarence Williams, both of Lincoln; and four grandsons. Funeral services were held at the Umberger Mortuary, Elder Charles Fry officiating. Interment was in the Lincoln Memorial Park cemetery.

WELBORN.—Howard Herbert, son of Mary Curtis and William E. Welborn, was born at Amo, Colorado, on June 6, 1903, and died at the University of Kansas Hospital on November 8, 1949. He was baptized into the Reorganized Church at the age of thirteen and on December 31, 1926, was married to Nita Akers; three children were born to them.

He is survived by his wife; two daughters: Nita June and Marie; and a son, Eldon, all of the home; his mother, Mary Welborn; two sisters: Mrs. Ethel Carpenter and Mrs. Alice Watkins; and four brothers: John, Floyd, William, and Harvey. Elders William Bath and Lawrence Martin conducted the funeral service. Burial was in Mound Grove Cemetery, Independence, Missouri.

PERRY.—Mary Maria, daughter of William and Susan Rowe, was born on September 9, 1865, near Strathroy, Ontario, and died on November 3, 1949, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Earl Hill, in Windsor, Ontario, following a lengthy illness. She was married to Peter Roger Perry in 1886; seven children were born to them. She had been a member of the Reorganized Church since March 4, 1911.

Surviving are six daughters: Mrs. Frank Sutherland and Mrs. Charles Noltie of London, Ontario; Mrs. Hamilton Fisher of Mt. Brydges, Ontario; Mrs. James Pettit of Melbourne, Ontario; Mrs. Gordon Squires and Mrs. Earl Hill of Windsor; a son, Roger, of Appin, Ontario; seventeen grandchildren; and fourteen great-grandchildren. Mr. Perry died in 1930. Funeral services were held at the Galbraith Mortuary in Strathroy, Elder Frank Gray officiating. Interment was in the Longwood Cemetery.

ENSLEY.—Joseph O., was born September 14, 1884, at Tracy, Oregon, and died November 21, 1949, at Dray, California. He was married to Emma Marie Elam on July 3, 1921. A member of the Reorganized Church since 1893, he was ordained an elder in 1932 and for several years served as pastor of the Stockton, California, Branch. Here he and his wife and family made a valuable contribution to the work.

He is survived by his wife, Emma; two daughters: Mrs. Marjorie Roach of Tracy and Mrs. Ruth Damron of Stockton; a son, Eisworth, of Tracy; a sister, Mrs. Elva M. Petz; his father, Oscar E. Ensley; and one grandchild. Funeral services were held at the B. C. Wallace Chapel in Stockton, Elder Laurence A. MacDonald officiating. Interment was in the Park View Cemetery.

SMITH.—Howard W., son of Lewis W. and Dora Smith, was born March 7, 1891, and was killed June 24, 1949, when the automobile he was driving was hit by a train at a crossing near Butler, Missouri. He was married to Estella Wix on April 12, 1914; five sons were born to them. He had been a member of the Reorganized Church since early manhood and had spent nearly all of his life in the community of Butler.

He is survived by his wife, Estella, of the home; his mother, Mrs. Dora Smith of Rich Mill, Missouri; five sons: Marion and Ronald of Wenatchee, Washington; Delbert of Ames, Iowa; Hubert of Lamoni, Iowa; and Wilbur of Butler; four grandchildren; a brother, Frank M. Smith of Kansas City, Missouri; and five sisters: Mabel Budd and Fern Moore of Independence, Missouri; Sylvia Warren, Goldie Wisner, and Lulu Rhoades of Kansas City. Funeral services were held at the Reorganized Church in Butler, Elders Evan Fry and Leroy Beckham of Butler assisting. Burial was in Oak Hill Cemetery at Butler.

Correction

ULTICAN.—William Patrick. The obituary appearing in the November 21 issue stated that graveside services were conducted by the I.O.O.F. at Hagerman, Idaho. This should read: "Funeral services were conducted at Hagerman Branch, and burial was in the I.O.O.F. Cemetery."

IN THIS ISSUE

EDITORIAL:

Another Trojan Horse..... 3

OFFICIAL:

Des Moines Choir to Broadcast "The Messiah"..... 4
Agricultural Courses at Graceland..... 4
Work on the Auditorium..... 4
Guide Lines Enlargement..... 4

ARTICLES:

The Unobserved Kingdom, by Chris B. Hartshorn..... 5
On Fixing Responsibility, by Kay McNeil..... 9
Interesting Personalities: Nellie Martin, by Sadi Moon Nagel..... 11
Messiah Choir 1916-1949..... 12
The Land Shadowing With Wings, by C. Ed Miller..... 14
Christmas in Hawaii, by Eriel Miller..... 16
Christmas in Australia, by Mrs. Norman Smith..... 16
Christmas in England, by Pomme Allen..... 17
Briefs..... 18
Letters..... 19
The Good Samaritan of Latter Days, by Ray Zinser..... 20
Bulletin Board..... 23

Mary A. Burlington
1510 1/2 Jules
St. Joseph, Missouri

14042
19
h

 OUR CHURCHES

Visitors to Independence often visit Stone Church and none of our other congregations. Stone Church has the great crowds, the big choir, the eminent speakers. But visitors would be rewarded to meet at our other churches too. There is the beautiful Englewood church, now completed, a fine family church with many children and splendid young people. There is our growing South Chrysler congregation, still constructing its building, with a great future before it. College Street Church will be a gem when it is completed; it has a devoted group of people. Enoch Hill will have a lovely new church home before too long. Walnut Park Church is well established in a fine building. And the others are on the way. When you visit Independence, try to get around and see a number of the churches.

 ORIGIN OF THE PACKAGE

A great deal is made these days of the fact that "modern merchandising" gives you almost everything you wish to buy in package form. Go to a grocery store, and you will be able to look at very few products. Nearly all of them are protected by wrappings and labels. It is a long time since you have bought sugar, shortening, and a lot of other things in bulk. We think we are clever. . . . Yet nature has been giving us her products in package form as long as history records. The grain of wheat is one of the most durable of packages. It contains starch, proteins, vitamins, and bran in fair proportion for human use, as well as a tiny spark of life for the future. The grape, the pear, the apple, the banana—all these are packaged goods. Nature wraps a husk around an ear of corn, puts a protective rind about a delicious watermelon, and even sends your spring rain to you in a pretty cloud!

 TWICE-READ TALES

My secret vice, if you must name it, is a stack of old pocket magazines in an obscure corner of my office. It was all right for Hawthorne to have "Twice-Told Tales." I have twice-read ones. How quaint it is, in view of all we know now, to go back and read the fairytales we so confidently believed ten years ago! There was that droll comedian, Hitler, so glib in prophecy, so ignorant of history; and a balcony warrior, Mussolini, who was always stubbing his toe on his lower jaw. Our current villains are stuffy and sour in comparison.

Never tell a story from a current "Reader's Digest"—everybody else has already heard or read it. But go back ten years, and you find a gold mine of stories that everybody has forgotten; it gives you a reputation as a clever and resourceful raconteur.

You'll find many fine things in the old magazines you'll want to keep. Time has done its sifting, and you can throw the ephemeral stuff in the waste basket. You can clip the precious items now and put them in a file. You may never get around to use them as you planned, but they will give your children something to throw away when you are gone, as they say, "Poor Dad—He saved such a lot of stuff!"

Take Advantage of Special
Christmas Gift Rates

on the

Saints' Herald

It's time to start thinking about Christmas gifts . . . and a wonderful gift for any of your friends is a year's subscription to the Herald. Save time and money by ordering gift subscriptions now! Our special gift rates save you up to 50c a subscription over regular rates! And we'll send a beautiful gift card with your name on it direct to your friends' homes. Make your Christmas gift list out now . . . fill in the blanks below and send your order today! Give the Saints' Herald this Christmas!

My gift card should read: From

Name

Address

City State

I enclose $..... Charge my account

Send one year of SAINTS' HERALD as my gift to:

Name

Address

City State

Name

Address

City State

Name

Address

City State

ONE SUBSCRIPTION (your own, new or renewal, or one gift)	$3.50
CANADA	$3.75
EACH ADDITIONAL GIFT SUBSCRIPTION	$3.00
CANADA	$3.25

THE SAINTS'

Herald

VOLUME 96

DECEMBER 19, 1949

NUMBER 51

The Light and the Word

Blended 1949 years ago in Bethlehem

The Quality of ETERNAL LIFE Depends on Them

Photo by Marion Pease

THE FOUNDER of Latter Day Saintism, Joseph Smith, Jr., was born 144 years ago next Friday. The stories of his first and second visions (1820, 1823) have been told many times. That he was no ordinary character is attested by the fact that he won so many ardent friends and enemies in such a short time. Joseph was prepared for this, for he quotes the Angel Moroni (1823) as saying: "God had a work for me to do, and that my name should be had for good and evil, among all nations."

The evil aspects more frequently make the headlines—they pay better. There seem to be few neutrals—those who view the man and his works objectively. Occasionally someone was willing to give him the benefit of the doubt.

One of the first of these was Samuel Smucker (1859) who said: "Whether knave or lunatic, whether liar or true man, it cannot be denied that he was one of the most extraordinary persons of his time, a man of rude genius, who accomplished a much greater work than he knew; and whose name, whatever he may have been whilst living, will take its place among the notables of the world."

In 1883 Josiah Quincy wrote: "It is by no means improbable that some future textbook, for use of generations yet unborn, will contain a question something like this: What historical American of the nineteenth century has exerted the most powerful influence upon the destinies of his countrymen? And it is by no means impossible that the answer to that interrogatory may be thus written: Joseph Smith, the Mormon prophet." If this is to come true, it will not be due to the incidence of his birth nor of his death, but because of the impact of his teachings on our lives and the thousands yet to come under their influence.

Introducing...

DANIEL TALBERT WILLIAMS, Independence, Missouri, (page 5) was born December 13, 1889, in Lucas County, Iowa. He married Agnes Scott, December 25, 1911. They have two daughters: Mrs. Ruth Banks and Mrs. Betty Brown.

Brother Williams attended public school when a child, but he had to leave while young and go to work in the coal mines. However, he early manifested a studious turn of mind, reading and studying in preparation for his life's work.

While still a young man, he entered the mission field and has served in the following priesthood positions: deacon, priest, elder, high priest. He has served in the presidency of Lamoni Stake and since 1922 he has been a member of the Quorum of Twelve. At the present time he has charge of Nebraska; Iowa; Rock Island, Chicago, and Northeastern Illinois.

ELLA MARIAN WILLMARTH, Toledo, Ohio, (page 10) was born in Council Bluffs, Iowa, but moved to Toledo, Ohio, while young and was baptized there in September of 1903.

In 1911 she married Asa E. Willmarth. They have two sons: Gerard E. and Joseph O. Sister Willmarth was graduated from Scott High School of Toledo in 1934. Her hobbies are reading and writing. She is adult supervisor, a teacher in the women's department, and district publicity agent.

THE SAINTS' HERALD

Volume 96

December 19, 1949

Number 51

EDITORS: The First Presidency: Israel A. Smith, F. Henry Edwards. ASSISTANTS: Leonard J. Lea, Associate Editor; Chris B. Hartshorn, Managing Editor; Kenneth L. Graham, Business Manager.

The Saints' Herald is the official publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, with headquarters at The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri, and is issued through the offices of Herald Publishing House, 103 South Osage Street, Independence, Missouri.

Entered as second-class matter at the post office at Independence, Missouri, under Act of March 3, 1879. Issued weekly at Independence, Missouri. Price, $3.50 per year and $1.75 for six months in advance in the U. S. A., its territories and possessions; Canada, $3.75 per year and $1.90 for six months; other countries, $4.50 per year. Notice of a change of address must be given three weeks ahead of the date that it is to become effective. Accepted for mailing at the special rate of postage provided for in section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized July 21, 1921. Printed in the United States of America.

NEWS FROM APOSTLE OAKMAN

Apostle Percy Farrow has just concluded a series of evening sermons at Saginaw, Michigan. He was preceded by Warren Chelline who preached two sermons at Saginaw, Brother Farrow following through the remainder of the week of Thanksgiving. Brother Farrow's preaching was of a high order, outstanding in its interpretation of the historical process, and his effort resulted in three baptisms. Arrangements for this series were concluded with Apostle Arthur Oakman sometime ago, and he was in attendance at a number of these sermons.

Elder Virgil Billings of the Seventy has recently concluded an outstanding series of meetings at Lansing, Michigan. In this endeavor he was supported by Elder Harry Doty. These two brethren worked closely together and as a result of five weeks intensive work, some twenty people have been baptized or are committed by promise to the ordinance. Five of these baptisms were at Greenville, Michigan, where Brother Doty preached upon successive Sunday nights during the month of November. Twelve or thirteen were baptized at Lansing. Apostle Oakman commends highly the work of these brethren and speaks with appreciation of the good support given the endeavor by Elder Francis Boman and the branch at Lansing as also the Saints at Greenville, along with their pastor, Elder Figmond Spenser.

Elder Luther Troyer has been active in Northern Indiana, and a number of baptisms have resulted over a period of four months. The Saints in Northern Indiana have also been recipients of the ministry of Evangelist Edward Carter and Bishop T. A. Beck. Bishop Beck, appointed to Michigan, is doing an excellent piece of work among the church people. His kindly manner and able personal counsel have been a strength wherever he has gone.

James Daugherty has recently visited all the branches in Wisconsin. Baptismal gains accruing from his missionary endeavor have so far this year amounted to sixty souls. There are many good prospects for church membership left among the people he visited, for wherever he goes, friends are won to the cause of Christ.

MESSIAH CONCERT ON WJR

Blair McClain succeeded in getting "The Goodwill Station" Detroit, Michigan, interested in carrying the program of the Independence "Messiah Choir," on Sunday night December 18. He quotes from a letter:

"In consideration of your request, we are canceling our regular program in order to carry the CBS presentation of Handel's "Messiah." We will, of course, be calling attention to this outstanding broadcast over our own facilities and will appreciate your co-operation in contacting your Great Lakes Mission."

NEW CHURCH BUILDING

About 400 people attended the official opening of the new West College Street Church on December 11. Local florists and members of the Slover Park congregation sent flowers for the occasion. President F. Henry Edwards was the speaker at the 11:00 service, and Apostle E. J. Gleazer was the speaker at the evening service. Apostle Gleazer was also in charge of the Consecration Service held in the afternoon.

(Continued on page 23.)

The Birthday of Our King

"Rejoice greatly, O daughter of Zion; shout, O daughter of Jerusalem: behold thy King cometh unto thee."—Zechariah 9: 9

Rediscovering Christmas

"My new happiness began," said Eric slowly, "with the rediscovery of Christmas. My chief regret now is for the years I wasted in unbelief. I didn't like Christmas because I thought it was based on something false. But all that time I was missing something, and there was a vacant place in my soul, waiting to be filled. Then I heard a wise teacher telling a little child that Christmas is the spirit of loving and giving. That was something I could understand and believe. That, at least, was true. My conversion began at that time We have nothing to give, really, but love. Things and services are incidental. And it isn't what you get that makes you happy, but what you give. At the center of it all is Christ, who personified in himself the Law of Love. Many people in the world would be happier if they could find Christmas again."—The Pilgrimage of Eric Lynn.

Christmas or Xmas?

Dr. Jesse M. Bader, of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, has called upon the Protestant churches to "rescue the observance of Christmas from an emphasis on turkey, tinsel, and presents, and New Year's from headache producing revelry," and to help spiritualize the two holidays.

We can readily and sympathetically join in such a movement. It is needed by the nation and the world. The common celebration of Christmas as most people do it is not bad, but it is lacking in something. Most people have lost the awareness of its spiritual and religious meaning. Christ is being forgotten on his own birthday. We need to restore him to a position of primacy in the observance of Christmas.

Your larger dictionaries will give you two names for this popular festival: "Christmas" and "Xmas." They will solemnly assure you that they mean the same thing. Etymologically, of course, that is correct. But in the practice of celebrating, there is a great difference.

Christmas is the birthday of the Lord Jesus. Xmas is a pagan festival devoted to Santa Claus. Christmas is a beautiful story, a tradition, a celebration too often confined to the churches. Xmas is an annual "potlatch" in which people spend far more than they can afford and struggle with bills and debts for months afterwards. Christmas emphasizes the life of the spirit. Xmas emphasizes material things, physical appetites, and revelry.

Our great sin is revealed in the fact that we are teaching little children to love Santa Claus more than Jesus.

A Lost Holiday

Thanksgiving as a holiday was almost lost this year in the stampede for Christmas swarming around it on all sides. The "thundering herds" of shoppers were thronging the streets and shops, following closely on the flying heels of the papier-maché reindeer, almost running over the last Puritan and his turkey before they could perform their traditional ceremony with the ax and chopping block.

When does Xmas begin? Earlier every year, it seems. People no sooner get the front yard cleaned up from the revelry of the spooks on Halloween than they must prepare for a new invasion by the spirit of Xmas.

It began here in the latter part of September with a display of greeting cards, holly, red ribbon, and tinsel. Some people blame the merchants, but merchants simply meet the demands of the buying public. The early shoppers are prudent folk who are trying to get their business done early enough to avoid the inconveniences, fatigues, and disappointments of the crowds and rushing in the last days, and even weeks before Christmas Day. Let's not try to shift the blame. If the spiritual beauty of Christmas has been turned into a noisy carnival called Xmas, "we the people" are responsible.

Jesus and Santa Claus

In a department store window there is a huge Santa Claus who rolls about in his chair with mechanical delight and roars and chuckles with recorded laughter amplified to tones of thunder. Crowds of people gather to see and hear this amazing creation. On a prominent hill to the south, under the tall spire of a beautiful church, there is a remarkable Nativity scene. Not many people take their children to see the drama of the birth of Jesus. It would be better if parents would give as much attention to the Lord as they do to Santa Claus.

Santa Claus cannot do very much for these people. They don't really need Xmas. They need Christ and the Christmas which stands for him.

A Religious Christmas

We can make Christmas better, more beautiful, more significant this year than it was last year. We can play recordings of the beautiful Christmas music in our homes. We can read the story of the birth of Jesus from the Bible, or we can buy records of it if we prefer. We can put Christ instead of Santa Claus at the center of our Christmas. We can sing the Christmas carols and songs. And we can engage in real Christmas prayer. Christmas can be a beautiful spiritual experience for all of us, if we follow a better plan.

L. J. L.

E d i t o r i a l

Catholic Propaganda

Comparative Report of General Church Income for the First Ten Months, 1948 - 1949

We are submitting herewith the following report of income from January 1 to October 31, which shows a net gain of $33,682.99 for the first ten months of this year over the same period of last year.

	1948	1949	Gain or (Loss)
January	$127,693.99	$147,928.49	$ 20,234.50
February	106,159.28	105,070.09	(1,089.19)
March	82,942.45	87,931.32	4,988.87
April	75,303.15	83,542.28	8,239.13
May	78,055.03	72,177.66	(5,877.37)
June	79,502.20	63,925.78	(15,576.42)
July	62,837.97	76,336.83	13,498.86
August	69,936.63	62,457.49	(7,479.14)
September	65,602.29	73,514.76	7,912.47
October	79,132.75	87,964.03	8,831.28
	$827,165.74	$860,848.73	$ 33,682.99

While this indicates a favorable trend, we are nevertheless hopeful that for the closing month of this year the income will be sufficient to show an even greater increase than that experienced for the first ten months of this year. Our budgetary expenses have also increased substantially, and as there are other needs which will more than exhaust the net increase of income over expenditures, we ask for the continued support of our financial representatives in bringing to the membership of the church the need for compliance with the financial law.

One need which seems to be imperative is that of adding to our Houses of Worship Revolving Fund, and this can be done only out of net increase of income. There are other capital needs such as additional equipment and further work on the Auditorium.

We also wish to report that the total received for Graceland College Day up to the present is $9,320.42.

Respectfully submitted,
 THE PRESIDING BISHOPRIC,
 G. L. DeLapp.

We occasionally receive from our members clippings from the daily newspapers setting out certain claims respecting the Roman Catholic Church—with which they take exceptions. An examination discloses they are paid advertising matter over the name of the Knights of Columbus.

One of these deals with the Bible, calls it a "Catholic Book," and avers it was "preserved" by "Catholic monks and scholars."

"It was the Catholic Church which treasured it and gave it to the world in its original and unaltered form." (Quoted from a recent "ad" in a Detroit paper.)

This claim of course is not believed by Latter Day Saints, and most any Ancient Free and Accepted Mason, if asked, will proceed to tell you how the Holy Scriptures was "preserved" by his order, was "saved for the world" from corruption by the Catholics.

The subject is worth exploring.

Israel A. Smith.

"Cheap" History

We have been shocked at the poor taste exhibited by the editors, sponsors, and publishers of a pictorial history of Illinois entitled This Is Illinois.

The Nauvoo era, that is from its founding through the year of the expulsion of the Latter Day Saints, which seems to be the only period worthy of notice by the compilers, is depicted first by a full-page cut of the Nauvoo Temple, similar to an architect's drawing, and another page showing a "capstone" from the Temple. The next two pages have as a background a half-tone cut of the first page of the Nauvoo Expositor with a picture of the upper room of Carthage Jail, as a center "cut out," where Joseph and Hyrum Smith were killed.

The injustice of this treatment is so obvious one wonders if among the sponsors and editors there was such a paucity of understanding of Nauvoo history that this one single but notorious incident could possibly be elevated to paramount importance in the history of the movement there.

We have written the following letter to the editors and sponsors of the book:

To the Editors and Sponsors of This Is Illinois:

I write you on behalf of myself, as well as the church which I have the honor to represent, concerning your treatment of the Latter Day Saints and Nauvoo. (See pages 58 to 61 inclusive.)

Upon fair consideration of the whole chapter about Nauvoo and the church which founded that city and brought it from a miasmatic swamp to a city of twenty thousand or more, is it not a pretty cheap and distorted appraisal by your editors that you would set it against the background of the Expositor incident, as if that were in any sense a summation of an important though tragic era, an era which was in fact one of marvelous development, and the growth of a religious movement which has had an unquestioned and great impact on the life of this nation?

A scurrilous and bitter attack by less than ten men, whom the Mayor of the City denounced in the Nauvoo Neighbor a few days later as villains and criminals, as "attested by the court records" of the city, is made the central historical fact about Nauvoo. Even if the Latter Day Saints of Utah (the polygamous branch) or the non-polygamous branch, the Reorganized Church, of unquestioned good standing in Illinois, Iowa, and Missouri, were not worthy or entitled to better treatment in your book, the present city of Nauvoo and its thousand inhabitants certainly are worthy of a fairer portrayal.

It may not be possible, because of prejudice, for your compilers and sponsors to experience the emotion, but I believe you ought to be ashamed of this exhibition of poor taste.

ISRAEL A. SMITH.

Christ, the Universal Savior

PART I

By APOSTLE D. T. WILLIAMS

Based on a sermon preached at the Campus, July 10, 1949.

God so loved the world that he gave his Only Begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him should not perish but have everlasting life.—John 3: 16.

TO UNDERSTAND and appreciate the full measure of God's love and concern for the human race, we must keep clearly in mind that we are his children, that his affection for us is far beyond a mother's love for her offspring, and that he created us both physically and spiritually. However, since the Father has provided us our agency, he leaves with us the right to say whether we will or will not be members of his family. We are his children only from the viewpoint of his creation and his desire until we voice our wish or, in other words, cast our vote to be associated in this assembly of the redeemed—the family of God.

God's Family

This determination is accomplished through our decision to affiliate with him and with those who have decided to accept their spiritual destiny in him by associating with his corporate body—the church militant. Such a decision is manifest in our "vote" which, when it is matched with God's desire for our salvation, completes the circle and composes our membership in his church. When with godly purpose we are baptized and take upon ourselves his name, we become members of his household and no longer are only creatures of our Creator but children of the Most High and "heirs of God and joint heirs with Jesus Christ" (Romans 8: 17); "of whom the whole family in heaven and earth is named" (Ephesians 3: 15).

Here let us look back over the vistas of the past and attempt to discover more fully the operation of God's love and his concern for us. First of all, we observe that this present life is but a small segment of God's plan to bring perfection to his creatures, thus eventually making us children worthy of a perfect Father. We were sent here to continue our course of instruction in the elements of the more abundant life which was begun in a previous sphere of activity. In that previous estate the right of agency, or privilege of choice, was granted us. The fact that this course of universal instruction is to continue beyond this life for the vast majority of those seeking eternal life is manifested in the fact that we shall yet live with and learn from the Christ for a thousand years—a period we commonly call the millennium. It is at the end of this latter term of teaching that the greatest teacher and physician of all the ages will hand over the church to his Father "without spot or blemish or any such thing."

This long-term course in the process of salvation is God's way of bringing us to a oneness with himself. Let us now look back to see why, when, and where all this began. What was in the mind of God when he said, "This is my work and my glory, to bring to pass the immortality and eternal life of man"—Doctrine and Covenants 22: 23?

Evidently the "why" of all this is found in a divine Father's eternal affection for his children. "God is love," and no one will ever reach the full measure of his potential who does not accept the hand of Divinity extended to him through the ages. Only as a man learns in turn to become like the Father in loving other men will he develop those attributes capable of making him like his Creator. Our salvation is to be realized only in our developing those qualities which make up the life of God. There is, therefore, great significance in St. Augustine's statement, "For thou hast formed us for thyself, and our hearts are restless 'till they rest in thee."

With this in mind we can better understand the everlasting pressure in the soul of man which pushes him toward his Father's house. There is the true center of his longing, for there is his Father and his Father's family. But in the prodigal spirit of the flesh is the call of the wild, and as Paul once said, "I see another law in my members, warring against the law of my mind, and bringing me into captivity to the law of sin which is in my members."—Romans 7: 22. In the region between these two lies human agency—the right of the soul to choose good or evil. In what he chooses lies either salvation or destruction. Here he makes his choice and turns either to the right or to the left. Blessed is he who chooses righteousness rather than evil—life rather than death.

God's Love

In the distant eons before the foundations of the earth were laid, God in the tremendous power of his vision was able to foresee what would transpire upon his earth, which was not yet created, and to his people, who were not yet brought into being. He foresaw that there would be such conditions among earth's children as would justify his prophet in saying, "All we like sheep have gone astray."—Isaiah 53:6. There is no other word of prophecy, no information in divine history, which would lead us to believe that what had happened to that particular generation had not happened likewise to all other generations of mankind from Adam down to now.

Man's plight and God's concern for him brings us to the unalterable conclusion that the passionate love of the Father for his children would not allow him to remain inactive while observing the everlasting destruction of his spiritual and fleshly progeny. For if they had "all gone astray," the self-evident inference can be none other than that they were in no position to find their way back to their Father's house without direction from some power outside themselves. Even an earthly parent would not stand crystallized in the presence of such impending disaster without making some effort to avert the cataclysmic results. Much less would God be unmoved by this tragic need of the ages.

If, as Isaiah says, "All we like sheep have gone astray," then the only logical deduction we can reach is that there was no one on earth who could bring men back to their Maker and eternal home. This being the case, there is but one conclusion to reach concerning the possibility of man's salvation; God would have to send out from his heaven of security and glory one who, knowing the way, could guide back to safety all those who, while yet exercising their agency, were willing to follow his direction.

Lost in Sin

If all in a group of people go astray in a desert, they are lost—not just one, but all of them. Since all are lost, no one knows the way out. Any effort they put forth to extricate themselves can lead only to their going in circles. So it was to be, as God saw, with men—all were lost in the great Sahara of sin; none knew the way out of this maelstrom of despair. But "God so loved the world" that he sent his Only Begotten Son to show us, through his love and knowledge, the way to "everlasting life."

How God, even before the creation of our race, resolved this point, is seen in the Biblical description of a council held in heaven before the foundations of the earth were laid. God's foreknowledge of humanity's awful plight led him to call upon his Son and Lucifer and possibly others, to lay before them the situation confronting the immortal souls of untold millions who must perish if help in the form of guidance and spiritual invigoration was not offered.

This council was not called because God needed advice; after all, he is the eternal fountain of wisdom, and it is not to be presumed that any other being, regardless of his eminence, could advise or instruct him. The council, if such it may be properly designated, was called for two purposes: firstly, that a capable one might have the opportunity to volunteer his services as the guide or savior of men to show them the "way back," without which they would have been everlastingly defeated; and second, that the one so volunteering and chosen by the Father could receive his commission and instruction for the tremendous task.

To elaborate upon the story of this council, we quote:

And I, the Lord God, spake unto Moses, saying, That Satan whom thou hast commanded in the name of mine

Only Begotten, is the same which was from the beginning; and he came before me, saying, Behold I, send me, I will be thy Son, and I will redeem all mankind, that one soul shall not be lost, and surely I will do it; wherefore, give me thine honor. But behold, my beloved Son, which was my beloved and chosen from the beginning, said unto me; Father, thy will be done, and the glory be thine for ever. Wherefore, because that Satan rebelled against me, and sought to destroy the agency of man, which I, the Lord God, had given him; and also that I should give unto him mine own power; by the power of mine Only Begotten I caused that he should be cast down; and he became Satan.—Genesis 3:1-4, Inspired Version.

From this we discover that two personages, Lucifer, and the Only Begotten Son of the Father, were willing to undertake the mission which was supposed to save countless throngs of humanity from the virus of sin and resulting spiritual death. Our Father had here an exceptionally important mission to assign to the one who would prove himself capable and worthy of the responsibility. The salvation of the world depended on the proper choice.

World to Be Saved From Selfishness

From what was the world to be saved? The general supposition is that it was to be saved from sin. This undoubtedly is correct from a strict application of the term, but as we seek in our thinking a more descriptive phrase, one which will make clearer the point we have in view, we will consider "selfishness" as a substitute. Selfishness is the tap-root of all sins. From self-centeredness springs all the sin in the catalogue of "sinology" and likewise all the crimes in the index of criminology.

Therefore, it would be logical to conclude that whomever the Father would choose to save the world from its selfishness would himself have to be free from selfishness; otherwise, how could he free a world from the evil virus with which he himself was contaminated?

Allow us to suggest here the picture of your community afflicted with an epidemic of a fatal disease. If, in the midst of such a situation, your own family was to become ill and you had your choice of calling a physician clean of every vestige of the awful malady or one who was known to be a carrier of the plague, which would you call? Perhaps you will comment that it is foolish to present such a question in light of so obvious an answer. In this you are entirely correct, but keep in mind that God was under the necessity of making just such a choice. All of these considerations had to be kept in the equation as the Father of Light sought to preserve the eternal principle of agency (the right of freedom of choice) to the one who was to volunteer his services to a world in such self-evident need.

How God Chose a Savior

How God was to make a choice between these two volunteers for this high responsibility of saving a world will soon be obvious. The first one to come forth with the suggestion that he would undertake the task was Lucifer, who accompanied his recommendation of himself with the words, "I will be thy Son, and I will redeem all mankind that one soul shall not be lost, and surely I will do it, wherefore give me thine honor."—Genesis 3: 2.

Lucifer was willing to accept this important mission upon the basis of his own provision. What he was saying was, "I will go and redeem the world with 100 per cent efficiency; I will save everyone." However, this prince of heaven held one reservation; before he would undertake such an assignment he wanted to be guaranteed full credit for the work. "I will go," he said, "if I may have thy honor." God must have listened with the foreknowledge that such would be the attitude of Lucifer, but also with full appreciation of the fact that the rights of all must be preserved—even the right to do wrong. So God heard Lucifer through and then waited the approach of his Son as a volunteer for the great mission.

The Son's proposal was simple and to the point; the effect of which was, "I will go and redeem the world, if the world be willing, and the glory be thine." There was here no promise of 100 per cent efficiency; there was no demand for all the honor and glory. With Lucifer, there was the desire for fame rather than service to lost souls; there was love only for self and a seeking for the glory that might be consumed in selfish ambitions. With the Son there was no such self-centered considerations entering into the proposal. "I will go, and the glory be thine," was the essence of his reply.

The time had come for God to manifest his choice. Since the mission to be performed was that of saving a world from selfishness and since one afflicted with such a disease would not be a proper instrument for the salvation of mankind, even if God were said to be limited in his foreknowledge, he needed only to look at the words of each volunteer to discover which one was qualified and which he would send on such a tremendous assignment.

The Choice Is Made

In Lucifer's acceptance there was a complete manifestation of the selfish spirit, which of necessity disqualified him—"I will go if I can have the glory." In the expression of the Only Begotten Son was the complete revelation of unselfishness—"The glory be thine." In light of these things is it any wonder God chose his Son and rejected Lucifer as the redeemer of mankind?

But at this juncture the critic may lift his head with the caustic observation, "It is self-evident why your God would choose his Son in preference to Lucifer. I was under the impression that your God taught you to be unselfish, but instead I discover by this story that he is more selfish even than this Lucifer whom you so seriously condemn and consign to the eternal pit. How do I reach such a conclusion? From the very fact that your God refuses to choose one who was willing to give a 100 per cent performance in saving the whole human race and chooses one of less efficiency. And why? Because the first wanted a proper and just remuneration for a task well done, and the second was willing to do the task gratis and permit the Father to retain for and to himself the benefits which should by rights go to the one performing the mission. How can such a God demand altruism of a race of men, if indeed there is a God?"

What is the answer to such an accusation? First of all let us observe that a God who has made the universe with its billions of blazing suns need not stoop to confiscate the lesser glory of any of his creatures. Rather, his greatness is enhanced in the glory of their illumination.

No, the answer to this challenge is not that God was selfish, but rather that he had this tremendous work to do and what he needed was not someone who could do no better than boast of his ability to do the task, but one who possessed in his nature the ability for such a great achievement. In the screening previous to acceptance of the responsibility, Lucifer's selfishness and his complete lack of comprehension of the requirements in the situation completely disqualified him for a task in which unselfishness was a prerequisite and a qualifying element for continuance in such a demanding situation. Upon the other hand, the Only Begotten Son qualified in every way to justify his appointment as the Savior of the world. Selfishness and sin were not in him. Herein lies the meaning of the text: "God so loved the world that he gave his Only Begotten Son."

In Part Two of this feature we will discuss Lucifer's second point of failure and discover how the Only Begotten Son continues to qualify for the position of the world's redeemer.

“Stille Nacht, Heilige Nacht”

(Silent Night, Holy Night) — By GEORGE BAIER

IS THERE ANYTHING which conveys more solemnly the spirit of Christmas than this carol? It was first sung in the little Tyrolean village of Hallein. On Christmas Eve in 1818 the village priest wrote the words, and on Christmas Day the teacher to whom he had shown them composed the music. Years have come and gone, and new inventions have changed man's way of life, but the song—as unchangeable as Christmas itself—remains the traditional accompaniment of true Christmas spirit during good times and bad.

The time of the Holy and Peaceful Night takes one's memory back to previous Christmases and invites comparisons.

Let us look at a typical German Christmas in the good old days prior to the two world wars. There were rich and poor then; but a certain prosperity lay over the land, and actual want existed in few cases. Weeks before Christmas, preparations were started—presents were prepared, cakes and cookies made—and as Christmas Eve drew near, the excitement increased. Husbands were planning, mothers scheming, and children looking forward. People forgot their everyday sorrows and worries. The climax came on December 24. When dusk settled, a great hush fell over the whole house. Children, in a separate room, glued their faces to the window, hoping they might catch a glimpse of the “Christ child” and Father Christmas coming down to earth in their golden sledge drawn by many reindeer and laden with all the beautiful things childish hearts longed for. In the adjoining room, parents decorated the tree and laid out gifts. At last the tinkle of a little silver bell announced the great moment. The family gathered before the bedecked tree and sang Christmas songs. With exclamations of joy, the children discovered their gifts. Christmas Day and Boxing Day were days of peace and inspiration. They were spent in remembrance of the birth of the Savior, and the spirit of brotherhood and forgiveness reigned.

THEN CAME WORLD WAR I. Men, torn from their families, looked up to heaven from trenches with the wish that peace might be restored soon. Women and children at home hoped and prayed that their husbands and fathers might return. Many did not, but peace came at last, putting a stop to man-made misery, and the candles on the Christmas tree seemed to burn brighter.

After a period of recovery, a new scourge came—World War II. Again families were torn apart, yet, under these sadly changed conditions, Christmas stood for everything that was good: peace, love, forgiveness. As the war continued, everyday living was changed fundamentally. Increasingly days and nights were spent in air-raid-shelters; town dwellers sent their children to the country for comparative safety; once-beautiful homes were reduced to rubble, and the shadow of death was constantly present. In the midst of this, Christmas Eve was like a peaceful little island in a turbulent sea. Though many of the children were far from home, there were still little Christmas trees or the facsimile of one made from twigs and lighted with one or two small candles.

Then came the end of the war, but not yet peace. Peace is such a beautiful word it could not be applied to the state of affairs then prevailing. Utter exhaustion, hopelessness, poverty, and loneliness were everywhere. There were those who had lost not only their homes and belongings but also their beloved ones. There were countless men still in captivity. To all this misery came physical hardships from terrible housing conditions, lack of food, clothing, and fuel. It was the deepest wretchedness the German people had ever gone through.

Gradually things have improved. Housing conditions are still very bad and food is still short although no longer at starvation level. Clothing—though expensive—is obtainable in restricted quantities. Much gratitude is due for the generosity and kindness of friends abroad, particularly those in America, who have done much to relieve the distress.

WHY THESE RECOLLECTIONS?

By looking back, we realize that the light of Christmas has never ceased to shine, no matter how dark the night. No horror or misery has been able to extinguish the spark. Again we celebrate the festival of love, and should we not be able to hope that lasting peace may come?

There is no reason why peace should not be universal as it becomes manifest in those beautiful Christmas customs and carols.

This year we celebrate Christmas more hopefully than we have for many years. If we look carefully, we can detect a little resemblance to the old, almost forgotten hustle and excitement which went with the weeks preceding Christmas Eve. The time-honored Christmas Fair in the market square where one can buy articles attracts children and grown-ups as in former days. In the church yards, graves of beloved ones are topped with little fir trees in the traditional way. And in public squares there stands a Christmas tree with lights for all to see and to remind them of the event that happened 1,949 years ago.

A Prophetic Drama - By JOHN BLACKMORE

And when they were come into the house, they saw the young child with Mary his mother, and fell down, and worshiped him: and when they had opened their treasures they presented unto him gifts; gold, and frankincense, and myrrh.

YOU WILL RECOGNIZE that this text is from the account of the Wise Men's visit to the babe Jesus. The incident is typical of the East. There is pomp and ceremony and a certain philosophical extravagance. These Wise Men of the East entered the scene with a flare of pageantry and ceremoniously presented to the young child their gold, frankincense, and myrrh, and then passed out of the picture. They returned to their own country and apparently had no further contact with Christ. Here we have enacted a sort of prophetic pantomime. The Wise Men pay homage to the "babe" and then for some reason march completely off the stage. At least we hear no more about them.

A Speculation

These Wise Men were alien astrologers, foreign in thought and practice. Their basic philosophy to the significance of Jesus' birth and later life differed from that of Christians. Their peculiar belief and the subsequent teachings of the adult Jesus were widely divergent. What would have happened if these Wise Men had stayed on in Palestine and listened to Jesus in his ministry of teaching? Of course, it is impossible to answer that question.

They may have turned aside and mocked the Christ and his simple philosophy of life. They may have opposed and persecuted the Master as he taught along the roadside. Chances are they would have stood intellectually by the side of the road and philosophized about the Nazarene and his social experiment. We do not know. But, in this spectacular incident there is the element of a happy prophecy.

