News and Notes

FROM HEADQUARTERS

PRESIDENT AT STONE CHURCH

President Israel A. Smith, Bishop G. L. DeLapp, and Elder Glaude A. Smith were the speakers at the New Year's Eve service at the Stone Church. Members of the First Presidency were all in Independence over the holidays.

JOINT COUNCIL TO MEET

Joint Council will be in session beginning January 6. All members of the Presidency, the Presiding Bishopric, and the Twelve with the exception of those abroad will meet.

GENE THEYS PREACHES

Seventy Gene Theys preached at Lawrence, Kansas, on December 14 for the morning service and preached at Stewartville, Missouri, that evening. He was the speaker at Spring Branch and Liberty Street congregations in Independence on December 21. Brother Theys is the missionary co-ordinator for the Center Stake.

"THE MESSIAH" WELL RECEIVED

The fourteenth network presentation of "The Messiah" was given December 21 at the TV Playhouse of KMBC in Kansas City, Missouri. Over 1,500 persons attended. A snowstorm which began at the time of the broadcast kept many from attending. The performance was received with a great deal of interest and enthusiasm. Soloists were Josephine Crinklaw Mader, soprano; Marcella Uhl Robnett, contralto; Maurice Nord, bass; and Garland Tickemyer, tenor. Reports are being received by the General Church radio and music department from the radio stations which carried the broadcast.

DRAMA FESTIVAL HELD

The Stake-wide Zion's League sponsored the annual drama festival December 1, 2, 4, and 5, in the Stone Church Annex. An average of three hundred people viewed the plays each evening. On the closing night, the results were announced. The plays were judged on a point basis, with credit given for preparation, acting, costuming, and group production. Four excellent ratings were given to the following Leagues: Walnut Park, "The Answered Call," directed by Tyra Phillips; Spring Branch, Senior, "This Life I Choose," directed by Dorothy Ferguson; Stone Church, Senior, "The Patched Coat," directed by Bernice Wehrli; and Mt. Washington, "Rumors Wanted," directed by Enid Wanbaugh.

SPEAKS TO PASTORS

Elder Charles D. Neff, assistant to the First Presidency, spoke at Second Church in Independence December 14 for the morning service, and that afternoon spoke to the pastors of the Central Missouri Stake at Warrensburg, concerning the new radio broadcast, "Hear Ye Him," which begins in early January. He concluded his series at Englewood that evening.

ARRIVES FROM ENGLAND

Sister May Oakman arrived in Independence from England on December 16. She is a fully qualified Royal Nurse and has a degree in midwifery. She has been engaged as a supervisor in the West London Hospital in England, and has decided to come to the United States in order to work eventually in the Independence Sanitarium. Many of the "Herald" readers will remember her correspondence with President Frederick M. Smith which was published in the "Herald" during the war.

We'd Like You to Know . . .

Mrs. Iola Hicks Kaestner

MRS. IOLA KAESTNER joined the Graceland College staff in the fall of 1946 as instructor of art, foods, and nutrition in the home economics department.

Born at Buckhart, Missouri, on February 1, 1903, she attended a rural school for eight years, was graduated from Lamoni High School in 1920, and Graceland College in 1922. During the summers of 1936 and 1937 she took courses in education at the University of Iowa and in 1938 began attending summer sessions at Iowa State College, Ames, Iowa, completing her work in six sessions with a B.S. degree in home economics in 1943. After four summer sessions at the University of Wisconsin she received an M.S. degree in home economics.

Teaching is Iola's profession, and her interests in the work have advanced along with the growing interests of her children. She taught one year in a Missouri rural school and one year in the Lamoni grade school. From 1938 to 1943 she taught in the Lamoni junior high school, and from 1943 to 1946 she was instructor of home economics in the Oskaloosa High School. She has been on the Graceland staff for six years.

She has two children: Mrs. Joyce Christensen, who is majoring in applied art in the home economics curriculum at Iowa State College, Ames, Iowa; and Ward H. Kaestner who is employed by the Ford Motor Company in Kansas City, Missouri. Stephen Richard Christensen is her only grandchild.

As a hobby, Mrs. Kaestner is interested in crafts, for she enjoys creating things.

She joined the Reorganized Church at the age of twelve. She looks upon her teaching at the college as the major part of her work for the church.

Let's Make a New Resolution

BEFORE we take up our resolution, let's review some of the circumstances that surround it.

The commodities of life are rarely in balance. There is always a shortage of benefits and an abundance of troubles and problems. At least one would think so if he listens to our complaints. Human beings have always had to struggle to match their many shortages, real and imaginary, with their few abundances. People have a weakness, for example, of tossing out impressions that they have plenty of money and a shortage of time, no matter how contrary the facts may be.

We range between the extremes of life with laughter and tears. Circumstances sometimes require us to suppress a smile to keep it from getting out of control; and again, they may send us off by ourselves to lick our wounds.

AND NOW, if we may, we would like to discuss one of the world's most serious shortages.

This item costs so little that there should be an abundance of it for everybody. But so few people are willing to pay the little price, or take the little thought and trouble it requires, that millions of people are unhappy for want of it.

It is a peculiar thing in one respect. You cannot get it for yourself, but you can give it to others. You can get it only if someone else gives it to you. And the interesting fact is that if you give it away generously, you will suffer no want, for others will gladly give back to you as much as you have given to them.

This thing cannot be bought. It is not an article of commerce. You may get it from a merchant, but he doesn't sell it; and nobody has ever been able to make a price tag stick on it, though that has often been tried. It is one of the free things a merchant can give away without cutting into his profits, and probably the best piece of advertising and public relations he could possibly employ.

The customer has it, too. Like the merchant, he can't sell it. But he can give it if he wishes, and make the merchant or the clerk happier for the occasion, even if no real business can be done.

Still, we haven't told you what the shortage is. Are you in a state of mild suspense?

FIRST, there is a surplus of sorrow and trouble in the world. Everywhere, you find people overburdened with work, worried by problems they cannot solve, sick with handicaps and illnesses they cannot overcome.

Second, you would think that this would make life hard enough, but something more is usually added. As if we do not have trouble and suffering enough, we pile something else on the burdens we must bear: cruelty and unkindness. We criticize. We nag. We gossip. We snap at each other. We say hateful things that we may or may not mean. We make life harder for others. They make life harder for us. It is all so stupid. It means one thing: unkindness.

THAT BRINGS US at last to the shortage. The world suffers from a shortage of kindness.

A kind word, a friendly thought, a helpful act will do much to help others. Whatever it is, it must be sincere to be effective. It must come from the heart. It cannot be simulated successfully. Imitations are easily detected, and they serve no good purpose.

A bit of kindness can make the difference between war and peace in the church. The church has lost members, friends, and even faithful servants through unkindness. Branches have been broken up not by any great serious differences of interest so much as by mere rudeness and unkindness. Kindness is a cement that can hold a branch together. It is a balm that can heal wounded hearts. It can make a setting in which the good Spirit will be at home to bless all concerned.

A bit of kindness in the home can make all the difference between hell and heaven. If we let our love show, it will show to the best advantage in words and deeds of kindness. Kindness can give happiness between mother and father, parents and children, among relatives and friends.

A bit of kindness in an office can produce peace and harmony, a situation in which work can be done efficiently and happily. Kindness can make the difference between the keeping of employees contentedly at work and having an excessive turnover of help, with all the cost and waste of training new assistants only to lose them again after a while.

You don't have to be a genius to be kind. You don't even have to be very intelligent, though you will need a little common sense. You don't need money to be kind. You don't even have to be beautiful or handsome. You could be color-blind, awkward, homely, poor, and uneducated, and still have one of the kindest hearts in the world. The requirements are easy to meet. But if you are kind, you share the very heart of love of the great God of Love himself.

WILL YOU JOIN US and include this among your resolutions? "RESOLVED: This coming year to be kinder to everybody—my family, my friends, my fellow-workers, the clerk in the store, the worker at the filling station, the postman, the trash collector, and even the pedlar who comes to my door. I may not be able to buy, but I will give a kind word to cheer every pilgrim on his way through life." How about it?

And be ye kind one to another, tenderhearted, forgiving one another even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you.—Ephesians 4: 32.

Across the Desk

THE FIRST PRESIDENCY

Elder Franklyn S. Weddle, director of music, writes:

Recently it has come to my attention that Paul Deaver, a young pianist of the church, played a benefit recital at Phoenix, Arizona, for the new church organ fund. His program included numbers by Scarlatti, Beethoven, Chopin, and Rachmaninoff. The Arizona Republic, a newspaper of Phoenix, carried Mr. Deaver's picture and a notice of the recital on December 12. The next day a very complimentary review of the recital appeared in which it was asserted, "Mr. Deaver made a hit with his small but appreciative audience." The review went on to close with these words: "We have seen artists with much less talent play to audiences of a thousand, and we believe Deaver deserves more listeners than he received last night. He proved himself a credit to a music-hungry community." We might add, knowing Mr. Deaver, that he proved himself a credit to the church as well, and I am sure the Saints in Phoenix appreciated his help in providing funds for a new church organ.

From Herbert C. Lively, Pastor of Walnut Park congregation, Independence:

I have been working with the Walnut Park congregation and in the Center Stake for over two months. As we become better acquainted with the people and the work here, Mrs. Lively and I are increasingly aware of the privilege which is ours to have been sent here. Naturally we miss our Kansas City friends, but our lives are made fuller by the additional friendships which this change makes possible.

Recently, we enjoyed an activity at Walnut Park which may be of interest to you. Such an activity was carried on last year, and we felt it very worthy of continuance this year. The congregation was host to the elderly people. All members and friends over sixty-five and their companions were invited to a turkey dinner given free of charge by the department of women and to a program following put on by young people of the branch. Group elders furnished transportation to persons having difficulty getting around. About eighty were served. We particularly noticed an attitude of relaxed friendliness among all, guests and workers alike. One elderly sister testified to me that this was her first trip to church in ten years in spite of the fact that she lives but a short distance from the church. Another, nearly blind, said that it was her first chance to come in two years. Everyone here feels that it was a very worth-while project.

From Deam H. Ferris at the University of Wisconsin:

As you may recall I am on leave from Graceland working on my Ph.D. here. Although we have a very heavy schedule (my wife Merle is working full time for the first time in our married life to help "Pop" through) we are both enjoying our association with the Saints in the local branch. Merle is the youth director and just two weeks ago supervised a regional Zion's League rally.

I told the pastor I wanted a job that wouldn't take much time since I had a pretty stiff graduate program; so I was elected director of music! We have had a grand time organizing a choir for the first time in a number of years. Rehearsals are held after prayer service each Wednesday night, and as you can note from the attached clipping, we climaxed our service with a Christmas vesper.

The choir is planning a missionary effort based on the Easter cantata. We feel this will be an excellent opportunity to invite friends and to tell our own distinctive message. The male quartet should be a drawing card, and we have some good soloists. Although my time is limited, I have had fine co-operation and I am sure we can "get the job done."

As you probably know, Myron Curry and his wife are here also. Sister Curry leads the junior choir and recently produced an excellent vesper service. Myron is working on his degree in radio and is a top-notch church school director.

George Nathaniel Briggs Dies

Another great minister and educator of the Reorganization has died. From his home in West Des Moines, Iowa, he passed on to his reward Friday morning, December 26, at the age of 78. He was buried in Rose Hill Cemetery after a funeral service in the Lamoni church Sunday afternoon, December 28. Six church officials from Independence attended: President F. Henry Edwards, Bishops G. L. DeLapp, N. Ray Carmichael, and A. Neal Deaver and Dr. F. M. McDowell, and Dr. A. R. Gilbert.

The funeral sermon was by Dr. Roy A. Cheville. Stake President Robert Farnham assisted. An extended biography and tribute will appear in a later issue of the Herald.

Miss Copeland Honored

The Presidency and Presiding Bishopric, who constitute a majority of the trustees of the Independence Sanitarium and Hospital, gave expression in another part of the Herald of their appreciation of the excellent services of Miss Gertrude Copeland during her thirty-year tenure as superintendent of that growing institution. Since then the board at a late session unanimously enacted the following resolution:

WHEREAS, Miss Gertrude E. Copeland's services as Superintendent of this Hospital terminate January 3, 1953, and

WHEREAS, Her tenure has continued through many long years, and she has successfully managed our affairs through very crucial periods, with a devotion rarely found in any who are not exclusively serving their own interests, now therefore, be it and it is hereby

Resolved, that we extend to Miss Copeland our sincere admiration, respect and gratitude for what she has accomplished for our institution, for a service indeed valuable beyond estimation, and our sincere wishes that she may live long to enjoy a release from that stern responsibility to which for so many years she has been faithful and true; and

That a copy of these resolutions be suitably engrossed for delivery to her, to be signed by each member of this board; and

That as a further mark of our appreciation and regard, we give to Miss Copeland a watch of a quality in keeping with her loyalty to the best traditions of her profession and the office she has so ably magnified since January 3, 1923.

At a later session the following was adopted:

In further consideration of our appreciation of the services rendered by Miss Gertrude E. Copeland, we hereby bestow upon her the title, Superintendent Emeritus of the Independence Sanitarium and Hospital.

"Ye Are My Stewards"

By Chris B. Hartshorn

A sermon given at South Chrysler church January 27, 1952
From a wire recording by Floy Patience

And one of the company said unto him, Master, speak to my brother, that he divide the inheritance with me. And he said unto him, Man, who made me a judge, or a divider over you? And he said unto them, Take heed, and beware of covetousness; for a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth.

And he spake a parable unto them, saying, The ground of a certain rich man brought forth plentifully; and he thought within himself, saying, What shall I do, because I have no room where to bestow my fruits? And he said, This will I do; I will pull down my barns and build greater; and there will I bestow all my fruits, and my goods.

And I will say to my soul, Soul, thou hast much goods laid up for many years; take thine ease, eat, drink, and be merry.

But God said unto him, Thou fool! This night thy soul shall be required of thee; then whose shall those things be which thou hast provided?

So shall it be with him who layeth up treasure for himself, and is not rich toward God.—Luke 12: 15-23.

I'M TAKING THE TEXT this morning not from our Scripture lesson, but from Doctrine and Covenants 101: 13. I'm just going to read two phrases of it: "All . . . things are mine, and ye are my stewards." This last is a significant thought or text for the sermon: "Ye are my stewards." Now this sounds quite orthodox. I doubt that any worshipers in any denomination upon hearing this would feel that something was coming that they wouldn't want to listen to, for somehow or other the Christian feels that he is closely linked with Almighty God, that God is the owner and the maker of all things, and that such goods as have come into his possession somehow are related to the benefits and blessings of Almighty God. Yet while this sounds orthodox, it is quite revolutionary in its implications. It is basic. Whether or not we consider ourselves stewards and God the owner of material possessions is a matter for each one of us to decide and then act accordingly. But I think there's good evidence for saying that it is a basic truth in the Christian religion.

I'D LIKE to divide the subject into five different principles which will serve as steps to develop this theme, "Ye are my stewards."

1. As I've already intimated, God is creator and owner.
2. Man is God's steward.
3. Man's control is temporary.
4. God and the government allow freedom in agency to choose these resources.

5. Since all these other principles are true, there's an obligation and time of accounting. We take January to decide on this because it is the beginning of the year; no time is better.

I like the statement of one philosopher who said that man distinguishes himself from all other animals by his social consciousness. As we think of this we perhaps will discern that a consciousness of kind, a feeling for other people, is the mark of a Christian person. When we say that a man is a Christian gentleman we mean he's kind and considerate of other people. Animals are not that way. There are some instincts which preserve them and their young, but they do not have a social consciousness—herd instinct, yes, but not social consciousness. To the extent that a man lacks this social consciousness, he's not a man. One thing Christianity is trying to do is to lift us above the animal level of eating and grabbing, and draw us to a level where we will love God and our neighbors. The first and second commandments therefore are based upon this principle of social consciousness.

We have said that God is the owner. This is not just a figure of speech. For scriptural support we have only to refer to the first verse in the first chapter of the first book of the Bible. "In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth" and all that in them is. Then in both the Old and New Testaments we find a statement that is similar to this: "The earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof." All wealth goes back to the earth and to the labor of men who make the earth produce. There is no other source of wealth. When we say we own a house or a farm, we're saying that we can trace the title we hold to the land on which the house is built—we don't buy the house, we buy the land beneath and around it. We can trace the title from one successive owner to another back to the government. In all ways we point back to the fact that God is the owner, and we acknowledge him as such.

The revolutionary aspect of this idea is that we don't act as though

He owned anything. We act as though we have made everything and we have a complete right to dispose of it as we please. This is not right, and I'm not just being philosophical, nor is my contention on this point merely theoretical. I can show where it is practical as well. Walt Whitman once said that he liked animals because "they have no mania for owning things." All they need is something to eat, and when this is supplied they are pretty happy. Selfishness in the human race always has been and always will be the door through which iniquity enters the soul. By selfishness I mean the desire to get, to keep, to possess. This is not altogether bad. The Lord wants us to have of the abundance of the earth; he's made it for us to enjoy. But selfishness goes beyond this to hoard more than we need, to have something better than other people, and to disregard the interests of those around us in getting it.

Man has a stewardship. I want to reinforce this statement by a brief reading from what is known as the constitutional law of the church:

And it shall come to pass that after they [deeds or contracts] are laid before the bishop of my church, and after that he has received these testimonies concerning the consecration of the properties of my church, that they can not be taken from the church, agreeable to my commandments; every man shall be made accountable unto me, a steward over his own property, or that which he has received by consecration, inasmuch as is sufficient for himself and family.—Doctrine and Covenants 42: 9.

An important word here is the adjective "own." We do not wait until the church or the government or anyone else gives us something and says, "Here, manage this." That's not necessary. We are to be stewards over our own property.

While waiting in a railway station a few years ago, I bought the December 27, 1943, issue of Life Magazine, and became interested in the editorial, "Can Christians Meet the Challenge of the Modern World?" I want to read a portion of it because it fits in neatly with what I'm trying to say this morning.

On the whole there seems to be emerging a more coherent doctrine, occupying a central position between the old fundamentalists on the one hand and the modernists on the other. Yet this doctrine is no compromise. It is very decidedly a reassertion of Christianity in modern terms. Prominent in this reassertion is the idea of the community—a Christian community existing as the nucleus or heart of the world community, organically related to it and inspiring in it a higher spiritual realization. This new theology has veered away from extreme emphasis on individualism into which Protestantism developed toward the acceptance of social values and social obligations which are basically and characteristically Christian. The accent has shifted from the problem of saving the individual soul to the problem of establishing upon the earth a real brotherhood of man.

This is pretty good Reorganized Latter Day Saint theology. We talk a great deal about the brotherhood of man, but we also are trying to do something about it. Our interest in the Restoration Movement has been kept alive by the fact that we felt we were moving toward this principle of recognizing community life as important, as being central, a laboratory in which we could develop spiritual values for the whole world. That's what the editorial says we're veering toward—a compromise between the old fundamentalists on the one side and the extreme modernists on the other. Emphasis is placed upon the Christian community as a stable force for spiritualizing the work and the industry and the life of mankind.

Now I am not overlooking the value of having money. I don't have enough of it; yet I think there is such a thing as having too much for one's own good. We do have to deal with property, and a just distribution of it is very, very important. But while it is good to have money and the things it can buy, let's be sure that while getting it we don't lose the things money cannot buy—contentment of heart, the right attitude toward our fellow-men, and the happiness which is the goal of Christian living.

MAN HAS ONLY TEMPORAL CONTROL. In connection with this I quote from Paul's writing to Timothy:

But godliness with contentment is great gain. For we brought nothing into this world, and it is certain we can carry nothing out. And having food and raiment, let us be therewith content. But they that will be rich fall into temptation and a snare, and into many foolish and hurtful lusts, which drown men in destruction and perdition. For the love of money is the root of all evil; which while some coveted after, they have erred from the faith, and pierced themselves through with many sorrows.—I Timothy 6: 6-10.

I thought when I first read this passage that it was a peculiar way to express the thought, "but they that will be rich," in the simple future tense. I've concluded that what Paul was trying to emphasize here was not the subjunctive mood, but the declarative mood: those who determine to be rich will be rich; that's their goal. And what happens to them? They fall into temptation and a snare, with many foolish and hurtful lusts. Once again I say there's nothing wrong with having money if we realize that it's not the all-important thing. The gospel of Jesus Christ has helped us to see that we should take a sound attitude toward our possessions; they are just things of passing concern and have value only to the extent that we use them to bring to us happiness.

The man I read about in the Scripture lesson must have thought he had arrived someplace—he had good crops and all was well with him. But what was he going to do with all this fruit and grain? Then he got an idea. "I'll pull down these little barns and build big ones so I can store all this grain," he said. "Then I won't have to work any more. I'll just say to my soul, 'You've arrived. You've enough to last a lifetime. Take your ease. See how you can spend it and enjoy it.'" But God said he hadn't reckoned with one thing—the shortness of life. None of us know how long we have to live. It isn't just old age that gets us. We have here no continuing abode, but we look for one whose builder and maker is God, where we shall continue eternally to enjoy the blessings of association with loved ones and a happiness greater than any we've known in our temporary abode here.

THE FOURTH STEP is permissive use. Our ownership is not absolute; it's limited. Here is the economic definition of ownership: "The exclusive right to use, to possess, to dispose of, and to enjoy some property or goods." Ownership is not absolute. For instance, one of our congregations is going to lose its church building pretty soon. A number of folks in Independence are going to lose their homes. Why? Because as has long been recognized, the interests of the majority are superior to the interests of an individual; and society—in this case we call it the government—says that we need to straighten out the road that goes through our city. We say that's all right, but what happens if we don't want to sell? Well, it's just too bad for us. We sell anyway, because of the right of eminent domain. We have a permissive use of this property as long as our interests are not superseded by the interests of the larger group.

I think it was Emerson who said, "Things are in the saddle, and ride mankind." Back in the day when a great deal of transportation was by horseback, the man in the saddle had a position of prominence, control, ownership; but as Emerson said, somehow or other we are controlled by things. Our whole life is made up in relationship to the amount of property we possess and how much goods and how many people we control.

I remember reading in the Independence Examiner a couple years ago of three boys who were arrested for robbing Harry Goode's filling station one Sunday evening. They were brought before Judge Gilbert Titus and given thirty days in jail for breaking the law. This isn't so significant, but what attracted my attention was the sign on the panel truck which they were driving at the time they took the gasoline. "Jesus Saves" was painted on it.

Evidently they had the notion, in keeping with the old saying, "God helps those who help themselves."

We are permitted to use things when we use them right, but we must respect other people's rights to do the same thing or we get into trouble.

Now we come to our last step in the analysis which declares, "Ye are my stewards."

I know that a great many people have said in times past, and are now saying, that they do not have to account to anyone for what they have earned and possess. They are against the idea of stewardship accounting. We've broken down our rebellion a little bit on that since the income tax has been cutting in so heavily and we are compelled to make an accounting of all our earnings. We've found there is somebody who has the power to say we must make an accounting.

The church has never said, "You have to make an accounting." But if we believe in the revolutionary idea that God is the creator and the maker of all and that we are only his stewards, then it follows that we are not good stewards if we refuse to account to him.

Some may protest, "God isn't here. How are we going to account to him?" God has said that a bishop should be appointed and that we should bring the testimonies of our stewardship to him. If we are convinced against our will, we may say, "Well, it's just too much trouble. I would like to do it if I could find a way of doing it, but somehow or other I get all mixed up." If we have this attitude we can't do it, but such is not the Christian way.

Paul said in his writings to the saints in Philippi: "I can do all things through Christ who strengtheneth me." If we want to do it, we can. The church has made it increasingly easy for us to keep an account. I started back in the days, as perhaps many of you did, when all we had was the equivalent of an inventory sheet. I made my inventory, but what about the next year and the "tenth of all the interest annually"? From there on I was in the dark. The church didn't seem to have a very clear idea of how we could pay one tenth of our interest as God had asked of us (Doctrine and Covenants 106: 1). That which we had left after we had provided for our families for basic necessities, food, shelter, and clothing, was to be tithed. Along in 1921 or '22, the Lord brought about a change in this condition, for a blank was made which helped us to tell how we as stewards had progressed during the year—what our increase really was on which we were to pay the tenth—by giving us the Annual Tithing Statement. That statement was practically the same as the one we are using today.

Unless we have certain data it is hard to make out a statement. To help, the church has provided the Family Income and Budget Record, which makes it comparatively simple. We still have to work. I know of no promise in the Scriptures that we give our hand to the minister and our heart to Jesus and that's all we have to do to be saved. Jesus said, "Take up your cross and follow me." These helps make the way easier for us.

SUPPOSE WE HAVEN'T BEEN KEEPING an account this year, and we don't know what our increase is. We're going to have a little trouble with our income tax statement if that's the case, but what about the Lord? We're concerned this morning with his attitude. I think God will accept an offering if we can honestly say to him, "I'm doing the very best I can. I've lost some of this data, but to the best of my knowledge this is where I stand with you." Then we should try harder next year to know just how good a steward we have been.

Also my servants who are abroad in the earth should send forth the accounts of their stewardships to the land of Zion, for the land of Zion shall be a seat and a place to receive and do all these things.—Doctrine and Covenants 69: 2.

That instruction fixed Independence and the Presiding Bishop as the place and person to whom these testimonies, these accountings, are to be made.

In the seventy-second section we find this statement:

The elders of the church in this part of my vineyard shall render an account of their stewardship unto the bishop which shall be appointed of me, in this part of my vineyard. These things shall be had on record, to be handed over unto the bishop in Zion.—Doctrine and Covenants 72: 1e, f.

Some may say, "I don't think I want to give my accounting to the local representatives of the district or stake bishop." That is something for each one of us to determine. The record doesn't say that we have to give it to a representative. We can send it direct to the Presiding Bishop if we want to, or we can give it to the district or stake bishop.

But we can't take the attitude that it's all ours, that we don't have to account to anybody, because that is not in harmony with the law of God and it won't give us a happy feeling in our hearts.

I could give some illustrations, if time permitted, of how God has blessed men who tried as best they could to be good stewards—blessed them with happy homes, with healthy children, with good jobs, with the respect of their neighbors. But such things are not always a sign that people have done all they are expected to do. God spoke about sending the rain and the sunshine upon the just and the unjust. We should not try to keep the law just so he will open the windows of heaven and pour out greater blessings upon us. Such is selfishness. We ought to be happy in the privilege of acknowledging our stewardship because of the good we can do our fellowmen. That's one of the highest blessings. That's the social consciousness which raises us above the animal level. In all my years of trying to observe the law of stewardship, I have been blessed. I am happy to recommend it to everyone from childhood on through life.

When General MacArthur entered Tokyo in 1945 word came to him that some of the Americans had visited the great Christian leader Kagawa and found him in a deplorable state of health. In fact he had almost starved to death. General MacArthur immediately sent word to Kagawa that he wanted him to have all the rations he needed, and the great Christian sent this word back to the General: "Thank you for your kindness, but I can't accept more rations than are allowed the rest of my people." MacArthur protested, "You don't have the strength. We need your help. This is a critical hour in the life of your nation, and your Christian leadership will mean much to the program we're trying to start here in Japan." Kagawa said, "That's very true. I do not have the strength. But I have the fire and want to be treated just as my brethren are treated."

Today may we carry this message, for we are God's stewards. Though everything may not be the way we want it, though we may not see clearly every step, if the fire is in us—the love of God, the desire to do what we know we ought to do—we'll go forward feeling in the long run that we'll see clearly God's hand leading us, and blessing us, and keeping us.

What the superior man seeks is in himself; what the ordinary man seeks is in others.

The superior man thinks of virtue; the ordinary man thinks of comfort.

If the will be set on virtue, there will be no practice of wickedness.

Death and life have their determined appointments; riches and honor depend on heaven.

The Lord's Tenth

I, the Lord, stretched out the heavens, and builded the earth as a very handy work; and all things therein are mine.—Doctrine and Covenants 101: 2d.

THERE IS A CLOSE RELATIONSHIP between God and man under the law of tithing. There was a time when the subject of tithes and finances was of little concern to religion. In ancient days, when men worshiped God in the forests, and the overhanging boughs of great trees formed the vaulted arches under which they gathered to lift their hearts toward heaven, there was no thought of a budget, tithing, or finances. When farmers brought stones from their fields and made them into altars on which gifts of their first fruits were offered, there was no need to ask others to help. It was a personal outpouring of gratitude to God.

And he gave unto them commandments, that they should worship the Lord their God; and should offer the firstlings of their flocks for an offering unto the Lord. And Adam was obedient unto the commandments of the Lord. And after many days, an angel of the Lord appeared unto Adam, saying, Why dost thou offer sacrifices unto the Lord? And Adam said unto him, I know not, save the Lord commanded me.—Genesis 4: 5, 6, I.V.

The Lord commanded Cain and Abel, the sons of Adam and Eve, to give of their first fruits unto the Lord. The word "tithe" means a tenth. From most ancient times God asked his people to pay him a tenth of their increase. It was nearly three thousand nine hundred years ago that Abraham paid tithes to Melchizedek.

And he lifted up his voice, and he blessed Abram, being the high priest, and the keeper of the storehouse of God; him whom God had appointed to receive tithes for the poor. Wherefore, Abram paid unto him tithes of all that he had, of all the riches which he possessed, which God had given him more than that which he had need.—Genesis 14: 37-39.

Thus, after deducting his needs, Abraham paid a tithe on the increase. Moses formulated a law of sacrifice which had been handed down from father to son for many generations. We find that the law of tithing was included as an obligation of God's people.

And all the tithe of the land, whether of the seed of the land, or of the fruit of the tree, is the Lord's; it is holy unto the Lord. . . . And concerning the tithe of the herd, or of the flock, even of whatsoever passeth under the rod, the tenth shall be holy unto the Lord.—Leviticus 27: 30-32.

WHILE COMMENDATION follows obedience, divine condemnation follows those who fail to pay tithes. This was the warning to ancient Israel and to those who failed to pay their tithes.

Ye are cursed with a curse; for ye have robbed me, even this whole nation. Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it.—Malachi 3: 9, 10.

Verily it is a day of sacrifice, and a day for the tithing of my people; for he that is tithed shall not be burned (at his coming).—Doctrine and Covenants 64: 5a.

Explicit direction has been given to the Reorganized Latter Day Saint Church. In response to a request as to how much of one's properties the Lord requires for tithing, the following was given:

Verily, thus saith the Lord, I require all their surplus property . . . and this shall be the beginning of the tithing of my people; and after that, those who have thus been tithed, shall pay one tenth of all their interest annually.—Doctrine and Covenants 106: 1.

Under the law the Israelites were required to give one tenth of the produce of the earth and herds to God. One tenth of Israel's increase went to the Levites, who did not till the soil and were dependent on their brethren for means of subsistence.

And the Lord spake unto Aaron, Thou shalt have no inheritance in their land, neither shalt thou have any part among them; I am thy part. . . . And, behold, I have given the children of Levi all the tenth in Israel for an inheritance, for their service which they serve, even the service of the tabernacle of the congregation.—Numbers 18: 20, 21.

GOD'S PLAN for supporting his ministry was by means of tithing. The tithes, the seed of the land and fruit of the trees, were given to God to be used in his service. Tithing seems to be an important part of the financial law. If men are so situated that they can do more, the law of love and the law of God both require that they do so. Jesus expected the entire life of his disciples to be dedicated to God.

And, behold, one came and said, Good Master, what good thing shall I do, that I may have eternal life? And he said unto him, Why callest thou me good? There is none good but one, that is, God; but if thou wilt enter into life, keep the commandments. He saith unto him, Which? Jesus said, Thou shalt not kill, Thou shalt not commit adultery, Thou shalt not steal, Thou shalt not bear false witness. Honor thy father and thy mother. And, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. The young man saith unto him, All these things have I kept from my youth up; what lack I yet? Jesus said unto him, If thou wilt be perfect go sell that thou hast, and give to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven, and come follow me.—Matthew 19: 16-21.

Jesus was not content that the young man should pay only tithes, but that he should give his all. The apostle Paul was a money raiser of distinction, asking nothing for himself because he made his living by a trade. He was not only a great preacher and pastor, but he devoted much of his time to raising money and perfecting organizations to secure offerings for the new church in Jerusalem. It was Paul who charged the elders of the church of Ephesus to remember the words of the Lord Jesus when he said, "It is more blessed to give than to receive." And it is to this experience and teaching that the Christian church owes much of its conception of tithing.

In 778 Charlemagne commanded tithes to be collected within all the portions of the old Roman Empire over which he ruled. This was to support the Christian church. The tithes were allotted to four different uses: (1) maintenance of the edifice of the church, (2) support of the bishop, (3) support of clergy, and (4) support of the poor. Ecclesiastical tithes—tithes that pertain to the church and its organization or government—were always more or less oppressive in their operation, being unevenly imposed, but after their introduction into Great Britain they were systematized. They were first enjoyed in England in 786 and 794. Offa, King of Mercia, gave the church all the tithes of his kingdom, and this law was made general for all England by Ethelwulf.

EARLY CHRISTIANS went far beyond the tithe. Under the Mosaic dispensation obedience to the Law of Moses was largely a matter of duty, while under the gospel dispensation obedience to this law is a matter of joyous co-operation.

And the multitude of them that believed were of one heart and of one soul; neither said any of them that ought of the things which he possessed was his own; but they had all things common.—Acts 4: 32, I.V.

Apostle John makes liberality a test of genuineness of Christian love.

But whosoever hath this world's goods and seeth his brother have need, and shutteth up his bowels of compassion from him, how dwelleth the love of God in him?—I John 3: 17.

James also saw brotherly love as a fruit of faith.

If a brother or sister be naked, and destitute, and one of you say, Depart in peace, be warmed and filled; notwithstanding he give them not those things which are needful to the body; what profit is your faith unto such? Even so faith, if it have not works is dead, being alone.—James 2: 16, 17, I.V.

The great challenge of Christianity is "In all thy ways acknowledge Him." It is no wonder that many have felt the Christian faith to be folly. So many Christians follow afar off, professing belief but being laggard in translating convictions into character. Jesus and the apostles taught the gospel in its purity and simplicity. However, it was not long until many departed from the true doctrine of the Lord Jesus Christ. The adoption of Christianity as a state form of worship brought material prosperity. The wealth and prominence and power thus gained were not used to build the kingdom.

THE FINANCIAL LAW is designed to guide people into the use of temporal resources, both for spiritual good of others and themselves. It is their incalculable loss when they do as the world does and see the temporal uses as the real ends to be gained, or when they neglect the temporal uses or dissipate them. Complete acceptance of the financial law clarifies the purpose of living and strengthens morally and spiritually the lives of men. Accounting for possessions and talents gives depths of joy in able home management, church fellowship, and partnership with God. It makes religion real to people, because tithepayers have a tangible investment in the work in which they believe—in God's work and business. There is no evading the responsibility of the tithe. God is the supreme owner of life and all material things, and it is impossible to think straight and not trace this ownership to him.

A steward is thought of as one who oversees or looks after property, lands, money or tithes that belong to someone else. To be a steward in the church of Jesus Christ one must be responsible to someone, but the question is: To whom is the steward responsible? Much of the teaching and preaching tends to make some believe they are responsible to the bishops. This is not entirely correct. If men could truly believe that God created the heavens and the earth and all things in them, and recognize his ownership in all things, many problems would be solved. When they accept the fact that everything comes from God, and for the most part was here long before humanity, selfishness will be overcome. Men need to have their hearts as well as their heads converted to the idea that God is in reality the owner while they are only stewards.

THERE ARE PEOPLE who proudly proclaim that one who does not pay his tithing is a poor steward. Perhaps this is true, but the inference that the paying of tithing makes one a good steward cannot be supported wholeheartedly. The paying of tithing, important as it is, is only one of the many things required of a steward. The importance of tithing should never be minimized, but it should be understood that the tithe is only one of the many privileges God has granted his people. Growth must be made in the knowledge of the tithe until the day comes when there is no thought of the tithe being paid to the bishop, but that the portion of God's creation he has asked for is returned to him. The tithe is given trustingly to men holding the office of bishop or those representing the office of bishop. God has called them to represent him in this field of work, but the tithe and service rendered is returned to God and his son Jesus Christ. It should be returned to them because in the hearts of men there is a love that can best be expressed in kingdom-building. The tithe should be returned to its rightful owner, because with God's people is the hope that has been in the hearts of righteous men and women down through the ages. They are seeking a city whose founder and framer is God.

Hubert Case

A Missionary of the Church

The Life of Hubert Case

By Alice Montague Case

Alice Case

A Mind That Sought the Lord

HUBERT CASE, the third son of James M. and Dorinda (Martin) Case, was born at Mondamin, Iowa, June 5, 1870. His father's parents were brought into the church by Oliver Cowdery in 1831. They were among the first of the church people to settle in Jackson County, afterward sharing the troubles and difficulties of the Saints in Clay and Caldwell Counties, and finally at Nauvoo. After the exodus from Nauvoo they moved to Keokuk, Iowa. Not satisfied, they went farther west and lived by the Des Moines River near the site of the present capital of the state.

It was not long until they went to Council Bluffs. They remained there for some time and finally journeyed northward about fifty miles, homesteading near where the town of Onawa, Iowa, now stands.

The father, James M., enlisted in the Civil War and served throughout with a regiment of the Fourth Iowa Cavalry. After the war he married Dorinda Martin of West Virginia, and they made their home on a farm near the village of Mondamin. It was there that they heard the gospel. It must not have been new to Hubert's father, though he had paid little heed to it. But to Hubert's mother it was entirely new. At the close of the series of meetings, the parents, two brothers, and one sister were baptized. Hubert wished greatly to be baptized also, but was considered too young, although he was then nine years old.

Not long after their baptism Hubert's parents moved to a farm about six miles from the village of Moorhead, Iowa. They seldom attended church services, but the children of the neighborhood were from homes of church people. Hence it was that when a group of boys planned to ride on horseback to attend a day of the Western Reunion, Hubert and his brothers planned to go also.

They started very early and arrived in time for the first service of the day, a prayer meeting, which was spiritual and interesting. This was followed by a sermon which seemed to be preached all for him. He decided then that he would be baptized. So the following Sunday Elder J. M. Putney baptized him and his brother Oscar at Moorhead.

The Cases were farm people and always busy. But as Hubert drove his team in the field, or went about other tasks, he was constantly meditating and praying; often fasting, too, asking the Lord for light and guidance. It was not long until he was chosen superintendent of the Sunday school at Moorhead, and he went into that work with all the zeal he had.

Ordination

IN THE LATTER PART of the 1800's the gospel work, which had been preached in the western part of Iowa for many years, seemed to take on new life. Some of the old members became more diligent, and many of the younger ones began for the first time to feel they had a duty to perform. The branch at Moorhead, Iowa, is the one which I am particularly designating, because my family, the Montagues, had belonged to it since its organization, and I since my ninth year, when I was baptized. Probably none of our crowd of young people could have given very intelligent answers to an inquirer, but somehow we became awakened, and began to study and really enjoy our church, our Sunday school, and a little later, Religio.

A new church had just been built and that aroused our enthusiasm still more. We tried to build up an efficient choir and were fortunate in having a good leader. Hubert and Oscar Case had been baptized a short time before that, and they gladly did their bit in choir work, or any other work they were called upon to do. Hubert was soon ordained a priest and found much to do in that office.

A Prophecy

At the reunion held in Logan, Iowa, in 1894, during a prayer meeting attended by hundreds of people, an old man arose from his seat directly behind Hubert and Oscar. He spoke with the gift of tongues and, laying his hands on the heads of Hubert and Oscar, and later on the heads of two other young men who sat beside them, he prophesied that they should all preach the gospel and should be sent to far places.

The tongue was immediately interpreted, and it was not long until the three others of the group were ordained. At the quarterly conference held in Magnolia, Iowa, in March, 1894, Hubert was ordained an elder. There had been much talk all that spring and summer about the gospel boat, "Evanelia." We worked in every way possible to raise money to help build the vessel, without the smallest idea on our parts that we should be passengers on it.

When the call was made for volunteers for the South Sea Islands Mission, Hubert and Oscar were among the first to send their names. As a priest Hubert had worked hard among the scattered members of the branch, many of whom were roused by his visits to a new diligence and began to attend church much more regularly.

We, Alice and Grace Montague, were schoolteachers. We seldom were far enough away so that we could not attend church. My sister was usually the organist, but if for any reason she could not be, I was her substitute. She had married about two years before, but still attended church whenever possible.

When it became known that two missionaries were expected to go on the boat, and it also became known who those missionaries were to be, the interest became keener than ever. Our branch learned that Hubert and Oscar had been chosen out of a number who volunteered. The congregation felt honored, and when it was announced that President Joseph Smith was coming and would speak in our church on September 30, interest ran high.

Marriage

Hubert came over to my sister's to see me one night in September. We talked a great deal about the boat, the natives, et cetera, and then finally he got around to the question he had been trying to arrive at all evening, "Would you go?" I answered honestly, "Yes, I would." So after Brother Joseph preached his sermon on Sunday, September 30, 1894, he came down from the platform, stood before the choir, and we two rose and were married.

Everybody was much surprised, although we had dated quite frequently in months past. My mother was inclined to think it was a matter of convenience on his part, but my father said, "This is as it ought to be." Of that I was sure.

Preparation for the Trip

During the week we learned that Oscar could not go after all. His wife and her people feared the sea; they could not bear to let her go. So, much to our regret, we started alone the next Sunday by going as far as Blencoe where Hubert's sister, Mrs. Emma Hogue, lived. We stayed there all night. In the morning, Emma brought me a set of silver knives, forks, and spoons. I had to carry them in my grip all the way to the coast, but of course I was very glad to have them.

We left early Monday morning for Council Bluffs and there changed trains for the West with no stop until we reached Ogden, Utah. Here we were met by Brother H. O. Smith who was pastor in Salt Lake City. He showed us the outstanding sights of the city and we continued on to the coast.

As the boat was not yet ready, we took a train for Gilroy to see some old friends, the J. M. Putneys, who lived near there and had long been members of our branch. Brother Putney had been branch president. After a nice visit there we returned to San Francisco and the gospel boat. How tiny she looked with those great steamers almost alongside! Their landing boats were almost equal to her in size. While they were waiting for last things to be done, we went up into the city and bought a little melodeon. I wanted a folding organ but didn't have enough money. The melodeon folded also, and it stayed that way until we were ashore again, because I was too seasick to try to play it.

Before we left the wharf, Brother Burton took on another man, William McGrath, in place of Oscar. He was a printer by trade. When he offered to go without wages, he was told to come back with references. In two days time he came back and was duly installed as a sailor. Hubert, too, was to be a sailor, though he hardly knew how to row a skiff. But both men learned—and soon.

To Papeete

We started on October 19, 1894, towed down the bay and out into the Pacific. It was not so quiet as the name indicated. Everybody got along fine and was able to enjoy it but me. I had to go to bed. We met a storm, and before we had traveled far, had to turn back to San Francisco Harbor. Sometime during that storm, Captain Burton called, "All hands on deck to shorten sail!" During the endeavor to shorten sail, someone kicked the binnacle lamp and broke the glass around it. There was nothing to do now but put back toward the bay. Captain Burton never left the wheel until we were in the bay. How he got there with no light to see his compass, only God knows. But when I came to my senses from sleep and seasickness, we were at anchor in Sausalito Bay.

We were delayed here nearly a week for repairs. We—the Burtons and ourselves—were invited to Brother and Sister Root's house on Sunday. Afterward Sister Burton and I took some washing up there and did it.

We left Sausalito on October 25. I wanted very much to see the beautiful sight of the sea breaking on the bar but got so sick I had to go below. It was like that for me all the way across. We had our regular meetings—prayer meetings on Wednesday night, preaching at 11:00 Sunday morning, and at 7:30 Sunday evening. Will McGrath attended every one but took no part. He was baptized, however, as soon as we reached Papeete on November 30.

Four Decades of General Church Ministry

A tribute to the late Elder John F. Sheehy

By D. O. Chesworth

RECENTLY there appeared in the pages of the Herald an announcement of the passing of Elder John F. Sheehy. With his passing the church loses another servant with a record of over forty years of general ministry and one who has served from coast to coast with his major activity in the state of Missouri. John was a personable representative and a friend of multitudes who, I am sure, mourn his passing.

I was baptized by this elder in Massachusetts in 1921 before he received his first appointment to the Middle West. He had already served in the state of Maine and was looking forward to missionary work in Massachusetts which was shortly interrupted by his transfer to Cameron, Missouri. I often thought of Brother Sheehy as an uncle in the faith, and when the time came for me to work under his supervision in Kansas City Stake in 1938, there were many occasions when we walked and talked together.

He was not only a man with a sense of humor, who could be expected to clown at almost a minute's notice, but he was a good sport—and a good preacher. Many times we say, in tribute, "He was a good minister." I have often said, in referring to him, "He is a good preacher."

Invariably when green grass was within reach one might find him looking for four-leaf clovers. On other occasions one might be surprised to observe his unpredictable greeting of a stranger. As was said of Will Rogers, this man never knew a stranger.

MEN SPEND YEARS in universities attempting to secure the understanding of human nature which seemed to be natural with John Sheehy. From his first appointment in the pastoral field at Little Compton, Rhode Island, to his major assignment as pastor of the Stone Church congregation, he won souls for the Galilean and his cause. As a youth he became interested in the "business of saving souls," as is often stated by his early associate minister, Elder Newman Wilson of Jonesport, Maine.

On several occasions I heard him tell of his desire to become a musical director in his work as a missionary. He went to a teacher of music in Fall River, Massachusetts, and was told to come back on a specific night with some music. Brother Sheehy brought a Zion's Praises with him, and when the music teacher told him to select a favorite number, he stated that they all sounded the same to him. After a trial the instructor knew that he was correct. It was therefore no surprise when the teacher asked, "Why do you wish to sing?" and received a surprising answer. "I want to sing because it is essential in the work to which I want to dedicate my life. There is nothing more in all the world that I want to do than to be a missionary in my church. It isn't a large church, but it is purposeful, and I want to spend my life in it." The instructor saw a different individual standing there and agreed to take young John Sheehy on a particular night after the paid students had finished their study. He received his lessons for only a token charge.

This minister did what he wanted to do. He spent over four decades ministering to children, young people, and adults. I have been deeply stirred by his preaching as thousands of others have been. In this tribute there is no claim presented for his perfection. The Great Judge will reward him justly as each of us will someday be rewarded.

John Sheehy truly was a friend. His preaching stirred my soul, causing me to want to live nearer to the Almighty. With his passing goes the last of three ministers who one day placed their hands upon my head to bestow the gift of the Holy Spirit and to confirm me as a member of the church. First to depart was I. E. Rogerson, then James W. Heap, and now John F. Sheehy, who has left burning in my breast that never-dying statement, "I want to be a missionary in my church more than I want to do anything else in life."

"They Presented Him Gifts"

"Bring your gifts of gold and frankincense and myrrh, and worship the newborn King" was sung with great enthusiasm during our recent Christmas activities. Jesus is no longer the new-born baby we love to read and talk about. He is now our leader! He has the plan that will bring peace to this war-torn world. Just as the angels sang, "On earth peace, good will to men" (Luke 2: 14), Jesus is waiting for us to help bring about this peace. We each can have a part in this great plan of bringing about peace on earth. There is a vital need for wise men today to accomplish this act of peace—wise men who are in tune with Him.

At the beginning of this new year we each can do as the Wise Men and "present unto him gifts." We each have three very special gifts we need to give Him—our time, talents, and money. At the beginning of this new year, we would make Christ happy if we would rid ourselves of every nonkingdom-building activity to which we are giving our time, talents, and money, and give these gifts to him instead. We would be happier too. We would be in a better position to hear his instructions and to help bring about this peace on earth which we so desire.

Miss Copeland Retires

Tributes to a True Steward

FROM THE FIRST PRESIDENCY AND PRESIDING BISHOPRIC

Miss Gertrude Copeland, R.N., retired as administrator of the Independence Sanitarium and Hospital January 1, 1953, bringing to a close thirty years of distinguished ministry in this important church institution. Throughout these years Miss Copeland has given her time and trained ability without reservation. It is a great pleasure to express our thanks for her outstanding services and to wish her every success in her further activities.

Miss Copeland has had a splendid record of service, both before and during her Sanitarium ministry. She was graduated from the Hahnemann Medical College and Hospital School of Nursing in May, 1916, and subsequently was in charge of a 130-bed hospital of that institution. In August, 1917, she became an army nurse in Base Hospital No. 48 and saw service in France, returning to the United States in April, 1919. From 1919 to 1921 she was in charge of the Wyoming Valley Homeopathic Hospital at Wilkes-Barre, Pennsylvania, and was also superintendent of the School of Nursing. From 1921 to 1923 she was superintendent of the Medical and Surgical Hospital of Reading, Pennsylvania.

While Miss Copeland was at Reading, the late President Frederick M. Smith urged her to come to Independence, Missouri, to become administrator of the Independence Sanitarium and Hospital. She agreed to, and assumed this responsibility on January 3, 1923. Under her guidance the Sanitarium has grown and expanded, both in its hospital facilities and in its School of Nursing, until today it is recognized as stated by an administrator in the field of health service recently as "one of the finest institutions in the Middle West."

Miss Copeland has always conserved the resources of the institution. At times she has carried forward the work most ably when no financial help was available. We are happy to congratulate her upon her achievements and to express our appreciation for this outstanding example of true stewardship. Her resignation, effective January 1, 1953, is accepted as given by one who has well earned a period of retirement and relief from responsibilities of an institution that is still growing. We wish for her many more good years of happiness and, knowing her as we do, we are sure that she will find many things to engage her in a continuous though perhaps less strenuous life of activity.

FROM THE MAYOR

Miss Copeland is truly a great lady who has humbly served her Maker through the science of medicine, and whose life is built into this great hospital institution of our city. She is as much a part of Independence as the maple leaves.

FROM THE CHURCH PHYSICIAN

It was a yearning for the fruition of a Zion vision, provoking Joseph Smith to petition the Almighty for light, that preceded the revelation calling us to build the Sanitarium. This was to be a "place of refuge for the sick and afflicted." It was because of the fires of devotion burning within these pioneers of the Sanitarium movement that the construction of the initial structure was begun. Joseph Smith, the prophet; Joseph Luff, apostle and physician; and Bishop E. L. Kelley were the triad that brought this "place of refuge" to its opening day in December, 1909.

Then followed days and years of change and adaptation to the altering needs of the church for this kind of an institution. Other spirits came, too, to mold and shape the infant organization as it set about to determine the best way to fulfill its mission. President F. M. Smith, Dr. W. E. Messenger, Dr. G. L. Harrington, Jennie Weed (Haan), its first superintendent of nurses, Mary Wise (Moats), and Laura Mann (Bate-man) were among the foremost in this period of establishing the work,

How Great Is Thy Calling

By Mrs. G. Leslie DeLapp

AS WE ATTEMPT to think through and to make clear the stewardship responsibility of women, we cannot do so without considering first the commission to the church. That commission is twofold: to preach the gospel in all the world to every kindred, tongue, and people, and to establish the kingdom of God here among men. The responsibility for fulfilling the commandment to do this great work rests with each individual who has taken upon himself the name of Christ by being baptized and confirmed a member of his church. So when we really face the magnitude of the task, we cannot do so without introspection, and in that introspection we are likely to find ourselves wanting.

Sometimes in our zeal and out of a sincere desire to make progress we feel a great impatience that we cannot move faster. And there are some who would even sacrifice beyond the point of good judgment. We know that Zion is to be built by a people willing to sacrifice, so we do not in any way mean to minimize that need. But many, many years ago the good man Samuel said, "Behold, to obey is better than sacrifice" (I Samuel 15: 22). I think, as a church, we are growing in an understanding of our responsibility as individuals, but the records show that only about 13 per cent of our membership has grown enough to acknowledge stewardship responsibility by the filing of the financial statement.

Stewardship is a way of life. It is a way of self-discipline, and it is the way we have been commanded by the Lord to proceed to do his work here among men. As an individual member my responsibility as a steward is like that of every other member of the church. Most of the things that we usually think of as ours are in reality only loaned to us. Life itself can come only from God, and our minds that grow to govern what we will do with our lives come from him.

FIRST OF ALL I am concerned about my trusteeship over myself, for I am a steward whether I have become aware of it or have acknowledged it before God or not. To be a good steward I must be converted to his way of life. I must seek to enlarge my mind, my will, not only that I may develop the talents with which I have been blessed, but also that I may use those talents to serve others. In order to do this I must study, carefully and prayerfully, "all good books," and I must use every opportunity to learn as much as I am able of instruction that the church and community has to offer.

In that study I must seek to care wisely for my body, because good health is the basis for sound mental and spiritual development. I must learn to make good use of time, because each hour used unwisely hinders my development. That does not mean that I must work always, for rest and recreation are fully as important as work and study. I must not be too discouraged as I measure myself beside the ideals and goals that I have set, because I am told that one does not lose the power to learn as he grows older, and I can begin again and seek to do better. The speed with which I learn may not be as rapid as I approach middle life, but I still have the power to do so.

Always to be a good steward I must possess a humble spirit and a willingness to learn so that my life through its moral soundness and integrity shall witness to my belief in Christ. Wherever may be my area of service I must have and continue to develop a genuine love for people so that that love will be expressed by an interest in those about me.

BUT LET US NOT stop here. We come into the world with nothing but our physical body and a mind to control it. Every physical possession that we call ours has been given us by others. As we grew and our abilities and talents increased we began to use money and to manage our possessions. We became stewards over these, too. So important is the wise management of money that we are told in Doctrine and Covenants 64: 5, "Verily it is a day of sacrifice, and a day for the tithing of my people; for he that is tithed shall not be burned (at his coming)." This statement does not mean that the paying of the tithe is some sort of insurance against being burned. It is a profound statement because we cannot properly be tithed without a wise and careful accounting, and a careful accounting year after year develops habits of thrift, honesty, and personal integrity that build the kind of character that can assist in building the kingdom. The filing of the financial statement then is truly an act of consecration and an acknowledgment of our willingness to accept God's way of life.

What, then, makes a woman's stewardship any different than man's? There is no difference except in the area of service. There are few jobs or professions in which we are not allowed to work if we choose. But, regardless of what other work we do, most of us want to be homemakers, and when we marry we increase our stewardship responsibilities. Homes need to be built by the husband and wife together; and the acquiring of a place to live and making it attractive requires the time and creative planning of both. The determining of the dominant purpose of that home will be decided, or should be, by the two of them thinking and working together. But it takes more than a house and its furnishings and more than the setting of a goal to build a Zion home and a successful, happy marriage. It takes working together intelligently, lovingly, and unceasingly with understanding and devotion to each other and above all to God and to the way of life he has pointed out to build such a home.

A WOMAN'S STEWARDSHIP increases with marriage because she has added responsibilities as a wife. It would be very difficult, if not impossible, for a man to declare—as did the good man of old—"As for me and my house, we will serve the Lord," unless he has the active support of a good wife. The picture given us in Proverbs of a virtuous woman is as sure a guide for us today as it was in Solomon's time even though the circumstances surrounding our lives differ greatly.

"The heart of her husband doth safely trust in her . . . she will do him good and not evil all the days of her life."

She must be trustworthy in all things. She can be depended upon to share confidences without fear of their being repeated. She can be depended upon to know and share her husband's desires and hopes and to give encouragement and help in attaining them. She can be depended upon not to seek to build herself up by exposing his personality shortcomings in public. Certainly she can be depended upon to be true to her marriage covenant in every way, for she will use all her talents and strength to keep her home and herself attractive and serene so that her husband can get the rest and wholesome spiritual encouragement necessary for him to do his work and serve to his greatest capacity. She stands by his side in facing all the problems that arise, ready and willing to make whatever adjustments they decide together must be made. She continually, by herself and with him, seeks divine guidance in meeting whatever problem may arise.

She seeketh wool, and flax, and worketh willingly with her hands.

She is like the merchants' ships; she bringeth her food from afar.

She riseth also while it is yet night, and giveth meat to her household, and a portion to her maidens.

She considereth a field, and buyeth it; with the fruit of her hands she planteth a vineyard.

She girdeth her loins with strength, and strengtheneth her arms.

She perceiveth that her merchandise is good; her candle goeth not out by night.

She layeth her hands to the spindle, and her hands hold the distaff.—Proverbs 31: 13-19.

THE NEXT SEVERAL VERSES have to do with the performing of household tasks, and if we read them and consider their meaning, we feel that they have their counterpart in living today. We know that if a woman "looketh well to the ways of her household, and eateth not the bread of idleness" today she will need to be a good manager. Even with our modern helps to housekeeping we are busy indeed if we are to meet the needs of our household economically and smoothly and find time for worthwhile work necessary to building the right kind of neighborhoods and communities so important to our homes.

The wise purchasing and proper preparation of food we must learn through study and through experience. If we can sew we can save nearly half the amount otherwise necessary for the clothes budget for ourselves and our families. And surely the proper care of clothing is so important both to the life of garments and to the way they affect our appearance that we can't overlook this part of our stewardship. Always the wife should uphold her husband and let nothing interfere with the running of her household that will prevent his being able to give his best to his work, and to his ministry if he is a minister.

"She stretcheth out her hand to the poor; yea, she reacheth forth her hands to the needy." There are always those about us who need our help. Sometimes it is the need of telling us their troubles and so to think them through. Sometimes it is actual need of food and clothing. Whatever the need, we must try to be the kind of neighbors and friends who will be ready to help meet it. Always there are those that we may not ever meet personally who need our help. Each month as we give to the oblation fund we are helping these. Day after day the church is able to help in rehabilitating families and individuals by means of this oblation fund, and we are as surely ministering in that way as when we do it personally. Then there are the Community Chest funds, the Red Cross, and other worth-while organizations through which we can assist others.

Upon the wife depends a great responsibility for keeping as accurate as possible the records of income and expense in the household so that an accurate accounting can be made, and that wise planning for the future can be done by the husband and wife together. If it seems wise and necessary for the wife to work outside the home, the cost should be considered very carefully. By that I mean the cost to all members of the family in additional responsibility in keeping the home running smoothly and of having time for each other and time and energy to do things together. Circumstances and an understanding between husband and wife must determine situations that make this necessary. There are so many worth-while things to be done and to be learned that if it is not necessary, it seems to me to be unwise for homemakers to work. Certainly if there are children at home it is important that the mother be there if it is humanly possible.

WITH THE COMING of children into the home the stewardship responsibility of both parents is enlarged still more. Children are the greatest joy and the greatest responsibility that can come to a home. Taking care of little children from before birth to maturity means much more than providing all the physical needs making for growth, health, and happiness for each member of the family. This, however, is of tremendous importance because from physical fatigue and undernourished babies can come all sorts of maladjustment and problems. Good nutrition for each member of the family plays a large part in the attainment of physical, emotional, and mental development. And the busy mother must learn about calories and vitamins and nutritional requirements for her family. She needs to know the requirements of sleep for each child in the family and make provision for that in the planning of household activities. The importance of sufficient deep rebuilding sleep cannot be stressed too much if each member of the family is to grow and to attain the maximum of efficiency. Nor can she afford to neglect the need for wholesome relaxation and recreation for each one. She should plan a time for play for little ones, for teen-agers, and for adults.

TEACHING CHILDREN is clearly the responsibility of the parents (Doctrine and Covenants 68: 4). Teaching them the doctrine of repentance, to pray, and to walk uprightly before the Lord requires that parents know something about child nature and the principles of good, effective teaching. First of all it is important for us to remember that a child begins to learn as soon as he is born. He very quickly finds that crying brings someone who ministers to his needs and comforts him. Because that someone is usually mother, she becomes the center of his universe. Very soon his preception is enlarged to include father, but because mother is with him through more of the time that he is awake she has a unique opportunity during the first five years of helping him to gain a real awareness of God as the Father and Creator of all. The little child learns through his five senses, and the busy mother must make use of every opportunity to help him learn the right things. He learns through imitation of those about him, and he is not too discriminating about that which he imitates. So the power of a mother's example each hour of the day cannot be overemphasized. She should seek to set the kind of example that is worthy of imitation.

Children learn to do by doing, so we must give them opportunity to have a share in family worship, to take part in family councils and the solving of problems together. We must give them responsibility for some of the work of the home, and for using and accounting for an allowance if we want them to learn to assume stewardship responsibility. Meeting these needs takes wisdom, knowledge, patience, and devotion, but it is the most important work and the highest calling in the world. "Her children arise up and call her blessed, and her husband also." This surely would be the greatest reward any woman would want.

If we keep always in mind that the real purpose of stewardship is sane development, and then consider the importance of our work as women of the church in making and keeping homes that will build lives to assist in the accomplishment of our goals as a church, we realize that ours is indeed a great opportunity for service.

SINCE IT'S THAT TIME AGAIN, I am thinking about my new-year resolutions. In January's past my imaginative list has started off with such statements as "I resolve this year to learn to like chicken and noodles," or "I resolve this year to start reading the Book of Mormon again," or "I resolve this year to stop putting—" Well, the train of thought is obvious, no matter what was going to happen, I was going to be the one who did it all, I was going to be the one who did all the stopping and starting. This coming year, however, in the light of my experiences of the last few months, my list will be centered around an infinitely more important personage—God.

"Constant striving" has always been my motto, but I guess I have missed the boat by quite a margin in not letting God take his rightful place in my plans. Although the task of drawing oneself upwards by one's own bootstraps is obviously strenuous I feel I have tried to do this very thing many, many times, whether because of selfishness on my part or underestimation of the ever-present powers of God I do not know. At other times I have allowed God to move in my life in his way. When I was saving up to come to Graceland from Australia I did all I could, then let God take over and have his will done. During that time in my life the assurance that God was helping me could not have been stronger. Yet somehow, even with experiences like this in my past, I cannot help feeling that I still haven't given him full place in my planning. The oversized "I" in my resolutions is being eliminated and replaced with "Les Gardner, this year allow yourself to be directed by God and prepare a life that he will be able to and will want to direct."

In 1953 the theme, "Here am I, Lord, let me tell you how to use me," is being changed to "Here am I, Lord, use me as thou wilt and when and where." The sense of importance of being a tool in God's hands to further some great work will have to evolve from the hubbub of everyday life. In the thrill of building the kingdom (and nothing could be more thrilling) the personal preparedness so necessary in making yourself "a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God" sometimes gets lost in the whirl of doing the things one thinks just have to be done.

THE REALIZATION that I was a part of this work of kingdom-building has certainly accelerated since the day last June when I set off to exercise my new stewardship in life as a church appointee. I say accelerated because to say it was nonexistent in my life before would be to belittle the efforts of those fine men and women who have taught me from my youth that I did have a definite part to play in this work. But now the realization comes clearer and closer each day. Now more than ever before I find myself a part of things and persons, no longer essentially governed by my own desires and wants and needs. I am a part of the body of Christ, working effectively only when I am in harmony with other parts of the body. I see my role more clearly and I thrill at its meaning.

It's an awful thing to think that we, as mortals, have dictated to God at some time in our lives. I feel I did once. When I was in high school I had the singular notion that if I put in an appearance at church once on Sunday, my obligations for the week were complete and no one could reprimand me for not supporting the church. It was I planning my life; there was no place in it for God. It was I deciding what to do with no help from God needed. Then someone asked me to League one night. I had been invited before, but this time a force seemed to say to me, "Don't resist these leadings any longer, yield yourself to My will." I yielded as best I knew how and then, having my time "taken over" by the work I entered, I actually found my life. It should have been no surprise, for I had always known the Scriptures to say, "Who-soever will lose his life for my sake the same shall save it." I gave an ordinary life and found in return the makings of a life abundant. This was probably the best trade-in I ever have or ever shall make.

I'M GOING TO REMEMBER this coming year that, while allowing God to work through me, I must not leave all the work to him. My missionary work has shown me that this is as unsuccessful as trying to do it all myself. When I leave it to either one of the two of us—God or myself—I find I am comparatively empty of conviction when I try to relate "the story" to others. When I do my best to prepare and seek God's help time after time, a power helps me to relate my testimony in the best manner of which I am capable. Recently I had the opportunity to baptize a very fine man. The first time I met him I was tired and felt that this was just another visit. Then the realization came to me that no visit is "just another visit." I made sure before the next time I saw him that I had made the meeting a matter of serious prayer and had sought God's help. The very moment I saw him next such a wave of concern for him swept over me that I could not doubt that God was interested and was sending his help to me. The fine spirit in our subsequent meetings together reached a climax as he made his decision to join the church. The thrill of hearing this decision, together with the assurance that God was there helping too, made me more than humble as I thought of the many times during my life when I had tried to work without him—of the many times I had tried to be the one in sole charge of my life.

New Horizons

I KNOW THERE IS DANGER in surrendering ourselves to those with lesser ideals than our own or to things which tend to restrain us from continuing our search for the better life, but no danger exists as far as I see in surrendering our lives to a more uplifting power or person. This kind of surrender spells gratification. Nothing is greater than the kingdom of God, so yielding to it becomes a challenge rather than a submission. It looks as if "yield" will be my word of the year for 1953. Resolutions I will have certainly. Dedication of self to His purposes will continue, but from now on God will be given the lead in my life, as I try to allow him to work through me to achieve his purposes, as I try to yield myself to his will and work and equip myself in body and spirit to be in a position of usefulness to him.

With a fresh new year ahead, an honest determination to do his will, and a God on whom I know I can rely for help, surely nothing can prevent the ever-increasing convictions from growing in my life and expressing themselves in the plea, "Here am I, Lord, use me."

Graceland

■ Graceland College gave its annual presentation of Handel's Messiah on December 14 at 8:00 p.m. Josephine Mader from Kansas City, Kansas, sang the soprano solos; Shirley Kuhn from Tama Indian Reservation, Iowa, the contralto solos; Henry Anderson from Lamoni, the tenor solos; and Hardin Van Deursen of Kansas City University, the bass solos. The chorus consisted of college students, college staff members, Lamoni townspeople, and some out-of-town singers. The college orchestra, directed by William Graves, provided the instrumental accompaniment.

■ The official opening of the Christmas season on the Graceland Campus took place Sunday, December 7, at 6:30 p.m. in the Student Center at the sing-vesper service. Santa Claus arrived with a big bagful of candy, and Miss Doris Conklin turned on the Christmas tree lights. All did their share in decorating the huge tree. Howard Sheehy led the singing with Miss Velma Ruch, Dave Freeman, Jan Faunce, Rene Haushare, and the double sextet participating also.

■ Recently Dr. Frank Rosenthal of Drake University challenged the students with the provoking question, "What are we going to do about Asia?" He explained that it is a long way across the continent of Asia from Israel to Korea, but Russia, disappointed by Israel's escaping her "people's democracy" policy, has turned toward Korea. He was extremely interesting and was well received by the audience.

■ A new link was formed Saturday morning, December 5, between Graceland and the church in Australia when six Australians on the campus, Jo Parkes, Beryl Judd, Bob Wood, Ralph Ferrett, Hudson Grundy, and Barry Fuller, recorded Christmas greetings to be sent to the mission and used at the reunions which begin shortly. Along with the Australians, several other Gracelanders and faculty members, representing a cross section of Graceland life, sent their greetings. It is hoped this activity will strengthen the ties that are already strong between Graceland and the church in Australia, and will also be an influence to bring more young people from that country to the campus.

■ Members of the freshman class presented a Christmas program in an all-school function. They did "The Night Before Christmas" and "The Littlest Angel" and sang many of the old familiar carols. It was truly an evening of entertainment as the frosh exhibited their talents and skills.

■ The students had a chance to see a hilarious presentation as their instructors gave the traditional faculty Christmas assembly. Complete with the classroom scene and standard instrumental offerings, the faculty gave readings, solos, and poems. Although the same routine is presented year after year, new students and old alike invariably laugh to see their instructors in such ridiculous circumstances.

■ The Graceland Yellowjackets have come through so far this season with six wins, three of which were by one point. Recently they beat Olathe 75-74 and Burlington 58-57. To date they have been undefeated and, with the Graceland hardwood quintet doing a top-notch job, it should be a grand season.

Question Time

Question:

1. Why were the plates of the Book of Mormon not made available later for even a believer who might be a language scholar to corroborate the prophet's translation and provide an added vindication of his words?

New York

C. D. Q.

Answer:

A transcript of characters made from the plates by Joseph Smith was taken by Martin Harris to Professor Anthon of New York City in February, 1828. Mr. Anthon certified to their genuineness, according to Martin Harris, and offered to help with the translation. On being told that part of the plates was sealed and that Joseph Smith had been forbidden to let them out of his hands except commanded, Mr. Anthon replied, "I cannot read a sealed book." This was a literal fulfillment of Isaiah 29: 11.

This transcript is still preserved, and has been seen by thousands. It has been reproduced many times in publications. There was no demotic dictionary at that time from which Joseph could have copied, yet photostatic copies reveal that of 236 characters altogether on that paper, and about 135 different ones, there are 97 real similarities found in the demotic dictionary. Thus the Lord did not need to make the plates available later for further corroboration.

Furthermore, the plates were to be shown only to those who would assist in bringing forth the work, three of whom, besides the translator, would be shown the plates "by the power of God" and would hear his declaration from heaven concerning them. This would constitute a testimony to be had by none other in "this generation." (See II Nephi 11: 133-135, Esther 2: 1-4, and D. and C. 5: 3.)

These prophecies were all literally fulfilled in harmony with the divine principle. "I have told you before it come to pass, that when it is come to pass ye might believe."—John 14: 29.

2. Why all the secrecy?

Presuming the question means why were the plates not shown to others besides the twelve men who handled and examined them, this in part has been dealt with in answering the previous question. Also we have the following:

In the mouth of two or three witnesses every word may be established.—Matt. 18: 16. If they hear not Moses and the prophets, neither will they be persuaded, though one rose from the dead.—Luke 16: 31.

Him God raised up the third day, and showed him openly; not to all the people, but unto witnesses chosen before of God, even to us, who did eat and drink with him after he rose from the dead.—Acts 10: 40, 41.

Moses only was called into God's presence to receive the tablets of the Ten Commandments. Only Peter, James, and John were taken to the Mount of Transfiguration to hear God's voice from heaven and to see Moses and Elias talking with Jesus. They were commanded not to tell it to any until Jesus should be risen from the dead. Why all the secrecy? Jesus at one time said:

I thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, because thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes. Even so, Father; for so it seemed good in thy sight.—Matt. 11: 25, 26.

What with the many evidences of archaeology, Bible prophecy, nineteenth century prophecy, the testimony of witnesses, the internal evidences of the book itself, and the promised witness of the Holy Spirit, no one need be in doubt for lack of corroborative evidence of the divine authenticity of the Book of Mormon.

HAROLD I. VELT

Question:

How does New Jerusalem's being eventually in Missouri correspond with its dimensions of 12,000 furlongs (1,500 miles) given in Revelation 21: 16 for length, width, and height? Doesn't it show it is not a literal city that high, but figurative?

New York

C. D. Q.

Answer:

We must not confuse the New Jerusalem to be built in Missouri with the one suggested for Jerusalem of the Old World. Both will apparently be literal cities. The statement to the effect that it is to come down from God is perplexing to some.

To those who believe that the creation was a matter of six days of twenty-four hours each, and that it was just that simple, it may also be easy to believe that the city to "come" to old Jerusalem will thus appear, having been set upon its foundations with the sewage, lights, and all other utilities connected and working. To those of us who find it easier to believe in the creation as a long process in harmony with the way that God is working now in his creative processes, it will be easier to believe that this process of "coming down from God" may include also a long process such as the one through which the church has been passing this past century. Bit by bit the plans and vision of this New Jerusalem are coming down from God. Eventually it will be completed; Reorganized Latter Day Saint philosophy is very positive on this point. It will be a literal city which we build here.

The matter of the dimensions seems to be somewhat in the same class as the statement of the New Testament writers when they, in speaking of Jesus' baptizing, said, "All Jerusalem and Judea came unto him and were baptized in Jordan." Now we are quite certain that this was an exaggerated statement intended, no doubt, to suggest that a lot of people did come to Jesus to be baptized.

Common sense suggests also that when a city is described as 1,500 miles high there is probably an exaggeration intended to suggest its relationship to God and the fact that it was important and far reaching. I find no actual dimensions suggested for the city which this people (our church) must eventually build. The Book of Mormon, page 664, suggests that it will be large enough to accommodate all who qualify. It might be very large or quite small, depending on the quality of evangelistic work which we accomplish. The figurative suggestions—and I believe that this is all that is figurative—as far as dimensions are concerned undoubtedly apply to the New Jerusalem of the Old World and not to the one to be built in America.

in recognizing the best course ahead, and in blotting out such mistakes that, because of its very youth, came most naturally.

In 1923 Gertrude Copeland, a devoted Saint from the Philadelphia congregation, a graduate nurse from Hahnemann Hospital in Philadelphia, a veteran nurse of World War I, and at that time superintendent of the Wilkes-Barre, Pennsylvania, Hospital, was invited by the Board of Trustees to come west and administer the thirteen-year-old Sanitarium and become, moreover, chief of its nursing staff.

She and her mother left their eastern home and together began a tenure of service which now adds up to almost a third of a century. Mother Copeland, literally beside her daughter through these years, has given unstintingly of her own life, her patience, and her labors to build to maturity the Sanitarium and to aid her daughter to perfect a large corps of well-trained, able young women as graduate professional nurses.

By 1923 ten classes of nurses including fifty girls had finished their courses in the new Sanitarium. Now, after thirty more years, the classes number forty and the graduates total four hundred forty-three. In 1923 the Sanitarium was listed as fifty-bed capacity and the average daily patient listing numbered some 33; today the bed capacity is noted as two hundred, and the daily average listing comes up to some 133 persons. The original building has become the nurses' home and houses, too, the school of nursing, replete with an organization of able, devoted, well-trained instructors, supervisors, and administration staff, with excellent laboratories, classrooms, and a fine library. The Sanitarium and Hospital is now housed in an adjacent building, seven stories above the basement, modern and well equipped, with various laboratories, X-ray facilities, medical and surgical diagnostic and therapeutic departments, along with obstetrical, orthopedic, pediatric, and physical therapeutic sections. These actually adorn rather than merely find location in the new structure.

The prim, cold white-walled rooms of 1923 with chilly white beds have grown young in 1953 with warm yellows and rose hues, interesting blues and greens. Furniture is no longer stuffily formal and regimented into identical design; today it is invitingly tasteful and demonstratively individualistic. Exotic screen coverings and dainty, or sometimes striking, bedspreads brighten up and bring into realization that an artistic touch is behind the creation of the inviting units of the hospital. So the institution has changed in these thirty years to a larger one, but it still retains—even increasingly—the loveliness and personality it was originally meant to radiate.

Miss Copeland, though busy with all these objective accomplishments, meantime has built about her a nursing corps that reveals the fundamental mission of the Sanitarium to its guests. No mere structure of brick, mortar, steel, and wood—regardless of how beautiful or how formally efficient—could carry out the mission of a refuge where those cared for might be removed from the unfavorable “influences and environments” referred to in the 1906 revelation.

It was necessary that the living personnel, the nurses themselves, show by their lives and by their attitudes, both toward those entrusted to their care and toward each other, an idealism. They had to feel deeply a faith in the goodness of the Almighty, were required to sense a persistent hope that this goodness would bring health, recovery, and well being to their charges, but especially they had always to feel a love toward their fellowmen and demonstrate it by attentive, patient, intelligent, and industrious devotion to the hour-by-hour needs of these sick ones. Such a group of people can be animated to such living only by a leader who herself believes in it, and who by her own life demonstrates such a full faith, such an enduring hope, and such an all-inclusive charity. Those who have known Miss Copeland the longest and the best know how truly such a tribute describes her.

When sympathy and gentleness were sorely needed, she always revealed herself to be naturally so endowed. Many a sorely pressed patient and many a trying young nurse has had a true refuge and a whole-souled friend in the person who was the busy hospital superintendent. Her chief concern has always been that the greatest good come to those around her, the sick who needed intelligent nursing, and the young women in training who needed help, understanding, and inspiration.

Thirty years of giving of herself to the Sanitarium, to its hundreds of young people who come here to learn, to its staff of doctors following her lead in keeping the hospital abreast with the scientific progress of each day, to thousands of patients seeking relief of pain, recovery from invalidism, or escape from death. We all shall miss her here. We know her for what she has done, but even more for what she is. Truly a saint of these latter days she is, for “by their works ye shall know them.”

Independence, Missouri

Book of Mormon Play Given

COAL HILL, MISSOURI.—The branch, located in El Dorado Springs, Missouri, held its annual business meeting in September with District President Williams in charge. The following officers were elected: Elder H. E. Winegar, Jerico Springs, Missouri, pastor; Elder Fred M. Blystone, El Dorado Springs, and Elder H. A. Gould, Humansville, counselors; Mrs. Bertie Gould, Humansville, director of religious education; Mrs. Shirley Johnston, El Dorado Springs, recorder and secretary; Mrs. Elsie Reynolds, treasurer; Mrs. Viola Wood, women's leader; Mrs. Pearl Davis, book steward; and James Richardson, young people's leader.

In October the following were guest speakers: Elder Lee Quick, Mapleton, Kansas; Elder E. W. Lloyd, Kansas City, Missouri; and Evangelist Ray Whiting, Independence, Missouri.

On November 15, a bake sale was held and $50 was cleared and given to the building fund.

On November 22, Brother Howard Kile of Osceola, Missouri, preached his second sermon. He was recently ordained to the office of priest.

The young people presented the program on Thanksgiving and Sister Bertie Gould told a story. A gift offering for the building fund was taken, followed by a Thanksgiving fellowship service.

On November 30, a group of older people gave a play on the Book of Mormon. The following participated: Elder F. M. Blystone and P. R. Davis, John Wood, James Richardson, Arthur Pratt, Wilsie Hubbard, Darrell Johnston, Billy Reynolds, Eunice Richardson, and Betty Wood. Sisters Pearl Davis and Aleene Pratt helped direct it.—Reported by SHIRLEY JOHNSTON

Young Mother Baptized

LONGVIEW, TEXAS.—On October 14, Wendell Carrell Nagel, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Nagel, was blessed by Seventy Alfred Yale assisted by Elder Norman Cox. The next morning the child's mother, Helen Marie Nagel, was baptized by Brother Yale. She was confirmed the following Sunday by Elder Lynden Wheeler who gave the morning sermon.—Reported by RAEFORD HANSON

Family Circles Completed in Church

BRENTWOOD, MISSOURI.—On November 13, the women's department held their annual bazaar and cleared over $500. On November 16, seven candidates were baptized. Among them were Irma Cowen, mother of Leslie and Ellen Cowen; La Rue Langguth, father, and his son Laren Langguth; John Briggs, son of Elder Ralph Briggs; and Joseph Evans, son of Cedric Evans. This completes three family circles in the church.—Reported by LOIS BENSON

Priesthood Retreat Held

MAINE DISTRICT.—The semiannual conference was held at Jonesport, November 16, under the direction of district officers. Apostle D. T. Williams, missionary in charge, was guest speaker. The opening session was a prayer meeting under the direction of Elder B. L. Carter, district president. Apostle Williams was the morning speaker.

Dinner was served in the lower auditorium by the local women's department.

The annual business session was held in the afternoon, conducted by Brother Williams. Seven names were recommended for ordination. The following district officers were elected: district president, Benjamin L. Carter of Stonington; counselors, Chester Gray of Jonesport, and George Woodward of Thomas-ton; secretary, Mrs. Ben Carter; treasurer, Calvin Crowley; church school director, Chester Gray with Calvin Crowley and Irwin Alley as assistants; women's leader, Mrs. Sophie Dobbins of Jonesport; young people's leader, William Wilson with Leon Wilson and Walter Billings, Jr., as assistants; nonresident pastor, Ray Ashenhurst, Jonesport; music director, Mrs. Geneva Church, Jonesport; publicity director, Ben L. Carter; historian, Mrs. Hazel Woodward; and sustained bishop's agent, Chester Gray.

A district budget of $1,208 was accepted. Elder Ray Ashenhurst reported that he had made 407 contacts with nonmembers through cottage meetings and missionary series, of which forty-seven are prospects for baptism.

Two new missions have been organized this year: the East Wilton mission with Bernard Holland as pastor, and the Ellsworth mission with Lorado Carter as pastor.

On October 11 and 12, a district priesthood retreat was held at Deer Isle, Maine, under the direction of the district officers. A banquet supper was served at the Stonington Branch Saturday evening which was followed by a devotional in the upper auditorium conducted by Elder B. L. Carter. All-day services and classes were held on Sunday at the isolated farm house of Brother Garfield Billings. About thirty men attended these services.—Reported by B. L. CARTER.

Plans for Building Begun

NEW YORK, NEW YORK.—The Saints of this area are meeting at Highland Park YMCA, Brooklyn, New York. Plans are being made for the erection of a new church building on the property at Lake Success, New York.

A surprise birthday party was held for High Priest Ephraim Squires on November 5 at the home of Elder Charles Harris.

The women sponsored a Christmas bazaar on November 29 for the building fund.

Seventy William Guthrie is going to be the speaker for a missionary series held in December. There will be meetings on Long Island and different parts of New York City.

Visitors can contact the pastor Perce Judd at 73-03 Little Neck Parkway, Glen Oaks, New York, telephone Fieldstone 3-7976.—Reported by FRANCES KEEN

Plans Developing for Church Dedication

TRI-CITY, KENTUCKY.—The branch met September 28 to elect officers for the new year. The following were elected: pastor, Glynn Colthorp; associate pastor, C. L. Ross; secretary, Clevia Mc Bee; recorder, Freida Colthorp; treasurer, Lubie Page; music director, Ada Farris; librarian, Freida Colthorp; publicity, Alma Harrison; young people's leader, Fredric Colthorp; women's leader, Lorene Fuller; auditing committee, Sylvester Fuller and Fredric Colthorp.

The branch, which is the consolidated branch of High Hill and Farmington, approved the change of the name to the Tri-City Branch in order to avoid confusion. The name will become official with the approval of the next Kentucky and Tennessee District conference.

The young son of Sylvester and Lorene Fuller, Ronnie Odean, was blessed October 5. Paul Snow was baptized October 12 and confirmed on October 19.

New pews were installed in the church on November 20 and plans are being made for the church dedication service.

The women's department held their fall bazaar on November 22. Sales totaled $59.40. Visiting ministers since the beginning of the new year's work are the district president, Terrull Cochran, Ralph Schrader and Brother Mitchell, all of Memphis, Tennessee. Brother Baily of Jack's Creek mission was the guest speaker on November 23.

Five Baptized

AKRON, OHIO.—A missionary institute was held in conjunction with the Kirtland District conference in Barberton, Ohio, November 22 and 23. Seventy Loyd Adams and Apostle D. T. Williams gave talks on missionary tools and techniques.

On November 30, five young ladies were baptized at the branch by Pastor W. Hubert Mitchell. They were Rita Ketterman, sixteen; Margaret Ketterman, fourteen; Marian Bonstein, fourteen; Carolyn Null, eighteen; and Ann Brockway, eight.—Reported by RANKIN DAVIS

Visitor Speaks at Branch

FALL RIVER, MASSACHUSETTS.—On November 16, Elder Edmund M. Brown of Providence, Rhode Island, was the speaker. He and Pastor A. M. Coombs administered to four-year-old Paul Remillard who is ill with diabetes. Saints had been praying and fasting for this little boy. Brother Brown and his wife left following this so that he could administer to the Blanchards who live near Boston.

Brother and Sister Frank H. Dippel of Hazelton, Pennsylvania, came for Thanksgiving to visit their daughter's family. Elder Dippel was the morning speaker at New Bedford, November 30.—Reported by MRS. GLADYS V. COOMBS

Stake Officers Elected

CENTRAL MISSOURI STAKE.—Between six and seven hundred members of the stake met for conference at the Warrensburg church on November 9. President F. Henry Edwards was present and preached the morning sermon. The business meeting was held in the afternoon. Among the items of business were the receiving of reports from stake officers, and the approval of financial grants of $500 to Kingsville and $1,500 to Richmond from the Stake Houses of Worship Fund to apply on new church buildings being erected at those places. Also approved were the recommendations for ordination of Fred Moore of Ather-ton to the office of priest; Carroll Mann of Blue Springs to that of teacher; Myrle Smith of Buckner to elder; James Stowell of Kingsville to the office of priest; Elbert Heath and David Heath of Oak Grove to the office of priest; as well as Jack Raveill of Warrensburg to the same office; Carl Cowick of Waken-da to the office of deacon, and the following from Lee's Summit: Dean Adams and Robert Sperry to elder and Warren Wheatley and Doyle Cook to the office of priest.

Officers elected for the next year were as follows: stake president, Harry J. Simons; stake bishop, Willard C. Becker; director of religious education, Eugene Look of Blue Springs; young adult leader, Herbert Ridge of Marshall; Zion's League leader, Merton Loveland of Pleasant Hill; children's supervisor, Wilma Green of Knob Noster; leader of women, Ruth Simons of Warrensburg; director of music, Melba Troyer of Harrisonville; historian, Louise Loveland of Pleasant Hill; recreation leader, Jack Swall of Lee's Summit. High Priest Paul M. Landsberg of Odessa was set apart as a counselor to the stake bishop, and William G. Ferguson of Richmond was ordained to the office of high priest and set apart as a member of the stake high council.

Approximately two hundred young adults met at Warrensburg on the evening of November 21 for the annual Thanksgiving banquet sponsored by the young adults of the stake. Seventy Philip W. Moore, stake missionary, was master of ceremonies and President F. Henry Edwards was the banquet speaker. Robert Young of Richmond was song leader and pianists were Harold Craven and Doras Becker. Special music was presented by Robert Young, soloist, and a trio from Marshall composed of Maurene Richardson, Gloria Worthington, and Angela Heide. Talks were given by E. P. Darnell, presiding officer at Warrensburg, welcoming the group to Warrensburg; Leonard Smith, retiring young adult leader; and Herbert Ridge, newly elected leader. Members of the Warrensburg women's department prepared and served the banquet, assisted by some of the Zion's Leaguers.

Recent news from the Holden congregation tells of the purchase and installation of a new Kilgen pipe organ; the marriage of Lois Phelps to Daniel Best on October 19; and the death of Charles Christenson on October 26. The misison sponsored by the Holden congregation at Quick City is thriving under the leadership of Elder Clarence Petre. Requests for baptism have already been received and a service was held November 23. Visiting speakers for the month of October were Elders Roy Weldon, Harold Constance, Ira Clutter, and W. C. Becker. On November 16, the young adult class from Enoch Hill congregation in Independence visited the Holden church and presented the entire service that morning. They furnished the speakers, the special music, junior church workers, and even ladies to supervise the nursery. After the service the Holden young adults were hosts for both groups in serving a basket dinner.

During the last week in October a missionary series was conducted in each of three congregations. Philip Moore, stake missionary, was at Knob Noster; Seventy Arthur Gibbs was at Sedalia; and Stake President Harry Simons was at Marshall. During the first week in December a pre-Christmas missionary series was planned for six more congregations with local speakers doing most of the preaching: Philip Moore at Blue Springs; Harry Simons at Pleasant Hill; Bishop W. C. Becker at Buckner; Roy Weldon at Odessa; S. E. Mifflin at Lexington; and Evangelist Arthur Stoff at Holden. At a baptism service held recently at Oak Grove seven members of one family were baptized. They were Willard Corlew and his six children, Edward, Franklin, Mary, Robert, Willard Lester, and William. Mrs. Corlew is already a member of the church. Those baptisms, together with others during the year at Oak Grove, make a total of seventeen for that congregation so far in 1952.—Reported by HARRY SIMONS

Apostle Holds Series

CARTHAGE, MISSOURI.—The following branch officers were elected at the June business meeting: pastor, Herman O. Plumb; associate pastor, H. A. Shank; junior pastor, Bill Shank; church school director, Karl Hobbs; women's leader, Mrs. A. M. Hogan; youth leader, Ernie Shank; children's leader, Mrs. H. O. Plumb; music director, Mrs. H. A. Shank; secretary, book steward, and historian, Lorraine Shank; treasurer and solicitor, Bill Shank; adult supervisor and publicity agent, Mrs. Bill Shank.

Miss Patricia Harrington was baptized on September 17 by Elder H. A. Shank and confirmed the following Sunday by Elders Plumb and Shank.

The women's department purchased and hung new drapes for the church. New front doors were donated recently by Joe York and family.

Apostle Arthur A. Oakman held a series of meetings from November 9-16. The church was filled to capacity each night.

The women's department sponsored a Thanksgiving dinner at the church on November 20. After the dinner, educational movies were shown.

On December 4, the women were hostesses to the district Christmas party at which Apostle Oakman and Elder Stephen Black were guest speakers.

A chili and pie supper was held December 6 and a bazaar and bake sale on December 13. The annual Christmas party for the combined departments was held December 17.—Reported by HILDA SHANK

VINEYARD SONG

Drudgery lay deep
In a sodden field
And the long day
Stood unconquered, Dumb.

How shall I bend my puny back
To break these unyielding clods?
How use ten fingers
And only two feet pushing Against immensity . . .
My short-sight eyes, my brain
The scrap of Holy Spirit
In my soul,
With only these for tools
How can I force the deadness
Of my sleeping field
To life?

"Take my yoke," the answer came,
"Make broad your shoulders
With this thing of wood,
And hang your heavy Seed sacks
At its ends.
Make free your hands,
Give rhythm to your marching feet,
Release the bursting song
That is your soul."

For the Lord of the vineyard
Heard my unworded prayer.
Katherine Keck Bear

TAKE MY HAND

Take my hand, Lord,
And help me to understand
The whys to all the problems
And to see the way you've planned.

Teach me thy ways, Lord,
That I may lead another,
Thereby proving with my deeds
That I'm a friend and brother.

Fill my heart with love, Lord,
For all mankind on earth
And give me all the requisites
Of a spiritual birth.

Beth L. Davis

When we build,
Let us think that we build forever.
Let it not be for present delight,
Nor for present use alone.
Let it be such that our descendants
Will thank us.
And let us think,
As we lay stone upon stone,
That the time is to come when
Those stones will be held sacred
Because our hands have touched them.
Someday the saints will say,
As they look upon the labor
And wrought substance of them,
See—this our fathers did for us.

News and Notes

FROM HEADQUARTERS

PRESIDENT ISRAEL SMITH NEW YEAR'S EVE SPEAKER

President Israel A. Smith recalled "The Achievements of 1952" at the New Year's Eve service held in Stone Church Wednesday evening, December 31, at 8:00 o'clock. Assisting him in the service were Bishop G. Leslie DeLapp, who gave "The Challenge of 1953"; L. F. P. Curry, who gave the invocation; Stake President Charles V. Graham, who offered a prayer for the new year; Elder Glaude A. Smith, who extended pastoral greetings; and Howard W. Harder, who gave the benediction. Special music was provided by the male quartet. Rose Mary Lentell was at the organ.

APOSTLE JENSEN SPEAKS AT STONE CHURCH

Apostle D. Blair Jensen spoke at both the 8:15 and 11:00 o'clock services at Stone Church Sunday morning, December 28. His subject was "Hitherto Hath the Lord Helped Us."

BISHOP LIVINGSTON IS OUT-OF-TOWN SPEAKER

Bishop H. L. Livingston delivered the 11:00 o'clock sermon at Butler, Missouri, on Sunday, December 28.

HOLDS SERIES

Seventy James C. Daugherty reports a series which he held with Missionary Wallace Jackson in Black Gum, Oklahoma, November 30-December 14. Brother Daugherty reports, "Due to the excellent missionary work of Brother Jackson, there were six adults baptized. This united four homes."

CENTER STAKE YOUTH ACTIVE

Orioles of the Center Stake of Zion were active in Christmas caroling. On December 20 they visited the Sanitarium, on December 21, Resthaven, on December 23 they caroled on the Courthouse steps, and on December 24 in one of the local department stores. This activity was under the direction of Lee Hart, stake youth director. Brother Hart also reports that the Stake-wide Zion's League raised $210 with a Christmas tree stand. This money will help pay for the new trampoline which the group has purchased.

CENTER STAKE YULETIDE YOUTH CONFERENCE

Approximately five hundred young people attended the annual yuletide youth conference sponsored December 26, 27, and 28 by the Zion's Leagues of Independence. Friday evening was Armed Services Night; under the supervision of Roy Schaefer, president of the West College Street League, and Hal and Geneva McKain, leaders, the forty-five packages collected at the meeting will be sent to servicemen. Dick Ankney of Houston, Texas, was master of ceremonies at the variety program Saturday evening held in the basement of the Auditorium. Special features of the program were selections by a seven-piece band composed of Leaguers, readings, a skit by the Gudgeil Park League, and a trampoline show. The conference ended Sunday morning with a fellowship service at Walnut Park Church at which Evan Fry presided.

Lee Hart, stake supervisor of youth, and members of the city-wide cabinet were in charge of making plans for the conference.

Norman Nelson

NORMAN NELSON joined the Graceland staff in September, 1952, as instructor of agriculture and chemistry.

He was born on August 20, 1924, at Guilford, Missouri. He finished his grade school work in a rural school and was graduated from Guilford High School in 1942. During 1942 and 1943 he completed two quarters of work at Northwest Missouri State Teacher's College, Marysville, Missouri. He then worked on the farm until 1946, at which time he joined the medical corps of the Army. In 1947 he completed his first year at Northwest Missouri State Teacher's College and was graduated from Graceland's Pre-medical course in 1948. Norman majored in agronomy at Iowa State College, Ames, Iowa, being graduated with a B.S. degree in 1950. He did graduate work at Iowa State under a fellowship furnished by the Pacific Coast Borax Company for research concerning the effect of borax on alfalfa, and he became a member of the Iowa State College Staff in 1951. He is a member of Phi Kappa Phi, an all-college honorary society, and Gamma Sigma Delta, an honorary agronomy society.

As hobbies, he enjoys photography, traveling, and tinkering with all types of machinery.

Norman married the former Arladine Adams. They have two sons: Robert Michael ("Mickey"), 19 months, and David Alan, 3 months.

In 1932 he became a member of the Reorganized Church. He was ordained a priest in 1950 and an elder in 1951. He enjoys his work as pastor of the kindergarten department of Lamoni congregation.

Give Us This Day

"Give us this day our daily bread."—The Lord's Prayer

ON THE WALL above the dining table is a wooden plate—a pretty hand-carved wooden plate that Brother purchased in Switzerland when he was in the military service and brought home to us. On the lower edge is carved the edelweiss, the Swiss national flower. On the upper edge a now unknown woodcarver inscribed these words from the Lord's Prayer: "Donne-nous aujourd'hui notre pain quotidien"—"Give us this day our daily bread." That is exactly the way he carved it.

We like to have that prayer above our dining table. It reminds us that we must look to God every day for our blessings. It helps us when we bow our heads to pray, "Father, we thank thee."

IN THIS DANGEROUS AGE, this "dies irae"—day of wrath—whose heart is not troubled? Who dares to connot troubled? Who dares to conclude his prayers, satisfied with a request for material bread? Are we not concerned every waking hour with fears and hopes of greater things?

We turn to God in prayer—"Give us this day . . . Lord, give us this day." If we pray at all—and we had better pray—we must look to the universal Friend for many things.

If you were asked to pray for the world, for humanity, for various countries and, finally, for yourself, what would you ask? Let us try praying together.

OUR FATHER, . . . Give us this day . . .

In a world of war and trouble, strife and bickering, give us peace of mind and spirit.

In a world of falsehood and pretenses, of propaganda and artificial fronts, veneers and imitations, of silver-plated ideals over facts of brass, give us honesty and truth, O Lord.

In a world of fanatical hates, of prejudice against other peoples and races and against our own neighbors, give us love, O Lord.

In a world of cruelty, with all the needless pain and profitless suffering it causes, give us the desire to be kind and merciful, O Lord.

In a world of selfishness and grasping greeds, give us generosity, O Lord. Help us first to give our hearts, and all other needed things will follow wherever there is human want.

In a world where tired bodies and more tired minds struggle against mountainous tasks to be done, give us strength to do our work and fortitude to carry the cross that we have been given to bear.

In situations where every effort is made to confuse us, help us to think clearly, to distinguish between good and bad, between better and best, between right and wrong.

Where our own selfish interests are involved, and where judgment is likely to be diverted by desire, help us still to see where our duty lies, and to be willing to pay the cost.

Give us this day, O Lord. Give us this day what is best for us in terms of eternal things.

I SAW PEOPLE gambling with little machines, at tables, and with games. I saw people gambling in speculation and investments. I saw people gambling in the stock market, and in business. And their whole idea was to get something for nothing—to get it away from someone else. They created nothing, they made nothing, they performed no service to society. It was their plan to live by the sweat of other men's brows, the toil of other's hands. I could see that they were secretly praying to their heathen god, whoever he was and whatever he was, "Give me money, O kindly fate, give me money. Give it to me, and not to another. Though he go hungry, let me be fed. Though he be naked, let me be clothed in fine raiment. Though he be poor, let me be rich. Though he be cold, let me be warm. Give to me, thou god, give to me."

IT OCCURRED TO ME that in this one small point lay the whole difference between hell and heaven. Says the selfish one: "Give to me." The other prays: "Give us." If you follow the "give me" principle, your path will lead to misery. You will not find happiness or peace. If your prayer is "give us," yours is a philosophy that points toward the kingdom of heaven. Which way will you choose?

"Give us this day." In our times of fear and worry, of need and indecision, we reach up to God for help, understanding, and wisdom that we cannot find either within ourselves or among other men. We are on the right way if we include others in our prayers. If we pray alone, we do not understand the genius and purpose of the kingdom. There is a social quality in the greatest of all Christian prayers. L. J. L.

A. Neal Deaver Appointed Administrator

The following action was taken by the Board of Trustees of Independence Sanitarium and Hospital on December 19, 1952:

RESOLUTION

WHEREAS, Miss Gertrude E. Copeland is retiring as of January 3, 1953, as Superintendent of the Independence Sanitarium and Hospital, and,

WHEREAS, A separate resolution has been adopted by the Board of Trustees of the Independence Sanitarium and Hospital, expressing appreciation for the thirty years of service so efficiently rendered, and,

WHEREAS, Her retirement leaves a vacancy in this most important administrative office of the Independence Sanitarium and Hospital, therefore be it

Resolved That we do hereby appoint A. Neal Deaver as Administrator of the Independence Sanitarium and Hospital, and do impose upon him the duties and responsibilities vested in this office.

THE FIRST PRESIDENCY

Recently I have been exchanging notes concerning the nature of salvation with one of the brethren for whose integrity, intelligence, and sound faith I have the utmost respect. Today he sent me the statement printed below, but indicated that his name should be omitted from any public reference I might make to it. However, he has consented to the presentation I am now making, as have President Smith and President W. Wallace Smith. His statement is given as a point of departure for the study of any who may be interested. F. H. E.

On October 4, 1952, in early morning semi-sleep I found myself in association with several persons, all ordinary humans like myself except one who was so distinctly superior that my attention was drawn toward him. He was of medium proportion, well formed in every way, and the most perfect as to physical form and nature beyond all whom I had ever seen. There was nothing suggestive of the athlete or the strong man, yet it was apparent that he possessed the acme of physical strength though it was held in quiet reserve. Perfect health and soundness of body showed in every feature and movement of his being. His apparel, though characterized by simplicity, was becoming and beautiful.

What impressed me most was his spiritual nature. I had ample time to behold and ponder, and under the spirit of keen discernment I found his whole nature was open to my understanding. It was as perfect and complete as was his physical nature.

His holiness was not that of innocence as seen in the child but something more substantial. He had been through the life of mortality, suffered temptations, had known weakness and sin, and under the gospel of Christ had struggled against them. Through diligence and prayer for divine help he had overcome, and was approved and accepted of God. He had known the sorrow of repentance, and the joy of forgiveness, and had found cleansing and sanctification through Christ.

He appeared not as an angel in glory, but rather as a man redeemed and clothed upon with immortality, ready to be crowned with eternal life. He was radiant throughout his whole being, with beams of intense joy playing over his countenance like dancing reflections of light upon rippling waters; and looking into his face was like looking into the deep sea. His glory sprang from the joy of victorious achievement associated with the sanctifying grace of the Redeemer. All trace of evil had been expurgated, and he was worthy of the kingdom of God.

This symbol of the perfect man was characterized by a degree of intelligence exceeding all that is earthly. Mortality could not approach it. Nor was his intelligence merely intellectual but such as reflected the inherent nature of Divinity. I have long known that intelligence as spoken of in the Scriptures was more than intellectuality, and this was plainly manifest in this man. The quality was a gift from God, as it is to every man who possesses it, and it cannot be possessed in any other way. It was in this and in the consciousness of perfect sanctity that the glory of God was revealed.

As I pondered the vision I understood that this presentation to me was a symbol or type of any and all men who seek righteousness through Christ and his gospel, and who overcome their own inherent evil by faith. Any man who diligently sets himself the task and is steadfast to the end may be this man and gain the kingdom of God.

No message was given except what developed in my own mind, which was sufficient. The great disparity between us made me reticent about speaking. In his presence I felt to mourn over my own condition and that of those about me, and I was about to weep, but awoke wondering, "Can I ever attain such glorious perfection?" It is possible through Christ and his gospel to every man who will strive in faith.

Devotional Messages

Daily Bread is just starting its fifth year, and the editors and publishers are pleased with its reception by the church. Some of those who helped launch this devotional magazine have not written for several months. Perhaps they got weary in well-doing.

A message-a-day which has appeal for a wide age range in the family circle taxes the capacity of a few people to produce. On the other hand, if the many people who feel in their hearts that they want to express a message of love which will draw the children and adults of the church closer to God in daily communion will make a little effort, the burden is not too great.

In making this appeal for your continued support by writing these Daily Bread messages, we hope you will bear with us if we ask you to beware of trite illustrations and those stories in which the pretty sayings of children are used. We sometimes have to reject messages because the illustration has been used too frequently already, and some children's sayings which seem quite sweet and significant to parents do not make a distinct contribution to family worship.

If you have not written before and would like to help us, we will be glad to send you a list of "Hints for Daily Bread Writers." We ask for continued support by our writers for Daily Bread and would particularly commend this assignment to priesthood members as a means of extending their ministry church-wide.

One Fold

By Wayne E. Simmons

And other sheep I have, which are not of this fold; them also I must bring, and they shall bear my voice; and there shall be one fold and one shepherd.

Segregation of Spanish-speaking People

With the establishment of a mission to Spanish-speaking people in America, begun in the church in 1950, there has come a concentration of effort to win the people of the great Southwest to the work. In a four-state area, from the Gulf of Mexico to the Pacific Ocean, are millions of Spanish-speaking people of Mexican origin and of Indian blood, waiting for a good missionary program to call them to the work of the kingdom of God. Most of them are citizens, and those of the younger generation are bilingual. Lack of a knowledge of Spanish ought not to be a serious handicap in ministering to them. The barrier of language is slowly being broken down.

There are yet, however, barriers that make great problems for ministry. The relatively low economic status in which they are found handicaps them. Texas offers a social problem typical of the area, in which these people are unfortunate victims of circumstances for the most part. Tens of thousands of Mexican laborers are pouring into the United States in search of employment, mingling with the population of Spanish-speaking stock already in residence. They are attracted by the "high" wages of two to three dollars a day offered by Texas farmers for field labor—an understandable attraction when the Mexican field-worker makes only thirty-five to sixty cents a day in Mexico. Hundreds of these immigrants illegally enter the United States every day, and only a few of them go back to Mexico to stay. In Texas they are called "wetbacks," because of their practice of crossing over into the United States by fording the Rio Grande. Immigration officers desperately try to enforce laws that will prevent such entry. However, "wetbacks" have become essential to the economy of so many forms of business and industry—farming, fruit picking, packing, canning, et cetera, that the United States citizens of the Rio Grande Valley, where this problem is acute, are not sympathetic to the enforcement of this law. They are good, willing workers, and they fill a need in a short labor market, for there are not enough United States citizens who will work for such low wages. So Mexico supplies them, involuntarily. As fast as they are deported, they come back, bringing their families, their brothers, and their cousins.

The average American may not try to distinguish between a "wetback" and a citizen of Mexican ancestry. In general, however, people of southern Texas know three major social levels. The "wetbacks" comprise the lowest stratum of society, largely composed of illiterates—people acquainted only with the bare subsistence level of life. The stratum above them is occupied by the Latin-American citizen of the states. He may live in the nicest area in town, in progressive cities like Brownsville, Texas, but in many other areas he may be segregated and pushed into shabby surroundings, regardless of his cultural achievements. In the Rio Grande Valley such people constitute more than 50 per cent of the population. Many a Latin-American youngster attending high school receives honors in his classroom, and a great ovation for his prowess on the football field. Upon graduation, however, he often depends on washing cars or working for substandard wages along with "wetbacks" for the rest of his life, unless he can afford to attend college, or train himself for top-flight jobs.

At the top of the social strata are the self-styled "white" people—locally called Anglo-Americans, the citizenry who are not of Spanish or Indian stock—those who make the rules for segregation. They are outnumbered by the Latins, but they are not outgoverned. Until recently the trained Latin-American citizen was not permitted by industry to compete with the Anglo-American for worthwhile positions.

Since World War II, some of the social and economic barriers have begun to crumble. Latin-American boys who fight for the United States and for the United Nations upon their return to civilian life wield strong influence for changing their society. The law raising minimum wages in industry to seventy-five cents an hour has doubled the average factory worker's wages. Many industries have become progressive enough to pay a man on the basis of his ability, rather than on the basis of how cheaply he can be replaced. They refuse to employ those who have no documentary proof of their right to American residence.

Most towns and cities have now abandoned the practice of putting Latin Americans into separate schools, apart from Anglo-American children. The fraternal organizations, municipal groups, the Rotary Club, the Chamber of Commerce, Kiwanis, et cetera, are now enlisting Anglos and Latins and are engaged in improving civic conditions. Most segregation barriers have been recognized as impediments to real progress, and are being steadily set aside by mutual consent. However, one segregation practice still stands—a barrier that ought to have fallen first, in the opinion of most Reorganized Latter Day Saints. The churches insist on separate congregations. The Latin American is separated from the Anglo-American as the proverbial goat from the sheep, in the variegated folds of Christendom represented in the area. Latin-American people justifiably resent the practice that places them outside the spiritual fellowship of their Anglo fellow-citizens with whom they associate in schools, business, and community organizations. For every First Methodist Church on Respectable Road, there is an Iglesia Metodista on the other side of the tracks. The Central Presbyterian Church on Exclusive Avenue may donate funds to help some Latin American in ministerial study, but the student, when ordained, will never officiate at that church. He will shepherd the larger flock at the Iglesia Presbiteriana provided for the Latins at the shabby end of town, far removed from the Country Club.

The Mormons flood these areas with young missionaries, Book of Mormon in hand telling the Lamanites of the coming day of the building of the New Jerusalem, but the converts they make are not placed in the same congregation with "white" Mormons. They place the "remnant of the house of Jacob" in worship situations, apart from their more comfortably housed Anglo congregations. They do not believe in "one fold."

If we of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ follow the lead of these man-made churches in segregating the Lamanites in the very land that God has constituted for the gathering of his people, then we have come too late to the Southwest, and we will have little appeal to the Latin peoples with our message which must cry Zion in spirit and segregation in practice. We must take our place at the end of a long procession of missionary movements in the area—at the end of the line of experts in winning the Latin from Catholicism, then segregating him. If, however, we are to blaze a new trail, to lead the field of missionary endeavor among the Spanish-speaking peoples in the United States, we must build Latin-Anglo congregations. We must demonstrate the rightness of the words of Jesus's prophecy, "There shall be one fold."

The Curse on the Lamanites

Inasmuch as they [Lamanites] will not hearken unto thy words, they shall be cut off from the presence of the Lord. . . . And he had caused the cursing to come upon them, yea, even a sore cursing, because of their iniquity. For behold, they had hardened their hearts against him, that they had become like unto flint; Wherefore, as they were white, and exceeding fair and delightsome, that they might not be enticing unto my people, the Lord God did cause a skin of blackness to come upon them. And thus saith the Lord God, I will cause that they shall be loathsome unto thy people, save they shall repent of their iniquities*. And cursed shall be the seed of him that mixeth with their seed; for they shall be cursed with the same cursing.—II Nephi 4: 31-37.

It is far happier for a missionary to see a prospective Lamanite candidate for baptism welcomed into a strong branch or mission where he will have good pastoral ministry. In fact, missionary policy, as outlined by the Council of Twelve, has been to concentrate efforts local to such groups, when possible, so that the newly baptized members might be nurtured and put to work in a healthy, growing group of fellow-citizens for the kingdom. Missions may well be started and later developed to branch status in a Mexican area of town, not, however, because of race, but because of proximity to more Spanish-speaking Reorganized Latter Day Saint homes. However, a small number of Reorganized Latter Day Saints have expressed concern for the proposal to open the fold to Lamanites. They ask: "What about the curse God placed on them? Wasn't that God's own plan—to segregate them? Just how far are we expected to go in fellowshipping with them? This 'one fold' is all right, as long as they keep their own place [away from Anglo-Americans]. But what happens if we let our young people mix with them? One of them might want to marry my daughter!"

Such questions reveal the questioner's distance from the kingdom. He is determined to maintain Nordic supremacy in the church of Jesus Christ, the head of which, when he was on earth, was a Jew.

The fact is that the problem of color ought not to be a prime consideration in our treatment of the Latin American, for many of them are as white as Anglo-Americans, and the others are, for the most part, no darker than many Mediterranean peoples whom we freely admit into our society. However, the question about the curse placed on the Lamanites deserves a hearing. If this is a curse which is to stand forever, unto and beyond our day, unqualified by any action on the part of Lamanite people, then it is a barrier to fellowship with Indian people that we ought to observe. And of course, if so, there can be no "one fold."

However, the scriptural phrase, "save they shall repent of their iniquities," shows the Lord's qualification of the curse. Upon the repentance of the Lamanites, the curse will be replaced with a promise. Jacob, Nephi's brother, warns the Nephites to repent of their own iniquity and offers prophetic hope of the lifting of the curse.

Behold, the Lamanites, your brethren, whom ye hate, because of their filthiness and the cursings which hath come upon their skins, are more righteous than you; for they have not forgotten the commandments of the Lord, which was given unto our fathers, that they should have, save it were one wife: . . . wherefore, because of this observance in keeping this commandment, the Lord God will not destroy them, but will be merciful unto them; and one day they shall become a blessed people. . . . O my brethren, I fear, that unless ye shall repent of your sins, that their skins will be whiter than yours, when ye shall be brought with them before the throne of God.*—Jacob 2: 54-59.

Members of the Restored Church should thrill to the knowledge of the instrumentality they must exercise in lifting the curse of the Lamanites. Nephi tells us how it shall come about.

For after the book of which I have spoken [Book of Mormon] shall come forth, and be written unto the Gentiles, and sealed up again unto the Lord, there shall be many which shall believe the words which are written; and they shall carry them forth unto the remnant of our seed. . . . And the gospel of Jesus Christ shall be declared among them; wherefore . . . their scales of darkness shall begin to fall from their eyes: and many generations shall not pass away among them, save they shall be a white and a delightful people.*—II Nephi 12: 80-84.

Seldom read, perhaps, are the words that follow, that promise the same blessing unto the Jews.

And it shall come to pass that the Jews which are scattered, also shall begin to believe in Christ: and they shall begin to gather in upon the face of the land; and as many as shall believe in Christ, shall also become a delightful people.—II Nephi 12: 85, 86.

Thus it may be seen that the real curse is not so much one of darkness in color—for the Jews are not segregated because of color—as one of having “scales of darkness” in their eyes, instead of spiritual understanding of the things of Christ. The gospel eventually may be expected to correct both the physical and spiritual aspects of the curse.

The Nephites understood that the Lamanites should have the opportunity to obey the gospel and, when converted, to worship with them together in one fold. They believed in the gathering principle. There came a time when the Nephites and the Lamanites banded together to fight a common enemy, even as Latins and Anglos stand shoulder to shoulder on modern battle fronts. We read how the Lamanites came to be numbered with the Nephites and how great was the blessing they received in consequence.

And it came to pass in the thirteenth year, there began to be wars and contentions throughout all the land; for the Gadianton robbers had become so numerous . . . that it became expedient that all the people, both the Nephites, and the Lamanites, should take up arms against them; therefore all the Lamanites, who had become converted unto the Lord, did unite with their brethren, the Nephites. . . . And it came to pass that those Lamanites who had united with the Nephites, were numbered among the Nephites; and their curse was taken from them, and their skin became white like unto the Nephites; and their young men and their daughters became exceeding fair, and they were numbered among the Nephites and were called Nephites. And thus ended the thirteenth year.*—III Nephi 1: 48-53.

What a marvelous thing to come in the space of one year! Because the two groups united and were numbered together, the curse was lifted. In this we may see a principle. Something more than the taking of the gospel to the Lamanites will be required of us. Like the Nephites, we must resolve to number them with us, discarding the terms “Latin American,” “Indian,” and “Mexican,” and substituting the words “Saint,” and “brother.” In so doing, we may be instruments to make prophecy come true, to truly bring a oneness in the fold. The Lord has indicated in Nephi’s prophecy (II Nephi 12: 84) that “*many generations shall not pass away among them, save they shall be a white and a delightful people.” This indicates the length of our program—generations of numbering them together may come before they shall all be free of the curse. It may happen to some in one year, or in one generation, as it happened in the Golden Age of the Nephites.

And it came to pass in the thirty and sixth year, the people were all converted unto the Lord, upon all the face of the land, both Nephites and Lamanites. . . . There were no robbers, nor murderers, neither were there Lamanites, nor any manner of ites; but they were in one, the children of Christ, and heirs to the kingdom of God.—IV Nephi 1: 3, 20.

Children of Germans born in this country are not called Germans. They are Americans. The same may be said of most peoples. However, the American whose parents owned the land where many cities of the United States now stand, because he is segregated by American society, still suffers under the curse and stigma of society, even though he may be a member of the Restored Church. He is “Mexican,” and we are “white.”

Making One Fold

It is one thing to treasure the Book of Mormon and to long for the day of the accomplishment of its prophecies. It is a better form of discipleship to assist their fulfillment. Reorganized Latter Day Saints have a choice to make and a policy to form in their ministry to any people, whether Lamanite or Jew, Oriental or Caucasian. If we shall break down the last great barrier to the coming kingdom—distrust of the man who speaks a different language, or has a different complexion—we may help to usher in the establishment of the kingdom in our generation. Many groups of the Southwest are working toward this end. Both in the Rio Grande Valley Branch and its mission at Brownsville, under the supervision of Elder Gene Bowden and Priest Wayne Jackel, steps are being taken to build Spanish-speaking converts into the same congregation with Anglos. At the mission a church school class is conducted in Spanish for the benefit of those who are not bilingual. During the preaching hour, sermons in English are interpreted in Spanish, or classwork in the study of English is afforded them. Brother Jackel is proficient in Spanish as is Brother Hubert Manning who works with this group. The people of the Valley

Marion and Marilla Elswick

By Marcella Schenck

HE WAS OUR BRANCH PRESIDENT. She was his wife. They were a team in the gospel.

The General Church would know little about them except a couple of cards in the files of the statistician's office that would record their names, births, blessings, baptisms, marriage, priesthood, branch, and later on their deaths.

Then why write about them? Because there are so many other teams in the gospel—man and wife together—as steadfast as were these two who meant so much to my spiritual welfare and the little white church in Carson. You can find them everywhere—Australia, England, Canada, Alaska, Hawaii, North, East, South, and West. I can name a few familiar names—Pete and Laura Fredrickson, Dan and Ellen Hougas, Tom and Emma Hougas, Calvin and Laura Sears, Brethren and Sisters Booker, Hansen, Mortimore, Carlile, Greene, Derry, Lane, Gamet, Tucker. Their roll call almost has no end. If I write of the one team I knew best, perhaps you can change the names and make this fit your own home branch. But I shall not be able to separate Marion and Rilla from my life story, because that is how I knew them.

MARION ELSWICK was a short, stockily built man of light complexion. He had a halt in his speech. He said he was a Moses needing an Aaron, but we said the Lord saw best to send him instead a combination of Mary and Martha. We knew her as Rilla, a spare thin woman with a golden heart.

Solomon was indeed wise. He knew her life ages before her existence. He wrote of such in his Proverbs, the last chapter. She could open her lips when necessary to champion a cause of the oppressed; her value was "far above rubies"; the secrets of a pastor could safely be entrusted with her; she did "good and not evil all the days of her life"; she stretched "out her hand to the poor; yea, she reached forth her hands to the needy"; her husband sat among the elders; she looked "well to the ways of her household" and ate not "the bread of idleness"; her children called "her blessed and her husband also." I have not the slightest doubt that her works praised her at the gates of glory when she passed over. Her like is in your branch, too.

MARION AND RILLA were there at the beginning of our branch. I imagine they put more dollars into the building than any other family. After that they held it together with labor, love, and devotion.

This is what a brother of mine once wrote about Marion Elswick, who acted as our pastor:

Nearly everyone liked to hear Brother Elswick read the Bible. He couldn't preach like the Apostles and Seventies who came sometimes to hold meetings at the little white church in Carson. He never preached. He just talked. Everyone liked him, especially the little tow-headed boy who was I.

The tow-headed boy liked Brother Elswick because he was kind to poor children. He always seemed to pick out the most unnoticed ones to shake hands with and never saw that their wrists were chapped to almost a dirty look or that a little boy might be wearing overalls or hand-me-downs to church. He talked to little boys almost as if they were men.

This little boy tried to push out quietly, but he couldn't right away because the people began visiting in the aisles. He hid his hands in his pockets, crossed his legs to cover the patch on the knee of his pants. Soon he tried again to push out toward the door. Brother Elswick was there. He shook the boy's hand and patted him on the back. Now the child was glad he had not been able to sneak out. That pastor's pat meant something.

A CHILDHOOD MEMORY of Brother Elswick stands out in an incident concerning the election of church school teachers one January Sunday. As I remember it, we had five or six classes in our small branch—an adult class, a young people's class, two intermediate classes, a primary class—and there may have been a beginner's class. The intermediate groups were the largest and were divided into a boys' class and a girls' class. The boys were happy to have Edna Elswick, the pastor's daughter, as their teacher. We girls worshiped Merle Gifford who was ours. To show how much the boys liked Edna, I again quote my brother: "She was a real angel, not an angel pictured on a wall."

Election of church school teachers was a very democratic affair. We began with the older class who nominated and voted. The young people used slips of paper, balloted, and the majority ruled. This same process came down to our intermediate groups. One year we girls voted first, the next year it was the boys turn.

THIS YEAR it happened that the boys were to vote first. They liked Edna as much as we girls adored Merle, but we were so smug in our satisfaction that we never dreamed what was brewing. The boys only meant to have a bit of fun. Liking to tease and having made it up previously, they balloted unanimously for Miss Gifford.

We girls gave one horrified gasp. We hadn't a thing in the world against Edna, but we didn't like this. We whispered the word along the line and with scowls and gritting teeth we stubbornly refused to vote. What did our pastor do? He laughed. Could you believe it? He laughed! Then he suggested that we be good sports. But we wouldn't be. He sent us out to the entry to decide upon another choice. We went to the entry where we expressed scathing opinions of boys in general and these brothers and acquaintances in particular. We could not use the word "friends" in the mood that possessed us.

After considerable time, Brother Elswick came to the entry and suggested the matter wait over. We returned to finish the service, and "God Is Marching His Army" would have been a fitting closing song for us girls.

At home I glowered at my brothers the rest of the day. The boys were triumphant. Dad grinned. Mother scolded first the boys and then me. By the next Sunday Brother Elswick and the teachers concerned had reached a conclusion. Miss Gifford decided she could handle all of us in one group. Edna took over a primary class. I hope the dear girl was never hurt over the affair. It was never mentioned again.

THREE OR FOUR YEARS slipped by, quiet years in which we were maturing. If sickness touched our flock, Brother Elswick was there to pray or turn a hand where needed. Sister Rilla was there also with nourishing food and nursing care. If she saw that a dress was frayed, from somewhere the dear lady found a scrap and made over the dress so that it looked well at church.

At length, I grew into a giggling girl. At about the same time a number of others had grown taller and were considered ready for the young people's class. Sister Clara Briggs was the teacher and as saintly a lady as ever graced a congregation. She gave high standards to us, and we loved her. But who can predict an adolescent? One Sunday in February our youthful spirits were effervescing. Someone had left a hatchet on a chair in our class behind the organ. When we marched up there after the opening services the innocent hatchet lay there to become an instrument of much distraction. First, it was put beneath some unsuspecting lad or lass as a surprise when they almost sat upon it, next it grew into a game of girls keeping the hatchet from boys and vice versa. The lesson story lost its interest and moral. We were a noisy bunch. Too noisy!

Certain parents must have been absent. As a rule, no matter what the age, a person doesn't get away with too much when all classes are housed in one room. But our conduct was not relayed to our parents by Brother Elswick. At least I never heard anything about it at home, nor did my brothers. The next Sunday, Sister Briggs remained quietly in the adult class, and when we marched up behind the organ, there was Brother Elswick with Bible, quarterly, and spectacles. He sat down among us and began teaching. There was no mention of the Sunday before until he wove it quietly in toward the end of the lesson. Then he told us that Sister Briggs had taken our actions as personal against herself. She had cried after church and refused to come back. What were we going to do about it? It was an astonishing revelation to us that our actions had caused her sorrow. We loved the dear lady, gentle and gracious always. We were no end sorry and promised everything.

The next Sunday Sister Briggs was back in her place. The church school had a new secretary whose name was Marcella. I have often wondered if the girl instigated the hatchet trouble. Youth remembers so little of how it all began.

It seemed I was to slip back into my class when my secretarial work was finished, but I began to loiter. I had a left-out feeling when I entered late and did not have my finger on the pulse of the lesson. Was my pastor watching my reaction? I do not know, but I think so. After three months, I was approached with the idea of taking over a class of beginners. I was only thirteen, but Brother Elswick was sure I could do the work because I had so much experience with little brothers and sisters in my home.

So it came about that the mischievous girl went no longer to the class behind the organ. Now, being responsible for the behavior of four or five tiny tots, she began herself to be more serious minded.

I WOULD NOT HAVE YOU THINK that Brother and Sister Elswick were too perfect. They were human as the rest of us. I am looking back over the years with love. I can remember in youthful days of thinking him rather narrow-minded about our attending other churches in the town. There were four other denominations besides our own in this small town of six hundred people. I once told him that if faith couldn't hold us after we stepped foot in another church, maybe there was something wrong with our faith. Maybe he was right, and I was wrong. I know now that I was too outspoken. He probably knew young people better than I knew myself.

Brother Elswick was opposed to mixing finances with preaching services and prayer meetings. We could discuss them at business meeting. We could take up a collection at church school, but no plate was ever passed at any time. It seemed rather repulsive to him. Often at his priesthood visits the financial upkeep of our little branch was discussed and moneys gathered. As to "money changers in the temple," he had his private views and stuck by them.

By the time I was sixteen or seventeen, I was thrilled with Religio, the Zion's League of our day. Our magazine, Autumn Leaves, contained suggestions for programs. If it read "original poem," "debate," or "original story" we had it. Someone must try, however feeble the effort. I think it was good for us. At seventeen I found myself secretary of our Religio group. That summer all the officers, except myself, had to be out of town, and the whole responsibility fell upon me—or so my pastor insisted. Would he offer the prayers? No, it was time for me to begin. Would he teach where an instructor was absent? No, by now I should be able to handle more than beginners.

Brother Elswick had to give me a lot of encouragement on that vocal praying. "Listen," he said, "Religio is for the training of our young people. We older ones must sit back. If you make mistakes, you will profit by them. There may be others in the branch who can lead music better than my Alta, but in Religio she will take her turn. If you pray two sentences vocally this week, maybe next week you can pray three."

I wish I had heeded his advice more thoroughly. In recent years I have neglected those vocal prayers.

I HAD BEEN TEACHING three years when I felt the need of more education and began thinking of college. One day Brother and Sister Elswick asked me to linger after church. They wanted to talk with me.

"We hear," said he, "that you are planning to go to college."

"Yes," said I, "the new state laws make it rather imperative."

"Where are you going?" asked she.

I had thought of Tabor College. It was near, and besides I had won a scholarship there when I had been graduated from high school. The scholarship would help on expenses.

"We want you to go to Graceland," said she.

It was too far away, in my thinking, and too expensive. I had not planned on that.

"We can help this way," explained Brother Elswick. "We purchased some Graceland scholarships for our children. Some don't plan to use theirs. We want you to accept one."

I promised to think it over and see about returning the money to them. No—that was not what they wanted. They were offering me a gift.

"All we ask," said Brother Elswick, "is that you make good in the church. We want you to attend our own college. We want you to grow in the church."

So it came about that my thoughts were directed Gracelandward. If I have been able to make good in the church, much of the credit belongs to this gospel team. But I wonder if they knew when they sent me forth to grow in the church how few times I would worship again in the little white church at Carson.

I often missed that pastor and his wife who loved their flock. I missed the Saints with whom I grew up. Our ties were as close as kinship, even as you find it in your branch.

The grass has long been green over the graves of these good Saints. How good it was that there remained an Edna, also an Irvin, from another faithful family, to carry on the responsibilities! The little branch still may struggle for existence, even as other small groups do. If in the hours of discouragement a pastor and his wife wonder if the effort is worth while, I have this to say, "If from your church doors can go forth an Alta to become the half of another gospel team far away; or a Doris with her capabilities and loyalties; a Jean whose quiet faith shall be an inspiration to many; a Joan with her leadership for youth; or boys whose posterity rise up to bless the church, then you and those after you have not labored in vain."

God bless the gospel teams, man and wife together, wherever they may be.

In Memoriam to

Joseph H. Anthony

as given by E. J. Gleazer, Jr.

IT IS OFTEN SAID that you can tell a man's character by the literature he reads. And I believe Joseph Anthony's character is best shown by the literature he read.

I want to read some verses which he had underlined from poems that he loved very dearly. One of these poems is "Rabbi Ben Ezra" by Robert Browning.

Grow old along with me!
The best is yet to be,
The last of life, for which the first was made.
Our times are in His hand
Who saith, "A whole I planned;
Youth shows but half. Trust God; see all,
nor be afraid!"

Another bit of poetry he loved and read many times was—

For I have learned
To look on nature, not as in the hour
Of thoughtless youth; but hearing oftentimes
The still, sad music of humanity,
Nor harsh nor grating, though of ample power
To chasten and subdue. And I have felt
A presence that disturbs me with the joy
Of elevated thoughts; a sense sublime
Of something far more deeply interfused,
Whose dwelling is the light of setting suns,
And the round ocean and the living air,
And the blue sky, and in the mind of man:
A motion and a spirit that impels
All thinking things, all objects of all thought,
And rolls through all things. Therefore am
I still

A lover of the meadows and the woods,
And mountains; and of all that we behold
From this green earth; of all the mighty world
Of eye, and ear—both what they half create,
And what perceive; well pleased to recognize
In nature and the language of the sense
The anchor of my purest thoughts, the nurse,
The guide, the guardian of my heart, and soul
Of all my moral being.

Nature never did betray
The heart that loved her; 'tis her privilege,
Through all the years of this our life, to lead
From joy to joy: for she can so inform
The mind that is within us, so impress
With quietness and beauty, and so feed
With lofty thoughts, that neither evil tongues,
Rash judgments, nor the sneers of selfish men,
Nor greetings where no kindness is, nor all
The dreary intercourse of daily life,
Shall e'er prevail against us, or disturb
Our cheerful faith, that all which we behold
Is full of blessings.

JOE ANTHONY had taken the clapper from the old church bell and had planned to mount it with a plaque cast from the bell metal as a monument to the brick church. As a dedication, he had started a poem, "To the Bell in the Old Church Tower."

Borne clearly upon the air waves,
Far above the prairie sod,
Your voice brought hope and courage
To a people seeking God.

Then there is a poem from his latest book, Lamoni's Passing Parade, which I would like to read.

THE PASSING PARADE

Down the road of life they pass, each day we see them go
Along the way—a column vast—with measured step and slow.
No trumpet sounds its lusty call, no gaudy streamers flung,
No pomp or show adorns their march toward the setting sun.

Their way the common way of life, they form life's great parade,
Living, loving, toiling, dying, marching unafraid.
In youth we glance but turn away, no sign foreboding see,
This constant tread of marching feet concerns not you or me.

But years roll on with quickened pace, and ere the time seems long
We find ourselves unconsciously included with the throng.
Then down this time-worn trail we tread, caught in the vast parade,
And silently accept our place with stoic mien and staid.

Though our part is commonplace with virtues oft unsung,
Along this course we carry on and toil till life is done;
And while we journey on our way the years speed on apace,
God grant we leave some token rare to those who take our place.

As we gained inspiration when we followed others' lead,
May we in turn give worth-while aid to those we find in need;
For strength is gained when once we share the treasures we have panned
From out life's stream and passed them on to other worthy hands.

We take the place of others who have gone this way before,
May those to come lend wisdom vast and prestige to the corps,
That all may nurture tolerance and work in unity
And thus complete the cycle planned for all humanity.

That from its dim beginning e'en until the end of time
The course of human effort form a firm, unbroken line:
That the spirit of true brotherhood the Great Creator made
May glorify this heritage—the passing world parade.

IN EARLY YOUTH an individual rarely dedicates his entire life with clarity of purpose and well-defined understanding. Yet every chapter of Mr. Anthony's interesting life lingers on two objects: the town of Lamoni and the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. His talents have been manifold, but his work was done with a singleness of purpose—to perpetuate the principles of the Great Leader.

Joseph Herman Anthony, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Anthony, was born at Wilbur, Nebraska, August 22, 1884. In June, 1890, he moved with his family to the Salt Lake City area where his father labored in the Rocky Mountain Mission for the Reorganized Church. This was an impressionable period in his life and in 1895 his father baptized him into the Reorganized Church.

In April, 1897, when Joseph was thirteen years old, the family moved to Lamoni. Here he entered West Side School, where he made many friends which were to remain an important influence throughout his entire life.

In 1905 he was united in marriage to Margaret B. White, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. C. White. For a time he worked as a harness maker for Herb Teale, who came to be a very close friend and confidant and who later advised him to accept a position with the Herald Publishing House. It was here he became interested in writing. His Birds of a Feather and Matty, running serially in the Stepping Stones, were later published in book form.

HIS HEART'S INTEREST, however, was instrumental music, and after the Herald House moved to Independence, he was asked to initiate a band and orchestra project in the Lamoni Public Schools and Graceland College. In this capacity he served the college twenty-six years and the schools for twenty-one years. He was a pioneer in the educational instrumental music movement in the state of Iowa and is widely recognized in this field. Not only have many music teachers developed under his direction but hundreds of students give him credit for moral guidance and inspiration.

He was ordained an elder in 1939 and accepted this charge with greatest humility. For many years he participated in youth work at the Lamoni reunions and Nauvoo youth camps, supervising various phases of handicraft he considered vital to young people.

In 1944 he became ill, and at this time climaxed his service to Lamoni in writing The Passing Parade, his tribute to the town in which he had lived fifty-five years.

He died October 27, 1952, at Leon, Iowa. He enjoyed his many friends and relatives and was especially devoted to his family: Margaret, his wife; Mr. and Mrs. D. Herman Anthony and daughter, Barbara Jean, of Des Moines; Mrs. Helen Claiborne and daughter, Norma Wray, of West Bend; Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Wyckoff of Heidelberg, Germany; and Mr. and Mrs. Paul A. Anthony and sons, Wayne, Dick, and Bobby Joe, of Des Moines. One daughter, Pauline, preceded him in death. His brothers, L. G. Anthony of Lamoni, D. S. Anthony of San Antonio, Texas, and one sister, Mrs. H. H. Gold of Chicago mourn his passing.

WE HAVE COME TOGETHER in this sanctuary this afternoon to memorialize the contribution made to our lives and to this community by Joseph Anthony. We are here also to seek those resources and that intelligence which can clarify our vision of life, its purposes, and our individual part in the eternal pattern.

Joe Anthony was a friend of mine as he was of so many of you assembled here. He made no attempt to force himself upon people. But there was in him a genuine affection for young and old alike. People were his stock in trade. In the expressions of his many talents there was this dominant chord of a basic interest in others. Along with this love for his fellow-humans, Joe forged ties of loyalty. He was inclined to have faith in his fellow-men. Occasionally, as happens to anyone who loves deeply, there were disappointments or hurts. But there were the great compensations of heights of friendship not known to those who fear to give their hearts in outward expression.

Perhaps Joseph Anthony could understand the sadness of Jesus as he wept over the city of Jerusalem or His pain at the betrayal by Judas and yet the triumphant decision made in the Garden of Gethsemane—that notwithstanding the pain, which is an associate of love, and notwithstanding the inadequate response of His disciples, the way was now clear; His relationship with His Heavenly Father was never more certain, and Jesus could go to the cross and say simply, "Father, it is finished; thy will be done." He who has never known sorrow has never known real happiness. He who has never known grief has not known transcending joy. He who has not loved deeply, without reservation, has not known the heights to which a life can rise.

UNCLE JOE, as he was known to many, was a teacher. He did not seek station in life, prestige, or riches. His reward was in the achievement and the growth of those he taught. Through their expression he found fulfillment. A generation of Graceland and Lamoni students knew the kindness of his tutelage. They found his love for the beauty of music to be a contagious thing. He was not an autocrat at the teacher's desk, but rather one who could beguile the task of learning by leadership, by evoking interest, by encouraging teamwork. Joe had the primary requisite of the good teacher—an abiding interest in the student. And, as is true with the good teacher, he did not stand in the way of his students' growth. Rather, he bade them Godspeed in their development. And eagerly he sought news of their achievement and gave evidence of sincere joy at their success.

Joseph Anthony was a craftsman. He was talented in more ways than are usually assigned to a man. As a writer he recorded what he considered the way of the good life in books for youngsters, who read them with appreciation. For the town of Lamoni he set down personal sketches of the varied personalities that have formed the community in which we live. He wrote the copy, set the type, and printed the book.

As a musician his contributions were many. Joe was deeply influenced by the history and atmosphere of Nauvoo. In imagination's eye he saw the devotion, the consecration, the vision and sacrifice of those people who sought to do God's will in community life and at tremendous odds. As one of the early participants in the youth camp movement, he walked by the Mississippi River at night and recorded the vibrations of his heart in the hymn, "Where Other Feet Have Trod."

Where other feet have trod, where other hearts have loved;
We come today, devout, resolved—
We will follow our God.
Our lives will speak anew, faith in a prophet true,
Proof as of yore the world he bore,
Where other feet have trod.

Our friend and brother loved Graceland College. His pen gave expression to this sentiment in the melody and words of "Forward Now, Old Gold and Blue." Surely there is evidence here of the kind of person he was. An artist reveals his personality in the form of his creations.

We must never know defeat; we dare not e're give in.
Graceland, dear, your flag we bear, our duty plain we see.
We'll fight for you, we'll die for you,
O Graceland, fight to victory.

And in another mood, when the students needed a football song, Joe arose one morning and wrote the Graceland Yellowjacket song, which with its driving tempo is heard each school year.

And in the beauty of finished wood, this craftsman revealed his love for the church of his choice. From the ruins of the old brick church he took scores of wood remnants, cleaned them, fashioned them together, polished them, and made a pulpit which was used in the Coliseum and now stands in a part of this building. This served to remind the Saints for twenty years that just as out of the ashes there had come this article of utility and beauty through the efforts and devotion and skill of a man's hands, as surely there could rise out of those ashes by the same token a new sanctuary, a new house of God.

THE JOE ANTHONY I knew was a man of God. Quietly he went his way doing good. He did not lay up treasures on earth—but I am sure he laid up treasures in heaven. He was a humble man. He did not seek the spotlight. This town is a better place because he lived here. Many of us are better people because we knew him. In a kindly, informal way, and perhaps unknowingly, he taught many of us the virtues of the Master. In my contacts with him, I was reminded of the Great Teacher who also was not given to show, who also was a master carpenter, who also revealed kindly good humor, and who also saw beauty in the flowers of the field, the flight of the swallow, the promise in a child's face, the miracle of an unfolding life. He was a man acquainted with grief, but he lived most abundantly. He reminded me of the one who said, "I am the resurrection and the life; he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live; and whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die."

There were things to do that Joseph Anthony did not get accomplished. The physical tabernacle did not have the strength to see to fulfillment all the desires of this man's heart. For such a one the promise of eternal life gives hope and assurance. Who is there who can say in the light of the spirit we feel here that this man's work is ended? Rather may not the talents mellowed and refined by experience now be ready for their fuller expression, for their more complete ministry as his spirit moves on. The details of what is to be cannot be comprehended by us, but of this we are sure: the testimony of the Spirit of God, of the best we know, of our hearts as we stand in quiet contemplation under the stars at night, is that those who have known love here shall know love there, that those who have served here shall have opportunities for greater service there. It is inconceivable that a soul which has become rich and fine, but fettered by physical handicap that binds its strivings, should not go on to a new kind of expression.

Part II

IT IS A BEAUTIFUL SCENE as the boat approaches Papeete. The island is mountainous and clothed with trees, shrubs, and grass. The pilot boat came out to meet the ship. I was much surprised that many of the men aboard the boat climbed up the ship's side and looked around, peeping in at portholes and causing the man in charge to reprimand some of them. I understood this better after we got ashore and went up to Brother Gilbert's house. The curious fellows were all there with the rest of our people who were in Papeete at that time.

Brother Wilmer Gilbert was waiting for us on the pier. He welcomed us for Brother and Sister Devore, as they were in the Tuamotus and so troubled with seasickness that they preferred to send a substitute.

We walked up the beautiful drive that runs along close to the shore from the landing to the part of Papeete where our people were located. It was very hard for me to walk that far as I had not eaten and retained my food for thirty-five days.

Reception by Church People

All our church members who were in Papeete were gathered in Brother Gilbert's house waiting for us. As we entered they began singing a song of welcome, and then we had to shake hands with every person present. After a little while they took their leave, and by the time each had shaken hands and said, "Ia ora na" we all knew that phrase used for greeting or going.

Brother Gilbert began getting dinner. Sister Burton helped him. Captain Burton had to return to the ship to look after business matters. I rested on Brother Gilbert's bed while Hubert tried to help. By and by we had dinner. How good it was to eat and realize that what I swallowed would stay down! In a day or so I had fully recovered my strength and was able to do my share of the work.

The Mission House was prepared for Captain and Sister Burton. We used Pae's house (pronounced Pie), one large room and a porch. A sort of kitchen was at one end, the bed at the other, and a table with two or three chairs—just for utility, not for beauty. We found this true of all the houses where we went.

One Sunday we had prepared to spend the day at Tiona (Zion). This was another little village of our people where T. W. Smith had lived part of the time. We drove out in an old two-seated spring wagon. It was four or five miles out of Papeete, situated on a hill. There was no wagon road up the hill, so we had to walk. This was hard on Brother Burton, who perspired profusely. We had a nice meeting in the church that Brother Smith had caused to be built. Many of our people from Papeete were there. They had arranged a dinner and had the table set out of doors. When they led us to our places around one end of the table, I was amused and rather startled to see my own silver knives and forks staring up at me. When we got back to Brother Gilbert's house, there were my knives and forks just where we had left them after breakfast that morning. We never lost anything through dishonesty while we were among those natives. In other places the people were not so well mannered.

Almost at once the French government began to be unpleasant about the "Evanelia." Owned by Americans and sailed by Americans—what right had she in French waters? After quite a long delay, the dispute was settled by making the native Bishop Metuaore the owner of the vessel and hiring a native captain. This was approved, but it took long hours of tiresome meetings for Captain Burton and Brother Gilbert, who always had to be with Brother Burton because he knew both Tahitian and English. Finally it was arranged so that we could sail for Kaukura to meet Brother and Sister Devore.

By Alice Montague Case

Visit to Kaukura

About the middle of January, 1895, we prepared for this visit. When we went aboard the boat I was filled with consternation! There were thirty-five people in sight—where once there had been seven. Their luggage was piled in every available space. As Brothers Scott and Neimann had returned to America, one berth was not needed for the Americans, so they piled it high with chests and boxes. One enterprising lad chose the chest nearest our berth for his bed. I spent most of the first night on board keeping his feet out of my face. He was not there the next night.