A Prophetic Pantomime

I view this scene of the visit of the Wise Men as a prophetic pantomime. I see in it a comforting augury of what will eventually happen. It is a prophetic and divinely inspired drama, very human in its enactment, with far-reaching significance. The whole message of this Oriental scene is that eventually all learning, education, statesmanship, and science must bend the knee to Christ. It will not be a submission by force or violence. It must be a voluntary submission dictated by the intuitive knowledge and understanding that Christ, with his simple philosophy of life, is the ultimate master.

These Wise Men followed a "star" that led them to a prompt recognition of the sonship of Jesus and his ultimate kingship. Their entrance into the homey circle of a mother, her babe, and her carpenter husband was indeed a prophetic scene.

The Wise Men of a Decade Past

A few years ago the wise men of the world thought they were building toward security and good will. Today "peace conferences" and United Nations sessions produce distrust and suspicion among the countries. Sometimes this is hidden beneath a flow of courteous, diplomatic language.

A decade or so ago scientists working in the laboratories prophesied that we were entering into an era of plenty. Under the stimulus of scientific agriculture and machinery, the earth was to bring forth plenty for all. Hunger and want were to be banished from the earth. Today, millions in Europe and Asia starve. Wise men in the research laboratories prophesied of man's ultimate control over disease. Health and vigor were to be available for nearly everybody even into the period of old age. Today, much of the earth's populace languish in the recent epidemic of death and destruction.

A few years ago technicians prophesied the growth of fraternal feeling among men because of the ease of long distance travel and the speed of international communication. Today, a large portion of the world lays behind an "iron curtain," and international "spheres of influence" are being created.

Wise men of social life have prophesied that because of the wonderful development in production, transportation, communication, and specialized learning, we would all, as nations, know each other better and therefore we would love each other more. But mechanical and economic development does not necessarily mean the social and spiritual improvement of society. All of our bewildering development of things means little unless accompanied by a personal, spiritual improvement. Our mechanical creations without the acceptance of Christ will prove to be another "Tower of Babel."

Christ Is Our Hope

"Christ is the hope of the World" cries the church; but there are many and varied concepts of Christ, some of them completely contradictory. To the Moslem, Jesus the Christ was one of a long line of prophets of which Mahomet was the last and greatest. To the Jew, Jesus was merely an imposter assuming the place of the "Messiah" who is yet to come. To the Buddhist, Jesus was just another philosopher of little importance. To the cynics, atheists, and scoffers, Jesus is a byword, an expression suitable only for an oath.

(Continued on page 22.)

Christmas Reminiscences

ELLEN MADDEN stepped briskly down the street, the snow crunching and squeaking beneath her heavy galoshes. The wind whipped her skirt about her slender ankles as she shifted the heavy market basket she was carrying from one arm to another and drew her coat more closely about her slim figure.

"More snow," she commented as she raised a speculative eye to the scurrying clouds overhead. "Hope it holds off till John gets here. The train is due at seven o'clock. I must hurry home and get the chicken in the oven; then I'll bake an apple pie—His favorite," she smiled into her fur collar.

She quickened her pace as she neared the little cottage that sat somewhat aloof from its neighbors at the end of Elm Street. It looked like an enlarged Christmas card with the festoons of yesterday's snow still clinging to the evergreens about the porch. Ellen smiled, noting the crisp holly wreath hanging in the bay window. "How nice it looks against the new curtains," she thought with housewifely pride.

She latched the front gate behind her and hurried up the walk and around to the back door. At her entering the kitchen, Shep, the old watch dog, stirred in uneasy slumber on his favorite chair before the fire.

"How good it seems to be getting a meal for John," she thought happily as she bustled about the kitchen. "I'm glad I dressed the chicken this morning," she smiled and placed the plump bird in the roasting pan. "I'll make the pie next, and then I'll have time to finish my mending before I set the table and peel the potatoes. John will like these," she thought, taking two tall, red candles from the market basket. "He always said they make a meal more festive, especially at Christmas time. They'll show up my new linen tablecloth. John doesn't know how I've pinched pennies this year to buy it."

She brought out the baking utensils, and soon the spicy odor of apple pie drove out the last vestige of loneliness that pervaded the little cottage. "Five o'clock," she observed, "only two more hours." Picking up an article of clothing from the sewing machine, she made her way into the living room and sat down on a low rocker by the window that framed a view of the snow-covered landscape. In the distance the village church spire pointed toward a lowering sky. "The wind's rising," she thought as she stooped to pick a scrap of bright percale from the work basket at her feet. The blue house dress on her lap had seen better days, but with careful mending it could be made to give further service.

A sudden gust of wind seemed to seize the cottage and shake it viciously. "The storm's here," Ellen sighed as she glanced out the window at the myriads of tiny flakes that zig-zagged in intricate confusion. "It's from the west, too. I hope the train isn't late." Again she took the letter from her apron pocket and held it meditatively in her hand. She knew every word of it from memory. "I'll be home on the seven o'clock train Christmas Eve. Don't come to the station to meet me; the weather may be inclement. I'd rather our meeting should not be witnessed by curious bystanders." She glanced in the mirror that hung on the opposite wall. Yes, her dark hair was streaked with silver, and there was a suggestion of crows feet at the corners of her eyes—laugh wrinkles, John called them—but she was still slender and trim in her neat cotton dress.

She finished the dress she was mending and sat musing in the early winter twilight. A shrill ringing of the doorbell startled her from her reverie. "Who can that be?" she questioned as she hastened to the door. Peering through the curtains, she saw a young man in uniform standing upon the porch. The blood drained from her face when she saw the yellow envelope he held in his hand. "Oh, no, God," she whispered, "don't let anything be wrong with John."

Summoning all her courage, she opened the door. "Sign here," the boy pointed, handing her the message. With trembling hands she scribbled her name, then slowly closed the door on his retreating figure. Leaning weakly against the wall in the deepening shadows, she fumbled for the light switch. Tearing open the envelope, she eagerly scanned the printed page, then a sigh of intense relief escaped her white lips. "Oh, thank God, he's safe," she breathed.

WONT BE HOME FOR CHRISTMAS STOP TRAINS HELD UP BY HEAVY SNOWSTORM JOHN

Disappointment enveloped her as she walked to the kitchen and opened the oven door. The pie was done; thick juicy syrup oozed from the crust, and the chicken was turning a golden brown. She lifted the pie from the oven, while tears trickled down her cheeks. She recalled the happy anticipation of the last few days. "It's always been this way," she sobbed. "Other women have their husbands while I must sit alone—and on Christmas too."

By MARIAN WILLMARTH

Later she sat down at the kitchen table to her solitary supper, but no candles gleamed softly on white linen. She tried to eat, but the food seemed to choke her, and she could not swallow for the lump in her throat. Rising from the table, she put the food away and washed the few dishes. She fed Shep, who once more eased himself into the old rocker before the kitchen stove.

Returning to the living room, she went to the window and parting the curtains, looked up and down the street. The elms bent low beneath their burden of white, while Christmas trees from neighboring windows shed beams that lay like winter roses on the snow. From the village church tower the bells chimed "Silent Night." Turning from the window she sobbed bitterly, "Christmas Eve, and I must sit alone."

SHE replenished the fire in the huge iron stove, then seating herself took up the soft wool sweater she was knitting for John. Doing something for him seemed to bring her comfort. The snow was turning to sleet and tapped like icy fingers upon the windowpanes. It reminded her of a Christmas Eve thirty years ago. How vividly it stood out in her memory as she listened to the wind whip the naked branches of the trees! She seemed to hear again the sleigh bells and John's voice above the storm as he shouted "Whoa," to the horses. Then the door opened and he stood on the threshold. His sudden intake of breath made her heart swell with happiness. She remembered his whispered greeting, "you're lovely." Together they drove through the blinding storm to the old brick church. She recalled the sea of happy faces as they turned from the altar to walk down the aisle after the ceremony. She could smell the piney odor of the great Christmas tree, aglow with softly gleaming candles.

Two years of married happiness, and it was Christmas Eve again. There was the same lowering sky, heavy with snow, and the same moaning wind, as it lashed among the elms. Through a maze of pain she heard her mother's voice, "Come, John, and eat a bite." Dimly she noted the doctor's whiteclad figure going from bedroom to kitchen and back again. A few minutes before the clock on the living room shelf chimed the hour of midnight, a baby's voice penetrated her fogged brain, and she heard her mother say, "A little boy, born just before midnight." After that she realized the meaning of true happiness as she cuddled John Junior's fragrant sweetness in her arms.

Thus reminiscing, she recalled an evening that was etched vividly upon her memory. It was Christmas Eve—John Junior's second birthday. She saw the stranger drop a pamphlet at her door as she sat by the window mending. It seemed that mending had been her vocation in life. She recovered it from a gust of wind and returned to the house to scan it. Strange words greeted her eyes, "The Gospel Restored, Come and hear the Angel Message." A list of subjects to be discussed followed. "Faith," "Repentance"—they were familiar; their minister often preached on these subjects. "Baptism," yes, occasionally there was a sermon on baptism and the rite administered to babies and new converts before a flower banked altar. But the pamphlet said, "Baptism by immersion for the remission of sin." She had never heard it thus. "Baptism is an outward sign of an inward grace," she remembered quoting. Stranger still, the pamphlet listed "Baptism of the Holy Ghost, by the laying on of hands, Gifts of the Spirit, Authority of the Priesthood, and Life after Death." Elder Underhill would discuss these subjects at the old brick church where she and John had been married and where John Junior had been christened.

She recalled showing the pamphlet to John when he came in from work. "Let's go hear what the elder has to say," she had suggested.

A large congregation had assembled when they arrived. She recalled the air of expectancy that pervaded the atmosphere and reflected on the faces of those assembled. She visualized the surly, almost vindictive expression on the face of old Deacon Winters as Elder Underhill rose to read his text from the third chapter of St. John: "Ye must be born again." "Putting off the old man, being buried with Christ in baptism—no sprinkling there—and rising to newness of life," that was the way Elder Underhill presented it—a lovely way, too, Ellen remembered thinking.

That night and the nights that followed had opened new vistas to her, for, after the elder had been denied the use of the church by an irate pastor and crotchety old deacon, some of the kind people of the town had opened their homes to this servant of God. But a strained relationship seemed to have crept up between her and John. One incident stood out vividly in her mind. Elder Underhill had concluded his series with a baptismal service which she and John had attended. The weather was bitterly cold, and as the little group stood on the bank of the frozen river, several of her acquaintances walked to where the elder stood in a hole which had been cut through the ice.

"Anyone who would be baptized at this time of year is crazy," John had whispered, as one of the candidates was placed beneath the icy water. She recalled the sickening revulsion that swept over her. She sensed so keenly the beauty and sacredness of the occasion and her own overwhelming desire to enter into covenant relationship with God. But in the days that followed, the powers of darkness seemed leagued against her. Bitter words replaced the endearing terms with which John usually addressed her. One evening in a blaze of anger he told her that unless she refrained from talking about the subject he would pack his clothes and leave. That night she slept little, and with the dawning she had crept out of bed. Going to the living room she knelt in prayer. John found her there and with tears thickening his voice had said he would no longer stand between her and the church.

Then one glorious Sunday afternoon in autumn, when the trees flaunted gold and crimson banners and the haze of Indian summer hung over the landscape, she stood on the bank of the sun-flecked river. Elder Underhill was there, and as he led John into the waters of regeneration she thought this world could hold no greater happiness.

"I have never regretted the step," she whispered, and the needles clicked in and out of the soft wool sweater, "but I didn't realize what it would cost me. I have spent years alone while he has been away preaching the gospel." Tears of self-pity rolled down her cheeks.

THE wind continued to howl, driving the sleet like tiny hammers against the window pane. The logs in the iron stove crackled and snapped, giving off the pungent odor of pine forests. The rhythmical ticking of the clock and the warmth from the fire seemed to seep into her brain. Gradually her eyelids drooped, the knitting fell from her hands, and she slept. In her dream she stood on the bank of a gently flowing stream. In the limped waters a few feet from the bank, John stood with his right hand raised to heaven. She distinctly heard him utter the impressive words, "Having been commissioned of Jesus Christ, I baptize you in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost." Then she saw him place beneath the water an individual dressed in white. As she turned from the scene, her eyes suffused with tears, she saw a white-robed figure standing beside her. "Come with me," the angel said as he preceded her down a road that stretched away into the distance. Despite his presence, a sense of intense loneliness seized her as she gazed on either side at barren rocks and deep shadows. "Look yonder," the angel pointed. She raised her eyes, and in the distance she could see the towers of a city over which a soft light shimmered. As she and the angel drew near and passed through the gates, she saw a familiar figure in the distance. He was surrounded by a large gathering of people all pressing forward in an effort to clasp his hand.

"It's John," she cried turning to the angel.

"Yes, it's John," the angel replied. "These are the souls he has garnered for the kingdom of God. These are they who shall live and reign with Christ a thousand years. I have seen your loneliness and sacrifice, but because of it you shall share the blessing. Be no longer despondent but rejoice that you are counted worthy to share in this great task."

ELLEN awoke with a start, the dream so projecting itself into her world of reality that she turned, half expecting to see the angel at her side. As the full significance of the vision burst upon her, she sank to her knees in contrition and shame. "Oh, God," she pleaded, "forgive my selfish complaining. I thank thee that mine has been the blessed privilege of sharing as a missionary's wife."

The next day, as she sat at the table, eating her solitary Christmas dinner, her heart swelled with gratitude. How could she ever be lonely again? Another telegram lay by her plate, received that morning. It read: MERRY CHRISTMAS TO MY CO-WORKER IN CHRIST STOP SORRY I CAN'T BE WITH YOU TODAY STOP ALL MY LOVE JOHN

The Messiah Choir of 1949

THIS PICTURE of the 1949 Messiah Choir was taken at a regular rehearsal period on Sunday afternoon, November 27. When contrasted with the picture of the chorus of 1916 in last week's Herald the growth of the chorus becomes apparent. The Conference choir in April of that year numbered 130; the choir which sang The Messiah the following December, about 160. This year's membership is 280. The peak year of membership was 1941—the twenty-fifth anniversary of the chorus—when the total registration was 315. The picture also shows some of the recent changes in the Stone Church, including a new rostrum and pulpit, and the grill-work of the new organ, which was installed late this fall.

This chorus, accompanied by forty-three selected members from the Kansas City Philharmonic Orchestra and directed by Franklyn S. Weddle, will sing The Messiah over Station KMBC of Kansas City and the coast-to-coast network of the Columbia Broadcasting System on Sunday night, December 18, from 10:30 p. m. to midnight, Central Standard Time. This will be the thirty-third annual Christmas presentation of The Messiah by this chorus, and the eleventh appearance on CBS. Soloists will be Josephine Crinklaw Mader of Kansas City, soprano; Harriett Porter Moore of Des Moines, Iowa, contralto; Garland E. Tickemyer of Los Angeles, California, tenor; and John Macdonald of Chicago, Illinois, bass.

The work of our own two members, Mrs. Mader and Mr. Tickemyer, is already well-known to church members throughout the United States. Mrs. Mader has sung in five previous broadcasts, and Mr. Tickemyer in six. Mrs. Mader is the mother of four children, has a class of vocal students in Kansas City, and is in constant demand for concert and radio work. Mr. Tickemyer is now president of our Los Angeles Metropolitan Area congregation, where he is also continuing his vocal studies under some of the excellent teachers of Hollywood.

Harriett Porter Moore received her training under Coenraad Bos, William Van Geisen, Charles Baker, and others. She has appeared as soloist with the Iowa State Symphony Orchestra on tour through the larger Iowa cities; and while in New York sang under the baton of Leopold Stokowski, Leonard Bernstein, and Robert Shaw. She has sung the alto roles in many oratorio performances at the Union Theological Seminary, and also has a Bachelor of Music Degree from the University of Michigan.

John Macdonald began his musical career at the age of eight, graduated from Northwestern University in 1929, and studied with Carl Beecher, Leo Sowerby, John Dwight Sample, Dino Bigalli, and Leo Kopp. He has appeared as soloist with the Chicago Civic Orchestra, the Chicago Opera Company, and has been featured as soloist on the Chicago Theater of the Air and the Chicagoland Music Festival.

Another presentation of The Messiah will be given in The Auditorium in Independence on the night of December 25, at 8:00 p.m., accompanied by the Independence Symphony Orchestra. Soloists for this performance will be Elizabeth Wilkinson Vaughn, Jeanette Nichols, Donald Pyper, and Herbert Lively.

Question Time

Any sincere question from our readers will receive consideration from the editors. If it is of general interest, it will be referred to the Question Time panel, and the answer will be printed. Please keep the question short—fifty words or less should be sufficient. Your personal problems, the answers to which concern you alone, will be answered by letter. Address questions to Herald Editors rather than panel members. We shall try to take all questions in the order they are received. Be patient, there may be several ahead of yours. Only signed questions sent by contributors will appear here.—EDITOR.

QUESTION:

In the parable of the ten virgins: What did their lamps represent? What did the oil in their lamps represent? What class of people were the foolish virgins in the day Christ spoke the parable? What caused them to be foolish? Was it the lack of faith? If so, what did they lack faith in? What was the reason the foolish virgins didn't carry an extra vessel as the wise virgins did? Do we have foolish virgins today? If so, what is the cause of their being foolish?

Texas

W.I.S.

ANSWER:

The parable of the ten virgins deals with the second coming of Christ and the preparation made by those expecting his return. Many commentators miss the meaning of this parable by failing to notice the significance of the first verse. The ten virgins "went forth to meet the bridegroom." This indicates a destination, because they would hardly have gone forth unless they had known where they were going. Today the rendezvous they have is with the Lord, and the Lord is coming to Zion (Isaiah 59:20). The whereabouts of Zion has been revealed (Doctrine and Covenants 57:1) and the "going forth" of the ten virgins is now on.

The lamps are our individual beliefs in the gospel of Christ. "Thy word is a lamp unto my feet" (Psalm 119:105), and the ten virgins are believers in that word. It is the cause for their going forth.

The oil is a symbol of the Holy Spirit. Many people believe the gospel of the Son of God but do not do what the gospel tells them to. The Holy Spirit is given only to the one who has "the commandments, and keepeth them."—John 14:21. That is where the responsibility comes in. In latter-day revelation this fact has been stressed over and over again (Doctrine and Covenants 56:6; 94:5; 140:5). Zion is more than a locality. It is a condition of the heart, a love for Christ and his instructions. It is oil in the lamp.

The answers to the rest of the questions are evident. We could hardly take the parable to mean the first coming of Christ. The Jews who did not believe in him and his message were the foolish virgins when the parable was spoken. The things that cause people to be foolish virgins are many. Usually they are carnal desires (Romans 8:6).

It is to be regretted, but we still have foolish virgins today. Many of our people are grabbing for the transitory instead of the eternal. They have no oil in their lamps.

George Njeim.

QUESTION:

Since we have been legally adjudged to be the original church, why can we not have exclusive use of the name, letting the church in Utah find another? Since by rebaptism and changing the doctrines and ordinances it has become a different church, we are entitled to the original name as well as the property, thus avoiding mountains of confusion.

Montana

Mrs. B. W. F.

ANSWER:

This question has arisen before, and we are glad to give consideration to it. I personally regret that the Reorganized Church did not hold to the original name. We did so until October, 1866; but for some reason not known to me (and I have tried to discover it) it was then changed. Of course there is a timeliness for such matters, and I doubt if the courts could be successfully appealed to now to compel the disuse of the name by the Mormons.

On the other hand, I do not believe we could be prevented or stopped from using any name we want, since the courts would likely hold that none can be considered the exclusively divine favorite. That is, who can say they have the right—to the exclusion of all others—to use the name of Jesus Christ?

The Book of Mormon says his church should be called by his name

(III Nephi 13:18-20, pages 672-673). It is possible that there would be some advantages to changing the name of the church. A change has at times been discussed in the church councils; but the sentiment seemed to be that the burdens assumed by changing would be greater than we now have. And besides we are gradually becoming so well known that the change is not so desirable as in former years.

It is true that the Mormon church is another, a new organization, changed from the original in doctrine and practice; all admitted by their well-known rebaptisms on the way to and upon reaching Salt Lake.

There is much to consider, but it may be worthy of our time and thought.

Israel A. Smith.

QUESTION:

What is the origin of the statement, "If this people do not establish Zion, God will raise up a people who will"?

ANSWER:

We have no information as to whom or when this statement was first made, though it is probable that it was spoken oratorically by some one of the elders in the early years of the Reorganization, and by repetition became a commonplace expression, assumed by many to be Scriptural. It is not found in the revelations, though the statement might easily have sprung from the latter portion of paragraph two, section 100, of the Doctrine and Covenants.

Charles Fry.

QUESTION

Since people will be held accountable for their own actions and not for Adam's transgression, how do you reconcile Romans 5:17-19?

New York

J. S.

ANSWER

The summation of this Scripture says: "For as by one man's disobedience [Adam's] many were made sinners, so by the obedience of one [Christ] shall many be made righteous." When Adam transgressed, the sentence of death was passed on the human race. Paul taught that Christ's life was the ransom paid to free us—and his atonement set us free from the debt. Therefore, men are baptized for the remission of their own sins and not those of their forefathers.

A. ORLIN CROWNOVER.

A Birthday Gift for Jesus

By Edgar Pillsbury

It was a brisk, chilly Christmas Eve—the proverbial “White Christmas” we all dream of. The blinding snow which had begun earlier in the day was piling up along the streets of the little town and blowing into the eyes of the passing throng.

People greeted each other with the usual “Merry Christmas,” and occasionally someone would call to a friend, “Haven’t seen anything like this since I was a youngster.”

It seemed that the whole populace had assembled itself in the downtown district for last-minute shopping. Men and women passed, some so tired they could hardly plow through the snow, while children skipped along as fleet as rabbits. Clerks in the stores looked fatigued. The long ordeal of the Christmas rush was about over, and in their drawn faces was the anticipation of welcome relief.

On the corner of one of the crowded streets stood a well-dressed boy of about ten and his father who was carrying a number of gayly-wrapped Christmas presents they’d received at the church party.

Bucking the strong wind, they began walking down the narrow street. The lad suddenly looked up at his father with a thoughtful expression on his face and asked, “Dad, why do people give presents at Christmas?”

The father looked perplexed, “Haven’t you been told a number of times that this is the birthday of Jesus? I’m a little disappointed that you’ve forgotten.”

“Yes, but if this is the birthday of Jesus, why do people give each other presents? Why not give him presents? It’s his birthday.”

“I guess not many people ever think of giving a birthday present to Jesus,” answered the father.

The child continued. “Well, when other people have birthdays, we give them presents; we don’t exchange gifts with someone else. Dad, if you could give something to Jesus for his birthday, would you?”

“I certainly would.”

“What would you give him?”

“I don’t really know. There isn’t much we could give Jesus.”

Finally the boy said, “Dad, there is something I can give Jesus.”

“And what is that?” asked the father.

“I could give Jesus myself and a promise to live the very best I can.”

The father smiled at the wisdom of his son’s decision. “Truly,” he thought, “A little child shall lead them.”

SPECIAL COMBINATION RATE for subscriptions expiring in January and February.

Saints' Herald

and

Daily Bread

both magazines, 1 year, now just $4.50
(to one address)

CANADA — $4.90

OTHER COUNTRIES — $5.85

Order From HERALD HOUSE

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI

*Each One
Win One Tract Packet*

$1

Contains one each:

Joseph Smith Tells His Own Story
Church Membership Is Important
Latter Day Saints and What They Believe

What Is Christ's Church?

The Book of Mormon, an Introductory Survey

Faith of Our Fathers

What Latter Day Saints Believe About God

Doctrinal References

Busy Man 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7

herald house

Independence, Mo.

Letters

Activities in the Utah District

The past year has been an encouraging one for the Saints of the Utah District. Although it is not possible to give all of the details in this letter, we wish to let our many friends know of our increased activity and hope for the future.

During the past twelve months we have met four times in district meetings, once for the district Christmas program, twice for district conferences, and once for the rededication of the Provo Branch properties commemorating the fiftieth anniversary of the building of the chapel there. Attendance at these meetings has been most encouraging. In spite of severe weather, there were more than seventy-five people at each of the winter meetings. Our fall conference and later the Provo rededication saw more than one hundred gathered together in fellowship. At each of these meetings, we have noted the increased degree of God's Spirit and feel that we have been truly blessed.

There has been an increased attendance in each of the individual branches with Salt Lake City showing the biggest gains. Sunday morning attendance there now ranges between thirty-five and forty-five.

A fine spirit of co-operation between the members of the church, branch leaders, and general church personnel has made possible a good increase in baptisms for the year. Seventeen in all have entered into fellowship with us, and there are a number of prospective members who meet with us much of the time.

The local priesthood has worked to help integrate activities. Branch presidents and their counselors for the coming year are as follows: Malad City, Idaho, Elders E. E. Richards and William P. Jones; Ogden, Utah, Elder Alfred H. Yale; Salt Lake City, Utah, Elders James D. Wardle and Ralph R. Briggs, and Priest Silas Egan, Jr.; Provo, Utah, Elder James A. Everett and Priest R. A. Nies. These men have done an excellent job in the past, and we anticipate much from their fine ministry in the future.

We could not pass without noting the fine work of the women in the district and branches. Looking back over the years, one realizes that much of the credit for even maintaining the work in Utah goes to them. Their devotion to the cause and their untiring efforts will continue to play an important part in the growth of the work here.

Although our youth work has many handicaps, we have been able to hold one youth institute under the leadership of James A. Everett and Richard A. Nies. We feel sure that all participating were amply repaid for their efforts. In Ogden, we have a fine Oriole Circle under the leadership of Sister Madonna Herbert.

The work of the department of religious education has been intensified under the leadership of Brother A. H. Yale. Some in the district are now taking classes for credit, and we anticipate at least two week-end religious education institutes during the coming year in addition to emphasis which can be placed in district conferences.

The outstanding event of the year was the rededication of the Provo Branch properties. The people there had worked hard to completely remodel their church facilities, and the results have brought much favorable comment from the community. On this occasion we were privileged to have President Israel A. Smith with us. His kind ministry was appreciated by all.

It is not possible to list all of the district officers at this time, but we will note the names of members of the district presidency. They are Elders Ralph R. Briggs, Alfred H. Yale, and James A. Everett. With the help of the other officers of the district, we feel sure much good work will be accomplished in the coming year.

We have been privileged to receive of the fine ministry of a number of General Church officers: President Israel A. Smith, Apostles Charles R. Hield, Paul M. Hanson, W. Wallace Smith, Patriarchs William Patterson, and F. A. Smith, and Dr. F. M. McDowell. Their ministry has been sincerely appreciated and has brought forth fruits.

We of the Utah District are grateful to God for his blessings and pray that we may be true to the trust he has placed in our hands.

RUSSELL F. RALSTON, Associate Minister in charge Utah and Western Colorado.
336 South Fourth Street,
Salt Lake City, Utah.

Helps Tell the Gospel Story

Last spring a Bible salesman came to our door and asked if he could talk to us. We invited him in, and he began telling us about the Scriptures. Then he wanted to know what church we attended. I told him that we usually attended the Church of Christ because it was nearest our home but that we belonged to the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. (We have no branch in Spearman.) Before he left we gave him a set of Busy Man's Tracts and told him about our church publishing house. He promised to read these before he went to bed. We were glad to be able to bear our testimony to him and hope to meet others like him who are seeking the truth.

MRS. W. A. SIMMONS.
Spearman, Texas

Wants to Correspond With Members

I have belonged to the Reorganized Church for over thirty years. At the time of my confirmation, I was disappointed because I did not receive the gift of the Holy Spirit, so I returned to my home and began to pray. Three times the words, "This day have I begotten thee," came to me, and each time I felt my doubts and fears being erased. God does reveal himself to us if we only believe. In my patriarchal blessing I was told that God would be with me to guide me. I have received instant healing when I was administered to and many other blessings. I can never thank my Heavenly Father enough.

I would be glad to hear from other members.

MRS. ETTA SIMPSON.
Troy, Kansas

Receives a Blessing

I am thankful to my Heavenly Father for blessing me when I was suffering with a broken hip. When the pain was almost beyond endurance, I have gone to him in prayer and he has comforted me. I still cannot walk very well, but this is not because of my hip. I have had ankylosis for years. I ask the Saints to pray for me that I may yet be able to walk.

JENNIE M. ALLEN
1423 North Twenty-fifth
East St. Louis, Illinois

From an Isolated Member

My husband and I and our two children have spent four summers and one winter on Beaver Island. The only church here is Catholic; and I used to feel very isolated. However, in a dream one night it was revealed to me that there were people on the island who had never had the privilege of hearing the true gospel message. Since then I have given several church books, tracts, and Heralds to people here. I also keep a table containing church literature on my front porch. I now feel that my stay on Beaver Island has a purpose. I shall appreciate the prayers of the Saints.

MRS. MARY RAMSEY
St. James, Michigan

A True Experience With the Evil Spirit

About sixty-one years ago I was working in a printing office at Mankato, Kansas. There was only one other Latter Day Saint in the town—a twenty-year-old girl, Anna Zundel. She also worked on the town paper as compositor and was instrumental in getting me a job so I could be there with her, for my folks lived about sixteen miles from Mankato. Anna owned a four-room cottage in the north part of town; she rented three rooms of her house to a Mr. and Mrs. Whitted and their sixteen-year-old adopted daughter, Myrtle. This girl was very popular with the young people in the Methodist Church.

I visited Anna quite often and got acquainted with the Whitted family. Being of a missionary turn, I often talked about the gospel and left the Autumn Leaves and Ensign for them to read. Both mother and daughter seemed interested.

One Sunday morning Anna came to my boarding place and told me Myrtle was very sick and wanted to see me. I went at once and found her in bed. Her mother told me that the evening before they were all sitting on the front porch when suddenly Myrtle fainted. They carried her in and put her to bed, but she had continued to grow worse. Later her mother told me what had happened. Myrtle had become converted to the gospel and wanted to be baptized but did not want her to leave the Methodist Church and lose her standing with the young people. However, she did not want to refuse her daughter what she wanted to do, so she said, "Since Latter Day Saints believe in miracles and also that God hears and answers prayer, let's make it a subject of prayer and ask God for a sign whether or not what they teach is true. If he answers, I won't object to your joining them." So each day they went in to their bedroom, closed the door, and prayed for a sign.

I was in the house but a few moments when Myrtle asked me to come sit by her bed. When I had done this, she took hold of my hand and said, "I have something to tell the folks, and I wanted you here with me. Last night I had a vision. My own mother came to me and talked about my sickness. She said that Satan was trying to destroy me, but if I would send for the elders of the church and be administered to, I would get well at once." As soon as her parents heard this, they appealed to me to get an elder at once.

We were living hundreds of miles from any branch of the church, and I was young and inexperienced, but I had faith that some way we could get an elder. I had read in the last Ensign that Elder A. H. Parsons was preaching in a certain town in Kansas, so I sent a telegram there. I received no reply, but heard that he was going to another town, so I telegraphed there—but with no better results. Myrtle was steadily growing worse, and I felt that those outside of the church who did not understand her condition would be of little help, so I wrote to my older sister to come and bring Brother R. W. Davis, a

(Continued on page 22.)

Briefs

PENSACOLA, FLORIDA.—Plans are being made for the construction of a new brick veneer building to provide an adequate church home for the growing congregation. Plans are now being prepared, and construction will begin soon.

A regional Leadership Training Convention was conducted October 29 and 30, which included the Belleview, Florida, group and the Robertsdale, Alabama, group. Elder W. F. Steiner, supervisor of the Southern Division of the District, was in charge, being assisted by Evangelist A. D. McCall and District President W. J. Breshears. Brother Breshears held a series of missionary sermons from October 30 to November 9.

The Pensacola Colored Group, a mission of the Pensacola Branch, has a new building of solid masonry under construction. The leader is William T. Blue.

DRUMRIGHT, OKLAHOMA. — George Griffith, recently ordained a priest, spoke November 13. The church has been redecorated and will soon be ready for dedication services. Four people have been added to the branch by baptism.—Reported by MARY E. SLOVER.

GRACELAND COLLEGE.—Money collected throughout the church on College Day has been used to buy furnishings for the Memorial Student Center building. Thus far, $52,000 has been spent on the Center with $33,000 remaining to be used for completion and furnishings. According to plans, the Student Center will be occupied at the end of Christmas vacation during which time all furnishings will be set in place.

TUCSON, ARIZONA.—Patriarch William Patterson held a series of missionary meetings October 8 to October 18. He gave thirteen patriarchal blessings. Helen Marie Hill was baptized October 23 and confirmed November 13. The junior church assisted in the confirmation service with Elder A. H. Hartman, pastor, in charge.—Reported by MRS. LANITA BERGAN.

LONG BEACH, CALIFORNIA.—Four men were ordained in October: Everet R. Niles, elder; Clyde Rockwell, priest; William D. Kingbury, teacher, and Edger L. Skinner, deacon. These, and others of the priesthood have been attending the class of the Priesthood Institute held at Central Branch, Los Angeles, conducted by G. E. Tickemyer, and associates.

On October 9 two children of Jacqueline and Jack Sacry were blessed by their grandfather, H. O. Sacry. At the Communion service on November 6, the children of Brother and Sister E. L. Mays and Brother and Sister J. A. Sandre were blessed.

Beginning October 23 Patriarch Louis J. Ostertag started a week's series of evangelistic services. Through means of these services one adult, Robert Dawson, and five children: Danny Colvert, Bobbie Colvert, Freddie Trembly, Sharon Briggs, and Arleen Mays were baptized on the last evening. This brings the total for baptisms for the year to fourteen. Brother Ostertag visited many of the homes of members and nonmembers.

BURT, MICHIGAN.—These six people have been baptized: Mr. and Mrs. Miles Dean and their three sons, John, Robert, and Jerry; and Mrs. Donna Loomis. Five more have expressed their desire to unite with the church.

Elder John W. Banks, district president, made several trips recently to visit homes here with Brother Clinton Loomis, pastor. On November 13 Elder Banks preached two sermons, gave a charge to the priesthood, and talked to a youth class.

DETROIT-WINDSOR DISTRICT.—On October 30 the East Side Congregation of the Detroit-Windsor District, held its thirty-third Annual Home-coming. The activities of the day began at 8:30 a.m., with a fellowship service presided over by the district president, Elder Blair McClain. A biblical film was shown during the church school hour, followed by a preaching service by Elder Wallace Jackson, the district missionary. After a noon luncheon served by the women's department, the Zion's League presented a service with Elder Richard Wood as the guest speaker. Following this was a song service in which all were invited to participate. Elder Bruce Brown was the speaker for the last services of the home-coming.—Reported by M. WINTERMEYER.

EUSTIS, NEBRASKA.—President Israel A. Smith and Apostle D. T. Williams were the guest speakers at the Annual Conference held in the Lincoln Church, Lincoln, Nebraska, October 29, 30. Apostle D. T. Williams was the instructor for the classes. President Israel A. Smith spoke on October 30. At the close of this service five babies were blessed. These officers were elected: Elder C. D. Williams, district president; Elders E. G. Keller and P. E. Goodrich, counselors; Bertha Keller, district secretary; Sister Wright, executive secretary; Dave Krahl, district leader of young people; Edith Niehaus, leader of women; Lorna Rife, director of music; G. C. Wall, auditor; Harry E. Niehaus, bishop's agent, and Vinton Wright, historian.

The names of Donald Savage and Ben Shriner were approved for ordination to the office of elder, and the name of L. Holly for the office of deacon. Delegates were elected to the General Conference.—Reported by MRS. BERTHA KELLER.

GULF STATES DISTRICT REPORT.—The district has been divided into two divisions, the Northern Division and the Southern Division. High Priest W. F. Steiner is supervisor of the Southern Division and Elder Ben L. Jernigan is supervisor of the Northern Division. So far this year fifty-eight people have been baptized.—Reported by W. J. BRESHEARS.

GASTON, OREGON.—Officers elected at the branch business meeting held September 18 were: R. W. Huggett, pastor; H. L. Bosshardt, and M. C. Whiting, counselors; Ray Rogers, church school director; Velma Whiting, secretary; Floyd Whiting, treasurer; Veryl Rogers, music director; Ella Deming, librarian and book steward; Amy Deming, historian; Grace Nunn, women's department leader; Lyle Anderson, auditor, and Mrs. Earl Huggett, reporter. Brother and Sister F. E. Chapman, district officers from Vancouver, Washington, were in attendance. Brother Chapman was in charge of the meeting.—Reported by MRS. EARL HUGGETT.

MIDLAND, MICHIGAN.—The South Central Michigan District Young People's "Send Off" was held October 29 and 30. Guest speaker at the banquet and minister for the convention was John F. Sheehy of Toronto. The women's department, supervised by Carrie Bartlett, served 146 persons at the banquet dinner Saturday evening. The district director of young people, Ray Rosevear, was in charge of all activities Saturday and Sunday. District president, John W. Banks, served as banquet toastmaster, and John Wiley, district music director, led the singing. One hundred and fifty-five young people registered for the "Send Off."—Reported by CORINNE BANKS.

YOUNGSTOWN DISTRICT CONFERENCE.—At this conference, held October 23, 1949, five were elected as delegates to General Conference, Homer McDowell, Amy Axelsson, Glenn Reichard, William McCune and Clarence Rhyal. Andrew Darling was called to the office of priest, and the ordination was approved by the conference. Agnes M. Kean was elected historian of the district.

Those elected to the Visual Aid Committee, with the purpose of presenting illustrated talks to the various branches of the district, were Roy Jones, chairman; Howard McDowell, Doran Simmons, George Franklin, and Fred Bonacher. Nineteen of the younger members spent the week end of October 29-30 at the Priesthood Institute at North Charleroi.

Dr. Floyd McDowell, Superintendent of Priesthood Education, and Apostle Percy Farrow began a series of missionary services in October. Seventy Merle P. Guthrie continued the services through November 9. Robert Kean, Kenneth Kean, and Peggy Jean Fetters were baptized at these services.

MOUNT VERNON, ILLINOIS.—Missionary S. R. Coleman presided over the annual branch business meeting September 12. New officers for the year are Elder W. W. Colvin, pastor; George Wolfe, church school director and Zion's League supervisor; Mrs. Ruby Ellis, children's supervisor, branch secretary, and publicity agent; Mrs. Lula Henson, church school secretary and book steward; Mrs. Ralph Rockett, music director; Mrs. John Rockett, women's supervisor; and Ralph Rockett, treasurer.

Bishop L. Wayne Updike, of Independence, Missouri, spoke at the morning, afternoon, and evening services on September 25. The last week of September, Pastor W. W. Colvin preached over radio station WMIX.

George Wolfe supervised the program "The Call to Stewardship" which was presented September 24. At the close of the program Verle Moore, Iris Stewart, Jerry Higginson, Robert Boyd, and Jackie DeSelms were baptized.

A potluck supper and Halloween party was held October 31. The Zion's League held a candlelight service as a special Communion service on November 6.

BURT, MICHIGAN.—On October 16 six people were baptized by Pastor L. C. Loomis. There are now 54 members on the branch record. During this quarter there has been an average attendance of fifty at the church school.—Reported by L. C. LOOMIS.

ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI.—Elder Charles D. Neff spoke Sunday morning, November 27, and Sister Neff played the organ. It was the first return to St. Louis for the Neffs since Elder Neff's appointment as pastor of the Omaha, Nebraska, Branch at the last General Conference. Sister Neff also played the organ at the Archibald-Amick wedding the evening of November 26.

Four members were added to the branch on "Decision Day," November 20, when Vici Coumerihl, Gerald Adams, Betty Wolfe, and William Sterling were baptized.

At a special branch business meeting November 18, Edwin Kent was approved, following previous district approval, for ordination to the office of elder. He was recently placed in charge of the Brentwood, Missouri, Branch.—Reported by DON HUNSTEIN.

OWEN SOUND, ONTARIO.—The Owen Sound District held their district business meeting in Grand Valley, October 30. Gordon Farrow, district president, was in charge. Officers elected for the coming year were Gordon Farrow, district president; Alex Caldwell and R. J. Farthing, counselors; Mrs. Ben Belrose, Sr., secretary; Aubrey Mason, director of religious education and children's pastor; George Furness, treasurer and director of music; Sister Robert Farthing, director of music; Everett Kennedy, young people's leader; Sister Harvey Davis, children's supervisor; Robert Farthing, district historian; and Arthur Dunn and Sidney Smith, reunion committee.

The district president presented the following names of men for calls to the priesthood: Kenneth Rowe and Robert Black to the office of elder, William J. Taylor, as priest; Elmer Dynes as teacher; Wayne Snell, Donald Richardson, Ronald Richardson, Hiram Hillis, and Tom Goheen to the office of deacon.

Delegates for 1950 General Conference are: Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Farrow, Mr. and Mrs. Alex Caldwell, Mr. and Mrs. Fred McLean, Mr. and Mrs. John Walker, Sister Laura Farthing, Sister Amelic Richardson, and Elmer Rydal.—Reported by MARJORIE SMITH.

LOUISVILLE, KENTUCKY.—The Priesthood Institute held on November 11, 12, and 13 under the direction of Dr. F. M. McDowell was very well attended, 85 per cent of the priesthood of the district being in attendance at one or more services. The priesthood and their companions met in a social gathering on the evening of November 11 and at a banquet on November 12. Brother McDowell was in charge of the morning prayer service on November 13.—Reported by MRS. NITA R. BURWELL.

SAULT STE MARIE, ONTARIO.—The Sault Ste Marie International District Conference was held October 16, with each branch being well represented. The 9:30 a.m. prayer service began with a musical selection by Sister Oris Campbell Flood, district music director. Apostle P. Farrow, assisted by Elder W. Bushila, district president, was in charge of the prayer service. Brother Farrow spoke at the 11:00 o'clock service.

The women's department served dinner in the church school rooms at the noon hour. At 2:30 in the afternoon there was an election of district officers for the coming year. Elder Rex Stowe of Gladstone, Michigan, is district president with Elders William Bushila, Soo, Ontario, and Verne Charlton, Little Current, Manitoulin Island, as associates.

Lunch was served before the evening service. Brother T. Summers of Port Huron, Michigan, was the evening speaker.

The branch social committee held a social evening in the church parlors, November 2, for members who have recently purchased homes, and presented each family with a suitable gift for their new homes. Games were played. Sisters Fred Miller and G. A. Edwards were in charge of the lunch.—Reported by VINA CAMPBELL.

SPRINGFIELD, OHIO.—A celebration to mark the second anniversary as a branch was held October 30, 1949. The branch was organized October 27, 1947, by Apostle Blair Jensen, district president, Floyd T. Rockwell, and Pastor Orval M. Hooten. Eighteen have been baptized into the branch during these two years.

Four were baptized at the morning service of October 27 and ordained at the evening service of the same day by Elders Floyd Rockwell, Orval M. Hooten, and R. H. Hunter, the pastor of Dayton. One baby was blessed during the evening service. At this same service there was a trumpet solo by Roger Charles, and a duet by Brother and Sister Melvin Charles.

The women's department served dinner in the basement, and at 2:00 p.m., Brother Hunter showed the safety film "Paradise Valley."—Reported by MARTHA BEATTY.

DEER ISLE, MAINE.—Apostle Maurice Draper, assisted by District President Newman Wilson and his counselors, Elders Chester Gray and Benjamin Carter, was in charge of the annual conference held October 29-30. Minutes of the last conference and statistical reports from the seven branches were read. Lorado Carter was ordained to the office of priest by Bishop Don Chesworth and Elder Benjamin Carter. Irvin Wass was ordained to the office of teacher by Elders Chester Gray and George E. Woodward. Percy Morrison was ordained to the office of deacon by Elders Don Harvey and Willard Gray. Elder Newman Wilson was ordained to the order of evangelist by Apostle Maurice Draper.

These officers were elected: Elder Don Harvey, pastor; Elders Chester Gray and Benjamin Carter, counselors; Elder Eugene Look, nonresident pastor; Louise J. Eaton, secretary; Calvin Crowley, treasurer; Frances Look, superintendent of religious education; Geraldine Kimbal, women's department leader; William Wilson, Zion's League leader and musical director; and Myron Shephard, auditor. Delegates to General Conference are Bishop Don Chesworth, Don Harvey, Chester Gray, Eugene Look, Willis Fass, Alcide Pelletier, Myrtle Pellitier, Pauline Harvey, Ruth Draper, Addie Fass, Alice Chesworth, and Frances Look.

OREGON DISTRICT CONFERENCE.—The forty-sixth annual district conference was held in Portland, November 3-6. The attendance was between six and seven hundred, the largest yet. Apostle C. George Mesley, Bishop G. Leslie DeLapp, Bishop M. C. Lasater, Missionary Edwin R. Vest, and District President J. L. Verhei traveled to most of the thirty-two groups and branches before the conference began, inspecting property and buildings, and speaking each night at some meeting.

The conference opened with a record attendance by the priesthood and wives at the Southeast Portland Church, Bishop DeLapp was the speaker. On the evening of November 5, Elbert A. Smith's play, "An Hour in the Liberty Jail," was presented under the direction of Sister Leona Carpenter.

The conference music was directed by Sister Carolyn Larson of Portland. Sister Roselee Smith, also of Portland, played the new Wurlitzer organ.

The Southeast Portland Branch women prepared all the meals under the leadership of Sister Jessie Smith and Sister Royce Chapman, district women's leader.

District President J. L. Verhei and other district officers were re-elected to their offices. A council of seventeen men were appointed as ministers to isolated Saints and for other special assignments. Fourteen men were ordained to the priesthood. Twenty delegates were elected to represent the Oregon District at the coming General Conference. Apostle W. Wallace Smith attended the conference. One new branch and four new missions have been started during the past year.

The conference closed on the evening of November 6 with motion pictures showed by Apostle C. G. Mesley on his trip to Alaska.—Reported by J. L. VERHEI.

ROSEBURG, OREGON, MISSION.—All day services and a basket dinner were held at the home of Pastor John Rodley on July 3. Brother and Sister Vernon Schmitt, recently from Minnesota, and Brother and Sister Walter Barker and their twin sons, Ronnie and Jimmy, recently from Chicago, have become members of this mission.

The women met on October 5 to organize the women's department. Brother J. F. Ruchaber has been giving the 11:00 sermon every Sunday.

Among recent visitors to the mission are Brother and Sister J. L. Verhei, Sister Vest, Brother Koffman, Sister Merle Lowden and daughters, Brother and Sister Ted Schuld, and Brother and Sister Giberson and daughters.—Reported by THELMA RUCHABER.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICHIGAN.—Apostle Arthur Oakman delivered two sermons on November 20. On the same day the building fund committee concluded a drive which was started about the first of October for funds for the new church building. The result of the drive was an offering of $1,232.00.—Reported by JOYCE DIETERMAN.

1950 Book Catalog

Just off
the Press!

Write for Your Free Copy

INDEPENDENCE, MO.

Christmas Customs

Christmas in Holland

By Twyla Scherer

TWO YEARS ago we arrived in Holland. It was just before Christmas, and immediately we sensed the excitement and anticipation which characterized the Yuletide season. The store windows were decorated with gifts and colorful wooden toys. We saw gaily lit Christmas trees in the homes. Streets were swarming with shoppers, and Christmas wreaths and holly were for sale on every corner.

Christmas has always been a wonderful time in Holland. The idea of our Santa Claus originated over there (the Dutch name for him is Sinter Klaus). December fifth is set aside as Sinter Klaus Day, and it is then that the lighter side of Christmas is celebrated. Families get together for feasting and fun and to exchange gifts.

On the eve of Sinter Klaus Day, the Dutch children fill their shoes with candy for Sinter Klaus and leave them on the mantel. They also leave a bit of hay for his horse. If they have been good, the next morning they find the candy gone, and in its place are the gifts they have longed for. If they have been naughty, they find that Sinter Klaus's helper, Black Pete, has left only switches for their punishment.

December twenty-fifth is reserved wholly as a day of reverence, the birthday of the Christ. Our branch in Rotterdam holds services very similar to those we have in America, with various classes of the church school participating in a Christmas program. When we were there the meeting hall was filled, the vestibule was packed with people standing, and others had to be turned away at the door. The kindergarten had an outstanding part in the day's activities with the children singing Dutch Christmas songs, reciting verses, and dramatizing various parts of the Christmas story. Tini Opmeer, a little six-and-a-half-year-old girl, recited from memory the entire second chapter of Luke without prompting. The young people contributed seasonal declamations and music, and the choir sang several beautiful Christmas anthems. The entire program lasted over three hours. An interesting custom we noticed was that at frequent intervals between numbers on the program, the women's group passed out a bit of candy or a cookie to everyone. We later learned that the candy they served had been sent to Holland by the Chicago church schools. Food parcels sent by Saints from other lands played a big part in making that Christmas a happy one for those people.

Since experiencing Christmas in Holland, the day has taken on new significance for us. By having given our gifts on Sinter Klaus Day, we were free on Christmas to commemorate the birth of Christ, the Greatest Gift of all.

Christmas in Denmark

By Ella Tinning

CHRISTMAS here in Denmark is absolutely the biggest celebration the year around. Every home, rich or poor, celebrates Christmas. We try at that time to be one big family. Great institutions and newspapers make collections of money, with which they pack a lot of baskets with meat, rice, and different good things, so that nobody is in need at Christmas.

We prepare for Christmas very early, making food, candy, and cakes; all the family members help to plait paper hearts and cornets in different colors.

We decorate our home with living lights [candles], spruce, and small Nissemand. The Nissemand is the symbol for the Danish Christmas. He is a funny little fellow. He looks like the American Santa Claus but is dressed different. He has a red blouse, gray pants, a long red pointed cap, white mustache, and pointed wooden shoes.

We celebrate Christmas for three days. On December 24 all offices and stores close at two o'clock, and at four o'clock all the church bells in Denmark chime the Christmas in. It is a wonderful time when people walk to church in the chiming of the bells, frequently the snow is falling, and everything is peace. We do not have a Reorganized Church in Denmark, so I go with my family to the state church, dreaming about the Stone Church. After coming home from church we have dinner. Here is the old custom for Christmas dinner. We have rice boiled in milk, and we eat it with cinnamon, sugar, and a piece of butter in the middle. In the rice we put an almond; the lucky one who gets the almond will have a present—a big Nissemand made of marcipan or some other thing. Then we have goose with apples and prunes inside.

OUT IN THE COUNTRY, some of the farmers put a big dish of rice up in the loft, because tradition says that the Nissemand lives there at Christmas time. After dinner we go to the Christmas tree. It has been fixed the night before and is now standing with a lot of red and white living lights, hearts, and cornets, Danish flags, small Nissemand, and on the top, a shining big star. Under the tree are some of the presents; others are in the Nissemand's bag. But before we have the presents we go around the tree, holding hands and singing our wonderful old Christmas hymns.

The first Christmas Day is a high holy day; there is no music or other amusement. In the forenoon people go to church and then to the cemeteries with flowers. In the evening the candles are lit again on the tree. The second Christmas Day is a holy day too, and a lot of us light the candles on the tree again, but at four o'clock the public life opens up: restaurants, shows, theaters, et cetera. On December 27 the stores and factories open. Christmas is over. It is a time we all look forward to, and a time we miss very much our dear ones we don't have with us. The children in Denmark count the days just as children do in America.

The Home Column

I hope this has given you a good picture of a Danish Christmas, and I, together with my husband and daughter, wish all brothers and sisters a very good and blessed Christmas. Thanks for your help to us in Denmark in the past years.

Christmas in Germany

By Emmy Baier

CHRISTMAS in Germany, the original home of the beautiful custom of decorating and lighting the Christmas tree, has a charm of its own. No loud revelries mar the sacredness of the day which reminds us of the greatest feat of love ever accomplished—the coming down to earth of our Lord and Master to live among men and redeem them.

Love—this is the guiding thought for Christmas.

The son or daughter living away from home throughout the year returns at this festive season to be with loved ones. Parents do all they can to make the celebration a happy one. The mother and father and all members of the family try to show their love by giving presents, however small they may be. But more than anybody else, it is the little ones for whom Christmas is the incarnation of love, light, and happiness.

Weeks before the important day, there is an air of secrecy about the house. Doors shut quickly before peeping eyes; there is whispering among grown-ups and children alike. Secrecy increases as the day draws nearer, and when at last it has come, this December 24, the whole atmosphere is charged with excitement. Last-minute preparations have to be made, shopping must be done, and the goose is prepared, while cookies and stollen (traditional German Christmas cake) have long since been made. Only when dusk falls, a great hush also falls over the whole house. Children watch eagerly for the Christ child in his golden robe, and Father Christmas, his servant, coming down to earth with presents for them. At the ringing of a little bell, old and young join in singing the beautiful, time-honored German Christmas songs, and then the children are allowed to look for their presents. The rest of the evening is spent in harmony and happiness, with music and songs, in the soft light of the burning candles on the Christmas tree.

This is a picture of the traditional Christmas of prewar Germany, when rich fare, nice presents, and normal housing-conditions were not the privilege of a favored few. Today, with families crowded in one room, with low income and high costs of living, with the specter of unemployment lurking around the corner, the picture is less bright and happy. Yet the spirit of Christmas survives. What matters if there is only one little corner for the Christmas preparations instead of a whole room? Who cares if the children have to be looked after by a kind neighbor while parents put finishing touches to the tree and little table holding the presents? What difference does it make if the presents are small and mostly homemade? And who minds that instead of the traditional goose and cookies there is simpler fare?

Christmas is the festival of love. And love needs no elaborate outward sign, no costly presents to become apparent. Love can be shown as clearly and as unmistakably in a small, modest room as in a great mansion. And the message of supreme love—"Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men"—has perhaps a deeper meaning for many people in war-ravaged, impoverished Germany than ever it had before.

Christmas in Latvia

By Elli Rosenthal

BY THE FIRST ADVENT there is to be noticed a Christmas atmosphere. The show windows in large cities display lots of alluring presents. Adults and children loaded with packages hurry through the streets with gay faces. The housewives start their preparations for Christmas by making dough for the traditional gingerbread, salt ox tongues, etc. About a fortnight before Christmas the small cakes are baked, and the children are allowed to form the various figures (hearts, half-moons, stars, Santa Clauses). Then the cake is put in big tins. Much attention is paid to the food; there should always be the smoked (and then cooked) hog's head, and the dry, decocted, field peas on the table with the evening-bread-meal at the Latvian Christmas. Larded pancakes are never absent either. In town and country alike there is much activity. Christmas trees are sold and there always is a Christmas market where one can buy all kinds of little things that rejoice the heart of a child.

When the tree is brought inside, the children know that the feast itself is very near. Usually the father decorates the tree. For this purpose he uses walnuts that have been gilded, chains made of colored paper, gingerbread, sweets, and red-checked little apples. There also are white and colored candles, wonder-candles, snowflakes, and icicles on the tree. The decorating is done on the afternoon before Christmas Eve. The children put on their best dresses, and then the whole family goes to church where there is also a tall tree with shining electric lights. The pastor preaches concerning Christ's birth, and the congregation sings Christmas carols such as: "Silent Night, Holy Night," "O Ye Joyful, O Ye Holy, Grace-bringing Christmas Time," "O Tannebaum, O Tannebaum," "I Come Down

(Continued on page 22.)

A Christmas Fantasy

By ALETA RUNKLE

IT was early morning in the courts of heaven. St. Peter punched in at the gate a half hour early. This would be an overtime day—not many people coming up probably, but lots of the angels would be going out on errands. He could hear the symphony tuning up now. They had been practicing all year for this night of music in the skies. Over in the amphitheater, he could hear the chorus warming up. Even the littlest angels were allowed to go out tonight with their tiny baskets of roses. He could hear their laughter from the wardrobe room where they were changing into their satin robes for the occasion. Yes, this was a happy day—this was a time for singing and laughter in the courts. Now if nothing went wrong to spoil the occasion—but there was always Oscar—clumsy little Oscar. Last year he was so excited he popped three harp strings in the middle of the Hallelujah Chorus, and the year before he caught his right foot in the gates and had to use a crutch the rest of the way down. This year the staff was more cautious and gave him the easiest assignment of all; he was to deliver a basket of good cheer to a home in a small town. He couldn't miss—there was only one basket and the town was twenty-five miles from its nearest neighbor. There was no chance for him to bungle the job.

St. Peter's musings were cut short by quick commands in the courtyard. Already the captains were lining up their ranks. For almost 2,000 years St. Peter had been thrilled by this moment—the sight of so many angels ready to go out on their missions of good will. Many went out every day, but on this festive night, as many angels as could be spared went to the homes that would receive them to breathe there a spirit of peace and happiness. St. Peter had always secretly yearned that sometime someone else might keep the gate on this night and let him go with the joyous throng, but then—he knew the records better than anyone else. He would stay. A sudden confusion in the rear corps interrupted his thoughts. Oscar, at the last minute, had forgotten his basket and had hurried back to his quarters to pick it up. He'd probably never make it now! Already the trumpets had sounded, and the first company had cleared the gate. Once the groups began to move, it would only be a matter of minutes until they were all on their way. Well, if Oscar got left he could polish the pearls. This was his group going through now—the last company. As St. Peter smiled his good wishes at them, he hesitated before closing the gate. If Oscar hurried he might be able to catch up with them. St. Peter pushed the emergency bell, and almost as if in immediate response Oscar came stumbling into the courtyard. When he went through the gate, St. Peter checked to see that he had the right basket. The weary gatekeeper questioned his own wisdom in helping Oscar on his way—but who could deny anyone on this night? Slowly St. Peter closed the gate, then propped his chair against a post for a brief nap before the messengers returned.

* * * * *

THE music of the chorus was so faint that Oscar could not locate the position of the others. He suddenly felt alone and afraid. Now he would have to proceed on his mission alone without the counsel of the expert guides who were well-traveled in the firmament. Let's see, what did the tag on his basket say, "Mr. and Mrs. Harold Decker and children, Sabula, Wyoming." Oh, why hadn't he stayed with his company? Was Wyoming in Africa or Alaska or South America? Confused, he decided to locate some of the more brightly-lighted cities, and perhaps there discover some signs to direct him. Directly in front of him was a gaily-lighted city—part of a neon sign seemed to blaze the name of the place—"New Orleans." Was that in Wyoming? Surely not. It was warm here, and he distinctly remembered someone saying that Wyoming was very cold, and that the snow often piled around the houses. He would have to go still further north.

New Horizons

It seemed hours later to Oscar that he spotted the little sign that said, "Sabula, pop. 200." He looked again at the little tag—no street address, no directions for finding the house! How was he to know where the Deckers lived? There was nothing to do but look into each home and find the one that needed this gift of cheer tonight. Down there at the end of the street was a dingy little house. Surely that must be the place. Oscar glanced in the window—in the corner of the room was a big evergreen strung with popcorn and brightly-colored paper garlands. By the tree a small girl was gently rocking her sock doll as she hummed a lullaby. In the center of the room Dad and Junior were constructing a bridge from crude "tinker toys" that the father had carved from rough wood. And over in the "kitchen" of the room, Mother hummed, "Silent Night" as she finished the dishes. No, these couldn't be the Deckers.

OSCAR decided the most systematic thing to do would be to take the houses street by street until he came to the right one. It was on the first row that he found it. The house was attractive with its green shutters and roof. The family was neither poor nor rich. It was quite the average home. Oscar was surprised; he almost had been tempted to pass it by. He thought he could save time by passing houses like this one. But on a sudden impulse he looked in the window. The three children were jealously snapping at each other over who should have which toy. "Well," Oscar thought, "that's not so bad. All children are like that sometimes I guess." The thing which made him decide to leave his basket here was the attitude of Mother and Dad. They were tired of each other—and of life itself. With everything for which to be grateful at this season, they were not happy. They had each other, their children, a good job, more than enough conveniences to make life pleasant, good health—everything but contentment. They had lost their way; they had no peace in their hearts. Here were the Deckers, Oscar decided—and wondered how many more there were in Sabula—and in the entire world.

When Oscar left his basket at the door, he felt a strange peace himself, and a new stirring of responsibility. He had done nothing to spoil the night. He could go back and report to the captain, "Mission Accomplished." As he started back he heard the chorus coming nearer. He could catch them if he hurried, but he was no longer afraid. He would go back alone as he had come.

When he reached the gate St. Peter was standing outside waiting. It had been a long day and he looked tired. Oscar expected a cross reproof, but St. Peter only smiled and said, "You did a good job tonight, Oscar. The staff will be proud of you. Go on in—I've already timed in for you. And Oscar—since it's after hours, the lights are out in your quarters. There are three baskets by your bed for you to deliver tomorrow. Don't fall over them."

Undisturbed

There was no special brightness
 In the eyes
 Of travelers who paid their coin
 For bed within the inn;
 They gave no extra nod
 To him who led their stock
 To water at the shed,
 Nor touched the cheek
 Of one small boy
 Who fled before their feet.
 The dust of travel and
 The desert sand
 Lay grey upon their hands
 Until they did not feel
 The trembling of the hills
 As rock dissolved beneath
 The heat of angel wings.
 The yearnings of the prophets
 Were fulfilled
 That night,
 And those of earth,
 So silently that weary travelers
 Never knew
 They slept throughout
 The miracle of Jesus' birth.

BILONE WHITING

The Tree That Refused to Grow

By FRANCES M. MILLS

A MAN owned a large piece of land, and he called his servant and said to him, "Let us plant trees upon these hillsides that one day there may be a profitable grove on this barren ground."

The man and his servant bought young seedling oaks, and hired laborers to plant them. They watched over the tiny trees and cultivated them and gave them water in seasons of drought and fertilizer that they might grow tall and strong.

And when spring came the little trees put forth leaves and branches, and after a few years they were taller than a man and cast a welcome shade when the days were long and hot. And the owner of the land walked among the trees and found them good.

But as he walked near the center of the grove one summer day, he saw one tree much smaller than the others. Now he knew at once it was not some chance seedling, for the grove had been set out according to a pattern, and each tree had its number and place.

Then the master called to his servant, and they brought spades and dug about the stunted tree and watered it and cut away some of the branches from near-by trees that it might receive more sunlight and air.

And the seasons passed by, and the little tree put forth its leaves in the spring, but they were no more numerous than on each preceding spring, neither did it make any more twigs or branches, nor add an inch to its height. Yet the master and his servant continued to watch over it and care for it.

The years passed by and the rains fell, the sun shone, the snows came thick and soft and melted away before the warm winds of spring, but the little oak remained as it was in the midst of the strong trees towering around it.

THEN the servant brought his ax and said to the Master, "Let me chop down this worthless tree, for it refuses to grow."

But the Master replied, "Wait a little longer. We will renew our efforts, and perhaps it will yet become a profitable tree in my grove."

So for the third time the Master and his servant dug around the tree and gave it water in times of drought and fertilizer to make it strong, but still the tree remained as it was before.

Then said the Master to his servant, "We have done all that could be done, and we can do no more. Now bring the ax and cut it down, for it is a worthless thing and fit only to be cast aside."

And the servant did as he was commanded, and the tree that refused to grow was cleared away, root, stem, and branch—nothing remained of it. And in its place was set another tree, that the Master's grove might be complete.

Nevertheless, he that repents and does the commandments of the Lord shall be forgiven; and he that repents not, from him shall be taken even the light which he has received, for my Spirit shall not always strive with man, saith the Lord of Hosts.—Doctrine and Covenants 1: 5.

A Prophetic Drama

(Continued from page 9.)

But to the Christian, Jesus Christ is the Messiah, the divine Son of God. He is a commander, a deliverer, and an example. He is the "Way of Life."

Unfortunately, Christianity is broken up into numerous fragments. The world is a long way from accepting Christ or his teachings. Centuries upon centuries will pass before the nations of the world will accept the Messiah and his message. Our learning, our mechanical progress, is becoming another "Tower of Babel."

However, Jesus the Christ remains the Hope of the World. Eventually the wise men of the world will learn through the suffering of nations that all learning, philosophy, and culture must, according to the prophetic pantomime of the Wise Men of the East, bow the knee to Jesus Christ and abide by his simple philosophy of life—"Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."

Christmas in Latvia

(Continued from page 19.)

From Heavens High," "There Came a New Twig."

After the service the family returns home, and Father and Mother enter the "Christmas room." At last, at the sounding of a little silver bell, the children rush into the room. First they are blinded by the beautiful brightness of the tree; then they discover their presents, which have been placed around the tree and in other special places. Yet they are not permitted to touch them until they have recited a poem. The family sings a Christmas carol after the father has read the story of Jesus Christ's birth, and then the evening meal starts. Such things as candy, pralines, nuts, apples, almonds, oranges, figs, and marchpane are all part of the Christmas feast.

Visitors call on the first Christmas Day while on the second day the children are entitled to go to the afternoon performance in the theater.

Letters (continued)

(Continued from page 15.)

young priest, who had been preaching in our neighborhood. They came, and we three struggled against the power of Satan for two days and nights, hoping and praying that help might come. Myrtle's spasms were almost continuous, and at such times it took all three of us to hold her in bed. She was small, but when possessed with the evil power was stronger than all of us.

By Tuesday afternoon we decided we could not reach Brother Parsons, so we sent a telegram to F. G. Pitt in Independence who was editor of the Ensign and a high priest. The message read, "COME AT ONCE—CHILD VERY SICK." We never even thought of the expense.

Tuesday night while the telegram was on its way, Elder Pitt was awakened in the middle of the night by a voice saying, "Get up and write your editorial." He paid no attention, but closed his eyes in sleep when again the voice spoke, "Get up and write your editorial." He was fully awake then and asked himself, "Why should I get up now in the middle of the night and write my editorial? I have plenty of time tomorrow." Then he turned over to go to sleep, but the voice spoke in commanding tones, "Get up and write your editorial." By that time he thought he had better obey, so he arose, dressed, and sat down and wrote his editorial on the subject of "Miracles." Then he went back to bed and slept.

Early the next morning a messenger was at his door with our telegram. He said the first thing he thought of was that he did not have the money for train fare. Man-fashion he began to reach first in one pocket and then another until he came to his vest pocket; there he found a five dollar bill—the exact cost of a ticket from Independence to Mankato. His mind began to work fast, and he thought, "There are only two trains going west today, one this morning and the other this evening. If I miss the morning train, I will have to wait until evening, and this case must be urgent." So he started for the depot as fast as he could go and arrived just in time to get his ticket and catch the westbound train. He arrived a Mankato soon after dark. Mr. Whitted was there to meet the train in case anyone came. None of us knew what Elder Pitt would look like; several men got off the train, but when a tall, fine-looking man with a small hand satchel came down the steps, Mr. Whitted said he knew this was the right person. He asked if his name was Pitt. When Brother Pitt answered, "Yes," he simply said, "Follow me."

They did not have far to go, and no words passed between them. When we opened the door for them, it seemed to us an angel from God had come. Brother Pitt told us later that he felt the presence of great faith when he entered the room.

After the usual greetings, he asked, "You have a sick child?" "Yes," Mrs. Whitted said, "and we want you to administer to her." "All right," he answered, "let us have a word of prayer."

While he prayed he was impressed to ask that the evil spirit there might be rebuked, that it might go to its own kind never to return. Then he stepped to the bed and laid his hands on Myrtle's head to administer to her. We noticed she was making a great effort to control herself, even clenching her hands under her. When Brother Pitt, by the Spirit, commanded the devil to depart, it seemed to tear her whole body, and she uttered an agonizing scream. Brother Pitt was holding her hands and said, "Be just as quiet as you can, Sister." In another second she relaxed and exclaimed, "Oh! he is gone!"

She asked to get up at once, but her mother refused until Brother Pitt said, "Let her get up. She is all right."

The rest of the night was spent in explaining and teaching the gospel to this family. By morning all three had asked for baptism. This ordinance was performed by Brother Pitt before he took the next train for Independence.

A number of years ago I attended a reunion at Kirtland, and I heard Brother Pitt tell this experience. He said, "It was the greatest experience of my life."

I do not know whether or not Myrtle is still alive. If she is, she too will verify this. I would appreciate hearing from her.

CARRIE (COOK) BALLINGER
1423 South Dodgion
Independence, Missouri

Note of Thanks

I want to thank the Saints who prayed for my son, Hoyte W. Crankshaw, and the elders who administered to him. Although he did not recover, he did receive relief and passed away peacefully.

MRS. L. J. CRANKSHAW.
Route 5,
Charlotte, Michigan

Two Experiences

I sit in my home this evening trying to get up enough courage to write my testimony. This is a rather difficult task, because I was once a pretty rebellious person and had to be chastened. I thought at one time that I would never reform, but God had other plans for me. I thought I was having a good time, but what was to come wasn't so exciting. It took a rapid succession of heart attacks to wake me up.

Several spiritual experiences have been given to me. I have had the opportunity of seeing the "Book of Life." Although my name wasn't in it at that time, I pray it will be eventually. Another time when I was very much concerned about which of two places I should go, I knelt to pray, and a bronze hand pointed out the direction.

I know in my heart this is the only true church in the world. I pray that others may humble themselves and come to know the same thing.

JESSE EMERSON
904 South Wayland
Sioux Falls, South Dakota

At Your Door

The Christmas Child comes softly knocking.

Will you, can you close your door?
Could you thus refuse him shelter
As the world has done before?

He is small and cold and hungry,
Hungry for a heartfelt smile.
Will you send him through the darkness

Trudging yet a weary mile?

Will you shut him from your hearth-side,

Turn your heart from his appeal?
Oh, give welcome, warm him, let him
Leave with you God's peace, his seal.

—Louise Wrigley.

Bulletin Board

Independence Yuletide League Conference

A Yuletide conference will be held in the Stone Church in Independence on December 29, 30, and 31, with the Independence Zion's Leagues playing hosts to the young people of Kansas City and Central Missouri Stake. The theme, "The Time of Your Life," has to do with the stewardship of time. The program will include recreation, discussion, and worship. College young people visiting Independence during the holidays are especially invited. Write Young People's Office, The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri, for information.

Notice to South Carolina Members

Mrs. Macy Brent will appreciate having any members living in or near Columbia, South Carolina, visit her daughter, Mrs. T. J. Clyburn, Jr., who lives at 1610 Columbia College Drive.

Heralds Wanted

Mrs. Willard Phelps, Mayville, Michigan, would like copies of the August 8, 1949, Herald.

Change of Address

Until further notice, personal letters to Elbert A. Smith should be addressed 1337 West Forty-second Street, Los Angeles 37, California. Evangelists mailing copies of blessings to him for filing should send them to The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri, marking them "For Filing."

REQUEST FOR PRAYERS

Prayers are requested for sixteen-year-old Jerry Anderson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Anderson of Summerville, Michigan, who is a patient at Memorial Hospital in South Bend, Indiana. Jerry has had five major and two minor brain operations in less than six weeks.

Continued prayers are requested by Lily Goodwin of Long Island, New York, who has undergone a serious operation.

Prayers are requested for Mrs. Cyrus Reed, Oakridge Street, Greenville, Michigan, who has been bedfast since August 7.

ENGAGEMENT

Kemmerer-Mapes

Mrs. Sarah Mapes of Clearwater, Nebraska, announces the engagement of her daughter, Zelpha Mae Mapes, to J. W. Kemmerer, son of Mrs. Ethel Booth of Lamoni, Iowa. Miss Mapes, a graduate of Graceland, class of '49, is teaching the second grade in the Woodbine, Iowa, public school. Mr. Kemmerer is a freshman at Graceland this year.

WEDDINGS

Seaver-Lewis

Dorothy (Dolly) A. Lewis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Lewis, Sr., of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and Lt. Donald L. Seaver, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph L. Seaver of Independence, Missouri, were married October 15 at the Reorganized Church in Philadelphia. Elder John T. Conway performed the double-ring ceremony. After a trip to Independence, the couple returned to Wareham, Massachusetts. The bride attended Graceland College in 1945-46. The groom is stationed with the Thirty-third Fighter Wing at Otis Air Force Base on Cape Cod.

DEATHS

HOLMES.—Carrie May, daughter of John and Catherine Epperly, was born September 26, 1880, in Mercer County, Illinois, and died November 23, 1949, at the home of her son, Lawrence E. Holmes of Independence, Missouri. She was baptized into the Reorganized Church in 1869 and was married to Melvin B. Holmes on May 7, 1877. Five children were born to them. Mr. Holmes and four children preceded her in death.

She is survived by one son, five grandchildren, and eight great-grandchildren. Funeral services were held at the Roland Speaks Chapel in Independence. Her grandson, Apostle Reed Holmes, officiated. Interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery.

STRAND.—Thomas Olsen, was born in Valdros, Norway, on March 19, 1868, and died in Moorhead, Iowa, on November 2, 1949. He came to the United States in 1889 and became a naturalized citizen. Soon after his arrival in America, he bought a partnership in the general store at Moorhead, Iowa, remaining with that business until 1908 after which he sold insurance and farmed. During recent years he and his wife spent their winters in California and the summer months in Iowa. He was always interested in community development, serving on the city council and board of education. He had been a member of the Reorganized Church since 1893, spending many years in pastoral work and serving eighteen months as a missionary to Scandinavia. He was also a Mason.

He is survived by his wife, Sarah Kathleen, to whom he had been married for fifty-six years; three daughters: Ruby Inlow of Los Angeles, California; Audrey James of Meeker, Colorado; and Frances Weldon of Moorhead; six grandchildren; and one great-grandchild.

DAY.—Loudia Quick, was born November 26, 1876, at Stewartville, Missouri, and died October 27, 1949. She was married to George W. Day on November 25, 1903, in North Dakota and was baptized on June 12, 1904, into the Reorganized Church. She was faithful to the end of her life, receiving much comfort through prayer and administration during her long illness.

She is survived by her husband; two daughters: Mrs. Earl Cronemiller and Mrs. Homer Robinson; and two sons: David F. and Jeman J. Funeral services were conducted by Elder C. F. Young of Fargo, North Dakota. Interment was in the cemetery near her home in Northern Township, Bemidji, Minnesota.

LANDSBERG.—Darryl Duane, infant son of Bishop and Mrs. Lewis E. Landsberg of Lamoni, Iowa, died at the Independence Sanitarium on November 27, 1949.

WISE.—Carrie C., daughter of David and Alice Phillips, was born August 18, 1878, in Fallowfield Township, Pennsylvania, and died at her home in Charleroi, Pennsylvania, on November 19, 1949. Except for five years, she spent most of her life in Washington County. She was baptized into the Reorganized Church on March 19, 1916, and was a member of the Lock Four Branch in North Charleroi.

She is survived by her husband, John Wise; two daughters: Mrs. Henry Winship and Mrs. Clarence Winship of North Charleroi; a son, Harold H. of Kirtland, Ohio; one sister, Mrs. Viola Chester of Uniontown, Pennsylvania; and twelve grandchildren. Funeral services were held at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Henry Winship, Elder John D. Carlisle officiating. Interment was in the Howe Cemetery in Coal Center, Pennsylvania.

SUMMERS.—James Marion, son of James and Mary Summers, was born May 18, 1861, at Russell, Iowa, and died November 20, 1949, at Painters Nursing Home in Lake City, Iowa, following a brief illness. He moved to Calhoun County as a small boy and remained there the rest of his life. He had been a member of the Reorganized Church since September 26, 1925. He was married on December 6, 1918 to Ella Baker, who preceded him in death on November 17, 1938. There are no immediate survivors.

News and Notes

(Continued from page 2.)

LOS ANGELES station KNX will re-broadcast the Messiah Choir of Independence Sunday evening, December 18. According to Garland Tickemyer the broadcast will be heard in the Los Angeles area at 10:30 to 12:00 Pacific Time.

CHURCH DEDICATIONS

President Israel A. Smith spent the first week end of December in Yuma, Colorado, where he took part in the dedication of the new church building.

ROCK ISLAND DISTRICT CONFERENCE

Apostles D. T. Williams, M. L. Draper, and Reed Holmes attended the conference held November 19 and the Workers' Institute held November 20. Brother Holmes was in charge of the institute. Brother Draper gave the opening address at the prayer service on November 20. Brother Williams was in charge of the business session held November 20, spoke at the 11:00 o'clock service, and was in charge of the morning prayer meeting.

STONE CHURCH

On November 20 there were five baptisms at the church: Sharon Ann Lewis, Robert Frederick Shultz, Sidney Carl Moore, Jr., and Gorgea Mae Warfield.

Group elders, assistants, and division leaders held a supper November 15 at the women's center building.

VISITOR FROM VENEZUELA

Wayne Simmons, Director of Centro at Caracas, Venezuela, spent a few weeks of November in United States. He returned here from South America because of the death of his father at Cameron, Missouri, on November 6. The Centro, of which Brother Simmons is the director, is a culture center established by the United States government for the purpose of assisting in the education of the people of Venezuela and for the purpose of establishing friendly understanding between them and the people of the United States.

IN THIS ISSUE

EDITORIAL:
The Birthday of Our King.....	3
OFFICIAL:
Comparative Report of General Church Income.....	4
Catholic Propaganda.....	4
Cheap History.....	4
ARTICLES:
Christ, the Universal Savior, by Apostle D. T. Williams.....	5
"Stille Nacht, Heilige Nacht," by George Baier.....	8
A Prophetic Drama, by John Blackmore.....	9
Christmas Reminiscences, by Marian Willmarth.....	10
The Messiah Choir of 1949.....	12
Question Time.....	13
A Birthday Gift for Jesus, by Edgar Pillsbury.....	14
Letters.....	15
Briefs.....	16
Christmas in Holland, by Twyla Scherer.....	18
Christmas in Denmark, by Ella Tinning.....	18
Christmas in Germany, by Emmy Baier.....	18
Christmas in Latvia, by Elli Rosenthal.....	19
A Christmas Fantasy, by Aleta Runkle.....	20
Undisturbed, a poem, by Blaine Whiting.....	21
The Tree That Refused to Grow, by Frances M. Mills.....	21
Bulletin Board.....	23

P.S.

* PREACHER

Brother X has no illusions about his popularity as a preacher. He says, "They have a cancellation late in the week. They try all the good ones and find them engaged. They get out the old list and work their way through it, their spirits sinking as they go down the page. They find my name at the bottom of the list. I am generally free to help them. That is how I get invited to preach so often!"

* GOING IN CIRCLES

Don't be too proud of your speed. It doesn't really matter, when you are going in circles anyway. Haven't you discovered yet that you are running in a squirrel cage?

Forgive it, if these remarks seem to be made in disparagement of circles. The great things of the universe travel in them. The earth moves in two circles at once. The sun goes in a circle too, and some astronomers assert that the whole solar system is moving majestically, like a convoy of ships, in a vast circle. Others say the universe is like a great wheel. And who knows?—it may be going somewhere.