The weather was not very good, and we kept going, going, and not arriving anywhere. We had no cook, and nobody had much to eat but hard bread such as sailors formerly used, so Brother Gilbert became desperate. He came down and made a fire, hunted until he found some cans of beef and some potatoes. In the biggest kettle he could find, he made some nourishing soup. Everybody, including me, was glad to eat it. That is the only cooking I remember anyone doing on that trip.

On the tenth day Captain Burton got out his nautical machinery and "took the sun." He found we were badly off our course and took over the running of the ship. We landed in Kaukura next day, after he prevented our going clear by on the wrong side. There we met Brother and Sister Devore, who were very happy to see us all. They had been there quite a long while and were earnestly trying to do the best they could, though neither of them spoke the language fluently.

We had brought our melodeon, and Brother Gilbert helped us with the singing. I have forgotten to say that Brother Will McGrath was on board also with our crowd from Papeete. He could not stand staying there and seeing all his friends leave for another island. Besides it was his object to see all he could of the island world.

The friendliness of the people won our hearts. We tried hard to be able to converse with them, but had not yet mastered enough of the language to prolong the talk. Hubert and Will were much ahead of me in talking with them. They would go out among them and learn words and sentences by hearing them said. I was learning by book. I had borrowed a dictionary and was trying to make myself a copy of it. It was quite an undertaking to copy in script and was some time before I finished it. I still have it.

At Makatea

We were supposed to go next to Niau, which was the home island of Pohemiti, but the wind was not favorable and Brother Burton was not on board to tell us where we were—so the captain decided we would go to Makatea. I have forgotten to say that Will McGrath went out from Kaukura in the small boat with us to reach the "Evanelia" as we started to see us off. It happened he was not in sight when the boat started back to shore, so he was obliged to go along with us. His clothes were on Kaukura where he intended to stay with Brother Devore. When we reached Makatea he went ashore with us, and we three went on studying the language and doing what we could about helping the natives. He shared Hubert's clothes.

Makatea is just a mountaintop rising from the sea. The mountain rises in a stony wall broken here and there by openings like caves. We climbed up to those places and found instead of floors of sand they were like ponds of water extending far back into the earth. Then a half or quarter of a wall would rise, separating it from another lake of water. The natives told us that T. W. Smith baptized nearly the whole population of that island in one of those pools in the caves.

The little town was situated in a small half circle of valley land where the mountain drew back. There were about one hundred people living there. Vessels could not land there, and frequently passed by on the other side of the island. We wondered why the village had not been built over there in a similar valley. Probably it was because that was the windward side, and a high wind might do damage in such a valley.

One day while we were writing our copies of the dictionary the cry arose, "A ship! A ship!" It was the "Trevaroa," and her captain came in with another man to call on us. He said that Mrs. Devore was on board and as soon as she was ready the boat would bring her in. She soon came, and we were very glad to see her. She had planned this visit as the Sunday school was soon to have its Mahana oaoa, or picnic day. She wanted to see that it was done right, as she was superintendent of the Sunday school in all the groups. She took charge at once and we all helped her in every way we could. It was over before long and was indeed quite a nice picnic.

Black Leprosy

This island was the place where we saw our first victim of black leprosy. Hubert and I, with Will of course, went to call on a man who, the natives told us, was sick. We asked him what his trouble was. He unwrapped a not too fresh bandage from his leg. As soon as Will caught sight of the series of black spots on the leg, he caught Hubert by the arm. "Don't you touch him, Hubert! That's black leprosy! I've seen it in Chinatown!" He almost pulled Hubert with him out of the door. I said a few words to the poor man, then said, "Ia ora na," and followed them out.

Black leprosy is not easily contagious. We didn't know anything about it at that time, but saw quite a bit of it later. Sister Devore had cautioned us always to wash our hands after we had shaken hands with a number of natives, but she had not mentioned leprosy. We saw many of them after that on various islands.

First Conference

The time soon arrived when we were to meet the "Evanelia" at the place of landing. We had to walk across the top of the island. Steps were hewn in the rock so one could climb to the top. After that it was mostly level, but we had to walk single file. It was not far as the island is not very big.

We have heard since that some product has been discovered there that has made fortunes for the finders. I'm afraid they spoiled the natural beauty of the place. We were soon on board and starting for Rairoa where the conference was to be. After two or three days of sailing, we arrived at our destination. If Brother Burton had had charge, it would have taken about half the time. We found the natives friendly as usual, and they had a nice lodging place for us, and also for Sister Devore, who was with us on the "Evanelia." Shortly after we got there, the Kaukura people came with Brother Devore. Brother Newton also came from one of the more distant islands. He was an Englishman, and the "h's" he constantly put in interfered with his use of the native language. He had fully made up his mind to return to America as soon as conference was over, which he did. We had a good conference. The meetings were quiet with almost no altercation. When the sessions were over, Brother Gilbert announced that he was considering returning to the States to get a companion before he finished this mission, and in due time he did.

Obsession for Folly

By Emma M. Phillips

BETTY CHAPMAN eased herself forward from the depth of the big chair as she smiled up into the pleasant face of Earla Kivel, leader of the Fairview women's department. Four years ago when Betty and her husband, Ben, had moved to Fairview, Mrs. Kivel had been in charge of the women's department. Betty had admired her from the first meeting, and the admiration had increased during the four years the older woman had served as leader.

Betty took a folded slip of paper from the small basket that Mrs. Kivel was holding. The paper would contain the name of the woman who would be her secret sister for the coming year. She glanced about the room. Here was an average group of women—some neat, some dowdy. Some talked too much about nonessential things; some were serious and deep enough to outreach the pastor. Most of the women were older than Betty. One of them would be her secret sister, and she would also be the secret sister of one of them.

Cautiously she unfolded the paper she held—Hettie Refus. She folded it quickly and looked about her. It couldn't be. She must have read the name wrong. Cautiously she unfolded the slip of paper again. The name was Hettie Refus. Betty folded the paper and shoved it into the bottom of her crowded purse. Why did she have to get that woman? Any one in the group would have been better.

She looked across the room at the tall stern woman who was to be her secret sister for the coming year. Mrs. Refus was also her next-door neighbor, and there was a fence between their houses. The fence didn't annoy Betty and her husband as much as the hole in it did. Mr. and Mrs. Refus owned a police dog and a flock of chickens. The dog was always wiggling through the hole to play with Betty's two-year-old son Dick. The play always ended with the child's being knocked down and frightened by the huge dog. The chickens were always coming through the hole to scratch in the garden. Whenever Ben spoke to Mr. Refus about the matter, his answer was always, "I'll get that hole fixed as soon as I can." And every time he said that, it seemed his wife would call him into the house immediately. Betty was sure that Mrs. Refus eavesdropped on every conversation that their husbands had about the hole in the fence.

AND NOW SHE WOULD HAVE to send presents to that woman for a whole year. "I won't do it," Betty told herself, "I'll trade the name with someone." She thrust her hand into her purse and began searching for the paper. After the sudden impulse had passed, she began to reason with herself that she couldn't possibly ask to exchange the name. Such things just weren't done among adults. It would make her appear juvenile. Her fumbling hand found the paper and gave it a tight wish - this - was - black - magic squeeze.

Betty snapped her purse shut again. "I'll send her gifts," she hissed to her inner self. "I'll send Mrs. Hettie Refus gifts just like the ones she would be sending me if I were her secret sister. I'll send her the stingiest, meanest gifts I possibly can."

That evening when it was impossible for her small son to hear the conversation, she told her plans to her husband. Ben listened to her attentively, but he made no comment. Betty talked on and on, every minute becoming more enthusiastic with her strategy for vengeance. "I'll get even with her," she declared, then asked, "Don't you think that is the best way to handle the situation?"

"That, Honey, depends on who you are trying to be."

"Who I am trying to be? What do you mean?"

"If you are trying to be like Mrs. Refus, your plans are fine. But if you want to be Betty Chapman, your plans are wrong. You aren't a mean person, but you'll be known by the colors you fly. You sound as though you want to fly the same colors as Mrs. Refus, and that's not natural for you."

Betty pushed her moist palms against her forehead. "Oh, no! I wouldn't want people to think about me the way they do about her. What'll I do?"

"Send her the gifts you would normally send a secret sister. Pretend you are buying for that little old lady up the street—the one who gives me the cheery 'hello' every morning when I'm going to work."

"Mrs. Tuttle?"

"Yes, that's the one. She'd make a good secret sister."

"I wish she were my secret sister. I've worked myself into such a nervous pitch over this I feel sick inside."

THAT NIGHT was full of restless dreams for Betty. Instead of sleeping she visioned gifts she might make and gifts she might buy. Any woman in the department would have made a better secret sister than her next-door neighbor. She thought about the gifts that she might make for Mrs. Tuttle and for the other women. During her restless sleep she gladly planned gifts for all of them. But always, after planning a gift there appeared that angular stern face of Hettie Refus.

In the morning when the alarm clock gave its shrill cry, Betty was still trying to sleep. She shut off the alarm and got up. Before she was dressed she had the solution to her problem. She would give Mrs. Refus much nicer gifts than she would ordinarily give to a secret sister. She would shower her with beautiful gifts all during the year. She would be sure to attend the end of the year meeting next January, for she wanted to see the pained expression on Mrs. Refus' face. Betty decided that she would spend the year working toward that one minute when she would be able to humiliate her neighbor.

That very month, January, she sent Mrs. Refus an expensive handkerchief and a friendly little card announcing that the gift was just a symbol of how happy she was over her selection of a secret sister. In February she sent three gifts: A heart-shaped box of candy for valentine's day, and a box of homemade cookies on Washington's and Lincoln's birthdays.

Mrs. Refus brought her presents over to show her neighbors. Ben smiled as he sampled the cookies. "These are good," he declared. "How about getting that recipe for Betty? I'd like some of these in my lunch."

"I'll leave you some," beamed Mrs. Refus, "and I'll leave some for Dick to nibble on, but I can't get you the recipe until next January when I find out who my secret sister is." She turned to Betty, "What did you get from your secret sister?"

Betty had to tell her that there had been no gifts and no cards as yet.

WHEN EASTER CAME Betty sent Mrs. Refus one of the latest church books. Again Mrs. Refus brought her gift over for Betty and Ben to see. "If you don't have a copy of this book," she said, "I'll let you borrow mine. It's marvelous reading. Whoever my secret sister is, she certainly has a wonderful choice of gifts." Betty looked at the woman so happy over her gift, but she thought only of the way she would look when she found out who was sending the gifts.

The Easter mail brought Betty a simple handkerchief folded into a simpler greeting card.

It was in June that the playful police dog wriggled through the hole in the fence again to play with Dick. He knocked the child down and caused him to cut his lip on a sharp stone. Betty was furious. She went immediately to Mrs. Refus. Both women were angry, and they made no efforts to conceal the fact. Because no settlement could be reached under such conditions, Betty left.

She went around the fence into her own yard and found the mailman had left a package for her—a birthday gift from her secret sister. She took it into the house and opened it. It contained an ugly brown apron. The cloth was so thin that a few washings would wear it out. Betty put her hands over her face in an effort to hold back tears of anger.

Dick stood in front of her, "Mama cry."

Betty forced a smile. "It's almost time for Superman on television, dear. You turn it on, and Mama will watch it with you."

Betty watched television, but she kept thinking about the next gift she would send Mrs. Refus. Instead of seeing Superman she visioned how ashamed her neighbor would be next January. She planned the gift she would send in July for a wedding anniversary present.

During the following days Betty spent every spare minute she could embroidering a luncheon cloth on which she had stamped wedding bells. With every stitch she took in the complicated work she quietly enjoyed thinking about how she was hurting Mrs. Refus. That woman would be so angry with her that she would likely put a cement foundation on the fence and build it three feet higher. There would be no more chickens in the garden, or playful big dogs, and best of all no more Mrs. Refus running in to brag about her gifts.

WHEN MRS. REFUS received her luncheon cloth as a wedding gift she not only brought it over to show Betty and Ben, but took it to the women's meeting to show everyone in the department. The cloth was a work of art. Betty didn't mind not being able to receive the compliments on her work; she thought of greater compensation to come.

It was at the same meeting that Betty made an important discovery. They were making cloth dolls and toys to sell at a bazaar. Mrs. Refus had stopped by Mrs. Kivel's to get a bag of cloth scraps that the leader wanted the women's department to have. "Mrs. Kivel isn't feeling well," explained Mrs. Refus. "I saw her yesterday in the store, and I told her since I was bringing scraps of cloth here I might as well bring hers too." She tipped over the bag and dumped the scraps on clean newspapers on the floor.

There, amid the bright pieces of cloth, Betty saw scraps of the hideous brown cloth from which her apron had been made. She picked it up and studied it. This cloth came from either Mrs. Kivel or Mrs. Refus. That meant that one of them was her secret sister. She sat staring at the cloth, wondering which woman had sent her those inferior gifts.

She heard the voice of Mrs. Refus directed to her. "That brown cloth must have come from Mrs. Kivel. I never saw it before."

"There," thought Betty, "is my answer. Mrs. Refus is my secret sister. She sent me those gifts. And she won't admit it, of course. Oh, won't she be a sick woman next January when she finds out that I am her secret sister."

That evening, after Dick was in bed, Betty started to tell Ben about her discovery. But she didn't. Ben didn't exactly share her joy in plotting against her neighbor.

IN AUGUST Betty received an embroidered luncheon cloth from her secret sister. It was by no means as beautiful as the cloth she had made, but it was superior to the brown apron. In September she received a box of chocolates. "My gifts are getting better," she told herself, "since Mrs. Refus knows that I have discovered her secret."

It was in September also that Betty sent an apron to Mrs. Refus for Labor Day. The material and the workmanship of the apron far surpassed that of the brown one she had received. "Sometime when she is wearing the apron I made," Betty told herself, "I'll wear my awe-inspiring creation."

As winter came Betty thought more and more about the January meeting. Her plan for revenge became an obsession she could not overthrow. Even at the most inopportune times she found herself thinking about it. She would wake up in the night to find herself unconsciously setting the stage for the January meeting. She wished she could talk to Ben about her feelings, but she knew she would get no sympathy from him. Her only consolation was that January was not far away. Then her deception would end, and she would be free to live a cheerful, friendly life again.

Betty sent Mrs. Refus a gift for Halloween, but she received none from her secret sister. She sent attractive gifts for Thanksgiving and Christmas but received only small gifts herself.

THEN CAME the January meeting. Here each woman presented her secret sister with a gift book for the church's library. Betty had purchased a copy of Stories That Live, and in the front of it she had written: To my secret sister, Hettie Refus from Betty Chapman.

Betty watched Mrs. Refus unwrap the book. This was the moment she had waited for a whole year. She mused that Mrs. Refus might even be angry enough to throw the book at her. Her neighbor removed the paper and read the title of the book. She opened the book and read the message that Betty had written. There was little expression on her face. She turned to Betty and spoke casually, "Thank you, Betty. Thank you for all the nice gifts you have sent me." That's all there was to it. Betty was disappointed.

Soon the time came for Betty to unwrap her book. It was a big book, much more expensive than any of the gifts she had received during the year. The inscription in the front read: "This book is presented to the church library by EARLA KIVEL in honor of her secret sister Betty Chapman." Betty was stunned beyond words. There flashed over her the sudden realization that Mrs. Kivel was a gracious woman only when she was in a position to be admired by those she was leading.

Betty's plans had gone entirely awry. She thought of the hours she had spent in vain, trying to hurt Mrs. Refus. It would have been better if she had tried to help the woman. Betty realized that she had done herself more harm than she had Mrs. Refus.

WHILE SHE PREPARED the evening meal she continued to think about how foolish she had been during the year. She knew now that she had not really enjoyed her cruel plans. Her musing stopped suddenly as she heard Dick screaming in the back yard.

When she reached the yard Mr. Refus was standing there with a noisy rooster dangling by the feet from his hand. Mrs. Refus was kneeling in front of Dick. She turned to Betty, "The rooster tried to spur Dick. It didn't reach him though; it only frightened him."

Betty took Dick in her arms. His body was trembling. His tears were moist against her neck. "Won't you do something about—?"

This Side of Perfection

By Ione Sartwell

GERRY TOSSED her church school supplies on the living room table so carelessly that several little leftover Kirtland Temples fluttered to the floor, followed by a box of crayons. She stooped hurriedly to pick them up and then bolted toward her own room.

Mrs. Maxwell caught a glimpse of angry tears as she went, but she was not too surprised. She had sensed a storm brewing in the yes-and-no answers Gerry had given her all the way home. Her first impulse now was to follow her daughter to find out what was troubling her, but, restraining it for the time being, she turned instead toward the kitchen. "Better to cry a little of the anger off her chest first," she said to herself, "then we'll see what we can do."

FEW BRANCHES could boast a more enthusiastic worker than Gerry Maxwell. It was not empty enthusiasm either, for she could always be depended on to do more than her share. Moreover, she was usually good-natured about it, but, as Mrs. Maxwell well knew, her good nature was limited by her impatience toward others of less enthusiasm and dependability. Charity for the indifferent came hard.

Half an hour later, then, since Gerry had not appeared, Mrs. Maxwell knocked softly on her door and entered to find her sitting sullenly by the window. The storm was over but the clouds had not fled.

QUESTIONS were not necessary. "It's those kids!" Gerry began in a voice choked with tears she now struggled to restrain. "They wouldn't pay a bit of attention. And when I told Brother Hanford how his son was behaving," here she turned to her mother as if begging her to understand her upset emotions, "he just laughed and said 'Well, kids will be kids, you know.' " Her voice broke on an angry sob, but she continued, "Just how do parents expect children to learn anything in church school if they don't know enough to teach them to behave!"

"It takes a lot of patience, Gerry," reminded her mother.

"Oh, it isn't just this time, Mom, you know that." She was appealing again to make her understand. "It's just that this time is the breaking point, and I've decided I'm through—absolutely through! I'm never going to teach a class again. In fact—"

"Why didn't you sing in the choir today?" interrupted Mrs. Maxwell. She thought to change the subject for a moment to divert Gerry's angry resolutions, but she realized immediately that she had selected a poor one.

"Because!" Here Gerry showed signs of pouting. "Donna asked to sit next to me so she could follow the alto better, and she sings so awful I just decided I'd rather not sing at all than sing beside her. Anyway," she excused herself, "Helen doesn't know how to direct. She makes us drag everything."

"You're awfully critical today," remonstrated her mother with determined mildness. "After all, we're not a perfect church by any means. We—"

"Well, why not?" Gerry cut in sharply. "If we're supposed to be God's church and he's perfect, why shouldn't we at least be showing some progress toward perfection? I don't think we've gotten one speck more perfect since—well, since I was baptized, for instance, and that was ten years ago."

"Do you know of a church that is close to perfection?" asked her mother.

"I don't know," Gerry replied with just a touch of stubbornness. "But I'm going to sit back and watch for awhile. Until I do find one I'll leave them all alone. I'm just wasting my time this way."

New Horizons

Mrs. Maxwell gasped, "Oh, but—" Then, seeing her son Tom playing little pitcher in the doorway, she changed quietly to, "Well, come on, we had better eat dinner now."

MRS. MAXWELL was glad they had planned to go to Grandpa's and Grandma's for the afternoon. Perhaps a pleasant day in the country would take the edge off Sunday morning cares. She was glad, too, that they hadn't planned to return in time for church. If Gerry's hurt pride should be healed in the country air it would be better not to open the wound again too soon.

But Gerry's pride did not recover so easily—not this time. She had curbed and silenced her impatience, even disgust, too often. She went to bed worrying a little over how she should tell Brother Sterling that she could not take part in the prayer service Wednesday night as she had promised. She was to talk on what preparation she was making for the reunion, but she was not going to the reunion. Not now. She wasn't going to the prayer meeting either. And next Sunday she wasn't going to church or church school. She wouldn't have to worry any more that someone would ask her to play the organ at the last minute. She wouldn't have to teach little imps what they didn't want to know, or listen to that draggy choir or—

Gerry knew she had found it at last. It had taken her a long time. Her feet were sore. Why, she must have walked a hundred miles today looking for a perfect church. One hundred miles and how many churches? Oh, millions. No, there couldn't be millions of churches; it must be thousands of churches. Oh, well, it didn't matter because she had found it now. It was right there before her, and she would just walk in and—

Let's see. Where should she offer her services first? The choir was her favorite. She glided into a seat. Ah, the conductor was perfect. The voices around her were perfect, so she opened her mouth and joined in. She had sung only a few bars when she suddenly felt eyes looking at her—first one pair of eyes, then two, then three, then the whole choir. Then a rumble seemed to pass through the group. "You're flat," it seemed to say, "you're flat, you're flat." "Oh, no," exclaimed Gerry. "I never sing flat in our choir—" "You sing flat in this choir," said the director. "This is a perfect choir . . . a perfect choir . . . a perfect choir . . ."

Gerry ran down the hall. If she couldn't sing, she could teach, and suddenly she found herself confronting a group of junior boys and girls sitting quietly in their seats waiting for her to begin. "Let's be qui—" No, that wasn't necessary. There was not a sound in the room. "Aaah, why did Joseph Smith go to the woods to pray?" she heard herself saying. Ten little faces stared at her incredulously. "What a silly question," they seemed to say. "We learned that in the beginners' class." "What happened in the woods?" she continued lamely. The ten little faces seemed to be closing in on her. "Ask

She knew what she'd do. If she couldn't sing and she couldn't teach, she'd—yes, she would—she'd pick up all the paper airplanes and clean the gum off the seats and put all the songbooks back in their pockets. She ran to the main auditorium. After she finished that, she'd . . . but where were the airplanes and the gum and the songbooks? She ran from one row to the other. She stooped and looked under the seats. She ran her hands over the tops of the seats and found them dustless. Now, frantically, she ran back to the classroom. She'd pick up all the crayons and chalk and straighten the chairs. But there were no crayons in sight, nor chalk, and the chairs were all in order.

What was that noise? It was the church bell . . . ringing. . . . "This is a perfect church," it seemed to say, "a perfect church . . . a perfect church . . ." And then a little girl was crying, "What can I do, Mama? What can I do, Mama? What can I do?" Why, that was herself, Gerry, at her mother's knee one night following an inspiring family altar. She was only three then. And now—she looked over the orderly classroom with the church bell still ringing in her ears, "This is a perfect church . . ."

GERRY FOUND THE ALARM had almost run itself down by the time she wakened enough to turn it off.

When Wednesday evening came, Mrs. Maxwell prepared to go to prayer meeting as usual. Tom was ready, too. Gerry, she noticed, had been quiet and thoughtful ever since Sunday, apparently trying to work out her problem by herself. Tonight might tell how well she had succeeded.

At seven-fifteen Gerry joined the two of them, dressed and ready to go, just a trifle too nonchalantly.

"Hey!" Kid brothers don't waste time in wondering. "I thought you weren't going to church any more?"

Gerry flushed and glanced at her mother. Then, recovering her usual good nature, she answered with a grin, "Well—ah—I decided I couldn't afford to lose my job."

Fanshawe Women's Department Sends Out SOS!

On September 20, of this year, our church was completely destroyed by fire. Naturally, we feel our loss very keenly. At first we were dazed by the shock, but now after a few weeks have passed our courage is gathering momentum, and we have found our "bearings."

The building of our new church is now under way. The foundation has been laid, and further plans and preparations have been made.

The work is being done by the men of the church. Every man available has been more than willing to do his share. A wonderful spirit of co-operation and fine fellowship prevails among them as they work diligently toward our new goal.

We are happy to state that we have the sympathy and the interest of the community as a whole. Many nonmembers have already assisted in the work, and we have been given permission to use the school building as a meeting place until our new church is erected. For this privilege we are very thankful.

We realize that the building of our new church will be a long, slow process. This experience is a challenge to our faith, and we women feel that we must rally to the cause. We know that with God's help, and through our own efforts, we can rebuild.

As a means of raising funds, our women's department has established a sewing center where we make new garments to be sold and also renovate used clothing for "rummage sales."

Those who wish to contribute may send articles of clothing to our president, Mrs. Jim Holderfield, Fanshawe, Oklahoma. We will gladly pay postage on all packages received.

Note of Thanks

I am grateful for the many cards and letters I received during the three weeks I was a patient at Research Hospital. I also appreciate the prayers offered in my behalf; I feel that I have been wonderfully blessed. I am thankful, too, to the elders who came to administer to me.

Birth of a Mission

On October 31 of this year, Robert S. Farnham, Lamoni Stake President, asked me to assume the responsibility of beginning a group of Saints in the Grant City area. This was a tremendous assignment with only a very few of us to work at it.

We immediately began calling on the members in the area and making plans for church services. As a result, we now hold church school each Sunday morning and a church history class each Thursday night in our home. We are progressing slowly but surely. We have the promise of help from Graceland College and Stake Missionary Virgil Billings after the first of the year.

We need the prayers of the Saints that our efforts will bear fruit pleasing unto God.

We began this venture penniless as far as the treasury was concerned, but we are gradually building a fund through which we can buy the necessities of such church activity. We also are beginning a building fund for the establishment of an active branch in Grant City, with a new church home as our goal. Therefore, certain projects will of necessity be carried on to raise these funds. The first one of importance is the selling of a booklet which my wife has prepared.

Wants Members to Contact Friend

If there are any members in or near Forester, Arkansas, I would like for them to contact Mrs. Jim Angel. She does not belong to the church, but has been reading our literature and seems interested.

I will appreciate the prayers of the Saints for my home and members of my family that they may have the faith and strength to do God's will and that they may have the opportunity to help build his kingdom.

Letter of Appreciation

Although I have been a member of the Reorganized Church for over fifty-six years this is the first time I have written a letter for the Herald. I first heard the gospel in Grand Rapids, Michigan. After being convinced of its truth, I wanted to be baptized, but it was winter and my mother would not give her consent since I would have to be immersed in the river. I prayed many times that God would make it possible for me to be baptized, and one day as I knelt praying I heard a voice say, "Fear not, I will take care of you." I had not expected God to speak to me, but I was very grateful, and soon after this experience Mother gave her consent. I have never forgotten those words, and often they have been a comfort to me.

In 1902 I was married to George DeTray, and in 1905 we moved to Independence. I found it a fine place to rear a family. I have always tried to do the best I could in whatever department I was asked to work, and I can testify that trying to live this gospel brings the greatest satisfaction life offers.

On August 8 I had the misfortune to break my hip and was taken to the Sanitarium for six weeks. This was the fourth time I had been a patient there, and from my experiences with the kind nurses and skilled doctors, as well as the Master Physician, I can truly say the Sanitarium is a house of God. I have also appreciated the visits of the chaplain and the help extended by other members of the priesthood. I am still in bed, but I expect to be up soon.

I want to thank the many friends who sent cards, flowers, and gifts to cheer. I am grateful for the prayers offered in my behalf and for the blessings I have received through administration. May God help all who labor for his kingdom.

Living Hypocrisy

Reading The Call at Evening and seeing the inspiring example of one of your members has caused a definite change in my life. I decided to overcome temper tantrums, faulty relations with those about me, and discontentment with my lot. First of all I found it necessary for me to thoroughly search myself, my attitudes, ambitions, motives, thoughts, and actions. This wasn't easy; the change didn't come overnight. There have been setbacks, and I realize I still have much improvement to make. However, I had reached the point where I was losing the respect, love, and friendship of certain people who were important to me, and I knew I must change.

During visiting hours at the tuberculosis sanatorium, where I was a patient, I managed to be all sweetness and light so that I could impress people. However, in everyday life I griped, criticized, helped grudgingly, and made life unpleasant for the woman who shared my room. In fact, I arranged for her to be moved out, because she talked so much about her family. I figured that no one would find out; anyway, I felt justified in doing it. I knew that her feelings would be hurt, but I reasoned that she would get over it all right in a short while. All this time I was praying daily, giving money to churches and charity, plus reading an article a day from a religious publication. I felt safe, satisfied, and self-righteous. Then repercussions began to come; people didn't understand as I had expected them to. Finally I realized that I was totally inadequate to change by myself, so I knelt and humbly prayed that God would forgive me and asked his help in knowing what I should do to make amends.

I am still weak, but with each new conquest comes added strength to do right and more determination to overcome the faults which warped my life. Now that I know it for what it is, hypocrisy is less a part of me. I am regaining the respect I had lost; I am finding inner peace.

PAULINE SLESACK

Upon This Rock

In the December 8, 1952, Herald on page 18 in Question Time, A. D. says, "I am stuck on the meaning of the word, 'Prevail,' in Jesus' statement, 'Upon this rock I will build my church and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it' (Matt. 16:18). The Catholics say it proves that there will be no apostasy and quote, 'Lo I am with you always, even unto the end of the world' (Matt. 28:20). I am investigating your church."

That is an old Catholic argument. I would like to give my answer to it. "And I say also unto thee, That thou art Peter; and upon this rock—the revealed truth that Jesus is the Christ—"I will build my church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it"—the church.

"For Christ also once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust, being put to death in the flesh, but quickened by the Spirit, that he might bring us to God."—I Peter 3:18. By this spirit he went and preached to the spirits in prison, which were disobedient in the days when Noah was preparing the ark at God's command, wherein eight souls were saved from the flood (verse 20).

"Because of this, is the gospel preached to them who are dead, that they might be judged according to men in the flesh, but live in the spirit according to the will of God."—I Peter 4:6. Jesus went into hell; the gates did not prevail against the church. He (Jesus) took the church into hell. How did he get there? See Revelation 1:18: "I am he that liveth, and was dead; and behold, I am alive forevermore, Amen; and have the keys of hell and of death." When Jesus went into hell, the church went into hell. The gates of hell did not prevail against the church.

In Revelation 20:12 we read: "And I saw the dead"—wicked dead that had been in hell at the end of the thousand years—"... and the dead were judged out of those things which were written in the books."

It seems plain that Jesus was talking about the gates of hell not destroying the church when he would take the church into hell.

I am a retired seventy. On November 30 my wife and I celebrated our sixtieth wedding anniversary. The church has been the biggest thing in our lives.

Question Time

Question:

How could the matter of not breaking the laws of the land, if you do God's will (D. and C. 58:5), apply in Nazi Germany and Communist countries, and to the apostles in Acts 4 and 5? Surely God wouldn't command Christians to obey Hitler's laws for war and Communist laws that prohibit Christian preaching!

New York

C. D. Q.

Answer:

There are two statements in the Doctrine and Covenants that might lead one to suppose that the obligation to obey the law of the land has universal application and could conceivably require one to perform acts contrary to conscience and to divine law. We shall present an analysis of these statements on the basis of a general principle without attempting to apply them to contemporary governments.

The first reads, "Let no man break the laws of the land, for he that keepeth the laws of God hath no need to break the laws of the land; wherefore be subject to the powers that be."—D. and C. 58:5.

If this is to be regarded as a universal law, unrestricted as to time and place, how could we justify Daniel who, in obedience to the first commandment, chose the lions' den rather than to bow the knee to Nebuchadnezzar's golden image to which homage was required by the law of the land?

If it is a universal law, then we must condemn the American Revolution which was a revolt against an established law. Of this revolution, foreseen in vision by Nephi, the Book of Mormon speaks: "And I beheld that the power of God was with them; and also that the wrath of God was upon all those that were gathered together against them to battle" (I Nephi 3:154). The Doctrine and Covenants speaks of this land as having been "redeemed . . . by the shedding of blood" (98:10).

A careful reading of Section 58 will reveal that direction is being given with respect to the acquiring and distributing of lands in Jackson County, Missouri. The prophet evidently is speaking of the constitutional law of the United States. The people were continually warned that all things "should be done in order," and were specifically instructed to "purchase" the land according to the law. Undoubtedly, the prophet had in mind the necessity for the proper securing of titles, et cetera, in the division of lands purchased out of the church treasury as inheritances to individual members. It might very well have applied, however, to all the laws of the United States, for despite the fact that the government failed to protect the Saints from unjust persecution, strict obedience to the law of the land was insisted upon by the church. That the constitution of the United States was divinely approved is indicated in Section 98:10h, which reads, "for this purpose have I established the constitution of this land, by the hands of wise men whom I raised up unto this very purpose." Again in Section 95:2 we read:

Concerning the laws of the land, It is my will that my people should observe to do all things whatsoever I command them, and that law of the land, which is constitutional, supporting that principle of freedom, in maintaining rights and privileges belongs to all mankind and is justifiable before me; . . . befriending that law which is the constitutional law of the land; and as pertaining to law of man, whatsoever is more or less than these, cometh of evil.

The second statement in Doctrine and Covenants that might be misinterpreted is found in Section 112:5 which is not a revelation but does give some indication of the interpretation placed on D. and C. 95:2 and 98:10 by the Saints of that day and by President Joseph Smith. It reads:

We believe that all men are bound to sustain and uphold the respective governments in which they reside, while protected in their inherent and inalienable rights by the laws of such governments, . . . holding sacred the freedom of conscience.

Obviously, there is no obligation to uphold a law, obedience to which would require violation of a divine law or an inherent right. Lengthy discussion might ensue as to what constitutes an inherent right, but freedom of worship would certainly be one.

"Sedition and rebellion are unbecoming every citizen thus protected" (D. and C. 112:5), and only the most monstrous injustice and iniquity would justify any deviation from the path of support of one's government. It must be recognized, however, that the state is more than the government. It is one body, made up of the institutions, the customs, and the culture of a people. The government is an integral part of the state insofar as it expresses the purposes and the will of the state. If, as an organ of the body, the government fails to function in harmony with its true purpose, the body becomes sick; the more serious the disease the greater its deviation from its true purpose. To preserve life, curative measures may have to be taken. Only after the most exhaustive means have been employed to aid the afflicted organ to effect its own cure, however, is the drastic measure of forcible action (revolution) justified. Such action should be taken only with a full awareness of all of the horrors that may result from revolution. It is a better condition for the patient to be sick with the possibility of eventual but slow recovery than to risk death from the effects of too drastic a treatment.

It may be concluded, therefore, that the admonition to keep the law of the land does not provide divine sanction for support of laws that require violation of the inherent rights of man.

Question:

Did early Americans include the "lost tribes"? III Nephi 8:4 isn't definite.

New York

C. D. Q.

Answer:

Other Nephite Scriptures taken with III Nephi 8:4 make it very definite that while the Nephites in America were of the "lost sheep" of whom Jesus said, "Other sheep I have which are not of this fold," there were still others of the lost tribes of Israel who were yet to hear the voice of Jesus, and who would keep record of the same. (See II Nephi 12:64-74, III Nephi 7:13-29, and III Nephi 8:4. Also note Ether 6:10-12, Isa. 11:11-13, Jer. 16:14-19; 31:7-9.)

Branch Officers Elected

PETROLIA, ONTARIO.—The following officers were elected at the annual business meeting: pastor, John Bowman of Sarnia; secretary-treasurer, hostess, and branch recorder, Mrs. Jack Taylor; church school director and music director, Mrs. Jack Churchill; women's leader, Mrs. Lettie Syer; finance committee, Pastor John Bowman, Mrs. Jack Taylor, and Jack Taylor; book steward, Mrs. C. V. Hamil; publicity agent, C. V. Hamil; custodian and branch solicitor, Jack Taylor.

The infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bidner was blessed by Elder John McDonald of Montreal. James John Taylor and William John Albert Hamil have been baptized and confirmed. They were confirmed by Elder Arthur Berkley of Chatham and Elder John McDonald of Montreal.—Reported by C. V. HAMIL

Thanksgiving Service Held

BALTIMORE, MARYLAND.—During the week end of September 4, Patriarch Willard Hield was present. He gave patriarchal blessings to Elinore Briggs, Joyce Fisher, and to Wonza Simmers. Sister Hield spoke to the women's group and Brother Hield gave the Sunday message.

The women's group sponsored their first big dinner and bazaar. Proceeds will go to the building fund. A talent project is currently producing a nice sum for the building fund also.

The Graceland program was under the direction of Sister Paul Edwards.

A baptism service was held in the Dundalk YMCA pool on November 15. Irvin Jones was baptized by A. A. Mehlich; Robert Keller and Robert Simmers were baptized by Arthur Edwards, Sr. It is interesting to note that R. Simmers was baptized from a wheel chair. Confirmation services were on the following Sunday, November 22.

Thanksgiving Day services were of a high quality, produced largely by the labor and devotion of the pastor who transformed the rented hall by the use of lighting, drapes, candles, and recorded organ music. The two newly baptized boys, Robert Keller and Irvin Jones, walked down the aisles carrying candles and lighted six other candles, citing the six principles of the gospel.—Reported by WONZA SIMMERS

Youth Retreat Held

ONTARIO DISTRICT.—The annual youth retreat was held October 11-13 at Camp Geneva, near Orillia, Ontario.

The theme for the week end was "Who Am I?" J. C. Stuart of London opened the series with a class on Saturday evening, "Man's Unending Search for Himself." Missionary William McMurray, Bishop Leslie Kohlman, and Elder John Booth continued the series with classes on related subjects.

On Sunday morning the campers had a prayer service using the theme, "Who Am I—Where Am I Going?" Besides the classes and preaching service on Sunday the campers hiked through the woods along the lake shore.

The young people were very much aware of a living God made evident by the beautiful surroundings of the camp, which is on the shore of Lake Couchiching.—Reported by THELMA I. PEARSON AND HARRY HORSLEY

Play Tournament Held

SANTA ANA, CALIFORNIA.—The annual business meeting was held on September 10 with District President John Davis present. Pastor Rodney Engel presided over the meeting. Officers elected for the coming year are Rodney Engel, pastor; Bill Farley, secretary-recorder and solicitor; Lee Casey, treasurer; Mrs. Charles Calkins, director of religious education; Wayne Hewes, young people's director; Warren Tait, director of music; Allie Hewes, director of drama; Hattie Tait, women's leader; Mildred Calkins, publicity agent; Betty Black, Herald correspondent; Madeline Ostertag, auditor; Warren Best, custodian; and Phyllis Carmichael, historian. The budget was voted on and Evangelist Louis J. Ostertag gave the benediction.

A Book of Mormon lecture was conducted by Elder Roy Hewes during the evening worship hour on September 14 and 21.

The branch was host to the young people from the Southern California District on September 20 and 21. A series of events was started with a beach party at Corona del Mar. Following this, the annual tournament of plays was held with seven branches participating. Bakersfield mission was awarded first prize and the second prize went to the San Diego Branch. The following morning a breakfast for the young people was given at the Carmichael home.

Apostle E. J. Gleazer presented a sermon the evening of September 30.

A farewell party was given for Dennis Norman who has left for Officer Candidate School in Florida. The branch presented him with a Book of Mormon.

Glen Holmes and his staff from Los Angeles presented a teacher's workshop on October 11. Many helpful and stimulating ideas were presented. Following the workshop class, a dinner was held in the lower auditorium.

The Zion's League visited the Riverside mission and the Ontario Branch to participate in a tournament of volleyball games. Santa Ana took the lead in both instances.

A costume Halloween party was held at the Woslum home on October 31.

A potluck luncheon was held at the Parson home on November 2, followed by volleyball games between the Zion's League and the young adults, with the Zion's League taking the lead.

Two children were blessed on November 2. They were Alan Wayne, son of Wayne and Lola Calliham; and David Alan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harchuck. Both children were blessed by Bishop D. B. Carmichael and Elder Roy F. Hewes.

Five members from Santa Ana attended the Religious Education Institute at San Diego on November 8 and 9.

A pre-festive turkey dinner was given November 14. An offering was taken to assist the Auditorium fund. Al Farley was presented a book from the branch as a farewell gift before leaving for the army.

A Thanksgiving vesper service was given on November 26. A special offering was taken for the Auditorium fund.

Elder Carl F. Ruoff from Compton conducted a six-week class on "Joseph Smith the Translator."

During November a traveling basket was circulated by the women's department in order to raise donations for the Auditorium drive.—Reported by BETTY BLACK

New Mission Organized

ORLANDO, FLORIDA.—The following officers were elected for the coming year: Elder William R. Martin, pastor and branch president; Gladys W. Crane, secretary; Deacon Paul Kaiser, treasurer; Priest Novy Bowman, church school director; Jane Roberts, leader of women; Doris A. Fredrick, minister of music; Susan Williams, auditor; Priest Howard Roberts, young people's leader; Bettye F. Kuhnert, Herald reporter; Priest William Williams, branch solicitor; Janet F. Costello, local publicity; Teacher Russell A. Martin, statistician; and Janet F. Costello, official greeter.

On November 1, the church women presented a drama entitled "Challenge of the Cross," directed by Jane Roberts. The cast included Maxine Bowman, Ora Kelley, Geraldine Martin, Verona Martin, Susan Williams, Mary Sue Hostetler, and Bettye Kuhnert. Illustrative music during the program was presented by a trio consisting of Doris A. Fredrick, Audentia F. Moran, and Janet F. Costello.

Mount Dora, Florida, mission was organized on November 5 under the direction of Elders William R. Martin and H. P. Kelley of Orlando. Priest Robert I. Wise was chosen and sustained as mission leader; Gladys Crane, treasurer; Evelyn Wise, secretary; and Mildred Anderson, music director. The mission meets at 1154 Fifth Avenue, Mount Dora, Florida, on Sunday mornings and for midweek fellowship services on Wednesday nights.

The time of the Orlando midweek fellowship services has been changed to Wednesday nights at 7:30 instead of Thursdays at 8:00 p.m.

Out-of-town guests during the past several months who have participated in the preaching services are Priest Fred Weddle, Texas, who recently returned from Korea, Evangelist LeRoy Squire of New York, and Elder T. A. Der-shimer of Pennsylvania.—Reported by BETTYE KUHNERT

Missionary Series Held

BUFFALO, NEW YORK.—A missionary series was held by Seventy Stanley Johnson November 20-26. The lectures were illustrated with slides.

A special confirmation service was held November 23 when Phyllis Palmer was confirmed by Elders P. L. Weegar and Harold Van Buskirk.—Reported by ROGER SULLIVAN

Twelve Candidates Baptized

EAST BAY BRANCH, BERKELEY, CALIFORNIA.—On Sunday, December 7, twelve persons were baptized as the result of effort expended in family meetings, family instruction, and the general instruction of the church. Six of these baptisms were adults, two were adolescents, and four were children.

Seven of those baptized were of one family. At the suggestion of Brother Orval Belville and the desire of the family, they attended church school in East Bay Branch. An alert kindergarten worker, Sister Dora Welboan, heard them mention their desire for more information about the church. She gave this information to the missionary supervisor, Elder Edward Lewis, who began conducting family meetings immediately. Since this family lived in Concord, some twenty miles from the city, this demanded considerable effort on the part of the one conducting the meetings. However, steady and consistent telling of the story won the family and resulted in the baptism of the following: Mrs. Orval Belville, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Belville, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hommond, and Wilda and Wynema Hommond.

Mr. James C. Davenport, who has been attending the branch for a number of years with his wife, Sister Belle Davenport, was also baptized. His enthusiasm was displayed by the immediate desire to be put to work. He assisted on the evening of his baptism with the ushering at the church. The young people baptized were Rogene and Robert Thomas and the children were Ruth Hawley and Dennis Melton.

Confirmation service was held immediately after the baptisms, followed by a Communion service.—Reported by THOMAS R. BEIL

Branch in the News

WOODBRIIDGE, ONTARIO.—The women's department held a turkey dinner on November 4, serving over three hundred people. This is an annual enterprise. Many from Toronto and Humber Bay Branches were present. Members meet twice a month for study and social endeavor.

Twenty-four of the Zion's League enjoyed their annual Labor Day week end on Robert's Island, Georgian Bay, as guests of Pastor and Mrs. Archer. Swimming, boating, fishing and volleyball were included in the activities as well as a fellowship service Sunday morning. Campfires were held on Saturday and Sunday evenings.

The League held a Halloween party in the church basement on October 28.

Miss Mary Cooper has entered nurse's training in East General Hospital, Toronto, and was presented with an umbrella by choir members and book ends by the Zion's League.

At the annual branch business meeting, Elder William Archer, Willowdale, who has served faithfully in the capacity of pastor for many years was re-elected. Other officers elected were counselors, Elder Bartley Farr, Elder Bruce Broadfoot; church school director, Lorne Goodwill; women's department leader, Olive Greenwood; young people's supervisor, Bruce Broadfoot; secretary, Edna Goodwill; music director, Gerald Trueblood; organist, Helen Broadfoot; treasurer, Bruce Broadfoot; historian, Isabel Goodwill; book steward, Al. Leonard; auditors, John Greenwood, Al. Leonard, Maxwell Jackson; publicity reporter, Edith Beggs.

President F. Henry Edwards was guest speaker at the anniversary services in June and Bishop Kohlman at the Harvest Home services in September.

The choir is under the direction of Gerald Trueblood.

Missionary William McMurray held church and cottage meetings during a two-week series last winter and plans are being made to have a two-week series at the church this winter with Elder Al Pelletier as the speaker. Eighteen people have been baptized since January of 1951, the newest member being Mrs. Burrell who was baptized last August.

Marriage vows were exchanged by Wanda Goodwill and Ross Morgan, Audrey Kitchener and Elwood Draper. Elder Archer officiated on both these occasions.

The two children of Mr. and Mrs. Biggs were blessed November 23 with Elders William Archer and John Booth officiating.

are anxious that this mission not be called a Latin-American mission. It is to be a group of Saints, composed of brethren, not Latins and Anglos.

Texas is a fertile field for such development. San Antonio has fine Latin-American members who are now an integral part of the branch and mission there. All of them are bilingual. It will be necessary to concentrate on bilingual people until our churches have trained leaders who can teach those who speak only Spanish. One of the first programs for study for the latter group is that of conversational English.

Out of the branches and missions of the Reorganized Church in the Southwest, and elsewhere in areas populated by Indian peoples, must come new missionaries, young men of Lamanite blood, perhaps, who will be the products of brotherhood in "one fold." These may be white, spiritually and physically—living proofs that the curse is lifted from those who repent and are numbered among the people of Christ. Theirs will be a rich ministry in restoring the Lamanites to Israel. We assist the work, now, as we bring such potential workers into the fold in which we enjoy the protection and the promises of the Shepherd.

I will show unto this people, that I had other sheep . . . for, behold, I will gather them as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings.—Doctrine and Covenants 3: 15.

Before the great day of the Lord shall come, Jacob shall flourish in the wilderness; and the Lamanites shall blossom as the rose. Zion shall flourish upon the hills, and rejoice upon the mountains, and shall be assembled together unto the place which I have appointed.—Doctrine and Covenants 49: 5.

Her words were cut short by Mrs. Refus. "We most certainly will do something and right now." She turned to her husband. "All right," she said, "you've been wanting to kill them. Do it now." Mr. Refus left for the chicken house.

Mrs. Refus took a step toward Betty. "I have been a mean, nasty person most of my life. I was brought up to be like that. I thought I had to fight my way through life. I never knew what kindness meant until you sent me all those wonderful gifts. Nothing so nice as that ever happened to me before. My husband and I have been talking about it, and we've decided to kill the chickens. We're going to give the dog to my brother in the country, and we're going to tear down the fence. We are going to be good neighbors."

Dick had stopped crying, but there were tears in the eyes of Mrs. Refus. The noise in the chicken house stopped.

Mr. Refus hung the body of the rooster on their clothesline. Beside it he hung the body of a plump hen. "That hen is for Dick," he explained. "The rooster will be a tough number."

Betty carried her son into the warm kitchen of her house. As she washed his face for supper she said a silent prayer, "Thank you, God, for making my folly have a good ending. And I promise you that from now on I'm going to be just Betty Chapman. Being mean isn't natural with me, and I pray I never let it be."

DEATHS

KINNAMAN.—Elizabeth, daughter of William and Mary Lewis, was born December 6, 1868, in Brookfield, Ohio, and died November 22, 1952, at the home of a daughter in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. As a small child she moved with her parents to a homestead near Columbus, Nebraska, where they lived six years, then moved to a farm near Stewartsville, Missouri, then to St. Joseph, where she spent the rest of her life except the past five years when she lived with her daughter. On May 1, 1889, she was married to Don Carlos Kinnaman. She had been a member of the Reorganized Church since her youth.

Surviving are two daughters: Mrs. J. W. Sauer of New York City and Mrs. John Zimmermann of Philadelphia; three sons: D. C. of Philadelphia; John of Bergenfield, New Jersey; and Norman of High Point, North Carolina; two sisters: Mrs. George Johnson of Des Moines, Iowa, and Mrs. Mark Holman of Independence, Missouri; ten grandchildren; and eleven great-grandchildren. Funeral services were conducted by Elders Eugene Theys and Emery E. Jennings.

VAN WINKLE.—Florence Ida, was born March 18, 1870, in Mississippi County, Missouri, and died November 9, 1952, at the Weber Nursing Home in Coffeyville, Kansas. She is survived by her husband, W. T. Van Winkle, to whose bedside her funeral service was relayed by loud speaker and telephone; and a stepdaughter, Mrs. W. P. Hart. The funeral was conducted by Elder Myron Cadwell at the Ford Chapel. Burial was in Springhill Cemetery.

RIVERS.—Carrie Etta, daughter of Peter and Nancy Milbourne Van Valkenburg, was born March 4, 1879, and died November 29, 1952. She had spent her entire life in Buchanan County, Missouri, and was a member of the Reorganized Church.

Surviving are two sons: Leo Hockaday of St. Joseph, Missouri, and Ocie Hockaday of Tacoma, Washington; five daughters: Mrs. Beulah Warner, Mrs. Crystal Switzer, and Mrs. Margaret Wagner of St. Joseph, Missouri; Mrs. Irene Beltzer of Huntington Park, California; and Mrs. Bessie York of Seattle, Washington; twenty-eight grandchildren; and twenty-seven great-grandchildren. Funeral services were conducted by Elder Emery E. Jennings. Burial was at St. Joseph.

BUTLER.—Don Lee, was born August 8, 1929, in Jackson County, Missouri, and was killed in an automobile accident December 21, 1952, near Independence, Missouri. He attended Grain Valley High School and was employed by the Independence Stove and Furnace Company until he entered the Navy in February, 1948. He spent eighteen months on Guam, later being transferred to the U.S.S. "DeHaven." His ship was the second in Inchon Harbor in the famous "sitting duck" operation of the Korean War. He received his discharge in February, 1952, and again became an employee of the furnace company. He had been a member of the Reorganized Church since July 2, 1940.

He is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lester Butler of Oak Grove, Missouri; a brother, W. D. Butler of Oskaloosa, Iowa; four sisters: Mrs. Thelma Orendac of Kansas City, Missouri; Mrs. Helen Hilliard of Valrico, Florida; Mrs. Shirley Hubble of Independence, Missouri; and Mrs. Roseanna Alley of Marion, Ohio; his maternal grandparents: Mr. and Mrs. J. R. White of Kingsville, Missouri; and his paternal grandmother, Mrs. Jennie Butler of Independence, Missouri. Funeral services were conducted by Elders Leonard Smith and John Quick at the Speaks Chapel in Independence. Interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery.

LANG.—Lucy E., was born July 15, 1881, at Range, Alabama, and died November 27, 1952. She had been a member of the Reorganized Church since 1916. She is survived by her husband, William; four daughters: Mrs. Cecil Grayson, Mrs. J. E. Bill, Mrs. Mack Smith, and Mrs. Morris Arrington; three sons: Mack E., W. R., and Alma; one sister; five brothers; eighteen grandchildren; and six great-grandchildren. Elder W. H. Drake conducted the funeral service. Interment was in Johnson Cemetery.

DIAMOND.—Alice Alberta Evans, was born October 14, 1871, in Allegheny City, Pennsylvania, and died December 8, 1952, at Okeene Hospital. As a child she moved with her parents to West Virginia and then to Pennsylvania. On July 4, 1888, she was married to A. L. Diamond of Belvidere, Kansas, and the following year they homesteaded near Lacy. Here in their half-dugout and log house six children were born to them. Mr. Diamond and four of the children preceded her in death. She had been a member of the Reorganized Church since 1913 and had served as secretary of the branch and the women's group, and teacher of a church school class. She was active also in community projects.

Surviving are a son, Roy Diamond of Eagle City; a daughter, Emma Christensen of Denver, Colorado; a half brother, John Drenhart of Oklahoma City, Oklahoma; seven grandchildren; and ten great-grandchildren.

SHOPPING LIST

Reading in an old magazine a few days ago I came across the following quotation from an unknown author and pass it along for its simple but effective admonition to repentance: "One of these days I must go shopping. I am completely out of self-respect. I want to exchange the self-righteousness I picked up the other day for some humility which they say is less expensive and wears longer. I want to look at some tolerance which is being used for wraps this season. Someone showed me some pretty samples of peace. We are a little low on that and one can never have too much of it. And by the way, I must try to match some patience that my neighbor wears. It is very becoming to her, and I think it might look well on me. I might try on that little garment of long-suffering they are displaying. I never thought I wanted to wear it, but I feel myself coming to it. Also I must not forget to have my sense of appreciation mended and look around for some inexpensive everyday goodness. It is surprising how quickly one's stock of goodness is depleted."

SUSAN'S FAITH

Aunt Mabel gave little Susan a kitten for Christmas. Susan and her parents lived in an apartment belonging to the grandparents, and it was the general consensus of opinion among the adults in the family that the cat shouldn't be kept. But Susan had fallen in love with the little animal and was determined that she should keep her kitty. At dinner time Susan was asked to give thanks for the food. She folded her hands, bowed her head, and said simply, "Please bless me and help me to keep my cat." That was all. Then she raised her head, looked across the table at her grandfather and said, "Aha, Granddaddy, Jesus is on my side now."

ON HANDSHAKING

One time I heard a minister give an excellent sermon. While speaking, he was poised, confident, dynamic, and his remarks sparkled and crackled with wit, interest, and clarity. After the sermon I passed by him to express appreciation for his excellent ministry. As I extended my hand, his smile was bright enough, but his handshake—ugh! It felt as if, rather than his hand, he had slipped a dead mackerel or a wet dishrag into my palm. As I squeezed his unresisting appendage, I half-expected to wring water out of it.

For some reason my admiration of the man decreased because of his weak handshake. And since then I have always appreciated a good, firm, substantial grip.

A good practice in winning friends and influencing people is to really bear down when shaking hands. Of course, when you feel bone crushing under your grasp, ease up; you are overdoing it. But in the long run you will lose more friends and make more bad impressions by letting people squeeze some limp fingers than by squeezing back, even a little too hard sometimes.

News and Notes

FROM HEADQUARTERS

PRESIDENT GUEST SPEAKER

President Israel A. Smith was the morning guest speaker at the first service in the new church at Council Bluffs, Iowa, on January 18.

ENGLEWOOD CONGREGATION DEDICATED

The Englewood congregation dedicated their church on January 11, with President Israel A. Smith as the speaker. This congregation has been under the pastoral care of Elder Ted Scott, but now is under the pastorship of Elder William LaGrèce. The congregation paid their General Church loan in five years, rather than the allotted time of ten years.

PRESIDENT EDWARDS IN COLUMBUS

President F. Henry Edwards was the guest speaker in Columbus, Ohio, January 4 and 5. He was present at the Communion service at South Church on Sunday morning. During the afternoon of the same day he met with the pastors of the Columbus District, and that evening he was a guest speaker at a joint service at North Church.

W. W. SMITH AT STONE CHURCH

President W. Wallace Smith was associated with Apostle Percy Farrow and the Stone Church pastor, Elder Glaude A. Smith, in the fellowship service for the women of the Center Stake on January 8 in their first Preparation Day of 1953.

APOSTLES TO CENTRAL AMERICA

Apostle Charles R. Hield was in Southwest Texas District recently where he attended a reunion committee meeting. He reports the Saints are enlarging the dining hall at the reunion grounds and it will meet the needs of twice as many people. They are also building four new buildings for children's work. It is anticipated that this year's reunion will be one fourth larger than last year's.

Brother Hield left with Apostle Paul M. Hanson on January 19 for Mexico, Guatemala, Honduras, and El Salvador. They will take pictures of the ruins and plan to do missionary work with the group in Guatemala.

APOSTLE OAKMAN TO EUROPE

Apostle Arthur A. Oakman sails for Europe on the "Queen Mary" on January 23. Friends wishing to write so as to reach him on board ship should address letters as follows: Apostle Arthur A. Oakman, c/o Cunard Steamship Company, New York City, Sailing January 23, RMS "Queen Mary." Most of Brother Oakman's time will be spent in Germany and the new address will be Eichstrasse 14A Hannover, Germany.

CURRICULUM COMMITTEE MEETS

The Curriculum Advisory Committee met in Independence, December 29 and 30. Those attending were Raymond L. Booker, Mobile, Alabama; Albert Fisher, Boston, Massachusetts; L. Wayne Updike, Highland Park, Michigan; R. A. Cheville, Clifford Cole, and Charlotte Gould, Lamoni, Iowa; Mrs. Richard Matson, Kansas City, Missouri; Mrs. G. L. DeLapp, Eleanor Sandy, Arthur Rock, Ruby Williamson, Reed M. Holmes, John Darling, and Edna Easter, Independence, Missouri. Glen Holmes of Los Angeles was the only member of the committee who could not be present for the meeting. This was the second meeting of the entire committee, and another meeting is scheduled for August 27-29. The committee considered the objectives of Christian education and age group characteristics.

Marilyn Sorden

MISS MARILYN SORDEN has been librarian at Graceland College since 1945. She also teaches courses in the use of the library and children's literature.

Marilyn was born in London, England, on October 24, 1921, while her parents, Missionary and Mrs. Dan Sorden, were there under General Church appointment. The first five years of her life were spent abroad, two years in England and three in Jerusalem. She attended fifteen grade schools from the West Coast to Oklahoma and was happy to settle down in Lamoni for her high school work while her father was President of the Lamoni Stake. She was graduated from Lamoni High School in 1939 and from Graceland College in 1941. She received her B.A. with a major in English at the University of Iowa. She enjoys school very much and has spent several summers doing graduate work at the University of Illinois. She received her master's degree in Library Science this fall.

Before coming to Graceland Miss Sorden worked one year in a ration board office in Salt Lake City and taught high school English in northeastern Iowa.

Marilyn has a happy outlook on life and is looking forward to a number of interesting things. She would like to attend more summer sessions at universities, get a summer job in some other field of work, travel for a whole summer, and in time return to Europe and Palestine. She has several ambitions for the growth of the library which now contains twenty thousand books. She recalls the former library which contained mostly donated books. She would like to see it become a very complete center of all kinds of literature which would be helpful for people of varied occupations, and especially a center of study for religious education leaders, priesthood institutes, et cetera.

Marilyn joined the Reorganized Church in 1930. She enjoys working with primaries and was supervisor of the Lamoni primary department for seven years. Since 1927 she has missed only one General Conference.

How to Make an Offering

A MINISTER was planning to give an offering talk in which he intended to urge the people to contribute as much as they possibly could. Before he made his speech, he privately told one of the more affluent members of the congregation, "Now this doesn't mean you. You could finance this whole project yourself, but that wouldn't be fair. These other folks have a right to share in this."

It is common practice for the ministry to direct the people of the congregations to give as much as they can. Only rarely do we hear one saying, "Give less than you can." The story of the widow who was asked to make a little cake for the prophet with her last bit of meal and the story of another who cast in her mite into the treasury, from which incident Jesus drew a lesson about giving, are often used to bolster the argument that one should give all that's possible on every occasion.

On the other hand, we are also referred to the philosophy that every man should look after his own family needs. The Scripture, "He that provideth not for his own denies the faith and is worse than an infidel," is often quoted to support the position that some should be withheld when the offering plate is passed. We talk about our religion being "guided by wisdom," which frequently is interpreted, "That means I'm not supposed to make a fool of myself by overdoing this thing."

Where lies the right? How can one determine how much he should give? Having made an offering, how does he know that it was adequate?

EVERY OFFERING should be motivated by gratitude and love and should be guided by wisdom. But these factors can be mixed in proper proportions only as we have an overall pattern of reference. We should form a habit of giving liberally in recognition to God for his generous providence. This daily attitude of thankfulness is a large part of the background out of which every offering should arise.

Those who recognize themselves as stewards and who understand something of God's plan for mankind have embarked upon a program pointing toward completing their inheritance. They are glad for the right and the ability to work. They enjoy and appreciate the right of possession of the fruits of their labor. Because they have acknowledged God as the provider of all, they have recognized that the individual inheritance is to be built from funds and assets which have been tithed. This has led them to the process of making their accounting annually. Once a year they "check up" on their progress. One of the purposes of this annual accounting is to determine whether or not adequate steps are being taken toward the completing of the inheritance. Such a program looks toward providing the fixed investments (the home), the working capital (the car, personal possessions, and so forth), and both temporal security (health insurance, life insurance, and operating reserves) and spiritual security (participating status in the work of God—the church). It includes the matter of sharing in the cost of providing an adequate church home for one's family. These inheritance costs are to be planned for and met regularly just as are the costs of other needed items.

THUS THE OFFERING each Sunday is to be considered as a part of the total financial program of the individual. Once a year, one should re-examine his plan. Usually that plan will call for a contribution of a certain amount each Sunday. It is not important from the financial standpoint whether one's annual planning calls for making his contribution each Sunday or whether he makes his contribution in one lump sum annually. The important thing is that the offering should be related to one's total financial and spiritual program and to the program of the church. Most people fail, however, to give an adequate offering if they do it just once a year. For that reason, the amount that the annual accounting shows should be given as an offering should be divided into fifty-two parts, and one part should be given each Sunday.

There is another good reason why one should make an offering each Sunday rather than just once a year—giving offerings is habit-forming. It is well for a person to arrange all his activities so that they create good habits. Habits result from actions. We are what our actions make us. The habit of giving is one that most needs to be cultivated if the church is to succeed, for as has been stated, "Zion shall be built by sacrifice."

An important aspect of giving an offering is the understanding on the part of the individual as to what the offering represents. He should think of it as a token or symbol of his own willingness to give of himself for divine purposes and to forego his own desires. One of the fundamentals of effective worship is that in the early part of our approach to God we come to him with an offering of ourselves. We say to God,

So you're planning a Zion. You say your purposes shall not come to naught. Failure is unthinkable. Zion will be. Well, I want to help in any way that I can. I'm serious about this. Here's my offering to show that I mean business. I'm not just pretending that I want to help. This represents a certain portion of my time. I worked to earn it, and I want it to be used in building this Zion. But I'm not thinking of this as money alone. I do this frequently to indicate that I'm always ready to help. In short, I'm always available for the task.

Notice of Professional and Business Men's Institute

It may be that there are some of our good professional and business men whose names have not been given to us for invitation to the Professional and Business Men's Institute, to be held February 11 to 14, inclusive. As has been stated previously, it is not intended that any should be excluded. We would therefore suggest that those who would like to attend feel free to get in touch with us. We are anxious to know the approximate number that will be in attendance.

While at this writing all invitations have not been sent out, the response from those already sent is most encouraging.

THE FIRST PRESIDENCY

The following comes to us from Elder Carl F. Crum of Tokyo. It is a report of the conference in Seoul, Korea, conducted by a group of the members who are military personnel in the Far East.

The devotion to the Restoration of these men in uniform is indeed commendable. A great deal of effort was required to make such a conference possible. Major Caldwell, who has recently been ordained to the office of elder, and his associates are to be praised for their efforts, as should the men in uniform whose love for the church prompted them to participate in this unusual event.

Through the efforts of Major Millard Caldwell, after much hard work and several weeks of preparation, a group of Reorganized Latter Day Saint boys were privileged to get together on November 1 and 2, 1952, for a church convention in Seoul, Korea. Through the co-operation and assistance of the chief chaplain of the Eighth Army, information was sent out to the various units about the time and place of the meetings. Official permission was granted for any member of the Reorganized Church in Korea to obtain a seventy-two-hour pass in order to be in attendance at these services.

When registration was completed it was discovered that out of twenty-four present only sixteen were members of the Reorganized Church, the others being members of the Utah Mormon Church. These withdrew even though they were invited to remain. Undoubtedly the smallness of numbers was due to the misunderstanding as to which church was sponsoring the meeting. Every effort had been made to identify the "Reorganized Church."

The boys started to arrive at the Seoul City Command Headquarters during the afternoon of October 31. As they arrived they were met by Major Caldwell (priest) and M/Sgt. Seth O. Osborn (elder) who had arrived early to act as receptionists and to get each man registered. Provision had been made for every person to bring blankets and mess equipment. Meals were provided in the Army mess hall.

The first service was a priesthood meeting at 1300 hours Saturday, November 1, with Elder Osborn in charge. At 1500 hours on Saturday a business meeting and preaching service was held with Priest Alma Blair in charge, assisted by Kenneth R. Fry and Thomas E. Kemple. Priest Millard F. Caldwell gave the opening address and welcoming remarks. Elder Carl F. Crum of Tokyo could not be in attendance because of his inability to get passport clearance, and Colonel D. A. Gough (priest) was prevented from being present because of work assignments.

At the business session plans were made for a monthly news letter to be circulated to all members in this theater of operations. Plans were discussed for sponsoring a Korean boy to attend Graceland College next term. Thomas Kemple has already accumulated $700.00 toward this project. He estimates that another four hundred dollars must be raised. It is hoped that the Saints will assist in this project and can contact Tommy at his address given below.* Each member pledged himself to—

- a. Push operation opportunity
- b. Attempt to spread the Restoration Story within his locale
- c. Keep in touch with each other through items for the news letter

On Sunday morning, November 2, a sunrise Communion service was held, followed by seven prayers and seven testimonies which proved to be a feast for hungry souls and an experience that will be long remembered. Following this service Priest Alma Blair and Deacon Roy Givens each delivered a sermonette. Both spoke from Scriptures with texts in keeping with the theme, "The Call to Service." The small chapel assigned for these meetings contained an organ and Cpl. Dale I. Swall played for all services. Some small Saints' Hymnals furnished by Cpl. James R. Farley, which he had received from his parents in Kansas City, made possible the singing of Latter Day Saint songs.

Checking out time came all too soon at 1600 hours Sunday afternoon. Some of the men left by jeep, some by rail, one or two by air. Representatives had come from every branch of the armed forces, from Pusan to Capital Hill, from the coast of the peninsula to the west. Some had been away from home as long as one and a half years; others had only recently left their loved ones. Some had not been in an R.L.D.S. meeting, or in touch with the Saints for many months. All left with smiles on their faces, happy in the blessings they had been granted.

Those in attendance were:

Pvt. Grant M. Salzman, Cody, Wyoming; M/Sgt. Seth O. Osborn, Lawton, Oklahoma; Maj. Millard F. Caldwell, Riverside, California; Pfc. Roy E. Givens, Wellsburg, West Virginia; Pfc. Alma Blair, Independence, Missouri; Cpl. Roger F. Hayer, Lamoni, Iowa; Pfc. Kenneth R. Fry, Cameron, Missouri; Cpl. Dale I. Swall, Greenwood, Missouri; Cpl. James R. Farley, Kansas City, Missouri; Cpl. Thomas E. Kemple, Kansas City, Missouri; Pfc. Carrol D. Berg, Waterbury, Nebraska; Sgt. Richard D. O'Dell, Independence, Missouri; S/Sgt. Rex D. Gardner, Atlanta, Georgia; Capt. Charles E. Cockroft, Providence, Rhode Island; Cpl. Harry M. Van Nieuwenhuyze, Memphis, Tennessee; Lynn R. Mayberry, Ogden, Utah.

The Kingdom of God

A church that can make it a fact

By Apostle R. E. Davey

A sermon given June 22, 1952, at the Campus in Independence

And there appeared a great sign in heaven, in the likeness of things on the earth; a woman clothed with the sun, and the moon under her feet, and upon her head a crown of twelve stars. And the woman being with child, cried, travailing in birth, and pained to be delivered. And she brought forth a man child, who was to rule all nations with a rod of iron; and her child was caught up unto God and his throne. And there appeared another sign in heaven; and behold, a great red dragon, having seven heads and ten horns, and seven crowns upon his heads. And his tail drew the third part of the stars of heaven, and did cast them to the earth. And the dragon stood before the woman which was delivered, ready to devour her child after it was born. And the woman fled into the wilderness, where she had a place prepared of God, that they should feed her there a thousand two hundred and threescore years. . . . And the dragon prevailed not against Michael, neither the child, nor the woman which was the church of God, who had been delivered of her pains, and brought forth the kingdom of our God and his Christ.

—Revelation 12: 1-5, 7, I.V.

THE HOPE OF TOMORROW'S WORLD is resident in the challenging ideal of the kingdom of God which Jesus Christ placed as the keystone of the arch in his message to the children of men. Without the kingdom of God we perish! Even our best thinkers frankly admit they have no solution for the problems that seem to grow in intensity with the passing of each year. Instead of being able by our own abilities to solve these problems, we find ourselves becoming more and more perplexed, groping like blind men for a wall.

Jesus Christ, the Son of God, came among the children of men nineteen hundred years ago and issued to those who would accept him as their leader, their Savior, and their Redeemer the challenge of the kingdom of God on earth, urging them to place that kingdom first and foremost in their concern. "Seek ye first to build up the kingdom of God and establish his righteousness," he said, and then all these other things—how we shall be fed, clothed, and sheltered—will fall into their rightful places. We have had a tendency to get the cart before the horse, and to be concerned about temporalities and financial security. Then, after all these things have been taken care of, if there is any talent, means, or time left over we consecrate it to the kingdom of God. But the kingdom cannot be built on this basis.

It is going to be built by sacrifice, self-discipline, and devotion on the part of those who catch the vision of the kingdom revealed in the person and message of Jesus Christ. The vision of the kingdom of God on earth and its far-reaching influence must so grip their hearts that they put it first in their interest and labors.

I REMEMBER ON ONE OCCASION when I was preaching upon this marvelous ideal of the kingdom of God and the hope it holds for the future of the world, that at the close of the service a man—not a member of the church—came to me and said, "That was certainly a wonderful ideal that you presented to us tonight." Then he paused a few seconds and added, "But of course we human beings aren't able to accomplish such an ideal as that."

I smiled and said, "You're telling me."

Then he said, "Do you mean to tell me that you don't believe we can do it either? Why then do you preach such things?"

And I answered, "If man by his own wisdom and abilities could have met the existing problems of the world and achieved such an ideal as this, he would have done so a long time ago. Many good people have sacrificed, and some have suffered and died, in order to achieve ideals that would bring into existence the utopia of the ages. As we look at our world today, we are forced to recognize that we are further from this ideal than ever. We cannot do it alone.

"I am preaching this ideal because I believe God is very definitely in the equation. Whenever God and man have worked together, the impossible has always been accomplished. And I believe it will be accomplished in this instance. I would not waste fifteen minutes of my time endeavoring to advance this ideal if I did not firmly believe that God is interested in and concerned with the building of his kingdom, which is to serve as an ensign to the nations. The ideal is given of him, and many scriptural prophecies assert that he purposes to bring it to pass. Through Jesus Christ he places in our hands the tools by which it can be achieved. We recognize that we face a gigantic task in attempting to build a society of Christian righteousness in which all our activities—social, economic, and recreational—shall be dominated by the Spirit of Christ in a world filled with selfishness, greed, and hate. But people consecrated to such an ideal, having in their possession the 'tools' provided in the gospel and church, plus the presence of the Spirit and power of God, can bring it to pass."

As we look at our world with all its sorrow, its hates and selfishness, its war, and threats of war, as well as its outstanding achievements of worth-while things, we see it is what it is because we are what we are—because we do things the way we do, because we have the ideals, motives and purposes in life that we have.

Certainly it is clearly evident that the only way the world can ever be made better or that any higher or more desirable type of society can possibly be established is by some means changing the life, attitudes, and purposes of society. I desire to read an observation or two so that we may know what some of our leading men think about this basic fact we are endeavoring to emphasize, and that Christ emphasized so long ago when he gave his gospel of regeneration.

THE FIRST ONE I desire to quote is a man who, a number of years ago, was a prominent socialist agitator and organizer in England, John Spargo. After spending nearly his whole life in such endeavors, he finally discovered a great truth which changed his whole outlook on the way the world can solve its problems. This quotation is from an article he wrote that was published in Nation's Business magazine:

It is all too obvious and certain that the attainment of a perfect social state depends not upon economic readjustment alone but upon the deeper and profounder processes of moral regeneration. The minds and wills of the citizens as individuals must be socialized and brought into harmony with the moral laws of God before there can be a perfect social state. It is for this reason that, vastly important as I know economic and political reforms to be, I am no longer content to devote myself to the movements aiming only at such reforms, but find myself turning with new understanding and deepening faith to the larger conception of the social problem which perceives that economic well-being is not the solution but only a part of it. There can be no adequate solution of the problem unless and until the minds and wills and deeds of men are brought into conscious and willing subjection to the moral laws.

What a tremendous truth! Before we solve our problems we shall have to learn this lesson well, and then translate it into action, deed, and conduct. We're not going to build a Christian society just by some economic and political manipulations. First we must develop the quality of life that will make us want to rightly use our economic and social opportunities. Until this is a fact, all else is vain.

The higher types of social co-ordination require a corresponding development in the intelligence and self-control in the individuals concerned; hence also more complete types of social organization require a similar development in individuals. It is not true, therefore, that social evolution can proceed independently of individual development. Upon the moral and mental development of the individual depends the heights to which social organization can be carried. The nature of the individual marks the limits of social development at any particular stage. (Page 196)

John Marchal Barker of the University of Boston, in his book, The Social Gospel and the New Era, writes:

You cannot build a good society out of poor material. Social results follow as the Christian life becomes incarnate in being and conduct. Social quickenings have always followed spiritual awakenings.

I want to read now an observation from a book written by G. T. W. Patrick of the University of Iowa, The Psychology of Social Reconstruction (social reconstruction is what we are talking about when we speak of building the kingdom of God):

Any workable plan for social reconstruction must be based upon an accurate knowledge of the human units which are to constitute the new society. No social system has any chance of success which is not planned with immediate reference to the materials of which the society is composed. A bridge builder has to give quite as much attention to the strength of materials as he has to the use and beauty of his structure. Human beings are the materials of our social order. But our theoretical social reorganization schemes are often planned only to accomplish certain ends and banish certain evils with very little consideration to the strength or weakness of the materials of which they are composed; namely, the human element. It would appear therefore that the reconstruction program of the future must proceed along other lines than those of our present popular movements. We must cease our efforts to make men more comfortable and begin to make them better. Civilization does not depend upon the increase of wealth or upon its equal distribution. . . . It depends upon producing men and women who possess initiative, daring, and constructive power, and it depends upon discipline, poise, loyalty, devotion, and mental and moral health. Most of all perhaps it depends upon the conservation and development of the moral values and issues of life.

FROM SUCH AUTHORITIES as these we see that, before a better society can be built, consideration first must be given to producing better people. They must be brought into conscious and willing subjection to the moral laws of God. Most certainly this is the task of religion and the church. How important, then, becomes the mission of the church. No wonder Christ said, "I will build my church," and took time during the three years of his intensive ministry to do just that. Yes, our only hope of advancing and developing society, of building a higher type of social relationship, is based on the transformation that must of necessity take place in the lives, hearts, and attitudes of the people who are going to constitute that new Christian society. Christ came among men to establish his gospel and to build his church so as to provide us with the "tools" that are needed to accomplish this task, to transform us into the kind of people God can use in the building of his kingdom.

I want to read from Dr. Charles Ellwood again, this time from his book, The Reconstruction of Religion:

The church is the institution organized to embody concretely the religious life of society. Only through suitable organization can the religious life express itself and be developed in the mass of individuals. The more highly developed a religion is the more pronounced will be its institutional character, and the more completely it will become organized. . . . The church is the institution which stands for the organized religious life of man. Without it that life would be powerless and utterly incapable of transforming human society. Viewed from this standpoint, the church is the most important of all human institutions.

How important the church as an organization is if through it religion is to transform society and build a better world, the kingdom of God!

FROM THE STANDPOINT of transforming human society, and building here upon the earth the kind of society that can bless the children of men, emancipate and free them from the things which today curse, damn, and destroy, it can be seen that there must be a church specifically organized for the task in hand; and this church with its God-given task of changing people to build the kingdom of God certainly becomes the most important of all institutions. We think our schools are important and pay large sums in taxes to maintain them. They are important, tremendously so, but compared to the means by which the kingdom of God is going to be achieved, they must fall into second place. The means of building the kingdom stand paramount.

Undoubtedly Christ recognized this when he promised, "I will build my church," and then fulfilled his promise. Frankly, I cannot conceive of so great a task as the building of the kingdom of God on earth being achieved apart from the complete functioning of the divine institution Jesus Christ provided. To say that we do not need a church, that we can get along just as well without it, is to pit our judgment against the judgment of Christ. Certainly he would not have been so foolish as to take the pains to provide a church if our very natures did not demand it.

Then again, there are a lot of people who say it does not make any difference what the type and nature of a church is just so those who belong to it are honest and sincere. But such an idea as that certainly was not in the mind of Christ, for although there were several organized expressions of religion in his day (several of them of Israel and stemming out of the Mosaic law) he ignored every one of them and said, "I will build my church."

If all there is in the Christian religion is that which concerns the inner spiritual satisfaction of the individual alone, then there is not a great deal of importance attached to the type and nature of a church's organization. But if there is aim and purpose in it, a goal to be achieved—such as the building of the kingdom of God on earth—then just how the church is organized, the officers provided, and the message taught make a tremendous difference. Nothing short of that which Christ himself provided in the New Testament church will suffice. It is only logical that Christ, who issued the challenge of the kingdom, would know what was necessary in the church which he provided as the means of its accomplishment.

THE SCRIPTURES tell us clearly that when Christ began to build his church he gathered about him a large number of disciples, then chose and ordained twelve from among them that he called apostles. Subsequently he ordained seventies, and sent them out two by two in missionary capacity. He laid the basic foundation of his church organization, and then, as it moved down through the New Testament experiences under the guiding influence of his Spirit, it developed and unfolded until it became the complete New Testament church.

The apostle Paul had such an appreciation of the church and the important function it had to perform that when he was addressing the elders of the church from Ephesus whom he had summoned to meet him at Troas, he said, "Take heed therefore unto yourselves, and all the flock over which the Holy Ghost hath made you overseers, to feed the church of God, which he hath purchased with his own blood."

Christ purchased the church with the blood he shed on Calvary's cross. Many forget this fact when they begin talking about the atoning influence of the blood of Christ and would try to divorce the atonement from the church and have it as expansive as the whole universe. They would have it that anywhere, under any condition, as long as in some way, shape, or form, a person acknowledges Christ, he comes under the atoning influence of his blood that was shed on the cross.

But that is not what the Scriptures teach. Paul tells us that it was for the church, implying that it applies to those who, by obedience to the gospel of Christ, have become members. I am not responsible for this statement. I am simply pointing out what the Word of God tells us. It was for the purchase of the church that Christ shed his blood upon the cross. The church, then, must be tremendously important.

THE APOSTLE PAUL gives quite a clear understanding as to the type and nature of that church, its organic structure, its officers, and its purpose, starting with the three apostles who were "pillars" in the church, forming the presidency, or presiding quorum of the church; the general body of the twelve apostles; the seventy, high priests, evangelists, elders, bishops, priests, teachers, and deacons. Each of these officers had a specific function that there might be an effectual functioning of the whole, and that as a result the body of the church might develop that type of perfection which would build the kingdom of God.

Let me read what Paul says in regard to the organization of the church:

And he gave some, apostles; and some, prophets; and some, evangelists; and some, pastors and teachers [This is a thumbnail description of the organic structure of the church. Other officers are mentioned in other citations.] for the perfecting of the saints [Yes, this is the function of the church, to enable those who obey the gospel to grow toward perfection.], for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ; till we, in the unity of the faith, all come to the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ.—Ephesians 4: 11-13.

As we move toward this high ideal, which the apostle Paul says the church of Jesus Christ was established to make possible, and we measure reasonably well toward its realization—to reach "the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ"—and then under the guidance and influence of the church we associate ourselves together in kingdom of God relationships, I do not believe it would take any stretch of the imagination to realize what kind of society would result. It would be the kingdom of God on earth.

Then Paul continues, saying:

That we henceforth be no more children, tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine, by the sleight of men, and cunning craftiness, whereby they lie in wait to deceive; but speaking the truth in love, may grow up unto him in all things, which is the head, even Christ; from whom the whole body, fitly joined together and compacted by that which every joint supplieth, according to the effectual working in the measure of every part, maketh increase of the body unto the edifying of itself in love.—Verses 14-16.

EACH PART OF THE CHURCH is essential and necessary, performing its particular task, ministering to the needs of the children of men, and especially the disciples, as occasion requires and necessitates, so that they shall grow toward the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ, and then associate them together in kingdom of God relationships.

Parked around us are a large number of automobiles. These automobiles are more or less efficient. In their tanks is gasoline—the power of motivation. But before it can do anything to propel the cars over the highways it must find expression through some organic means, the internal combustion engine. The more efficient the engine is, with each part serving its particular function, the more power is obtained from the gasoline, and the more surely and satisfactorily we travel. That is precisely what we find as far as the organic structure of the church is concerned. Christ gave his gospel which "is the power of God unto salvation," but before it could find expression and be developed in the lives of people there had to be provided some means, some organization through which it could function. To meet this need Christ built his church, placing every officer in it that he knew was necessary. It is self-evident that the more complete and efficient the church is, the more effectively and powerfully will the gospel function in the lives of people, and the more readily will they become the kind of people God must have to build the kingdom.

We would not expect to get results from our cars if several of the major working parts of the engine were to be discarded. What would an automobile mechanic think if you were to have your car towed into his garage and told him that you could not understand why it would not run, and then upon lifting the hood, he discovered there were no distributor and no spark plugs. Then when he looked inside the engine there were no connecting rods or crank shaft.

Something like that is what happened to the church Christ built as it moved down through the early Christian centuries. Somehow men came to the conclusion that some of the officers provided by our Heavenly Father through Jesus Christ were no longer necessary, that they could get along just as well without them, so they were discarded. Sometimes they attempted to substitute something else. Now mankind wonders why Christianity after nineteen hundred years has not been able to bring forth more fruitage in Christian living, in and among the so-called Christian nations, to justify its existence.

How could it accomplish its mission with so many parts of the engine—the organic structure of the church—completely missing? How could it be expected to work? Jesus provided us with a church which, when every part works with every other part, moves us toward the realization of the kingdom of God. When some of the important officers provided for in that church were discarded, it became impossible for it, and the gospel functioning through it, to accomplish its task.

THE APOSTLE PAUL compares the church to the human body. God has placed in our bodies all of the organs and members that he knew were necessary, each one with its specific function. All are necessary for the proper functioning of the body. If any of the members of the body are lost or impaired, the function of the body is hindered to that extent. We lose our eyesight, we cannot function as efficiently as before. We lose our hearing, a leg, an arm, and each loss renders the body less and less efficient until eventually it is useless. No more can the purpose of the church be achieved if it loses some of its vital parts.

When the kingdom of God is achieved, it will be built as a result of the gospel of Christ functioning efficiently through the church of the living God provided for us by Jesus Christ nineteen hundred years ago. It is going to require every part of that church, every officer God put in it.

The extent to which the church will function effectively in the lives of the people and bring to pass God's purpose through them depends upon what men do who have been called of God to the various offices in the organization of the church. It is not enough to have the provision of these officers in theory only. An officer does not mean much unless he is functioning, producing results, magnifying his office and calling in all diligence, devotion, and sincerity. The building of the kingdom of God, so greatly needed in our world today, is waiting the day when those who have accepted the call of God to the various offices in the priesthood of the church will endeavor, by the grace of God and the power of his Spirit, to discharge their responsibilities and become polished shafts in the hand of God in ministering to the needs of people.

As I have emphasized, nothing is more needed in our world today than the realization of the kingdom of God. The world stands in an agony of expectation waiting for its appearance. Nothing is more essential to the building of the kingdom than the church that Christ built when he fulfilled his promise, "I will build my church."

Several years ago one of the large Protestant churches in the United States held a ministerial convention. It evidenced a fine Christian spirit by inviting a number of other religious organizations to send representatives. Brother Floyd McDowell was requested to attend in response to this invitation. At the convention one day tithing, stewardships, and the kingdom of God were being discussed. The discussion was quite vague, dealing mostly in generalities. After the session Brother McDowell talked with one of the leading ministers of this organization. He asked the man if he thought his church would be able to make an actual concrete contribution toward the building of this Christian society on earth, the kingdom of God. The minister looked at Brother McDowell for a few moments and finally shook his head. He said, "Doctor McDowell, I am afraid we will not be able to make any definite contribution toward the actual realization of the kingdom of God. We are not organized for the job. We are just a group of congregations loosely associated together." And then he made a statement that surprised Brother McDowell. "I have become somewhat acquainted with your church and its organization. If the kingdom of God is ever built, it will be built by a church like yours that is organized for the task in hand."

IS THE CHURCH IMPORTANT? Does it make any difference how it is organized? It certainly made a difference to Christ, and it most certainly makes just as much difference today. Our basic natures are the same as the people in that day; our needs are the same; the task of the building of the kingdom is the same.

If we are going to answer the call of Jesus Christ to build his kingdom, then we must seek and find his church, making sure that it is the same kind of institution that the New Testament evidences; and then having found it, we must see that it is put to work definitely in our own experiences. Just being a member of the church does not assure salvation; in fact, it may bring condemnation. I find my Bible telling me that if through obedience to the gospel and membership in the church I am cleansed of my former sins, and then I continue to walk in the same old way that I walked in before—if I transact the same sharp business deals, cutting corners if it pays; conduct myself the same way in my home, quarreling, jangling, selfishly taking more than my share; fuss with my neighbors; and such like—I am under greater condemnation than nonmembers who do the same things. I am worse off than I was before I heard about the church. The fact that I have had the light and understanding the church gave me brings greater condemnation. There are many of us who pride ourselves on belonging to the church of Christ, restored by the power of God in these last days, who are going to find our membership condemning us when we stand before the tribunal bar of God's judgment. The church can save; the church can condemn—it depends on what we do about it. In the church we find the priesthood ministry, which if we will profit by it, will change and transform our attitudes toward God, our fellow-men, and ourselves. It will make of us the kind of people who can build the kingdom, and that is precisely what God intended when he established his church. And in these last days God has brought forth by his own divine revelation the re-establishment of the church as it was in the days of the New Testament, the same divinely organized church that Christ established when he fulfilled his promise, "I will build my church."

This church has within it the power to transform the lives, attitudes, and motives of people, and then so unify them into one great body of crusaders who can and will build the kingdom of God, bringing assurance, deliverance, and salvation to the world.

May God grant that each of us shall grow in our appreciation and understanding of the provision made by God for our redemption, so that we shall give it the place in our lives it should occupy and become kingdom-building people. Then God's kingdom will come and his will be done on earth as it is in heaven.

Editor Expresses Regret

Mademoiselle for December '52 publishes a letter written by President Smith in which he takes to task Helen Beal Woodward for giving currency to the Mormon claim that Joseph Smith is responsible for the doctrine of polygamy. A condensation of a chapter from Mrs. Woodward's forthcoming book, The Bold Women, was published in the October issue. The author expresses thanks for his "kind and reasonable letter," and disclaims any intention of taking sides in the controversy over the issue. She says: "In that story of a forgotten woman's ambition and brief, dramatic notoriety, the Mormon background was intended to be background and nothing more. If my way of telling that story has offended anybody's religious sensibilities, I am truly very sorry.

"I shall make sure, when my book appears, that your church's objection to the Utah-Mormon account of the Nauvoo period is duly stated."

The magazine editor also expresses regret. We commend both Mrs. Woodward and Mademoiselle for their willingness to consider our protest and give us courteous consideration.

Question:

Is there any reference outside Latter Day Saintism to "reformed Egyptian"? If so, where can I find this in the library?
New York

C. D. Q.

Answer:

I know of no such reference except in works commenting on the statement in the Book of Mormon. It is well known that Egyptian was changed considerably before being lost and recovered again to the world. In your library see the Encyclopaedia Britannica or any good encyclopedia. But concerning changes made by the Nephites in America, it is plain that the "reformed Egyptian" to which they referred was that developed among themselves. (We will italicize the appropriate words for emphasis.) "And now, behold, we have written this record according to our knowledge in the characters which are called among us the reformed Egyptian, being handed down and altered by us, according to our manner of speech."—Mormon 4: 98.

Question:

Joseph Smith is supposed to have seen God and Christ, yet Exodus 33: 20, John 1: 18, and I Timothy 6: 16 say this is impossible. Is the only answer that these texts are mistranslations?
New York

C. D. Q.

Answer:

A number of other biblical statements clearly indicate that God has been seen as a visible personage. Exodus 33: 20, John 1: 18, I Timothy 6: 16 and I John 4: 11 consequently should not be considered as conclusive, according to the King James Version, that God never has been seen visibly. Scriptures that state otherwise are Gen. 17: 1, which relates that the Lord "appeared unto Abram" (Abraham), and after conversing with him, "went up from Abraham." Gen. 32: 29, 30: Jacob saw "God face to face." Ex. 24: 9-12: Moses, Aaron, Nadab, Abihu, and seventy of the elders of Israel "saw the God of Israel." Ex. 33: 11: "And the Lord spake unto Moses face to face, as a man speaketh unto his friend." Ex. 33: 21-23 says that because of sin certain ones were not allowed to see God's face, but were to see "his back parts." Deut. 5: 4: "The Lord talked with you face to face in the mount." Acts 7: 55: Stephen saw "the glory of God, and Jesus standing on the right hand of God."

These citations indicate the Lord's having been seen actually, rather than in the sense of conscious awareness of his presence without a visible appearance. It is to be noted, then, that either these references or the ones stating that God never has been seen are in contradiction, and one set or the other is inconsistent with the facts involved.

After the resurrection and ascension of Christ, he again assumed the glory he had with the Father prior to his coming into the world through the portals of flesh (John 17: 5; I Tim. 3: 16). In this state he is "the brightness of his [God's] glory, and the express image of his [God's] person" (Heb. 1: 3). The same John, whose testimony is cited in John 1: 18 as declaring that God has not been seen, testifies in Revelation 1: 12-18 of having seen the glorified Christ and gives a vivid description of his appearance. In this glory Christ is like God, the Father (I John 5: 20). It ought to be concluded that inasmuch as the glorified Christ could be seen, God, the Father, also could be seen.

Now consider the rendition of the Inspired Version of the Bible. Exodus 33: 20: "... for there shall no man among them see me at this time, and live, for they are exceeding sinful. And no sinful man hath at any time, neither shall there be any sinful man at any time, that shall see my face and live." John 1: 19: "And no man hath seen God at any time, except he hath borne record of the Son." I Timothy 6: 16: "Whom no man hath seen, nor can see, unto whom no man can approach, only he who hath the light and the hope of immortality dwelling in him." I John 4: 12: "No man hath seen God at any time, except them who believe."

These inspired corrections supply a harmony consistent with the Scriptures as a whole. They are recommended to you as the logical explanation of the statements in question.

Question:

The nonmember mother of one of our church members died today. She had requested that her body be cremated. Her church refuses to conduct the service of interment because it opposes cremation. What is the attitude of our church and can our ministers conduct the service?

California

B. J. S.

Answer:

Circumstances of burial and attitudes of relatives should reflect proper respect and love befitting Christian people. The actual method of disposal of mortal remains of the deceased, however, does not present a moral problem. The real self is only temporarily identified with the body, and after separation the body is only an empty and useless husk. Sentiment and social custom are the only factors to be considered.

If deliberate cremation were to forever prevent the reuniting of the spirit with the physical form and should thus constitute an immoral act, then we would be confronted with a difficult problem in the case of those whose bodies are cremated through accidental causes. Victims of the atom bomb, whose bodies are disintegrated by its force, would suffer eternal as well as mortal destruction. The slow disintegration of the flesh and bones of the deceased through decay is actually a process of oxidation which destroys mortal remains just as effectively as does fire.

Science tells us that the physical elements of which the body is composed undergo complete change every seven years.

God created man in the beginning, and he can also reassemble the elements of the physical body for its promised resurrection.

In the case of many persons, sentiment restrains them from consenting to cremation of members of their own families, but the church does not forbid its ministry to those who prefer said disposal.

The Measure of the Man

Editor's note: The "Dear Son" letter which follows was a mother's way of helping her son to see that a happy marriage does not entirely depend on getting "the right girl." This son had shown his mother a letter he had written his sweetheart in which he had laid down some rather exacting principles of conduct for her.

Dear Son:

Happy birthday! Today you are sixteen. You've had your first date, and probably you've had your first kiss, too. I hope you kissed her gently and with a dawning wonder that this is what girls were made for. That's what I want to talk to you about in this letter—love. Love in general and love in particular. The kind of love between a man and a woman that makes a marriage.

I hope in the sixteen years between the time you were born and this moment when you read this that you have learned a great deal about love from us, your parents. I hope you have learned it from watching us when we didn't know you were there and from listening to us when we didn't know you were within earshot. The kind of love you have seen and heard from us will affect you all your life just as the kind of love we witnessed between our parents has affected us. And the kind of love you establish with the girl you marry will affect all those who come after you. That's how important it is, and that's why I'm writing you this letter.

The kind of love your father and I have isn't accidental. It didn't burst into being the moment we saw each other. We didn't find it waiting for us at our marriage altar. And it didn't spring out from behind an anniversary cake somewhere along the line. It was simply there all the time, growing. For the relationship of love between us is a manufactured thing made out of the ingredients of character we brought to our marriage. You see, the important thing isn't how much you can get out of marriage, but how much you can put into it. The important thing isn't the list of impossible qualifications you demand of the wife you are looking for, but the kind of person you can offer her as a husband.

Let's put it this way: I'm not much concerned with your future wife—who she will be or what she will be like—but I am concerned with you, the kind of man you will become, the kind of husband you will be to my daughter-in-law. You should be concerned about that man, too. Before you presume to dictate the qualities of the wife you want to find, be sure that you have found in yourself the man you can be proud to offer her as a husband. Let's not worry about finding the girl. Let's find the man first, and the rest will take care of itself.

I honestly believe that we have to learn all the virtues by observing them in other people and trying to copy them in our own lives. We are born selfish, but we see and feel the effects of generosity, and so we try to learn to be generous in our hearts by actually practicing generosity. For most of us it's a long, hard training period; we have to work hard at being generous before it becomes an integral part of our natures. It's the same with learning to love. We learn to love by being loved and then trying to copy that love in our own lives. Being loved comes first. That's our department—your father's and mine. It's our job to teach you to love by loving you. We learned it from our parents, and they learned it from theirs. We could carry it all the way back to God and find that mankind learned to love because He first loved his children.

There is something special about God's kind of love. Sometimes we humans miss that special quality, and without it love becomes a cheap imitation. God's love is a completely disinterested love. He doesn't love us for what he can get out of us. He doesn't love just a few people and ignore the existence of all others. He doesn't love with reservations. In human love it is impossible to really love one person or the few people closest to us without creating in ourselves a new capacity for loving the multitudes who people our world. If our love for one does not increase our ability to love the many then we do not really love the one.

Love is not possessive. As the ultimate example, God has not enslaved us by chains of dependence or predestination. He is not ruthlessly determined to make us over in his own image. Instead, he has given us our free agency, the full right to develop our individual personalities. Similarly, human love cannot be possessive. We love most truly when we leave the loved one free.

Lastly, my son, in order to really love others you must learn to love yourself . . . God's way. When he commanded us to "love thy neighbor as thyself," he presupposed that we would love ourselves. Self-contempt stunts our capacity to love and leaves us emotionally ill. Self-love gives a feeling of dignity that endows all men with dignity. Self-love gives a feeling of fellowship with the world that makes all men your brothers. Self-love gives a feeling of individual value that makes all men precious to you. Self-love gives a feeling of humility that makes it possible for you to serve all men gladly.

Earlier I said that we learn all the virtues by observing them in others and trying to copy them in our own lives. Since then I have talked only about love. I have done that because I think love is the basic virtue. Once you have really learned to love, all the other virtues will be added unto you. We want to be generous to those we love. We want to be thoughtful of them. We want to be tender, compassionate, honest, pure,

MANY MEMBERS of the church were saddened to learn of the recent death of George Nathaniel Briggs on December 26. Most of his friends and admirers were alumni of Graceland College with which his twenty-nine years as president identified him. But many others of the church family who think of Graceland are quite apt to associate with it this man who left national and international educational activities to help a struggling institution.

During the first twenty-five years the students of Graceland were enrolled mainly in preparatory, academy, and commercial departments. Its college department offered few courses and these were not accredited. Consequently, few students were attracted. Thirteen presidents had come and gone in those twenty-five years. Yet this man who had served the U. S. government for fourteen years, working up from a teaching position to head the Philippine Normal School in Manila, came to serve the church college.

President Briggs envisioned his task as he came to Lamoni in the fall of 1915 as twofold: (1) to select a faculty whose training, vision, and devotion were adequate to the need; and (2) to promote financial support for a physical plant and the personnel to meet his goals. A man of smaller caliber and less administrative ability could hardly have done the job. His ability in selecting and training men for the government made him the man of the hour. The church is glad to acknowledge this debt again at the time of his passing. He was ever modest, kindly, patient, and indefatigable in his devotion to Graceland and the church.

He was born at Tabor, Iowa, on May 10, 1874, to Riley W. and Clara Briggs. After finishing his high school training in Carson, Iowa, he attended Iowa State Teachers College, from which he received his degree of Bachelor of Didactics in 1893. Four years later he received his B.A. from State University of Iowa. He took some undergraduate work in law from Drake University of Des Moines. He took graduate work at both Chicago University and the University of Minnesota, receiving an honorary degree of LL.D. in 1923.

WHEN THE PHILIPPINE ISLANDS became an American protectorate in 1901, Brother Briggs was selected as one of a thousand teachers sent to the Islands to help prepare the inhabitants for independence. His natural administrative ability was soon recognized, and he was promoted from one post to another until he became the superintendent of the Normal School, the highest institution of learning organ-

This offering of ourselves has been made in the covenant of baptism, and since it applies for the remainder of our lives, it is not necessary for us to repeat our baptism each time we again wish to signify to the Lord that we are willing to assist him. A restatement of our willingness, however, is good for us. The material offering also takes its place as a symbol of our spiritual willingness to give of ourselves. It is a token or a symbol of our dedication. It may not always be adequate, but it is always accurate.

A COMMON ERROR, though one rarely admitted, is that the offering is a form of appeasement which we give to the Lord in return for which we receive forgiveness. People often make the mistake of measuring righteousness in terms of dollars. It is this error which gives men of money more influence in the churches of today than they deserve. It is this philosophy in reverse that tends to lead many people to discount the value of the soul of one who is poor. Before God, the offering is always measured in terms of ized by the government in the Islands. For his exhibit on education at the Panama-Pacific Exposition at San Francisco, California, in 1915 he was awarded a gold medal of honor. He was secretary of the Iowa Association of College Presidents for sixteen years.

In 1944 President Briggs felt that he had reached the age (70) when "a younger man should be designated to take over the administrative affairs at the college." The college board accepted his resignation and elected him to the position of President Emeritus of the board and college so that his counsel and vision would still be available. Thereafter he graciously helped as far as his health permitted.

A man of strong character, saintly integrity, and devotion has gone to a well-earned reward. C. B. H.

On certain occasions, such as Easter, Sanitarium Day, and Thanksgiving one often feels the urge to help with the work of the church in a special way. Then the question becomes not "How much can I give?" but "Of that which was planned to be mine, how much can I give up?" This is above the Sunday by Sunday contribution which one planned to make. This is a "special" offering. It calls for more emphasis on love and gratitude, and less on the personal program. Accomplishment in this type of offering lifts one from the area of "giving" to the area of "giving up" for God. Here is the opportunity to push oneself to the limits of his ability and receive a plaudit similar to the commendation the Master gave the widow who contributed her mite. From this opportunity, no minister need hesitate to say, "Give all you can." The spiritual rewards are always proportional to what one is willing to deny himself for God.

Part III

Experiences at Rarotonga

We found when we reached Tahiti that our mail had been sent to Rairoa. It was a terrible disappointment. Until one has tried going without mail for a month at a time, one just doesn't know what that means.

We stayed in the mission house on this occasion. It was roomier than any other house we had lived in since we came to the mission. We put it in order and proceeded to enjoy life in the tropics. I had not been at all well while on Rairoa, but seemed much better on Tahiti. We spent some time at Tiona, and both of us kept studying to improve our use of the language. By that time Hubert was preaching in the native tongue, having made his first effort on Rairoa just before conference began.

When we returned to Papeete, we had a letter from Brother Devore, asking us if we would be willing to go to Rarotonga. This is an island of the Cook group, on the way from Tahiti to New Zealand. The steamer from Australia and New Zealand made a monthly trip from there to Tahiti, stopping at Rarotonga.

We decided to go, even though we had little time to prepare. The steamer was already in, and we had not packed anything. On inquiring, we learned it would leave early on Sunday, so we began to get ready immediately. Of course we took all our belongings. Our idea of South Sea Island natives was that they were all alike. Mostly they are, but not when they are obeying someone who has authority over them. We were to learn that later. I was touched when the women shed tears, and even some of the men could not speak for sobbing. Meturaore made the prayer for us in our living room, crowded with the congregation from the church. We had heard their way of kissing was to rub noses, and for the first time we had our noses rubbed in the caressing way that means a kiss. We should have known that there was something different we were running into, but we didn't. However, the Almighty has his own way of helping his people out of difficulties.

Seven Lost Sheep

We didn't know a soul on the island of Rarotonga and had only a list of the names of seven persons (natives) previously baptized by one of our men, Kehauri, who had been lost in a storm in a small vessel with several others. They finally were swept ashore in the wreck of their boat. The natives took care of them, and in the long time they had to wait for a chance to return to Tahiti Kehauri preached the gospel to them. He succeeded in baptizing seven of them. They were the ones we were to seek. The list told us where they lived, but that was all.

We had to go to a restaurant for our dinner that day. It was a good dinner, but we still remember most vividly that it was the first and only drink of ice-cold water we had tasted since we left the United States.

We went aboard at noon. As we neared the wharf, we met Mr. J. L. Young, a merchant that Hubert knew slightly. He asked where we were going, and if we knew anyone there. We said we didn't.

"Wait a minute," said he, "and I'll give you a letter of introduction to the only man I know in Rarotonga." He hurried into his near-by office, and came out with the letter. We thanked him and went on board.

I was hardly sick at all on the steamer. I played the piano and enjoyed myself. But next day was not so good and no more enjoyment for me until we were at anchor in Rarotonga harbor Wednesday noon. After attending to all formalities, we took our hand luggage and started walking up the long wharf toward the village.

Captain Taylor

When we were about half way there we saw a man drive his team up to the edge of the wharf, tie the horses, and start walking toward us and the ship. He asked whom we were looking for, and Hubert said we knew no one but had a letter of introduction to Captain Taylor. He said, "Well, I am Captain Taylor." He took the letter and read it. Then he said, "If you will go up there to my buggy, get in, and wait until I finish my business on the ship, I'll see what I can do to help you."

We sat in the buggy and looked with interest at the street and houses which could be seen from where we were. Soon Captain Taylor returned and climbed into the buggy. He seemed to know where to go to find the people whose names we had. When we reached the place, after driving some six miles, not one of the people named was there. It was their home, but they had gone to another island as natives do. With no one to depend on we wondered what to do.

"Well," Captain Taylor said as we turned back to the town, "we'll try something else." He drove to his own house, and told us to stay there on the porch until he returned. We had no idea what he had in mind. But after a while he came back and told us to come with him. So we climbed in the buggy again, and he drove up a long hill that seemed to put us far above the town.

We came to a nice large house more ornate than most. Captain Taylor explained that this house was built for the governor of the island to occupy, but he was an old man and did not have a team of horses, so the hill was too much for him. He and his wife rented a house down in the village. An Adventist couple were renting the place, and he had brought us here to stay all night. They had told him they would keep us. We went in and were very kindly received. There was only the man, his wife, and their sixteen-year-old daughter. They were as pleased apparently to have unexpected company as if some relatives had come. We had a pleasant evening, and a good bed to sleep in.

Next morning I noticed that Mrs. Owen did not seem very well, so I helped the daughter with the breakfast and the dishes. As we carried the dishes to the outside kitchen, she said, "I feel as if my sister had come to visit us!" I felt very flattered.

That day Captain Taylor introduced Hubert to the chief judge of the island, Judge Tepou. He was really the leader of the natives on the entire island, though there were three queens, one for each geographical division of the island.

A Temporary Home

Tepou was interested, and before a half day was gone, he had found us two good rooms in a house on the main street. We remained with the Owens another night as it took some time for the present renters to move out and give us possession though as usual they hadn't much to move. Our stuff was brought up from the wharf, and we took possession of the rooms next day. We had to cook mostly on an outdoor fire; although we had a tiny coal-oil stove indoors.

There was a good bed in the bedroom with a tick filled with kapok which grows there. It makes a soft bed, but it is not hot like feathers. Fortunately I had brought a mirror, an old sofa, a round table, our melodeon, an old dresser (in which I kept my utensils and food) and three chairs, one minus a seat. We fixed that when we found some slats from a shipping crate.

Neighbors Came Calling

When we were moved in, we opened the melodeon and began to sing. First the front porch was crowded, then Tepou came over and walked inside. Soon the house was full as well as the porch. Hubert asked Tepou if he thought there would be any objection to his preaching to the people. Tepou didn't think there would be. So after trying to talk to them a little to see if they could understand Tahitian, and seeing that the most of them could, he told them that tomorrow night we would sing for them again and he would preach to them. Tepou volunteered to interpret if necessary, so we started next night.

On the second night when Hubert started to preach he used the Tahitian language, but as he continued and the Spirit came upon him, he found himself using words that he knew must be of their language, as they were different from Tahitian. He continued that way each night and Judge Tepou said he used many words of the Rarotongan language, and all the people who listened understood.

It was mostly the music that attracted them, and the house was full of them. They sat on the floor (only Tepou, Hubert, and I had chairs) and the porch was full too. They paid good attention, and we felt very hopeful. This went on for five nights. On the sixth night our congregation was nil. Nobody came.

The Hand of the Enemy

We knew the reason. On that day we had seen the Episcopalian minister walking up and down the road talking and gesticulating. Of course he feared for his flock. These people all belonged to his church which had for several years been the only Protestant church on the island. The London Missionary Society had sent him here ten years or more before, and he felt nobody had a right to try to get his natives to join any other church. He was very much opposed to the Adventist people, too, who had come to stay, building themselves good houses in all three divisions of the island. The chief minister of the Adventists was also a practicing physician. We have already spoken of the Owen family, and there were one or two more families or parts of families who attended their Sabbath school and church.

By the way, this was the very place to suit the Advent faith. By some mistake made long before we were there, they had thought themselves on the side of the date line which had changed a day from the usual calendar. So everybody living there kept the Sabbath on Saturday, which compelled us to have two Sundays. I did some sewing, but kept out of sight of any of them, native or white. Mostly we read or took walks.

A Native Housewarming

Not long after we found our rooms, a native (the son of Tepou, called Jimmie Tepou) finished building himself a house just a little way north of where we lived. As soon as it was finished, he made a great feast and invited everyone he saw to come to his housewarming. Of course we went. Four tables, at least thirty feet long, stretched the length of the room. They had cloths over them and were all set. When most of the people were assembled, they were seated, first a man, then a woman, all up and down the table.

Hubert was seated beside Queen Makea, the highest of the three queens. All of them were there. They didn't do much talking, for the queen didn't know English, and we didn't know Rarotongan. My partner was a white man, a sea captain. We were introduced, but it did no good. The only thing he said—and that repeatedly—was "Please pass the ham!" I passed it and wished he would keep it in front of himself, but he didn't. There was nice chicken, too, beautifully baked, but the captain would not eat it while there was ham.

At this dinner we met other white people whom we had not seen before. Among them were Captain and Mrs. Piltz. She was from San Francisco and the only American I had met who was not a missionary. In the course of our conversation she asked me if I played the piano. I said I did, and she asked if I would give music lessons. I told her I would, and she immediately engaged me to come to her house to give lessons to herself and her stepdaughter, Teuira.

We felt as if we had stumbled on manna. We were getting very low on funds with no prospect for any more. Metuaore had spent all he had of tithing money to send us here, and we did not receive any allowance from America all the time we stayed in the islands. It took about six months to send a letter from Rarotonga to America and receive an answer.

When we were among our own church natives they gave us money, besides providing our food. Many of them had given me cloth for dresses, so we were all right when we were with them. But this was different. I was extremely glad to be able to earn a little.

A Funeral

Next day Dr. Caldwell and Mr. Owen called and told us Mrs. Owen was very sick and wondered if we would sit up with her that night. We said of course we would gladly do it. But when we went up to their home on the hill, we found we would sit with her dead body. We stayed that night, and next day they asked Hubert if we would help to make a quartet to sing at her funeral, which we did, and I played the organ in the Episcopal minister's church. All the Advent people came, a few white people who wanted to see what was done, and several rows of seats were filled with natives, who did not understand a word of the sermon.

Help From Music Lessons

Next Monday Mrs. Piltz sent her stepdaughter down with the horse and buggy to take me up to their house. I had expected to walk, and I surely appreciated her kindness. She did that every day I went, twice a week. Always I gave the daughter her lesson before lunch, ate with them, and gave Mrs. Piltz her lesson afterward; then Teuira would drive me home. This we did on Monday and Thursday for months.

Hubert continued his Sunday evening meetings for a while. Sometimes there would be a dozen, sometimes less. As we were getting so low on funds, we concluded we could get along without milk every day. The lady who had been delivering milk was a German woman whose name was Engelke. She also had married a sea captain who had quit the sea. One morning she was trying to turn her horse and buggy around and became mixed up with a tree. Hubert saw her and ran across to help her. When she was headed in the right direction, she drove over to our place and came in to meet me. We talked awhile, then told her we felt we would have to give up the milk as we were short of money. She replied with a sharp glance at me, "You need that milk and are going to get it, if you never can pay me." She could see that we were expecting a baby; so was she. So she continued to bring the milk, and often stopped for a brief visit. I tell these things to show the kindness of the white people toward us.

A New Church for Phoenix

By Georgia Speer

Historian

A HAMMER lying on the workbench is proof that an artisan is about and will likely come to use it. And the appearance of a public building indicates its function in the community. In taking possession of their new house of worship, the Saints in Phoenix feel that they have come into possession of a fine tool, laid in place by many artisans, and with a future as great as the capacities of those who use it. In appreciation for some of those who devote themselves to the fashioning of this tool, this short history has been compiled from documents that are a part of this heritage given the Phoenix congregation.

In the fall of 1908 there began a work that showed little promise of having any lasting effect in the community. A mother and daughter (Sister Clare Sturges and daughter, Elva, now Mrs. Arthur Oakman) met in the home of Brother and Sister Pender to hold Sunday school class. Their first few meetings had the additional presence of Elder Alvin Knisley, who had come to the state for the purpose of organizing a group at the mining town of Bisbee. From this beginning, however, there sprang a very determined movement that would not be put down.

From 1908 until 1920 the church had no home. Sunday school meetings continued a year at the Pender residence. A hall was rented for a time, private homes again, then another hall. On Sunday evenings, Brother Pender preached in the City Hall Plaza or on the streets. Early efforts to effect a branch organization failed twice in this infant group. Then Brother James Yates came in 1914, and for four years during his residence here acted as branch president and conducted regular meetings in his home. When Conference appointment took him elsewhere meetings were held in other private homes, then in an Adventist Hall, still later in another better located hall until in January, 1920, these nomadic wanderings came to an end. Membership had grown to about sixty, and the group decided to build a church. In four months it was complete enough to house the first meeting. This brought evening preaching into the church building, and Wednesday prayer service became a regular weekly activity. At the first meeting two men were called to the priesthood and two others indicated for later call. The voice of the Spirit was heard, as though divine recognition had come to bless the accomplishment and the twelve years' preparatory work. "Be ye comforted in the message of my Spirit, saith the Lord through the voice of the servant I have chosen to speak these things" were the closing words of the message given designating the new helpers to their work.

FRUITFUL YEARS followed, and the membership grew to 112. The streets on which the building was located were paved, and this financial responsibility was assumed gladly by the people. A mortgage of $1,250 on the building became a goal for unified effort toward liquidation. Visiting priesthood brought encouragement and inspiration from the Center Place. Many study classes and social activities were entered into with harmony and a spirit of thanksgiving. On Sundays the hall was almost filled. Enthusiasm—the special blessing of the small group—was abundant, and financial difficulties, differences of opinion, family problems, and welfare needs all seemed to dissolve before this unified people. Activity was somewhat sporadic because of the long and unrelieved hot season. Many members left the state for the worst three months. There were many health seekers who came only for the warm winter. But it was a good time, a period of growth.

Again the voice of the leader was heard, this time not in prophecy but of his own understanding of his people. The leader was Brother J. R. Johnson. In the midst of happiness and enthusiasm he called upon the members to preserve their unity and love for one another and prepare for a testing time that would come. There was to be a severe trial to both leaders and membership. Later, and before outward evidence of trouble came, he resigned and Brother F. C. Coberly took his place as pastor.

Brother Coberly presided through good times and ill, for the testing time did come about two years after the warning was given. Murmurings of dissension throughout the church rose to a clamor, and administrative details loomed so important as to form irreconcilable barriers to unity of purpose. What is generally known as the "1925 controversy" cut the Phoenix membership almost in half. Several times Brother Coberly was replaced as pastor during these trying times but returned again and again to take up his work when other pastors moved away or for other reasons resigned. Toward the end of his long period of guidance he saw a reassembling of the people, but for the most part his duty was to provide strong leadership to members prone to discouragement and financial trial. He tirelessly ministered with his especial gift, healing, day and night. He was to be depended upon to be in his place for each announced meeting be the attendance twelve or sixty. He found himself many times the only available member of the priesthood to meet a need.

A PERIOD OF TEN YEARS went by. Many efforts to revive interest were made, but attendance thinned out more and more. At last there came a time when it seemed completely hopeless. In October, 1932, the Apostle in charge presided over a meeting for the purpose of looking into the possibility of selling the building; he was very much distressed. Phoenix was one of only three branches in the state, and it seemed wrong to dissolve it. As he sat on the platform considering these things, it was given him to know that one would come to this meeting who was to be put in charge. A stranger came. So the Apostle charged the congregation with the responsibility of continuing to hold the church. In a short time this stranger became pastor of the branch. He was able to pour into it such a measure of personal enthusiasm and vigor that there was a renewal of confidence, and finally spiritual strength again. This pastor was Brother Howard Miller, who served from 1932 until 1943, when he was sent on General Church appointment to Hawaii.

BROTHER MILLER, during his years as leader, worked toward establishing state-wide interest. His position as salesman took him on business trips throughout the state, and he combined his selling with personal visits in every town where he could locate members. Later, when he established his own business, he found still more freedom to move among these isolated Saints. Rallies in the church at Phoenix were held from time to time; for there the Phoenix women furnished midday meals and housing for the visitors. A one-sheet letter was circulated among isolated members. Into this bulletin went announcements of Phoenix activities, General Church news, and Herald items.

In 1938 a mission was started in Prescott, 120 miles north of Phoenix, to which priesthood members from Phoenix took the Communion once a month for three years. Church school was conducted each week by Brother and Sister Manley Stayton in their home. When they moved to Phoenix this mission was discontinued. A mission was revived in Glendale, nine miles west of Phoenix. Meetings were held at various places there. Afternoon classes were held for some time in the home of Sister Della Higginbotham in Mesa, eighteen miles east of Phoenix. These activities are mentioned because of their effect on the growth of the branch. They were served by priesthood members living in Phoenix, and in turn brought to the city enthusiastic visitors from surrounding areas.

THE MORTGAGE on the building all this time had hung threateningly over the heads of the people. Interest was overdue, the paving assessment seemed beyond any possibility of payment, and the roof needed replacement. In a membership of health seekers with no income, financial needs were many. During most of this time there were but six regular wage earners in the group.

These problems, however, were to bring about a greater spirit of co-operation. A new roof was nailed in place by the men of the branch. Repairs and paint were added in the same way. In 1937 it was disclosed there was still $1,100 of the original $1,250 debt still unpaid; this challenge to their very existence was met with a decision to make payments of $60 a month until the principal was cleared. Active members made pledges to the very limit of their ability, and met them. Sister Miller, assisted by Sister Olive McSherry, canvassed all on the membership roll, giving them opportunity to help if they would. In a way hard to understand, with the nation's depression at its height, this campaign bore fruit, and after eighteen years the property was ready to turn over to the General Church.

For this dedication service, on November 13, 1938, there was a congregation that taxed the capacity of the church. President Israel Smith and Apostle John Rushton were on the platform for the 11:00 o'clock dedication service. Dinner was served on the church lawn, and at 2:00 p.m. the service for turning the deed over to Brother Smith was held. With it were the keys to the building, which Brother Smith then turned back to the local deacon, John Senter, Sr., to keep the building for and on behalf of the Bishopric. At the evening meeting Brother Rushton gave an inspiring talk. Some time later there arrived from the Center Place a gift from Brother Israel, a token of his first official act in the Presidency of the Church. It was a pulpit Bible, appropriately inscribed. This Bible may still be seen in the new pulpit of the new Phoenix church.

HAVING SHAKEN OFF this financial debt the church began to prosper in many ways. An evaporative cooler was added for the comfort of those who spent summers in the city. A baptismal font was built into the building. Zion's League was added to church activities. The women's department was reorganized. Brother K. Tsuji from Hawaii was added to the membership and took over the teaching of church school classes.

It soon became evident that Brother Tsuji was in need of more room for this work, and in December, 1939, a residence just north of the church was added to the property. This was used for classes, and later junior church also under the direction of Brother Tsuji was added. This building was cleared of its mortgage four years later. With the enlarged and constantly growing membership, one event alone brought into the treasury an amount equal to more than a quarter of the mortgage that had so long been a plague. This event was a sacrifice dinner held at the end of a month during which each member took it upon himself to make real sacrifices and dedicate the money saved to the payment of the debt. When the collection was made, in a gathering of seventy-five persons, there was over $500, all in small contributions.

Many such activities received the support of the members. A succession of General Church appointees gave encouragement. In 1942 Brother Barmore was sent into the district to serve. Elders John Banks and David Larmour succeeded him, and from time to time short terms have been served by others as conditions have permitted.

IN 1942 Arizona held her first statewide youth camp. It was small—attended by about a dozen young people from the two branches, Phoenix and Tucson. The young people were taken by Brother Miller in his truck to Granite Dells in northern Arizona to stay overnight. At this camp there was such a spirit of uplift and inspiration that camping was made a yearly event. Though Brother Miller was not again able to meet with this group, enthusiasm for the venture was so high that his successor in the pastorate, Brother Paul Bear, became camp supervisor. The second meeting was held for three days, and adults were invited. All camp work was done by those attending, and expenses were thus held to a level which permitted anyone who wished to attend. The "youth" theme of its beginning was preserved for many years. For each adult meeting, one of parallel interest was arranged for the children. From this grew the present Arizona Reunion, regularly organized and supervised by General Church appointees. It is now held in a more central location, at Mt. Lemmon near Tucson. Said to be the only regularly scheduled reunion held in unorganized church territory, it is in session for eight days each year and has an attendance of around 150.

During the war years not many families were without grief, and Elder Bear's spiritual ministry to the Saints was of high order. The prayer services he conducted were comforting and powerful. He was able to bring to the people several prophecies concerning their work, their personal growth, and their spiritual effort. It was a time of financial prosperity and growing confusions of purpose. Membership had grown until it was again felt there must be more room. When a building fund was established, interest waxed and waned over a time. A half-dozen members contributed $100 each in an effort to give real substance to the sum. Several U. S. Defense Bonds were donated. But it was several years

Parents in Partnership With God

By Lottie Clarke Diggle

WHEN TWO YOUNG PERSONS enter into the holy bonds of matrimony, each promising to love and honor the other, one wonders if they realize the full meaning of the word "honor"—which is to esteem, to treat with deference and respect. Every person has a right to preserve his or her human dignity, to retain individuality and a sense of personal worth. To belittle or ridicule husband or wife before others is not only humiliating to the victim, but is an unpardonable breach of good taste. If there must be criticism it should be in privacy.

No wife should have to suffer the humiliation of begging for every dollar for the upkeep of the home; and when the husband corrects the children, however much the mother disagrees with his attitude, she should reserve her objections until they are alone. I was a guest in a home when the father, a man of gentleness and dignity, rebuked one of the sons for a misdemeanor. The mother, to my intense embarrassment and his, reversed his decision. Infinite tact and forbearance may be required when a husband tells the same dull story at every gathering or a wife monopolizes the conversation with silly chatter.

Christianity and chivalry have ever gone hand in hand. The pagan Indian stalks ahead on the trail, leaving his squaw to carry their papoose on her back and drag home and skin the deer he has slain. The Arab rides majestically on their one donkey, while his patient spouse trots after as best she can. Under the gospel law, man uses his superior strength to serve and protect rather than to dominate. Followers of Christ are glad to share time, talents, finances, joys, and problems. Full co-operation is an essential for successful marriage. Evangelist Ben

Hewitt once said, "My wife does so many lovely things for me that I can hardly keep up with her."

MARRIAGE IS THE UNION of two incomplete human beings, having a common purpose, to create a perfect whole. One is reminded of a three-legged race where the participants are tied together and wish to run together, but at first one jerks this way and the other that way until they fall. Soon, with perseverance, patience, and practice they attain a unity and rhythm of movement that enables them to travel together without mishap.

Marriage might be compared to two sides of a triangle which unite at a given point. With the advent of the child the triangle is complete. Miraculously bestowed on two fallible human beings is the most precious thing in the universe, a little child: perfect, plastic, easily molded for better or for worse. A great responsibility rests upon Christian young people which, if realized, might almost overwhelm them were it not for their dependence upon God. If there were ever a time when the Scripture given to the boy Joseph Smith, "If any of you lack wisdom," could fill a great need, it is when parents are beset with problems of diet, illness, discipline, and religious training in connection with their children, and self-control in relation to themselves.

It is natural for the mother, whose work is at least doubled with the advent of the baby, to devote herself to its physical well-being. Too many young mothers make the mistake of concentrating all their interest in the care of the child to the neglect of the man they promised to love and honor. He feels neglected and in some cases is even jealous of his own child. In many marriages what should become a bond of increased union has been the entering wedge for dissension and divorce.

CHILDREN have other hungers than physical. They have four definite needs: activity, security, love, and a feeling of importance. Parents should not complain that Ricky is never still or that he gets into everything. He is only normal, and one can thank God that he is not paralytic or mentally retarded.

Every child must be loved by both parents and have manifestations of that love if he is to grow up well adjusted. The era of institutional care when the child was left alone and unloved in his crib is outdated. Foster homes are recommended in this enlightened age. Even when the child must be corrected or punished he should not be left in doubt for one minute that his naughtiness has left him bereft of his parents' love.

A sense of security is the birthright of every child. Fortunate indeed is that little one who is born into a home where peace, unity, and love prevail. He needs to feel wanted, sure of both parents, with his home a haven. He needs the pride of belonging and of being on equal footing with his companions. The pitiful situation of a child of divorced parents is all too common. Favoritism is another source of insecurity. The father favors the son and the mother the daughter, or vice versa. The unfortunate child may be continually criticized until discouragement and a sense of futility or resentment develops.

Every human being needs to feel important, to know that he matters and is needed. This need continues from the cradle to the grave. How sad to see a grandmother who, living with her children, is not allowed to help or make her contribution to the family welfare. How tragic during the depression when men, out of work, became bitter and difficult to live with! Children, too, are persons; they need praise, encouragement, the chance to help and to be given a measure of responsibility. They should never be ridiculed or punished before others, but given the same measure of courtesy accorded an adult if they are to develop a sense of personal worth that will aid them in making future adjustments.

During the Victorian age, and even extending into the twentieth century, it was believed that children should be seen and not heard and that to spare the rod was to spoil the child. Then the pendulum swung as far as possible in the opposite direction. Psychologists taught that corporal punishment was taboo and that children should be allowed to express themselves. This creed was interpreted to mean that if Jimmy took apart his father's watch, or hauled his little sister around the living room in the roasting pan, he was only expressing himself and must not be corrected. The result was an infestation of vandalism and sadism among children that alarmed authorities and parents alike. Hence the third and perhaps the sanest attitude of the three has developed from the mistakes of the two trends. Corporal punishment for some children on occasion is permissible, and while Jimmy is still allowed to express himself, he must not interfere with the rights and privileges of others.

REOGANIZED LATTER DAY SAINT parents sense their responsibility to guide their children to grow up to love and serve the church. Example is of course the first requisite, and added to it is the desire to inculcate in the child a spontaneous love for the gospel and a firm faith in God. This requires tact, knowledge, and wisdom, which gift can be had for the asking.

Let not anxiety, however, make the mistake of compulsion. The Reverend Charles Templeton, famous Canadian evangelist, said that he personally knew intimately the family of Edwin Boyd, notorious bank robber, whose crimes have made first-page news the last few months. There were three boys and one girl in the family. The mother, who was very religious and dominating, forced the children to go to church and Sunday school. She served churchianity to the family Sundays and week days, with the result that all three boys have criminal records, although the daughter became a missionary. One of the sons told Mr. Templeton that he was sick of having religion crammed down his throat all the time.

All too soon children grow up and leave home. They need to be well armed for the battle of life. Let us ask ourselves: "Are we well grounded in the gospel of the Son of God? Have we learned from precept and example to make righteous decisions? Have we taken with us the shield of faith? Have we learned to depend upon God as an ever present friend whom we need not fear to consult in time of need?" If such is the case, we need have no fear for the future of our loved ones who so lately were sheltered in the four walls of home.

A Way to Witness

I MET a wonderful new neighbor today. The moving van had just pulled away, leaving us with an impossible pile of crates and wooden boxes of assorted sizes and shapes, nearly all of them right in the middle of the living room floor. John and I looked at each other with a sigh, hardly knowing where to start, hardly caring. We were both bone-tired from a long, cross-country drive, and although finding an apartment immediately had seemed like good luck, at this moment our new home looked cold and unfriendly.

"Hello," said my new neighbor with a warm smile. She crossed the yard, holding a child by each hand. "I came over to get acquainted."

Her friendly manner took away some of the tiredness. We sat down a moment to rest and visit. "Don't bother about your dinner. I have it all planned," she said casually.

I was so surprised I hardly knew what to say. Here was a stranger with plans for our dinner already running through her head. Since she was an army wife, too, how completely she understood that all those crates looked exactly alike to me so that I had not the slightest notion which one even held my can opener.

Dinner was soon on our table, and I'm sure we never ate a better meal. It was brought over in gay dishes—the type of meal to tempt a tired appetite.

I'll bake a chocolate pie just as soon as I locate my pie plates, and take it to my gracious neighbor. That could never be repayment, though, for her generous gesture. That will just let her know I want to be thoughtful, too.

You may have a stranger living next door to you. Have you met her? Have you taken time out of your busy schedule to make her your friend? You meet so many worth-while people that way and enlarge and broaden your own appreciation of life.

We often think of witnessing for Christ and our Zionitic way of life in terms of "preaching the gospel" to those who will listen. I think being a warmhearted neighbor, generous with your help and your understanding to meet another's problem or another's need is one of the very finest ways of witnessing, don't you?

LOUISE WRIGLEY

Interlude

By Shirley Hunter

MY RELIGIOUS AUTOBIOGRAPHY is a spiritual metamorphosis. Being a rather serious child, I was always interested in the nature of things, and at an early age began to cast about to find the nature of God. However, I was a child, and my first attempts appear—from the level on which I am now living—as embryonic, just as my present attempts will appear in the development of years to come.

I recall that at the age of eight or nine I was riding on the drawbar of my father's tractor when it occurred to me that the God who performed miracles in early days could still do it; so I proceeded at once to pray that he would create for me a fairy to leap lightly from clod to clod for my entertainment. I prayed most earnestly, ceasing only to peep out periodically to see if my prayers had been answered yet. When nothing happened I threw God out and became a youthful atheist. The wound healed quickly, and through the experiences of the intervening years, I have come to know that God does perform miracles, but not as proof that he exists.

As a youngster I went to Sunday school and church regularly and willingly, though I wasn't much impressed by the dull Bible stories. That is, not until I met Lois. She was my junior teacher, and I never had met anyone so devoted to a purpose. Our close association grew, and even today I turn to her with my problems. She showed me what it means to serve God and to love people. Her life is a testimony that God still lives and moves in the lives of people.

DURING MY LATE HIGH SCHOOL days I began to question my religion—not the foundation and bases themselves, but the whole pattern of truth and life. It was all rather nebulous, and hung in suspended animation in the back of my mind for some time. I attended a church camp for the first time just after I was graduated, and it was here that I met many church youth and found that in them lay the key to what I was searching for. As we sang around campfires and held prayer meetings and testimonials, I found others voicing the questions I had twisting around in my mind: What does it mean to be good? What is the place

Here Is the Writer . . .

SHIRLEY HUNTER attended Graceland for one year, then transferred to the University of Iowa College of Nursing from which she plans to graduate with a B.S. in nursing in 1954. Here she has served as both judiciary board member and unit chairman in Currier Hall, and this year is vice-president of the junior nursing class. She also sings in the Westlawn Chorus. At Graceland she wrote for the "Tower" and the "Acacia" and served as judiciary chairman at Walker. "My interests," she says, "are varied. I enjoy all sports, reading, writing, and—of course, nursing."

of God in my life, and my place in his world? What about the conflict that exists between science and religion? But now that I sensed the importance of people in the answers, I entered Graceland College that fall with an interest in them and in God that I had not held before.

The intellectual pursuits of college, when centered in a search for truth, led me to understand the nature of God's work in his universe. The spark of divinity that I had come to sense in men proved to me that Divinity exists, and from my observations, I could see that great men—really great men—were drawing sustenance from some higher power and combining it with their own inherent powers with the end result of a good man. I met intelligent men, foreign students, people of all ages and from all levels of life, and together we found that science and religion are not conflicting, but consistent. I saw miracles in the lives of the people I knew, I found miracles in the textbooks I studied, I sensed miracles in the depth of the life around me. It was easy then to accept the idea that miracles are happenings in accordance with laws not yet fully understood by men. Science and religion are coincident. It broadened my childish concept; I understood how "these things shall follow them that believe."

I DISCOVERED IN GOD the qualities of sympathetic love, kindness, humor, integrity, and personal interest in every man, and discarded forever my former idea of him as aloof and impersonal. My relationship with him and with other people led me to another realization—that of the divinity of the Bible. Now that I could grasp the spiritual potential that men have, I could see what God is and the power that Jesus has because of his close communion with God. Because of this, he is the only one in history who could atone for man. Furthermore, I found that there are so many conflicting ideas about the Bible and so many mistakes in translation that men need additional revelation to give the principles meaning and embellishment to fit today's dynamic, developing life.

I left Graceland, the dear little chapel I had come to love, the talks with others on man's moral obligations, our classes with emphasis on the social responsibility of Christians,

Honorable Mention to All-American High School Football Star

RUSSELL HAMPTON, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry E. Hampton of Bakersfield, California, has made an outstanding contribution on the Graceland football team this fall; this is just one of a long line of football honors to his credit. Last spring Russell was given honorable mention with the All-American high school team players selected annually by the Wigwam Wisemen of America. Previously he had made the Californian's all-valley and all-state teams. Last year he was captain of the Bakersfield High School "Driller" Football Team and president of the "Big B" athletic club. The "Drillers" won the valley championship for 1951-52.

Russell received bids to apply for the honor of playing in the East-West "All-American" game which was held in the East last summer. Later he was asked to play in the North-South California game, which the little winding rock path that poses as a quiet, tranquil co-ordinator of the busy town behind and the search for truth on the "Hill" ahead. I left, but I paused to receive the crowning climax of my spiritual experiences there, my patriarchal blessing, bestowed on me by "Doc" Cheville. The personal message of that blessing unified my life and gave it purpose by putting the ethereal quality of my college, my church, and my God into a form that could guide me in the new experiences ahead. It pointed up to me the meaning of spirituality—the joining of emotion and knowledge into one way of life.

My autobiography is not complete, only because life does not end here. I have questions still unanswered, problems yet unsolved, a God unfathomed. And this is but an interlude.

was held at the Coliseum in Los Angeles last August 7. He turned down both bids because he felt it was necessary for him to work all summer in order to attend college.

Last June at graduation from Bakersfield High School, a school with an enrollment of four thousand students, Russell was one of ten to receive an award pin for outstanding service to his school during his four years as a student. He was also awarded the coveted Sam Lynn trophy. This is given annually to the athlete who, in the opinion of the coaches, is the most outstanding representative of the school's sports program, both on and off the athletic field.

For three consecutive years he also received the school's award for being the most outstanding student on the football team.

RUSSELL HAS BEEN an active member of the Bakersfield Zion's League and has attended church and church school regularly. He has assisted with ushering and in preworship services. His father has been pastor of the Bakersfield mission for the past eight years, and there has been plenty of work for Russell to do.

The family always took it for granted that Russell would attend Graceland. But until he went to reunion last summer, he had made plans to attend the University of California at Los Angeles. This is the story his mother tells:

When graduation was over many people contacted Russell and much pressure was put upon him to enroll in a state university. He was awarded scholarships to attend the University of California at Berkeley, and the University of California at Los Angeles.

After much serious consideration and many prayers he made his decision to attend UCLA. But we know now that none of us seemed to feel just right about the decision.

When reunion time came Russell felt that he would have to stay home to work as he knew his employer would not allow him any time off. The rest of our family attended reunion at Pacific Palisades for the entire week. On Friday night Russell joined us there. By Sunday a great and new decision had been made in our family—Russell was going to Graceland.

A revelation was given through Brother Peter Whalley at the final reunion prayer meeting. The youth, particularly the young men of the church, were admonished to prepare themselves for a greater work and new responsibilities.

Further instruction was given by President W. Wallace Smith in the closing sermon of the reunion concerning work, activities, and responsibilities of the membership, especially the young people. We feel our prayers were answered at that reunion.

This fall Russ was one of five Gracelanders who placed on the interstate all-conference football team. He is currently a member of the varsity basketball squad.

New Branch in British Isles

SKEWEN, SOUTH WALES.—November 15 and 16 was a special occasion for the Saints at Skewen in South Wales. Elder Donald V. Lents, mission president, and Elder Thomas Worth, district president, were in attendance for the purpose of organizing the Skewen group into a branch to be known as the Skewen Branch. The recommendation for this came originally from the Llanelly Branch pastor, Elder Walter Cowley, who until now has supervised this group. The recommendation had the approval of the General Church officers concerned and the unanimous concurrence of the September district conference.

The Skewen group has had regular Sunday services for some time in a hired hall, under the local direction of Elder Don C. Hughes. November 15 was the day set for the actual organization which was effected by Elder Tom Worth. In a special service for the occasion he outlined the purpose and procedure of the meeting and emphasized the importance of branch organization. Twenty-three people were present. Nineteen are listed as charter members of the new branch, and the officers elected are as follows: pastor, Don C. Hughes; counselors, Priests Sam Pattinson and Douglas Jones; secretary-treasurer, Beatrice Evans; recorder and historian, S. Pattinson; women's leader, Lily Farrage; church school director, Aubrey Evans; young people's leader, Stuart Moule; director of music, Verna Hughes; auditors, Charles Farrage and Melita Farrage.

Worship services were arranged for next day when, in the afternoon, Elder Tom Worth preached on "An Appreciation of the Restoration," and Elder Walter Cowley presided. The evening sermon was by Elder Donald V. Lents and followed the theme, "Why Tarriest Thou?"—Reported by TOM WORTH

League Has Project

MIAMI, FLORIDA.—Graceland College Day was observed October 26, with Elder Ed Fisher in charge.

A Halloween party was held in the home of Elder Edgar Chevalier for the Zion's League. The project chosen by the League for the year is to beautify the church grounds.

Elder and Mrs. N. L. Booker and Deacon and Mrs. William Dippel attended the Doctrine and Covenants Institute in Independence. They also visited Bishop Leslie Kohlman and family of Guelph, Ontario.

Recent visitors to the branch were Elder and Mrs. Gordon Barnes of Pensacola, Florida, and their son, Private Glenn T. Barnes, and his wife Betty who came from Ft. Ord, California. Betty is the daughter of Priest and Mrs. Clarence White. Glenn left for overseas duty on November 15.

For the past several months, instead of a Sunday night preaching service, different men of the priesthood have conducted class periods.

The women's department has divided into two classes. One class is studying the Commentary on the Doctrine and Covenants by Edwards and the other is studying a course on child psychology.

On November 30, Priest Roy McGahagan of Tampa, accompanied by his wife, was the speaker for the eleven o'clock service.

The church is located on the corner of 67 Avenue and 15 Street.—Reported by MRS. EDGAR A. CHEVALIER

Annual Election Held

MYRTLE POINT, OREGON.—The branch held its annual business meeting on August 24 under the direction of District President J. L. Verhei.

The officers' reports were given and approved and the budget for the coming year was presented and unanimously approved.

The following officers were elected: Thomas E. Coffman, pastor; Mrs. Thomas Coffman, secretary; Charles McCrachen, treasurer; Mrs. Allison Roberts, church school director; Mrs. Fred Zumwalt, women's leader; Mrs. Lula Gnad, historian; Vern Brewer, auditor; Mrs. Vern Brewer, publicity; Miss Margaret Gnad, librarian; Mrs. Thomas Coffman, music leader; Mrs. Jasper Streeter, Zion's League leader; and Noel King, social leader.—Reported by MRS. VERN BREWER

Missionary Holds Series

JACKSON, MICHIGAN.—Missionary Elder Stanley Lee Pfohl held a series of meetings November 16-23. The theme was "The Story of the Restoration," illustrated with slides. Prior to the series Brother Pfohl was in Jackson for two weeks of preparation with the priesthood. Pastor John R. Cox visited the homes of Saints and nonmembers with Brother Pfohl. The women's department also met in preparation meetings with the missionary elder. They went in twos, visiting the homes in the neighborhood of the church.

Sister Grace Surbrook was baptized at the conclusion of the series on November 30.

Confirmation services were held on December 7 in the church. Brother Pfohl confirmed Sister Surbrook, assisted by Pastor John R. Cox and Elder Stanley Price.—Reported by NANCY TURNER should fall too low, the college would have difficulty in meeting its financial obligations. If the number should rise too high, there would be insufficient housing, classes, and dining facilities. The yearly budget determines the minimum number of students necessary to maintain a healthy college. The Board of Trustees determines the maximum number of students that can be served adequately. Last year the maximum was 585.

These factors will influence enrollment in the coming year:

1. Students returning for their second year are accepted first. In 1951 there were 318 freshmen; 220 of them returned this year. At present there are 366 freshmen. This indicates that the freshman class next fall may have to be slightly smaller than it was last September, unless the total enrollment is allowed to rise.

2. National trends and present correspondence indicate a heavy demand for enrollment next fall.

In order that all applicants may receive a fair and thorough consideration, the Student Selection Committee needs to receive applications soon. The Committee considers each applicant separately. Among the factors influencing their decision are the following:

1. Date of application
2. An academic record which gives reasonable promise of success in college.
3. Clearly stated educational goals
4. An approved financial plan
5. Pattern of social background and behavior
6. Geographic distribution throughout the church.

The Student Selection Committee will meet on the following dates: February 2, March 2, March 16, March 30, April 13, and April 27. After May 1, the Committee will meet as often as the need requires.

All credentials must be complete before an applicant's name is presented to the Committee. These credentials include these items:

- Application for admission
- Application for housing (except for Lamoni students and married students)
- Dormitory deposit of $15.00
- Financial plan
- High school transcript

Applicants who need student employment or scholarship loans should submit these applications also. Each of these applications must be accompanied by a $10.00 deposit. Dormitory and work deposits are refunded unless the student violates his agreements with the college.

before the fund grew to a size where it seemed the time was right for making actual plans. There was a desire among some to move from the old quarters—a wish that eventually had to yield before the inflated property values of all newer sections of the city. It was finally agreed that remaining in the present well-populated and well-landscaped district would permit a larger sum to be put into the building, and even then it became necessary for the group to accept a loan from the Houses of Worship Revolving Fund of the General Church for the completion of the new building.

Under the present pastor, Brother W. W. Wood of Windsor, Ontario, all the divergent plans were consolidated for this building. The picture shown is the finished church. It is a remodeling of the original building with a new auditorium added in such a way as to appear one structure. The material is brick, stuccoed and painted white. The interior is of open beam construction with natural wood pews and pulpit furnishings. The rostrum and aisles are carpeted. A recessed baptismal font is curtained to harmonize with the color of the walls. Gold draperies were selected to accent the wood trim. The "old" part, which is called the junior chapel, appears as the wing to the left. In it are classrooms and the junior auditorium. The building very comfortably takes care of the present membership and its activities.

Carol Dee Haferkamp, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter C. Haferkamp of Temple City, California, and Charles E. Bickel, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Bickel of San Gabriel, California, were married December 21 at the Michillinda Community Presbyterian Church. Elder Blaine Bender, pastor of the Temple City congregation, performed the double-ring ceremony. The couple will live in San Gabriel.

Greer-Vincent

Sylvia Vincent, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Vincent of Akron, Colorado, and Wesley Greer, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Greer of Muskogee, Oklahoma, were married December 23 by Elder Joseph E. Hufford. Sylvia is a graduate of Graceland College, class of '49, and Wes is a graduate of Oklahoma A. and M. They are making their home in Pleasant View, Colorado.

Speer-Stephens

Charlotte May Stephens, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. Stephens of Eureka, California, and Thomas T. Speer, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. T. Speer of Phoenix, Arizona, were married December 23, at the Reorganized Church in Phoenix. Priest Leonard Speer, brother of the groom, performed the wedding ceremony. The couple will make their home in Seattle, Washington, where the groom (a graduate of Graceland College) is stationed with the coast guard until he is assigned to Alaska. His bride will join him there later.

BIRTHS

A daughter, Julie Ann, was born on October 23 to Mr. and Mrs. George Edward Greene of Chandler, Arizona. She was blessed on December 14 by her paternal grandfather, Elder I. Raymond Greene, and Elder K. Tsuji at the church in Phoenix. Mrs. Greene is the former Lois Stevens.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Van Fleet of Independence, Missouri, announce the birth of a son, David Robert, born December 27. Mrs. Van Fleet is the former Ruth Berryman of Royal Oak, Michigan. Both parents attended Graceland College.

Twin daughters, Linda Kay and Lois Mae, were born September 17 to Mr. and Mrs. Everett G. Nielsen of Portsmouth, Iowa. They were blessed December 28 at Persia, Iowa, by Elders E. L. Edwards and John M. Jensen.

A daughter, Margaret Anne, was born on November 5 to Anne and Vernon Pettit of Aurora, Illinois. She was blessed on November 30 by Elders Paul Gouty and Arnold J. Settles.

A daughter, Mary Frances, was born on December 11 to Mr. and Mrs. Ronald C. Smith of Wenatchee, Washington.

A son, Charles Allen, was born on December 18, 1952, to S/Sgt. and Mrs. Jack Jolicoeur of Ontario, California. Mrs. Jolicoeur is the former Marjorie Swain.

A daughter, Mildred Marie, was born on November 9 to Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Troeh of Twin Falls, Idaho. The father is pastor of Twin Falls mission.

DEATHS

FRIEND.—Emma, was born September 29, 1849, in Salem, Ohio, and died November 2, 1952, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Rilla Wright, in Flint, Michigan. At the age of 103 she could still recall going to Michigan in a covered wagon with her husband and their daughter. She had been a member of the Reorganized Church over fifty years, having been baptized in Pigeon River by Elder Dirk Schreur.

She is survived by her daughter; four grandchildren; two great-grandchildren; and six great-great-grandchildren. Funeral services were conducted by Elder Arthur DuRose at the Groves Memorial Chapel at Flint. Burial was in the Flint Memorial Park.

CRENSHAW.—Arthur W., was born in Jackson County, Missouri, in 1870, and died December 20, 1952, at the Independence Sanitarium. He was married on February 23, 1893, to Mary Waddell, who survives him.

Five children were born to them; one son, Herbert, preceded him in death.

Besides his wife he leaves three sons: Ralph E. of Des Moines, Iowa; Chester C. and Dell D. of Independence, Missouri; a daughter, Mrs. F. L. Kelley of Wichita, Kansas; three brothers: Marvin Crenshaw of Columbia, Missouri; Ernest Crenshaw of Blue Springs, Missouri; and Irvin Crenshaw of Buckner, Missouri; two sisters: Miss Gertrude Crenshaw of Buckner and Mrs. Eva Brown of Grain Valley, Missouri; six grandchildren; and eight great-grandchildren. Funeral services were held at the Carson Chapel in Independence.

JACOBS.—Cornelia Grace, daughter of Pleun and Ida May Roobol, was born January 16, 1898, near Gallatin Gateway, Montana, (date of death not given). She was married to Milton Schuyler and one son was born to them. Mr. Schuyler preceded her in death, and on November 15, 1942, she was married to Henry Jacobs, who survives her.

Besides her husband she leaves her father; three sisters: Mrs. C. L. McCampbell of Santa Ana, California; Alice Myrstel of Big Timber; and Mrs. Melvin Peterson of Bozeman; a brother, Darrell of Butte; a stepson, Don Jacobs; and two stepdaughters: Erlene Andes and Veda Jacobs. Her son preceded her in death on March 5, 1950.

CAMPBELL.—Jennie Kemp, daughter of Henry and Sarah Kemp, was born June 22, 1861, at Cash Valley, Utah, and died December 17, 1952, in Independence, Missouri, which had been her home since 1880. On April 17, 1887, she was married to Willis O. Campbell; four children were born to them. Her husband died on May 1, 1941. For a while after his death she made her home with her daughter in Kansas City, but returned to Independence two years ago to live with her son, Orville. She had been a member of the Reorganized Church since 1874.

Surviving are three sons: Frank Leslie of Van Buren, Arkansas; Orville of Independence; and William Clyde of Chatham, New Jersey; a daughter, Mrs. Henrietta Leavens of Kansas City, Missouri; seven grandchildren; and twelve great-grandchildren. Funeral services were conducted by Elder Glaude A. Smith at the Carson Chapel in Independence. Interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery.

Correction

Two typographical errors appeared in the obituary of Anna B. Rowley (December 29 issue of the Herald). Mrs. Rowley's maiden name was Maggard, rather than Waggard, and the name Teo Burcell should be Ted Burcell.

courteous, loyal, and all the things that are "of good report."

Learning to love is a lifetime job. It isn't easy. But the rewards are great and among them is the knowledge that while you are learning you will be discovering in yourself a man capable of being a good husband to my daughter-in-law, a man capable of being a good father to my grandchildren, a man capable of starting the cycle over again by teaching a new generation of children how to love.

When you have found the man, it will be time enough to think about looking around for the wife. She will be there looking for you. My dear, I hope you will find someone gentle and gay, strong enough to stand beside you in the wildest wind, someone who has courage and is acquainted with fear, someone of integrity and appreciation of selfhood. And when you have found each other, I hope she will find you worth loving.

Have a happy day, my son. And good hunting in the days ahead.

Lovingly,
Mother

WHAT IS SUCCESS?

When I was young and times were hard, success was my ambition. I thought it best to disregard all else but that condition. I studied long (perhaps too long) how other men succeeded; that soon beyond the aimless throng, my place would be conceded. So seeking for a favored spot, I fought and kept on fighting. The plight of others mattered not; success seemed so inviting. Then one day from a clear blue sky, my soul was lightning riven. I found, as Paul, the reason why life on earth was given. True success means happiness, to you and to all others. Upon the road to blessedness we travel with our brothers. Success! Ah, what a mighty word, when righteousness is blended with each man's deeds; when envy is served and selfishness surrendered.

DESTINY

One of the passing generations but not yet passe, the one and only C. Ed. Miller, not long ago quoted from memory the following poem which he offered as a tribute to the memory of Joseph Smith:

A man is thought a knave or fool,
Or bigot, plotting crime,
Who, for the advancement of his race,
Is wiser than his time.

For him the hemlock shall distill,
For him the axe is bared,
For him the gibbet shall be built,
For him the stake prepared!

Him shall the scorn and wrath of men
Pursue with deadly aim,
While envy, malice, hate, and lies
Shall desecrate his name.

THE SALT OF THE EARTH

Salt is something we need. It is necessary to life. Without it we would not last long. It must be good. The dictionary says that salt is to season, to purify, to cure—a compound of chloride and sodium possessing valuable anti-septic properties. It is that which preserves from corruption and gives flavor a character.

Thus we understand Jesus to mean, when he says, "Ye are the salt of the earth," you—my disciples, all who follow me—must possess the character that flavors the world of men. You must possess the saving, purifying properties that will cure all the evils of mankind. This is a tremendous challenge. You must possess the saving qualities like unto salt or you can do little if any good.

Jesus depends upon all of us to do good. He depends upon us to do his will. If we would build the kingdom we must build according to his instructions.

"Please pass the salt" is an expression we hear many times. This should be a constant reminder of our responsibility, "Ye are the salt of the earth," the Christian flavor in daily living.

News and Notes

FROM HEADQUARTERS

PRESIDENT IN IOWA

The first service was held in the new church at Council Bluffs, Iowa, on January 18. President Israel A. Smith was the guest speaker at the morning service.

DEDICATES CHURCH IN MICHIGAN

President W. Wallace Smith left Independence January 16, to be present at the dedication service for the Cash, Michigan, church which was held January 18. Elder Eldon Winters is pastor of the Cash Branch, and Elder John Blackstock is district president.

STAKE COMMUNION SERVICE

"Seek Ye First to Build Up the Kingdom of God" was the theme for the annual priesthood Communion service held January 9, at the Stone Church. There was an attendance of 375 priesthood members. Bishop G. L. DeLapp gave the Communion message, and following a testimonial period, President Israel A. Smith gave the prayer of consecration. Stake President C. V. Graham reports that the testimonies were of outstandingly high quality.

APOSTLE FARROW IN KENTUCKY

Apostle Percy E. Farrow conducted a series in Louisville, Kentucky, December 14-21. He reports excellent attendance and interest. The pastor of the branch is Elder James B. Welch.

CONDUCTS PRIESTHOOD INSTITUTES

Dr. F. M. McDowell reports a successful series of priesthood institutes conducted with Apostle C. George Mesley in four districts in Michigan during December. They also spent one evening with the priesthood of the London District in Ontario. Emphasis was given throughout to the setting up of a long-time priesthood education program growing out of the peculiar needs in each district to be administered by the administrative officers in each instance. Brother McDowell reports a continued close co-operation with administrative officers in selected areas in the conducting of intensive experimental programs in priesthood education. Recent contacts with such administrative officers include Northwest Iowa District, Rhode Island District, Far West Stake, Lamoni Stake, and Central Missouri Stake.

MISSIONARY SERIES PLANNED

A Sunday night missionary series, beginning February 1 and ending March 8, will be held in the Center Stake. The congregations will have the following speakers: Blue Ridge, Eugene A. Theys; East Independence, E. Norman Cox; Eden Heights, C. V. Graham; Englewood, Almer Sheehy; Enoch Hill, L. J. Richards; Gudgell Park, Vern Brown; Liberty Street, Merle Guthrie; Mt. Washington, William E. Timms; Second Church, Arthur Stoft; Slover Park, W. E. Wakeman; South Crysler, Charles Neff; Spring Branch, Warren B. Haskins; Stone Church, Glaude A. Smith; Walnut Park, Herbert C. Lively; Walnut Park Mission, Henry Schaefer (to be held in Brother Schaefer's home); and Sugar Creek, Lee Hart. Liberty Street will begin their series on February 8. The over-all theme for the series is "Hear Ye Him."

We'd Like You to Know . . .

Ina P. Hattey, R.N.

It isn't any wonder that Ina Hattey has the kind of dreams for the future which she has. When a woman has handled and cared for as many thousand new-born infants as she has it is natural to be concerned for their welfare and for that of their new mothers, many of whom have turned to her almost pathetically for guidance and help. When a day-old baby is placed in his mother's arms for the first time at the Independence Sanitarium and Hospital, Ina Hattey usually is not far away. She'll be handy if there are questions or if the little one needs to be taught how to nurse. Her hope for the San's future is to be able to initiate a clinic for teaching young mothers how to care for the new infant in the home.

That smile on her face as she looks at the little ones in her arms is natural. It comes from her heart, and her heart is given in service to the mothers and infants of Independence and the church. As nursery supervisor she helps the student nurses handle the babies. She directs activities in the nursery only, and instructs the new mother about the child's care after they leave the hospital.

Ina has lived in Independence all her life. She was baptized at the Stone Church in 1908, attended the Independence high school, Kansas City Junior College, and the Independence Sanitarium and Hospital School of Nursing. Nursing has had the most important place in her life for many years.

She is also a musician and was awarded a scholarship in voice study with Paul Craig for two years. She sang solos in the Stone Church and for the Independence Music Club until a recent illness.

She lives near the San with friends—Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Moler. Her first loves at home are her nieces and nephews, whom she enjoys watching grow up to be well-mannered, well-adjusted young men and women. Her first love at work is to send the little ones home with their mothers as well-mannered, well-adjusted babies performing as parents hope they will. Also her little "adopted" babies are her pride and joy, and the happiness they bring to their parents is her happiness.

The Burden

"Cast thy burden upon the Lord, and he shall sustain thee."—Psalm 55: 22.

A TIME COMES in your life when you wake up in the morning to be confronted by a load of responsibility—too much work to do, problems too difficult to solve, and unpleasant tasks to perform. You may almost wish you had not awakened that day. Only in sleep have you been able to escape your troubles. For every waking moment you are keenly aware of a great burden upon mind and heart. You need help, and you need it now.

If you are a reader of the Bible, God's word is your treasure house. You may remember some such promise as this: "Cast thy burden upon the Lord, and he shall sustain thee."

Just how does that work?

There is a way, and many people have found it. It is possible for you to find that way too.

A WOMAN who reads these pages wrote to us in recent weeks regarding a severe trial that had come to her. She and her husband had been working apart because of serious illness in the family. He has been laboring on the home in anticipation of the time when they would be together again.

Death released a suffering parent from his pains, and it seemed that the time had come when this woman could be at home. How happily she looked forward to it. How grateful she was for it.

Then a heavy blow struck. The doctor told her that her husband had not long to live. Their happiness together would be brief. The home, prepared with so much toil and loving care, would soon be empty again. And she was warned not to tell her husband. She felt the tragedy of her burden, and she knew she could not carry it all alone.

We quote this sentence from her letter: "Finally I decided the problem was too big for me, and I would have to leave it in the hands of my Master."

It was this decision that brought her new strength and a return of peace to mind and heart. How God will solve her problem, she does not yet know. But she feels the assurance that he is remembering her and her needs, and she has faith that he will work out a solution for her somehow.

We sometimes meet death in the midst of life. And then, turning to God, we find life again, right there in the midst of death. It is a great victory when we come to the understanding that at the very heart of the universe is the great loving, indestructible, enduring Life.

PERHAPS it was only yesterday that you felt you could not endure the long hours ahead of you. For a few minutes alone you went down on your knees in prayer. You laid your burden before the Lord. You wept at the foot of the throne. You reached up your hands pleading for help.

And help came.

Your burden was not made lighter, but you were given strength to bear it. Your pain of body and spirit was eased for a time. Light shone upon the path before you, where all had been darkness. And through the day, as you went from one thing to another you felt a helpful spiritual presence, giving you love and strength.

But that was yesterday.

IN THE NIGHT the shadows were around you again, and when dawn came you felt more tired than when you went to bed. Where was the strength that sustained you yesterday? Would you have to endure the rigors of this day alone?

So you turned to prayer again. It seemed that the blessing you received was not as great, but it was enough that you could carry on. God did not give you a crutch, to make a permanent spiritual cripple of you. He gave you a boost so that you could walk by yourself. He never takes over the whole job. He always leaves something for you to do.

REMEMBER the occasion, related in the first chapter of Deuteronomy, when Moses was training the people of Israel in the art of self-government. The nation was increasing in numbers, and Moses found it impossible to judge all the people's differences. So he appointed magistrates according to their numbers. But he continued to serve as an appellate court. He said to them, "The cause that is too hard for you, bring it unto me, and I will hear it" (verse 17).

The God of heaven is training us in the art of self-control and self-management. We are to do everything we can for ourselves. Only through this effort, discipline, and pain do we come to mature mind, spirit, and character. But he says to us, "The cause that is too hard for you, bring it unto me, and I will hear it."

"Cast thy burden upon the Lord." No matter how big it is, no matter how hard it is to bear, no matter what pain and grief may accompany it, he will give you help. "And he shall sustain thee." That is the promise. And that is your hope.

Reorganization of Oklahoma Districts

At the recent Joint Council of the First Presidency, Council of Twelve, and Presiding Bishopric, the Tulsa District and the Oklahoma City District were formed from the present Central Oklahoma District and two counties of the Western Oklahoma District.

The Western Oklahoma District continues as heretofore except for the addition of Grant and Garfield Counties.

The new Tulsa District consists of Kay, Osage, Washington, Noble, Pawnee, Payne, Creek, Rogers, Tulsa, Okmulgee, Wagoner, Muskogee, Cherokee, and Adair Counties.

The new Oklahoma City District consists of Kingfisher, Logan, Canadian, Oklahoma, Lincoln, Okfuskee, Caddo, Grady, Cleveland, Pottawatomie, Seminole, Hughes, McIntosh, Sequoyah, McClain, Pontotoc, Pittsburg, Haskell, Latimer, and Le Flore Counties.

These changes became effective as of January 1, 1953. Local conferences are being called by Apostle Jensen to determine district personnel.

Official Boy Scout Sunday, February 8

The Boy Scouts of America have invited us to join in observing the traditional Boy Scout Sunday on February 8. This date will represent the forty-third anniversary of Scouting in the States and will be observed as part of Boy Scout Week, February 7-14.

The theme of the week is "The Whole Family." It is a theme which can be used profitably in our pulpits whether or not we have Cubs and Scouts in our congregations. Because we are deeply interested in family ministry and because Boy Scouting is the official boys' program of our church, it would seem wise, wherever possible, to observe this day.

Our recognition of the home as the "cradle" of kingdom builders should make it relatively easy to relate our February church theme, "The Available Kingdom," to a service in recognition of "the whole family."

Cubs, Scouts, and Explorers are to be encouraged to attend the churches of their choice with their own families. Many of the more than three million members of Scouting will have no regular church home of their own. The observance of Scout Sunday, therefore, should be particularly effective this year as part of our general missionary effort.

Change of Bishop's Agent Assignment, Kirtland District

At his request Brother Joseph Kochis is being relieved of the work of bishop's agent in the Kirtland District, and this work is being assigned to Bishop J. F. Wildermuth, 29617 Lake Shore Boulevard, Willoughby, Ohio. Solicitors of this district are hereby notified to send their reports for the month of January, 1953, and each succeeding month thereafter to Bishop Wildermuth at this address.

We are most appreciative of the good service given by Brother Kochis as bishop's agent in the Kirtland District. We are grateful also for the good support given him in his office by the Saints of this district, and are assured that the same support and co-operation will be accorded Bishop Wildermuth as he assumes responsibility for this work.

"Herald Sunday" Changed

Because February 8, originally selected for "Herald Sunday," falls on National Boy Scout Sunday which is observed in many of the larger congregations, it has been considered wise to change the date of observing "Herald Sunday" to March 8. Suggestions and materials to help on this occasion will be sent out soon.

Auditorium Income

It will be some time before we will have complete returns for the year on the Auditorium, as December is usually a big month and it will take a while to tabulate the returns; but at the close of November only four districts had met their full quota. The first to go over the top was South-eastern Illinois, with contributions of $2,452.39 and a quota of $2,000.00. The other districts were Northern Indiana, with a quota of $1,750.00 and an income of $1,800.86; Eastern Montana with a quota of $500.00 and contributions of $504.55; and Central Nebraska with a quota of $300.00 and contributions of $318.23. We are hopeful that many more districts and stakes will meet their quotas when the December income is in and tabulated.

(Since writing the above we have received a telegram from Bishop Stephen Robinson on the attainment of the Des Moines District of its quota for the Auditorium. We hope there are many other districts that will have achieved this during the month of December. We are glad to get the information from Bishop Robinson so that it could be incorporated with this notice.)

The total receipts up to and including the month of November amounted to $107,650.66. We are hopeful that the income for December will show an improvement in the total year's effort to raise funds for this much-needed construction work on the Auditorium.

Influence of the Bible

By Israel A. Smith

THE ISSUANCE OF A NEW TRANSLATION of the Bible and the tremendous publicity given it by way of outright advertising and articles in most of our magazines and newspapers have caused us to reconsider the place of the Bible in the minds and hearts of the American people. Perhaps it is not presumptuous for us to do so, though I would not essay to talk about the Bible in other lands. However, I suspect that the Bible is more revered in some foreign places, such as England, than it is here.

Of course, throughout history there have been those who have "stood against" the Bible, as we have always had agnostics and scoffers and traducers of Jesus Christ and the Christian religion.

An interesting story is told of a society of infidels in England, men of erudition and learning, who often assembled for the purpose of impeaching the Bible and strengthening each other in their unbelief. In the progress of this society, agreement was finally reached to burn the book, since it was the cause of so much disquiet to them.

Every preparation for the ceremony was made and a brilliant young man of accepted standing was chosen to have charge. Amidst supporting applause of now jovial associates, since the die for them was cast, it is said that he took hold of the large Bible which had been selected for the burning, to place it in or on the fire, when he began to tremble and faint, upon which he returned the Bible to the table whence he took it, remarking with feeling, "We will not burn that book until we get a better!"

We trust that no critics of the Bible, now that the world has what is said to be a better, will have any desire to burn the older translations.

As a happy sequel to the foregoing story it is said that the young man who refused to put the torch to the Bible later became a Christian and died happy in his better faith expressing hopes of forgiveness and blessedness from the book he once wanted to burn and destroy. The fear of impending death is often a solvent that softens what some men profess rigidly to believe.

FAMOUS MEN have spoken of their convictions as to the Bible, but they spoke when men generally were Bible readers. It is tragic, of course, that there is today such general ignorance of the Bible and so few people in proportion to the population who make this book a source of divine instruction.

Lord Byron once wrote to a friend, saying that firm believers in the Bible have a great advantage over all others, for this simple reason:

If it be true, they will have their reward hereafter, and if there be no hereafter, they can be but with the infidel in his eternal sleep, having had the assistance of an exalted hope through life, without subsequent disappointment, since—at the worst, for them—"out of nothing, nothing can arise, not even sorrow."

After Byron's death there was found in his Bible the following:

Within this awful volume lies
The mystery of mysteries;
Oh, happiest they of human race
To whom our God has given grace
To hear, to read, to fear, to pray,
To lift the latch and force the way!
But better had they ne'er been born
Who read to doubt, or read to scorn.

One need not subscribe to the belief that the Bible is infallible to give hearty encouragement to it as something that is highly essential in the lives of people. One can well believe that there are errors in all of the various translations, carefully discriminating between obvious truth and apparent error. It is still one of the greatest of books.

PERHAPS THE READERS of the Herald would appreciate a symposium of notable statements about the Bible from famous persons well known to history. It is likely that most of them never entertained any thought that the Bible known to them and of which they spoke could possibly contain error, and most of them wholeheartedly liked the idea that the "canon of Scripture was closed," as for instance, Francis Bacon who said:

I believe that the word of God, whereby his will is revealed, continued in revelation and tradition with Moses, and that the Scriptures were from Moses' time . . . shut and closed, so as not to receive any new addition.

Milton, the blind poet, said:

. . . God having to this end ordained his Gospel to be the revelation of his power and wisdom in Christ Jesus. And this is one depth of his wisdom, that he could so plainly reveal so great a measure of it to the gross, distorted apprehension of decayed mankind. Let others, therefore, dread and shun the Scriptures for their darkness.

William Penn affirmed:

I do declare to the whole world that we believe the Scriptures to contain a declaration of the mind and will of God . . . that they ought also to be read, believed, and fulfilled in our day, being useful for reproof and instruction, that the man of God may be perfect.

A story has been told of a deist who was publicly understood to work against Christianity, who denounced the Bible as a forgery, but who at one time was found instructing his children from the New Testament. When upbraided for his apparent inconsistency, he said that it was necessary to teach children morality, and that nowhere was there to be found "such morality as in the Bible."

It was reported of Napoleon that he expressed the highest admiration for "the purity, the sublimity, the beauty of the morality" the New Testament contained.

John Quincy Adams, president of the United States and a great statesman wrote:

I have for many years made it a practice to read through the Bible once every year. My custom is to read four or five chapters every morning, immediately after rising from my bed. It employs about an hour of my time, and seems to me the most suitable manner of beginning the day. In what light soever we regard the Bible, whether with reference to revelation, to history, or to morality, it is an invaluable and inexhaustible mine of knowledge and virtue.

Rousseau, noted French philosopher, said:

This divine book, the only one which is indispensable to the Christian, need only to be read with reflection to inspire love for its author, and the most ardent desire to obey its precepts. Never did virtue speak so sweet a language; never was the most profound wisdom expressed with so much energy and simplicity. No one can arise from its perusal without feeling himself better than he was before. Is it possible that a book at once so simple and sublime should be merely the work of man? Is it possible that the sacred personage whose history it contains should himself be a mere man? Do we find that he assumed the tone of an enthusiast or ambitious sectary? What sweetness, what purity in his manners! What an affecting gracefulness in his delivery! What sublimity in his maxims! What profound wisdom in his discourses! What presence of mind, what sublimity, what truth in his replies! How great the command over his passions! Where is the man, where is the philosopher, who could so live and so die, without weakness and without ostentation?

When Plato described his imaginary good man, loaded with all the shame of guilt, yet meriting the highest rewards of virtue, he described exactly the character of Jesus Christ; . . .

John Locke said:

The morality of the gospels doth so far excel that of all other books that, to give a man full knowledge of true morality, I would send him no other book than the New Testament. . . . The shortest and surest way for a young man to attain to true knowledge of the Christian religion is to study the Holy Scriptures, especially the New Testament . . . which has God for its author, salvation for its end, and truth, without any mixture of error, for its matter.

Joseph Addison, great English author, wrote:

After perusing the book of Psalms, let a judge of the beauties of poetry read a literal translation of Horace or Pindar, and he will find in these two last such an absurdity and confusion of style, with such a comparative poverty of imagination, as will make him sensible of the vast superiority of Scripture style.

Selden, who was said to have been one of the most celebrated of philosophers of his day said that notwithstanding he ". . . had been so laborious in inquiries and curious in his collection and had possessed himself of a treasure of books and manuscripts upon all subjects, yet he could rest his soul on none save the Scriptures."

THE FOLLOWING STORY of Sir Walter Scott is well known. In his last illness he asked for an attendant to bring him "a book." When inquiry was made as to what book, he answered, "There is but one—the Bible."

Apparently the controversy respecting the teaching of religion in the public schools is not new, for in the days of Fisher Ames (1758-1808) he lamented the disuse of the Bible in the schools, and thus wrote:

Should not the Bible regain the place it once held as a school book? Its morals are pure, its examples captivating and noble. The reverence for the Sacred Book that is thus early impressed lasts long. If not impressed in infancy, it probably never takes firm hold of the mind. One consideration more is important. In no book is there so good English, so pure and so elegant, and by teaching all the same book they will speak alike, and the Bible will justly remain the standard of language as well as of faith.

The foregoing in support of the Bible and the place it should occupy in the lives of men and women is, of course, but a small part of what could be presented with profit, and we trust that the material offered may be of use to Herald readers.

In closing, however, let us not forget the unique place the Book of Mormon should have with our people, as also the Book of Doctrine and Covenants. Indeed we have in the Three Standard Books of the church a rich mine for the inspiration of our people.

An Old Concordance

The General Church Research Library has received from Brother C. W. Clark of Independence an old German Bible Concordance, dated 1677, which indicates that it is 275 years old. It is very ornate in coloring and binding, the lettering on the several flyleaves being done in beautiful, colored, old style printing. It was sent to Brother Clark by Brother N. L. Ard of Chicago for presentation to the Church Library.

This is an interesting book, and if its history could be traced it would undoubtedly prove valuable. Brother Henry Schaeffer of Independence translated a portion of the introduction. According to his translation the Concordance is the work of a scholar, M. Frederick Lankischen, who undertook the task at the request of the Count of Saxony for the members of the early Lutheran Church.

We sincerely thank Brother Ard and Brother Clark for this contribution to the Research Library which is associated with the Historian's office. Such contributions are always appreciated.

An Enduring Heritage

Funeral sermon of G. N. Briggs given at Lamoni, Iowa, church, December 28, 1952

By Roy A. Cheville

G. N. Briggs

I have a goodly heritage.

—Psalm 16: 16

SO SANG the Psalmist in a hymn of hope and gratitude. With assurance he testified, "The Lord is the portion of mine inheritance." Usually the ancients estimated their blessings in terms of material prosperity. Here, however, was a prophetic soul of two and a half millenniums ago who could think in terms of something more enduring. He saw the choicest inheritance as his communion with God and the qualities of soul that came with it. He sang of gladness and assurance and hope. Out of a fullness of heart he witnessed, "I have a goodly heritage."

Our Interest in Material Inheritances

We have long been interested in transfer of material inheritances. We have formulated laws after laws about them. Way back in ancient times the Babylonians and the Egyptians and then the Romans went into detail about them. English codes went into particulars. American legislation has followed. In former times the estate was to be left undivided that thereby the family name would be preserved in the oldest son. The property kept intact was to constitute a memorial.

In recent years this transfer has become less sure. Inheritance taxes have eaten at funds. Democracy has called for more equal distribution. Socialist theory has advocated the abolition of inheritance in order to further equality among children. In England many an ancestral estate has been dissolved.

The Uncertainty of Material Property

Today we do not discount the gifts of parents to their offspring. I am saying that such inheritances are ephemeral. Jesus saw them as transitory and subject to decay through "moth and rust" and liable to loss as thieves would break in and steal. In our time we see men who were once wealthy now poor through shifts in economic conditions. In a sense these things are external to the man. The energy, the thrift, the creativeness, the personal values—all these and more—are a part of the soul. These things are spiritual.

Opening a Will

A year ago my brother and I sat in the office of a lawyer. An envelope sealed some ten years before was opened, and we heard the reading of my father's will. I noted the designation of properties inasmuch as my brother and I were named coexecutors. I was touched by the stipulation that we were to serve "without bond"—our father had confidence in his two sons. Yet both of us sensed without saying a word that the things mentioned in the document did not constitute the major heritage.

My father was a farmer and loved the soil and growing things. He was forthright in speech and almost dogmatic on the surface. Underneath lay a tender heart and an artistry that never found adequate expression. After hearing of properties that could be measured in moneys, I thought of some things more enduring that transcended these. Three counsels stand out: (1) Do an honest day's work; (2) Keep your credit good; (3) Take care of the stock in the barn and pens. No tank was to be left empty when cattle were thirsty. No horse was to go unfed. Here was a spiritual inheritance that rose above description.

A few evenings ago I read again Plato's account of the death of Socrates. He had no property to leave. At the last he requested a beloved disciple to pay a small debt for him. When his sorrowing friends asked him about manner of burial, he remarked, "Be of good cheer . . . and say that you are burying my body only." He knew that the eternal Socrates could not be disposed of. The intellectual courage, honesty, the serenity of spirit as he faced the unknown afterlife, the passion for justice and truth constitute a priceless bequest to the ages.

Roster of Immortals

This week I have been reading Kepler's recent book, A Journey With the Saints. The preface gives Baron von Huegal's qualities of a saint. The foremost is "radiance." This means the unconscious and continuous giving of his spiritual qualities to those around him. It involves an unassuming heroism that has its source in the courage of Christ who never wavered in his spiritual certainty. I met again in this company the ancients such as Cyprian and Augustine and the moderns such as Rufus Jones, Albert Schweitzer, and Toyohiko Kagawa. I added such as Paul of Tarsus and John Bunyan who could take their inheritance to jail with them. How impoverished would be our world without the bequests of these saintly souls who gave without thinking about giving.

The Potential Eternal in Us

Every one of us has the potentiality to develop an enduring bequest to the ages. It need not be listed on monuments or in printed records. These "saints" of the earth just mentioned did not seek recognition. Thornton Wilder puts this affirmation in the thoughts of one of his characters in Our Town: "I don't care what they say with their mouths—everybody knows that something is eternal. And it ain't houses and it ain't names, and it ain't earth, and it ain't stars—everybody knows in their bones that something is eternal, and that something has to do with human beings. All the greatest people that ever lived have been telling us that for five thousand years, and yet you'd be surprised how people are always losing hold of it. There's something way down deep that's eternal about every human being."

In our better moments we sense this eternal something in every one of us. This is what endures when fads and fancies pass away. The eternal begets the eternal.

What We Leave

In the neighborhood in which I grew up, one question was sure to be asked when a man died. It was "How much did he leave?" Of course that meant the acres of ground, the head of stock, the money in the bank. Generally another question followed, "How did he leave it?" This inquired whether it was encumbered by mortgage, designated to specific receivers, and the like. The questions are still good ones, but there needs to be some direction in shaping the reply. The measurement of a man's heritage constitutes a measurement of us. I read again Paul's second letter to his beloved Timothy. What a heritage is left in the impact of this spiritually dynamic apostle on the young missionary! What a treasury is caught up in his farewell testimony: "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith." Paul probably left Timothy a few parchments, a cloak or two, and a few personal belongings. These have long since been forgotten. The spirit of the apostle carries on through the ages.

We Make Selection

Every one of these saints of yesteryears were flesh and blood persons. They had their idiosyncracies, frailties, and lesser moments. It is good that we have power of selectiveness. We do not and should not forget the less attractive sides of the natures of these good men and women. It is also good that we have the ability to place emphasis on the things that are uplifting. The habit of concentrating on the inspiring while recognizing the existence of the uninspiring is a mark of saintly character. We do this with our friends. We hope they will be equally gracious with us. Today, I am going to exercise this manner of observation as I look at the inheritance left to us by him whom we memorialize.

His Enduring Contribution

What George N. Briggs has left in material property I do not know. At the moment this does not concern me. What he has left in spiritual property I can partially evaluate, for I have already been a recipient. What remains for him today is what he gave away. When we think of his heritage we turn at once to Graceland College, in which stewardship he gave so freely.

He came to Graceland in September, 1915. Four years later I met him. Since 1919 I have known him closely, worked with him, and remembered him. I shall resist the temptation to be reminiscent and stop only to select those qualities that constitute for us a spiritual inheritance. I shall select three that are significantly meaningful to all of us.

1. Stimulation of Others

What a man does to others constitutes an index of the quality of his character. The teacher of Nazareth inspired his disciples to "become." In this sense George N. Briggs has left a remarkable inheritance. He was always encouraging others to make something worthwhile out of their lives. He was not worried about their surpassing him. He expected them to. When he came to Graceland there was almost an itinerant faculty. The new president set out to gather a staff of competence. These people were to have the best of preparation in the first-class universities of the country. They must have the loyalty that would prompt them to stay at Graceland.

All this I know, for I was one of those he invited to go on and then return to the college. A committee sat in his office when I was called in. President Briggs was sitting in the swivel chair before the roll-top desk. He usually began with some generalization and then led to his point. So he began, "I'm sure we all recognize the need . . ." He spoke of the proposed development of a chair of religion and related it to the work of the church. Then he continued, as was his custom, "For some time we have been looking for someone who . . ." That is where I came in. He turned to me with a direct question about my interest in launching out into this new field. He wanted a personal commitment and a willingness to work. Then he wanted to know what school I would recommend. It was new to me, and I had nothing to suggest. "We need a university of unquestioned reputation. I would suggest the University of Chicago." He advised me to stay on for my master's degree. He was happy when I completed the bachelor of divinity requirements. He placed his hand on my shoulder and said, "Well done, my boy," when at long last I brought to him my doctor of philosophy diploma. What he did for me he did for many others. Yes, he knew that he must stimulate others to carry on after his days of service should end.

2. Planned Effectiveness

George N. Briggs never expected manna to fall from heaven without human effort. I am sure he believed that if God needed such a miracle, it could be performed, but I am equally sure he did not expect the Saints to obtain their daily bread in such an effortless way. Our college was unaccredited when he came. He planned carefully so that the school would be worthy of accreditation when he should ask. A year after his coming the state universities of Iowa and Missouri gave their endorsement. By 1920 the North Central Association was ready to give approval. This systematic, long-time planning for merit remains an inestimable heritage in institutional and personal life.

3. Personal Stewardship

George N. Briggs did not come to Graceland College to get a job. He already had a position of standing and good remuneration. He came to Lamoni to serve his church. He came to a place of gathering to "rear a family." Once he told me of his coming. Back in 1900 he had been asked to take the presidency. He was honest enough to say he was not ready. Several years later while sitting in a meeting of the National Education Association in Philadelphia, as I recall, he had a quiet but telling experience in which he foresaw that he would be asked to come to Graceland. He kept all this to himself. When approached again in the summer of 1915 he was ready to make reply. During his twenty-nine years of leadership, he did not speak in public of this experience and of his sense of call. Yet it was deep in his heart. It is an indispensable heritage for each of us and for our college, our town, and our church.

Unto Us All

It would be out of place for me to exhort you to accept these inheritances. You of the family will single out the parts that will enrich your lives most. We who worked with him will pay our best tribute by carrying on the Graceland he consigned to us. Some have said that in the oil painting which hangs in the Ad Building the eyes follow so they seem to include us from every angle. Likewise the bequest of his life can touch us all. In response I pray the prayer of Kipling, written in the high days of the British Empire, in 1906.

Father in heaven, who lovest all,
O help thy children when they call,
That they may build from age to age
An undefiled heritage.

Another Leave-taking

It was a never-to-be forgotten meeting early in 1944 when the faculty heard President Briggs announce that on the previous day the Board of Trustees had accepted his resignation. An eloquent silence prevailed after he had struggled through his statement. One does not leave a position to which he has given twenty-nine years of his life without a tug at the heartstrings. After what seemed a long silence I managed to say, "President Briggs, there is so much we'd like to say but we haven't words now—but, we'll carry on." Today we have another leave-taking. Now as then, we feel it time for him to go. Again, we say, "We haven't words now—but, we'll carry on."

We have a goodly heritage.

contribution to the Auditorium. Recently it came to our attention that one of our good, loyal members sacrificed a day's freedom on Christmas Day to work at a job no one else wanted to take; even though he deprived himself of association with his family, he felt the urgency of the need for completing the Auditorium and made his contribution of the day's receipts earned on Christmas to the Auditorium Fund. It will take this kind of interest and devotion to the church to make this total project successful. We are grateful that there are those who are making such sacrificial contributions.

Report of Baptisms

We have finished the year 1952 with a decided upturn in the number of baptisms reported to the Department of Statistics. There were 541 reported in December. This is the highest number in December since the present system of reporting was instituted in 1920. It is 145 more than were reported last December.

In spite of the high total for December, the total for the year is 489 less than for 1951. For 1951 the total was 4,952, and 1952 has a total of 4,463.

Stakes and districts having the five highest totals of baptisms reported in December are as follows: Center Stake of Zion, 36; Kansas City Stake, 36; Central Oklahoma District, 32; Far West Stake, 24; Lamoni Stake and Los Angeles Stake, each 23.

Branches having the five highest totals of baptisms reported in December are as follows: Tulsa, Oklahoma, 15; East Bay, California, 12; Omaha, Nebraska, 10; Wichita, Kansas, 10; and Hagerman, Idaho, 9.

Sincerely yours,

THE FIRST PRESIDENCY

It is a pleasure to share the following with Herald readers:

We have recently passed through the Christmas season in the German Mission and are very happy to be able to report a fine response to our church preparations for this year. Each of our groups had special services on Christmas day, and each reports a good attendance and the presence of the Spirit of the Master.

Recently while in Kaiserslautern, Chaplain Floyd Engstrom, of our church, informed me that the Army had a surprise for our church mission. As we further discussed this matter I was very happy to learn that it was a check for $103.70 to be given to the German Mission for the furtherance of our work. Each month one Sunday's offering is turned over to a charitable organization. This results from a EUCOM ruling of the U.S. Army. This policy was begun in September, so our church received the third offering in this program.

Brother Engstrom is doing a fine work in his calling and is well respected by his associates. The position of our church is considerably strengthened by his presence in our German Mission.

The Saints of the German Mission are determined to forward the cause of the Master in the new year. As we anticipate the opportunities that shall come, we move forward with anxiety and joy. This past year has been a momentous one for the mission. A new mission house has been successfully constructed and was dedicated by President Israel A. Smith. Brethren Oakman and Livingston visited the mission and ministered to the Saints. Also this past year we were privileged to receive some splendid ministry from Elder Compier of Holland. Each of these men has assisted in strengthening our work in this part of God's vineyard.

We pledge our continued service and shall endeavor to move forward over here as shall the Saints throughout the world. May God continue to bless you brethren for the cause of Zion. Our prayers and hopes accompany you in your important calling.

This was written in Australia on December 18:

Though Christmas is a strange experience this year, with the thermometer around one hundred degrees and reunion beginning on Christmas Day, the spirit of its real significance is not forgotten.

In a way which only those who have been so far away from home and friends at such a time can appreciate, our thoughts have frequently turned in your direction in the recent weeks. Lest we sound ungrateful, let us hasten to add that the new friendships and additional opportunities which enrich our lives here contribute to our total gratitude for life and its blessings through the gospel.

Recent experiences in missionary campaigns in the four Sydney branches add to our assurance that we have been highly favored with divine grace through the restoration of the fullness of the gospel. The sense of being called of God into the fellowship of the ministry of his Son is the rallying point of all our energies, as we are particularly aware under these circumstances and at this season.

The M. L. DRAPERS

The Life of Hubert Case Part IV

An Answer to Prayer

One day when Hubert was alone he decided to go up into the woods on the hillside for quiet prayer. This he did. He said to the Lord, "If I am your servant, and there is anything I can do for your cause in this place, then provide some way by which we may live." He knew God would answer his prayer, for he then received the assurance of the Spirit. He started back down the hill and had walked only a few rods when he met a native. This man had been very friendly toward him and listened eagerly to the preaching. He told Hubert his minister told them to starve us so that we would leave the island, then added, "This is my land," showing him the boundaries. He cut a large bunch of bananas which he gave him, saying, "Don't tell where you got this, but come and get more or anything else I have here, when you want." Hubert felt very much cheered by what the man said. He took the bananas to the house and walked on toward the town.

Another Friend

He entered the store of a man named Goodwin. He was not in the main part of the village, but on the outskirts. After greeting him kindly, Mr. Goodwin said, "Did you know that the minister of the London Missionary Society has written a very bad pamphlet against you?"

Hubert said, "No, I did not know it." Mr. Goodwin then showed him a copy written in the Rarotongan dialect, which Hubert was unable to read. He replied, "No, I did not know it, and now that I do, I cannot reply to it, because I do not know the language. Also I have no funds to hire it translated or to print a reply."

Then Mr. Goodwin said, "I don't want to be personal or prying, but do you have anything to live on?" Hubert told him we had no money at all. Mr. Goodwin walked behind his counter and handed him $35.00 saying, "I am no Christian, but I do believe in doing unto others as I would they should do unto me." He added, "When that is gone and you have not heard from America, come back and get more." Hubert did have to go back, and was again given the same amount, although he said, "I don't know when I can repay you."

"Again I say, I give it to you freely, you need not pay it back," he was told. Two years later we were able to pay it through the generosity of our native members in the Tuamotus.

With Mr. Goodwin's help and our native friend's fruit and vegetables, we managed to get through the next few weeks. When our mail came there were usually a few contributions from home folk that were very gratefully received. One dollar of U.S. money was worth $2.00 in South American money, which was generally used all through the islands we visited. I was obliged to use some of the cash for cloth to make clothes for the expected child. Being able to sew on the machine or by hand helped make the money go farther.

During the latter part of July, the ship "Pitcairn" which belonged to the Advent Church came to Rarotonga. On board were Mr. Owen's other daughter and husband. We were so glad for Mr. Owen and Lura, the sixteen-year-old daughter, who had been so very lonely since her mother died. The Adventists brought several of their visiting friends to see us and took us on board their ship to show us all the sights. It was much larger than the "Evanelia." All these people were Americans, and very friendly toward us, perhaps because of that.

On July 4 we resolved to pay our respects to the governor and his lady, so we went to their home and introduced ourselves. But there was no need of introduction. Both knew who we were and were very friendly. Hubert tried to explain that we were not Mormons, but of the Reorganized Church. "Yes," said Mr. Moss, "I think the difference between those two churches is just this: the Mormon church occupies the same position toward the church Joseph Smith organized as the Catholic church does toward the church organized by Jesus Christ."

Hubert replied, "You have it exactly right." And no more was said on the subject. No one on the island was more sociable and friendly than they. Hubert continued his efforts to find some evidences of Kehauri's preaching. He had met a young man named Proctor who was trying the experiment of living wholly on fruits of different kinds. As he seemed to have no work to do, whenever Hubert wanted to walk, he was ready to accompany him. So they frequently walked ten miles or more, and after eating some fruit, or in Hubert's case, trying to find someone to listen to the gospel, perhaps eating fruit or fasting, they made their way back to Avarus. One day as they walked in their usual direction toward Matavera, where Kehauri had preached to the natives, they stopped at the house of an Englishman whom they had never met.

A Vision Fulfilled

Hubert had some tracts to distribute, and when the man invited them in, he handed him a number of tracts, one of each kind which he held. The old man gave him a keen look, counted the tracts he had given him, and asked him to sit down. He then told him that three months before he had seen him in a vision—that Hubert had handed him just the number of papers which he now held in his hand. The old man went on to say that before the vision he had been praying and fasting, asking God to heal him of his infirmities. He testified that an angel had visited him, healing him of his infirmities, and told him of Hubert's coming. Missionary work is not in vain, where God confirms the word as he has promised.

A Lost Sheep Found

One day as I was sitting near the open door sewing, I saw a native coming up the walk. His face was aglow, and he almost ran up the walk. I said to Hubert, "Here comes a Latter Day Saint!" Hubert took about three steps to the door onto the porch, and the native threw himself on his knees, grasping Hubert around the knees. "My mitinare! My mitinare!" (My missionary!) he exclaimed. It proved to be one of the natives whom Kehauri had baptized. He had just returned from another island of the group. His name was Ioane Pura-hua (the first name is native for John). He had heard of our coming and returned at the first opportunity. We were very glad to see him, and he came to our house almost every day from that time on. However, he seemed to have no influence on any of the other natives, and I am sure he tried many times before he went away to convert them to his beliefs.

Hubert employed his idle time in trying to make a bed for our expected addition to the family. Ioane proved very helpful. He knew how to use tools, and he also knew where to borrow what was needed. It did not take them long to finish, and it was really a good looking little bed.

The neighborhood children learned that we would pay them small coins for baskets of tomatoes now and then. They did not follow the advice of the preacher who had said to starve us out, and they helped us a lot.

One day Mrs. Piltz invited me to drive around the island with her. If she had invited Hubert also, I would have been better pleased. But we were just a carriage-load of women. The rest of the island was new to most of us. There was much more tillable land than I had expected to see. Quite a lot of it was being farmed, and crops were growing nicely. We started at 9 a.m., drove till noon; ate our picnic lunch, and went on. We drove again until 5:30 p.m., and then went home. I do not know how far we went, but I think it was 35 miles. I had not ridden that far for a long time and was very tired.

About this time Meau, owner of the house we lived in, died. He stayed just across the street from our place, and we found out how the natives did when one of their number passed away. For a little while all was quiet. Then Mr. Hutchings, the Episcopal minister, came and had prayer with the assembled relatives and friends. As soon as he was gone, there was a pandemonium of wails, sobs, and ejaculations. We had never heard anything like it in our past experiences with the Tahitian people. What was worse, as soon as one group wore themselves out, another would begin. We had almost no sleep that night. We were thankful that he had to be buried the next day. We attended his funeral and all the natives were very quiet and dignified. Hutchings preached, or rather he read the ritual in the Church of England book. As soon as Meau was buried, his sister began nagging at us about one thing or another.

The Missing Silver

Also about this time, in looking into my trunk one day, I discovered a knife, fork, and spoon were missing from the silver I had not been using. Of course there was no way of telling who had taken it, but we learned from this incident that these natives were not to be trusted, as our friends in Tahiti and the Tuamotus were. That was one reason why we were very willing to find another place to live.

When we began looking for another house I went to Mrs. Moss's home to spend the day while Hubert hunted for a place that would do.

A Child Born in a New Home

Late in the afternoon he found a room with kitchen and porch privileges. We were soon moved, as I had packed all our trunks and boxes before we left that morning. The people where we were to live were Australians, Mr. and Mrs. Harding. They had four children of their own. They were kind people, and we liked them very much. It was in this room that our baby (Cicely) was born, and we knew then that God's hand had led us there. Here we could have the services of Dr. Caldwell and Maud Young, his nurse. If it had not been for Dr. Caldwell both the baby and I would have died. As it was, baby was all right and I soon was able to be up. We remember the first time Mr. and Mrs. Moss came to see the baby. I walked to meet them with Cicely in my arms. Mrs. Moss started to tell me to sit down, but she caught sight of the baby's face, and exclaimed, "Oh! What a beautiful little baby!" Then Mr. Moss hurried forward too.

Kindness From Other People

Never have we seen anywhere people more kind who might have been excused if they had taken no notice of us. Instead, Mrs. Moss was my most frequent caller, and had, months before, sent me a canvas porch chair when she saw I had nothing but the straight-backed kitchen chairs.

Mrs. Piltz also was like a sister; often in the last few months of our stay she would offer Hubert the horse and buggy to take me for a ride. Our good friend Mrs. Engelke, who had come to the little Adventist hospital in the early part of December, was found to have a large tumor, and after the operation she passed away. I was not able to go to see her, but Hubert attended her funeral. We went out to see Captain Engelke as soon as I was able to ride that far to thank him for all his kindness in furnishing us milk when we could not pay for it. He was much pleased to see us and sent us home with gifts of vegetables, pineapples, and other fruit.

About this time we had word from Metuaore that he had money for our passage on the steamer when we were ready to come. This was indeed good news for us. Cicely was about a month old and it would be two more weeks before the steamer would come, so we began making preparations right away. I have forgotten to mention old Ioane's gift to the baby. The first time he came to see her, he left underneath his chair a woven native mat made of paudanus, about four by nine feet in size; also a polished coconut bowl, which the natives use for drinking. The rug is their bed, with a pillow added. We used the rug after we came home, but not to sleep on. It was about as thick as a piece of pasteboard. His grief was great when he found we were going back to Tahiti.

Return to Papeete

The steamer called at several places, making short stops. We arrived in Papeete at night and could not land until morning. As soon as we docked and people began hurrying ashore, the captain told Hubert we would have to stay on the boat until we found out whether our fares would be paid. Metuaore soon came and he and Hubert went with the captain to pay our debt. Before he returned, Ahuura came on board and found Cicely and me. She asked to take the baby, and of course I laid her in her arms; she was loud in the child's praise, but suddenly turned and walked on to the wharf and up to the street; then she started running; I watched as I could do nothing else. I knew she wanted to show the baby to others before we got there.

The Saints were all assembled when we got there and Cicely had been passed from hand to hand until she was glad to see familiar faces (for babies do know familiar faces even at six weeks). After a talk of greeting, we began to arrange things so that we could live in the mission house during our stay in Papeete.

There were a number of things Hubert was supposed to attend to while we were there, and in every branch there were three services on Sunday besides church school. We had prayer union for the women on Thursday afternoons and prayer meeting Wednesday night, so we kept busy.

The "Evanelia" Overhauled

The next day after we landed, the "Evanelia" came into port. It was shortly after breakfast next morning when someone ran past the kitchen window and into the door. It was Will McGrath, and were we pleased to see one another! He immediately wanted to see the baby who was asleep in her little bed. He tiptoed in and came out with the hushed comment, "Isn't she pretty?" Naturally we agreed.

There was quite a bit of spare time each day after the business was done, so Hubert and Will decided to see the sights of old Tahiti. They climbed the mountain to the Fort which had been built when the French first came to Tahiti. Several times in the next few days, they climbed to different viewpoints and noted all the sights they had not already seen.

The "Evanelia" had been overhauled and had new masts which increased her speed. This was part of the business Brother Devore had delegated to Hubert—to see the firm that did the job and to find what the bill was, so that it could be presented to the Conference.

When God Moves In

When God Moves In, by Arnold H. Lowe (author of The Importance of Being Ourselves and Start Where You Are). Harper and Brothers, New York, 191 pages, $2.50.

When God Moves In is not a great book, nor one which says anything particularly new, but it does say some things which very much need to be reiterated and taken to heart by the people of this generation. It is divided into twenty-four chapters, each one fairly short and more or less complete in itself, though when read together they form a consecutive whole. This arrangement makes the book convenient for "pick-up" reading. It could be a source book for many good sermon ideas.

The book is a treatise on the need for a center for life—individual life, social life, commercial life, and national life. God should be that center. When God moves in and is placed in his rightful position at the center of things, all of life changes. Without him, we find that our reliance on material resources is misplaced; that all of our much-vaunted prowess with material things comes to nought in the final test; that our lives get out of balance and go to pieces; and that we become obsessed with a growing sense of our own futility.

Sooner or later, into each life comes some great challenge—some devastating calamity, some great sorrow, some tragedy or illness or loss. Then of all times we need to let God move in. If we have let him move in long before, so much the better. We never need to be defeated by life. We are defeated only by something within us which denies us the resources of Divinity. When God is allowed to move into our lives, where he becomes known as a dear friend and a daily companion in living, we are prepared for any crisis that may come. We can see life in proper focus and live it in proper balance. We are sure of God's love and forgiveness; there is no tendency to self-recrimination for that which we cannot help—no tendency to regard trouble as an undeserved punishment.

When God moves in we are protected against our successes as well as our defeats. When we are successful the humility generated by our association with God will remind us that we are only instruments in his hands.

One of the tragedies of our age is that we have never made up our minds about Christ. We are unwilling to let him go, but we are also unwilling to accept him fully. We are willing to worship, but not to follow or obey. We are willing to confess him as a great example, a great teacher, but not as the Son of God—the Way, the Truth, the Life.

Another tragedy of our age is that we are only halfway to the kingdom. We have gone only halfway because we are afraid to pay the full price. We are "not far" from the kingdom, but still we are not there.

Many of us, instead of maturing spiritually, have lost ground since childhood. Dr. Lowe in his concluding chapter asks, "How far is today's faith from our faith as children? Have you lost even your childhood faith, or has your faith grown up? Do you still pray as a child, or as a mature, God-centered, Christ-motivated person? Now that you are grown, what does Christ mean to you? Have you lost something, or gained something, since the beginning?"

The time to place God in the center of our lives, says Dr. Lowe, is now. History will not wait for us. Men as individuals sometimes have a second chance; but no nation in history has ever had a second chance. "Some day" will be too late. "The more convenient season" never comes.

BOY SCOUTS HONOR THE WHOLE FAMILY

THE WHOLE FAMILY will be honored this year in churches observing Boy Scout Sunday on February 8, as Scouting in America observes its forty-third anniversary. The family theme is one which should especially warm the hearts of all pastors and be easily related to the General Church theme for February, "The Available Kingdom."

A splendid missionary opportunity is also provided local branches by Scouting which, through local and national publicity, will be urging the families of Cubs, Scouts, and Explorer Scouts to attend church together. The boys will be invited to wear their uniforms but to sit with their families rather than in separate groups.

Scouting recognizes that many boys have no church homes and places upon its troop leaders a heavy responsibility to see that all Cubs and Scouts are encouraged to attend regularly a church of their choice. As a long-time user of the Scout programs, we are not only invited but are expected to help provide spiritual nurture to boys who have no church of their own.

If a Cub or Scout chooses to attend our church on Scout Sunday, or any other time, we have an obligation to make him welcome and to invite him into our fellowship. If he can be persuaded to bring his entire family to church on Scout Sunday, we have one more opportunity for missionary work.

The purposes of Scouting are to "build character" and "train for citizenship." The Boy Scouts recognize that "no boy develops into the best kind of citizen without recognizing his obligation to God." All churches are invited to participate in this crusade to save boys from the secular influences and selfish motives of life. When the pastor of one church can say, "I have counted thirteen families brought into our congregation through the influence of Scouting," then we should be alert to the missionary possibilities of Scouting, both during Scout week and every other week of the year.

Church members who give leadership to Scouting groups within our church are urged to co-operate with their pastors in inviting the families of all boys of the troop or pack to attend church with their sons on Scout Sunday. They may also suggest ways wherein the boys of troop leaders might assist in the service, remembering that the Scout Sunday service is primarily a church rather than a Scout service.

Church members who give leadership to Scout units meeting under other than church sponsorship should remember their obligation to encourage all families of Scouts under their jurisdiction to attend church. If they have no particular church of their own or feel lead by the influence of the Scout leader or den mother to attend his or her church, then by all means the leader should assure them that they will be welcome. The pastor should be informed of this possibility so he may make suitable preparations for their reception and recognition.

Scout week, observed this year from February 7-14, also provides an excellent opportunity for Courts of Honor, Blue and Gold dinners, and other special events through which additional recognition may be extended to families of members and nonmembers alike. In a day of high divorce rates and family instability this splendid opportunity should not be overlooked to help tie families together through a ministry of love to them and their children.

The Scout Sunday and Scout week theme of "The Whole Family" ties into the 1953 theme of "The Whole Scout Family" and into the three-year crusade of Scouting entitled "Forward on Liberty's Team." Further suggestions for the observance of Scout Sunday may be found in Scouting Magazine, which all Scout leaders receive. It also may be secured from the local council office.

Question Time

used by Joseph Smith as the ground of his work, and incorporated into the Inspired Version, was made.

In the Inspired Version this passage stands by divine authority and with divine attestation. If it had been expunged we would have lost something of value.

CHARLES FRY

Question:

What are some of the "other books" that are to establish the truth of the Bible? (I Nephi 3: 190-192)
N. Y. C. D. Q.

Answer:

Six hundred years before Christ the Lord showed Nephi by vision the successive events of world history down to the last days, including the coming of the "Gentiles" to America after its discovery, and of their bringing the Bible to the remnants of the land—the Indians—he said, "And after it had come forth unto them, I beheld other books which came forth by the power of the Lamb, from the Gentiles unto them. . . . These last records which thou hast seen among the Gentiles shall establish the truth of the first"—that is, the Bible.

The Book of Mormon came "by the power of the Lamb" in 1830, one of its purposes being not to supplant nor "destroy that which they have received [the Bible], but to build it up." However, the Book of Mormon as translated by Joseph Smith was only a part of the whole book given into his hands, the untranslated part being sealed and not then to be opened but reserved for a future day. The book was returned to the angel for safekeeping until the Lord should direct its revelation. That sealed part will be one of the "other books" yet to come forth and will more fully establish the truth of the Bible which has suffered great depreciation through modern criticism.

The Book of Mormon mentions the "plates of brass," containing Israel's Scriptures down to 600 B. C. with a pre-Israelite account reaching back to the beginning. The Nephite people in America kept a record of sacred things for nearly one thousand years. The promise is that both are to come forth to the remnants of Israel on this land when the time comes for their conversion. The Lord has told us that the Book of Enoch is to come. A fullness of John's writings is also promised. The Lord tells of other unknown writings of Moses which "because of wickedness, it is not had among the children of men" (D. and C. 104: 29b; 90: 1c, 3a; 63: 6b; 22: 16). Many other Scriptures are mentioned, reserved for a future day.

Question:

I John 5: 7 is not in any ancient Bible manuscript, but is included in III Nephi 11: 27. Critics claim this shows the Book of Mormon copied this translation. What do you have to answer the charge regarding this specific text?
N.Y. C.D.Q.

Answer:

The passage reads in John: "For there are three that bear record in heaven, the Father, the Word, and the Holy Ghost: and these three are one," but the passage is not found in the reference given or elsewhere in the Book of Mormon, though in III Nephi 5: 38 a harmonious thought is expressed in slightly different language. The questioner probably refers to its retention in the Inspired Version of the Bible, and we answer on that basis.

The work of Joseph Smith as pertaining to the Bible was neither a literary revision nor a translational revision reviewing the work of its translators, for he was by training neither a literary man nor a translator. But he was qualified as a servant of God, by the gift and power of the Holy Ghost, to pass upon the integrity of the word which had come down from ancient date as the word of God, but having passed through the manipulations of human minds by copying and translation, had suffered, as is well known, innumerable perversions by which the verity of the divine word in many instances had become clouded or destroyed.

This work was done by divine command and direction and was performed by the spirit of revelation and inspiration, not by any educational skill possessed by Joseph Smith. His qualification was the same as that possessed by the ancient authors and writers of the sacred word who often wrote by revelation. The only point to be considered as to the passage in question is not whether it had been in the original manuscript, or whether it had been translated correctly, but whether it was divinely true. Was it God's truth and such as his Spirit could certify to in the hearts of the children of men? If so, then it should be retained.

We believe it was upon this basis that every important change (and there were many incidental ones) made in the text of the Authorized Version which was

Question:

What is the church's practice and belief concerning the ordinance of administration for the sick to nonmembers?
Missouri C. A.

Answer:

When nonmembers request the holy ordinance of administration and understand the purpose of it, the elders should anoint with oil and offer a prayer of faith. The scriptural warrant as found in the epistle of James places no limitations, such as church membership, upon the practice of asking God in this holy, ordained, and appointed manner for physical blessings.

There is a statement in the 1934 issue of the Priesthood Manual which is contrary to this. However, it has been corrected in the revised 1949 issue of the Priesthood Manual. On page 49 this statement is made: "Sharing this ordinance with our nonmember friends is certainly worth while and a fine opportunity for us to give some good ministry, providing our nonmember friend has an understanding of our belief and practices."

With the knowledge and support of the leading officials of the church, the Chaplain of the Independence Sanitarium and Hospital daily conducts and supervises the administration to patients who are not members of the church, but who ask in faith believing for the spiritual and physical blessings that may be conferred upon them by the powers of heaven through the ordinance of administration to the sick.

Our Heritage of Spiritual Power

OFTEN DURING WINDSTORMS I have marveled at the power of the wind. I have seen great trees bent by it; I have spent nights with only candles for light as a result of the force of it. The wind has been powerful enough to stop our great transportation system. In fact, as its greatest power, the wind is capable of completely halting our civilization. If we were asked to create wind, we would say—and rightly so—that we cannot. It is a power far greater than we are, and as mortals we tend to say that things which do not have shape, color, form, and dimension are beyond our comprehension.

Spiritual power does not have these properties of shape, color, form, and dimension so we tend to refuse or try to understand it. It is powerful. I have seen lives completely redirected by spiritual power. It sways us much as the wind sways the trees. It can completely halt our present way of life, stop all this worldliness, and turn us toward God's way. Just as we have no power over the wind, we often say we have no power over spiritual forces; yet we are given the task of developing spiritual power.

Many of us look back to the "good old days" for evidences of spiritual power and tend to feel that it is not present among us now. It is true that there has been, throughout the history of the church, a surge of an intangible force that I feel has been responsible for the spiritual conditions of the people of God.

I OFTEN THINK of the young boy who left the grove to tell of his wonderful vision. I am sure that Joseph Smith, much like the young boys of our day and age, was bubbling over with excitement, for it had been a wonderful and strange experience. And just as we, when something wonderful has happened to us, he could not help telling those about him. How dejected he must have felt when they refused to accept his story in the spirit in which he knew it had happened. I can almost feel the loneliness he experienced as he went about the town after that. I don't imagine his school friends were even cordial. They probably scoffed at him and most likely thought up some peculiar nicknames for him. I wonder why he didn't decide to forget about the whole thing. Maybe if he hadn't mentioned it for a year or so, others would have forgotten about it and accepted him again within their circle of friendship. I have wondered what I would do if I had to face the same situation today.

As he grew older, Joseph Smith followed God's direction to translate the Book of Mormon. The people of those days were as human as we, and if we heard that our neighbor had some ancient plates of gold, we would be right there wanting to see them. Don't you often wonder why Joseph Smith persisted in following God's command? Why didn't he show these men the plates, for it surely couldn't do any harm? They, in their humanness, refused to believe he had them when he refused to show the proof. He could have quieted their jeers if he had disobeyed God. Could we have been as true to a mission?

On April 6, 1830, six young men met in Fayette, New York, to organize Christ's church. All of those men were very young. Today we would feel a little doubt as to their ability to handle such a job. And there were so few of them! Now, if we had only six to church some Sunday night, we might feel tempted to stay away with the rest of the congregation. Why did these six young men feel that they could set out on the great task of building Zion?

SEVERAL YEARS AGO I was privileged to be at Kirtland during reunion. One night, after we had driven several miles away from the Temple, we stopped to look back. There stood the Temple atop the hill, glistening in the floodlights. It does truly glisten because of the sacrifice of the women of the early church. The Saints at Kirtland were commanded by God to build a temple. The women gave their china and glassware to be ground up and used in the cement work. In that day, this was a real sacrifice, for those women could not run downtown and replace their household goods the next day, as we can. The Kirtland Temple stands today as a testimony of the sacrifice of those men and women of the early church. I have some very lovely china, given to me as a wedding present. I wonder how I would feel if someone wanted to break it up, even for such a good cause.

The Saints went on from Kirtland to Independence. This was the realization of a great dream. They expected to build a city there and to dwell in it with God and Christ. How disillusioned they must have been when they found nothing but bitterness and persecution. If we had been at Haun's Mill and seen whole families wiped out and not even been able to care for the dead, what would we have done? If we had worked hard and long to build a home in Independence and then seen a mob destroy it in a few minutes, if we had seen the printing press, for which the people of the church had worked so hard, thrown out into the street and the manuscripts and printed pages tossed to the wind, how would we have felt? If we had gone with the church to Nauvoo, worked hard to build a city again, then seen it destroyed and our leader taken from us and killed by a mob, would we have given up? Not in all our church history has there ever been recorded the suggestion that they give up and go back to Ohio, New York, or Pennsylvania and live their lives separately in peace.

To the contrary, the Saints refused to give up at all, and it is my opinion that most of those who were misled were sincere in their efforts to do as God wanted them to do. But some were very determined that they should not leave God, and indeed they did not. In 1852 God directed them to reorganize the church. They didn't seem to have any doubts as to what they wanted to do. I should think it would have been easier to have forgotten the whole matter.

I wonder why young Joseph ever asked God what he should do about "this thing called Mormonism." After all the trouble it had caused his father, it would have seemed wiser for him to live his days in peace, respected by his neighbors as a successful farmer. But something within would not leave him alone, and he said, when he went to the church at Amboy to take his father's place as a prophet of God, "I come in obedience to a power not my own."

THE EARLY-DAY MISSIONARIES suffered much in their effort to spread the true gospel. They suffered from lack of food and clothing. A classic story of our church is one in which a missionary in England had to sell his overcoat in order to pay the postage to get his copies of the Herald. It took courage for these men to go tell the story, and some of us can't seem to get up enough courage to tell our next-door neighbor about our most cherished possession.

I sat spellbound recently while listening to Apostle Paul Hanson tell the story of his mother and father and their struggle to find Christ's church. They endured a long pioneer journey from the old country to America and across the plains to Utah only to discover that things were not as they believed they should be. Finally they were led to a missionary of the Reorganized Church, were baptized under cover of darkness, "escaped" from Utah and settled in Iowa. They suffered cold, rain, heat, and dust on those trips across the vast, unsettled country; yet some of us feel that a rainy Sunday morning is a good time to stay at home and rest up for the week ahead.

Finally the Saints returned to Independence. They had grown in peace at Lamoni. From outward appearances it would have seemed to be a very foolish move to go to Independence. After all, they had suffered dearly there in years past. Could they endure that again? They must have had a very confident faith that God would indeed be with them.

No human being could have endured any of these persecutions and continued in this great work without spiritual power. There must have been a great compelling force from within or they would have faltered. This, then, is our heritage in the church. God gave those men and women the resources by which to develop such power, and since he is a just God he has given us the same potentialities; it is our responsibility to keep this heritage alive.

SOME PEOPLE are doing their very best to develop this spiritual fortitude. All of us know members who have given much in order to do their best for Christ and his work. Some men have put Christ and his work ahead of their personal safety. Most of us knew, in the summer of 1939, that Europe was set to bubble over; yet one of our men had the courage to go into Germany to transact the work of the Lord. I don't think many of us would have enjoyed the trip, nor would we have wanted to go with the first missionary to Germany after the war. Even now the world seems to be seething; most of us enjoy the comparative security of the Western Hemisphere, yet our men are serving over the world.

time and talents to the church. One gave up his place as a university professor; another gave up an opportunity that would have tempted most young men in the world of professional baseball with all its fame and glory. Some have placed the work of the church above their families and have left their loved ones at home while they worked for the Lord's vineyard, not a week or two, but for a year. One young man recently baptized at Graceland College knew he never would be welcome again in his parents' home in Salt Lake City after joining our church. Yet he had the power from within to do as he thought God would have him do.

All of us know people within our own groups who seem always to have the strength to do that one extra thing for the church, or who are able, where so many of us fall down, to put the church first at all times. I can recall when one of our young women was able to turn down offer after offer of positions in the big churches of the town to direct their choirs at a substantial monetary return in order to work in her own small church, and she gave years of service to that congregation.

We have seen, too, branches that have been so long content within themselves develop the spiritual power within their people so that they grew both in numbers and in the quality of worship.

BUT WE HAVE to be realistic and not look only through rose-colored glasses. In some circumstances the situation is not so good. We visited the pastor of one of our large branches who had in his study a map of the city. On this map he had different colored pins for the membership of the branch: pink for active members, blue for homes of priesthood members, brown for in-

I Will Testify of Him

By Dick Howard

Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost; teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you; and lo, I am with you always, unto the end of the world. Amen.—Matthew 28: 18, 19.

WHEN I ENROLLED in a class called "Fundamentals of Debate" here at the University of Kansas, I had no idea that because of this class, my concept of and my relationship with Jesus Christ would be so enriched and deepened. Nor did I suspect that I would be given the chance to testify to this class of His great love and purpose for mankind.

Recently, however, our debate professor asked each of us to speak on the topic, "This I Believe." We were to tell the class something of our philosophies of life—one thing in our philosophies which gives us more happiness than anything else.

Although I rejoiced in the hope of telling the class something of the infinite love of God for his children, I was frankly relieved that I was scheduled to speak on the second day. For, on the first day, I listened to others speak, and this listening experience did much to define the nature of my testimony. As one person spoke, dogmatically trying to convince and persuade us to believe that his church was the only true church of God and the only means of salvation, I watched the expressions of rebellion and scorn, the exchange of mocking smiles, winks, and raised eyebrows. I knew then with warm assurance that my talk would be a simple testimony of Christ. Those who listened could laugh off any attempt to prove, or argue, or debate doctrine. But somehow I was certain that a sincere testimony of Christ would be appropriate to this situation.

I was reassured again as I prayerfully prepared my speech, and even more so as I gave the speech, watching intently the faces, and particularly the eyes of those in the room. I am indebted to C. S. Lewis, author of The Case for Christianity, a book to which I made constant reference in my preparation. Even more am I indebted to President F. Henry Edwards, author of The Life and Ministry of Jesus, a book which has enabled me to know Christ increasingly during the past six months. Most of all, I am indebted to the Master's Spirit, which has uplifted me and directed me whenever I have integrated my faculties enough to utilize it. I offer my testimony of Christ as it stands now, young, inexperienced, and yet eagerly striving for deeper meaning and increasing adequacy of expression.

for being. But I find myself groping for means of expressing even the small bit of this great idea which my mind and heart has conceived. This idea is and always will be the focal point of my life's experience, and I expect that if I work at it, it shall grow in meaning as long as I keep myself in the right relationship to it.

First, let me say that my primary concern here is something much removed from an attempt to persuade, or to impose my beliefs upon you, or merely to fulfill an assignment. My philosophy, my religion, lends itself to anything but argument or debate. My religion means too much to me to be discussed in detail in this particular situation. I am here today wanting very much to tell to attentive minds and hearts something of the great and infinite love of God, a small particle of which I've become acquainted with during the last two and one half years.

I would like to say that all the component parts of which I call happiness; for example, family ties, my church, and my role as a minister in that church, any small ability to love people which might be mine, the happiness which I share with my wife-to-be, my love for the out-of-doors, and the many other things which round out this happy life, issues from one central source of all joy and love. That source is Jesus Christ, the Son of the living God. The thing about Jesus which means so much to me isn't anything he said primarily. It wasn't his perfect example of godlike living that I'm most grateful for. It can't be summed up in his Sermon on the Mount. The thing for which I'm most grateful is the manner and purpose for which he suffered, bled, and died on the cross for you and me. It is strange that the only earthly man who never sinned was the only one who could leave with us such an unforgettable picture of just how low and deplorable sin could be as he looked up to God from the cross and said, "Forgive them, Father, for they know not what they do."

I've often wondered why it was so necessary for Christ to do this on my behalf. Some say that he volunteered simply because he wanted to bear our punishment for us. It seems rather silly to think that if God were ready to let us off easy he would make an innocent person suffer for the faults of the sinful. There's not much point in this, if you think of punishment in the police-court sense. But when I begin to view this punishment as paying off a debt, or getting out of a hole, then I can refer to common experience to see that usually whenever a person gets into a hole, the burden for bringing him out of the hole usually falls upon a friend—a friend who has plenty of assets to pay the bill.

IT SEEMS that just about the time Christ came to earth, man had really fallen into a hole. He had set himself up and behaved as if he belonged only to himself. He wasn't merely an imperfection needing improvements, but a rebel on the wrong track—one who needed sorely to disarm and go full speed astern until he would arrive at a point where he could start life all over again anew. In short, he needed to repent. But here is the catch—man had withdrawn so completely from God that he wasn't capable of repenting. He was so wicked he needed to repent more than anything, yet he was too wicked to repent. It takes a quality of goodness to repent. The only person who could do a perfect job of repenting would be a perfect person, and he wouldn't need to.

Until two and one half years ago, I had no idea of just what repentance implied. Perhaps it was because I had never experienced any vestige of true repentance. I still have shallow insight into what it requires, but I feel that repentance is the key to happiness in the fullest measure. And it isn't something I go through before God will take me back. Repentance is simply a description of the act of going back to God. If I were to ask God to forgive me, which is the same as saying if I were to ask God to take me back without making the effort to go back to him, I would really be asking him to let me go back without going back. This, of course, is impossible. And yet, the same badness which makes me need repentance makes me unable to repent. The only way for me to repent is for God to help me. He helps me by giving me a bit of himself; he lends me a spark of his reasoning powers which enables me to think. He endows me with a particle of his great love, which enables me to love others. Like teaching a child to write, or to shake hands—one must hold the child's hand and form the letters, or shake his hand. He forms the letters or shakes his hand because he is being guided. God loves and reasons and holds our hand while we do it.

IF WE HADN'T FALLEN, we wouldn't need God's help to pull us out of the hole. But we do need him to help us do something which, in his own nature as Supreme Being of the universe, he never does at all—that is, to surrender, to submit, to suffer, to die. Nothing in God's nature approximates this process at all. The very door through which I must pass, I can't find unless God takes my hand, opens the door, and guides me through. This is a door through which God, in his own nature, has never passed.

But God through his Son became a man. To me, this is the one grand and glorious blessing of all time. This is the one source of all the happiness I have ever experienced or will ever know. Because of Christ's appearance, our human nature, capable of suffering and dying, was combined with the nature of God in one person. Only he could help us out of the hole. He could (and did) surrender his will, suffer and die on the cross because he was man. He did it perfectly because he was God. Because of this perfect example of repentance, I know that I can do the same act only if God does it in me, just as God did it in Christ. As Christ surrendered his will to God, suffered the discipline of resisting temptations beyond human description, and died on the cross to go on to eternal life, so I can (though not perfectly here on this earth) travel the same road that God did as man. I believe my attempt to enact this continued repentance will succeed to the extent that I share Christ's dying, just as my reasoning powers succeed only because they are but a speck of sawdust from the huge tree of his intelligence. But I know I couldn't share this dying of the Son of God unless he had died, and he couldn't have died had he not become man. This is how Christ paid my debt. This is how he helps me out of the hole into which I fall all along the road of life. When I fall, it is my own doing. When I climb back out, God through his Son Jesus Christ has lifted me out.

I want to share the humility and suffering of Christ, for only in doing this can I share in his conquest of death and find a new life after death—a life which will bring perfection and perfect happiness. To this end, I surrender my will to that of the Master and join hands with him as together we work out God's purposes in my life.

HOW OLD ARE YOU?" was the first question asked me by the professor when I finished my talk. Then he said something which humbled me to my very depths: "I'd give anything if I could have had things worked out like that when I was your age. . . . I would have gone into the ministry as I had originally planned."

Another asked, "What is your purpose in life? I feel as if you implied it, but could you clarify those last few words?" I answered, "My purpose is to search out the will of God and then to be sure I fulfill it, nothing less. Of course I'll get into a lot of holes along the road, and that is where repentance enters in. I must be continually 'going back to God,' the author of my life."

The girl in the next row then asked, "What church do you belong to?" I was never so happy to say, "The Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints." She said, "But I didn't think your church stressed repentance so much as other Protestant churches." While she spoke, I prayed hard; then I said, "Our church exists to bring people into as close a relationship with God as it can, and repentance is one basic principle through which this is made possible. Really, we are not a Protestant church at all. We are so busy affirming the gospel of Christ that we hesitate to expend time and energy in protesting the beliefs and practices of other faiths."

I was indeed happy that twenty more people had heard and understood (I hope) a little more about Christ and his love for us. One thing they didn't know—that experience gave me a firmer grip upon the inviting hands of God, a grip which I believe is becoming more inseparable with each day I try to walk with him. I encourage all young people of the church to join in this great, challenging, humbling experience of testifying of Christ. He has said, "... and lo, I am with you always, unto the end of the world."

Observe Sixtieth Wedding Anniversary

Elder and Mrs. Lee Quick of Mapleton, Kansas, were honored on their sixtieth wedding anniversary, November 30, when their children held open house for them. Elder Quick was under General Church appointment from 1900 until his superannuation in 1942.

They have five living children: Fred Quick, Mrs. Frank McCollam, and Mrs. Arthur Dennis of Mapleton; Mrs. Melvin Shipley of Miami, Oklahoma; and Mrs. Lloyd Wede of Los Angeles, California. They also have sixteen grandchildren and twenty great-grandchildren.

Letters

Letter of Gratitude

I want to express my thanks through the Herald to all who prayed for me during my illness, especially the members of Fanshawe Branch who also fasted for me. I know their prayers were answered, for I was relieved of so much suffering when nothing else seemed to help.

I am fifteen years old. I have been a member of the church since 1951 when Brother William Haden held a series of meetings at Fanshawe; my father, mother, and brother also were baptized at that time. The following Christmas I developed a serious heart ailment, as the result of having had rheumatic fever. I was forced to lie on my back all the time because my heart was so enlarged; I had no appetite, and the pains in my legs were almost unbearable. I know I could not have lived long had it not been for the mercy of a kind Heavenly Father. Now I am able to attend church again. I always invite my friends to go with me. I cannot go to school or enjoy sports as I used to, but it's good not to be confined to bed. May God bless all who remembered me in my time of suffering.

Note of Thanks

I take this opportunity to thank all who remembered me during the holiday season. I cannot acknowledge each gift and greeting personally as I have no vision in my right eye and only half vision in my left, which makes reading and writing difficult for me. I can still talk, however, and I have preached six times in the past seven weeks at a church ten miles from the city.

Helps to Interest a Nonmember

A few days ago a friend commented that she noticed we seem to think the same way about many things. With this as a basis for talking about the church, I asked her if she would like to read The Call at Evening. She took it with her, and tonight returned with the request for more material of this kind, so I gave her The Solid Rock and one of our tracts.

I feel that I am very fortunate in being able to help in this way. I am happy that I know something of God's plan and that my husband and children do too; still that is not enough. I feel it is my duty to win others to this better life also.

Christianity in Action

Before Christmas my wife and I sent some money to a church member in Germany. In the accompanying letter I told him to use it any way he thought best, at the same time suggesting he might take the family out to a Christmas dinner, feeling sure they have few "dinners out," as we say over here.

Today I received a letter from him in which he says:

We are very glad about the money. I believe it will be the best to change the money and spend it on an old, poor woman from the East Sector for Christmas. Christmas is also a big day here in Germany, and we do what we can to help the poorest members of our branch. Here in Berlin it is very cold today.

HERALD HOUSE INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI

These people lost all they possessed during the war, and, according to our standards, are still very much in need of the things which make home and life comfortable. The man's income is not more a month than he could easily earn in a week here in the United States.

They are lovely people, and his use of the money is really and truly Christianity in action. They were lovely to us when we were in Berlin in 1951.

Even though I am in the Air Force and far away from home this evening my faith has been strengthened as never before. Ordinarily, being in charge of quarters is a lonely all-night job and, being extra duty, it is not of particular pleasure to perform. All week I had been planning to portray Nephi in the Christmas program and pageant to be presented at the San Antonio Branch. At the last minute my squadron had other plans for me and perhaps the Almighty One above was a guiding hand in my assignment tonight.

It is well past midnight now, but I am filled with the desire to share this experience with Herald readers and perhaps with the church as a whole. The Messiah has been advertised as the Christmas gift of our church to the nation. Truer words were never spoken. Many men have passed into the orderly room this evening during the presentation of the Messiah—many of them did not leave as quickly as they entered, for I believe my duty tonight was one of evangelism to others more lonely for home than am I. The words of the Messiah were words of hope and Christmas cheer. It was my privilege to tell these men that the choir represented my church and was composed of members of it. Then, too, when presented with the chance, I unfolded as much of the history and mission of our church as I could.

So, as a member of the priesthood, I was able, in the orderly room of my squadron, to spread the gospel of my church merely by the flick of a dial and tuning in to the wonderful medium of music, helping to minister with this music to the listening ears.

When the presentation was over and the room again empty, I knew no present could be sweeter. I looked toward the star shining on the chapel steeple, and could say with faith and hope, "Thanks to the church for this great gift; may it continue to yearly bless this nation with the words of the Christmas story in these times of strife."

From a Lonely Member

I have been a member of this church fifty-six years. All my children are married, and I live alone. I get quite lonesome. I ask the prayers of the Saints that our little group here in Ponca City may accomplish the work it has undertaken to spread the gospel in this part of the state. We do want to live to be worthy of the name "Saint."

From a Subscriber

I enclose a check for the renewal of our subscription to Herald and Daily Bread. Both are good, and Daily Bread definitely fills our need for the right start for the day. In the peace and quiet of the morning the Scripture and lesson are bread from heaven—and they are easy enough for a child to understand. We thank all who help in this good work. We do appreciate it.

active members, and red for prospective members. Then he had some black pins in the map. When he questioned him about these he explained that they were for "dead" members. These are the ones who come to church occasionally but never seem to be a part of the group; they hear little of the sermon and retain still less. I'm afraid there are branches that are spiritually dead too. They have no missionary drive and sometimes seem to apologize to the community for even existing.

One of the greatest evidences of the lack of spiritual power in the world is the number of decadent homes. Unfortunately this same atmosphere seems to have crept dangerously near some of our church homes. We can notice it when we have branches with no active youth; where we have parents sending their children to church school instead of bringing them; where we find parents attending evening services but letting the children go their own ways.

IN PLACES where people have failed to keep contact with the great sources of spiritual power revealed anew to the world by the restored gospel, the women of the church must bear their share of the blame. Whenever the church has gone forward in varied expressions of spiritual power, the women have done their part in sustaining that accomplishment. There are three areas in which women have been able to hinder or help this spiritual growth.

First, there comes the realization that the amount of work my priesthood husband can do in the church depends upon me. The responsibility of my husband's priesthood lies upon my shoulders in so far as I am able to help or hinder him in carrying out the duties and responsibilities of his office. If, on Wednesday evening, I have dinner ready a little early and my home under complete control, with nothing to disturb or dismay, then I have helped prepare him for the prayer meeting to come. If, on the other hand, I have planned some work for him to do on Wednesday night to keep him home, or if I grumble about being left alone on the night he plans to do some priesthood visiting, then I am hindering him in his calling. Too, if a wife limits the work that her nonpriesthood husband does in the church, she may hinder any call to the priesthood that might be his.

Second, the whole world admits that in this day women largely control the training of the children. We have been told by the Lord that we could have been redeemed, but we have not learned to be obedient to the things which he requires (Doctrine and Covenants 102: 2). Therefore, if this generation does not gain this great goal, it is up to the women of the church to train a generation so obedient to God's laws and so consecrated to the work of the church that it will be able, with God, to build Zion.

Third, we are responsible for the quality of spiritual power within our own lives. If we would develop lives of such great spiritual power we cannot help building a greater quality of spiritual power in the church as a whole, for the dream of Zion is as close as our spiritual condition permits (Doctrine and Covenants 140: 5).

We have much to say and do with this development of spiritual power. Without it the church will never go forward as it has in the past. Let us then, seriously, look for those ways by which we, individually and collectively, will be able to increase and carry on this great heritage within our church. We owe such devotion to the generation that will follow us in Christ's work.

Mission Organized

HULETT, WYOMING.—The mission was organized on December 7. A prayer service was held in the auditorium of the high school building. Following a special number by Dorothy O'Haver, Debra Lea, daughter of Elder and Sister Dale Larsen, was blessed under the hands of Elders L. S. Troyer and George Mef-ferd. Following this ordinance, preaching service was held with Brother Troyer as speaker. There were fifty-four people at the services. A basket lunch was served following the service.

Services were resumed in the afternoon. W. Aubery Long was ordained to the office of elder. This was performed by Elder E. C. Judson of Wheatland, Wyoming, who is the resident pastor of this unorganized territory. A special vocal number was then given by Danny Long.

Elder E. C. Judson spoke at the service prior to the organization of the local group into a mission. The organization was presided over by Seventy Luther S. Troyer, missionary in charge.

Elder W. Aubery Long was placed as pastor of the new mission, and Priest Merlin O'Haver as assistant pastor, church school director, and solicitor. Alice M. Long was placed as secretary, historian and music director; Lillian O'Haver, treasurer; Gertrude Mahoney, women's leader; Gale Jolley, publicity agent and young people's leader; and John S. Mahoney, auditor.

There were 68 in attendance at the afternoon services.

Preaching services were held each evening of the three days following with Seventy L. S. Troyer as speaker.—Reported by GALE JOLLEY

Work Among Spanish-speaking People

RIO GRANDE VALLEY BRANCH, ALAMO, TEXAS.—Evangelist William Patterson was in the branch during the month of November. He gave blessings and ministered to the Saints. Apostle and Sister Charles R. Hield were also present in November. Brother and Sister Wayne Simmons are also ministering to the Spanish-speaking people. Brother Wayne Jackel baptized a Latin-American couple, Pedro and Lilia Cordona of Weslaco. Brother Jackel holds services in Spanish every Sunday at the Brownsville mission for the Latin Americans.—Reported by BLANCHE SOLOMON

Evangelist in Area

IDAHO DISTRICT.—Seventy Wayne Smith held a series in Pocatello and baptized the following: Charlie Nelson and son Larry, Mr. and Mrs. Gene Cheney, and Robert N. Brown and son Duane. The New Plymouth group reports the ordination of Dale E. Uehlin as a priest, the baptism of Mr. and Mrs. Butler and two young sons, three young people at Graceland this fall, and another one who is scheduled to leave in January for Graceland.

District President Harry Fry and wife are touring the district and holding services. Brother Fry is preaching and Sister Fry is contributing as soloist and leading in the music where needed.

Under the ministry of Priests Wayne Burgess and Myron Montgomery, Thursday evening prayer services have been initiated at the Pocatello mission, and also a Zion's League group has been started.

The Boise group has been very active lately. The Ladasa Club sponsored a turkey dinner and bazaar December 5. The proceeds will be contributed to the Auditorium. The Ladasa Club Christmas party was held December 17 at Opal Sutherland's home and the adult class Christmas party was held December 18 with an exchange of gifts.

Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Gilley of Eugene had their baby daughter blessed in Boise on November 30.

Evangelist J. F. Curtis, accompanied by District President Harry S. Fry and Mrs. Fry, made a tour of the missions and branches in Idaho in December. Brother Curtis has been in the ministry for about fifty-three years. He was a member of the Council of Twelve for twenty-nine years, during which time he traveled extensively abroad with Apostle Paul M. Hanson. He traveled through the European countries and down into Africa, in Canada and all of the United States except three states. He was in Boise, December 10 and 14; Nampa, December 11; New Plymouth, December 12, 13, and 14; Hagerman, December 15; Rupert, December 16; Pocatello, December 17 and 18; Twin Falls, December 19; and back to his home in Spokane, Washington, December 21.—Reported by RUBY Y. BROWN

Gracelanders Occupy Pulpit

PITTSBURG, KANSAS.—Thelona Stevens was in the branch December 13 and 14. She was the guest of Pastor and Mrs. T. W. Bath. At their home Saturday evening Mrs. Stevens met with teachers and department heads of Scammon and Pittsburg. E. G. Gilbert, district director of religious education, and his wife were present also. They are from Miami, Oklahoma. On Sunday morning, Mrs. Stevens conducted the combined adult classes and also spoke at the morning service.

The women's department is divided into five groups this year, according to locality. Mrs. J. W. Jones is the local leader. The South Group had its Christmas party at the church cottage December 16. Families were guests.

Apostle Arthur Oakman and District President Stephen Black spoke at the district women's meeting at Carthage, Missouri, on December 4. Mrs. T. W. Bath, district women's leader, conducted the meeting.

During the month of November, four students of Pittsburg State College, former Gracelanders, occupied the pulpit on Sunday evenings. They were William Propst, Russell Johnston, Conrad Faulk, and Newell Yates.

The Pittsburg choir assisted at Carthage, Missouri, November 12, during Apostle Oakman's series of meetings. The choir sang at Joplin, Missouri, during Elder Roy Weldon's lectures in October. Robert Trimble is music director. The choir gave a Christmas program December 14.

Pittsburg was host to the district young people at their retreat November 8 and 9. District Leader Harry Shank from Carthage and other local leaders were in charge. Apostle Oakman was the guest speaker. Pittsburg youth leaders are Mr. and Mrs. Warren Jackson. The young people had a chili supper December 1 and cleared $18. About forty-five young people attended a roller skating party on December 8. The Zion's League has an early morning Communion prayer service each month. Rosa Lea Gates is president of the League.

Pastor T. W. Bath officiated at the wedding of Barbara Landrum and Kenneth Cooper at the church November 23. Mrs. James Gates and Mrs. Robert Trimble gave a shower for Barbara on October 27.—Reported by ESTHER HELLER

Budget for Branch Set Up

GREAT BEND, KANSAS.—A housewarming was given for Priest Kenneth Ingram and his family on November 30. Surprise gifts were given in the afternoon.

On December 7 a meeting was held and the budget for 1953 was set up.

The women's department raised $114 on the food sale and bazaar held November 22.

The Thanksgiving program was given following church school November 30.—Reported by MRS. RUTH SNAPP

Baptismal Service Held

PHOENIX, ARIZONA.—On December 21, James Daniel Fletcher was baptized by Elder Marion Blakely. The confirmation was by High Priest Frank McDonald on December 28.

Leland Glenn Havelly, fourteen-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Dana Havelly, Mesa, Arizona, died November 29, in an auto accident.

Four Candidates Baptized

SAN ANTONIO, TEXAS.—Missionary Charles Kornman has been actively engaged in group preaching with the results of four more baptisms on December 14. The candidates were Mrs. Margarite Raney, Mrs. Margarite Temple, Mrs. Louise Temple, and Billie Temple. This brings the number of baptisms for San Antonio to twenty-four for the year of 1952.

The little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Raney, Phillis Ann, was blessed on December 14 by Pastor Floyd E. Jett and Elder F. P. Hall.—Reported by RUTH A. HARP

Women's Group Organized

SALEM, OREGON.—A young women's circle has been formed within the women's department of the branch. The branch women's leader, Sister Irene Speed, attended the first organization meeting. Officers elected are Shirley Landon, president; Mary Lou Swain, vice-president; Nadine Clark, secretary; and Clara Coburn, treasurer. An Indian name, Menica, meaning "love," has been chosen. The first group project, a bake sale, was successfully carried out.—Reported by MARY LOU SWAIN

Women's Group Active

CHILLIWACK, BRITISH COLUMBIA.—Following the regular church school hour on November 16, an ordination service was held. Alfred Beer, Sr., was ordained to the office of elder under the hands of Elder Edwin Spargo of Vancouver and Elder Robert Day of Chilliwack. Thomas Charles Beer was ordained to the office of deacon by High Priest S. G. Clark of Vancouver and Elder Duncan Calder of Chilliwack.

Brother Spargo gave the charge to the candidates and Brother Calvin Taylor, pastor of the Vancouver Branch, gave the charge to the congregation. The Institute Hall, the place of worship, was filled to capacity as several came from Vancouver for the special service. Rose-dale Saints also came to worship on the occasion.

The women's group of Chilliwack held a bazaar recently. Although there is only a membership of approximately twelve, $175 was raised. At the last women's meeting, it was voted to donate $200 to the church building fund.

Plans are developing so that the branch will have a building of their own.—Reported by FLORENCE A. BEER

Ordained to Priesthood

ST. CHARLES, MISSOURI.—Elder James W. Myers, pastor of the branch, baptized Mrs. Russell Reider September 21. Elder Goetz and Elder Myers confirmed her.

Brother Charles A. Sappington was ordained to the office of priest on November 2. Pastor Myers, assisted by Elders Bowman and Goetz, ordained him.—Reported by FLORENCE HOLLANDER

Branch Officers Elected

KIMBALL, ONTARIO.—The annual branch business meeting was held in July with District President John Banks presiding. The following were elected or sustained: pastor, John Harkness; church school director and young people's leader, Edgar Ellenor; junior church school director, Nelda McDonald; music director, Lois Shaw; pianist, Janet Louise Tye; women's leader, Rayme Shaw; publicity agent and book steward, Emma Shaw.

Three young men were ordained on July 20. Gordon McDonald and Leslie Shaw were ordained to the office of priest, and Jim Shaw was ordained to the office of deacon.

Missionary William McMurray held a series of meetings November 9-23.

Four babies were blessed on November 23. They were Leslie Andrew Cecil, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Munday, by Elders John Harkness and William McMurray; Vonda Joan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vaughn White, by the grandfather, Elder Clarence Smith of Bothwell, assisted by Elder Duncan Clathworthy; Barbara Stellamae, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Atkinson, by Elders Duncan Clathworthy and Clarence Smith; and Owen Lee, son of Mr. and Mrs. William McDonald, by Elders McMurray and Harkness.

Ruth Ann Richmond was baptized on December 7 by Priest Gordon McDonald. She was confirmed by Elders McMurray and Harkness.

The women's group sponsored several projects during the past year. Three food and bake sales were held, and refreshment booths in September and at the annual fair in October were also sponsored. In November a tea, food and bake sale, and annual bazaar brought the fund to $375 which was given to the branch secretary for branch expenses.

District President John Banks held a leadership training course for six weeks.

The choir under the direction of Sister Lois Shaw has given of its services.

A branch supper was held December 29.—Reported by EMMA SHAW

Young People Present Cantata

SAULT STE MARIE, ONTARIO.—The men and women at the Davey Home for Aged were presented a Christmas cantata sponsored by the young people on December 16.

The church school concert was presented on December 18.

Brother Albert F. Edwards was ordained to the office of priest at the morning service on December 21. He and his family are now leaving to make their home in Nova Scotia.

Introducing

LOIS RUTH (LAMBERT) MOORE, Warrensburg, Missouri (page 14), is the wife of our missionary, Seventy Philip W. Moore. After completing high school in Niagara Falls, New York, in 1940, she continued her education at Graceland, graduating in 1942. During the next three years she was secretary of the Fluor Corporation of Kansas City. Her hobby is sewing. She was married to Brother Moore in 1945. They have three children: Robert Duane, 6, Patricia Ardeen, 4, and Bruce Allen, 6 months. Her special interests are church music, especially organ and choirs.

...And Finally

SEEK FIRST THE KINGDOM!

Seek first the kingdom! Not in some far off clime
Or at some long past time . . . but here and now.

Seek first the kingdom! Not in some other place Or in some other face; but mirrored on your brow.

Seek first the kingdom! Not in some book of creed,
But helping neighbor's need. Build Zion now!

SOMETHING OLD, SOMETHING NEW

I recently experienced something somewhat disgusting and something pleasing in radio sponsorship. The unpleasant thing is that from Independence I was unable to get a baseball broadcast—major league or American Association—which was not sponsored by a brewery.
The pleasant thing was the Family Theatre which, broadcasting on a nation-wide network, advocated family prayer in its commercials.
This weekly show features top Hollywood stars in short dramatic productions and centers its plea for prayer around the slogan, "The family that prays together, stays together."

FEED MY LAMBS

Normal children are full of questions. In exasperation a tired mother may say, "Don't bother me, I haven't time now."

While visiting a farm recently I helped to feed a calf and three baby lambs. So frantic were their appeals for food that I was amused.
In excited anticipation the calf danced from his head to the tip of his ropelike tail. He craved food with his whole being. The lambs poked their woolly heads through the fence in their struggles to reach the bottles, and the air reverberated with loud bleats.

All young things are hungry; that is why they grow. Their craving for food is no more intense than a small child's yearning for God and love. Why should we be outraged when parents neglect to feed them physically but apathetic when they starve their souls?

STURDY PIONEERS

All of us have seen the picture of the Puritan going to the meetinghouse with his Bible in one hand, his musket in the other, and his faithful wife at his side. No man need fail who trusts in God's word, whose wife stands at his side, and who is ready to protect both his liberties and his home with his life.

FROM HEADQUARTERS

IN COUNCIL BLUFFS

President Israel A. Smith was associated with Bishop G. L. DeLapp at the opening services of the Council Bluffs, Iowa, church on January 18. Elder V. D. Ruch is the pastor there.

CASH, MICHIGAN, BRANCH DEDICATED

President W. Wallace Smith gave the dedication address at the Cash, Michigan, Branch, January 18. Associated with Brother Smith at the activities of the day were Bishop Ted A. Beck, Evangelist John R. Grice, District President John W. Blackstock, and Missionary Elroy E. Hanton.

MEETS WITH PRIESTHOOD

Dr. F. M. McDowell attended a meeting on January 18 for the priesthood of the Central Missouri Stake at Warrensburg, Missouri, to map out an experimental and long-time program of priesthood training and utilization for that stake.

CHAIRMAN OF CAMPING DISCUSSION

F. Carl Mesle, General Church youth director, was the chairman of a meeting of the North Missouri-Kansas district meeting of the Missouri Valley Section of the American Camping Association, on January 21. The subject of the discussion was "Intercultural Aspects of Camping." That evening Brother Mesle spoke to the William Chrisman High School P.T.A. on "Youth's Quest for Religion."

SPEAKS AT HAMILTON, MISSOURI

Lee Hart, youth director of the Center Stake of Zion, spoke to the students of the J. C. Penney High School at Hamilton, Missouri, on January 21. After directing group games and songs, Brother Hart spoke on "Life's Greater Values." He was associated with Elder Barner Berridge, missionary to the Far West Stake, and Elder Dodge Dunlap, pastor of the Hamilton Branch.

SPEAKS AT WARRENSBURG

F. Carl Mesle, General Church youth director, was on the Graceland Campus January 9 and 10. On January 11 he spoke to the three combined Zion Leagues of the Warrensburg, Missouri, Branch on the "Evangelistic Zion's League," and preached the evening service.

SEVENTY IN DES MOINES

Seventy Eugene A. Theys spoke to the Laurel Club of the Center Stake of Zion, January 14, at the Auditorium. On January 15, he spoke to the Englewood women's group in the morning and in the afternoon he was the speaker at the West College women's meeting. He was in Des Moines, Iowa, on January 19, where he addressed the Men's Club of the Des Moines Branch.

ANOTHER BAPTISM IN GUATEMALA

Information has been received by the First Presidency that Mrs. Jose Aranda of Guatemala City was baptized there on January 10, by Evangelist Ray Whiting. Her husband was baptized some time ago and this now completes that family circle. Brother Whiting was in Guatemala visiting his daughter, Mrs. George Young, her husband, and their young son.

We'd Like You to Know . . .

John T. Conway

JOHN T. CONWAY, a high priest, is president of the New York-Philadelphia District. But how he came to such a station in life is a story of God's interest in an individual and His concern for His church. During World War II "Jack" was a naval officer. He participated in the invasion of southern France and in shuttle work at Anzio Beachhead. One day shortly after the invasion, a voice spoke to him saying, "You must pray." He responded and prayed for protection. That night he and his companions were spared in a dangerous encounter.

After his return to the States, a voice spoke the same words to him once in New York City as he walked on the street, and again while on duty at Northwestern University in Evanston, Illinois. This last time he was filled with a piercing concern for the future, which lasted for several days.

After receiving his discharge from the Navy, he returned to his home in Minneapolis, Minnesota, and prepared to return to work with the Northwestern Bell Telephone Company with which he had previously been employed. This was the spring of 1946. He was with his family in his father's living room one evening when the same voice said to him, "Tell your family you might go under General Church appointment." This seemed such a strange possibility that he moved to another part of the room and said nothing. A few minutes later the admonition was repeated. It seemed remote to him, for he had never been approached by any church official about it and had not considered it previously. Again he said nothing. The next morning in the mail he received a questionnaire from Independence regarding church appointment—his first communication from any General Church official on this matter.

"I feel assured, as a result of these and other experiences, that I am occupied in the work where God would have me be, and that this is the church of Jesus Christ," says Brother Conway.

He was born and reared in Minneapolis, Minnesota, and received a B.A. degree in economics from the University of Minnesota. In January, 1944, he was married to Bette Jean Mallams. They have a daughter, Kathleen, 6 years old, a son, John Thomas, 4, and a daughter, Candace, born December 9, 1952. Brother Conway's special interests are the economic aspects of Zion and Book of Mormon theology. His hobbies are handball in the winter and golf in the summer.

Falling in Love

"Every one that loveth is born of God."—I John 4: 7.

I HAVE JUST FALLEN in love. This time, with a man.

Is there such a thing as "brotherly love-at-first-sight"? If there is, I have it. Or it has me. How long it will last I do not know, though at the present moment it could last forever as far as I am concerned.

He doesn't know about it yet, because I haven't told him. I may never tell him. There isn't much reason to do so, because many other people love him too. It is a very humble, common thing I have done. But it is a beautiful experience.

My kind of love will never hurt him, never demand anything, never expect anything, except that he shall continue to be the kind of man he is and wants to be.

I may as well confess it—he is a preacher. When he began to talk, I had a feeling that God came a little nearer to the earth, and a little nearer us, too. I went away with a strong desire to be better.

YOU HAVE HEARD a lot about falling in love. Not so much has been said about falling into brotherly love. Perhaps that is because there are so few men in the world really worthy of it. . . . Or are there more than we suspect?

Peter (I, 1: 22) writes of the "unfeigned love of the brethren." I think I understand better what Peter meant, now that I have had this experience.

Above and beyond this, I now have an impression that God has been trying to lead me toward this understanding for a long time. He has been very patient with me. I have been such a slow disciple, with a singularly impenetrable mind.

MARK (10: 21) recorded this: "Then Jesus beholding him loved him." How fortunate the rich young man was. He loved Jesus, too, and love had brought him to the Master with a question. But worldly wealth stood in the way. It was a spiritual tragedy that his love could not survive that test. What a bright chapter he might have added to the early Christian church! How his name might have been honored by Christians through more than two millenniums of time! The church lost, and he lost; but he lost the most.

Well, that is one incident in which Jesus fell in love—an unrequited affection, too. So, it must be all right for men to fall in love with men. It is written that the rich young man was sad as he turned away. It seems that Jesus must have been sad too. We are not always fortunate in having those we love return it in equal measure.

There is a very famous story of the love that can exist between two men. You could hardly attend church school without having heard of it. It begins in I Samuel 18: 1, "The soul of Jonathan was knit with the soul of David, and Jonathan loved him as his own soul."

Jonathan proved the greatness and unselfishness of his love that asked only an opportunity to serve, to protect David from the dangers that surrounded him.

The love of good men for each other is a theme that you will find running like a bright thread through literature and life from that time to this.

THE LOVE OF GOOD WOMEN for each other has equally inspiring examples. There is none more beautiful in all the history of human relationships than that recorded in the Book of Ruth. Naomi's husband had died, and her sons also had died in Moab. As she planned to return to her own land and her own people, the two young widows stood at her side, prepared to go with her. She admonished them to remain, and Orpah obeyed. But Ruth made this beautiful declaration:

Intreat me not to leave thee, or to return from following after thee: for whither thou goest, I will go; and where thou lodgest, I will lodge; thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God.

People sometimes speak as if there were some great principle that makes women inevitable competitors and even enemies. That is purely a fictitious literary convention. There are, right up to modern times, examples of great love between women.

YOU do not have to be in a church congregation very long before you know whether the people love each other or not. If there is hate, someone will soon be whispering it in your ear, seeking to poison your mind. If there is love, you will soon know that, too.

The kingdom of God is built upon a foundation of love—of God's love for us, of our love for him, and our love for each other. Every little corner, every congregation—if it is to do God's work—must be built upon that same foundation. And every home, if it is to contribute its part to the kingdom, must be built upon love, too.

One of the great discoveries that comes to us in the middle years is the knowledge of how many good people there are in the world. We find them everywhere. It is impossible not to love them. And why should we resist it? The Scriptures assure us, "Every one that loveth is born of God." L. J. L.

Dr. Meredith to Graceland Board

Bishop Earl T. Higdon, Chairman of the Board of Trustees of Graceland College, informs us of the selection of Dr. H. V. Meredith as a member of the Graceland College Board of Trustees. Dr. Meredith was selected January 10, 1953, by the remaining members of the Board to fill the unexpired term of Bishop A. Neal Deaver, who resigned because of the pressure of his duties as Superintendent of the Independence Sanitarium and Hospital.

THE FIRST PRESIDENCY
By Israel A. Smith

Sino-Japanese Youth Institute

Graceland College is conducting a week-end institute on the Orient, March 7 and 8, 1953. It will be open to selected delegations from the territory adjacent to the college. Delegations may be selected and sent by districts and stakes, or by large branches. The invitation does not seek numbers, but qualified youth leaders who will contribute to, and profit from, this conference.

The registration fee of $1.50 will include the Saturday evening and Sunday morning meals. Housing will be provided by the college. The conference opens at 1:00 o'clock Saturday afternoon and closes at 11:45 Sunday morning. Applications may be sent to W. S. Gould, c/o Graceland College. A delegation will consist of six members, normally five young people and their youth leader or pastor.

The institute aims to develop insight into the life and culture of China and Japan and help build an understanding for interpreting the message of the church to people of Chinese and Japanese culture. The staff will include leaders of the General Church.

Walter Barker Dies

Word has just reached the office of the First Presidency that Evangelist Walter H. Barker, of Portland, Oregon, died on Thursday, January 22. Evangelist Barker has been called "the father of Portland Branch."

THE FIRST PRESIDENCY

From Elder Louis Zonker, Hanover, Germany:

Each time I visit the groups over here I give them greetings from you, and they are most happy. Always they ask that they might be remembered to you.

The work over here is moving steadily forward. I believe we are growing stronger as a mission each day. The Christmas season has been one of much activity in the mission. The response from nonmember friends has been very good, and this is promising.

We look forward with hope to the new year and shall do all we can to forward the cause of the kingdom.

Our prayers and best wishes accompany you in your ministry. If there is ever anything that we might be able to do for you, we would appreciate this being made known.

May God continue to bless you that you may fulfill the work that you have done so well up to this time.

Brother Hanson has sent us a letter he received from Brother Wayne Smith from which we take the following paragraph:

You will be interested to know that we had nine baptisms yesterday at Hagerman. This united four families in the church. All nine candidates were adults except two, and those were high school girls. This was one of the most challenging series of meetings I have had the privilege to engage in. We have only scratched the surface of possibilities in the Hagerman area.

The President of the Board of Trustees of Graceland College, Bishop Earl T. Higdon, has sent us the following biographical sketch of Dr. Howard V. Meredith, selected by the College Board to fill the unexpired term of Bishop A. Neal Deaver:

Dr. Meredith has his Doctor's degree in the field of child development, with a major in Physiological Research and a minor in Psychological Research. He received his Ph.D. degree from the University of Iowa in 1935. Since that time he has written over seventy research papers on physical development of the child. He is now Professor and Consultant in Physical Growth and Dental Research at the University of Iowa.

Voas Meredith, as all of his friends know him, was born in Birmingham, England, November 5, 1903. He was baptized by Elder Richard Baldwin in 1919. He received his elementary and part of his high school education in England. In the early 1920's he came to Graceland College, where he completed his high school requirements and after an interruption, because of the death of his father, he received his A.A. degree from Graceland in 1930. During his first period at Graceland, he met Matilda Johnson of Des Moines, Iowa. Voas and Matilda were married in England in 1926. After their return to America and completion of work at Graceland College, Voas continued his education at the University of Iowa, receiving his B.A. degree in 1931 in the field of religion. He received his M.A. degree in 1932 in the field of character development. From this, he turned to the field of research in child development for his Doctor's degree.

Dr. Meredith continued at the University of Iowa as Professor of Physical Growth from 1935 to 1949. From 1949-1952 he was Professor of Physical Growth at the University of Oregon. During these years, he spent two short periods as Professor of Child Development at the University of Southern California.

Dr. Meredith is a Fellow of the Society of Research in Child Development and a member of the American Association of Physical Anthropologists. He is Research Consultant for the Pan American Institute of Physical Education, and he is also a member of Sigma Xi, honorary science fraternity, being a former officer of the University of Iowa chapter.

When asked if he had any hobbies, he said he supposed it was fixing up the houses he has lived in.

He has a very special interest in the field of character development and religious education.

Brother Meredith is an elder in the church and has acted as a friendly counselor to the Reorganized Latter Day Saint students at the University of Iowa for many years.

We look forward expectantly to the valuable service which Dr. Meredith will give to Graceland College as a member of the Board of Trustees.

Spiritual Gifts

By Evangelist E. Y. Hunker

An address given at Niagara Falls, New York, October 28, 1952, at the institute for appointees in the northeastern missions

A FAVORITE QUOTATION of the late John W. Rushton was "If God were not able to reveal himself, he could not be divine. If God would not reveal himself, he could not be moral."

God constantly endeavors to reveal himself and his will, desiring to make himself known to men—particularly to those who have tried to make themselves his and thus have effected some measure of spiritual attunement to the mind of Deity. The gifts or manifestations of the Spirit are phases of the great principle and movement of revelation. Through them God purposes to speak in a more direct and personal manner so as to be better understood and appreciated, as well as to warm and bless the souls of his Saints.

The Spirit of God is variously defined as the Holy Ghost, the Holy Spirit, the Comforter, the Spirit of Truth, the Spirit of Christ, the mind of Christ, etc. An excellent study by Evangelists Elbert A. Smith and Albert Carmichael was printed in the Priesthood Journal for April, 1940. They present this opinion:

It is well for us to determine as far as possible what is meant by the Spirit. . . . Paul calls it the mind of Christ (Philippians 2: 5).

Men have the Spirit of Christ in different measurements. Some have it intermittently—others as an abiding Comforter (John 14: 16). The quality of the Spirit is always the same. In its enlightenment of mankind it differs in quantity. There is only one Spirit coming from God (Ephesians 4: 4).

With his deep insight as to spiritual things, combined with his unquestioned ability to discuss intelligently spiritual phenomena, Paul has given us his final findings—"the mind of Christ."

Doctrine and Covenants 85: 1-3 informs us that this Holy Spirit is the infinite radiating energy, power, and intelligence of Christ, projected throughout the universe, touching with life, light, and pulsating creative force all things that exist. Colossians 1: 16, 17 states that this power of Christ is that by which all things consist.

The spiritual gifts most frequently alluded to by our church are enumerated in Paul's first Corinthian letter:

Now concerning spiritual gifts, brethren, I would not have you ignorant. . . . Now there are diversities of gifts, but the same Spirit. And there are differences of administrations, but the same Lord. And there are diversities of operations, but it is the same God which worketh all in all. But the manifestation of the Spirit is given to every man to profit withal. [Moffatt: Each receives his manifestation of the Spirit for the common good.] For to one is given by the Spirit the word of wisdom; to another the word of knowledge by the same Spirit; to another faith by the same Spirit; to another the gifts of healing by the same Spirit; to another the working of miracles; to another discerning of spirits; to another divers kinds of tongues; to another the interpretation of tongues; but all these worketh that one and the self-same Spirit, dividing to every man severally as he will. [Moffatt: apportioning them severally to each individual as he pleases.]—I Corinthians 12: 1-11.

THE ANCIENT AMERICAN SCRIPTURES, through the writing of Moroni, inform us:

And again I exhort you, my brethren, that ye deny not the gifts of God, for they are many; and they come from the same God. And there are different ways that these gifts are administered; but it is the same God who worketh all in all; and they are given by the manifestations of the Spirit of God unto men to profit them.

For behold, to one is given by the Spirit of God, that he may teach the word of wisdom; and to another, that he may teach the word of knowledge by the same Spirit; and to another exceeding great faith; and to another, the gifts of healing by the same Spirit.

And again, to another, that he may work mighty miracles; and again, to another, that he may prophesy concerning all things; and again, to another, the beholding of angels and ministering spirits; and again, to another, all kinds of tongues; and again, to another, the interpretation of languages and of divers kinds of tongues.

And all these gifts come by the Spirit of Christ; and they come unto every man severally, according as he will.

And I would exhort you my beloved brethren, that ye remember that every good gift cometh of Christ.

And I would exhort you, my beloved brethren, that ye remember that he is the same yesterday, today, and for ever, and that all these gifts of which I have spoken, which are spiritual, never will be done away, even as long as the world shall stand, only according to the unbelief of the children of men.—Moroni 10: 8-14.

. . . and that which the Spirit testifies unto you, even so I would that you should do in all holiness of heart, walking uprightly before me, considering the end of your salvation, doing all things with prayer and thanksgiving, that ye may not be seduced by evil spirits, or doctrines of devils, or the commandments of men, for some are of men, and others of devils.

Wherefore, beware, lest ye are deceived, and that ye may not be deceived, seek ye earnestly the best gifts, always remembering for what they are given; for verily I say unto you, They are given for the benefit of those who love me and keep all my commandments, and him that seeketh so to do, that all may be benefited, that seeketh or that asketh of me, that asketh not for a sign that he may consume it upon his lusts.

And again, verily I say unto you, I would that ye should always remember, and always retain in your minds what those gifts are, that are given unto the church, for all have not every gift given unto them; for there are many gifts, and to every man is given a gift by the Spirit of God: to some it is given one, and to some is given another, that all may be profited thereby; to some it is given by the Holy Ghost to know that Jesus Christ is the Son of God, and that he was crucified for the sins of the world; to others it is given to believe on their words, that they also might have eternal life, if they continue faithful. . . .

And again, to some it is given by the Holy Ghost to know the differences of administration, as it will be pleasing unto the same Lord, according as the Lord will, suiting his mercies according to the conditions of the children of men. And again, it is given by the Holy Ghost to some to know the diversities of operations, whether it be of God, that the manifestations of the Spirit may be given to every man to profit withal.

And again, verily I say unto you, To some it is given, by the Spirit of God, the word of wisdom; to another it is given the word of knowledge, that all may be taught to be wise and to have knowledge. And again, to some it is given to have faith to be healed, and to others it is given to have faith to heal. And again, to some it is given the working of miracles; and to others it is given to prophesy, and to others the discerning of spirits. And again, it is given to some to speak with tongues, and to another it is given the interpretation of tongues: and all these gifts cometh from God, for the benefit of the children of God. And unto the bishop of the church, and unto such as God shall appoint and ordain to watch over the church, and to be elders unto the church, are to have it given unto them to discern all those gifts, lest there shall be any among you professing and yet be not of God.

And it shall come to pass that he that asketh in spirit shall receive in spirit; that unto some it may be given to have all those gifts, that there may be a head, in order that every member may be profited thereby: he that asketh in the spirit, asketh according to the will of God, wherefore it is done even as he asketh.

And again I say unto you, All things must be done in the name of Christ, whatsoever you do in the spirit, and ye must give thanks unto God in the spirit for whatever blessing ye are blessed with; and ye must practice virtue and holiness before me continually. Even so. Amen.—Doctrine and Covenants 46: 3-9.

And having the spirit of prophecy, and the spirit of revelation, and also many gifts; the gift of speaking with tongues, and the gift of preaching, and the gift of the Holy Ghost, and gift of translation.—Alma 7: 31.

TO THIS LIST of gifts or manifestations of the Spirit, our "Old Guard" missionaries used to add two others: dreams and visions—based on Joel's prophecy and reiterated by Peter at Pentecost (Joel 2: 28, 29; Acts 2: 16-18).

These are the direct gifts. "They are the manifestations given directly to us as distinguished from the indirect manifestations as found in nature. They are a means unto an end, the end being the fruits such as love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faithfulness, meekness, temperance. They are the cause, the fruits, the result."—Priesthood Journal, April, 1940, pages 23, 24.

As noted in Doctrine and Covenants 46: 3, 4, 5, and 7, with the enumeration of these gifts of the Spirit, the Lord also gave instruction to enlighten and to warn as to the essential purpose of the gifts, of the potential danger of their abuse and misuse, and of the ever-present threat of Satan's cunning endeavors to entice men to self-exaltation and deception of the Saints through presumptuous exercise of false manifestations.

The purpose of the gifts is to benefit the Lord's children, that they may be helped in their spiritual growth toward "the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ," and that in them there ultimately may come the attainment to the full significance of "bringing to pass the immortality and eternal life of man." The spiritual gifts are not the end of God's intents, but a part of his great means for the achievement of his eternal purposes, in the souls and destiny of men. The late John F. Garver expressed it thus:

The purpose of the gifts is to "profit" the Saints. The gifts bring light and understanding and power in and of themselves as the movement of Deity. And they also quicken within the individual Saint and the group of Saints light and understanding and power that but for their touch would lie dormant. The gifts extend to group and individual powers and performances beyond their ordinary achievement. The gifts help the Saints toward the Christ character and ministry, which is God's purpose in their experience.—Priesthood Journal, April, 1936, page 26.

Whenever anything possessed of great power and potentiality is entrusted to beings endowed with agency, tremendous issues are involved. When these gifts are handled and utilized by Christ-centered souls, the benefits are all that the Creator intends. If, conversely, they are used by persons who allow self-interests and personal ambitions to gain dominance in their lives, the marvelous gifts of God become prostituted, many souls are injured, and the cause of Christ is distorted and smeared. The wise counsel found in Doctrine and Covenants 63: 16 is apropos and timely here: "Remember that that which cometh from above is sacred and must be spoken with care, and by constraint of the Spirit, and in this there is no condemnation." This well may have been the major understanding of Paul's assertion: "Now concerning spiritual gifts, brethren, I would not have you ignorant." Not only should we be informed as to the nature and the number of the gifts, we should be concerned and informed even more as to their proper expression and control.

IT IS NOT IMPROBABLE that Paul, with his keen mind quickened by spiritual light, gave consideration to enumeration of the manifestations or gifts in the order of their importance. He presents, as the gift of the first order, the word of wisdom; second, the word of knowledge; and third, faith. Any measure of reflection and analysis relative to the gifts and their potentials to benefit the Saints should certify that this is the logical order of their importance. There could be no reception of the gifts without faith, it is true. But even the wonderful gift of faith, to enable its utilization to the utmost possible profit to the Saints, must be handled and controlled by the gifts of wisdom and knowledge. The same principle applies to all the other gifts. Without their being controlled and directed and timed by the gifts of wisdom and knowledge, no matter how genuine their origin, they can be exercised to the serious spiritual hurt and impairment of the Saints and the Master's cause.

It is to be deplored that the tendency of many of our people is to hold the concept that unless there is utterance given under a "Thus saith the Spirit" there is no enjoyment of the presence and exercise of the gifts of the Spirit; or that there must be a spectacular expression like in the gift of tongues and prophecy; or an outright miracle of instantaneous healing of affliction or disease. We men of the priesthood, without deprecating or depreciating or quenching any genuine gift of prophecy, or of tongues and interpretation thereof, or of miracles, should help to teach the Saints that our gift of discernment should be trained and exercised to sense that the basic and major gifts most to be desired are wisdom, knowledge, and faith. If these three are absent, or if they are not exercised, and inordinate ambition for and indiscriminate expression of the more outwardly spectacular gifts dominate the spiritual activities and assemblies of the membership, we shall be fortunate indeed if shipwreck of the work is averted in time to save a branch, or even possibly the entire church.

Wisdom is the gift of judgment and understanding by which the power of knowledge and faith and all the other manifestations and spiritual forces are conserved, balanced, and utilized for the common good of the church. There is timeless and eternal truth crystallized in the scriptural counsel: "Get wisdom, get understanding: forget it not; neither decline from the words of my mouth. Forsake her not, and she shall preserve thee: love her, and she shall keep thee. Wisdom is the principle thing; therefore get wisdom: and with all thy getting get understanding" (Proverbs 4: 5-7). Proverbs, eighth chapter, should also be considered.

"Wisdom is the knowledge of what to do, why to do it, how to do it, where to do it, and who should do it." (To this I would add: and when to do it.) "It is the using of knowledge in the right place, for the right purpose, and by the right person." (Here I would further add: and at the right time).—Priesthood Journal, April, 1940, page 30. "That we may not be deceived, we are commanded to seek earnestly the best gifts (I Corinthians 12: 3). This means that some gifts are good, some better, and others best. We should always remember for what these gifts are given so that we be not deceived (Doctrine and Covenants 46: 4).—Priesthood Journal, April, 1940.

TO MY OBSERVATION the most spectacular and sought-after manifestation of the Spirit is that which we call prophecy, accompanied by a "Thus saith the Spirit." Whether in a direct language message or through the gift and interpretation of unknown tongues, this manifestation often creates a sense of tremendous exaltation on the part of both the one giving and the ones receiving. Personal recognition thus won makes this type of manifestation subject to much misuse and abuse, so that often it becomes a means of personal exaltation and vindication, not to say dominance, among the congregations of the Saints.

What is prophecy, basically? There attaches a strong notion or concept that it fundamentally is a disclosing or revealing of things to come. The basic prophetic function, however, is to disclose or reveal the mind of God as to the truth needed to enlighten, instruct, direct, counsel, and benefit his people and his cause, whether this truth relates to past, present, future, or all three. The test of the genuineness of prophetic utterance is whether it is Christ-centered. "The testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy" (Revelation 19: 10), or the life and power and genuineness of prophecy are in prophecy's testimony for and of Jesus Christ as the light, life, and hope of men. If prophecy does not call and move men to repentance and the ordering of their lives and affairs according to Christ and his gospel, then prophetic utterance, regardless of how great its claim to future revelation, is without its necessary spirit. As "the body without the spirit is dead," so prophecy without the spirit and testimony of Jesus is dead.

Both the Bible and Book of Mormon declare that all the prophets testified of Christ (Acts 10: 43; Jacob 5: 19). The surest seal and certification of the prophetic mantle of Joseph Smith, Jr., is the repeated testimony in the revelations that came through him of the pre-eminence and deity of Jesus Christ, and the call to the nations as well as to the Saints to repent and obey the gospel. Joseph's revelations are Christ-centered. They bear the intrinsic quality in themselves of their origin in and emanation from divine intelligence and truth.

ACCORDING TO SUCH MEASURES of discernment as has come to me, I have felt that there are occasions when attempts are made in certain types of assemblies of the Saints to prime the pump and force the flow of spectacular manifestations under a great build-up of urgency and the psychology of suggestion, coupled with terrific emotional spiritual tension and anticipation. In my judgment, this is out of accord with the guidance and light of wisdom and knowledge. The reception of the gifts should be the result of consistent saintly living which provides a sound and stable spiritual preparation and reservoir out of which the spiritual manifestations will flow quietly, naturally, and freely, even as the flow of a stream from a living well. "Spiritual gifts are to be anticipated, planned, and worked for, and evaluated. They are to be appreciated and responded to when encountered. Above all, they are to be turned to the stimulation and development and fuller activity of the Saints.

"In this there should be no overstressing. No depreciation. No turning the cold shoulder. No flurry of excitement. Only a normal movement, as in all other fields of saintly life and experience.—John F. Garver in Priesthood Journal, April, 1936, pages 27, 28.

The gift of unknown tongues, as remarkable as it may be, is not to be sought after as a means to create wonderment. It, too, will impart light and intelligence if it truly be a manifestation of the Holy Spirit. Unless it understandingly reveals the mind and light of Deity it is not desirable nor profitable (I Corinthians 14:

8-20, 27, 28). There may be some differentiation between speaking in an unknown tongue and speaking in tongues. Alma mentioned "the gift of preaching," previously referred to. Many times our ministers stand to speak to the people and are clothed with a power of light and a liberty of speech far beyond their ordinary experience or capacity. They at times speak with a prophetic power that is tremendously significant. Under that influence they move with a divine unction that imparts the quality of prophecy to their utterances, even though they do not proclaim it with a "Thus saith the Spirit." Here again, the training and development of the gifts of wisdom, knowledge, and discernment are needed among the Saints. Above all, let us remember that though we "speak with the tongues of men and of angels, and have not charity, we are become as sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal. And though we have the gift of prophecy, and understand all mysteries, and all knowledge; and though we have all faith, so that we could remove mountains, and have not charity, we are as nothing."—I Corinthians 13: 1, 2.

THE GIFT OF HEALING always needs to be directed intelligently. If we allow Deity to speak to us he ever will seek to enlighten as to the eternal issues involved. In many areas of religion today the idea of healing is being given major emphasis. There are, and will be, healings through the application of and response to certain psychic suggestions and the application of principles of the reactions and responses of mental powers in human nature. But, unless such healings are spiritually Christ-centered instead of personally and physically self-centered, they are not the direct manifestations of the Holy Spirit and will not reveal the mind and will of Christ. Doctrine and Covenants 42: 12d, ". . . and if they die, they shall die unto me, and if they live, they shall live unto me," is proof of Christ-centered healing. Its basic purpose is the healing of the soul rather than just the healing of the body without the consciousness of divine purpose or godly living.

In conjunction with the desire to see persons relieved of physical suffering and mental distress there goes the touching of human sympathies to such a degree that the wishful thinking of some ministers who administer is at times translated into so-called prophetic utterance over the afflicted. The Lord, through the late Joseph Smith, gave wise and warning counsel:

Proclamation of Israel Independence

Editor's note: When Alex Klein recently visited his people in the State of Israel, he obtained a copy of the following article which we believe has sufficient interest to our readers to justify its publication here.

Issued at Tel Aviv on May 14, 1948 (fifth of Iyar, 5708)

The Land of Israel was the birthplace of the Jewish people. Here their spiritual, religious, and national identity was formed. Here they achieved independence and created a culture of national and universal significance. Here they wrote and gave the Bible to the world.

Exiled from Palestine, the Jewish people remained faithful to it in all the countries of their dispersion, never ceasing to pray and hope for their return and the restoration of their national freedom.

Impelled by this historic association, Jews strove throughout the centuries to go back to the land of their fathers and regain their statehood. In recent decades they returned in masses. They reclaimed the wilderness, revived their language, built cities and villages, and established a vigorous and ever-growing community, with its own economic and cultural life. They sought peace yet were ever prepared to defend themselves. They brought the blessing of progress to all inhabitants of the country.

In the year 1897 the First Zionist Congress, inspired by Theodor Herzl's vision of the Jewish state, proclaimed the right of the Jewish people to national revival in their own country.

This right was acknowledged by the Balfour Declaration of November 2, 1917, and reaffirmed by the Mandate of the League of Nations, which gave explicit international recognition to the historic connection of the Jewish people with Palestine and their right to reconstitute their national home.

The Nazi holocaust, which engulfed millions of Jews in Europe, proved anew the urgency of the re-establishment of the Jewish state, which would solve the problem of Jewish homelessness by opening the gates to all Jews and lifting the Jewish people to equality in the family of nations.

The survivors of the European catastrophe, as well as Jews from other lands, proclaiming their right to a life of dignity, freedom, and labor, and undeterred by hazards, hardships, and obstacles, have tried unceasingly to enter Palestine.

In World War II the Jewish people in Palestine made a full contribution in the struggle of the freedom-loving nations against the Nazi evil. The sacrifices of their soldiers and the efforts of their workers gained them title to rank with the peoples who founded the United Nations.

On November 29, 1947, the General Assembly of the United Nations adopted a resolution for the establishment of an independent Jewish State in Palestine, and called upon the inhabitants of the country to take such steps as may be necessary on their part to put the plan into effect.

This recognition by the United Nations of the right of the Jewish people to establish their independent state may not be revoked. It is, moreover, the self-evident right of the Jewish people to be a nation, as all other nations, in its own sovereign State.

ACCORDINGLY, We, the members of the National Council, representing the Jewish people in Palestine and the Zionist movement of the world, met together in solemn assembly today, the day of termination of the British Mandate for Palestine, by virtue of the natural and historic right of the Jewish people and of the Resolution of the General Assembly of the United Nations,

HEREBY PROCLAIM the establishment of the Jewish State in Palestine to be called ISRAEL.

WE HEREBY DECLARE that as from the termination of the Mandate at midnight, this night of the fourteenth to fifteenth of May, 1948, and until the setting up of the duly elected bodies of the State in accordance with a Constitution, to be drawn up by a Constituent Assembly not later than the first day of October, 1948, the present National Council shall act as the provisional administration, shall constitute the Provisional Government of the State of Israel.

THE STATE OF ISRAEL will be open to the immigration of Jews from all countries of their dispersion; will promote the development of the country for the benefit of all its inhabitants; will be based on the precepts of liberty, justice, and peace taught by the Hebrew prophets; will uphold the full social and political equality of all its citizens, without distinction of race, creed, or sex; will guarantee full freedom of conscience, worship, education, and culture; will safeguard the sanctity and inviolability of the shrines and Holy Places of all religions; and will dedicate itself to the principles of the Charter of the United Nations.

THE STATE OF ISRAEL will be ready to co-operate with the organs and representatives of the United Nations in the implementation of the Resolution of the Assembly of November 29, 1947, and will take steps to bring about the Economic Union over the whole of Palestine.

We appeal to the United Nations to assist the Jewish people in the building of its State and to admit Israel into the family of nations.

In the midst of wanton aggression, we yet call upon the Arab inhabitants

God Is Still Working

By James F. Keir

THE GOSPEL OF JESUS CHRIST as restored in our day through the prophet Joseph Smith is unique in that, while it proclaimed doctrines not generally accepted at that time, these doctrines have been attested as true by witnesses.

John Landers, the grandfather of Christiana Salyards who was so well known to the church during her lifetime, had a most interesting experience. He was a Baptist preacher before he joined the Latter Day Saint Church (see The Story of the Church). I have in my possession a certified copy of a letter which Mr. Landers wrote to Mr. C. G. Lewis. Mr. Lewis was visiting at the home of my stepfather, F. M. Cooper, while I was present, and at that time he read this letter to us. I was so impressed with its contents that I made a copy of it and had him certify it.

For awhile I thought that I had lost this certified copy, but just a of the State of Israel to return to the ways of peace and play their part in the development of the State, with full and equal citizenship and due representation in all its bodies and institutions—provisional or permanent.

We offer peace and unity to all the neighboring states and their peoples, and invite them to co-operate with the independent Jewish nation for the common good of all.

Our call goes out to the Jewish people all over the world to rally to our side in the task of immigration and development and to stand by us in the great struggle for the fulfillment of the dream of generations—the redemption of Israel.

With trust in Almighty God, we set our hand to this Declaration, at this Session of the Provisional State Council, in the city of Tel Aviv, on this Sabbath eve, the fifth of Iyar, 5708, the fourteenth day of May, 1948.

few weeks ago I found it. Several points are brought out in this experience. First, that the gift of speaking in tongues is one of the spiritual gifts which is now enjoyed by the followers of Christ. Second, that God does and will continue to reveal his mind to men. Third, that the Book of Mormon is of divine origin. Fourth, that there shall never more be an active rejection of the church.

I trust that the contents of this remarkable letter will serve to stimulate your faith in the message of the Restoration. Should doubts and trials assail you, may this experience of one of God's faithful witnesses bring the needed assurance to keep you steadfast.

Lamoni, Iowa
the 19 of June 1890

Beloved friend,

You do not address me as a brother. I suppose your intention is honest in the inquiries you make, and I will give you a truthful and honest reply. I was baptized into the Church of Latter Day Saints on October, the ninth day, 1836, by Elder John E. Page and was confirmed and ordained by him and James Blakeslee to the office of an elder and immediately began to preach. The same fall, after I preached in a private house, a man came to me and inquired of me if I could tell him how the Book of Mormon came into the world. I said "no," and immediately a young man arose to his feet and began to speak in tongues, in which he described the form and shape of the Hill Cumorah. Immediately in vision I was on the hill and standing at the southeast corner of the stone box in which the plates were deposited, the top stone was moved to the north from the northwest to the southeast corner of the box so as to expose to me the whole inside of the box. While I gazed with wonder at the contents, the Lord commanded me to bear my testimony to the truth of the Book of Mormon as long as I lived.

I did not record the time, but it was in the fall of thirty-six [1836] and all I have written above transpired in Canada. We came to Illinois in thirty-eight, and the sixth day of April, in the year 1839, was the first time I saw Joseph Smith, the Lord's seer and prophet to this generation. From that time till the death of Joseph there was nothing transpired relating to your next question. After his death many false leaders arose striving to take his place, which caused great confusion. I ceased to preach but did not cease to pray. One of our neighbors had dug a stock well in a remote place and had drawn out the earth with a scraper, so that I could walk down into it to pray and while there the Lord talked to me as a man would talk to his friend. He forbade me to follow any of them, saying that in his own time he would call Joseph, the oldest son of the Seer, to fill his father's place, and also bade me commence preaching. This of which I now write transpired in the summer of 1846. It was the first indication that I had of Joseph's call to preside over the church.

In obedience to the commands I commenced to preach. The scattered Saints continued to meet on the sixth day of April each year until 1860; that year we met at Amboy. On my way to Conference, when about twenty miles distance from the place, the Lord said to me, "When you get to Amboy you will see Joseph there. He will take the lead of the church, and all honest souls out of all the factions of the several parties will merge into this church, and there shall never more be an active rejection of the church." When I got to Amboy I found Joseph there, and all things transpired as had been told me. He has continued to preside over the church till now, to the honor of God and the good of the church. I want [lack] two months of being 96 years old, and this letter is my own penmanship.

Reaching Higher

In a formerly "dry" state, a stumblum staggered out of a speak-easy. He tested the sidewalk with his feet, muttering to himself, "Yes, I got feet." He shook hands with himself; "Yes, I got hands." He felt of his biceps; "Yes, I got stren'th." Lastly, he put his arms upward vaguely as though searching for something higher. Then in utter dejection he said, "Trouble is, I ain't got no head."

A short walk along most any street will convince an observer that many people who are hurrying through life with hands and feet and physical strength do not know how to reach higher to find that which comes only through seeking the great gifts of God: light and truth. This may account for the fact that half the people in America do not acknowledge God in any form of religion.

We can help powerfully here, through witnessing for Christ by the way we live. We can actually make miracles by helping people link their innate intelligence steadfastly to the divine intelligence of the great I AM.

En route to Manihi

WE SET SAIL for Apataki to pick up Brother and Sister Devore, who were there at the time. Will McGrath went with us, as he was staying on board the "Evanelia" at this time. The two young men, Hubert and Will, took turns cooking for the three of us. I felt all right if I lay still, but not if I tried to get up and move about.

The trip was not so hard as the first one to Kaukura as there were not so many natives aboard. We came very close to a rocky little island called Bird Island. No people lived there and the gulls made it a place where they hatched their young. We could see the nests on the sand—dozens of them full of eggs. The mother birds screamed with rage, but the natives took all the eggs they could find. About one in four would be fit to eat I found when I tried to fry some. But the native people ate them all raw, whether half a bird was inside or not. We didn't seem to have much appetite for them. After loitering along, we finally reached Manihi, the island where the conference was to be held on April 6, as was the custom.

We went ashore, and there was a good house prepared for us. The priesthood members were having quorum meetings, and mainly talking about the "Evanelia" and what should be done with her. Time rather dragged until Brother and Sister Devore arrived. They came on one of the trading vessels. Will went with some natives to the island of Anaa and they nearly lost their lives; when they got back they were almost dead from hunger and thirst. They went in a small boat without accurate compass—sort of trusting to instinct and luck. Soon Brother and Sister Devore landed and proceedings really started for the Sunday school convention, then the conference.

Shortly before the Devores came, Hubert was called to administer to a baby, who was apparently born dead. The mother was wailing and mourning, thinking it was already gone, when Hubert administered. In a few minutes it gave a gasp, then a cry, and they knew it was alive. Their weeping soon turned to rejoicing, and they were grateful. They did not have any other children, and idolized the one that was born to them.

Previous to the conference the Sunday school had its Mabana Oaoa, as we had witnessed it on a smaller scale on Makatea. Then there was a business meeting. As Sister Devore was leaving right after conference someone had to take her place. I was voted to take the position, which rather frightened me. I knew several of the men who wished to be elected. I chose Tapu to help as first counselor, and Petero for second, making my first real speech in native when I did this. The conference was not very long, and there was not much disputation. When it came to the time when Brother Devore told them he was leaving for America immediately after the conference, there was much weeping, and many spoke their feelings. He was much beloved, and Sister Devore also. So when he told them he was leaving his work to Hubert, and wanted them to support him in every way, they nodded agreement. It was ordered after a long argument that Will McGrath should take charge of the "Evanelia." Some did not like that, especially the crew that had sailed her for a year.

The Devores Leave for Home

Possessions of the Devores were being carried aboard the "Evanelia," and the four of us sat on the beach, saying a tearful good-by. We loved and respected them both. Now we were alone with a great responsibility on our hands. We felt like orphan children. Brother Devore blessed our baby the first Sunday of conference.

We remained some weeks on Manihi until the "Evanelia" returned from Papeete. There was always much to do, as so many who had come to conference remained to dive for shell. The French government very wisely places a restriction on their diving. After an island has been open for diving, it is closed for three years to allow the shell to grow.

Pearl Diving

The ship came late in May. We left immediately, and our first stop was at Takaroa. We remained only a short time, as most of the people were on the island we had just left. After a week, we resumed our journey. Our next stop was Raroia but we stayed only over Sunday so that I could get a little rest from seasickness. We went from Raroia to Hao, where many Saints were congregated for the diving. Their manner of diving is not with the diving bell as white men have invented. They dive from the small boat with nothing on but a loin cloth and a mesh bag around their shoulders to put the shell in when they find it. They reach incredible depths and stay under water longer than one would believe possible.

Simple Housekeeping

A house was fixed for us as usual. There was no table, so the natives brought in some long boards and made one that must have been twelve or fourteen feet long. We used the front part for our books and writing space; the center was our dining place; and the back part held utensils and foodstuffs. As usual there were no luxuries; it was just like camping.

Here Hubert was very busy. There were several Mormon missionaries, and they were always having long arguments with him. They had a very few members gathered there for the diving. One missionary never argued or tried to show how much he knew. He was a cowboy, fresh from the range, and cattle was all he knew much about. We invited him to dinner with us one day, and his reply was, "Oh, I can't argue." Hubert assured him we would talk about other things and he accepted the invitation with alacrity. On leaving, he said, "It's pleasant to talk about home things once in a while." His two-year stint must have been like a prison term to him.

Herman Janssen

Here we met Brother Herman Janssen of Norway. He had left the Norwegian vessel he had been serving on as a sailor. After a year or two around Papeete he met with Brother John Hawkins and others. They talked to him until he was converted and baptized. He stayed with us for a long time and was much help as he was a good cook.