Comfort yourself with this thought as you wheel and gallop through your busy day like a wooden horse on a merry-go-round.

* TRIM YOUR LIST OF TROUBLES

I used to have a long list, though I did not realize it, of things that could make me unhappy. Every day I was sure to become miserable over something. I was very faithful about it; I regarded it as a duty. I was anxious; I fretted; I resented; I kept my nerves on the grindstone.

Then one day I learned what was wrong with me and decided it was all very silly. My list of troubles was far too long. They were depleting my nervous energy. They were luxuries I could not afford. I'd have to let some of them go.

The first step was to make a complete list of them. They amazed me. I didn't know I had so many. Then I took a red pencil and began cutting.

First, I discarded the weather. All the worry in the world couldn't change it. Now, I take the weather as it comes, and never feel blue or depressed by it. It's off the list.

For the same reason, I quit worrying about war, politics, and the social problem. Other people may get stomach ulcers about these things. I have resigned as Number One Warrior for the nation. The job paid too little.

Now I have quit worrying about how nature ruined my looks, and what people think of me, and petty imaginary slights.

It is wonderful how happy life can be when you eliminate the unnecessary and useless things from your list of worries. Wouldn't you like to try it?

* THE POTTERY OWL

On the whatnot shelf at home we have a small pottery owl. He sits there in the midst of a collection of the small useless and decorative objects one buys on a vacation, wishing merely to take home a souvenir. At such times, the mind also is usually on a vacation. This owl has never said anything. He has never done anything. He has never made any mistakes. But he looks exceedingly wise. Ah, there is so much of the human in animals, so much of the animal in humans!

Last Chance

Special Christmas Gift Rates

on the

Saints' Herald

It's time to start thinking about Christmas gifts . . . and a wonderful gift for any of your friends is a year's subscription to the Herald. Save time and money by ordering gift subscriptions now! Our special gift rates save you up to 50c a subscription over regular rates! And we'll send a beautiful gift card with your name on it direct to your friends' homes. Make your Christmas gift list out now . . . fill in the blanks below and send your order today! Give the Saints' Herald this Christmas!

My gift card should read: From

Name

Address

City State

I enclose $..... Charge my account

Send one year of SAINTS' HERALD as my gift to:

Name

Address

City State

Name

Address

City State

Name

Address

City State

ONE SUBSCRIPTION (your own, new or renewal, or one gift)	$3.50
CANADA	$3.75
EACH ADDITIONAL GIFT SUBSCRIPTION	$3.00
CANADA	$3.25

THE SAINTS'

Herald

VOLUME 96

DECEMBER 26, 1949

NUMBER 52

Elder John J. Cornish

October 17, 1854

June 24, 1937

"My heart warmed toward God."

He baptized fifteen hundred persons during his fifty-four years of missionary labor.

(See page 7)

Christmas Greetings

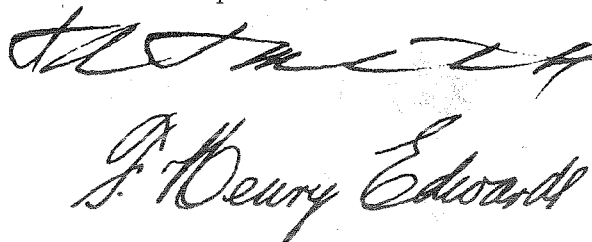

WE ARE VERY HAPPY to extend our Christmas Greetings to the church throughout the world. The return of this greatest of all birthday anniversaries reminds us that our love for each other and for the work of the kingdom is rooted and grounded in our love for the Son of God. It is well that we should be reminded.

Many years ago the Apostle Peter wrote, "His divine power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness, through the knowledge of him that hath called us to glory and virtue." Let us take firm hold on this assurance, meditating on it from time to time during the Christmas Season. The gift of the Son of God, which makes Christmas unique, guarantees to the faithful all they truly need for time and eternity. This is true because the matchless gift of the love of God carries with it the obligations of a love that inspires those who respond to use every gift for bringing about the kingdom.

All of us want to share in the Christmas spirit. We want to give gifts as well as to receive gifts. But our greatest joy comes from giving on the highest possible level. So let us share our finest gifts of joy, music, affection, wisdom, brotherhood, compassion, and peace. Let us add these to every other gift that we share—savor the joy of them—register the experience deeply enough that we can come back from time to time and find the inspiration to recreate our Christmas continually throughout the months to come.

We know this can be done because we ourselves have been blessed by the spirit of Christmas, which is the Spirit of the Lord Jesus Christ, in our association with the Saints. The other general officers of the church, the appointees, district and branch presidents, and all of you who have been active in the work of the church, have felt the warming and enlightening influence of the Spirit which finds its richest expression in the Christmas Season. Let us thank each other and thank God who is the giver of every good and perfect gift. Let us find joy together in service and our friends and loved ones as we face the New Year with the confidence born of inward peace.

In Gospel Bonds,

THE FIRST PRESIDENCY.

Introducing...

ERNEST YEWELL HUNKER, Independence, Missouri, (page 5) was born in Roanoke, Missouri, August 22, 1899. He attended the Roanoke schools, finishing three years of high school there, and then was graduated in 1916 from Lakeview High School in Oregon. He attended Graceland College from 1919 to 1921.

The year he finished Graceland he married Nellie A. Smith, who went with him on his first mission abroad to the Scandinavian countries in 1922. After three years he came back to the United States, but was returned to Scandinavia by the 1927 Conference. He served another year. They have four children: Mrs. Juanita Sutherland, Geneva, Roberta, and William.

Brother Hunker was baptized in 1919, and the following July was ordained a priest. In 1920 he was ordained an elder, and in 1923 he was ordained a Seventy in Norway by Peter Muceus. Brother Hunker was ordained a President of Seventy in 1932, and ten years later became the Senior President of Seventy, as well as President of the reorganized First Quorum.

By General Conference appointment, 1948, he was assigned to N. W. Minnesota, North and South Dakota, Wyoming, Idaho, Montana, in the United States, and to Alberta and Saskatchewan, in Canada, as associate-minister-in-charge under the supervision of Apostle C. George Mesley.

THE SAINTS' HERALD

Volume 96

December 26, 1949

Number 52

Editors: The First Presidency; Israel A. Smith, F. Henry Edwards. ASSISTANTS: Leonard J. Lea, Associate Editor; Chris B. Hartshorn, Managing Editor; Kenneth L. Graham, Business Manager.

The Saints' Herald is the official publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, with headquarters at The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri, and is issued through the offices of Herald Publishing House, 103 South Osage Street, Independence, Missouri.

Entered as second-class matter at the post office at Independence, Missouri, under Act of March 3, 1879. Issued weekly at Independence, Missouri. Price, $3.50 per year and $1.75 for six months in advance in the U. S. A., its territories and possessions; Canada, $3.75 per year and $1.90 for six months; other countries, $4.50 per year. Notice of a change of address must be given three weeks ahead of the date that it is to become effective. Accepted for mailing at the special rate of postage provided for in section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized July 21, 1921. Printed in the United States of America.

News & Notes

WICHITA, KANSAS, BUILDING PLANS

President F. H. Edwards, Apostle Reed Holmes, and Bishop G. Leslie DeLapp made a trip to Wichita, Kansas, the first week end of December to meet with the building committee and Dean Kent Fraherwerk, architect employed by the church. They went over the plans for the new church building.

VISIT TO UTAH

Apostle Paul M. Hanson, president of the quorum of twelve, visited Utah on October 30, and spoke in the churches at Ogden and Salt Lake City. He related many interesting facts about his recent trip to Peru and Bolivia and about the Inca and pre-Inca ruins there. A Salt Lake City newspaper carried a lengthy write-up about his visit, and a picture of Brother Hanson.

BAPTISMS

Apostle Maurice Draper announced that baptismal reports are coming in in sufficient numbers to indicate that last November will be one of the best in many years.

NEWS FROM THE BISHOPRIC

Apostle E. J. Gleazer and Bishop H. L. Livingston visited the Central Missouri Stake the first week end in December.

Bishop W. N. Johnson was one of the principal speakers at the Chicago District Conference on the same week end.

MISSIONS

According to Apostle Maurice Draper, the South Jersey Mission of Camden, New Jersey, is making rapid progress. The mission was opened this year and is now working on a building fund.

Apostle Draper also reports good missionary opportunities are opening up in northern Maine. Elder Donald E. Harvey is laboring in this new missionary field for the church.

PRIESTHOOD INSTITUTE

At the priesthood institute held in Tulsa, Oklahoma, on December 3 and 4, Apostle Reed Holmes presented the membership statistics as they applied to the district and particularly the Tulsa Branch. Dr. F. M. McDowell was the guest minister and spoke on the need of more effective family ministry by the priesthood. Several men from Central Oklahoma District were present for the complete institute.

MUSIC

The little hymnal, used at General Conference, is being revised to include some material from the new youth hymnal now in process for publication.

The Messiah Choir of Independence was invited to join the 700 voice community choir in a rendition of Handel's oratorio given under the auspices of the Kansas City Philharmonic Association in Kansas City's Municipal Auditorium. The Independence choir formed a nucleus for the other choirs. The Kansas City Philharmonic Orchestra played, and Hans Schweiger, conductor, directed the performance.

The Independence chorus will broadcast over the Columbia network from 10:30 to 12 midnight on December 18, accompanied by 43 selected musicians from the Philharmonic Orchestra, and will sing in the Auditorium on Christmas night. Franklyn S. Weddle will direct both performances.

(Continued on page 23.)

The Open Door

"Behold, I have set before thee an open door, and no man can shut it." —Revelation 3: 8

The Direction of Happiness

The happiest people are those who look to the future as an adventure filled with interest and opportunity. They are the only people who truly live. The rest are serving time, working out a sentence pronounced upon them by life—an indeterminate sentence that ends at the grave. One who waits for death is dying already.

The direction of happiness is the future, because we are subject to the stream of time, carried along on its crest like boats that go down the river to the sea.

There is a wider meaning in our text than any of us can imagine. "Behold, I have set before thee an open door, and no man can shut it." Nobody can shut it for us. We cannot shut it for ourselves. The passing of time is not a voluntary matter. We have no control of it. We must all enter the year 1950 together, whether we wish to or not.

There are some people who take this compulsory journey, moving backward into the future with their eyes upon the past. That was the mistake of Lot's wife, who looked back and was turned to a pillar of salt. Salt kills growing things, when there is too much of it. Anybody who keeps his gaze fixed upon the past will turn, in spirit at least, to salt; for he will dwell in the land of death.

The words of our text which the prophet was directed to address "to the angel of the church in Philadelphia" (Revelation 3: 7)—and isn't it a beautiful idea that each church should have a guardian angel to care for it—are an invitation to turn our steps and our attention in the direction of the future.

Just now, as we look ahead only a few days, we see the open door. It has an inscription above it: "1950."

What Do You See?

As you look through the open door, what do you see for yourself in the year to come? There are many possibilities. There are books to read, if you will open them (not just buy them and put them on the shelf to gather dust). There is good music to hear if you will take the time. There are new friendships to make if you will take the trouble. There are interesting places to see if you will travel to them. There is work to be done if you will arise and do it.

We must all confess if we look back over the past year—and a little bit of that goes a long way—that we have not done as much as we could. "We have lived below our opportunities." We have been less than our best, and we are smaller today to that extent. People grow in work and service. They stifle and die by inactivity. Whatever mistakes you made in 1949, you cannot correct them now. But you can keep from making them over again in 1950.

For Your Home

Look through that open door, and what do you see for your home and family? Can you see your wife made happier because you are determined to leave old faults behind at the threshold of the year, to be more considerate and kind to her? Can you see your children loving you more deeply because you are gentler with them, and spend a little more time with them as a companion?

We can accomplish little without planning. This is a new opportunity to plan something better for our homes. Each year should bring some improvement in convenience, space, or beauty, for the benefit of the family.

Above all, we should be mindful to give love to our families here and now, for we do not know how long we may have them with us; and we never know when accident or fate may take them from us, leaving us the bitterness of regret that we had not been better to them.

For the Church

Looking again through that open door into the new year, we should also be able to see something for the church. There is the class you declined to teach last year. Will you not say, "Yes," when they ask you again to give your help this year? There is the financial support needed by your local church, as well as the tithing to be paid to headquarters. Will you give that needed help this year?

Consider the condition of your local church. Perhaps some repairs and improvements are necessary. Probably some addition to the landscaping would beautify it. New equipment, a coat of paint, or an added room could be provided for the children. Certainly the church—the spiritual home of the congregation—deserves something better this year than it had last year.

For the Community

Christ gave a commandment in the Sermon on the Mount that we should consider as we look through the open door into the next year. "Ye are the light of the world . . . Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven."

Circumstances have been such that some of our people have been isolated and rather cut off from community work and activity. Our light can shine through good works for the benefit of the community, such good works as can be performed in co-operation with others. L. J. L.

E d i t o r i a l

Across the Desk

From Elder John T. Conway, district president, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania:

On Sunday, December 11, Brother Almer Sheehy and I will have an all-day meeting in Norwalk, Connecticut. The New Haven and Norwalk congregations will combine for the day's activities. Almer and I have looked forward to the opportunity to work together, and a meeting of this kind will provide it. The day's program will include morning prayer service and preaching, dinner at the church, afternoon classwork, and evening preaching.

The district Zion's League, under the direction of Paul Frisbey, has a project under way to send one young person from each branch League group to General Conference next spring. Efforts are being continued to bring the North Philadelphia group into existence. Brother Samuel Worrell has been appointed leader of this group and will work with the priesthood in that area. They are searching for a suitable meeting place.

In a recent report I indicated my concern for the growth of our work in this eastern area which cradled the Restoration Movement. These great eastern states comprise areas of tremendous missionary potentiality. Many of our branches have not had missionary help for years, and all of them need missionary assistance as soon as possible.

From President E. E. Jennings, Far West Stake, November 1, 1949:

Here is news we like to report, and I am sure you like to receive. During the month of October, we baptized thirty-one in Far West Stake. Yesterday (Sunday) we had two baptismal services, both of which were held at First Church. In the afternoon nineteen were inducted into the church, and in the evening two more were baptized.

A recent letter from one of our district presidents raised a question which has probably been in the minds of other local administrative officers. We are, therefore, publishing our reply to him:

Dear Brother:

We have given much thought to your inquiry as to the relative jurisdiction of district presidents and pastors of branches. As so often happens, there may not appear a sharp line of cleavage between them. We think it is well that there is not, because it accentuates the desire—yes, necessity—for a spirit of harmonious co-operation on the part of both.

A district president has supervisory responsibility over the branches and congregations in his district. Pastors have the immediate direction and watch care of their branches or congregations, and unless the affairs of branches or congregations are neglected or become in "disorder," the district president has no right to interfere with their administration, and then only to "set in order."

A proper appraisal of and respect for the prerogatives of the other without jealousy or envy on the part of either will bring about harmony and the spirit of co-operation.

Succinctly stated, superior administrative officers, though having advisory responsibilities, should not interfere with the duties and administration of subordinates unless and until they or the work intrusted to them can be properly held to be in disorder.

Yours truly,
THE FIRST PRESIDENCY,
By Israel A. Smith

Sister Alfay McCracken of Bainville, Montana, in a recent letter gave the following consideration to differences that persist between our church and the Utah church:

If people aren't becoming educated to the fact that there are two churches, it isn't the fault of our scattered members, for it is we who are so scattered that make it a point to tell our friends.

We appreciate the feeling expressed here, and while we are few in number, we know that a great change could result in a very short time if all our members were diligent in telling others of our belief. Let us not waste a golden opportunity in a golden age.

From a letter by Alma C. Andrews we excerpt the following:

The Berkeley congregation is increasing in attendance and activity. It was host to the Northern California women's department on October 29 and 30. Elder John W. Rushton gave the sermon on Sunday at 11:00 o'clock, when two hundred persons were in attendance.

Former Gracelanders who are serving in the priesthood here have given a good account of themselves in their ministry. Some who have assisted in months past are Jerry Runkle, Malcolm Ritchie, Joseph and William Piedemonte, Turner Allen, and Clark Vincent. With the assistance of these men in the various pulpits and in other activities, the work here has been greatly enhanced. The Berkeley Branch, as well as the other branches and groups of the Bay Cities area, is making good progress.

We excerpt the following from a letter by Elder Frank McDonald, pastor of the St. Louis Branch:

We had a baptismal service on November 20 in which we received four additions to the church. We feel that several others are nearly ready for baptism and that they will make their decision soon. One of the new members, a very fine young man, completes a family circle. Another is a young woman who came to us from the Baptist Church through contacts within the Zion's League. We are happy for these additions, and I am sure that several others will be ready within the year. During the little more than five years we have been here, 105 people have been baptized. In the twenty-one years immediately preceding, there were 191 baptisms. Our record of baptisms is much too low, and we are hoping for many more this year and in the years to come.

Boston Branch Parsonage

On October 16, 1949, in conjunction with open house, a dedication service was held for the newly-purchased Boston Branch parsonage. Over two hundred persons were present for the occasion.

The parsonage, located at 11 Summit Street, postal zone 44, Somerville, Massachusetts, is in a fine residential area. It is a well-constructed, nine-room house with slate roof and steam-heating system. Following the purchase of the building, two painting bees were held under the direction of Wallace Booth, Sr., and his son, Wallace, Jr. Twenty-three men participated in the bee, and several women of the congregation served meals.

Christmas in Scandinavia

By E. Y. HUNKER

CHRISTMAS in the Scandinavian countries is a festive time for family, church, and community groups. In Norway, in addition to Christmas Eve, First Christmas Day, and Second Christmas Day, the holidays continue until January 20. In Sweden they continue until about February 13. Religious groups meet in their little churches at specified dates. Beginning in late afternoon or early evening, they enjoy association and refreshments together. From time to time during the "fest" they join hands and circle the gaily decorated Christmas tree, singing songs of sociability, blended with songs whose sentiment centers around the theme of the birth of Jesus.

For days, even weeks, before Christmas, housewives prepare baked goods: cakes, cookies, doughnuts (which the Scandinavians appropriately call "lard rings"), and varied other goodies. Not to be forgotten is the famed Jul kringel, a special Christmas cake, which is rolled out long and oval and shaped into a form something like a pretzel, then baked.

The people are not unmindful of the fact that cold weather and deep snows make it difficult for the birds to find natural food. There is a nation-wide custom of putting out the "Christmas sheaf" for these feathered denizens of wood and field. Unthreshed grain—oats, rye, or wheat, still on the straw—is bound on a stick. This stick is fastened in the gable peak of roofs so the sheaf protrudes a little above the ridge-comb. There the birds feed whenever they get hungry.

One of the lovely and appealing customs in Norway is the assembling of the family members of an entire home unit to feast together on Christmas Eve. Varied conditions and activities during the year make it difficult for all of them to be together often. On Christmas Eve this is possible. It is a heart-warming sight to see the pride and concern of parents in the ties of blood kinship. The desire to have all the household together in the spirit of fellowship, good will, reconciliation, and peace imparts to this custom a touching appeal. This, supplemented by the remembrance of the Good Father's gift of his Son, engenders inexpressible sentiments that are nevertheless felt and appreciated.

PERHAPS it was this spirit of Christmas, this love of home and family, evident even in the midst of the joyous and festive season in Scandinavia that intensified my Christmas experience in Stockholm, Sweden, in 1927. Separated by many miles from home and loved ones, God allowed me to have an experience that taught me far more about his love and fatherhood than I had sensed previously.

In August, 1927, by decision of General Church Authorities, I was assigned to return on my second mission to Scandinavia. This meant leaving my wife and four-year-old daughter, Juanita, here in America and crossing the sea to be away for over a year. My heart was heavy, and I was lonely when I bade them farewell in Kansas City. By the time I arrived in Brooklyn, where I was to board ship, it seemed I was far from home. When the ship was leaving, there was not a personal acquaintance on the dock to tell me good-by. There were two letters for me on the boat: one from my wife, the other from John R. Grice. Aside from that it seemed no one cared. As the ship put out to sea, the consciousness within me that every hour was rapidly widening the distance between my loved ones and me did not improve my feelings. Eventually we made port at Bergen, Norway.

Busy days followed. I renewed contacts with Saints and friends, visited, preached, and told the gospel story. I was feeling some better until word from Apostle Hanson in England instructed me to go to Stockholm, Sweden. Brother C. Oscar Johnson, who with his family had been seven years on that mission, was soon to sail for America. I was to replace him in Stockholm. This perturbed me. I was hardly acquainted in Sweden. It would be necessary for me to learn a new language. I would be alone in a large and strange city, rather far removed from points where I felt familiar.

After a month the Johnsons left for America. I felt more lonely than ever, but I took up the work as best I could and endeavored to carry on. Thus Christmas, 1927, overtook me in Stockholm.

I spent the day of December 24 in my room, working and trying to crowd out the homesickness and loneliness that persistently pushed into my thinking and feeling everytime I paused. Finally, toward four or five o'clock that afternoon, I donned my overcoat and went out to walk. All day the sounds of festive preparation had penetrated through the walls of my room from the surrounding apartments. I hoped to get away from this so I might forget my intense longing to be at home with my family. I had prayed intermittently through the day for divine grace to stand the ordeal. My praying seemed only to augment the pangs that were gnawing at my heart.

Outside, however, the situation was no better. Darkness falls early in the north countries at that time of year. Windows were brightly lighted and festooned. The joyous prattle and singing of children, blended with happy adult voices, were everywhere. On the streets people were hurrying along, excited and animated with the Christmas spirit. And it seemed to me that I never before saw so many couples about the same age as my wife and I, with a little girl about the age of our Juanita. They were moving along with happy countenances, carrying toys and packages. This was more than I could endure. I returned to my room and knelt to pray for help. But restlessness soon drove me out into the evening again, only to be overcome by the emotions that welled up within as I noted the Christmas joys of families all around. I turned the second time to my room to seek relief in prayer. I continued this alternating procedure until after 1:00 a.m., when with an aching heart I went to my room. No family had invited me to join in its joys on Christmas Eve. Never had I felt so alone and forgotten. It was as though I could not live through the night. My heart, my thoughts, my desires, my hopes, were all with my loved ones in our little home in Independence.

BEFORE RETIRING I knelt by my cot and poured out my soul to God. I was utterly beaten. My pride was gone. Other recourse was without power to aid me in this hour of great need. The situation had brought me to my knees. In repentant spirit I besought my Heavenly Father for divine assistance. The gist of my petition was something like this:

Father, once again, as I have done many times in the past, I turn to thee for needed help that only thou canst give. Thou hast been good to me far beyond what I have deserved. Thou hast helped me in times of trial. Often I have grown negligent and have forgotten. I have at times withstood thy will and love. I feel I am not even worthy to be called thy son. I ask forgiveness. My trial is more than I can bear alone. Even though I am unworthy, thou hast called me to minister to needy souls, and insofar as I am able, I desire to carry out thy bidding. Thou knowest my need at this time. Thou knowest how greatly I desire to be with my family during this Christmas season. Bless them. Be near them. Comfort them. May they have joy, and may all be well with them. And if it be not out of harmony with thy will and purpose, Father, supply me with the power to live through this loneliness. If it can be possible, and if I am at all worthy, grant something in thine own wisdom and way that will dispel this grief. If ever I needed help from thee, I need it now. I shall try to be humbly grateful and shall endeavor to continue the work thou hast called me to do. May it be granted through Christ whose birth we now commemorate. Amen!

I arose from praying, turned off the light, and went to bed. Suddenly, within a few moments, I felt a spiritual transition. A vision appeared in which I saw my wife and daughter. They seemed to be at a distance of about a hundred feet. My wife was kneeling beside our daughter. Both were facing toward me. Their faces were wreathed in smiles. My wife pointed toward me and said to our daughter: "Look, there's Daddy over there! See him? Say Merry Christmas to Daddy!" Little Juanita inclined her head to one side, smiled brightly, waved her hand, and said: "Merry Christmas, Daddy!" My wife joined in waving to me. Their faces were radiant with joy and smiles. Then as suddenly as it had come, the vision vanished. I was instantly conscious of my surroundings in the room, but my loneliness had vanished with the vision. The warmth and glow of the presence and love of my Heavenly Father charged and surcharged my being. My heart was filled to overflowing with gratitude and praise to him who knows the needs of his children and who hears them when they cry. My tears changed from those of sorrow to those of joy. There was no sleep for me through the remaining hours of the night, but my soul was lifted up in the blessing of the Father's goodness and love. I came to sense his fatherhood more deeply and realistically than ever before.

It was Christmas Day an Scandinavian. I was far from loved ones, but God had given me the consciousness of their nearness in spirit. Christ bestowed upon me a great gift on his birthday. I doubt that of all the gifts exchanged in Scandinavia, there was any other that compared with mine. God drew me into his love and revealed once more his compassionate heart and his care and concern for his children. I knew he understood the deepest longings of my soul. Through his grace I was able to endure.

By his grace and truth may we come to see more clearly that his fatherhood seeks to bring to pass the oneness and true brotherhood of mankind in Jesus Christ: "Peace on earth among men of good will."

Strengthening Family Ties

WE CANNOT ADVOCATE too strongly that marriages be built upon a spiritual foundation. Until recently family prayer was one of the characteristic features of happy American home life. The divorce rate has climbed ever since people gave it up.

Marriages were consecrated in prayer. Husband and wife prayed together and had grace at the table. When the children came, it was made a family prayer period. It did something for people. It taught them how to live together and kept them from those mistakes which gradually destroy marriage. Over a period of years I have found that when a couple learns to pray together, they have found the surest preventive for marriage difficulties. I do not know of a man and wife who have practiced this who have not had happiness in marriage. It can even restore happiness to those whose marriages seem to be failing.

A Heart Warmed Toward God

John J. Cornish, Missionary

BIRTH AND INFANCY

John Cornish, my father, and Mary Taylor, my mother, were born and married in Devonshire, England, as near as I can ascertain. I was born in the Township of Osborne, County of Huron, Province of Ontario, Canada, October 17, 1854. My mother died when I was about three years of age. I was bound out, according to the laws of Ontario, to a man by the name of John Vail, until I should become twenty-one years old. At the age of six or seven I was able to do some farm chores. If I did not do them to suit Mr. Vail, I would usually get a whipping.

CHILDHOOD

I asked, "Did my own mother belong to the church?"

"No."

"Well, then, is she in hell?"

"Yes."

This brought much sorrow to me, and it was on my mind for many days.

YOUTH

A neighbor said to me, "Jack, you're a fool to stay with Vail and be abused." Another, "I'd run away from him." Then I determined that the next time he whipped me I would . . . and I left not long after. I went a few miles south. That fall an uncle arranged for me to work at another place. . . .

After a few months Mr. Magee moved his business into London, Ontario, taking with him his family and Thomas Brock, Mary [his sister], and me, as helpers.

YOUNG MANHOOD

Time went on, and first one and then another would tell me something about the gospel. I heard preaching and attended prayer meetings. The elder . . . gave many references of Scripture to prove all he said.

I believed then that there was a chance for my mother and for all mankind. My heart warmed toward God. I thought, "There is a God, and he is just, and I love him as I never could have loved him before."

CONVERSION

There I knelt and prayed earnestly that if God would speak to me in tongues through rough Elder Myron Haskins, and tell me this gospel is true, if it is, and give me a manifestation of his Holy Spirit, I would obey it. . . . With this good feeling I arose and determined that not a soul on earth should know what I had done. . . .

Selections from his autobiography, "Into the Latter Day Light," with explanatory notes.

After the meeting had opened, Brother Haskins arose and began speaking in a language I did not know. Then he turned to me and said, "Inasmuch as you have inquired of me this day to know the truthfulness of my gospel, I now reveal it unto you, and give you a manifestation of my Spirit."

Some of the men went to cut a hole in the ice. Brother Leverton baptized me. I was confirmed by Arthur Leverton, Myron Haskins, and (I think) Norman Blakeslee.

Suddenly I heard, up in the air, a sound like a strong rushing wind coming nearer and nearer, until it descended upon my head, and my entire being was thrilled through and through, which caused joy, peace, and happiness. I said, "O God, I am satisfied; I thank thee for thy mercies and blessings; I'll serve thee while I live."

(Brother Cornish was baptized and confirmed on February 22, 1872.)

BEGINNING IN LONDON (1875)

Having a great desire to have the gospel preached in London, I concluded that as soon as I could get a little money ahead I would try to get the elders to come. . . . There was one young lady who seemed willing to investigate the new doctrine. We went to Bothwell, where we spent Sunday in the meetings of the Saints. She was baptized and confirmed and returned to London a Latter Day Saint. We now had two Saints in London. Only one man who worked in the mill with me would investigate our claims, John J. Harvey. We made it our business to be together as often as we could to read and talk about the gospel. Shortly, he was baptized. There were now three Saints in London.

I joined the Sons of Temperance and in about two months obtained the use of the Sons of Temperance hall, at one dollar a night. I had to do the janitor work. The time came and with it Elders Robert Davis and Arthur Leverton. Nine persons only were present.

PERSONAL EVANGELISM

"Cornie," said Mr. Coglin, "if you say another word about your doctrine, I'll sack you."

"No, you won't," said I. "You started it. You know that besides keeping the engine going, I am working about one quarter of the time at sawing, turning, and other work, and that is more than any other man did for you." And looking in his face with an old-fashioned smile that generally comes unbidden, I said, "No, Mr. Coglin, you just love me, and you wouldn't sack me for anything."

He didn't. . . .

* * * * *

Mr. Grant was in the height of his glory. "Jack," said he, "I'll knock that Mormon doctrine out of you."

I said, "You can't, Bill; you haven't the right kind of a knocker."

MOBBED

The captain of the mob said, "Where's that other little devil?" and peering among the crowd spied me and ran against me with such force it knocked me flat in the snow. Refusing to walk, I was dragged to the sleigh. My ears and the tips of my fingers were frozen that night. Arriving in the woods, we found the snow was shoveled back. A pile of dry wood in the center was waiting for the match which was applied. Bill . . . jumped from the sleigh, rushing toward me with his right fist extended, when a man in the ring grabbed his arm. . . . By that time the ring was broken, much confusion ensued, and I started for the road. . . . We gained the road and liberty.

NOTES

On the second Sunday evening in London, as a result of work and advertising, sixty were present. Three more were baptized; three members came from England, which made nine. Brother Cornish's first converts in London were James H. Stratton and Albert Dempsey. In sixteen months the membership rose to seventy. They built, and on November 21, 1875, dedicated a church thirty by forty feet in dimensions.

Question Time

The year, 1875, was a great one in the life of Brother Cornish. He was ordained a priest on April 5; was married to one of his converts, Miss Jannie Stratton; and was ordained an elder on October 4.

From 1875 to 1877, he did missionary work, amidst eager support and persecution, in other Ontario towns: Usborne, Exeter, and St. Thomas. In 1876 he helped Joseph Luff organize a branch at Toronto. Further work followed in Corinth, Blenheim, and various parts of Michigan.

In 1877 Brother Cornish attended a General Conference at Galland's Grove, Iowa, where he was appointed to labor on a self-sustaining basis. At the time of his superannuation in 1922, he had traveled thousands of miles on foot in church work, had developed a technique of personal evangelism that enabled him to baptize 1,500 persons, and had engaged in many debates in defense of the gospel. His great contribution to the church in fifty years of labor, and more, was the branch at London, Ontario, which is one of our strongest and finest groups today.

Eight children were born to the Cornishes, and Brother Cornish had the joy of seeing some of his sons ordained and serving the church. His wife was as devoted to the work as he was and made many sacrifices to enable him to carry on his ministry.

To the end of his life he wore the winsome, charming smile with which he began his ministry. His friendly blue eyes made people like him immediately. He preached a gospel of God's love that everybody could understand, and himself gave an example of loving the people.

As he wrote of his early days, "My heart warmed toward God," it is apparent from his life that it never cooled off. His slender figure was vibrant with energy; his manner won affection wherever he went.

He passed away on June 24, 1937, but a fame and a legend of him remains among the people who remember "Johnnie Cornish" as one of the great ministers of the Reorganization.

L. J. L.

Any sincere question from our readers will receive consideration from the editors. If it is of general interest, it will be referred to the Question Time panel, and the answer will be printed. Please keep the question short—fifty words or less should be sufficient. Your personal problems, the answers to which concern you alone, will be answered by letter. Address questions to Herald Editors rather than panel members. We shall try to take all questions in the order they are received. Be patient, there may be several ahead of yours. Only signed questions sent by contributors will appear here.—EDITOR.

QUESTION:

Where should a Latter Day Saint draw the line at upholding and sustaining the repsective government in which he resides (Doctrine and Covenants 112: 5) if that government is an ungodly one not founded on principles of justice?

Mrs. N. W.

ANSWER:

It is difficult to say exactly at what point one would cease to uphold and sustain a government which might be in the path of error. To be sure all governments have certain imperfections, and there are some which are much more just and right than others. Certainly no one is obliged to support a government which is in open defiance of the principles of liberty and justice vouchsafed to us in the gospel of Jesus Christ.

A statement found among the papers of Thomas Jefferson after his death gives us the following: "Resistance to tyrants is obedience to God." Righteous men will oppose a government that is not founded on justice, one which is ungodly.

The Declaration of Independence explains the reasons for the establishment of a new government as follows:

Prudence, indeed, will dictate that governments long established should not be changed for light and transient causes; and accordingly all experience has shown, that mankind are more disposed to suffer, while evils are sufferable, than to right themselves by abolishing the forms to which they are accustomed. But when a long train of abuses and usurpations, pursuing invariably the same Object evinces a desire to reduce them under absolute despotism, it is their right, it is their duty, to throw off such Government, and to provide new guards for their future security.

Though a government may be in some degree of error, it should have the support of its people as long as it seeks to protect their personal and community rights. We may change a well-founded but erring government, but a wicked foundation is fatal. Our Heavenly Father would not expect us to support a government which is not founded on Christian principles.

A. Orlin Crownover.

QUESTION:

In the Epitome of Faith by Joseph Smith we have the statement: "In the Bible is contained the word of God." Does this mean that the Bible is the word of God, or that part of it is and that part is not?
New York J. S.

ANSWER:

The statement, "In the Bible is contained the word of God," is true. We cannot say that the Bible contains all the word of God, neither can we say that all the writings of the Bible can be attributed to him. For the most part, however, the word of God is to be found in the Bible. We know that the parts of the Bible are attributed variously to God, his Son Jesus, the Holy Ghost, the angels of God, and holy men inspired of God. We also know that other statements were made by uninspired men and even by Satan. In the Book of Job for instance, God, Satan, Job, his three friends, and Elihu make up the personnel who are speaking or quoted. Job was severely tried, and his mind became darkened. In this condition his utterance was a mixture of truth and error. That which is in error will be found to disagree with statements by other writers who perceived the word of truth.

A. Orlin Crownover

QUESTION

Where do the spirits of the righteous and the wicked go after leaving the body?

ANSWER

The Book of Mormon (448: 43-47) states that the spirits of both good and bad are taken "home to that God who gave them life." Then the spirits of the righteous are received "into a state of happiness, which is called paradise; a state of rest; a state of peace." And then the spirits of the wicked "shall be cast out into outer darkness; . . . a state of awful, fearful, looking for, of the fiery indignation of the wrath of God upon them" until the time of the resurrection.

A. B. PHILLIPS.

Briefs

DECATUR, NEBRASKA.—The annual Northeast Nebraska District Conference was held on November 6. District President Albert Livingston was in charge, and Bishop Walter Johnson of the Presiding Bishopric was the guest speaker. A crowd of about 100 was in attendance. The women of the branch served the noonday lunch.

Elder Charles D. Neff, pastor of the Omaha Branch, was elected president of the district for the coming year. Other officers elected were E. A. Link, secretary-treasurer; Harold Newton, young people's director; Wesley Ballinger, associate young people's leader; Mrs. Kreizel, women's leader; Frances Neff, music director; Carl T. Self, recorder and historian; and Maxine Link, church school director.

LA GRANDE, OREGON.—The Baker Group with other groups from eastern Oregon were visited by the Oregon district officers and by Missionary Elder Vest and wife for a two-day meeting. Elder Vest and Earl Wilcox visited the homes of Saints in La Grande, Wallowa, and Pondosa. Elder Vest presented illustrated sermons in some of the places visited. Several young people have been baptized recently. Regular services are held in Wallowa, Baker, and La Grande.—EARL WILCOX.

LOCK FOUR, NORTH CHARLEROI, PENNSYLVANIA.—Patriarch John R. Grice held a successful series of meetings from October 9 through October 27. On October 12 a baptismal service was held at the church. Three adults were baptized by Brother Grice. They were confirmed by Brother Grice, and Elders Henry and Clarence Winship. Brother Grice gave over sixty patriarchal blessings during his stay.

A Tri-District Institute was held October 28, 29, and 30. Districts attending were Youngstown, West Virginia, and Pittsburgh. Apostle Percy E. Farrow and Dr. F. M. McDowell were ministers in charge. Seventy Merle P. Guthrie and Evangelist John R. Grice assisted.

On the evening of October 28, Dr. McDowell and Apostle Farrow addressed the conference. A social hour followed, consisting of refreshments, singing, and fellowship. On October 29 there was held a prayer service and morning and afternoon classes. An assembly of reports and summary findings was given. A fellowship dinner was held in the evening of the same day in the Social Room of the Presbyterian Church.

Brother Farrow spoke at the 10:00 service and Brother McDowell at the 11:00 service of October 30. Brother Farrow gave the closing sermon in the evening.—Reported by DORIS DOOLEY AND DOROTHY RAISBECK.

MOBILE, ALABAMA.—Elder R. L. Booker of the Mobile public school system has been promoted to principalship of the Prichard schools. He was born in Kansas, educated at Kansas State Teachers College, and taught six years in his native state before going to Alabama. He holds offices in the city, county, and state, and is vice-president of the National Association of Elementary Principles.—Reported by ELDER JACK A. PRAY, pastor of Mobile Branch.

WALNUT PARK, INDEPENDENCE.—On October 9 Apostle Charles Hield showed Kodachrome slides about Central America and lectured to the congregation on the archaeological evidence of the Book of Mormon. On October 16 Apostle Draper showed slides of events, people, and places of church history. Before Apostle Draper's sermon, there was a musical meditation in which Homer Gatchett was baritone soloist, and Mr. and Mrs. Zygmund Rondomanski and Mrs. Frank Prell were members of a string trio.

Elder Fred Davies, pastor, went to Chariton, Iowa, on October 9 to 16 and preached a series of missionary sermons.

Zion's League has organized a choir of mixed voices. Bernard Butterworth and Allene Lucas usually act as directors. There was a fine musical program on October 30 by the branch choir and orchestra in a joint endeavor.

Bud Henson, church custodian, reports that following the redecoration of the church building, the installation of the gas furnace began.—Reported by MRS. ELLA MAE WILLIAMS.

OREGON DISTRICT.—The officers, district council, and pastors met for an all-day instruction class and lunch at the Central Portland Church on November 27. The purpose of this meeting was to organize the year's work and to familiarize each person with his work and responsibilities. They made plans to raise the largest operating budget ever to be raised in the district's history. Thirty-two branch, mission, and group pastors; twenty district officers; and twenty-one of the district council; including the county ministers to isolated Saints and special assigned officers, totaling fifty-nine were present.