The Loss of the "Evanelia"

On July 18 the ship "Henry" came to anchor at the village. Hubert went at once to see if our mail was on board. It was, but the news the captain told him was far more important than the mail. He said the "Evanelia" was lost after leaving Raroia a few hours. All the people aboard took to the landing boat and rowed the distance back to the island they had just left. We could hardly believe it. Until we heard Will's own story about it, we could not see how it could happen on a clear day with no bad wind.

It was several weeks before we had a letter from Will, giving his account of what happened. He had violated his agreement made when he took over the boat. He had agreed not to load her with copra (dried coconut) or pearl shell. He had not been able to sell much of his stock on account of this agreement. Most of the natives had little money and traded on those two articles. So when he reached Rairoa and met the owner of a schooner, who had met with an accident to his ship and had to repair it before he could go on, he persuaded Will to take his load to Tahiti, offering to pay him $200 to do it. Will agreed. They overloaded the ship with copra in the cabin, and pearl shell in sacks on deck. When they were about one and a half miles from shore they saw that the ship was sinking. Almost before they could get the landing boat out and into the water, the "Evanelia" went down.

The only reason cargo was allowed to be put in the boat was the attitude of some of the church people who were jealous if the boat stayed longer at one island than their own. They did nothing to maintain the boat or crew in the way of money or food. At times the crew had gone for days with no food at all. The French government at Papeete had threatened to tie up the boat as a vagrant vessel.

It was finally decided to allow McGrath to take charge of her, putting foodstuffs, etc., on board for sale. He had not made expenses on the one trip he was finishing when he called at Rairoa.

A House on Hikueru

The "Te avaroa," Mapuhi's largest vessel, came to the island. Mapuhi was on board and treated us very kindly. We had a good sleep, ate breakfast, and prepared to go ashore at Hikueru. This was a very rocky island where the waves break continually. In the rowboat going ashore, the baby and I were completely drenched. On landing we were greeted by Brother Janssen and Win Brander, whom we had met at Hao. Mr. Brander invited us to go to his house; his wife had joined him here.

The next morning the natives went to work to build us a house. It was finished and we slept in it that night. The women wove the coconut leaves into semblance of wide planks; these helped to keep the house cool. That night we slept on the floor.

When the people from Niau arrived, we were much surprised to see Will McGrath among them. He found us right away and handed me my watch, which I had sent by him to Papeete to be repaired. He did not meet us as he formerly did. When he handed the watch to me, he said that when they first got into the small boat as the "Evanelia" was sinking, his chest bobbed up right beside the boat. He grasped the handle and another man helped him to get it into the boat. Hence my watch was not lost. He was very cool to us and did not stay there long, leaving on the next ship for Tahiti.

Building a Church

The natives had no church on this island, and they began talking about building one. After plans were made, they asked Hubert to go to Papeete to see about getting the lumber. He was gone about three weeks. During that time an epidemic of stomach complaint broke out among the people. Before long I was stricken, and if Brother Janssen had not been there, I don't know what I would have done. He talked with a white woman who told him what to do and sent me some medicine. It was bad to take, but it helped me very quickly. Then our baby took the same thing. I fixed a dose of the same medicine I had taken and prayed silently that she would drink it. To my great joy and amazement she did. It helped her as it had me. The natives rejoiced when they came in at night, to see that we were so much better. I think Hubert was more lonely than I was, for I had the baby. Brother Janssen took over the cooking, which helped me greatly.

When Hubert left he had received enough money from the natives so that he paid our debts to Mr. Goodwin and Dr. Caldwell in Rarotonga. We were happy to do it, and received nice letters from them both long after, saying that it would have been quite all right if we had never paid.

Hubert had a hard trip on the little vessel on which he sailed. His bed was a native mat and pillow. He ate what the rest ate and had no charge for anything—the usual custom on trading vessels. Mr. Mervin, who owned several of these vessels for trading in the Tuamotus, was on board, and they talked together frequently. The few natives who were in Papeete were very glad to see him and furnished him food. On Sunday he preached and baptized three. When his work of purchasing the lumber was finished, he sailed for Hikueru, very homesick and anxious to get there. He arrived Saturday morning, December 5, 1896.

Shortly after his return he got hold of some scraps of old lumber and made a sort of bedstead. We had been sleeping in a bed on the floor since we had landed there. It was good to sleep on a bedstead although it was no softer than the ground. The native women had made mats from coconut leaves to cover the floor of our coconut house. The bed was all made of timber of that tree for the scant frame, and the rest made of the leaves. Our baby was learning to walk and she did much better on the matting.

Calico Pancakes

By Ruth Lewis Holman

GENERAL CONFERENCE is going to be held here—in Stewartsville—next time? That's wonderful! What an opportunity for service it will be," said Mrs. Betty Smith, excitedly, at the close of the women's afternoon prayer service. The pastor of the Stewartsville Branch had met with the women and announced the decision of the church authorities that the General Conference of 1884 would convene in Stewartsville, Missouri.

"What is the exact date set for the Conference?" one of the women asked.

"The date is April 6; that will be the opening of the Conference," replied the pastor. "But the Quorum of Twelve will meet one week sooner and hold council meetings. We must arrange for the Twelve to stay in one home if possible."

The women discussed this for a while and finally decided it was impossible for one home to take care of all the men. So arrangements were made for three neighboring homes to house the Quorum.

"Mary, your dining room is large. Could you arrange to feed all the members of the Twelve there? It would be very convenient for them as you are close to the church. Some of the other women will help you, I'm sure." Mary Lewis wondered how she could arrange her schedule to take care of this added work, but answered, "I'll talk it over with William. I'm quite sure he will say we can."

THE BRANCH in Stewartsville was small. Days and weeks of planning and preparation were necessary to complete the arrangements for housing the General Conference visitors. In time everything was ready, and ten days before the opening date members of the Twelve began to arrive. Meals were served them in the Lewis home and several of them slept there too.

Serious problems confronted the Twelve at that time. Some of these problems they discussed over the breakfast table. Some mornings, however, the men were in a jovial mood and did not talk of their burdens, but told humorous stories. On these occasions their hostess felt more than repaid for her hard work and considered it a privilege to be able to associate with and to serve such distinguished men. Sometimes the merriest—or the bolder—one of the group would play a joke on his hostess.

Among the Twelve were W. H. Kelley, Heman C. Smith, and Alexander H. Smith. Brother Alex lived in Stewartsville, but sometimes joined his fellow Apostles for meals in the Lewis home.

Betty Smith was one of Mary Lewis's best helpers. After clearing away the supper dishes one evening Betty said, "Tomorrow morning—Sunday—I intend to cook part of the breakfast and bring it over. That will help you more than anything I can do. I'll bring the pancakes."

"How nice of you," Mary replied. "These men certainly like to eat, and I'll confess they may be getting a little tired of the breakfasts I've been preparing for them. In the morning I had planned to have ham and eggs, fried potatoes, biscuits, peaches, and some jams and jellies, with plenty of milk to drink. I've been making biscuits and popovers every morning, so pancakes will be a change. Many thanks for your thoughtfulness, Betty."

IN THE MORNING, when the men were all seated at the big table, Mary and her helpers brought in the large platters of ham and eggs and dishes of fried potatoes—but bread was lacking. Mary was a little worried, fearing Betty had decided against making the pancakes. But just as Mary started passing the food, Betty came—almost running. She was carrying a huge platter covered with a heavy pottery lid.

"Ooooh—what have we here?" The men smiled in anticipation as Betty placed the dish on one end of the table. She took off the lid, and they saw the stacks of delicious, steaming-hot pancakes.

"What a lot of work, Betty!" Mary said.

"Oh, it was fun," Betty replied promptly.

The cakes were quickly passed around, and as each man began to butter his cake then try to cut it, Betty watched.

"Now the fun's begun," she mused.

W. H. Kelley tried cutting his pancake with a fork; it wouldn't cut. He very deftly used his knife too; again the cake refused to be cut—so he began a sawing motion with his knife. Next Betty watched Brother Heman C. Smith go through the same motions, and so on around the table. Not a word was said, but by the time the last man had tried—and failed—to cut through the pancakes, Mary was looking at Betty with accusing eyes. Betty's face fairly sparkled. Mary, sensing the joke, said, in a cutting tone, "Betty Smith, what have you done?"

A loud roar of laughter came from the men as they realized they were the victims of a practical joke. It was Heman C. Smith who said, "Well, brethren, don't you know this is the first day of April? We surely have to take our hats off to Sis-

Don't Make Our Missionaries Ill

DO YOU KNOW that many of our missionaries become ill because they eat improperly? Not because they want to, but because we, the women, force them into it.

This is what I mean. Brother General Church Appointee is scheduled to come to the branch for a two weeks' missionary series. Every one of us rushes for an appointment for one of the twenty-eight meals that he'll eat during the time he is with us. Then what happens? Each of us sees to it that he receives the very best. First we plan to have meat, preferably fried chicken. A spicy cocktail is a must, of course. Then ter Betty for these calico pancakes! After all the serious problems we have considered, this is good for us. A little humor now and then is relished by the best of men! Thanks, Betty." But Betty was already out of the house hurrying toward her home as fast as she could go, wondering if she had carried her joke too far. What a lot of work it had been to make the batter, then cut round doilies of calico and place in the center of each pancake as it fried!

Knowing Betty so well, Mary felt that Betty was almost remorseful before she left the house. "What a thrill she's had in doing this! She's always the first one on hand to help in case of sickness or accident or when anyone needs a friend. And from this prank I'd say she rates first in April fool jokes," she said. And the Apostles all agreed. They never forgot April 1, 1884, in Stewartville, Missouri.

we peel the vegetables, whip the potatoes, and top off the meal with pie à la mode or some other rich desert.

Let's count this up. The accepted serving of meat, for a special occasion, is eight ounces. If he eats eight ounces of meat at each home during his two weeks' stay, Brother G. C. A. has to consume fourteen pounds of meat. This isn't counting the meat in the various seafood cocktails. Our family of four uses only about eight pounds of meat for that length of time. Remember, the Word of Wisdom plainly states, "Eat meat sparingly."

Many of us are learning to conserve vitamins by leaving the peeling on our vegetables and by using whole-wheat bread. So check to see if you are one of the twenty-eight women who make it a point to peel the vegetables, whip the potatoes, and serve white rolls when Brother G. C. A. comes to dine in your home. As for desert he is expected to eat the equivalent of three and one-half pies a week. For again we would see that he receives the biggest and fattest piece.

How can he refuse to eat all of this? Especially when he knows that you'll have a hurt inside of you even if he says ever so graciously, "Thank you, I have plenty." Also he can't keep an efficient ministry if he is not fed properly. We women are the only ones who can do anything about this, because we are the ones who provide his meals.

We must realize that our missionaries are under constant scrutiny of the world. If they have digestive disturbances, how can they teach the Word of Wisdom? Many outside of the church know the high nutritional merits of the Word of Wisdom and teach them for a profit. I have heard them ridicule us for not practicing what we claim to believe. One of these men pointed to me from the platform of a large hall. He shouted, "I can go into any of your homes and not find any one of these things."

THIS ISN'T THE ONLY WAY that our missionary's ministry is affected. How can he effectively put over an important message when he is so stuffed or ill that clear thinking is next to impossible? Yet we must have him in our homes during meal time, especially the evening meal. Because the only time he can give individual ministry to our school children and husbands is at that precious hour between school or work and the evening service at seven-thirty.

To improve this missionary-member relationship we must have information—information concerning his preferences. This important information has been handed to us in such an unorganized way that it has led to embarrassment. We find ourselves rushing to the phone to call Mrs. A exclaiming, "What did you find out! I'd just simply die if I fed him something he didn't like and above all anything that would make him ill." Mrs. A gladly gives us the information she has found out the hard way.

An easy way to meet this problem would be to give the women's leader the authority to appoint a member to obtain the needed information from the General Church appointees. In this way it would be simple to contact the one who has the information. Then in the name of good nutrition we should use wisdom in planning our menus. By doing this we can help our missionaries to better health. If they have better health, their ministry will be more effective. An effective ministry means a more godly people, and a more godly people will lead us to our goal—Zion.

TO YOUNG PEOPLE planning to attend a college, university, or training school, help is now available to guide them in selecting a place which meets their requirements and which is also located near a branch of the church.

A new pamphlet entitled "Directory of Colleges and Universities in the United States and Canada in Church Towns" has recently been mailed to all General Church officers, district presidents, pastors, and missionaries. The directory was compiled in the office of Dr. Lawrence Brockway of the University of Michigan, who is Chairman of the General Church Committee on Ministry to College People. Extra copies are available to others who may be in a position to assist young people in choosing a school for their advanced education. (Anyone interested may obtain a copy by writing to Carl Mesle, General Church Youth Office, The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri.)

The experience of the church, with some notable exceptions, is that those young people who separate themselves from church participation and activity during college years too often completely separate themselves and their families from the church in later life. In the past two many young people have unconsciously chosen to attend colleges and universities where there are no branches. Today they may be guided in the selection of a school which meets all other requirements and which has the additional advantage of locating them within the area of ministry of a local branch.

The purpose of the directory is best stated by Dr. Brockway in the preface from which we quote:

The church has a strong interest in promoting education because the accomplishment of its tasks requires the services of consecrated people who are intelligent, alert, and skilled. . . .

The student entering college for the first time and coming from a church background often has a good appreciation of church objectives and program and is eager to relate his own life's work to the goals of the church. Because it is easy to become preoccupied with the subject matter of college courses and somewhat awed at new intellectual vistas, the senior (or graduate student) may find that his intellectual growth has not been matched by an increased appreciation of the place and function of the church. To be a senior in intellect and at the same time a freshman in church appreciation is to be unbalanced and confused. . . .

Through adequate church experience during student years the student will find encouragement toward study of the church in true academic style, the opportunity for worship experiences which join intellect and spirit, vocational counseling with a consciousness of Zion's goals, and encouragement for current participation in the life of the church. This is possible only for students in schools where there is a church student group or local congregation of the church.

This directory is issued in the hope of assisting young people who are choosing a school, as well as leaders and workers among young people. To all such we say: "Choose a school from this list, or consider the consequences of being separated from the association of church people."

THE COMMITTEE ON MINISTRY TO COLLEGE PEOPLE

Material for an early issue of the Directory, ready for the printer, was lost in its travels. The entire work, therefore, had to be re-done. A few unavoidable errors and omissions may be discovered, but the Directory itself is generally complete and accurate and should prove most helpful to those who will choose to use it. It is commended to the use of all young people, parents, youth workers, pastors, and others to the end that an increasing number of church young people who every year enter colleges, other than Graceland or the Sanitarium, will select schools where they may continue their church life throughout their student years.

Footnote to History

The immortal Gettysburg Address, as recorded in the Diary of President Lincoln's secretary, John Hay, later Secretary of State under Presidents McKinley and Theodore Roosevelt:

In the morning of the 19th (November, 1863), I got a beast and rode out with the President and suite to the Cemetery in procession. The procession formed itself in an orphanly sort of way, and moved out with very little help from anybody; and after a little delay Mr. Everett took his place on the stand—and Mr. Stockton made a prayer which thought it was an oration—and Mr. Everett spoke as he always does, perfectly; and the President, in a firm, free way, with more grace than is his wont, said a half-dozen lines of consecration—and the music wailed, and we went home through crowded and cheering streets.—William Roscoe Thayer, The Life of John Hay (Houghton Mifflin).

Church Young People in the News

Author and Counselor

Mary Cooper

Turning the tables on the author of many of these feature articles, we focus the spotlight on Mary Cooper, journalism senior at the University of Kansas, who this year is serving the University as counselor to twenty-four freshman girls.

Mary's interests are as wide as they are numerous. In recent years they have ranged from captain of a championship high school baseball team to assistant managing editor of the University Daily Kansan, and from honor student to dormitory counselor.

In each of her activities Mary has won a reputation for dependability and effectiveness. Despite her distinguished record she considers her accomplishments very unimportant and would much rather talk about someone else's achievements than her own.

She has also been a society editor of the Daily Kansan and is a member of Theta Sigma Phi, national honorary and professional fraternity for women in Journalism.

Last year she was recreation chairman for the Liahona fellowship, the church student group at KU. This year she is supplementing her Liahona work by helping with a nursery-age class in the church school at Lawrence.

Through her high school and college career she has maintained a constant participation in an enormous amount of extracurricular activities besides being graduated from both William Chrisman High School and Graceland College as an honor student.

Mary moved from Arcadia, California, with her mother to Independence in 1944. At William Chrisman she began her journalistic career as a first-page editor of the Envoy, Chrisman's student newspaper. She also served as business manager and advertising manager. On the Gleam yearbook, she was a member of the layout staff and literary staff. She also was a member of Quill and Scroll, high school journalism honor society.

In athletics she won a three-sport Chrisman "C."

A member of a championship play cast, she was named outstanding actress at William Chrisman in district play competition and in state competition. She won a similar honor in Zion's League dramatics. She was a member of the National Forensic League and the National Thespian Honor Society.

Mary was graduated fourth in her class from William Chrisman in 1949 and was a member of the National Honor Society. She won an honor scholarship from the American Association of University Women but decided not to use it because of her desire to attend Graceland. Here she continued her dramatic career as a Graceland player and had roles in the home-coming play both years.

As in high school, her Graceland years were loaded with activities and responsibility. She was station manager of KGRA, president of the G.L.S. social club, president of Graceland Future Teacher's Association, and a Crescent. She was graduated from Graceland a member of Lambda Delta Sigma, scholastic honor society.

Summers have been no exception to Mary's activeness. She is very interested in camping. As an Oriole girl, she achieved first rank and was a monitor. She was the first Oriole girl to win the "Light of Life" award for outstanding church activity. She attended Oececa, the Oriole girls' camp, at Lake Doniphan for five years, the church youth camp at Nauvoo one year, and several reunions at Lake Doniphan.

During her high school years she was active in the Stone Church Teenage Zion's League, serving as vice-president one year. She also gave her time as a teacher in the junior department and secretary of the junior high department of the Stone Church church school.

Last summer she worked in the Department of Religious Education, but volunteered part of her time as a leader at the Chetek, Wisconsin, and Nauvoo youth camps as well as at the girls' camps, at Lake Doniphan, Excelsior Springs, Missouri. She also managed to squeeze in time to attend the Theta Sigma Phi national convention in Columbus, Ohio. The previous summer she worked for Herald House.

After graduation, Mary looks forward to the possibility of working for the church. She does not see the job as a permanent position, however. With a twinkle in her eye she explains that she does not believe in careers for women but rather thinks that their place is in the home.

Question Time

Question:

Are Latter Day Saints faith healers?
Colorado E. C. D.

Answer:

No! We do not pose as such. However, we do believe in the promises of Christ to the effect that those who are sick and afflicted may be healed by the power of God through the anointing with oil and the laying on of hands by those in authority (James 5: 14; Mark 6: 13). This, we claim, is a natural result of compliance with Christ's standards in church organization and development. It was true in Christ's time and later, therefore it is true now.

WARD HOUGAS

Question:

Does the prophet of the Reorganized Church tell what is going to come to pass?
Colorado E. C. D.

Answer:

The president of the church, or the prophet as we may choose to call him, has foretold coming events in the past through revelation and may continue to do so in the future. Prophetic leadership does not necessarily include the foretelling of events, but it does insure the proper understanding and interpreting of conditions.

WARD HOUGAS

Question:

Is Psalm 85: 11, "Truth shall spring out of the earth; and righteousness shall look down from heaven," applied to the Book of Mormon?
N.Y. C. D. Q.

Answer:

It has been so interpreted and applied by Latter Day Saints generally since the very early days of the church.

Its interpretation becomes more clear and certain when considered with the prophecy of Isaiah 29, which is more specific, describing a nation "which shall be brought down, and shall speak out of the ground, and thy speech shall be low out of the dust." The prophecy goes on to describe a book that is sealed. Words of the book are delivered to one that is learned to read, who says, "I cannot." The book is delivered to one that is not learned who the prophecy assumes did read it. The coming forth of this book was to be part of "a marvelous work" which the Lord would do in connection with Israel's restoration. Since this prophecy had a somewhat detailed fulfillment in the coming forth of the Book of Mormon we interpret it as applying to that book.

The prophecy in Psalms points to the same general fact of truth springing forth from the earth, though more broadly stated. Of this prophecy the coming of the Book of Mormon is only part fulfillment, for there are many other sacred Scriptures, written by various peoples, in many lands and in different ages. Isaiah further prophesied, "Let the skies pour down righteousness; let the earth open, and let them bring forth salvation, and let righteousness spring up together" (45: 8). And Jeremiah, concerning the restoration of Israel in the latter days, said the Lord "will reveal unto them the abundance of peace and truth" (33: 6). We have entered "the dispensation of the fulness of times," when God will "gather together in one all things in Christ, both which are in heaven, and which are on earth." The Nephites who wrote the Book of Mormon left other Scriptures, as also did the Jaredites before them, all of which will in time be revealed.

Question:

In the light of Old Testament law, how can the eating of pork be justified?
Wyoming Mrs. H. W. S.

Answer:

According to Reorganized Latter Day Saint Scripture, the gospel, such as we know it today, was delivered to Adam and continued on through the line of the faithful until the days of Moses; then the gospel and the higher priesthood was taken from the people because they were not capable of appreciating it and living up to it. A new set of laws took its place. These have been referred to as the "law of carnal commandments." They involved many restrictions on human relations, on eating, and on living conditions.

Later, in the meridian of time, God sent his own Son to give a living demonstration and the celestial law; in him the gospel and the Melchisedec priesthood were restored. Luke 16: 16 declares: "The law and the prophets were until John: since that time the kingdom of God is preached and every man presseth into it" (A. V.). Paul makes very clear that with the coming of the gospel there was no reason for trying to force the Gentile saints to observe the old law "which neither our fathers nor we were able to bear."

We conclude that only those restrictions which have been repeated by Christ and the apostles or revealed in latter-day revelations are binding on the church at this time. The proscription against pork is not one of these.

Question:

The local merchants give coupons with purchases which are put in a jackpot for a drawing. If one accepts the money would it be gambling, a lottery, or contrary to God's laws?
Michigan Mrs. J. M.

Answer:

As far as I know, the church has never taken any official stand on the subject in question.

We have been counseled by the Lord to avoid "the spirit of speculation" (Doctrine and Covenants 127: 7c). Therefore, it would be our opinion that to accept any material gain, in the manner as set forth in the question, would be acceptable, as long as this spirit and attitude were avoided.

L. W. KOHLMAN

Any sincere question from our readers will receive consideration from the editors. If it is of general interest, it will be referred to the Question Time panel, and the answer will be printed. The answers are the opinions and interpretations of the panel members signing them, and do not commit the Herald nor the church.

Please keep the question short—fifty words or less should be sufficient. Your personal problems, the answers to which concern you alone, will be answered by letter. Address questions to Herald Editors rather than panel members. We shall try to take all questions in the order they are received. Be patient, there may be several ahead of yours. Only questions with contributor's full name (not just initials) and address will receive attention.—EDITOR.

The Autograph of God

The Autograph of God, by Archer Wallace. The Macmillan Company, New York, 1952. 150 pages, $2.00.

The Autograph of God is a collection of fifty-two tales and essays. The range of topics is impressive. The development of each, supported by a wide range of well-chosen illustrations is even more impressive. All selections were made with definite purpose: to point out to the reader that the problems besetting him in everyday life are not peculiar to him, and that there are solutions—or at least helpful attitudes which can be developed toward these common troubles, both large and small.

Dr. Wallace is a well-known Canadian minister and associate editor of Onward, a Canadian publication.

In reviewing The Autograph of God, one discovers that this little volume itself is its own best recommendation. Food for meditation, human interest that carries the reader along in anticipation, awareness of the personal problems of the day, and satisfying counsel given are a rare combination which merits hearty approval.

Each of the fifty-two chapters develops a complete thought. Freedom from dogmatism in real and fictitious illustrations, scriptural quotations, and conclusions drawn are free of narrow preachment. One becomes increasingly aware of the author's ability to beam specific material to diversified interests and needs.

Now for a few of the innumerable and beautiful quotes that could be selected:

A philosopher who was trying hard to make allowance for people's irritability and temperamental ways, says, "Be patient with them, remember that some people pass through life as a man might walk over a path of broken bottles with bare feet." (page 4)

Human nature dislikes nothing more than to be compelled beyond old landmarks. (page 11)

Men often condemn with a superficial knowledge, whereas if they knew the truth they would pity and sympathize, even if they could not condone. . . . If we know anything at all about religious teaching it is that we are given credit for what we try to do as well as for what we actually accomplish. (page 14)

The lame man is always with us, for every morally incapable person is lame, and so is everyone who is in doubt and perplexity. Churches are tested, not by their creeds, but by what they can do for the lame man in the community; and not for the lame man of yesterday, but for the sufferer of today. (page 20)

History is a witness to the truth that we need not be creatures of circumstances, but creators of them. (page 55)

Misplaced temper is a boomerang; it is self-inflicted punishment. There is an old saying that if you throw mud at a man, you may or may not hit him, but you will soil your own hands. (page 59)

No one stands alone. We are like trees in a forest. When a tree falls, it crushes other trees and underbrush. (page 100)

The reading of this book and its presence as a handy reference will prove both pleasurable and profitable.

Ways of Teaching

Ways of Teaching, by Karen Andersen. The Muhlenberg Press, Philadelphia, 1952. 144 pages. 90c.

Christian teachers desire help in preparing themselves for their tasks. Ways of Teaching provides just such help. "Readable," "condensed," and "challenging" are words applicable to its style and contents. The intent of the course as found in the editorial foreword is "to help teachers grow in a knowledge and understanding of good teaching procedures, and to help them acquire skill in the use of these procedures." The author has clothed this goal with practical suggestions for achievement.

While this book is intended primarily for use in Christian education and leadership training classes, it will have value for the person who reads it individually in his home. As class study, it encourages discussion. Its suggestions stimulate adaptation into teaching situations. The section bearing the title "Activities," found at the close of each chapter, includes not only the "old reliables" but those which are refreshingly new.

Scope of treatment is felt immediately as one examines chapter headings:

The Task Before Us
The Learning Process—Teacher's Approach
The Learning Process—Pupil's Approach
The Teacher
The Group
Discipline
Stories, Lectures, Questions and Answers
Discussion and Activities
Play, Dramatics, Choral Reading, and Music
Audio-Visual Aids

Additional readings and a helpful guide to audio-visuals are found at the close of this little book.

The Department of Religious Education calls this course to the attention of everyone interested in Christian education, particularly parents and others who are in any way responsible for church school teaching. It is a book of encouragement, for it points out not only important areas of knowledge and understanding but gives practical aid to acquiring increased teaching skill.

Prophecy over them that are sick in administering to them has been a fruitful source of trouble among my people. They must observe that this they are not required to do except there be a direct manifestation of the Spirit which may direct it. Pray over the sick, anoint them with oil, as commanded in the law, and leave them in my hands, that the Spirit may deal with them according to my wisdom. Many spiritual manifestations have been had. Some of these have been false, and under the operation of the law which I gave many, many years ago, those who make these false presentations are not to be feared among my people. They are not justified in permitting their human sympathies to overcome that which has been written in my Scriptures. The spirit of the prophets is subject to the prophets.—Doctrine and Covenants 125: 15.

This same counsel applies to the gifts as a whole.

The inherent potential which is in persons is, in my opinion, the basis for the channel through which Deity desires to manifest the spiritual gifts. I do not believe the Lord gives a gift to a person as something extraneous to his nature. We are born with certain inherent tendencies, characteristics, capacities, traits, and dispositions. Under the movement of the Spirit of God in those who have obeyed the gospel and have been born of water and of the Spirit, these characteristics or capacities can be quickened and brought to light and expression. "All are called according to the gifts of God unto them." These potentialities inhere in human nature according to the law of inherent transmitted characteristics. It is hardly to be expected that a donkey will sing like a canary, or that a canary will bray like a donkey.

To all persons, normally, is granted capacity to have the fundamental gifts: to learn wisdom, to acquire knowledge, and to develop faith. To all, however, in not given the inherent capacity for all the gifts, like prophecy, tongues, interpretation of tongues, etc.

The manifestations of the Spirit, then, are to give light, to reveal the mind of Christ, to impart divine grace, to stimulate and encourage and direct the powers of life within us so there will be the fruitage of intelligent unfoldment of the Christlike potentialities in the personalities of the Saints. ". . . whatsoever doth make manifest is light" (Ephesians 5: 13). "The glory of God is intelligence, or, in other words, light and truth; light and truth forsaketh that evil one."—Doctrine and Covenants 90: 6.

■ Sunday, December 28, the basketball players started on their vacation trip to Texas and Arkansas. They spent their first night at a motel near Kansas City and then journeyed the next day to Fort Smith, Arkansas. There they played Fort Smith Junior College and won 60-50.

They then continued to Camp Chaffee where they shopped and were shown around the base. They saw the soldiers at Camp Chaffee at shooting and at bayonet practice. That night they played Camp Chaffee, losing 65-64.

The next day they went to Texarkana, where they spent New Year's Eve. The following day they went to Tyler, Texas, and played two games losing 90-57 and 98-44. They started back for Graceland the next day. They had the misfortune of some of the players getting sick. R. L. Coberly from Independence only played one game; and Tom Cochrane and Jim Carpenter, also from Missouri, were sick.

■ The premiere of The Razor's Edge was presented to the Graceland students and faculty on January 17, 1953. The film has been adapted for the screen from Somerset Maugham's famous novel by the same name. Preceding the movie, there was half an hour of music by the Graceland College Swing Band. Seats were reserved and dress was formal or semiformal. Receptions were held later at three night spots on the campus.

■ One of the largest percentages of students in Graceland's history turned out January 16, 1953, to elect six freshmen to the Student Council. Four hundred ninety students cast the ballots which elected Nan Bayless of Kansas, Hank Beers of Pennsylvania, Jim Clark of Washington, Kathy Frisby of Michigan, Barbara Woods of California, and Frank Woodson of California, to a year's term on the council. The three girls and three boys elected will get their first taste of service when they help with registration at the semester.

■ In acknowledgment of donors who contributed approximately $30,000 for the interior furnishings of the Memorial Student Center, an aluminum plaque was placed December 9 on the north wall of the lobby in the Student Center. The General Church appropriated $60,000 to Graceland for the building of the Student Center, but it was soon found that it would not be a sufficient amount to cover the various improvements that the building committee felt should be included in this new building. Friends of the college came to the rescue and donated $30,000. These names and areas benefiting from donations will be found on the plaque: Bookstore: Lou Blair and Wilbur Gillen, in memory of their parents; Snack Shop: Lamoni Patroness Society; Lounge: Charles Van Eaton; Post Office: Paul Morder in memory of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Morden; Chancel Furnishings: Class of 1949; Fireplace: Class of 1947; and areas not specified: Arthur B. Church, Harlow G. Fredrick, Graceland Players, Alumni of College, and College Day Contributions of 1947 and 1948.

■ With the coming of the second semester, there will be sixteen additions to the Graceland family. These are Shirley Oatwell and Lois Green from Detroit, Jack Larson from Saginaw, Frances Rogers from East Lansing, and Mary Lou Lohr from Harper Woods, Michigan. The four young men who will be arriving from Guatemala are Mario Mendez, Carlos Nuyens, Raphael Rodriguez, and Klaus Rotter. Others are Virginia Elliott of Modesto, California; Ruth Basom of Rapid City, South Dakota; Beverly Coleman of Seattle, Washington; Harriett Spurling of New Plymouth, Idaho; David Thatcher of Independence; Elsie Webb of Cherokee, Iowa; and Ray Martens of Lamoni. These newcomers are sincerely welcomed; it is the hope of present students that they will find genuine fellowship.

Letters

Administration Brought Assurance

(NOTE: The writer of this letter, Mrs. Oscar Deal, died on December 16, 1952. It is at her husband's request that it is being printed.)

During a serious illness, when I was a patient in the old Sanitarium, the doctors decided I should have surgery, but I had such high blood pressure they were afraid to operate. Our son, Archie, came in and sat on my bed and said, "Mother, you had better go home until you are stronger," but I knew I couldn't live as I was. When the doctor came in I told him that I would like to go ahead with the operation, and he said, "I do not want your husband or family or the surgeon to be held responsible, but if it is your wish, we shall arrange for surgery." I prayed much of the night, asking God to assure someone besides myself that it was the right thing to do. This assurance did not come to my husband, but after Brother Arthur Oakman administered to me, he said, "Fear not; God is with you." I rejoiced, because I knew this was the answer to my prayer. He also told my husband he would remain during the operation to plead for my recovery.

I was unable to see anyone for several days and had to have special nurses. One morning when I was better Sister Cockrill told me that my operation had been a touching experience for her as the whole room seemed filled with the Spirit of God. Sister Fry said that she and a group of the nurses had met in a vacant room and offered prayers for me.

I can't express how much this meant to me.

From a Serviceman to His Home League

Dear Leaguers:

I don't know if you think of me as much as I think of all of you or not, but I want you to know I still remember you and am hoping that you are even more active than you were when I left you.

Since I came back here and have been out of boot camp I have been able to attend my own church at San Diego. The church is very nice and there is a swell group of young people. They meet every Saturday night, so I have been able to attend most all of their meetings except when I have been on duty week ends. Then I sleep at the YMCA Saturday night and go to church Sunday morning.

I didn't learn about the young people's prayer services until quite late, so I got to attend only one of them. They are held on the first Sunday of every month before the regular church service starts.

The prayer meeting I attended is probably the last prayer service I shall attend for at least a year, but the services for that Sunday were so strong with the spirit that I don't know where I could have gone to receive a greater blessing. After the Communion emblems were served, the pastor, who is a high priest, spoke under the power of the spirit. Then that night I received a special blessing given to all servicemen who are going overseas.

I never realized what a great privilege we of the church have until I got in the Marine Corps. I tried to attend other services while I was in boot camp until I could go to my own church, but they just didn't have what I needed and I wasn't satisfied.

I wish I could tell you how I feel, especially you boys who will soon be going into the service. Get all you can from your church while you can. When you are in the service you can't always attend your own church and receive the spiritual strength you need, and the language you hear is far from Christian. The temptations that are around you seem to be much greater than when you are a civilian. Take advantage of the great blessing that is before you while you can.

While I was stationed at Camp Del Mar (next to Camp Pendleton where I am stationed now until I go overseas), I was living in the same barrack with one of our Latter Day Saint boys, but he stayed there when I moved because he is permanent personnel.

I ask you to remember me in your prayers that I may always do the things that will be pleasing to our Lord.

Notice to Members Visiting Florida

I am eighty-three years old, and my greatest desire is to let my light shine and lead others to the Father above. I have been a member seventy years, and I go to Ft. Lauderdale twice each year to stay with my son and go to church.

I will be glad to see any members passing through here. I live three blocks north of the bridge in a Conoco Station; my signs have my name and "L. D. S." on them. This gives me a chance to explain my religion to those who ask what the initials stand for.

Service Extraordinary

It was a cold, stormy night; it had been snowing all day and now a blizzard was in progress. We almost felt that we would be justified in staying at home, but Mother said, "We can't do that because someone you least expect is always sure to come if meeting is called off."

Mother had spent her entire afternoon preparing her lesson. She had first prayed that God would enlighten her mind and help her to bring to the Saints a message that would be beneficial to them. We were studying The Life of W. W. Blair, that hardy pioneer of an early day.

When we reached the hall where we held meetings, a warm fire had been built and there were fourteen members of the Peoria Sunday evening study class present. Discouragement seemed to meet us as we entered the room until the pastor of the branch opened the meeting. As I played the opening song, I was amazed at the sweetness of the music sung by these ordinary people with untrained voices.

When Mother began the lesson, the Holy Spirit rested upon her and she spoke words given her of God. Every person in that small, humble room was thrilled by His Spirit, and all knew that they had received a blessing.

During the closing song, an angel chorus seemed to join in the singing. It was a wonderful experience, and those present felt that they had been rewarded for their faithfulness in venturing out on such a stormy night.

Quartet in the News

In the Madison, Wisconsin, Capitol Times for December 18 this picture appeared with the following account:

An unusual vocal quartet, made up of three generations of the Wirth family headed by seventy-year-old Carl Wirth, will be featured in the annual choral Christmas Vespers Sunday at the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, 221 Jackson Street. The vespers program will begin at 4:30 p.m. D. H. Ferris is choir director. Shown here are, left to right, Carl Wirth II, 14; his father, Russell Wirth, 46; the grandfather, Carl Wirth, Sr., and a second grandson of the venerable choir singer, Tom Wirth, 17. Both Tom and Carl Wirth are students at Central High School. This quartet has been a regular part of the musical services of the Reorganized Church the past year.

Candidate Baptized by Pastor

NIAGARA FALLS, ONTARIO.—In November the women's department held their annual bazaar which raised $109. Sister Nellie Towers was the director of activities. On December 14, Miss Jean Stead was baptized by Brother Charles Tomlinson, the pastor. Brother Tomlinson also officiated in the confirmation which took place at the evening service. Sister Stead has been active in choir work and with the young people for the past year.

On December 21, the choir gave the cantata, "Bethlehem," under the direction of Sister Mona Cochrane. The choir took the cantata to Niagara Falls, New York, and Hamberstone Branches.

A candlelight service was held on New Year's Eve and was under the direction of the pastor.—Reported by AUDREY V. WARE

Six Candidates Baptized

BLACKGUM, OKLAHOMA. — Brother James P. Daugherty and Brother Wallace Jackson completed a two weeks' series on December 14. On the closing day of the series, six candidates were baptized. They were Austin Davis, Wayne Davis, Stevens Johnson, L. D. Johnson, Cleo Pack, and Lavern Johnson. The confirmation service was held at the eleven o'clock service that day. This made a total of fourteen baptisms for 1952.

The new church home is being completed although services have been held there since July. The church is located about one half mile east of the Tenkiller Dam, about eight miles northeast of Gore, Oklahoma, and about forty-five miles west of Fort Smith, Arkansas. The lake formed by the Tenkiller Dam is planned to become one of the greatest vacation and recreation spots in eastern Oklahoma. Anyone vacationing in the area is invited to worship here with the Saints. Church school is held at ten and worship at eleven on Sunday mornings. A Book of Mormon class or prayer meeting is held every Wednesday evening. The district president, Brother Victor Witte and Brother Yale, who is to be the new district president, visited the group on December 4.—Reported by JOSEPH PACK

Two Young People Baptized

VERMONT CONGREGATION, LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA.—Denker and 108 Streets is the location selected by the stake officers for the new church building. This corner lot (79 x 127) is across from the Washington High School and bordering a new tract development, showing good missionary possibilities. The site was bought and paid for out of the building fund and plans are being formed to build the new church this year. The women's department has had projects including rummage sales, bake sales, and bazaars to raise money for the fund.

Two young people were baptized by Priest W. K. Waibel and were confirmed December 28 by Elders N. W. Walden and W. H. Hall.—Reported by W. H. HALL

Series Held

ALEXANDER, KANSAS.—Elder Herbert Lynn preached a series of meetings closing on November 23. Faye Schadel Mostrom was baptized on that day and confirmed by Elder Clyde Shannon of Wichita on December 14. Forty-four people were present at one of the meetings.

Dennis Ray, son of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Codrington, was born August 8, and blessed September 28, by Elder Coda Gose of Arkansas City.

Elders Clyde Shannon and James Wolfe held services December 13 and 14.—A special confirmation service was held on Sunday afternoon, December 14.—Reported by MRS. CECIL CODRINGTON

Zion's League Has Institute

SOUTHERN OREGON DISTRICT.—A youth convention was held at Klamath Falls November 29 and 30. Elder Harold Crooker, pastor of Klamath Falls mission, was in charge of activities. Elder Clinton Dobson, assistant to the district president, and Elder Keith Kinart, district young people's leader, attended to represent the district officers.

An informal game time opened the convention after registration on Saturday night. This was followed by a fellowship during which nearly all present participated. On Sunday morning the Klamath Falls League had charge of the worship service followed by a class instructed by Brother Kinart.

The church service was directed to young people and a large number of them were present. Elder Dobson was the speaker and Brethren Kinart and Crooker and Priest Dale Ward, district Zion's League president, assisted with the service.

After church, a potluck dinner was held with the Klamath Falls women's department in charge.

In the afternoon a meeting was held under the leadership of Elder Kinart during which plans for future activities were discussed and ways of improving Zion's League work presented. Brother Ward brought the greetings of the district League officers and presented the proposed program for the first district activity for young people in 1953.

The total registration was thirty-two, with Klamath Falls, Lakeview, Rouge Valley, Grant's Pass, and Albany-Corvallis missions represented.—Reported by DALE F. WARD

Money Raised for Building Fund

SAN JOSE, CALIFORNIA.—A branch business meeting was held December 17 and it was voted to purchase a lot for the future church.

The annual Christmas family night was held at the church on December 19. A playlet, under the direction of Sister Agnes Elam, was presented. The children received candy, and baskets were distributed to the shut-ins and needy.

The group of junior high Campfire Girls sang carols at a local hospital. They were under the direction of Sister Agnes Elam.

Elder Ruben Porter and family of Redwood City are attending church in San Jose.

Sister Catherine Krauter, in charge of Christmas card sales, reports a net of $211 for the building fund. The women's department held their Christmas party on December 11 at the pastor's home. An offering was received for the Auditorium fund.

The Zion Home Builders had their Christmas dinner and party at the Hotel DeAnza on December 20.

The Leaguers met on December 21 at the home of Barbara Graff for their Christmas party and then went on a scavenger hunt.

The junior and senior high groups attended Yule Camp at Happy Valley reunion grounds during Christmas vacation.—Reported by STENA CALDWELL

New Mission Begun

MT. PLEASANT, IOWA.—The mission was started January 4. The new district president, Max Hromek, had charge of organizing the mission, assisted by District Pastor B. A.

Galbraith. District Missionary Fred Banta gave a talk. Teacher Raymond Brown was selected as pastor and S. S. Hartford, church school director. Other officers are Mrs. Dora Hartford, secretary; Rex Calloway, treasurer; and Mrs. Grace Sampson, publicity agent. Services will be held at the City Hall at ten o'clock each Sunday morning.—Reported by GRACE SAMPSON

District Women Meet

BAYOU LA BATRE, ALABAMA.—The following were sustained in their offices for 1952-53: Elder Delbert Tillman, pastor; Elder Alma Tillman, counselor to the pastor and solicitor; Priest Robert Pendarvis, counselor to the pastor and treasurer; Irma Tillman, church school director, treasurer, and historian; Wilona Gazzier, women's leader; Audrey Tillman, secretary and music director; Hazel Ruth Nelson, book steward and reporter. Frank Deakle was succeeded by Sherman Seaman as youth leader.

A seafood-gumbo plate was served at the noon and afternoon hour Thanksgiving Day. Candy, bazaar material, and flower plants were also sold. The proceeds of this effort was applied to the branch budget to meet commitments to the General Church.

Apostle Percy Farrow held a series of missionary services November 16-20. Brother Farrow illustrated his sermons with colored slides. Myra Sutton was baptized, completing a family circle in the church.

The women's leaders of the Mobile District met at the branch December 15 with the District President J. A. Pray. The purpose of this meeting was to receive instruction as to how each leader could increase the efficiency and spirituality of the group. A covered dish luncheon was served by the Bayou La Batre women.

Bishop Joseph E. Baldwin taught a class January 2 about the financial law and the importance of Stewardship Emphasis Day.—Reported by HAZEL RUTH NELSON

Baby Blessed

MAYSVILLE, MISSOURI.—Duane Lee, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Newcom of Carrollton, Missouri, was born June 7, 1951, and blessed May 4, 1952, at Maysville, Missouri, by Brother W. A. Simmons and Brother A. E. Adams.—Reported by MRS. ELIZABETH WELTER

Christmas Camp Held

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA DISTRICT.—The district and the Los Angeles Stake held their joint annual Christmas camp, December 26, 27, and 28 at the Easter Seal Lodge in Crestline, California. Under the direction of Jack Van Eaton, camp director; Hugh Kensler, program director; with the assistance of Glen Johnson, president of Seventy; Maxine Evans, nurse; Faith Myers, John and Beverly Stephens, Bob Martin, and Joyce Kensler, counselors, the theme of "Partnerships with Christ" was carried out. Worship services, classes, and filmstrips on stewardship were shown. Meals were served by Lacyene Van Eaton and Loretta Shedd. Over fifty young people from the district and stake attended the camp.—Reported by HUGH KENSLER.

Men Approved for Ordination

CENTER STAKE OF ZION.—On December 12, the following were approved at the stake conference for ordination: Russell Jerome Sherman, elder, Gudgell Park; William H. DeBarthe, deacon, David W. Chapman, deacon, Robert E. Thompson, deacon, Donald R. Bain, teacher, Raymond Lee Lesh, teacher, Cecil R. Taylor, teacher, Earl L. Thompson, teacher, and David A. Hurshman, elder, all of Eden Heights; Fred R. Norris, teacher, Milton Costlow, priest, James Leslie Daly, priest, Lloyd E. Stoner, priest, John L. McArthur, elder, all of West College; Leon Allen, elder, Slover Park; William Edwin Farrand, deacon, Englewood; Malcom E. Haskins, deacon, William Gordon Smith, deacon, Everett Scott Finken, priest, Richard D. Price, elder, all of Enoch Hill. After the completion of a pre-ordination training course for the men, ordinations will be provided for.

Fourteen Scouts in the Center Stake have received their final award in the "For God and Country" division of the Scout program. Troop 203, West College, graduated John D. Darling, Jr., Everett Graffeo, John A. Hiles, Jimmy Johnson, and Reginald L. Stoner. Scouts from Troop 223, Stone Church, receiving like honors are James Brand, Jr., Harry Mangum, Joseph Mangum, Bill Nichols, Jr., Tom Quick, Robert Rannie, Mark Thoman, and Gerry Westwood. Gordon Heady, Troop 227, Walnut Park, also received the award. For eighteen months these Scouts have been in classwork under the instruction of Elder Arthur B. Taylor in the junior high department of the Stone Church school. Rex Sandidge, Troop 224, Enoch Hill, is scheduled to receive his award.

On December 12, the following men were elected by the stake conference for pastoral responsibility for the year 1953: Ernest F. Rauh, Blue Ridge; Delmar M. Sloan, East Independence; L. Donald Pypier, Eden Heights; William LaGrece, Englewood; Lewis J. Richards, Enoch Hill; C. Myron Zerr, Gudgell Park; Fred A. Fry, Liberty Street; R. Lyle McFarlane, Mount Washington; Herman A. Chelline, Second Church; Marion G. Talcott, Slover Park; Orville L. Hiles, South Chrysler; Warren B. Haskins, Spring Branch; Glaude A. Smith, Stone Church; Ralph M. Freeman, Sugar Creek; Herbert C. Lively, Walnut Park; and Howard C. Timm, West College.

The conference approved the appointment of Herbert C. Lively as a member of the stake presidency. President F. Henry Edwards, assisted by Stake President C. V. Graham, set him apart. The vacancy in the stake presidency occurred by the recent appointment of Fred O. Davies as president of the Kansas City Stake.—Report from Centerstake News

Women's Department Active

MISSOURI VALLEY, IOWA.—The annual business meeting was held September 10 under the direction of John Jensen. The following officers were elected: pastor, George I. Hansen; church school director, Joseph Marshall, Jr.; women's leader, Minnie Squires; young people's supervisor, Jerold Marshall; branch secretary, Bernice Varns; branch recorder, Charlotte Hansen; solicitor, Don McCurley; branch treasurer, John Jensen; music director, Neva McCurley; book steward, Minnie Squires; branch historian, Bernice Varns.

John Jensen gave the closing remarks, stating that as pastor for the past five years he had enjoyed a fine experience.

The women's department officers were elected as follows: secretary, Bessie Long; treasurer, Minnie Riley; friendly visitor, Nellie Sisley; correspondent, May Davis; solicitors, Evelyn Marshall, Thelma Duysen, Hattie Gibbs, Irene Jones, Bernice Varns. The women's department held twenty meetings during the year with an average attendance of ten. Two hundred and eighty homes were visited and Heralds were distributed in many homes. Cards were sent and baskets delivered to shut-ins. Two new blankets were sent overseas as a project of the United Church Council of Women. The women's group contributed ten dollars to the Iowa Temperance League. The women's working projects were serving for the Kiwanis Club for six weeks, serving for a priesthood banquet, two food sales, an ice cream social, and selling cards and extracts.

Two babies were blessed on October 26. They were Kathy Jo, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Marshall, Jr.; and James Robert, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Dozier.—Reported by BERNICE VARNs

Men Ordained to the Priesthood

AVERY, TEXAS.—Elders R. L. Morrison and James E. Renfroe were in the branch. James Arvil Wilson was ordained to the office of priest by Elders R. L. Morrison and Arvil L. Wilson. James Alvin Roden was ordained to the office of teacher by Elders James E. Renfroe and Arvil L. Wilson. A priesthood meeting was scheduled in January.—Reported by WILMA FRANCES NICKS

Babies Blessed

PORT HURON, MICHIGAN.—A service was held December 21 at the branch and the following babies were blessed: Janis Denise, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Delbert Maxwell, was blessed by her grandfather, Evangelist John R. Grice, assisted by Elder Harvey Grice; Daniel James, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Piacenza, was blessed by Evangelist John R. Grice, assisted by Elder Harvey Grice; and Judy Ann, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Clemens, was blessed by her grandfather, Elder Edward Dumas, assisted by Evangelist John R. Grice.—Reported by LEONA HANDS

Plan for Baptismal Font

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH.—Following an intensive missionary effort the following were baptized by Seventy James Everett on December 14: James Richard Montoya, Frances Jane Blake, Carol Ann Lewis, Mary Josephine Yeager, David Allen Welsh, and Beatrice Alma McDonald.

Elders Clarence Wallis, John Vigil, and James Everett confirmed the candidates at the Sunday evening services. Plans are being made for a baptismal font to be placed in the new chapel early in the spring. A good share of the funds have already been donated for construction. Cecil Lewis and Clarence Wallis will do the building.—Reported by BROOKSIE HOOD

Zion's League Organized

JACKSONVILLE, FLORIDA.—Mr. and Mrs. Hank Praeger moved to the group from Memphis, Tennessee. Mrs. Praeger is the daughter of the district president and Mr. Praeger is in the Navy. Mr. and Mrs. Ira Wyatt, formerly of Phoenix, Arizona, and their family have joined the group. Mr. and Mrs. Elbert Powell and their family have come from Pensacola. Brothers Wyatt and Powell are connected with the St. Regis Paper Mill. Duane Edwards from Egypt, Pennsylvania, has visited in the branch. He is in the Marine Corps.

The young people of the group have formed a Zion's League of fifteen members. Officers in the League are League director, Mrs. Pat Varner; teacher, Duane Edwards; president, Mrs. Hank Praeger; secretary-treasurer, Sarah Donaldson; and music director, Mrs. Wallace Cosan. Members of the League to date are Hank Praeger, Wallace Cosan, Mike Enge, Johnny Smith, Harvey Powell, Glenn Powell, Duane Edwards, Billy Edgar, Joan Enge, Faye Wyatt, Sarah, Mary, and June Donaldson, Margie Cosan, and Joan Praeger. On November 30, the League sponsored a group picnic after morning services and there were thirty-two young people present. They also presented a Christmas program.

On September 28, Elder J. A. Pray was in the city and preached at the evening service. On December 7, Brother and Sister Wirebaugh from Bradnor, Ohio, visited the group. Elder Wirebaugh gave the Communion remarks to a group of thirty-five. A piano has been purchased by the group.—Reported by LUCYANN M. ENGE

Branch Officers Elected

ROBERTSDALE, ALABAMA.—J. A. Pray, district president, was in charge of the business meeting held September 4. The following officers were elected: Aubrey Phillips, pastor; Norman Cunningham, church school supervisor; Helen Barnette, women's leader; George Kennard, church and church school secretary; H. M. Aebli, group solicitor; book steward, Sally Erlandson; finance committee, George Long, George Kennard, and Norman Cunningham; church secretary, Annie Mae Phillips.

The following teachers were also appointed and approved: adult, Aubrey Phillips; junior high, Annie Mae Phillips; and primary, Edna Kennard.

In October, Priest Aubrey Phillips requested that an elder be sent as acting pastor, under whose direction he would be glad to work. District President J. A. Pray presented Elder Raymond Booker to the group on November 23, explaining the request made by Brother Phillips, and Brother Booker was unanimously elected as pastor for the year 1953.

A good piano and lights for the church have been purchased during the year.

The women's group has earned money for various expenses and projects, taken two study courses, cheered the sick by visiting, and undertaken other projects for the needy.—Reported by ANNIE MAE PHILLIPS

Stake Women Raise Funds

DETROIT INTERNATIONAL STAKE.—The combined efforts of the women of the stake resulted in another successful carnival and bazaar. The proceeds of over $1,300 were put into the stake building fund. Each of the twenty-one congregations, comprising the stake, contributed in time, money, and merchandise. The next anticipated function for the stake is to be the Auditorium Fund Dinner on February 24, 1953, at the Piemontese Club, Puritan, Detroit. The stake women's leader is Mrs. Ena Slasor, 15751 Monte Vista, Detroit 21, Michigan.—Reported by MINNIE TRUDELL

Christmas Activities in Branch

POCATELLO, IDAHO.—On December 18 the women's group met at the home of Mrs. Sarelida Barnett for their Christmas party and lunch. After lunch, games were played; and before going home, gifts were exchanged. Guests were Evangelist J. F. Curtis from Spokane, and District President and Mrs. Harry S. Fry from Boise. On the evening of December 19 at the church, Warren and Elm Streets, Alameda (which adjoins Pocatello), the annual Christmas party was given by the young people of the church directed by Melba Rae Barnett, church school director, and Joy Garrard, music director. There were approximately eighty present and Santa Claus made his appearance with gifts for the little folks. On December 21, Elder Orval J. Baker, from Montpelier, some one hundred miles from Pocatello, delivered the Christmas sermon as the pastor, Priest Wayne Burgess, was ill in the hospital. Brother Burgess is now convalescing at home.

Elder A. A. Baker from Blackfoot and Priest Myron Montgomery from Pocatello held service in Blackfoot, December 21, at the home of Brother Baker. There were fifteen present.

The illness of Mrs. Emma Daniels, 700 West Center, Pocatello, Idaho, is again reported. She would appreciate a note from her many friends.—Reported by RUBY Y. BROWN

THE RIGHT TO GRIPE

Democracy cultivates criticism. Our schools teach us that there is nothing in our social relations above and beyond being criticized: This has proved a virtue in the scientific and material field, but it has made many of us hard to live with. "Our kids can't spell or add a column of figures," so we blame the school. Those in positions of public trust are "alarmingly dishonest and corrupt," so we blame politics. We pay for expensive gadgets with which to make weather predictions, only to get caught out with the wrong suit or hat. Our only recourse is the right to gripe. The prayer meetings, so we are told, are "not so spiritual," as they used to be and we haven't heard a "gospel sermon" for years.

Certainly we have a right to express our opinion. It's no fun to listen all the time; we want to express our feelings. Go ahead and gripe! Get it out of your system, you may feel better—and you may not. Most of the grippers I know seem to feel worse instead of better. Jesus declared, "All they that take the sword shall perish by the sword." The privilege of criticising comes at a price which the critic must pay: he gets so that he sees only the rotten apple in the tree. Gossiping and griping have a common denominator; they hurt the participant. Jesus put his finger on the sore spot, "With what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again."

WE BUILD

To each is given a kit of tools,
A lump of clay, and a book of rules.
And each must build, ere' life has flown,
A stumbling block, or a steppingstone.

NOTHING NEW

That there are really no brand-new ideas is a fact every psychologist knows. Creative thinking is just another name for finding new ideas—combinations. William James put it, "Get your mind whirling and see what happens."

Rudolf Flesch

THE PRAYING ART

Teach me to pray, O Lord—
Not for myself, but for the hoards
Of suffering humanity
Who have no homes, no friends but thee;
Whose hearts are torn by pain and grief;
Who do not know prayer brings relief;
Whose only thought both day and night
Is to relieve their painful plight.

Teach me to pray, O Lord,
With wisdom and with sweet accord.
I would not ask for praise from others,
It is enough to help my brothers.
Just give me health and joy of living,
For we receive while we are giving.
Just let me say, as did thy Son,
"Not my will, Lord, but thine be done."

We'd Like You to Know . . .

Evan A. Fry

TO MANY HUNDREDS and perhaps thousands of people the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints means Evan Fry. He's preached funeral sermons, performed weddings, and in every way ministered to not only Saints but people whose only contact with religion is what they hear over the radio. Many have loved him and his message over the years.

Recently the General Church signed a contract with KMBC in Kansas City and, since January 4 of this year, every Sunday morning from 8:30 to 9:00 radio listeners of the area have been able to hear a doctrinal sermon with a missionary slant. These sermons are prepared by Brother Fry.

Officially he divides his time half and half between the radio department and the department of priesthood education of the General Church. He has been preparing a course on conducting prayer meetings, in addition to working on Melchisedec priesthood material, which is typical of the type of service he is constantly giving to the church. The current Pastor's Handbook is his work. There will soon be published a book of his radio sermons which have won for him the appreciation of radio listeners who have listened to him through the years.

He's a man of many hobbies, one of which is music. The compilation of the present Saints' Hymnal is largely his work.

Another hobby is his study of the language of revelation and the language of the prophet. Those who were at the Doctrine and Covenants Institute remember that he presented three lectures on the subject, bringing to light some interesting facts about words and phrases used in the Doctrine and Covenants.

Evan Fry was born at Tabor, Iowa, on November 8, 1902. His father, Charles Fry, is a man who also has given much in service to the church. He was graduated from William Chrisman High School in Independence in 1920, and from Kansas City Junior College in 1922. From 1923 to 1925 he took a teacher's training course at Graceland. In 1926 he received his B.A. degree from the University of Kansas. He married Dorothy Eden in 1932. They have three girls: Celia Louise, a freshman at Graceland College; Margaret Ann, in her first year of junior high; and Evelyn Ruth, in the third grade.

Brother Fry was employed by radio stations at Kansas City, Kansas, and Wichita, Kansas, from 1930 to June, 1940, and since then has been under appointment. He was ordained an elder in 1930 and a high priest in 1936. He has served as pastor of the Grandview, Kansas, congregation and has been a member of the Kansas City Stake High Council. He is also a member of Rotary International and the YMCA.

As a teacher and preacher he is much in demand. He limits his preaching engagements to Sunday evenings, because he sings with the Stone Church Choir on Sunday mornings and teaches YKT class (By their works "You'll Know Them") at the Stone Church. Last summer, reunions throughout the church used Sources of Spiritual Power, material prepared by Brother Fry.

What's Right With Religion?

"Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father . . ."

—James 1: 27

IT IS EASY to find fault with religion. Many people do it without thinking at all. To be sure, fault-finding of any kind is easy, popular, and cheap. Only the greater souls know how to appreciate. While the inferior man is grumbling about his food, the superior one is thanking God for the privileges and opportunities of life. Discontent is a little door through which small souls may pass without touching at any side.

An "inquiring reporter" was sent out to get answers to the question: "What's wrong with most sermons?" This is a negative approach, and one wonders how much the replies would be worth. The presumption that there is something wrong with sermons is characteristic of our times. In past years the presumption was that something was wrong with the sinners who should be listening to the sermons. Probably the sermons are not as good as they ought to be; but then, neither are the people.

That question is only a subdivision of older ones that have provoked endless argument and disagreement in the world: "What's wrong with the churches?" and "What's wrong with religion?"

This thought makes it appear that the whole negative approach is incomplete. In all fairness, shouldn't we ask, "What's right with religion?" In every human situation there are two parts to the account—the debits and the credits, the red and the black. Don't add up the liabilities of religion unless you also plan to add up its assets.

AN OLD STORY is recalled by memory. An atheist editor had hired a young man as reporter for his paper. One morning there was nothing to do—no news at all. The town was at a standstill. There were no fires, accidents, births, deaths, or divoices. The reporter was waiting for orders. A sardonic mood struck the editor and, without looking up from the exchange he was reading, he growled, "Go out and interview the Devil. Ask him to make a statement about God."

Where the young man went or what he did was not recorded. But he had been sent out for a story, and he brought one back. The statement, attributed truly or falsely to his Satanic Majesty, was an astute document of implication and attribution. It took an exceedingly dim view of all divinity. While it contained nothing libelous, there was a minimizing of great things and an exaggeration of small ones, inversions of truth and distortions of fact, such as could come only from the perverse imagination of that maimed and malignant spirit. When it was printed, those who understood it were amused, and those who did not were shocked.

Well, that's the story, for whatever it may be worth. The moral is that if you want the truth about a person—even the Supreme Person—don't go to his enemies. You will have a better chance to learn the truth from his friends. With all their limitations and failures, God's friends will at least be sincere in trying to tell you the truth about him.

You may wish to compose your own answer to that one. In case you need help, here are a few suggestions. Religion, functioning through the church, renders a unique service. It has no competitor. There are forces that come into conflict with it, but nothing that offers real competition. Alone among all the great social and spiritual forces of the world, religion is concerned with the soul and seeks its eternal welfare.

The merchants of your town are concerned with your body, your physical existence. The hospital is concerned with your health. The schools and the university are concerned with your mind. The politicians are concerned with your vote. When you die, a few years from now more or less, you will lose all of these things. Only your religion is concerned with your eternal welfare.

Religion brings us into association and co-operation with people who want to be good and do good in the world. They may have faults, but their purposes are right.

Religion provides a viewpoint and a means for relating us to the great universe and to the Creator of it and of ourselves. Our lives are temporary, ephemeral. All our works will perish soon or late unless we identify ourselves with something that endures. Religion is our point of contact with eternity.

This is not merely a way of making excuses for religion and the churches. You will find bungling inefficiency, corruption, dishonesty, stupidity, and all the rest in business, government, and in every human institution, as well as in the churches. The church is not free of these faults because its members are the same human beings that operate in other departments of life. But, considering all things, the record of the church is good—as good as it can possibly be under the circumstances and with the personnel that serve it.

It would not be possible, here and in this amount of space, to list all of the things that are right with religion and the church. What has God done for you? What has the church done for you? Make your own list, and be honest about it. You may find a few things wrong, but you will find many things right. And remember—without hope for the soul, this would be a dead and empty life.

Institute in Evangelism

As previously announced to the church at the General Conference of 1952, we are calling your attention to the Institute in Evangelism which will be held in Independence, Missouri, April 12-17, 1953. This is open to all members of the Melchisedec priesthood, with particular emphasis placed on the presiding officers of missions, branches, districts, and stakes. We urge you to keep this date in mind in planning the allocation of your time.

THE FIRST PRESIDENCY

Suggestions for Scout Sunday

The suspension of junior church services in favor of the regular morning worship services is encouraged on Sunday, February 8, in those congregations and branches which observe Boy Scout Sunday on that day. Cubs and Scouts are encouraged to attend church with their families; and ministry is expected to be directed toward the youth.

Canadian Agency

Herald House is happy to announce the official opening of a division of the church publishing house in Canada, effective Monday, February 16, 1953. The agency, which will be known as Herald House Division of the Church in Canada, will be located in Guelph, Ontario, and will be under the supervision of Bishop L. W. Kohlman. Miss Jeanette Young, who is moving to Guelph from New Liskeard, Ontario, will be office secretary and will have charge of the Herald House order department.

The establishment of this Herald House Agency in Canada will make it possible for Canadian Saints, including book stewards, to order all church literature and supplies (this includes everything offered for sale by Herald House in Independence) direct from Guelph without the inconvenience of clearing parcels through customs or of figuring exchange.

Current catalog prices will continue to prevail in all of Canada, and book stewards will continue to operate the same as in the past except that orders and payments will be sent to the Guelph office. However, charges made at the Independence office prior to February 16 should be paid at this office.

Effective immediately all orders and inquiries originating in any province of Canada should be sent to:

Herald House Division

Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints (Canada)

Box 382

Guelph, Ontario

We commend the services of this new division to all Canadian Saints and feel certain that it will make possible an improved ministry of literature throughout Canada.

THE FIRST PRESIDENCY

A letter from Melvin Russell tells us of a practice carried on in the Flint, Michigan, Branch of sending the Saints' Herald to all the men in the Armed Services. Brother Russell writes:

We mail to each boy in the service each week the current issue of the Saints' Herald. Usually we insert the current Sunday bulletin for the church here too. Also we have a committee assigned to edit and mail out a monthly newsletter to these servicemen and women. We have not sent letters every month, but we send them almost that often.

Many letters come back from these people. All we hear from say that they read every word in the Herald. This is something they seldom did when they were at home. Then, when they come home on leave, they always come to church. These people are very appreciative for what the church back home is doing for them.

Enclosed is a letter received from one of these men. We had this letter mimeographed and distributed along with the bulletin at church last Sunday. It is a typical one and reflects the attitude of our men and women who are serving their country far from home.

We didn't have a white Christmas over here; in fact, it was more like spring. I was privileged to spend the day with our missionary, Elder Louis Zonker, and his family in Hannover. The new mission headquarters building here was completed last summer and is very nice. It has a beautiful church auditorium on the first floor, classrooms in the basement, the Zonker's apartment on the second floor, and living quarters for another missionary family on the third floor. I heard my first sermon preached in German Christmas morning. Of course I didn't understand much of it, but I felt the good spirit present. This same spirit surpassed the language barrier as I shook hands with the German members after the service; we knew that we were brothers in the great work of building Christ's kingdom on earth.

It really touches me to see what these people have accomplished when they have so little to work with. Here in the rubble of their cities where many of their loved ones have died they are going ahead and spreading the gospel. We now have two native German missionaries; I went with Elder Zonker to visit one who is in Hamburg. He is a fine person, and Brother Zonker tells me he is doing a good job. The other missionary is in the Russian Zone and has a pretty hard time. There the Saints are allowed to meet in groups in only a couple of places, and some can meet only a few at a time in homes. The humility and sincerity of these people have really impressed me.

There are many needs here—the biggest one is for church literature in German. So far the only hymnals are songs typed out in temporary booklets. There is almost no church school material, but more will be translated as the money becomes available. I was ashamed of myself when I saw how much these people have done with so little. I wish other members could have the same eye-opening experiences I have had here.

The Herald comes pretty regularly, and it really helps a lot.

Who Will Bring Forth the Kingdom?

A sermon preached on the Campus, July 27, 1952

By Apostle Reed M. Holmes

From a wire recording by Elmer Hart

Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ which according to his abundant mercy hath begotten us again unto a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead.

HOW LONG WILL IT LAST? It's a common question and may refer to a lollipop, a rubber tire, a light bulb, or a marriage. And we ask it about life itself. How long will life last?

Does death end life? Through the years men have asked the question, "If a man die, will he live again?" This question rightfully concerns us. Perhaps it should disturb us a bit, but most folks avoid it, except deep down inside and in moments when loved ones are laid to rest.

Our questions vary from a child's query about a run-over puppy to the lover's question about seeing his betrothed so wretchedly snatched from him. Perhaps it is the anticipation of loneliness as well as the sense of mystery which makes us want to cry inside.

He who had the greatest assurance of immortality was strangely indefinite and even silent on some of our questions. We ask, "If there is a life on the other side of what we call death, what will it be like? Where are we going to spend eternity? What kind of bodies, if any, shall we have? How shall we, in eternity, spend our time?"

Jesus said simply, "Let not your hearts be troubled; ye believe in God, believe also in me. In my Father's house are many mansions [rooms]."

Perhaps that is all we really need to know. This present life is one room in the Father's house. The life beyond is another room, or rooms, in the same house. We do not need to know the precise location of the room, or what it looks like, or the kind of furniture it will contain. We do need to know that it is part of the Father's house, and his love and care are in control.

WE DO NEED TO KNOW that life endures, and that death cannot separate us from the love of Christ. He showed us that in his own experience. Death, even his death, did not separate the disciples from him. Rather, death brought them closer than ever before. No wonder they were fearless as they went forth. They were empowered with knowledge of the Resurrection. Changes were wrought in them in consequence of their knowledge that Jesus had risen from the dead. They had seen the risen Lord. The Old Testament question, "If a man dies, shall he live again?" had found answer in the continuing life of Jesus of Nazareth. His previous conversations and the portentous words following Easter gave the disciples assurance of their own immortality.

It is fairly easy to see the effect of this conviction of the Resurrection upon Peter, John, Stephen, and Paul. Peter, who had feared a maid's accusation, now spoke with courage within hearing of the Pharisees. John, who had left his cloak on the tip of a soldier's spear, now was the brave exponent of the Master in the midst of Jerusalem.

Stephen has the distinction of being the first follower of Jesus to be martyred. Some still would say he only entered the portals of death, but Stephen knew he was entering into life eternal. Filled with the promises and hopes of the gospel, on fire with the new knowledge of the Resurrection and believing that Jesus possessed all power both in heaven and in earth, Stephen went forth to bear his testimony.

Stephen could have kept his mouth shut. Many wished he would, and if he had, he might have lived longer. Or would he? In point of days, yes. In our memories, no—even that kind of immortality would have been denied Stephen. Some feel that such is enough, that all immortality consists of is the perpetuation of a man's deeds down through the memory of mankind. If Stephen had chosen to be silent about his faith—as so many are—even the immortality the world provides would have been lost to him.

BUT STEPHEN opened his mouth. He criticized the men who had slain his Master. He identified the Galilean as the Christ, the Son of the living God. So he shared the Galilean's reputation for blasphemy and was stoned. As at Calvary, God was waiting in the shadows to claim his own. Stephen was no coward. His faith was stronger than fear had been. Stephen had courage to live by—and courage to die by.

Those who "rushed together upon him" had left their garments at the feet of a young man named Saul who "was consenting to his death."

Before we consider Saul let us stamp indelibly in our minds that Stephen's course of action was determined by his conviction—his great faith in the Resurrection. It is the nature of flesh to recoil from pain.

It was courage of soul that strengthened Stephen. His life was a vibrant testimony of his profound belief. As Stephen spoke and presented his body a living sacrifice, the kingdom of heaven was at hand. It was in view. It was in reach. It was present in Stephen himself, not so much a product as it was a result in his own life.

But some will find no consolation in Stephen. They prefer to live solely for the present even if that means denial of Christian values. They say, "What did it get Stephen but a stone in the back?" "What did he get out of it?" There is a typical godless question of our day—as if the only measure of value is getting. What Stephen gained was the kingdom of God.

LET US LOOK at Saul who consented to the stoning of Stephen. Before the experience on the road to Damascus Saul of Tarsus was not lacking convictions. He held them strongly, too. He was a man of deep conviction, but as right as he seemed to be to himself and by the standards of his day, he was wrong.

It's a common fault with us to know too many things that aren't so. Worse still, we fight to uphold the errors we feel to be the truth. So it was with Paul. But Paul from Damascus on was changed. Something new was added—conviction concerning Jesus and his resurrection. He had felt it blasphemy that these followers of Jesus should come into the sanctuary of the chosen and there declare that this humble carpenter of Nazareth was in very deed the Son of God. These religionists who were so careful even with the uttering of the name of God shuddered and then raged at the claim that this lowly Galilean was the Messiah.

Saul had eagerly punished the Christians for bearing this blasphemous testimony. But all that had changed. The blasphemy had become truth, and Saul of Tarsus became Paul the Apostle. "Forgetting those things which are behind I press toward the mark of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus."

Paul's way of life, his persistence and courage, grew out of his strong conviction concerning the resurrection of Jesus. And once again, because this conviction was allowed to be uppermost in the life of a man—to shape his deeds and his destiny—the kingdom of heaven was again at hand.

The kingdom was made a contemporary experience. Paul not only produced the kingdom, he was the kingdom. We are not alone to produce the kingdom as something made with hands. It is made of human stuff transformed by the Spirit of God and the power of the resurrection. It is a result in us more than a product by us. It is made of us. It is born within us as we are convinced of the nature of Jesus and bear the testimony of his deity in our hearts and the deeds of the flesh.

PAUL'S CONVICTION conditioned his whole life. So it is with us, always. The way we live, the way we vote, and the way we treat our neighbors reveal the convictions we hold uppermost in our lives. We may say with emotion and seeming sincerity in prayer and testimony service that we have certain convictions, but if in the course of everyday life we do not live by what we have professed, it is not really our conviction at all. It is an exercise of the mind—a copying of another's words. Our lives are the direct reflection of those convictions we hold to be of importance to us. As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he.

Of direct significance for kingdom-building is the realization that Paul's principles of social relationships derived from his incomparable assurance of eternal life. His moral teaching is the outgrowth of his eschatology. What he believed about future and final things conditioned his teachings concerning man's relationship to other men.

It is no accident that Paul's great passage on the resurrection is contained in the same letter as his reflection on the meaning of love. Consider these excerpts from the first Corinthian letter. They are not in direct sequence, but their relation to each other is unmistakable.

I delivered unto you first of all that which I also received how that Christ died for our sins according to our Scriptures, and that he was buried, and that he arose again the third day, according to the Scriptures, and was seen.

If Christ be preached that he rose from the dead how say some among you that there is no resurrection of the dead?

On he bears his testimony until we come to the very familiar words of hope:

For this corruptible must put on incorruption: This mortal must put on immortality. So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory. O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory? The sting of death is sin; and the strength of sin is the law. But thanks be to God, which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ.

This is the heart of the teaching of Paul, and we see it inseparably connected with his teachings in regard to human conduct and relationships. The following goes hand in hand with the passages on immortality:

Do you not know that the unrighteous will not inherit the kingdom of God? Do not be deceived. Neither the immoral, nor the idolators, nor adulterers, nor homosexuals, nor thieves, nor the greedy, nor drunkards, nor revilers, nor robbers will inherit the kingdom of God, and such were some of you, but you were washed; you were consecrated, you were justified in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ and in the Spirit of our God.

Equally close to the passages on immortality, and the earthly expression of that tremendous conviction, is the sublime passage on love.

Love is patient and kind; love is not jealous or boastful; it is not arrogant or rude. Love does not insist on its own way; it is not irritable or resentful; it does not rejoice at wrong, but rejoices in the right. Love bears all things, believes all things, hopes all things, endures all things. Love never ends (Revised Standard Version).

The last phrase gives us the assurance that love is the essence of eternal life, and the previous phrases characterize the expression of everlasting love in the here and now.

BECAUSE WE SHALL LIVE forever we must live now in the light of eternity. We cannot believe the Christian view of immortality without its affecting our everyday life, and it is in the process of affecting our everyday life that the kingdom of God is produced. Who will bring forth the kingdom? They who share Jesus' conviction of immortality and eternal life. At any point in time and eternity the kingdom of God is, in fact, the contemporary expression of eternal life. There may be but one, or there may be many; but in the one or the many the kingdom is present; it is at hand.

We are shaped by our convictions. Nevin Harner has expressed this very well in his book, I Believe, pages 83, 84 (used by permission of the Christian Education Press).

Imagine a man completely wrapped up in himself. All he can think about is himself, his aches and pains, his petty successes, the impression he is making on other people. The doors of his life to fellowship with other people and with God are closed. He has nothing big and interesting to live for. A man wrapped up in himself, as a church bulletin board once said, makes a pretty small package; and he gets smaller and smaller as the years go on. He is unhappy now, and he will become more and more unhappy. He is in hell now; and his life will become more hellish during the remainder of his days on this earth, and during the eternity beyond (unless he changes somewhere along the line).

Imagine also a man living only for his body. The things that make life worth while to him are steak dinners and cocktails. But as he grows older, his body wears out. He can't eat so many steak dinners, nor drink so many cocktails. And all he gets from them is indigestion and inflammation of the liver. He is following a blind alley, leading nowhere. And what will it be like when he wakes up some morning without this body? Nothing to live for! Nothing to give life meaning! If that isn't hell, what is it? We begin to see the truth of the penetrating statement that the problem of heaven is how to be happy without a stomach.

Imagine now another man of a different sort. He may live on the same block as these others, speak the same language, wear the same kind of clothes. But this man is not overly concerned about himself. He is interested in his family and his neighbors. He thinks a good deal about underprivileged groups in this country, and people in dire need on other continents. He takes an active part in his church and the affairs of his community. He "gets a kick" out of his job. The doors of his soul are open to God, who becomes more and more real to him as the years pass. He takes proper care of his body, but he doesn't depend too much on the pleasure it can give him. Instead, he derives real satisfaction from good literature, art, and music. Such a man is quite happy now. He will be happier at seventy than he is at forty. And when he is called upon to lay aside this body, he can keep right on going with increasing happiness; for he has built his life on the joys of the spirit rather than the satisfactions of the body. In other words, he is, and will be, in heaven.

WHAT'S THE DIFFERENCE in these three? Essentially, the difference is in what they believe about God, in what they believe about the nature of man, and in what they believe about the worth and endurance of their own souls.

We say we want the kingdom. We pray for it. The kingdom can be. If we are truly convinced of immortality and eternal life our lives will reflect it, and the kingdom shall be "at hand." The kingdom is produced by those of deep and abiding convictions concerning the work and glory of God.

"This is my work and my glory to bring to pass the immortality and eternal life of man." Isn't that wonderful! We have the assurance that life goes on, and with significance! We cannot adequately define it. It is impossible for us to describe it, for we are yet earthbound. But we know, primarily because of Jesus, that there is immortality and eternal life. We may have eternity to fulfill the dreams which time keeps snatching from us. The mysteries which make our souls ache now shall become our knowledge in the tomorrow that has no dawn nor dusk.

The kingdom of God is to be compounded of those who live by this great conviction. Not by hocus-pocus, nor by some cheap sleight of hand, but as the natural consequence of the Word being expressed in life—thus shall the kingdom of God be realized on earth.

For so many today, life is but a fleeting instant in an eternal mystery, a series of pleasantries to be enjoyed before they fade away, liberally sprinkled with unpleasantries to take the joy out of life. These will not know the kingdom, for they are not in themselves the kingdom. Their only measure of worth is their physical senses, and these are numbed by overindulgence. Their destiny is hell, and they will not have to wait for it.

WHO SHALL ACHIEVE the kingdom? They who live by the truth. They who recognize the imperishable nature of personality and so live that immortality is for them a blessing instead of a curse. It is not so important to be immortal as it is to inherit eternal life. Eternal life is a kind of life—the kind of life we see in a Stephen of yesteryear or an Elbert A. Smith of today. Eternal life is a life based on enduring values. It is to deliberately choose the lasting rather than the fleeting pleasure. It is to place faith in God whose loving care is our best guarantee of life after death.

Who shall produce the kingdom? They who value what God values. They who accept his purposes as their own. We cannot hope to achieve the kingdom by holding tenaciously to picayunish convictions that leave no room for sharing God's convictions.

We shall burst these earthly fetters. Death shall be seen as release. Eternal life shall be seen as fulfillment. Those who do not believe this will not produce the kingdom—nor shall they see it. They won't be bothered until it is too late.

Those who truly believe in immortality and eternal life shall bring forth the kingdom of God even upon this earth.

ENGLAND

AS OUR SAILING date gave opportunity for a stop at Montreal, it was our good pleasure to see something of that great city.

It being Apostle Mesley's field, he joined me at Ottawa. On Tuesday came Bishop Livingston, Elder Don Lents, his wife Helen, and their children, Pamela and Don, Jr. On Wednesday all of us took a special train for Quebec. Our train pulled alongside the "Franconia," and at 5 p.m. we were on our way.

All of us enjoyed an evening at Montreal when we were taken to the home of Elder John M. McDonald for a visit with his family and others, including a young Sister Fisher from Saskatchewan, and Don Swain of Sydney, Australia, son of Brother and Sister Walter Swain of that faraway city.

Brother McDonald, employed by a large oil company, recently came from Petrolia, Ontario, and is shepherding our few members in that large metropolis.

Since visiting England last summer, I have had a desire to read what my father, the late President Joseph Smith, wrote for publication in the Herald about his experiences there. He, in company with Elder R. C. Evans, his counselor at the time, and William Newton, left New York on a ship by that name, arriving seven days later at the port of Southampton.

Soon after his arrival he mailed his first installment of experience under the heading, "Senior Editor Abroad." In his first paragraph, he wrote:

World's great metropolis, London. . . . Here a small band of Saints, having a little church in an obscure street, . . . is striving to maintain the cause of a risen Redeemer under conditions most discouraging, in charge of Elder J. W. Worth, a man of the people who devotes as much of his time as practicable to the duties of his office.

That was a half century ago, and when Bishop Livingston, Elder Don Lents and family, and I left the "Franconia" at Liverpool on June 19, there among others of the Saints to welcome us was this same John W. Worth, one of the greatest of men in soul and spirit, now a patriarch of the church, still the same in devotion to "the cause of the risen Redeemer."

WHEN LAST I indited my travels, as I recall them, we were on the Cunard liner in mid-Atlantic. We enjoyed the new experience of ocean travel with its round of meals and "teas," orchestra recitals (enjoyed most by Brethren Lents and Livingston) and deck recreational amusements. Yet we chafed a little as the days slowly passed, being anxious to arrive and meet the Saints and prosecute our mission among them.

The "Franconia," after a cool, uneventful sailing, docked at 1:30 p.m. Thursday, the nineteenth, and as we are being "warped" in to the pier, among the hundreds of faces awaiting us we caught sight of Apostle A. A. Oakman; Patriarch Worth and his son "Tom," church appointee; William Baty; John H. and Ann Coggan; Eric Rowe, appointee; Fred Schofield, and others. After customs the Lenteses were driven to Nuneaton by the Coggans and Schofields, while Bishop Livingston and I were taken to Manchester in one of the cars belonging to Brother Arthur Mayne. At Manchester Henry and I were separated; he went to Brother Rowe's, 611 Manchester Road in Denton, and I to the very hospitable home of Brother and Sister Arthur Mayne, 15 Victoria Grove, Heaton Chapel, Stockton.

Brother Mayne operates certain bus lines, is secretary of the Manchester District, and his wife Olive is his able assistant. They have two fine young children, Andrew and Stephen, who, like their biblical and apostolic namesakes, will mature to be able and good men I believe.

As at Auckland, where Brother Mark Siegfried and I arrived in the closing days of the winter "down under," I went to the Northern District with a Panama hat. The days there were mostly rainy and damp, and after running the gauntlet of public gaze for a day or two and coming to the conclusion that wearing such summer headgear made me conspicuous—I must have been the only man in town wearing a "straw"—I bought a serviceable and pretty good-looking (so I was told) cloth hat which I wore throughout the summer to Norway and other places on the Continent, leaving my Panama for safekeeping at the Coggan home in Nuneaton where it awaited the day of our departure for New York.

When I witness the numerous editorial accounts which my father made of his visit to England, I cannot escape the conclusion that he either saw more or learned more—or at least retained more of what he saw and heard—than I, for I find he had the devotion and energy to relate something of the history and expanded in description of the places visited. Naturally, since he was mostly English by ancestry, he must have felt he was in a sense "at home" in England.

I too had a feeling while there that I was sojourning among my cousins or "blood relations," and of course my feelings toward the Saints were still "closer."

IN TELLING of his Manchester visit, father wrote:

Manchester is the strongest place in England for the work of the Reorganization; besides the branches already named it includes within its district Stockport, Warrington, Wigan, and Farnworth, and, until recently, the city of Leeds. The district was presided over for many years by Elder Joseph Dewsnap, Sr., whose influence and ability have done much to establish the work on a solid basis, assisted very faithfully by noble men and women, some of whom have passed away. For a few years, however, the district has been sustained under the presidency of Henry Greenwood, supported by Brother George Baty as vice-president and Thomas Brian as secretary.

I met Thomas Brian, mentioned in the foregoing, while in Manchester. Being quite aged, he was unable to attend services. Sister Olive Mayne, wife of Brother Arthur Mayne, is the granddaughter of Brother Brian.

Father added:

The weather during our stay in Manchester was not inviting, but was dull, damp, and often very wet. We understand, however, that Manchester is notorious for wet weather.

Also—which I quote for the benefit of our English Saints:

Sunday the 17th was to be a "red letter day"; all the branches were to close the several halls and meet en masse at the Co-operative Hall, Ardwick. The Sunday-school banner was to be unveiled and a procession headed by a band and the banner was to parade the streets in the immediate vicinity of the hall. It was with apprehension and anxiety that the weather was criticized on Sunday morning, but it rained. Hopes were dashed down and disappointment seemed imminent. We set out for the hall and despite the gloomy prospect and the rain, a good company had braved the inclement weather. We greeted many Saints from Manchester: Brother and Sister Rudd, Sister Daeley, and Sister Howden, of Leeds; Brother Bennett, a veteran of the work from Birkenhead, Liverpool; Brother and Sister George Baty, Stockport; Brothers Spargo and Hankin, of Wigan; Brother Hassall of Farnworth.

OUR VISIT to Manchester was timed so that we would be there for the conference of the Northern District to be held at Wigan on June 21 and 22, an occasion which I am sure was enjoyed by Brother Oakman (Apostle in charge of the European Mission) and Bishop Livingston of the Presiding Bishopric. Brother Livingston proved to be a fine traveling companion, affable, and always cheerful, who also proved his capacity as a defender of the faith and a good teacher. I too enjoyed the conference, my burden having been lightened through the thoughtful planning of Brother Oakman; this I greatly appreciated.

On Saturday evening, June 21, a "reception" banquet was held at the Wigan Branch in honor of the visiting church officials. The program was more or less informal; all of us had a part, and we met a wholesome group of Saints who are firm in the faith. Rain and fog and adverse weather conditions fade from memory, but pleasant association with Saints is cherished and preserved in memory.

Our missionary, Eric Rowe, is district president and presides with poise and ability. The business of the conference was dispatched without difficulty.

Elder William Entwistle is pastor of the Wigan Branch. Brother Entwistle and family visited the General Conference of 1950. We recall well the two Entwistle boys; but Conference delegates would hardly recognize them now, they have grown so much meantime.

The conference program carried a number of songs, some of which were sung to music not shown in our present hymnal (Welsh or Old English) and Brother Oakman handed me a note since the Wigan conference:

One of the features of the conference was the splendid congregational singing. There were four tunes which are not commonly used in America. No. 5 is known of there.

1. Silver Hill. This was used for Hymn 27.
2. Lloyd. Used for Hymn 125.
3. Rimington. Used also for 27.
4. Diadem. Used for 33.
5. Cwm Rhonnda. Used for 175.

All these tunes are excellent, and as you heard them sung by an ordinary congregation of untrained voices, you can imagine how they would sound sung by a large trained choir.

I believe Brother Oakman, who is a member of the hymnal committee, has told me some of these old (new to many) tunes will be included in the new hymnal.

The Saints sang freely and well and seemed to gather additional fervor from the use of the old tunes. Every place we met in England some of these tunes were used in our devotions. I have been stimulated to greater interest in what the hymnal committee has prepared for us.

The conference sessions at Wigan included priesthood and fellowship services, and preaching by Bishop Livingston and myself. Brother Oakman presided over the prayer services, and Elder James Schofield, who planned to remove to America soon, had charge of the singing, both choir and congregational.

My notes are not too helpful, but I recall songs by Sister Olive Mayne; Sister Joyce Taylor, daughter of John Taylor, pastor at Leeds; and Sister A. Wright of Wigan.

This conference was also attended by Patriarch John W. Worth of London, and Bishop A. T. Trapp, of Gloucester. Sister Trapp, whom we so well remember in America, was ill and unable to attend.

As I reach this point in my reminiscences, I pause to add a note of sadness. Just a few days ago, word reached us that Elder Fred Schofield of Birmingham—who with his brother Franklyn, pastor of the Enfield Branch, visited our General Conference last April, making the journey by air—was recently called in death almost without warning or previous illness. Our hearts go out to his family, to Franklyn, and to their mother who is "of the home" of this good brother.

A Valuable Gift

Brother J. W. A. Bailey, a missionary for the church for many years, has presented to the Research Library of the church many rare and valuable books and manuscripts which comprised his own personal library. These books have been acquired by Brother Bailey during the years of his extensive research and study. We appreciate this gift, for it will enrich the amount of source material available to students of the church.

We thank Brother Bailey and assure him that this valuable collection will be well preserved.

A Box From Home

On December 23 Brother and Sister Burton arrived, and we received a box from home folks. They had tried to send some things that didn't stand the rough handling the box received; some of it had spilled on the dry goods and was not in very good condition. We were glad to see the Burtons, and Hubert felt relieved of responsibility, as Brother Burton was sent as missionary in charge.

We felt when our box from home came that it was a real mahana oaoa (day of rejoicing). We had some fruit from home—mostly dried, but very good—some preserved, and some jelly. It had been a long time since we had tasted things like that.

A New Church

We were both very busy during the month of December. We continued the Sabbath school Sister Devore had instituted, and held a celebration. I had had a lot of work because of it, and a young woman came and offered to help me. She did our washing, ironing, and watched the baby who played around sometimes by herself and sometimes with other children. She had her first birthday on December 17. We held the picnic (if such you could call it) on Christmas Day. It lasted all day, and I was exhausted at the end of the picnic. I was very glad I never had to do it again. This woman stayed with us for about a year, going with us from island to island.

There was quite a lot of trouble about the location for the new church. Finally someone donated a lot, and work began immediately. It went up like magic and was soon ready for use. The natives would go out and dive in the morning, come in and eat, sleep two hours or so, and then come to work on the church. Of course it was unfinished inside, but it was roomy and much more comfortable than the makeshift tent we had been using. The church was dedicated January 24, 1897. Hubert had worked so hard that he was physically tired out, but he was able to preach the dedicatory sermon. When the excitement of the new church had abated, we prepared to go to Papeete. After some delays we got a chance to go. At the last minute the Burtons decided they would go too as far as Kaukuru where the April conference was to be held. They went ashore there, and we went on to Tahiti.

There was some business connected with divorce that Hubert had to see a lawyer about. The natives had been making a law of their own, and something had to be done. As soon as we were at home in the mission house, our good friends Mrs. Henry and Mrs. Goodwin called. They were always very friendly. They were of the London Missionary Society too, but not like the minister at Rarotonga. We were not in Papeete very long as we wanted to get back to the conference. We had quite a hard time getting passage on a ship, probably because of the baby. It was the first and only time we had to pay for passage. Hubert had to borrow the money from one of the merchants whom we knew fairly well, but we had a good place to sleep and enough to eat on the trip. With a favorable wind, we landed soon after the vessel left the harbor.

It was very near to conference time when we reached Kaukura. Many people were already there. Here we met again old Brother Hawkins, who had come the long distance from Tubuoi, where the gospel was first preached in the islands. After visiting with him, Hubert had the following vision (expressed in his own words):

Vision of Visit by Three Nephites

I seemed to be in a church about forty feet square. I walked in at a door in the corner of the church, and after taking a few steps, I saw a man sitting in a high pulpit, about six feet off the floor. He was one of our old-time missionaries, Brother Hawkins. I later got to know him quite well. While speaking to him, I heard someone coming in at the door. I looked and saw a large man walking up the aisle. He was very well dressed and had iron-gray hair and whiskers. There was something unusual and wonderful about him. He came up on my right side and laid his arm across my shoulders. Brother Hawkins said, "Brother Case, do you know who that is?"

I said, "No, I don't." Then he told me that the man was one of the Three Nephites who were to tarry. About that time a second man came in, walked to my left side, and put his arm across my shoulders.

I asked, "What does this mean?"

Brother Hawkins said, "That is another of the Three Nephites."

Immediately at another door, the third one came in. He came and stood in front of us. If ever one looked into the faces of men of God, I certainly did when I looked into their faces. This third man said to me, "We came to give you a message. Do you see that light on the wall? We have come to tell you concerning your life's work. God will make of you a bright light, much brighter than the light on the wall over there."

I stood thrilled from head to foot; it seemed to me like I had thought heaven to be. I did not say much to them, I was so completely surprised by their appearing and talking with me. They all talked—first one, then another—telling me of my life's work. It seemed after they had gone that they had been there only a few minutes. Time was nothing. It might have been longer than it seemed. They were the best-dressed, best-groomed men I have ever seen.

Conference at Kaukura

I soon was visited by the sister who had taken care of the baby on Hikueru. Her name was Tenaki. She took almost entire care of the baby throughout the conference. I was chosen secretary and was as busy as any of the rest for the duration of the conference. The Sunday school meetings followed after conference was over. I had to continue as superintendent and worked hard all the year writing the books of questions and answers which Brother and Sister Devore had made.

A Triple Wedding

We left Kaukura for Arutua on April 24. It is a small island not far from where we started. All the inhabitants there were church members. This was a brief breathing space to get letters written and rest among friends. When we left, it was for the near-by island of Apataki. We went in Tapu's boat. The trip took about twelve hours. We landed in Apataki on May 6, 1897. On the next Sunday, Hubert married three couples—a triple wedding—the only one in his history. We attended the wedding feast.

On May 12 we left on the "Hitinui." At Niau we went ashore, but did not stay, except for a few hours. Next stop was Fakarava much farther east. While there, Hubert ordained one elder and baptized four people. He preached four times. We received our mail there on May 20. The next day we sailed to Takaroa for a four-day visit at that island. On the twenty-seventh we called at Marutea, but did not go ashore. The following day we landed at Hikueru, where we picked up our mail and some boxes of belongings which Brother Burton had sent. We left Hikueru May 31 and landed in Raroia, which is the farthest east of any of the Tuamotu Islands. It has lately received much attention in Kon-Tiki. We read this book, wondering at the description of the reception given those men by the people of Raroia. There was certainly no person when we were there that dimly resembled a hula dancer and never did we see or hear of meetings such as those which were described in the book. However fifty years is a long time and people change. This was the only island we visited that was vexed with mosquitoes. They bothered us both day and night.

Some Had Grown Cold

On July 2 Temari came from Taenga to take us to his island. He had a five-ton boat. The people of Raroia had seldom been visited, and they wanted us to stay longer. But it was even worse with the people of Taenga. They had seldom been visited and had grown cold. Nothing we did seemed to make any particular impression. So after a few days when a trading vessel called we went on to Hikueru. The next stop was a small island where no one was living except an old couple. They gave Hubert a chicken, coconuts, and a large yellow pearl. It was as yellow as gold and quite perfect, except that it was flat on one side. Our oldest granddaughter now wears it in a ring. We had several other pearls; one—small but quite perfect—was given to baby Cicely.

A Difficult Launching Out to Sea

We landed next morning in Hikueru. We were tired and dirty and felt as if we must rest a few days. But after those few days were over, we wanted to go on to Hao, which had been our destination since leaving Raroia. A young native who owned a small boat offered to take us to Hao for twenty-five dollars. After thinking it over we decided to go. So he began to try to get his boat out of the lagoon on the windward side. There was no pass out of this lagoon—just a small open place here and there, worn down to sea level and filled with rocky coral growth. One of these places at high tide would be capable of floating a small five-ton vessel like his over the reef, with some manpower applied. Some agreed to help him, so we put our stuff aboard and in the morning went across the lagoon. It was extremely hot on the small vessel with no shade to speak of. We stayed there all that day and all night. Night was a blessed relief. I tried to stay in the hold and keep baby out of the sun, but she wanted to go on deck and could walk, so she would get up there in spite of my watching. We spent two days like that, before enough men would come to help get the boat over the rocks. Finally we started. As we were almost to get into the undertow that would pull us out to sea, the natives on shore pulled the ropes off the rocks to which they were tied, and we got a tiny bit farther out, but the knots were still in the ropes and caught again on the jagged coral. Hubert was on deck and he grasped his old pocketknife and cut one of the ropes. The captain found an ax close at hand and chopped off the other two—just as the third and largest wave shot over.

Drenched, But Safe

They had the cover to the hold shoved back about two feet toward the bow. I had been near by holding the baby in my arms to watch. I was standing in the bottom of the boat which was only about five feet deep. Suddenly my glasses fell off my face, and I stooped quickly to retrieve them. The last big wave shot over—pushing the cover back all but a narrow space; it came so swiftly that the baby could have been killed, and I badly injured. As it happened we didn't get hurt, but we were terribly wet.

The boat shot out to sea and soon was under full sail outside the bar. Hubert came down and found our clothes high and dry in the hold. We all had to change practically in sight of everybody on board. No one cared but me. The natives had on only their loincloths. They took them off, wrung the water out of them, and put them right back on. Hubert got back as far as he could and put his dry clothes on and went back on deck.

We sailed along with a light breeze till bedtime. I fixed a place down below for us to sleep. But Hubert couldn't stand the heat down there and spent most of the night on deck.

The captain said he thought we were making one and a half or two miles an hour most of the night. But when the sun rose next morning, we sighted land. It proved to be Hao. We had made a hundred miles that night. If an unknown current was there, nobody knew it. There was no sensation of fast motion. Everybody was amazed and could hardly believe it.

We landed at the settlement about noon. Most of the natives were inside diving. We remained there about three weeks, Hubert preaching, teaching, and baptizing ten while there. I wrote question books and answers for the Sunday school, my usual employment. On August 30 we went to Amanu, just a few hours away, in a three-ton boat.

Called as a Seventy

We had just received our mail from home containing the Heralds which told the April Conference news. One item of interest was that Hubert was to be ordained a seventy. After a short stay in Amanu, we returned to Hao in order to get passage on some larger ship for other islands. While waiting, Hubert baptized two more.

A Disappointment in Pearls

On October 15 we left for Marutea. This island had a reputation for shells bearing pearls, so there was a large crowd gathered, and the governor came up from Tahiti to formally open the island for diving. A sunrise celebration had been arranged for that day, and the whole fleet of boats—perhaps two hundred—went out to the mouth of the pass to meet his steamer. They staged the affair at sunrise, and it was really a glorious spectacle: the rising sun, the deep blue water, and the snowy sails of all those boats.

After the governor's speech, they started for places to drop sail and dive, but they were sorely disappointed. Where shell had always been plentiful, they found only a few. They tried here and there, but their reward was scanty. They soon began leaving for Takaboto, which was also open for diving.

While we were at this place, our baby girl kept asking for coconuts, which were a part of her feeding. The soft creamy meat of the unripe coconut is very good food, as it has a high content of a substance much like milk. But the land around the village was owned by people who would not allow the nuts to be picked.

There was an old Chinese who had a little store near us. He came in one day, and we had some dried food which we did not like or care to eat. So we asked him if he would like to have it. He joyfully said he would. Then he asked why the baby cried. We told him about the coconuts. Soon after he came by again and handed her a young coconut. From that time, there was never a day when she did not get her coconut. She had just been weaned, so her feeding was quite a problem. Where he got them we didn't know. Besides the coconut I had to depend on Eagle Brand condensed milk.

The Gifts and Callings of God

By Orrin R. Wilcox

EVERY MEMBER of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints is called to be a saint. There is no higher calling!

Webster says, "A saint is a holy or godly person, one regenerated or sanctified or undergoing sanctification, one extraordinarily charitable, patient, and self-denying." No matter what may be our vocation in life, our original call to be a saint comes first and is the basic foundation for all other calls.

There are many people in the world who have been converted to the principles of the gospel but have failed to seek entrance to the kingdom because of the word "Saint." They fail to appreciate the opportunity of a partnership with God in their fight against sin.

There are no perfect saints on earth. Men are called to priesthood that they may assist God in the work of perfecting the Saints.

Many Saints are called to be mothers in Israel, though they are not especially ordained and set apart in the order of motherhood. They are called to be Saints. To them comes the high and holy calling to prepare men to work in the priesthood whether it be the Order of Aaron or the Order of Melchizedek.

We often sing, "God send us men of steadfast will, patient, courageous, strong and true, with vision clear and mind equipped his will to learn, his work to do."

And God is sending such men as they are prepared by saintly mothers, as well as fathers, in Zion homes functioning in co-operation with God.

ASIDE from the fundamental call to be a saint there are subsidiary calls which come to all Saints according to their gifts. These calls to service can be exercised only according to the preparation of the one called and the need of the people.

Some men are called to be farmers, lawyers, schoolteachers, mechanics, or engineers. Zion can never be built without them. Their service is as sacred as is the work of the ministry. When the Order of Enoch is fully organized it is quite probable that men of every honorable vocation will be consecrated and set apart for their work. If such procedure were followed there might be fewer farmer failures. However, it does not guarantee success even in the priesthood. "All are called, but few are chosen." Preparation and consecration determine the choice of God.

All calls to service are important with God. The gifts of wisdom and revelation are just as essential in calling a man to the office of teacher as in calling him to the high priesthood.

A good teacher may well be a teacher all his life, on through the millennium, and still on eternally (Doctrine and Covenants 83: 3; Exodus 40: 15). A good teacher would not necessarily make a good elder. The usefulness of some men has been destroyed by what is sometimes called a "higher call," but has proved to be a less important call to the man concerned.

A WISE ADMINISTRATIVE OFFICER will study his man. He will not put a restless lover of adventure into local service.

The old saying "A rolling stone gathers no moss" might apply in temporal affairs which will eventually concern the Order of Enoch. Members of the Order of Melchizedek sometimes roam far but accumulate much spiritually.

Apostle Paul was of a restless nature, yet he became the greatest missionary of all time. St. Augustine said, "Thou hast made me for thine own, and I am restless until I rest in thee."

Some members of the Quorum of Seventy and even the Apostles make one think of the story of the pioneer's hens as told by Carl Sandburg in Abe Lincoln Grows Up. Speaking of Lincoln he says:

Moving was natural to his blood; he came from a long line of movers. He could tell about the family that moved so often that their chickens knew the signs of another move. They would walk up to the mover, stretch flat on the ground, and put up their feet to be tied for the next wagon trip.

The great task of working with God in calling men to the ministry requires the utmost in wisdom and understanding. Sometimes men are called and given a job which is not of a nature to arouse and retain their interest. Spiritual degeneration results. On the other hand one may be given a task so far beyond his capacity that he becomes a misfit and a failure. Like a fifth grade pupil trying to do eighth grade work, he becomes a tragic figure floating with the tide.

Man's extremity is God's opportunity here as elsewhere. The most important consideration in calling men to God's holy priesthood is inspiration. Personal friendships should not be allowed to influence a call. Family relationship should have no influence in choosing laborers in the kingdom of God. There is a higher relationship between brothers in Christ. God reveals his will on the basis of the standards of the individual affected. Selfish interests must be laid aside in the interest of God and his church.

"A man who may disagree with me on certain issues is valuable to me. He is none the less a servant of God!" (Sadi Nagel in Daily Bread, April 18, 1952.)

INASMUCH AS THERE ARE no perfect people it will sometimes be necessary to look beyond some characteristics of an individual. In estimating material for leadership one should always be "humble, faithful, and full of love."

Good priesthood material may be found among the poor.

I passed a hovel round whose door the signs of penury were strewn.
I saw the grimed and littered floor, the walls of logs from tree trunks hewn.
I said, "The gates of life are closed to them within that wretched pen.
When Lo! from out that humble hut, came one to rule a world of men.

The calling of men to ministry has been greatly hindered because of the love of money. The purses of many Saints (?) have not yet been converted. The church is doing a great work with the funds now sent to the bishop. Think what could be done if all were obeying the financial law.

As we raise our standards, God will bless us both temporally and spiritually. More laborers can then be called into the ripening harvest field. We still continue to make it impossible for God to make choices among us. He is no respecter of persons. He distributes gifts severally as he will, but all work in the priesthood is equally honorable whether it be that of a deacon, teacher, elder, or high priest. In our search for the learned, the rich, the noble, and the wise, we may always find need of a contribution from the blind, the halt, and the maimed.

For every high priest taken from among men is ordained for men in things pertaining to God, that he may offer both gifts and sacrifices for sins; who can have compassion on the ignorant and on them that are out of the way; for that he himself also is compassed with infirmity.—Hebrews 5: 1, 2.

The gifts and callings to men of refinement and culture have also sometimes been overlooked. As the work of the church broadens and takes on new impetus, we will find ourselves as partners with God searching for more instruments for the execution of his purposes in building the kingdom.

Question Time

Question:

Will you explain why the Bible quotations in the Book of Mormon happen to use the same language as that in the King James Bible? Did Joseph Smith make an exact translation from the plates? Or did he purposely use the King James Version instead?

Missouri

F. M. D.

Answer:

We know of no account by Joseph Smith that would definitely settle these questions. Because there are identical quotations from the King James translation of the Bible found in the Book of Mormon, some have concluded that Joseph Smith used the King James Version of the Bible for comparison when translating parallel passages from the Nephite records. This need not have been so, however, for we know by experience with the gift of tongues that it is given at times by the Spirit to speak not only in different languages unknown to the speaker, but in different idioms and dialects of those languages. (See The Sacred Book of Ancient America, pages 179-182.) Why might not the Lord have seen fit to use the language and style best known to millions—the King James Version—in translating Scriptures parallel to those of the Bible?

Again, it should be known that many verses are not the same. For instance, of approximately 433 verses of Isaiah in the Book of Mormon, 234 are not the same, being slightly modified or changed in some cases, radically changed in others. It is possible that the translation through the Urim and Thummim came not altogether and necessarily word by word, but by concept of the message conveyed, together with a quickening of intellect and capacity of expression in fitting language at the command of the translator. If so, the translation would naturally be somewhat influenced by Joseph Smith's acquaintance with the language and style of the King James Bible. While God works by miraculous power, it is also true he supplies according to the need, supplementing by miraculous gifts that which cannot be achieved through other means. Yet we know of nothing to indicate definitely that the translator was left more to his own initiative when Bible quotations appeared for translation than at other times. We do know from Doctrine and Covenants 9 that agency and initiative were to be exercised prayerfully and intelligently in co-operation with divine power in the work of translating.

When God's voice was later heard from heaven saying, "These plates have been revealed by the power of God. They have been translated by the power of God. The translation thereof is correct and you are commanded to bear witness of what you now see and hear," it did not necessarily mean that the language was a perfect, word for word, exact translation that could not possibly be duplicated by other words or phrases, just as fitting and possibly more so at times, but a correct translation conveying the true sense of the ancient writings.

HAROLD I. VELT

Question:

If Joseph Smith's new translation of the 116 stolen pages of the manuscript of the Book of Mormon had corresponded with the first, then could he not have made the unbelievers put up or shut up by demanding that they show the stolen copies they claimed differed, and then calling attention to changes, erasures, or different handwriting? This would have been a vindication of his translation. New York

C. D. Q.

Answer:

The proposition stated in the question is one that might have been possible. However, there are many implications in a matter such as this. Let us consider a few of these.

While the prophet could have called attention to the changes, proving them to be such would have been difficult. There were undoubtedly erasures in the original manuscript as it is not probable that any man could have written 116 pages of dictated material without making some errors which would require erasures. We also know that there are some who are so skilled in forging another's handwriting that only an expert can detect the difference. Had such alterations been as skillful as this it would have been most difficult to prove them such, especially with public opinion already against Joseph Smith.

At best, even with the testimony of a handwriting expert, this would have been a controversial issue. The nature of the public seems to be such that the charge of the accuser against good men is readily accepted and often enlarged upon. This could easily have happened in this case; and regardless of proof to the contrary, many who wanted an excuse to misrepresent the work of Joseph Smith would have refused to believe even the testimony of an expert, preferring rather to accept false testimony of the evil and designing men who stole the manuscript in the first place.

Once the charge had been made by these men the story would have spread rapidly as it passed over the eager tongues of gossipmongers. This would have required Joseph Smith and the church to defend a point which, even if proved, would be of little value. Much time would have been lost, and in spite of all efforts to have it otherwise, a cloud of doubt would have been cast on the whole matter. As noted, little would have been gained. Evidences which vindicate the translation are too numerous and too positive to have any need of depending upon something like this.

It is to be noted also that nothing was really lost by the fact that those pages were not retranslated, for the same story was told in more detail on plates yet to be translated. The bringing forth of a more detailed account is not without precedence. Jeremiah 36:32 refers to such an instance in biblical history.

Finally, the decision not to re-translate rested not with Joseph Smith but with God who knows the hearts of all men and who can foresee the far-reaching possibilities of such a decision. It was God, not man, who said, "Behold, I say unto you, that you shall not translate again those words which have gone forth out of your hands" (Doctrine and Covenants 3:6).

Learn of Me

By Addie Spaulding Stowell

Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart; and ye shall find rest unto your souls.—Matthew 11: 28, 29.

IT WAS A DAY in early autumn. The sun shone in a cloudless sky, and the haze of Indian summer rested on the landscape. A panorama of beauty lay before Ruth Douglas as she stood in the doorway, but she recognized none of it. She leaned her head against the doorjamb, tears trickling down her cheeks. Grief, hard work, and poverty had left their gaunt traces on a once pretty face. The sun was no longer shining for her, and the haze might have been a mantle that covered her heart.

Soon the children would be home from school for their lunch, and there was no lunch for them. When Sam got his pay check the previous evening he was to have brought home the week's supply of groceries. But that part of the pay check which was not spent for drink was lost in a poker game. Now he was sleeping off the effects of his dissipation.

In her anguish Ruth began to pray, "O Father in heaven, it is not for myself I ask. I ignored your counsel, and my punishment is great; but I ask it for my children. Please send us food. In the name of our Lord, Amen."

ANNA GREGORY, a middle-aged woman whose smile was a caress lived in the same neighborhood. Anna decided to take advantage of the nice day and get her house cleaning done. She was busy scrubbing woodwork when suddenly the feeling came to her that she must go see Ruth Douglas. Her thoughts turned to Ruth and her condition. Ruth was proud and resented any pity, but Anna knew there were times when she and her children were desperately in need.

She hadn't seen Ruth for several days and wondered how she was getting along. She must go and see her when she finished her cleaning. Then she let her mind drift to other things, but the impression came again a little stronger to go and see Ruth. Yes, I'll go sometime today. Her scrubbing brush flew up and down the window casings and her mind gave more heed to her work than to her impressions. Then it came stronger than ever that she must go see Ruth. "Yes," she spoke out, "I'll go when I finish this work." But then the impression came forcefully as though someone had spoken it, "Go now."

"Yes, Lord," Anna answered, "I'll go now."

SHE DROPPED her scrubbing brush into the pan of water and washed her hands, all the time wondering what the trouble could be. "Perhaps she is out of food," Anna thought, knowing that many times in the past this had been her distress.

Anna always kept a supply of everything in the food line on hand, so she got her market basket and began to fill it with the things from her refrigerator and pantry—bread, butter, cheese, bacon, milk, vegetables, and fruits. When she reached Ruth's house, she saw her standing in the doorway. She held the basket of food toward her and asked, "Did you need this, Ruth? The Lord told me to come see you, and I thought I should bring you this."

Ruth set the basket on the table, then threw her arms about Anna's neck and wept bitterly. "I am not worthy of such a blessing," she moaned between sobs, "but God has answered my prayer. I prayed for food."

GOD, WHO IS MINDFUL of the sparrows, will answer the prayers of his children when they are in need or distressed if they come to him in faith with a contrite heart and humble spirit. His Spirit does not always speak in an audible voice or a rushing mighty wind. Often it is in a peaceful assurance that comes to those who are troubled and pray to him for guidance or strength. He will never turn from us, but we can look to him and know that his Spirit is always near.

Anna had learned of Christ. She had drunk of the water from which she would never thirst. It was in her heart a fountain of joy springing up into everlasting life. Her heart was receptive to the spirit within, prompting her by its gentle whisperings to help another who was in need.

To learn of Christ is to learn of his meekness and lowliness. He was without the material things of life, but he was rich in heavenly things. The same privilege is ours if we take upon us his virtues, and to do that we must profit by his admonition, "Learn of me."

Humility

By Nettie C. Lake

Editor's Note: This short article will have more meaning for our readers when they understand that Sister Lake lost her husband about a year ago. She speaks out of a heart which has known suffering and loneliness. Her message, however, is one of understanding and trust. It is good to know that the gospel can help people make such happy adjustments under difficult conditions.

ISN'T IT STRANGE how we all wish to avoid trouble and sorrows? It takes a lot of living to make us understand that without them we would never really be alive, never so aware of the kindness, friendship, and goodness which surround us like the air we breathe.

People who skip through life without suffering are pointed out as "lucky." But I doubt whether they are as fortunate as others who learn through grief, and who bear suffering without resentment. The lucky men and women are those who know they must gather strength from friends, neighbors, and the thought of God's eternal solicitude when things go wrong.

The boon of misfortune and sorrow is humility, and humility is very good for our souls. It makes us realize that we are little bits of humanity, nothing special—weaklings who must sometimes run to others for comfort. This dependence upon each other at certain bitter moments is one of our most valuable assets, although we do not count it as such when we add up our accounts. We always forget that it takes more courage to accept favors than to give them, and it's good for us to have our pride dragged in the dust.

Think of the times you have said to yourself, "I must talk to someone. I can't carry this burden alone. I have to lean on strength outside of myself." Perhaps you remember these periods as moments of despair.

Yet, from the larger perspective, they may have been moments when you were touched with humility and divine insight.

We rebel instinctively against the frustration of our plans and hopes; we resent grief. Yet through them we work out our salvation and find God.

We use our hearts then, understanding that it is indeed a pilgrim's progress. It is filled with sad and happy days. It takes us into dark valleys and on to glorious mountaintops. If we accept the bad as being as valuable for us as the good, we shall, like Bunyan's Christian, ". . . hear the trumpets sounding for us on the other side."

AUTOBIOGRAPHY TITLES

By Marcella Schenck

PEOPLE'S LIVES seem to stand for something in particular—Jewell's sweetness, Martha's integrity, Ina's sincerity, the ladyship of Lena, and the humor of Verna. We wouldn't want a one of them any different, because those are only their outstanding qualities. They have many more nice ones, too. I wonder how those descriptive words are going to look as titles to Life Books.

A lady lay in a hospital trying to be quiet and still as she had been asked to do. It was not much of an effort. The raising of a hand seemed so useless anyway. A note came to her from another patient which read: "I like to think of your youth. You were such a merry girl. It seems unnatural to see you so quiet and still." Slow wet tears slipped from under the lids of the quiet one. Why had that note not come thirty or more years before? Then she had been hushed often with "Cast your excessive laughter far from you;" "Cease from all laughter;" and "Much laughter is a sin." She could almost have thrown the book at folks. Much later she was to learn that the same book admired cheerful hearts and countenances, and even glad hearts. What she needed to understand was the difference between excessive merriment and gladness.

To indulge in a bit of fancifulness . . . suppose Saint Peter searches along his bookshelves for Life Books. They are opened, read, and closed again. When the golden clasps are fastened he turns them over and there in gilded letters are the titles we sent along with our autobiographies—Friendliness on one, Gentleness on another. There will be many others—Honesty, Patience, Neighborliness, Godliness, Service. . . . He will come to one that reads, The Merry Heart. He will know she couldn't keep a house immaculate; her cakes would fall; and maybe she couldn't sew a straight seam. But she could get along with people, laugh away a strained situation, smile away the woes of a little child. Saint Peter would put the book back in its place and say, "Just one in a thousand." Probably that would be all of her type that you would need among that many people.

I have been wondering, what is on our book covers up there anyway? What could one pick out among our qualities, good or bad, to entitle our lives? Whether we will it or not, we are writing life books, and they will have titles that are us.

It Can Be Done

By Ruth Elser

IT WAS MY HAPPY PRIVILEGE to be a counselor, as well as secretary of the program, for the Foreign Student Orientation Center conducted at the University of Kansas from July 28 to September 6, 1952. Sponsored by the Department of State and administered by the Institute of International Education, the Center had three main purposes:

1. To acquaint the foreign student with the customs and ways of life in this country
2. To help him gain fluency in the use of the English language
3. To acquaint him with academic procedures at an American university

The group consisted of forty-two students from thirteen different countries, including Chile, Mexico, Italy, Iran, Pakistan, Germany, France, the Philippines, Greece, and Japan. The fact that there were various religions represented in this group provided the basis for a great many interesting discussions.

Mealtime was a pleasant experience for all of us. The men, women, counselors, and some of the instructors ate together. Excellent food was provided, prepared by experienced cooks and served by friendly waitresses. The table manners of various nationalities were interesting, particularly during the first week or so. Several students used the European method of holding the fork in the left hand and the knife in the right to pile food on the fork. The Japanese, of course, were very proficient with chopsticks and used them frequently. Some carried their chopsticks with them as a matter of habit. Menus were planned so that rice would be served at least once a day for the benefit of the large number of Oriental people in the Center. They seemed to appreciate genuinely this gesture, and the rest of us also became quite fond of eating rice with La Choy Soya Sauce.

During meals politics was one of the most frequently discussed topics. Most of the students seemed to anticipate greatly the November election and considered themselves fortunate in being able to witness this great event firsthand. Some of the Japanese students were fortunate enough to have arrived in Chicago two weeks prior to the opening of the Orientation Center and were able to attend part of the nominating conventions. Fashions were a favorite topic among the girls; this topic seems to be of universal interest!

THE CLASSWORK PART of the program was set up to approximate an ordinary morning of university classes with the curriculum being divided into language and nonlanguage sections. The language portion consisted of classes in pronunciation, conversation, and written English, and a seminar. The students were divided into five groups according to their speaking and comprehensive ability, based on an oral and written test. Classes were rotated every two weeks so the students would have each of the instructors sometime during the Orientation Center.

Lectures for the first three weeks dealt with American institutions, the American educational system, the family, community organization (rural and urban), and regional differences in culture patterns. The fourth through the sixth week period was devoted to discussion of controversial public questions of the day. The student was given a background in these matters so that he could discuss them intelligently with other university people. Attendance to the lecture and class periods was voluntary, but 100 per cent attendance was the rule rather than the exception.

AS IMPORTANT as the classwork section was the recreational part of the program. A great variety of sports and games were offered. Volleyball and softball were played by a few hardy members of the group; at the end of the center, the students played a faculty team and won with a score of 24-19. The favorite game by far was ping-pong. Facilities had been set up in the recreation room and the students eagerly played ping-pong every available minute before and after meals and in the evenings. Great vigor and enthusiasm were displayed, as evidenced by the many bills for new ping-pong balls and paddles. After several weeks a tournament was scheduled in which thirty-six people played. The final victor was hailed with loud cheers at the dinner table at the conclusion of the fiery tournament. A daily event was the "classical music hour" after lunch and dinner at which time students could request favorite selections.

Those interested in journalism put out two issues of The Seven Seas Reporter, the 1952 Orientation Center newspaper. Articles were submitted by the students and prepared by a student editor. The second issue served as a souvenir for the students of their days at KU.

FIELD TRIPS were an interesting and vital part of our program. Usually one full day a week was devoted to an out-of-town trip to Topeka or Kansas City. These were generally planned to coincide with topics and problems mentioned in the lectures. Some of the places visited were the Ford Motor Company, KMBC, WDAF-TV, TWA Overhaul Base, U. S. Post Office, Folger Coffee Company, Stock Exchange, Federal Reserve Bank, Donnelly Garment Company, Menninger Foundation, State Capitol, and the governor's office, where the students were greeted personally by Governor Arn. On field trips when we spent the entire day in Kansas City or Topeka, students were given lunch money. This enabled them to visit various cafeterias and restaurants so that they could become acquainted with public eating places. Free time was allowed for browsing and shopping, which the students—especially the women—seemed to enjoy immensely. The group visited the Starlight Theater twice, seeing "The Red Mill" and "Showboat." The fact that these trips were usually taken in two of the University busses gave us the opportunity to talk with each other and sing songs together, which helped to establish a closer bond among all of us.

Evening activities were scheduled about four or five nights during the week. Attendance again was voluntary, but the response was generally very good. A number of guest lecturers were engaged to talk on a variety of topics, among which were American folksongs and ballads, American art and architecture, American sports and the Olympics in Helsinki, trends in American writing, and American music. Perhaps the best-liked evening entertainments were the social evenings known as "Friday Night at Eight" programs. These were planned, prepared, and given by the students themselves. Each national group was represented on the program sometime during the Center. The Orientation Center staff also presented several programs. Numbers by the students included quiz programs, dances in native costumes, songs, and instrumental programs. The townspeople of Lawrence were invited to these evening programs. Many of the students received invitations to visit in their homes.

IF ANY ONE particular event could be called the high light of the entire program and its activities, I think it would be the Council Grove International Week End. Briefly, the purpose of the week end was to have each foreign student live in an average American home for two days as a member of that family. The small farming community of Council Grove, Kansas, willingly accepted the challenge of showing these foreign students the "inside story" of the average American home. For two days and a night these students lived and ate with and participated in the various activities of a family in this community. On the return trip to Lawrence, the students stopped in Dwight, Kansas, at the farm of one of the counselors for a picnic supper; then they toured the farm and went swimming and horseback riding. Many close friendships between American people and people of other lands were formed that week end which are still being continued. The students came back to Lawrence with a new understanding and appreciation of American people; and this, after all, was what we attempted to give to them in the hope of promoting good will and international understanding.

Contact with the people of Lawrence was an important aspect of the program. Such contact was made possible through weekly guest dinners held each Wednesday night. About fifteen people of different groups in the community were invited to these dinners. Students met at succeeding guest dinners faculty members in their specific fields of interest, housewives and professional women, doctors, lawyers, ministers, a cross section of small-town business, skilled and unskilled workmen, and at the final dinner, teachers and students from Lawrence High School and Haskell Indian Institute. The evenings following the guest dinners were always left open for the students and guests to talk as long as they wished in the living room. The dinners were also valuable as a social dress-up affair at which the students could practice the dining manners which they had learned about in their conversation classes.

LIVING, WORKING, eating, playing, and talking with these young people of different backgrounds has given me a broader view of the achievements as well as the problems of various peoples of the world. The program has presented to me an opportunity to learn of the different customs and attitudes of these people. It has also given me the challenging opportunity to live the kind of life that would best represent to those people our American ideals. It was a privilege for me to give

Interesting Personalities

Mrs. Gladys Furby

THE ALARM sounds at four o'clock every morning in the Furby household. About an hour and fifteen miles later Mrs. Gladys Furby is in the kitchen of the Jackson County (Mississippi) Prison farm where she is busily engaged in the preparation of breakfast for the convicts. As matron at the Missisissippi prison, she has fed and befriended her "enforced guests" for seven years.

Seven days a week she cooks three meals a day, doctors the sick, and even acts as secretary for many who need assistance in writing letters. Her advice is often sought by the young smooth-cheeked offenders as well as the hardened repeaters and drunks who are sent back to the farm consistently.

Mrs. Furby has helped create a pleasant environment for the prisoners who all affirm she is "a kind, sweet lady." The majority of prisoners are gone during the day, working on roads and other county projects, but several men are usually assigned to help Mrs. Furby. They keep the grounds clean, get vegetables for the farm, and sometimes peel potatoes. None of these men have ever attempted to escape.

Sister Furby's hope is that these men will be better citizens when they leave the prison. Her life has been a testimony of service. One prisoner wrote to her, "The work you are doing might not seem very much, but everyone that leaves the camp remembers you well for your many kindnesses. If every place accorded the same treatment, it would be a living Christianity instead of a professed one."

When she was first offered the job, Sister Furby was dubious about working with so many lawbreakers. However, she told Irene King, a reporter for the Pascagoula-Star and Moss Point Advertiser, "I have never regretted one minute of the time spent here. There is plenty of opportunity for true missionary work; I try to influence them to want to do better, and they all respond to kindness."

Not only does Sister Furby represent the church to these men, but she also serves in her branch at Pascagoula, Mississippi, in the Mobile District. She is a church school teacher and after she prepares the Sunday morning breakfast, the noon meal, and a light snack for supper for the prisoners she is present at the church school at 10:00 a.m. Elder Jack Pray, pastor of the Mobile, Alabama, Branch has said this of Sister Furby: "I have had breakfast at six o'clock twice at the prison farm, and I can recommend very highly her art of cooking as well as her graciousness as the matron. She is a gem."

Start Now

By Robert J. Miller

Yea, neither can the Lord redeem such; for he cannot deny himself; for he cannot deny justice when it has its claim.—Mosiah 8: 65.

IT IS NATURAL for people of integrity to want next year's record of their lives to be better than the past—which is probably the reason for new-year resolutions. In a way it is good that this is so, especially if the determination is present to keep on trying throughout the year regardless of mistakes and failures.

However, the best time to start is always now, for the laws of God do not wait for January the first; they are always in operation.

Now is the best time to repent—the best time to forgive others, that in turn there may be hope of personal forgiveness from the Father.

Jesus taught us to forgive others their trespasses that we may have God's forgiveness. This is a hard thing for some to do, but it is the law of God, and the law of God cannot be denied.

Mercy cannot deny justice, for God's mercy is written in his law. His law is in harmony with justice; and there are conditions which govern a claim upon his mercy. Forgiving others is one of the conditions; continued obedience to his law is another.

It is impossible for God to forgive a man who refuses to forgive another, for in so doing God would deny himself. He cannot forgive an unrepentant person. He can forgive only when men put themselves in a position to be forgiven—that is by ridding self of obstacles which keep the heart hard and the door closed.

Mercy has a claim on mercy; and when a person has truly forgiven others, then he, too, may hope for forgiveness from God. This is God's law governing mercy. It is in complete accord with the two great commandments of love and the golden rule.

As we learn to forgive freely, the path of complete obedience to the law becomes easier; for we then overcome the greatest barrier between man and man, and God and man.

May the new year find all of us loving each other more and forgiving one another our petty mistakes and blundering ways.

Under the Influence

By C. G. Mottashed

WITH THE INCREASE of highway accidents and fatalities, many of which are caused by the use of liquors, we believe that the following questions and answers will be of interest. These were selected from a pamphlet prepared by the American Medical Association Committee on Medicolegal Problems for distribution at the Fortieth National Safety Congress and Exposition which was in session recently in Chicago's Conrad Hilton Hotel:

- Q. Is this a satisfactory definition of "under the influence of alcohol"? A person is under the influence of alcohol when, due to the imbibing of alcohol, he has lost to any extent some of that clearness of intellect and self-control that he would otherwise possess.
- A. Yes. This definition is modeled after a Supreme Court decision of the State of Arizona.
- Q. Can you diagnose drunkenness by physical examination?
- A. No. A person being examined may temporarily pull himself together and give a better account of himself than he would if he were not under scrutiny. Also, ordinary physical examination does not show the deterioration of judgment and the acuity of the senses. Finally, about one hundred pathologic conditions cause symptoms which resemble those of alcohol.
- Q. Is alcohol a stimulant?
- A. No. The apparent stimulation is due to lessening of the inhibitions by the narcotic action of alcohol.
- Q. Is alcohol a good remedy for a snake-bite?
- A. No. A person bitten by a snake may be in shock which is increased by the depressing action of the alcohol.
- Q. Is alcohol a member of the anesthetic series of drugs?
- A. Yes. Alcohol is chemically related to ether, chloroform, and other anesthetics.
- Q. Is alcohol taken as a medicine necessary in the treatment for any disease?
- A. No. "Alcohol is not a specific or cure for any disease, unless one considers worry a disease, and a drugged indifference a cure."
- Q. Does alcohol increase the visual acuity or the acuity of any other sense?
- A. No. As little as 0.04 per cent of alcohol in the blood may reduce visual acuity as much as wearing of dark glasses after sundown, and other senses are also less acute.

- Q. Is it a good policy to take a few shots of whisky to warm one up just before being exposed to very low temperatures?
- A. No. The feeling of warmth after drinking is caused by the dilation of the superficial capillaries. This condition is associated with rapid loss of bodily heat.
- Q. Does loss of judgment and the ability for self-criticism occur before there are obvious symptoms of intoxication?
- A. Yes. The person is not aware of his shortcomings although careful psychologic examination may indicate marked loss of efficiency.
- Q. Can an exceptional person have 0.15 per cent of alcohol in his blood and still retain all of his faculties?
- A. No. The individual may give a good account of himself, but he has nevertheless lost enough of the clearness of intellect and self-control that he would normally possess to materially interfere with his mental and physical capabilities.
- Q. Is alcoholism hereditary?
- A. No. Children of alcoholics brought up in foster homes have a better record regarding alcoholism than the normal population.

Observe Golden Wedding Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. James H. Cunningham of Pocatello, Idaho, celebrated fifty years of married life December 31, 1952. They were married in Pleasant Grove, Utah, December 31, 1902, and have lived in the Pocatello vicinity since the spring of 1930. Mrs. Cunningham was reared in the church, and Mr. Cunningham became a member in March, 1930. Their home was always open to the early-day missionaries, and many times services were held there. They had two sons, both now deceased. In addition to rearing their own family, they also reared two of their grandchildren after the death of one of their sons. They are devoted to the work of the church and were very active in the building of the new church in Pocatello during 1952. Brother Cunningham was a member of the building committee and was always on hand to help with the work. Sister Cunningham is teacher of the women's group. In May and June of 1952 they took their first trip to Independence; this was the fulfillment of a long-standing desire for them. They are now retired and live in their new home at the edge of Pocatello.

Branch Officers Elected

ARKANSAS CITY AND WINFIELD, KANSAS.—The annual election of officers was held at the regular branch business meeting on August 27. District President Don Manuel was in charge of the meeting, assisted by Brother Shannon of Wichita, Brother England, and Brother Gose.

The following branch officers were elected: branch president, C. S. Gose; counselors, Ray Goodfellow and Virgil England; director of religious education, Ray Goodfellow; counselor, Sequoyah England; women's leader, Florene Goodfellow; Zion's League leader and branch auditor, Virgil England; music director, Marilyn McKibben; assistant music director and secretary, Iva England; drama director, Julius Lewis; treasurer and branch solicitor, Omer Smith; librarian, Claudine Richerson; statistician and branch correspondent, Sadie Gasser; branch historian, Mable Vickrey; Herald book agent, Ray Goodfellow. Teachers are as follows: adult, Hazel Gose; young people, Virgil England; juniors, Claudine Richerson; children, Iva England.

Regular meetings are held. Three services are held on Sunday as well as Zion's League. Fellowship meetings are held each Wednesday, and the women's department meets twice a month.

The women's group is working on the building fund.—Reported by SADIE GASSER

Youth Conference Held

HOUSTON, TEXAS.—The Texas youth conference was held in the Houston Branch November 28-30. The theme was "I Give Unto You to Be the Light of the World." The staff included Seventy Wayne Simmons, appointee to labor with the Spanish-speaking people; Missionary Charles Kornman of San Antonio; Missionary Norman Cox, Jr.; Houston Youth Leader Fred Olson, and Pastor Roy Vandel.

The local Saints, particularly the women's department, worked hard to make the conference a success. All of the Texas branches were represented. The high lights of the conference were the early morning prayer service, the classes, the two sermons, and the evening that concluded with the story of George and Billie Young who have been in Guatemala.

Some of the local young people who helped on the conference were Mr. and Mrs. Marion Bishop, Jimmie Lee Grubbs, Millard Payne, and Shirley Arnold.—Reported by DICK ANKNEY

Branch Has Visitors

ENFIELD, ENGLAND.—At the annual business meeting held September 27 the pastor and all officers were sustained except the women's department leader, Sister Freda Schofield, who retired. Sister Edith Lawrence was elected to this office.

In the pastor's report it was stated that average attendance had increased, as indicated by the weekly offerings.

A dedicatory service for the branch officers was held on the following Sunday morning.

High lights of this year's activities are as follows: eleven baptisms, Miss Kitty Riley, in March; Mrs. Annie Watson and Mrs. Gladys Taddell, in September; Peter Elmes, Brenda Folkes, Malcolm Judd, Janette Lawrence, and Brian Spray, in October; Mr. E. Watson, Jr., and his wife Violet, also Mr. E. Watson, Sr., in November.

The majority of the men of the branch attended the priesthood institute at Birmingham in June, and were greatly benefited.

The branch has welcomed High Priest D. V. Lents and family. Brother Lents is now mission president, and has preached at Enfield on several occasions. Seventy T. E. Worth, district president, has also visited the branch for preaching and missionary work.

In May there were two Australian visitors, Elders Victor Alberts and Norman Smith. They showed a set of slides of their tour of the Pacific Islands Mission, church headquarters, and places of church historical interest in the States.

The visit of President Israel Smith, Bishop Livingston, and Apostle Oakman to the mission reunion in August was much appreciated by the Enfield Saints.

Special services held included Zion's League Day, Women's Day and Mother's Day, Children's Day, Harvest Thanksgiving, and Remembrance Sunday. Collections on Sanitarium Day and Graceland College Day were given to the respective institutions. A donation was also raised for a local hospital to help build their staff chapel.

A Zion's League outing to Windsor, including the Royal Castle, was held in April. The church school annual outing was in May, to Chessington Zoo, Surrey. The women's department went to Clacton-on-Sea for their outing in June. In July a ramble, followed by tea and vesper service, was organized by the Zion's League.

Brother and Sister David Givens and children left England in September, having been associated with the Enfield Branch for three years. Three other American friends arrived this summer. They are Brother Mark Hamilton, of the Cameron, Missouri, Branch, Brother Lee Scofield of the Oak Grove, Missouri, Branch and his friend Jim Whitehead, all of the U.S. Air Force.

On November 1 a Halloween party was arranged by Lee Scofield. Although unused to the custom, the majority came in disguise. The entertainment was rather different from English style, but the fun was much enjoyed.

The Christmas Fair held November 8 was opened by Miss R. Oakley, headmistress of the local council school. In her opening remarks she paid a warm tribute to the friendliness of the Saints and spoke highly of the family attendance at church. Many nonmembers attended the Fair, which raised £130 profit.

The branch regrets to lose the association of Sr. May Oakman, who sailed for the United States on December 8 to nurse at the Sanitarium. A farewell supper was held on December 4 at which she was presented with a pen and pencil set.

Women's department officers for 1952-53 are as follows: leader, Edith Lawrence; assistant leader and treasurer, Kitty Elmes; secretary, Nellie Wicks; visitors to the sick, Rose Butler and Gladys Judd.

At Zion's League business meeting in October, President Roy D. A. Oakman was sustained, Philip Maloney was elected vice-president; Gladys Castle was sustained as secretary; and Kath Judd was elected treasurer. The League study subject for the year was The Story of the Church, by Inez Davis. Worship services, cultural programs and recreational evenings have also been held. Projects included a rummage sale and a house-to-house collection for Dr. Barnardo's Children's Homes.

Exterior and interior redecoration of the church building was carried out in July, largely by voluntary labor of the men in the branch.

A gift has been made of a cottage organ for the vestry.—Reported by LILY A. E. OAKMAN

Branch Officers Elected

GOODLAND, KANSAS.—The Saints met for the first time in their new church May 25, 1952. The building is not finished as yet, but was near enough completed for the meetings to be held there so they could give possession to their old church basement. The Children's Day program was given June 8 and was under the direction of Alice Ingram. The children gave flannelgraph stories, sand box stories, et cetera. Beverly Taylor who is in nurse's training at the Sanitarium in Independence visited the branch in June. Several of the young people attended youth camp at Palmer Lake, Colorado. Those who attended were Richard Rohr, Carolyn Rohr, Jeanne Carl, Jared Ingram, Billie Pickenpaugh, and Bob Harding. District President Ward Hougas and Mrs. Hougas were in the branch June 18. Brother Hougas showed slides entitled "The Sunset World." Rosalie Young of Independence also visited our branch in June. Sonia Caldwell was baptized July 2, by Elder Dick Marolf, pastor, and was confirmed July 6, by Elders Marolf and Conrad Graybill. The League and choir held a fellowship service on the Chester Phillips' farm July 17. July 30 the branch held their monthly "Branch Nite" at the park. It began with a basket supper and then the young people who attended youth camp gave reports. Several members attended the Eastern Colorado Reunion at Palmer Lake, Colorado, during August. Apostle D. Blair Jensen and family stopped in Goodland on their way from reunion and Brother Jensen preached.

Sonia Caldwell and Jo Studer, both of Goodland, were married July 20 in Sharon Springs, Kansas, by Priest Krulz.

The following were elected at the annual business meeting held August 3: pastor, Dick Marolf; branch clerk, Inez Been; solicitor, Conrad Graybill; reporter, Pauline Roberts; music director, O'ella Marolf; women's leader, Marian Phillips; youth leaders, Bob Cowan and Pauline Roberts; children's leader, Alice Ingram; church school superintendent, Byron Graybill; assistant church school director, Jared Ingram; branch treasurer, Glen Middleton; church school secretary, Libby Stapp; historian, J. R. Graybill; librarian, Lyda Graybill; building committee, Harve Ingram, Barney Been, Glen Curry, and Kenneth Carl.

The following teachers were elected in September: adult, Kenneth Ingram; young adult, Pauline Roberts; senior high, Glen Middleton; junior high, Bob Cowan; junior, Inez Been; primary, Alice Ingram; kindergarten, Dorothea Graybill and Dorothy Cowan, assisted by Hallie Alford.

The following assistant teachers were appointed: adult, Glen Curry; young adult, Rae Young; senior high, O'ella Marolf; junior high, Twyla Middleton; junior, Libby Stapp; primary, Louise Alford.—Reported by O'ELLA MAROLF

Mission Organized

JOPPA, ILLINOIS.—On December 14, the district president, W. W. Colvin, organized a mission at Joppa, Illinois. The group holds services at the Joppa grade school. Elder R. E. Phillips who was appointed as pastor has been conducting church school for the past three months. The following were appointed by Elder Colvin: pastor, Rubie Earl Phillips; church school director, Robert Lewis; women's leader, Sister Cassie Lewis; clerk, children's supervisor, treasurer, and music director, Irene Phillips; young people's leader, Arthur Thompson; historian, Nora Lukens; young adult leader, Elvis Phillips; dramatic leader, Pauline Sutfin. The solicitor will be appointed by the district bishop's agent, Edd Knapp.

After appointments were presented to the group, they were given a vote of confidence or approval by a unanimous vote. There were fifty present at the organization, after which a basket dinner was served. Joppa had a branch at one time, but because of lack of leadership it was disorganized some years ago. Joppa is a growing community and several new homes are being built in the area. There will be a membership of around twenty-five in or near Joppa. Plans are in the making for the purchase of a lot for a new church building to be built in the future. The group meets every Sunday for church school and eleven o'clock services. Plans have also been made for District Missionary Donald Kyser to hold a missionary series. Brother Colvin expressed his appreciation at the organization meeting for the capable leadership in the district. All the business had the approval of Apostle D. O. Chesworth.—Reported by NORA LUKENS

Thanksgiving Services Held

SACRAMENTO, CALIFORNIA.—At the morning service November 9, Karen Lorraine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Howard, was blessed by Elder Lawrence Hendrickson, assisted by Elder John E. Gann.

Elder William H. Kemple of Ontario, California, was the morning speaker on November 16. In the evening the motion picture "All That I Have" was shown.

The women's department held a rummage sale in November. The annual bazaar and bake sale was held at the church on November 21. A play directed by Maybelle Nephew was presented. During the past year the women engaged in a "talent" project, contributing the proceeds to the Happy Valley reunion grounds. During the coming year they have agreed to furnish hostesses every three months at the local USO.

Special Thanksgiving services were held on Sunday, November 23, with Pastor Myron R. Schall the speaker. On November 26 Apostle E. J. Gleazer preached a Thanksgiving sermon and appealed to the branch to assist in the drive for the Auditorium fund. The Zion's League held a cake sale on December 6 for this fund, and the women donated the proceeds of a turkey dinner held on December 12. At the Communion service on December 7 a special offering for the Auditorium was received.

The Junior Zion's League held a Christmas party at the home of Patti Elam on December 19. Christmas services were held on December 21. In the morning the choir, directed by Edna Burdick, presented portions of Handel's Messiah. Solo parts were sung by Laurence MacDonald, E. Leroy Burdick, Hazel Damron, Virginia Winsor, and Marjorie Damitz. "What Think Ye of Jesus?" was the subject of the pastor's Christmas message. In the evening a play was presented under the direction of Maybelle Nephew. Gifts of canned foods for needy families were brought to the service by the children. The Christmas carolers paid their annual visit to the shut-ins on December 23. On Christmas Day the wedding of Nancy Sabin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Sabin, and Jimmie Kendrick was held at the church. Evangelist W. H. Dawson performed the ceremony.

Two Yule Camps for junior and senior young people held at Happy Valley were attended by many from the branch. Priests Lawrence R. Schall and E. Leroy Burdick were in charge. At the Communion service on January 4 Bishop E. C. Burdick spoke by the Spirit to these two young men, commending them particularly for their work among the youth of the district. There was also a message of admonition to the entire priesthood and membership.—Reported by LENA SWANEY

Harvest Festival Held

BREMERTON, WASHINGTON.—Bishop G. L. DeLapp was presented at the evening rededication service at the remodeled church on November 16. He received the check from Pastor Glenn Davis, the final payment on the debt to the Revolving Building Fund. Assisting with the service were Bishop Monte E. Lasater, Pastor Howard Sheehy of Seattle First Branch, Evangelist A. W. Lundeen, and Apostle E. J. Gleazer. Brother DeLapp gave the dedication message. Many of the Saints from Seattle First and Second Branches were present. After the service a reception was held in the lower auditorium where a large cake decorated with a picture of the church building in colored frosting was served.

The branch featured a Harvest Festival November 21-23. It began with a turkey dinner and bazaar. The Laurel Club had its bazaar displayed on decorated tables. The women of the branch tithed their canned goods, bringing their contributions to the bazaar.

On November 22, the Zion's League had its carnival. The festival was closed on Sunday with the message by Pastor Glenn Davis and a potluck dinner in the lower auditorium.

On November 23, the branch received recommendations for the ordinations of Ralph Baggerly and Jim Turner to the office of deacon.

Three babies were blessed on December 7 before the Communion service. They were Gary Allen, son of Brother and Sister John Ganson, blessed by Evangelist A. W. Lundeen and assisted by Elder Harry Turner; William Cullen, Jr., son of Brother and Sister William Cullen Bryant, blessed by Elder Charles Glover and assisted by Pastor Glenn Davis; and Paul Greg, son of Brother and Sister Paul Williams, blessed by Elder Harry Turner and assisted by Evangelist A. W. Lundeen.—Reported by MARY ELLEN TURNER

Women's Group Active

SANTA ROSA, CALIFORNIA.—On November 7, the United Council of Church Women met at the church for World Community Day. Sister Beulah Cline was program chairman, and over eighty women were present. Bundles of children's clothing were obtained and dedicated to be sent overseas.

On November 8, the women's department held their annual bazaar, dinner, food, and plants sale in Native Son's Hall. This project raised over $167. Sister Lula Rowley is president of the group; Jessie A. Wain, secretary; and Iva Harris, treasurer. To finish up the bazaar work, a sale was held together with a rummage sale on December 1. This netted $65. A previous rummage sale in October had raised almost $90. This money will be added to the building fund. The women are now working on quilts to be sent to Korea.—Reported by ETTA C. WALKER

New Missionary in District

HEARNE, TEXAS.—On Graceland Day, Charles Z. Renfroe gave a talk on "The High Points of Graceland Life." Elder Earl Allen of Marlin was also guest speaker for the day.

The building committee in co-operation with the women's department under the direction of Lula Shiels, president, served a turkey supper on November 25 and cleared ninety dollars.

Seventy Alfred H. Yale visited the branch on November 23, introducing Norman Cox, Jr., who will replace Brother Yale as Texas Central District missionary. Brother Yale has served as district missionary for the past three years and will be missed by the branch.

Seventy Z. Z. Renfroe conducted a series of missionary services December 7-14. Extensive visiting was done during this period.—Reported by NELLA JUNE DOTSON counsel and advice to these foreign students who faced the problems of living in a strange land.

Unlike the end of a book, September was not the end of this enriching experience; it was merely the culmination of our activities together as a group. For me it was the beginning of a new type of relationship sustained through the postal system and colored by the rosy hue of memory. I have heard from nearly all of my foreign friends. They are continuing to share their hopes, fears, and academic and social problems as well as their joys and new experiences with us. Many have sent me gifts which they brought with them from their native lands as a token of their gratitude and appreciation. I am humbled by their gracious words of praise and admiration, but I am also filled with a new determination to live a better life and to be an example to others in the United States and foreign lands.

This experience has broadened my outlook and increased my tolerance for other people as no other single experience could have done. Our experiment in international living was an overwhelming success. If this type of living could be carried out on an international level, the earth would indeed be a happier place. We of the KU Orientation Center are convinced that it can be done. Our purpose now is to be as pebbles thrown into the water, that, as a result, ripples may circle out farther and farther, and that at last the waves of good will may reach every shore on earth.

At one era in our history even the work of an evangelist was little understood by members of the higher quorums of the church. "The spirit of the prophets is subject to the prophets." The Spirit of God finds expression in men of understanding.

That these men [evangelists] should receive ordination, but hitherto those upon whom this burden has lain have neglected, for the reason that they did not understand the duties and prerogatives that attach to the office. Let my servants take heed and hesitate no longer.—Doctrine and Covenants 125: 6.

As a result of a clearer understanding many fine men now serve as evangelists.

We go on with Christ to help in completing his mission to the wandering and lost of all mankind.

To open the blind eyes, to bring out the prisoners from the prison, and them that sit in darkness out of the prison house.—Isaiah 42: 7.

Prosecute the missionary work in this land so far and so widely as you may. All are called according to the gifts of God unto them; and to the intent that all may labor together, let him that laboreth in the ministry and him that toileth in the affairs of the men of business and of work labor together with God for the accomplishment of the work intrusted to all.—Doctrine and Covenants 119: 8.

Herald House Reminder

One of our missionaries who received a complimentary copy of this diary calls attention to the fact that it has a statement from the Nazarene Theological Seminary in it. This is due to the fact that these books are ordered from an outside publisher who supplies them to a number of denominations. It is quite evident that some mix-up in the order has occurred. If any of the other books we have sent out have been bound in error, we will be glad to replace them with our own copy.

DEATHS

TUCKER.—Daniel, was born May 10, 1869, in Broadclyst, Devonshire, England, and died January 22, 1953, at his home in Kansas City, Kansas. With his parents he came to America at the age of fifteen, settling in Kansas City. After working for several brass foundries he established his own business, the Progressive Brass Company. He retired twelve years ago and for the past two years had been in ill health. His wife, Jessie, died in August, 1951. He had been a member of the Reorganized Church since April 19, 1891.

He is survived by a son, Mayor Clark E. Tucker; a brother, John Tucker; a grandson; and two great-grandchildren, all of Kansas City, Kansas. Funeral services were held at Butler Chapel with Elder Evan A. Fry officiating. Burial was in Highland Park Cemetery.

FAHNSTROM.—Beulah Harpman, was born August 12, 1907, at East Galesburg, Illinois, and died January 4, 1953, at Cottage Hospital in Galesburg. She was married on February 27, 1929, to Clarence Fahnstrom, who survives her. She had been a member of the Reorganized Church since 1941.

Besides her husband she leaves two daughters: Mrs. Raymond Cole of Galesburg and Mrs. Clairdon Carlson of Williamsfield; a brother, Robert Harpman of Martinez, California; two sisters: Mrs. Florence Carrasca of Galva, Illinois, and Mrs. Dorothy Garrigan of Kewanee, Illinois; and four grandchildren. A son died in infancy. Funeral services were held at the Johnson and Gill Chapel in Galva, Elders J. W. Breshears and Ambrose King officiating. Burial was in Victoria Cemetery.

BLACKETTER.—Rebecca Johnston, daughter of William and Elizabeth Troutner Johnston, was born September 15, 1869, in Lincoln County, Missouri, and died December 25, 1952, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Alma Saxbury, in Barry, Illinois. On August 11, 1894, she was married to Edmon Blacketter, who preceded her in death on April 16, 1943. She had been a member of the Reorganized Church since 1896.

Surviving are four daughters: Mrs. Alza Conner of Hannibal, Missouri; Mrs. Saxbury; Mrs. Maude Sappington and Mrs. Ollie Bennett of St. Charles, Missouri; two stepchildren: Mrs. Grace Smith of Barry and Bessie Blacketter of Hannibal; twenty-four grandchildren; and twenty-seven great-grandchildren. Two sons died in infancy.

DAVEY.—Roy Franklin, son of Edward C. and Mammie Davey, was born at Deer Lodge, Montana on July 18, 1904, and died at Independence, Missouri, on January 9, 1953. He was baptized into the Reorganized Church on October 20, 1912, and served as a priest from August 22, 1926, until his death. He is survived by one brother, Roscoe E. Davey of Independence, and a sister, Mrs. Ernestine Smelser, also of Independence.

JOHNSTON.—Louise Dinkle Spanougle, was born February 2, 1905, at Cando, North Dakota, and died January 5, 1953, at St. Joseph, Missouri. On March 29, 1930, she was married to Stanley Johnston who survives her. She had been a member of the Reorganized Church since 1924.

Besides her husband she leaves two daughters: Mrs. Fern King of Holt, Missouri, and Mrs. Peggy Carpenter of Oak Grove, Missouri; and two sons: James Gail and Dennis Kelly of the home in Trimble, Missouri.

GLENN.—Mary K., daughter of John and Margaret Sutcliffe, was born July 29, 1862, at Cannelton, Indiana, and died June 22, 1952, at Derby, Indiana. On September 5, 1880, she was married to Adam Glenn, a widower with three children. One son and one daughter of the seven children born to them died in infancy, and Mr. Glenn preceded his wife in death in 1917. Another son died in 1936. After this she continued to live on the home place near Derby with her daughter and stepdaughter. She had belonged to the Reorganized Church since she was thirteen. Forty-five members of her family joined the church, and six hold offices in the priesthood.

Funeral services were conducted by Elders H. W. Burwell and Chester Metcalf. She was buried beside her husband in Conner Cemetery near Derby.

POET'S LIFE

A poet leads a tragic life, as folks are apt to measure men;
As he writes, or idly fondles, with his paper, ink, and pen.
Sad and drawn his face and features, long his whiskers and his hair,
While his clothes are worn and leaning on the threshold of despair.
Hungry, too, he goes, and friendless, writing 'twixt his scattered meals.
As he calmly puts on paper lofty lines with high ideals.
Care may vex his soul and body, still his thoughts are superfine!
Though his troubles number forty, still his joys are thirty-nine.

W. L. Hartnell

FALSE VIEW

Prejudice may be considered as a continual false medium of viewing things; for prejudiced persons not only never speak well, but also never think well of those whom they dislike, and the whole character and conduct is considered with an eye to that particular thing which offends them.

Anon.

SWEARING

Of all the crimes that ever disgraced society, that of swearing admits of the least palliation. No possible benefit can be derived from it, and nothing but perverseness and depravity of human nature would ever have suggested it; yet such is its prevalence that by many it is mistaken for a fashionable acquirement and considered by unreflecting persons as indicative of energy and decision of character.

A MARK FOR ENVY

Never forget that by your advancement you have become an object of envy to those whom you have outstripped in the race of life and a tacit reproach to their want of energy or capacity which they never will forgive. You must, therefore, lay your account to be a mark for envy, hatred, and malice, and all uncharitableness.

HONOR AND SERVICE

Honor was the virtue of the pagan; but Christianity teaches a more enlarged and nobler code, calling into activity all the best feelings of our nature, illuminating our path through this world with deeds of mercy and charity mutually done and received, and sustaining us amidst difficulties and temptations by the hope of a glorious immortality in which peace shall be inviolable and joy eternal.

PRAYER OF THE RIGHTEOUS

"The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much."—James 5:16. We hear a lot about God's forgiving the sinner because of the sinner's prayer, and that is wonderful. But the sinner prays only for himself; he cannot see past his own remorse and misery. The righteous man can pray for someone else; he can include the whole world in his prayer.—Fred O. Davies, in a sermon at Malvern Hill church.

We'd Like You to Know . . .

Raymond Gerald Gabriel

AN INTEREST in "Utopian communities" comes in handy for Brother Gabriel in his missionary work for the church with its hope and goal of Zion. He first became interested in "Utopias" while serving in the Navy during 1944 and 1945, and enrolled with the University of Missouri for correspondence work in related subjects. On his return to civilian life, he entered the University of Missouri as a regular student to pursue his interests in community problems. He spent his first semester there on a special assignment in social engineering and later received his B.S. degree in agriculture. He still does unaccredited work in social and community problems as a hobby.

In 1949, after graduation from college, Brother Gabriel moved with his family—his wife, the former Doris Talcott whom he married July 3, 1938, and two children, Jerry, Jr., now eleven, and Cherie, nine—to Liberty, Missouri, where he served as county 4-H agent. Since then, Dennis, three, has been added to the family.

The Gabriels were not at Liberty long, though, because Brother Gabriel went under church appointment in June of the same year they moved there. His first appointment was to act as supervising pastor for the Stewartsville, Osborn, Maple Grove, and Cameron, Missouri, congregations. He is now missionary for the Eastern Colorado District, and his family lives in Colorado Springs.

An elder since May 1, 1949, he has been a member of the church since he was fifteen. He was baptized in his home town of Kennett, Missouri, on October 5, 1930. He soon served as Zion's League president for the Southeast Missouri District. He attended Graceland in 1936-37 and continued in Zion's League work after moving to Independence in 1935. He also served as a group priest at the Walnut Park congregation for six years. Later, while at the University of Missouri, he served as pastor of the college group at Columbia.

He worked for a dry cleaning company for five years and as a guard for an arms company for four years while living in Independence before going into the Navy. He served most of his Navy time at Pearl Harbor, Hawaii.

News and Notes

FROM HEADQUARTERS

PRESIDENT SMITH HONORED

President Israel A. Smith was the guest of honor at a dinner given at noon at the Auditorium by the Laurel Club on February 2, Brother Smith's birthday. Other guests were members of the First Presidency and the Presiding Bishopric. This continues a custom of many years.

APOSTLE MESLEY IN CANADA

Apostle C. G. Mesley has just returned to Independence from the anniversary services of the Toronto Branch and reunion-planning sessions throughout Michigan and Ontario.

APOSTLE IN EAST

Apostle D. T. Williams traveled in the East from January 17 to February 2. He was in Washington, D.C., where he saw the inauguration ceremonies and parade. He preached at the branch in Washington, D.C., in Elk Mills, and Baltimore, Maryland. Then he went to Portsmouth, Virginia, for week-end services and the ordination of men who had been approved by the previous conference. He visited Beckley, West Virginia, then traveled to Ironton, West Portsmouth, and Cincinnati, Ohio. Brother Williams reports that the group in Cincinnati is growing and is looking forward to building a new church.

SOUTHERN MISSION APPOINTEES MEET

Apostle Percy E. Farrow, in charge of the Southern Mission, reports that Elder Lawrence Reiff of Hattiesburg, Mississippi, has been appointed nonresident pastor of the unorganized territory in Mississippi and Louisiana. He visits Jackson, Mississippi, once a month and is now planning to begin services at Baton Rouge, Louisiana. The two cities are capital cities of the states. Brother Farrow also reports that the appointees of the Southern Mission met for four days' fellowship and meetings, and through the courtesy of Brother Emory Powell of Bayou La Batre, Alabama, the "Day Queen" was made available for trips to the Gulf of Mexico. Elder Franklyn S. Weddle was with Brother Farrow during this time.

MUSIC INSTITUTES IN SOUTH

Apostle Percy E. Farrow and Elder Franklyn S. Weddle, General Church director of music, traveled through the southern area of the Southern Mission. Brother Weddle conducted institutes on music at Pensacola for the Pensacola and Mobile Districts, and at Orlando for the Florida District, and at Montgomery for the Alabama District. Brother Farrow and Brother Weddle also visited Escatawpa and Mobile in the Mobile District, Brewton in the Pensacola District, and Tampa and Miami, Florida. A new mission has been opened at Mt. Dora, Florida. Brother Farrow reports that the work is growing in the Florida area, particularly in the Orlando, Tampa, and Miami branches, and several other missions in Florida and Louisiana.

ATTENDS LEAGUE LEADERS MEETING

F. Carl Mesle, General Church youth director, attended the Zion's League leaders conference at Carthage, Missouri, January 31. The conference was under the supervision of Harry Shank, League leader for the Spring River District. On the next day, Brother Mesle was at Pittsburg, Kansas, and met with the Zion's League and the college student group.

A Most Regrettable Incident

FOR SOME TIME I have felt impelled to present something in the columns of the Herald respecting one of the most unfortunate incidents in the history of the church. The central figure was a man who at the time was a member of the church and who went through the hard experiences of the church in an early day in the state of Missouri. His name was George M. Hinkle. Historians of the events of the so-called "Mormon War" in Missouri during the year of 1838 have placed upon him the odium of having betrayed his brethren. This charge he stoutly and consistently resisted, and his posterity, people of good repute, many of them members of the church, have just as vigorously denied what history, wrongfully I am inclined to believe, recorded as to the transactions in question.

Who more than a descendant of Joseph Smith should give consideration to the disputed events and come to the rescue of a man's reputation if the circumstances will even in the least support his explanation of good intentions? I have known some of the descendants of Colonel Hinkle, and I have taken the time to investigate the defense which Colonel Hinkle made and which has been made on his behalf in later years by his son, S. J. Hinkle, and by his grandson, Dr. J. G. E. Hinkle, of Bethany, Missouri.

It is a fundamental principle that one accused of a crime, or charged with any conduct that is or may be deemed reprehensible, has the right to explain or present any defense that he may have; and where there is a conflict of evidence, the decent and charitable thing is to resolve any and all doubts in his favor. In fact, instructions to juries in criminal cases stipulate that the accused must be convicted only upon a preponderance of the evidence, that if there is a reasonable doubt in the minds of the jurors, the accused must be acquitted.

It appears that Colonel Hinkle was charged as guilty after the incidents in question, and that he was not tried or given an opportunity for a fair trial—but let us state briefly what was believed about him.

IN THE OCTOBER, 1920, ISSUE of the Journal of History appears a letter written by Colonel Hinkle's son, S. J. Hinkle, from which we can learn something of his father's life after the unfortunate experience in Missouri. In the same issue was published a letter written by Colonel Hinkle, which had appeared in the Messenger and Advocate of August 1, 1845. From this we learn his version of the matter.

It was at a time when the Missouri militia in great force was about to begin battle against the Latter Day Saints, and Colonel Hinkle, ranking officer in the armed forces of the Saints, went with others to meet officers of the State militia who approached under a flag of truce. Brigham H. Roberts, the Mormon historian, gives an account as follows:

Colonel Hinkle went to meet the flag and secretly made the following engagement. . . . Towards evening I [Joseph Smith] was waited upon by Colonel Hinkle, who stated that the officers of the militia desired to have an interview with me and some others, hoping that the difficulties might be settled without occasion to carry into effect the exterminating orders which they had received from the governor.

The account then goes on to state that as soon as Joseph Smith and others appeared before the commanding officer, General Lucas, they were seized and thrust into jail where they were detained for several months.

It appears to have been believed, whether it was a mere assumption or not, that their seizure as prisoners had been arranged or consented to by Colonel Hinkle; thus he was charged with treachery to his comrades in misfortune. It seems that later he was expelled from the church. Our own Church History, Volume 2, page 359, has this to say:

On March 17 (1839), at a conference held at Quincy, several were expelled from the church. The record is as follows: "After the conference fully expressed their feelings upon the subject, it was unanimously voted that the following persons be excommunicated from the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints; viz.: George H. Hinkle, Sampson Avard. . . ."

It thus does not appear what were the specific charges on which the conference tried him and took action, and in the absence of more information we could well surmise that it was premised on his participation in the difficulty at Far West. It is to be regretted that the record on this point is so meager.

THE LETTER of Colonel Hinkle's written in 1844, addressed to W. W. Phelps and published in 1845 as before mentioned, fails to enlighten us as to the trial before the church conference at Quincy. From this letter it is clear that he was holding Phelps as one of the parties responsible for slander and vilification:

Those vilifiers have stated it, and vociferated its repetition throughout the length and breadth of our happy land, and the newspapers of the day have thrown it upon the wings of the wind . . . that I, as a base wretch, after having the confidence of the church, yet in that critical moment of their perils in Missouri, when they in and of Far West were besieged by between three and four thousand men—the story is, that I, there and then, betrayed the heads of the church into the hands of the military authorities of Missouri, and that, too, for a large sum of money. . . . And many such like reports have been put in circulation by my enemies to do me injury; all of which, before God, I declare to be as false as Satan himself.

Notice of Appointments

With the division of the former Central Oklahoma District into the Oklahoma City and Tulsa Districts, we are requesting Brother E. F. Yerrington, who formerly served as agent in this area, to continue in the capacity of bishop's agent for the Oklahoma City District. We are appreciative of his good services over the past years and are assured of the continued co-operation from the Saints residing in the new Oklahoma City District.

Notice is hereby given of the appointment of Alan D. Kelley, 224 N. Quanah, Tulsa 6, Oklahoma, as bishop's agent of the Tulsa District. Solicitors in this district should send their reports each month to Brother Kelley at the above address.

We commend Brother Kelley to the Saints of the Tulsa District for their support. We take this opportunity of expressing our continued interest in and our sincere good wishes for the continued progress of these two newly organized districts.

Dr. Cheville to Speak at Kansas State Teachers College

Dr. Roy A. Cheville has been invited to participate in Religious Emphasis Week at Kansas State Teachers College at Pittsburg, Kansas, February 15-20. On the staff of leaders will be a Roman Catholic priest, a Jewish rabbi, and Protestant preachers. Dr. Cheville will carry a schedule of group devotions, general lectures, panel discussions, classroom and club presentations, and a faculty conference. The week opens with a retreat at Racine, Missouri, Sunday afternoon. One of his first assignments is called "Think Session," in the Music Hall Auditorium Tuesday morning at 10:00. Another comes that afternoon in Skylight Lounge, "Christ, Einstein, or Both?" An interesting session is scheduled for Thursday afternoon at 3:00—"Skeptics Hour"—with all leaders participating in a discussion, "Faith Under Fire."

The editors think this may be of interest to members in the area who can attend.

Helen Weeks Dies

An automobile accident February 6 proved fatal to Miss Helen Weeks, supervisor of Resthaven, home for aged women. Her funeral service was held at Stone Church February 8. She was taken to Rhodes, Iowa, for burial.

THE FIRST PRESIDENCY

Received from Elder Anton Compijer, Rozemarynstraat 44, Rotterdam, Holland, February 2:

I spent the week end in Friesland, where we had a baptismal meeting at Leeuwarden; five people (four adults, one child) were baptized. I planned to stay there longer, but hurried home today because of the situation in the southwestern part of Holland.

Holland has been hit by one of the worst catastrophes in its history. Saturday night a severe high tide and a hurricane broke dikes every place, letting the water sweep over the land. I had to come home by a detour; the railway to Rotterdam was broken up, too. In the section where I lived in Rotterdam, south, and where most of our church people live, we had one meter of water yesterday. We live on a second floor, so no damage was done to us. As far as I know now most of our people are all right. Two families (Mosterdijk and Van Renswarde) had their houses flooded (about sixteen inches of water and mud). I do not have any news on two families living in villages outside Rotterdam. These are isolated and being evacuated.

The radio just now told that so far over 400 people have been killed already. Over a million people are in great need. The air force is dropping food and material such as rubber boats over the province of Zeeland, where several islands are covered by the water. American engineering troops from Germany are on their way to Holland to render their services.

I have checked on the Annastraat property. The dike there held out and no damage at all has been done to it; not even a cellar is flooded, so we have been lucky there.

Everywhere there are holes in the streets. Gas and electricity are limited because of damaged works. People are busy pumping water out of their cellars and drying their rugs and linoleums in the streets. However, this what happened at Rotterdam is nothing compared to what is happening in the province of Zeeland. There there are still lots of people in the trees and on the roofs of their houses.

This is all for now. I thought you might be anxious to hear from this country, and that's why I wrote. Should there be any further news, I shall let you know.

Herald readers will be happy to learn of this item which comes from the Pacific coast area:

G. E. Tickemyer was tenor soloist in the 1952 Christmas performance of The Messiah by the Pasadena Civic Chorus and Pasadena Symphony. This performance is regarded as the most important on the West Coast and was broadcast on the "Voice of America" in Europe. It was directed by Dr. Richard Lert, former director of the Berlin Opera.

A Faith That Functions

A sermon preached in Denver, Colorado, August 10, 1952

By Ward A. Hougas

For verily I say unto you, That whosoever shall say unto this mountain, Be thou removed, and be thou cast into the sea; and shall not doubt in his heart, but shall believe that those things which he saith shall come to pass; he shall have whatsoever he saith fulfilled. Therefore I say unto you, Whatsoever things ye desire, when ye pray, believe that ye receive, and ye shall have whatsoever ye ask. And when ye stand praying, forgive if ye have aught against any; that your Father also who is in heaven, may forgive you your trespasses. But if you do not forgive, neither will your Father who is in heaven forgive your trespasses.—Mark 11: 25-28.

I AM CONSCIOUS that it is easy to tell you what faith is. I can tell you that "faith is the assurance of things hoped for; the evidence of things not seen." And when I get through you'll know just about as much as you did when I started, maybe a little less, because it is just about as clear as mud. So let's just forget this stock answer that we give so often and talk about faith as it actually affects us.

A lot of times our minds are pretty badly clouded as we attempt to figure out what faith is. We talk about faith, belief, hope, and desire as though they were one and the same thing, and in our misunderstanding sometimes we take the supports out from beneath the faith which we do possess.

The story is told of the spider who built himself a nest way up in the peak of a barn. One day he let himself down on a single strand and discovered that the sun was shining, so he built himself a web down in the sunshine, and there he prospered. The other insects came to him and became entangled in his web, and he lived on the fat of the land. Then one day as he was wandering around in his web he discovered the little single strand which ran up into the dark peak of the barn. He thought, "That's a foolish thing; it doesn't look good on my mansion here," so he clipped it off. To his amazement the web collapsed around him.

We get to wandering around our mansions sometimes. We come to some little things that we have almost forgotten—they seem to have so little significance in our lives. We just don't like the looks of them and are somewhat ashamed of the way they hook on to our present pattern of life, so we clip them off. Then to our surprise, we, too, may discover our webs have collapsed, and we find ourselves unable to face life in hours of need. We are short of that which we thought we possessed, because most of us feel that we possess faith; most of us are sure that we have lots of faith, when actually our supply is running pitifully low. We believe, but we have not yet reached the stage where we actually possess faith.

THE STORY OF THE FIG TREE in the Scriptures takes us back to that lonely road along the Judean hills. Jesus and his little group of followers were traveling along rather early in the morning. Jesus was hungry. I presume his disciples were hungry too, and as they looked afar off and saw this fig tree with its luxurious foliage and every promise of fruit, I imagine they quickened their pace to reach it because they thought there would be food. When they got there they discovered nothing but leaves. Jesus cursed the fig tree by some process and went on his way.

Then a few days later they came back and the disciples were surprised to find that the foliage, which only a few days before had been so green and luxuriant, was curled and dry, lying down around the foot of the tree. The boughs were shriveled because they too had died and dried up. Then Jesus preached one of his short sermons. I wish some of the rest of us could learn to preach as short sermons as he did and still say as much as he said, but we haven't learned that art yet. Standing out on the hillside, he looked at those men and said four words: "Have faith in God."

When you actually face it, perhaps that was one of the greatest sermons Jesus ever preached, because he told us then and there, in every way, the result of nonproductivity is death. And that is fundamentally true. If your body today would cease to produce new cells you would soon be dead, because life is a process of production and reproduction. Jesus told the disciples that the day their lives became nonproductive—when they were mere foliage—death would be inevitable. I know of no better sermon Jesus ever preached than the simple, fundamental statement that when we cease to grow and produce for the kingdom, then as far as the kingdom is concerned we are dead. Whenever our faith ceases to produce "fruit," then our faith is absolutely dead.

Someone has said that belief is the acceptance of a map, and faith is the taking of a journey. I think that is pretty well put. So many times in our religious life we reach out and "accept a map"; we accept the church and become nominal members; we believe that which the church teaches, but because we cease to grow, because we cease to produce fruit, we die. The sad thing is that a high percentage of our nominal members are spiritually dead because that which they had the opportunity of producing by way of faith remained a simple belief and brought forth no fruitage which caused it to become a faith.

You have a belief; follow it up, and you will develop a faith and a knowledge of what you need to know. Yet the very nature of faith makes it active, and the very nature of faith demands that you be active.

I AM ALWAYS INTERESTED but rather disturbed as I move among inactive, isolated people. Invariably they bear one testimony—that their faith in this work is strong. And they believe it; they believe that their faith is strong when actually they have no faith. They believe in the church, but they have no faith; this is evidenced by the fact that they are perfectly content to remain inactive or semiactive—and isolated.

This matter of faith is the process of adventuring in life—of pushing out toward divine goals. And, interestingly enough, we generally find them when we look for them.

A year or two ago there was quite a stir in southern California. One particular organization put out a lot of publicity as to whether people believe in a two-letter or a four-letter religion. Curiously I investigated what it was all about. The two-letter religion was "a do religion" and the four-letter religion was "a done religion." The do religion demanded that a person do something; the done religion simply assured its members that Jesus paid it all, and that's all there was to it.

Sometimes I think Latter Day Saintism has four letters in it, but it functions on a two-letter basis. If this religion is to mean anything to you, if you want to have faith—a mature faith—that faith should be a growing faith which causes you to do something about it. After all, everything you do in life demands some measure of faith. If you go to the tap for a drink of water, you have faith that back of that source of supply is some protection and the water which you drink is pure; however, sometimes that is not the case. When you go to the grocery store to buy food, you don't raise any particular questions because you have faith that through our system of inspection the food is not adulterated. Yet just the other day I discovered that someone here in Denver put rocks in the cans of beans he sold and got in difficulty with the law. The law says that type of thing can't be done, and we have faith that the laws are going to be enforced so that when we buy food we know that food is going to be fit for human consumption.

We turn the switch and have light. That is, we have faith that we are going to have light. I turned the switch here the other day, and we didn't have any light; we had no organ because the contact had been broken. We express faith in practically everything we do. We get into our automobiles and push the starter. Normally it starts. Once in a while it doesn't, but usually it does. Now, since we accept everything in life with a measure of faith, why is it at times we are so hesitant to grasp for some of those things which the apostle talked about when he said, "the evidence of things not seen"? Why is it we are so slow to reach out for what we can't see, instead of moving toward it with a faith which would bring it to us?

SIR OLIVER LODGE of the British Association for the Promotion of Scientific Adventure once said that genuine religion had its roots deep down in the heart of humanity and in the reality of things. We don't have much difficulty any more, but I can remember back when there was a lot of difficulty in the thinking of the people about the story of creation. There was a lot of argument; many people were upset. Then finally we came to the realization that it didn't make much difference what we believed about the creation—whether we believed that God actually created the world miraculously in six days of twenty-four hours each, or whether we agreed with the scientist and said, "After all, God created the world through millions, perhaps billions, of years." The time element is not so important as our believing that God did create. For me it is easier to see that God worked through the natural laws of creation, as I have seen those laws operate in my own day. But whichever way people believe, they must have some measure of faith that God did create.

Faith is most scientific, and only those with a smattering of knowledge seem to find difficulty with it. I discover that it is mostly freshmen who have the most trouble with this matter of science versus religion. There really is no such thing. It is science and religion, because to those who have come to understand, faith is very scientific. We believe in an order of things, and we talk sometimes with pride about the great sidereal universe, as though we had something to do with the creation of it. If we believe in all of these things, then why should it be so hard to reach back and have faith that behind this order of things is a creator of the order?

Someone has said that faith is not only a means of obeying, but the principle act of obedience; not only an altar on which to sacrifice, but a sacrifice itself, and perhaps the greatest of all, the submission of our understanding, thinking, and feelings to the greater reasoning of God.

SACRIFICE COMES BY FAITH. What is sacrifice anyway? We dodge it sometimes as we would dodge bullets. I talk to people to whom sacrifice means the giving up of everything in life that is worth while and doing all that they don't want to do, or doing nothing that they do want to do.

Did it ever occur to you that sacrifice is not a matter of giving up things? It is the process of taking those things, inherent or acquired, which make life what it is and making the use of them a sacred matter. You don't give up anything, because you do what you really desire to do. The person who takes the properties of life and causes them to become sacred in his hands finds greater joy in the sacred use of those things than does the individual who has not yet gained that viewpoint and who still feels that sacrifice means he must do everything in life he doesn't want to do or nothing that he does want to do.

The person who has developed the spirit of sacrifice finds serving God and his fellow-men the most desirable thing in the world, because he has adjusted his viewpoints and attitudes. Sacrifice to him becomes merely the sacred use of that which God has given or loaned to him.

I suggest that when you take your time, money, hopes, abilities, and ideals and make them sacred, life becomes enriched and beautiful. Then, perhaps for the first time, you actually begin to live and do the things that above all else in the world you wish to do. Then life becomes truly godly and brings you eternal satisfaction. This is the life which Jesus said he came that we might have and have more abundantly. This is faith—the sacred use of your life. Such faith demands action; it makes you take the things in which you believe and use them in a sacred manner for God, and in this process you develop a faith which stands out above all other things.

Someone has said, "I prefer a firm religious faith to every other blessing, for it makes life a discipline of goodness, creates new hopes when those of the world vanish, throws over the decay of life the most gorgeous of all lights, and wakens life even in death." We need this light of life which stands out above other lights. It will come when we learn to make sacred those things in which we have faith.

LAST WEDNESDAY NIGHT at prayer service we had quite an experience. In the request for prayers there came to our attention two families in which tragedy had struck, and in the discussion which followed someone suggested that after all, for hours such as this, we need the cumulative experience which gives us the type of faith to stand firmly. At the close of the service I used that illustration of the mathematician who studied geometry. He didn't study it piecemeal—simply cramming for an examination—he studied geometry so that it became a part of his life. He read, meditated, attended each class, and did his homework; he literally lived with the things he desired to know, and geometry to him became life.

And yet in this spiritual realm of ours we sometimes feel we can become powerful by simply cramming for examinations. We are going to reunion this week, and, if history repeats itself, I can tell you just about what will happen. Toward the end of the week some people will get very interested in prayer services—people who don't bother to go to prayer services at home at all. Why? They think they can cram a little for the examination and make a passing grade. There are lots of different grades, of course. In school some students get straight "A's"; some get "B's"; some are thankful to get "C's."

It was very apparent to me the other night as I listened to the prayers and testimonies that we were becoming conscious of the fact that we couldn't just cram for the exams and have straight "A's," because straight "A's" come only to those who pay the price of doing their homework, of meditating, of studying, of being present in the public discussions, of taking advantage of every opportunity which was offered that the subject might become more and more a part of them.

We talk about faith as though it were something we could create in the beginning of our lives and just put on the shelf where we could have it from then on. We fail to realize that faith demands action and stays alive only as we continue to replenish it, just as our bodies continue to function only as our cells continue to reproduce. Whenever that process stops, deterioration begins, and before long we die. Similarly, if our faith is not stimulated and reinforced every day it too disintegrates and dies.

You may feel that you have great faith, but if your faith is not forcing you into action, causing you to do your homework, to attend class, to meditate, and to study—if it does not cause you to become the thing which in your ideals you know you should become—yours is a weak faith, perhaps only a measure of belief.

There is no use in our trying to make ourselves believe that we can be strong in the faith and yet do nothing about it, because it's just impossible. Faith demands action. There are many passing grades, of course. We believe, as the apostle Paul believed, that "there is one glory of the sun, another glory of the moon, and another glory of the stars, and as one star differs from another, so also is the resurrection of the dead." Let us face the fact that we may cram for exams and by some process secure a passing grade, yet that grade may be very low in the scale of spiritual endeavor.

IN A NUMBER OF NEW BUILDINGS we walk up to the door and about the time we begin to wonder where the handle on the thing is, it flies open. Just the other day, in one of the downtown stores, I saw an elderly lady standing back about six or eight feet wondering why the door wouldn't open. She was still there when I left, waiting for the door to open. The seeing eye had not yet caught her in the process of moving forward.

I am convinced that many of us who have great ideals stand afar off—many of us who really desire to do something for humanity and the kingdom. We stand back, and the door never opens because the Great Seeing Eye has not yet seen in our lives a willingness, desire, and determination to push forward in the process of accomplishing what we desire to.

I happen to know many men who today would be serving in the priesthood if they only had the courage, the determination, and the faith to move forward in the process of becoming what they desire to become.

We believe in the possibilities of eternal life now as well as hereafter, and those with faith do move into a quality of eternal life on this earth. Men of faith are willing to accept for themselves the attitude of sacrifice, which means the making sacred of their lives, and develop that quality of eternal life which brings them joy and happiness. After all, we collect much in life even as we go. Those who have learned to live the good life receive—even here and now—the peace and satisfaction of soul which comes to people who are willing to pay the price of the good life. It takes faith to adjust our lives to the basis of sacred use.

The story is told about two fellows. One was a skeptic, and one a faithful man. The skeptic said to the faithful man, "Now, Joe, suppose when you die you discover there isn't any heaven; what are you going to do?"

Joe looked at him and answered, "Well, that will be all right; if it should happen that there is no heaven, I'll have had a good time living for it anyway."

Each started on his own way; then the faithful man turned around and said, "By the way, John, I'd like to ask you a question."

"Okay, what is it?"

"Just what are you going to do if after you die you discover there is a hell?" There was no more said; each man went his own way.

Life demands faith; it demands faith that we live now as well as hereafter. The man of faith gets the most from life. The survival of the fittest is the law in the animal world. The gospel law involves something bigger than this. It comprehends the revival of those the world says are unfit. The work of the church and the kingdom has been established and pushed forward ordinarily by people who have not been outstanding so far as the world is concerned, but they have been men and women of intelligence who were willing to accept the faith which God gave them (as he gives each of us) and reach down and lift up those who might otherwise have been squeezed out by the law of the survival of the fittest.

Our business is to help the unfit. Jesus said that the well people had no need of a physician, but that they who are sick—the unfit in life—did.

Remember there must be fruitage, else when the "foliage" is gone, life itself is void. That was what was in Jesus' mind that day when he stood out on the Judean hillside and pointed to the fig tree that had died because it had failed to produce fruit. He said to his disciples, "Have faith in God," because he knew that if they had faith in God they would produce fruit; they would be active and the All-seeing Eye would continue to open the doors of opportunity. All who have the courage and the faith to move forward in the kingdom of God will find fruitage—eternal fruitage.

Our greatest glory is not in never falling, but in rising every time we fall.

Humility is the solid foundation of all the virtues.

The heart of a wise man should resemble a mirror, which reflects every object without being sullied by any.

Ignorance is the night of the mind, but a night without moon or star.

The superior wishes to be slow in his words, and earnest in his conduct.

The Life of Hubert Case Part VII

Ordination as a Seventy

We soon left for Takaboto. We enjoyed meeting the people and stayed with them from November 15 to December 11. Here we made many of the best friends we had in the islands. We sailed for Papeete about the middle of December and when we arrived all seemed pleased to see us. Poris' house was made ready for us to live in. We were glad to see the printing press at work. On Sunday, December 19, 1897, Hubert was ordained to the office of seventy by Brother Burton.

One day we resolved to do a little sight-seeing before we left Tahiti. We hired a hack and drove to Point Venus where the lighthouse was built. This marks the spot where white men first landed on Tahiti. Climbing to the top of the 108-foot lighthouse we saw coconut trees near by that were taller than the lighthouse. The baby did not enjoy the hack ride; she was more frightened than I had ever seen her since the event on Hikueru. She grasped Sister Burton's dress in one hand, and mine in the other, and held on for dear life. She was now two years old.

The next trip we made was out to Tiona to spend the day. Here we held prayer meetings, and Hubert preached. We returned the same day. The baby was not so frightened this time to ride in a wagon. Brother Burton had bought a small hand-operated printing press, and Hubert helped a great deal with printing. Before we left, he printed a tract which he had written on the Sabbath question.

Return to the United States

When we were preparing to go home, I did a lot of sewing for the baby and myself. Hubert helped Brother Burton operate the press, and they did a lot of work which had been waiting to be done until Brother Burton had some help. We began packing our beautiful sea shells first. There was a large box of them, a collection which we have always cherished. The ship arrived, and when she was ready to sail we sent our goods aboard. After bidding everybody a tearful good-by we, too, went on board. The "Galilee" was a much larger ship than we were accustomed to, and we did not get so sick at first. We sailed two days with a fair wind, then a gale struck our ship and broke the foremast about eighteen feet from the deck. The sails and mass of ropes swept right around the stub of the mast. We had to go back for repairs.

The unsteady motion of the damaged ship made me much sicker than before. We were four days getting back, anchoring again on January 21. We had to take our hand luggage ashore and go back to Poris' house. We left again on January 25. The trip from Papeete to San Francisco took thirty days. Hubert went ashore, found Brother Parkin, and obtained our passage money. Brother Parkin also told him that I had a cousin who lived in San Francisco, who wanted us to stay with them while we were in the city. As we expected to remain a couple of weeks to get used to United States climate again, we went to their house. I had not seen my cousin since I was ten years old and had only a dim recollection of him. I had never met the girl he married and their family.

They seemed very glad to see us, and I was glad to have some little children for Cicely to play with. It took much longer for her to get acquainted with them than with the native youngsters. She spoke fluent Tahitian, but no English at all except "Papa" and "Mama." Yet she understood everything we said to her, and we always used English in speaking to her. Our first job was getting our washing and ironing done. There was so much we finally sent it all to a Chinese laundry. The first place I went was to a store to find a coat. I had none, and San Francisco was colder than I seemed to remember that even the Iowa weather was.

By Alice Montague Case

It was good to go to church and hear a service in English. At first I tried to keep up with the preacher and turn it all into Tahitian. It took me several weeks to quit this foolish attempt.

Meeting Father Montague

We decided to go home by the southern route, then wished we hadn't when we found how hot and dusty it was. Our main reason for going this way was that my father, who was missionary in charge of Texas, was at Standley, Indian Territory, and wanted us to visit him. We were to meet him and stop there for a short time. Of course as we traveled we always looked out at the stations to see if there were people we might know. As we were nearing Sherman, Texas, I heard Hubert say, "Well, I guess you'd better sit down here." I looked up, and there stood my father. We were all excited and happy at this unexpected meeting.

Ellis Short and Earl D. Bailey

We arrived in Standley at midnight. Brother Ellis Short met us and soon had a room ready for us to go in and occupy. He and Brother Pickering had a lumber mill at this place; they obtained logs for it from the pine forests near by. There was quite a village with stores to provide the workers with the things they needed. They had built a church, and we attended services there several times.

We also became acquainted with Brother Earl D. Bailey and family there. This acquaintance was kept up by meetings at reunions and other church gatherings for many years. His fireside talks were something we shall always remember. Finally Father wanted to move on toward Independence and Conference. We went with him to Webb City, Missouri, for a short stay with some old friends of his, Mr. and Mrs. O. P. Sutherland. While we were at their house my father's nephew came from Weir City, Kansas, to see him and meet us. It was the first time that I had met Harvey Bird. He was very fond of Father. We met many noble Saints at Webb City and enjoyed our stay.

Baby Cicely had her first experience with snow while there. There was a light snowfall and the porch floor was covered about halfway to the house. She slipped out there to get some of it, thinking it was sugar. She fell, and as I went out to get her, she stood up, shaking her hands and saying in Tahitian, "Oh, Mama, this sugar makes my hands so sick!"

Conference in Independence

About the last of March, we arrived in Independence, Missouri. We were assigned the R. J. Parker home. The next day my mother and sister, Grace Vredenburgh, arrived and were also domiciled at Parker's. We all were delighted to be together again. There was not much chance then to have a real visit. First we had Religio and Sunday school business meetings before the Conference began. About the last Friday of Conference my sister said she must go back to her children, and I decided to go with her. Hubert stayed at Conference, and came with the rest of the family who attended.

1898—A Mission in Western Iowa

When they came, we learned where the work of the two missionaries was to be the next two years. Hubert was assigned to western Iowa, and Father to Galland's Grove District. So we all decided to live together in our old home in Moorhead. We had to do a lot of work to make it ready for use, but we enjoyed it. My brother and family lived not far away, so we saw them frequently. Mother had lived with them the last year or so while we were away. Finally we got the things back from our travels, bought some new things, and were ready for the arrival of our next baby. She was born on June 16.

Both of the men of the house were away most of the time. Sometimes one would be home, sometimes the other. Hubert bought a buggy so he would have some way to travel about his territory. We already had a horse and the necessary harness. On July 4, I decided to go to the celebration held in a grove about one-half mile from our house. I had been up and about the house for some time, so I went with Hubert to the celebration and sat in the buggy with Baby Dorothy. Hubert had to sing in the choir. As soon as the program was finished, he took us back home. We saw many people we knew and had not seen since our return. Hubert began his summer's work with Brother J. F. Mintun soon after this.

They held a series of tent meetings, beginning at Sandy Point and going from there to Blencoe. We had not visited Hubert's sister, Mrs. Emma Hogue, since coming home, so I went with him to Blencoe and stayed at her house. Also we visited his other sister, Mrs. Ida Moyers, who lived on a farm near by.

The Missionary Allowance

Hubert's tent meetings continued through July and August. The final meeting was held at Smithland. After that Hubert brought the tent to Moorhead and stored it for the winter. He had begun to worry about how we were to get through the winter. Starting in on our fifth year of missionary life under General Conference appointment, we received our first check from the bishop for $16.66. On this amount we were supposed to exist. My mother received the same amount each month.

Some Extra Money

With the prospect of cold weather coming, we were concerned about expenses. Hubert talked with the man for whom the town was named. He owned many acres of land up and down the Soldier River valley and back in the hills. Hubert wanted to buy some timber land about a mile from our home. He bought ten acres of heavily timbered land for $10 per acre and hired men to help him fell the trees and trim them for sawing. When that was done, he hired a man with a mechanical saw to come and cut it into stove lengths. He sold enough wood to pay the men who worked for him, to pay for the land, and to furnish us with considerable money to add to our meager store. Besides we had enough wood to last a year for the cookstove. This took him away from his missionary work for some time, but it seemed to be the only thing to do. The following year we planted potatoes on the cleared land, and without any cultivation whatever, they yielded about thirty-five bushels in the fall. That winter Hubert also bought eleven head of hogs for $22. He brought them home, where we could feed them and see that they had water. They were very little trouble and cleared another small sum of money to help us out. It was a very cold winter. Hubert and Brother Mark Jensen had gone to a place called Climbing Hill not far from Sioux City. They had a wonderful interest, and in spite of the severe cold weather the house was full of people every night. They continued the meetings three weeks, and at the close baptized one candidate out-of-doors in that terrible cold. The next winter they held another meeting there and baptized quite a group of people.

The Harvest and the Labors

By J. L. Verhei

The harvest truly is plenteous, but the laborers are few.

When he saw the multitudes, he was moved with compassion on them, because they fainted, and were scattered abroad, as sheep having no shepherd.

THEN, AS ALWAYS, it was the needy human multitude that was on the mind of Jesus. He started immediately after his baptism by John to take care of that need; but he realized that he would be able to teach, heal, and lead these unfortunates for only a short period; so he invited other men whom he called his disciples to walk with him and taste of the life that he lived.

He invited them to learn by watching him and listening to his teachings.

He invited them to experience the blessing he performed for others, such as restoring sight to the blind, healing the sick, and raising the dead.

Then he sent them out two by two, instructing them to preach, teach, and perform the same wonders as he did for these people. They did, and with such success that they returned to him and volunteered to spend their entire lives in this type of service.

Jesus saw this human tragedy as something that could not wait; it was a need that must be met immediately. But along with this human need, so like an abundant harvest that cannot wait to be reaped, he observed something else—that the laborers were few. The number of those willing to do anything about it was pitifully small.

UNFORTUNATELY, Jesus could say the same thing if he were here today. Nation after nation is without the proper food, clothing, and housing facilities to care for their teeming millions.

Still other millions of people are hungering for the truth, for a gospel that will lead them to the kingdom of God. Children from every walk of life need real leadership that will guide them to the world's storehouse of plenty and righteousness.

This crying need comes to men and women of every walk of life—to Christian doctors and nurses who can see the spiritual as well as the physical need and will rise up and build hospitals to meet these requirements.

It comes to farmers who will raise an abundance to feed the poor and clothe them with wool and cotton.

ONE OF THE GREAT PROBLEMS before us is the necessity for a rebirth within our ranks and within the ranks of Christianity as a whole. I heard a leading Jewish Rabbi say recently: "We failed miserably. I don't believe you can do it, but if you can, you can't if you leave us out." So we cannot expect to go on alone. Others need our help, and we need theirs. But we cannot compromise with anyone who doesn't accept the instructions God has given.

We need to instill a new family life into each home. We need Christlike parents who will make their homes places where God is honored and where integrity is taught and exemplified.

From these homes we must develop statesmen, scientists, electricians, painters, craftsmen, and laborers who will produce and distribute the same full measure of devotion that Christ gave.

There is a need for deacons, teachers, priests, elders, high priests, and seventies to fill our pulpits with the voice of the Master, the power of the Holy Spirit, and an assurance of the Holy Father. There is a human need for the mingling of these men in the homes of the Saints and the homes of the world to guide these parents and their children to prayer, worship, and honest living.

There is a need for the prophetic voice of God to be heard through this ministry. But it must be the real voice of God in answer to a real human need, such as the voice that came to Moses: "Let my people go"; a voice like that which came to Joseph in these latter days: "Preach nothing but repentance to this people," "Seek to bring forth and establish my Zion," "Gather my people"; a voice that will lead to victory, happiness, a land of plenty; and then to eternal life.

The world needs prophetic leadership that will be as a watchman on a tower warning the people of disasters to come.

The spirit of prophecy should be heard in every sermon in the overflow from the speaker's heart.

Never were these words more true than today: "The harvest truly is plenteous but the laborers are few."

Never has there been such opportunity as today to preach, teach, and talk the full gospel of the Restoration. We have received enough by the spirit of truth, the spirit of healing, the spirit of eternity, and the spirit of the Holy Ghost to testify that we know the restored gospel is true and is "the power of God unto salvation."

Never have human needs so demanded our help; never have people been so eager for the true light of God which we can show them.

The call is for us to rise above the voice of doubt, the voice of self, the voice of the tempter. Forgetting those things which are behind, we must move on into the harvest of human lives and souls. Remember we are called and sent by God and his church; we are not accountable for another's mistake.

We must not be sidetracked by beckoning hands illuminated by the various "isms" of the day. There is no substitute for God's commands and instructions.

Christ said 1,900 years ago, "I will build my church, and the gates of hell will not prevail against it."

We must be led by a prophet, or surely we will die. We will be victorious, but only as we are willing to help others.

This sounds to me like a man who was pleading a just cause.

It is to be noted, also, that some time before the difficulties with the state authorities, during the temporary stay of the church at Far West, W. W. Phelps, whom he here charged with lying about him, was disfellowshipped, along with Jacob Whitmer. Here is what is recorded in our Church History, Volume 2, page 140:

Elder G. M. Hinkle then set forth the way in which the Presidency of Far West had been labored with, that a committee of three, of whom he was one, had labored with them. He then read a written document containing a number of accusations against the three presidents. He spoke many accusations against them, setting forth in a plain and energetic manner the iniquity of Phelps and Whitmer in using the moneys which were loaned to the church. . . . Bishop Partridge then arose and endeavored to rectify some mistakes of minor importance made by Elder Hinkle.

Evidently Partridge did not raise any question as to Hinkle's major complaints.

Later it appears from the record of these proceedings that the charges were sustained and the three presidents, of whom Phelps was one, were "rejected." Still later, as the minutes show, "it was decided that William W. Phelps and John Whitmer be no longer members of the Church of Christ of Latter Day Saints, and be given over to the buffetings of Satan . . ."

We do not assume that Hinkle's active opposition to Phelps two years earlier had caused Phelps to deal unkindly with him, but it would hardly be human for Phelps to have forgotten and forgiven Hinkle for helping to drive him out of the church. (Later Phelps was reinstated in membership.)

LET US NOW TURN to find Colonel Hinkle's explanation of what happened at Far West, as stated in the letter to Phelps in 1844 (published in the Messenger and Advocate in 1845). Addressing Phelps, he wrote:

Now, sir, you are the man who knows more about it than any other belonging to the church. You know that you, John Corrill, A. Morrison, and myself, were appointed by Joseph Smith to go and confer with the commanding officers of the Missouri militia, and effect a treaty, if possible, on any terms short of battle. You know that we went and risked our lives with a white flag, when only a few hours previous the bearer of one (Charles Rich) had been fired at on the same field; and we did this to obey the order or request of Joseph Smith. Our object was (at least I felt so) to prevent the effusion of blood, which we all saw must inevitably take place unless something could be done immediately. Were you not present, sir, at that trying scene when the eyes of our enemies seemed to flash fire when we approached, and I received from the hand of Major General Lucas that unhallowed paper, narrating to us the terms upon which the lives of our families and friends could be saved, viz.: "Give up your leaders—your principal men—as hostages to be tried by civil law. Give up all your arms of defense, and all leave the State forthwith"? He also read to us that generous—no, that execrable—order of Governor Boggs, authorizing him to exterminate us, or drive us from the State.

Now, sir, I appeal to your candor; Did I, at this critical moment, say to General Lucas, or to any of those with him, "Give me a sum of money (Judas-like) and I will comply"? If you answer in the affirmative, then query, Were you and the others of the delegation to go partners with me in such an unhallowed speculation?

What! thus to betray our friends—our brethren—into the hands of their implacable enemies in the hour of their peril—and that, too, for Missouri gold!!! Or if I did, as has been reported by men high in authority among you, winked at by all and not contradicted by any, at least so far as I know—did I take the price and snugly lodge it all in my own pocket, without dividing with any of you?

You know I did not make that treaty alone. Nay, you well remember that yourself and the others with us, by authority or request of Joseph Smith himself, agreed to the disgraceful terms. We then urged all to submit. But did I not then and there oppose that part of the order requiring us to give up our arms and immediately leave the State, urging that if any had offended by breaking the law, we were willing and even anxious that such should be punished to the extent of justice, or the magnitude of the crime, but to give up our arms and leave the State would be virtually throwing away our most sacred rights as citizens of a republican state, and that we would as soon give up our lives?

Did he not become enraged and say that Joseph Smith, Sidney Rigdon, Lyman Wight, P. P. Pratt, and G. W. Robinson must be given up, and no other terms would do? Did he not give us half an hour to consult our friends?

When the facts were laid before Joseph, did he not say, "I will go"; and did not the others go with him, and that, too, voluntarily, so far as you and I were concerned?

My understanding was that those men were to be taken and kept till next morning as hostages; and if they did not, upon reflection and consultation with the officers in the camp of the enemy, during the night, conclude to accept the terms proposed to us, but choose to fight, then they were to be kept safely, and returned to us in the city next morning, unharmed, and time given us to prepare for an attack by the militia. . . .

And when Smith and the others had given up, without any compulsory measures from us, did not General Lucas demand our arms, but on reflection agree to let us retain them till next day, inasmuch as it was then about sunset? Were we not advised next day, by word sent expressly from Joseph Smith to us, to surrender? When that intelligence was received, did I not draw up the forces under my command, and explain to them the nature of the whole affair, and then request all who were in favor of surrendering, to make it known by marching three paces forward? They made a slow start, but finally all came forward. We then marched out with slow and solemn step into a partial hollow square of the enemy, faced inward, grounded arms, and marched away and left them. . . .

. . . As to my course of conduct there, even under the trying circumstances, while retrospectively it I have no cause of regret. And during the time I was a member of that church, before God and all men I have a clear conscience, and am willing to give an account of my course at any time. . . .

Notwithstanding the many slanders that have been afloat about me, in order to injure and ruin me, this is the first scrap that I have ever published on the subject; and I have written and published this out of mere necessity, in self-defense. . . . Almost six years have rolled away since I withdrew my labors and influence from that people; and notwithstanding my reserve, some of them still continue to roll down their Satanic falsehoods upon me.

Colonel Hinkle concluded this letter to Phelps with a request that Phelps take steps to "exempt me from those charges, and correct the minds of the people and the public on this subject; for you know," he added, "that they are as base as the blackness of darkness, and as false as Satan himself."

THIS IS THE FIRST TIME I have attempted to glean the facts from the records available. What we have may not include all that can be found on the history of the events, but I believe in common justice I should say that in the letter to Phelps, Colonel Hinkle's presentation bears undeniably the stamp of conviction and truth. The letter which was written by his son, S. J. Hinkle, giving a resumé of Colonel Hinkle's life, also bears the stamp of honest conviction, from which one gathers that his father was a man of integrity; that he remained true to his faith in the restored gospel, and occasionally went on preaching trips to points in Illinois and elsewhere. At one time he took his horses and drove W. W. Blair and E. C. Briggs a hundred miles for them to prosecute their missionary work.

S. J. Hinkle in his letter quotes from the History of Caldwell and Livingston Counties (Missouri) as follows:

Doubtless this officer [Hinkle] was actuated by the noble motive of desiring to save the lives of scores if not hundreds of his brethren by his actions.

Again from the same book:

Colonel G. M. Hinkle was a Kentuckian and personally brave and fearless. He did not fear danger for himself, but for his brethren, and his course, it must be admitted, was certainly for the best.

The son proceeds to speculate. Was he right? who knows?

I maintain that had it not been for the action of G. M. Hinkle on that day, the order of General Boggs would have been carried out, and the leaders of the church would have been killed with all their families. Consequently there would have been no Latter Day Saint Church today. And I hold that was the greatest day's work that has been done since the organization of the church in 1830.

IN THE LIGHT of our experience as a church, in the light of the experience of the posterity of Joseph Smith (who was misrepresented, misunderstood, and lied about by his enemies in the world and by hypocritical, false and heretical pseudo friends within the church) it is my firm conviction, my considered judgment, that there has been far too much of uncertainty in the evidence submitted against Colonel Hinkle and far too much doubt as to his culpability—doubts that in common fairness should be resolved in his favor—for us of the Reorganization to give countenance to anything that tends to perpetuate the belief that Colonel Hinkle was guilty of any treachery toward his brethren.

One of the contentions that the writer has stressed in his attempts to do justice to the Prophet and to correct untruthful statements about him is that in common decency those who attempt to tell his story or essay to write his history should, when charging him with complicity with the doctrine and practice of polygamy, at least add that such things have always been denied by his descendants and by many thousands of faithful church members. In this present inquiry, should any of our ministry or writers deal with Far West matter, if they are impelled by any consideration to mention Colonel Hinkle's alleged guilt, let them carefully add that Colonel Hinkle always stoutly denied such charge and that his posterity, ever faithful to his memory, have done what they could, against very adverse conditions, to correct the injury done to him and his reputation.

What Modern Theologians Are Thinking

What Modern Theologians Are Thinking, by Daniel Day Williams. $2.00

It is the purpose of the author to suggest certain key problems which lie at the heart of the theological movement today and to delineate if possible the lines of movement in the thinking of modern theologians as they attempt to solve these problems. This book offers no solutions, but it does attempt to explore the general trends of thought now dominant in the field of religious thinking.

Some consideration is given to major influences acting on contemporary theology. Among those mentioned are history, psychology, and positivistic philosophy. The probable influence thus exerted is important in the development of general trends.

Four key issues are then given consideration. These are being restated by almost every forward-looking school of thought in an effort to answer certain general questions which have plagued the Christian movement from the very beginning of Protestantism, at least, if not before.

Perhaps the number one issue is authority and the Bible. "How do we know that our beliefs are true?" Unless this can be answered in the affirmative, then even the basis of prayer is gone. Many are insisting that the Bible is the revealed word of God and thus becomes the norm for all statements of belief. Three questions seem natural to any Christian theology: (a) Does it preserve and express the message of the gospel? (b) Does it interpret the faith in such a way as to bring Christian belief into some type of intelligible order? (c) Does it give an account of how this faith may be presented to the unbeliever so that he, too, may see the truth?

The number two issue is the basis of Christian ethics. The gospel gives us ultimate principles often expressed in cryptic sayings. Decency and justice must have a chance to win over human misery and suicidal conflict. The ethical question lies in the manner in which our death as well as our life may best serve God's purposes.

The third issue is that the meaning of Jesus Christ flavors our response to everything Christian. The lesser concept demands a lesser response. Therefore the need for a richer concept of the purpose of Jesus Christ is at once necessary if Christianity is to be able to cope with the paganism which seems so widespread over the world—even in the church itself.

One of the most striking developments of recent years is the tendency to challenge the "divine impassibility" of God. There is the growing feeling that God suffers with the world, that he is actively engaged in dealing with history and the existing conflicts. What happens does make a great difference to him. "The cross is in God as well as in history," says the author. The way and manner in which men see Christ and interpret his mission determines what they see at the "end" of the road for themselves and for history in general.

The fourth and last key issue is the form and nature of the church. In this field of thought there is much of variation, yet a general trend seems to be developing. This may be stated as a growing will to include in the form and nature of the church everything that proves to be important. Much is being said about "the full word of God." This suggests a growing realization that in many, if not all cases, some things of importance have been lost somewhere along the road. The existence of a diversity of forms and ideas seems to bear witness that someone, perhaps everyone, has missed some things that God intended to be kept and used to the advantage of strengthening his work on earth.

The baptismal question, especially that of infant baptism, has continued to come to the forefront. Even its advocates are coming to admit that it produces something of a scandal in providing this Christian ceremony for "all and sundry regardless of real Christian profession or intention."

To the extent that one is able to grasp the various ideas put forth on these key issues he has a good understanding of the heart of theological matters today. The author has examined the thinking of such prominent men as Reinhold Niebuhr, Paul Ramsay, Paul Tillich, Nels Ferré, Donald Baillie, and Karl Barth.

After-Christmas Meditations

Millions of gifts were carefully wrapped in varicolored papers and tied with gay ribbons. They were arranged under the Christmas tree, or in small stockings, or passed from hand to hand, or sent through the mails. It seemed a shame to tear apart those beautiful wrappings. But only so could we have the gifts that were ours to love and to use.

Christmas comes and goes, and the tinsel tree is burned. What remains? The story of Christmas of which the gifts were symbolical remains. Some of the gifts may have been given formally, just to conform to custom. Others were given by a loved one, and we gave gifts to those we loved. Those are the gifts that may be admired, treasured—and used.

God So Loved That He Gave . . .

We are told, "God so loved the world that he gave his Only Begotten Son." That was the first and greatest Christmas gift. We did not really celebrate Christmas Day if we forgot that fact. That is a gift for us to remember always. But he gives us many other gifts, to treasure—and to use.

We are told, "All are called according to the gifts and callings of God unto them." What gifts has he given us to use? Have we kept some of them carefully wrapped up and concealed and unused? Those gifts are given neither to be hoarded nor put on prideful exhibition. They are meant for service to God and the church and humanity.

Christmas is past. A new year is before us. Shall we explore and understand and learn to wisely and skillfully use our gifts? Shall we use them in the service of our Lord, who himself "ascended up on high and gave gifts unto men"? I fear that we have throughout the church many gifted and richly endowed men and women who have never unwrapped and used their gifts. That is tragic! It is a happier thought that we have so many others who have prayerfully consecrated and diligently used the gifts that God has given them.

Question Time

Question:

We are a family of six. Our four children all have musical instruments and are taking music lessons. I am told that the cost of the music lessons is not tithable, but that the instruments are tithable both to us as parents and to the children. We as parents must tithe them because we purchased them. The children must tithe them because we gave the instruments to them. We can see and understand that the instruments should be tithed once, but the question is, Is double tithing on an educational instrument in the same family unit right?

Missouri

Mrs. V. M. T.

Answer:

This is a question which comes up periodically and cannot be answered in a yes-or-no manner. The answer given in the Handbook of the Financial Law, page 45, item 79, is as follows:

Elementary music lessons taken while children are in the grades or high school are regarded as an expenditure which would normally go along with their education and consequently are necessary expenses. Beyond this, however, money spent for music lessons, tuition, and books are at the present time regarded in the classification of higher education and should not be deducted as necessary expenses.

Perhaps some further comment regarding tithing as a matter of principle is best applied in answering this question. In the first place, it should be remembered that tithing is not a tax; it is one of the methods of preaching the gospel of Jesus Christ, and through the system of tithing, funds are made available to carry on the missionary program of the church. Therefore, it is not a question of double tithing, it is a question of participation in the work of the Lord. It is not compulsory and, consequently, wide latitude is permissible in the matter of determining what is tithable.

The principle of tithing is one which applies to each member of the church and provides the opportunity of sharing in the work of the church.

In this particular case the decision must necessarily be left to the parents. Exact interpretation of the law is that tithing is paid upon the increase and must be interpreted on an individual basis. The increase in this family situation, as far as the parents are concerned, is used to purchase musical instruments; it is assumed that they are given as gifts to the children.

The children, in this fashion, have increase in their possessions and in the strict sense the value would be tithable. As already indicated, however, the purpose of the law of tithing is not to impose hardship nor to tax; it is a principle by which individuals can determine the extent to which they will or can share in the work of the church.

G. L. DELAPP

Question:

In what services may stringed instruments or any instrument be used other than organ or piano?

Missouri

Mrs. E. K.

Answer:

"Let them who shall be moved thereto by a desire and a gift to sing take upon them the burden and care of the service, and use therein instruments of music of the reed and of the string, or instruments of brass in congregations that are large, and as wisdom and choice may direct."—Doctrine and Covenants 119:6.

The question involves the true nature of worship. Music for worship functions only when it aids the act of worship and brings us into closer communion with God. Since the internal act of worship is difficult to achieve, we try to intensify it by certain externals, music being one of these. However, if the music used calls attention to itself, it hinders worship and had better not be used.

The revelation quoted indicates that the use of reed, string, and brass be used only as wisdom and choice directs.

Other things being equal, it is better not to use orchestral combinations for the regular formal or semiformal services of the church. The reason is that in most instances the musicians involved will not be of a professional caliber and will therefore play in varying degrees of out-of-tuneness, incorrect pitch, and rhythm; this will result in the worshipers having their attention distracted from the outreach to the Infinite to the difficulties that the players are having, or in being disturbed by bad intonation and other purely musical factors. Even the tuning of the instruments before the service will be more or less a distraction. It would seem, then, that wisdom would direct that an orchestra or band or other combination of musical instruments would be in questionable taste, from a worship standpoint, at most worship services.

Occasionally a solo instrument, or perhaps a string quartet of a high degree of musical proficiency, might be acceptable and even desirable for some types of worship services, or for use as an offertory number or a bit of music for meditation. But where more than one or two people are involved in the combination of instruments, the effectiveness would be greatly diminished.

Now all of this may sound discouraging to those who are interested in building instrumental music and instrumental combinations for their branch work. It is not my intention to discourage the formation of orchestras sponsored by the church. In fact, the opposite is desirable from many standpoints. The formation of a church orchestra is highly desirable in the training of young people, in tying them to church-sponsored activities, teaching them good citizenship, and building fine character qualities; if at all possible, every branch should be urged to develop this type of activity. There are many occasions on which an orchestra can be used in the various activities of a branch: in connection with the Zion's League, for banquets, ice cream socials, branch-wide family activity nights, and other such occasions. Occasionally, or even as often as once a month for a half hour preceding the evening services on Sunday, there might be a short concert by the orchestra. The main point being made here is that for worship purposes and for the average worship service, it would seem unwise and undesirable to have an orchestra or instrumental combination. It is conceivable that there would be exceptions to that statement, but those exceptions would be very few.

The Relay Race

By Mrs. S. S. Arnson

SOME TIME AGO one of the splendid younger leaders of our church phoned me and asked for some information about some people in another place. When I was able to give him what he wanted, he seemed quite surprised that I could answer him so readily. It happened, however, that I had formerly lived in that city and knew the families and their connections, so I said facetiously, "Whenever you want to know anything about anybody, just phone me."

This conversation made me begin to think seriously about one of the compensations which comes with maturity, for surely the longer one lives the greater should be his storehouse of knowledges, skills, and experiences. What finer use could be made of these than to share them with younger people who have not had the same advantage?

A new leader of a women's group explained by letter that her inexperience was the reason she had been so slow in getting her department organized. She said she hoped to do better, then continued to say that much time, worry, and ill feeling as well as regret for being replaced would be removed if the outgoing officers would help the new workers understand their duties, pass on ideas that had worked, and lend their support until the new one "got on her feet." Her hope was that the attitude which is sometimes unexpressed but felt of "let her find out for herself" would forever be eliminated.

ONE OF THE DISTINCTIVE BELIEFS of the gospel is that we should share the talents and abilities that God has given us and help others to succeed. Keeping this in mind, we shouldn't find it too hard to be glad when another excels us. Brother Elbert A. Smith, the presiding patriarch, has expressed his pleasure many times when he has had opportunity to step back and push a younger man forward. I recall, too, that Sister Lydia Wight, one of our consecrated women, for years planned the worship services for a church school but rarely took part in them, preferring that another have a place on the program.

The progress that has been made in the church has resulted because those who have gone before have left a good foundation for us to build upon. There were no established precedents when six young men were instructed to organize the church, but the Lord gave instruction as needed and then helped his people develop their intelligence and guided them by his holy spirit so that each succeeding generation could continue to build. Zion will be because of the good things passed on by previous generations, plus the fact that we have been able to accomplish more because we have used these and carried them on as we have gone farther.

IN A RELAY RACE each person running covers a specified portion of the entire course. The race can be won only if he runs well and covers his special portion. Then the entire course is accomplished. A parent wants his child to surpass him and puts every help in his path to assist him. The same can be true in the church family. Even though a difficult adjustment is to see another take one's place, the consciousness that he has carried the baton successfully over a specified portion of the course will help him take continuing pride in the achievements of his successor.

In the fall of 1951 the General Institute for the Women of the Church was held in Independence. The idea was initiated a year and a half before, but it took eight months to get everything ready for such a gathering. Members of the First Presidency requested that a detailed report be made and left in their files to assist those who might have the responsibility in later years of planning such an institute. Such items as checking with stake officers for dates which would not conflict with other activities, reserving the Stone Church, arranging the program, providing lodging and food for the visitors were kept, for it was anticipated that many precious hours of labor could be saved because this blueprint was available. This report contained three typewritten, single-spaced pages of valuable data.

THERE ARE MANY HELPS that will assist new workers to get their organization going in an orderly fashion. In one parent-teacher group at the beginning of the term of office, the president hands to each member of her executive committee a little five-cent notebook and asks that each keep track of the things that she does in her capacity as an officer so that at the end of her term this book can be passed on to the new worker. To illustrate, a new leader needs to have this suggestion passed on to her if she has had no previous experience. There are many capable women speakers who are called upon several times a year to address women's groups. Most of these women are happy to assist and are willing to make every effort to accept the invitation. It is only courteous to see that transportation is furnished. A member of the group calls for the speaker on the specified day and takes her to the meeting. If the speaker has a car, money for gas should be provided, or if she takes a bus or streetcar the women's group should offer to pay the fare. If the speaker is asked to make only one address a year, she could meet her own expenses but should not be asked nor expected to do this continually.

It is the custom also in some civic clubs for the president of the past year to be invited to sit in at the board meetings the following year so that the new group can have the benefit of her experience. She in no way directs or indicates policies but

The Purpose of Emotion

RECENTLY WE HAD A VISIT from a member of the priesthood of another branch. It was just a short visit, but the little talk he gave us made me realize afresh the part that emotions play in our lives. His talk was not emotional in the sense that some people regard the term. We did not laugh or weep. Nevertheless it touched our hearts and minds and brought us all closer together and closer to God.

Just as God has given us our bodies and our minds, so has he given us the power of emotion. Unless we accept and use correctly all God offers us we cannot have the life more abundant that Jesus spoke of. Far be it from me to advocate the emotional orgies that some religious sects indulge in, but it is just as wrong to take the swing of the pendulum to the opposite extreme and be coldly practical. I once heard the church likened to a flower having every petal of equal size. The emotions form one petal, and this petal must be no larger and no smaller than the others.

A branch or group may be well organized with a full schedule and with attention paid to every detail; every principle of the gospel may be taught, but if the emotional side is neglected the group is not likely to progress. A member of the ministry may have a great knowledge of the church and the gospel but it is of little avail if he cannot also touch people's hearts.

We may be given the knowledge that Jesus is the Son of God and that he died on the cross, but our feelings must be aroused to realize that it was God's love and Christ's love for us that brought him here to earth to be killed. Only when our emotions are stirred are we willing to do something about it.

THE PRINCIPLES of the gospel may be taught to us and we may look at them from the logical viewpoint. However, only when we feel something about it and become enthusiastic—when we have a desire burning within us—do faith and repentance become part of us. Only then do we fully understand and desire baptism.

Remember Palm Sunday? Did the people take that calmly? No, they cried out and spread their garments before Jesus. If they had not done so, the very stones would have cried out. When the Spirit is present in a meeting we feel it through our emotions. If we try to analyze it mentally, it vanishes. We know that "the glory of God is intelligence" but we are also told that "God is love." Each must have its place.

We know that Paul declared it was more important to edify the saints than to use spectacular gifts such as speaking in tongues. Nevertheless, the more spectacular gifts have been given us of God, and they must have their rightful place along with everything else. Would God give them to us with no reason? If we deny them completely we, in part, are denying God, and where is the true Saint who desires to deny God?

WHILE I WAS in my early teens and attending church school I was asked to go to an ordination service. A young man, just a few years older than I, was to be ordained to the ministry. Other ministers, I was told, would lay their hands upon his head, and through this the power and authority of God would come. Being accustomed to the ways of other churches, I thought this person was very young to be a minister, and I couldn't understand the situation. However, I was curious and went with the idea of learning just what was to be done.

Mrs. Roth of Auckland,

Whether it was before the ordination or after I cannot now recall, but the young man arose to speak and tears came to his eyes. I had been brought up to believe that tears were a sign of weakness—something to be ashamed of. However, when I saw those tears I marveled that he should be so deeply moved. I wondered what there was in this church that could touch him so much, and it strengthened my conviction that the people who attended had something I'd never come across before.

Later on I drifted away, but I always thought of our little church as the place where the people were really sincere—where they were not ashamed of showing how much their religion meant to them.

So . . . I came back!

The Wildwood Course

By John Thoman

THE WORK OF BUILDING the golf course at Wildwood was not nearly as hard as most people thought it would be.

Three things helped—the natural rolling meadows, the amiable committee, and Uncle Ned Campbell. Uncle Ned was a bundle of energy and enthusiasm. He bought a power mower, hired a few good men, and gave the job his own undivided attention. The committee helped by designing and planning one of the easiest eighteen-hole courses ever laid out in America.

Wildwood, a small but progressive community, now possessed, along with its other attractions, a handsome golf course all its own. The only possible criticism of the course was one hardly worth mentioning. It was, in effect, that the course was too easy. It had no hazards, no sand traps, and for real players, no challenge.

Before Uncle Ned's men were through, they had contrived to make most of the fairways to slant smoothly toward the green, and most of the greens to slant smoothly toward the cup.

The day finally came that all had looked forward to. Uncle Ned and three members of the committee made up the first eager foursome to play the Wildwood course. They had a very enthusiastic gallery composed of most of the people of Wildwood. Uncle Ned was the star. He really had beginner's luck, and went around the first eighteen holes in 98 strokes, thus immediately breaking the one hundred-stroke line that separates the men from the boys. When that happened, the most surprised person of all was Uncle Ned himself, and he immediately became the spearhead of all golfing activities. He was on the course at every possible opportunity.

His good-natured wife became a golf widow, and the salesmen at the Wildwood Sporting Goods Store were glad to see his ruddy, smiling face, for he was always ready to buy and try out any real or imaginary improvements.

BEING CHURCH-CONSCIOUS PEOPLE the Wildwood crowd managed to forswear Sunday golf altogether. And they managed (such of them as were heads of families) to save one evening a week for the family; but on Sunday afternoon various golf enthusiasts could be seen whipping at the grass in the back yard with a new club or spending an idle hour over the polishing of gear, already in fine condition.

There was some good-natured protest about the difference the links made in the community, but by and large the congregations in Wildwood felt that the course was an asset rather than a liability.

Three out of four of the ministers of Wildwood churches were on the course regularly and spoke enthusiastically of the wholesome sport. The fourth, Elder MacClannagan, could have been expected to take a dim view of almost everything new, so his position was no surprise to the town.

THERE WAS ONE ASPECT of Elder MacClannagan's objections, however, that was surprising, to say the least, in the light of later events. Although he never played the course himself, he was persuaded one morning soon after it was completed to walk around it on a tour of inspection. Always afterward when reference was made to it (as it frequently was), his chief complaint seemed to be not that the course had been built at some expense and labor and was now a very definite part of the community's social life, but that it was, as a golf course, altogether too easy. According to Elder MacClannagan it was completely inadequate as a test of skill. "In the days before I gave my soul to the Lord and became his servant, I played the game of golf on the moors of my native Scotland," he was heard to say, "and I tell you this course here is a travesty on those I played in my youth. We played gravel pits and swamp holes and the moors." And he would shake his head sadly with a look of disappointment in his golfing companions and walk away. But somehow the Wildwood course was in keeping with everything else in the community. In Wildwood the living church members, in contrast to those pioneers sleeping in the cemetery, had been mostly the "assembly line" variety. They had been born into the faith; built nice churches, bought pews, contributed to foreign missions, and generously purchased white elephants at the church bazaars. The church officials had done the rest. It had been like buying life insurance, and there were few who dared to tell them that their souls were dying of a creeping paralysis.

On one or two occasions Elder MacClannagan had in his dour, uncompromising Scotch manner made it pretty plain that he thought the work of the Lord was bogged down by the all too human proclivity of taking life easy, "like a baby feeding on pap." The other ministers of Wildwood, being well fed and housed, gradually grew less critical of the Wildwood way of life, and being essentially fine fellows they began to accept and extol the pleasant paths of peace.

The very thing that the rugged Elder MacClannagan criticized came to be a virtue in the minds of the others. For instance the Reverend Jones, on a trip to a neighboring town, had seen a red-faced golfer standing in a sand trap, slicing away at a half-buried ball and losing his temper. Pastor Jones came back to praise publicly the great idea of Wildwood's painless golf course, which was not so full of sand traps and other hazards as to provoke the Christian sportsmen to profanity. If there were those who agreed with Elder MacClannagan just a little bit, they didn't do it publicly.

REALITY caught up with Wildwood in September in the first fall tournament. All summer there had been good-natured rivalry between Wildwood and Rock Creek, the neighboring community. Citizens of both towns had formed the habit of carrying with them their score cards, which they diligently compared. Members of Wildwood and Rock Creek mingled occasionally, both socially and in business, and all summer they had judged each other's game by the marks on the little white cards they carried.

But neither group had played the other's course, and Uncle Ned's stalwart sportsmen had failed somehow to brag about the painless character of their de luxe links. In fact, they hadn't even mentioned it.

There was no scouting so that by a comparison of cards alone, the Wildwood team seemed to all and sundry to be away out in front. At last one evening they met and flipped the fateful coin as to where the game was to be played the next day. It was here that reality took over. Rock Creek won the toss and naturally elected to play the first game on its own familiar course. Uncle Ned and his partner were full of confidence. Many from Wildwood came to see the game, and they too were filled with confidence.

Now the Rock Creek course was cleverly trapped and bunkered. It was narrow and hopelessly rough. It was as rough as real life. Uncle Ned teed up his ball and, taking careful aim, drove a long slice into the woods. His opponent drove straight down the course. Uncle Ned's partner never found his first ball at all after the second stroke. He lost several other balls before he gave up on the fifth green. Long before the eighth hole Uncle Ned broke completely and threw his clubs into the water trap. The two of them started for the clubhouse. The match was over. The Rock Creek players were calm and good natured. They played on until the end.

THE NEXT SUNDAY the church pastored by Elder MacClannagan was crowded. "Friends," Elder MacClannagan began, "the Wildwood golf course is like our lives. We are suffocated by easy living. Our souls have grown fat with laziness. Our pioneers sleeping in the cemeteries of Wildwood would be ashamed to own us." Then raising his voice he continued, "We are a disgrace to them. The Lord's work needs men, not weak-willed children."

He did not spare the feelings of his flock, and on his side at least he had the virtue of consistency. He spoke of the need of a new church school building. Then, during the singing of the last hymn, he strode to the door to shake hands with the members as they filed out.

The moment of suspense, awaited by those who clustered around, arrived when Uncle Ned came up. The eyes of the two strong men met and held. Uncle Ned thrust out his hand, "A good sermon, elder," he said, "and I would like a chance to talk to you tomorrow morning about two things. I want to increase my pledge toward the new church school building, and I'd like your advice on re-vamping our Wildwood course to make it more hazardous. After all, if our younger men should want to learn to play the game, they should play it right." Elder Mac's normally sober features broke into a grin that nearly cracked his face.

Elder R. L. Amsberry Goes to Iran on Point IV Program

(The following account was sent to the "Herald" by the Federal Security Agency, Office of Education, Division of International Education, Washington, D. C.)

Rolla L. Amsberry recently accepted a two-year assignment as vocational agriculture advisor in Iran under the Point IV Program. Mr. Amsberry was in charge of the veterans agriculture training program in Denison, Iowa, a pioneer in adult education, and a former superintendent and long-time vocational agriculture instructor in the Hawkeye State. For the past five years he was also pastor of the Reorganized Church.

Mr. Amsberry was born at Bussey, Iowa, and was graduated in 1926 with a B.S. degree in agricultural education from Iowa State College. In 1936 he received the M.A. degree in education from the State University of Iowa. He is a charter member and secretary of Sigma Alpha, the vocational agriculture honorary fraternity; of Phi Delta Kappa, the honorary education fraternity; and is listed in "Who's Who in American Education."

Mr. Amsberry was once superintendent of schools at Wyman, Cotter, and Oneida. He developed the large comprehensive-type adult education schools in Iowa at Marengo, Lohrville, Lamoni, and Oneida. During World War II he was in charge of the Shelby County War Production program at Harlan.

The Point IV Program is widely known throughout the world as a co-operative venture in which we help the governments and peoples of underdeveloped areas to help themselves. Our technicians provide the "know-how." The term "Point IV" is derived from President Truman's 1949 Inaugural Address. His fourth point was "for making the benefits of our scientific advance and industrial progress available for the improvement and growth of underdeveloped areas." For the educational part of the program, educators and specialists are requested by the different countries in South Asia, Near East, and Middle East. Experienced men and women educators are chosen for two-year terms to fill such requests.

Mr. Amsberry with his wife and 14-year-old daughter, Gwyneth, left for Iran in January.

Ordination Service Held

OSAGE, WYOMING.—The Osage and Newcastle group held an ordination service December 11. L. S. Troyer visited the group and ordained Forrest C. Julius to the office of elder.

Melady Ann, Joann, and Melvin Mathis were blessed by L. S. Troyer and F. C. Julius. After the services forty-seven Saints met at the home of Brother Julius for lunch.—Reported by Mrs. FORREST C. JULIUS

Speaks at Branch

OCEAN SPRINGS, MISSISSIPPI.—Elder Marshall Mizell of Pascagoula, Mississippi, was speaker at the morning services on November 23 and 30. He was also the speaker at the evening services through the month of December.—Reported by Mrs. D. A. BYRD

Baptismal Service Held

OLYMPIA, WASHINGTON.—Marvin Glenn Weber was baptized December 21 by Cecil Grant Willis at Olympia, Washington. He was confirmed on December 28 by High Priest Paul Wellington and Elder C. C. Willis. His two children, Dan and Cheryl, were blessed on the same day by Elders Wellington and Willis.—Reported by C. C. WILLIS

Two Distant Groups Started

IDAHO DISTRICT.—The Castleford mission is active these days trying to raise money for their building fund and also in their Zion's League work. A chili supper was held December 14 by the Zion's League with a program afterward. Several of the people from the Hagerman Branch were present and participated in the program. A potluck supper was held December 19.

Some of the recent activities of the New Plymouth group was a combined bridal shower for Brother and Sister Roy and a going away party for Miss Hattie Spurling who was leaving for Graceland. Visiting during the holidays from Graceland were Bernard Parton, Brooks Nelson, and Evan Jenkins. A Christmas program was held the week after Christmas and then a watch and prayer service New Year's Eve. January attendance started out with forty and forty-one for the first two Sundays. Special services were conducted at Boise recently by Elder Harry S. Fry for the baptism of Sister Bersie Roy from New Plymouth.

A new group has been started at Council, Idaho, under the leadership of Brother Dale Uehlin. It will be interesting to note the growth of the new group at Council in the far western part of the state and the one at Blackfoot, Idaho, in the eastern part of the state. The two towns are approximately 425 miles apart.

The Pocatello group under the direction of Mr. Charles Nelson and Mr. Travis L. Brown are putting a ceiling in the basement of the church. The building has been in use since August; however, there is still a lot of work to be done.—Reported by RUBY Y. BROWN

ODESSA, TEXAS.—The mission held its annual meeting in September with Elder Iral Parker in charge. The following officers were elected: Elder Parker was sustained as pastor; Elder Otis Baker, Jr., assistant pastor; Mrs. Iral Parker, music director; Priest Jim Hobbs, secretary and treasurer; Teacher Lawrence Hickman, church school director; Mrs. Lawrence Hickman, secretary, and treasurer of the church school; Mrs. M. D. Smith, women's director; Mrs. Homer Spiers, historian and publicity agent; Mrs. Otis Baker, Jr., book steward; Mrs. Jim Hobbs and Mrs. Leo Moles, ways and means committee; Mrs. Jim Hobbs, junior League leader.

Four of the priesthood attended the priesthood institute in Oklahoma City in October.

The priesthood of unorganized west Texas and New Mexico, which includes Eunice, New Mexico, and Stanton and Odessa, Texas, have been meeting once each month for the past year for classwork. Brother Parker of Odessa is director, and Elder Douglas Church of Stanton, Texas, is teacher.

On November 30, there were three ordinations with Pastor Iral Parker in charge. Priest Otis Baker, Jr., was ordained to the office of elder by Elder Carl Leonard, assisted by Elder W. F. Page. Ralph Everett Sader was ordained a priest by Elder Page; and David Sader was ordained a deacon by Elder Otis Baker, Jr., assisted by Priest Ralph Sader.

The Zion's League was organized on October 5, with ten persons present. Priest Jim Hobbs is youth leader and Deacon David Sader is president. On December 7, Marieta Kay, daughter of Elder and Mrs. Otis Baker, Jr., was blessed by the infant's father, assisted by Elder Iral Parker.

On December 21, Deborah Jean, daughter of Pfc. John K. and Jean Williams, was blessed by Elder Iral Parker, assisted by Elder Baker.

On December 21, Eldon Rex Parker and Patricia Sue Hickman were baptized by Priest Jim Hobbs. They were confirmed by Elders Parker and Page.

District President Ralph Wilt was in Odessa, November 9. Brother Wilt preached both the evening and morning service.

Ralph Edward Sader and Wendell Parker were home from college for the holidays.—Reported by MRS. HOMER SPIERS

Mission Becomes Branch

BAKERSFIELD, CALIFORNIA.—On November 15, sixty-five adults and children were present when the Bakersfield mission was officially organized into a branch under the direction of District President John P. Davis and the pastor, Harry E. Hampton. Other priesthood members in the stand included James A. Dameron of Sacramento, and Abe Heinrichs, Thomas Connell, Eber Pechin, Norman Slick, Charles Vancil, and Lloyd Huntley of Bakersfield.

It was under the supervision of Brother Dameron and Brother Heinrichs that the Bakersfield mission was first organized on March 26, 1939. At that time Elder Heinrichs was elected mission pastor.

The branch has been very active in all departments during the past year. A new adult group was organized and has been meeting regularly both for study and recreation.

The Zion's League, under the direction of Faith Meyer and Eber Pechin, made several trips to southern California branches to compete in the volleyball tournaments. They also played host to several visiting Leagues. In September they traveled to Santa Ana, where they were awarded the trophy for placing first in the southern California Zion's Leagues play tournament.

Two of the young women of the branch, Faith Meyer and Velda Bitters, attended children's camp June 20 to June 27. Faith was the camp nurse and counselor and Velda was a teacher and counselor.

Early in June, one adult and five children were baptized in services conducted in near-by Tehachapi. The following candidates were baptized by Elders Hampton and Heinrichs: Mrs. Dorothy Canfield, Sharon Lee Canfield, Richard Strever, Sherry Lane Strever, Thomas Connell, Jr., and James Hampton. The confirmation service was held that evening at the home of the pastor.

Seventy Glen Johnson was with the branch December 1 through 14. His series of meetings was well received by an actively interested group, both at the evening services and the ensuing cottage meetings.

During his visit a baptismal service was conducted. Those baptized by Brother Johnson were Mrs. Jessie Bitters and son, Carroll Wilkinson.—Reported by VELDA BITTERS

Ordained to Office of Teacher

JONESBORO, ARKANSAS.—Paul Dison was ordained January 11 to the office of teacher by Elders Harry Larche and G. H. Turner.—Reported by KATHRYN WILSON

Women's Group Active

MIAMI, OKLAHOMA.—Elder Stephen A. Black, district president, was the guest speaker at the evening service on January 11. Special music for the evening was furnished by the Bluejacket High School Glee Club.

Holiday visitors in Miami were Mrs. Edward Butterworth and children of Detroit, Michigan; Mr. and Mrs. D. L. Kyser and children of Marion, Illinois; Mr. and Mrs. F. M. McDowell of Independence, Missouri; and Miss Joan Stanton who is attending Graceland College.

The choir, directed by D. W. Guinee and accompanied by Mrs. V. G. Gaston, presented the Christmas cantata "The Heavenly Message" for the evening service on December 21. Soloists were Mrs. E. G. Gilbert, Mrs. B. F. Kyser, Mrs. C. L. Rook, Harold Van Sickle, and Brother Guinee.

Holiday festivities for the young matrons included the annual Christmas party on December 18 at the home of Mrs. Henryetta Betz and a New Year's Eve party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Althouse at which the husbands were guests.

A joint meeting of the women's department was held on December 11 and "Portraits of the Restoration" was presented. Those participating in the service were Mrs. Jo Boyer, Mrs. E. G. Gilbert, Mrs. Carl Angel, Mrs. B. A. Howard, Mrs. J. D. Rook, Mrs. Maud Mahoney, Mrs. Charles Angel, Mrs. John Mount, and Mrs. B. F. Kyser, Jr. Following a business session there was a gift exchange.

The women's department held a bake sale and bazaar on December 6 and earned $40.

Preceding the prayer service on November 26 the choir presented a vesper service "Gratitude to God" under the direction of Mrs. C. L. Rook.

The women's department honored Mrs. Ralph Bobbitt with a farewell party at the home of Mrs. Walter Sample on November 20. Farewell remarks were made by Mrs. B. A. Howard. Hostesses for the evening were Mrs. J. D. Rook, Mrs. E. G. Gilbert, Mrs. Charles Angel, and Mrs. Carl Angel. Mrs. Bobbitt joined her husband at Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, where he was recently assigned by the General Church.

At the morning service, on November 9, the sacrament of the blessing of children was observed. Special music was presented by a trio: Alice Gilbert, Emma Jane Rotter, and Judy Foraker. Roger Mayfield and Charles Cline were blessed by Elders O. A. Duncan and Alvin Smith; Connie Sue Cline and Carol Louise Cline were blessed by Elders D. W. Guinee and B. A. Howard; and Cindy Lea Cline and Cathy Jannabeth Cline were blessed by Elders Duncan and Smith.

Evangelist William A. Patterson, a former district president, was guest speaker at the morning and evening services on November 2.

Family night was observed on October 30, with a Halloween party.

Members of the priesthood were organized by the pastor, Elder Howard, for the new year in October and meet each Tuesday evening for study and visiting.—Reported by BETTY L. KYSER

Baptisms have included Gail Bratcher, Jimmie Stalcup, Martha Fae Nutt, George Postum, Janice Tey, Karen Wilson, Wanda Jo Davenport, Mrs. Emma Jo Metzler, Mrs. Maretta Carpenter, and Ross Sherman.

The following children have been blessed: Galen and Connie, children of Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Chadwick; Dwight, son of Mr. and Mrs. Merlin Metzler; Michelle Rae, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Boyd Brollair; Debra and David, son and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John O'Brien; Debra Rae, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bob Hacker.

In September the branch celebrated its thirty-sixth anniversary with a home-coming for two days. Saturday evening the young people presented skits, Boyd Brollair was master of ceremonies, and refreshments were served. On Sunday morning the past pastors and present pastor were seated on the rostrum. Each made a short talk, following which each charter member was presented a corsage or boutonniere. The five charter members present were Elders W. R. Standifer, R. F. Moore, Mrs. Lillie Ebel, Mrs. Rose Huey, and Mrs. Chattie Everett. Pastor Linden E. Wheeler gave a short sermon following this. The church was decorated by Mrs. Gene Graham. A basket dinner was served on the church lawn.

Evangelist H. I. Velt held a two-weeks series. Following this a missionary effort began, and tracting has been organized.

Dallas Saints attended the religious institute in Houston and the youth retreat.

Elders Alfred Yale and Norman Cox visited the branch.

The Zion's League is divided into two active groups. They are studying America's Lost Civilizations. At their Christmas party, they brought gifts for the branch.

The women's department meets once a month for study, social, and work. The department sent several boxes of warm clothing to the Social Service Center. A transfer company carried the boxes free of charge. Rummage sales, bazaar, Christmas and greeting cards, house numbers, and Reader's Digest subscriptions have all been ways of raising money which is donated to the building fund.

The branch has purchased three lots. The women's department has also sponsored parties for the branch.

The Tuesday evening work group leader is Zelpha Pierson. The group has cleared the church lawn of wild grass, planted shrubs, painted the annex, installed new heaters in the auditorium and classrooms, put new linoleum in the rest rooms, stained the floors, and laid a new sidewalk. The group also cleans the church building each week.

Bob Hacker is the junior church pastor, and services are held every Sunday except the first Sunday of the month.

Glenn Fordham, church school director, has installed classroom bells, a loud speaker for the nursery, and has finished a church directory.

Cottage prayer meetings are held three times a month in different homes, and a general prayer meeting is held once a month at the church.

Local speakers have been Linden Wheeler, C. A. Green, Glenn Fordham, Bob Hacker, R. F. Moore, H. E. Davenport, and Frank Tey.

Jimmie Hillenberger has enlisted in the Navy and is now in Japan. Dwight Graham is in the Coast Guard. Donald Everett has returned from Japan.—Reported by CHATTIE EVERETT

Religious Puppet Show Given

OREGON DISTRICT.—The district met in fall conference November 7, 8, and 9 at Central Church and Washington Hall in Portland with an attendance of over eight hundred. Apostle E. J. Gleazer, Bishop G. L.

DeLapp, Bishop M. E. Lasater, and Missionaries James N. Kemp and Don Landon were on the staff of the conference. The children were taught by Elder Harold Carpenter and Sister Mabel Ray. A special feature for the children was a religious puppet show given by Sister Forest Moore and Sister Gordon Lampart of Portland.

Sermons during the conference were given by Apostle Gleazer and Bishop DeLapp.

Meals were served under the direction of Sister Effie Verhei. Sister Roycie Chapman was in charge of the needlework booth and Sister Kathleen Lawler in charge of registration. Music for the conference was under the direction of Elder Lloyd Shannon.

At the annual business meeting the following officers were sustained and elected: district president, High Priest J. L. Verhei; secretary, Elder Roy D. Keiser; treasurer, Elder Milton Becker; director of religious education, Elder Harold M. Carpenter; youth leader, Elder Keith Kinart; music leader, Elder Lloyd Shannon; women's leader, Sister Rita Kinart; dramatics and publicity, Sister Leona Carpenter; auditor, Elder Fred Hawes; historian, Sister Lillian Livingston; book steward, Teacher Albert Lasley; bishop, Monte E. Lasater; bishop's counselor, Elder Paul Fishel; evangelists, Mark Yoeman and Walter Barker. The following elders were approved as associates to the district president: Elders Miles Whitting, F. E. Chapman, Lloyd Shannon, Ray Hugget, Keith Kinart, Harold Carpenter, Clinton Dobson, and Roy Keiser.

Due to the fact the district is growing so rapidly the district has been divided into divisional groups with members of the district presidency in charge of each division.

An ordination service was held on Sunday morning and the following men were ordained: elders, Frank Tucker, DeWayne Miller, Ernest Mikesell, Harry Howell, Bernard Taylor, and William Brewster; priests, Ural Donnalee, Kenneth Goddard, Waldo Lasley, August Sahlberg, Fred Moore, Albert Sharp, Albert Gardner, Earl Smith, John Livingston; teachers, Earl Yates, Robert Good, Joseph Cox, Leon Coburn, Elbert Hartshorn; deacons, James Steinbrink, Herbert Hough, George Sahlberg, Jerry Dixon, and Carrol Darr.—Reported by LEONA CARPENTER

Priesthood Institute Held

AURORA, ILLINOIS.—Many members of the branch attended the church reunion at Naperville in August. Many stayed at the camp, serving as staff workers. Others made trips during the day, providing transportation for all the Saints.

At the annual business meeting, Elder Paul Gouty was chosen as branch president and Philip Wilson as church school director. New leaders were also selected in other offices so that all could learn to share the responsibilities of the group.

The work of remodeling the church basement has been steadily progressing. Upon receiving a loan from church headquarters, renewed efforts were made to finish the work. The old furnace and classrooms were torn out, the last of the flagstone walls and excess dirt was removed. In three Saturdays, new toilets were installed and the entire floor was cemented. The chimney was torn down and rebuilt, together with a new furnace.

The church picnic was held in September at Island Park at Geneva, Illinois, on the Fox River.

Twenty men made a guided tour through Joliet Prison under the leadership of William Hicklin, Men's Club president.

Sister Margaret Reedy was elected as women's leader with a competent staff to assist in the work.

Zion's League has over twenty members with Chuck Hughes as president and Sister Kay Wakeman as supervisor. They have formed several active committees and many events are planned for the future. Seventy Cecil Ettinger, district appointee, recently completed a series of illustrated lectures. He was assisted by Elder Fred Banta, appointee to the Nauvoo District.

Margaret Ann, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Pettit, was blessed in November by Elder Paul Gouty, assisted by Elder A. J. Settles.

The priesthood institute, sponsored by the Northeastern Illinois and Chicago Districts was successfully directed by District Presidents Lyle Woodstock and Lloyd Cleveland, November 15. Apostle Don Chesworth and Seventy Cecil Ettinger were present. At the same time, the wives of the priesthood members conducted classes and this work was summed up by Lydia Wight. Eighty priesthood members and their wives attended the banquet on November 14.—Reported by CHARLES REEDY

Progress Made on New Building

BELL, CALIFORNIA.—The annual business meeting of the Southeast Congregation was held September 21, 1952. Officers elected to serve during the coming year are as follows: High Priest R. L. Macrae, pastor; Elder Elmer Johnson, counselor; Priest Leroy Hamilton, counselor and treasurer; Margaret Barnes, secretary and recorder; Ruth Aslin, historian; Priest Harold Downey, church school director; Irene Ivory, church school secretary; Dorothea Hawkes, publicity agent; Richard Smith, auditor; Elder Arthur Hawkes, missionary supervisor and director of young people's activities; Nellie DeBruin, women's leader; Teacher Floyd Barnes, book steward; Alice Johnson, drama; Ora Macrae, Alberta Downey, Norma Jean Smith, music committee; Irma Patella, junior church director; Dave Miller, custodian; and Deacon Ted Bowen, building supervisor.

On September 14, the following were ordained: Harold Downey to office of priest; Deacon Floyd Barnes to office of teacher; and Ted Bowen to office of deacon.

On October 19, the following people were baptized: Allen Carney, his wife Mary Carney, his daughter Linda Carrico; Sister Laura Harrison, and her daughter Florence Harrison.

Four more people united with the church on December 7. They are Sharon Downey, daughter of Harold and Alberta Downey; Inez Shaw, and her daughter Arline and son Teddy.

A Thanksgiving dinner was held on November 29, in the new dining hall with one hundred and twenty people present. This new building addition which is being constructed by the local congregation under the direction of Brother Ted Bowen consists of an auditorium, kitchen, and two lounges. The Southeast Congregation is located at 3801 East Florence Avenue, Bell, California.—Reported by DOROTHEA HAWKES

Young People Active

NAUVOO DISTRICT.—The Zion's League of the Nauvoo District celebrated New Year with a midnight watch party held in the lower auditorium of the church in Nauvoo. The auditorium was decorated with crepe paper streamers, cheerful red bells and various other New Year's remembrances. This work was done by Irene Nehring and Ruth Knipe of Nauvoo.

The evening's entertainment began at eight o'clock on New Year's Eve by a visit into the past. A large book of "Memories" stood open before the group and on each page was a poem or list of games and activities which everyone participates in during each phase of his growing up. Starting with preschool age up through college age, the childhood games of marbles and jumping rope, relay races, spelling bees, and baseball were enjoyed, as well as skits and group singing. The games were directed by Lee Ourth who acted as master of ceremonies for the introduction of each new game.

At 10:45 p.m. after fifteen minutes of group singing, the Leaguers made their way to the upper auditorium for their last fellowship service of 1952. The room was lighted only by candles and a small brightly lit church furnished the worship setting. The service was conducted by Lynn Ourth, with Ralph Gunn of Ft. Madison assisting. The theme was "Making the Right Choices in '53."

The service was concluded with a benedictory prayer offered by Lloyd Tripp, Nauvoo.

Refreshments were then served in the lower auditorium and the new year was ushered in. The guests retired to the homes of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Banta, missionary to the Nauvoo District, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Ourth, and Mr. and Mrs. Elbert Tripp. At 10 a.m. on New Year's Day, the group re-assembled for breakfast. Predictions for the future were hidden in bright-colored balloons around the room. Alarm clocks, set twenty minutes apart, were wrapped in several layers of paper on each table. Under most of the glasses was a slip of paper telling the occupant of that place either to puncture a balloon and read the prediction, or to recite a nursery rhyme having to do with time, or to stand and tell the time every 18 minutes. One person at each table was instructed to open the package when the alarm rang and not to tear the paper or break the string. Someone else at the table timed his actions. Hal Smith opened his package in the least time. Lives of several of the young people were portrayed in poetry and Brother Gail Hunter, Ft. Madison League leader, presented a short talk in closing. A friendship circle was then formed, climaxed with the singing of "Blest Be the Tie That Binds."

Mrs. Floyd Hartman is the Nauvoo League leader and she was assisted in the planning of the New Year's party by Mrs. Betty Tripp and the members of the Nauvoo League.—Reported by BETTY TRIPP

Evangelist Holds Series

MOBILE, ALABAMA.—The Oriole and Skylark organizations for girls have been effected with Betty Rester as leader, and Dorothy Shannon, Sybil Thistlewaite, and Charlene Snyder assisting.

Graceland College Day was observed at the eleven o'clock service October 26. Former Gracelanders participated in a program of inspirational talks and music.

Evangelist H. I. Velt was guest minister for a series of services November 6-16. Kodachrome slides were shown each evening at seven o'clock followed by preaching service. A combined class for men, women, young adults, and Zion's Leaguers met in the sanctuary each Sunday morning at the church school hour with Evangelist Velt as instructor. Sister Velt, who is a member of the General Council of Women, accompanied Brother Velt on his visit to Mobile, and was honored at an afternoon tea Sunday, November 9.

On Monday evening, November 17, the department of women held a meeting with Pastor J. A. Pray as speaker.

The department of women held its regular Thanksgiving meeting on Tuesday evening, November 25. Contributions of canned food for the needy were accepted at this meeting.

A special service was held on Thanksgiving morning, November 27, with the message being given by Elder Franklin E. Steiner of Rome, Georgia.

Elder R. L. Booker has been appointed pastor of the Robertsdale mission, effective January 1, 1953.

The department of women sponsored a Harvest Festival, December 5, which included a talent show by the women; booths of candy, fancywork, and baked goods; and dinner and supper served in the annex auditorium.

The children's Christmas party was held Friday evening, December 19, in the annex auditorium under the direction of the leaders and teachers of the children's division.

On December 21, the church school preworship service, a Christmas pantomime, was presented by the children's division under the direction of Julia Wilson and Sue Mader. The eleven o'clock service was a service of baptism for candidates from Mobile and Bayou La Batre, Alabama; Pascagoula, Mississippi; and New Orleans, Louisiana. Elder J. A. Pray, Mobile, and Priest Oscar Goff, Pascagoula, officiated. The evening service consisted of the drama, "A Christmas Carol," by Charles Dickens, presented by the Zion's League. This production was under the direction of Wilda Grace, branch director of drama.

Members of the choir met at the home of Wayne and Jeanne Hough to listen to the Messiah broadcast over the local station WKRG, Sunday night, December 21.

The Men's Club was formally organized December 21, with Jimmie Farnell elected president. The initial supper meeting was January 5.

A special white gift service was held Christmas night, directed by Elders J. A. Pray, R. L. Booker, and A. W. Hough. Special music was furnished by the choir.

At the eleven o'clock service, Sunday, December 28, Lula Hough and Russell McGuire, Jr., were confirmed by Elders H. H. Jernigan and A. W. Hough.

The Christmas cantata, "The Music of Bethlehem," was presented by the choir under the direction of Jeanne Hough at the evening service, December 28. Martha Salter was the organist.

The regular quarterly business meeting of the branch was held December 29, with the pastor presiding. The proposed branch budget for the calendar year 1953 was submitted and accepted. The appointment of Dwayne Shannon as book steward to succeed James Peavy who has recently moved to Birmingham was sustained. A building and grounds committee consisting of Brewton Greene, Jr., chairman, Willie Day, Paul Mader, Ed Stanton, R. V. Rogers, and T. C. Salter was recommended by the pastor and approved by the branch.

A New Year's Eve watch service was held followed by a social hour in the annex auditorium. Sound movies were shown.—Reported by ARDIETH VICKREY

Group Growing

FORT BIGGS, TEXAS.—The El Paso-Las Cruces group continues to meet every Sunday at the Old Chapel, Fort Biggs. Church school is held at 11:00 a.m., and the preaching service at 12:00 noon. The group is interested in contacting new members who are at White Sands Proving Ground, Fort Biggs, or Fort Bliss bases, or in or around El Paso. They are requested to contact or phone Lester Hershey, Captain Kenneth Walker, or Robert Porter, at 0380R1.

Mr. and Mrs. Bill Dollins are missed from the group since they moved, but a welcome has been extended to Mr. and Mrs. Bob Doan who are back at Alamogordo.

Since January the number of the group has doubled. Some of the newest members include Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Doyle, Mr. and Mrs. Ted Hiles, Mrs. Nadine Up De Grafg, Mrs. Dawson, and Mr. and Mrs. N. Shepperd. Several servicemen are attending meetings. During the past year visiting ministry has included Apostle Charles Hield, Brother McDonald, Brother Archibald, and Brother Wayne Simmons.—Reported by BANTZ J. DAVIS

Golden Wedding Anniversaries

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Chase

A reception honoring Brother and Sister Elmer D. Chase on their fiftieth wedding anniversary was held on the afternoon of December 21 at the Reorganized Church in Pasadena, California. Brother Chase served as pastor of the Pasadena congregation for seven years during the time it was a mission. They were married in Adams, North Dakota, on December 22, 1902, and lived for many years in Canada and Montana before moving to California in 1930. The Redland Saints, with whom they now worship, also honored them with a special observance of their anniversary.

Present for the reception were their children: William Chase of Yucaipa, California; Mrs. Warren McElwain of Altadena, California; Mrs. Frank Kinney of Compton, California; Mrs. Ray Wineinger of Montrose, California; and Mrs. Alyce Gildehaus of Woodland Hills, California. Also present were nine of their twelve grandchildren.

Dr. and Mrs. H. S. Salisbury

Dr. and Mrs. H. S. Salisbury of San Rafael, California, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary on December 28. A reception for them was held at the home of a son, Dr. Winfield W. Salisbury and his wife in Lafayette, California. Another son, Scott A. Salisbury, of San Anselmo, California, a daughter, Mrs. George Wehrheim of Wood Acre, California, and nine grandchildren were present for the occasion. Two guests, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Hale Smith of Detroit, Michigan, attended the wedding fifty years ago.

Both Dr. and Mrs. Salisbury, the former Leona Scott, have been active members of the Reorganized Church since their youth.

New York City Saints hold Sunday services in the Highland Park Branch YMCA, 570 Jamaica Avenue, at the eastern edge of Brooklyn. Visitors may obtain further information by telephoning Virginia 7-8527.

Requests for Prayers

Rose Martens, Persia, Iowa, requests prayers for her husband that he might be led to accept the message of Christ, and for herself that she may know best how to help him.

Glenn H. McVicker, Route 1, Aredale, Iowa, who has lost his sight, requests prayers that he may be able to endure his affliction and qualify as a member of the church in good standing with the Lord.

An interest in the prayers of the Saints is requested by Sister Allie K. Maddox, Route 1, Eros, Louisiana. Sister Maddox reports that she has been an isolated member for many years and that she is now afflicted with a serious physical illness; she also feels the need of spiritual enlightenment. She is concerned that she be blessed with adequate faith, wisdom, and knowledge, in order that she might have strength for this trying time in her life.

BIRTHS

Mr. and Mrs. John Gunzel, Jr., of Overland, Missouri, announce the birth of twins: a daughter, Jean Marie, and a son, John Michael, born January 2. These are the great-grandchildren of Evangelist A. K. Dillee.

A son, Bruce Alan, was born on December 22 to Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Martin of Midland, Michigan. Mrs. Martin is the former Barbara Hulmes.

A daughter, Vickie Jean, was born on July 9 to Mr. and Mrs. Eldon D. Slover of Woodburn, Oregon. She was blessed on November 2 by her uncle, Elder Herbert Hawley, and Elder Don Landon. Mrs. Slover, the former Luella Jean Hawley, attended Graceland College.

A son, Kenneth Wayne, was born on September 17 to A/2C and Mrs. Dave Chamberlin at Fitzsimons Hospital in Denver, Colorado. He was blessed October 12 by Elders J. W. Noyes and W. D. Stukesbary. Mrs. Chamberlin is the former Dorothy Porter of Nevada, Missouri.

A son, Aaron Leon, was born January 6 to Mr. and Mrs. V. Fred Price of Tama, Iowa. Mrs. Price, the former Norma Houston, is a graduate of the Independence Sanitarium School of Nursing.

A daughter, Dawn Jennette, was born on January 19 to Mr. and Mrs. Donald Fuller of Laguna Beach, California.

A son, James Gordon, was born on January 21 to O/C and Mrs. A. Gordon Conk of San Antonio, Texas. Mrs. Conk is the former Janith Angerine of St. Louis, Missouri.

DEATHS

HAMILTON.—John Floyd, son of William and Helen Hamilton, was born June 11, 1878, at DeKalb, Illinois, and died December 18, 1952, at Kideout Hospital, Marysville, California. He was an agent for Santa Fe Trailways until his retirement in 1944, after which he made his home in Marysville and Yuba City. He had been a member of the Reorganized Church since 1915.

He is survived by his wife, the former Mamie Cooper to whom he was married in 1896; two sons: Edward L. and Stanley H. of Yuba City; a daughter, Hazel Bennett of Oklahoma City, Oklahoma; and four grandchildren. Another daughter, Helen, preceded him in death. Funeral services were conducted by Patriarch William Dawson at Marysville. Interment was at Sutter City, California.

CARLYLE.—Mary, daughter of the late Frank McLean and Mrs. McLean of Hopeville, Ontario, was born May 18, 1912, and was killed December 2, 1952, in a car accident. She had been a member of the Proton Branch of the Reorganized Church since 1922. Her husband preceded her in death several years ago.

The funeral service was conducted by Evangelist Benson Belrose and Elder Robert Black at the Reorganized Church in Proton. Burial was in the adjoining cemetery.

WILLOUGHBY.—Cpl. Earl Calvin, son of Mr. and Mrs. James W. Willoughby, was born August 25, 1930, at Independence, Missouri, and died November 6, 1953, while serving with the armed forces in Korea. He was graduated from the Lee's Summit, Missouri, High School in May, 1949, and was called to the Army on September 27, 1951. He had been a member of the Reorganized Church since he was eight years old.

Surviving are his wife, the former Ann Louise Custer to whom he was married on April 1, 1952; his parents; three brothers; Melvin and James L. of Lee's Summit, and Pvt. Robert Willoughby of Camp Chaffee, Arkansas; and three sisters: Mrs. Helen Given, Mrs. Evelyn Bruce, and Mrs. Lucille Chiddix of Lee's Summit. Funeral services were conducted at the Reorganized Church in Lee's Summit on January 23, Stake President Harry J. Simons and Elder Stanley Curtis officiating.

DAKIN.—Norman A., was born March 15, 1893, at Fairbanks, South Dakota, and died January 18, 1953, at Arlington Symmes Hospital in Massachusetts after a brief illness. On August 24, 1934, he was married to Julia Joy, who survives him. He had been a member of the Reorganized Church since June 11, 1949, and attended Boston Branch.

Besides his wife he leaves two sons: Norman and David; a brother, Carl, and a sister, Mrs. Mamie Welch, both of Washington State. Funeral services were held at Wilson Chapel in Somerville, Elders Albert Fisher and John Foster officiating. Interment was in Joy Cemetery, Addison, Maine.

SHERMAN.—John W., son of Nancy and Warren Sherman, was born June 6, 1882, at Escatawpa, Mississippi, and died January 3, 1953, of a heart ailment. He was baptized into the Reorganized Church on October 13, 1895, and remained a faithful, active member until his death. On July 17, 1907, he was married to Edna Catherine Mizell, who survives him. No children were born to them, but many little ones from other families were regular visitors at the home of "Uncle John and Aunt Edna." It was said of him at his funeral, "This brother was not blessed with an abundance of material things, but today he meets his maker a rich man."

Besides his wife he leaves one brother, Daniel Sherman. The funeral was conducted by High Priest Jack Pray, Pastor A. N. Barnes, and Priest Rudolph Williams.

VOLTMANN.—Franklin, son of Adolf and Edith Collyer Voltmann, was born August 31, 1905, in Buffalo, New York, and died December 10, 1952. He had been a member of the Reorganized Church since 1915.

He is survived by his wife, Eleanor Karn Voltmann; two sons: Franklin, Jr., and Ronald; three brothers: Herbert of Detroit, Michigan; Max of Marilla, New York; and Delwin of Jamestown, New York; three sisters: Mrs. Bertha Schreyer and Mrs. Cecilia Bohn of Ebenezer, New York, and Mrs. Alice McCabe of Kenmore, New York; and three grandchildren. Funeral services were conducted by Elder Stanley Johnson.

The Relay Race

is available when questioned as to ways of doing things successfully.

Even though this is not followed customarily in women's department groups, much could be offered by the past experienced leader were she to be invited to give her advice occasionally.

Another aid to orderly business procedure is to have a set of bylaws adopted by the women's group which outlines definite policies and contains rules to govern the body, defines the object of the organization, and explains duties of the officers. Much confusion can be avoided if the members are familiar with these rules which govern their organization. The secretary's minutes of the meetings of the past year offer much enlightenment to the new set of officers. A careful reading tells much.

All of us who have become members of the church of the living Christ are members of this team who have been commissioned to run this race of kingdom-building. It is a privilege for us to equip ourselves in such a way that we will be physically, mentally, and spiritually qualified to run our designated portion well and then happily pass the baton on to assist another that he might complete his portion.

Introducing

JUNE (VEAR) ROTH, Auckland, New Zealand (page 15), was born in Auckland in 1919 and was baptized August 1, 1943. In 1946 she married Dolph Roth, formerly of Brisbane Branch, Australia, who is now an elder in the church. They have two children: Merilyn, 5, and Valerie, 1½.

Sister Roth left secondary school at the age of sixteen but returned to night school several years later to complete an accountancy course.

She acted as branch treasurer for six years and is now secretary of the women's department. She has also worked on the duplicated New Zealand Mission paper, Tenakoe.

WITH THE CROWD

Millions can be wrong—and have been. But "it is not common that the voice of the people desireth anything contrary to that which is right." If we would mention some article or message in "Guidelines," "Saints' Herald," or "Daily Bread," which had helped us as often as we mention a radio program or what we enjoy on TV, more people would start reading them. Just as sure as a winning ball team or a top movie star packs the theater, people want to read what other people talk about in prayer meetings, worship services, sermons, or even parlor conversations. Certainly we like to know what people are talking about; we like to follow the crowd. It's not alone that these periodicals need the publicity, but for the good it will do.

PARTNER IN EDUCATION

Let us hope that our new and enormously powerful partner in education will soon begin to look at his curriculum. This partner is Mr. Television.

Four Chicago television stations fed 93 murders to children during the LAST WEEK of 1952.

In the 134 children's programs shown that week, 295 violent crimes were enacted. The greatest number of murders were shown on Saturday and Sunday.—Bulletin for Principals and Teachers

FAITHFULNESS

FOR THE UNBELIEVER

Come with me across the field;
Here, I'll pick a velvet pansy from its nest of green.

It's for you.

Oh, smell the apple blossoms as they loose
Their blushing bounty on our heads.
There soars a lark! His song spills from the sky
Like water from a spring
To drench us with its melody.

. . . Softly now,

A robin's there upon her nest. She guards her little ones

As mothers should.

And there's a hovering butterfly.

Its trembling colors take my breath!

We've had our walk. Is not the earth just FILLED with lovely things

That man could never make?

I will not preach—but here,

Take in your hand my baby's hand. His touch is soft.

See how his fingers curl around your own.

Just feel their gentle tug—and tell me, if you can,

There is no God!

to Know . . .

Jennie C. Lund

"I do nothing but work, work, work," says Jennie Lund. But the kind of work she does is dear to the heart of most women. She is nurses aid on the maternity floor at the Independence Sanitarium and Hospital, and she has been in this fascinating work for about ten years. She takes the babies to their mothers to feed, bathes them, changes them, and cares for these newborns generally.

"Babies are my hobby," she says. "I've been taking care of them almost fifty years. I worked as a housekeeper and took care of children for thirty-eight years, and then Miss Copeland asked me to help in the nursery at the Sanitarium."

On Sundays for the past forty-two years she has been in her place at the Stone Church in the kindergarten department. Officially she is the secretary, but "I just help Miss Tessie with the children," she says humbly when asked what that involves.

Sister Lund lives with her mother not far from the Stone Church and cares for her and the home. Work is something that evidently agrees with her. She does much of it, and it hasn't spoiled her sweetness or her consistent efforts in being of service.

News and Notes

FROM HEADQUARTERS

PRESIDENT OPENS INSTITUTE

Over three hundred professional and business men had registered at noon on February 11, for the institute which began that morning and continued through February 14. Following the opening worship service, President I. A. Smith gave the opening address to the group at the Stone Church. Bishop G. L. DeLapp introduced the leaders of the conference and presented the statement of purpose. One of the unique features of the institute was the display of church institutions which was shown in the main assembly room of the Auditorium. It featured a mural drawn by Sonny Directo and Alta Seal representing the institutions of the church in relation to their vocational and industrial life, past, present, and future. A miniature replica of the Auditorium and pictures of the other institutions were also on display.

W. W. SMITH AT STAKE CONFERENCE

President W. Wallace Smith was the morning speaker at the Central Missouri Stake conference in Warrensburg, Missouri, February 8. Elder Harry J. Simons is stake president.

PRESIDENT EDWARDS IN INDIANA

President F. Henry Edwards was in Gary, Indiana, over the week end of February 8, to attend the wedding of his son, Paul, to Carolyn Smith who is the daughter of the pastor, Elder D. H. Smith. President Edwards spoke at Gary on Sunday morning, and that afternoon addressed the district priesthood.

NEFF IN TOPEKA

Elder Charles Neff was the morning speaker at the Topeka, Kansas, Branch, February 8. That evening Seventy Herbert Lynn began a series, "Crusade for Christ," in the Topeka Branch.

PREACHES IN LAMONI

Elder Evan Fry, General Church radio minister, preached in Lamoni, Iowa, the evening of February 15.

ARTHUR ROCK HOLDS SERIES

Elder Arthur Rock, radio minister and audio-visual director for the General Church, began a series in Marshall, Missouri, February 8. In conjunction with his series he is also giving daily radio programs over Station KBOA. He preaches at the branch in the evening following an audio-visual program.

TRAMPOLINE EXHIBIT

Approximately one thousand persons viewed the trampoline show, "Phenomenon," which was sponsored by the Center Stake youth department. The three Leagues which shared the major part of the responsibility were Gudgell Park, program planning; Spring Branch, junior and senior, decorations. Delmar Gouldsmith, stake League president, was publicity chairman. An offering was taken which finished paying for the trampoline. This was one of the purposes of the program which was held in the basement of the Auditorium. Guest artist on the trampoline was Bruce Riley who flew from Lincoln, Nebraska, to perform.

MISSION ORGANIZED

A mission at Las Vegas, Nevada, was organized on January 19, 1953. Elder Russell F. Ralston, one of the presidents of Seventy, organized the group. Brother Hampton, formerly of Hamilton, Missouri, was appointed to direct the work of the mission.

To What Purpose

TO WHAT END is all this busy-ness?" Bishop J. A. Koehler asked in the course of a conversation in my office. "What is the unifying purpose in our priesthood work?" Dr. F. M. McDowell had asked similarly only a short time before. And a little later Franklyn S. Weddle, Director of Music, picked up the same theme when he asked, "How can we help pastors and music leaders to see that the whole approach in planning the music for a worship service is different from what it would be in planning a concert, just because your purpose in the service of worship is so different from your purpose in the concert?" Each of these three key church officers was concerned about the end that must be served in the specific activities under his direction. Each of us, in his place, needs to feel a similar concern that his specific acts shall serve his total purpose. Particularly, we need to watch carefully to see that our "busy-ness" does not become a substitute for the moral action which it is proposed to promote.

The church carries on many activities. Their growing number and complexity become more and more apparent. In Independence alone (at the Auditorium and church institutions) there are four hundred full-time employees. Beyond this, and beyond Graceland, and beyond the work carried on by nearly two hundred appointees is the tremendous investment of time and money and endeavor on the part of many thousands of Saints whose unmeasured contribution makes possible the maintenance of church life.

When we who are called to positions of leadership in the church stop to think of this busy-ness, of its high cost to the Saints, and sense the obligation laid on us by the willing sacrifices which they make, it is to be expected that we shall ask ourselves, "To what purpose is all this endeavor?" But to make this query effective it should be asked of himself by every man who is in moral earnest about his life and work. Is it possible that we sometimes forget our purpose in the multiplicity of our endeavors? And, more significant still, is it possible that the character of our endeavors may sometimes defeat our purpose?

THIS PROBLEM is not new. When the people of Judah and Jerusalem substituted costly sacrifices for the sound moral action which God had reason to expect from them, the Lord himself said by the mouth of Isaiah (1: 11): "To what purpose is the multitude of your sacrifices unto me?" Indeed, the query threw such a flood of light on the moral condition of the nation that the chapter containing it is widely known as "the great arraignment."

An able commentator on this first chapter of Isaiah says, "One of the greatest dangers of the church of God . . . is unreality. We cannot escape this grave peril by adopting a ritual, nor by dispensing with rituals, but only by the most persistent and strenuous moral efforts."¹ Jesus himself warned his followers to "beware of the leaven of the Pharisees, which is hypocrisy." And, fundamentally, hypocrisy is play acting—substituting the sham for the real, putting religious motions in place of spiritual reality. It is making gestures instead of being good—gestures which do not really matter in that they do not embody genuine spiritual purpose and so do not advance the cause of the kingdom.

To what end are you working? What is achieved in your worship? What victories are won in your prayers? Ritual is only superstition unless it is supported by faith and repentance and the generosity which grows out of love.

More About David Whitmer

Miss Maud Guinand of Independence has presented to the church a number of newspaper accounts of the death of David Whitmer which were published at the time of his passing. With these papers also came an interesting handwritten certificate by Dr. G. W. Buchanan (who was his attending physician when Whitmer died in 1884) dated April 28, 1864, to the effect that his patient was suffering from a serious malady which threatened to make him a "confirmed invalid." Elder Whitmer apparently exercised care, since he lived for twenty years afterward.

From Sister Guinand also we have secured a copy of a Book of Mormon (Lamoni edition) and a copy of our early Saints' Harp, both of which belonged to this Book of Mormon witness. All of these items were given to Sister Guinand by her cousin, Mrs. Rose Fowler Allen, stepdaughter of David J. Whitmer, son of Elder Whitmer.

These items will be deposited in our Historical Department, and we extend our thanks to Sister Guinand for her thoughtfulness.

Appointment of Secretary to the Quorum of High Priests

Elder W. J. Breshears, 1305 Forty-third Street, Rock Island, Illinois, has been appointed Secretary to the Quorum of High Priests to succeed J. C. Stuart, resigned. We take this opportunity of expressing our appreciation to Brother Stuart for his years of very efficient work in this capacity. All future correspondence should be addressed to Brother Breshears.

Names of College Students Wanted

The names and addresses of all church college and university students not at Graceland or the Sanitarium are needed immediately in order that these students may receive copies of the latest R. L. D. S. University Bulletin.

The bulletin is a 48-page lithographed magazine edited by Harley Morris of Madison, Wisconsin, and other volunteers of the Committee on Ministry to College People, under the auspices of the General Church. It contains articles summarizing the fall College Student Conference at Lamoni, current news from several of the thirty campus groups, and articles about and by leading professional people of the church. It is sent without charge to all church young people enrolled in colleges or universities other than Graceland or the Sanitarium.

Because of the difficulty of securing the names and addresses of the estimated six hundred church students scattered on campuses across the United States and Canada, only about half of the copies of the University Bulletin have been mailed. Persons who know of church member students whose names might not be expected to be picked up in the regular channels are urged to send all such names and addresses to the chairman of the Committee, Dr. Lawrence O. Brockway, Department of Chemistry, University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Michigan, or to the Youth Office, The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri.

THE FIRST PRESIDENCY

Notice Regarding Resthaven

The loss sustained by the church in the untimely death of Sister Helen Weeks has left a vacancy in our ranks that will be most difficult to fill. As Superintendent of Resthaven she served efficiently and with a devotion even beyond that which the church asked of her.

We need the services of a registered nurse with some administrative experience to assume this responsibility and ask that those with qualifications and training required to assume this responsibility get in touch with us.

THE FIRST PRESIDENCY

From Louis Zonker, Eich Str. 14A Hannover, Germany:

Recently I received from your office a letter written by Brother Edwards directing my attention to a young man in Frankfurt, Germany, who had recently been baptized in Missouri. This young man's name is Gerd-Dieter Moos, and the letter also informed me of a prospective convert of this brother.

I contacted them immediately by mail, enclosing the tracts that we have and inviting them to come and visit with us at the mission house. They responded favorably and were able to spend three and a half days with us at the beginning of this year. The prospect was very interested in the church and in the message of the Restoration. We had the opportunity to help him clear up some of his bewilderments. After the visit he asked to be baptized. Thus on the last day of his visit we were able to arrange for a special baptismal service, in which he made his covenant with the Master. Patriarch Beil of Hannover confirmed him, and a strong portion of the Spirit of God was manifested on this occasion. Both of these young men are schoolteachers near Frankfurt, Germany, and will contribute richly toward the progress of the kingdom.

The following is a copy of a letter that he sent to us after his return to his home:

"Dear Brother Louis: Yesterday it was that I have been baptized and that a new period of life began. Before my baptism I often had been hopeless, but today I am looking forward to my future life in good hope.

"I thank so much our Lord that he led my way in that direction, and I thank you, dear Louis, for your missionary work. You can believe when you had been speaking at the church Sunday morning, I was feeling the Holy Spirit. This important day, January 4, in this year will always be in my mind. I would have been glad if I could still stay with you because you could have answered me a lot of questions. But I will remain in contact with you by letters so that I can write my problems. Please give my best regards to the branch. I thank the dear people that they had taken myself within their prayers. Especially I thank you and Betty for the very nice hours in your home. With the warmest personally regards,

"Your brother,

All Are Called

According to the Gifts of God Unto Them

By Gerald Gabriel

Prosecute the missionary work in this land and abroad so far and so widely as you may. All are called according to the gifts of God unto them; and to the intent that all may labor together. . . —Doctrine and Covenants 119: 8.

O ye that embark in the service of God, see that ye serve him with all your heart, might, mind, and strength, that ye may stand blameless before God at the last day; therefore, if ye have desires to serve God, ye are called to the work. . . . Remember, faith, virtue, knowledge, temperance, patience, brotherly kindness, godliness, charity, humility, diligence. Ask and ye shall receive, knock and it shall be opened unto you. Amen.—Doctrine and Covenants 4: 1, 2.

A MARK of a dying branch is the assumption of responsibilities by too few persons. In one branch the only elder is the pastor, preacher, church school director, song leader, and class lecturer. Such has been the case for the past decade. Today the branch is less than half the size it was ten years ago, and from the present age composition it will be a branch of the past in another ten years if some changes are not made. No leadership has been developed, nor is any more desired—either on the part of the presiding officer or the membership. They are seemingly content to go on into oblivion. Yet “all are called according to the gifts of God unto them.”

This pattern is easily established by some leaders who seem to have been blessed with more than average ability in various fields. Frequently when such a leader asks those working under him to assume responsibility, that potential worker refuses because of his lack of comparable abilities. Or the presiding officer becomes impatient with the beginners’ seemingly feeble efforts and “just takes over” again. With such an outlook, potential workers are “passed over”—the parishioners seem to have no gifts.

If a similar program were carried out in our homes our children would grow up to be helpless. Branches do likewise. In some instances limited pastoral leadership (limited as far as gifts are concerned) have built the fastest growing branches. Such pastors are willing to accept their share of the load, but at the same time are willing to share responsibility. “All are called according to the gifts of God unto them.”

Many an inactive member has renewed his interest when given responsibility in the church. Nonmembers have grown to members through serving the church—even in physical labors. Psychology points out that we need to let people help us do things. The leader with vision can see potentiality in people. There are times when his vision is obscured until a dire need arises. Some branches, it seems, need to die before they can be resurrected to see their potentialities. Yet “all are called according to the gifts of God unto them.”

NO GREATER PUNISHMENT can be inflicted upon a normal person than for him to be compelled to attend a branch in which he is allowed only passive participation, and to remain unnoticed for that which he desires most—to be given a chance to excel in some field or department of the church. Social science has pointed out that by nature each person desires to be a member of a group—a solitary individual is not a normal person. Group participation is the building of one’s self—one’s happiness—one’s security. We all, if normal, desire to belong to a group and to participate actively in it. The greatest missionary endeavor of the church lies here and usually begins in group participation. There is the misleading teaching in many religions that church membership brings salvation. Membership, in inactive or passive participation, may prove to be a seed of dissatisfaction. Really, the primary step toward substantial church membership begins with group participation. A “convert” to subject matter without participation often remains only a number on church records. Active participation in church circles brings about modification of attitudes and tastes to harmonize with the group. If they are active in the “out group” (other than church) and passive in the “in group” (the church) they are likely to become resentful toward church members, although converted to subject matter. Active participation makes their membership more than just marginal.

IN A THEOCRATIC DEMOCRACY we do not “dish out” orders and expect them to be followed to a “T.” If such absolute authority were in effect the following generations would grow up to be puppets and branches would either die or disintegrate. Problem number one is usually those who are in the position of leadership. Frequently, the ones who pride themselves on their experience and insist on their way of doing things because of that experience little realize that they may be repeating errors of the past. Individual initiative should be encouraged as a part of the branch program.

Another human trait which seems to be shared by most of us is that we pride ourselves on our use of common sense in regard to human relations. Such pride leads one in every ten to a mental institution. Humility is mentioned with the other attributes in the Scripture quoted. Weaknesses are given to us that we may be humble before God in our service to him. Actually, we have few experts in the field of human relations, but because so many of us assume that we are experts in this field, group conflicts result.

In the field of religious progress we are called upon to make surveys or investigations touching the human ego which is encompassed with taboos and deep reservations. In such research we are led to probe into facts that may reveal situations or practices needing reform, even in the face of vested interest members who have arrived at a state of self-satisfaction. Such investigation by only the leader may reveal true facts but will be met with resistance to suggested change. One pastor's research into his congregational situation led him to report some facts indicating that the congregation was dying. For years the members had sincerely launched out on a program of perfecting themselves with no concern for their neighbors. Revelation of those facts caused the pastor to be removed. This is a mistake commonly made by leader and follower. The solution here is, first, the realization that more than four fifths of us have our prejudices, and no matter how valid the facts we do not easily change an established attitude or belief.

Attitude and belief tend to remain as they are established. If an investigation is made, it is already biased. That is, the facts that prove the present attitude or belief will be accepted; while those that tend to disprove will be discarded or overlooked. Any change in group attitude or belief must be done collectively and gradually by the group. In finding and recording the facts the members will promote a strong "we" feeling, and new progress can be made in transition without the group's realizing its growth. Leadership must not go so far in advance of the group in discovering facts and needed changes to recommend drastic change—until the membership has been through the same avenues to discover the facts also. Leadership must help the group make its decisions. Facts must be discovered by group members and discussed openly and frankly by them. Facts discovered by individuals are believed by them in the same manner in which they believe in themselves. Our church groups want to cure their own ills, but on the basis of their own diagnosis and treatment.

EVERY MEMBER and potential member likes to excel in some special field of the church. If we are constructing a new church we are not going to ask a public accountant, experienced only in that field, to take charge of the plumbing; but we may ask someone experienced in plumbing to assume responsibility for it and use the accountant as an assistant. There are two important things we must keep in mind in using a person. One is his interest and desires; the other is his abilities and gifts. If a person is not interested in working with children he likely will not put his heart and soul into it. If his heart is not there, his treasure lies elsewhere. Glen Cunningham who was once burned so that the doctors gave up hopes of his ever walking again developed the desire to see what his crippled limbs could do. He started walking between the plow handles. After much training he ran the fastest mile. Many would like to serve in the "fastest mile" area of the church, but they must first learn to walk between the plow handles. Herein lies more responsibility for the leader.

Sometimes members desire to occupy certain positions in the church which would be disastrous for them and others. They can be given other positions in which they are kept busy and can actively excel.

Other square pegs that seem to get into round holes are the fighters. There are actually two types, the militant and the tame. The latter can be the most dangerous. They occupy a position of leadership as an undermining negotiator. Their appeasements have serious effects on groups; in good faith they mislead and misrepresent the desires of the whole. They are often marked as the actual do-nothings, leaning on whispery gossip. They rely on winning good will and are too afraid to offend. An assignment in some special field will often re-channel their interest and energy. The militant fighter is outspoken and often radical. Sometimes we are tempted to give him what he says he wants to avoid, a "row." Actually he hopes we will fall for this. Many times his cries are so loud that we are misled to believe he represents group opinion—when actually he stands alone. People do not continue long in their creations of discord if they do not gain a following, or if they continually lose in their battles. If a good cause can be substituted for which they can fight and win in harmony with the program of the church their desires are satisfied. If such is not the case and we cannot divert their energies to productive works, we had better do as Joseph Smith once did when confronted with a similar problem. Hiram Page had been receiving revelations through a stone to guide the early church. It would have taken very little in some respects to have wrecked the church in its infancy, so Joseph again went to the woods to pray. He returned from the woods to send Hiram Page—along with some other men—on an important mission. It was a mission to the very borders of civilization, carrying the Book of Mormon message to the Indians. The challenge was so great the stone incident was forgotten. "Ask and ye shall receive, knock and it shall be opened unto you." "All are called according to the gifts of God unto them."

Hymns Are Important

By Roy Benson

ONE OF THE MOST treasured possessions of the church is its hymnody. In hymnody all denominations merge to tell the story of the gospel, express beautiful thought, and reaffirm faith in the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man.

The hymn is the "folk music" of the church. It has an earthiness that could come only from the hearts of the people themselves. It has no denominational, racial, or social barriers. The hymn is the common property of all people, and as such it is one of the few ways in which every member of the congregation participates.

The most vital part of the church organist's job is the playing of hymns. The average church organist pays too little attention to this aspect of his work. In many cases the pianist will become the organist overnight. He should, by all means, become an organist and not a "converted pianist." No one can possibly become a good organist unless he develops an adequate organ technique. It takes as much technique to play a hymn as it does to play a Bach prelude. A good pianist can very easily make a good organist, providing he starts at the beginning of a good methods book and patiently, with help, studies it in a systematic manner. Here are a few suggestions in connection with the playing of hymns.

Learning to play an organ will be much easier for those who read piano music. Sight reading is important. The playing of hymns for the average organist is the most exacting and demanding part of the church service. Everything else is generally practiced or rehearsed. For some reason or other the hymn-book isn't practiced enough, and as a result the organist depends too much on his ability to sight-read. It is not easy to sight-read hymns correctly. The notes of the hymn must be played exactly as written, the soprano, alto, and tenor being played on the manuals and the bass part on the pedal clavier. It must be introduced in such a manner as to convey to the congregation the mood of that particular hymn. The organist in reality is the "song leader."

ONE CANNOT PLAY the organ unless he has confidence in playing and co-ordinating the pedal notes. Finding the pedal notes quickly and accurately is a must even for the playing of hymns. The feet play the bass part and should not be duplicated by the left hand. The bass part must be played legato which means that it has to be played with both feet. Organists who habitually hack away with one foot are admitting that they are still "converted pianists."

One playing organ hymns must know the importance of the word "legato." So far only those things have been mentioned which have to do with reading ability. One could be a good reader and still be a very poor musician. A good organist must have a thorough working knowledge of the importance of playing smoothly and evenly. The tone of an organ continues to speak only as long as the key is depressed. The organ has no sustaining pedal like the piano so it is important to connect the notes in order to keep the tone flowing. This is not easy to do in progressing from one chord to the other because it involves a lot of finger changing to get the so-called legato touch. The hymn phrases must be played legato, and the organist must learn to "breathe" the phrases with his hands and feet.

The playing of repeated notes offers a problem in legato playing of hymns. It is a general rule to play all repeated notes of the outside voices (soprano and bass). Repeated notes in the alto and tenor are held except from a weak to a strong beat. The reason for this is to give the hymn a "flowing" or legato feeling.

THERE ARE THREE general ways to play hymns:

1. Play the four parts on the manuals.
2. Play the three upper parts on the manuals and the bass on the pedal clavier.
3. Play the melody as a solo on one manual and the alto and tenor on another manual, the bass on the pedal clavier.

The first method can be used to introduce a hymn but is used very sparingly to accompany the congregational singing. Personally, I would prefer to hear music played correctly this way rather than poorly using the other two methods.

The second method is the most important of the three ways because it is used to introduce and accompany the congregational singing. It takes a lot of practicing to do this with ease and confidence. The organist should learn to work out good "fingering" for the feet, practicing the bass part of the hymns by themselves; some bass parts are easy, and others not so easy.

The third method is the most difficult to play. The organist must learn to select solo stops for the hymn tune, play the melody an octave higher or lower or in its regular register, and keep good balance between the solo and the accompaniment. The melody is played with the right hand, the alto and tenor with the left hand on another manual, and the bass with the feet. This method, when used for responses, meditations, and preludes, can add much to the beauty of the service.

Basic knowledge of organ registration is very necessary in the playing of hymns. The organist should not try to get "fancy" sounds, but make use of a good solid foundation tone.

Knowing the hymn text is also important to good hymn playing. The hymn should be played so that it is in complete accord with the textual thoughts. As an example, Number 55 in the Saints' Hymnal shouldn't be played fortissimo. The general mood of this particular hymn is meditative. Contrast this hymn with Number 205. The mood here is one of virility and strength. The Lord is "calling to battle." There is nothing meditative or serene about this one. Each hymn has a general mood. The organist should try to sense it before introducing it. Registration and intensity can vary slightly from verse to verse without changing the general mood.

There is no accepted tempo for hymns; it varies with different denominations. A hymn should never drag or be jazzy. The tempo generally needs to be a comfortable one as far as the conductor's beat is concerned. The organist must be careful not to play quiet hymns too slowly and martial ones too quickly. A hymn can be buoyant without excessive tempo or loudness.

The organist will do well to scrutinize time signatures of the hymns. The 4/4 time signature is misleading at times. Some of these 4/4 hymns flow much more naturally with two beats to the measure. This does not mean that the hymn will go twice as fast; it will actually go very little faster in most cases. Number 63 in the Saints' Hymnal offers a good example, and there are many more like it. Most of these questionable hymns consist of all quarter and half notes.

The use of vibrato might be considered in the use of hymn playing. It will generally depend on two factors:

1. The acoustics of the building

2. The style and type of hymn

If a building is acoustically dead a little vibrato will help in most cases. Some hymns require a little vibrato, others none. On Numbers 144 and 145 in the Saints' Hymnal I would use a little vibrato with the first one, none with the second. A good general rule to follow regarding the use of vibrato would be "use too little rather than too much," and "if in doubt do not use any." Vibrato has a place in church music, but it should not be overdone. The hymns of different eras or periods differ in both text and musical materials and therefore will be treated differently. Hymns are not tied down by a set tradition. Tradition changes from musical style to style, but it is always governed by good musical taste.