Elder Harold Carpenter, district church school director had charge of the morning church school assisted by Brother Lloyd Shannon. Evangelist W. H. Barker spoke at the 11:00 hour.

A basket lunch in charge of Sister Susie Yeoman, the Central Church women's leader, and Sister Royce Chapman, district women's leader, was served. This was the first meal to be served in the Central Church's new dining room and kitchen.

After lunch the leadership gathered in the chapel, and the following men spoke: James Burdick on "Priesthood Education," Chester Gregory on "Youth Organization," Elwin R. Vest on "Missionary Work," Milton Becker on "District Budget," Paul Fishel on "Tithing and Financial Law," Robert Bailey on "Ministry to Isolated Saints," Charles Gollihon on "How I Can Best Serve," Raymond Huggett on "My Job as a Pastor," Leonard Hoisington on "Adequate Church Buildings," and Miles Whiting on "My Place in the Service of God." Round-table discussions were held on each topic.

District President J. L. Verhei presided over the entire gathering and spoke in the afternoon on "Priesthood Standards." Evangelist Mark Yeoman preached in the evening. The organists were Sister Dorothy Haviland and Elaine Gollihon, while the soloists were Elder Glenn Haviland and Sister Peggy Vest.

The group was reminded that there are over 2,000 members in the thirty-nine counties of Oregon and Washington to serve.

Groups of workers are meeting each Saturday to work on the new Oregon Camp Grounds on the Lewis River. These beautiful thirty acre grounds are located on the Lewis River in Washington and will afford large recreation fields, picnic grounds, and camping facilities. They will be used for branch and district picnics and youth camps. But reunions will not be held there until proper buildings are available.—Reported by J. L. VERHEI.

ROCK ISLAND DISTRICT.—A Church School Worker's Conference and District Conference were held in Rock Island, Illinois, November 19 and 20. Around 150 were present on November 19 when Apostle Reed Holmes spoke. The day's sessions were climaxed with a pageant "The Church of Yesterday, Today, and Tomorrow," directed by Sister Winifred Stiegel.

Some 400 persons attended the conference held at the Masonic Temple with Apostle D. T. Williams and Apostle Holmes, speakers for the morning and early afternoon services. At the business session the following officers were elected or sustained: Lyle W. Woodstock, district president; Clarence M. Beil and E. R. Williams, counselors; Mrs. George C. Shippy, secretary; John C. Stiegel, treasurer and bishop's agent; Mrs. John C. Stiegel, church school director; Leonard Hendricks, young people's leader; Jesse Cady, director of music; Mrs. H. R. Cady, supervisor of women; Mrs. Lora Sackfield, historian; Warren Hinkle, O. E. Lindsay, and E. T. Williamson, auditors; Josephine Scott, children's leader; Miss Ellen Blake, director of teacher training; and C. A. Beil, George McFarlane, J. O. Dutton, L. L. Allen, nonresident pastors.—Reported by MRS. RUTH SHIPPY.

OMAHA, NEBRASKA.—Working towards the goal of the church, "Each One Win One," and also towards his own goal of 50 baptisms for this fiscal year, Pastor Charles D. Neff of Omaha observed November 20 as Decision Day for the branch.

The help of members of the priesthood was solicited and a program for priesthood visiting every Monday evening was instituted. A plan for family visiting was also formulated by Pastor Neff. This plan was for October, and the month was designated "Get Acquainted Month." Stencils were cut on which were given the rules to be followed. Six links representing a chain were drawn down the right-hand side. In each link was the family name of some member of the branch. Pastor Neff gave the sheet to the person whose family name appeared in the first link, and this family was to visit within three days the family whose name appeared in the second link. The sheet was then left with this second family, and they in turn visited the family whose name appeared in the third link. This procedure was to be followed throughout the links of that particular chain. Several of these lists were handed out the first of October. As a result of this plan many families were visited, especially those in which not all were members of the church.

Decision Day was given much publicity through the local branch paper Ray-O-Lite, the weekly bulletin, and through conversation. As a result of this special endeavor, a baptismal service was held on the morning of November 20. Patriarch R. W. Scott gave the charge to the candidates, and Pastor Neff baptized twelve people. These were confirmed at the evening service. The twelve are Dick and Patty Turner, Joan and Keith Johnson, Ed Cunningham and daughter Eleanor, Filmore Walker and son Curtis, Vivian Hill, Norma Kenyon, Ruth and Edith Goff.

Plans are already under way for another Decision Day in the near future. Five of those baptized were from South Mission, established only six weeks ago. Brother Neff chose Elder Buy Riley as his assistant and placed him in charge of the mission. The total church attendance for the city of Omaha has increased approximately 22 per cent since the opening of the mission. The average attendance of the Omaha Branch is now approximately 52 per cent greater than it was a year ago.—Reported by C. B. CONSTANCE.

Blessed Are They That Do

By LOTTIE CLARK DIGGLE

A SISTER ONCE REMARKED, "You know I haven't the education to do much for the church, but I can always work with my hands."

For five consecutive days she washed the walls and painted in the lower auditorium. Others came to help at intervals, but Elizabeth's enthusiasm never once flagged until the church school room was a joy to behold. Some time later the chapel pews needed scraping and revarnishing. Again quiet, efficient Elizabeth led the crew of workers. Her garden is a riot of lovely bloom, and her home is always neat. Should a wedding be in the offing, her nimble fingers are busy embroidering a set of dish towels, or perhaps a colorful, hooked, woolen rug for the bride. Who shall say our sister's workworn hands are other than beautiful?

I LOVE TO REMEMBER my father's gnarled hands. After a busy day he sometimes would fashion a delightful whistle from a willow branch, or make a perfectly balanced top from an empty spool. How deft and gentle were those sturdy hands when our baby sister's finger was all but severed. Four tiny wooden splints and a bit of clean linen saved a child's hand from deformity.

In my mind's eye I can yet see his hands parting the tall grasses so that we could get a better view of the speckled eggs of a nesting blackbird. Later as we walked homeward, one child said, "I want to hold hands with you, Papa."

Before he was laid in his last resting place, I would go into the quiet room where he lay. His wrinkled hands were inert on his breast. No more would they hold the plow or scatter seed; never again would they be laid on a fevered brow or pat a curly head. I wondered how anything so vibrant and creative could suffer death, decay, and oblivion? Then I remembered the vision granted him in his last illness:

"I saw Jesus Christ and the eternal city, and now I am not afraid," he said one morning. His passing was but a transition to a happier, busier life of greater service, and all was well!

How appealing are the small hands of a child as the dimpled fingers try to co-ordinate on a crumb of cookie or wave an erratic good-by!

Then there are the creative hands! How infinitely marvelous must be the hands of the Father and the Son who created the universe, who fashioned the earth and all that is within it, who planned and executed the infinite variety of flowers and fruit, and then made man. Even they were proud and pleased with the result of their creative efforts, for as they rested and surveyed the finished product, they saw that it was good.

We are thankful for those whose fingers can play musical instruments, for the genius who creates a work of art, for the unselfish who sacrifice hours of rest or pleasure to write newsy, comforting letters. How grateful must have been our boys overseas who received hand-knit socks—what heart-warming visions they must have had of loved ones back home knitting countless stitches! Blessings on those who made warm quilts and clothing for the shivering children of war-torn Europe! Further blessings on the legions of women whose busy fingers provide the finances to keep the church fires burning! These are builders "who needeth not to be ashamed," and include the humble carpenters as was Jesus of Nazareth. Last are the tillers of the soil who produce by the labor of their hands the food for a hungry world.

THE PHONE RINGS blatantly, insistently. Only half awake after a grueling day at the office and a long evening of priesthood visiting, Elder John Thompson hammers down the stairsteps in a mad rush to answer the call.

"Hello, is this Elder Thompson?" a voice sobs.

"Yes, speaking."

"This is Sister Snell. Jackie has the croup and is almost smothering. Could you come over right away?"

"Of course, sister. I will be right over."

The rain is coming down in sheets, and the streets are a mass of mud and water. Does Elder Thompson feel like a martyr? Is he irritated or disgruntled? Never for a second! Dressing hurriedly he battles the elements for a mile and a half. His knock is answered by the weeping, frightened mother. Soon those hands, those blessed, tender, healing hands are laid gently upon the little head. A fervent prayer goes up to God. The choking lessens—then ceases altogether, and the exhausted child is soon asleep.

"How can I ever thank you enough, Brother Thompson! You have saved Jackie's life," cried Mrs. Snell, fervently.

"Not I, but the Lord, dear sister! I was only the instrument. Let us kneel down and thank him for this great blessing."

And as the good brother once more faces the wild night storm, he muses,

"What a privilege to be God's servant and be able to help those who are in trouble."

Verily, blessed are they that do.

The Home Column

The Women Prepare

Editor's Note: The following letter was written by a young sister who is happy about the training program which was launched by the City-Wide Women's Council of Independence this fall. She is anxious to share it with her friends and is writing to them so they will want to attend.

Dear Friends:

I am so full of inspiration and enthusiasm since attending the second Preparation Day Service here in Independence, that I felt I should let you know what you are missing if you haven't attended one of these services.

In case you haven't even heard of the women's program for this year, I want to tell you a little about it. These services are called "Preparation Days." They include beautiful music by some of our good folk specializing in that field, an inspirational talk by a priesthood member, and sometimes a short social service conducted by the priesthood. In the afternoon classes on such subjects as "Leadership," "Friendly Visiting," "Guides for Studying," "Motherhood," and "Child Rearing," are held. There will be a "Preparation Day" the first Thursday of each month from 10:30 a.m. to 2:15 p.m. through May. We take a sack lunch and visit with our friends at lunch time.

Don't worry about your preschool children; they, too, are provided for. In fact, if I didn't want to attend these services myself, I would have to take Joanne; she "lives" from one nursery school to the other, asking me forty times a day how many more "sleeps" she has to take before she can go to her school again. Of course, she is only three-and-a-half years old and doesn't understand she too is preparing for the most important task in her life; but she does understand it is a day she gets to go to school where she learns new songs, stories, games, and meets her little friends for a picnic day.

I know some of my friends live too far from Independence to attend, but I am anxious for them to know about the program and perhaps they will set this day aside as a study day too, either in groups or individually. When we prepare ourselves to build the kingdom, we do it not only for ourselves, but for all our friends both in and out of the church. All those who live close enough to drive, or have train or bus facilities to Independence, should come and prepare with us. Those who live in Independence and are not attending, especially the young mothers and homemakers, are cheating themselves out of a chance for real spiritual growth.

Why don't you start now and declare the first Thursday of each month a day of learning and preparation for you and your family, and meet your friends at the church at 10:30 a.m.?

BERTHA A. STECK.

Picked From the Periodicals

By Aarona Booker Kohlman

December magazines contain much stimulating material in addition to the expected Christmas themes. One November magazine, a weekly arriving too late for the previous column, is referred to, as the article is so important.

"Our Daughter Is an Epileptic," Collier's, November 26, is the candid story of a girl's affliction told by her parents. It is naturally of interest to any who face this problem, but everyone should read it so that the big problem of prejudice might be eased.

"Get Off Route 25, Young Man," Collier's, December 3, contains a big challenge by Charles F. Kettering. You will be amazed at what we don't know, and at what possibilities and opportunities lie ahead for those who will grasp them.

"Foot Health for Children," Woman's Day, gives pointers on how to be sure that your children's shoes are properly fitted, in order that the foot muscles will be trained and strengthened.

"The Cookie Jar," Woman's Day, is a collection of fifty-two cookie recipes. You might like to save these for future use.

"Let's Be Polite Grown-Ups," Woman's Day, will probably give you a jolt—the author speaks of politeness to children, you see.

"Working Mother," McCall's, is the answer of one working mother to the aching sense of guilt felt by many.

"Dandy Don't Bite," Good Housekeeping, discusses family jokes—some are good to remember, but others are poison. Maybe yours need examining.

"Your Quarrel With Your Daughter," Good Housekeeping, is an article for all mothers of daughters of any age. Better to read it when your daughter is an infant, but in any case, read it and reread it.

Although as a church we cannot agree, "Let's Unite Our Churches—Now," Woman's Home Companion, is an article of great importance and significance. It reflects a world trend we cannot ignore.

"Should You Have a Baby the First Year?" Woman's Home Companion, is a frank discussion for those just married or soon to be married and gets at the roots of the problem.

"A Day to Remember," Woman's Home Companion, sets forth some delightful suggestions to give more meaning to Christmas and to make the Christmas message come alive.

Although the title may sound otherwise, "Let's Get Rid of Xmas," Family Circle, carries the familiar sentiments, and contains some profound truths. It will jog you a little, no doubt.

We do not usually include fiction, but "House Upon a Rock," a book condensation, Ladies' Home Journal, is so unusual and thought-provoking that we recommend it. As the plot concerns a miracle and its effects, our church members will be particularly intrigued by it.

"I Wanted to Nurse My Baby," Ladies' Home Journal, is an excellent article for expectant mothers.

"Something New in Childbirth," Parents' Magazine, should certainly be read by every expectant mother, or by any woman who expects ever to give birth to a child. The author is a "satisfied customer" of the principles of natural childbirth advocated by Dr. Grantly Dick Read in his book, Childbirth Without Fear.

"Raising Good Sports," Parents' Magazine, is for every parent, father or mother. The authors give some suggestions for things parents can do to foster good sportsmanship.

If you have children at home, by all means read "Keeping the Peace at Our House," Parents' Magazine. You will feel that you are quite normal, but you will also see that imagination will help solve your problems.

"Turn Your Imagination Loose!" Reader's Digest, will stimulate your mind and make you realize how little you really use it. "Exercising one's imagination is fun. Few of us make it the asset it should be in our lives."

They Cry Unto the Lord

By RAMONA SEELEY

AND IT SEEMED as if Jesus were sitting upon a hill, and he said, "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven."¹

And the little white children rushed up eagerly to receive the blessings which they were sure were theirs, followed more timidly by members of the yellow, the red, and the brown races. Only the little black boy stood back, uncertain, afraid.

Jesus, noticing, beckoned him on, and the small one approached slowly with faltering steps.

"You—you mean me too, Lord?"

"Come, my boy. I did not say 'Suffer the little white children to come unto me and forbid the colored.' All are welcome to my kingdom."

And the black boy's face was suffused with light and happiness, and he felt white in the eyes of the Lord, and a new world opened up before him.

Jesus left, and the children descended the hill together, laughing gaily.

Soon they came to the home of the white children, and they began to enter. But as the little black boy came to the door, he was pushed aside.

"You cannot enter here."

"But, Jesus said—"

"Oh, he didn't mean that," a giggling voice said, and the door was closed.

Dejectedly the black boy walked away, wishing he could speak to Jesus again. As he was walking, he noticed a beautiful church, and he thought,

"I will go in, and perhaps Jesus will be there."

But as he started to enter, he was stopped at the door.

"You cannot enter here."

"But I am looking for Jesus."

"You cannot find him here—only white people worship here. Go build a church of your own."

"But I don't know how and I have no money."

"That isn't our concern." And the little black boy was turned from the door.

Here Is the Writer

Ramona Sartwell Seeley attended the Savannah, Illinois, High School, graduating in June, 1940. From then until her marriage to Robert Seeley on March 12, 1945, she was employed as secretary for the Midway Oil Company in Rock Island, Illinois. Now she and her husband, a graduate of the University of Southern California, and their two sons, James Robert and Gerald Ammon, are making their home in Moline, Illinois. Mr. Seeley is employed by the board of education.

Ramona lists her hobbies as writing and sports. She teaches a church school class and is an Oriole leader. In addition to her home and church responsibilities, she attends night school. "I hope," she says, "to someday have a college education of my own."

HE AGAIN WALKED on, fear in his heart, bewilderment in his eyes. In the distance he saw a schoolhouse, and he thought, "Perhaps, I can enter there and learn." And he approached slowly.

The teacher pointed out a seat in the back of the room, and he felt the eyes of everyone upon him, and whispers of "Nigger" reached his ears. His face was miserable with shame, and he walked out.

He climbed the hill where Jesus had sat and threw himself down and wept bitterly.

"Oh, Lord," he sobbed, "they say I am not worthy, that I am cursed and full of sin. Oh, Lord, what have I done? What have I done to deserve this?"

And a voice spoke and said, "The Lord denieth none that come unto him, black and white, bond and free, male and female; and he remembereth the heathen, and all are alike unto God!"²

"Oh Lord, they bless with their mouths but they curse inwardly."³

And the voice spoke again saying, "Do not fear, for unless they repent of their sins, your skin will be whiter than theirs, when you shall be brought with them before the throne of God."⁴

And the little black boy arose and was comforted and grew in the ways of the Lord.

* * * *

*Wherefore, a commandment I give unto you, which is the word of God, that ye revile no more against them, because of the darkness of their skins.*⁵

1. Matthew 19: 14.
2. II Nephi 11: 114, 115.
3. Psalm 62: 4.
4. Based on Book of Jacob 2: 59.
5. Book of Jacob 2: 60.

Speaking of Prejudice

Prejudice squints when it looks, and lies when it talks.—Duchess d'Abrantes.

He hears but half who hears one party only.—Aeschylus.

Prejudice is the child of ignorance.—Hazlitt.

A prejudice is a vagrant opinion without visible means of support.—Ambrose Bierce.

It is never too late to give up your prejudices.—Thoreau.

When the judgment's weak, the prejudice is strong.—Kane O'Hara.

Prejudice is being down on something you're not up on.—Evan Fry.

www.LatterDayTruth.org

New Horizons

This Is Switzerland

By BILOINE WHITING

WE ARE IN AN almost unbelievable place—Montana Village in the Alps. It was recommended to us by a Swiss friend when we said we wanted a quiet place to complete some stories. All around us are snowcapped peaks, and below us is the Rhone Valley—visible only when the clouds dissolve. The village literally hangs to the side of the mountain, and all the houses are wooden chalets, unpainted, with roofs that seem too big for the rest of the house and red flower boxes on the porches. We are the first “foreigners” (Americans) to have ever come here. The natives have never seen clothes like ours or heard the English language. The women all wear full black skirts down to their ankles, wool shawls, and embroidered scarves. On Sundays they add blue satin aprons to their costumes. The religion is Catholic, and in the center of the village of perhaps thirty chalets is the church which dates back to 1615. The women do their laundry in watering troughs scattered around the village for the cattle which are driven through the streets every morning and evening.

We are living in the town’s combination tavern and grocery. Our room (on the second floor) is pine-paneled and heated with a wood stove. The beds are equipped with deep feather mattresses. Outside is a porch that overlooks the village and offers a breath-taking view of the mountains. We are the only guests and get wonderful service—the food is delicious. For breakfast we always have a plate of hard rolls, a dish of wild strawberry jam, about a half pound of Swiss butter, and pitchers of cafe au lait. This is a concentrated liquid coffee diluted with hot milk. It is mild-tasting, and I like it better than American coffee. For dinner we have soup, steak or roast with mushrooms, two vegetables, a green salad, rice or spaghetti, and fruit. Supper is typically Swiss with cheese or bacon and eggs, soup, fried potatoes, and salad.

ONE DAY we went hiking. Although there is no snow in the village, we soon climbed into it, yet the sun was so warm we needed only sweaters for wraps. I’ve been taking pictures with as much abandon as if I didn’t have Italy yet to photograph, but Montana Village is so untouched by centuries of valley life that I can’t resist recording it. The people here are so sincere they don’t even pose when we photograph them. I wish I had read all of Mann’s book about the Magic Mountain, because down the slope of this one is a tuberculosis sanitarium for Swiss soldiers and civilians. At night we can see the lights of the hospital blinking below us.

I can appreciate the argument for isolation after living in Montana Village for a few days. Here there is so little of the grasping, climbing-up-on-the-other-person’s-shoulder that is so disheartening in other places. The village is like a family. Though its citizens look into the valley, they return to their chalet homes to live and work and eventually be buried in the tiny, walled cemetery behind the church.

Day after tomorrow we leave for Rome. While there I hope to interview the Pope (I have press cards that open doors amazingly). Our boat, the “Atlanta,” sails from Naples on December 30, and we should reach New York some nine days later if the weather is good. We are to stop at Lisbon and Halifax before disembarking at New York. The next stop will be home.

1950 Book Catalog

Sent Free on Request

herald house
INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI

Large - Type Book of Mormon

Genuine Leather

This book is printed in extra large, readable type and is printed page for page like the small edition. There are marginal references which refer to other passages in the Book of Mormon, and in some instances reference is made to Doctrine and Covenants passages and verses in the Inspired Version. Included, too, are topical headings and chronological datings, making it an ideal book for the student's use or in the leather binding especially nice for a pulpit book. Leather binding with gold edges

$10

Herald House

INDEPENDENCE, MO.

Index to Saints' Herald, Volume 96, 1949

Editorial and General

- Aaronic Priesthood in Church Structure, 76.
 Aaronic Priesthood Anniversary, 458.
 Aaronic Priesthood, The, 459.
 Abundant Life, The, 703.
 Accentuate the Positive, 284.
 According to the Rules, 452.
 Accounting, The Time of, 535.
 Ackley, Mrs. Ruby: Spiritual Experiences of William Clark, 615.
 Adams, Loyd R.: Greatness Through Service, 341.
 Adams, Willie C., Sr.: We Need Social Security Plus, 1141.
 Airift, 404.
 Alaska, Apostle Mesley to, 531.
 Alaskan Journey, Part I, 1061; Part II, 1087.
 Alberts, D. A.: Church Publications in Australia, 635.
 Alcoholism—America's Most Expensive Disease, 182.
 All Are Called, 295, 1167.
 All on a Summer's Day, 641.
 Allen, Pomme: Christmas in England, 1193.
 America's Prophetic Outline, 204.
 America, What Price? 630.
 America as Revealed by the Book of Mormon, 632.
 "An Enemy Hath Done This," 973.
 Anderson, Audentia: Witnessing in Gospel Bonds, 427; I Witness for Christ Through My Family, 1096.
 Anderson, Bob: Progress Through Sharing, 116; Born to Be Free, 1148.
 Angels of Mercy, 374.
 Appreciating Musical Talents, 276.
 April 6, What Does It Mean to You? 328.
 April, 328.
 Armstrong, Fred: A Moral Religion, 1004.
 Arnsen, Pauline James: A Tribute to Mothers, 437; Needlecraft Society, The, 640; A New Year of Opportunity, 930.
 "As a Man Thinketh," 106, 848.
 As Others Hear Us, 666.
 Ashenhurst, Ray: The House of the Lord, 929.
 Ask and Ye Shall Receive, 882.
 Asking and Receiving, 897.
 Auditorium, Working on, 995.
 August, 786.
 Australia Greets America, 675.
 Australia, The Church in, 677.
 Australia, Reunions in, 682.
 Australia, General Conference Appointees for, 684.
 Australia, Church Publications in, 685.
 Baier, George: Conditions in Germany, 35; How We Found the Church, 725; "Stille Nacht, Heilige Nacht," 1208.
 Baier, Mrs. George: We Went Through Hell, 251; Christmas in Germany, 1219.
 Bailey, J. W. A.: That Word Otherwise, 470.
 Baldwin, Joseph E.: The Meaning of Priesthood, 726.
 Banks, John W.: They Built It Themselves, 132.
 Baptism, Preparing the Child for, 233.
 Baptism and Church Membership, Part I, 415; Part II, 442.
 Baptism by Water, 467.
 Baptism for the Eight-Year-Old, 562.
 Baptism by Water, 968.
 Barnett, Jean: A Letter From the Yukon, 152.
 Barwise, Edith: Concerning Zion—III Counting the Cost, 119; IV Counting the Cost, 130; V Counting the Cost, 158; The Door of Grace, 228.
 Beauty, The Secret of, 1170.
 Be Yourself, 972.
 Bear Ye One Another's Burdens, 489.
 Beautiful Hands Are Those That Do, 378.
 Becker, Fridolin: I Found the Church Through Suffering, 1137.
 Beggs, Edith G.: Prayer Philosophy, 357; A Prayer, 976.
 Begin the New Year—Right—With Study, 131.
 Bell, Golde R.: Denver Builds a Church, 729.
 Benevolence, 208.
 Bennett, Floy Lorene: It's "On the Record," 206; Beautiful Hands Are Those That Do, 378.
 Benson, Roy: Music and the Church, 1040.
 Bethel, Mrs. S. C.: Unto All People, 184; Music Speaks a Universal Language, 208; The Japanese Mind, 229; What the Japanese Believe, 256; Christianity in Japan, 397; The Color Line, 611; Asking and Receiving, 897.
 Beware—Man-killer! 693.
 Beyond, The, 429.
 Billboard Advertising, 1121.
 Bird, Merva: Some Thoughts on Kingdom-Building, 755.
 Birky, Mrs. Sabria: Woman's Calling to Worthy Citizenship, 89.
 Bishop, James E.: The Question Method, 807.
 Black, Stephen A.: Of Faith and Works, 58; "As a Man Thinketh," 106; According to the Rules, 452; The Devil's Business, 1172.
 Blackmore, John: A Prophetic Drama, 1209.
 Blackstock, John: Billboard Advertising, 1121.
 Blackstock, Mrs. John: Look for the Beautiful, 712.
 Blame, Without, 1034.
 Bless That Man, 590.
 Blessed Are They That Do, 1234.
 Blue Pencil Notes, 22, 296, 417, 484, 700, 988.
 Bonham, Bernice: Worship Suggestions for March, 134.
 Books: First Steps in Prayer, 17; Prayer, The Mightiest Force in the World, 17; Prayer and You, 17; A Faith for You, 17; Human Destiny, 42; A Greater Generation, 42; Lincoln and the Bible, 166; How to Speak, 166; The Big Fisherman, 166; The Crystal Fountain, 595; The Angel Standing, 595; How to Think Creatively, 595.
 Books, Two Good, 732.
 Book of Mormon, The Origin of the, 85.
 Book of Mormon Lands, A Visit to, 775.
 Book of Mormon, Concerning the Divinity of the, 970.
 Book of Mormon Manuscript, "Kansas City Times" Features Story of, 971.
 Booton, Conrad H.: The Land Shadowing With Wings, 1044.
 Booz, Don: Easter Challenge, 371.
 Borrow Not Tomorrow's Tears, 788.
 Boston Branch Parsonage, 1228.
 Bowden, Darlene: Spring Prayer, 451.
 Branch Procedure, 124.
 Bread, Daily, 1106.
 Bridges Are Out, 90.
 Bridges We Build, The, 428.
 Briggs, Edmund C. (biographical sketch), 314.
 British Mission, I Was at Home in the, 1161.
 Brockway, Esther: A Reasonable Service, 657.
 Broken Home, The, 1155.
 Brotherhood in Our Day, 129.
 Brotherhood Week, Notes for, 157.
 Brother John's Shoulders, 585.
 Brotherly Love and Reconciliation, The Question of, 749.
 Browne, R. Edwin: An Open Letter to Church Young People, 597; What Will Your College Day Gift Provide? 1013; The Graceland Way, 1052.
 Brunson, Jane: Reverence, 855.
 Bryant, Verda E.: By Their Fruits Ye Shall Know Them, 136; A Shorthand Supplement, 394; Stepping Stones to Zion, 688; Leaven for the Lump, 873; Five Years in Zion, 1139.
 Buckley, Alice Zion: Fourth of July Puppy, 765; They Be Good, 784.
 Building Christian Personalities, 164.
 Burbank, California, Church, 1099.
 Burgess, S. A.: Upon the Promised Land, 1041.
 Burgess, Mrs. S. A.: The Twig Is Bent, 234.
 Burwell, W. H.: The New Louisville Church Building, 851.
 Butterworth, Vida E.: Nurses Made to Measure, 159; Nursing as a Career, 420.
 By Their Fruits Ye Shall Know Them, 136.
 Calling, The Highest, 68.
 Camps, We Grow Latter Day Saints in, 514.
 Campus Shop Grows Up, The, 1042.
 Capping, 277.
 Cargyle, Glen: Nauvoo, June 27, 1949, 780; 200 Mormons Hold Conference in Nauvoo, 780; Each One Win One, But First Let's Sell Ourselves, 1029.
 Carmichael, Lula: A New Year—Another January, 16; February, 186; March, 254; April, 328; May, 450; June, 545; July, 664; August, 736; September, 856; October, 952; November, 1074; December, 1170.
 Case, Hubert: The People From the North Country, 250; The Great Springtime of the Restoration, 347; Building on the Rock, 728; Our Lamanites, 1043.
 Central Missouri Stake Has New Officials, 521.
 Chatburn, Thomas W. (biographical sketch), 805.
 Cheerfulness Versus Clutter, 885.
 Chelline, Warren: Guided Paths, 92; A Latter Day Saint Looks at the Cross, 380; What Comes Naturally? 669.
 Chesworth, D. O.: Improving the Prayer Service, 154; Stewardship, 701; Give Thanks Unto the Lord, 1112.
 Cheville, Roy A.: An Authorized Church, 392; We Shall Still Sing Together, 538; I Wanted to Go to Europe, 1039; I Visited the Rotterdam Branch, 1090; I Lived With Saints in Germany, 1114; I Was at Home in the British Mission, 1161.
 Children, Our Handicapped, 179.
 Children's Day—Memories and Previews, 537.
 Children, The Blessing of, 543.
 Child's Freedom to Play, A, 542.
 Child Is Father to the Man, The, 554.
 Children's Day, 555.
 Christ, I Witness for, 21.
 Christ and the Engineer, 212.
 Christ, The Triumph of, 339.
 Christ, Co-operatively Women Witness for, 976.
 Christian, The Three Decisive Acts of a, 370.
 Christian Homes, For, 507.
 Christmas Will Come Again, 103.
 Christmas Customs—Part I, 1192; Part II, 1218.
 Christmas Greetings, 1226.
 Christmas Reminiscences, 1210.
 Christmas in Scandinavia, 1229.
 Christmas Fantasy, A, 1220.
 Choice Above All Other Lands—Part I, 708.
 Church Buildings, Distinctive, 122.
 Church, Beautiful Englewood, 194.
 Church, The Birthday of the, 315.
 Church, An Authorized, 392.
 Church, How We Found the, 725.
 Church, Denver Builds a, 729.
 Church, A Dynamic, 806.
 Church, Let's Take Our Children to, 334.
 Church for These Times, A, 869.
 Church, Someone Invited Me to, 949.
 Church, When Did Christ Organize His? 996.
 Church-Sponsored Scout Troops, 1163.
 Churchman, John: His Servants, 857.
 Clark, The Spiritual Experiences of Elder William, 615.
 Cleveland, Lloyd E.: The Bridges We Build, 428; Where Are the Men? 336.
 Clock, My Grandmother's, 141.
 College, So You're Going to, 653.
 College Students' Conference, 819.
 College Youth, The Church and Its, 825.
 College Day Suggestions, 1014.
 Collins, Camilla: Worship Suggestions for June, 448.
 Color Line, The, 611.
 Come and Follow Me, 561.
 Commandment, The Unwritten, 1005.
 Communion Covenant, The, 1132.
 Community, I Witness for Christ Through Service to My, 1000.
 Connell, W. E.: Fort Collins, Colorado, Branch, 754.
 Consecrated, If Thou Art, 438.
 Consecration Sermon, 751.
 Controversial Questions, 165.
 Convert Your Companion, 835.
 Conway, John: The Gathering, 10.
 Cookies, The Magic of, 403.
 Courage Did It! 549.
 Crayne, Mabel Williams: Thanksgiving, 1126.
 Creation and Destiny, 317.
 Creators, 549.
 Crisis Is Always, 1037.
 Cross, In the Shadow of the, 372.
 Cross, A Latter Day Saint Looks at the, 380.
 Cross, Lillian B., The Beyond, 429.
 Crutcher, Geneva: Easter Has Meaning for Me, 357.
 Cultivate the Best Gifts, 699.
 Curry, Mary Margaret: Using Time Wisely, 254.
 "Daily Bread," They Like, 230.
 "Daily Bread" Habit, The, 388.
 Dare to Be Different, 956.
 Daugherty, James: The Sermon on the Mount, 1019; Missionary Techniques for the Layman, 1166.
 Davey, Mabel: Greetings From the Land of the Southern Cross, 1146.
 Davies, Charles A.: The Church in Australia, 677.
 Davey, Mabel: Friendly Visiting, 736.
 Davis, Beth L.: A Way of Service, 823.
 Dawning, Land of the, 679.
 Deaver, A. Neal: The "San" Belongs to You, 366.
 December Tenth, 1154.
 December, 1170.
 December 23, 1263.
 Deck, We Sat on the, 789.
 Dedication, Prayer of, 753.
 Deep Channels, 994.
 Deity, Without, 572.
 DeLapp, G. L.: A Sure Foundation, 224; Funeral Sermon of John F. Garver, 269; Our Increasing Responsibilities, 485; The Time of Accounting, 535; Graceland's Place in Our Church Program, 634; A Measurement of Progress, 797; The Test of Discipleship, 1157.
 Dennis, Harry A.: Does Our Church Need a School of Theology? 807.
 Design for Living, Part I, 1024; Part II, 1048.
 Detroit Appointees' Institute, 820.
 Development, A Threefold, 655.
 Devil's Business, The, 1172.
 Devotional, A, 760.
 Devotions of the Heart, 837.
 Diggle, Lottie Clark: Blessed Are They That Do, 1234.
 Discipleship, The Test of, 1157.
 Distinctive Beliefs of the Restoration, 308.
 District Bishop in Action, A, 802.
 Does It Make Any Difference Which Church You Belong to? 180.
 Door, At Your, 1222.
 Door, The Open, 1227.
 Double Harness, In, 463.
 Doubledeed, George M.: While We Dream of Zion, 878.
 Dougherty, Alta: The Highest Calling, 68; In the Spring, 356.
 Drama, A Prophetic, 1269.
 Draper, Maurice L.: We Are His Witnesses, 7; The Memphis, Tennessee, Church, 170; The Fruit of the Spirit, 488; Life After Death, 893.
 Drink, The First, 756.
 Dutton, Jasper O.: The Second Mile, 519.
 Duvall, Evelyn: Mates for Mar-