We need to sense more and more the importance of the hymn in the church service. Both the congregation and organist must assume their responsibility as participants. What a wonderful experience it is to hear a congregation sing hymns as they should be sung. We have a wonderful heritage in the music of the church; may we all, to the best of our ability, strive to interpret and preserve it.

The Poor, the Tithe, and the Offering

By Emma V. Freeman

THE LORD in his ministry was thoughtful of the poor, the sinful, the suffering, and the bereaved. Just what should be the attitude of the poor as to tithes and offerings? He tells us, "All power is in my hand," and "The cattle on a thousand hills are mine." We read of how he fed the five thousand, besides the women and children, from a very little bread and fish, and in my judgment he needed neither.

It seems to me that the person paying tithes and offerings who has but little of this world's goods manifests great faith in Christ. If we are afraid to give to his work, through the law provided by his church, are we not acknowledging that we lack faith in him? It is true that the small offering does not help much. It makes the bishops and solicitors as much work as though it were large, but if given with a humble heart to assist in the accomplishment of God's work on earth, "The bread cast upon the water" will return many fold—possibly not in dollars and cents, but in the form of blessings of which the person who gives is in need. The greatest blessing that can come, of course, is eternal life.

A person I knew believed fervently that if a person kept the law of God spiritually and temporally, material blessings would be his. This man tried to obey the law of God, but instead of blessings, one disaster after another came to him. Through no fault of his there were sickness in his family, accidents to stock, drouth, losses here and losses there, yet this man did not lose his faith, but gained more love and understanding of the misfortunes of his brethren.

The poor, the sick, and the unfortunate need ministry. Why should they not be more worthy if they sacrifice and give of what they have? The widow who gave her mite was commended by Christ to his apostles. Perhaps she never knew that the Savior noticed her gift, but no doubt she felt joy in her giving that brought peace to her soul.

In 1888, a widow with small children invited an apostle whom she knew to her home, and her invitation was accepted. Her aged father also shared her home. She prepared for the guest, but when the day came, he went to a home where there was more. No doubt he felt it might be a burden for this widow to share a meal with him. She felt she needed his ministry, and was

Objectionable Radio and TV Programs

By Harry Whipple

SOME TIME AGO there appeared in Colliers an editorial deploring the fact that so many people were clamoring for a cleanup in radio and television programs. This editor seemed to feel that anyone who did not like a particular program needed only to turn the dial and get something else or turn it off altogether. I believe that such an attitude is the result of the man's not having given sufficient thought to the subject, or to investigating to determine the real needs and tastes of the listening public.

The People's Rights

The Federal Communications Commission has ruled that the air waves belong to the people, not to the broadcasters. The different wave lengths are leased to broadcasting quite unhappy. Shortly after this, while sewing—as that was the way she provided for her home—she was spoken to by the Spirit and told to write this man. She could not believe the voice, but when told the third time, she got her pen and wrote the words which were given her to say. In a short time she received an answer from the apostle humbly asking pardon and promising he would “remember the widow and the orphan in their affliction” in his ministry from then on.

What better way can we give thanks than by having faith to share that with which he blesses us? I have known some to justify themselves in not paying tithes and offerings who could attend movies, take the daily paper, and in numerous other ways spend for their desires. I do not believe these things are wrong if they do not rob us of time and the means to do good, but we should remember God even by sacrifice if we wish to taste of the richness of his blessings.

companies with the understanding that they are to be used to bring programs to the listeners which will be for their best interests. And according to the rules of the FCC, any station owner leasing a wave length must agree to present programs which are of a high moral, educational, and entertaining nature.

We cannot expect everyone to have the same tastes in entertainment. Most cities have their boxing and wrestling matches, theaters with a variety of plays, movies to choose from, and other types of amusement; yet none of these are forced upon the people. They can go there or stay away as they choose. But radio and television are different in that they are a part of the home.

The Value of Quality Programs

Many station owners claim that they must present some programs of a risqué nature to give variety and hold the listeners, and that quality programs are unpopular.

On January 11, 1953, the New York Philharmonic Symphony broadcast its seven-hundredth program over C.B.S. This program was started as a means of bringing prestige to the network, as well as to meet the keen competition then existing between the networks. Its first broadcast in 1930, a performance of Weber's overture to Der Freischütz, was heard on only sixteen stations. Today the Philharmonic is broadcast over 194 stations to an audience of millions. Its rating (4.2) is the best for any Sunday afternoon program now on radio. The impact of good music on American culture cannot be measured in ordinary terms, but its effect is deep and permanent. Experience has shown that any attempt to change or curtail this fine program brings a roar of protest from the listening public.

Radio's contribution in the field of good music only calls attention to its omission in other fields. Radio might have created an audience for great books and great plays, as it has in music, but it did not. The Philharmonic broadcasts have disproved the old notion that only the sophisticated can enjoy quality programs; fan mail, station calls, and surveys reveal that people of every class of society, on all educational levels, rural as well as urban, prefer good programs. That a great many of the people are interested in this type of program on the air is evidenced by the great number of complaints which constantly appear at the FCC office and by those which appeared before the congressional investigating committee.

Public Opinion

Unnecessary restrictions or blue laws affecting radio, TV, or any form of free expression is not desired by anyone, but the fact that the unscrupulous advertiser will resort to the unfair tactics of worming his way into the very homes of the people through the use of programs of a questionable character, or through spot announcements sandwiched in between good programs, gives the public sufficient cause for complaint.

Perhaps if enough people would write their local stations demanding more programs of high quality and fewer of the undesirable type, the desired results might be obtained without resort to censorship or control by law. We must assume, from the information now available, that the broadcasting companies and the telecasters, too, are very eager to please listeners. The chances for a voluntary cleanup should be good, if listeners will take the time to write and let the station owners know how they feel.

Getting voluntary action and avoiding the more drastic method of censorship would be beneficial to both listeners and the station owners.

The Life of Hubert Case Part VIII

A Mother and Child Healed

Brother Jensen and Hubert held a series of meetings at Cherokee in the northwestern corner of Iowa. A very remarkable case of healing took place while they were at this place. Brother Ora Van Sickle's wife and child were both very ill. The child had pneumonia, but after she was administered to, she slid out of the chair where she was lying and exclaimed, "Mama, I want a drink!" Then she went out into the kitchen. Her mother was also almost instantly healed. This was the winter of 1898-99. The following summer he was engaged in the same work as the previous year, tent meetings, but no very outstanding results occurred. We attended the reunion at Woodbine that fall where Hubert baptized fifteen including Brother Mintun's son, Guy.

Money became scarce again, so Hubert found a job painting, for which he received the sum of $1.75 a day. In the spring of 1900 we went with Amos Vredenburg and his wife, my sister, to Lamoni to attend General Conference. My oldest sister, Mrs. F. L. Thompson, lived there, and we stayed at her house.

First Mission to Oklahoma, 1900

The Conference was a long one, and before it closed, the Vredenburgs felt they must go home. So leaving Hubert to return by train, we drove back. When he returned we learned that he had been appointed to Oklahoma for the next two years. We both felt rather downhearted about his appointment. We had hoped to stay nearer home for another year. However, he began to make preparations to go to the new mission and left on May 19, 1900. He landed at Perry, Oklahoma, and was met by Brother H. C. Hughes who took him to his home. There had been several meetings held in his locality before; several persons had been baptized, and my father had been there to organize them into a branch. Brother William Aylor came shortly after to join Hubert there.

They held meetings in the schoolhouse for about two weeks. Then the district tent was obtained, and they started meetings in the town of Morrison, which was the nearest village to Brother Hughes' neighborhood. A few were baptized. Then they went to Blackwell, Pond Creek, and from there to the reunion at Hennessey. Here I joined the crowd, having stayed at Moorhead as long as I felt able.

Brother and Sister Aylor, Hubert, and I went to Okarcho together with Brother and Sister Pate. We stayed at the Pate home while the Aylors stayed at Brother Will Smith's.

A tent meeting was begun on Friday night after our arrival. We had some members near enough to attend part of the time, and Brother Aylor had been a merchant in this town, so was well known. The attendance was very good.

Life on the Frontier

This was before Oklahoma became a state. Many people were flocking in from various parts of the country to take claims or buy land. Many of them were church people. Wherever they settled, they made the missionaries welcome. Their neighbors were their friends and gladly attended church services whenever possible. The fact that they belonged to some other church did not deter them from attending our services and listening carefully to the preached word. The Maloneys located in Dewey County because the Durfeys from Iowa, the Moldrups from Nebraska, the Elverts from Missouri, Elijah Baggs, and old Brother D. S. Crawley were already located near, and all were members of the church. We found friends wherever we went. The calls for preaching came from every direction. Hubert held a meeting in Seiling and was joined by Brother W. R. Smith. We rented an empty store building and lived there while the meetings were going on. People loaned us bedding and necessary housekeeping things. We were there a month.

When we returned to Okarcho, we found there was a vacant hotel for rent, not far from the depot. My sister, Mrs. Holden, was looking for an opportunity of this kind, so we wrote her about this, and she came down at once, looked the place over, and rented it. We had already spoken for the large room on the lower floor that had been the parlor of the hotel. We rented this, and moved what we had in there and proceeded to assemble enough stuff to keep house. We stayed there until the following month of May. Brother Aylor and Hubert went to various places and held meetings throughout the winter, answering the most urgent calls, preaching and baptizing wherever they went. In March the quarterly conference was held at Okarcho; we obtained the use of the Methodist Church for it. Immediately after the conference, Hubert went with Brother R. M. Maloney to administer to a very sick woman who lived quite a long way from there.

This woman was Sister Landon. She had arthritis and was so crippled that she could not walk nor work with her hands. She was as thin as a live human could be and constantly suffered. Her family consisted of six small children and her husband, a stock farmer.

Upon arriving, Brother Maloney suggested that they sing. This they did, singing five or six hymns. They felt the Spirit of God in their songs, and they proceeded to administer to the sister. They then went to an adjacent farm home to spend the night. Next morning at day-break they returned. They found her much better and administered again before starting back to Okarcho.

The next time Hubert saw her was at reunion the next summer. She was entirely healed of arthritis, and instead of looking like a skeleton she weighed 150 pounds.

It was about this time that Hubert, Brother Pate, Brother Smith, and others resolved to file on land in Roger Mills County in the farthest tier of Oklahoma counties. They filed at Kingfisher upon returning home. This was in December, 1900. That same month my father and mother came to stay with us at Okarcho. My mother was not well when she arrived and though she recovered a little and was with us at Christmas time, she passed away in April, 1901. We buried her in Okarcho cemetery.

In May we started for the claims. The farther we went into uncultivated regions, the more we saw the beauty of the original land. The prairies were covered with green and dotted thickly with beautiful wild flowers. It had been pasture land for many years for cattle, but they were not in sufficient numbers to destroy the natural beauty of the spring. As soon as we were established on our claims and had fences built to keep us from being overrun with the herds, Hubert began preaching at Redmoon and other settlements where we learned there were church members located. He found several in different localities, and everywhere he went to visit members they wanted meetings held.

The Shannon Debate

About a year from the time of our coming to Redmoon, the Saints at a little town called Richmond in Dewey County were challenged to public debate by the Adventist State Evangelist, R. B. Shannon. He had long been a source of annoyance to our people near Kingfisher—T. J. Smith's family—and near Piedmont where the Lamberts, Aylors, Rowlands, Tennerys, and Clessons lived. So, though not particularly advocating debates, Hubert felt he must do something to prevent the ruining of the faith of the people who belonged to, or were favorable toward, our church. So he accepted the challenge of Mr. Shannon, and the debate soon began. So many people came that the house was full to overflowing and many stood outside to listen at the windows. We tried to get Mr. Henry Crocker to act as chairman. He was the wealthiest and most influential man in the whole countryside. When Hubert asked him, he refused, saying, "To tell you the truth, Mr. Case, I am too prejudiced against you to do you justice." So we got the schoolteacher, who did a fine job as chairman.

The great and deciding factor of the whole debate was the summary. Mr. Shannon had drawn a rough picture of a tree. On each branch he had written a citation from the Bible, labeling it "Case's doctrine." When he completed his speech calling attention to each of his written statements from the Bible on the limbs of the tree, Hubert was instantly on his feet, thanking him for the compliment Shannon had paid him, for those were all statements from Christ, Paul, Peter, and John—all were in the Bible and were a part of Christ's doctrine. When Hubert's half-hour speech was finished and the meeting dismissed, Henry Crocker was the first man to walk up and give his name for baptism. Hubert baptized five families as a result of the debate.

Redmoon

Soon after this he had agreed to start a series of meetings at a point fifteen miles southwest of Redmoon where there was a schoolhouse and one family of Saints.

When he went to the school he found the door locked. Mr. Rowan, the man at whose home I was staying, said he would go and get the key. The man would not give him the key, saying he would not let Mormons preach in the schoolhouse. Mr. Rowan was very angry and came back to report. Hubert only laughed and said he would have some handbills printed to let them see who we were.

While on his way to Cheyenne (he did not have the team on this trip) he had to cross a large pasture with a herd of Texas cattle in it. About halfway across, the animals saw him. They would have paid no attention to a man on horseback or to a team, but seeing him on foot they came running—with a red bull in the lead. Hubert did not run, but hunted hard clods of dirt until he had about five or six. When they came near enough he pelted the leader in the face with those clods. About three of them were enough to make him turn in another direction. Hubert ran toward the fence, collected some more clods, and when they again came near enough he pelted the leader again. This time, when they turned he managed to reach the fence and roll under. He walked on toward Cheyenne, and was soon overtaken by a man driving that way. He soon got there and arranged for his printing. They promised to hasten with it, so it was printed that same day. It was a very good tract and the man who had the key to the schoolhouse apologized and invited Hubert to come back.

During that year he held meetings at Durham, Brule, and Leedy. Durham was formerly known as Antelope Hills. He and S. S. Smith held meetings at the Haines schoolhouse. At all those places some were baptized. Usually a member of the church already lived there, thus giving them a place to stay.

Third Daughter Born

On July 7 our third baby was born—another daughter, Ardyce Lucile. My recovery was rather slow, but as soon as I was able we set out for the Stillwater Reunion. After that was over, we started for Iowa to see Hubert's sister, who was ill with tuberculosis. This was in September. After we visited her, we went to Decatur, Nebraska, to visit Hubert's parents. From there Hubert returned to Oklahoma but the children and I went to Lamoni to visit my sisters.

Hubert returned home, arranged for another absence and, taking his team, started for eastern Oklahoma. Brother Pate, who had long been anxious to go on a missionary trip, went along, taking his own team and buggy in case he should get tired before Hubert was ready to come home. Their objective was Matthewson, Oklahoma (later named Piedmont). They did some missionary work on the way east, stopping at Putnam, Seiling, and what is now Eagle City. From there they went on to Piedmont, where Hubert was to meet Denton Collins of the Church of Christ in debate.

The Cartoon Debate

The debate was held in what was known as the Kansas Schoolhouse. Denton Collins was an elderly man, and Hubert was young and full of vigor. The schoolteacher was a young man with a talent for drawing. Every night they would find the blackboard covered with cartoons showing the former night's debate. These cartoons were in Hubert's favor and attracted so much attention that his opponent quit the debate before it was half through. On the last night of the debate, the people of the audience walked along in a line past the desk and laid $24.50 on Hubert's end of the table; only $.50 went on Mr. Collins' side of the desk. The Presbyterians who had a church building near there invited Hubert to preach in their church. He preached there for a week to a full house. After that meeting was over, he drove on to Oklahoma City to meet his family and spend Thanksgiving. Brother Pate stayed at Brother Rowland's, which was near his old home at Okarche.

He joined us as we drove west from Oklahoma City, and that was the only missionary trip he ever wanted to take. Soon after our arrival home, Hubert and S. S. Smith held meetings near Cheyenne in a country schoolhouse; they had fine interest and a good attendance.

Mob Spirit

In 1904 S. S. Smith had been holding a meeting near Roll, Oklahoma. He became sick and asked Hubert to fill his appointment. Hubert took Brother Rook, a priest, with him; he was one of the most fearless men to be found. When they got there, Sunday school was being conducted. As soon as they entered the building, they sat down on a seat near the door, and Brother Rook was filled with such fear that he was nearly scared to death, but Hubert did not feel any fear at all.

After the Sunday school was over, Hubert said, "Let's go up front and open the meeting." Brother Rook said, "I can't. I was never so scared in all my life."

Hubert said, "What's the matter?" When he walked up and opened the meeting all the people left except one man and two little girls. That crowd marched around that building while Hubert preached. He had good liberty. When the sermon was over, the man who stayed in the house told him he had come there to see those people mob S. S. Smith. It was that mob spirit Brother Rook felt that scared him. Hubert had not felt it at all and had just gone ahead and preached as though the house were full of people.

Hubert was satisfied the would-be mobbers heard most of what he said because the windows and doors were open, but he saw that when they went out they were angry. It was a very unusual experience but none of them said a word nor made any move to hurt him. If Brother Smith had been there that night they certainly would have done something to him.

the church library. The thoughtfulness and generosity of Brother Fowler lead us to suggest that we will be glad to receive copies of other publications of scientific studies made by church members. These might well include theses for advanced degrees.

From a recent letter from Elder Frank McDonald, Phoenix, Arizona:

If men of the priesthood, who are still in full vigor and strength but retiring from their everyday work, desire to give a full measure of service to their Master, they are invited—if they can do so without economic sacrifices—to move to the Valley of the Sun or elsewhere in this territory. Here they would find most pleasant living conditions and opportunities for service in the work of the Lord that would pay big dividends in abundant living for themselves as well as strengthening the hands of those who are carrying the heavy burdens incident to kingdom-building.

This area is one of the frontiers of the movement among the Spanish-speaking peoples, and we need strong branches here from which to operate into the countries south.

From W. H. Gunn, Nauvoo District, to the Presiding Bishop:

Just a note to tell you the Nauvoo District met its 1952 quota for the Auditorium, and at the same time other contributions for 1952 exceeded 1951. Thought this might be interesting to you.

(We are of the opinion that there are other districts that have gone over their quotas, but we are just in the process of checking the reports for December.—G. L. DeLapp.)

From Apostle A. A. Oakman, February 3:

The spirit of the Saints over here is very good—morale is high and they are happy to have Don Lents with them. He is doing a wonderful work. Last year we had sixty-six baptisms, and I am sure this level can be maintained by a steady and consistent missionary effort.

Many of the folk at the Northern District Conference inquired about you last week end. They will not soon forget your kind ministry and unassuming bearing, and they treasure the memory of your words in sermon, in inspired utterance, and in private conversation.

The floods over here are terrible. They have assumed the proportions of a national disaster. One sixth of Holland is under water, and although I have booked passage for Rotterdam to arrive there next Sunday morning, it begins to look as if I shall have to postpone my visit. Victor Witte comes in next Saturday, and I am trying to contact Anton Compier on the telephone to have him tell me of conditions in Rotterdam. I shall keep you informed.

Perhaps many Herald readers will be interested in Apostle Draper's account of Australian reunion procedures:

We have just concluded the reunion season in Australia. Tiona and Mountain Hut, the former in northern New South Wales and the latter in Victoria, had simultaneous reunions beginning Christmas Day and closing January 4. We estimate that a thousand persons were on the grounds at the two reunions, though at Tiona about 250 were non-members and not there for the reunion.

The daily programs were built around discussions in which every person was given an opportunity to participate. The camp was divided into age groups—adults, young adults, youth, and children. The three older sections were subdivided into discussion groups of not over eight persons. The order of activities called for a fifteen-minute morning prayer and theme presentation period, after which the sections went to their respective meeting places. A forty-minute discussion period followed, and then a forty-minute prayer and testimony period was held in each section. The final morning period was a report and forum session at which group reporters presented data for general summary by the group. Finally, on the closing Saturday, the morning was spent in a camp-wide summary forum. This procedure was well received by both reunions, with appreciation being expressed for the opportunity of extended participation by all. We are summarizing the reports made at the forums and will use the suitable ideas in further emphasis on the reunion theme of "Spiritual Growth Through Stewardship" during the year.

On February 5 citizens of Independence gave a "Welcome Home" dinner for former President Harry S. Truman and family. This was served by the Laurel Club in the Auditorium dining room and received wide newspaper publicity.

Mrs. Flo Burton, president of the Laurel Club, has passed along to us a letter she received from Gerona, Spain, apropos this event. She secured an autograph from President Truman on the bill of fare and mailed it to the writer.

Manager of the Laurel Club
Independence, Missouri
Dear Sir:

This is to join myself entirely to the deserved homage you are preparing to the ex-President Mr. Harry S. Truman on his return to his natal town.

I would also like to ask you to do a favour to me. Will you please be so kind as to send me a bill of fare of the banquet which is going to take place in the salons of this Club, so that I may keep it as a souvenir of this welcome to Mr. Truman.

Thanks you very many in anticipation.
With my best wishes, I am sincerely
yours,

The following is excerpted from a letter from Lee Oliver, president of Pensacola District:

On January 17 and 18, Brother Franklyn Weddle, accompanied by Brother Farrow and Brother Velt, conducted a joint Pensacola-Mobile District Music Institute. This was very successful and drew attendance as high as 225 per service. The people were eager for this type of ministry, and we feel that great good has been accomplished by it.

We are happy to note that in all our services we average as high as twenty-five or thirty visitors, and we feel we are attracting a lot of good will here in this community.

From Ewald Thum of Germany:

I have received much pleasure in your Christmas greeting, and I thank you very much for it. I hope also in the coming year to join with you in the work of God's kingdom. Also my good wishes to you for the coming year. May the Lord bless you in your work.

We remember you always, your visit to Berlin, and feel the good spirit that you have left with us and desire to go forward in it.

The very best greeting from me your brother in the gospel.

Question Time

Question:

I observe that the church follows the exact form of administering the sacrament as given in the fourth chapter of Moroni. Why does it not likewise follow the specific prayers given in the third chapter when performing ordinations?

Missouri

MRS. E. L. R.

Answer:

We do not follow the specific sacramental prayer because it is found in the Book of Mormon. We use this prayer because we are thus commanded in the Doctrine and Covenants, Section 17: 22c, d, 23a, b.

This question no doubt arises from a rather consistent criticism of the type of ordination prayer that is often offered. Instead of the simple prayer which (1) officially declares the candidate to have been ordained to a certain office "in the name of Jesus Christ" and (2) asking briefly for God's blessing upon this official act, we generally wander on.

No doubt the time will come when we will be forced to face our habits in this field, and in the matter of ordinations, as well as confirmations and other acts of a similar nature, we will confine our words to those which are actually prayer to God and, in the case of ordinations, our prayers will endeavor to accomplish the two purposes mentioned. This should end the present criticism which is quite common as regards our departure from the simple form used in Book of Mormon times.

WARD A. HOUGAS

Question:

Do we have any background as to the progenitors of Mary, the mother of Jesus? I cannot feel that his progenitors should be given as through Joseph since the Scriptures maintain that Joseph was not his father.

Colorado

A. A. W.

Answer:

There is considerable doubt regarding the lineage of Mary, the mother of Jesus. Some have felt the following references are sufficient evidence to conclude that she was of the lineage of David: Psalm 132: 11; Luke 1: 32; Romans 1: 3. Others have felt that these scriptural statements do not indicate the ancestry of Mary, but rather refer to Joseph her husband. Again, some Bible students have felt that Mary's kinship to Elizabeth might indicate that she was of the lineage of the tribe of Levi.

CLIFFORD A. COLE

Question:

Today I had charge of a nonmember funeral service. The woman died suddenly Friday night. The husband said she wanted to join our church and her sister has expressed a desire for baptism. Why wouldn't this be a place where baptism for the dead would be justified?

Missouri

R. L. T.

Answer:

To answer this question fully one would have to consider in detail the question, "Does baptism for the dead have any efficacy in the salvation of the dead?" This question is considered at length in the tract now published by the church on the subject, Baptism for the Dead. From my study of the Scriptures I can find no evidence of the fact that baptism for the dead would have any effect upon the eternal salvation of this good lady.

The statement of Jesus to Nicodemus, John 3: 5, reads, "Except a man be born of the water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." Jesus did not say, "Except a man be born of the water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter the kingdom of God unless another man is born of water for him after he is dead." Thus, in his commandment on the essential nature of a man being born again of the water and of the Spirit, Jesus left no opening for the substitution of any other ordinance, baptism for the dead or otherwise. This is only one of the numerous scriptural evidences that baptism for the dead would not have taken the place of the rebirth of the water and of the spirit of the lady herself.

The salvation of this lady depends upon many things, some of which we cannot fully know. I cannot conceive of anyone receiving salvation merely through deathbed repentance, or even deathbed baptism, if throughout his life having had many opportunities to make his covenant with God, but because of indifference or other reason, he had procrastinated the offering of his life to Him until life was ebbing away.

However, many good people through no fault of their own live their entire lives without receiving the conviction of the truth. If the desire of their hearts is worthy in the sight of God, then in all fairness and in keeping with his quality of mercy, justice, and love, he must offer them means by which they can obtain celestial salvation. However, even as a man is judged according to his works in the flesh, so must his reward in the world to come be the result of his works and not those of another. If this lady's salvation were dependent upon baptism for the dead and because of the iniquity of men in the flesh no one was baptized for her, then her salvation would be denied her not because of her unworthiness but because of the unworthiness of others. Can you imagine greater injustice? No, her salvation depends not upon baptism for the dead, but upon the works of her life and the desire of her heart which God alone can know and judge justly.

I now quote from the revelation received by the Prophet Joseph at Kirtland Temple at the time his father was ordained patriarch of the church:

All who have died without a knowledge of this gospel, who would have received it if they had been permitted to tarry, shall be heirs of the celestial kingdom of God; also all that shall die henceforth without a knowledge of it, who would have received it with all their hearts, shall be heirs of that kingdom, for I, the Lord, will judge all men according to their works, according to the desire of their hearts.—Church History, Volume 2, page 16.

This indicates that God has a way by which he offers celestial salvation to those whose hearts' desire is worthy and who through no fault of their own had no opportunity to be baptized in this world. Thus, if the fact that this lady was not baptized in this life was due to no fault of her own and the desire of her heart is worthy in the sight of God, she has no need of having someone practice baptism for the dead in her behalf, for unto such the promises of God are sure. This being true then hers is not a case where baptism for the dead would be justified.

Let Nothing Separate You From Each Other

By Alice M. Burgess

CHRIST AT THAT LAST SUPPER with his disciples laid down fellowship as the mark of his discipleship, saying, "By this shall all men know ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another" (John 13:35).

And later John, the apostle of love, wrote, "If we walk in the light as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another" (I John 1:7).

You will notice both John and Jesus refer to the fellowship of the Saints—the love that is born by those of one faith, one doctrine, and one baptism. This gospel fellowship is a closer tie than may be found elsewhere—a love based on the love of Christ as the motivating force of our lives.

Perhaps in small church groups this love exists more prevalently and becomes a closer bond than here in Independence where there are so many of us. It shouldn't. True, you can't know intimately a thousand people; but there should always be the smaller group that you meet often and learn to love as you work together and share life's joys and sorrows.

At any rate, if you've ever been an active member of a branch you have experienced the thrill of Reorganized Latter Day Saint fellowship, the special quality of affection that comes from praying together and sharing the Spirit of the Lord as you go forward in the greatest endeavor ever trusted to mankind. This is the fellowship which clears your vision till you see Christ in your neighbor and, seeing clearly, understand her.

I can remember as a child how closely we were knit together in the little branches, and how keen the sorrow was when orders came for us to move on to another appointment. But it was (and is) wonderful to drop into such a branch, a stranger in a strange city, and feel there the same joy of fellowship in Christ.

It is fortunate that our boys during the war are finding this same fellowship among the Saints in foreign lands. Surely this bond is one of the greatest things in life—a foretaste of the life eternal.

WE SHOULD ASK OURSELVES to what extent we "have fellowship one with another." Since our theme is negatively stated, we shall examine ourselves from that angle, asking, "What are some of the things that separate us from each other?" Let us test ourselves by answering a few questions: Does worldliness separate us from the complete fellowship we should have with each other? Are our minds so concentrated on meeting the social obligations of our neighborhood group, our special club, or our husband's office clique that we haven't time to work with God's people on the greatest job in the world? Are the current concerts, lectures, plays, or movies so fascinating that they crowd out women's meetings, prayer service, choir practice, or even the social activities of our branch? Do we say "yes" so easily to the demands of the world that we are compelled to say "no" to God's call for jobs to be done in his kingdom? Do we wake up some mornings to find ourselves definitely out of touch with the members of the branch and out of step with their onward march?

When James pronounced friendship of the world to be enmity with God and said further, "whosoever . . . will be a friend of the world is the enemy of God" (James 4:4), he meant just what he said. We might think this too harsh for us in this so-called Christian world. But it is still true that whosoever wills to be a friend of the world soon finds God crowded out of his life. After all, this is not a Christian nation, and not a Christian community in the strict sense of the word. Most of our government, politics, community, and the homes around us are half pagan. Christianity still hasn't been working out in daily living, else Zion would be accomplished.

We must, of course, be in the world and should be civic-minded and neighborly, retaining our fine friendships with the good people around us who are not of our faith. But we cannot allow such contacts and friendships to come first in our lives. We must pray not that God will take us out of this world, but that he will keep us from the evil that is in the world. We need to be possessed of civic and world consciousness to be good citizens, alert to our duty to civic righteousness. But it still should be true with us as the old hymn declares, "The friends most delightful this world can afford are the friends of my Master, the children of God."

ARE WE BEING separated from each other by idle and malicious gossip? Do we undermine someone's influence and power for good in the branch by repeating and spreading petty or derogatory tales? Can we always top the current story of our brothers' or sisters' weaknesses by another incident just as bad or worse? Do we push on the snowball of gossip and add to it as we push, or do we try to stop it and melt it away by recalling good things, kindly attributes, and admirable and lovable characteristics of the one who is being panned? We know how such stories often start: "I've always admired Louise so much; she's a good worker and comes from a fine church family, but I was shocked to hear the other day that she, buzz, buzz, buzz." How do we greet such a story? Are we shocked but credulous, and do we pass it on? Or do we politely but firmly decline to believe it, counter with a different story about Louise and, if the gossip continues to spread, try to ferret out the truth of the matter? If Louise is in real trouble, we should help her back to safe ground; if it is a blown-up tale based on some trivial weakness or misdeed, or is absolutely untrue, we should use our telephones to call as many as we know who have heard the story and set them right. It will be time well spent, though often we find it a hard task to quench the flame of wide-spread gossip.

How much better if we could establish a pattern of behavior which refuses to talk about anyone unless we can say good things. How vulnerable we are among ourselves; if we are a small group, meeting often and knowing each other intimately, we are bound, sooner or later, to see each other's weaknesses and be disappointed at times. How terribly we can hurt each other when our loyalty and love are not adequate to the occasion and we criticize or ridicule those of our own fellowship.

Our Lord said to those who found fault with him for refusing to pronounce harsh Mosaic judgment on the sins of others, "Ye judge after the flesh, I judge no man" (John 8:15). And again in the Sermon on the Mount, he said, "Judge not unrighteously, that ye be not judged. . . . For with what judgment ye shall judge, ye shall be judged; and with what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again" (Matthew 7:2, 3). Paul sums it up, "Let us not therefore judge one another any more; but judge this rather, than no man put a stumbling block or an occasion to fall in his brother's way" (Romans 14:13). And again, "Brethren, if a man be overtaken in a fault, ye which are spiritual restore such a one in the spirit of meekness" (Galatians 6:1).

ARE YOU ALLOWING YOURSELF to be separated from someone because of pride or envy? Do you work with others as long as you can occupy a place of prominence, but when circumstances, ill health, or press of family cares compels you to relinquish that leadership, can you drop down gracefully to doing smaller things and support your successor? Or does everything look wrong to you because she doesn't do things as you have done them? Can you rejoice in the success, happiness, and achievement of others, or are you bitten by the green bug of jealousy? It's very easy to be envious of those who are doing a job that you would like to do. It is natural to your carnal self to be jealous of a family that is getting ahead either in the church or in a financial way—especially if you feel yourself slipping a little. It is one of Satan's most favored weapons against the people of the Lord to play upon this human trend.

The Saints have been repeatedly warned against envy both in the New Testament church and in the church of the latter days. Envy and strife are among the things that polluted the inheritance of Saints, and they are the more deadly in that we often do not acknowledge to ourselves that they are the motivation behind the things we do and say. We are not honest with ourselves in the matter, and before we realize it our hearts become embittered, our lives soured, and we are walking in darkness.

Try this bit of feminine soul searching: Are you big enough to fellowship with someone who can dress much better, drives a better car, has a home that makes your carefully contrived dwelling place shrink to unimportance and inadequacy? Can you really like someone who has gone much farther in the educational world? If you have a soul large enough you may be able to minister even to such a person. Perhaps she needs you.

ARE YOU A GOOD FORGIVER, or do you hold a grudge? Some affronts are hard to take and keep sweet. A young soldier just returned from three years' active combat and still in uniform was invited to meet with a special group of young people. He and his wife had long looked forward to that meeting. He needed the healing, comforting experience of communion with Saints, and it would be their first prayer and fellowship meeting together since his return. One of the fortunate young men who had been allowed to stay home and work in a defense plant during the war arose and expressed heartfelt gratitude that the Lord had saved him from soiling his life by combat and polluting his soul by killing others. That was a bitter pill to take. This young couple have not been able to bring themselves to meet again with that group, but they are trying to dig the hurt and anger out of their hearts. They are pleasant to the offender and his wife whenever they have contact.

It is easier to forgive a slight against yourself than an injustice borne by your husband or family. But you are not helpful to these dear ones if you cultivate the hurt and carry the grudge. Do not estrange them from the household of faith by such mistaken loyalty and pity. Jesus told Peter that he must forgive his brother who sinned against him, not seven times but seventy times seven. If you started keeping score I doubt if you would reach that total in a lifetime. Oh, you might fancy you were slighted or offended many times, but if you find yourself continually feeling persecuted, offended, or even sinned against, you'd better examine yourself to see if the fault is within you. Can it be that you are out of step or have a chip on your shoulder?

The Lord has said in this latter day, "He that forgiveth not his brother his trespasses, standeth condemned before the Lord, for there remaineth in him the greater sin. I, the Lord, will forgive whom I will forgive, but of you it is required to forgive all men" (Doctrine and Covenants 64: 2d, e). No matter how unjustly you have been treated, no matter how badly sinned against, you will be more at fault than the offender if you do not forgive him.

Do you permit class prejudice to separate you from fellowship with some of the household of faith? Do you pick and choose among the Saints, shutting out some from the inner circle of heart-to-heart communion that should be yours with all fellow-members? We pride ourselves on not having class distinctions in the United States, but we do have; yet the net still gathers all kinds; the poor still have the gospel preached to them. Perhaps some of the humbler members have gone farther into the definite day by day demonstration of Christian living than we have.

In one of the Stone Church groups that holds cottage prayer meetings there is a little deacon who can scarcely put two words together without sinning most atrociously against what Blanche Mesley would call the King's English. But he is a man of great faith and tireless industry in his priesthood work. He has done a great work in that group and also among the young people, and I was guilty of making snap judgment the first time I met him and heard him give an announcement in group meeting. My heart sank, and I said to myself, "Surely in Independence we have better priesthood material than that." But after I heard two of his testimonies and had worked a few weeks with him, I was convinced that my misgivings were unfounded, that saintliness of character, a living faith, and an absolute consecration of life are more important to the Lord than correct diction and sophisticated social graces.

DON'T BRING UP your children to be little prigs who look with disdain upon less fortunate children. Don't play Lady Bountiful, but give a sincere sisterly hand to those who are down. My daughter tells me her social case work has taught her that often these destitute people need a sympathetic ear into which to pour their troubles and an encouraging word to help them become self-confident more than they need the money and clothes they receive.

Some terrible sins have been committed against the fellowship of Saints in the name of "friendly visiting," and it is sad that this beautiful phrase has come to stand in the minds of some of our poor and needy for something undesirable to be endured from their sisters. The phrase itself means just what it should—visiting as a sincere friend and helping as only a sincere friend can help in time of trouble.

Do you let race prejudice shut you out of fellowship with some very wonderful Saints? We are told by psychologists that there are no over-all race differences. The so-called Negroid apelike skull and features are found in some members of Aryan races. Very dark skin is found among some individuals of the white race, and there are light-skinned Negroes. The Jewish nose and cast of features are found frequently among Anglo-Saxons. As for their so-called grasping, self-assertive, sharp bargain-driving tendencies, I wish I could repeat to you a sermon I once heard Brother Elbert give comparing the Jew and the traits for which he is condemned with the Yankee.

I know of one family of good Saints, fourth or fifth generation, who kept their children out of Graceland because there were too many Hawaiians and Orientals in places of prominence in the student body. "God hath made of one blood all nations of the earth." Christ came for all. To the extent that we shut ourselves out of this larger brotherhood we shut ourselves out from him.

Do you have a critical attitude toward others, especially toward your leaders and members of the priesthood? Don't dwell on mistakes of judgment or weaknesses

Youth Camp Quotes From '52

CAMPS for the church young people of high school and junior high age and even for children are increasing at a phenomenal rate. From our first church youth camp held at Nauvoo in 1928, the number of camps had grown to twenty-four in 1951, and to thirty-five in 1952. From less than thirty in the first camp, the number served in these camps has grown to over three thousand young people and children in 1952. The promise for 1953 is for even more camps to minister to even greater numbers of church young people and their friends. All this is in addition to the splendid growth of our reunions.

The value of camps, like that of reunions, branches, or districts, must be evaluated not simply by the number attending, but in their ability to deepen Christian convictions and to change lives for the better. The following extracts from reports received from the 1952 camps are quoted as partial evidence of the worth of these camps to the church. Camp administrators have their problems too, and not all camps achieve the same results. Even so, these few quotes should warm the hearts of all who may wonder what youth-camping can contribute to kingdom-building:

Camp Wasila, Oregon:

Camp Wasila, 1952, was the high light of my religious experiences! Never before has a staff and camp felt more uplifted by a camping experience in the Northwest. . . . It was a real period of growth and inspiration. . . . I think of several boys who had seemed great problems in previous years who this year were perfect examples of peaceable leaders in all camp events. Our counselors did an excellent job of getting acquainted and gaining the confidence of the young people. Many excellent private counseling sessions spontaneously came into existence. The response to dorm devotion was phenomenal in some groups. . . . Only two or three of the group of nearly 120 who attended fellowship service failed to respond in testimony.—PAUL WELLINGTON

Unlimited thanks are due Paul Wellington, camp director, from all who are vitally concerned with young people, for with love, patience, and deep understanding, he united campers and staff members in a search for spiritual growth.—SHIRLEY LANDON

Hawaii:

We hold the same youth camp, Hooluana, in two sections, one being here on Oahu and the other on Hawaii. . . . Only by having the two camps can we accommodate as many of our young people as we do. . . . Our camps this year were a little smaller than last year, but the spirit and the amount of good that we feel was derived by the campers were greater. . . . We look forward to even better camps next year and hope that the attendance will increase.—ORLIN CROWNOVER

Camp Michivoix, Michigan:

Evening devotions were mentioned by many as high points of camp. . . . We feel that the two-week camp has worked out satisfactorily and recommend that such a plan be contemplated for the coming year. If it should be expanded further er the next step, it seems to me, would be to offer a three-week camp with a two-week limit to any camper. . . . The class we offered in Restoration Distinctives was very successful. It would make a good camp theme for another year. . . . Our conviction is that camping is very worth while. This feeling grows as we see, even in this short week or two together, changes take place in the attitudes and outlook of many young people as they take on qualities of the kingdom. It is also enhanced as we see many still building on the start made at camp months and years later. . . . I do not want to overemphasize youth camps, but feel that they are an effective means of helping young people find God. They can and should be tied to district and local youth activities to gain the desired continuity.—JOHN WILEY

Camp Winiagwamauk, Maine:

A new vision of camping, its possibilities, and its challenge was brought to campers and parents alike.—LOYD ADAMS

Brush Creek Youth Camp, Illinois:

At the close of camp one camper was baptized, and two others made their decisions to be baptized at their home branches. . . . All in all, it was a wonderful experience for campers and staff members. I am very grateful to have had this opportunity to serve.—CECIL R. ETTINGER

Camp Kiondashawa, Pennsylvania:

The ministry given to the teen-agers of this area was one of the most encouraging signs of growth during the three-year period. It had pronounced effect on the branch life, the missionary zeal, and the general tone of the whole area. The camp is serving approximately two hundred young people each summer.

We managed to get one good Spanish-speaking prospect to camp—a young lady, Maxine Segure Glaser, from Oak Harbor, Ohio. I believe the camp had a profound influence on her investigation of the church. She is a native of Casa Grandis, Mexico, and a Roman Catholic.—LOYD ADAMS

Junior High Camp at Kiondashawa:

Calvin French's Bible-marking class seems to me to be a good thing. At the preceding camp we had quizzed a group of older campers, including some young priesthood members, regarding the beliefs of the church, and though they knew the beliefs reasonably well, yet in the fifty-minute class, not one was able to give a correct quotation with reference. This called for some attention, and we felt that we might be able to help at this camp. . . . We revolved the camp around an Indian theme and divided the campers into different tribes. We built on Book of Mormon topics during the day and arranged Indian stunts and activities in the evening. We are going to try to bring in some of the romance of Mexican history and the goals of the church in our future work in that area.—JAMES MENZIES

New Horizons

Deer Park Youth Camp, Pennsylvania:

The camp was climaxed with a baptismal service on Saturday, August 9. Four young people were baptized in a most impressive and inspiring service. This was followed by a deeply moving service of prayer and testimony at which the unmistakable power of the Spirit of Christ moved with real effect on many of the campers.—LOYD ADAMS

Allegany State Park Camp, New York:

The camp at Allegany State Park, New York, August 24-31, was a new one in terms of location. . . . The physical setting, the number of campers, and the quality of the staff contributed most to its success. . . . Early morning hikes, a mountain climb, and cook-out were exciting features of the camp. We closed once more with a very inspiring baptismal service on Saturday night, and a Communion and dedication service on Sunday morning during which the witnessing power of Jesus Christ was certainly present. It was a wonderful note on which to close the summer camping experience. . . . I sincerely believe that if we work at the job to make it so . . . the youth camp can be one of our most effective evangelistic tools. When we consider that we grow by the number we keep, the value of youth camp is made even more apparent. Its ministry to the young people plus its opportunity to serve extended to the young adults in staff responsibility made it an activity of high priority in my judgment.—LOYD ADAMS

Camp Ontagin:

This youth camp, June 29-July 6, was the first camping experience for the young people of Ontario. Although the first attempt, it was extremely successful. . . . The classes were very good and fellowship and sportsmanship were stressed, with the young people responding to a high degree. The prayer service the last Sunday morning of camp was outstanding, and many young people were lifted up and touched by a new experience. This being my first camp experience, I thought it most worth while. I enjoyed the fellowship of the staff members as well as the campers, feeling that they worked together in a most co-operative manner.—JOHN E. BOOTH

Stanley Leonard

Veteran Symphony Player at Twenty-one

When the Senior Symphony Orchestra of the Eastman School of Music, Rochester, New York, appears in public concert these days, the young musician producing the roaring crescendoes on the kettle drums is Stanley Leonard, twenty-one-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. William Leonard of Independence, Missouri. A junior and a scholarship student at Eastman, Stanley is already a veteran performer in the field of symphonic music.

One of three hundred students selected from all parts of the world to attend the School of Music of the University of Rochester, Stanley also plays percussion instruments in the Eastman Little Symphony and the Eastman Wind Ensemble, the latter being a performing and recording band for public school demonstration in New York State. While essentially a percussion player, Stanley does orchestral and band arrangements and plays piano, French horn, trumpet, and marimba. He has also composed for piano, woodwind and brass instruments, and percussion ensembles.

At the age of fourteen, he began playing percussion instruments with the Independence Symphony Orchestra. He also has played with the University of Kansas City Symphony Orchestra. When he was a senior at William Chrisman High School, he began playing with the Kansas City Philharmonic Orchestra and, during the past year, he played with the Erie, Pennsylvania, Philharmonic Orchestra.

Stan has played with members of the Kansas City Philharmonic Orchestra accompanying the Independence Messiah Choir for four of its nation-wide broadcasts. Only a late holiday school schedule kept him from playing for the broadcast this Christmas season.

His wide experience, participating in these and other orchestras, has been coupled with a lifetime of intense study. While in high school, he won the honor award in art; received a number one rating for four years in snare drum and marimba in Missouri State music contests; held the rank of major in the ROTC; was battalion executive officer; had leading parts in several plays; and was student director of the band.

As a member of the Stone Church Scout Troop 223, Stan advanced to the rank of Eagle, and also won the Bronze, Silver, and Gold Palms. Before going to college he served as assistant Scoutmaster.

While in high school he attended the Kansas University summer music camp. He has also attended the University of Michigan summer school of music at Interlochen, Michigan, Northwestern University, and Graceland College. Entering Eastman as a sophomore, Stan did such excellent work that he was awarded a scholarship from the school for his junior year. In an effort to help finance his education, he has worked in machine shops, operated a steam roller, and taught music since he was in high school. Currently he is playing percussion with a selected orchestra from Eastman which broadcasts a half-hour program weekly over N.B.C.

Last July Stan conducted the orchestra and chorus for the Center Stake Zion's League annual outdoor operetta, "H.M.S. Pinafore," playing four performances before a total of three thousand people. He has always taken an active interest in the Zion's League, and before he was graduated from William Chrisman in 1949 served as president of the Stone Church teen-age Zion's League. He is now young people's leader for the New York District.

In April, 1952, Stan and his childhood sweetheart, Margaret Ann Holman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mark Holman, also of Independence, were married. She is a graduate of Graceland and is now attending the University of Rochester and working part time.

Stan has never allowed other activities to interfere with his responsibilities in the church. He has always wanted to serve his fellow-men because he feels that in this way he is serving God. In November, 1952, he was ordained a priest and is now serving as assistant pastor of the Rochester Branch. Margaret Ann is serving as pianist.

BOB AKERS

Golden Wedding Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Holmes of Portland, Oregon, were honored by their friends on Sunday, January 11, their golden wedding anniversary. A reception was held for them at the home of their daughter, Mrs. Clarence Oak; Mrs. Clyde Johnson, their other daughter, was cohostess. The reception was highlighted by a golden dollar tree and many gifts.

Married January 11, 1903, in Gresham, Mr. and Mrs. Holmes have lived in the Portland area most of the time since. He is operator of a motel and service station.

The Holmes have three grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Missionary Holds Series

WEST PORTSMOUTH, OHIO.—Carl A. Chadwell and wife of Follansbee, West Virginia, visited the branch on October 19.

The women's department had a membership drive in October and fifteen new members joined the department. The prize for bringing in the most members was awarded to Genevieve Myers. After the close of the business session, refreshments were served.

The men of the priesthood from West Portsmouth, McDermott, Ironton, and Pleasant Valley branches met at the branch on November 8, and entertained with a dinner in honor of their wives. Fifty-five were in attendance at the banquet. Joseph Williams, Jr., gave the evening address.

The missionary to southern Ohio, Elder Calvin French, held meetings and showed colored slides at the branch from November 9 to 23. Sister French assisted with the songs and music.

The former district missionary, Seventy Virgil Billings, and his wife visited the branch on November 23. He gave the closing sermon of the missionary series which Brother French held.

Members of the Zion's League from the branch met at McDermott on November 17 for a fellowship meeting with League members from Ironton, Pleasant Valley, and McDermott.

The church school held a costume Halloween party on October 31 in the basement of the church. Music and games provided entertainment and prizes were awarded.

The women's department held their annual Thanksgiving chicken dinner on November 26. Proceeds netted $155.81, which was donated to the new fuel oil furnace. A traveling basket is being circulated by the department in order to raise funds for the building.

A group of young people from the Zion's League visited homes of several Saints that were sick and aged and sang Christmas carols to them on December 24.

A Christmas program was presented by the children of the church school on the Sunday morning before Christmas.

A Christmas play was given by the older young people of the church school that evening. Approximately seventy-five persons were present.

S/Sgt. Samuel D. Rexroad was home on a thirty-day furlough from Burlington, Vermont. At the conclusion of his furlough he reported to Camp Stoneman, California, for overseas duty.—Reported by NELLIE G. REXROAD weeks' series of cottage meetings and illustrated lectures. At the Sunday morning service, nine adults were baptized. They were Mr. and Mrs. Hale Glauner, Mr. and Mrs. James Stapleton, Mr. Walter French, Misses Henrietta Jenkins and Evelyn Vinson, all of Hagerman, and Mr. and Mrs. Ivan Nipper of Buhl. This makes a total of twenty-seven baptized for the year.

Brother and Sister J. Ervin Condit held open house December 29 to celebrate their sixtieth wedding anniversary. They were married at Malta, Idaho, in 1892, and moved to Hagerman in 1893. They were charter members of the branch which was organized in 1902.

On January 4 a candlelight Communion and dedication service was held. Evangelist Silas Condit, Pastor Lysle Gilmore, and Elder Charles Vreeland were in charge, assisted by priests Howard Carlson, Merrill Gilmore, Ivan Montgomery and Win Condit.—Reported by MRS. SILAS CONDIT

New Church Consecrated

PORT COLBORNE, ONTARIO.—The new church was consecrated on October 6, with Apostle C. George Mesley and Bishop Leslie Kohlman in attendance. Missionary services were conducted November 16-30 by Seventy Al Pelletier of Port Elgin. Brother Pelletier chose as his theme, "Provisions for Abundant Living," and conducted services as well as visiting in the homes in the area. Three new members were baptized at the conclusion of the series. On the closing Sunday of the series a confirmation service was held in the morning, and a service for the blessing of children was held in the evening. The following children were blessed by Seventy A. Pelletier and Elders H. Snider and P. Baldwin: David J., son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Petterson; Stuart James, William Edmund, and John Charles, sons of Mr. and Mrs. William Locheed.—Reported by ROY CASTLE

Baptismal Service Held

BRIDGEPORT, WASHINGTON.—Charles Enslie was ordained to the office of elder on April 20, 1952. Glenda Joice and Marilyn Lois McCoy of Grand Coulee and Bert Leroy Dobson of Brewster were baptized by L. N. Johnson, and confirmed by Elders J. F. Curtis, Charles Enslie, and L. N. Johnson on June 22.

On August 31, Elder Johnson went to Wenatchee to assist in the confirmation of ten newly baptized members.

On October 9, Brother George Njeim visited the branch.

During 1952, the following men were among those who ministered in the branch: Vern Webb, Ted Beck, Monte Lasater, Arthur Gibbs, Harold Hight, and Brother Hammel.

Leonard Johnson of the branch is now at Graceland College. Brother Joe Love is the solicitor and deacon of the branch.

Twenty-three administrations and three blessings of children were reported in the past year.—Reported by YVONNE BOWER

Children Give Christmas Program

PROVIDENCE, RHODE ISLAND.—A harvest supper was held November 1 in the church auditorium by the women's department of the branch under the direction of the women's leader, Mrs. Doris Latham, and was attended by over one hundred people. Entertainment followed the supper, with colored slides and an accompanying talk given by Mrs. Stanley J. Bates, who is Ranger Naturalist at Crater Lake, Mt. Rainier National Park.

The Christmas service for the church school was held December 21, with the annual Christmas tree and concert, under the direction of the church school director, Mr. H. Clifton

Hallgreen. A play, "The Shepherd and the Angel," was given by members of the primary and junior classes, after which gifts were distributed to the children.—Reported by MRS. H. C. HALLGREEN

Patriarch Holds Series

LANCASTER, OHIO.—Elder George I. Howdyshell was elected to serve as pastor for the ensuing year; Lillian Hallarn, church school director; Ruth Howdyshell, music director; Betty Griffin, women's leader; Cora Stoneburner, publicity agent; Betty Smith, secretary; Howard Koontz, treasurer; and E. H. Caldwell, solicitor.

Patriarch E. Y. Hunker held a series from December 7 to December 14. Brother Hunker was in charge of the Communion service on December 7.

On December 21, a Christmas program was held at the 10:30 a.m. service by the children. That evening a Christmas cantata was given. The infant daughter, Debra Marlene, of Mr. and Mrs. Gale R. King, was blessed by Elders George I. Howdyshell and H. A. Griffin.

Brother and Sister Kyle Reed and little daughter have moved to Lancaster and have entered into the branch activity. Brother Reed has been appointed Zion's League leader.

On December 28, Elder H. A. Griffin was the speaker at the morning preaching services, and Elder Edward L. Smith was the evening speaker.

Joan Smith was home from Graceland for Christmas vacation, and Jane Campbell was home from Ohio State University.

A watch party and fellowship service was held December 31 at the church basement.—Reported by CORA STONEBURNER

Branch Has Christmas Activities

SANTA ANA, CALIFORNIA.—On December 3, Evangelist Louis J. Ostertag baptized his nephew, James Wilson, and wife Betty. Confirmation followed by Bishop David B. Carmichael and Evangelist Louis J. Ostertag.

A chili supper was given on December 5 by the Zion's League. An offering was taken which was used to defray part of the expense of the Yule camp. A bazaar and cooked food sale was held on December 6, with proceeds totaling $200.

On December 7, at the conclusion of a series given by Elder Carl Ruoff on Joseph Smith the Translator, a reception was given for Elder Ruoff and his family in the lower auditorium.

The women's department gave a Christmas tea on December 14 which was held at the home of Sister Vida Engel. Mrs. Joyce McCoy sang "Jesu Bambino" and "No Candle and No Fire," accompanied by Mrs. Leah Pemberton. Margaret Wickes Jones performed at the piano during the serving of the tea.

The women's department met at the home of Sister Hallie Tait for ten o'clock brunch on December 17. Entertainment was furnished by Edith Ross who played the accordion. A silver offering amounting to $11 was taken and applied to the Auditorium Fund.

The annual Christmas party was held December 19. The party, which was under the direction of the Ward family, included games, carol singing, a recitation given by Phillip Morrison, the arrival of Santa, and the exchange of gifts. The pastor was presented a Christmas gift from the branch.

On December 21, during the church school hour, a Christmas drama, entitled "Why the Chimes Rang," was given by the children. The children's choir, under the direction of Warren Tait, provided Christmas music during the morning services. During the evening service a drama depicting the story of Christmas was given by the Zion's League. Following this, the young people went caroling.

Ardith Parons attended Yule camp held at Easter Seal Lodge December 26, 27, and 28.

James Clayton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Bilbo, was blessed by Evangelist Louis J. Ostertag and Elder James Clark on December 28.—Reported by BETTY BLACK dle, General Church music director. A class was held on Saturday evening, and he preached on "Music for Worship" at the Sunday morning service. Classes were held on Sunday afternoon. Apostle Percy Farrow and Evangelist H. I. Velt accompanied Brother Weddle. Brother Farrow preached in Mobile on Sunday night, and Brother Velt preached at Pensacola.—Reported by J. D. HALL

Group Organized Into Mission

BRYAN, TEXAS.—The Bryan group was a part of the Hearne Branch when it was organized four years ago and until 1952, when it became a district mission under the direction of District President C. W. Tischer. Elder C. M. Mitchell is the pastor.

Meetings are still held in a public building, but the group have consistently added to the building fund. They have almost $2,500 in cash and our lot has been purchased at a cost of $1,800. Many desire to contribute labor on the building which it is hoped will be erected soon.

Seventy Z. Z. Renfroe met with the group from November 23 to December 6. During this time he held a missionary series in the evenings and visited both members and non-member friends during the day. Unfortunately the evening services were irregular due to conflicts in building reservations.

Brother Renfroe presided at the morning prayer service Thanksgiving Day. Dinner was served to all at the church and a program of music was presented in the afternoon.

Mary Rebecca, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Stout, was blessed November 30, by Elders Z. Z. Renfroe and C. M. Mitchell.—Reported by M. B. GOUGH

Additions to Building

WELLSBURG, WEST VIRGINIA.—A baptismal service was conducted at Wellsburg on January 18. Geraldine Davis, Nancy Davis, and Dorothy Jean White were baptized by Pastor John Treiber, who with the assistance of Eugene Chadwell confirmed those inducted.

Brother Roy Hanes has received his discharge from the Armed Forces, having served for two years. He spent fifteen months in Germany.

The kitchen has been remodeled recently and a branch supper was held February 21. A valentine box social was held on February 13, with three groups, Zion's League, adult class, and Live Wire class, participating.

A pastor's study has also been added to the church building. The dining hall and classrooms are in process of being completed.—Reported by LEONA HANES

Conference and Institute Held

EASTERN MICHIGAN DISTRICT.—The Eastern Michigan District conference was held October 19, at Sandusky, Michigan, under the direction of J. V. Pement, district president.

The conference opened with a prayer service at 9:00 a.m. under the leadership of Apostle C. G. Mesley and Bishop T. A. Beck.

The morning worship service was called at 10:45 with President W. Wallace Smith as the speaker.

Dinner was served at noon by the ladies of the branch.

The business meeting was called to order by Brother Pement at 2:00 p.m. The following were elected to office: John Blackstock of Prudenville, Michigan, district president; Ardis Bender of Sandusky, Michigan, secretary; Herbert McFarlane, of McGregor, Michigan, treasurer; Frank Sheufelt of Owendale, Michigan, director of religious education; Eldon Winters of Cash, director of priesthood education; Kenneth Rich of McGregor, Michigan, director of missionary activity; Emerson Wood of Harbor Beach, Michigan, director of youth; John Thum of Sandusky, Michigan, director of music; Ruth Wood of Harbor Beach, Michigan, publicity agent; Harold Dekker of Applegate, Michigan, and O. J. Campbell of Sandusky, auditors; Maude-Wilson, historian; and O. J. Campbell, bishop's agent.

It was voted to hold a reunion at the Cash, Michigan, reunion grounds in 1953.

The district will have a missionary in residence in Sandusky, Michigan. Elroy Hanton, formerly of Port Huron, Michigan, will fill this office and will assist the new district president with his work in this area.

Brother J. V. Pement was transferred to Boston, Massachusetts, by action of the Joint Council.

Maynard Albright of Bay Port, and Emerson Wood of Harbor Beach, Michigan, were called to the office of priest. Eugene Greaves of McGregor, Michigan, was called to the office of teacher.

On Friday night preceding the conference a banquet was held to raise funds with which to complete the office of the district president which has been included in the construction of a residence for the Sandusky minister. This dinner was attended by approximately 225 people. President W. Wallace Smith spoke of his travels to Hawaii and illustrated them with colored slides. Apostle C. G. Mesley spoke on behalf of the need for the funds for which the banquet was held.

On October 18, the day preceding conference an institute for priesthood and their wives was held. There were sessions for the men under the direction of W. Wallace Smith and T. A. Beck. Classes for the women were under the direction of Mrs. T. A. Beck. General classes were held under the direction of C. G. Mesley. Saturday evening speaking service was held for all the membership with President W. Wallace Smith as the speaker.

November 15 and 16 were the dates for a Zion's League rally held in the Community Building of Harbor Beach, Michigan. Very foggy weather curtailed the attendance of both personnel and young people, but almost forty were able to attend.

The week end opened with a turkey dinner served by the women's department of the Harbor Beach mission.

The program for the evening was presided over by Emerson Wood as toastmaster. Community singing was conducted by Margie Richards assisted by Harry Volz and Joan Jeffers. The speaker for the evening was John Banks, of Chatham, Ontario.

A young people's class was held Sunday morning, conducted by Elder Elroy Hanton.

District President John Blackstock spoke at 11:00 a.m.

A business meeting was held for the Zion's League at 2:00 p.m. at which time district activities were discussed.

Mission Organized Into Branch

HOPEWELL, OREGON.—In a little farming community situated on Route 1, Dayton, Oregon, a group of isolated Saints met together once a week in their homes to hold cottage prayer meetings. The Spirit of God was there in abundance at each one of their brief meetings. Also present in each individual was a dream that they would one day have a church there. They talked, dreamed, and prayed until one day in the early part of 1950 they heard that Elder Elwin R. Vest of Portland was holding a series of missionary meetings at the church in Salem and a group of them decided to attend.

One day Brother Vest came out into the community and visited at the homes of many of the Saints. He told them of the great possibilities they had there and when he returned to Portland he talked to the district president concerning this matter. On September 15, 1950, District President J. L. Verhei and the district church school director, Harold Carpenter, came down to organize the mission. It was a happy day for the Saints, for their dream had at last become a reality.

Having no definite place in which to hold services they gave the mission the temporary name, Grand Island mission. Later when the building committee had made arrangements for the group to use an unused school building, the name was changed to Hopewell mission as the building was located in the Hopewell vicinity.

On October 15, 1950, the little group convened for the first time. A total of sixty-one members, their families, and guests were present that first Sunday. They worked hard to further the work in the community and many of the Saints from the branches in Salem, Sherwood, Woodburn, Portland, and many other places came and lent a helping hand to the group. The first two years were happy ones for the Saints. They had good attendance and many were baptized into the church. The mission was organized into a branch on February 1, 1953.—Reported by MONA WORTHINGTON

FIRST BRANCH, CHICAGO, ILLINOIS.

—During the month of September Women's Day was observed in all the branches of the district. On September 21, First Branch emphasized "Restoration Challenges to Women" with Lydia Wight giving the message. Emerine Gunderson, women's leader, was in charge, assisted by Eleanor Chandler. The women's choir, under the direction of Helene Hancock, presented "I Saw a Mighty Angel Fly" with Ruth Skinner at the piano. Judith Schmidt, women's club program chairman, was responsible for the planning of the service. Benediction was by Mrs. E. W. Chandler.

Speakers for the month were Elders H. T. McCaig, Sr., L. P. Hancock, and District President Lyle Woodstock. Those contributing in ministry of music during the month were Don Zion, Mrs. Helene Hancock, Mrs. Doris Gelhorn, and Mrs. Frank Mercolino.

The Ssenippah Guild had a lawn social at the home of Mrs. Louis Hancock. Proceeds went to the building fund.

Installation services were held by the North Side Circle and Ssenippah Guild of the branch at their first meetings of the new year.

First Chicago Women's Club sponsored the Jeanette MacDonald concert for the building fund project. A profit of $312 was cleared.

On October 5 the church school held a promotion day service. The children's department participated in a worship service, following which they were presented with promotion certificates and attendance prizes. Gerald Hancock received a Book of Mormon as first prize for perfect attendance for one year. Charlene and Marilyn Schulz won second prize, and Claudia Chandler third prize.

The promotion service was followed by an installation service with the church school director, Louis Hancock, in charge. Elbert Chandler, pastor, gave a charge to the school and Hattie K. Bell gave the closing prayer.

Speakers for the month were Elders Paul Goodrich, L. P. Hancock, E. W. Chandler, Steve Lester, and District President Lyle Woodstock.

On October 10, the women's club met at the Austin Towne Hall. Emerine Gunderson was in charge. The guest speaker was Architect Leonard Wayman. He talked on plans for the new church. The club cleared $233 at their rummage sale held October 23 and 24. Proceeds went to the building fund.

Glenn Lenox was baptized October 25 and was confirmed November 2 at the Communion service by Elders Buren Lenox and District President Lyle Woodstock.

Speakers for the month of November were Elders Paul Goodrich, Paul Whitman, and Apostle Donald O. Chesworth.

A building fund dinner was held November 7 at the home of Herbert Jones, building chairman.

The North Side Women's Circle met at the home of Mrs. Frances Salomon for their Christmas party on December 4. After luncheon Athena Striblen, president, opened the meeting. The devotionals were by Myrtle Gauthier, assisted by Helene Hancock at the piano. Apostle D. O. Chesworth was the guest speaker. District President Lyle Woodstock also gave a talk. Greeting cards were signed for shut-in members, and former members of the Circle, and to boys in service.

Theme for the December Communion service was "Christ Is King," presided over by the pastor. The invocation was by Deacon R. O. Brown. At this service James P., son of Dr. and Mrs. Joseph Ligman, was blessed by Elders J. D. Anderson and Buren Lenox. A trio, Mrs. Fern Swalley, Bernice Delmont, and Helene Hancock, sang.

On December 21 the church school sponsored a Christmas program. The choir sang Christmas carols with the children taking part with their Christmas verses. Alice Skinner was in charge.

The Christmas Scripture was read by Earl Lehman. Santa Claus was there, distributing gifts and candy.

Mrs. Warren Hinkle favored the congregation with a solo in December and the choir, under the direction of Helene Hancock, sang, with Fern Swalley, soloist.

Speakers for the month of December were District President Woodstock, Elders J. D. Anderson and Paul Goodrich.

At the close of the morning service on December 21 the congregation gave a white gift offering amounting to over $650. Proceeds will go to the building fund.

Many women of First Chicago and West Suburban groups attended the study classes at the home of Mrs. Lillian Studtman. The first course was "Better Reading and Study Habits," with Elder Raymond Troyer as teacher, assisted by Sisters Lydia Wight and Doris Woodstock.

The North Side Circle sponsored the sale of Christmas Ideals. The project was directed by Rose Oakes. The proceeds went to the building fund.

Average attendance in November was 109. Average attendance in December was 110. The meeting place each Sunday at 9:30 a.m. church school and 10:50 a.m. preaching is the Austin YMCA, 501 N. Central Avenue.

Prayer and fellowship services are held each Wednesday evening at various homes. The Saints gave a farewell party recently at the home of Mrs. Arthur Swanson in honor of Nina Campbell who is making her home in San Bernardino, California.—Reported by VELVA E. CASTINS

League Sponsors Activity

FAIRLAND, OKLAHOMA.—At the annual branch business meeting the following officers were elected: pastor, C. D. Wilson; church school director, J. G. Jones; secretary, Georgia Canada; treasurer, George Moore; music director, Felyce Dale; women's leader, Esther Wilson; young people's leader, Bill Miller; special day program chairman, Madoleen Miller; auditor, R. L. Montgomery; publicity agent, Josephine Montgomery.

This year, for the first time, the women's department was divided into two groups according to age and interests. The older group has chosen to be called the Hope Circle. The young matrons chose the name Matronettes. The two groups still work closely with joint meetings and co-operative projects.

A special Sunday morning service was held for the blessing of four babies born in the past year. The officiating elders, C. D. Wilson, J. G. Jones, and Ben Bowman, blessed the following babies: Carol Jean, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alby Hudson; Kenneth, son of Mr. and Mrs. Luther Canada; Peggy Lee, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Earls; and Lawrence Dressler, son of Mr. and Mrs. Vern Montgomery.

The Zion's League sponsored a box supper to raise money for the swimming pool at the Ozark reunion grounds. A different flavor was given to the evening by making it a "backwards" box supper with the men bringing the boxes and the women bidding for them.

Four Fairland women attended the district women's department meeting at Carthage. The four women were Esther Wilson, Lorene Moore, Emma Bowman, and Edith Ganzeales.

A Christmas pageant, "The Light Shone Down," was presented at the evening service on December 21, under the direction of Madoleen Miller. The choir was accompanied by Felyce Dale and directed by Henry Williston. On December 23, the branch held its annual Christmas party at the Legion Hall.

The Matronettes, with the co-operation of the Hope Circle, sponsored a bake sale on January 24. The proceeds were used to help a family who lost their home and possessions in a recent fire.—Reported by JO MONTGOMERY

Women's Department Active

DENNIS PORT, MASSACHUSETTS.—Adelia West and her two daughters, Eleanor and Susan, were baptized at reunion by the pastor, Elder George E. Armeson.

Frieda Crocker is the new director of religious education for the branch. The new district president, Elder Jacques Pement, has visited the branch, and Brother William Guthrie visited on January 18.

The branch celebrated its eighty-sixth birthday since the reorganization on November 27.

An active women's department is sponsoring two units of work—the Helping Hand Society and the Thrift Shop. They contribute liberally to the branch budget and special funds.

A Christmas fair consisting of arts and crafts and articles of food was held Saturday afternoon, December 20, by the women of the branch. This was followed in the evening by a musical program by the primary and junior departments. They were trained by Sister Katheryn Armeson whose work with them has been outstanding.

The pastor, Elder George E. Armeson, an attorney, has been actively engaged in missionary work. He is also bishop's agent for the district. During his absence, Brother Clarence A. Rogers serves in his capacity.

On January 16 a branch family night was held, followed by a program.

The auditorium of the church has been redecorated recently by the pastor and volunteer help from the membership. The chimes and the dorsal of maroon velvet were gifts to the church in memory of two women, Mary A. Kelley and Maude Estey. At the service dedicating the chimes there was an overflow crowd. At Christmas time a concert is held and a loud speaker system sends the carols throughout the neighborhood.—Reported by SARAH E. BERRY

League Sponsors Activities

XENIA, ILLINOIS.—On the first Thursday of the month, the women's department meet in the different homes for their social activities and refreshments. Two weeks are given to the lesson, "Tapping Our Spiritual Resources," taught by Ethel Jones.

On the fourth Thursday, members of the group meet for devotional service, birthday dinner, and drawing of gifts for the birthdays of the month. The women have had two bake sales and a bazaar. They have also sponsored some of the eleven o'clock Sunday morning services. Christmas cards have been sold by the group. They have a branch flower fund for the sick and bereaved.

The branch had a fellowship turkey supper and an offering was taken. The guest speakers were District President W. W. Colvin, Dr. W. E. Phillips, and Elder John Henson.

The Zion's League had a New Year's Eve frolic at Brush Creek, Illinois. Thirty young people met at the home of Genevieve Hufhines, young people's leader, December 31. On December 22, the League presented a Christmas program to the branch under the direction of Joe Hoover and Sister Hufhines. On November 28, the young people sponsored an old-fashioned pie supper. The proceeds, $78.25, were added to the branch building fund.—Reported by MARVA M. MOORE

Women Raise Funds

SHERWOOD, OREGON.—The following members of the branch have moved to other areas: Billie Mae and Charlene Ballard, Mrs. LeRoy Leeson, Mrs. Al. McDowell, and Mrs. R. E. Chapman.

There is an average attendance on Sunday mornings of about thirty to thirty-five. About one third of these are nonmembers, including seven or eight children.

Elder James Kemp, recently returned from Hawaii and now missionary to the Oregon District, conducted a series of services at Sherwood. Sister Kemp assisted with the music.

The pastor, Elder Robert L. Bailey, visited Mexico last fall.

The church school is directed by Sister Edith Balsiger.

The women's department is directed by Sister Dolly Callahan and Sister Ruth Tooze. Among their projects have been monthly food sales, quilting and other handwork, potluck dinners after Sunday services, a salmon dinner, and furnishing articles of food and clothing for two needy Christian Jewish families in Germany.

Money raised by the women's department was used to purchase material to make a much needed multi-purpose room by remodeling the old woodshed. Among those contributing work on the new room were Ed M. Balsiger and son, Donald, Randall Rife and son Edward, Arthur Tooze, Vincent Shultz, and son, Donald.

A Thanksgiving service was held by the branch, the Methodists, and the Friends. Pastors of the three groups participated.

The Christmas program was directed by the dramatics leader, Bessie Shultz. It featured children and young people from cradle roll to junior high, and was titled "Glory in the Highest."—Reported by VINCENT R. SHULTZ

TOOZE.—Chester, Jr., died December 10, 1952, of injuries received Thanksgiving Day in a hunting accident. He had served in World War II and in Korea. He had been a member of the Sherwood, Oregon, Branch since childhood.

He is survived by his wife; two children; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Tooze; two brothers; and four sisters.

of these men and women who are spending themselves for you to help you work out God's plan in your life and fellowship. Don't expect them to be more than human. If your pastor never made a mistake, never failed a little in his high purpose, he would be like Enoch—ready to be translated. Could you do a better job than your women's leader does? If she is not accomplishing all you think she should, get busy and help her to get more done.

When seated at the family table for Sunday dinner, don't pick to pieces the whole service of the morning, starting with the opening of church school and ending with the benediction. It is a form of self-indulgence. By criticizing others and picking to pieces what they do you may get a sort of selfish satisfaction, a false sense of superiority which is not Christlike. If you find yourself annoyed or irritated by some person's behavior in the church life, or just plain disliking someone of the fellowship, make a point of getting to know that person better. Of some outstanding person it is often said, "To know her is to love her." I am convinced this is true of everyone. The better we can become acquainted with each other the closer we can come to really understanding each other. When we really understand the causes and factors back of each personality we often marvel at the Christian achievement and saintliness of that life.

Let us never cease to work constructively together and with God. Let us be humble, shake ourselves out of our self-centered or world-centered lives and put first the fellowship of the Saints. We can receive a wonderful blessing but first must make devoted, inspiring investment of ourselves, our lives, our time, and our interests for the good of the whole church group or branch of which we are a member. Achievement of such fellowship is a fine means of evangelism.

"By this shall all men know ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another."

FROSTY AGE

Passing years have given me an increasing respect for maturity. The word has pleasing connotations which the cold word "adult" and the harsh words "old people" do not carry. A time comes in most lives when the cheeks bleach and the hair line whitens. This is the frosty age. It is an in-between season—or many of them—following the verdure of spring and before the snows of winter. It is the glorious age of maturity. C. B. H.

THE LOST ART OF LISTENING

A professor tells this story about a tea party his wife was giving. He noticed the polite murmurs and vague looks as conversation was made, so he decided to try an experiment. As he helped in passing the tiny tea sandwiches, he offered them saying, "These are filled with cheese spread; these have ham; those are filled with arsenic; and those with egg salad." He was amazed to see them helping themselves to all four varieties without comment.

LANGUAGE

Language is to the Arab what architecture, painting and music are to other peoples. He knows all of the 100 synonyms for camel, or sword, and delights in using the most complicated forms of expression. From infancy he is initiated in the art of beautiful words; a simple Bedouin woman will chastise her children for using a wrong grammatical expression.

Each tribe has its own poet, who accompanies it in battle. Before the conflict the poets of each side step forth to praise their own and belittle the prowess of the opposing tribe. It has happened that the tribe whose poet was vanquished silently withdrew from the field without even attempting to fight with weapons.

SLOW, PLEASE

This is an age of speed, but a hurry-up age doesn't require us to be a hurry-up people. I've seen motorcar drivers who insist upon BEING the car—on a long hill they lean forward, jaws set, muscles strained, and work hard. They think they're speeding things up; but we can speed up things only with skill, and skill is acquired slowly and patiently. Racing motorcars and airplanes aren't driven by tense, hurried men, but by calm and skillful ones. Fast thinkers grow from painstaking students and careful observers.

Looking at life from a pitcher's box, I don't think we have to break our necks to keep up. If I should let the yells of the grandstand panic me into hasty action, I'd get tense and shoot wild. There's a great difference between handling a ball and being one. Baseball is a fast game, but you've got to slow down to play it. And life is that way, too, I think.

News and Notes

FROM HEADQUARTERS

Bernice Leona White, R.N.

WHEN THE INDEPENDENCE SANITARIUM AND HOSPITAL opened the new children's floor late last summer, it was with gratification that they could have Bernice Leona White as the supervisor and head nurse. Her experience in pediatrics is wide. She was with the visiting nurses association of Kansas City; has worked as an office nurse; was head nurse of general duty at Children's Mercy Hospital before she came to the San; has supervised the children's clinic; and has taught courses in pediatrics, child development, and infant nutrition.

Her education in the field adds to her ability in no mean terms. Following her graduation from the Children's Mercy Hospital School of Nursing in Kansas City, Missouri, she took a business course, did post graduate work in public health and work in nursing education and counseling at Colorado State College of Education in Greeley, and studied psychology, sociology, and English through Kansas University at Lawrence.

Mrs. White has great plans for her new department. Specifically they are for parent education in the care of sick children, and the development of a volunteer program for entertainment and occupational therapy for children so that the little folks will not become too bored with hospital life while convalescing. Generally her plans are for helping the student nurse to develop the pediatric viewpoint in the broadest sense through study in understanding (1) the normal child; (2) all of the phases of the child in illness; (3) nutrition of children; and (4) the psychological aspects of child care in sickness and in health.

"In short," says Mrs. White, "I want to teach the student nurses in the San not only to care for the sick child but, along with other community organizations, to help him to develop into a normal individual who is capable of living fully and in turn of rendering service to others."

Her first interest outside her work is her home, where she is Mrs. Paul R. White of 1810 Norton, Independence. Her hobbies include traveling. She says, "I travel as much as I can afford, which is never enough, and I like to fish—fly-fishing, that is. I seldom mention it but I like to write, though I have done nothing of consequence to my credit. If there is any time left, I read."

PRESIDENT IN IOWA

President Israel A. Smith was in Tabor, Iowa, February 22, for the dedication of the Tabor church. He was accompanied on the trip by Elder Evan Fry.

PRESIDENT EDWARDS IN NORTHWEST

President F. Henry Edwards left Independence, February 17, for a trip to California and the Northwest. He will return in about three weeks.

PRESIDENT W. W. SMITH IN TULSA

President W. W. Smith was in Tulsa, Oklahoma, February 22, for the Tulsa District conference. He traveled with Apostle D. Blair Jensen. Seventy Alfred Yale is the district president.

ATTENDS NATIONAL MEETING

Elder John Darling, associate director of the General Church Department of Religious Education, attended the 1953 annual meeting of the Division of Christian Education of the National Council of the Churches of Christ in the U.S.A., held in Cincinnati, Ohio, February 10-13. He reported very fine sessions in the leadership education section.

NEWS OF COUNCIL OF WOMEN

The General Council of Women are working on 1953 reunion material. They have been meeting once a week at the Auditorium under the direction of Pauline Arnsen, director of the Council.

Mrs. Samuel Burgess of the Council spoke at the Eden Heights church February 11. Mrs. Clarence Skinner, a member of the Council, gave the evening's program for the Junior Chamber of Commerce for the valentine sweetheart dinner on February 12. She is instructing a monthly class of the Daughters of Zion at the Mt. Washington church in Independence. Mrs. H. I. Velt, also a member of the Council, has left for a trip through the South with her husband, Evangelist H. I. Velt.

NEFF IN DES MOINES

Elder Charles Neff left Independence February 21 to participate in a youth rally for the Des Moines District held in Des Moines on that week end. Jack Ross, student at Iowa State University at Ames, is the district youth leader and is in charge of the planning.

PRIESTHOOD CLASSES IN SESSION

The second session of the priesthood school for the Center Stake for this year began January 26. There were 150 elders present and 190 members of the Aaronic priesthood present for the opening class. Melchisedec priesthood class teachers are Elder Herbert Lively, of the Center Stake presidency, and quorum presidents Clyde Baker, Victor Talcott, and Wynne Jones. The Aaronic priesthood class instructors are Harold Cackler, W. N. Johnson, O. Kenneth Byrn, F. M. McDowell, and C. V. Graham. President F. Henry Edwards was a guest on the opening evening session.

Our Church and the Public School

EDITOR'S NOTE: We expect to invite guest editors to contribute to this page from time to time. This comes from the Director of Young People's Activities in the Church.

HOW OFTEN on Wednesday or Sunday evenings do young people excuse themselves from church attendance with "Sorry, I can't go to church tonight; I have homework to do"? Is it a rather familiar tune? If so it may be the result of a heavy load by the teachers, but more often it is the result of poor application and planning by the student. In any event, homework too often tends to separate young people from many worth-while church activities and services.

Has it ever happened in your branch that any of the young people have advanced this reason for missing church, "Sorry, but I'm in the school play and our director is calling practice on Wednesday evenings until the performance"? Or is it an evening basketball practice, a school discussion, a P.T.A. meeting, or any one of a dozen extracurricular activities which have developed over the years as part of our educational program?

When these activities flood in to consume the church time of your young people, does your branch do anything about it other than build up a feeling of resentment against the schools? Is there any solution?

IN ONE OF OUR YOUTH CAMPS a girl came to the camp director saying, "I'm sorry; I hate to leave before camp ends on Sunday, but I have to be home on Saturday night." Further inquiry by the director revealed that the girl was committed to take part in an installation ceremony of a sorority. After some reflection, the director turned to the girl and said, "You applied and were accepted for the entire period of the youth camp. You have paid your full camp fee. This camp is a major activity of your church. You have been a good camper and will be losing something valuable by leaving early. Isn't your obligation to the camp and to your church as great as that to your sorority?" The girl paused, then answered, "I'd simply never thought of it that way."

In one of the stakes of the church it happened one winter that the date of the stake drama festival and the high school one-act play contest conflicted. When the church and school leaders got together and peaceably made the necessary changes in dates, there still was overlapping in the periods of preparation. Some young people who were invited to take part in the school plays dropped out of their League plays, with the expression, "Schoolwork comes first." One young man, however, who happened to be one of the school's leading actors was overheard to say, "I was asked to be in my class play too, but I chose to be in the League play." When he turned down the school play, contrary to some expectations, his grades did not drop. He was not expelled from school or ostracized by his fellow-students. His drama teacher said, "I hated to lose Lloyd, but I thought he did a fine piece of acting in his church play."

FOR MANY STUDENTS as well as for parents, it may be a new idea that outside of regular school hours, extracurricular activities do not necessarily come first. For a student to get all "A's" and receive popular acclaim in high school, yet be a "spiritual illiterate," does not make for balanced, happy living. It happens that the nation seems to be at the bottom of a swing of school emphasis upon the secular, rather than the sacred. In the future this emphasis may change, but for the present to pacify various religious interests the public schools have been forced almost to ignore the field of religion. Nevertheless the best citizens of any community recognize the importance of the team of home, church, and school to balanced lives and happy, well-adjusted personalities. The church and the home, therefore, do have and must make their claim upon the legitimate time of their young people.

As with the girl at camp, for many young people it may be a completely new thought that they do have as great a responsibility to the church and to their homes as they do to their schools. Pastors, parents, and youth leaders need to keep this thought alive in their own minds and in the hearts of young people.

Insincere Christians

The emptiest and most unhappy occupation in the world is that of trying to act like a Christian when you are not a Christian. Religion is a lift and not a drag. When I ride an elevator I don't stoop down and take hold of the edge of the elevator to try to help it get up to the tenth floor. I usually lean back in one of the corners and say to myself, "This is a good deal." I have heard people say, "I am going to live right if it kills me." From the looks of some of the people to whom I preach, I have been led to believe that that is exactly what is happening. Living the Christian life never killed anyone, but trying to live like a Christian when you are not one does place you in the hands of death.—C. Gordon Bayless in And Be Ye Saved (Revell)

Professional and Business Men's Institute

We feel that much good was accomplished at the recent Professional and Business Men's Institute held in Independence. The meetings were well attended by a representative group of men with total registration reaching the 365 mark.

Recordings were made of the material presented which will be edited under the direction of the Presiding Bishopric. This material will then be printed for distribution.

We wish to extend our thanks to all those who participated, both in the preparation and presentation of the program, and those who contributed to the success of the venture by their presence.

Institute in Evangelism

The church is again reminded of the Institute in Evangelism which will be held in Independence, Missouri, April 12 to 17, 1953. It will be open to all members of the Melchisedec priesthood, with particular emphasis for presiding officers (or their designates) of missions, branches, districts, and stakes. Much of the appointee force, including the Presidency, Twelve, Bishops, Seventy, Missionary Elders, and Order of Evangelists, will be in attendance.

The opening service will be at 8:00 o'clock Sunday morning, April 12, at the Stone Church. Preaching services will be held at the Auditorium at 11:00 a.m. and 2:00 p.m. All persons desiring to attend these services are cordially invited. The same invitation is extended for the evening preaching services, which will be conducted in six of the churches in Independence.

All persons planning to attend are urged to register in advance by sending $1.00 to Institute in Evangelism, The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri. Please indicate in that letter your housing needs, in order that arrangements can be made for you. Noon and evening meals will be available to registrants.

More details of the program will be printed in forthcoming issues of the Herald.

Notice of Sanitarium Day

Pursuant to the action of the General Conference we are calling your attention to the fact that the Independence Sanitarium and Hospital School of Nursing will observe "Sanitarium Day" on Sunday, April 19, 1953. You will recognize with us the increasing good which is coming to the church and to young women seeking to qualify themselves as professional nurses. We trust that each pastor and district president will mark his calendar to observe this important occasion at the eleven o'clock service on this date.

Sanitarium Openings

We need nurses for all departments of the Independence Sanitarium and Hospital, and for all shifts (7:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., 3:00 p.m. to 11:30 p.m., and 11:00 p.m. to 7:30 a.m.). This need is especially acute in the operating and emergency rooms, surgical unit, orthopedic unit, and the pediatric unit.

We are also in need of a science instructor, who should be with us by June 8. She should be a nurse prepared to teach microbiology and to assist with the science laboratory periods.

Persons interested should contact Miss Nelle Morgan, R.N., Director of Nursing, Independence Sanitarium and Hospital.

June Class for Sanitarium School of Nursing

The Independence Sanitarium and Hospital School of Nursing will enroll a class of student nurses on June 8. The class will be composed of students who have had one or more years of college education. A class of prenursing students from Graceland College plan to enter at that time. After completing the three-year course in nursing education, those desiring a degree in nursing may obtain from the University of Missouri a B.S. in nursing, by completing 24 semester hours in residence there.

Anyone with college background desiring to enter this class should write for application forms, to Miss Nelle Morgan, R.N., Director of Nursing, Independence Sanitarium and Hospital School of Nursing, Independence, Missouri. These forms must be completed and returned to the school in the near future so they can be processed by the Faculty Committee on Admissions in time for enrollment in the June class.

Note of Thanks

The Business and Professional Men's Institute, held in Independence February 11 to 14, was attended by 365 men from many of the States and Canada. The participants, who enrolled by invitation, were from the Order of Bishops, the First Presidency, and other representatives of the leading councils of the church, as well as a large number of business and professional men who are also members of the church.

We take this opportunity to express appreciation to those whose interest was indicated by their attendance, including the many who came at some sacrifice and the large number who carried part of the burden of responsibility for the operation of the institute.

We are anticipating a more complete resumé in a later Herald.

THE PRESIDING BISHOPRIC

By G. L. DeLapp

Precept Upon Precept: Line Upon Line

By F. E. Thornton

Consider what I say; and the Lord give thee understanding in all things.—
II Timothy 2: 7.

Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of lights, with whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning.—
James 1: 17.

ACCORDING to David, the Psalmist, God made man a little lower than the angels. Sometimes, when the vileness of man's conduct becomes most apparent, there may be a disposition to question the aptness of this description. But certainly it can be agreed that man has attained dominion over the rest of the living world, even though his rule has not always gone unchallenged. Possibly the primary factor in elevating man to this position of pre-eminence has been his superior mental development as contrasted with that of the lower creatures. He alone seems to possess the faculty for sustained reasoning which enables him to weigh the long-range consequences of his behavior and to plot with deliberation a favorable course of action. But even so, effective co-operation would have been hampered, and consecutive thought would have been extremely limited, except for the development and refinement of the powers of communication.

Although some of the birds can be taught to imitate human sounds, and many animals have developed mating calls and signals of alarm, nowhere in the animal world is there to be found a situation which even remotely approaches the power of human beings to convey ideas to each other.

Any effort to trace the ultimate origin of language eventually becomes lost in a maze of speculation. However, it seems reasonably certain that the first efforts at communication consisted of little more than a series of signs and gestures. Slowly, man learned the use of imitative sounds which were associated with objects and primitive concepts of nature. Still later, descriptive terms evolved which made it possible to indicate such fundamental generalizations as size, shape, and color.

BEFORE THE INVENTION of writing, as it is known today, the Egyptian priests had perfected a system of picture writing, known as hieroglyphics. Although this system was reasonably successful it lacked the simplicity, speed, exactness, and flexibility which characterizes most modern alphabets. One of the earliest alphabets originated with the Phoenicians who inhabited the sea-coasts in the general area of the region northwest of the recently established Israelite nation. The significance of the Phoenician alphabet is to be found in its use of a series of signs or letters to represent consonants in the language. The Greeks not only adopted this system for their own use, but improved upon it by the addition of other letters to represent vowels.

About the middle of the fifteenth century printed books began to appear in quantity, thus opening up a new world of opportunity for mankind. Prior to that time, it was customary for books to be copied laboriously by hand, and such books as the Bible were often chained in order to prevent their being stolen. The invention of printing made the reproduction of the Bible and all other books a comparatively inexpensive process, and knowledge became widely disseminated. Whereas learning had formerly been confined almost exclusively to the scholar—particularly to members of the priesthood—now it could touch even the most humble home. But printing, marvelous though it was, was only the opening wedge in a whole series of developments which have enriched man's life and widened his horizon. Since then, he has developed the telegraph, the telephone, the radio, and television as means of communication.

IN THE REALM OF RELIGION men developed early a medium of communication called prayer. In the lives of thousands of Christians, and those of other faiths as well, prayer has exerted a tremendous influence for good. But if prayer has been a blessing for many, it is equally true that for others it has been a source of keen disappointment. Possessing only a limited or distorted understanding of the true function and operation of prayer, and unable to reconcile its apparent failures with their own preconceived notions, these persons frequently become confused and perhaps even embittered. Instead of that serenity of body and soul which should be the lot of those who daily walk with God, doubt begins to creep in, and they become easy prey to the scorn and ridicule of scoffers. It is important then that Christians know something of the limitations of prayer, as well as its more apparent advantages.

When people pray—for guidance, for courage to meet temptation, for health, for anything—and fail to receive an answer, what has gone wrong? Is it because Christianity and the institution of prayer are a gigantic fraud, foisted upon gullible believers by church leaders who are exploiting the people for their own benefit? This is essentially the argument advanced by those skeptics who call themselves atheists. Are Christians perhaps foolish to believe that prayer, under any circumstances, is ever answered? Or is there a possibility of a logical explanation within the framework of the Scriptures?

AT THE OUTSET, we should recognize that the answer to any prayer may be negative as well as positive. Thus the failure to receive a satisfactory answer may in reality represent a negative reply. If, through long sinning and hardening of the heart toward spiritual matters, we have alienated ourselves from God, is it not reasonable to expect him to turn a deaf ear to our pleas? "If I regard iniquity in my heart, the Lord will not hear me" (Psalm 66: 18). Too frequently, when we pray under these circumstances, it is because of fear rather than any change of heart on our part. It is a situation similar to that of a criminal who has been apprehended and is sorry—not for his misdeeds, but because he got caught—and seeks anxiously to avoid the consequences of his misconduct. But God, looking into the depths of our hearts, detects the lack of sincerity and turns away. "And when ye spread forth your hands, I will hide mine eyes from you: yea, when ye make many prayers, I will not hear: your hands are full of blood" (Isaiah 1: 15). But the gulf is not so deep nor so wide that it cannot be bridged at any time man approaches God with humbleness and true sincerity of purpose. "Though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow" (Isaiah 1: 18).

AT THIS POINT it might be well to consider that among Christians of all faiths there is rather general agreement that the promises of the Scriptures are seldom, if ever, absolute. Man is assured of nothing, except as he complies with the conditions which have been established for his guidance. Thus Peter, upon invitation of the Master himself, actually succeeded in walking on the water, until his faith failed him (Matthew 14: 28-31). How often do men pray, figuratively with fingers crossed, with no real expectation of receiving that for which they pray? And yet, reference to the Scriptures reveals that the primary consideration for the answering of any prayer is faith (Matthew 21: 21, 22; John 14: 12, 13).

However, assuming that faith is present, what happens then? Today many enlightened Christians are of the opinion that God operates in conformity with natural laws which he himself has put into operation and which are only rarely set aside. The just and the unjust are equally subject to these laws; indeed, there are occasions when it would appear that those who are outside of the church actually fare better than those who profess to be followers of the Master. An automobile hurtling down a highway at ninety miles an hour may bring quick destruction to a half-dozen innocent persons, while sparing the life of the irresponsible driver who has little regard for the safety of his fellow-men. When a contagious disease strikes, such as polio or smallpox, there is no assurance that the believer will be spared. On the other hand, when the rains come, the crops of the sinner are benefited no less than are those of the righteous man (Matthew 5: 45). Some things we may reasonably expect as a part of life, and generally they are unaffected by our prayers.

But isn't such a philosophy contrary to the teachings of the Bible, particularly those pertaining to healing and the working of miracles (James 5: 14; John 14: 12)? To this question I believe there is only one answer: No. Whenever the need exists and the necessary conditions have been fulfilled, the gifts of the gospel are still operative in our lives. If prayer should seem to fail, even when faith is evident, it may well be that there has been a failure to recognize its real function and place in the plan of living. Prayer will not have failed; it will be we who have failed through a tragic lack of understanding.

THROUGHOUT THE BIBLE, I can find no evidence that the followers of Christ are to be spared whatever pain and suffering may otherwise be associated with an earthly existence. We all know good people—godly people—who have suffered grievously. And with them we may have wondered, "Why?" Even the apostles, as close as they were to Christ, both physically and spiritually, did not always succeed in healing (Matthew 17: 14-20; II Timothy 4: 20). Job, although a good man in the sight of God, was nevertheless permitted to undergo a long series of misfortunes before his prayers were finally answered. And the Apostle Paul gloried in an affliction which he was unable to cast off, after being denied three times. Instead of being healed, he was admonished: "My grace is sufficient for thee: for my strength is made perfect in weakness" (II Corinthians 12: 9). If these faithful servants, who were so close to God in their thinking and actions, sometimes failed to have their prayers answered, is it then so strange that we who live in a later age should encounter a parallel situation? And if our finite minds should fail to understand (Isaiah 55: 8), there is still consolation in the knowledge that our afflictions, like those of Job, may be for a purpose known only to the Father.

Perhaps all too frequently our prayers involve a purely selfish motive which destroys much of their effectiveness. If we pray for the life of a loved one only out of consideration for our own personal loss, is it any wonder that God fails to hear? Indeed, if all such requests were to be granted, the end result might be regret. Who would knowingly ask that the life of a son should be spared if it could be foreseen that the grown man would subsequently devote his energies to a life of crime? Or who would want his own life to be extended, as was King Hezekiah's (II Kings 20), only to learn that disaster would overtake his kingdom and his own children would be taken into bondage? But if we pray always with an eye single to His glory, maintaining our faith in the ultimate wisdom and justice of His judgment, then we can be assured that the decision will be for the best interests of all, even though it may not seem to be at the moment. No, prayer is not a juvenile excursion into the realms of phantasy where any request can be had for the mere asking. For our own benefit, God sometimes finds it necessary to veto requests which, if granted, would be contrary to our best welfare. But when we learn to say, "Thy will be done," prayer can become a mighty bulwark of strength which will shore up the soul when adversity strikes. And through it all, the "peace of God, which passeth all understanding" shall not be lacking (Philippians 4: 7).

FOR MANY CHRISTIANS, the question of healing poses a delicate problem in faith. In sickness, is it permissible to call in a physician, or is it necessary to follow a literal interpretation of the biblical injunction to call for the elders of the church (James 5: 14, 15)? It is well to note that the reference cited does not rule out the services of a physician. What it does is to attach a special significance to the value of the prayer of faith, not only in the healing of the body, but in the healing of the soul as well. Without question there is a place for divine healing in the life of any Christian who possesses the necessary faith. That such cures do occur is evidenced by the frequency with which physicians report recoveries which are incapable of explanation according to known concepts of medicine. And to dismiss these baffling cases on the basis of emotionalism or error in judgment hardly seems justified in view of the integrity and professional competence of the witnesses. It seems more likely that God, in effecting a cure, may have employed some law or principle which man has not yet discovered.

But if such cures are in accordance with natural laws which are not yet known to our scientists, then man through his own initiative and intelligence, coupled with the inspiration of the Spirit, may yet succeed in determining the sequence of cause and effect and cure. And with knowledge at hand, there arises the possibility of utilizing this information to the glory of God and the benefit of mankind. Are we then to believe that a cure effected through human agency is undesirable and to be scorned, simply because it lacks the element of the mysterious and the miraculous? Doesn't the Bible constantly reaffirm God's use of human agency in the attainment of his highest purposes?

THE SAME PEOPLE who scorn the services of a physician, as being unworthy of a true follower of the Master, are strangely inconsistent when it comes to applying the same line of reasoning to other passages of Scripture. Thus in Genesis 3: 19, we read: "In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread." Yet, there is no particular criticism against the use of tractors and other labor-saving devices which make life more bountiful, while reducing perspiration to a minimum. Nor does anyone seriously anticipate that the necessities of life will be miraculously provided, although there are frequent biblical references wherein people have been fed under somewhat unusual circumstances (Exodus 16: 13-15; II Kings 4: 42-44; Matthew 14: 19; John 2: 6-10).

In the medical arts, then, as in all other areas of human endeavor, we as God's creatures should constantly strive to broaden and improve mankind's limited horizon by all honorable means, not excepting frequent recourse to prayer, through which we shall gain access to powers and potentialities now hidden from us (Proverbs 18: 15).

For those who are weak in faith—and there are many—the services of a properly qualified physician are indispensable and are not inconsistent with a belief in healing. But if we would have an ideal situation, there must be a community of purpose, with the church and the physician working together in harmony for the physical and spiritual well-being of the sick.

IN THIS WORLD in which we live, disease, starvation, greed, hatred, and a host of other destructive influences exist. These are not pleasant facts to dwell upon, and they frequently prove to be most embarrassing in our efforts to win others to Christ. Nonbelievers are prone to ask why a God of love, such as we profess to worship, should permit the continued existence of powerful forces with such a potential for evil. Here and there the Scriptures provide a glimpse of the answer (I Peter 5: 8), but at best we see only dimly as through a dark glass (Isaiah 55: 8, 9). But our vision, clouded though it may be, is still sufficient to indicate that it was not God's will that man should suffer (Isaiah 55: 7). Suffering came into the world through disobedience (Romans 5: 18), and that same disobedience, still holding sway in the lives of men, subjects even the innocent to its certain consequences. The solution to such problems is not to attempt a transfer of our man-made burdens to God through the medium of prayer. Instead of seeking a miraculous and painless cure for the festering boils which inflame the lifeblood of people and nations, Christians must look instead toward the complete eradication of the hard core of sin, which is the source of reinfection. It is not enough merely to want and pray for a better world; we must be willing to devote our time and energies toward the achievement of that purpose. The free agency of man is in reality a two-edged sword. If, on the one hand, it confers a freedom of choice between the evil and the good, it as surely provides a just reward in keeping with the wisdom of the choice. And the offense may engulf the innocent as well as the guilty, whether it be a single family suffering from the debauchery of a drunken father or an entire nation suffering the horrors of total war because of rulers struggling for world power.

By the very nature of their faith, Christians are committed toward positive action on issues involving fundamental moral questions (Titus 1: 16). They can never afford to be lukewarm or vacillating in such matters (Revelation 3: 15, 16). If the Christian community, on a local and personal level, is unable to cope successfully with gambling, graft, political corruption, the liquor traffic, and racial intolerance, then what hope is there for a better world order in which it will be unprofitable for renegade nations to wage war against their weaker and more peaceful neighbors? No man can serve two masters; either he is for Christian principles of living, or else he is opposed to them. How can one advocate racial tolerance while failing to practice it? How can one condemn the liquor traffic and its attendant evils while deriving financial benefit from its sale?

No, prayer is not a retreat from reality, designed to enable Christians to escape the responsibilities which were assumed at baptism. But prayer, when accompanied by a determination to co-operate with God, can become a most powerful ally in the solution of some of life's most perplexing problems. "If my people, which are called by my name, shall humble themselves, and pray, and seek my face, and turn from their wicked ways; then will I hear from heaven, and will forgive their sin, and will heal their land."—II Chronicles 7: 14.

MANY INSTANCES could be cited of men and women with a vision of a better world who succeeded against tremendous odds: Harriett Beecher Stowe, whose memorable novel Uncle Tom's Cabin helped to crystallize the sentiment against slavery; Louis Pasteur, who stood almost alone in his struggle to establish the germ theory of disease; Jane Addams, the founder of Chicago's Hull House, recognized as the model for all social settlements.

Christians have an ideal unsurpassed by any "ism" in the world. The main problem is whether they can be made to realize that the success or failure of Christianity hinges on their willingness to work at it. Practical Christians do not avoid prayer, neither do they expect to get things done by asking God to do it while they rest. But in the carrying out of their Christian duties it will be found that somehow renewed hope, renewed courage, and renewed strength will not be lacking. The idea of working at the job of being a Christian is not at all original. Many times I have heard it expressed, sometimes vaguely, sometimes eloquently, but never in more pungent language than in a meeting conducted by one of West Virginia's mountain preachers, "Brethren, what we need is more Christians what's willing to do, and less Christians what's willing to say. We been setting around too long already on the stool of do-nothing. If we're ever gonna get anywhere, we got to roll up both sleeves and go to work for God, like as if we really meant it."

Are We Keeping Pace?

By Fred Weddle

MAN HAS MADE unbelievable progress in the field of aeronautical science. Engineers have obeyed the laws of stress to the extent that a jet fighter wing only a few inches thick and a few feet long can withstand a wing load of many thousands of pounds. Metallurgists have obeyed the physical laws of combining metals to withstand heat of thousands of degrees without melting or breaking down. These and other inventions have been combined to make the jet fighter and interceptor planes which we have today.

This morning I flew the latest Air Force all-weather jet interceptor through the sonic barrier as easily as my grandfather sat in his old rocker. I reached an airspeed well beyond the eight hundred mile an hour mark at an altitude of eight and a half miles. Three minutes later I was rolling to a stop at the end of an air base runway.

I am wondering what would happen in our lives if we would keep the same pace spiritually as we do electro-mechanically. Would not many of the yet unanswered promises be given to us if we spent the degree of searching and studying in spiritual and religious affairs as the engineers and scientists do in developing a new jet interceptor? Which does the world, or even the United States, need most—a fully automatic supersonic weapon, or a fully developed national spiritual consciousness?

We have been given the greatest and most important commission that was ever entrusted to mankind. I wonder if we fully realize the tremendous responsibility we as a church have accepted. At first thought that might tend to frighten us a little. True, it is a very grave responsibility; but think of the wonderful opportunity this commission affords us—perhaps the greatest opportunity that a group of people have ever had. We have the fullness of the gospel of Jesus Christ; and we have been assured that it will not be taken from the earth until he again walks with us.

Let us do our utmost to keep the pace set for us by the engineer and the scientist. Let us keep the pace set by the founders of the Restoration. Let us make our lives a daily witness to all people that we as Reorganized Latter Day Saints recognize our great responsibility and strive diligently to be worthy to share our convictions with others.

Saintly Microscopist

WHAT IS IT?"

The white-haired professor with the twinkle in his eyes takes a mysterious antique from its pyramidal case and places it on the filing cabinet which has served as a lectern for so many years in Room 10, Briggs Hall. Other eyes begin to twinkle, too.

Two days before, the assignment had been given: "Find out all you can about the microscope."

It was certainly nothing to become excited about. Nearly everyone had seen a microscope or used one in high school. It was near the beginning of the school year and many in the class were wondering why they were taking biology anyway. The speeches about the necessity for a "broad background today" seemed quite vague at high school commencement and at the opening sessions of the college. In the day to day business of school life they had long been forgotten. Mary Jane didn't "find out" very much. She came to college to master French; the value of this science is lost on her. Sally Jo just came to college; she has fallen in love and doesn't need a microscope to discover that! Bob Jones has just been ordained a priest; he wants to be a missionary and believes that any course outside of the religion curriculum is a waste of time.

"What is it?"

Details of the assignment have become blurred with the rush of time, but the class has begun. The question is specific and there is an object before the class. Several hands go up immediately. With a skill developed from years in the classroom, Dr. Platz smilingly restrains for a few minutes those who know the answer. They recognize that he is aware of their preparation and knowledge. But to give the "answer" too quickly would remove the challenge of the question mark he has placed before each individual mind. The class begins to savor a delicious curiosity. A few timid hands go up.

"Is it an old ear trumpet?"

"Is it some kind of an old lamp?"

A mischievous but friendly smile and shake of the professor's head indicate that the answers are wrong, but that the trials are appreciated as a necessary part of the daily classroom experience. Several can no longer be restrained.

"It's a microscope!"

Of course, everyone can see that it is a microscope now! Especially after the professor takes out a shiny new Bausch and Lomb research scope and places it beside the antique. Well, that's that! But the professor isn't through.

"To whom do you suppose this old microscope belonged?"

"Leeuwenhoek?"

"It does look old, but his were a great deal smaller, weren't they?"

"Hooke?"

"That shows some good reading. It does look very much like Hooke's; in fact, the design originated with Hooke, that old pioneer of science who gave us the term we use so much today—the 'cell.' But the man who used this microscope was a Latter Day Saint and a prominent member of the Reorganization."

THIS INTRODUCTION is a tele-scoped (maybe we should say, "microscopic") glimpse into a biology class at Graceland College. Perhaps you along with the many students who have taken this course will be interested in a nonscientist of our own history who studied with the microscope. For the one pictured here belonged to a famed pioneer of the Reorganization, Mark Forscutt.

Born June 19, 1834, at Bath, England, he united with the church at the age of nineteen. On March 25, 1860, he married Miss Elizabeth Unsworth, and on that same day left England for the United States of America. Most people are aware of his amazing and adventuresome life: his trek on foot across the plains to Salt Lake City; four years as secretary to Brigham Young; his escape from Utah and service with the United States Army; his eventual union with the Reorganization on January 1, 1865. Most of us are familiar with his long service as a minister, as a missionary to Europe, as assistant editor of the Saints' Herald, and especially as a writer of many of our beloved hymns. All of us can immediately think of "Bow, ye mortals, bow before him," "Met in thy sacred name, O Lord," "Heavenly Father, we adore thee," and "Blest be thou, O God of Israel." He composed eighty-eight hymns and twenty-four tunes for the Saints' Harmony alone.

In his day science was barely making its way into the classical grammar schools and universities of the period. Most of the great developments which had taken place in science were outside of the halls of learning. Copernicus, Galileo, Franklin, and Faraday were spurned by the universities. Even Newton, it is said, did not make much of a stir at Cambridge. The ideal education for the minister of that period consisted largely of highly formalized Latin, Greek, Hebrew, Aristotelian logic, and theology. Science and sociology—even history and modern languages—were young and upstart disciplines. It is much to his credit that Mark Forscutt had wider interests than the traditional sectarian minister of his day.

THE MICROSCOPE was presented to Dr. Platz, head of the Biology Department, by a great nephew of Mark Forscutt, Roscoe Faunce, Director of Campus Life at Graceland. Mr. Faunce is also well known for his own artistic contributions in the field of drama and as an inspiring teacher. According to him the time and place where "Uncle Mark" acquired the instrument are not known, nor the extent to which he used it. In addition to the microscope, which is in a fairly good state of preservation, there are some spare parts and a small drawer full of slides, four of which are shown in the illustration. Mounted on these slides are a wide variety of natural objects including feathers, salt crystals, and parts of insects. The labels, which are considered to be in his handwriting, show a knowledge of many insect types and illustrate parts of insect anatomy, such as legs, wings, and mouth parts. Most of the slides are satisfactory enough to be used in a class today.

For two years I have been tracing the origin of this microscope. Neither of the leading manufacturers of microscopes in this country could give any estimate of its age or source of manufacture, except that it was over one hundred years old. Even the Smithsonian Institute could give no clues. From descriptions and pictures in the History of the Micro- scope by Clay and Court (1932, Charles Griffin and Company) it was apparently similar to those made by Edmond Culpeper of London. This observation was confirmed by Brigadier General Elbert DeCoursey, Director of the Armed Forces Institute of Pathology, Washington, D. C., the medical museum of which houses one of the finest microscope collections in the world. He writes:

The picture of an early microscope enclosed in your letter of 25 November bears a marked resemblance to a compound microscope in the Medical Museum collection. The microscope was devised and made before 1738 by Edmond Culpeper of London, who introduced the concave mirror placed below the tripod stage.

Comparison with a color reproduction of the Medical Museum model obtained from Abbott Laboratories, Chicago, leaves no doubt that Forscutt's is indeed an antique Culpeper microscope. After 1750, the manufacture of such microscopes took place in France. For additional information concerning its age and particularly the best means of keeping it for future use, the Royal Microscopical Society of London has been contacted. Some consideration has been given to the possibility of having it restored to its original condition. As an antique it has value in its own right. But its chief value lies beyond that of a museum piece.

NO ONE CAN BE PRESENT in a class where this microscope is utilized (not merely exhibited) and not be aware that vital learning is taking place. Let us vision the classroom scene again. Somehow, the pioneer minister comes out of the past to stand beside the professor. He looks through the microscope once again and looks up at the class with a smile:

Take a look through the microscope! Have you ever really seen the symmetry in a grain of salt, the pattern in the scales of a butterfly's wing, or the marvelous design of a grasshopper's leg? Nothing is too small to interest God. "Behold, all these are my kingdoms, and any man who hath seen any or the least of these, hath seen God moving in his majesty and power." Are your interests large or small?

When I joined the church we were only a handful. How do you suppose we grew? How did we create a Herald House, a Sanitarium, a Graceland College? We did it with women like Marietta Walker and men like President Joseph Smith, with many people who were well read and wide awake to the forces moving in that day. Today, you are living in the era they prophesied. Knowledge has increased. You need to take a much longer look through your microscopes than I did. You need to learn "all things that pertain unto the kingdom of God . . . things both in heaven, and in earth, and under the earth; things which have been; things which are; things which must shortly come to pass; things which are at home; things which are abroad; the wars and perplexities of nations; and the judgments which are on the land; and a knowledge also of countries, and of kingdoms, that ye may be prepared in all things when I shall send you again."

You sing a few of the hymns I wrote, but most of them you have forgotten. Well, maybe some of them do sound a little out of date. But remember this one thing: If you don't sing my hymns, you ought to be singing some better ones that you have written.

I noticed that the professor started you out with a question which kept you pretty busy. I think that I'll go him one better. As you look at my old microscope I want you to think about this paradox:

Until you understand what I saw through the microscope, you won't be able to write those hymns.

at Lawrence for the religious emphasis weeks of the colleges. They spent the week of February 15-20 meeting with various groups at the schools, as well as ministering to the church student groups.

Youth Fellowship Held

The Center Stake young people met for a prayer service in preparation for the Youth Rally scheduled for March 2-6. The theme for the prayer service was "Eleven Days to Witness." Charles V. Graham, stake president, gave the address. Lee Hart, stake youth leader, was in charge of the service, and the special prayer was offered by Evangelist Arthur Stoft. About 275 young people were at the service.

Question Time

Question:

Doctrine and Covenants 76: 7, speaking of telestial glory, says that included there are those "who are liars, and sorcerers, and adulterers, and whoremongers, and whosoever loves and makes a lie." Revelation 21: 8, I.V., says that this class "shall have their part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone; which is the second death." Doctrine and Covenants 76: 4 claims that the second death is only for the Devil and his angels and the sons of perdition. Please reconcile these doctrines.

Montana

L. S. T.

Answer:

The Scriptures do teach that persons guilty of these sins will find place, some in the telestial world, where the gospel is preached and the opportunity for some degree of salvation is still open, and others in the realm of perdition where the light of the gospel does not enter and salvation is forever cut off. We may well ask why.

The answer is that there is something other than these particular sins which separate these two groups of sinful souls. Both are guilty of these same sins, yet one portion still has hope of recovery, and the other is without hope. The first, as the Lord says in Doctrine and Covenants 76: 7, are "heirs of salvation." The second, who have become sons of perdition, the Lord says

... are vessels of wrath, doomed to suffer the wrath of God, with the Devil and his angels, in eternity, concerning whom I have said there is no forgiveness in this world nor in the world to come; having denied the Holy Spirit after having received it; and having denied the only begotten Son of the Father; having crucified him unto themselves.—Doctrine and Covenants 76: 4.

This sin against the Holy Spirit and this crucifying of Christ to themselves were in addition to the other sins, of which those in the telestial world were not guilty.

The telestial group had not had opportunity of hearing the gospel in this world and consequently had not rejected it. The Lord could not justly consign them to perdition notwithstanding their sins were great, but they must be given the opportunity extended to all others of hearing and obeying the gospel. The second group had heard the gospel in this life, had been given the opportunity to repent, and would not. Their sins included the sin of unbelief when the truth had been revealed to them wherein they had sinned against light and knowledge, which before God is the greatest sin man can commit; it is a sin unto death and is unpardonable.

It is this sin of rejecting Christ and his gospel when the opportunity is presented which brings them to perdition, where even their other sins cannot be pardoned. Jacob says they "remain in their sins." We may note that the statement in Revelation relative to the list of deep sins adds as a preface this sin of disbelieving, as also Doctrine and Covenants 63: 5b.

Jesus said,

All sins which men have committed, when they repent, . . . shall be forgiven them that come unto me and do the works which they see me do. But there is a sin which shall not be forgiven. He that shall blaspheme against the Holy Ghost, hath never forgiveness; . . . and they shall inherit eternal damnation.—Mark 3: 22-24.

In the light of these truths the answer is clear.

CHARLES FRY

Question:

Must the president of the church be a descendant of Joseph Smith II although called by revelation?

Wisconsin

MRS. I. D.

Answer:

Whatever has been indicated concerning lineal descent in the matter of presidency of the high priesthood is all taken care of by the provision of definite law as to the manner of selection and appointment of the prophet and revelator to the church. It is so plain there can be no mistake, and it was given "that you may not be deceived." If appointed in any other way, the Lord indicated, "You may know they are not of me." A study of this law makes very plain where lies true succession today in the church of the Restoration. It is found in the following:

The president of the church, who is also president of the council, is appointed by revelation.—Doctrine and Covenants 99: 6a.

Such revelation must come through the previous incumbent in office.

I say unto you, that none else shall be appointed unto this gift except it be through him, for if it be taken from him he shall not have power except to appoint another in his stead, and this shall be a law unto you, that ye receive not the teachings of any that shall come before you as revelations, or commandments, and this I give unto you that you may not be deceived.—Doctrine and Covenants 43: 2a, b.

While this was given in February, 1831, during the days of the first president, it was to be a standing law to the church, a safeguard against deception at all times. The third provision required the law of "common consent" or approval by majority vote.

For, behold, these things have not been appointed unto him, neither shall anything be appointed unto any of this church contrary to the church covenants, for all things must be done in order and by common consent in the church, by the prayer of faith.—D. and C. 27: 4b, c.

The president of the church . . . is . . . acknowledged, in his administration, by the voice of the church.—D. and C. 99: 6a.

The fourth provision (indicating clearly the Lord foresaw the assumption by Brigham Young and others who would claim the presidency without ordination to that office) required ordination to the office of president, regardless of any previous ordination. "For verily I say unto you, that he that is ordained of me, shall come in at the gate and be ordained as I have told you before."—D. and C. 43: 2c.

If the Lord and the church should see fit in harmony with all the foregoing provisions, one not a descendant of Joseph Smith might be chosen president of the church.

Any sincere question from our readers will receive consideration from the editors. If it is of general interest, it will be referred to the Question Time panel, and the answer will be printed. The answers are the opinions and interpretations of the panel members signing them, and do not commit the Herald nor the church.

Please keep the question short—fifty words or less should be sufficient. Your personal problems, the answers to which concern you alone, will be answered by letter. Address questions to Herald Editors rather than panel members. We shall try to take all questions in the order they are received. Be patient, there may be several ahead of yours. Only questions with contributor's full name (not just initials) and address will receive attention.—EDITOR.

The Life of Hubert Case

By Alice Montague Case

Alice and Hubert Case—1905

The Young Family

A wealthy cattleman named Young invited them to hold meetings near his ranch which was on Dead Indian Creek. Brother Smith and Hubert preached there for several weeks. It was not very far from home, so he could drive back and forth, but the roads were too new and rough to be traveled at night. The reunion was held there in 1905, because we had a larger number of members there than at former meeting places. Hubert visited and preached at various points in northwestern Oklahoma: such places as Freedom, Alva, Gamet, Woodward, and May. Hubert visited and held meetings associated with Brother J. H. Baker. At Seiling, Richmond, and Calumet, he worked with Brother R. M. Maloney, and numbers were brought into the church in all these places. We were located in Cheyenne for the winter and spring. Hubert visited and preached at Sayre and Davidson, associated with Brother B. F. Renfroe. During 1906 he and S. S. Smith preached at Weatherford with good success. Hubert went on to Piedmont and made arrangements for us to move to that place a little later on, which we did.

Piedmont

Shortly after we had settled in Piedmont, Hubert was called to Stillwater to preach the funeral of Sister S. J. Hinkle. A little later we attended the General Conference at Independence. After we returned from Conference Hubert was sick for two weeks with a severe cold. His appointment was still Oklahoma.

When he recovered he was called back to Cheyenne to help my sister, Mrs. Vredenburg, to pay out the price and obtain title to the land she had filed on. While in Roger Mills County he preached at Redmoon, Hamburg, Cheyenne, and Brule. On the way back he stopped at Weatherford and Calumet, preaching at both places.

This group, known as the Matthewson Branch, was almost in a disorganized state and needed rebuilding. Hubert began a series of meetings in the Head schoolhouse and continued them for eight weeks. Attendance and interest justified the continuation for that length of time.

This was about seven miles from Piedmont. The first preaching done by our people in Oklahoma was in that schoolhouse, and the minister was J. R. Lambert. Among those baptized as the result of the long series of meetings were the True family, the Swains, H. C. Taylor family, and the Piatts. Along with the Rowlands, the Tennerys and the Clessons, and Sister Montgomery, there were enough to hold Sabbath school and preaching every Sunday. Brother Rowland was an elder.

The Experience of George Swain

Among those baptized was George Swain, father of Edith Brockway and Alberta Moore. He had been very prejudiced against the church and fought it for fifteen years. After he had been away to school at Lincoln, Nebraska, to take a course to become a Methodist minister, he knew so much about the Reorganized Latter Day Saint belief that he argued with the professor in the class to see what his answer would be to the Reorganized Latter Day Saint position. One day the professor said, "George, I don't want to do that to any man, but you are injuring the faith of these students." George quit the school and went home.

Hubert was holding a meeting near his place, and George Swain started attending. On the fourth night he walked up before a packed house and gave his name for baptism to the astonishment of all his neighbors, who knew how prejudiced he had been.

A month or so after he was baptized, he was stricken with acute appendicitis and had to be put in an ice pack. Hubert was going by his home one evening to a new place where he had never preached before. He knew he had an invitation to visit the Swain's. The family had been watching the road. When they saw Hubert coming, they called him in. He administered to George and he was instantly healed. He even got up and went to church with Hubert. Then the next day he took a load of hogs to town. The doctor saw him and said, "What are you doing here, coming to town on such a day as this? You are a sick man."

George said, "I am well. I have been healed." The doctor said, "That is no way to treat the Lord who healed you.

You ought to take care of yourself, or you will be down sick again."

The next day Brother Swain sat on the damp ground and husked corn all day—a damp, cold day. That night he was violently ill again. His old trouble had come back on him. They had Hubert come and administer to him. When Hubert sat there and talked to him he said, "Brother Swain, you have not treated the Lord right. This has come back on you. You will not be instantly healed this time." In a day or two he was well, but he was not healed instantly as he was the first time. He said the lesson was worth it. He took care of himself after that. It was a valuable lesson to him for the rest of his life.

A week after he was baptized, his wife continued to weep because she thought they were disgraced by his joining the church. She thought she would pick up the Book of Mormon and see how ridiculous it was. She opened to page 631 where Christ made his appearance to the Nephites. She read twenty pages and cried for joy. So when Brother Swain returned home that evening, she said, "George, send for Brother Case. I want to be baptized." These experiences brought the whole family into the church.

Other Baptisms

Not long after these eight weeks of meetings were finished Hubert was asked to come to the neighborhood three miles north to preach. The young man who was teaching the school extended the invitation. There was a fine interest at this meeting, and at the close Hubert baptized the young schoolteacher Tavner Fisher, Mrs. Downing, and her two sons, Elmer and Earl. A Sunday school was organized at the Head schoolhouse and services were continued for years.

About this time Hubert was requested to go to Avery, Texas, to meet Ben M. Bogard of the Baptist Church in debate. J. F. Grimes was moderator in the debate. Hubert did not think much was accomplished by it. As usual, his opponent's stock in trade was mudslinging and vilifying the Saints. However, Hubert baptized several after the debate was finished. The one interesting thing the people remembered was that Reverend Bogard prided himself on his knowledge of Greek. By way of ridicule he remarked, "My opponent has no knowledge of any language other than English." Whereupon Hubert poured out a few sentences in fluent Tahitian to Bogard's great surprise and the enthusiastic delight of the audience.

Hubert returned from this debate nearly sick with a cold and had to stay at home for a couple of weeks. He had never been in favor of debates, but was forced into them by the parties of the opposition, whose desire usually was financial gain for themselves. He has always believed in Brother Joseph's teaching, "Go out and preach an affirmative gospel, and let other people alone."

After the Christmas holiday was over, Hubert went to Anadarko, where Brother and Sister J. H. Norris lived. Brother Norris was an elder from Kewanee, Illinois. He was the only man Hubert ever remembered meeting who habitually, on the first Sunday of every month, administered the Communion to his family. No other church members were near. The good life he had always lived and the fact that he had been chosen superintendent of the Union Sunday School in the neighborhood gave Hubert a good standing with the people. He held a series of meetings and several he baptized still live in that vicinity.

Kingfisher, Oklahoma, was another point where the few Saints who lived in the vicinity gave the church a good name. The Butlers and Sordens lived there and were held in esteem by their neighbors. Hubert conducted meetings in a schoolhouse east of town and had good attendance.

Brother J. J. Grimes was with him in opening the work at Weatherford. As in most places it was easier to obtain a hearing in a country schoolhouse than to find a place in town. Here also they aroused great interest and found a group of people from near Stewartsville, Missouri, and one family from Spickard, Missouri. This man was Willis Coffey; he and his whole family belonged to the church. The others were not members, but all were interested and several were baptized. At the close of one of the meetings, a man who was a Baptist deacon arose and said he felt that an offering should be taken up for the preacher. He collected $8.50 and handed it to Hubert.

Administration to the Sick

The next morning Hubert received a letter from Pond Creek, Oklahoma, asking him to come and administer to two young men from Lamoni who had come to Oklahoma to work in the wheat harvest and had serious cases of typhoid fever. He left for Pond Creek at once after arranging for Brother Grimes to carry on the meeting. The $8.50 he had received the night before was just enough for his railroad fare. He found the young men very ill indeed. Their sister, Hattie Vanderflute, had come from Lamoni to nurse them. Hessel, the older one, had already taken a turn for the better, but Charles was unconscious. Hubert administered to both of them that night. By morning they were better, the improvement being most noticeable in Charles. He administered again the next morning, and then returned to Weatherford. They continued preaching another week, and another collection was taken by the same Baptist brother.

At the end of this week Hubert received another call to come to Piedmont to administer to Brother George Clesson's daughter, who was also ill with typhoid. He went and administered, but she died soon after. Hubert returned to Weatherford, but was called back very soon to conduct the funeral service for Zeffie.

They continued the meetings at Weatherford another week. This series brought about the baptism of the Richards family, the Downeys, the Goads, and the Whitells.

Yandell's Arm

From eastern Oklahoma, Brother Jesse Simmons called Hubert to come and help him. A man named Yandell, a school-teacher and Baptist minister, had been heckling him and wanting to debate for a long time. Hubert agreed to go. During Yandell's first speech, he called names and made more hateful accusations against the members of our church than Hubert had ever heard before in any kind of lecture or debate. He continued that way until in one of the last sessions of the debate he defied the "God of old Joe Smith to crook his little finger." In reply to this Hubert said, "That was a foolish speech, because the God of Joseph Smith was the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob; the God whom we all worship. Don't worry about your little finger, but look out for your whole arm."

Hubert is sure that he never made a thirty-minute speech in his life equal to his first one on our proposition. It was under the power of the Spirit of God, every word of it. A doctor came up to him at the close of the speech and asked him if he saw the shaft of light that he stood in during that thirty-minute speech. Hubert had not seen the shaft but had felt a circle of light on his head. Alexander Smith made a promise in Hubert's patriarchal blessing that there would be times when he stood in defense of the truth that a circle of light would rest upon his head and he would be prone to lift his hand to see if it were there. That was literally fulfilled in this experience.

Hubert never saw Mr. Yandell again after the debate, but just four or five years ago Brother T. E. Fitzwater saw him and told Hubert that Yandell's arm was useless from the shoulder down and had been so since that debate.

A Home in Piedmont

About the second year of our stay in Piedmont, we decided to build a house to live in. We were tired of the old store building we had been using. With the assistance of Brother Rowland and Brother Tennyery we built a neat little home. We were very well pleased with it and enjoyed the rest of our stay in Piedmont much more than before.

We remained in Piedmont about two years after this. Then our oldest daughter was graduated from the eighth grade, the highest grade in the Piedmont schools. So we decided we would have to move to get all three girls in school for the next year. We went to Kingfisher, and after failing to find a suitable place for rent, we built again. We had no trouble selling the house in Piedmont. The local doctor bought it as soon as he knew it was for sale.

Ministry in Oklahoma City

Some people were baptized in Oklahoma City after Hubert started holding cottage meetings, and it was not long until there was a nice congregation. Other Saints moved in, and so many were baptized that the work grew until they were a happy band. No wonder the Lord blessed them! The sick were healed, and the Saints had many other blessings. They feasted on the good things the Lord had in store for them, experiencing a real foretaste of Zion. We started the work in many places in Oklahoma with people from all the other states. Party lines were broken down, prejudice was eliminated to a large extent, and they were eager for the gospel. Oklahoma was one of the richest missionary fields in the church. It was during those early years that Hubert's missionary work reached its highest point. He traveled over the state, built branches, and commenced the Indian work.

Philosophy for a Gadget

By Myron M. Curry

DO YOU HAVE a radio or television set in working order? Ever listen to it? Often? Sometimes? Never? What do you do when you hear a program that you dislike? Snarl loudly? Snarl subvocally? Tune out? Write a letter? One more question: Were you aware that the church had applied for and failed to secure a broadcasting license? If so, were you at all concerned about it? If not, you know now and the same question applies—do you care?

Before you, as a church member, can arrive at a really satisfactory conclusion about the church's use of broadcasting facilities, whether it eventually operates any stations, purchases time from commercial stations around the country, or receives air time free of charge, would you think it amiss if someone suggested that you, the church member, have a stewardship as a radio listener or television viewer—actual or potential?

That idea has come from a number of people, in particular from the former chairman of the Federal Communications Commission which allocates frequencies for broadcast use. Says he: "The listener—not the broadcaster, not the advertiser, not the government—is the most important party in the American system of free broadcasting. . . . The time has come for the listener to make himself heard—not in sporadic, exasperated outbursts, but in an intelligent, rational, organized fashion. . . . The listener council movement can become one of the most powerful agencies for the public good in our time."

Some listeners have answered that challenge. The Wisconsin Association for Better Radio-TV Listening meets regularly, listens to experts on broadcasting, conducts special monitoring studies of its own, and informs Wisconsin broadcasters of their findings. There is a "National Association for Better Radio and Television," a "Radio Council of Greater Cleveland," and a "Radio Listeners of Northern California" group. That list is virtually complete. Short, isn't it?

PERHAPS YOU ASK, "Why should I bother with that? Radio is just a gadget, mere entertainment. If I don't like what I hear I tune out or turn it off." If you think that, you haven't heard that radio (and television) motivates behavior, sells goods, creates attitudes, stimulates ideas, touches even the most esoteric or the most manual of skills. It is a profound force in everyday living. Moreover the Federal Communications Act of 1934 promotes broadcasting "in the public interest, convenience, and necessity." Surely that is more than entertainment.

Other nations, notably Canada and Britain, surpass us in providing their citizens with great literature and music, programs of dramatized history and folklore, public discussion of significant problems on local, regional, and national levels, and exchange programs from other nations. It is most encouraging to know that the forces of public service in the United States are growing stronger, almost literally by the hour, in a trend toward separate facilities for providing educational, informational, and cultural programs at hours when they can be heard and in sufficient numbers to establish an audience and develop adequately the subjects chosen. Public service broadcasters are reaching the "seldom-or-never" listeners—the minorities who use the radio infrequently or not at all.

NOW, WHERE DOES THE CHURCH enter the broadcasting picture? Wherever the church decides to broadcast on a regular basis, it must determine what kinds of programs it will provide, what techniques to use in winning and holding an audience, and how to motivate that audience to some kind of positive action regarding the principles of Christian living and Zionite endeavor. Add the problems of acquiring specialists in broadcasting, choosing facilities for broadcasting, evaluating the results of the programs, following up positive contacts made by means of those programs, and you have a few elements which suggest a great opportunity for stewardships in the actual functions of broadcasting.

But the greater stewardship—one that, unfortunately, few people yet seem likely to undertake—is the task of developing critical listeners and viewers. True, a few groups seek to stimulate broadcasters into providing better program fare, but it takes more than a few. For intelligent listeners to evaluate a program in terms of their need for it, its production techniques, its manner or style of presentation, its message or lack of it, its logic or lack of it, and so on—and then for those listeners to express their approval or disapproval to the broadcasters—would indeed exert potent and beneficial effect.

These electronic gadgets, radio and television, possess real stature only in terms of the ideas they convey, not in terms of the noise-and-picture quality, nor even in terms of the financial return they bring their

A Good Neighbor

By Gladys L. Hegwood

SISTER MELVINA HEVENER was a member of the Reorganized Church. She and her husband, Robert, who was not a member, were New Yorkers and possessed all of the mannerisms of Eastern people. She was a sister of the well-known Bishop Israel Rogers who was prominent in the early days of the church.

The Heveners were pioneer settlers in Ford County; they had a prosperous farm near Piper City, Illinois. Their only son, Silas, was also a member of the church and a farmer. He and his family lived near by, and his home and heart were always open to those in need. Since his father, a Civil War veteran, was badly crippled, Silas did the heavy farming on the home place also.

In Sister Hevener's time there were no modern conveniences. Household tasks had to be done the hard way; not only did she have to be adept in the homemaking arts, but she had to be a spinner of yarn, a weaver of carpets for the floors of her rooms, and a seamstress for herself and her husband.

When Father and Mother rented a farm in Ford County and moved there, the Heveners were their first callers. Mother was embarrassed that a stranger should find her home in disorder, but she was confined to her bed with illness, leaving Father to tend the house.

After they had visited awhile, Aunt Viny, as her friends lovingly called her, said tactfully, "Give me an apron, Mr. Hegwood, and tell me where things are and what provisions you have on hand. I'll prepare dinner. You and Rob go some place out of my way and visit until dinner is ready; afterward we'll make a beginning at getting you folks settled."

Until Mother's sister Flora was able to come and be with her, this good neighbor came every day and took complete charge of the household. She and Mother were soon good friends and they were calling each other "Aunt Viny" and "Mary."

ABOUT A MONTH LATER Aunt Viny said to mother, "I am a member of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. I brought a few tracts with me this morning which explain the organization of the church, and I should like you to read them."

The church was this good woman's life. Nothing was too much for her to do for God's work. Not only did she help her unfortunate neighbors but she took four girls into her home, taught them household arts, educated them, and was the means of bringing them into the church. She sent them out into the world better women because of her teaching and influence.

Missionaries were always heartily welcomed at the Hevener home.

Here they were comfortably housed and fed, their clothing mended, new clothing provided when necessary, and a generous sum of money given to defray expenses when they left.

While her mother and sister were members of the Christian Church, and Mother had become a member since her marriage, she couldn't offend the Heveners by refusing to attend Sunday school in the little Hevener schoolhouse. Though she disliked the word "Mormon," she watched her neighbors who were members of the church closely and found them honorable, God-fearing people and good citizens. Eventually she and Father became members of the church, and through them our entire family became interested and asked for membership.

As time passed and Sister Hevener was reaching the end of life's journey, Mother would often say to her, "Many will arise to call you blessed, Aunt Viny, for the kindness you've extended to your fellow men and women."

"I've done no more than my share, Dear," she would answer. "God has been most gracious and generous to me and my family. I've only cast my bread upon the waters of life and it has returned to me increased a hundredfold."

Money is not required to buy one necessity of the soul.

operators. We can learn to evaluate those ideas rather easily by visiting our libraries to investigate the ever-increasing wealth of literature about broadcasting—what people listen to and why, production and advertising techniques, station management, governmental control, history of broadcasting, and even how to apply for a radio or television station. Librarians are glad to direct us to the trade magazines, professional journals of speech and public opinion research, and bibliographies of books and periodicals which guide our study of this gadget that broadcasts voices, music, sound, and pictures to the far reaches of the globe.

With nearly 100 per cent of our nation equipped with radios in homes or in automobiles, it is worth acquiring the power to judge what we hear and see by objective and artistic standards, and then to join hands with our neighbors in informing broadcasters of our favorable and unfavorable reactions. That is a project worthy of any Zion builder.

What Can a League Do?

The ultimate objective of young people's activities as well as of all church work is to produce godlike individuals who are more concerned with the needs of others than with themselves. Thus it is through service projects that Zion's Leagues and League members grow and come to express the real purpose of their being. Because of the importance of this phase of the League's activities we would like to share the challenge that came to us through the inspiring leadership of Blanche Green and her enthusiastic young people. We bring it to the "Herald" in the hope that it will help others plan with their young people in their homes and in their Leagues unselfish service projects that they too may know the thrill and experience the growth that comes from sharing with and serving others.*

BLANCHE GREEN was a League leader in Independence. Her League was in one of the smaller congregations, then little more than a mission. These Leaguers did not even have a church home, but held their meetings in a dwelling house. As you review their activities, however, it will be easy to see why the League was much larger than one would expect to find in a branch of this size. Soon these people outgrew their humble beginning, and now they have a fine new church.

We share here these projects as they were initiated month by month and described in their annual report to the branch. Many of the projects, of course, were carried on throughout the year.

January

This year of service began with a New Year's Eve party. The party closed with a candlelighting service which turned into a testimony meeting. Here many of the young people expressed desires of giving greater service to the Lord during the coming year.

All Leaguers were given Youth Stewardship books, and they worked together in filling out their inventories. A League representative sat with the branch council in planning the inventory service.

A calendar was made up from the files of the pastor giving the birth dates of all persons over sixty-five and under five years old. A greeting card was sent to them in time for their birthdays.

February

In February a service project came in response to the need of one of the members who was seriously ill. Prayer services were held each Sunday morning. The young people came fasting. Then, because the need was great, they decided to fast one meal each day and continue in prayer to God that the condition of their fellow-member might be relieved. A blessing was received.

The League also had a valentine party for an elderly lady, Mrs. Palmer, who had suffered a stroke. Everyone brought a gift, and these were placed in a large box decorated in red and white crepe paper. There were thirty packages in all, and Mrs. Palmer was instructed to draw out just one package each day. This brightened what would otherwise have been many weary days for her.

March

The young adults in the branch were trying to get enough members together to organize a program similar to that used in the League. To help encourage this the League rented a skating rink and invited all young adult couples and their children to be their guests. Transportation was provided, and a special effort was made by League members to show their guests a good time. (The young adults were later organized.)

April

Since the Sunday evening preaching service closed at 8:30 o'clock the evening was still young, so League members usually went to the home of some of their members near by and sang or played. It was during this time, too, that they planned their missionary service. There were four young members of the priesthood in the League, so the group was divided into four parts. Numbers were drawn to designate who the leaders of the groups were to be and where they would minister. Appointments were made well in advance of these meetings which were presented twice each month in homes of the community.

Sometimes the group put on an evening worship service for a family where there were small children. Sometimes it was a prayer service for an aged couple. There were some families who had become discouraged and had quit attending church. The League ministered to them by reviving their interest. Sometimes they visited in the homes of school friends who were nonmembers. (Two members were baptized as a result of this.)

May

The League was invited to dedicate a new home. This was a real challenge and required some careful preparation. The project was carried out beautifully.

Several of the League members were taking business training which included shorthand and typing. They volunteered their services in recording ordinations and blessings of babies and also took notes from sermons which were used in discussion groups.

June

Several years previous the Leaguers had rented eight acres of ground and planted it to alfalfa. At this time of year they turned out in a body to reap the harvest. They got four cuttings which netted several hundred dollars each year from this project. The boys rented the machinery and did the work while the girls furnished the food and cool fresh water. The money went to the building fund.

July

The pastor called on the League many times for definite tasks. This month the call came for the group to assist in cleaning the home of an aged widower who was going blind. The boys Kemtoned the walls and ceiling of the home while the girls washed windows, scrubbed floors, and hung curtains.

August

The Leaguers volunteered to put on a program at the Negro church; the Negroes seemed so friendly and appreciative that the Leaguers invited them to visit their church and present a program. They agreed to come at an early date.

A boys quartet was organized. They sang at the Waldo Avenue Baptist Church, the Maywood Methodist Church, Spring Branch Reorganized Church, the Ott P.T.A., and the Young School for colored boys and girls, besides helping in their own group whenever called upon.

September

The projects this month grew out of a class in directing music, conducted by Betty Mosier. One high school boy organized some neighborhood boys into a chorus and practiced with them every Saturday afternoon. One of the girls took the responsibility of teaching songs to the Skylarks, and another of directing a Zion's League choir.

October

During this month the League sponsored a box supper. A total of thirty dollars was cleared and the money sent to a needy family in the community.

November

The League sponsored a turkey dinner for eight League members and several families in the congregation who had no relatives living in Independence. Each one brought a covered dish and the expense of the turkey and trimmings was divided among all. An impromptu program in the afternoon provided entertainment for everyone.

December

In December the Leaguers sang carols and adopted a family for Christmas. The father of the family had stolen a truck while intoxicated and was in jail, leaving the mother and four small children in need. The League also worked through the pastor to try to get a parole for the man so that he could be with his family for Christmas, but the Police Department felt that it would be wiser to keep him in jail. They believe some real lessons were learned during this project.

The League's Christmas contribution to the community was a drama entitled "One Star to Follow."

In addition to these splendid service projects the Leaguers had many fine experiences in study, worship, and recreation. They built a volleyball court back of the church and played some exciting games. They had a retreat at Lake Doniphan, played table tennis, went skating, boating, and swimming.

Because of the small space for their church service the Leaguers attended the eight o'clock sacrament services on Communion Sundays and then held special services of their own at eleven o'clock. They met each Sunday evening at six o'clock and each Tuesday evening at seven-thirty.

JOY HARRIS

*Blanche Green was the wife of Clair E. Green who at the time of this particular year of League activity was pastor of the Slover Park congregation in Independence, Missouri. Blanche served several years as a highly successful Zion's League leader. In 1948 she was called to serve as the first women's leader of the newly created Center Stake. Here she was continuing her unselfish service at the time of her death in February, 1949, as the result of an automobile accident.

■ The financial statement unit in religious activities began Sunday, January 11. There was a service of instruction and testimony regarding stewardship and financial statements. The pastoral groups met in the form of a workshop in order to discuss any difficulties or questions that might arise. The students brought their completed financial statements to their pastoral groups where an envelope was provided for each statement. On Sunday, January 18, Bishop Earl T. Higdon from Lamoni Stake received the statements from the pastors of each group.

■ Graceland's Food Service Department, in conjunction with Miss Ruth York's Spanish classes, is planning an authentic Mexican dinner for all students and faculty members, Thursday evening, February 19. This is in line with Leonard Delano's plan to have a dinner representative of different countries and cultures once each month. During the course of the evening, the Spanish classes have planned an entertaining floor show, which will be given at intervals during the dining hour. The program will be made up entirely of Mexican numbers.

■ The campus congregation has now entered into the Creative Interest Unit in religious activities. Sunday, February 1, Evangelist Elvin Baughman of Dow City, Iowa, was interviewed on the theme "Church Work on the Side." Brother Baughman is a mail carrier, but he has found time to engage in a number of creative interests. Among these are working with bees, doing carpentry and masonry work, and Scouting.

New Horizons

The formal opening of the new church at Council Bluffs, Iowa, was held on January 18, 1953, with President Israel A. Smith, Bishop G. L. DeLapp, and Apostle R. E. Davey as guest speakers. Each of them made a fine contribution to this joyous occasion. The activities of the day opened with a service of appreciation with Pastor V. D. Ruch in charge. This was a prayer service in which the Saints expressed their appreciation to God for his marvelous help in this building project. The service of consecration was conducted at 11:00 a.m. with President Smith bringing the message. At the close of the sermon the congregation and the pastor read a prayer of consecration together.