- riage, 273; Families for Today, 441.
- Each One Win One, 987.
- Each One Win One—But First Let's Sell Ourselves, 1029.
- Earth on Which We Dwell, This, 108.
- Earth and the Fullness Thereof, The, 189.
- Easter, The Approach of, 219.
- Easter Programs, What Is the Matter With Our, 325.
- Easter Has Meaning for Me, 357.
- Easter Makes a Difference to the World, 363.
- Easter Challenge, 371.
- Easter, The Significance of, 374.
- Easter Sacrifice Luncheon, 545.
- Eastwood, Dorothy: The Best Gifts, 980.
- Ecclestone, William: With British Pioneers—Part I, 12; Part II, 39; Part III, 65.
- Editorial Review, 147, 171, 195, 651.
- Edwards, Alice M.: Design for Living—Part I, 1024; Part II, 1048.
- Edwards, F. Henry: Resolutions on Race Relations, 5; A Chain of Prayer, 99; President John F. Garver, 266; Biography and Tribute to John Franklin Garver, 268; All Are Called, 295; Bear Ye One Another's Burdens, 489; Pentecost and the Church of Today, 534; Oscar W. Okerland Dies, 723; Living Witnesses, 773; Continuing Missionary Emphasis, 987.
- Edwards, Paul: Prayer That Contacts God, 620.
- Elbows, Watch Your, 333.
- Elliott, Jennie Z.: The Road to Light, 824.
- Elliott, May: The Quest for Knowledge, 880.
- Embleton, Bert: Let's Take Our Children to Church, 834.
- Environment and Faith, 323.
- Estrada, Doris: The Education of a Mother, 236.
- Eternal Life Now, 560.
- Ettinger, Cecil R.: Nauvoo and Her Mission Today, 925.
- Europe, I Wanted to Go to, 1039.
- European Situation, The, 947.
- Evangelism and . . . , 1053.
- Examinations, Periodic Health, 41.
- Fads and Fashions of 1999, 183.
- Faith for the Future, 100.
- Faith, The Magic of, 213.
- Faith, My, 466.
- Faith for Tomorrow, A, 812.
- Faith, The Grain of, 850.
- Faith to Be Healed, 1104.
- Families for Today, 441.
- Family, I Witness for Christ Through My, 1096.
- Farthing, R. J.: Lo, the State of Israel, 419.
- Father's Day, Random Thoughts for, 581.
- Fellowship, I Learn of Christ Through, 453.
- First Amendment, Fight for, 174.
- Flesh, The Thorn in the, 105.
- Fletcher, Vida M.: Invading the Home, 446; Gracious Living, 662.
- Flora, Illinois, Church, The, 879.
- Floro, Martha Ford: Lift Thine Eyes, 74; Brotherhood in Our Day, 129.
- Follow Me, 939.
- Foo, EnOi: I Am a Student Nurse . . . , 277.
- Food Chats, 472.
- For 1949, 2.
- Forget-Me-Nots, 1075.
- Fort Collins, Colorado, Branch, 754.
- Fort Madison, Iowa, Church, 1051.
- Forty-Niners Say, The, 1013.
- Foundation, A Sure, 224.
- Fourth of July Puppy, 765.
- Fraccascia, Paul: Bridges Are Out, 90.
- Frater, Alan S.: Reunions in Australia, 682.
- Free, Born to Be, 1148.
- Freedom, A New Birth of, 827.
- Friend, The, 260.
- Friendly Neighborliness, 856.
- From This Year Forward, 20.
- Fruits of Home, 1028.
- Fry, Charles: The Doctrine of Predestination, 557.
- Fry, Evan A.: God the Creator, 53; What Are You Worth? 83; The Thorn in the Flesh, 105; The More Excellent Way, 1016.
- Gabriel, Gerald: Land Tenure and the Rural Church, 395; The Land of Zion, 612; Helping Men Own Farms, 1067.
- Garden, My, 231.
- Garden Time, 281.
- Garver, John F.—Notice of Death, 246; President John F. (Official), 266; Tributes to President Garver, 267; Biography and Tribute, 268; Funeral Sermon, 269; General Conference Appointees for Australia, 684.
- Gastronomic Reminiscences, 301.
- Gathering, The, 10.
- Gathering, Our Motives for, 778.
- General Conference Missionary Service, 321.
- General Principles of Local Finance, 945.
- Germany, Conditions in, 35.
- Germany, A Letter from, 727.
- Germany, I Lived With Saints in, 1114.
- Germany, Report From, 1124.
- Get Out of My Way, 761.
- Gibbs, Arthur F.: We Sat on the Deck, 789.
- Gibson, Margaret: Baptism for the Eight-Year-old? 562; The Weaker Sex, 713; Worship Suggestions for October, 854.
- Gift for Aunt Della, A, 160.
- Gifts, According to Their, 199.
- Gifts, The Good, 741.
- Gifts, The Best, 980.
- Gleazer, Edmund J., Jr., 650.
- So You're Going to College, 653.
- Crisis Is Always, 1037.
- Gleazer, E. J., Sr.: Your Redemption Draweth Nigh, 293; A Church for These Times, 869.
- God Came to Me, 26.
- God's Way, 44.
- God, The Creator, 59.
- God, Sons of, 243.
- God, To the Glory of, 746.
- God, The Love of, 804.
- God, A Heart Warmed Toward, 1231.
- God, An Enlarging Concept of, 810.
- God, Called of, 867.
- God's Glory Light, 997.
- God Was There, 1131.
- Gog Comes to America, 29.
- Gog's Swan Song, 52.
- Good, They Be, 784.
- Good Samaritan of Latter Days, The, 1198.
- Goodwin, Ruth Midgorden: Dare to Be Different, 959; My Neighbor, My Friend, 1101.
- Gossline, Marie: "I Cleanse My Soul," 117; My Grandmother's Clock, 141; Today Is Cash, 187; Something Nice From Charley, 307; Watch Your Elbows, 333; Pictures of Mother, 438; If Thou Art Consecrated, 438; Courage Did It! 549; Come and Follow Me, 561; Something to Do, 779; Home and Happiness, 813; On Being Liked, 861; The Guatemalan Indian, 981.
- Gospel, The Fifth, 186.
- Gospel in Their Home, The, 999.
- Grabske, Charles F.: The Mission of Our Sanitarium, 365.
- Grace, The Door of, 228.
- Graceland Faculty Changes, 355.
- Graceland A Cappella Choir, 410.
- Graceland Place in Our Church Program, 634.
- Graceland, Last Call for, 818.
- Graceland Home-coming, 964.
- Graceland Gazette, 1015.
- Graceland Way, The, 1052.
- Gracious Living, 662.
- Grant, Beverly: God's Writ of Service, 740.
- Great Oaks, 261.
- Great Souls and Their Faith, 175.
- Grice, John: Miracle of the Thanksgiving Feast, 1113.
- Griffith, Raymond: The Significance of Easter, 375.
- Guatemalan Indian, The, 981.
- Guided Paths, 92.
- Gunning, A. R.: The Church in New Zealand, 686.
- Gunsolley, Jeremiah A. (Tribute to), 758.
- Gwen the Teacher, 785.
- Hands, Leona N.: The Game of Hearts, 40; Prayer of a Weary Pilgrim, 60; Regret, 379; Young Mothers, Count Your Blessings, 618; Be Yourself, 972.
- Hanson, Paul M.: The Serpent Motive in Ancient Mexico and Central America, 126.
- Harris, Ella: Fruits of the Spirit, 645.
- Hartman, Frances: Worship Suggestions for May, 326.
- Hartshorn, Chris B.: "Kansas City Times" Features Story of Book of Mormon Manuscript, 971; Working on Auditorium, 995; Faith to Be Healed, 1104; The Unobserved Kingdom, 1181.
- Haworth, W. J.: This Earth on Which We Dwell, 108; The Inner Sanctuary, 509.
- Heald, Robert: The Unseen Power, 332.
- Hear Ye Him, 291, 345.
- Hearts, The Game of, 40.
- Heat and Burden of the Day, The, 747.
- Heide, Jessie: The Art of Meditation, 285.
- He Is Risen, 418.
- Hell, We Went Through, 251.
- Help Wanted, Witnesses, 771.
- Helpful Suggestions, 931.
- Helping Men Own Farms, 1067.
- Henricks, Paul H.: Youth in Action, 692.
- Henson, O. C.: Finding the Lost Sheep, 948.
- Hero Without a Name, A, 588.
- Hield, Charles R.: Lifesavers, 821; Palenque, 1064.
- Hinderks, Wardell E.: What an Active Young Adult Group Can Do, 782.
- History—A Witness for God, 716.
- Historical Markers for Nauvoo and Kirtland, 915.
- Hoecker, Mrs. Frank: Balancing Our Program, 112.
- Holmes, Reed: Hear Ye Him, 845; Another Trojan Horse, 1179.
- Home, Thy Dream of, 484.
- Home, Invading the, 446.
- Home and Happiness, 813.
- Home-front Evangelism, 860.
- Hope of the World, The, 867.
- Hospital, The Human Side of the, 369.
- Hospital, I Found Christ in a, 524.
- Hour, One Quiet, 247.
- House of the Lord, The, 929.
- How About You? 69.
- How to Start a Nursery School, 906.
- How to Listen to a Sermon, 1059.
- Hunker, E. Y.: Christmas in Scandinavia, 1229.
- Hunt, C. J.: Great Souls and Their Faith, 175; A Tribute to David Whitmer, 992.
- Hunter, Iva: The Women's Center Building, 1143.
- Hymns, Suggestions for Learning, 324.
- Hymn Meditation, 668.
- Hypocrisy, The Art of, 794.
- I Choose to Believe, 178.
- I Am Challenged by the Life of Christ, 596.
- I Found the Church Through Suffering, 1237.
- Illusions, 117.
- I Never Realized, 693.
- Independence Sanitarium and Hospital Day, 362.
- Independence Sanitarium, The Mission of the, 365.
- Independence Sanitarium, Forty Years of Service, December 15, 1949, 1178.
- Ingratitude, 357.
- Interesting Personalities: Pastor to Scattered Saints, 497; Evan Fry—Radio Minister, 714.
- International Boy, An, 98.
- Irene Wolfe—Stone Church Organist, 619.
- Iringites, The—Who were They? 565.
- Is God Concerned? 764.
- Israel, Lo, the State of, 419.
- It Isn't Too Hard to Say, "No, Thank You," 61.
- It's "On the Record," 206.
- It's Our Own Fault, 1120.
- Japanese Mind, The, 229.
- Japanese Believe, What, 256.
- Japan, Christianity in, 397.
- Jennings, Lillie: For Children's Day—Memories and Previews, 536.
- Jensen, D. Blair: The European Situation, 947.
- Jesus, And Now Meet, 795.
- Jesus, The Living, 804.
- Jesus, A Birthday Gift for, 1214.
- Job, Let's Tackle Our, 760.
- Joseph Smith—What Did He Teach? 605.
- July, 664.
- July 4, 1949—What Does It Mean to You? 644.
- June, 545.
- Kanneman, Bessie: Lambs of the Fold, 877.
- Keir, James F.: I Choose to Believe, 178; The Widow's Mite, 896.
- Kennedy, Emma Smith: Zion Will Be, 607; The Living Jesus, 804.
- King, The Birthday of Our, 1203.
- Kingdom-Building, Some Thoughts on, 755.
- Kingdom, The Unobserved, 1181.
- Kirkendall, Norma Anne: Vision, 426; Shall I Tolerate My Neighbor? 621.
- Kirtland Temple, 927.
- Knowledge, The Quest for, 880.
- Koehler, J. A.: Christmas Will Come Again, 103.
- Kohlman, Aarona Booker: Picked From the Periodicals, 307, 329, 451, 563, 665, 875, 1074, 1171, 1235; All on a Summer's Day, 641.
- Kohlman, L. W.: Resthaven, 242; The Quality of Mercy, 977.
- Kornman, Charles: From This Year Forward, 20; Prayer Is Natural, 548; Salvation From Self, 1100.
- Krahl, Grace L.: America's Most Expensive Disease, 182; Where-withal Shall They Be Fed? 781; "An Enemy Hath Done This," 973.
- Kraus, Vida: Your Girls and Mine, 398.
- Lake, Nettie C.: The New Year, Its Meaning and Message, 4; Spring Is Here, 403; A Child's Freedom to Play, 542.
- Lamanites, Our, 1043.
- Lambkin, Roland C.: Of Prophets and Scientists, 501.
- Lambs of the Fold, 877.
- Lamoni People, 203.
- Land Tenure and the Rural Church, 395.
- Land of the Southern Cross, Greetings From the, 1146.
- Lant, C. J.: When God Finds Me, 658; Undernourished, 328.
- Larsen, Lois: The Zionie Home, 664.
- Lawrence, Kansas, Branch, History of the, 166.
- Lea, Leonard: Our Moral Foundations, 27; The Beautiful Northwest, 50; What Are We Waiting For? 51; It Isn't Too Hard to Say, "No, Thank You," 61; The Pastor, 75; Missionary Emphasis, 99; Distinctive Church Buildings, 122; Messages That Win, 123; Lodge Affiliations, 141; Editorial Review, 147; Controversial Questions, 165; Editorial Review, 171; Beautiful Englewood Church, 194; Editorial Review, 195; Tell the Story, 219; Sons of God, 243; Tributes to President Garver, 267; Hear Ye Him, 291; The Birthday of the Church, 315; The Triumph of Christ, 339; Independence Sanitarium and Hospital Day, 362; Easter Makes a Difference, 363; The Miracle of Rebirth, 387; Serve Where You Are, 413; Thy Dream of Home, 434; Behold Thy Mother, 435; Vashti, the Queen Who Defied a King, 440; The Aaronic Priesthood, 459; A Pacifist, 463; For Christian Homes, 507; Pentecost, 531; Children's Day, 555; Love in a World of Hate, 579; A Hero Without a Name, 588; Support Your Church Institutions, 603; A New Birth of Freedom, 627; Editorial Review, 651; Cultivate the Best Gifts, 689; The Heat and Burden of the Day, 747; Jeremiah A. Gunsolley (Tribute to), 758; Help Wanted: Witnesses, 771; And Now, Meet Jesus! 795; Learn of Him, 819; The Gospel of Work, 843; The Hope of the World, 867; The Saving of Souls, 891; Acknowledgments, 916; The Greatness of Joseph Smith, 916; The Beginnings of Nauvoo, 917; Nauvoo House, 918; The Mansion House, 921; The Nauvoo Temple, 923; Kirtland Temple, 927;

- "Follow Me," 939; The Reluctant Saint, 963; Treasures of Wisdom and Knowledge, 1011; Memories of O. W. Parker, 1027; Leaves From a Shepherd's Notebook, 1035; How to Listen to a Sermon, 1059; Men of Good Will, 1083; We Ought to Be Thankful, 1107; In the Power of the Spirit, 1116; God Was There, 1131; The Broken Home, 1155; The Birthday of Our King, 1203; The Open Door, 1227; A Heart Warmed Toward God, 1231.
- Lea, Lucile Esgar: Three Graves in Old Nauvoo, 322.
- Learn to Laugh—Not Worry, 544. Learn of Him, 819.
- Leaves From a Shepherd's Notebook, 1035.
- Leaven for the Lump, 873.
- Ledsworth, J. J.: Instruction for New Members, 802.
- Leibbrand, Louise Crutcher: The Friend, 260.
- Lents, Donald V.: The Ministry of Visiting the Sick, 31; The Human Side of the Hospital, 369.
- Leonard, David: Youth Looks Forward to Its Civic Responsibilities, 861.
- Lest We Forget, 506.
- Letchworth, H. I.: Mongolians and the Lamanites, 800; Concerning the Divinity of the Book of Mormon, 970.
- Lewis, Louise Hills—Funeral Address, 349.
- Life After Death, 893.
- Lifesavers, 821.
- Lift Thine Eyes, 74.
- Light, The Road to, 824.
- Livingston, Pat—High School Senator, 1095.
- Lodge Affiliations, 141.
- Look for the Beautiful, 712.
- Lord, The Joys and Sorrows of Our, 965.
- Lord, They Cry Unto the, 1236.
- Louisville Church, The New, 851.
- Love in a World of Hate, 579.
- Lum, V. L.: Strengthening Family Ties, 1230.
- Magnetic Recording in the Church, 148.
- Make Me Believe—Part I, 55; Part II, 176.
- Make the New Year Count, 88.
- Man's Plan and God's Plan, 659.
- Man, Creator of His Own Destiny, 909.
- Mansion House, The, 921.
- Maples, Evelyn Palmer: Yearning, 287.
- March, 254.
- Marks, William (Biographical Sketch), 297.
- Marriage, Mates for, 273.
- Martin, Nellie: Missionary Tips, 1168.
- Martin, Nellie—Missionary Teacher (biographical sketch), 1187.
- Martyrs, The, 578.
- May, 450.
- Maymon, Margaret L.: History of New Albany Branch, 904.
- Meditation, The Art of, 285.
- Memphis, Tennessee, Church, The, 170.
- Men? Where Are the, 836.
- Men of Good Will, 1083.
- Mercy, The Quality of, 977.
- Mesle, Carl: According to Their Gifts, 199; Is God Concerned? 764; Church-Sponsored Scout Troops, 1163.
- Mesley, Apostle C. G.: Faith for the Future, 100; Alaskan Journey—Part I, 1061; Part II, 1087.
- Mesley, Blanche: Land of the Dawning, 679; An Enlarging Concept of God, 810.
- Messages That Win, 123.
- Messiah (The), Nation-wide Coverage of, 275.
- Messiah Choir, The First, 1188.
- Messiah Choir of 1949, 1212.
- Metz, Kathryn G.: Lamoni People, 203.
- Middle-Age Importance, 280.
- Mile, The Second, 519.
- Miller, C. Ed.: What Is the Matter With Our Easter Programs? 325; God's Glory Light, 997; The Land Shadowing With Wings, 1190.
- Miller, Eriel: Christmas in Hawaii, 1192.
- Miller, Robert J.: The Best Time, 6; Priesthood, 466; Baptism by Water, 467; A Robin Dies, 593.
- Mills, Frances M.: The Earth and the Fullness Thereof, 189; Without Deity, 572; The Tree That Refused to Grow, 1221.
- Milner, Winifred: A Gift for Aunt Della, 160; We Three Together—Part I, 494; Part II, 516.
- Ministerial Institute at Independence, Missouri (1949), 710.
- Missionary Emphasis, 99.
- Missionary Emphasis, Continuing, 987.
- Missionary Techniques for the Layman, 1167.
- Missionary Tips, 1168.
- Moats, Mrs. B. F.: Co-operatively, Women Witness for Christ, 976.
- Mongolians and the Lamanites, 800.
- Moon, Cleo Hanthorne: Brother John's Shoulders, 535.
- Moore, Mrs. Fred S.: We Labor for Zion Through Study, 784.
- Morefield, Velda: The Flora, Illinois, Church, 879.
- Morgan, Agnes Fay: My Faith, 466.
- Morgan, Ann: Seek Ye, 16.
- Morgan, Nelle: Capping, 277.
- Mormon Church, I Visited a, 469.
- Morris, Harley A.: God Came to Me, 26; The Aaronic Priesthood in Church Structure, 76; The Teachings of Jesus Concerning Wealth, 244; The Three Decisive Acts of a Christian, 370; A Mother's Influence, 439; A Threefold Development, 655; The Church and Its College Youth, 825.
- Morris, J. C.: On Social Security, 1142.
- Moser, Nora: Going Visiting, 500; Book Review, 1080; Modern Social Work, 1140.
- Mother, The Education of a, 236.
- Mother, Behold Thy, 435.
- Mothers, A Tribute to, 437.
- Mother, Pictures of, 438.
- Mother's Influence, A, 439.
- Mother Checks Up on Herself, 450.
- Mrs. Missionary Serves Abroad, 1077.
- Music Speaks a Universal Language, 208.
- Music and Church Architecture, 540.
- Music in Worship, Approaching the Upper Heights in, 852.
- Music and the Church, 1040.
- Musical Democracy (A)—Independence, Missouri, 826.
- My Poem Center, 761.
- My Neighbor, My Friend, 1101.
- McArthur, Kay: The West College Church League, 832.
- McClain, W. Blair: A New Church Opens at Royal Oak, Michigan, 750.
- McConley, Mrs. M. A.: I Witness for Christ Through Service to My Community, 1000.
- McNeil, Kay: On Fixing Responsibility, 1185.
- McDole, Marvin: Magnetic Recording in the Church, 148; July 4, 1949—What Does It Mean to You? 644.
- Nagel, Sadi Anka Moon, Will You? 333; Pastor to Scattered Saints, 497; Worship Suggestions for September, 734; O. W. Parker Retires, 803; The Gospel in Their Home, 999; The Campus Shop Grows Up, 1042; Pat Livingston, High School Senator, 1095; Nellie Martin, Missionary Teacher, 1187.
- Naming Lineage in the Patriarchal Blessing, 79.
- Nauvoo Temple, 459, 923.
- Nauvoo, June 27, 1949, 780.
- Nauvoo, 200 Mormons Hold Conference in, 780.
- Nauvoo, The Beginnings of, 917.
- Nauvoo House, 919.
- Nauvoo and Her Mission Today, 925.
- Nauvoo, Three Graves in Old, 934.
- Needlecraft Society, The, 640.
- Neighbor? Shall I Tolerate My, 621.
- Nelson, Mrs. Edward W.: Spirituality in the Home, 884.
- Nelson, B. Mildred: Worthy Conversations, 62; Food Chats, 472; Aluminum Cooking Utensils, 473.
- New Purchase in Independence, 754.
- New Members, Instruction for, 802.
- New Albany (Indiana) Branch History, 904.
- New Year Greetings, 3.
- New Year (The), Its Meaning and Message, 4.
- New Year (A)—Another January, 17.
- New Zealand, The Church in, 686.
- Nickson, Mrs. Charles: Independence, Missouri—A Musical Democracy, 826.
- None to Give Away, 952.
- Norris, W. A., 23.
- North Country, People From the, 250.
- Northwest, The Beautiful, 50.
- Not for Children Alone, 542.
- "Not by Way of Compulsion or Restraint," 705.
- Not Old, 963.
- November, 1074.
- Nurses Made to Measure, 159.
- Nurse, I Am a Student, 277.
- Nursing as a Career, 420.
- Oakman, Arthur: Service Expectancy, 227; Creation and Destiny, 317; General Conference Missionary Service, 321; The Witness of the Church in Home and Pulpit, 376; Prayer of Dedication, 753.
- Oakman, Doris M.: We Mutually Agree, 908.
- Oakman, Elva: The Sacred Week, 352; Thanksgiving—A Holy Day, 1122.
- Oakman, May Edith: I Found Christ in a Hospital, 524.
- October, 952.
- Odom, Edith: My Poem Center, 760.
- Of Faith and Works, 58.
- Official: Appointment of Bishop's Agent, Central Michigan District, 4; Ban on Packages to Russian Zone, 26; The Order of Evangelists, 28; Statement of Income, 78; Announcement to Pastors, 78; Appointment of Bishop's Agent, Utah District, 125; Kansas District, 151; Appointment of District President, 151; A Report on European Relief, 151; Changes in Editorial Staff, 198; Appointment of Spokane District President, 198; Books Needed by Music Department, 223; Work to Be Done on Auditorium, 246; Supervisor of Priesthood Education, 246; To Protect Readers Against H. R. 2945, 290; Tithing and Offering Statements to Contributors, 316; Radio Department, 340; European Relief, 340; The Appointment of District Historians, 364; Notice Regarding Sending Church Literature to Persons in British Isles, 364; Notice of Appointment of Ontario Bishop, 388; Joint Council Actions, 484; Change in Eastern Colorado Presidency, 508; Appointment of Western Colorado Bishop's Agent, 508; Transcripts for Radio Broadcasts, 532; Appointment of District President for Western Colorado, 532; Missionary Emphasis, 532; Notice of Fraud, 580; Appointment of District President, 604; Early Editions Needed, 628; Report of Status of Houses of Worship Revolving Fund, 676; Information Wanted, 700; College Students' Conference, 724; Tithing Statements, 796; Old Tracts Needed, 868; Notice to Pastors and District Presidents, 892; Keep the Law, 940; College Day, 988; Expanding Our Welfare Work, 1034; Comparative Income Statement, 1036; Radio Recordings Available, 1108; "The Messiah," 1150; Des Moines Choir to Broadcast "The Messiah," 1180; Agricultural Courses at Graceland, 1180; Work on Auditorium, 1180; "Guide Lines" Enlargement, 1180; Comparative Report of Income for First Ten Months, '48-'49, 1204.
- Oliver, John C. (Biographical Sketch), A Life of Ministry and Service, 401.
- Oliver, Lucile: My Prayer, 1138.
- Omohundro, Stella B.: Make the New Year Count, 88; Mother Checks Up on Herself, 460; How to Start a Nursery School, 906.
- Open Letter to the Young People of the Church, 597.
- Opportunity Is Knocking, 592.
- Opportunity, A New Year of, 930.
- Oscar W. Okerlind Dies, 723.
- Our Moral Foundations, 27.
- Pacifist, A, 468.
- Palenque, 1064.
- Parker, O. W., Retires, 803.
- Parker, O. W.—Memories of, 1027.
- Parks, Mrs. Lloyd: Try Your Skill, 402.
- Pastor, The, 75.
- Pastors, A Code for, 513.
- Patterson, William: America's Prophetic Outline, 204; As Others Hear Us, 666.
- Paupers in Heaven, 299.
- Paxton, Mrs. J. H.: A Nauvoo Resident's Account of Emma Smith, 206; Helpful Suggestions, 931.
- Peisker, Hermann: Australia G greets America, 675.
- Pentecost, 531.
- Pentecost and the Church of Today, 534.
- People, A Studious, 201.
- People Are Mirrors, 1173.
- Personal Responsibility, 220.
- Phelps, W. W.: Printer-Poet of the Restoration, 482; A Voice From the Past, 490.
- Phelps, Mrs. Willard: Let's Tackle Our Job, 760.
- Phillips, Emma M.: Why Be Good? 900.
- Picked From the Periodicals, 307, 329, 451, 568, 665, 857, 977, 1074, 1171, 1235.
- Pillsbury, Edgar: The First Drink, 756; A Birthday Gift for Jesus, 1214.
- Pioneers, With British—Part I, 12; Part II, 38; Part III, 65.
- Place of Refuge and Help, A, 367.
- Poems: For 1949, 2; God Came to Me, 26; Prayer of a Weary Pilgrim, 60; Lift Thine Eyes, 74; Illusions, 117; Brotherhood in Our Day, 129; Trust, 146; Sunday Bells, 155; Scorched Earth, 184; Benevolence, 208; The Door of Grace, 238; My Garden, 231; Yearning, 237; Progress, 249; To the San, 277; Ingratitude, 357; Regret, 378; Lo, The State of Israel, 419; Spring Prayer, 451; Creators, 549; Growing Up, 568; Get Out of My Way, 761; A Prayer, 976; Forget-Me-Nots, 1075; Thanksgiving, 1126; My Prayer, 1138; Recipe for a Happy Day, 1170; Undisturbed, 1220; At Your Door, 1222.
- Polygamy, Bigamy, Crime, 609.
- Power, The Unseen, 332.
- Prayer of a Weary Pilgrim, 60.
- Prayer, A Chain of, 99.
- Prayer Service, Improving the, 154.
- Prayer Makes a Difference, 476.
- Prayer Is Natural, 548.
- Prayer That Contacts God, 620.
- Prayer Philosophy, 857.
- Prayer, A, 976.
- Prayer, My, 1138.
- Predestination, The Doctrine of, 557.
- Preserved in Safety, 878.
- Priesthood Education, Opportunities for, 34, 111, 133, 133, 200, 282, 393.
- Priesthood Visit, Planning a, 461.
- Priesthood, 466.
- Priesthood, The Meaning of, 726.
- Program, Balancing Our, 112.
- Progress Through Sharing, 116.
- Progress, 249.
- Progress, A Measurement of, 797.
- Prophets and Scientists, Of, 501.
- Puckett, John T.: All Are Called, 1167.
- Question Department, 411.
- Question Time, 493, 515, 539, 569, 589, 614, 637, 658, 711, 733, 757, 783, 808, 829, 853, 881, 903, 975, 993, 1020, 1045, 1072, 1094, 1117, 1144, 1213, 1232.
- Question Method, The, 807.
- Race Relations, Resolutions on, 5.
- Rannie, Alma: The Origin of the Book of Mormon, 85.
- Rebirth, The Miracle of, 337.
- Records Are Important, 386.
- Regret, 377.

- Religion, Intellectual Honesty, and Science, 841.
- Religion, A Moral, 1004.
- Remember, 196.
- "Reorganize," Why I Am a, 660.
- Repentance Continues, 512.
- Representative Girl (Mary Williams), 805.
- Responsibilities, Our Increasing, 455.
- Responsibility, On Fixing, 1185.
- Resthaven, 242.
- Resurrection, The Power of His, 843.
- Reverence, 855.
- Ritual in Worship—Part I, 464; Part II, 491.
- Ruch, Mrs. V. D.: What Does April 6 Mean to You? 328.
- Restoration, The Great Springtime of the, 347.
- Richardson, Dora: Paupers in Heaven, 299.
- Roberts, Frederic W.: A District Bishop in Action, 802.
- Robin Dies, A, 593.
- Rock, Building on the, 728.
- Rondomanski, Zygmund: Appreciating Musical Talents, 276.
- Rosenthal, Elhi: Christmas in Latvia, 1219.
- Rotterdam Branch, I Visited the, 1090.
- Royal Oak, Michigan, Opening of New Church at, 750.
- Ruch, V. D.: Does It Make Any Difference Which Church You Belong To? 180.
- Runkle, Aleta: Fads and Fashions of 1999, 183; Hymn Meditation, 668; A Christmas Fantasy, 1220.
- Rushton, John W.: Gastronomic Reminiscences, 301; The Power of His Resurrection, 343; Thanksgiving, 1109.
- Russell, Eleanor: Angels of Mercy, 374.
- Russell, Naomi: The Magic of Faith, 218; Where Credit Is Due, 405; They Learn Young, 564; Irene Wolfe—Stone Church Organist, 619; Myron Schall—Coach, Boxer, Inventor, Minister, 833; The Unwritten Commandment, 1005; It's Our Own Fault, 1120.
- Sacrament, The, 842.
- Sacred Week, The, 352.
- Saint, The Reluctant, 963.
- Salvation From Self, 1100.
- Samuel Powers—Leader of the Reorganization, 899.
- Sanctuary, The Inner, 509.
- Sanitarium, To the, 277.
- Sanitarium, (The) Belongs to You, 366.
- Savage, Donald: History—A Witness for God, 716; Baptism by Water, 968.
- Savior, Our Emotional, 354.
- Savior, Christ the Universal, 1205.
- Schall, Myron Reed (Interesting Personalities), 833.
- Scherer, Twyla: Christmas in Holland, 1218.
- Schmidt, D. H.: The American People Need Social Security, 1141.
- Schoepke, Karl: A Dynamic Church, 806.
- Scotfield, Mrs. H. R.: Easter Sacrifice Luncheon, 545.
- Scorched Earth, 184.
- Scott, Lewis E.: Prayer Makes a Difference, 476.
- Scott, Roland W.: A Task for Youth, 608.
- Searles, William G.: Christ and the Engineer, 212; Beware—Man-killer! 693; People Are Mirrors, 1173.
- Second Step, The, 587.
- Seeing Trees Walk, 770.
- Seek Ye, 16.
- Seer, The Choice, 231.
- Seeley, Ramona: They Cry Unto the Lord, 1236.
- Selzer, Ruth: Learn to Laugh—Not Worry, 544.
- Sermon on the Mount, The, 1019.
- Serpent Motive (The) in Ancient Mexico and Central America, 126.
- Servants, His, 957.
- Serve Where You Are, 413.
- Service Expectancy, 227.
- Service, Greatness Through, 341.
- Service, Reasonable, 657.
- Service, God's Writ of, 740.
- Service, A Way of, 828.
- Sheep, Finding the Lost, 948.
- Sheldon, Louise P.: Two Good Books, 732.
- Sheppard, Mrs. E. L.: A Devotional, 760.
- Shipley, Blanche Neal: Bless That Man, 590.
- Shoemaker, George K.: Theological Conflicts, 1076.
- Shorthand Supplement, A, 394.
- Shute, Evan V.: Religion, Intellectual Honesty, and Science, 841; Adventure Toward Social Security, 1133.
- "Sic Transit," 1165.
- Sick, The Ministry of Visiting the, 81.
- Signal Lights, 1130.
- Siegfried, Mark H.: A Voice From the Past, 490; The Irvingites—Who Were They? 565; Preserved in Safety, 878; Is Social Security Good for Us? 1002.
- Simmons, Florence W.: The Fifth Gospel, 186; Strengthening Family Values by the Garden, 300.
- Skelton, Josephine: Scorched Earth, 184; Home-front Evangelism, 860.
- Skinner, C. A.: The High Cost of Low Thinking, 271.
- Smith, Delbert D.: Building Christian Personalities, 164.
- Smith, Elbert A.: Naming Lineage in the Patriarchal Blessing, 79; Blue Pencil Notes, 222, 296, 417, 484, 700, 988; Random Thoughts for Father's Day, 581; The Question of Brotherly Love and Reconciliation, 749; The Joys and Sorrows of Our Lord, 965; Forget-Me-Nots, 1075.
- Smith, Emma, A Nauvoo Resident's Account of, 206.
- Smith, Frederick M., Bust of, Presented to Graceland College, 54.
- Smith, Israel A.: New Year Greetings, 3; Bronze Bust of Late President F. M. Smith Presented to Graceland, 54; Branch Procedure, 124; The Word of Wisdom Again, 159; Fight for First Amendment, 174; Funeral Address of Louise Lewis, 349; Travelogs, 389, 419, 460, 556, 629, 772, 794, 796, 1012, 1084; Question Department, 411; Nauvoo Temple, 459; In Double Harness, 463; Tardy Amends, 483; The Martyrs, 578; Polygamy, Bigamy, Crime, 609; What Price America? 630; "Not by Way of Compulsion or Restraint," 705; Two Prophecies Concerning "The Elect Lady" Fulfilled, 723; Consecration Sermon, 751; New Purchase in Independence, 754; Historical Markers for Nauvoo and Kirtland, 915; Judicial Murder, 1002; The Communion Covenant, 1132; "Sic Transit," 1165.
- Smith, Lynn E.: What Did Joseph Smith Teach? 605.
- Smith, Mabel: The Love of God, 804.
- Smith, Mrs. Norman: Christmas in Australia, 1193.
- Smith, W. Wallace: Remember, 196.
- Social Security, Is It Good for Us? 1002.
- Social Security, Adventure Toward, 1133.
- Social Work, Modern, 1140.
- Social Security Plus, We Need, 1141.
- Social Security, The American People Need, 1141.
- Social Security, On, 1142.
- Someone Invited Me to Church, 949.
- Something Nice From Charley, 307.
- Something to Do, 779.
- Sorden, Dan E.: Our Emotional Savior, 354.
- Soul, I Cleanse My, 117.
- Souls, The Saving of, 891.
- Sperry, Margaret Farley: Someone Invited Me to Church, 949.
- Spirit, The Fruit of the, 485.
- Spirit, Fruits of the, 545.
- Spirit, In the Power of the, 1116.
- Spring, In the, 358.
- Spring Is Here, 403.
- Spring Prayer, 451.
- Spirituality in the Home, 884.
- Steck, Bertha: The Women Prepare, 1235.
- Stevens, Thelma D.: Worship Suggestions for February, 14; Begin the New Year Right With Study, 131.
- Stewardship, Implications of, 172.
- Stewardship, 701.
- Stewart, Georgia Metcalf: To Susan, 568.
- "Stille Nacht, Heilige Nacht," 1208.
- Strand, Ruby: Worship Suggestions for April, 232; Opportunity Is Knocking, 592; Gwen the Teacher, 785.
- Strengthening Family Ties, 1230.
- Strengthening Family Values by the Garden, 300.
- Student Nurse Recruitment Campaign for 1949, 185.
- Study, We Labor for Zion Through, 784.
- Sunday Bells, 155.
- Sunday Morning Visitor, Your, 185.
- Support Your Church Institutions, 603.
- Switzerland, This Is, 1237.
- Tardy Amends, 483.
- Tarrant, Dora Williams: The Quality of Mercy, 977.
- Task, This Crowns My, 422.
- Taylor, Bessie: History of the Lawrence, Kansas, Branch, 156; Middle Age Importance, 280; Choice Above All Other Lands—Part I, 708; Part II, 731.
- Tell the Story, 219.
- Thankful, For This I Am Truly, 1085.
- Thankful, We Ought to Be, 1107.
- Thanksgiving, 1109.
- Thanksgiving Feast, Miracle of the, 1113.
- Thanksgiving—A Holy Day, 1122.
- Thanksgiving Poem, 1126.
- Thanks, Unto the Lord Give, 1112.
- That Word Otherwise, 470.
- Theology? Does Our Church Need a School of, 807.
- Theological Conflicts, 1076.
- These Times Demand, 1082.
- They Built It Themselves, 132.
- Theys, Eugene A.: Planning a Priesthood Visit, 461.
- Thinking, The High Cost of Low, 271.
- Thoman, John C.: Air Lift, 404; A Faith for Tomorrow, 812.
- Thomas, Myron N.: I Visited a Mormon Church, 469.
- Tickemyer, Garland E.: A Tribute to Joseph Smith, 583.
- Tidings from Women's Groups, 379.
- Time, The Best, 6.
- Tinkham, Ruby: Make Me Believe—Part I, 55; Part II, 176; One Quiet Hour, 247; In the Shadow of the Cross, 372; The Second Step, 587; The Grain of Faith, 850; Deep Channels, 994.
- Tinning, Ella: Christmas in Denmark, 1218.
- To Susan, 568.
- Today Is Cash, 187.
- Together We Grow, 390.
- Torsch, Christianine: To the San, 277.
- Tousley, Mrs. G. H.: The 1949 Student Nurse Recruitment Campaign, 185; "A Place of Refuge and Help," 367.
- Townsend, Elsie: None to Give Away, 592.
- Travelogs, 389, 419, 460, 556, 629, 724, 772, 796, 1012, 1084.
- Treasures of Wisdom and Knowledge, 1011.
- Tree That Refused to Grow, The, 1221.
- Tribute to Joseph Smith, A, 583.
- Tripp, Betty Sanford: God's Way, 44; Ask and Ye Shall Receive, 882.
- Trojan Horse, Another, 1179.
- Troyer, Raymond: A Studious People, 201; Building Zion's Communities, 989.
- Trudell, Doreen: Unpredictable, 69.
- Trust, 146.
- Trusteeship, 914.
- Truth, Persuade Men to Obey the, 338.
- Try Your Skill, 402.
- Turner, Trudy: Illusions, 117; Benevolence, 208; My Garden, 231; Progress, 249; Man, Creator of His Own Destiny, 909.
- Twig Is Bent, The, 234.
- Two Men I Honour and No Third, 602.
- Two Prophecies Concerning "The Elect Lady" Fulfilled, 723.
- Undisturbed, 1221.
- UNESCO Conference, Apostles at, 447.
- Unger, Donna Jane: Great Oaks, 261.
- Unpredictable, 69.
- Unto All People, 184.
- Urdike, L. Wayne: Implications of Stewardship, 172; Baptism and Church Membership—Part I, 414; Part II, 442; The Abundant Life, 703; Our Motives for Gathering, 778; General Principles of Local Finance, 945.
- Upon the Promised Land, 1041.
- Using Time Wisely, 254.
- Vashti, the Queen Who Defied a King, 440.
- Velt, Harold I.: America as Revealed by the Book of Mormon, 632; For This I Am Truly Thankful, 1085.
- Velt, Mrs. Harold I.: Friendly Neighborliness, 856.
- Verhel, J. L.: Personal Responsibility, 220.
- Vision, 426.
- Visiting, Going, 500.
- Visiting, Friendly, 736.
- Voice From the Past, A, 490.
- Voices, Many, 891.
- Wakeman, W. E.: The Blessing of Children, 543.
- Ward, Charles Edgar: Convert Your Companion, 835.
- Ward, Mary: Fruits of Home, 1028.
- Warren, Charles S.: Man's Plan and God's Plan, 659.
- Way, The More Excellent, 1016.
- Weaker Sex, The, 713.
- Wealth, The Teachings of Jesus Concerning, 244.
- Weddle, Franklyn S.: Suggestions for Learning New Hymns, 324; Music and Church Architecture, 540.
- Weldon, Clair E.: Accentuate the Positive, 284.
- Weldon, Roy E.: A Visit to Book of Mormon Lands, 775.
- Wellington, Paul A.: As a Man Thinketh, 848.
- Wells, Gomer R.: He Is Risen, 418.
- We Three Together—Part I, 494; Part II, 516.
- We Shall Still Sing Together, 538.
- We Mutually Agree, 908.
- West College Church League, The, 832.
- What Are We Waiting For? 51.
- What Are You Worth? 83.
- What Comes Naturally? 669.
- What of Tomorrow's Adults? 901.
- What Will Your College Day Gift Provide? 1013.
- When God Finds Me, 658.
- Where Credit Is Due, 405.
- Wherewithal Shall They Be Fed? 781.
- Whiting, Eloise: Mrs. Missionary Serves Abroad, 1077; Report From Germany, 1124; Undisturbed, 1221; This Is Switzerland, 1237.
- Whiting, Ray: Our Handicapped Children, 179; The Choice Ser, 231; Why I Am a "Reorganize," 660.
- Whitmer, David—A Tribute to 992.
- Why Be Good? 900.
- Widow's Mite, The, 896.
- Wight, Lydia A.: This Crowns My Task, 422.
- Will You? 333.
- Will You Strike the First Blow? 1074.
- Willard, Laura: The Secret of Beauty, 1170.
- Williams, D. J.: When Did Christ Organize His Church? 996.
- Williams, D. T.: Gog Comes to America, 29; Gog's Swan Song, 52; Each One Win One, 987; Christ the Universal Savior, 1205.
- Williams, Thomas S.: Ritual in Worship—Part I, 464; Part II, 491.
- Willmarth, Marian: Christmas Reminiscences, 1210.
- Wilson, Katherine H.: Worship Suggestions for August, 638.
- Wings, The Land Shadowing With, 1044, 1190.
- Witnesses, We Are His, 7.
- Witness (The) of the Church in Home and Pulpit, 376.
- Witnessing in Gospel Bonds, 427.

Witnesses, Living, 773.
 Woman's Calling to Worthy Citizenship, 89.
 Women's Center Building, The, 1143.
 Women Prepare, The, 1235.
 Woods, Marilyn: I Am Challenged by the Life of Christ, 596; The Good Gifts, 741.
 Word of Wisdom (The) Again, 150.
 Work, The Gospel of, 843.
 Worship Suggestions for February, 14; March, 134; April, 232; May, 326; June, 448; July, 546; August, 638; September, 734; October, 854; November, 950; December, 1071.
 Worthy Conversations, 62.
 Wrigley, Louise: For 1949, 2; Trust, 146; Sunday Bells, 155; Ingratitude, 357; The Magic of Cookies, 403; Not For Children Alone, 542; Creators, 549; Growing Up, 568; I Never Realized, 693; Borrow Not Tomorrow's Tears, 787; Devotions of the Heart, 837; Cheerfulness Versus Clutter, 885; What of Tomorrow's Adults? 901; Thanksgiving Centerpiece, 977; Your Talent for Mine, 1029; Will You Strike the First Blow? 1074; Rainy Day Fun, 1098; At Your Door, 1222.
 Wyatt, Geraldine: Environment and Faith, 323.
 Yearning, 237.
 Yerrington, Minerva: Worship Suggestions for December, 1070.
 Young, They Learn, 564.
 Young Mothers, Count Your Blessings, 616.
 Young Adult Group—What an Active One Can do, 782.
 Your Girls and Mine, 398.
 Your Talent for Mine, 1029.
 Your Redemption Draweth Nigh, 298.
 Your Talent For Mine, 1089.
 Youth, A Task for, 608.
 Youth in Action, 692.
 Youth Looks Forward to Its Civic Responsibilities, 861.
 Youth, The Voice of, 938.
 Yukon, A Letter From the, 152.
 Zerr, Byrna: Worship Suggestions for July, 546.
 Zinser, Ray: The Good Samaritan of Latter Days, 1196.
 Zion, Goldie Graham: Worship Suggestions for November, 950.
 Zion, Concerning—Part III, 110; Part IV, 130; Part V, 158.
 Zion's League Project Report No. 1, 477.
 Zion Will Be, 607.
 Zion, The Land of, 612.
 Zion, Stepping Stones to, 688.
 Zion, While We Dream of, 876.
 Zion, Five Years in, 1139.
 Zion's Home, The, 664.
 Zion's Communities, Building, 989.

Letters

Ackley, Mrs. Ruby, 424.
 Addicott, Mrs. W. E., 763.
 Agar, Mrs. Ida, 399.
 Albon, Richard T., 43.
 Allen, Jennie M., 1215.
 Alish, Edith F., 522.
 Angell, Margaret, 762.
 Ard, N. L., 1195.
 Atkins, Mrs. Herbert, 1195.
 Bacon, Paul and Lucille, 259.
 Bailey, Jessie M., 1073.
 Baldwin, Mrs. Don, 1195.
 Ballinger, Carrie, 1215.
 Barkdoll, Viola, 283.
 Barnett, Jean, 522.
 Barrett, Mrs. Ethel, 425.
 Barton, Mrs. Julia, 424.
 Beebe, Emma, 1047.
 Behnke, Mrs. Betty, 139.
 Bennett, Mrs. Bessie, 727.
 Benson, Jennie, 763.
 Blair, A. D., 1021.
 Blume, J. W., 258.
 Boggess, Lillian, 335.
 Bolie, Mrs. Kenneth H., 1147.
 Brady, Ruth, 566.
 Brown, D. H., 209.
 Bruns, Mrs. H. A., 1195.
 Buller, C. R., 858.
 Burgess, Wayne, 1073.

Cain, Mr. and Mrs. J. L., 283.
 Callaci, Leo A., 522.
 Candage, Mrs. Doris, 735.
 Carter, Mrs. A. L., 934.
 Cassity, Mrs. L. O., 566.
 Cates, Jennie Brannon, 283.
 Chandler, Mrs. J. M., 497.
 Christy, Mrs. Ward L., 1195.
 Clark, Velma, 1073.
 Clark, Mrs. Fred S., 566.
 Clark, Walter L., Sr., 1147.
 Coffman, William A., 163.
 Collins, Llewellyn, 474.
 Cone, Mattie, 523, 1021.
 Cox, Mrs. Earl, 306.
 Cox, Mr. and Mrs. Earl, 711.
 Cramblett, Nettie, 715.
 Crankshaw, Mrs. L. J., 1222.
 Cross, Mrs. Mary A., 522.
 Curtis, Lalue, 858.
 Damitz, Mrs. John, 209.
 Davis, Mrs. Mark, 425.
 Davis, Myrtle O., 425.
 Davis, Walter M., 497.
 Davison, Mrs. Olive, 853.
 Daw, Mrs. J. S., 163.
 Dean, Mrs. Don, 566.
 Dey, Mrs. Lottie, 566.
 Diamond, Mrs. Alice, 523.
 Doty, Mrs. Byron, 400.
 Eliason, Edna Hopkins, 424.
 Ellis, Owen, 523.
 Emerson, Cora, 400.
 Emerson, Jesse, 1222.
 Erickson, Mrs. C. L., 399, 567.
 Estrada, Mrs. Frank, 858.
 Ewing, Mrs. Florence, 19.
 Fender, Mrs. John R., 163.
 Ferris, J. A., 139.
 Fifield, Mrs. Grace, 567.
 Fligg, William L., 259.
 Forster, Bessie, 257.
 Fuller, Mrs. Audrey, 306.
 Fuller, Innette, 306.
 Gage, Arthur W., 1195.
 Garver, Mrs. John, 382.
 Gault, Mr. and Mrs. Clyde, 306.
 Gilmore, Lucille, 19.
 Green, Clair, 259.
 Grice, Mrs. John R., 567.
 Grubb, Mrs. Henry, 425.
 Hackley, Louise Hughes, 785.
 Harper, John W., 163.
 Hatton, Anna Lynn, 425.
 Hayer, Mrs. W. E., 424.
 Hayes, Mary Lee, 163, 283.
 Himmler, Laura, 258.
 Holmes, Mildred E., 139.
 Honeywell, G. H., 400.
 Hoss, Mrs. Gladys, 258.
 Hursh, Jennie, 400.
 Jarvis, Mary L., 1147.
 Jensen, Bessie, 138.
 Johnson, Mrs. Dimple, 424.
 Jones, Melvin, 706.
 Judd, Mr. and Mrs. William, 982.
 Keen, Hazel, 706.
 LaLone, Mrs. Mildred, 209.
 Laman, Sue, 858.
 Lampard, Gordon O., 139.
 Lant, C. J., 762.
 Leka, Mary, 934.
 Leighton, James W., 785.
 LeNeve, Curtis R., 934.
 Lewis, David, 91.
 Lewis, Louise, 335.
 Maliwat, Benito U., 259.
 Matney, Mrs. Lillian, 599.
 McCaig, H. T., 19.
 McDonald, Frank, 223.
 McGuire, Mrs. J. T., 18.
 McNew, Mrs. Donald, 163.
 Meyers, Mrs. R. J., 858.
 Meyers, Mrs. Thelma, 163.
 Mik, Pieter de, 1021.
 Miller, Mrs. Mable, 982.
 Mills, Hubert, 522.
 Mitchell, Leonard A., 400.
 Moore, R. C., 1195.
 Moren, Bertha, 858.
 Morley, Edna George, 139.
 Muir, Bernardine Benbow, 335.
 Mussell, Blanche, 982.
 Neece, Mrs. Homer, 1073.
 Nelson, Opal, 934.
 Nies, Richard A., 43.
 Norton, Edmund and Amy, 163.
 Oliver, J. J., 306.
 Pagat, Viola, 1147.
 Peterson, Anton J., 1073.
 Peterson, Gus, 283.

Peterson, Irene, 858.
 Perkins, Mrs. W. N., 858.
 Phillips, Annie Mae, 139, 163.
 Pinkerton, Mrs. J. A., 259.
 Pollard, Jackye, 306.
 Potter, Floyd, 711.
 Ralston, Russell F., 1215.
 Ramsey, Mrs. Mary, 1215.
 Rhodes, Ruth, 209.
 Robertson, George H., 1073.
 Rushton, John W., 522.
 Sanders, Ema Frances, 306.
 Saunier, W. J., 424.
 Savage, Donald: Repentance Continues, 512; History—A Witness for God, 716.
 Scherer, Al, 223, 566.
 Schofield, Robert, 959.
 Schroyer, Mrs. R. R., 497.
 Sevy, Mrs. G. H., 1073.
 Shane, Lula, 400.
 Sheppard, Mrs. Ruth, 399.
 Simmons, Mrs. W. A., 1215.
 Simpson, Mrs. Etta, 1215.
 Shippy, Beatrice, 18.
 Small, Lula, 497.
 Smith, Bertha, 566.
 Smith, Herman D., 1047.
 Sparling, J. W., 1073.
 Stearman, Mrs. Norma, 335.
 Stewart, Blanche, 567.
 Stringer, J. T., 17.
 Summers, J. M., 567.
 Sumruld, Louceal, 335.
 Surgeon, Mrs. J. A., 706.
 Taylor, Mae Everett, 335.
 Teljohann, Virgil C., 858.
 Thihs, Mrs. Anna, 982.
 Thomas, Mrs. J. H., 474, 523.
 Tickemyer, Garland E., 400.
 Tippy, Minnie, 19.
 Toon, Ruby, 474.
 Troyer, Rachel M., 401, 959.
 Tuck, Mrs. O. W., 567.
 Wade, Mrs. Hazel, 982.
 Weaver, Virgil E., 400.
 Weddle, J. F., 566.
 Weldon, Roy, 806.
 White, Mrs. William G., 1047.
 Whitbanks, Mrs. Rubyjo, 762.
 Wilcox, Orrin R., 934.
 Wiley, Glen, 138.
 Williams, Charles M., 566.
 Williams, Mrs. Leah, 283.
 Wilson, Mrs. Arthur, 401.
 Wisdom, Edna L., 567.
 Wivel, Mrs. Edward, 522.
 Wolfe, Mrs. Ray, 523.
 Wolfram, Opal, 763.
 Worth, Tom and Betty, 258.
 Yates, Irksie Leila, 1073.
 Zuber, Louise, 523.
 Alabama, Bay Minette, 330.
 Alabama, Bayou Le Batre, 759.
 Alabama, Huxford, 1078.
 Alabama, McKenzie, 192.
 Alabama, Mobile, 43, 408, 759, 859, 1023, 1233.
 Arizona, Phoenix, 142, 520, 594.
 Arizona, Tucson, 192, 425, 1023, 1216.
 Arkansas, Bald Knob, 43.
 Arkansas, Texarkana, 43.
 Australia, Brisbane, 618.
 Brush Creek Reunion, 1174.
 California, Berkeley, 498.
 California, Chico, 425, 520.
 California, Dinuba, 135, 520.
 California, Lennox, 786, 1098.
 California, Long Beach, 1216.
 California, Modesto, 427.
 California, Pasadena, 258, 259, 330, 520, 594, 809.
 California, Sacramento, 192, 498, 859.
 California, San Leandro, 1078.
 California, Santa Barbara, 282.
 California, Santa Rosa, 570.
 California (Southern) Reunion, 954.
 California, Van Nuys, 192.
 Colorado, Colorado Springs, 493, 570, 978, 1145.
 Colorado, Delta, 330.
 Colorado, Denver, 408, 809.
 Colorado, Fort Collins, 1003.
 Colorado, Grand Junction, 1023.
 Detroit-Windsor District, 425, 1216.

Eastern Michigan District, 408.
 England, Birmingham, 739.
 England, Gravelly Hill, 809.
 England, Langwith, 809.
 England, London, 1145.
 England, Warrington, 570, 978.
 Florida, Miami, 305.
 Florida, Orlando, 330.
 Florida, Pensacola, 521, 1216.
 Florida, Tampa, 43.
 Gulf States District, 408, 570, 809, 859, 1216.
 Hawaii, Honolulu, 330, 954.
 Holland, Rotterdam, 520.
 Idaho, Boise, 759.
 Idaho, Sagle, 520.
 Illinois, Aurora, 408, 739.
 Illinois, Beardstown, 570.
 Illinois, Chicago, 330, 594, 859, 978, 1194.
 Illinois, Danville, 358, 1145.
 Illinois, DeKalb, 377, 1078.
 Illinois, Deselm, 667.
 Illinois, East St. Louis, 759, 859.
 Illinois, Flora, 786.
 Illinois, Galesburg, 666.
 Illinois, Mission, 759, 955.
 Illinois, Moline, 358.
 Illinois, Mt. Vernon, 135, 643, 1216.
 Illinois, Nauvoo, 759, 786, 905, 978.
 Illinois, Ottawa, 1022.
 Illinois, Pekin, 594.
 Illinois, Peoria, 475.
 Illinois, Pontiac, 377.
 Illinois, Rock Island, 258, 594, 1233.
 Illinois, Springfield, 408.
 Indiana, Hibbard, 667, 1078.
 Indiana, Mishawaka, 786.
 Iowa, Cedar Rapids, 571.
 Iowa, Council Bluffs, 408, 1098.
 Iowa, Crescent, 142.
 Iowa, Creston, 358.
 Iowa, Des Moines, 408, 570, 1194.
 Iowa, Dow City, 330, 879.
 Iowa, Evergreen, 1003.
 Iowa, Ft. Madison, 475.
 Iowa, Lamoni, 282, 305, 408, 498, 1174, 1216.
 Iowa, Logan, 358.
 Iowa, Missouri Valley, 330.
 Iowa, Moorhead, 498.
 Iowa, Muscatine, 926.
 Iowa, Newton, 1078.
 Iowa, Oelwein, 1003.
 Iowa, Persia, 358.
 Iowa, Tabor, 691.
 Kansas, Blue Rapids, 135, 594.
 Kansas, Eldorado, 377, 832.
 Kansas, Fort Scott, 1022.
 Kansas, Kansas City (Argentine Branch), 1003.
 Kansas, Lawrence, 259.
 Kansas, Manhattan, 643.
 Kansas, Pittsburg, 520, 978.
 Kansas, Wichita, 978.
 Kentucky, Louisville, 330, 1217.
 Kentucky-Tennessee Reunion, 954.
 Maine, Deer Isle, 643, 1217.
 Maine, Jonesport, 643.
 Manitoba, Winnipeg, 142.
 Maryland, Baltimore, 379.
 Massachusetts, Boston, 691.
 Massachusetts, Somerville, 475, 1194.
 Michigan, Almo, 1098.
 Michigan, Ann Arbor, 377, 498.
 Michigan, Bay City, 520.
 Michigan, Beaverton, 1078.
 Michigan, Buchanan, 832.
 Michigan, Burt, 1216.
 Michigan, Cash, 954.
 Michigan, Coldwater, 1022.
 Michigan, Detroit, 259.
 Michigan, Grand Rapids, 1217.
 Michigan, Flint, 570, 809, 1194.
 Michigan, Juniata, 1078, 1194.
 Michigan, Lachine, 358.
 Michigan, Lake Orion, 520, 594.
 Michigan, Lansing, 594.
 Michigan, Marlette, 739.
 Michigan, Midland, 305, 1216.
 Michigan, Muskegon, 759.
 Michigan, Port Hope, 1078.
 Michigan, Port Huron, 259, 282, 475.
 Minnesota, Minneapolis, 759.
 Mississippi, Escatawpa, 667.
 Mississippi, Ocean Springs, 305.
 Mississippi, Pascagoula, 618.
 Mississippi, Vancleave, 667.
 Missouri, Bevier, 1022.
 Missouri, Buckner, 1098.
 Missouri, Butler, 282.
 Missouri, Cameron, 1194.
 Missouri, Central Stake, 1022.
 Missouri, Gardner Lake, 786, 809.

Briefs

Missouri, Holden, 408, 475, 525, 558.
 Missouri, Independence, 43, 258, 259, 282, 304, 305, 377, 408, 454, 520, 571, 594, 691, 786, 832, 926, 979, 1022, 1023, 1046, 1078, 1098, 1194, 1233.
 Missouri, Kansas City, 358, 571.
 Missouri, Kennett, 1194.
 Missouri, Mill Spring, 786.
 Missouri, Nevada, 1046.
 Missouri, Odessa, 859.
 Missouri, Popular Bluff, 192.
 Missouri, Springfield, 282, 408, 594, 759, 879.
 Missouri, St. Charles, 978.
 Missouri, St. Joseph, 304, 570.
 Missouri, St. Louis, 192, 282, 570, 809, 1216.
 Montana, Culbertson, 759.
 Montana, Fairview, 786, 1145, 1174.
 Montana District, 667.
 Nebraska, Columbus, 978.
 Nebraska, Decatur, 1233.
 Nebraska, Eustis, 1216.
 Nebraska, Lincoln, 879.
 Nebraska, Omaha, 282, 305, 454, 832, 1098, 1233.
 Nebraska, Walthill, 192.
 New Mexico, Albuquerque, 377, 979.
 New Mexico, Eunice, 498.
 New South Wales, 643.
 New York, Buffalo, 498.
 New York, Greenwood, 978.
 New York, Johnson City, 1078.
 North Dakota, Dunn Center, 43, 1194.
 North Dakota, Minot, 498.
 Northeastern Illinois District, 594, 1098.
 Northern Indiana District, 1023.
 Northern Michigan District, 618.
 Northwestern Iowa District, 1047.
 Northwestern Ohio District, 1174.
 Ohio, Barberton, 1078.
 Ohio, Cincinnati, 570, 786.
 Ohio, Cleveland, 377.
 Ohio, Columbus, 304, 377.
 Ohio, Kirtland, 1194.
 Ohio, Nelsonville, 43.
 Ohio, Pleasant Valley, 305.
 Ohio, Springfield, 1217.
 Ohio, St. Mary's, 594.
 Ohio, Youngstown, 521, 1046, 1216.
 Oklahoma, Davidson, 358, 1046.
 Oklahoma, Drumright, 1216.
 Oklahoma, Enid, 282.
 Oklahoma, Pawnee, 618.
 Oklahoma, Ponca City, 955.
 Ontario, Chatham, 282, 425.
 Ontario, Essex, 955.
 Ontario, Guelph, 192.
 Ontario, Hamilton, 475, 715.
 Ontario, Humber Bay, 759.
 Ontario, London, 759, 955, 1003, 1078.
 Ontario, Low Banks, 954.
 Ontario, Merlin, 571.
 Ontario, Niagara, 408.
 Ontario, Ottawa, 809.
 Ontario, Owen Sound, 1217.
 Ontario, Proton, 1098.
 Ontario, Sault Ste Marie, 1217.
 Ontario, Stratford, 1194.
 Ontario, Windsor, 594.
 Oregon, Bend, 475, 1022.
 Oregon, Brookings, 759.
 Oregon District, 166, 258, 1099, 1217, 1233.
 Oregon, Forest Grove, 594.
 Oregon, Gaston, 1216.
 Oregon, LeGrande, 1233.
 Oregon, Portland, 330.
 Oregon, Roseburg, 1217.
 Oregon, Salem, 520, 715.
 Owen Sound District, 670.
 Pennsylvania, Bloomsburg, 166, 454.
 Pennsylvania, Fayette City, 1022.
 Pennsylvania, Lock Four, 1233.
 Pennsylvania, Pittsburgh, 475, 809, 1022.
 Pennsylvania, Sharon, 1046.
 Rhode Island, Providence, 135, 594, 739.
 Saskatchewan, Saskatoon, 809, 1145.
 Sault Ste Marie District, 1098.
 Southeastern and Central Illinois Districts, 786.
 South Dakota, Parker, 1046.
 Spring River District, 1099.
 Tennessee, Jacks Creek, 905.
 Texas, Dallas, 594, 1023.
 Texas, Houston, 1099.
 Texas, Marlin, 377, 979.

Utah, Provo, 475, 759.
 Washington, Everett, 1047, 1145.
 Washington, Puyallup, 475.
 Washington, Richland, 192, 330.
 Washington, Ridgefield, 954.
 Washington, Silver Lake Reunion, 954.
 Washington, Seattle, 570, 1145.
 Washington, Vancouver, 570, 1022.
 Washington, Walla Walla, 1003.
 West Virginia District, 282.
 Wisconsin, Sparta, 594.
 Wisconsin, Wisconsin Rapids, 594.
 West Virginia, Wellsburg, 498, 1046.
 West Virginia, Wheeling, 1046.

Bulletin Board

Arkansas-Louisiana District: Conference, 191.
 Asks Members to Contact Son, 214.
 Asks for Correspondence, 214.
 Attention, Canadian Saints, 23.
 Attention, Pittsburg, Kansas, Members, 191.
 Brooksville Reunion, 622.
 Blue Water Reunion, 574.
 Cash Reunion, 622.
 Central Illinois District: Women's Institute, 142; Conference, 1007.
 Central Michigan District: Women's Institute, 575; Conference, 1030.
 Central Missouri Stake: Conference, 1079.
 Central and Western Oklahoma and Kansas District Meetings, 1007.
 Central Texas District: Institute, 286; Conference, 1007.
 Changes of Address: D. J. Williams, 47; Luther S. Troyer, 94; Percy E. Farrow, 142; Loyd Adams, 191; Tom and Betty Worth, 239; Louis Zonker, 239; F. R. Lancaster, 286; Virgil Billings, 526; Louis J. Ostertag, 574; R. Melvin Russell, 622; Jack A. Pray, 622; Percy E. Farrow, 670; Glen H. Johnson, 839; Dick and Betty Nies, 887; Elder and Mrs. Louis Zonker, 911; A. Orin Crownover, 958; Elbert A. Smith, 1223.
 Chatham-London Districts: Youth Convention, 94; Women's Institute, 383.
 Chetek Reunion, 575.
 Church Organ for Sale, 1007.
 Cincinnati, Ohio, Mission, 142; Cincinnati, Ohio, Mission Change in Meeting Place, 430.
 Colorado (Western) Reunion, 694.
 Dayton, Ohio, Home-coming, 407.
 Des Moines District: Youth Camp, 790; Conference, 862.
 Detroit-Windsor District: Women's Institute, 958.
 Eastern Colorado District: Conference, 262; Eastern Colorado Reunion, 742.
 Eastern Michigan District: Conference, 1007.
 Eastern Montana Reunion and Conference, 598.
 Erie Beach Reunion, 575.
 Flint-Port Huron District: Women's Meeting, 286; Young People's Convention, 478; Conference, 983.
 Glasses Found During College Conference, 1079.
 Gulf States Conference, 23; Priesthood Institutes, 239; Women's Retreat, 286; Reunion, 574; Gulf States Annual Youth Camp, 622; Convention, 1031; Conference, 1151.
 Home-coming at Plesanton, Iowa, 551.
 Home-coming at Holden, Missouri, 575.
 Idaho District: Spring Festival, 334; Youth Conference, 1127.
 Independence Yuletide League Conference, 1223.
 Indiana (Northern) Women's Institute, 694.
 Kalamazoo, Michigan: Religious Education Institute, 574.
 Kansas City Stake: Women's Institute, 1079.

Kansas District: Conference, 286, 1055.
 Kentucky-Tennessee District: Conference, 911.
 Kirtland District Reunion, 334, 575, 766; Conference, 454; Youth Camp, 574; Institute and Conference, 1007.
 Liahona Park Reunion, 694.
 Maine District: Spring Conference and Institute, 359; Institute and Conference, 1007.
 Missouri Valley, Iowa, Priesthood Institute, 214; Youth Camp, 622.
 Myrtle Point, Oregon, Meeting, 622.
 Nauvoo District: Conference, 502, 933; Reunion, 670.
 Northeastern Nebraska District: Conference, 1054.
 Northern Indiana District: Meeting, 359; Youth Convention, 526; Conference, 815.
 New York District: Institutes, 383; Conference, 478; Reunion, 502; Youth Rally, 839.
 Northeastern Illinois District: Conference, 253; League Retreat, 478; Conference, 839.
 Northeastern Nebraska District: Conference, 71.
 Northern California District: Women's Institute, 933.
 Northern Michigan District: Reunion, 430; Women's Institute, 430; Reunion, 647; Conference, 911.
 Northern Ontario Reunion, 574.
 Northwest Reunion, 574.
 Northwestern Iowa District: Conference, 478, 862.
 Northwestern Ohio District: Women's Meeting, 502; Conference and Institute, 1007.
 Nonresident Pastors in Northwest, 167.
 Notice to Pastors, 598.
 Notices: To Saints in San Fernando Valley, 118; To Memphis, Tennessee, Members, 142; To Tulsa, Oklahoma, Saints, 142; To Members in Illinois, 142; To Saints in Muskogee, Oklahoma, 142; To Louisiana Saints, 239; To Manhattan, Kansas, Members, 263; To Texas Members, 286; To Members in Virginia, 334; To Saints in California and Oregon, 334; To California Members, 334; To Members in West Central Iowa, 359; To San Diego Saints, 383; To Members in Council Grove, Kansas, 430; To Members in Maryland, 526; To Records Purchasers, 551; To Members in Northwestern Ohio District, 670; To Members in Vale Oregon, 766; To Kansas State College Students, 862, 887; To Texas Members, 862; To Canadian Bishop's Agents and Solicitors, 911; To Manhattan, Kansas, Members, 1030; To Minnesota Saints, 1030; To Indiana Members, 1054; To North-Central California Saints, 1079; To Montana Members, 1079; To Members in Vancouver, Washington, 1175; To Members in South Carolina, 1223.
 Nowata, Oklahoma, Home-coming, 598.
 Oklahoma: State Reunion, 383.
 Onset Reunion, 551.
 Ontario Youth Convention, 862.
 Oregon District: Activities, 167; Priesthood Institute, 478; Institute, 598, 742; Institutes and Conference, 911.
 Organ for Sale by Radio Department, 694.
 Owen Sound District: Talent Institute, 191; Conference, 1079; Owen Sound-Toronto Reunion, 622.
 Ozarks Reunion, 622.
 Palmyra, Missouri: Church School, 574.
 Philadelphia, Pennsylvania: Series of Meetings, 310.
 Personal Experiences Wanted for "Stepping Stones," 71.
 Pittsburgh District: Conference, 310; Institute, 647; Conference, 1151.
 Priesthood Institute for Ohio, West Virginia, and Pittsburgh Districts, 983, 1007, 1030, 1054.

 Rochester, New York: Youth Conference, 407.
 Rock Island District: Conference, 1127.
 Saskatchewan Religious Education Institute, 911.
 Sault Ste Marie District: Meeting, 790; Conference, 911.
 Seattle District: Conference, 1007.
 Silver Lake Reunion, 167.
 Southeastern Illinois District: Activities, 598; Conference, 1030; Priesthood Retreat, 1030; Conference, 1102.
 Southern Indiana District: Conference, 191; Reunion, 622; Priesthood Institutes, 983, 1007, 1030, 1054, 1079.
 Southern Michigan District: Women's Institute, 430; Conference, 911.
 Southern Missouri District: Conference, 551; Institute, 911.
 Southern Nebraska District: Institute, 454; Conference, 1030.
 Southern Ohio District: Conference, 239.
 Southern Oregon Mission, Organization of, 1199.
 Spring River District: Conference, 911.
 St. Louis, Missouri, District: Conference, 430.
 Syracuse, New York, Institute at, 214, 239.
 Texas Youth Retreat, 839.
 Toronto District: Conference, 1054.
 Tri-State Institute, 1030.
 Wants to Contact Members: Juanita Hawkins, 694; Pvt. R. A. Wiley, 834; Rapid City Saints, 983.
 Washington, D. C., Home-coming, 1054.
 Wedding Anniversary Celebrations: Mr. and Mrs. William Beckett (50th), 166; Mr. and Mrs. Edward Whitworth (55th), 358; Mr. and Mrs. James Davis (50th), 382; Mr. and Mrs. Ira Kinsman (60th), 382.
 Wellsburg, West Virginia, Institute, 47.
 West Virginia District: Conference, 253, 694, 887, 1102.
 Wyoming, Western South Dakota Area: Notice to Members, 47.
 Youngstown, Ohio, District: Conference, 983.
 Requests for Prayers
 Jones, John C., 23.
 O'Neal, Mrs. Ada, 23.
 Hill, A. E., 23.
 Burgess, Cloyd, 47.
 Cooper, Emma, 47.
 Davis, Mrs. Violet, 47.
 Gouty, Mrs. C. A., 47.
 Fender, Eva Marie, 71.
 Young, Mrs. C. B., 71.
 Kunkle, Charlotte Pratt, 71.
 Stoutenburg, Stanley, 71.
 Frankier, Mrs. Viola, 118.
 Brown, Mollie, 118.
 Agar, Mrs. Charles W., 142.
 Culp, Mrs. Hulda, 142.
 Colclazer, John F., 142.
 Tharp, Charles A., 142.
 Farrell, Clarice, 142.
 Cooper, Emma, 142.
 Williamson, Mrs. Albert, 142.
 Honeywell, Mrs. Mary, 167.
 Perry, Mrs. John, 167.
 Brien, J. L., 191.
 Ward, Harriet, 191.
 Lorentzen, Sophie, 214.
 Collins, Jonathan, 215.
 Pugh, Mrs. Donie, 215.
 Smith, Mrs. Mary, 215.
 Richmond, Mrs. M. T., 215.
 Galland, Henry, 215.
 Keenn, Hazel, 215.
 Fronkier, Viola, 215.
 Phillips, Bertha, 215.
 Holt, Claude, 215.
 Skank, Ethel, 215.
 Hotze, Mrs. Lewis, 215.
 Dobbs, Rosella, 239.
 Peacock, Mrs. William C., 239.
 Land, Mr. and Mrs. Ray, 239.
 Crawford, Mrs. Cordia, 239.
 Hledsoe, Mrs. W. N., 239.
 Lorentzen, Roy, 239.

Davis, Myrtle O., 239.
 Miles, Mrs. Minnie, 253.
 Altman, Mrs. James, 253.
 Schmoier, Mrs. Ralph, 253.
 McKim, Mrs. Ida E., 286.
 McNutt, George A., 286.
 Penny, Mrs. Christine, 286.
 McNew, Mrs. Donald, 286.
 Salter, Mrs. Lloyd A., 334.
 Butler, Jennie, 334.
 Sumner, Emily, 334.
 Woods, Mrs. Naomi N., 334.
 Foxworthy, Mrs. C. M., 334.
 Clapp, Mrs. C. R., 359.
 Mayse, Mrs. A. J., 359.
 Parrish, Mrs. O. M., 359.
 Saunier, W. J., 383.
 Goff, Mrs. A. E., 383.
 Sanderson, Mrs. L. H., 407.
 Clark, Velma, 431.
 Green, Kenneth H., 454.
 Corbin, Laura, 454.
 McConnell, John, 454.
 Laman, Sue, 454.
 Frankier, Viola, 478.
 Smith, Mary C., 502.
 Leonard, Mrs. Mabel, 502.
 Altman, Mary, 502.
 Erickson, Daisy, 526.
 Cox, Mr. and Mrs. Earl, 575.
 Bunch, A. B., 598.
 Petty, Mrs. R. R., 598.
 Hordy, Mary, 598.
 Young, C. B., 599.
 Addicott, Mrs. W. E., 622.
 Tryon, Mrs. Dot, 622.
 Dixon, Joseph G., 622.
 Schenman, Mrs. Earnest, 647.
 Frazier, Lynda Kay, 647.
 Lambert, Raymond, 670.
 Emerson, Cora, 670.
 Harwood, Phoebe, 694.
 Honeywell, Harold, 694.
 Fisher, Annie, 694.
 Worcester, Lucy Nelson, 694.
 Harwood, Mrs. Fred (Phoebe), 719.
 Saltz, Mrs. Fern E., 742.
 Crowley, Madelaine, 790.
 Rodman, Lucy, 790.
 Nuce, Lucy, 815.
 Shutt, Mrs. Ethel, 815.
 Davis, Mrs. Maud, 815.
 Duckworth, Mrs. Isobel, 815.
 Boyce, Mary E., 839.
 Smith, Mrs. George, 839.
 Emerson, Cora, 839.
 Simmons, Mrs. W. A., 839.
 Sodersten, Mrs. Rose, 839.
 Royston, Bert, 862.
 Blett, Mrs. Ernest, 887.
 Cheatham, Nancy, 887.
 Wood, Mrs. Aileen, 887.
 Reed, Mrs. Agnes, 887.
 Parks, William M., 911.
 Christianson, Caroline, 911.
 Elder, Mrs. F. G., 911.
 Larson, Weltha, 911.
 Reich, Mrs. Gladys, 934.
 Skinner, Mrs. Laura, 934.
 Moncur, Mrs. H. B., 958.
 Hunt, Mrs. Samuel, Sr., 958.
 Curry, Mrs. Alma, 959.
 Waits, Mrs. C. H., 983.
 Muermann, Mrs. John, 983.
 Stuenkel, Stanley, 983.
 Crankshaw, Mrs. C. J., 1007.
 Enge, Axel Thorn, 1055.
 Dustin, Mrs. Iona, 1079.
 Arnold, Irene, 1079.
 Rathmann, Elizabeth, 1079.
 Atkinson, Ruth and Kate, 1102.
 Ramshaw, Molly K., 1102.
 Sheppard, Mrs. Ethel, 1127.
 Petterson, Mrs. John W., 1127.
 Culp, Mrs. Harve, 1127.
 Stevens, Hazel Cornish, 1127.
 Lankford, E. J., 1151.
 Howk, Mrs. James, Jr., 1151.
 LaMaster, Myrtle, 1175.
 Dodgett, Harvard L., 1175.
 Goodwin, Lily, 1175.
 Walmsley, Thomas, 1199.
 McCarty, Mrs. Hazel, 1199.
 Snodgrass, Judy, 1199.
 Anderson, Jerry, 1223.
 Goodwin, Lily, 1223.
 Reed, Mrs. Cyrus, 1223.

Engagements

Allen-Bates, 94.
 Baughman-Anderson, 766.
 Berridge-Wilcox, 454.
 Chapman-Baker, 575.
 Cochran-Martin, 862.
 Compier-Key, 599.
 Condit-Martin, 167.
 Cox-Eriggs, 387.
 Dickens-Larrabee, 239.
 Ellis-Allen, 791.

Englehard-Welch, 1007.
 Eysell-Howard, 359.
 Greene-Salter, 1199.
 Gunzell-Ford, 71.
 Higdon-McFarlane, 887.
 Hoss-Van Fleet, 239.
 Kemmerer-Mapes, 1223.
 Kemple-Cooke, 71.
 Knapp-Limb, 934.
 Laurel-Grahl, 1079.
 Lusha-Cooper, 839.
 Mark-Harris, 647.
 Monroe-Barrows, 94.
 Murray-Stone, 815.
 Nagel-Moon, 670.
 Noland-Martin, 454.
 Pearson-DeTray, 911.
 Pike-Hayer, 719.
 Pincomb-Jewett, 959.
 Sartwell-Moorman, 47.
 Schlotman-Prather, 959.
 Schmall-Phelps, 887.
 Selle-Griffin, 862.
 Sinclair-Payne, 454.
 Slover, Hawley, 934.
 Smith-Metcalf, 94.
 Stayton-Eliefson, 911.
 Strange-Mahurin, 454.
 Taylor-Seaver, 359.
 Van Fleet-Berryman, 310.
 Van Fleet-Jagger, 502.
 Vogel-Park, 71.
 Wagner-Robinson, 359.
 Leutzinger-Ward, 1055.
 Webb-Hunt, 766.
 Weldon-Bruch, 719.
 Willetts-Jackel, 239.
 York-Sexton, 142.
 Young-Anderson, 47.

Weddings

Adams-Haden, 142; Albon-Minor, 359; Allen-Bates, 502; Amick-Archibald, 1199; Ashby-Goddard, 71; Averill-Patton, 862.
 Barns-Beauchene, 887; Barr-Golightly, 407; Barrett-Tabor, 1079; Berridge-Wilcox, 719; Bloom-Morian, 310; Boatwright-Moore, 526; Brady-Gregory, 887; Bridenbecker - Kolmsee, 1055; Briggs-Haferkamp, 215; Brown-Travis, 310; Burgess-Atkinson, 887.
 Carlson-Hubble, 239; Carpenter-Browne, 599; Castile-Coop, 623; Cavin-Sheppard, 862; Christie-Newton, 526; Cohrs-Marshall, 742; Costello-Fredrick, 670; Chuning-Winslow, 670; Cool-Lafferty, 599; Creviston-Richmann, 1199; Crownover-Reed, 742.
 Dalton-Perry, 454; Davis-Surbrook, 911; Davis-Tillman, 694; Dawson-Scott, 1079; Dell-Bodkin, 742; Denton-Nelson, 286; Dickman-Hulmes, 454; Draper-Bardeau, 670; Dalton-Cameron, 454.
 Ecker-Stoor, 934; Edwards-Larsen, 934; Engel-Moore, 575.
 Finch-Child, 599; Fletcher-Routledge, 766; Forbes-Kapp, 215.
 Glaser-Hill, 407; Gnadt-Davis, 359; Grant-Trombino, 983; Greene-Robinson, 623.
 Hansen-Barney, 1007; Hansen-Golding, 1007; Hensen-Hoss, 934; Hartman-Morivick, 983; Harts-horn-Shippy, 911; Hewitt-Beckman, 286; Hinderks-Box, 1102; Hoffman-Hunnakko, 454; Holde-mer-Anderson, 359; Holiday-McKinney, 286; Holt-Melendy, 810; Horton-Bridges, 215; Hoss-Van Fleet, 742; Howard-Law, 742; Howes-Reid, 526; Hughes-Cleveland, 23.
 Jansma-Field, 71; Johnson-Webster, 911.
 Seaver - Lewis, 1223; Kemple-Cooke, 647; Kerr-Harper, 23; Kingsbury-Goddard, 526; Ko-chel-Beckner, 407; Kohlhof-Rook, 887.
 Laudie-Harris, 694; Long-Dempsey, 310; Lyon-Miller, 286.
 Mason-McKay, 1151; Madigin-Lockyer, 454; Manuel-Barritt, 647; Markham-Carrick, 526; Martin-Bryant, 286; May-Westerman, 286; Meeks-Chambers, 862; Miller-Funk, 766; Miller-Moran, 478; Mills-McAlister, 887; Mitchell-Cunningham, 286; Mitchell-Sheppard, 1199; Mon-roee-Barrows, 1031; Mueller-Mickelson, 742.

 McCluskey-Abrahams, 1199; Mc-Cormack-McAninch, 647; Mc-Graw-DeLapp, 1199; McKarnan-Wood, 815; McKee-King, 694; McArthur-Call, 599.
 Nagel-Moon, 887; Neal-Skelding, 575; Nelson-Tracey, 766; Norris-Boyd, 670; Nott-Evans, 647.
 Olson-Taylor, 862.
 Pack-Curry, 599; Page-Williams, 454; Parish-Thiles, 407; Pear-son - DeTray, 1055; Peevy-Thompson, 334; Phipps-White, 623; Pike-Hayer, 1007.
 Roll-Wheeler, 215; Rose-Brown, 742; Ross-Burgess, 359; Rout-ledge-Hudson, 766; Russell-Johnston, 1079; Rutherford-Ya-ger, 1031.
 Sartwell-Moorman, 239; Schneible-Keen, 502; Scofield-Peters, 623; Setterberg-Morse, 599; Sharp-Condit, 1151; Sheppard-Koesch, 23; Sheppard-Studyvin, 454; Shippy-White, 670; Short-Sheri-dan, 215; Silvester-Goddard, 526; Slover-Asher, 694; Smith-Met-calf, 983; Smith-Nelson, 1199; Stevens-Newton, 526; Stice-Smith, 742; Summy-Prentice, 310; Swoffer-Fifeid, 1127.
 Taylor-Seaver, 599; Testerman-Young, 1102; Towers-Nickell, 934; (Correction), 983; Tracey-White, 118; Treadway-Corbin, 839; Triebel-Muyres, 359.
 Upson-Martin, 766.
 Van Buskirk-Combs, 1079; Van Nieuwenhuyze-Shipman, 791; Veleiz-Hunter, 502; Vogel-Park, 286.
 Watts-Slavick, 623; Webb-Hunt, 983; White-Renbarger, 934; Wil-kie-Long, 310; Wilkinson-Ches-worth, 694; Willetts-Jackel, 766; Williams-Buck, 839; Wilson-Buccas, 118.
 Young-Harnage, 719.