At 2:30 p.m. Bishop DeLapp was the speaker at the service of presentation, when the building was presented by Elder Charles F. Putnam, chairman of the building committee, to the pastor and the congregation for use in worshiping God. Then at 7:30 p.m. Apostle Davey preached at "the gospel service," beginning a two-week series of missionary meetings, the first series to be held in the new church. Over a thousand people were in attendance at the morning service. The three choirs—the senior choir, the junior choir, and the Cecelian Singers—participated in the day's services.

The new church is of light buff brick veneer and has a seating capacity of about seven hundred. An excellent sound system throughout the building makes it possible for the service from the sanctuary to be heard in other parts of the building. Besides the sanctuary and the balcony there is a small chapel that will seat about one hundred people, a beautifully furnished and commodious lounge, the pastor's study, several large church school rooms, a large fellowship hall with a stage and two dressing rooms, and a well-equipped kitchen. The building is heated with three gas furnaces. The wood trim is of blond oak, with pews and chancel furniture to match. There are two pulpits with an altar as the worship center. The rooms are beautifully painted, and most of them have floors of asphalt tile. The sanctuary and small chapel have hardwood floors. The lounge and pastor's study, as well as the platform and aisles in the sanctuary, are carpeted. A large front window, 27 by 12 feet, depicts Christ as the Good Shepherd and also the Three Standard Books in stained glass. This window is spotlighted from the inside at night and can be seen by all who pass by. A spotlight also shows up the main entrance and tower each evening.

The citizens of Council Bluffs have shown a deep interest in the building of this church and have been very generous in their praise of it. Many of them have said that they are going to start attending services here. As an indication of the feeling of nonmember friends, the following editorial was carried in the Council Bluffs Nonpareil Saturday evening, January 24, under the heading, "The New Latter Day Saint Church":

The Council Bluffs Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints is now worshipping in one of the finest church edifices in the Midwest.

It is a realization of a dream which began to take shape in 1945, when the first of a series of fund-raising dinners was held. Six dinners were held in all, each one netting more than $25,000 for the new church.

A lot of faith and consecration and hard work went into the project before construction began. The Latter Day Saints have the admirable and old-fashioned idea that most of the money should be in hand before a contract is let. Some money remains to be raised before the new church can be formally dedicated, it being a firm principle of the Latter Day Saints not to dedicate a new church until the cost has been fully paid. But in the meantime the more than thirteen hundred members are worshipping in the new edifice, enjoying the commodious quarters it provides for all of the church activities.

All the people of Council Bluffs and southwest Iowa join with the Latter Day Saints in rejoicing in the realization of their dream and the completion of the church building. It is a credit to this community, an achievement of which we can all be proud.

As pastor of this branch, in behalf of our congregation, I wish to extend an invitation to our members and friends who may be passing through our city to stop and attend our services and see the new building. Any isolated Saints who are contemplating a change in location are invited to consider Council Bluffs where they may have the opportunities and privileges of this large branch.

Observe Fifty-ninth Wedding Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Louis P. Buck of Sperry, Oklahoma, observed their fifty-ninth wedding anniversary on January 25 by holding open house at their home. They were married January 22, 1894, at Weed, New Mexico; both are seventy-seven years old. Mrs. Buck has been a member of the Reorganized Church since August, 1925, and Mr. Buck since April, 1941. Only three of their seven children are living: Mrs. L. D. Jeffrey of Tulsa, Oklahoma; Mrs. W. E. Equels, also of Tulsa; and W. F. Buck of Sperry. They have eight grandchildren and eleven great-grandchildren.

Discussion Groups Held

SAN JOSE, CALIFORNIA.—Following the Communion service on January 4, Reuben Gene Porter of Redwood City was ordained to the office of deacon by his father, Elder Reuben Porter, and the pastor, Elder Elbert Guilbert.

On January 11, four groups of Sunday evening neighborhood meetings have been taking place at homes in San Jose, Burbank, Santa Clara, Willow Glen, Campbell, Los Gatos, Central San Jose, and Eastern Foothills.

The meetings are informal discussion groups and have proved interesting and profitable. There are two members of the priesthood in charge of each group. The textbook used is Missionary Outlines by F. Henry Edwards.

The branch provides a speaker for the Happy Valley reunion grounds group twice a month. The Communion service is held there the second Sunday of the month.

Elder James Damron, member of the district bishopric, was the visiting speaker on January 11.

A potluck dinner was held at the church on January 25, and an offering was taken to help purchase material for choir robes.

The Leaguers and Graceland alumni attended a meeting in Berkeley on January 17.

A branch of the church school meets in Palo Alto each Sunday at the Doppee home. Elder Harold Cline, the director of religious education, supervises.—Reported by STENA CALDWELL

Plan For New Building

LONGMONT, COLORADO.—The branch was first organized as a mission out of the Denver Branch. Help is still received from the Denver and Fort Collins priesthood. The pastor is W. E. Gunderson, assisted by Deacon Roy A. Johnson. Other officers are church school superintendent, Zella Horn; assistant superintendent, Dorothy Gunderson; secretary-treasurer, Roy A. Johnson; music director, Walter Gunderson; historian, Jean Holloway; young adult leader, Genevieve Krebill; librarian, Mary Jane Horn; women's leader, Margaret Bingham.

Missionary Gerald Gabriel conducted a series of meetings last fall resulting in three baptisms. They were Laverne Test, and Carole and Donna Bingham. Judy Ann Bingham, Ronald Trevarton, and Gerald Trevarton were blessed last year.

The young people of the branch attended youth camp and League retreat, and are active in the city Scouting program.

The women's department has various projects, including bake sales, Christmas card sales, and interest in the missionary program.

The group meets in a hall, but plans to own a building soon.

Every second Tuesday in the month is "family night." Meetings are held in the homes of various families. A dinner is served. On the other Tuesday nights, prayer services are held in the homes.—Reported by ZELLA HORN

Workshop Conducted

BUFFALO, NEW YORK.—Members of the branch have been attending a seven-week, Sunday evening workshop in evangelism being held by Seventy S. W. Johnson. The classes have dealt with missionary problems, techniques, and procedures. Each session has dealt with situations the missionary meets, and the discussion has centered around the way to meet the problem and answer the questions raised in such a situation by nonmembers. Some of the young men of the branch are holding cottage meetings in conjunction with the workshops.—Reported by ROGER SULLIVAN

Recordings at Service

EAST JORDAN, MICHIGAN.—On February 1, a potluck lunch was served at the home of Brother and Sister Vern Whiteford, after which a record of hymns by the Stone Church Choir was played, followed by the sermon given by Apostle Arthur Oakman at Conference on April 6, 1952.

The evening program closed with the playing of the second record of hymns by the Stone Church Choir. Eleven persons were present at the meeting.—Reported by JAMES D. FROST

Group Aids Polio Fund

WENATCHEE, WASHINGTON.—Evangelist J. F. Curtis from Spokane visited in Wenatchee and conducted services. District President Charles Powers and Bishop Monte Lasater were in the group and ordained Vernon Pratt to the office of deacon and Wesley Lovitt to the office of elder.

Paul Wellington met with the church school group, setting into motion a constructive teacher's study course.

Work Chairman Eathel Davis, assisted by a committee composed of Eilenne Chapman, Fern Lovitt, Lizzie Crocker, and Nora Cook, sponsored a dinner to benefit the polio fund. A check for $112 was turned over to the "March of Dimes."—Reported by REA M. KEENER

New Family in Branch

SUMMERSVILLE, MISSOURI.—The branch is under the leadership of Brother Ed Battaglini who was ordained to the priesthood on August 10, 1952. He was elected pastor at the last business meeting.

Sister Esther Irwin of the branch died on October 23.

The branch has welcomed the W. H. Beaty family. Lois Mae, the youngest member of the family, was baptized on November 23.

Plans for the organization of a Zion's League are under way.—Reported by MRS. MILDRED WEBB

Laurel Club Active

NEW WESTMINSTER, BRITISH COLUMBIA.—At the annual business meeting of the branch the following officers were elected: pastor, High Priest S. G. Clark; counselors, Elder A. Coburn, Priest Laurel Benham, and Priest F. Wood; junior church pastor, Gilbert V. Burton; women's leader, Francis Butterfield; secretary, Marjory Clark; treasurer, Lloyd Navy; church school director, Roy Mountany; adult supervisor, Phoebe Waite; young people's supervisor, Jessie Navy; children's supervisor, Ruth Atherton; music director, Lillian Cross.

The following have been called to the priesthood: Herbert Burton, elder; Robert McLean, priest; Roy Mountany and Gilbert Burton, teacher.

Guest speakers have been Apostle E. J. Gleazer, Bishop Curry, Bishop M. Lasater, Seventy G. Njeim. Seventy Aleah Koury began a series on February 1.

The Laurel Club, under the leadership of Francis Butterfield has held a luncheon the first Tuesday of each month in the church auditorium, and on the third Tuesday of each month they have a meeting in the different homes. The fall bazaar and tea was held in December.

A Christmas tree and program was held on December 13 by the juniors and their teachers. Ruth Atherton was in charge. On December 21, the pastor was in charge of the Christmas service. The choir was directed by Peggy McLean with Edith Andrews at the organ.

Church school is held each Sunday at 10:00 a.m., and church at 11:00 a.m. Prayer services are held each Thursday at 7:30 p.m.

Branch Officers Installed

BATTLE CREEK, MICHIGAN.—The annual business meeting of the branch was held June 15, with Elder Muril Robinson of Kalamazoo, Michigan, in charge. The following officers were elected: Muril Robinson, pastor; Grace Fitzke, treasurer; Esther Snyder, secretary and church school director; Mattie Willis, women's department leader; Ruth Kirby, choir director; Arlene Gratho, Zion's League leader; Estella Rizer, auditor; Esther Snyder, librarian and book steward; Hazel Lybarger, flower chairman; Evelyn Parks, publicity; Mildred Ashley, solicitor. Also elected were Arnold Robbins, Glenn Lamphier, and George Clark, Jr., finance committee; Grace Fitzke, Henry Gratho, Joe Glubke, Orlando Clark, and Esther Snyder, building committee.

Lawrence David, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Paradine, was blessed by Elder Muril Robinson, on October 5.

The Zion's League held its installation service on October 12, 1952. The following are officers for the year: George Clark, Jr., president; Bonnie Clark, vice-president; Jerry Glubke, secretary-treasurer. At present the Leaguers are rehearsing for a play, "Aunt Samantha Rules the Roost," to be presented the first of the year for the benefit of the building fund.

On October 19, a candlelighting installation service was held in the evening by the women's department. Officers for the coming year are as follows: Mattie Willis, women's leader; Katherine Kirpatrick, secretary-treasurer; Iola Bradshaw, ways and social chairman; Esther Snyder, friendly visitor; Gloria Malotte, nursery school director; Evelyn Parks, evening group leader; Chanda Clark, afternoon group leader; Mildred Ashley, morning group leader. The department sponsored a rummage sale, bazaar, friendly visiting, and family night gatherings during the past year. Their theme for the year is "Stewardship."

The following people have been welcomed to the branch from other areas: Sgt. and Mrs. Francis Bradshaw and their two children, Neva and Jerry, of Independence, Missouri; Cpl. and Mrs. Jack Bronson also of Independence; Mrs. Ruth Ann Wolfe of Borden, Ohio; and Mrs. Lena Ray of Detroit, Michigan.

Missionary Luncheons Held

MYRTLE POINT, OREGON.—A Zion's League has recently been organized. The group meets every Sunday evening at 6:30 under the leadership of Mrs. Jasper Streeter. A Christmas play was presented by this group at the annual Christmas program.

During 1952, a series of missionary luncheons was given by the women's department under the direction of Mrs. Fred Zumwalt. Each member brought one or more nonmembers to the luncheon and program, acquainting those persons with the church. Another series is planned for 1953.

Another active group is the young adult group. Meetings have been held every other Friday evening with the Book of Mormon as the present study project, followed by light refreshments. A missionary rally luncheon is being planned by the group to precede the missionary series.—Reported by MRS. VERN BREWER

Servicemen Assist Branch

BALTIMORE, MARYLAND.—A Christmas program was arranged by the church school director, Robert K. Vitek, who is now in the military service, and given with the film "A Christmas Carol." Lily Vitek directed a short playlet. Chocolates were distributed to the children.

Sister A. L. Mehlisch was elected to replace Brother Vitek as church school director.

The branch has welcomed Robert Sparks, Roger and Betty Farrish, and Clifford and Joyce Carver, all from Independence. The men are in the Army and are stationed at Edgewood, Maryland. They attend services regularly. Brother Sparks has rendered valuable assistance in the priesthood.—Reported by WONZA SIMMERS

Children Given Banquet

BELOIT, WISCONSIN.—Evangelist Ray Whiting began a series of meetings November 16-30. He also gave patriarchal blessings while with the Saints. His son-in-law, Elder George Young and wife, were with the group, November 26-27.

The lower auditorium held a chili supper December 12 and the children sold bricks to finish their project of laying tile on the auditorium floor. With the job completed, Elder Clyde Funk, pastor, gave the children a banquet on January 24.

Roger Wade, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Seldon Spencer, was blessed December 14, by Evangelist Harry Wasson and Elder Funk.

Elder Cecil Robbins and Mrs. Robbins were in Beloit on December 28. Brother Robbins was the morning speaker.—Reported by FRANCES HERMANSON

New Mission Organized

SAN DIEGO, CALIFORNIA.—On December 28, 1952, Wilda Reighard was baptized by Priest Orin Teeter and confirmed by High Priest Peter S. Whalley, assisted by Elder A. Ralph Thompson. This was the twentieth baptism of the year.

The Zion's League took charge of a Christmas vesper service in December. They have charge of one evening service each month. On January 3 they had a chili supper. The proceeds from this supper went toward the Auditorium fund.

High Priest Vernon Curtis of Kansas City, Missouri, spent two months in San Diego recently. During his stay here he gave two lectures to the priesthood and preached twice at the worship hour on Sunday morning.

Bishop Mark Siegfried visited the branch on Sunday, January 25. He preached at the morning service and showed slides of his world travels at the evening service.

A new mission has been organized at El Cajon. Elder Thompson has been appointed pastor, and Priest Orin Teeter assistant pastor. Forty-nine were present at their first Sunday morning service on January 25. They meet at the American Legion Hall. This is the third mission to be organized in the San Diego area.

Paula Wilcox, daughter of Joyce and Ralph Wilcox, was blessed on February 1 by Elder John Whipple and Brother Whalley.

Sister Van Fleet, the district women's leader, visited the branch in January and spoke to the women. Refreshments were served following the meeting.

Jeanne Ourth was baptized on February 1 by Priest Paul Brington and confirmed by Elder Leonard Holloway and Elder Robert Hada.—Reported by MIRIAM CHESWORTH

District Conference Held

WEST VIRGINIA DISTRICT.—The fall conference of the district was held in Parkersburg on September 27 and 28, presided over by Apostle D. T. Williams and the district president, Samuel M. Zonker. The business meeting convened Saturday at which time the following officers were elected: president, Samuel M. Zonker; counselors, Clyde S. Rice and Hubert A. Hinkle; church school director, W. A. Schoenian; young people's leader, Lawrence H. Phillips; women's leader, Blanche Martin; music director, Anna L. Schoenian; bishop's agent, Otto O. Melcher; secretary, treasurer, and historian, May R. Griffin; Herald correspondent, Mabel L. Smith.

The evening sermon was presented by Apostle D. T. Williams.

Sunday morning services began with a priesthood meeting directed by Apostle Williams, followed by a fellowship service for the entire gathering. The eleven o'clock message was also presented by Apostle Williams.

The meals during the conference were served by the department of women of Parkersburg Branch in the church dining rooms.

On Sunday afternoon Seventy James Menzies delivered the message. Following this was an ordination service: Emerson Cottrill of the Greenwood mission and Gomer Williams of Parkersburg were ordained to the office of teacher.

Elder Clyde S. Rice, district counselor and pastor of the Parkersburg Branch, gives the morning sermon often for the nurses' worship service at the Camden-Clark Memorial Hospital. He also was chosen to select the Scripture readings during the month for the Parkersburg News and in doing so helped to present our doctrine to the local community.

On November 15 a district council meeting was held at Bellaire Branch. These meetings are held often so problems of the district can be discussed by the officers and branch pastors. Such matters as missionary expansion work, the Graceland scholarship fund, a young people's institute, and regional vacation Bible school institute were planned for the early spring, also a women's and priesthood institute to follow shortly.

A letter was read from Brother Roy Givens written from Korea, stating a worthy project the Reorganized boys were doing over there in aiding a Korean boy to attend Graceland College. Each boy was to pledge a sum to aid in this, and ask his home district to match his pledge. This project was readily approved by the West Virginia District in trying to make this project known as "Operation Opportunity" a success.

The sixtieth anniversary of the organization of the West Virginia District was observed on December 6 and 7 at Wheeling, and the gathering was honored by the presence of President Israel A. Smith, Apostle D. T. Williams, and Seventy James A. Menzies.

The district was organized December 10, 1892, at the old Goose Creek (Mount Zion) Branch, with General Church representatives Apostle W. H. Kelley and Elder T. W. Williams presiding. These two men were also selected to represent the new district at the General Conference of 1893.

The theme of the anniversary services was "Christ Is King" and was carried out in all meetings. The opening session was presided over by District President Zonker, who welcomed the General Church representatives.

The Junior Order of United Mechanics presented the Wheeling Branch with a large American flag and standard. This flag together with the new church flag recently purchased made a beautiful contribution to the altar. Elder Samuel A. Martin, pastor of the Wheeling Branch, gave the acceptance response on behalf of the church.

As the Christmas season was approaching, gifts were presented to President Smith, Apostle Williams, Seventy Menzies, and Brother Zonker. Sister Anna Schoenian, Sister Freeze, and Sister Gertrude Barton, dressed in costumes of sixty years ago, sang appropriate and amusing songs to the men who were presented gifts. Brothers Neil Nixon and Keith Zonker also gave several songs which contributed to the enjoyment of the occasion.

A short business session was conducted Saturday evening and Billy Wayne Beasley of the Beckley mission was approved for ordination to the office of teacher.

The Saturday evening sermon was presented by Brother Williams, also the sermon Sunday afternoon.

Sunday services began with an early priesthood meeting with President Smith and Apostle Williams bringing counsel. A prayer and fellowship service was conducted, and President Smith delivered the morning sermon. —Reported by MABEL L. SMITH

Funds Raised for Equipment

DE KALB, ILLINOIS.—The branch was host to Seventy Cecil R. Ettinger throughout the month of January. Most of his time was spent in visiting and cottage meetings, together with our pastor, concluding with a week's series of meetings. The men met together each Sunday afternoon during his stay for informal messages and fellowship with Brother Ettinger. The young adult group honored him and his family as special guests at a buffet luncheon on Saturday evening, January 17. On January 25 two candidates were baptized. They were Mrs. Kenneth Hintzsche and Mr. James Davis. This makes a total of nine baptisms for our branch during the past fifteen months. Our other new members are Mrs. Ronald Brooke and her two sons, Bill and David; Mrs. Edwin Whitney; Mr. Jerry Krubert; Mrs. Charles Pease, and Mrs. Richard Hintzsche. Five family circles have now been completed in church membership. Sister Ettinger, Ray, and Stephanie were present for three Sundays. She contributed to the musical portion of the services.

The Men's Brotherhood meet once a month for socials with work nights interspersed. Their current project is the building of cupboards and drawers in the kitchen of the church. They also decided, at the conclusion of Brother Ettinger's ministry to them, to hold priesthood training classes the last Sunday afternoon of each month.

The young adults also meet monthly. Their recent activities have included a hayride, costume party at which the men came dressed as women and vice versa, and the preparation and delivery of Christmas baskets accompanied by caroling.

The women's department held a bazaar, bake sale, rummage sale, and snack counter in December, clearing around $250. This money was turned into the branch treasury and items left from the rummage sale are being shipped to the Social Service Center in Independence. An all-day institute was held in December. Sister Ruth Wildermuth, district director of women, addressed the group concerning the observance of Christmas, and also told the story of "The Black Madonna." Following a luncheon, the quarterly business meeting was held, carols were sung, and Brother Ettinger completed the day with a Christmas message.

Their current project is the sponsoring of an anniversary supper for the branch at which time funds will be accepted for equipping a nursery at the church. This money has been raised by each family sewing a patch upon an apron and enclosing a donation under the patch in appreciation of their years of married life together. The new book, Feather in the Wind, is to be presented to the couple celebrating the most years of married happiness.

The Zion's League class and their guests attended the lecture, "Star of Bethlehem," at the Adler Planetarium in Chicago the Sunday preceding Christmas. They were then entertained at the home of the pastor in River Forest for supper and a short vesper service.

Officers currently serving the branch are pastor, Lloyd L. Hadley; counselor, Charles

Special Services Held

HARMONY, PENNSYLVANIA.—Special services were held by district officers at the branch on January 16 and 17. The Saturday evening speaker, Elder Hubert Hinkle, spoke on "Prayer." The church school was held on Sunday morning, followed by the morning sermon by Brother Hinkle. A lunch was served in the church dining room by the local Saints, under the supervision of Sister Susie Givens.

Services convened in the afternoon with Brother W. A. Schoenian as speaker. Sister Anna Schoenian, director of music, also spoke in the afternoon. She was assisted by the branch pianist.

Other visitors were Brother Lawrence Phillips, young people's director from the Clarksburg Branch, and Sister Madeline Hinkle of the Beckley mission.—Reported by REA DAWN DAWSON

Building Fund Boosted

EROS, LOUISIANA.—The La-Da-Sa Club met in the home of Mrs. Mattie Mobley for the Christmas party; refreshments were served by Mrs. Sallie Carpenter, women's leader, and her assistant, Sister Mobley. Each one present drew a number and received the gift that had their number on it.

The branch had a Christmas tree, and Audrey Fuller and Lavinia Carroll directed the Christmas program. Music was played and sung by Marie Sholars who attends School for the Blind at Baton Rouge, Louisiana.

Members of the branch in Baton Rouge have received thanks for their donation of flowers and linens to help with the building funds.

Some of the members who have been away were able to be home in December for a few days. They were as follows: Mrs. Margie Dickerson, Mrs. Hazel Dickerson of Baton Rouge, Louisiana; Miss Florence Phillips of Maryland; Lawrence Phillips who is in the Air Force; Richard Williams and Billy Fuller who are in the Navy; and Marie Sholars of Baton Rouge.

Elder Jim Phillips of Kennett, Missouri, visited his brothers, Elder J. E. Phillips and Priest Clarence Phillips, and preached for six nights.—Reported by ORELL FULLER

Women's Group Raise Funds

TRAVERSE, MICHIGAN.—During the fall the Zions' League group sponsored several early morning prayer services, with breakfast cook-outs afterward. Desiring to help the church financially, the young people contributed part of the proceeds from a bake sale to the Auditorium fund. During the winter they were hosts to the Leagues from the surrounding area for a week end of fellowship, and are making plans for another week end soon.

The young adult and the adult groups meet once each month for suppers, parties, programs, and various activities, which tends to promote growth and harmony in the branch.

The women's department has worked diligently this winter, earning over four hundred dollars, from which they turned over three hundred dollars to the local building fund and sent one hundred dollars to the Auditorium fund. At Christmas time they gave a shower for the church kitchen; many useful articles were received.

During the weeks of January 11-25 a series of preaching services was conducted by Seventy Harry L. Doty on "The Distinctive Beliefs of the Church." Prior to this the Zion's League members canvassed parts of the city giving personal invitations. Contributing to the success of this endeavor were the many slides shown, as well as the special musical numbers offered. There was an exceptionally good attendance throughout the series, with four young people being baptized at its close; several others are greatly interested and are still investigating the church beliefs.

Under the consecrated leadership of Pastor Doty Price the branch celebrated its fiftieth anniversary with a banquet and program on January 29. Elder Homer A. Doty was the only member present who had taken part in the organization of the Traverse City Branch January 28, 1903.—Reported by LORRAINE G. SMITH

Prepares for World Day of Prayer

WEBB CITY, MISSOURI.—The children's division, assisted by the junior high group, gave a Christmas program on the evening of December 21. Mrs. Elna Spencer, supervisor, and her department teachers were in charge.

The adult class held its annual Christmas party at the home of Mrs. A. N. Deaver on December 16.

Eight of the women of the branch attended the district women's meeting in Carthage, December 4.

Elder Charles Neff, assistant to the First Presidency, held a series of meetings January 11-25. He was assisted by District President Stephen A. Black, Saints from Joplin, Carthage, and Medoc, Missouri, and Pittsburg and Weir, Kansas, Branches, as well as nonmembers, were present. The music department was assisted by special numbers from Joplin, Carthage, and Pittsburg. Herbert Potter and Commodore Horn were baptized at the Joplin church; confirmation was at the Webb City church. Brother Potter was confirmed by Elders J. M. Jones and J. I. Wolf; Brother Horn by Elders Neff and Jones.

The women held their regular monthly meeting at the church on January 21. A covered dish luncheon was held at noon, followed by a short talk by Brother Neff, who introduced Brother Black as the speaker.

Other visiting speakers have been Elder Spangler and Ted Linder of Joplin; Harold Graves and William Shank of Carthage; William Miller of Medoc; and Brother Stephen Black of Neosho. Clarence Lade of Slover Park, Independence, Missouri, was the guest speaker on January 15.

The third Thursday of each month is family night at which time a covered dish dinner is held honoring those having birthdays in that particular month. A short program is usually given following the dinner.

Mrs. Rose Wolf and Mrs. Nelirta Jones attended a meeting of representatives of all the churches to plan the local World Day of Prayer to be held February 20.—Reported by MRS. J. M. JONES

Missionary Fellowship Day

MISSOURI MISSIONARY AREA.—On January 25 there was a missionary fellowship day held at Bevier, Missouri. Seventy John T. Puckett was in charge, assisted by Missionary Sam Anderson. The theme carried out in all the services throughout the day was "For this is my stewardship."

The morning prayer service was held, followed by a class taught by Elder Ross Mortimer of Jefferson City, Missouri, and the morning sermon by Brother Puckett. The women's department served lunch at noon. There was a baptismal service in the afternoon and three children were baptized. They were Virginia Kay Kemple, Lynn, Missouri, and Lloyd Martin Clark and Donald Cheavers of Macon, Missouri. Priest Lloyd Clark performed the ordinance.—Reported by MRS. ELSIE WINTERMEYER

The First Easter

An effective instrumental prelude and choral number precedes the story which alternates with vocal selections throughout the cantata. The reading of the story may be omitted at the option of the director.

Price 20c; $2.00 a dozen

The Living Redeemer

This cantata uses a narrator whose part supplies the desired continuity. The average volunteer choir can perform this, but it will require more rehearsal time than others of its type. The story and music are based on dramatic events leading to the Crucifixion.

WE LIKE TO TALK

Ever notice that some people always "participate" at prayer meetings, business meetings, or in class discussions? They enjoy it. The others talk just as much, perhaps, but at other times and places. A few years back I heard that Cheville and Higdon were walking over to the college for a faculty meeting. Higdon said, "Roy, I'll bet you can't go through this session without talking." On the walk home Earl said, "Well, you won, but I wouldn't have believed it if I hadn't been there." "Yes, I won the bet, but I didn't have any fun doing it."

Most of us think of our best ideas and snappiest comebacks after the meeting is over and then develop inferiority complexes.

GOOD WORKS

I wish it (Christianity) were more productive of good works . . . I mean real good works . . . not holy-day keeping, sermon-hearing . . . or making long prayers, filled with flatteries and compliments despised by wise men and much less capable of pleasing the Deity.

Allen Breckenridge

WHEN ALLEN was about fifteen his ambition to be a schoolteacher faded out in his consuming desire to be a missionary. He was ordained a deacon at sixteen and, under the supervision of Ward Hougas who was then president of Far West Stake, he filled several preaching appointments. Allen was one of the few who romanced about converting the peoples of far-off lands. In 1948 the church sent him to the Society Islands, where he labored until last summer. He made some venturesome ocean trips in ministering to the Tahitians on the several islands, but none were more thrilling than the one he took in a forty-ton motorboat during a storm with the captain and crew drunk. When he awoke he found water all over the boat and the little craft was about to flounder. The most treacherous part of the return trip was shooting the reefs in the small boats at night to get ashore. It can be done, but it is always dangerous to try.

A much more pleasant trip for the missionary came later when about twenty-five Saints set out in two sailboats. At the first island two more boats joined them, with similar groups at the second and the third islands. By this time the party amounted to one hundred. Each time the native sailors would climb the mast to look for land. As soon as it was sighted, they would sing and pray as they did each day at dawn and dusk.

Brother Breckenridge was born in Shreveport, Louisiana, in 1921. As a small child he moved with his family to St. Joseph, Missouri, where he was baptized in 1934. Even before finishing high school he became interested in missionary work and filled preaching appointments in the stake. He was ordained a deacon in 1937, a priest in 1940, an elder in 1941, and a seventy in 1947. After he was graduated from high school he attended the Junior College of St. Joseph and has utilized other opportunities of extending his education. Since returning from his mission in the Society Islands, he is serving in Kansas City Stake and is taking a course in family counseling at Kansas City University.

Brother Breckenridge married Emma Jane Smith in 1944. They have two children: David, 4, and Carol Lei, 2. In addition to Far West Stake, he has labored in the Portland, Spokane, Spring River, Southern Indiana, Kentucky, and Tennessee Districts. He is interested in music and has done considerable vocal solo work, as well as playing in band and orchestra.

News and Notes

FROM HEADQUARTERS

PRESIDENT SMITH IN TEXAS

President Israel A. Smith left Independence February 24 for Fort Worth, Texas. He returned to the office on the morning of February 27.

PRESIDENT EDWARDS IN WEST

President F. Henry Edwards continues to make contacts in the West, meeting with the Saints at Berkeley February 28 and March 1, for the Northern California District conference. Elder L. A. McDonald is the district president, and Elder Tom Beil is the Bay Cities pastor.

PRESIDENT W. W. SMITH IN TULSA

President W. Wallace Smith attended the district conference of the Tulsa, Oklahoma, District, February 21-22. He was associated with Apostle D. Blair Jensen at the conference. Elder Alfred Yale was elected district president for the newly formed Tulsa District. Brother Smith preached the morning sermon, and Brother Jensen preached the evening sermon. The men also conducted classes.

APOSTLE CHESWORTH HOLDS SERIES

Apostle D. O. Chesworth held a series for two weeks beginning February 15 at Brush Creek, Illinois. The effort was supported by the Brush Creek, Flora, and Poplar Creek Branches. Including visitors from the district, the average attendance was 104 each night. Two adults were baptized. Elder Samuel E. Anderson assisted Brother Chesworth. On February 6, 7, and 8, he was at the Southeastern Illinois District institute at Flora. Associated with Brother Chesworth were Elder Stephen Black, and Seventy and Mrs. D. L. Kyser. Brother Chesworth preached at the First Chicago and Brainerd Branches on February 1.

DR. McDOWELL ON CAMPUSES

On February 3-6, Dr. F. M. McDowell, director of priesthood education, in connection with District President Ralph Wicker, conducted a series of meetings for members of the priesthood and their wives in four regions of the Des Moines District. Meetings were held at Boone, Webster City, Knoxville, and Des Moines. This project had in view a long-time program for the district in priesthood training and ministry which will be launched March 1. Eighty-three per cent of all the priesthood in the district were reached by this series.

On February 7-12, Brother McDowell was at the Graceland campus where he held conferences with the ordained men on the campus. He was on the campus of Kansas University in Lawrence, Kansas, February 15-19. This was the first time that a representative of the church was invited to participate. He lectured to groups of students of the university in various dormitories, houses, and classes.

SCOUT CONFERENCE HELD

Over ninety Scouters attended the annual Scouting executives' conference for adult leaders in the Center Stake on February 22. The planning committee was composed of F. Carl Mesle, Finley Fiske, Barney McLaughlin, Chester Kramer, and Lee Hart. Howard Harder gave the address. Other speakers included Carl Mesle, Finley Fiske, Jay Keck, and Charles V. Graham. Lee Hart was in charge of the conference.

Six Dynamic Words

"We are workers together with God."

THE APOSTLE PAUL had a sort of inspired genius to say a great deal in few words. This talent for well-laden brevity was never better illustrated than in his statement, "We are [workers] laborers together with God."

Where would you place the greater emphasis in that brief text? Probably at three points, like this: We are workers. We are workers together. We are workers together with God.

We Are Workers

There are popular and erroneous ideas about work. Many think that a life free from work and devoted to idleness or pleasure seeking would be a happy life. People who live that sort of life are discontented and unhappy. Emerson rather truly said, "Every man's job is his life preserver."

Also there has been a wrong theological idea that work was a curse pronounced upon man after he sinned and was driven from Eden. To the contrary, the Scriptures tell us that God planted a garden and set Adam in it to dress it and tend it and gave Eve to him as a helpmeet. Both had a job, even in Paradise.

It is true that excessive, un congenial slave labor is a curse. Honest, constructive, interesting work is a blessing.

We term the religious task given us "the great latter day work." God called it "the great and marvelous work." And in it he has called all of us to be workers together with him.

In every branch, district, and stake there is great need for workers. The church always needs wise, dependable, efficient, trained workers.

One problem from generation to generation is to develop such workers. This is a problem taxing the best efforts of administrative officers. In some branches a few men have been content just to preside from year to year, failing to develop workers to follow after them. And they have not been open-minded to perceive the call of God to young people to serve in the priesthood or in other departments of church work.

Brother George Mesley at one time was called to preside in an area where the development of workers had been neglected. He immediately laid down this principle, "We do not know whom the Lord will call, but we do know the type of men he is likely to call to the priesthood." So he gathered around him a "fellowship group" of that kind of young men. He taught them and led them and gave them jobs to do as helpers. He was alert to the call when it came to ordain certain of those men.

When I was first assigned to a pastorate a wise friend said to me, "It is better to set ten men to work than it is to try to do the work of ten men."

We Are Workers Together

It is of supreme importance that we learn to work with others. This requires strength of character, self-control, tolerance, understanding of other people, patience, and more patience. The rewards are great. Jesus said that where even two or three are met together in his name and are agreed, he will be there to bless.

I was once asked to name my favorite scriptural text. It was difficult to choose among so many fine texts. However, I named this one: "Let nothing separate you from each other and the work whereunto you have been called; and I will be with you by my Spirit and presence of power unto the end."—Doctrine and Covenants 122: 17.

Every congregation, great or small, should be a sort of preparatory school in Zion's living and working together.

We Are Workers Together With God

When we are workers together it is not difficult to work with God. And we have been told that before we bring our gift to the altar we must first go and make peace with our brother who may have aught against us. (That means at least a reasonable and sustained effort toward mutual understanding.)

Essentially, what is this work to which we are called? In Genesis we are told that as God proceeded with his work of creation he paused at intervals to look at it and then say, "It is good." At the last he said, "It is very good."

I am constrained to believe that many of the things created were potentially very good. They had in them qualities that God intended should be developed by man working with him. To illustrate: at least in historic times the Creator did not hand to man a Stark's Delicious apple. He gave him a wild apple full of marvelous possibilities. From it, man working with God has developed the Stark's Delicious, the Grimes Golden, the Baldwin, and many other varieties. They were all in that first created apple, which was "very good" as a challenge to men of faith and works and vision.

In the human soul there are hidden possibilities. Perhaps you have powers of which you have not yet dreamed. They are unexplored, undeveloped, dormant. It is the work of the gospel to develop the souls of men, to bring to light their hidden beauty and strength and goodness. Working together and with God we may thus transform our own lives and help others in that same task. We are workers. We are workers together. We are workers together with God.

German Hymnal to Be Published

The German Saints of the church will no doubt be pleased to learn that we have completed arrangements for the publishing of a German hymnal for which there has been a long-felt need. The book will contain about 247 hymns and will be published in Germany, but copies will be available for German Saints living in the United States and Canada.

We were fortunate to be able to have the help of many German Saints in the preparation of this book. Sister Clara Hoxie, who edited a German hymnal in 1916, gave us some valuable help. Elder Paul Radelow of Philadelphia did more than his share by making translations of somewhere around thirty hymns. These were particularly Latter Day Saint hymns, and we were most happy to have them available to the German Saints. Brother Kurt Radelow translated one of the hymns. Sister Elli Rosenthal gave us a great deal of valuable help in the editorial work on the book.

Brother Oakman is in the European Mission at the present time and will be arranging for the publishing of the book.

We are very happy to be able to make this announcement and feel that the work of the church in Germany will be greatly enhanced by the addition of this manual of worship.

Sincerely,

FRANKLYN S. WEDDLE

This Is Life Eternal

The Funeral Sermon of Helen Weeks Given February 9, 1953

Let not your heart be troubled: ye believe in God, believe also in me. In my Father's house are many mansions: if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also. And whither I go ye know, and the way ye know.

And I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you for ever; even the Spirit of truth; whom the world cannot receive, because it seeth him not, neither knoweth him: but ye know him; for he dwelleth with you, and shall be in you. I will not leave you comfortless: I will come to you. Yet a little while, and the world seeth me no more; but ye see me: because I live, ye shall live also.

These things have I spoken unto you, being yet present with you. But the Comforter, which is the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in my name, he shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you. Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you: not as the world giveth, give I unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid.—John 14: 1-4, 16-19, 25-27.

Then said Martha unto Jesus, Lord, if thou hadst been here, my brother had not died. But I know, that even now, whatsoever thou wilt ask of God, God will give it thee. Jesus saith unto her, Thy brother shall rise again. Martha saith unto him, I know that he shall rise again in the resurrection at the last day. Jesus said unto her, I am the resurrection, and the life: he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live: and whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die.—John 11: 21-26.

WE MEET TODAY to express our respect and love for a deeply beloved sister and relative, a good friend, a worthy citizen, and a good steward.

Sister Helen Weeks has been taken from us suddenly in one of those tragic happenings for which we have no adequate explanation. She was loved by her family and her many friends, as well as by her adopted family at Resthaven which she had served with high professional skill and rich human love and sympathy for six years.

In her work as a registered nurse she made countless friends by her ministry of nursing care, and, perhaps, never more appreciative and admiring ones than those made in recent years in Independence. She was busy and she was ministering. There was great need for that ministry, but two days ago her earthly work ended. It is difficult for us this afternoon to realize that she walks no more with us.

One longs in vain today for some magic formula which would explain this tragedy and soften the harsh reality of this bereavement. One's mind reaches out and asks questions which no man is capable of answering except perhaps in a most fragmentary manner; finally we are forced to admit that there are no complete explanations for some of these experiences through which we must pass. In the face of such experiences, we must, like Job of old, fall back on our faith in God and in his love and eternal purposes. Job had been bereaved of his family, despised by his friends, and was sick and afflicted; nevertheless, he knew that he had been a good man and knew that his afflictions were not punishment from God, so he stood up and declared, "Though he slay me, yet will I trust him."

It is in this spirit of trust and faith that we must meditate this afternoon. There are so many rich and fine things in the life of Helen Weeks that there should be in our hearts some feeling of gratitude because she was with us for a little while, and during that time made such contributions to the lives of so many of us. Surely, in this sacred place, under the ministry of worship, sacred music, and inspired Scripture, we may be lifted for a moment above our bereavement and catch a glimpse of the triumph of such a life.

IT IS NOT EASY to reconcile ourselves to her sudden passing, for we are bound to the earth by a thousand interests, by friends, loved ones, good memories, responsibilities, unfinished tasks, and concern over a multitude of things. Under the impact of our busy lives and the things we see and feel and hear, we tend to limit our view to the little space between the experiences we call birth and death. We need to remember that after all these are narrow boundaries. Even when we are permitted to live to ripe old age, these earthly experiences of coming into the world and leaving it are very close together.

God is not limited in viewpoint by the experiences we know as birth and death. He sees clearly (although it may be difficult for us to do so) that these are only incidents in the lives of his immortal children, and his love and concern for us are not affected by these experiences. Paul felt that when he wrote to the Roman saints, "I am persuaded that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord."—Romans 8: 38.

Paul could not imagine anything in heaven or on earth, not even death itself, separating us from the love of God. Let us remember that as we review our association with this good woman to whom we pay tribute today. We need to see that a good life is always a revelation of God at work among us; it is a living Scripture and a shining testimony that spiritual values are eternal and shall outlast the very earth on which we stand.

This little span of earthly life is significant, we believe, not alone for its years, be they few or many, but because of what good men at their best have always felt that this life prophesied. True, we come into this world so ill-equipped to take care of ourselves that our sojourn would be only a few hours were it not for the love and care of others, but we come with wonderful potentialities for mental and spiritual development. We speak often about the miracle of birth, but physical growth and mental and spiritual development are miracles also; and life, in those rare moments when we are able to view it objectively, is forever wonderful and amazing.

EVERY SOUL is played upon by forces and factors so varied and numerous that we can comprehend only dimly how the helpless baby grows into a self-directing person. Forces both within and outside of him mold and shape him, and in a little while the baby is a young person learning, working, adjusting, exercising will power, achieving independence of thought and action, making decisions, and forming a pattern of life for good or ill.

It is strange and mysterious that, having entered the arena of earthly life without volition on our part (and we shall leave also without willing it), we find in the years between our coming in and going out that there is so much of self-direction, of choosing, of deciding, of planning and achieving. Unique though each life is, something of a common pattern runs through all our lives. There are successes and failures in things we consider important. There are tears and troubles, fun and laughter, friends and fellowship, moments of discouragement and exaltation and rare spiritual insight. There are work and worship, ideals and striving that make us different from the rest of God's creatures.

WE ASK GREAT THINGS of life during the few years we spend here. We want health and strength and the satisfying of our physical needs. Perhaps we crave and work for wealth, for prestige, for power. We search for work which we can enjoy—work that fills our deep need for creative expression. We want to love and be loved, to have good friends and to be well thought of by those whom we respect and love. And through all this living runs the golden thread of character—character which is all important, and which we believe is the purpose of our sojourn here. We could, perhaps, say that anyone who has his physical needs met adequately and enjoys the friendship and fellowship has a life good enough to be an end in itself, but life is more than just these good experiences.

Life is believing and hoping. Life is a seeking and a constant finding. It is an adventure of faith. It is growing in spiritual insight so that we are no longer bounded completely by the things that are seen. Life is growing into the experience of the infinite love of God. In the words of Paul, "We look not at the things which are seen but at the things which are not seen, for the things which are seen are temporal but the things which are not seen are eternal."

Life at its best goes far beyond the physical and social, and it is found giving itself and losing itself in great causes with high idealism and self-sacrificing devotion; and through those causes one sees the purposes of God being worked out among men. We believe Jesus had something of this higher level in life in mind when, in the course of his prayer for his disciples, he declared, "This is life eternal that they might know thee, the only true God and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent." Today we are talking about life eternal, the life that knows God.

Jesus knew the sad side of death. Because he was human as we are, he stood by the grave of Lazarus with the sorrowing sisters and wept, and by so doing made himself kin forever to every one of us. But, in the midst of grief he was able to comfort Martha by saying, "I am the resurrection, and the life: he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live." Men had believed for many centuries that the grave was not the end of life, but Jesus went on to say something even more important, for he said, "And whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die." I believe that is exactly what he meant—that those who live in him and believe in him shall never die. Was he not saying that life beyond the grave is not an artificial addition to this present existence? Does he not make you feel that life beyond the grave is but a natural continuation of life here? He is saying to us that if ever a man is immortal, he is immortal now. "This is life eternal, to know the only true God." This knowledge is not reserved for some distant future in some other world; it is available to us here and now. To read the New Testament is to feel that eternal life is not an additional possession bestowed at death but a present endowment.

WE ARE IMMORTAL NOW, and to believe that makes a tremendous difference to character, for it clothes with eternal significance the daily round of activities, and it sets our feet on an endless road of spiritual development with untold possibilities. Earthly life becomes a journey in which death is an incident and not the final act of our earthly drama. It is impossible for us to conceive a limit to the potentiality of spiritual life. A traveler in Switzerland tells us that when uncertain of his way, he asked a small lad by the roadside where Kandersteg was located and received a most significant answer, for the boy pointed to the road leading away into the distance and said, "I do not know where Kandersteg is, but there is the road to it." That is symbolic of the spiritual experience of man. He cannot know his ultimate goal, or all that is potential in him. He only knows that the ideal character is always ahead. The road to perfection and Christlikeness is always open, and he believes that this road goes even beyond the grave. He believes he is called to the achievement of immortal life, and in that calling death can never be the victor.

THE SOUL-STIRRING message which Jesus brought then was not that we shall come to life again after dying. It was that we never really die: "He that liveth and believeth in me shall never die." He brought that glorious Easter message, "Because I live, ye shall live also." He makes us feel that death is but an opening to a richer, fuller life.

The eloquent Henry Ward Beecher felt this. He strikes a responsive chord in each of us in one of his great sermons: "When I fall and am buried in Greenwood, let no man dare to stand over the turf and say, 'Here lies Henry Ward Beecher,' for God knows that I will not lie there. Look up! If you love me, and if you feel that I have helped you on your way home, stand and look up; for I will not hear anybody who does not speak with his face toward heaven." If for a moment the veil could be lifted, and we could see beyond the death of the physical body, we would understand what Paul meant when he said, "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him" (I Corinthians 2: 9).

THAT HELEN WEEKS loved Him, none who knew her would ever deny. She had sought and found those answers which gave her life poise and stability. In her were those immortal qualities of faith, love, and goodness; and those qualities were always adding the plus elements to everything she did. Those qualities made her life significant. In her work at Resthaven no task was too lowly if it served the home and its people.

It seems to me that the life of Helen Weeks makes meaningful what I have been attempting to say about life eternal. It would be difficult to praise too highly her devotion, her sympathy, her conscientious work. Her task was not an easy one. There were always problems to face. We have seen her when she was discouraged and tired, but always shining through any discouragement was her fine sense of stewardship and a devotion to service that kept her at her task when she might have preferred to have worked with less honor and responsibility. There was no perfunctory doing of her job; always she was going the second mile, concerned not alone that her charges should have the best possible physical care, but that there should be peace of mind and such happiness and contentment as she might by extra effort be able to give.

When one thinks of the work she has done throughout her life, he thinks of stewardship, for her work was always a stewardship to her, and she felt a tremendous responsibility to give her best to every task. She had learned the great truth that all people are important. She took their concerns and problems upon herself and was forever trying to bring comfort and peace to those in her care.

As a church we owe a great debt of gratitude, not alone for what she did personally for the aged and the ill, but also for what she inspired others to do. We of the church and our community have been fortunate indeed that we had Helen Weeks in the formative years of our church home for the aged to set high standards of performance which we must at all costs maintain.

Even at the last, when she was suffering from the injuries received and from which she was soon to succumb, she was thinking about Resthaven and her adopted family there, and inquired about her charges. Assurance had to be given her that everything was being cared for. One is touched and humbled by this evidence of devoted stewardship in the midst of intense suffering in the closing hours of her earthly sojourn. Surely, with such a life of service as she gave, and with such a warm-hearted and kindly personality as she had, shall we not feel confident that everything is well with her?

All of us have thought of the need of her continued ministry. We shall miss her deeply, and we have wondered why she should be taken from us when normally so many good years of rich living might be before her.

LET US BE REMINDED today and accept the fact that the length of our days and those of our friends and loved ones are in higher hands than ours. Let us rather be found grateful for her life, and be reassured that her good life goes on, not measured in days and years perhaps as we measure life, but it still goes on in the loving care of her Heavenly Father.

May we lift up our hearts in gratitude for God's loving kindness, and feel his presence near us so that no untoward losses of loved ones, no dark storms of life shall ever shake the faith which we have won along the way.

There is a message for us in the words of John Greenleaf Whittier:

Yet Love will dream, and Faith will trust (Since he who knows our need is just)
That somehow, somewhere, meet we must.
Alas for him who never sees
The stars shine through his cypress trees!
Who, hopeless, lays his dead away,
Nor looks to see the breaking day
Across the mournful marbles play!
Who hath not learned, in hours of faith,
The truth to flesh and sense unknown,
That life is ever Lord of Death,
And Love can never lose its own.

Shall we not bear witness that "life is ever Lord of Death, And Love can never lose its own"?

In the light of our belief in immortality and in remembering this life to which we pay tribute today, we ought to reaffirm our conviction that God loves us everyone; that every life is important to him; and that he shall not rest nor be content

The House of the Lord

By Harry Black

Pastor of Kirtland Temple

The Temple

IN THE SMALL, quiet village of Kirtland, surrounded by tall trees, stands the House of the Lord, known among men as Kirtland Temple.

This large rectangular-shaped building, constructed of stone and wood, represents the restoration of Christ's church to mankind; and its sturdy walls proclaim the faith and courage of those who builded it.

Its story did not commence when the builders laid the foundation stones in 1833; it began on the sixth day of April in the year 1830 at Fayette, New York, the day the church of Jesus Christ was restored to the earth.

Six young men were present at this momentous occasion, and five of them listened intently to their youthful leader, Joseph Smith, as he presented those things which were given him of God.

Only a few years before, this same young man had stood alone when he had announced the visitation of an angel and the restoration of Christ's true church to the earth. Friends deserted him, and religious fanatics persecuted him, but like Paul of old he would not deny the heavenly vision. Now on April 6, 1830, he was able to realize the truthfulness of the angel messenger and see the literal fulfillment of biblical prophecy.

THE CHURCH GREW RAPIDLY and missionaries were sent out. Four of these—Parley P. Pratt, Oliver Cowdery, Peter Whitmer, Jr., and Ziba Peterson—journeyed westward and soon arrived at Kirtland. One of them desired to present the new-found gospel to Sidney Rigdon, a minister he knew who lived five miles northeast of Kirtland at Mentor. Because of his thoughtfulness this great orator was added to the ranks of Christ, and a branch was organized at Kirtland.

After his conversion Sidney Rigdon, accompanied by Edward Partridge, a member of his former congregation, presented himself to Joseph Smith at Fayette, offering his services; they were accepted. A short period elapsed and Edward Partridge became converted to the faith. Thus three men came together who were to play outstanding parts in furthering the work of God upon earth.

IN THE YEAR 1831 these three brethren arrived at Kirtland with fifty-two other families. Two years later, after receiving divine instructions, they began to build the House of the Lord.

Trees were brought from neighboring forests, stone from near-by quarries, and the people worked with a will. So the Temple grew, and with its growing came a strong bond of fellowship and faith among the people.

According to divine command the foundations were laid to provide for an auditorium 65 feet by 55 feet. A ten-foot vestibule with two doors provided entrance at the east end. Also in accordance with instructions, the house was given two main auditoriums, one above the other; further space was added by including a third floor of five small rooms.

The lower auditorium, which is entered from the vestibule, is decorated with beautifully carved columns and arches. These columns, generally called Ionic fluted columns, become more interesting when it is learned that a yoke of oxen pulled the steel planes over the wood to cut the pattern.

The Window Beautiful—second floor

While the columns are interesting, the arches are inspiring; both Ionic and Grecian decorative arts are present. Delicately carved, the patterns included the Grecian egg and dart design; this alone portrays unique craftsmanship.

ADDING TO THE SIMPLE BEAUTY are the elevated pulpits situated in the east and west ends of the auditorium. These represent the two priesthoods found in Christ's church, and the initials embossed in gold on each section designate some of the ministerial officers.

The letters and explanations are as follows:

- P.D.A. Presiding Deacon Aaronic
- P.T.A. Presiding Teacher Aaronic
- P.A.P. Presiding Aaronic Priest
- B.P.A. Bishop Presiding over Aaronic
- P.E.M. Presiding Elder Melchisedec
- M.H.P. Melchisedec High Priesthood
- P.M.H. Presiding Melchisedec High Priesthood (Quorum of Twelve or Stake High Council)

Decorative molding above door

M.P.C. Melchisedec Presiding Counsel (Presidency of Church or Presidency of Stake)

Behind each set of pulpits, windows of colonial style give light. The panes of glass turn this light into myriads of shadows; this is caused by hand blowing, a process used in the early days of glass making.

The north and south walls have Gothic windows with frames carrying the fluted pattern similar to the columns. This gives a sense of unity and prevents optical conflict.

Seating arrangements of unusual order furnish the auditoriums—one center, two side, and four corner sections. The center and sides are constructed to allow worship toward either end of the building; that is, within each pew there is a movable bench which allows the congregation to face east or west.

In the corners the seats are arranged to face the side of the pulpits nearest them.

WITH THIS SEATING PLAN a method of "sectional division" was used, permitting the dividing of the auditorium into two or four sections by curtains.

These curtains were draped from the ceiling by ropes which passed through small holes. They could be lowered or raised as desired. Narrow spaces between the pews allowed them to reach the floor.

Also on the ceiling are four large circular moldings centered with hooks which formed the lighting positions. From these hung candelabra.

Well between upper and lower auditoriums

With such an atmosphere of beauty built and carved within, it is easy to comprehend why this lower auditorium was reserved for prayers and worship.

Climbing the winding staircase in the vestibule brings one to the upper auditorium, known as the School of the Apostles. Plainly speaking it was used for priesthood education.

The planning is much the same as that on the lower floor, with slight variations. Pulpits not as decorative and less elevated are situated at each end, with colonial windows providing an illuminated backing. Gothic windows also duplicate the lower auditorium arrangement.

On the ceiling wooden rollers herald the past, for it was on these rollers that curtains similar to the ones downstairs were wrapped.

By placing a handle or crank on the center shaft of small wooden wheels hidden within the columns, one could raise and lower the curtains easily. Skilled craftsmen and efficient planning combined to produce this system.

At the east end of the second floor the large colonial window is of unique workmanship; it is often called the "window beautiful," its name being derived from the beautiful carvings ornamenting the frame. Rumor has it that the sum of $10,000 was offered for it by a prominent gentleman of pecuniary success. However, there is no proof of this.

Leaving the upper auditorium and continuing up the winding staircase, one will note the removable rails protecting the windows. These rails permit easy access for cleaning purposes.

Carved columns

ARRIVING AT THE THIRD FLOOR the spectator cannot help noticing the old-fashioned oil chandelier which hangs at the head of the stairs. Its pipelike arms and cylindrical reservoir add an essence of the early nineteenth century to the present day. Though not original, the lamp shows the type of lighting used in bygone days.

Entering the classrooms on the third floor gives one the feeling of stepping into a nineteenth century school; there are roughly laid floor boards, small windows, and low ceilings. It was here that the priesthood attended specific instructional classes; Hebrew was one of the subjects studied.

A humorous story is told of the small passageways which run north and south of the rooms. If a man were late for his class he was given the unpleasant task of stumbling to his room in the small dark passage, thus preventing the other pupils and instructors in adjoining rooms from being disturbed.

Passing from the third floor and climbing the narrow stairs leading to the bell tower brings a deep admiration for the early builders. Using only crude tools and manual strength,

If Christ Should Visit Mexico

By Wayne Simmons

GUIDEBOOK IN HAND, the American tourist has made a new discovery—not Europe with its taint of Communism and threat of the Iron Curtain, but Mexico, land of the siesta and warm winters. Engineers have smoothed the path under his feet, unwinding thousands of kilometers of macadamized highways for him to travel. He skims by the hundreds of sunbaked little Indian villages, content with a fleeting glimpse, bound for the capital, Mexico City, and its transplanted American luxuries; or Acapulco, the Mexican Riviera. The American tourist is important to Mexico, and he knows it. His dollars that buy him so many pesos are vital to Mexico's trade with the United States, and he is attracted into the market stalls to spend them on the quaint bits of pottery that he will use for ash-trays, the serapes and rebozos that he will hang as trophies on his walls.

If the tourist's eye or nose is offended at times by the sight or smell of squalor and dirt, he is philosophical about it, remembering that it will be the subject of his remarks to homefolks when he gets back, to reveal the shocking details of how dirty the natives can be. It's the price he pays to escape from democracy where he is a middling sort of fellow to enter a world where he can be treated like visiting royalty for a few days—and afford it! It's a pity, he feels, that they don't speak English. He could straighten out some of them by a mere explanation of how much better the sanitation, the plumbing, the lighting, and the city-planning are back home. Oh, well, they wouldn't know what to do with anything better anyway.

MEMBERS of the Restored Church have joined the influx of American tourists to Mexico. But how different they are from their fellow-vacationists! No night clubs for them, nor dancing "on the sands of Acapulco"—they are a "peculiar" people. They have come down to see the ruins. They will be particularly eager to interrupt their bilingual guides who are explaining how the ancient Mexicans came across the Bering Strait from Mongolia, for they want them to know how all the ancient wonders really came about—that the ancient Mexicans were Jaredites and Nephites and Lamanites led here from Bible lands. The Reorganized Latter Day Saint tourist visits Tula, Teotihuacan, Cuicuilco, Xochicalco, Cholula, in and around Mexico City—all ruins of once important cities and works of ancient peoples. Or he may go to the far-flung corners of the land, by plane to Yucatan to see Chichen Itza, or to Uxmal, or to Palenque—more ruins. What a thrill to pick up pieces of pottery and reflect that perhaps some Nephite made them—to stand on a stone wall and wonder if Samuel the Lamanite once stood on the same spot! The Reorganized Latter Day Saint tourist takes pictures of pyramids and temples and altars, of friezes and artifacts, for his trophies. He will return home to tell Reorganized Latter Day Saint audiences of these wonders and to show them visual, thrilling evidences of the once mighty culture of the people of ancient Mexico. Why does he do this? He is proving the authenticity of the Book of Mormon and vindicating the honor of Joseph Smith, its translator. Yet, visits to ruins have not yet built the kingdom of God.

IF CHRIST SHOULD VISIT MEXICO . . . where would he go? What would he do? Would he set out to climb the highest pyramid or to explore the most ancient churches? Can we picture him sitting on top of the Pyramid of the Sun and weeping over the widespread empty streetways and remnants of crumbling masonry below? Not for long, we suspect, would he sit down to review the past. We can see him "girding up his loins," hitching his tunic firmly about him, and getting down to the business of reclaiming the descendants of the people who once had the kingdom within their grasp. Christ, the tourist to Mexico, might be far more interested in its people than in its winter sunshine or its ruins.

If Christ should visit Mexico, he would find the social conditions today hauntingly familiar. He, like the modern Mexican Indian, too, had grown up in a land where inequity and illiteracy had enslaved a chosen people. He came from a little village, not the luxurious capital. He knew what it was to work long hours to provide no more than a wretched meal for himself and the family he labored to support. He knew about dirt and disease and sickness and the superstition that grew up in the stead of medical skill. And the intolerance of the Castilian, or European-derived Mexican, for the Indian Mexican in his poverty would be part of a familiar pattern for him. He had seen the wealthy, educated Jews—the Pharisees, and their contempt for Galileans like himself. Perhaps he knew something of the Romans who came as conquerors and—who knows?—as tourists, to condescend toward Pharisee and Galilean alike.

REORGANIZED LATTER DAY SAINTS need to see Mexico and its people. Its population is predominantly Indian, with some twenty million people either pure or mixed-blood descendants of those who lived in the land of Nephi or Zarahemla. The Book of Mormon holds eternal promise for the New Jerusalem in America built by the remnant peoples of the house of Israel and the Gentiles. Let the Reorganized Latter Day Saint tourist see the ruins and take his vacation from winter in the warm sunshine, but let him not overlook the warm, living reminders of Christ's program in America, the real indigenous Mexican of today—intelligent, friendly, full of promise. Let the church tourist reflect that someone with the fullness of the gospel must yet assist these people in building Zion. Surely this can't be done without starting out basically, learning the language, developing skills to supply their needs, and sharing the gospel in all its aspects, spiritual, and economic—any less fundamental approach to converting them to the gospel of the kingdom would be un-Christlike! Let the prospective Reorganized Latter Day Saint visitor to Mexico ponder what it is that these humble people have to contribute to the kingdom of God that he as a Gentile-derived church member cannot of himself contribute. Then he has a good state of expectancy with which to enter Mexico.

A well-prepared trip to Mexico may include the gathering of information about the great program for raising literary standards there—public school education for all. The knowledge that even the little bootblacks, who work all day in the parks and markets, go to night school to learn to read and write may deepen your appreciation for Mexico and its struggles to grow. Read about the governmental redistribution of land and visit the areas where these projects are in progress. There are lessons here for a Zion enterprise that the church will profit by in your observing. If you could arrange to stay a few days in some modest Mexican family home instead of some American-type hotel, you'd learn much more about the people, and you'd love them more. Plan your trip to Mexico, but plan it as though you were the personal representative of Christ. You'll know what to plan to see if you put yourself in his place and ask, "What should I see and do in Mexico if I were the Christ? If Christ should visit Mexico?"

Question Time

Question:

Who are the sons of Levi, and what shall be their inheritance?
Alberta E. C.

Answer:

In Old Testament times the sons of Levi were members of the priestly tribe who had no inheritance of land. They lived from the tithes and offerings of the other tribes whom they served in spiritual things. Their priesthood in due time became the priesthood of Aaron, also a descendant of Levi. That literal descendants of Aaron may serve again in the church is indicated in Doctrine and Covenants 104: 32b. It would seem, however, that the term "sons of Levi" has at times been used to indicate in a general way the Aaronic priesthood of the church of the Restoration. It was during the bestowal of this priesthood upon Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery in May, 1829, that the angel, John the Baptist, said, "And this shall never be taken from the earth until the sons of Levi do offer again an offering unto the Lord in righteousness."

In all probability, Levi will have inheritance both in Palestine and in America; for while the New Jerusalem will be built principally by descendants of Joseph "as many of the house of Israel as shall come" are to assist Joseph in building a New Jerusalem in "this land"—America (see Ether 6: 1, 2 and III Nephi 10: 1-8).

Wonderful promises are in process of fulfillment concerning the happy relationships to come between the Israel of Judah and associates in Palestine and the Israel of America, and their associates, through the sons of Levi. "And he shall purify the sons of Levi . . . that they may offer unto the Lord an offering in righteousness. Then shall the offering of Judah and Jerusalem be pleasant unto the Lord."—Malachi 3: 3, 4. "The envy also of Ephraim shall depart, and the adversaries of Judah shall be cut off; Ephraim shall not envy Judah, and Judah shall not vex Ephraim."—Isaiah 11: 13. But these latter quotations were quoted with their contexts by the angel in September, 1823, as events of promise soon to come. Marvels have happened since then. Greater things are before us.

Question:

Does Isaiah 7: 14 refer to the birth of Christ or was it a local incident, a sign to Ahaz that the land he "abhorrest shall be forsaken of both her kings"?

What is meant by the "fly" and "bee" of verse 18?
Iowa F. W.

Answer:

It was a common practice for the prophets to couple up remote events with local and current matters inasmuch that it is not always easy to distinguish them. In Isaiah 9: 6 the prophecy of Christ's birth is associated with wars, the falling of nations, and the restoration of Israel, all relating to the latter days. Nevertheless there is a close relation between them. There are many similar prophecies.

Isaiah 6 and 7 deal with the wasting of the land of Israel, the captivity in Babylon, and the return of a tenth to rebuild the land; of threatened wars with Syria and Egypt. In the midst of these matters is interjected the prophecy of the coming Messiah, a sign to Israel: "A virgin shall conceive, and shall bear a son, and shall call his name Immanuel." These events are widely separated yet have a close relation. This prophecy is addressed to "O house of David," but designed for all people. It is the promise of a Redeemer who will redeem his people from their enemies.

The "fly" and the "bee," referring to stinging insects, are evidently figurative words pointing to the armies of Egypt and Syria whose invasion of Judah and Israel would cause much distress.

Question:

Explain why the twelve disciples in Book of Mormon times were not called apostles as the twelve were that were chosen by Jesus at the beginning of his ministry in Palestine.

Ontario

G. A. E.

Answer:

The work done by Jesus Christ in Palestine and the church resulting therefrom were universal in nature. The Scriptures give a plain picture of the basic structure of that church and the fact that there were to be twelve apostles in it and only twelve at any one time. An example of this is found following the death of Judas. The eleven remaining presented the names of two good men to God and prayed, "Thou, Lord, which knowest the hearts of all men, shew whether of these two thou hast chosen, that he may take part of this ministry and apostleship, from which Judas by transgression fell" (Acts 1: 24, 25). It seems clear that the apostles knew there must be twelve, for they quickly set about to seek the will of God in choosing the successor to Judas. They also understood that there should not be more than twelve, for though they were considering two good men they asked the Lord to designate only one.

While these twelve apostles were still active in Jerusalem, Jesus ministered to the Book of Mormon people. The Book of Mormon (III Nephi, chapters 4 and 5; IV Nephi, chapter 1) indicates that it was in A. D. 34 that he began his ministry here. Thus, when Jesus chose the twelve disciples named in the Book of Mormon, the twelve apostles in Jerusalem were still functioning. Inasmuch as the work and church of Jesus Christ are universal, knowing no boundary of sea or land, had Jesus called the twelve disciples "apostles" his Church would have had not twelve but rather twenty-four apostles.

The twelve disciples were given authority over the work in Joseph's land and in many ways entered into apostolic function. However, the Scripture makes it plain that the twelve apostles in Jerusalem held authority over the twelve disciples (I Nephi 3: 114-116, page 31).

Thus, the twelve disciples in Book of Mormon times were not called apostles as were those in Palestine because in fact they were not apostles; rather they were twelve disciples called and set apart to special function in leading the Book of Mormon peoples of their day.

The Life of Hubert Case

Part X

Raising Money for Oklahoma City

In 1907 and 1908 Hubert held meetings in various places such as the DeLong schoolhouse, Sanders near Calumet, Ripley, Stillwater, Holdenville, Stroud, and Alva. Wherever he went, he found good attendance, and there were many baptisms. It was during these two years that the sisters of the Oklahoma City Branch asked him to help them in their effort to raise money to build a church. They had a small tent sixteen by twenty feet at the state fair and they served meals. When they had cleared $150 they thought they had done wonders.

The next year they had a tent forty feet long and cleared $450. Hubert said to the group of women sponsoring the work, "If you are going to work yourselves nearly to death to raise a little money, why don't you rent the biggest dining hall on the fairgrounds?" They rented the biggest hall on the fairgrounds for $350. It seemed a lot of money, but they cleared $3,058 above all expenses that year, and the next year in ten days they cleared an even $3,000. How the women enjoyed each other, working together that way! It was a regular reunion; besides getting to meet people, they were happy to be making money to build their new church.

That was a great diversion from his routine of missionary work, but it was really the foundation of the work in Oklahoma City. The women ran that booth at the fair for sixteen years. There were some bad years, but they seldom made less than $1,000, and it did not take them long to get a very good sum. They sold the little white church and bought their present stone church building, paying cash for it. They were happy in the small church, but their congregation grew and they had to have a larger building. They sold it to the colored people just a little while before oil wells were all over that city. The colored people got an oil well that made them a lot of money.

The spirit of the whole situation in bringing our work to a place like Oklahoma City was a wonderful experience. It was much like the friendly group we had on the homestead. There is nothing more interesting than a group of Saints who will work together; God always blesses them in their work.

Beginning of Ministry to the Indians

After moving to Kingfisher, Hubert chanced to become acquainted with an educated Indian whose name among white men was Richard Davis. He was of the Cheyenne tribe, and his brother, Bull Bear, was chief. The Indians had their village at the east end of the reservation about one and a half miles west of Kingfisher.

Hubert and Richard went out about five miles to the chief's home and talked with him for three hours. When Hubert got through that conversation, he had won that man's friendship and had been asked to come and preach in the village. "I will call a large gathering," promised Chief Bull Bear. Hubert had approximately 1,000 Indians in that meeting, and when he preached to them, it seemed to him that the Spirit of the Lord filled him. He told them he had talked with some of their medicine men who were their spiritual advisors and learned some of their traditions. Hubert said, "I can take every one of your traditions like so many threads. They all run back to the days when you had prophets and seers among you, and they wrote a great book, and that book tells the story of your people being of the house of Israel, and your people came out from Jerusalem six hundred years before Christ and crossed the Pacific Ocean. They were led by four brothers. They settled on the west coast of South America. There was jealousy between the younger son, Nephi, who was a prophet of God, and his older brother Laman. They had repeated wars as they migrated north from South America across the isthmus and up into this country, but for a thousand years they had prophets and seers. This great book I shall talk to you about was written by your ancestors, and it corresponds with the Bible and the history of the Bible. It teaches the same God, the same Christ, the same Holy Spirit, and the same gospel laws as are in the New Testament."

This made such an impression on the people that he had an invitation to preach to them every time he came to Kingfisher for some ten years.

Indian Baptisms

The first Indian he baptized lived near Kingfisher. He preached to those Indians when he was at home for a couple of years before he converted one. When

By Alice Montague Case

Hubert baptized this first man, he was healed of typhoid fever and sugar diabetes. It made a big impression on those Indians, and when they saw him confirmed by the laying on of hands, that made another impression on them. Many of them had had their babies blessed.

It was the spiritual things of the gospel that converted the Indians—seeing miracles, having their children blessed, and receiving the laying on of hands for the reception of the Spirit. Before this they had turned from the Baptist church and were just members of the old Indian religion. When Hubert started the work among them, he found they had great faith; the spiritual gifts and ordinances, the story of the Book of Mormon, and the fact that Hubert told them they were Israelites brought them in.

He preached to them many times, baptizing one hundred and fifty of them and organizing a branch; they built a little church to worship in. He also helped take the gospel to the Otoes, baptizing one hundred and sixty and organizing a branch at Red Rock, Oklahoma. Thirty-two members of the Kaw tribe also joined the church.

Preaching at Tribal Gatherings

During Hubert's work near Kingfisher and Calumet, he heard of a big Indian meeting at Clinton, Oklahoma. Brother Ed Dillon went with him to that meeting. Indeed it was a great meeting. Four tribes were present and as he spoke four interpreters talked to their tribes: the Kiowas, Comanches, Cheyennes, and Arapahoes. At this meeting he baptized two fine leaders who had attended his meetings at Kingfisher—Ernest Watson and John Turtle. Both were Cheyennes. They and some twenty other Indians started a fine group at the little town of Bessie, Oklahoma.

Brother J. F. Curtis had told us a vision he had seen sometime previous to that meeting at the Clinton Reunion, wherein he saw the big camp of Indians as a beautiful grove of the finest trees he had ever seen. He was made to know it was that tribe of Indians, near the town of Clinton, where they were then in camp.

Another meeting was held northwest of Calumet where thirteen tribes were represented by their leaders in the greatest council meeting we had ever seen. The Indians asked Hubert to offer a prayer and then to preach, which he did. The Spirit was present in great measure. The Indians responded unanimously by their usual grunt of approval. After the meeting was dismissed, they shook hands with him and invited him to come to their respective tribes and preach to their people. Brother A. H. Chrestensen was with Hubert at Christmas time in some large gatherings, also at Watonga Indian Fair, where five thousand Indians were camped. They had the district tent on the fairgrounds and preached to them, making many friends.

During the time Hubert was working with the Cheyennes, Otoes, and the Kaws, he had a real taste of the endowment of the Spirit. The Lord sent a heavenly vision which lasted some forty minutes. He was in the Spirit and enabled to see and understand the gospel as never before in his life.

His work with the Indians was mostly from house to house, teaching and explaining the story of Jesus and telling of His visit to America as related in the Book of Mormon. He also administered to their sick and blessed their children.

The Indian agent, Mr. George Hoyo, and his good wife told him the Indians loved him and that he had done more with them than any man who had ever worked with them. Mr. Hoyo urged him to work with the Poncas and Tonkawas, for he said, "Your Indians are 'way ahead of the others, and I am a competent judge of such, for I am impartial."

Among those he first baptized were the greatest leaders and best-loved men of the tribe. All were educated and spoke English fluently. They were Leonard Tyler, Philip Cook, Reuben Taylor, Ernest Watson, Charles Wickes, and John Bull. Also there was an interpreter, Julia Prentice, who was a great help in many meetings. She also was baptized.

Calumet

Different members of the priesthood had preached near Calumet, which was the home of Brother Dick Sanders. They always reported no interest there. Hubert had tried to preach there and had the same result; so he told Brother Sanders not to ask him to come back until he felt sure the neighborhood was ready. In the summer of 1911, Brother Sanders sent him word to come. He was then the superintendent of a union Sabbath school and had a great interest. He said the whole community was ripe for the gospel. Hubert went and began conducting meetings. They lasted seven weeks. Near the close, he sent word for me to come down and bring our youngest daughter, who was just then of baptismal age. She was one of the sixty he baptized at that meeting. A branch was organized there shortly after the meetings closed, and it was not long until a church was built.

Hubert had wondered why he could not build a branch before. The Piedmont meeting showed him how it was done. He had heard Brother Joseph Smith tell the ministry, "Stay with an interest until you build a branch or preach yourself out of a crowd." So he followed that advice and had many baptisms as a result. By following this method he organized a number of good groups that afterward became branches.

Eagle City

Soon after the Calumet meeting, Brother Alva Chrestensen and Hubert conducted a series at Eagle City where a number were baptized, including Lester and Lemuel Dyke, their wives, and their father and mother. Lester is still living at Eagle City and is pastor there; for many years he served as district president. Lemuel is pastor at Seiling, and until recently was bishop's agent for the western district.

A very interesting meeting was held at Reeding, Oklahoma, soon after the one at Eagle City, which resulted in eleven baptisms. Later on others also were baptized. A Sabbath school was organized here which continued for years.

Others were added to the Eagle City group as a result of a reunion held there. The children and I went, since we could reach it by train. It was a very spiritual reunion and marked the beginning of Z. Z. Renfroe's ministry.

Alva

Another outstanding reunion was the one at Alva in Woodward County. This also was a very spiritual occasion. Brother J. F. Curtis was with us there, and he and Hubert would preach in the street in the afternoon. When Brother Curtis had finished his speech one afternoon a man said, "Say, young man, tell us about old Joe Smith stealing sheep." Hubert quickly asked Brother Curtis to let him answer that. Brother Curtis said, "Go ahead." As he arose and faced the man, Hubert said, "This is a funny story. In 1827 Alexander Campbell organized what is known as the Christian Church. In 1830 Joseph Smith organized the Latter Day Saint Church. The ministers of these two churches met in public debate for the first time in 1831, which resulted in the Latter Day Saints getting four of the Christian elders and thirty-two of their members. Members in those days, as now, were referred to as 'sheep.' Men like this good looking gentleman actually believe Joseph Smith stole sheep. That is the way this story started." The crowd cheered, and the heckler walked away.

After attending reunion the girls and I had to return to Kingfisher as it was nearing school time. Brother Curtis also was returning home to Independence, so we left on Monday following the reunion. Hubert remained to hold a meeting in the city hall, in company with Brother A. M. Chase. Before the meetings began, Charles and Alice Chase (now Alice Burgess) who were students at that school invited the teachers in the State Normal, Dr. Herod and Dr. Stephens, to attend the lecture on the Book of Mormon which was slated for that Monday night. They never told him they had invited those men, but when he saw them come in and be seated near the front, he noticed them and recognized that they were men of education and ability. When he finished the lecture on the Book of Mormon they came upon the platform, greeted him, and one of them said, "Why do not all the churches accept that book? Science proves it true." One of them asked if there was a condensed form of the book since he was a very busy man with little time for outside reading. Hubert was sorry to have to tell him that we had no such brief story.

The next morning in assembly at school, Dr. Stephens told the students, "If you ever have an opportunity to hear a lecture on the Book of Mormon, as the true history of the ancestors of the American Indian and their coming to this country, go and hear it, for science proves it true." Dr. Stephens later became a member of the Harvard faculty.

A Great Vision

Hubert had a vision at Kingfisher, Oklahoma, while we were living there. We came downstairs one morning, and while I prepared breakfast he sat in the living room, where he was immediately wrapped in a vision. He saw the glory of God and his great work. The gospel was made so plain it seemed everyone should accept it. He saw the new fields ripening before him; Oklahoma was the ripest and richest of all, a great harvest waiting to be reaped.

I called breakfast just then, and we all sat down at the table. Hubert offered thanks, then shoved back his chair and returned to the living room. Again the vision opened, showing him the glorious home God has prepared for the righteous and how infinitely happy they are. He was so lifted up in spirit, and so thrilled, he felt the Lord had come to his rescue to give him strength for the task of bringing the Lamanites into the kingdom. The vision closed as breakfast was over. He told it at the meeting that night.

Sunday School Is Anywhere

By Louise Scott Wrigley

IT WAS A COLD and foggy morning. A chill hung sullenly in the air. I turned over in bed, shifting the covers as I went. But I still heard it—the determined padding of little feet—and here it was with its face stuck next to mine.

“Get up, Mommy,” ordered Kirk. He was a tyrannical three-year-old. I groaned a little and turned over again. Big John was gone on business, and it was so hard to get up on a dreary morning such as this after having slept restlessly.

The face went around to the other side of the bed. “I hungry,” it said. “I want to go to Tunny Tool.”

Wearily I eased out of bed and fumbled into my robe and slippers. I knew there would be no Sunday school this morning because I had overslept. The hands of the clock pointed accusingly to nine o'clock, and Sunday school was a good half hour's drive away. There was breakfast to get and children to be dressed. We would never make it in time for anything but the last few minutes. Yet I knew Kirk's disappointment would be sharp.

“Why do I have to feel so sleepy and cross on Sunday morning?” I mused as I scrambled the eggs and put on the toast. I looked at Kirk's sweet waiting face. It wasn't fair that he should be deprived of something he needed just because I had been a lazy mother this morning.

“Hurry up, Johnny,” Kirk admonished his bigger brother who was dawdling over breakfast. “We going to Tunny Tool.” Johnny said nothing but he looked at the clock on the kitchen wall. He knew it was too late.

As I washed up the dishes, Kirk came in, dragging his good pants and jacket on the floor behind him. “Dress me,” he demanded.

“We can't go to Sunday school this morning, Kirk. Take your good clothes back in your bedroom and don't drag them on the floor.” I was surprised to hear the sharpness of my own tone, the disappointment. I hated to miss church school too. The tears spilled in a torrent over Kirk's little round cheeks.

“I am going to Tunny Tool,” he shouted, pulling at my robe and banging at me with his hard little fists.

SUDDENLY SOMETHING OCCURRED to me. Why couldn't we have Sunday school right here at home? We had Bible storybooks in the bookshelf. They would never be put to a better use. We all knew hymns. What was to prevent our conducting our own church school right here in the quiet of our own home? I knelt to put my arms around my determined littlest one.

“All right,” I soothed him. “Let's have Sunday school right at home.”

“And can I wear my good pants?” He eyed me suspiciously through his tears.

“Yes, you can wear your good pants.”

A few moments later, Johnny walked into the living room holding Kirk's hand—just as they always go to church school together.

“I brushed my own hair,” Kirk said triumphantly. The part was on the wrong side and his curls were all fuzzed up, but his face was serene.

Two little chairs had been placed side by side, with a big one for me. I held in my hand a Bible storybook and a hymnal. A Bible lay open on the table near by with a book of religious poetry for children.

“You forgot to give me some money for Jesus,” said Kirk grimly, as he sat down. I hurried into the bedroom for my purse.

“Let's sing 'Jesus Loves Me,'” decided Kirk, after a short prayer. So we sang “Jesus Loves Me,” the two little-boy-voices ringing out sweet and clear. Then we had our Scripture, a short story-lesson, took up our offering, had a thank-you prayer and another song. After our little prayer of dismissal, the boys left the living room, hand in hand just as they had arrived.

AS I PUT THE CHAIRS AWAY and slipped the books back into the bookshelf, I wondered why this wouldn't work for isolated families who haven't the privileges of a church close by? Might it be a good plan for sick girls and boys who miss attendance at church school? Could the idea be worked out by mothers all over the church whose boys and girls are denied regular attendance at church, and who are concerned about this problem? Quarterlies could be followed, songs could be learned right at home. There are always beautiful lessons in the changing seasons, in the experiences families have together. Children are drawn by stories of things related to them, not high-flown experiences of which they can have no knowledge. They learn quickly from things which have happened to them or to their friends. Are we missing an opportunity with our own families, isolated members, because we are too busy or too lazy to set up a plan to fit our own needs? The Religious Education Department of our church, with its background of research and planned study, and the wonderful people there who love us and want to help us grow toward a better understanding of all the things Christ is and stands for—these people and this department are as close as a piece of writing paper and a pen.

Let us consider this possibility of a definite Sunday morning church school routine in our isolated homes and homes where illnesses deprive the child of his rightful privilege of making Jesus his friend.

Victims of Conventionality

By Naomi Russell

I THINK I'VE DISCOVERED a little Bohemian blood in my veins, and now that I've made the discovery I hope I can convince myself I should do something about it.

For a long time I've been vaguely aware that I've accepted invitations to showers that I haven't wanted to attend, given by people who probably didn't want to give them for people who really didn't need them, all because it's the accepted thing to do. I have no gripes whatsoever about contributing to the households of young couples who are having to count pennies or to expectant mothers who, without the help of friends, would not have the things they need to care for their infants when they arrive. In fact, few experiences are so heart-warming as being able to give to people who are genuinely in need; I have done too little of it, because I have been content to give a single gift and let it go at that instead of following up with other gifts as later needs arise. On the other hand I have probably given ceramic pieces and embroidered hand towels to dozens of brides who have never used them, and baby rings and locketts to youngsters who seldom if ever wear them.

These are people I like, and I have no grudge against giving them gifts—but they don't need them. Most of all I wish I weren't expected to sit for several hours doing such idiotic things as unscrambling ten mixed-up words or tearing a baby bonnet out of a piece of crepe paper. I wish I could educate myself not to cringe at the thought of "what people will say" if I neglect my financially comfortable friends and use the money instead to buy something for someone who is not so comfortable.

There are other things I can give my friends besides material gifts that will probably mean more to them—if I will take the trouble to do so. A couple of sincere compliments (who doesn't love 'em when they're dealt honestly?) may bring more happiness than several presents tied with satin ribbon. A "listening ear" may be the best-of-all gift I can give. Whether it is trouble or triumph, people like to talk about themselves and what happens to them; on such occasions they need a devoted listener. Generally I would rather give advice than compliments, and I'd rather talk about myself than hear someone else's life story, but herein lies a chance to give something that counts for a great deal more than tangibles.

People in weather-beaten shacks and hand-me-downs need compliments too; often their egos are in a worse state of malnutrition than their bodies, but they also have physical needs. Not far from us lives a family of nine; the only income in that household at present is the mother's nurse-aide check for $120 a month. A Negro family of six that I know survives on a relief allotment of $100 a month; there is no man in this home to provide a living, and the two women of working age have physical disabilities that make wage-earning impossible for them. I'm sure there are others, even here in Zion, who have just as limited incomes.

THE WEIGHT of poor stewardship has rested heavily upon me ever since I bought a fur coat that is neither warm nor extraordinarily beautiful. I have made other purchases that are equally foolish, and they too have proved such a burden to conscience that I have resolved to consider carefully my future wants before spending money on them. Too often I have bought things to impress others or to satisfy some long-standing desire only to find out they weren't what I wanted at all. I hope I can develop the good sense to be as wise in the selection of "gifts" for myself as I would like to be in selecting for others.

A friend who is to be married soon is wondering how she can finance a reception after the wedding. "I must get my Graceland debt paid," she explains, "and if I do that there won't be much left." If it weren't expected of her, she says, she would just shake hands with the guests at the church door as they leave the wedding and forget about the cake and punch and napkins and doilies and all the other necessities that go to make up a reception. Probably the guests would just as soon shake hands at the door and go on home too. Receptions usually mean long waiting lines, which for most women in two-inch heels spells torture and for most men a sheer waste of time. Yet my engaged friend and all her friends will probably suffer through this social nicety because it is the accepted thing to do.

These are only a smattering of the things we do because they seem to be expected of us. I'm not sure who expects them—in fact, I think most people would be relieved if someone declared a ban on these traditions and their counterparts. Certainly much good could come of our will to put real need before imagined social acceptability.

It will take brave people to change the customs that have been ruling society for hundreds of years. I'm not at all sure my scant trace of Bohemian blood is going to be powerful enough to make me a pioneer in this field of defying conventionality. It's a real struggle with my mind cautioning, "Think what people will say," and my heart urging, "Do what you know you should." I hope my heart will win.

God Always Keeps His Promises

When I was a boy of eleven I lost my mother. I had a playmate about the same age that lost an older brother about the same time. We used to get together and talk of our sorrows and pray that God would send them back to us; we had great faith that he would.

One time as I prayed there came such an assurance to me that God would let Mother come back that I was very much relieved. But as time wore on and she did not come, I began to think God had forgotten or else I was mistaken. But about twenty years later I became very sick; it was during the flu epidemic when many people were dying; the doctor thought my time was short too. My sister-in-law came to help care for me, and as she came into my room there came another woman also who was just about the size of my mother, only she did not have the tired look that I remembered so well. As she passed by me she smiled and dropped her cloak on my bed.

I asked who she was, and was told "That is Aunt Nell." I said, "I see her but another woman came in with her." The Saints held a prayer meeting to pray for me that night, and the next morning I asked for food.

Later as I pondered this experience and the promise I was sure I had received as that boy of eleven, there came the very same Spirit to me and told me God had sent my mother back as a guardian angel to keep the hand of death from our home that night so I could finish my work here on earth. What a joy to know God always keeps his promises!

Looking to the New Year

At the beginning of this new year we should remember the sayings of Paul in his letter to the Hebrew saints: "Wherefore seeing we also are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, let us lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us."

If we have patience, kindness, tolerance, and love we shall achieve the goal we are striving to reach. Looking back over the past year we may feel that we are not worthy of the numerous blessings we have received, but we can live in the future so that we are deserving. For every good deed we do we are repaid. My love for this great work increases with the years, and I have an ever-growing desire to do something in return for the blessings which have been mine.

Testimony of a Nonmember

(The following testimony was given by Mrs. William Hood of Carleton, Michigan, at a prayer service last summer.)

I am not a member of this congregation, but I am appreciative of what it means to me. You people do not quarrel. You live in peace in the house of God. I leave here impressed and happy. I don't mean to become emotional, but it's really and truly deep in my heart. I long to come here, and I'm always appreciated. May God always bless this congregation. Though a Methodist, I pray for you, because this town needs your church. I am thankful that you are so friendly to me when I am here. You don't know what it means to me. I thank you again and again for the use of the piano and the opportunity to sing the beautiful songs that are close to my heart. I sing them at home and they are very helpful. May God bless you all.

A Protest Against Publicized Crime

When I see children and teen-agers sitting through shows where all kinds of vice and violence are portrayed, I wonder what kind of an impression is being made upon them. There are some wonderful pictures, and I enjoy seeing them and having my family and friends see them, but often they are preceded or followed by crime shows. Radio and television programs present the same problem. I am afraid many children will grow up thinking that fighting is the way to settle everything.

I take off my hat to Jack Mobley who is trying to do something to change this situation. Surely there is much we can do, too. Perhaps our pastors can use their influence to help get better programs on the air.

A Letter From Tokyo

The steady movement of church boys through Japan continues. We are always glad to contact them when they arrive for their Far East assignment, but are doubly glad to wish them Godspeed when they leave for home. We have come to realize with them the happiness and joy they all share in being home-bound.

Letters from friends and loved ones in the States are a part of each week's mail, and we have been able to contact some of our boys through information thus received. Recently contacted by letter and telephone were Pvt. Jack C. George of Kansas City, Missouri; Pvt. Wm. Anderson whose home is in Michigan; and Roy Dayton (Navy) of Brentwood, Missouri.

Pvt. Carlin Talcott of Independence, Missouri, who processed through Camp Drake, was able to have dinner with us while waiting for his assignment in Korea.

We were most happy to share our Christmas dinner with Ronald Burnell of Iowa who is stationed at Yokosuka Naval Base, and with Pvt. Alma Blair of Independence, Missouri, who was in Tokyo for a week of rest and rehabilitation from Korea. We spent part of the afternoon listening to Tokyo Chapel Choir broadcasting The Messiah over the Far Eastern network. Other recent visitors have been Gaynor Fox of Romeo, Michigan, and Al Cothran of Independence, Missouri.

Some of the Tokyo Saints met at the Otto Tice home in Yokohama to witness the ordination of Major Millard Caldwell to the office of elder. Brother Caldwell held the office of priest in the church and has been giving valuable service in keeping a roster of all our members in the Armed Forces in this area and printing a monthly newsletter which he mails to each member on his list. His week of rest and rehabilitation in Tokyo made it possible for Brother Crum to carry out the instructions of the Presidency as to this ordination. Our prayers went with him as he returned to Korea with this added privilege and responsibility.

Our church school in Yokohama voted to assist Major Caldwell in his efforts to provide a Christmas party for the children of an orphanage in Seoul. We hope the large box of Christmas stockings and candy arrived in time for the party. The plight of these helpless, innocent victims of war is heartbreaking. Their greatest need is for warm clothing of all sizes and for nourishing food. The winters in Korea are bitterly cold, and the orphanages have no heat. Many organizations are trying to help, but some are receiving no assistance.

SFC Pat Samuela with his wife Betty and three children, Paul, Rosalie, and Christine, sailed for home in December after three years in Japan. He has been assigned to the Presidio in San Francisco.

W/O and Mrs. Otto Tice and children, Linda and Raymond, sailed for the States January 6 en route to his new assignment in Louisiana. On the same ship was Milton Bachellor of Massachusetts who has been in our home several times and will soon return to civilian life.

Miss Lela Gurwell who was with us when we started our church school in Yokohama was transferred to Korea the day after Christmas.

We are most happy to welcome Captain John R. Faurot of the Air Force to our group. He comes from Independence, Missouri, and has been assigned to the Tokyo area. He is a member of the Melchisedec priesthood, and his fellowship and assistance will be greatly appreciated. It is amazing to realize the church has now two elders in Tokyo and two in Korea. We are all here on comparatively short assignments, but let us hope some real good can be accomplished.

We are expecting to have to move from our present quarters in Nonomiya Apartments in the near future. As we do not know yet where we will be located, we suggest our office telephone number be kept in mind. If we cannot be reached at our home number, 33-5581, we may be contacted at the office, 57-8008, during office hours.

We have been fortunate in having escaped the severe influenza epidemic which is now raging in this area. The authorities estimate that approximately 50 per cent of the inhabitants of Tokyo have been afflicted in the past two months. Fatalities have amounted to about 2 per cent.

Unfortunately Brother Crum is at present confined to a hospital bed recovering from minor surgery. He expects to be home in a few days.

Witness to a Healing

While reading Dr. Cheville's article, "How Shall I Make Ready for a Patriarchal Blessing?" I was impressed by the statement: "It is a great experience to place hands on the head of a youth and sense the illuminating presence of God."

About two months ago I was called to the hospital to administer to a seventeen-year-old girl, a member of the church, who had been seriously injured in an automobile accident. She was given no chance to live, yet when I laid my hands upon her head I received the most soul-touching experience of my entire ministry and was given to know that the girl would live. I told her mother about it after the administration, and although ten days passed before the girl regained consciousness, her mother was there at her bedside to see her open her eyes and to hear her first words.

The first X rays showed many shattered bones from her shoulders to her feet, but when Brother Grice stopped in to administer to her, he told the doctors they might be surprised when they went to set the bones. As he had predicted, they were amazed at the healing which had taken place, and had another X ray made. This only verified the fact that a remarkable recovery was in process. The nurses thought it was terrible that the girl should remain a helpless invalid because the bones were not set, but as I visited her on my way to prayer meeting Wednesday night, I found that she was able to walk down the hall.

I have witnessed the working of the power of which Brother Chevillie wrote. My prayer is that the whole world may be awakened to its presence.

In Praise of "The Measure of the Man"

I just read "The Measure of the Man" on page 10 of the January 19 issue of the Herald. I feel it is a wonderful letter for everyone to read. It applies not only to physical marriage but our "marriage to the church." We should be as close to it as possible, and still be friendly with those who do not belong so that they too might come to know Christ. Self-love was explained in this article in a way I had never considered it before; it has helped me much.

Value of Patriarchal Blessings

I wonder if we who have received a personal blessing from God realize the values and responsibilities attached to it. I received mine at the age of nine; today people do not get them so early in life, but I can testify that I have seen the fulfillment of part of it and expect to see the rest become reality before my life is over. In my blessing I am told to put my trust in God; he has been with me through many trials and has kept my feet in the straight and narrow path. At our last reunion I had the privilege of sitting in while three of my children received their blessings. When they were told that God had recognized them from their infancy I knew he had heard and answered my prayers. Knowing that I am to represent Christ in the world, I have read and studied and prayed that I might know him better. As I have done so I have become more valiant in my testimony, and I have also been able to help in the building of our new church.

I think that we who have patriarchal blessings should read them more often and heed the advice we are given in them. Those who have not yet received theirs should prepare to get them. We all must be deeply concerned about this privilege we have and accept God's counsel to us.

A Life of Service

I spent thirty-five years in Independence, Missouri, during which time I served as assistant pastor of the Stone Church under Walter W. Smith and R. V. Hopkins. With eleven other men I was called to the Independence Stake High Council. I also served on the Sanitarium board for several years. I have known and worked with Joseph III, Frederick M., and Israel A. Smith.

A little over twenty years ago we moved to St. Louis, Missouri, where we remained until September, when we moved to Lamoni, Iowa. We love the people here and the beautiful new church. Truly we are engaged in a wonderful work. There is nothing like it in the whole world.

To all who need a spiritual lift I suggest the reading of the following in the first and second volumes of Church History: the charge to the twelve apostles by the First Presidency,

Volume 1, page 542; the vision seen by Joseph Smith and others, Volume 2, page 16; and the blessing given to the children of the first patriarch of the church before he died, Volume 2, page 461.

That the spirit of the Master may be and abide with all is my prayer.

In Praise of "Feather in the Wind"

I wish to express to Miss Galbraith our congratulations on her book, A Feather in the Wind. It is a fine contribution to our missionary literature.

It is unusually well written. Not anywhere does it become tedious nor keep the reader too long in suspense; it is remarkably true to life where full obedience to the gospel is yielded without reserve.

Sister Velt and I read it aloud together during the Christmas vacation, and we found ourselves shedding tears of joy at times as we relived many actual experiences where life was transformed through the gospel, all made vivid again through this beautiful story. We feel to thank God for this contribution.

Every church member should have this book for missionary purposes. It makes a fine approach to the Book of Mormon through archaeology and presents in a telling way the power of the financial law in the process of spiritual growth and in helping spread the gospel story.

I will do everything possible to advertise this book, and I feel sure others will once they read it.

Letter of Appreciation

I want to thank the Saints and friends who remembered me in prayer and sent cards and best wishes to me during my long illness. I am grateful, too, to the nurses at the Independence Sanitarium, and to Mr. Rannie who so willingly returned to Port Huron with me by plane.

Many blessings have come to me through administration, and I am grateful for this ordinance of God's church. I was in a coma for five days, but with prayer and administration I recovered.

May God's courage and assurance be with all who read this testimony.

Letter of Appreciation

Our grandson, Walter Bert Penney, Jr., died February 1 at the Veterans' Hospital in Wadsworth, Kansas. He had been an invalid for six years, but he was very faithful. His mother was not able to attend the funeral because she had had an operation on January 29. We want to thank all who remembered him with cards and letters. May God bless those who befriended him.

The House of the Lord

they built the Temple to a height of 128 feet above the ground.

They were not only builders, but planners; standing on the small platform around the tower evidences this. The Temple commands a naturally elevated position and so presents a majestic figure to the surrounding countryside. Looking eastward brings a view of forest splendor, and the heart of any beauty lover pulses at the serenity of the scene.

South of the Temple stands the home of Hyrum Smith, faithful and courageous brother of the Prophet. A small graveyard lies northward, and within its portals rest the remains of many a valiant member of the restored church. Mary Smith, grandmother of Joseph, and the twins born to Emma and Joseph at Kirtland are here.

From foundation to tower, inside and out, the Temple represents faith, devotion, and courage. Faithful men worked by day and guarded by night. Devoted women sacrificed their glassware and china that the walls might be beautified. Courageous leaders braved savage mobs so that Christ might be preached to the world.

Not only was the Temple built according to divine revelation, it was protected by divine power. After the Saints left Kirtland in 1840, the sacred house stood empty forty years without being damaged by vandals. In 1880 the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, true successor to the original church by law and doctrine, went into the Lake County Common Pleas Court to fight for legal possession of the building. The defendants—Lucius Williams who claimed the Temple as payment of debt owed by Joseph Smith, and the Mormon Church from Utah, the faction of Brigham Young—lost their cases. One lost on the basis that the Temple was not Joseph Smith's; the other lost on the fact that the Utah Church had departed from the original teachings by introducing plural marriage and other foreign doctrines contrary to those taught by the early church.

Today the Temple is old. Its outside walls are bleached nearly white by sun and rain, but its sanctity will live on in the lives of those who serve the Lord.

Three Candidates Baptized

HOT SPRINGS, ARKANSAS.—The Arkansas-Louisiana District conference was held at Hot Springs, November 22 and 23.

Apostle P. E. Farrow was in charge. Others attending were Bishop Joseph Baldwin and Evangelist Harold I. Velt.

The theme for the conference was "The Financial Law." The high lights of the conference were the early morning prayer service, the classes, the two sermons, and the business meeting.

Evangelist Velt held a series of meetings November 24-December 7. Sister Velt accompanied him and met with the women of the branch.

On December 21, an ordination service was held at which time Carroll Donathon, under the hands of Seventy James Renfroe assisted by Lonnie Timbs, was ordained to the office of priest.

A baptismal service was held on January 4. Jim Hogue and Mr. and Mrs. James Huntsman were baptized by James Renfroe. The confirmation service was held the following evening.—Reported by BONNIE SANDERS

Slides Taken of Program

NEW LONDON, CONNECTICUT.—The regular business meeting of the branch was held in June. The following officers were elected: Elder Walter Engdahl, pastor; Bruce Whipple, church school director; Margaret Slater, secretary-treasurer; Muriel Wheeler, historian; Beverley Thayer, music director.

Joan Louise, daughter of Jack and Marian Appleby, was blessed by Elder Don Crowell of New Haven and Elder Engdahl on December 7.

Sister Jean Rickman, the former Jean Piedmonte, and her family have been meeting with the branch for the past year while her husband is stationed at the Naval Base. Other servicemen who have been in the branch include Jim Devers of Joplin, Missouri, and Tom Spear and Don Mac Indoo of Phoenix, Arizona. Don Mac Indoo is a member of the Church of Christ (Temple Lot). Vernon Bowen of Wisconsin and Howard Sheldon of Idaho have also been in the branch. At the present time, Brother and Sister Earl Wesner and two children of Peoria, Illinois, are in the group. Brother Esner is attending the Coast Guard School.

A new furnace was installed in the church before Christmas.

A Christmas party was held in the church December 27. Colored slides were taken as part of the program which included a pageant and the distribution of gifts. These slides were shown at a Family Night on February 7.—Reported by MURIEL WHEELER

Missionary Emphasis in Branch

STOKES BAY, ONTARIO.—The annual business meeting of the branch was held in the church on September 29. Elder Ivan Thompson was elected pastor. Other officers are as follows: J. L. Ribbel, counselor; Bernice Johnston, secretary-treasurer; Nettie Ribbel, director of music; Margaret Thompson, women's leader; Priest J. L. Ribbel, branch priest; Priest Tom Burley, branch teacher; and Moroni Johnston, branch deacon.

On July 6, a two-week missionary effort was concluded with Elder Garnet Farrow of Wiarton morning speaker and Priest John Bradley of Wiarton afternoon speaker. The priesthood of Wiarton, under the direction of Missionary Al Pelletier, conducted services each evening during the two weeks. On July 6, Lilla Rosalind, daughter of Albert and Rosalind Reid of Wiarton, and Barbara Ann Johnston of Lion's Head were baptized. Lilla was baptized by Elder Aubrey Mason and confirmed by Elder Gordon Farrow. Barbara was baptized by Ivan Thompson and confirmed by Elder Garnet Farrow.

During 1952, the following children were blessed: William Michael Ray, son of Abbie and Walter Geddle of Wadena, Minnesota, was blessed by Elder Ivan Thompson; Carol Ann and Garry Blayne, children of Audrey and Rae Kinart of Sarnia, were blessed by Bishop Leslie Kohlman of Guelph and Elder Gordon Farrow, respectively; Terry McIver, son of McIver and Donelda Burley of Stokes Bay, was blessed by Alex Cadwell of Guelph.

Brother Pelletier arranged an exchange of speakers for Sunday, September 28, October 5, 12, and 19, for the Owen Sound District. Brother Gordon Farrow spoke at Stokes Bay.

On August 28, members of the branch met at the home of Brother and Sister J. L. Ribbel for a social evening honoring Ivan and Margaret Thompson who had just been married. They were given a pair of blankets.

In November, the branch with the assistance of the women's department purchased a new Communion service set. A short dedication service was held at the Communion hour on December 7. The women's department also purchased new linens for the Communion table.

Sister Elsy Gray and sons, Wayne and Harold, left Stokes Bay to join Brother Gray in New Liskeard, Ontario. A farewell social was held for them at the home of the pastor.

Women's department meetings are held the fourth Wednesday of each month, under the leadership of Sister Margaret Thompson. A bazaar and bake sale were held in October.

The branch raised over their quota for the Auditorium fund for last year.—Reported by BERNICE JOHNSTON

Babies Blessed

FIRST CHURCH, ST. JOSEPH, MISSOURI.—Stake Bishop Lewis E. Landsberg gave the Communion address February 1. At the church school hour the Zion's League was in charge. Participating in the service were Katherine Frisby, Detroit, Michigan; Susanna Mendiola, Mexico City, Mexico; and Howard Sheehy, Jr., of Seattle, Washington. These young people are students of Graceland College.

On February 8, Elder Donald Harvey talked at the special service for the blessing of babies, with Elder Joseph Albus, pastor, in charge. Children blessed were Nancy Gay, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Ruoff; Carla Sue and Vicki Lynn, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Northcutt; Merritt Earl, son of Mr. and Mrs. Merritt Blanchard; Suellen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Bush; Roger Elton and Bruce Elton, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Norvin Hitson; Linda Marie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Houpp. The blessings were given by Bishop Lewis Landsberg, Seventy Donald Harvey, Elders Joseph Albus, John Ruoff, and Orville Rowlett.

Apostle R. E. Davey was in St. Joseph until March 8, presenting a series of missionary sermons at each of the three churches.—Reported by MRS. GORDON WOOD

President Speaks at Service

CRESTON, IOWA.—On October 19, at the conclusion of an extensive missionary series conducted by Seventy Virgil E. Billings and Apostle Roscoe E. Davey, nine candidates were baptized. They were Glen Kneedler and his three sons, Frank, Marion, and Ronnie; Farris Shofner and his wife Victoria; Mrs. Lillian Lysinger and son Joseph; and Mrs. Marguerite Smith.

President Israel A. Smith was the guest speaker on the morning of October 26, having come especially for the church presentation service held in the afternoon. In the evening a confirmation service was held for the new members.

On the morning of November 2, R. Jack Mercer was ordained to the office of priest under the hands of the pastor, O. H. Probst, and Jerry C. Runkle, Lamoni Stake officer and member of the Graceland College faculty. Seventy Virgil E. Billings was also present and gave the charge to the congregation.

On Thanksgiving morning an early prayer service was held with A. D. Blair in charge. A special offering was taken at this service for the benefit of a young man of Korea who is making preparation to attend Graceland College this coming fall.

Christmas was commemorated on the Sunday morning of December 21 with the children's department in charge. The junior choir, under the leadership of Mrs. Sherman Phipps, Wandeen Hirst at the piano, and R. Jack Mercer and his violin, furnished the music.

A vesper service was presented in the evening. The adult choir sang at this service and Mrs. Earl Fine was moderator. This was under the supervision of Wandeen Hirst, director of music.

The annual bazaar and bake sale, sponsored by the women's department, was held on December 6 with a proceeds of $349. The women also hold a monthly bake sale, with the exception of reunion month, and realized more than a hundred dollars at each of these. The money is all turned into the church building fund.

A needy family was adopted by the branch at Christmas time and a large box of food, clothing, etc., was presented them.

On New Year's Day the annual co-operative dinner was held in the lower auditorium of the church.

On January 4, Seventy Virgil E. Billings returned to the Creston area to begin another six weeks' missionary endeavor, preaching each Sunday night and conducting his illustrated lectures in a number of nonmember homes. A baptismal service is scheduled for the afternoon of February 15.

January 25 was Inventory Day with Elder Wilbur Prall, of the Lamoni Stake bishopric, as guest speaker at the morning service. A number of inventories were presented and a brick "wall," symbolic of the building of the kingdom through stewardship, was "erected" brick by brick, as each filed inventory form was placed in the offering plate. These were acknowledged by Henry T. Strand, bishop's agent. A basket dinner was held at noon in the lower auditorium.

Mrs. R. Jack Mercer has been writing a series of articles for the local paper. They appear each Friday and afford an excellent medium for acquainting the general public with our distinctive beliefs.

The Zion's League, though small in numbers, has regular meetings on Sunday evenings before church and social get-togethers, from time to time. David E. Blair was with them during the Christmas holidays. David is in his freshman year at Graceland.—Reported by MRS. HENRY T. STRAND

Gracelanders in Play

MIAMI, FLORIDA.—On December 21, the Zion's League presented a Christmas play directed by Betty Fisher. Gracelanders assisting at the eleven o'clock hour on December 23 were Joyce Wortham, Dorothy Fisher, and Ruth Purvis of Miami, Arthur Burnham of Independence, Priest Klaas Kaat of Rotterdam, Holland, and Teacher Barry Fuller of Sydney, Australia.

Elder Paul M. Frisbie of Flushing, New York, was the morning speaker on January 18 and 25. His wife sang a special number.

On January 27, the members of the branch and Ft. Lauderdale mission enjoyed a worship service conducted by Elder Franklyn S. Weddle and Apostle P. E. Farrow.—Reported by MRS. EDGAR CHEVALIER

Money Raised for Building Fund

BURBANK, CALIFORNIA.—The annual election of officers was held in September with Pastor Robert Wilms presiding. The following were elected: counselors to the pastor, Edward E. Spencer and Willard Bettis; director of religious education, John Kirkpatrick; children's director, Gwen Ish; children's pastor, John Stevens; women's leader, Margery Rowlett; youth leaders, John and Beverly Stevens; director of music, Ruth Westburg; publicity agent, Opal Baird; director of drama, Lois Hartnett; secretary and recorder, Eleanor Wilms; treasurer, Harold Rowlett; book steward, Frank Cline; assistant book steward, Gary Beebe; auditor, Novella Thompson; historian, Bessy Christy; bishop's solicitor, Roy Sorenson; custodian, Ward Baird.

Various money-raising projects have been held. A turkey dinner was held at the home of Brother and Sister Robert Wilms in September. This raised $165 toward the building fund. The ice-cream social at the home of Sister Gwen Ish, sponsored by the children's church school, netted $57.50. The Halloween party held at the home of Brother and Sister John Kirkpatrick raised $101.

The women's department held a bazaar on November 14 and raised $140. A rummage sale was held on January 26 and 27 and raised $87.50.

A service was held October 12 when six men were ordained. They were deacons, Paul Griner, Gary Beebe; priests, Robert Bettis, Frank Cline, Roy Sorenson, and John Stevens.

Brother and Sister Willard Bettis were guests of the Zion's League at a dinner. They are the past leaders of the young people. Four of the Leaguers and their leaders attended the Yule Camp, December 26, 27, and 28, held at Crestline.

Gary Prentice was baptized on December 21 by Robert Bettis.

Tracy Jean, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Johnston, was blessed on February 8 by Elder Richard Andersen.

Brother Andersen was the speaker on February 8, which was National Boy Scout Day.

Brother and Sister Allison of Iowa have been welcomed to the group.—Reported by OPAL BAIRD

Meeting in New Location

CORYDON, IOWA.—On the first Sunday of December, 1952, Lyle Mitchell, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Lyle Crozier, was blessed by his grandfather, Oscar Sharp, pastor of the mission. Brother Sharp then confirmed Jon Lynn Mendenhall who had been baptized at Lamoni.

The Saints in the area met in the home of Brother and Sister John H. Evans of Corydon for some time until a church site was purchased at the corner of Lincoln and Maple Streets. A rural school was purchased, moved to the present location, and remodeled, where church services are now held.—Reported by MRS. RUTH SEARS

Mission Growing

CORPUS CHRISTI, TEXAS.—The mission has been an active group for the past year. Elder J. E. Martin of Independence, Missouri, met with us and held meetings last year. Elder Jack Wight followed these meetings with illustrated lectures. At the close of the series, under the supervision of Brother Wight, a mission organization was effected. Raymond T. Jackel was designated mission leader by the district president, Gene Wilder.

Sister Thelma Smith was elected group treasurer. A budget committee consisting of F. B. Barnhard, Thelma Smith, and Raymond Jackel was appointed. Brother Vincent P. Smith was designated adult class teacher. The group made arrangements to meet in the YMCA building. A building fund began following a generous contribution by Evangelist Leslie Wight.

Among the visiting priesthood have been Bishop J. E. Baldwin, Elder Charles Kornman, and Elder Amos Graybill. Elder and Mrs. Graybill were visiting from Council Bluffs, Iowa. Their son, Wilmer, and his family live in the area. Elder and Mrs. Carl Weeks of Bevier, Missouri, are visiting their son, Donald, and his family.

Sister Nellie Wright, formerly of Walthill, Nebraska, is the present adult class teacher. Sister Katherine Hamilton of Hammond, Indiana, is teaching the children's class.

Members or friends visiting in the area may contact the group by writing or phoning Raymond T. Jackel, 1505 18th Street, Corpus Christi, Texas, phone 49019.—Reported by DORIS JACKEL

Special Services in Branch

GRAND RAPIDS, MICHIGAN.—Christmas worship was ushered in by an evening candlelight Communion service. Junior boys lit the candles in the chancel and in the windows. The Christmas story from the Scriptures was read by the pastor, Elder James Phillips, and the choir sang Christmas carols between Scripture readings. The following Sunday evening a service of the Hanging of the Greens took place. The church was decorated with Christmas greens and poinsettias by families to the singing of carols by the choir and congregation. Elder Jack Hodge read the story of Christmas traditions in other countries. Following the service, a light lunch was served in the lower auditorium. On December 21, the cantata, "The Babe of Bethlehem," was given by the choir under the direction of Mrs. Ted Carlson, with Mrs. Hunter at the organ. During the cantata the manger scene was portrayed under the direction of the Men's Club. Out of town speakers recently have been Bishop Beck, Elders Edward Premoe and Alva Dexter of Lansing, Elder David Dowker of Detroit and Elder Melvin Russell of Flint.

Two babies were recently blessed, Dawn Evon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Griffin, and Brenda, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Neibarger.

William Webber was ordained to the office of elder and Jesse Krause to the office of deacon.

The women's department, under the leadership of Mrs. Francis Osborne, has been active in raising funds for the church building debt through a successful bazaar and supper held in the lower auditorium of the church in December, as well as other projects. On January 20, a book review on The Silver Chalice was given by Mrs. Sunshine Beck of Lansing. Members of the P.M. Group were hostesses for this meeting.—Reported by ISABEL PHILLIPS

Series Held

EL DORADO, KANSAS.—Three-year-old Debra Diana, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Orbie Ingersoll, was blessed by Elder J. J. Wilson, assisted by Elder John Hufford, Sr., on February 8.

Elder Herbert Lynn held a week of services December 14-19.—Reported by ARLIE KNOLLENBERG

Five Latin Americans Baptized

ALAMO, TEXAS.—The Rio Grande Valley Branch which is located in Alamo had a two weeks' series of meetings in January. They were conducted by Seventy Z. Z. Renfroe. Sister Renfroe accompanied him on the trip.

On January 16 William Gifford, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. William G. Wisdom, and Michael Allen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Darrell Wilson, were blessed. Elders Wayne Simmons, Charles Kornman, and C. E. Bowden officiated.

A baptismal service was held following the series. Mrs. L. O. Read, John A. Wessling, Pat Wessling, Sandra Best, James W. Wilder, José Lopez, Catalina Lopez, Carlos and Guadalupe Trujillo, and Maria Lara were baptized. The confirmation service was held on February 1 by Elders Simmons, Kornman, Bowden, and Robert Reike. James Wilder will be confirmed at a later date.

The women sponsored a father-son banquet on February 16, with the proceeds to go to the Auditorium fund.

Elder Kornman has been doing missionary work and ministering to the Saints in the valley.—Reported by BLANCHE SOLOMON

Gracelanders in Program

STANTON, TEXAS.—Don Carlos, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Leonard, Jr., was blessed July 5, and Sherry Diane, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Morris Standefer, was blessed October 19. On November 9, Jackie Leonard was baptized.

Wayne Church and Fred Church were ordained to the office of deacon, and Carl Leonard, Jr., to the office of elder.

A Christmas vesper service was given December 24, with the assistance of the Gracelanders who were home for the holidays. They were Earl and Gearl Koonce, Fred Church, Sue Standefer, and a guest, Miss Sylvia Wood from Manchester, England.

On January 11, Lee and Lois Brice were baptized. Their three daughters, Linda, Lana, and Lindsey were blessed.

On January 13, priesthood from Odessa, Midland, Lubbock, and Alton met at Stanton for a regularly scheduled priesthood meeting directed by District President Raymon Carston.

On January 28, Brother Carson and Apostle D. Blair Jensen visited the branch, and Brother Jensen gave the evening sermon.—Reported by COLLEEN LEONARD

New Mission Organized

KENTUCKY-TENNESSEE DISTRICT.—On December 7, Elder R. T. Cochran, assisted by Ralph Schrader, organized a mission in Jackson, Tennessee. The mission meets in the home of Brother Vester Bridges, under the leadership of the district president. Church school is at 9:45 a.m., and preaching at 11:00 a.m.

On January 11, the mission traveled to Memphis for a baptismal service which followed the morning sermon given by Brother D. E. Grim of Clarksdale, Mississippi.

Kenneth Wayne Gomer, age twelve and the son of Brother and Sister Luther Pierce of Jackson, was baptized by Elder R. T. Cochran.

The Memphis women's department prepared the noon meal in honor of the mission in the home of Ralph Schrader.

On December 6, Alma Cochran, district women's leader, assisted the Jack's Creek ladies in organizing themselves into a women's group. There were fifteen ladies present. Sister Joan Bailey was appointed as leader; Ruth Middleton, assistant; Lula Bailey, secretary and treasurer; Dorcie Beechan, teacher; and Earlene Jones, cradle roll worker and friendly visitor.—Reported by MRS. ALMA COCHRAN

Student Group Active

AMES, IOWA.—The Ames group journeyed to Des Moines, Sunday, January 18, for Financial Observance Day. Special speaker for the day was Bishop Walter Johnson.

Joan Toth was baptized Sunday, January 25, and confirmed Wednesday, January 28, by Elder Lloyd Young. The baptism service was held in the Boone R.L.D.S. Church and the confirmation in Ames.

The Des Moines District young people had a roller-skating party in Ames, February 5. Jack Ross, district youth leader, was in charge of the program.

Deacon Bill Young is on the faculty at Iowa State College as he continues work on his Master's Degree.

Elder Lloyd Young (sociology) and Priest Dick DeLong (agronomy) are doing research work toward their Master's Degrees at ISC.—Reported by JOYCE CROFT

Four Generations Represented

COLUMBUS, OHIO.—A worship service was held at South Church on Thanksgiving eve when over 150 members of the branch met for a Communion service.

The Worthy Builders met at the home of Harriet Overly for their November meeting.

Grace Parry was hostess to the Zion Builders Circle for November. The pastor, Elder E. E. Smith, led the discussion.

Pat Brush entertained the Emma Smith Circle at their November meeting, and were making plans in conjunction with the other circles to make the December rummage sale a huge success.

Nelle Swanson was the guest speaker at the meeting of the Friendly Circle in November. The hostesses were Thelma Baker and Elizabeth Husted.

The Home Builders Circle met at the home of Carol Pattin, November 11. The topics discussed were friendly visiting, white Christmas offering, and the rummage sale.

The Gleaners Circle met at South Church to complete plans for their November dinner and bazaar.

Every Monday evening the priesthood convenes under the able direction of the pastor for the purpose of study and consecration. Special attention is given at this time to the prayer service and priesthood visiting.

Special attention was given through the city papers to the Christmas services and The Messiah given by the Independence "Messiah" Choir.

On December 28, Charlie Ervan Settles was blessed by Elders Robert J. Miller and Charles Ferguson. Debra Jo Ferguson was blessed by Elders Charles and George Ferguson. The blessing of the Ferguson baby was unique in that four generations were represented. The baby was blessed by the grandfather and great grandfather. Mrs. Ferguson was formerly Beverly Baeth of Moorhead, Iowa.—Reported by ROBERT J. MILLER

Eight Candidates Baptized

SOUTH BEND, INDIANA.—Eight candidates were baptized on February 1. They were Ronald Cooper, Ruby Simmons and children, Gloria and Donald, Robert Nunn, Linda Schraeder, Lloyd Matchette, and his stepson, Allen Chew. Elders John Drader and James O. Best performed the baptisms with Pastor F. E. Myers in charge of the service. Elders Myers, Drader, and C. F. Hoxie officiated at the confirmation services that evening.

Apostle D. O. Chesworth and Seventy C. R. Ettinger began a missionary campaign in the branch on December 9, with the help of the pastor. Teams were organized, tracts distributed, contacts were made. There are other indications of interest among the people as well as the baptisms. Plans have been made for a visit from Missionary Elder Clair Weldon.—Reported by FOREST E. MYERS

Classes Held in Stake

FAR WEST STAKE.—The western half of Nemaha County, Kansas, has been added to Far West Stake.

A series of missionary sermons and cottage meetings have been conducted in the various congregations of the stake.

A Social Service Shop was organized in July and has a store located at St. Joseph.

A home-coming was held at Stewartsville on October 12 with a basket dinner at noon. F. Henry Edwards of the First Presidency was the guest speaker in the forenoon and Stake Bishop Lewis E. Landsberg in the afternoon.

The annual stake-wide women's institute was held at Cameron October 30. The theme was "Acknowledge Him in All Thy Ways." The guest speaker was Mrs. G. Leslie DeLapp of Independence.

Beginning the month of December through the month of April, classes are being conducted one evening each week in most of the congregations of the stake. These classes are for the education of the membership.

The stake also has been divided into several area centers in which priesthood classes are conducted each week by Stake President Emery E. Jennings, Stake Bishop Landsberg, Seventy Donald E. Harvey, High Priest Evan R. Agenstein, and High Priest John W. Newhart.

A Boy Scout father and son outing was held at the reunion grounds in September.

The Zion's League retreat was held at Lake Doniphan in September. The theme was "Here Am I, Lord, Send Me." The guest speaker was Brother Lee Hart of Independence. A League rally was held at Guilford in October with Seventy Eugene Theys as the guest speaker. A special stake-wide Zion's League roller skating was held November 27 for the Leaguers. A group of the Leaguers made the trip to Kansas City to see and hear the Messiah broadcast. Their annual yuletide banquet was held at the YWCA in St. Joseph. The theme was "Lost in the Deep" and the guest speaker was Les Gardner.—Reported by MARIE AGENSTEIN

New Program Organized

CENTER STAKE OF ZION.—The stake is developing a new approach to the "Family Ministry Visiting." The Englewood Congregation was first to experiment and put into use what is called the "Kingdom-building Program." Ted P. Scott, former pastor at Englewood, and William Fetter organized the priesthood and department heads in a method of ministry to all ages. Contacts are made and printed cards are used in enlisting the members in some kingdom-building activity. A personal follow-up contact is made by the appropriate department head, leader, or priesthood member. At the present time, Brother Fetter is representing the stake presidency in organizing and developing the program in other congregations.

Awarded Certificates

NORTHEASTERN ILLINOIS DISTRICT.—Mr. and Mrs. Burdette Heun of the Plano Branch are among the first in Northeastern Illinois District to receive their second certificate of progress under the Christian Education and Leadership Training program of the General Church Department of Religious Education. These certificates represent intensive study and are recognition of much consecrated service.

At the Sunday morning service in Plano on December 15 the district president, Elder Lloyd Cleveland of Aurora, presented the certificates.

The Heuns are both very active in the religious education program of the Plano Branch. Marion serves as director of religious education and also teaches a large class of junior high girls, and Burdette serves as junior pastor.

William Pike, Sr., is the district director of religious education and Mrs. Melvin Marvin serves as district examiner.

Christmas Activities in Branch

CHICO, CALIFORNIA.—On October 19, Florence Slinger, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ira Slinger, was baptized by Elder H. D. Hintz. Her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Greene of Happy Valley reunion grounds, were present for the confirmation service two weeks later.

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI

Mrs. Pauline Brown was pleasantly surprised when the women's department met at her home for the evening meeting in October and presented her with a leather hassock as a housewarming gift.

A Halloween party feting parents and friends was given by the Zion's League October 28 in the church social room. Instead of the usual "trick or treat" custom, members of the Christian Youth Council of Chico collected a large amount of clothing for the Korean Relief Drive, working with the Council of Church Women on the project. Zion's League members were prominent in this effort.

On November 16, Major Chris Thomas of the Salvation Army was the morning speaker, bringing youthful members of the band who played several sacred selections.

The annual harvest dinner sponsored by the women's department was held November 21. Following the meal, musical numbers were given under the direction of Miss Elsa Boystun, program chairman of the evening.

Baked foods were featured at the annual Christmas bazaar at Miller's Market, held December 6 by the women's department. Over one hundred dollars was cleared.

Sister Fern Sliger's home in Durham was the scene of the annual Christmas party for the women's department, at which time they proposed to turn over the money generally used for a gift exchange among the members to aid the charity baskets being planned by the church.

Because of the generous response of members the church was able to provide several baskets for needy families this year. An additional box of toys and basket of food were sent to the pastor for his distribution by the Christian Fellowship of Chico State College.

"The Birth of the King" was the topic chosen for Christmas Sunday morning by Priest H. M. Brown. Two Christmas anthems were given by the choir. In the evening the church school presented a religious play, assisted by the junior and senior choirs. Ira Sliger, as Santa Claus, appeared at the close of the program, distributing candy to the children. Mrs. L. L. Ultican directed the play.

The annual Zion's League Christmas caroling party was held with stops at rest homes and shut-ins.

The Salvation Army entertained one hundred elderly persons, who otherwise would have been forgotten, on December 20, at the Citadel. Various churches were invited to participate in cheering these folks. Mrs. Cora Hintz, Mrs. Evelyn Riley, and Miss Peggy White responded from the branch.

The sixth annual Christmas Day observance at eleven o'clock opened with the choir in the processional, "Oh, Come All Ye Faithful." The story of each of the four carols sung by the choir was told by the pastor interspersing each number. "Can Christ Be Separated From Jesus" was the sermon topic he used. Lighting tapers from the large candle on the altar, the choir led the recessional with Franz Gruber's "Silent Night." Marjorie Hintz directed and Fern Sliger accompanied the choir. Elder and Mrs. George C. Price of Myrtle Point, Oregon, and Deacon and Mrs. Harold Plumb and family of Colorado are welcome additions to the branch.

Sixty young people attended the Christian Youth Council Wonderland party on December 29 at the Trinity Methodist Church. Marjorie Hintz of the branch was general chairman.

A special watch party was held with a fellowship service an hour before midnight on New Year's Eve. Elder George Price and Priest H. M. Brown assisted the pastor in this service at the conclusion of which the Communion was served.—Reported by HELEN E. HINTZ

New Public Address System Installed

LOCK FOUR, PENNSYLVANIA.—On September 28, Deborah Ann and John Edward, Jr., children of Mr. and Mrs. John Bedener of Lock Four Branch, were blessed by Elders Clarence Winship and Ben Cooper. Catherine Lucille, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Palfrey, Jr., of Lock Four and Susan Elizabeth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Drinkwater, were also blessed.

At the annual business meeting Elder Ben Cooper was elected the new pastor and Elder Clarence Winship the associate pastor. During the month of October the young adults entered a float in the Halloween parade. It portrayed the Bible with children of different nations and the caption, "Peace." First prize was awarded them.

In November four members of the Johnston family were baptized by Elder Winship. Cheri, daughter of the Johnstons, was blessed at the same hour.

A special Communion and prayer service was held on Thanksgiving Eve. On November 15, the young adults were organized. They had a dinner with twenty-four present.

A new public address system was purchased by the branch in December. Christmas carols and hymns were amplified over the valley every evening before Christmas. On December 21, in the morning, the Christmas program and a play were presented by the junior League. The evening program was given by the young adults. Christmas carolers visited the homes of Saints and shut-ins and delivered a Christmas letter from the pastor. A New Year's Eve party was held December 31, and closed with a worship service.

The branch met their goal of five hundred dollars for the Auditorium fund.—Reported by LILIAN ZOLLORS

Women in District Active

YOUNGSTOWN, OHIO, DISTRICT.—A women's institute was held in the fall with Pauline Arnson, of the General Church women's department, as the guest speaker. The institute was held in Youngstown on October 18. Sister Arnson conducted the morning and afternoon classes. The next evening she spoke at the Baldwin Branch at New Hamburg, and the next evening she spoke in Sharon, Pennsylvania. The branch attended the evening services.

There are five branches in the district. They are Warren and Youngstown, Ohio, and New Castle, Sharon, and New Hamburg, Pennsylvania.

A sacrifice dinner was held in November in the branch. Almost two hundred dollars was raised. Youngstown held their annual sacrifice dinner the last of February.

A new church is being built in New Castle. The women have been active on this project.

A women's department has been organized at the mission in Linesville, Pennsylvania.

A meeting of all the officers of the five women's departments met in December to plan for future work. Another meeting was planned for April.

For the Christmas project gifts were sent to the missionary, James Menzies and family.

The women of the district plan to put on a play, entitled "The Solid Rock," at the district conference.—Reported by LEONE DARLING until his best plans for every life are somewhere, sometime brought to full fruition. Shall we not, in spite of all we do not understand, find reassurance that God loves us ceaselessly, inescapably, forever, and neither Helen Weeks nor any one of us who has set his feet on the pathway of immortal life shall ever be able to "drift beyond his love and care."

Surely such a faith is reasonable and right. In confirmation of it across the centuries come the words of Jesus, as new and faith-inspiring as ever, "He that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live: and whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die." May this great promise and the consolation and blessing of his holy spirit go with us all.

BIRTHS

Elder and Mrs. Alan Tyree of Kansas City, Missouri, announce the birth of a son, Lawrence Wayne, born February 22 at the Independence Sanitarium. Mrs. Tyree is the former Gladys Omohundro of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. The Tyrees have been assigned to the Society Island Mission.

A daughter, Delores Mae, was born on December 29 to Mr. and Mrs. Allan Van Tuyl of Atherton, Missouri.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Clark of Atherton, Missouri, announce the birth of a daughter, Audrey Rae, born January 12.

A daughter, Janice Lucille, was born on January 10 to Mr. and Mrs. Russell Beebe of Atherton, Missouri.

A son, George Augustus III, was born on November 10 to Mr. and Mrs. George Granger, Jr., of Kalamazoo, Michigan. Mrs. Granger is the former Shirley Jensen of Grayling, Michigan.

DEATHS

DAVIS.—Joseph Arthur, son of J. Arthur and Mary Jones Davis, was born July 31, 1890, at Detroit Lakes, Minnesota (date and place of death not given). While living in Pittsburg, Kansas, he was married to Nelle Scott, who survives him. He had been a member of the Reorganized Church since his youth.

Besides his wife he leaves a daughter, Mrs. Richard Heidinger of the home; his father of Independence, Missouri; six brothers: William Evan and Edmund Earl of Tulsa, Oklahoma; Heman N. of Rocky Ford, Colorado; Kenneth C. of Seattle, Washington; Glenn of Bremerton, Washington; and John Hale of San Francisco, California; two sisters: Mrs. R. D. Christoffersen of Omaha, Nebraska, and Mrs. Clark Davis of Bremerton, Washington; and two grandchildren.

ETHRIDGE.—Charles Wilson, son of Edward and Elizabeth Ethridge, was born August 18, 1862, at Norfolk, Virginia, and died February 4, 1953, at a rest home in Independence, Missouri, where he had resided the past four years. On November 11, 1886, he was married to Anna Parker, who preceded him in death on January 16, 1953. He had been a member of the Reorganized Church since June 13, 1897, and had served as a priest since October 7, 1900.

Surviving are two sons: C. C. Ethridge of Kansas City, Missouri, and F. W. Ethridge of Tulsa, Oklahoma; a daughter, Flossie E. Budd of Independence, Missouri; four grandchildren; and one great-grandchild. Funeral services were conducted by Elders W. F. Bolinger, H. B. Sprague, and J. A. Holsworth. Burial was in Graceland Cemetery, Cameron, Missouri.

LAND.—Ella Grace, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Denton, was born August 13, 1906, at North Platte, Nebraska, and died January 20, 1953, at Carrot River, Saskatchewan, after a long illness. On December 25, 1924, she was married to Norman Edgar Land, who survives her. She had been a member of the Reorganized Church since 1914.

Besides her husband she leaves a son, Clarence of Saskatoon, Saskatchewan; a daughter, Betty Jean Gibson of Smoky Burn, Saskatchewan; four grandchildren; three sisters: Pearl McMahan and Erma Ward of Saskatoon, and Ruth of Winter, Saskatchewan; and two brothers (names not given) of Shellbrooke, Saskatchewan. Funeral services were conducted by Elder Lloyd F. Chase at Carrot River.

LUNGWITZ.—Otto J., was born October 11, 1886, at Atchinson, Kansas, and died January 26, 1953, at his home in Independence, Missouri, where he had resided the past twelve years. He was a veteran of World War I and, previous to his retirement a year ago, was employed by the Kansas City Power and Light Company. He had been a member of the Reorganized Church since June 11, 1939.

He is survived by his wife, Verma, of the home; a daughter, Evelyn Lorraine Austin; two adopted daughters: Millie Mae Dourty and Sedellah Lee Campbell; two sisters: Mrs. C. W. Ebbs of Atchinson, Kansas, and Mrs. M. W. Bryan of Olympia, Washington. Funeral services were held at the George Carson Chapel in Independence, Elders Evan A. Fry and Glaude A. Smith officiating. Interment was in Floral Hills Cemetery.

MELENYZER.—Muriel, was born December 31, 1907, in North Charleroi, Pennsylvania, and died January 13, 1953, at her home in Fallowfield Township. She was a member of the Reorganized Church.

She is survived by her husband, Russell G. Melnyzer, Sr.; two sons: Russell G., Jr., and Keith of the home; two daughters: Mrs. William Horn of State College and Mrs. Clifford Kincaid of Fisher Heights; a brother, Edward Franks of Library; a sister, Mrs. Kenneth Metz of Bentleyville; and one grandchild.

MOORE.—Francis Martin, was born April 27, 1925, at Nashville, Missouri, and was killed January 9, 1953, when his tractor overturned while he was working on his farm at Oronogo, Missouri. He was married on December 25, 1949, to Geneva Crutcher, who survives him.

Besides his wife he leaves his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Moore of Opolis, Kansas; and two brothers: Leroy Moore of Sunnyside, Washington, and James Moore of Opolis. Funeral services were held at the Reorganized Church in Medoc, Missouri, Elder Arthur Rock officiating. Interment was in the Oronogo cemetery.

PACKARD.—Mary Carr Spaulding, was born July 28, 1869, at Newbury, New Hampshire, and died January 28, 1953, at the home of her daughter, Stella Best, in Santa Ana, California. On September 4, 1888, she was married to Otis P. Packard; soon after the turn of the century she and her family moved to the west coast and settled in Long Beach, California. From the time of her baptism, August 27, 1911, to her death she was an active and devoted member. The church school held in her home was the beginning of the Long Beach congregation. Today this large branch stands as a monument to her devotion.

Besides her daughter she leaves six grandchildren and ten great-grandchildren. Funeral services were held at the Smith and Tuthill chapel in Santa Ana, Evangelist Louis J. Ostertag officiating. Interment was in Fairhaven Cemetery, Santa Ana.

PENNY.—Walter B., Jr., was born October 17, 1919, at St. Joseph, Missouri, and died February 1, 1953, at the Veterans' Hospital in Wadsworth, Kansas, after six years of illness. During World War II he served in the Air Force; shortly after his discharge he was stricken by an incurable nerve disease that eventually paralyzed his body. He had been a devoted member of the Reorganized Church since he was eight years old.

He is survived by his parents, Walter B. and Christine Ruoff Penny; a sister, Mrs. Marian Bartlett; and his maternal grandfather, Andrew Ruoff. Funeral services were held at St. Joseph, Elder Donald E. Harvey officiating.

PEW.—Ada Barbara Cecelia, daughter of Henry and Barbara Minor, was born January 31, 1867, and died January 6, 1953, at Lowbanks, Ontario. She was married on April 24, 1887, to Lincoln T. Pew, who preceded her in death on March 14, 1940. She had belonged to the Reorganized Church since December 17, 1893, and was a charter member of the Lowbanks Branch.

Surviving are seven daughters: Mrs. Lloyd Minor and Mrs. Alvin Meyers of Lowbanks; Mrs. Oliver Burdick and Mrs. Roland Le Vaughn of Niagara Falls, New York; Mrs. Harry Jarvis of California; Mrs. Clifford Heney of New York City; and Varena of Wayne, Michigan; four sons: Charles A. of Lowbanks; Richard H. of Niagara Falls; Lewis of Erie, Pennsylvania; and James of Buffalo, New York; a sister, Mrs. Marjorie Hill of Burnaby; twenty-two grandchildren; and twelve great-grandchildren. A son, William, died in 1905. Funeral services were conducted by Elders George Towers and Clarence McDonald at the H. L. Cudney Chapel in Welland. Interment was in the family plot in Lowbanks cemetery.

WINN.—Oda I., daughter of W. J. and Tennessee Seaton, was born December 13, 1877, in Paris, Tennessee, and died January 31, 1953, at her home in Independence, Missouri. On August 13, 1893, she was married to Joseph Henderson Winn, who preceded her in death in December, 1932. She had been a member of the Reorganized Church since March 25, 1890.

Surviving are five daughters: Mrs. Delta Sanford and Mrs. Tessie Hershey of Independence; Mrs. Audrey Holm of Kansas City, Missouri; Mrs. Clara Sheldon and Mrs. Imogene Buchanan of Long Beach, California; two sons: William of Sacramento, California, and Fred of Kansas City, Missouri; a brother, Elvin M. Seaton of Independence; fourteen grandchildren; and thirteen great-grandchildren. One son preceded her in death. Elder Evan Fry conducted the funeral service at Speaks Chapel in Independence. Burial was in Mound Grove Cemetery.

HANKEN.—Anna Ruth Maupin, was born August 12, 1888, at Lathrop, Missouri, and died February 4, 1953, at St. Joseph, Missouri. She moved to San Francisco in 1940, to Independence in 1941, back to San Francisco in 1942, and then returned to Missouri, making her home in St. Joseph, where she spent her last nine years. She had been a member of the Reorganized Church since July 27, 1925.

Funeral services were held at the Kopley Chapel in Independence, Elders Glaude A. Smith and H. V. Minton officiating. Burial was at Mound Grove Cemetery.

WHEN IN NEED

The other day a mother was complaining that she had not heard from her daughter who had gone to a distant state two weeks before. A man who had experience with a boy and girl going through college assured her, "You'll be hearing when she needs some money."

There is scriptural evidence that this spirit of personal concern for others is not restricted to the days of youth. In December, 1833, the Lord said of those driven from Jackson County, Missouri.

"In the day of their peace they esteemed lightly my counsel; but in the day of their trouble, of necessity they feel after me."

This reminds me of a bit of doggerel:

God and the doctor alike we adore
Just on the brink of danger, not before;
The danger past, both are requited.
God is forgotten, and the doctor slighted.

PRAYER

Prayer is talking over with God the campaign of building his kingdom upon earth.

Charles R. Hield

NO NEUTRALITY

While twirling the radio dials we heard this quotation: "You cannot be neutral in regard to moral issues—you are for, or against." Surely that was the thought of a great mind.

Between heaven and hell, truth and falsehood, right and wrong, there is no safe middle ground, no place to stand. To try to be neutral and indifferent in the great struggles of the world is like preferring to be a man without a country, with no place to go, no government to protect and represent him against the great powers of the world. It was for this mistake that St. John of the Apocalypse warned the Laodiceans and rejected their works.

On one of our streets there is a church that makes a great effort to serve and save the young people of our town. Not two blocks away, on the same thoroughfare, is a basement dive that is devoted to their corruption and ruin. Recently it was padlocked.

Yet there are people in our town who can stand on the sidewalks and say, in one way and another, "I don't care which one wins!" Actually they are not neutral. By not choosing, they have chosen. And eventually the master they serve will claim them.

L. J. L.

There is too much
Morbid thinking
Here around.
If the atom strikes,
Why worry?
We'll be six feet under ground,
Or better still,
Nowhere to be found.

We'd Like You to Know . . .

Stephen A. Black

IT TOOK AN ACT OF CONGRESS to get me into the ministry," Brother Black says facetiously but not without reason. Perhaps we should start the story back in his high school days at Van Nuys, California. He had two ambitions: to coach athletics and to teach drama. He entered Los Angeles City College in 1930 and went out for football. The first day of scrimmage he was assigned to the second string and played defensive fullback. One hour of being pounded, smothered under the heap, with several kicks in the teeth, left him very sober and meditative. "Why all this and what good can come of it?" he asked himself. Then he concluded that it meant nothing to him and turned in his suit.

He went on to specialize in drama, and after two years of college joined the Pasadena Community Players. A few months later he went into professional acting and for seven years was with stock and repertoire companies. While he and his wife, Lea, were living in New York in 1939 they sent for the one-volume history, Story of the Church, and the Three Standard Books so that they could read them together. It was the church's emphasis on the social message of Jesus which first appealed to Brother Black. When he asked the church ministry why, with such a message, the church had not made more progress, he was told, "Because we need young men like you to help us with the job."

Steve said, "We were living in a fourth-floor, walk-up apartment at that time. I had access to the roof and went up there many times to pray. There, God answered my prayer as to the divinity of the restored gospel." He was baptized in February, 1939. Soon he was faced with another big decision. He went out with the Roslyn Players, which worked under the National Service Bureau on a federal grant. He was cast in the lead part of a show which was to appear at the World's Fair and doubtless would come to the attention of the big-time producers. It was the chance that all actors dream about. Two weeks later Congress abolished the Federal Theatre project. This climaxed a number of conditions which entered his final decision to give up the theater.

He was married to Lea Vail in 1934. They have three children: Michele Ann, 13; Lauren Lea, 11; and John Christopher, 7. After leaving the stage, Brother Black worked as salesman for an oil company, then entered the aircraft industry and radio. He and his wife opened a Dramatic Arts Studio in Independence, Missouri, in 1946 and continued this until he went under Conference appointment in 1948 as a radio minister. In 1950 he was appointed to Spring River District, where he still serves as district president and pastor of Joplin Branch. He was ordained a priest in 1946, an elder eight months later, and a high priest in 1951. He has a hobby of remodeling and decorating old houses, and has hopes that the Dodgers will yet come through with a world championship in baseball.

News and Notes

FROM HEADQUARTERS

PRESIDENT IN THE SOUTH

President Israel A. Smith has joined Apostle Percy Farrow to make contact with the Saints in the Gulf States area. He plans to return to the office in about three weeks.

PRESIDENT EDWARDS IN WEST

President F. Henry Edwards was still in the West on March 4. He planned to return to the office on March 12.

SERVES ON PANEL

President W. Wallace Smith was on a panel at a Center Stake Zion's League youth rally on March 2. The rally continued through March 7. Brother Smith was associated on the panel with Sister Blanche Mesley and Elder Glaude Smith. Elder Almer Sheehy was the speaker for the rally, and Elder Charles Neff was the moderator for the panels each evening.

BISHOP LIVINGSTON IN DETROIT

Bishop Henry Livingston was in Detroit, Michigan, on February 24 and 25, for an Auditorium dinner. He stopped off in Chicago en route and met with the Chicago building committee of First Chicago Branch and the West Suburban Branch.