Births

Amos, Stephen Michael, 1199; An-ders, Martin Dale, 1175; Ander-son, Janis Elaine, 623; Anderson, Judith Marie, 191; Andrews, Robert William, 191; Appel, Wil-liam Lloyd, 599; Atkinson, John Douglas Reid, 599; Armstrong, Donna Sue, 862.
 Bain, Nancy Jean, 359; Baker, Karen Sue, 815; Banks, Deborah Ann, 1079; Barlow, Pamela Sue and Patricia Ann, 1127; Bar-more, Roy Edward, 286; Beckner, Marcia Rae, 670; Belcher, Alice Cathleen, 454; Bernard, Richard Montgomery, Junior, . . . ; Bil-lins, Jeffrey Claud, 71; Bird, Ger-ald Eugene, 143; Bondurant, Neal Lee, 118; Booth, John Thomas, 887; Bowbeer, Karen Lynn, 286; Bradford, Sarah Lou-ise, 1199; Briggs, Dianna Kay, 191; Brockway, Katherine Kay, 454; Brown, Bruce Allen, 1031; Brown, Valeria Gail, 670; Buck, Nancy Kay, 862; Burdick, James Allen, 383; Burger, Pamela Sue, 310; Butterworth, Cheryl Jean, 1079.
 Campbell, Sally Sue, 983; Canter-bury, David Earl, 454; Carlson, William Paul, 887; Carnahan, Lila Kathleen, 143; Cates, Amiel Leemon, 815; Catlin, Terry Aiton, 862; Cawfield, James William, 383; Chapman, Dale Alan, 959; Chatburn, Gary Blaine, 815; Cheresch, David and Mark, 286; Clark, Gayle Allison, 191; Coburn, Dennis Lee, 454; Cochran, Jacqueline Annette, 71; Collins, Connie Maxine, 286; Condit, Michael Duane, 742; Conoley, David Michael, 599; Cook, Elaine Joyce, 407; Cook, Judith K., 1199; Cottle, Donald Wesley, 1175; Covell, Betty Ann, 983; Covert, Glenna Louise, 623; Cozart, Dennis Wayne, 142;
 Crowell, James Frederick, 191; Crowther, Deborah Kay, 862; Cunningham, Marsha Jean, 1102.
 Daugherty, Jeri Lynn, 1151; Deck-er, David Learmont, 719; De-Lany, Daniel Charles, 670; De-Lucca, Darlene Saye, 1199; Dip-pel, Frank Henry, 286; Doster, Lawrence Edward, 1151; Dun-field, Dennis Wayne, 1199.
 Edwards, Lynn Diane, 815; Ed-wards, Richard George, 767; Et-tinger, Stephanie Lynn, 142.
 Farrow, Karen Leah, 71; Fergu-son, Connie Lynn, 94; Fetting, Richard Ralph, 815; Few, Don-ald Brent, 767; Fewell, Regina Ruth, 862; Fewell, Thomas Wil-liam, 862; Flier, Curtis Lee, 911; Fleming, Dennis Leroy, 383; Floro, Beverly Joan, 934; Foo-shee, Michael Ray, 454; Fred-rick, Jeffrey Ryan, 670; Frisbe, Gregory Truman, 310.
 Garrett, Katherine Sue, 863; Gaul-ter, Frederick Wayne, . . . ; Gel-born, Bethel Amy, 478; Gibbs, Sharon Louise, 94; Gill, Margaret Ruth, 599; Glauner, Daniel Dal-las, 191; Gordon, Deanna Lorene, 191; Gordon, Michael David, 719; Green, Catherine Sue, 118; Grit-ton, Marcia Lynn, 143; Grot, Sandra Kay, 862; Gunn, Russell Jay, 887.
 Hackler, Dennis Truman, 862; Hada, Robert Wallace, 1031; Hamilton, Lawrence Lee, 71; Hargrove, Patricia Ann, 454; Harshman, Jewell Marie, 286; Haskett, Diane Margaret, 599; Hawley, Michael Hale, 1031; Heaviland, Claudette Marie, 454; Hendricks, Jerry Wayne, 889; Higginbotham, David Bazil, 1199; Hollander, Gary Joseph, 959; Holliday, Darryl Ross, 1175; Holman, Karen Sue, 478; Hon-eychurch, Steven Mark, 191; Houk, Charles Edward, 359; Howard, Nancy Clare, 286; Hun-ter, Craig Edgar, 454.
 Ihde, William John, 575.
 Johnson, David Lee, 1175; John-son, Donna Marie, 1031; John-son, Robert Henry, 310; Jones, James Richard, 359; Jones, Nath-an Hale, 791; Jordan, Sue Ann, 1151; Judd, Shirley Fern, 983.
 Kemp, Jacqueline Sue, 694; Ken-nedy, Cynthia, 767; Kenney, John Arthur and Gene Frank, 934; Kopley, Kathleen Gayle, 767; King, David Michael, 1079; Kin-kaid, Robert Lee, 359; Knight, David Eugene, 791; Kroesen, Gregory Alan, 983.
 Lade, Valeria Jane, 1031; Lamb-kin, Betty Sue, 191; Lancaster, Alice Clara, 191; Lents, Don Glaude, 1127; Lohmann, Stephen Earl, 815; Lynch, Cynthia Har-lean, 478.
 Maki, Larry K., 191; Maples, Mat-thew McBride, 1055; Marolf, Allen Lynn, 1151; Marshall, Gordon Ronald, 1055; Mercer, Ron-ald Ross, 310; Mills, Ronald Arthur, 694; Mitchell, Carol Lynn, 1031; Moreland, Dennis Lee, 983; Mosher, Bruce Allen.
 McCarroll, Russell Wayne, 1175; McClain, Michael William, 1175; McCormick, Jay Douglas, 599; McDole, Dana Ernest (Adop-tion), 71; McKee, Susan Marie, 191; McKiernan, Sandra Jo, 143.
 Neff, Nancy Cheryl, 310; Neibrok, John William, 454; Newcom, Linda Diane, 359; Nunn, Thomas Royal, 1127.
 Pack, Beth Elaine, 143; Parks, Jacquelin Lue, 191; Pederson, Ann Louise, 1031; Perkins, Ira Lee, 310; Peterson, Craig Allen, 983; Philbrook, Pamela Jane, 839; Pillsbury Charles Henry III, 286; Pittenger, David An-drew, 454; Plumb, Linda Sue, 887; Porter, Karen Lee, 142; Powers, Jimmy Gordon, 694; Purgahn, Richard Frederick, 383.

Quirey, Tim Alan, 647.

Ralston, Judith Gail, 71; Randall, Gregory Allan, 1055; Reigleman, Margie Irene, 1151; Reynolds, James Edward, 742; Rich, Donna Louise, 575; Ritchie, Karen Sue, 1031; Robinson, David Anthony, 143; Robinson, Thomas Clare, 286; Rolinson, Carol Ann, 862; Rosbury, Keith Douglas, 359; Roszell, Bonnie Faith, 599; Rounds, John Lyle, 407; Russell, Elizabeth Jane, 1031.

Sartwell, Theresa Denise, 1127; Savage, Gregory Stephen, 791; Schlotzhauer, Neil Howard, 503; Searles, Jeffrey Paul, 839; Sears, Thomas Delbert, 94; Seeley, Linda Darlene, 647; Setchfield, Melissa May, 599; Sherman, Joyce Anne, 191; Siegfried, Sandra Jean, 118; Simmons, Jeffrey Lynn, 1102; Smith, Barrie Allan, 359; Smith, Gregory Kenneth, 503; Snearly, Dalene Grace, 118; Steinkerchner, Albert Eugene, Jr., 454; Stella, James Robert, 1031; Stevenson, Bonnie and Donnie, 503; Stevenson, Phillip Thomas, 142; Stewart, Delmar Allen, 1031; Stewart, Jeffery William, 1175; Stobaugh, Laura Jane, 142; Stoner, Ruth Ann, 742; Streeter, Donald Jay, 454; Sumruld, Walter Louis, Jr., 191; Swain, Lois Jean, 670; Swanson, Candy Jean, 1031; Symon, Philip Keith, 1151.

Taylor, Barbara Joan, 71; Taylor, Roger Ivan, 983; Tousely, Jacquelyn Diane, 71; Tretter, Gordon English, 191; Trimble, Carolyn Marie, 407; Tucker, James Clifford, 791.

Wagner, Loretta Anna, 575; Wakeman, Scott Douglas, 862; Waite, Christine Anne, 454; Weiss, Barbara June, 862; Weldon, Stephen Reynolds, 286; Wells, Rebecca Jean, 1151; West, Gaye Dawne, 787; West, Kathleen Sue, 142; Westwood, Bret Robert, 286; Wiggins, Nancy Irene, 1151; Wilcox, Barbara Ann, 575; Wilcox, Kent George, 1102; Williams, Alan Michael, 142; Williams, Connie Marie, 1031; Williams, Karen Fay, 359; Wilson, Paul Howard, 334; Woods, Lynn Mary, 286; Wright, Earl Eugene, 934; Wrigley, Kirk Douglas, 933.

Deaths

Adams, Mary Jacobs, 719.
Aelick, James Deber, 286.
Akridge, James George, 1031.
Alley, Josiah M., 71.
Anderson Sarah Elizabeth, 431.
Andes, Granville D., 742.
Andrew, Isaac, 455.
Andrews, Roy Francis, 311.
Arnold, David, 527.
Arnold, George Francis, 478.
Ashmead, Gertrude Alberta, 887.
Austin, Charles C., 1127.

Bailey, John William, 671.
Ballantyne, David Frederick, 742.
Baker, Ann Julia Robin, 253.
Bardwell, Clara G., 407.
Beck, Dorothy Mildred, 815.
Beckett, William Raymond, 1103.
Beckman, Samuel Arthur, 71.
Beebe, Ethel Cordelia Manlove, 310.
Bell, William H., 1031.
Bennett, John Eugene, 479.
Berlin, Verinia Grace, 791.
Bevins, Edwin Scott, Jr., 143.
Billingsley, Hazel, 455.
Binkley, Idabelle, 791.
Bishop, Lot, 311.
Bishop, Viola, 311.
Blalock, Ulysses A., 695.
Blodsoe, William Newton, 1031.
Blount, Dr. Stephen Landon, 839.
Bly, Mary Jane Walker, 767.
Boren, Anke Aline, 191.
Botkin, George Walter, 431.
Bowers, Jeanette Gene, 1103.
Bratcher, Janice Huberta, 113.
Bronson, Claude L., 478.
Brown, Alta May Edwards, 478.
Brown, John Alexander, 1175.
Brown, Mollie Lois, 478.

Brown, Lt. Robert M., 695.
Frundage, George Russell, 1127.
Buchanan, Lloyd Clayton, 935.
Bud, Arthur L., 144.
Burge, Amos Montgomery, 118.
Burge, Cora A., 333.
Burdick, James Albert, 334.
Burdick, Nellie Frances, 143.
Burton, Dr. Benjamin Otto, 1103.
Burton, Wilfred George, 671.
Buschlen, Harold Clifford, 959.
Butts, Joseph Edgar, 670.

Cairns, James, 253.
Calkins, Jennie Sarah, 694.
Calsing, Norvan Dee, Jr., 191.
Campbell, T-Sgt. Willard A., 863.
Carner, Lawrence Elmer, 1055.
Carpenter, Mildred E., 334.
Carson, Ada, 839.
Carrow, Louis A., 742.
Chambers, Frederick J., 815.
Clark, Alice Helena Oliver, 311.
Clark, Gary Alden, 311.
Clinesmith, Franklin Snyder, 1055.
Clum, Florence Estella, 163.
Cole, Elizabeth Maria, 695.
Cole, Joseph G., 863.
Collins, Mary Peslin, 959.
Copas, Cora Lou, 191.
Corbin, Laura Marie, 1127.
Corley, Amelia, 1175.
Cowen, Rebecca Aurilla, 695.
Crabb, John Thomas, 503.
Crabtree, Thomas, 191.
Craven, Anna Marie, 670.
Crawford, Eugene James, Sr., 815.
Crook, Daisy A., 455.
Crowell, Nellie Frances, 935.
Crum, Joseph M., 407.
Culp, Hulda Cordelia, 431.

Daggett, Clyde Otis, 671.
Daly, Allie, 479.
Damron, Kathleen Olive, 71.
Danielson, Bertha, 863.
Darling, Ida Josephine, 1175.
Davenport, Blanch Freeman, 695.
Davis, Jane, 742.
Davis, Violet Gertrude, 1102.
Day, Louida Quick, 1223.
Depew, Elizabeth C. Taylor, 144.
Doherty, Addie, 742.
Donaldson, William Ford, 311.
Dunn, John Jefferson, 526.

Edie, Albert Gallatin, Sr., 623.
Elam, Howard Thomas, 311.
Emmerson, William, 959.
Ensley, Joseph O., 1199.
Ettinger, William James, 1175.
Everett, Wayne Edward, 118.

Farrar, Isabelle Ross, 455.
Faulkingham, Charlotte Althea Beal, 719.
Ferrett, Linda Rae, 191.
Fetting, Anna Marie, 311.
Fetting, August, 478.
Fewell, Ida May, 334.
Fewell, John Riley, 71.
Fish, Maude Mae, 163.
Fisher, Myron C., 526.
Fitzwater, Thomas Edward, 742.
Flanders, LeRoy Franklin, 719.
Flinn, Randall Ralph, 503.
Forest, Rebecca Elizabeth, 1151.
Foster, Mary Esther, 791.
Fowler, David O., 1102.
Freeman, Joseph A., 526.
Fritcher, Gertrude Mae, 647.
Fusselman, Augusta C., 935.

Garrison, Frank N., 143.
Gelatt, Amelia, 1031.
Gimblett, William Farley, 94.
Ginthardt, Charles T., 959.
Gold, Mary Mahala, 310.
Gouldsmith, Nelson R., 695.
Green, Anna M., 695.
Green, Blanche, 253.
Greenwood, Joseph H., 959.
Guthrie, Nora E., 1103.
Hacker, David Luther, 526.
Hall, Bertha Chadwick Hatch, 310.
Hall, Ernest Bruce, 695.
Hammon, Earl Elwood, 742.
Hancock, Edith Mabel, 935.
Hanggi, Elsie, 334.
Harper, Nellie Fay, 334.
Harris, Olive Amy, 933.
Hawley, Francis Aaron, 791.
Hayter, Ida Alida, 163.
Heide, Amos William, 1127.
Henderson, Nancy Caroline, 935.
Henning, Laura L. Gamble, 767.
Heuermann, Rosa Marie Larsen, 144.
Hexdol, Kenneth Marvin, 863.
Hillis, John, 167.
Hinderks, Temme H., 478.
Hogle, Glen A., 143.

Holman, Susan Emer J., 670.
Holmes, Carrie May, 1223.
Holmes, Anna J., 647.
Holmes, Daniel Thomas, 455.
Hopkins, Thomas, 94.
Hornocker, Laurence D., 695.
Hunt, Anna Cecilia, 1199.
Hunter, Jennie, 935.
Hussung, Alice Elizabeth, 71.
Hussung, William Price, 71.
Hutton, Ida May, 503.

Ingersoll, Carrie E., 719.
Irvin, Arclissa Kaufman, 143.
Johnson, Harry C., 1055.
Jones, John C., 742.
Jordison, Arthur William, 527.
Juergens, George, 742.
Juergens, J. Garrit, 143.
Julius, Louis Edward, 287.

Kelley, William Andrew, 334.
Kemp, James F., 719.
Ketchum, George Riley, 1151.
Kewish, Harvey Walter, 311.
Kidd, Aditha Bell, 163.
Kieffer, Jake, 623.
Kimball, James Norman, 334.
Kiser, Willard F., 503.
Klaus, Peter Fred, 334.
Knight, George Mattison, 1055.
Kress, Alice Eugene, 287.

Lambkin, Byrne Story, 478.
Landsberg, Darryll Duane, 1223.
Lanham, Susan Lavenia, 719.
LeRay, Ava B., 479.
Lettington, William Thomas, 815.
Lewis, Carrie M., 863.
Lewis, Louise Hills, 287.
Lindsey, Mathilde Louisa Tandberg, 527.
Linsea, Robert A., 695.
Lippert, Hannah Boren, 287.
Loar, Delbert Wilson, 144.
Loeding, Anna, 167.
Logsdon, Albert Russell, 791.
Luce, Elva Leona, 527.

Mackie, Olive Marie, 1031.
Manlove, Lila Veritas, 167.
Martin, Edward G., 113.
Mayse, Andrew J., 623.
Mellinger, Ellen L., 671.
Metten, Edward E., 191.
Mielke, Eva May Truluck, 695.
Miller, Alice Victoria, 333.
Miller, Sylvester, 191.
Mitchell, James Loranzo, 1055.
Monsees, Ruben Henry, 1055.
Moore, Lloyd Colmen, 118.
Moore, Sallie Aurilla, 71.
Morgan, Deborah, 935.
Morrison, Lula Elizabeth, 455.
Mourier, Regis Paul, 310.
Myers, Carolyn Wilson, 527.

McCauley, M. George, 478.
McCoy, Ida S. Keyser, 1055.
McCoy, John, 1055.
McFarlane, Clara Emma, 1055.
McGuire, Phoebe Tharp, 143.
McIntosh, Caldwell, 1102.
McIntosh, Sarah Ann, 144.
McKeage, Sylvia M., 791.
McKenna, Matilda Gertrude, 287.
McKinsey, William E., 333.
McLean, Marjorie, 1055.

Napier, Pauline Olive Spurgeon, 575.
Neitzelt, Emma F., 575.
Nelson, Anna Christine Hanson, 599.
Nelson, John Norman, 742.
Newkirk, Roy Ellsworth, 1127.
Newman, George, 767.
Nichol, Daniel Albert, 742.
Norris, Catherine Marie, 113.
O'Bryan, Anna, 623.
Okerlind, Oscar William, 767.
Omohundro, Alice P., 479.

Palmer, Dan Wilkinson, 1175.
Pankey, Henry S., 310.
Parker, Theophilus Windsor, 1102.
Parrish, Aleta E., 694.
Parkhouse, Margaret, 311.
Pennell, George Wayland, 742.
Penticuff, Clarence M., 333.
Perry, Mary Maria, 1199.
Peters, Dwight Leroy, 623.
Peters, Rhoda E., 742.
Petersen, Anna Marie, 310.
Peterson, Bert Emanuel, 1151.
Peterson, Richard Kenneth, 311.
Petre, John Frederick, 310.
Pett, George A., 1079.
Phay, Joshua J., 310.
Pickens, Alice H., 455.

Pickles, Floyd B., 431.
Pim, Ernie Lou, 1102.
Pinkerton, Earl William, 983.
Pinkerton, William, 742.
Powers, Lettie Fern, 742.
Powers, Roy W., 1079.
Prettyman, Catherine Ruth, 863.
Price, Mary Adeline, 959.
Prideaux, Edith Cordelia, 143.

Raveill, Mary Olive, 287.
Raveill, Thomas Wesley, 1175.
Raw, Patrick J., 863.
Reek, Kate J., 455.
Reese, Mary, 334.
Reilly, Joseph W., 935.
Renfroe, Detrich Durwood, 113.
Reynolds, George, 503.
Richards, W. B., 527.
Rinehart, Ira Newton, 478.
Robinson, Amanda Caroline, 94.
Robinson, James, 670.
Royce, Belle, 143.
Royster, Mattie, 527.
Ruby, William Arthur, 1102.
Runkle, Alice, 623.
Russell, Susan Emmaline Davison, 935.

Santos, George Vincent, 935.
Sargent, Bunn Taylor, 191.
Schaar, Jane Seymour, 455.
Schaefer, Elise Fredericke, 479.
Schmidt, Margaret M., 1103.
Scott, John Thomas, 1102.
Severy, Fred A., 670.
Shaffer, Mary Elcy, 1031.
Shed, Lida Gilbertson, 742.
Shed, Murray Owen, 742.
Shepherdson, William, 286.
Sherrill, Filmore Squires, 191.
Skinner, William, 670.
Small, Adda Florence, 287.
Smith, Francis Coomer, 167.
Smith, Howard W., 1199.
Smith, John W., 1151.
Smith, Verlie Ethel Jeffrey, 839.
Smith, William Henry, 143.
Smitson, John W., 143.
Snell, Janet, 935.
Soper, John K., 959.
Sparks, Marie Dorothea Hetrick, 286.
Sperry, Alice Patricia, 694.
Sperry, Anna Christina, 479.
Sprague, Hugh A., 407.
Standefer, Louella, 503.
Stone, Ladner E., 503.
Strand, Thomas Olsen, 1223.
Stuyvesant, Roy Glenn, 1175.
Summers, James Marion, 1223.
Swanson, Charles A., 311.
Swinney, Lily, 1031.

Taylor, Jacob, 94.
Taylor, Warren James, 767.
Teel, Ida May, 479.
Theys, Frank Albert, 719.
Thompson, Hattie O., 143.
Thompson, Margaret, 431.
Thompson, Martha Emmaline, 503.
Thorman, Herman, 1079.
Thornton, John, 671.
Tillery, Linda Kay, 143.
Tinker, William Russell, 1127.
Todd, Mary Elizabeth Brintnall, 431.
Tomlinson, Jane, 599.
Tonahill, Albert More, 1175.
Traver, E. L., 113.
Tucker, Cammie M., 311.

Ultican, William Patrick, 1127.
Volz, Jennie Clark, 94.
Walters, Elizabeth Webster, 431.
Watford, Claude Washington, 527.
Watkins, Thomas J., 311.
Webberly, Louis Robert, 791.
Webster, Daniel Mack, 815.
Wehrli, Walter Louis, 143.
Welborn, Howard Herbert, 1199.
Wells, Noel Ben, 627.
Weston, Bernard D., 1079.
Whipple, Thomas Geer, 1102.
White, Laura Belle, 407.
Whitney, Ena Payne, 253.
Wilcox, Parry Beatrice Davis, 94.
Winship, George, 503.
Wise, Carrie C., 1223.
Wivel, Edward, 1151.
Wolf, Minnie K., 143.

Yelland, Henry J., 143.
Yingling, Jenny, 935.
Zeidler, Mary K., 287.
Ziegenhorn, Theodore E., 1175.

Bulletin Board

Wants to Contact Saints

My husband and I and our four children have just moved to Abilene, Texas, from Kennett, Missouri. If there are members here, we shall appreciate having them contact us. Our address is 442 1-2 Jeanette, and our phone number 3363.

Zion-Wide "Preparation Day"

The next monthly meeting of the city-wide women's department will be held at the Walnut Park Church on January 4 from 10:15 a.m. to 2:15 p.m. A nursery will be provided for preschool children.

Correction of Address

Gomer T. Griffiths address is Route 2, Wiloughby, Ohio, rather than Kirtland Hills as given in the December 5.

REQUESTS FOR PRAYERS

Mrs. W. J. Parker, Villa Grove, Illinois, who has been ill for a long time, asks the Saints to remember her in prayer.

Prayers are requested for Mrs. Joseph Abbondanza, Route 1, Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, an isolated Saint. She would appreciate letters from those who care to write.

Josephine L. Green, 827 Fourteenth Street, Rock Island, Illinois, requests prayers that she may be relieved of a great burden and be able to live in peace.

Prayers are requested for sixteen-year-old George Inman, son of Mr. and Mrs. V. C. Inman, 340 Victoria, Costa Mesa, California, who is a victim of cancer. He is not a Latter Day Saint but has attended our church school.

WEDDINGS

Shewmake-Henson

Marilyn Henson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rueben Henson of Mt. Vernon, Illinois, and Parkes Shewmake, also of Mt. Vernon, were married September 29 at Henderson, Kentucky, the Reverend E. K. Judy officiating. They are making their home in Mt. Vernon.

BIRTHS

Mr. and Mrs. Glen Rose of Orangeburg, New York, announce the birth of a daughter, Cynthia Ann, born November 25. Mrs. Rose is the former Barbara Harshman. Both parents attended Graceland College.

A son, Michael Eugene, was born on June 29 to Mr. and Mrs. Robert Green of Mt. Vernon, Illinois. Mrs. Green is the former Betty DeSelsms.

A daughter, Sherry Rose, was born on November 12 to Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Rockett of Mt. Vernon, Illinois. Mrs. Rockett is the former Norma Lee Jackson of Marion, Illinois.

A daughter, Mary Louise, was born on September 9 to Mr. and Mrs. Harvey S. Mowrey of Tallahassee, Florida.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. York of Independence, Missouri, announce the birth of a son, Stephen Kenneth, born November 24 at the Independence Sanitarium. Mrs. York is the former Doris Sexton.

A son, Gregory Bruce, was born on August 12 to Mr. and Mrs. Elbert Boren of Oberlin, Ohio. He was blessed on September 25 by Elder W. W. Crispin. Mrs. Boren is the former Virginia Harply.

Mr. and Mrs. Glenn A. Motta of Fort Scott, Kansas, announce the birth of a son, Russell Anthony, born November 21 at the Burke Street Hospital. Mrs. Motta, the former Ruby LeNeve, attended Graceland College from 1941-44.

Mr. and Mrs. Carroll S. Fenner of Chardon, Ohio, announce the birth of a daughter, Carla Mae, born October 22. Mrs. Fenner is the former Mae Brown, daughter of Evangelist and Mrs. Robert T. Brown of Merlin, Ontario.

Mr. and Mrs. Ivan M. Allen of Lohrville, Iowa, announce the birth of a son, Paul Eugene, born October 18. He was blessed on November 20 at Coalville, Iowa, by Elder Harold Mann. Mrs. Allen, the former Eula Baughman, is a graduate of the Independence Sanitarium School of Nursing, class of 1940.

DEATHS

SMELSER.—Esty Louis, was born May 30, 1887, at Red Cloud, Nebraska, and died August 10, 1949, at St. Margaret's Hospital in Hammond, Indiana. He was baptized into the Reorganized Church on December 17, 1911, was ordained a teacher in 1918, and a priest in January, 1949. He was faithful to his calling and was in charge of the Communion service in Hammond Branch the Sunday preceding his death. He married Ernestine Davey on November 26, 1914, in Montana. In 1928 he and his family moved to Independence, Missouri, and a few years later to Indiana.

He is survived by his wife; two sons: Wayne of Chicago, Illinois, and John of Plymouth, Indiana; a daughter, Mrs. Wilma McKeehen of Stoughton, Massachusetts; eight grandchildren; two brothers; and one sister. Interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery, Independence.

SIMMONS.—Samuel Hillman, son of Samuel and Gulletta Simmons, was born near Cameron, Missouri, on April 23, 1880, and died at his home in Cameron on November 6, 1949. He was baptized into the Reorganized Church at the age of eight, was ordained to the Aaronic priesthood in 1904 and two years later to the office of elder. He was pastor of the Far West Branch for eleven years and president of Far West District prior to its organization as a stake. Following his ordination to the office of high priest, he served as a member of the stake high council. For two years he was pastor of the Cameron Branch. Although he never fully recovered from a severe illness in 1944, he continued his ministry until death. On February 12, 1903, he was married to Ruby Maybelle Bean; six children were born to them. Three sons, Clair, Donovan, and Leon preceded him in death.

He is survived by his wife; two sons: Samuel Lockwood Simmons of Washington, D. C., and Wayne Emerson Simmons of Caracas, Venezuela; a daughter, Mrs. Marjorie Volters of Cameron; and four grandchildren. Funeral services were held in the Christian Church in Cameron, Elders J. C. Constance and Orman Salisbury officiating. Interment was in the Delano Cemetery.

HAWKINS.—Cleve, was born November 22, 1886, at Midway, Alabama, and died October 16, 1949, at his home in Kennett, Missouri. He had been a member of the Reorganized Church since boyhood. He is survived by his wife, Lucy; three sons: Hershel James, and Elbert; and three daughters: Glennie Henflein, Hazel Carson, and Vera Haze.

VALLEM.—William Peter, was born November 1, 1871, at Woodfords, California, and died March 6, 1949, at his home near Lodi, California. He was baptized into the Reorganized Church on November 24, 1888.

He is survived by two brothers, Raymond and George W. Vallem. Funeral services were conducted by Patriarch Willam Dawson. Burial was in the Lodi cemetery.

HARDY.—Mary Vandusen, was born June 13, 1872, at Kenosha, Wisconsin, and died August 3, 1949, at French Camp, California. She had been a member of the Reorganized Church since September 17, 1893.

Surviving are two sons, Alex and Howard. Interment was in the Parkview Cemetery, Stockton, California.

PACKARD.—Forrest Earl, was born January 11, 1892, at Hinsdale, New Hampshire, and died at his farm home near Conway, Missouri, on November 9, 1949. He united with the Reorganized Church on August 2, 1925, was ordained a deacon on July 14, 1934, and a priest on March 5, 1944. He was faithful to his calling and drove many miles over rough roads to hold services in the homes of isolated members.

He is survived by his wife, Ada; a son, Harold, of Mesa, Arizona; a daughter, Mrs. G. L. Spies of Salem, Oregon; his mother, Mrs. Mary Packard of Long Beach, California; a sister, Mrs. Warren Best of Santa Ana, California; a stepson, Hugh Kensler of Santa Paula, California; and five grandchildren. Funeral services were held in the Green Mountain Baptist Church west of Conway, Elder Arthur E. Starks officiating. Interment was in the Gann Cemetery.

REICH.—Gladys, daughter of S. W. and Evelyn Lamb, was born near Delaware, Oklahoma, on December 21, 1893, and died November 24, 1949, in Oklahoma. On June 4, 1914, she was married to Edwin Reich; three sons were born to them. She was baptized into the Reorganized Church on October 10, 1915, and was an enthusiastic worker in her branch. For two years she was leader of the women's department.

She is survived by her husband; three sons: Wendell of Delaware; Doyle of Tahlequah, Oklahoma; and John of the home; her twin sister, Gayle Reich of Poteau, Oklahoma; another sister, Mrs. Leonard Stroup of Kansas City, Missouri; two brothers: Jake Lamb of San Diego, California, and Loy Lamb of Lakeview, Oregon; and one grandson. Funeral services were held at Nowata, Oklahoma, Elder Frank Kyser officiating. Interment was in the Nowata Memorial Park.

BROCKETT.—Clara Jane, daughter of James and Paulina Parks, was born August 8, 1866, in Runnells, Iowa, and died June 13, 1949, in Des Moines, Iowa, where she had made her home for many years. She was married to W. S. Brockett on August 7, 1885. She had been a member of the Reorganized Church since June 13, 1880.

Surviving are two sons: Charles Brockett of Des Moines and Robert Brockett of Mason City, Iowa; and a daughter, Mrs. Ona Riggs of Des Moines. Funeral services were held June 16 in Des Moines, Pastor Herbert Scott officiating. Interment was in the Runnells cemetery.

RICE.—David M., son of Bryant and Nancie Rice, was born July 9, 1883, near Vancleave, Mississippi, and died November 27, 1949. On August 16, 1901, he was married to Cora E. Rogers; five children were born to them. He had been a member of the Reorganized Church since July 6, 1902.

He is survived by his wife; two daughters: Ethel Annee Bretinbach of Vancleave and Vida Estella Parker of Gantier, Mississippi; three sons: Malcom of Fredricks, West Virginia; Freddie of Pascagoula, Mississippi; and LaRue of Vancleave; seventeen grandchildren; and five great-grandchildren. Funeral services were held at the Reorganized Church in Vancleave, Elders Franklin Steiner and J. L. Barlow officiating. Burial was in the church cemetery.

ROGERS.—Eliza Rebecca, was born November 29, 1875, and died November 21, 1949, in Pascagoula, Mississippi, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Mack Hawley. She had been a member of the Reorganized Church for over fifty years. Six children were born to her and her husband, John M. Rogers: Mrs. Lillian Pigg of Rockford, Illinois; Mrs. Bertha Hawley of Moss Point, Mississippi; Willie A. of Vancleave; John L., Lonnie W., and Harry H. of Mobile, Alabama; eight grandchildren; one great-grandchild; a brother, W. D. Spradley of Pass Christian, Mississippi; and two sisters: Mrs. Riley Welch of Ocean Springs, Mississippi, and Mrs. Ann Roberts of Alexandria, Louisiana. Funeral services were held at the church in Vancleave, A. G. Miller, J. L. Barlo, and R. A. Vaughn officiating.

LYONS.—Kate, daughter of Ellis and Elizabeth Goff, was born in July, 1880, and died November 19, 1949. She was married to H. L. Lyons in 1900. Two daughters were born to them. Eula, the older, preceded her mother in death; the younger, Mrs. Roland Ware, lives in Vancleave, Mississippi. Also surviving are a sister, Mrs. Ruth Scott of Mobile, Alabama; one grandchild; and one great-grandchild. Mrs. Lyons had been a member of the Reorganized Church for over fifty years. Funeral services were held at the Mt. Pleasant Methodist Church in Vancleave. The Reverend G. A. Bradus gave the funeral sermon, assisted by A. G. Miller.

McMILLAN.—Malcom Andrew, son of Robert and Laura Mae McMillan, was born June 27, 1949, at Pascagoula, and died December 8, 1949. He is survived by his parents and one brother. Funeral services were conducted by A. G. Miller.

OLIVER.—Louisa Sophia, daughter of William and Jane Oliver, was born June 12, 1876, in Blanchard County, Perty, Ontario, and died June 22, 1949, in Toronto, Ontario. On July 1, 1889, she was baptized a member of the Reorganized Church. Until about thirty-five years ago she resided in St. Marys, Ontario. After that she made her home with her sister, Alice Clark, who preceded her in death last January.

She leaves no immediate survivors. Funeral services were conducted by Elder John F. Sheehy, pastor of Toronto Branch.

LENT.—Charles Wesley, son of Arculeus and Catherine Lent, was born July 22, 1868, near Hopeville, Iowa, and died November 21, 1949. He was married to Mary E. Brown, and one daughter was born to them. He had been a member of the Reorganized Church since 1893.

Surviving are his daughter, Mrs. Will Butterfield; four grandchildren; and nine great-grandchildren.

PRAY.—Gordon Paton, was born March 16, 1904, in London, Ontario, and died November 24, 1949, at the Methodist Hospital in Fort Wayne, Indiana. He had been a member of the Reorganized Church since December 2, 1916.

He is survived by his wife, Nona; a son, Donald; two daughters: Mary and Barbara, of Bay City, Michigan; his parents: Joseph and Laura Paton Gerardot of Ft. Wayne; and a brother, Jack A. Pray of Mobile, Alabama. Elder Luther Troyer officiated at the funeral service. Interment was in the I.O.O.F. Cemetery in New Haven, Indiana.

MAY.—Francis Marion, son of Marion and Melvina Hood May, was born February 28, 1870, in Boyd County, Kentucky, and died at the age of seventy-six at Portsmouth, Ohio (date of death not given). He was baptized into the Reorganized Church on January 29, 1907, and was ordained an elder the following August. He was an outstanding teacher and labored in several branches of Southern Ohio District. During his lifetime he baptized about two hundred persons into the church.

He is survived by his wife, Bertha May; a son, Joel of Dayton, Ohio; two daughters: Mrs. Julia Davis of Dayton and Mrs. Verna Donovan of Cleveland, Ohio; a sister, Mrs. Theresa Caffihan of Westwood, Kentucky; two brothers: Samuel of Greenup, Kentucky, and Reuben of Ashland, Kentucky; a half-brother, Theodore Hood, of Ashland; and four grandchildren. Funeral services were conducted by High Priest Floyd Rockwell at the Pleasant Valley Reorganized Church.

NEWS AND NOTES

(Continued from page 2.)

PRESIDENT SMITH

President Smith left Independence on December 9 to attend a district conference held in Mobile, Alabama, on December 10 and 11. He was the speaker at the banquet held Saturday evening, and spoke at the 11:00 service on Sunday. He spent December 12, 13, and 14 in the Gulf States District, conferring with District President W. J. Breshears. He returned to Independence on December 15.

ZION'S LEAGUE

Activity programs began in the Auditorium gymnasium on December 6. Ping-pong, shuffleboard, volleyball, handball, relays, and circle games were played. A special feature open to all Leaguers and their guests, is an art class taught by John Thoman. Wes Cottle, of the Recreation Commission, is in charge of the programs.

Carl Mesle, in charge of publicity for the Messiah Choir, reports that Leaguers from the City-wide Service Commission, assisted by several Scouts and Orioles, have given about 200 hours of volunteer work to help publicize "The Messiah."

INDEPENDENCE,
MISSOURI

Our best wishes for a very happy and prosperous
New Year

New...

better than ever before!

GUIDE LINES

TO LEADERSHIP

Under The First Presidency's direction, the magazine GUIDE LINES has just been expanded and revitalized! Now, in the forthcoming January-February issue, you'll find a GUIDE LINES packed with new and important materials for every earnest church worker. Whether your field is priesthood, music, religious education, or the women's department, you'll find lots of useful helps in this new, better-than-ever GUIDE LINES. Send for your subscription today! It costs just $1.50 a year.*

* $1.65, Canada — $1.85, Foreign.

IN THIS ISSUE

EDITORIAL:

The Open Door.....	3
Across the Desk.....	4

ARTICLES:

Christmas in Scandinavia, by E. Y. Hunker.....	5
Strengthening Family Ties, by V. L. Lum.....	6
John J. Cornish, Missionary, Selections from his autobiography.....	7
Question Time.....	8
Briefs.....	9
Blessed Are They That Do, by Lottie Clark Diggle.....	10
The Women Prepare, by Bertha A. Steck.....	11
Picked From the Periodicals, by Aarona Booker Kohlman.....	11
They Cry Unto the Lord, by Ramona Seeley.....	12
This Is Switzerland, by Biloine Whiting.....	13
Index.....	14
Bulletin Board.....	22

P.S.

* DONOR

You have read the story of the executive who spent most of his time in his office pounding his desk, yelling in the telephone, and bawling out the help. His doctor visited him one day and, observing the uproar, said, "You should quit this; you will get stomach ulcers."

But the man hollered back, "Ulcers! I don't get 'em. I give 'em!" . . . Well, that's what he thought. Anybody who gives other people ulcers will get them himself. Or they will get him!

I was waiting in the doctor's office with another man. I was up for a sore throat. He was up for sick nerves.

"It isn't my work that wears me out," he said. "I rather like it, although it involves a lot of responsibility. But what hurts me is the fact that I never know when the boss is going to start yelling at me about something."

There is enough pain and misery in life without our creating any extras. Cruelty and meanness, hard words, hard thoughts, and hard hearts increase the burden of living until sometimes it is almost unbearable.

That is why Jesus said, "Thou shalt love . . ." That is why John said, "Little children, love one another." It is only through love that life can be happy.

A church choir had two directors: one who smiled and was pleasant, and one who scowled and criticized. For whom, do you suppose, did the choir do its finest singing? You need only one guess!

IF YOU THINK you have been mistreated, you go to your pastor for help and consolation. But did you ever think how much criticism and mistreatment he has endured?

PEOPLE love to talk about their troubles. But they don't want to hear about yours. Two popular songs are, "Nobody knows the trouble I've seen," and "I need sympathy." If anybody ever wrote a song entitled, "Cry on my shoulder, darling," it wouldn't be popular.

ONE SISTER said, "I have always been a coward about pain. I thought I could pray my way out of it. I saw it come to other people, but I hoped it wouldn't come to me. Now God has given me this severe illness, and he is teaching me what pain is, and how to endure it. I hope I won't need more than one lesson."

* THE RADIANT YEARS

It is a pleasure to receive a letter from Brother E. W. Lloyd, a volunteer servant of the church, minister to the sick, visitor to the wandering, and encourager of the weak. We have been out with him on some of his many missions of mercy, and know something of the great good he has done. He says, "I have spent the most happy year, and will reach my eighty-fifth on January 16, if it is God's will. My heart is full of gratitude to Jesus for his great blessings. I have seen some marvelous healings. Through the kindness of a brother, I have been given hundreds of dollars for the needy. I have borne my testimony in many places that this work is true."

just off
the press

In the land of the feathered serpent

By PAUL M. HANSON

This is the new and long-awaited book by Apostle Paul M. Hanson, one of the church's foremost students of archaeology. It tells of his travels in "the land of the feathered serpent" . . . the Book of Mormon lands of Mexico. As such, it is an intensely interesting book, packed with historical facts every church member should know about. Beautifully illustrated, it is also a book which any nonmember would deeply appreciate as a gift. Order your copy of Brother Hanson's new book today . . . just fill in the form below and send to us in Independence.

herald house

independence, missouri

order form

Please send me copies of "In the land of the feathered serpent" at $3 each. I am enclosing with this order form $.....

Ship books postpaid to the address below.

Name

Address

City State