ATTENDS DISTRICT CONFERENCE

Apostle D. O. Chesworth attended an all-day meeting of the Missouri Missionary Area, March 1. On March 8 he was in the Chicago District, and on March 14 and 15, he was at Madison, Wisconsin, at the Wisconsin District conference.

VISITS STUDENTS AT AMES

Dr. F. M. McDowell was in the Des Moines District February 28 and March 1. He visited Ames on Saturday evening for a social hour and a discussion period with students and branch members. Then on Sunday morning he met with the priesthood for a fellowship service. He participated in church school and in the Communion service. He noted almost 100 per cent devotion and participation among the students. He attended a meeting of the district president, pastors, and associate pastors of the Des Moines District to launch the "Kingdom-building Program," based on a person-centered ministry throughout the district.

REPRESENT HERALD HOUSE

Kenneth L. Graham, manager; Jeanne Miller, assistant to the manager; and Lloyd L. Bland represented Herald House at the annual convention of the Protestant Churches Owned Publishers Association in Atlantic City, New Jersey, February 23-27. The association represents thirty-one denominations. It is controlled by a board of directors composed of two members of each denomination. Mr. Graham and Mrs. Miller are the representatives of the church on this board. Mr. Bland is Herald House auditor.

MESLE TO THE NORTHWEST

F. Carl Mesle, General Church youth director, was at Graceland College, February 8, to open the series on boy-girl relationships. His topic was "Growth Through Friendship and Romance." He was at Wichita, Kansas, March 1, and is scheduled to be away from the office and in the Northwest during the entire month of March.

Let's Increase Our Stature

"Which of you by taking thought can add one cubit unto his stature?"—Matthew 6: 27.

IN ANCIENT TIMES the Greek cubit was a little more than eighteen inches, the Hebrew cubit a little less. A cubit added to a tree would hardly be noticed. Added to a man, it would make him a giant and complicate his life in a thousand ways.

Stature seems so important to many people. A woman five feet seven inches worries because she thinks she is too tall, and wears low heels. Another woman five feet five inches worries because she is too short and wears high heels. A short man may have to resist the Napoleonic complex, and he may find himself speaking in too loud a voice and stretching himself to his full height to keep from looking up into other men's faces. A tall man learns humility by bowing his head to listen to what others are saying. People are very conscious of their height.

This should be spoken softly—we tend to expect bigness of mind and spirit in those who are large of frame. Many great people are small, but it is a little harder for them to make an impression, and they work against a handicap. Samson and Goliath were mighty men, but Samson was outwitted by a small woman, and Goliath was killed by a boy.

IT WAS of a group of men that Jesus asked the question about adding to one's stature. If the questioner had not been the Lord, they might have responded, "Who would want to?" Hardly anyone.

Physical stature is not so very significant, especially in these days when the greatest powers are mechanical, not human. The keen mind will always win, in the end, in any contest with the strong arm. The mighty spirit is forever greater than the powerful body.

THE SPIRITUAL and intellectual emphasis in stature was noted by Luke when he wrote, "And Jesus increased in wisdom and stature, and in favor with God and man." Paul pointed in the same direction when he said, "Till we all come . . . unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ" (Ephesians 4: 13).

Who would want to add a cubit—eighteen inches—to his height? Who could do it? Well, the youngest infant and the smaller children in the family will do it quite easily, if you give them proper thought and care. This is a miracle of growth that can be performed only by the very young.

But the other miracle of growth—that of the mind and spirit—is one that can be accomplished by people of any age, men or women, any race, any religion, any kind. The only limit is opportunity.

WE WERE TOLD some years ago of some poor people who came into the church. They were poor and humble economically, culturally, and educationally. But they had two assets: they were good people, and they were willing to learn. Membership in the church meant a new chance for them. Interests developed in church school classes extended to other things, and they educated themselves. They soon had better jobs, then built better homes, took better care of their health, and learned how to wear better clothes. The church put their feet on a ladder, and they climbed up. When a church does that for people, it is doing a great work for God. In return, these people served in the church, were called to minister, and helped others.

THERE IS SOME EVIDENCE that there is an affirmative factor in the answer to the question that Jesus asked. By taking thought people have increased their stature, though not by a cubit. Antiquarians, studying the armor worn by the heroes and warriors of the age of chivalry, have found them to be rather small men, according to our standards, and not as large as the stories told of their feats. A healthy thirteen-year-old boy of modern times would find some of that armor a rather tight fit. Current records show that soldiers fighting in the present Korean "police action" are taller and hungrier than soldiers who fought in the first and second World Wars. Consider the young people in college today—tall, handsome young men, and tall, beautiful girls, too—probably the finest looking young people the world has ever seen. Why? Parents and doctors have taken thought. Better diets. Cod-liver oil. Wheat germ. Minerals. People have not added a cubit to their stature, but they have grown measurably taller.

Now we need to give attention to becoming better, to our spiritual and intellectual growth.

THE WONDERFUL THING about the gospel is that it gives the people hope and opportunity. Cynics and critics may say, "You can't change human nature." But this is proved false by science and history.

No matter what our conditions may be today, they can be better tomorrow if we decide now to make them so. No matter how small and ineffectual we may be individually, there is a future in which we can be stronger, wiser, and better than we are now. This can be realized if we decide now and begin work immediately.

What is the greatest statement in the Bible? Many people will favor different passages. Our choice is this one from the gospel of St. John 1: 12, "To them gave he power to become the sons of God." Power to become. Power to become sons of God. What a promise, what a hope! What an opportunity for every soul who aspires to better things.

Baptismal Report for January

There were 172 baptisms reported to the Department of Statistics in January, 1953. Although this is the lowest number of baptisms since 1948, we need not be alarmed, but everyone should pause to examine his own missionary efforts. In January, 1951, there were 311 baptisms reported, and last year 224.

Branches reporting 5 or more baptisms for January are as follows: Boise, Idaho, 7; Central East Side, Portland, Oregon, 6; Clio, Michigan, 6; Knoxville, Iowa, 6; Clinton, Iowa, 5; Yuma, Colorado, 5; and Toronto, Ontario, 5.

Districts and stakes reporting the five highest totals are as follows: Eastern Colorado District, 11; Oregon District, 10; Northern California District, 8; Idaho District, 8; and Central Illinois District, 8.

Evangelism Institute

The forthcoming Institute in Evangelism, to be held April 12 to 17, will be open to all members of the Melchisedec priesthood. However, there will be services on the opening day which will be of great interest to all members of the church who can attend, and to which all are invited.

At 10:45 a.m., on April 12, President F. Henry Edwards will be the speaker at the service held at the Auditorium. Members of the First Presidency and the Council of Twelve will be on the platform, and President Israel A. Smith will be in charge of the service.

The afternoon service, beginning at two o'clock, will feature Apostle Paul M. Hanson as the speaker, with members of the Council of Twelve and the Council of Presidents of Seventy occupying the platform.

Evening preaching services will be held in six locations in the Center Stake. They are Stone Church upper auditorium, Stone Church lower auditorium, West College, Englewood, Walnut Park, and Enoch Hill. Also included in this series will be a service at Central Church in Kansas City.

It is anticipated that the Laurel Club will serve the noon and evening meals every day of the institute.

Relief for Holland

Whenever disaster befalls any of our people in any area of the world, we receive numerous inquiries. When disasters occur, such as the recent floods in Holland, the General Church officials immediately contact our representatives for information and to give assurance that the church is willing and able to help and to use our local personnel to give such assistance.

We have already authorized the giving of such assistance as may be necessary through our representatives in Holland. The reports thus far received indicate that the losses sustained by our people have not been of substantial character; nevertheless, our concern for them is deep and we are sure that the church members will wish to know that this concern is expressed in a concrete way. Further investigation and aid will be carried on.

We have heard from both Apostle Oakman and our bishop's representative, Anton Compier. Brother Compier advises that he has already called on our members in the flooded areas. A brief excerpt from his letter will indicate the agencies at work to meet the needs of the Dutch people:

Rescue work is still going on full speed. There are about 5,000 American troops here now with amphibious cars and helicopters. About 250 planes of five nationalities are taking care of the airlift to the islands. About 5,000 boats of all sizes are concentrated in the island area. Troops from Belgium and France are helping, too. Several of the dikes have been repaired by now; these are the smaller holes. There are holes, however, of 300 and more meters. Shortly there will appear a book with pictures; I shall get one and send it to you if it is any good. The income out of the sale is for the people who suffered so great losses. It is marvelous what is being done here and from other countries for them. The Holland people have contributed over 11 million already, while also tremendous amounts are coming from all countries. Already about 200,000 new blankets have been contributed by other countries and it is still going on. This is really something beautiful; too bad that something like this has to happen to get countries to work together in such a way.

We of course wish to do all we can for our members in addition to that done by other agencies. As is the case in such disasters, words cannot express or describe the suffering of the many people affected. Further reports will be made as we receive additional information.

THE PRESIDING BISHOPRIC

By G. L. DeLapp

THE FIRST PRESIDENCY

The following excerpt is from the Statistical Department:

We start 1953 with a comparatively low report of baptisms for January. This is the first time since 1949 that less than 200 baptisms have been reported in January. The highest number on record is 311 for January, 1951. The 1952 figure was 224.

We do not feel that there is any cause for alarm in this low figure of 172 for January, 1953. We are hopeful that this is one of the instances where as the old adage has it "a poor beginning means a good ending." In consequence we are urging everyone to be conscious of the need to continue their evangelistic urge pointing toward the winning of souls to the gospel of Christ and their eventual baptism into his church.

Whitmer Heirlooms

By Israel A. Smith

SOON AFTER MY RETURN from Europe last August, I received a letter from Mrs. Helen V. C. Blankenship, of Springfield, Illinois, in which she said:

I am the great-granddaughter of David Whitmer, through my mother, the late Josephine Schweich VanCleave. It was her brother, George W. L. Schweich (Mr. Whitmer's grandson), who sold the Book of Mormon manuscript to your organization.

By inheritance I have a few mementoes of my great-grandfather which I think should be placed with some Missouri group that would respect and value them, either a historical library, museum, or a church like yours which in at least some aspects shares his own beliefs.

The small collection includes the little trunk in which David Whitmer kept the manuscript under his bed until his death at eighty-three years, his family Bible and Book of Mormon, and the queer old spectacles he used for reading these treasured volumes. There are pictures of his home and family, a long letter on religion from Hiram Page, a copy of the now very rare "Address to All Believers in Christ" (Richmond, 1887), and some early newspapers and clippings, pertinent to affairs of the church.

Among the clippings is an article describing the Richmond cyclone of 1878, in which every bit of the Whitmer homestead was blown away except David Whitmer's little first-floor room where he kept the manuscript. When the storm was over, this room alone survived: not a shingle was lifted, not a crack marred the white plaster, and the little trunk with its sacred papers remained undisturbed under the perfectly made bed. All this I knew also from my mother, who was there. She lived with her grandparents.

I am not a member of your church, but I was brought up to a love and reverence for David Whitmer, for his courage and integrity, and his gentle way of life, that will remain with me always. I want to be very careful to whom I entrust the few things I have which belonged to him, and I would like to know whether they would be valued and preserved by the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. I have been told that this group is not a large one, but I care nothing for that. It seems to me that if you have the manuscript, you would also like to have the other things.

Will you write me, please, as I must come to some decision about them?

Sincerely,

Helen VanCleave Blankenship.

WITHIN A FEW DAYS after this came I went by train to Springfield and, calling at the Blankenship residence, I was greeted by a most gracious lady who soon put me at ease, and I very quickly learned that Mrs. Blankenship desired first to know that the personal items she had and of which she wrote would be cherished and preserved. If they would, then all she wanted was a letter to that effect, and she would gladly deliver them into my hands for that purpose and without any idea of compensation. Of course, I was happy to give her that assurance.

As the trunk and its contents were too bulky to carry back home, I returned to Independence by an early train. I arrived at midnight of that day and left by car the next morning for Illinois.

This time on my visit to the Blankenship home, I met the husband, Doctor Harrison C. Blankenship, a medical practitioner. He was friendly and seemed pleased to know the heirlooms were going to be placed in safekeeping and eventually have an honored place in our historic museum.

The trip came to an end safely the next day, and as opportunity afforded the trunk and its contents were examined and listed; a copy of the same was sent to Mrs. Blankenship with a letter of appreciation.

David Whitmer is a household name with us, and he will ever be held in reverence by all Latter Day Saints, not only because he was one of the Three Witnesses to the Book of Mormon, and was true to that heavenly vision to the hour of his death, but because his life gave proof that he was a man of absolute integrity.

LET US REFRESH our memory: When David Whitmer died, here is what, among other things, were said of him in the Richmond Democrat, January 26, 1888:

He bore his long illness with great patience and fortitude, his faith never for a moment wavering, and when the summons came, he sank peacefully to rest with a smile on his countenance, as if he was being lulled to sleep by sweet music. Just before the breath left the body, he opened his eyes which glistened with the brightness of early manhood. He then turned them toward heaven, and a wonderful light came over his countenance, which remained several moments, when the eyes gradually closed and David Whitmer was gone to his rest.

On Monday last at ten o'clock in the morning, after awakening from a short slumber, he said he had seen beyond the veil and saw Christ on the other side. His friends who were constantly at his bedside claim that he had many manifestations of the truths of the great beyond, which confirms their faith beyond all shadow of doubt.

On Sunday evening at 5:30, January 22, 1888, Mr. Whitmer called his family and some friends to his bedside, and, addressing himself to the attending physician, said: "Dr. Buchanan, I want you to say whether or not I am in my right mind before I give my dying testimony."

The doctor answered: "Yes, you are in your right mind, for I have just had a conversation with you."

He then addressed himself to all around his bedside in these words: "Now you must all be faithful in Christ. I want to say to you all, the Bible and the record of the Nephites [Book of Mormon] are true, so you can say that you have heard me bear my testimony on my deathbed. All be faithful in Christ and your reward will be according to your works. God bless you all. My trust is in Christ forever, world without end.—Amen."

It is proper to state the Book of Mormon, the manuscript of which Mr. Whitmer retained to the day of his death, strongly condemns polygamy and the practice of Utah Mormons. In 1879, Orson Pratt and other [Utah] Mormon Elders came here and attempted to buy the manuscript, but Mr. Whitmer would part with it for no consideration, as he considered it his duty to retain it.

In the spring of 1887 he published a pamphlet setting forth his religious views, in which he strongly condemns polygamy and forcibly argues by giving Scripture quotations, in favor of the Church of Christ, which is the name taken by all true believers in the record of the Nephites.

His remains will be laid to rest tomorrow at the new city cemetery in Richmond. Mr. Whitmer was a very plain man, and it was his desire that no display of any kind be made at his burial, hence the only ceremony will be a few appropriate remarks at his late residence.—Reprinted in the Saints' Herald, February 11, 1888, page 95.

HERE IS AN ACCOUNT from the Chicago Times, January 26, 1888:

David Whitmer, one of the original Mormons, a sketch of whose life was printed in Tuesday's Times, died at his home in Richmond, Missouri, at five o'clock yesterday afternoon, the news reaching here last evening in a dispatch to Mr. VanCleave, of the city clerk's office. A Chicago man, on hearing of Mr. Whitmer's death, related the following incident:

"Some sixteen years ago I chanced to ride across the state of Missouri from Hannibal to Kansas City. There were but few in the car in which I rode, and the seat directly in front of mine was occupied by a very tall, quiet, elderly gentleman, with whom I had some conversation. Some things in his dress, manners, and talk caused me to think that he was a prosperous Pennsylvania Quaker, journeying west to look after his investments. I soon found, however, that he was possessed of much information about the land over which we were passing, the various resource of the same, and of its early history. About noon a gentleman in the car asked me into the smoker to enjoy a cigar. He asked me if I knew the man with whom I had been talking. I informed him that I did not. He then stated that it was David Whitmer, one of the 'testifiers' of the Book of Mormon, and one of the early associates of Joseph Smith. I asked him if he was well acquainted with Mr. Whitmer, and he stated that he was, having always lived in the same county with him. As I now remember he said he was brought up on a farm, but had for several years been practicing law or performing the duties of sheriff of the county. At my request he gave an account of what he knew of our traveling companion and his estimate of his character.

"He said he was a small boy when some patriotic citizens proposed to drive the Mormons out of Missouri, the leading charges against them being that they were 'Yankee abolitionists and prohibitionists, who spent more time in going to meeting than most persons thought there was any need of.' He was on horseback behind his father when they were driven out. The leader of the party, he said, dismounted, took a stand on the stile in front of David Whitmer's house, and, producing various firearms and dirks, declared that he should stand guard over those premises. He declared that he would kill like a dog any man who ventured to molest David Whitmer or his brother or to take any of their goods. The Whitmers continued to reside on their places after their old companions had left, and were always highly respected. At the breaking out of the Civil War, the narrator continued, most of the people in our county were secessionists, and it was proposed to notify the union men that their room was much better than their company. A meeting was accordingly called, at which the sentiment of the community was to be expressed. Some speeches were made, and a committee was appointed to draft resolutions expressive of the feeling of the members present. At this point in the proceedings David Whitmer arose, walked to the platform, and delivered a short but very telling speech. He stated that no resolutions or threats would cause him to run away. He declared that he was a citizen of the United States and would remain such. He proposed to live or die under the old flag. If anyone desired to shoot him then was a good time. The resolutions were not passed; the meeting was adjourned to a given day, but it did not convene. In the opinion of this gentleman, no man in Missouri possessed greater courage or honesty than this heroic old man. 'His oath,' he said, 'would send a man to the gallows quicker than that of any man I ever knew.' He then went on to say that no person had ever questioned his word as to his knowledge about any other matter than finding the Book of Mormon. He was always a loser and never a gainer by adhering to the faith of Joseph Smith. Why persons should question his word about the golden plates, when they took it in relation to all other matters, was to him a mystery."—Reprinted in the Saints' Herald, February 11, 1888

Criticisms Answered

By Charles Fry

IN THE PAMPHLET, Prophetic Monthly, Dr. V. C. Oltrogge, president of the Arizona Bible Institute, wrote an article headed "Mormonism's Unscriptural Doctrine of the Godhead." He offers some criticisms of the teachings of the Mormon Church on the doctrine of God, including a general condemnation of the Book of Mormon as to its divinity. He holds the Bible to be an absolute and complete revelation allowing for none other to follow, and saying that irrespective of its teachings, the Book of Mormon is to be discarded.

Mormon Doctrine on God

The article quotes from the Deseret News, a Salt Lake City newspaper, a statement by Elder Talmage from a page devoted to the bishopric of the church:

There are three Gods forming the presidency and presiding council of the Universe. These are the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost. The Father is an exalted, perfected, and glorified being; he is a personage of tabernacle, and has a body of flesh and bones as tangible as man's; indeed he is himself an exalted man. . . . The Son was the Firstborn in the spirit, and is the Only Begotten in the flesh. By virtue of righteousness and obedience he attained unto the status of a God. . . . The Holy Ghost is a personage of spirit, a spirit person, an individual having a spirit body, and he can be in only one place at a time.

If Dr. Oltrogge has read the Book of Mormon he must be aware that such teachings on God are not derived from that book. They are not to be attributed to Joseph Smith or the church which he founded. They had their development in that body of people who left the original faith after they settled in Utah.

The Book of Mormon reveals God as Father, and as Son, and as the Holy Ghost. He is represented as being "from all eternity to all eternity, infinite and unchangeable." The God of the Book of Mormon did not grow into godship. He was not a man, except as Christ took upon himself human flesh that he might save the race, but it was not because of the flesh that he became God. The Book of Mormon says it was God who came down and took upon him flesh and blood.

The God revealed in the Book of Mormon is the same as the God of the Bible. The purpose of this book is repeatedly declared to be the upholding of the Bible teachings, especially about God, and to prove that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God and Savior of the world. The Mormon doctrine that "As man is, God once was; and as God is, man may become" is not the teaching of the Book of Mormon, neither was it ever countenanced by the Reorganized Church. Gods don't grow from men, and the very idea smacks of anthropomorphism to an extreme degree, bringing God down to the level of man.

Does the Book of Mormon Supplant the Bible?

The Book of Mormon comes under criticism on the grounds that the Bible, being an "absolute" and complete revelation, leaves no room for any later revelation. "If divine revelation consists of the Bible plus the Book of Mormon, then we have two absolutes in the realm of authoritative or revealed religion." The common teaching is assumed that the Bible contains all the word of God, as, in the language of the creeds, "Nothing at any time is to be added—whether by new revelation of the Spirit, or traditions of men."

The Bible is a witness testifying of God's dealings with his people in Palestine. The Book of Mormon is a witness testifying of God's dealings with a branch of Israel in America. Both books were being prepared at the same time, and both were written by men inspired of God. The divine author of both is the same; the Christ and the Holy Spirit are the same; the testimony is the same. The Book of Mormon is not an appendix to the Bible but an independent witness giving like testimony. A second witness in court giving independent and harmonious testimony confirming the first neither weakens nor supplants the testimony of the first, but strengthens it.

God Never Closed the Avenue of Communication

To say that God closed the canon of Scripture and cut man off from any further revelation is to say that he who kept open the avenue of communication between heaven and earth for four thousand years made a complete change in his nature and attitude. Yet the Bible says he never changes. To say that God favored the first half of human kind with light and truth as needed to meet current exigencies, then suddenly closed the windows of heaven, leaving the latter half to its own resources, is to say that God is partial. Yet the Bible says he is impartial and "keepeth covenant and mercy with them that love him, . . . to a thousand generations."

Whenever revelation has stopped—and it often has stopped temporarily—it was not due to any change in God's attitude or purpose, but was the result of man's refusing to accept and obey the voice of God. This is the testimony of the Bible itself that sin and unbelief have closed up the way.

Is it not for you to know judgment? Who hate the good, and love the evil. . . . Then shall they cry unto the Lord, but he will not hear them; he will even hide his face from them at that time, as they have behaved themselves ill in their doings.—Micah 3: 1-4.

Your iniquities have separated between you and your God, and your sins have hid his face from you, that he will not hear.—Isaiah 59: 2.

It was sin which separated man from God in Eden; it will be sin which will separate man from God in the final judgment. Sin, wickedness, and unbelief, anywhere, at any time, hang as a veil of separation between men and God. Faith with ready response to the will of God puts men in attunement with him that they may hear his voice. God's challenge through Malachi was "Prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it."

The Bible Declares for Continued Revelation

The Bible is not only without pronouncement as to revelation reaching a final end, but definitely and affirmatively advocates an unchanged policy of continued revelation to the end of the world, subject to the faith and response of the people. From Moses down through all the prophets God's interest in Israel is held unchanged, notwithstanding its national fall and scattering throughout the world. In the latter days he promised he would recover and re-establish his people, revealing himself, pouring out his Spirit upon them, and sending angels to minister to them. Hidden Scriptures would be unfolded to them. From the innumerable prophecies we give just a few:

Therefore, my people shall know my name; yea, in that day they shall know that I am he that doth speak; behold it is I. And then shall they say, How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him that bringeth good tidings unto them, that publisheth peace; . . . that saith unto Zion, Thy God reigneth.—Isaiah 52: 6, 7.

[When Israel and Judah become one nation—yet in the future] Moreover I will make a covenant of peace with them; it shall be an everlasting covenant with them; and I will place them, and multiply them, and will set my sanctuary in the midst of them for evermore. My tabernacle also shall be with them; yea, I will be their God, and they shall be my people.—Ezekiel 37: 26, 27.

The Lord also shall roar out of Zion, and utter his voice from Jerusalem; and the heavens and the earth shall shake; but the Lord will be the hope of his people, and the strength of the children of Israel.—Joel 3: 16.

Mercy and truth are met together; . . . truth shall spring out of the earth; and righteousness shall look down from heaven.—Ibid., vss. 10, 11.

All Israel shall be saved; as it is written, There shall come out of Zion the Deliverer, and shall turn away ungodliness from Jacob.—Romans 11: 26.

For Zion's sake will I not hold my peace, and for Jerusalem's sake I will not rest, until the righteousness thereof go forth as brightness, and the salvation thereof as a lamp that burneth.—Isaiah 62: 1.

The apostles were not able to receive all that Jesus desired to give them, but he promised:

When he, the Spirit of truth, is come, he will guide you into all truth; for he shall not speak of himself; but whatsoever he shall hear, that shall he speak; and he will shew you things to come.—John 16: 13, 14.

In addition to these evidences, the Bible tells of many angels whose coming was yet future, whose mission was to be the messengers of God. They will not be dumb messengers, but as those sent of God to reveal his mind and purpose and perform his work as in ancient times.

If the Bible is a closed canon it is only because man has closed it. God never did. After speaking of many common evils the Lord said, "These things hast thou done, and I kept silence." The promise is "Draw nigh to God, and he will draw nigh to you."

Latter Day Revelation

In strict accordance with Bible prophecy, the Book of Mormon was revealed by an angel of God and given to man. It is a new revelation from God, but not a new gospel; as the Lord says, "This is a new and everlasting covenant; even that which was from the beginning." Its very coming was a refutation of the doctrine of a closed canon. In this age when the Bible has been torn by a thousand false interpretations until its authority has been largely destroyed in the minds of the people, the Lord has brought forth another witness to testify of the same truth, thus reappointing men to the Bible and reaffirming its testimony. In this way the truth was established for the coming church, being brought forth from the ground.

Another angel came in glory, laid his hands upon two young men chosen of God, and conferred upon them divine authority in what is termed priesthood, whereby they were empowered to proceed in the establishing of the church of Jesus Christ for the turning of men to repentance and righteousness. Thus God showed his mercy toward men, fulfilling in part the prophecy, "Truth shall spring out of the earth, and righteousness shall look down from heaven."

From the beginning, the church has upheld the Bible, Book of Mormon, and the revelations given as its Scripture.

Don't Say It Couldn't Happen

THE "IMPOSSIBLE" is always happening. Actually, it is merely what we are unprepared for. It is just something that doesn't fit into our notions of would, should, or could.

Have you heard this true story about the Farmers' Almanac, published in New England continuously since 1792? This unusual book contains certain long-term predictions. Especially well-known are those concerning the weather, for the editors have had the audacity to forecast, many months in advance, the probable weather for every single day in the year.

One day long ago the editor said to the owner: "What shall I say about July 13?"

"Say snow and hail and rain" was the reply. It was meant to be facetious, but moved by some odd impulse, the editor put down "Snow, hail, and rain" for that July 13. And on July 13, it did snow, hail, and rain! The impossible came to pass, and many people began believing that the Farmers' Almanac had a direct wire to the Weather Maker!

The man who discovered anthracite coal in Pennsylvania was greeted with the word "impossible" when he said to his friend, "Look! I can burn stones."

"Without using wires I can send signals, voices, even opera songs to places far away," said Marconi.

"Impossible," said the world.

"The earth is round," said Galileo.

"Impossible," cried the learned men of his day.

IT IS INDEED POSSIBLE to recall a vast cavalcade of impossibles that have been achieved by men of vision and persistence. So why not learn to think the impossible, do the impossible, live with the impossible? That, in fact, has been the major glory of America, whose history and ideals constitute, in essence, the conquest of the impossible. The victory of General Washington was considered impossible by military experts. The achievement of unity as a United States was declared impossible by many doubters. The achievement of a precedent-shattering constitution seemed impossible to the little minds of that far-off day.

And so history has marched on—the impossible happening again and again. The most recent example is utilization of atomic energy, which seemed impossible until a few years ago.

THOUSANDS OF IMPOSSIBLE THINGS have been and are occurring constantly. Mothers and fathers do the impossible for their children. Dedicated souls render impossible service to humanity. In the aggregate these millions of impossible achievements make up the story of civilization.

By J. George Frederick

So open your mind to the impossible. Don't rate that boy incorrigible, that girl lost, or that criminal sunk in depravity. Don't abandon hope for that alcoholic who seems unsavable, that maladjusted person, that seemingly incurable ailment, or that tyrant who appears invincible. The task may seem overwhelming, but don't say it's impossible. Remember, it has snowed, hailed, and rained on July 13. The dead have come to life. The incurable has been cured and the evil mind cleansed. Hate has turned to love.

What must have seemed impossible to the ordinary person living in the Roman Empire about the time of Christ's death was that his teachings could survive. It seemed impossible that the handful of tortured martyrs living in the fetid catacombs could defy the crushing power of the superstate of that day. And yet it happened. Christianity grew more vital year by year, until today—almost two millennia later—what the martyrs stood for has burgeoned into a world-wide religion embracing the souls of hundreds of millions of people. Caesar's onemighty empire is just a distant memory.

Those early martyrs were following the example of a Man who refused to admit the impossible. He dared to dream of a temple purified, of a universal spirit of love and mercy. He believed in these impossibles even as the last tortured breath left Him on the cross.

"Impossible" is a word convicted and condemned by history. It has no place in our lexicon. The human spirit cannot now, and never has lived by craven obedience to the impossibles.

Life in Our Time

Part I: Lifetimes of Opportunity

By Don Savage

THOMAS PAINE once penned with heavy heart, "These are times that try men's souls." He carried in vivid memory the trials and sacrifices that some of our forefathers were asked to bear in order that this nation might come into being. Along with others Paine probably felt that his particular burden was more wearisome and difficult to bear than the burdens of men who went before him—and likely not to be exceeded by those who should come after.

One of the great mysteries of God, and a riddle continuously under human consideration, is why one generation or particular individuals in all generations are required to carry much heavier life-long loads than others to obtain salvation. Salvation is offered to every human being on the same contract terms—life-long obedience to all the commandments of God of which the individual is aware, regardless of the personal loss or gain involved therein. Lifelong obedience may be easy for some and difficult for others. One man may live long years in happiness and prosperity to finally die quietly in bed surrounded by his loved ones. Another may suffer severe afflictions all his days and finally end the unhappy existence chained to a burning stake surrounded by enemies. And still the same salvation is offered to each.

Few men taking upon them the name of Christ know which path will be theirs to tread. Men do not bargain with God to follow him only so long as the way is easy. They covenant to do everything they have the ability and opportunity to do to promote the cause of righteousness on earth. Anything less than this must break their covenant and bring them something less than celestial salvation. When at the last day we stand before the great white throne, we will understand why we have lived at the time we have and the reason for our particular life's circumstances. Experience and faith in God's work brings assurance that there is a righteous and wonderful answer.

SOME ACTIONS OF GOD are strange to our eyes: potential or ability to perform great works is created within a body and yet the opportunity to fulfill those potentialities is forever lacking. Thus, at the death of the creature the talent returns to Him who gave it, much like the tiny soul of a baby which is carried back to heaven after but a glimpse of mortality.

Think of the millions of seeds produced in the vegetable kingdom year after year! A fine old box-elder tree stands over our backyard, its branches laden with clusters of seeds. Any one of those seeds can produce another box-elder tree which can in turn produce thousands of little box-elder trees. If I could gather every seed of that tree this season, I suppose I could plant them all in our yard. But what of next season? And what of the season twenty years from now when my yardful of trees each produces a yardful of trees? Soon the world would not hold them all. And this is but one tree of one species. Obviously God created potential life with sure knowledge that it would never see earthly fulfillment. I can't explain the reason why, but it is true and I am forced to accept the fact.

The same is true of the animal kingdom of which we are members. Tiny germ organisms are produced by the millions, with opportunity of life for but a relative few. In human beings countless sperm cells are produced, each capable under the proper conditions of producing another human being; yet by the plan of God only a few can ever fulfill their potentiality. What would be the offering to mankind if these millions of potential lives were to obtain mortality? Why is a tiny soul terribly crippled in mind even at birth chosen for life from among thousands and thousands of others with powerful minds who may not be given mortal opportunities?

It is exceedingly sobering to me to think upon these things. How much I am forced to realize my willful failures and disobediences! What a miserable representative of God and man I am! Who am I that I should selfishly look upon another's life with covetous eyes and envy his lot? Better to spend every instant in the keeping of my covenant and let every other man keep his.

IT IS A MISTAKE to suppose that among the generations of men who lived in the dark days following the apostasy of the early Christian church, there were none who would have believed the gospel had there been someone to teach them. Very likely if a group from the year A. D. 1200 could be brought back to live their lives anew in this day, about the same percentage would believe the gospel as among a similar number chosen at random in the year 1953. The only difference in actuality is that some of the people living now have the opportunity to be baptized and receive the Holy Spirit of celestial promise, while those of A. D. 1200 did not have this opportunity. As much as they might have wanted to be baptized, there was no officer of Christ to help them. The best they could do was keep every commandment within their power and trust God to judge them according to what they would have done if they had had the opportunity. And thus it is with us all.

King Benjamin of Book of Mormon days in his down-to-earth explanations of the will of God exhorted his people (including us) to aid the beggar when they could. We are to be generous in all good ways to every man, and if we have not the means to be generous, then we should at least order our hearts into the position where we can truthfully say, "I give not because I have not; but if I had, I would give" (Mosiah 2: 40). For God looks upon the heart and judges by what is found there.

It is not necessary that we try to find a rational answer for all of the godly mysteries suggested here. Without the benefit of the sealed portion of Mormon's record, enough can be seen to make us reverent and enough can be understood to bring us salvation. Somehow we, a little group on earth, stand chosen in some manner from among a million times our number who might have lived in our place. Through this great fortune alone we are morally required to make the very best of our lives. Our task is to be intelligent beings, co-operative with the Holy Spirit, seeking and finding those opportunities for service which are pleasing in the sight of God. It is not an easy task. Without his Spirit it is an impossible task. But we do have the key to his help: "Behold, I stand at the door, and knock: if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me. To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame, and am set down with my Father in his throne."—Revelation 3: 20, 21.

But we must find within our own souls the desire and courage to turn the key.

The Life of Hubert Case

Part XI

Morris Moldrup

The branch at Seiling, Oklahoma, had been disorganized, and the Saints were very discouraged. Apostle I. N. White asked Hubert to go with the president of the district, Brother A. M. Chase, and reorganize that branch. He said, "You will be guided as to who shall be chosen and who will guide that group of people." So they prayed and fasted over the matter that they might be guided by the Spirit of God. They went to the hall where they had held some meetings, and as they were going across the street, Hubert heard the voice of the Spirit speak to him, "Separate unto me my servant Morris Moldrup and ordain him to the office of elder that he may lead this people."

After they entered the hall, he asked Brother Chase if he had heard that voice. Brother Chase said, "No, I did not." Hubert told him of the Spirit's message, and he said, "Don't tell that to the people; the Lord will direct their vote. Wait until after the vote is taken." They presented the matter to the group that night and took a vote. It was unanimous for Morris Moldrup. Then Hubert arose and told them of his experience. Elder Moldrup presided over that group of people for over twenty-five years, a humble servant of God.

Freedom, Oklahoma

While Hubert was on that trip, Apostle I. N. White sent him to Freedom, Oklahoma, to organize the members there into a branch after the officers had moved away and the people were stranded. It was thirty miles from the railroad, and a man by the name of Martin Moreland met him at the station, taking him and a young man, Alva Chrestensen, to his place. It was a long drive with a team and wagon, and on the way out they talked of many things, but the subject that was uppermost in their hearts all the time was the organization of the branch.

Brother Moreland said to Hubert three different times in answer to the question that he had raised: "Well, how are you going to know who should lead the people?" Hubert told him the Lord would direct. Whereupon he said, "Suppose the Lord won't direct?" Hubert said, "If the Lord doesn't direct us, we won't make a choice." Then he added, "How did the Lord direct Joseph Smith for the organization?"

They had a fine prayer meeting, but not one word was given in any way to indicate who should be chosen. So the next day the three of them were sitting and talking in Brother Moreland's house while he was mending some harness. They were talking over the branch and the possibilities of the progress of the work when Hubert received this inspiration: "Say unto my servant, Martin Moreland, 'If you will put away your doings from before my face which are displeasing to me and step forward into the leadership of this work, it will be pleasing to me.'" Hubert did not tell him at that time. Brother Chrestensen and Hubert were invited to the home of another family of Saints to take lunch with them, and on the way back after they had eaten and visited for an hour or two, Hubert told this young man what was given him. He said he had had the same thing given to him. So when they came to where Brother Moreland was loading broomcorn into his wagon, Hubert said, "Brother Moreland, I have had some words of direction in this matter." When he told him of the experience Brother Moreland commenced to cry, saying, "I knew it all the time! I knew that was coming!"

In a few minutes a man who was to haul a load for him drove up and he took a big plug of tobacco out of his pocket, handed it to the man, and said, "Here, I have no more use for it." He never tasted tobacco afterward, but it was an awful struggle for him. He was unanimously chosen for leader of those people and served them well for many years.

Ten Angry Men

While there in Brother Moreland's house one Friday night, Hubert had a vision in which he saw himself surrounded by ten men who were swearing angrily and looking as if they would devour him. He told this vision to Brother Moreland and Brother Chrestensen. He sent the young man on to Woodward, Oklahoma, to start a meeting on Sunday morning, saying he would be there Sunday night. That evening Hubert preached in great power on the restoration of the gospel, and the house was packed; people had to sit around him on the platform.

By Alice Montague Case

After the sermon was over, he stepped down toward the door to shake hands with everyone, and he found himself immediately surrounded by ten of the angriest men he ever saw. He could not get away because he was in the middle of a circle. There was no use trying to talk because they would not let him. There were about three or four talking at once; after about an hour the crowd had gone home, but they still railed and raved at him. He did not know what they were going to do, but he finally asked, "Well, what do you men want? What is the matter with you?" An old man standing outside the circle said, "I will tell you. When you got through with that sermon, you left all of us out." Hubert said, "That is true, but I invited you in. I was showing the setting up of the kingdom, and I came here to ask you to be a part of it."

After making that explanation he watched the men file out of the building still swearing as they went. Soon all were gone but one young man, who apologized, saying, "I have never seen such a disgraceful thing in my life; I am ashamed of our community."

A Daughter in College

We had been living in Kingfisher four years when our oldest daughter was graduated from Kingfisher High School in June, 1913. She was among the top-ranking pupils of her class, and later during the summer the president of Kingfisher College called at our house to try to enroll her as a student.

After talking with both of us, he offered her tuition free. Since the college was only one and a half miles from town so that she could walk the distance and board at home, we gladly accepted his offer.

The Warlick Debate

A little later in the summer, Hubert was holding a meeting at Anadarko when Sister Lizzie Simmons drove down from the Panhandle of Texas to take him back there to debate with Joe Warlick of the Campbellite church at Ochiltree. Hubert knew this man and his ability and methods, having been moderator for J. F. Curtis when he met Warlick.

He was meeting one of the most popular men he had ever heard debate, and the night before the debate started, a messenger stood by his bed and told him not to follow his opponent in any of his slander, abuse, or ridicule. Warlick's first speech was a tirade against Latter Day Saints, but when Hubert arose to answer, he said: "Ladies and gentlemen, we have heard nothing but slander, abuse, ridicule, and vulgarity, which is beneath the dignity of a minister for Jesus Christ. That is not the proposition. The proposition is 'Who Has the Gospel?'" He spent his whole time preaching with all the power he had at his command. The debate might just as well have closed at that first session, because Hubert had won the whole crowd by courtesy and kindness. Not once in the whole debate did he ever say an unkind thing against his opponent's church, despite Warlick's continual slander.

Mr. and Mrs. Hancock, rich cattle owners in the Panhandle, came to Hubert at the close of the second session of the debate and said, "Brother Case, we would like to stay and hear your good speeches, but our minister has talked so bad that we cannot endure it any longer. We are going home."

One wealthy cattleman by the name of Pierson paid Mr. Warlick $400 to run the Latter Day Saints out of that country. At the close of the debate, Mr. Pierson called Hubert over to the cot where he was lying sick with palsy and said, "Mr. Case, you have made the cleanest debate I have ever heard in all my life." Another prominent cattleman talked out before a crowd of men at the end of the big tent and said, "Gentlemen, I am a Mormon—Joseph Smith, Book of Mormon, and all. I believe every word of it."

During one of Mr. Warlick's speeches, he said, "Old Joe Smith was the worst ignoramus I have read after in all my life. He did not have sense enough to put a punctuation mark in the whole first edition of the Book of Mormon." Then he proceeded to tell how the second chapter of Jacob ought to be punctuated to make it teach polygamy. When Hubert's time came to speak, he said: "Ladies and gentlemen, unfortunately for my opponent, I happen to have the first edition of the Book of Mormon," and he read it exactly as it is punctuated in our present edition, then went on with his talk. That is all the reference he made to him, and Warlick slipped up to the pulpit and took the book off the pulpit, which Hubert wanted him to do, because he was sitting by the president of the Business College in Amarillo, Texas, and the Methodist preacher from Ochiltree. Hubert never mentioned the Book of Mormon again. He said, "Ladies and gentlemen, my opponent won't refer to the Book of Mormon. I am glad those two eminent gentlemen saw that statement and how he misrepresented us." To show he was a scholar Warlick never took a Bible or any book in the pulpit during the whole debate because he knew the Bible and could quote Scripture more easily and correctly than anyone Hubert had ever heard.

His Voice Healed

The next to the last session of that debate Hubert's voice "played out" and he could not speak above a whisper. His opponent roared like a lion and ridiculed a man of God who would lose his voice. When they went to lunch, old Brother Sam Simmons, his moderator, was with him; while Sister Simmons was getting their lunch, they went into the bedroom and he administered to Hubert. When he took his hands off his head, Hubert's voice was as clear as a bell. When he went back to the afternoon session of the debate, he found his opponent couldn't speak above a whisper. So the debate ended that way.

President Frederick M. Smith Visits Indians

Hubert has always considered the Indian work in Oklahoma to be the greatest mission opened up in his lifetime. During the fall President Frederick M. Smith came to Oklahoma, and in company with Hubert, visited first the Cheyennes and Arapahoes, then the Kiowas, Sacs, Foxes, and Otoes, where they held meetings with a multitude of Indians from various tribes. After one meeting, at which they had both preached, a full-blood Cheyenne who was an Episcopal minister asked if he might speak. Hubert told him to go ahead. He said, "I have heard Mr. Case preach for the last two years, and I am convinced that these men have the Comforter, which is what all the Indians want. For that reason, I am going to be baptized, and come into this church." His name was Charles Wicks.

From that meeting they went to visit the Kaws and the Osages. Then on to Sperry, Oklahoma, before President Smith returned to Independence. Brother Smith was very much interested in what he saw during his visit and continued that interest all his lifetime.

Enid, Oklahoma

Hubert held a meeting on the street in Enid, Oklahoma, where there were a number of Utah elders preaching, because the Saints in the town wanted him to tell the difference between the two churches. He replied to the Mormons one night; after that, they sat on the curb and listened to him for three weeks. At the last meeting he talked on the Book of Mormon. There were sixteen preachers from the Christian College just east of town, one Adventist preacher, and two Holiness preachers, besides seven of the Utah elders. His audience numbered over 450, and the people were standing up. He started in at eight o'clock, and there was a running fire of questions from those preachers all the way through—not from the Utah elders but from the others, especially from the men of the college.

When he read the statement from the sixteenth chapter of Mark that these signs shall follow those that believe, the dean of the university stopped him and asked if he would eat a box of "Rough on Rats" if he would go and get it for him. Hubert said, "Go get it, and I will show you." He went to the drugstore and bought a box of it, and demanded Hubert should eat it. Of course the large audience was very much excited over it, when he said to him: "Hold on. I want to ask you a question or two. Will you swear that this is 'Rough on Rats?'" He said, "Yes, I will swear that this is 'Rough on Rats.'" Hubert said, "Well, another question—do you believe the Bible?" He said, "Yes, I do." Hubert said, "According to your interpretation of the Bible, you should eat it," and asked if he would eat it and prove to that audience that he was a Christian. The audience just yelled and booed him.

Hubert said, "We are also told 'It is written again, Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God.' Now if I deliberately take a poison and then demand God to heal me, I am tempting him to perform a miracle to show off his power. However, should I be given poison by the enemies of Christ, his promise would apply, and I would not be hurt." The dean became very angry. He said, "I demand that you lay your hands on me and heal me because I am a sick man." Hubert said, "I can prove by this whole audience that you are a murderer. You came here with murder in your heart, and got that poison to kill me." He became angrier still and started to leave; the audience booed him until he was out of sight.

When Hubert finished his talk, it was twelve o'clock. He had preached four hours. Everyone was greatly interested because he answered every one of those men on all the questions that they raised.

Inspiration

By M. Virginia Fisher

MANY OF YOU have heard President Eisenhower's inaugural address. It was a speech meant to inspire the American people with confidence in him, his government, and in the fact that they could do a good job. Such inspiration is the spring from which much goodness flows. Likewise we women have a job to do in inspiring our husbands and children to lead good lives in the service of our Master.

The busy mother of a household may often feel like a piece of bubble gum being pulled in a dozen different directions. She is the bubble about to burst. At such times a silent prayer will help her to meet her demands—father wanting his clean shirt, Gary his sore finger attended to, Baby crying, and breakfast to get ready, all requiring infinite patience. However, the headaches and the sore backs seem worth while when we consider the important job we are doing.

Some months ago an article in the Herald began, "What makes one person develop into a Joseph Smith and another into a Hitler? What causes one man to develop humanity and another destroy it? What powers direct one man to serve God and another to serve the Devil?" When we stop to think that we as mothers and wives are largely responsible for the people in this world, our task seems too great.

FROM MY EXPERIENCES with children while teaching I can give illustrations of some of the problems of childhood and the importance of upbringing.

George had the ability to do "B" work, which is a little above average. He was doing a poor "C." By delving into his background I discovered that he had been the petted baby of the family while his father was overseas for five years. Then when his little sister arrived he was pushed to one side of the picture and was expected to be a very good little boy. His older sister was doing very well at school and he was expected to do just as well. His older sister received money for her "A's" and "B's" and I think George must have received strappings for his "C's" and "D's" for he couldn't seem to write a story without repeating that someone or other had been hit about twenty times or more. It didn't matter how he started, he always ended his stories the same way. I talked to his mother and tried to tell her that he needed encouragement. She decided to try but resorted to the method of using the bribe of money for "A's." In his next report, George, a little more enthusiastic, began working harder, but like his parents he expected too much to happen at once. When he took his next report home, it had improved but it wasn't as good as the sister's. He was told that he could have done better. George's ambition was gone. He had worked for some honor and praise and had received none.

Another pupil, Peter, was not as clever as George, but he did just as well. He was a happy, well-adjusted youngster, who didn't need strapping to make him come in at night. His father had a workshop, and there was a place in it for Peter. He was in grade three at the time and could do things with a ruler as well or better than I could. He could be depended on to do things that better students were unable to do. Peter was dependable because his parents had taught him to be.

Another boy named Paul was undernourished. There were rumors that his parents had used drugs to get him to go to sleep at night. He had poor discipline at home and was a problem child at school. He was only in grade one, yet he asked defiantly for the strap.

Ray, a boy from a poor home in every way, knew no moral standards. Being the toughest fighter was his code. Trying to teach him right from wrong was like teaching a foreign language.

Myrna, an only daughter, was encouraged by her parents to have confidence in them. She could never rest easy until she had confessed a misdemeanor. Her parents taught her to square her shoulders to the responsibilities of her actions.

FROM SUCH AS THESE come the Joseph Smiths and the Adolph Hitlers. For the task of homemaking we women need inspiration. We can find it in the Scriptures:

Who can find a virtuous woman? for her price is far above rubies. The heart of her husband doth safely trust in her, so that he shall have no need of spoil. She will do him good and not evil all the days of her life. She seeketh wool, and flax, and worketh willingly with her hands.—Proverbs 31: 10-13.

Reading such Scripture makes a woman better envision the task that is before her. Often a woman does not realize the harm she may be doing her husband. Here is what sometimes happens.

A young girl is undecided about the man that she should marry. Her parents have given her the impression that the man of her choice is not as well educated nor as good a provider as she might have been expected to find. Being influenced by her parents and the desire for social position, she is always driving her husband. She wants him to be a success in a financial way so that she can keep up with the Joneses and the Browns.

Another woman may have no confidence in her husband's ability to take part in public affairs. If a man is going to help his community and his Lord, he must have his wife beside him, not red-faced at home for fear he will make a grammatical error when he speaks.

A woman can be an inspiration to her husband. Emma Smith was told:

Continue in the spirit of meekness, and beware of pride. Let thy soul delight in thy husband, and the glory which shall come upon him. . . . And except thou do this, where I am thou canst not come.—Doctrine and Covenants 24: 4.

She was told to delight in her husband's glory and to beware of pride in herself. Do we fail in this?

So often we can't be happy unless we are bolstering our own self-esteem. We may do this by wanting the nicest home in the block or by insisting on the latest fashions for our wardrobes. What service can our husbands give to God if they always have to be worrying about giving us the things of the world? The standards of our lives will measure up to what we put into them. If we can a poor quality of vegetable, we will serve a poor quality of vegetable; if we sow poor seed, we will get poor harvests. If we set our goal high, then we have the opportunity of at least climbing.

We must keep our morale high as we attempt to serve the Lord. We will then be better able to inspire our families. When our children are grown and the years have taken their toll our reward may be—"Her children arise up and call her blessed; her husband also, and he praises her."—Proverbs 31: 28.

Seek Ye First the Kingdom

By Marion C. McKim

(See page 23.)

AS I THOUGHT of the theme, "Seek ye first the kingdom," I wondered what we must do to our own lives in order to start putting the kingdom first. I believe that the thing we need most for kingdom living is love, or in the words of the Scriptures, charity. In Doctrine and Covenants 11: 4 we are told: "No one can assist in this work except he shall be humble and full of love."

Jesus once said, "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another."—John 13: 35.

In the seventh chapter of Moroni we are told, "Charity is the pure love of Christ . . . and whoso is found possessed of it at the last day, it shall be well with them." Also we are told to "pray with all the energy of heart that we may be filled with this love."

It will take a lot of hard work for us to possess this pure love of Christ. We say we love our brothers and sisters—and we really do—but the love that we now possess is not great enough. We often become angry or hurt because of something someone else does or fails to do. We become provoked with our children because they act like children. We are irked with our companions because they don't think the way we want them to think. God said, "Charity is not easily provoked."

We are all human enough to think that the things we do and the ideas we have are right—the best ever. We don't mind telling the world how wonderful we are either. We throw out our chests and tell of our accomplishments or sometimes we don't say a word—we just strut around and let our actions show how superior we feel. God said, "Charity is not puffed up."

God said, "Charity is kind." Are we always kind?

"Charity suffereth long." Are we patient in our suffering?

Are we critical of every little thing others do? Do we try to help them? Do we overlook their shortcomings as we expect our misdeeds to be overlooked? It doesn't take much to strike back at the person who has hurt us. Only a person with a strong character—a person full of love—can overlook the hurts.

Jesus gave us a new commandment: "Love one another, even as I have loved you." At another time he said, "Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you and persecute you." This is hard to do; yet, if we are to live a Christlike life, we must learn to do it.

None of us can stand alone. We are all dependent on the love of others to help us, and if it weren't for love, no one would be willing to help anyone else.

God has told us that Satan is hard at work within the church and within our own families, trying to destroy the love that is here.

Let us work, even harder, to possess the pure love of Christ within our hearts, so that Satan cannot destroy us.

Camp Songs

By Ronald Kirlin

AT CAMP THIS PAST YEAR our theme song was "Have Thine Own Way, Lord." I wonder if this hymn wouldn't be useful as a regular theme song in this movement of restoring the gospel of Jesus to the earth? It might be the title on our banner for the coming years.

Have thine own way, Lord,

Have thine own way.

Thou art the potter; I am the clay.

Mold me and make me after thy will,
While I am waiting, yielded and still.

God is the potter. We are his makings. He has made us from clay and put us here. He has given us our free agency, the right to choose our own standards. We believe that the standards we should bear are the standards of Jesus Christ. In our prayers we need to ask God to help us—to make us and mold us after his will. We know that we have found the way to the kingdom of God, and we must let our Maker mold us into pottery useful for holding the spiritual gifts he has bestowed upon us.

Have thine own way, Lord,

Have thine own way,

Search me and try me, Master, today.

Make my faith center ever in thee,
And to thy teachings, true may I be.

The Master is seeking us and trying us each day. He tries to find us in many ways—through friendship, knowledge, and prayer. We need to have faith in him always. We remember Peter as he walked on the water. He stepped from the boat onto the water and walked to Christ, constantly watching the Master's face. Then Peter began to think of himself. As a result, he began to sink into the water. As long as Peter walked ahead, watching the face of Christ in faith, he stayed on top; but when he thought of Peter, he sank.

Have thine own way, Lord,

Have thine own way.

Help me to follow thee every day.

Open my eyes, Lord, help me to see
Christ ever, always, walking with me.

When Judas left the upper room during the Last Supper, it was said that he stumbled into darkness as he departed. Judas left the light behind him when he left Jesus. His eyes were blinded with darkness. We must open our eyes and see the light of the true gospel. Then we must follow that guiding light. Jesus said, "I am the light of the world. He that followeth me shall not walk in darkness."

Here Is the Writer . . .

Ronald Kirlin is seventeen and will graduate this spring from Cheyenne High School, Cheyenne, Wyoming. He plans to attend the University of Wyoming in the fall. His special interests right now are architecture and sports. Two years ago Cheyenne Branch was left without a pastor. The women of the branch made the matter a subject of prayer, hoping that a pastor might be sent there from some other place. Somewhat to their surprise, yet much to their joy, Ron was called to the priesthood soon after. He was fifteen at that time.

This article was inspired by his attendance at youth camp in 1952.

Have thine own way, Lord,

Have thine own way,

Help me to love thee more every day.

Help me to know that thy love so free
Is greater in value than all else to me.

It was when one of the scribes asked Jesus which was the first and greatest commandment that Jesus replied, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart and with all thy soul and with all thy mind and with all thy strength." We all know the adage, "Love thy neighbor." As we grow in the kingdom of God, we know that we must love all people, and then the love of God will be forever with us. Love is of God, and God is love. We must have love in order to build Zion.

Have thine own way, Lord,

Have thine own way.

Bless what I offer to thee today.

Help me to always remember thee,

And thy precious blood shed for me.

God intended that we remember him, and we do remember him through our service to his church. We remember Christ through our offerings, our prayers, and our friendship with others. We are made to remember Christ at prayer and preaching services, at church school, at youth camps, at reunions. We remember him the way his disciples remembered him. Jesus knew that his effort would be sustained only if his twelve chosen ones remembered him. So during the last night of his earthly life he made a careful plan to establish himself in their memory. This plan was the Last Supper, the sacred communion that we, today, still partake of in remembrance of him. "This do in remembrance of me," said Christ, and as a result of the remembrance of his disciples, Christian belief has spread throughout the world. The future of our church today lies in the hands of those workers who will remember Jesus and his teachings.

Have thine own way, Lord,

Have thine own way.

Guide me and keep me, Master, each day.

Help me be pure, Lord, and may I be True to the faith thou hast in me.

God has faith in each of us. He has given us a tremendous task, but he has faith that we are capable of completing it—even the establishment of his kingdom. Of his faith in us we are assured—it is our faith in him that often wavers.

Let us determine this year and in all years ahead to let God have his way: We will need to work hard together, and without reservation. We shall have the decision to make—will it be our way, or God's way?

Graceland GAZETTE

■ Graceland students in Applied Music presented a recital Sunday afternoon, February 1. Included in the program were representative works for organ, voice, piano, and brass bass.

■ Students and faculty members attended an open house for creative hobbies and avocations on Sunday, February 8. This was sponsored by the Religious Activities Department and was one of the features of the creative interest unit. Both students and people from Lamoni participated in the event by entering hobbies and creative interests in the exhibit. Creative interests were shown in the fields of photography, art, writing, home decoration, handcraft, landscaping, Scouting, horticulture, and bird raising.

■ On March 27 a chartered bus will leave the Graceland campus loaded with forty-two members of the college band starting on their annual tour. The band will play before church groups and high school student bodies and assemblies in Missouri, Oklahoma, Texas, and Kansas, returning to Independence, Missouri, a second time to participate in the Easter Sunrise Service.

■ Dr. Roy Cheville took part in the Religious Emphasis Week Convention at Kansas State Teachers College in Pittsburg, Kansas, February 15 to 20, along with members of the Catholic, Jewish, and Protestant faiths. He was asked to speak on such topics as mental hygiene, educational psychology, science for elementary teachers, communication, biology and social ethics, problems of human populations, scientific thinking versus religious thinking, contemporary American problems, religions of the world, religion in homes of mixed religious marriages, and the history, beliefs, and practices of the Reorganized Church.

Young People in the News

Reporter and European Traveler

Roger Yarrington

AS A JOURNALISM STUDENT, Roger Yarrington, six-foot-two-inch, twenty-one-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Byron O. Yarrington of Lamoni, Iowa, was editor in chief of his school newspaper three times. During part of his senior year at the University of Kansas he was editorial writer of the University Daily Kansan. He was also editor of the Graceland Tower in 1950-51 and editor of the Lamoni High School Trumpeter while a junior and senior in high school.

A trip to Europe this past summer aided him in his editorial work. He and his roommate of last year, Jim Tabor, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold A. Tabor also of Lamoni, spent the entire summer visiting England, France, and Italy.

The two fellows were especially impressed with their visit to the Enfield Church in London, England, where they received a warm reception. Two close friends of theirs, Dick Cheville and Jim White, also of Lamoni, had visited this same branch during their trips to Europe. This was the only branch they visited, as they did not travel farther north than Stratford-on-Avon in England; France and Italy have no organized branches.

A more recent trip for Roger was his journey to the national convention of Delta Sigma Chi, professional journalism fraternity, in Boulder, Colorado, during November. The local chapter selected him as the delegate to represent the University of Kansas.

During his last semester at KU, Roger was president of Liahona Fellowship, the church student group of approximately sixty members on the campus. Last year he was vice-president of the group.

In high school he was coeditor of the school's year book, The Flame, and captain of the basketball team. He was also very active in Scouting, having achieved the Eagle Scout award and being one of the first church members to receive the God and Country award. While in Scouting he regularly attended Scout camp. He also attended youth camp at Camp Yopeca, Lake Doniphan, for several years.

While a Graceland he participated in varsity basketball his freshman year. He was also president of the AUB social club.

After graduation at the semester, Roger took a job as reporter for an Iowa daily newspaper, the Burlington Hawkeye Gazette. He plans to continue this work until Uncle Sam calls him for a year or more of military service.

Question Time

Question:

In the Book of Mormon story of the return of the sons of Lehi to Jerusalem to secure the records of their people, was it the Spirit of God, or another spirit (an evil spirit) that constrained Nephi to kill Laban?

California

N. D. M.

Answer:

The reading of the context in the first book of Nephi seems to leave no doubt in the matter. The explanation there given in the word of the Lord is "It is better that one man should perish, than that a nation should dwindle and perish in unbelief."

God's over-all concern for the salvation of souls is the only reason such an act would be justified. That was the only reason for destroying the world by flood in the days of Noah; for destroying Korah, Dathan, and Abiram with their two hundred and fifty princes of renown and the fourteen thousand seven hundred who rose in rebellion against Moses and Aaron (see Numbers 16); the only reason why Moses was commanded to slay the Midianites, Hittites, Amorites, Canaanites, Perizzites, Hivites and Jebusites (see Numbers 31 and Deuteronomy 20: 17); and the only reason why men and women had to suffer death by stoning for breaking the commandments under the Law of Moses.

An evil spirit would not likely constrain one to have the kind of faith that prompted Nephi to go alone to Laban's home under such circumstances that the will and commandments of God might be done. It was the Spirit of God that prevailed in the entire life of Nephi.

HAROLD I. VELT

Question:

Do the Reorganized Latter Day Saints teach that unsaved people have a second chance for repentance after death?

Iowa

E. L. C.

Answer:

The Three Books—the Bible, the Book of Mormon, and the Book of Doctrine and Covenants—constitute the adopted Scriptures of this church; whatever is found taught therein is the doctrine of the church, and nothing else.

These Scriptures teach upon the point requested that the gospel is to be preached to every soul and that the part of humanity which did not hear it in this world will have the privilege of hearing it in the hereafter. They will have the opportunity of accepting or rejecting it. The Scriptures do not teach that persons who have had ample opportunity of hearing the gospel in this life, and have rejected it, will be given another chance in the spirit world. Every man must have his opportunity, but with that opportunity once given, rejected and lost, it will not be renewed. (This all relates to the true and authoritative gospel of Jesus Christ, not to the common teaching of Christianity in the world generally.)

CHARLES FRY

Question:

Why do we celebrate December 25 as Christ's birthday? Are there not some indications that Christ was born in the spring?

Missouri

R. C. T.

Answer:

There is no conclusive information as to why or when December 25 was chosen as the time for celebrating the anniversary of the birth of Christ. Apparently little interest was shown in the matter until the early part of the third century. At that time Hippolytus, Bishop of Rome, chose January 2 for commemorating Christ's birth. Others proposed the dates of March 25 or 28, and April 18 or 19. For some time January 6 was celebrated as the spiritual birthday or the date of his baptism, as well as his physical birthday.

Three reasons have been generally accepted as having been important in the choice of December 25:

1. The so-called "Plan of the Ages"

By complex and fantastic reasoning, it was thought that the creation of the world began on March 25, hence Christ, the Paschal Lamb, was conceived on March 25, the anniversary of the creation, and born on December 25.

2. John the Baptist's birth

By quite unsubstantiated reasoning based on the gospel stories, it was concluded that the conception of John the Baptist took place in September. By this reasoning, Christ would have been conceived six months later, in March, and therefore born in December.

3. The pagan celebrations of Saturnalia and Brumalia

In pagan Rome the celebrations of the Saturnalia, December 17 to 24, and Brumalia, December 25, were times of rejoicing in the unconquered sun, for it was in this period that the steady increase of darkness in the Northern Hemisphere ended, and the days began to grow longer. Christianity is thought to have adopted these Roman holidays using the symbolism of the unconquered sun to represent the birth of Christ and the beginning of the unconquerable light of Christ which shall overcome the darkness and sin of the world.

Question:

Will children who die in infancy endure temptation at the end of the millennial reign?

Oklahoma

MRS. P. S.

Answer:

Little children who die before they reach the years of accountability are saved through the mercies and atonement of Christ. They will be resurrected at his coming to inherit the celestial kingdom, and like all the others to "go no more out" (Revelation 3: 12). Satan cannot come there. The redeemed are above and beyond all evil and cannot be tempted.

During the millennium there will be people on the earth, not with the redeemed in the holy city, who still live in mortality, which means that they will still be possessed of inherited evil, and when Satan is loosed they will be subject to temptation. Many will turn to sin and be led into rebellion, and will seek to destroy the holy kingdom; these will be destroyed by fire from heaven.

Letter From a Serviceman

Many times I have felt like writing to express a few of my thoughts and my appreciation to my home congregation, Flint, Michigan, for sending the Saints' Herald to the fellows in the service. I have felt a portion of God's Holy Spirit resting on me many times as I have read from the church publications; others in the service have expressed themselves to me in this manner also. God has truly been with us. We are his children, and if we endeavor to do his will, he will abide with us. Many of us are privileged to meet only with small groups, but we have the promise (in Matthew 18: 20) that "where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst of them."

After reading the article under P.S. entitled "Heat" (August 18, 1952, issue) I decided to write a few of the things which have been on my mind for some time. This article deals with Alaska, and I would like to say that those who have never been in this country cannot really begin to know what it is like. I had heard so many stories of Alaska—the land of eternal ice and snow, Eskimos, and igloos—that I was very surprised to find here the largest proportion of the population is made up of the white race. As for igloos—they are something I have only seen in movies or read about in books. Here in Anchorage we have many modern buildings which are as nice as those in the States.

Whoever wrote "Heat" asked, "Anybody planning a trip to Alaska? We'd like to go along as valet, cook, colporteur, or personal bodyguard—almost anything to get to go." When I get out of the service, I plan to return to Alaska. There is a work to be done here for God, and if I can be an instrument in his hands in carrying out this work, then here is where I want to be. Good church members are needed—people who are truly dedicated to God's work. If the writer is still interested, he may have transportation to Anchorage with me when I return late in 1954.

We have the job of evangelizing the world. Alaska is a vast territory with only one branch of our church within its boundaries. This field is truly white and ready to harvest. Are there those who care to help in the harvesting? The time to work is now. "Jesus is calling, Oh hear him today, Calling for you, . . . Will you not quickly his summons obey? Jesus is calling for you."

Sincerely,

Jack Lee Little

An Experience in Faith

About eight o'clock one evening last August, Brother Weedmark called, and asked if it was too late for me to fix a refrigerator. I told him, "No," since in service work you are subject to call at all times. He said he was trying to get a used refrigerator for his mother, and that he had located one, but not knowing much about it, he wondered if I could come and see if it was worth the price asked before he bought it.

I met him at the place and as soon as I opened the unit compartment door, I could smell sulphur dioxide gas (the type of refrigerant used in most older refrigerators). Going back to my truck I returned with a bottle of ammonia and a cotton swab to see exactly where the gas was leaking. Sulphur dioxide gas forms a white smoke when it comes in contact with ammonia fumes.

I located the leak at the compressor shaft seal. After I told Brother Weedmark what it would cost, he said to go ahead and fix it. I had to remove the compressor and take it to the shop to replace the seal. He said he would take the refrigerator to his mother's house, and I could install the compressor in the refrigerator there.

I brought my tool tray and gauges in from the truck and proceeded to disconnect the compressor. The refrigerator was on a screened-in back porch, and I was sitting on the floor in front of it.

Being in somewhat of a hurry (it was late and I had had a busy day) I was not as careful as I might have been and the liquid line from the compressor broke loose. The sulphur dioxide, under pressure of about eighty pounds, hit directly in my eyes.

Sulphur dioxide is toxic; so when it hit me in the face, choking and blinding me, I instinctively pushed back and whirled around to the porch floor. I thought I was gone; everything was black for a moment, then I realized that I would have to get out of there or I would die of suffocation.

I felt for the outside door and threw myself down the steps (the floor of the porch was about eight feet from the ground). I lay face down on the grass at the foot of the steps gasping for breath, for my lungs were seared by the gas. The liquid sulphur dioxide which came in contact with the moisture in my eyes and lungs was actually like sulphuric acid thrown in my eyes and sucked down into my lungs. At that moment I thought my eyes were gone. They were a total blank.

I lay there on the grass, the awful reality running through my mind that here I was blind. What could I do? I knew then what must be the thoughts of a drowning person, for this was something of a similar experience. Being a member of the priesthood, I had studied to some length and was working in cottage meetings. Still I realized how far short I was from being the servant God expected me to be. I realized how much studying I needed to do in order to present this gospel to others with conviction that they might know of its truth. I realized that I had to have my eyes to carry on God's work as I should, if I was to fulfill my obligation.

I prayed as I had never prayed before, saying, "Thy will be done." The assurance came to me then that my eyes would be all right. I wasn't even bruised from the tumble down the steps.

I called for Brother Weedmark, who was in the house, but he couldn't hear me. I couldn't go in the back way because of the gas escaping from the refrigerator on the back porch. I felt my way around the house to the front door and the Weedmarks helped me to the kitchen sink where I began rinsing my eyes with water.

It was about a half hour before a doctor could be located. While I was on the operating table, the doctor said my left eye would probably be all right but he had little hope for my right eye. Still I had assurance that I would be all right. As soon as Brother Weedmark brought me home, I had my wife call Elder James Post to administer to me. I felt that was all I needed. After three days the bandage was left off my left eye, but my right eye was still a blank. On the fourth day I could faintly see the doctor's face when he took the bandage off my right eye, but it had to be kept bandaged for two weeks as it was quite sensitive to the light.

A person doesn't realize how precious his eyes are until he is unable to use them, even temporarily.

Today my eyes are almost as good as they were before. I don't wear glasses and I read and study as I did before. This experience has been a testimony to me of the value of administration and the power of prayer and faith.

A Tribute to Walter B. Penny, Jr.

Walter Penny was a patient at the Veterans' Hospital at Wadsworth, Kansas, when we first met him. He continued to be a patient there until his death on Sunday, February 1. He had been hospitalized for the last six years and for the last three and a half years was almost completely paralyzed.

To know Walter was to know courage—the quiet kind of courage that does not get downcast regardless of the trials that come; the kind that faces each new day as it comes; the courage to face things as they are and not as he would have had them.

To talk with Walter was to realize his great strength. He had little physical strength, but his spiritual strength was boundless. His life touched that of many others, and his faith and fortitude gave courage to other patients at Wadsworth. He was known as the "man of hope" by workers and patients in the hospital. He trusted God to do as he would with him.

We loved Walter; he was near to our hearts. He was an older brother to the children, a younger brother to those of us who are older. Our lives have been enriched because we have known him. He loved others as deeply as he was loved, praying continually for those about him. All of you have been included in his prayers, for he prayed always for God's people.

He earnestly desired to get well that he might serve others and help in building the kingdom. He felt he was doing so little in comparison to others. We feel that he was a conscientious workman in the vineyard. He was unable to do physical labor but he received a small pension as a disabled veteran. Much of this he gave as a freewill offering to the church; and of course he paid tithing. Whenever he knew of a need in his local church he gave liberally to help.

All who have known him have been served by him. Many have testified that they have visited him in hopes of ministering to him, but that they in turn received rich ministry. The beauty and dignity in this ministry was felt in the simplicity of Walter's personality. His simple faith, his great courage, his deep desire to serve, and his love for all of God's people marked him as a "beloved brother."

opinion as to doctrines, and he stood in opposition to others because of them, we have the conviction that at the heart he had unquestioned integrity.

He played a part in one of the great dramas of American history such as few men ever have done, was captain of his soul to the end, and faced the eventualities of death with level look—wholly unafraid.

After my experience with his great-granddaughter, Mrs. Blankenship, I believe Father Whitmer transmitted some of his sterling qualities to his posterity.

Meet With Apostle

CHANUTE-IOLA, KANSAS.—"Perfection" was the subject of the farewell sermon by Missionary Ralph Bobbitt at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Vohs, Iola, Kansas, when he and his wife visited here October 21. A gift from the branch was presented them at the close of the service by Leon Morrow, who expressed appreciation of their services and extended them best wishes in their new field.

The women's department sponsored a Halloween party for the branch October 24 in the cabin at Humboldt Park.

Mrs. T. W. Bath, district women's leader, was the guest speaker on November 21, when the women's department held their covered dish Thanksgiving luncheon at the home of Mrs. Roy Trammell in Humboldt. Mrs. Roy Heller of Pittsburg, Kansas, offered the closing prayer. Several other guests were present, including Elder A. C. Barker, the pastor.

Stephen Black, president of Spring River District, spoke on the subject, "Christ Is King," at the women's meeting December 5, at the home of Mrs. Howard Earnest, Chanute. He also presented the sermon in the evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Walton in Iola.

The branch dispensed with services in Chanute on Sunday, December 14, to meet with the Independence, Kansas, Saints in an all-day meeting under the direction of Elder Stephen Black and Apostle Arthur Oakman. A basket dinner was held at noon.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Hill of Mission, Kansas, were guests Sunday, November 9. Before moving to Mission, Brother Hill was teacher of the adult class for many years, and was also a former pastor of the group.

Carol Moore, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chester Moore, and Bobby Maple, son of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Maple, were baptized December 21, at the church in Independence, Kansas, by Robert Vohs, priest, and Elder A. C. Barker. They were confirmed by A. C. Barker and Elder Myron Cadwell.

The branch held a reception honoring Mr. and Mrs. Fred Joy who observed their golden wedding anniversary, January 10, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Earnest. A gift was presented to them from the branch by Robert Vohs. Out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Joy and son of Wichita, Kansas, and Pvt. Richard Bain.

Pvt. Bain, son of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Bain, attended services January 11, when he was en route from Camp Breckenridge, Kentucky, to Fort Riley, Kansas, where he is a student in Photo Interpretation.

A/3C Dale Carlson, son of Mr. and Mrs. George M. Carlson, attended services October 26 and November 2. He is now stationed at Godman Air Force Base at Fort Knox, Kentucky. Prior to this he was stationed at Lowry Air Force Base at Denver, Colorado.

The branch Christmas party was held in the Little Theater in Iola on December 15.

Following the Wednesday evening prayer service on January 7, Mrs. Maude Moore was honored with a housewarming social. She was presented with a gift from the group and refreshments were served. Mrs. Moore is now living in Humboldt.

Elder and Mrs. Arthur B. Dennis of Mapleton, Kansas, and Priest Joe Rei and family were guests January 25. Elder Dennis, president of Rich Hill District, presented the morning sermon.

The Saints from this area are enjoying the radio programs, "The Old, Old Path," on Sunday mornings on station KFSB, Joplin, Missouri, under the direction of Stephen Black, and also the program originating from the Stone Church in Independence, Missouri, under the direction of Evan Fry.—Reported by Mrs. EARL BAIN

Children Present Program

KIRTLAND, OHIO.—The branch officers for the year are as follows: Harry Black, branch president and temple guide; Erle Wildermuth, church school director; Byron Neville, music director; Grace Ebeling, women's leader; Arthur Burt, Zion's League leader; Agnes Martin, children's leader; William Davidson, treasurer; Pauline Jones, book steward.

The women's department, under the leadership of Sister Ebeling, voted to divide into circles for the coming year. There are now seven circles with about twenty members in each circle. Many more women are taking an active part in branch work than did previously.

On October 21, Pauline Arnon spoke to the women of the district in the temple. Following her talk there was a reception in the Chestnut Room of the auditorium. There were about seventy-five women present.

Missionary Loyd Adams conducted a series of missionary meetings in the temple November 16-21.

On November 13, the women's department held a turkey supper and bazaar which netted about four hundred dollars.

On December 21, the choir presented the cantata, "The Heavenly Child," under the direction of Byron Neville. Soloists were Dorothy Buck, soprano; Harriet Collins, alto; William Davies, bass; and Jack Sanford, tenor.

The children's division of the church school presented their annual Christmas program on December 23. The program was under the direction of Agnes Martin. New stage curtains were used. These were a gift of the Zion's League, the women's department, the church school, and the young adults. After the program a treat was passed out to everyone present.

On November 23, Jack Sanford was ordained an elder, Vincent Majewski, priest, and Wade Smith, teacher.

Both the senior and junior Zion's League have had a busy fall. They have had several sunrise prayer services. The junior League meets every Monday night under the direction of Vincent Majewski and his wife, Margaret, for study and recreation. The senior League meets every Thursday night under the direction of Arthur Burt and his wife, Ruth, for study and recreation.

In December the branch voted to share the cost of a car for the pastor, Harry Black, with the General Church.—Reported by MABEL ISENBURG

Mission Organized

LAS VEGAS, NEVADA.—On January 19, 1953, Seventy Russell F. Ralston, under the direction of Apostle Paul Hanson, came to Las Vegas and organized the group into a mission. He appointed Elder Robert Hampton as pastor. There were thirteen members present, and two visiting members, Brother and Sister Steve Bullard of Colorado. At present the mission is meeting at the home of Mrs. Jeanette Hadlock. Any members in the area are requested to contact the group and meet with them on Sunday morning. Brother Hampton appointed Genevieve Dexter as clerk and secretary of the mission. She may be contacted by phone or mail at Box 444, North Las Vegas, Nevada, telephone 6551. The pastor may be contacted at 811 Oakey Boulevard, Las Vegas, Nevada, telephone 3487-R.—Reported by GENEVIEVE DEXTER

Building Program in District

IDAHO DISTRICT.—Nampa is very active in the work on their new church building. January goal was installing plumbing, furnace, wiring, and work on the ceiling. Stephen Wayne and Stephanie Lynne, children of Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Lewis of Nampa, have been blessed. On January 18, Elder Cecil Gilmore, pastor of the Boise Branch, met with the Saints at Nampa for the morning service and after a basket lunch he spoke on "Stewardship." Nampa recently appointed Mrs. Myrtle Yager as reporter for the Nampa mission.

Joint baptismal and confirmation services were held in Boise, February 1, under the leadership of Elder Lester Dellenbaugh. The following from Weiser were baptized by Elder Harry S. Fry: Shirley Stout, Oscar Stout, Esther Mitchell, and Thomas Mitchell. Sam Thornton from Boise was baptized by Elder Lloyd Condit.

Mrs. Bessie Ray has been selected as teacher for the adult class at New Plymouth and the average attendance for church school and church is around 50. The New Plymouth building committee is looking for a suitable location for a church building. Seventy Luther Troyer spent January 25-28 in New Plymouth. The Saints in New Plymouth held a special prayer service for the sister of Mrs. Freeman and since then Mrs. Freeman reports her sister much improved. Sunday evening, February 8, J. L. Verhei, Oregon District President, spoke at New Plymouth, having been at Baker, Oregon, for the morning service. Brother Verhei was on his way to Independence.

The Pocatello mission is indebted to Elder A. A. Baker from Blackfoot, Idaho, for the new sign he built and erected on the corner of the church property. The sign is about seven feet in height and approximately four feet wide. In addition to building the sign Brother Baker also built a pulpit for the new church, the platform upon which the pulpit stands, and three chairs for the rostrum. Brother Baker is past eighty and years ago was in the mission field.—Reported by RUBY Y. BROWN

Zion's League Active

JOPLIN, MISSOURI.—The children's Christmas program was held December 21 at the eleven o'clock hour. Elder Raymond E. Troyer of Chicago gave the Christmas message. The Zion's League held a breakfast at the home of Jay McKinley that morning. Following the breakfast they had a prayer service at the church. The college students presented a Graceland College program on December 28.

Two students and two alumni spoke in the evening at the service. On January 11, Priest John Leslie preached. The evening service on that day and all services throughout the week were canceled so that the Saints could attend a series conducted by Elder Charles Neff at Webb City, Missouri.

The women's department bought new rugs for the nursery. On January 22, twenty-four members of the women's study group met in the home of May Nash for their regular meeting. On January 27, about thirty of the women attended a demonstration of the modern work-saving kitchen as guests of Reeder's Appliance Store.

Following a missionary series of two weeks in Webb City, a baptismal service was held at the Joplin Branch. Elder Charles Neff baptized two young men uniting their homes in the church.

Members of the branch have been cleaning and redecorating the building.

Elder Herman Plumb, pastor of the Carthage Branch, preached at the morning service on February 8, and Seventy James C. Daugherty preached in the evening.

Donald Nash and Jay McKinley have left for the service.

On the evening of February 10, the Young Matron's held a valentine party at the church with Ruth Guinness and Lois Leslie hostesses. The Zion's League had a party on the same evening at the home of Kenneth Siler.

On February 11, forty Saints and friends attended the prayer service. Elders Stephen Black, Seth Spangler, and David Lohr were in charge.

Mark and Macel Mink, May Gray, and Lorene Carrow left for a tour of the ancient ruins of Mexico on February 11.—Reported by MRS. RACHEL M. TROYER

District Women Meet

WILBURTON, OKLAHOMA.—Beginning in September, the project for the women's department has been to plan and serve the evening meal to the Wilburton Lion's Club every Tuesday night. The older ladies of the group have been active in quilting this winter, under the direction of Georgia Parsons. They meet the first and third Friday of each month for worship and study.

On October 12, Raymond Grace and Donna Kathleen Jackson were baptized by Missionary Wallace A. Jackson.

Alene Goss was married to Almon Wilson, Jr., of Oklahoma City on November 15, by Brother O. O. Dollins.

Elder Raymond Yuebanks, of Tulsa, preached the morning sermon on Sunday November 16.

The women's department held their annual Thanksgiving Day program on November 21. The theme for the day was "We Are Thankful for Our Stewardship of the Kingdom." Visitors and guest speakers were from near-by branches. The district president of women, Ruth Goodwin of Shawnee, Oklahoma, was also present.

Apostle D. Blair Jensen preached at the church four nights during the week of December 14. On Tuesday night he was the guest speaker for the Wilburton Lion's Club.

A special Christmas program was held this year, highlighted by the play, "A Light in My Window," under the direction of Angie Dollins.

The branch was in charge of the program of the General Council of Church Women, at the Presbyterian Church on December 29. Effie Wallace gave the devotional, and O. O. Dollins was asked by the president of the organization to give a talk on the doctrine of the R.L.D.S. Church.

Recent speakers have been Victor Witte, and Alfred Yale of Tulsa, Oklahoma. The Saints of this area were sorry to lose the Witte family from the district, but happy to welcome Brother Yale and family.

Fonda Gail Glenn was blessed on Sunday, January 4, by O. O. Dollins.

Apostle D. Blair Jensen preached January 19 and 20 at the branch.

Many of the Saints from Wilburton attended the district business meeting at Oklahoma City, on February 8.—Reported by MICKBY MONTANA

Study Group Organized

CARTHAGE, ILLINOIS.—On January 16, Nauvoo District President Max Hromek of Fort Madison, Iowa, organized a study group in Carthage, Illinois. This group meets twice a month, and it is taught by Elder B. A. Galbraith of Nauvoo, district pastor for isolated members. David Stevenson of Carthage, a deacon, is group leader, and Mrs. Clarence Tripp, Carthage, is secretary-treasurer.—Reported by WARREN L. VAN DINE

Winter Activities in Branch

LOMBARD, ILLINOIS.—The women's group conducted two rummage sales in the fall. One was held in October and the other in November. On December 5, they sponsored a bake sale. From the two projects over three hundred dollars was raised for the building fund.

On January 15, a ham supper was served by the women which netted $125 for the building fund. Plans for other activities included a barbecue.

Seventy Cecil Ettinger was in the branch the second and third weeks in December. He preached at the church on the two Sundays, and held cottage meetings during the week.

On the morning of December 21, the church school presented the play, "Let the Earth Receive," under the direction of Pat Wayne. Children from the primary to Zion's League ages participated.

A church school party was held at the church on December 22, under the supervision of the church school director, Grant Hoyt.

Sister Florence Davidson of the Medford Branch was unable to be at the last week of the series as she had undergone surgery on January 30.—Reported by SISTER CORREY

League Leaders Meet

SPRING RIVER DISTRICT.—On January 31, a conference for the district Zion's League leaders was held at Carthage, Missouri, under the leadership of Carl Mesle, youth leader for the General Church; Harry Shank, district youth leader; and Stephen Black, district president.

One of the high points in Brother Mesle's classes was the development of the following objectives of youth work: to enlarge youth's concept of God, to develop a better understanding of the mission of the church, to change lives, to train future church leadership, to attract and convert new members, to provide worship experiences on the youth level, to teach the thrill of unselfish service, and to provide wholesome fun. He also discussed the Zion's League annual commission plan.

Brother Mesle also related experiences by other branches throughout the church that are having success in their League work. He used colored slides to show activities at youth camps and retreats.

Harry Shank conducted a discussion class. The tentative program of activities for 1953 includes retreat in February, district conference in March, Restoration Festival in April, youth camp in June, reunion in July, retreat in September, and a Thanksgiving banquet and festival in November. These activities are under the direction of the district president and the apostle in charge of the territory.

Brother Stephen Black assisted in the planning of the leaders meeting and assisted in the classwork. Ten branches were represented, and the women of the Carthage Branch served the meals. Plans are being made for similar meetings for League leaders throughout the year.—Reported by HARRY SHANK

MODESTO, CALIFORNIA.—The annual business meeting was held October 8, 1952, and installation of the following officers was held October 12 with Sr. Mary Stark as reader: Elder Robert M. Colville, pastor; Elder Homer Gatchett, youth leader and church school director; Daisy Jennings, leader of women's department; Irene Gatchett, director of music; Mabel McGill, secretary; John Moffet, Jr., recorder;

Frank McGill, treasurer; Eubert Downing, auditor; Joyce Colville, director of drama; Elder John Moffet, Sr., bishop's solicitor; Elder Eugene Bivens, book steward; Ida Moffet, historian. Appointive officers were Shirley Reese and Wanda Reese, librarians; George Shimel, maintenance chairman; and Ilah Rose, publicity. As of February, 1953, the secretary and treasurer found it necessary to resign. They have been replaced by Lola Downing and Deacon Don Hawley, respectively.

On November 30, 1952, Robert Pyle, his wife, Mary, and two children, Shirley and Richard, were baptized by Priest Fred Kettner. They were confirmed December 7 by Elders Homer Gatchett, Eugene Bivens, David Elliott and John Moffet, Sr. On February 15 Sylvia Diane Snider, Lynda Rebecca Snider, and Jeffrey C. Keller were baptized by Elder C. K. Saxton and confirmed by Elders Eugene Bivens and Homer Gatchett.

The branch has welcomed Mrs. Elva Welch of Detroit, Michigan; the Floyd F. Viril family of Durango, Colorado; and John Moffet, Jr., who returned from the armed forces November 21. James and Rogene Templin have moved since Brother Templin's call to the armed service.

On October 12, 1952, Carol Savinia, daughter of Ambrose and Carol Sutton, was blessed. November 30, 1952, Scott Thomas, son of Anthony and Dennis Lee Borges, of Pittsburg, California, was blessed.

Some of the special activities have been a branch Halloween party sponsored by the women's department with Daisy Jennings and Rogene Templin in charge; a branch Christmas party at the church with program and treats; Handel's Messiah at the morning service on December 21, Irene Gatchett directing; and a Christmas play at the evening service, "Blue Overalls Angel," Joyce Colville, director.—Reported by ILAH ROSE

Missionary Holds Series

WOODBRIDGE, ONTARIO.—Missionary Al Pelletier was guest speaker for a series January 4-18. Summaries of these sermons were sent to the local paper.

At the conclusion of the last Friday evening service, the women's department served apple pie and ice cream, and on the final Sunday the Zion's League served supper and presented Brother Pelletier with a token of appreciation. The following week two young people, Mrs. B. Whitworth and her brother, Mr. Harry Price, were baptized by Elder Pelletier. They were confirmed by Elders Pelletier and F. C. LeFeuvre. Gary, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Whitworth, was blessed by Elder LeFeuvre and the pastor, Elder Archer.

The choir assisted at these services and soloists during the series were Bruce Broadfoot, Isabel Goodwill, Marlene Beggs, and Helen Goodwill.

Bishop Kohlman visited the branch February 1. The women's department served the evening meal in the lower auditorium. Other recent speakers have been Evangelist B. H. Hewitt and Elder LeFeuvre.

Elder Bruce Broadfoot gave two lectures, accompanied by slides, at Port Colbourne, recently.

The Zion's League is studying "Beliefs of Our Neighbors" by Apostle Mesley, which is being taught by Elder Archer. A party was held followed by serving pancakes and syrup by the social committee.

The women's department had a bake sale, February 28, in the showroom of an implement dealer in the village.

Harold Neale from Toronto is conducting the choir in the absence of G. Trueblood due to illness. Miss Jean Gardiner has also assisted in this way.—Reported by EDITH G. BEGGS

Church Auditorium Remodeled

ELYRIA, OHIO.—The Elyrian Leaguers met with the Barberton Leaguers for a combined business and social meeting. The Leaguers of Elyria then entertained Barberton for a week end. In December the Elyria Leaguers played host to West Cleveland for a combined business and social meeting. In January our League held a box social.

All church school teachers of the branch have recently received credits for taking a course taught by Ruth Minkler, "A Short Course for Teachers." During the week of November 9 to 15, Seventy Loyd Adams held a series of missionary meetings with a total of twenty-eight nonmembers attending. Many members of the branch attended the district conference held in Barberton in November.

Remodeling of the main auditorium has been recently completed. Work has been started on additional parking space, and new shrubbery has been planted as part of a landscaping plan.

The women's department held a bazaar, the proceeds of which were used to buy a new lighted church sign, which was recently erected in front of the building. Money raised from rummage sales, vanilla, silver polish, and blanket clubs sales was used to pay part of the expense of a new heating system. Another bazaar was held in December with the proceeds totaling $100. The money was put into the operating fund. On February 13, the women's department sponsored a sweetheart night. The women brought their sweethearts for an evening of recreation and refreshments. A movie was shown on partnership in marriage.—Reported by BETTY KELLING

Missionary Shows Slides

MINNEAPOLIS, MINNESOTA.—The women's department under the direction of Mrs. Lois Resch is active in projects to help with the building fund. The department has sponsored a pancake and chili supper.

Apostle D. O. Chesworth was at a priesthood and women's institute that was held the latter part of November for the Minnesota District.

William F. Shuster was called to the office of a deacon and Paul R. Staffeld was called to the office of elder on October 5.

The following babies have been blessed: Thomas Glen, son of Hazel and Doyle Sundell; Ronald Kenneth, son of Mildred and Delbert Smith; and Kathy Ann, daughter of Betty and Harry Hatch.

Walter C. Baldwin was baptized November 30, and Jay Driscoll was baptized February 11.

The Minnesota District conference is to be held in Minneapolis on March 13, 14, and 15.

Missionary Delbert Smith has been showing slides during the months of January and February for Sunday evening services.—Reported by JOYCE W. TRACEY

SAULT STE MARIE, ONTARIO.—On February 21, Ruth E. Spencer and Marilyn J. Spencer were baptized by Elder W. A. Bushila, and George E. Robb was baptized by Elder G. A. Edwards.

During prayer service the next morning the three candidates were confirmed by the same two elders.—Reported by WINNIFRED L. SPENCER

News From Stake

CENTRAL MISSOURI STAKE.—Stake conference was held at Warrensburg on Sunday, February 8, with approximately six hundred people in attendance. President W. Wallace Smith, of the First Presidency, and Sister Smith were present. Sister Smith taught a class for women and Brother Smith was the speaker at the preaching service. Financial reports for last year were approved and the budget for 1953 was adopted. Approved for ordination to the priesthood were Hubert Dillon and Otto Nephi Beil, of Odessa, and Allan Van Tuyl, of Atherton, to the office of deacon; Ira Brosam, of Atherton, to the office of teacher; and Lloyd Martin, of Blue Springs, to the office of priest.

The stake Zion's League all-day meeting was held at Odessa on Sunday, February 22, with Missionary Alan Tyree, recently appointed to the South Sea Islands, as guest speaker. Merton Loveland is stake League leader.

A stake church school and music institute was held in Warrensburg on March 8 and a stake young adult all-day meeting was scheduled to be held at Holden on March 22.

News of a number of the congregations of the stake follows:

ATHERTON

Mr. and Mrs. George Graybill received word that their son, Keith, was seriously injured in Korea on January 6. He had been in the combat zone two weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. Russell Beebe and family have moved to their new farm near Buckner, and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hamilton and family have moved to their new farm near Richmond.

A talent night, sponsored by the adult group, was an outstanding activity for January.

Mr. and Mrs. D. R. Hughes are visiting in Miami, Florida.

Guest speakers during January and February were Philip W. Moore, Herbert Barto, and J. T. Smith.

BUCKNER

Last year the congregation purchased property for a new church to be built at Buckner. The piece of ground fronts 500 feet on Highway 20E just south of Buckner and is 150 feet deep. Plans are to build a new church and have room for a playground and a picnic area in the part that has timber on it. On New Year's Day about fifteen of the brethren of the church gathered together and cleared the brush off the ground.

HARRISONVILLE

Under the leadership of Elder Rex Rowland, this congregation has been growing steadily. New families are moving in and some have been added through baptism. The women's department, under the leadership of Edna Beckham, is gaining in attendance and actively engaged in study and working together, to help pay for the new church building in which the group has met since April, 1952. The young adults meet regularly for study and social activities. The Zion's League presented a Christmas play entitled "To Those Who Sit in Darkness," under the direction of Frances Benner, dramatic leader.

KNOB NOSTER

On January 8, the women's department met at the country home of Mrs. Roy Hume for an all-day meeting. A covered dish luncheon was served and in the afternoon the pastor, Elder J. T. Nutt, discussed the subject of tithing. A number of tea towels were finished which are to be given to the Independence Sanitarium. On January 29, the ladies met at the home of Mrs. Nora Ginn and spent the day in study and sewing.

Visiting speakers from the stake on recent Sundays have been Bishop W. C. Becker, Elder Paul Landsberg, and Elder Roy Weldon.

OAK GROVE

During the last three-month period, Oak Grove congregation has shown continuous progress in the various departments, under the efficient leadership of Elder Leonard Smith.

The children's department is functioning under the direction of Sister Freda Noltensmeyer. This group rendered one worship service for the entire congregation for the church school hour, and they put on an interesting program at Christmas time. Junior church is held on the second Sunday of each month.

The members of the Zion's League are quite active. They meet each Sunday evening. They have had Brethren Roy Weldon, S. E. Mifflin, Leonard Smith, and E. C. Larche as speakers. Social activities included a skating party, a TV party, and Christmas caroling. They presented a Christmas play under the direction of the dramatics department. They sent seventy pounds of clothing to Korea for the orphans and old people.

The young adult group is active under the supervision of Brother Aubrey Miller. They had charge of family night at Halloween. Once a month they had charge of the service for the entire congregation. One of their special speakers was Elder Almer Sheehy. A program of hymn music appreciation was held. They have as their project the purchasing of drapes for the church.

The weekly program of the branch is in the Oak Grove newspaper.

ODESSA

The Odessa congregation celebrated its fourth anniversary on Sunday, January 18, with Elder Almer Sheehy, of Independence, as the speaker. The congregation and friends held a basket dinner at noon in the basement.

A new partition is being added to the basement to separate the worship room from the kitchen. The young adults have furnished the labor. Among the out-of-town speakers have been Apostle Roscoe Davey, Eugene Look, William Ferguson, and Nelson Gard.

PLEASANT HILL

The group held a Thanksgiving dinner at the church the Monday evening before Thanksgiving. A Thanksgiving offering was taken.

The women's Christmas bazaar and bake sale raised over one hundred dollars. The money is to be used for repairs on the church. The church was painted last fall, but there are still other repairs needed.

Our Stake President, Harry J. Simons, held a series of meetings beginning Sunday, December 7, continuing on Monday, Wednesday, Thursday, and concluding on Sunday evening, December 14. On Monday evening a male quartet from Butler, Missouri, sang.

The children's Christmas program was Sunday morning, December 21. The service was centered around a cake for Jesus' birthday. A Christmas offering was taken at that time. A play was presented in the evening by the Zion's League.

WAKENDA

The mission at Wakenda continues to grow, under the able leadership of Elder John Jorgenson of Richmond and Elder Harold Ratcliff of Hale. Elder Roy Weldon of Warrensburg conducted a missionary series last fall. Ethel Brotherton was baptized on November 26. The first ordination in the mission took place on December 7 when Carl Cowick was ordained to the office of deacon, under the hands of High Priest William G. Ferguson, of the stake high council, and Pastor John Jorgenson.

Priesthood Holds Communion Service

HUMBER BAY, ONTARIO.—The pastor, Walter L. Thorpe, has suggested that the theme should be "Make Humber Bay a Spiritual Tree in '53." To attain this end, one new endeavor was to establish a new junior church at the beginning of November. Elder Floyd Wilson is the junior church pastor.

There are two active women's circles, the Daughters of Zion and the Mary and Martha Circle. The Daughters of Zion were hostesses at a turkey dinner on November 14. Moving pictures presented by the Canadian National Railways followed the dinner. On January 30, a potluck supper was held at the church, sponsored by the Mary and Martha Circle; followed by movies from the Department of Lands and Forests, Province of Ontario.

Both circles shared the responsibility of serving the meals at the Harvest Home, September 28. Elder James Pycock, a superannuated Seventy, was the speaker. In the evening, Elder Elwood Smythe spoke. Brother Smythe also conducted a Sunday night series during the month of October.

Dorene Moore, formerly of Humber Bay, is working in the branch at New Liskeard, Ontario. On Graceland College Day, Doug Muir, Aileen Dadson, and Barbara Riding were the speakers.

On November 9, at the Armistice Day service, ex-servicemen spoke to the branch.

The men of the priesthood held a Communion and fellowship service with visitors from Toronto and Woodbridge in attendance on November 28. District President John Booth was in charge of the fellowship service and also delivered the Communion message. A former pastor, Elder F. C. LeFeuvre spoke at the fellowship service.

On November 29, the eighth annual community bazaar was held, sponsored by the women's groups of the following local churches: St. James Anglican, Aldgate Baptist, and the Reorganized Latter Day Saints. This community event was originally inaugurated by a member of the Daughters of Zion Circle.

The Zion's League meetings are held every Monday evening. One of the projects was to keep the church decorated with cut flowers throughout the winter season.

Doug Muir gave the address and a special collection was taken November 30, Auditorium Day.

The church school Christmas tree party was held on December 19. The white gift service was held on December 21. The branch supplied five baskets for the needy in the community. The candlelight service in the evening was of music and readings. The first Christmas Day service was held under the direction of Shirley Kent, music director.

A New Year's Eve watch night service was held. A social hour was followed by a fellowship under the theme, "Take My Cross and Follow Me." The worship center was prepared by Doug Muir, and Elder Herbert Brown gave the talk.

At the suggestion of Reg Kent, a young adult group was formed to interest the young married people in the branch.

Saints who are prevented by distance from attending Wednesday night fellowship services have had services taken to them in their homes.

Plans are being made for a missionary series to be held by Elder Al Pelletier, beginning April 19 and continuing for two weeks. This will be preceded by cottage meetings.—Reported by THORA JONES

Introducing

MARION VIRGINIA (THOMSON) FISHER, Saskatoon, Saskatchewan (page 12). Sister Fisher is a housewife who, before her marriage to Howard W. Fisher in 1949, taught school for five years. After graduation from the Biggar, Saskatchewan, high school, she continued training at the Saskatoon Normal School and took some extension work from the university. Her special interests are psychology and writing. Brother and Sister Fisher have a girl, Loretta Marion, 2½, and a boy, Howard Grant, nearing 1. Sister Fisher is active in the women's department.

MARION (COOPER) McKIM, Haddonfield, New Jersey (page 12), was baptized with her husband, Norman L. McKim, Jr., in Philadelphia in September, 1949. They were married in 1941 and have a three-year-old son, Jay Allan. She was graduated from the Woodrow Wilson High School of Camden, New Jersey, in June, 1941. Her husband was in service, and she traveled with him much of the time, working as a telephone operator for two years in Camden, New Jersey, and also in a Michigan hospital for a year. For four years she worked as a receptionist and office assistant for a chiropodist in Collingswood, New Jersey.

Her hobbies are music and reading. Having been a member of the church only a short time she says: "In all my spare time I try to learn more of this great church." She is especially interested in nutrition and home management. She serves as secretary of the women's department and is teacher in the church school.

PAPER

It was becoming dark in the publishing plant of the city newspaper. All the staff had gone home except the publisher. Typewriters that had whipped out the last news stories were at rest. The rotary presses were silent and washed up for the next day. The jaws of the Linotypes were open to let the molds cool.

The publisher thought of the busy day just finished, of the gathering of the news, a chronicle of human fear and hope, joy and sorrow, trouble and success, all contained in the edition then being sold on the city streets. He thought of his years in newspaper work. Then he looked out the window at the coat of ice that covered the street.

The phone rang. An old woman living on the outskirts of the city said she had not received her paper, and would like to have it. He thought only a second and said, "I'll bring it to you."

When she met him at the door she realized that the publisher had brought her paper. Apologetic, she said, "I have read this paper for fifty years, and I don't feel like going to sleep at night without having read it."

For such an experience and expression of confidence, he thought that his trip was worth the trouble, and he felt a little closer to the people he served. L. J. L.

HE DOESN'T WANT TO BE FIRST

It is hard for most of us Americans to understand any man who doesn't want to win first honors all the time. Now and then, however, someone discovers a wise person who realizes that happiness is not to be found in competitive effort.

Mignon Quaw Lott tells about a man whose way of living may hold some suggestions for some of us who drive ourselves hard. "I know a most delightful man," the writer says, "whose enjoyment of life is unique in our tense and harried struggle for existence. 'I don't want to be first,' he once told me. 'If I go fishing, I don't have to catch the biggest trout. If I go to the movies, I don't have to have the best seat. Let the other fellow fight and jostle for these things. I'm going to enjoy life without this terrible competition.'"

And he does. He is relaxed, deliberate, genial. He has time for friends.—Thomas Dreier

We'd Like You to Know . . .

Harold Wayne Cackler

HE'S A MOST WONDERFUL MAN," his wife says, and she isn't the only one who feels that way about the bishop of the Center Stake of Zion, Harold W. Cackler. The kind expression he wears in this picture is standard equipment. And if you note a look of discerning penetration, that's not foreign to him, either. Brother Cackler has shown in his ministry a keen spiritual insight and a good business mind as well, combined with a great kindness toward people. He brings to his office of bishop that which he must also bring to his home—God's love.

Brother Cackler is known as a humble man. He inspired people to respond to the financial law. He won't take any credit for the fact—though he must in part be responsible—that in 1948 there was a 13.4 per cent compliance with the financial law in the Center Stake while in 1951 there was 24.5 per cent. Tithing statement filers almost doubled in three years!

Brother Cackler is a busy man. As bishop of Center Stake he has jurisdiction over the disbursement of funds of the sixteen congregations. He's systematic. Each month there is mailed out to each pastor and bishop's agent an itemized list of amounts and percentages in financial performance both of the local offerings and General Church participation. Every congregation knows just how it stands.

He isn't a "desk man"; in fact you can seldom find him in his office. He's out on field work, ministering, teaching, overseeing projects, and building new enterprises. "He's out on some phase of his work every night of the week," his wife says.

Brother Cackler was born in Lucas County, Iowa, on September 30, 1912. He was baptized in June, 1923, at Chariton, Iowa. On April 18, 1941, he married Arline Fae Fowler. They have one son, John Wayne, born in August, 1943.

His business experience has added to his qualifications as bishop. He had two years of stenographic and clerical work in a law office and finance company; eight years of clerical work in the sales department of Ford Motor Company in Des Moines, Iowa; and five years as service manager for the Gibbs-Cook Tractor and Equipment Company, distributors for Diesel tractors and heavy road construction equipment.

Since 1947 he has been under church appointment, acting as assistant to the presiding bishopric in 1947-48. Since 1949 he has been bishop of the Center Stake.

He was ordained a teacher in 1933, an elder in 1935, a high priest and bishop in 1947. In the church he has done many things. In Des Moines he was at various times church school director, young people's leader, counselor to the pastor, and counselor to the district president. He has also been pastor of the Indianola, Iowa, and Boone, Iowa, Branches.

He is a member of the Rotary Club in Independence. He's too busy to have hobbies, but on hot summer days he likes to relax in front of the radio and listen to the Kansas City Blues play baseball. He was active in sports in high school, where he was also a member of the high school honor society, and the quill and scroll. Now he "just works," there's so much of it to do in building the kingdom.

News and Notes

FROM HEADQUARTERS

PRESIDENT IN FLORIDA

President Israel A. Smith was in Orlando, Florida, March 8. On March 15 he was in the Miami, Florida, Branch. Apostle Percy Farrow is accompanying Brother Smith on his trip in the South.

PRESIDENT EDWARDS HOME

President F. Henry Edwards returned to the office on March 12, after a trip to the West where he worked in the Los Angeles Stake and the Southern California and Northern California Districts. He reports that he arrived home just a little too late to welcome his first grandson.

AT DISTRICT CONFERENCE

President W. Wallace Smith was in Minneapolis, Minnesota, March 14 and 15, for a district conference. He taught classes and preached. Sister Smith, who accompanied him, taught the women's classes and the Zion's League. Apostle D. O. Chesworth was associated with Brother Smith at the conference.

APOSTLE DAVEY HOLDS SERIES

Apostle Davey Davey just completed a missionary series in St. Joseph, Missouri. He held a series for one week in each of the three branches in the city. He reported good interest despite the worst storm of the year. Three candidates were baptized at the conclusion of the series.

ELDER PRESENTS SERIES

Elder Arthur Rock of the General Church radio and audio-visual department, presented a series at the Grandview Branch in Kansas City, Kansas, March 8-14. The series included visualization material with a sermon following. The branch is in the Kansas City Stake.

CONFER ON BUILDING PLANS

Elder Jack Conway and Richard Wahl were in Independence, March 11, to confer on the plans for the Washington, D. C., church building. Brother Wahl was the representative of the building committee, and Brother Conway is the appointee pastor.

INSTITUTE AT WARRENSBURG

A combined church school and music institute was held at Warrensburg, Missouri, March 8, under the leadership of Eugene Look, district church school director, and Mrs. Melba Troyer, district music director. Workers included Thelona Stevens and John Darling of the General Church department of religious education, and Aleta Runkle, Mrs. John Darling, and Herbert Lively. The theme of the institute was "Ye Are Called to the Work." Brother Darling was the evening speaker at Warrensburg.

PRIESTHOOD SCHOOL CONCLUDED

The priesthood school of the Center Stake of Zion concluded March 2. Elder Herbert Lively completed the school for the Melchisedec priesthood on the theme "Sharing Pastoral Ministry." Apostle D. Blair Jensen was present for the closing meeting. The Aaronic school was conducted by Bishop Harold Cackler, Bishop Walter Johnson, and Elder O. Kenneth Byrn, on "Stewardship"; Dr. F. M. McDowell on "Psychology of Religion"; and Stake President Charles V. Graham on "Counseling and Family Relationship."

Stability in Marriage

THE DIVORCE RATE has risen so alarmingly in the United States and elsewhere that a surprising number of surveys of the divorce situation are being made and the results are being published. The fact that these survey reports are being so widely purchased confirms other evidences that not only ministers but also statesmen, judges, sociologists, and many others are genuinely alarmed. They have need to be.

An astonishing fact about these surveys is that so few of them get down to the root difficulty: the selfishness of marriage partners and their crass ignorance of the purpose and spirit of true marriage.

The purpose of marriage, and of every other aspect of human life, is the glory of God and the further establishment of his kingdom. This means that marriage is designed and intended to serve the highest conceivable ends—ends which God himself can approve. The present pleasure or advantage of the husband and wife—either or both of them—is not an adequate goal in marriage. It is greatly to be desired, but it is not enough. And, certainly, the satisfaction of husband or wife at the expense of the other is not enough.

The cohesive power in heaven-blessed marriages is the Spirit of God. The love which the partners have for each other is important, but this love, at its highest and best, is born of the Spirit. This is the Spirit "which leadeth to do good; yea, to do justly, to walk humbly, to judge righteously." The fruit of this Spirit is "love, joy, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, meekness, temperance." By this Spirit good men and their good wives practice the selfless love which makes them "one flesh," and holds them more and more closely together to serve their families, the church, and the community.

True marriage cannot be entered into as an experiment, nor with selfish reservations, nor flippantly. When these elements intrude, they destroy the possibility of the union intended of God and desired by right-thinking and right-feeling people.

THOSE WHO MARRY understandingly take each other in faith and confident hope. They gladly surrender their individual lives for the sake of the larger and richer life that they can achieve in common. Even when they start out, dewy-eyed though they may be, they know that this joint life cannot be one of unalloyed pleasure. The very fact that they love each other and share each other's lives intimately means that they can now be hurt more deeply and in more ways than ever before. For this reason, and for many others, it is fundamentally important that selflessness and mutuality shall be recognized and welcomed aspects of the partnership from the beginning.

Sacrifice is usually regarded as something difficult and irksome. But sacrifices made generously, out of the sense of privilege in sharing, can so enrich home life that the ministry of sacrifice becomes a truly creative factor in married life and love.

To put asunder "what God hath joined" is a truly wicked thing. To fail to cement that which God has put together is almost as wicked. In marriages contracted for the glory of God, blessed by the ministry of his Spirit, and strengthened in the generous practice of unselfish love, this cementing process goes steadily forward. Where the partners to marriage live together on this plane, divorce is still a very rare occurrence.

Kirtland Bank

One of the "choicest morsels" of the enemies of the work of our church has been the alleged failure of the Kirtland Safety Society. We believe our people should be advised as to a "notice" published over the signature of Joseph Smith in the Nauvoo Neighbor for June 19, 1844. Although we have called attention to this before, it is well to do so again:

CAUTION

Having once notified the public against receiving a certain currency, called "Kirtland Safety Society," I again caution all persons against receiving of, or trading in, said paper money, as all that was issued as genuine was redeemed; after the first officers who signed said bills retired, a new set of officers were appointed; and the vault of the institution was broken open and robbed of several hundred thousand dollars; the signatures forged upon the said stolen bills and those bills are being slyly bartered or had in trade for the purpose of willful and malicious prosecution and collection. In the first place, the bills are not collectable by law in an unchartered institution; in the second place they are spurious, the signatures being a forgery, and every person passing or trading a bill is guilty of passing counterfeit money, besides the barefaced act of swindling. And lastly, he that uses said bills in any way as a medium of trade, is guilty of fraud and shows a wicked and corrupt determination to willfully, maliciously and feloniously rob the Latter Day Saints; and if the executors of the laws are as ready to mete out even handed justice to such men as to the Mormons, more indictments will indicate more honesty. Time will show.

JOSEPH SMITH

Nauvoo, June 6th, 1844

Thus we see that Joseph Smith and the church have been terribly misrepresented in this matter.

Editorial

Across the Desk

THE FIRST PRESIDENCY

From Bishop Don Alberts in Australia:

It was with warm feelings that your letter of Christmas greeting was received. Although it does not seem to be set down in writing very much, I am sure we all with one accord feel deeply grateful for the devoted, spiritual leadership that the church is receiving from your office.

Here in Australia we sense the impetus of fresh missionary emphasis with Apostle Draper. As always with a new man, he brings a different aspect to the work of the church; this is stimulating and helpful.

The unmistakable evidence of continual, steady progress appears as 1952 is reviewed. Our church building at Guildford is almost completed and promises to be "way above" anything else we have in the mission. Situated on the outskirts of the Sydney Metropolitan area, it stands on a large corner site facing a main highway in the midst of a very rapidly developing residential area. We look forward to immediate response from the neighborhood to church school development and also membership gains.

1952 set a further record for General Church income and also tithing contributors, notwithstanding a very definite steadying of our national economy through the year. This further increase in income indicates, I believe, increased awareness of the goals of the church. The installation of some cars has been well received by the people and has been reflected in a more efficient appointee ministry. It is good to feel our increased ability for further outreach.

From Sister Alma May Brookover, Beloit, Wisconsin:

The Wisconsin District voted to hold Centennial Services at Blanchardsville at the fall district conference. I have made several trips over there and am very happy with the results. I have located many of the historical spots, among them the homes of the Newkirks, Fretwells, Z. H. Gurley, Sr., Henry H. Deam, Wm. C. Klines, Samuel Gurley's store, site of the Cyrus Newkirk mill (where several General Conferences were held), and the site of the log church. I have nearly finished a detailed history which

I hope will be useful to many. I have felt the Spirit of God very abundantly as I have been doing research work in that vicinity.

From Lee R. Oliver, Pensacola, Florida:

During the month of February we baptized five persons in Pensacola—four adults and one child. Two of these men united families in the church. The other was a young couple who recently became interested in the church.

We had a very beautiful candlelight baptismal service with a slide of Jesus being baptized by John thrown on the wall back of the font. This was very impressive. The church was full, and a truly fine spirit was present. Many remarked it was the most beautiful service they had ever witnessed. Afterward there was a reception held in the basement to welcome the new members.

From Mrs. Emil J. Morse, 17 Black Creek Lane, Clayton, Missouri, to Bishop DeLapp:

Enclosed is a check for five hundred dollars to be used for the Auditorium Fund. The money was raised by a group of eleven women, all members of the St.

Louis Branch. We are called the K's Club.

The club raised the money by giving barbecues, teas, book reviews, and earning talent money. This is the same way in which we earned enough money to furnish a room at Graceland, and one on the children's floor of the Sanitarium in previous years.

We have enjoyed working together and are happy to present this check to you for such an urgent cause.

EVELYN ELLIOTT MORSE
President of the K's Club

David Oakman Dies

Word has been received from England of the death of David Alma Oakman, father of Apostle Arthur Oakman, who is now in Europe. He had been a member of the Reorganized Church since 1898, was ordained a priest in 1914, an elder in 1939, and a high priest in 1945. For nearly three years he served as pastor of the Enfield Branch, and at the time of his death was counselor to the pastor.

He died on Friday, March 6, in a London hospital after an extended illness.

Ye Are My Witnesses

By Eugene A. Theys

And when they saw him they worshipped him; but some doubted. And Jesus came and spake unto them, saying, All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth. Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost; teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you; and, lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world.—Matthew 28: 17-20.

I AM VERY HAPPY to have this opportunity to preach to the Saints in Independence, and to have had the opportunity to worship with and minister to our people in missions abroad. In our text we find the content of the love that Christ has for all mankind, when he said to his disciples before ascending into heaven, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel."

The church of Jesus Christ has a world calling, a world mission; a world responsibility rests upon the shoulders of every one of us, not because we are gathered in Zion, not because we are in far distant places from those to whom we must take the gospel, but because here in Independence we have a responsibility to go and teach the gospel to our neighbors and friends.

During the next few months, or years, or the length of time given me to minister and to work with you, I trust that together we may be able to teach the gospel to many others here in the Center Place. The people in missions abroad are looking to us for the type of missionary leadership that will help to inspire them and to show the way in methods that we must apply to winning others to Christ.

In the text we find that Christ had been resurrected. He had given three years of ministry to his disciples and had taught them the way of the kingdom. He had inspired them and showed them the way by the demonstration of the power which was resident within him. By the miracles that he performed and by the words which he spoke he exemplified the message that is embodied in the church of Jesus Christ. Now the time had come that his ministry was completed on earth. He placed the work in the hands of his disciples so that it might go forward. Thus commissioned they sensed the divine power that he had felt. They also must have sensed the love for their brothers and sisters that he had demonstrated to them.

WE KNOW THE EXPERIENCE that Peter had with Jesus when he said, "Peter, lovest thou me?" and Peter answered, "Yea, Lord, thou knowest that I love thee." Then Jesus said, "Feed my sheep." Three times it was necessary for Christ to repeat this statement to impress upon the heart and soul of Peter that if he loved him he must feed the sheep and the lambs. Now, if we are to go forth and demonstrate the gospel of Jesus Christ we also must feed the sheep and the lambs. We must testify of Christ and demonstrate the things which we believe in our everyday lives. So, as the disciples journeyed to the place designated in Jerusalem, there to fast and pray and ask God's blessings upon them, they received the fulfillment of that promise Christ made them that he would bless them: "All power is given unto me both in heaven and in earth." That power was given them on the day of Pentecost when they spoke in the tongues of the people about them; they performed miracles and healings, and the power of God testified in the lives of men and women who would listen to the message of the disciples.

Something happened to the early Christians who followed them. Surely they must have lost something of the vision and the hope of the kingdom of God, for there came a time when apostasy crept in and the church lost its power and authority. Yet as this day came and passed, the Lord made provision for the return of his church—the Restoration.

I do not wish to dwell upon these things, but I do wish to point out that even as this day came and passed God once again instituted within his plan the restoration of his church. Again we are commissioned to preach the gospel. The first missionaries went out from America representing the church of Jesus Christ in 1837. They went to England and there, by the power of God, they demonstrated that which Christ had promised would come to those who believed on him. They testified of Christ and the gospel.

THE CHURCH HAS CONTINUED to grow in these latter days. I have found as I have gone out from time to time to teach the gospel that the power of God has been present, and I have felt that power within my very life and ministry.

Our brother this evening in his introduction told you of our leaving Independence five years ago today. We sailed from New York on October 7; from there we went to England and spent several weeks with the Saints in that mission. Then we went to Holland where we found our people facing hardships, rationing, and the lack of many things which they needed. In January, 1948, in company with Apostle M. A. McConley I went into Germany where I had been assigned to minister. I wondered during the months previous to my going there what I might be able to say and do to minister to these people and inspire them to bear witness of Christ and bring about better conditions.

It wasn't easy for me and for others to forget some of the experiences of the war. I tried to keep my mind open in regard to these people, and yet some very unpleasant things stayed in my mind. I suppose I must have thought of Germans as a barbarous race, hardened of heart; yet as I went among the people of that country I found them desiring to learn more of God.

JANUARY, 1948, was the darkest time for the German people. Those who had money were as poor as those who had none, because money would buy nothing. The only way they could get food was to barter. I have walked along the streets where people would be exchanging shoes for bread. I know something of the things that went on in the black market by having associated with the Americans the first year of my ministry in Germany.

The occupation forces received all the rations in clothing and things that they needed. An American could go to his post exchange and there for one dollar buy a carton of cigarettes containing ten packages; with these ten packages he could go out and trade with the Germans for whatever he wanted. A man who had to buy such things with German marks had to work three and a half months to pay for a dollar carton of cigarettes. Coffee cost the equivalent of fifty dollars a pound in our money; yet Americans traded such things on the black market to the German people for lovely antique furniture. The people who lived in the city, in order to survive, would take their rugs, household goods, and clothing into the country to barter with the German farmers for food.

On Friday evening when the offices would be closed, people would load up some of their precious items, get on a train, and go as far into the country as they could, hoping not to find anyone else there with the same idea in mind. There they would spend the week end walking the country roads, trying to trade their belongings for enough food to tide them over until the following week end when they could go out again.

OUR FIRST TRIP into Germany took us to Berlin. We rode all night behind the Iron Curtain in the Russian Zone. When we awoke the next morning we saw a city of destruction. Berlin was a very beautiful city prior to the war; now it was in ruins. The streets had not been cleared of rubble at that time. Often we would have to make a detour when traveling by car for five or ten miles just to cross a street.

We wondered how we would find our members there. That Sunday morning when we stood in the congregation of Saints and sang with them the songs of the Restoration, we knew that the Spirit of God was with them. We knew, too, that they hadn't forgotten God or the teaching of their fellow-men about the love of Jesus Christ. I shall never forget the first song we sang that Sunday morning, "We thank thee, O God, for a Prophet to guide us in these latter days." As tears of appreciation ran down their cheeks we felt the Holy Spirit in our midst, and we knew that these people were the children of God. We were aware of the fact that we had a work to do here, even though our hearts were to be wrung as we tried to minister to them.

I shall never forget those first few months in Germany. Often we would have a ten-minute pause between services, and during that pause we would see mothers open their purses and hand their little ones a piece of dry bread; if there was enough to go around, the mothers would nibble on a piece too. That's all they had—no butter, margarine, or even lard to go on their bread. They didn't have anything warm to drink either; yet they would close their purses when the service started and with smiles on their faces they would sit and listen to every word that was said. I saw little children, pale and with pinched cheeks, and mothers with face flaming red from vitamin deficiency. Some with malnutrition in an advanced stage would have open sores from the "burn" in their skins.

I preached to these people, for they needed ministry. I tried to feed their hungry souls by telling of the love of Jesus Christ for all mankind, and they understood; for through their sufferings and hardships they had found God. Had it not been for the help and the love of our people here in America, the Saints in Germany, and the German Mission itself, would have been wiped out. Frequently food packages from the States arrived just in time to save the life of some individual in a family.

In one home that I went into there was a small baby. Somewhere the parents had found enough milk to feed the child. I would notice the mother, after the baby had nursed. Usually there would be a little left, and she would take the nipple from the bottle and drink it as rapidly as she could with trembling hands. These people hungered physically but not spiritually; they had found the church of Jesus Christ. In the midst of their suffering they bore witness of Christ.

In 1948 our statistics showed that we had 715 members in the German Mission. As we started bringing the records up to date we had to remove about 245 names from the records. Some 150 had been killed during the war. A number of them were unknown, so we had their names taken from the records. During the next five years that we ministered in the German Mission the membership grew from 550 to 1,425 members, and from six groups in the German Mission in 1947 to thirty-one groups in August, 1952. Are the people in the German Mission bearing their testimony of Jesus Christ? Are they going out and telling the gospel story as it should be told? I think so.

I'M GOING TO BE INTERESTED in what I can be done here in Independence as I labor with you in the new capacity to which I have been assigned—supervisor of missionary work. I'm wondering if we here can match the efforts of these people. I'm wondering if we likewise have a testimony of the love of God? Do we understand the purpose of the Restoration? Do we understand the nature and the call of the kingdom of God today? Those people, as they sing the songs of Zion, think of us. They think of their preparation there in Germany, as do Saints in England and Holland and other places where the gospel has gone. They are thinking of their responsibility of gathering to Zion. They likewise think of our responsibility here in the Center Place. But they have come to know that Zion alone is not the big thing; living the kingdom law wherever they are is the important thing in their lives.

Yes, they want to come to Zion, but let me tell you of one man who had to make a decision some twenty years ago. You will recall that in 1930 a number of our German Saints came to Independence. One man and his family didn't, however. It was our pastor in Hannover, Brother Franz Beil, who is now the patriarch in western Germany. At the time he was pastor of our little group in Hannover, he and his wife received their visas to come with their family to America. They had worked hard to come, and they were elated that soon they would be with the Saints in the Center Place. A few nights before time to sail, Brother and Sister Beil sat down together and began to talk about the church work in Hannover. Sister Beil said, "Papa, what's going to happen to the Saints here when we go off to Zion?"

He said, "Sofie, I've been thinking about that myself. You know," he said, "I want to be humble in what I say, but I'm afraid if we go the work will die; there's no one to take over the leadership of these people and guide them on." Then Sister Beil said, "Papa, what do you think we ought to do?" And he answered, "I think we ought to stay here. Maybe someday, if God permits, our children can go, or perhaps through the ministry that we can give here we can help the children of others who are staying behind that they might go." And they remained while thirty other members from the Hannover group went on to the United States.

TWENTY YEARS LATER, after the four years of suffering and hardships of World War II, the General Church decided that, because of the activity and vigor of the German Mission, it was necessary to set up headquarters there and send American missionaries there to live. A commission went over and made a survey of the German Mission, and the question of a logical place arose. The unanimous decision was Hannover. For over twenty years these people who had been left behind bore their testimony of this gospel and new souls were won to the church and kingdom. Today, as a result of their witnessing, the German Mission headquarters is in Hannover.

During the construction of the mission property in Hannover Brother Beil's son and wife went to the States; thus a part of his dream was fulfilled. During the twenty years, this brother grew and qualified himself for the day when God designated him to be a patriarch over the people in the German Mission. He is a man who preaches with power and conviction. I have talked with the young people in this group, and they have told me, "Every time Brother Beil preaches, we want to be there. We feel the Spirit of God in our midst as he talks to us. We know that he has found God, and he helps to share his experiences with us that we might find him also." Isn't that a wonderful tribute to a man who must preach almost every Sunday in his congregation?

Go ye therefore, and teach the gospel" is our call as a church. I am happy for the experiences that we have had with the German people and for many other experiences we have had with people of other countries who have found the gospel.

Now I want to tell you of our work in the Swiss Mission. I didn't know until I came back to the States that many of our people think there is a Swiss language; there isn't. In Switzerland three languages are spoken, as the country is divided into three parts: Italian, along the border of Italy; French, in the part joining France; and German, in the section next to Germany.

Thirty years ago our last missionary left Switzerland. We had a group of thirty-five members in the mission at that time. When our last missionary left we had no priesthood, so the little group was without leadership. In 1948 it was necessary for me to go into Switzerland and arrange for printing contracts that we might have German tracts. Before going there I recalled having seen a list of Swiss Saints in my files. I looked the list over and found a name that stood out to me, probably because he was the youngest of the group. I sent a telegram to him hoping that he was still alive and that he might receive it and be at the railway station the afternoon when I arrived.

That evening as I arrived at Basel, Switzerland, my heart sank. About two thousand people got off that train, which had started out in Norway and gone on through Holland, Belgium, Luxemburg, and then into Switzerland. I wondered how I could recognize this man in such a crowd. I didn't have his address. I trusted the telegraph office operator in Switzerland would take the time and trouble to look this up for me. As I stood there in the big railway station praying that I would see Milcher Wasser in the crowd, I looked toward the door and saw a tall man come in. I felt sure that if any person in the crowd was Milcher this must be he. So I waited. As he walked through the door he stood there for a few moments and looked the crowd over; then he spotted me, walked directly to me, and introduced himself. It was my first time in Switzerland, and I didn't know where to go. When I arrived I was given a handful of ration coupons. I was having a problem mastering the German language, and when I heard Swiss German I knew that was still another brand to learn.

BROTHER MILCHER took me to a hotel and later we went to his home. There we sat down and went over the list of Swiss Saints. He said, "This one is dead, this one is dead, this one is dead," until I thought surely none but this man remained alive. When we had finished the list we found there were five left. We made arrangements to hold services the next evening in my hotel room. He was to go see four of the members, and I was to see the fifth one because this woman lived between the hotel and the printing office where I was to go.

The next morning I went to her door and knocked. Soon an old lady came. I asked if she was the member I was looking for, and she said, "Yes, I am." Then I told her who I was. Tears began flowing down her cheeks and she said, "For thirty years as I have worked in my home I have prayed that the time would come when the church would send missionaries back to us, and my prayers have been answered." That evening at our meeting we didn't sing the songs of the Restoration—we didn't dare to! I was staying at a hotel operated by one of the large churches of Switzerland. But we did pray, and then we talked about the wonderful gospel of Jesus Christ. At the close of our little service I asked if there was anyone who had a friend who might be interested in hearing of the gospel of Christ. Brother Wasser raised his hand and said, "Yes, I have a friend. I was talking to him last week about the church." Thirty years without a missionary—thirty years without much hope and without his knowledge of my coming—yet this man was still talking about the church of Jesus Christ!

WE WENT THE NEXT MORNING to this home. As I stood before the door acknowledging introductions I noticed an unusual expression come over the man's face, but I did not know why until later. We went into his home and chatted for a few moments and then we got down to work. I told him why I was in Switzerland, why we had come to see him and what we had to offer. For the next two hours we searched the Scriptures and talked about the gospel of Jesus Christ. In closing I told him that the following evening we had secured a little room off the side of a restaurant there in Basel and wondered if he wouldn't like to come and hear more about the gospel; he said he would. The next evening I spoke on the subject of the Restoration and told how Joseph Smith had seen an angel and how he had been commissioned of God to bring about the restoration of this church. At the close of the service this man, Joseph Wolf, asked if it would be possible for us to come back to his home that evening, for he had something very important he wanted to tell us. A few minutes later we were in his home. Then he sat down and told us of an experience that he had had.

Some three months before, he was awakened during the night and saw a vision. He heard the voice of the Lord saying to him, "This is one of my servants. He will soon come to your land.

Life in Our Time

PART II: Opportunities for Christians

By Don Savage

BAPTISM IS AT ONCE a most serious and necessary step. It is the signing of a contract of obedience with God which cannot be broken without the loss of hope for celestial salvation. The candidate for baptism publicly vows to take upon himself the name of Christ and keep all his commandments. To break his vow simply means that he no longer cares for the name of Christ and no longer intends to keep his commandments.

On the other hand, there is no way of avoiding this responsibility. A requirement for celestial salvation is that each recipient thereof be baptized beneath the wave in similitude of the Christ who was buried in the earth. With his ascent from the water the person begins a life more carefully lived than ever before. He must fulfill in diligence all good tasks offered him for which he has the ability and the opportunity. Of course, that is by no means a simple task.

At once the new follower of Christ begins to realize his dependency upon the Holy Spirit for guidance in the works he ought to do. This guidance may come as personal individual direction, or it may come in the form of a commandment to thousands. But regardless of its form or scope, the revelation must be followed in good faith, or the time will come after repeated rejections when the Spirit will cease to direct the slothful and disobedient ones. Revelation from God is commonly called prophecy. And men prophesy as they are moved upon by the Holy Spirit.

WE NEED NOT ENTER a lengthy discussion of how God knows the future in detail. A few short examples in illustration of the principal involved will suffice.

The shrewd observer can often predict to some extent the future of a business or life simply by knowing and analyzing many of the influences and forces that will constitute the environment of that enterprise. Life insurance companies can tell you remarkably well what, if our world continues something like it is, you will be doing in ten or thirty years, where and when you will die, and the amount of your estate at the time. Business consultants can tell you how your new brand of soup, labeled as you have it, will sell in this area where it must compete with other brands. The engineer builds his airplane, having its infinity of details, with sufficient foresightedness that it will fly the first time it is scheduled for a trial run. Every day in a multitude of ways we use our powers of observation and reasoning to analyze the future from the visible signs about us. The accuracy and reach of our predictions are limited by the aptness of our minds and acquaintance with all of the bearing factors. This is man's likeness to God—his power to reason.

The mind of God, which is without limitation in depth and scope, completely understands the present and judges infinitely into the future. In the very beginning with the first simple creation God could judge just what would happen to his creation because he knew every factor that would bear upon it. Knowing what the first created things would do, he was able to judge their influence upon the second, and their influence upon the third, and so on. With the growing area of creation he, through bigness of mind, could predict all things.

Thus it is that his Spirit can rest upon the prophets and instruct them in things to come before they happen. An utterly fascinating study is of the wonderful opportunities God has always offered men in preparing them for things to come and counseling them to do certain things at opportune times in history. Like a halfback who must charge through the football line the instant the path is cleared for him or lose the advantage the play afforded, so God can see the opportunities in history long before they open up and counsel his people to take full advantage of them. Usually men follow his commandments by faith, not being able to see the reason or opportunity presented until long after it is gone. The Scriptures are replete with examples in which the Lord through his foreknowledge has counseled his people to act in a certain manner at certain times. The responding ones prospered immensely; the hesitant lost blessings that should have been theirs to enjoy.

A BASIC LESSON learned by human beings and to some extent by all creatures is that there is a time or point in each cycle of events where it is most advantageous to accomplish certain things relative to the cycle. For example, a ballplayer at bat watches intently as the baseball leaves the pitcher's hand and tenses every sense to judge exactly when the ball will pass him and the path it will follow. The batter knows there will be a single instant, more opportune than any other, when he should strike at the passing ball. He must consider all factors relative to the ball's flight to know that exact instant. Once his choice is made, it cannot be recalled. Perhaps he must decide not to strike at all.

Another example is in the growth and harvesting of crops. The farmer must constantly calculate the risk of his moves. To cultivate in dry weather is an invitation to disaster, for the soil will then dry rapidly and the plants will wither. But in time if the weeds are not removed, they will also starve the plants of their moisture. However, if it rains, the cultivated ground will benefit immensely, but the uncultivated earth will become impossible to work, and the weeds will then benefit. Therefore, the farmer turns to one who is in a better position than he to predict the advent of rain, the weatherman. Whether or not he decides correctly with the weatherman's help there is a point when it is best to cultivate. Similarly, when harvesttime rolls around, the reaper must decide when to reap. Some crops harvested early avoid the risk of hail, but bring lower prices than those left until perfectly ripe. Considering all things, there is again one point when the reaping should be done to bring the most profit to the farmer.

The baseball player is forced to make his decision in a portion of a second. The farmer may have days to decide. Nevertheless, there is a time with everything when it is opportune to act. The cycle may be immense or minute. The movements of nations are immense, while human actions are often minute. It is the action of the Holy Spirit in all the Lord's guiding functions to show men the moment of opportunity for the accomplishment of righteous works. But how can man know those moments if the Holy Spirit has no voice within him? What a tragedy that so many times man has failed to "strike when the iron was red" as urged by that Spirit.

BACK IN THE DAYS OF MOSES the children of Israel were ushered by the hand of their God out of Egypt toward the promised land of Palestine. There, Jehovah promised, they could become a mighty nation. History now discloses to the student that it was a period when the surrounding powers of the Nile and Euphrates Valleys were at a low ebb, and it was an opportune time for a small band of people like the Israelites to build themselves a nation without having to fight off the millions of those mighty countries to do it. Palestine was inhabited by loosely knit tribes who could be routed with little trouble. In short, the time was ripe for Israel. But Israel dilly-dallied. Forty years later they were still grubbing about in Arabian Desert sands trying to make up their minds whether or not they liked Jehovah. And finally when Joshua arose to lead them reluctantly across Jordan a part of the group became faint-hearted and wanted to settle down outside of the Promised Land entirely. Their wars which should have been mighty victories, aided as they were by the battle-ax of God, were mostly second-rate skirmishes. Despite the many times the Lord demonstrated to them his ability to help and to lead, their faith was just plain lacking. As a final result, the nation of Israel doomed herself to something less than that which she might have been, her only contribution to succeeding civilizations being the Holy Scriptures, and those were a gift from God. The Lord knew when the time was right for the Israelites to do great things, but they refused. Their children have had to wait for nearly three millenniums for the second opportunity to gather to the Promised Land.

IN GETHSEMANE on that awful yet wonderful night, Jesus prepared in mighty prayer for his sacrifice a few hours hence, asking his only earthly friends to watch and pray with him that last hour. In that period of prayer he was to make his final decision to be the Savior of the world. But it was late, and the apostles were weary from the long day's activities. Anyway, there would be other times when they could help . . . they supposed. And so they closed their eyes in sleep. A second time he returned to them and asked, "Won't you be my friends for this last time?" But again their answer was evident as they returned to their sleep, and his last prayers were said alone. The minutes ticked away, and with them departed this opportunity. The Lord knew what was to come, and using that knowledge he had offered his disciples one of the greatest privileges afforded any mortal man. After it was gone, in typical human fashion they arose ready for service. But it was too late. The instant of action came and went and was lost forever. Instead of helping the Son of God in the greatest decision ever made, they arose at last in the wisdom of men, and the best they could do was to cut off some poor fellow's ear.

OLIVER COWDERY LABORED LONG and diligently in the early days of the church as Joseph's scribe while the Book of Mormon was translated. Our own experience since then in spiritual matters makes us realize how taxing the burden of translating must have been. Somehow the Holy Spirit planted in Oliver's mind the thought that he too might work in the process of translation as Joseph did. Perhaps Joseph desperately needed the rest. Oliver's inquiring prayer was answered in the affirmative; he could assist in translating. Yet he hesitated, perhaps waiting until his faith increased to a safe margin—we do not know the exact circumstances. But in this cycle of events also the opportunity came and went. When the day finally arrived that Oliver thought he was ready, his offer to translate was refused by God because it was no longer expedient. The time when he could have worked had drifted away forever. And thus was lost the privilege of being a greater light in the Restoration. Lost also was the help he might have been to God and Joseph.

A less melancholy example and one in which some of our ancient kin heeded a prophecy is of ancient Nineveh. Ripening in sin, Nineveh was grudgingly spoken to by Jonah, the prophet, and given just forty days to put things back in order. At the end of that time, if things hadn't changed, the city was to be destroyed. Jonah, who did not like the Ninevites anyway, was pretty sure his prophesying had not been effective. The people, he thought, were just no good, and, thinking that the show of seeing fire and brimstone pour down out of heaven was worth waiting to see, he went out a safe distance from the place and climbed a hill to wait. What chagrin he must have suffered there in his temporary lean-to as the forty days expired and no inferno appeared from the sky. The people of Nineveh had heeded his prophecy and repented in sackcloth and ashes, so the calamity was turned from them. Again the Lord set a given moment of opportunity. These people took it.

A FINAL EXAMPLE, and one which is yet to be fully understood, concerns the purchase of lands westward from Independence, Missouri. In the early days of the church when the land was cheap and could be had, we were counseled to purchase as much as we could. At the time it probably did not look like too good an investment, and the Saints weren't interested. Now Kansas City rests on the land. Apart from monetary loss we may have suffered by our disobedience, perhaps time will tell whether there was not a greater reason in His mind for not having the great city so close to the Center Place.

These several cases illustrate one principal: God knows all things, past, present, and future. With this knowledge he directs men to do many things which will prove to be of great advantage to the cause of righteousness. Often men have refused. Each refusal has brought unnecessary sorrow to someone. Each time of heeding has brought blessing. The time for decision may be limited to hours, or it may have a tolerance of years. Each case is different and is understood from His words and spiritual direction. He does not counsel his children to do that which is impossible. The way may not at the moment be visible, but a lapse of time will show that it was there, and success would have been possible. Our duty as Christ's followers is to seek spiritual guidance into these opportunities.

"O Jerusalem! Jerusalem! Ye who will kill the prophets, and will stone them who are sent unto you; how often would I have gathered your children together, even as a hen gathers her chickens under her wings, and ye would not. Behold, your house is left unto you desolate!"
—Matthew 23: 37, 38, I.V.

PART ONE OF THIS SERIES was written with the purpose of showing something of the obligation which every human being has toward God and humanity. Man's unavoidable duty is obedience to all of the commandments of God.

Part two is intended to illustrate that through the foreknowledge of God, man is offered opportunities for righteous service which he would not otherwise find. The Holy Spirit is the Lord's medium through which these opportunities are presented. Only by careful observance of all spiritual directions in matters small and large can men keep all of the desires of God.

Part three, the conclusion, will deal with "keeping our feet on the ground." Big things are happening, and it is easy for us to lose our way among shadows and illusions. We must constantly examine our situation; for Zion, while it will be built with our dreams in the heavens, must be built on a solid foundation.

A Lapse in the Hubert Case Story

New Church at Decatur

By Kenneth A. Newton

PIONEERS OF THE RESTORATION kept the spark of the gospel alive among the isolated members in the Decatur, Illinois, area until August, 1925. Brothers Emsley Curtis, Walters, Davis, Paxton, L. Wildermuth, and C. Harpe preached and visited with the Saints in the years prior to the organization of a church school. Among those who played an important part in this step were Brother E. L. Ulrich, Mr. and Mrs. O. C. Johnson, Anna Pritchett, and Mr. and Mrs. N. A. Burrow.

On February 4, 1926, District President J. O. Dutton called the group together for a midweek prayer service, at which time it was decided that a branch should be organized. On March 1 F. Henry Edwards, who was a member of the Council of Twelve at that time, met for the organization of the branch. O. C. Johnson was elected pastor. Shortly following the organization of the branch, a building committee was appointed. Excavation began on the lot April 23, 1926, a day after it was purchased. Weather conditions were unfavorable, but the volunteer laborers were undaunted. On July 4 of that year, the first meeting was held in the new church home at 1175 West King Street. Brother E. L. Ulrich of Bradner, Ohio, conducted the meetings on that day. During the fall of the same year, Brother Ulrich returned and conducted a series of meetings, after which fourteen candidates were baptized. Feeling the need for further ministry the Saints prevailed upon Brother Ulrich to continue his series, and two weeks later twelve more members were added to the church. Within four months after the new church building was erected, the membership reached a total of forty-four.

District President F. T. Mussell worked in the area in 1927. Other missionaries included Roscoe E. Davey, R. L. Fulk, Harvey Minton, L. G. Holloway, Virgil Shepherd, E. Y. Hunker, C. Houston Hobart, J. D. Anderson, and John R. Grice.

Brother O. C. Johnson served as branch president until September, 1934. One of his contributions to the group was the development of the children's department.

Brother O. C. Henson, Sr., was elected branch president in 1934 and served until 1944. During his term of office a new baptismal font was built in the church, and other improvements were made.

SINCE THAT TIME progress has been made in the branch by growth in numbers and the strength of the priesthood. Kenneth A. Newton served as branch president from 1945 to the fall of 1948. Fred Robbins served as pastor until he moved to Bloomington to attend school, at which time O. C. Henson, Jr., was appointed branch president. He was elected to this office the following year and has served in that capacity since.

In March, 1949, plans began to secure funds to be used either in enlarging the building or to secure a lot for a new church. Ideas for selling the church and purchasing or building a larger, more adequate one soon became prevalent. A building fund drive began, and in October, 1949, the Saints voted to purchase two lots on the southeast corner of West King Street and Fairview Avenue (having a frontage of eighty-four feet on West King and one hundred and fifty feet on Fairview) for $2,700. Committees appointed were as follows: building committee, Gilbert Elam and K. A. Newton; plans committee, William Spicer, Donald Ragel and Louise Sloan; and building fund committee, Henry Atkinson, Anna Pritchett, Carl Gordon, and Vivian Lane.

DURING 1950 several problems were solved, many possibilities and their alternatives were discussed, and plans were presented for consideration. One set which was drawn up and sent to the Presiding Bishopric called for moving the church at 1174 West King Street to the new location, splitting the building down the center and widening it. This however could not be done, and, after much work, the Saints met for the groundbreaking ceremony on June 3, 1951. District President Arthur Henson was the speaker at the service. Each member of the branch took positions along the lines where the outside walls were to be raised, and after the prayer by Patriarch O. C. Henson, Sr., each one turned a spadeful of dirt to signify willingness to help in the building program of the new church. The old church was sold for $5,000 to Mr. John Piper in August, 1951.

After less than a year of work by each member of the congregation, the cornerstone service was held May 18, 1952. Present for the day's activities were President Israel A. Smith, Apostle D. O. Chesworth, Illinois State Senator Elbert S. Smith, Dean of Chapel E. I. Abendroth of Millikin University, and district officers.

The cornerstone and a stone from the Nauvoo Temple were laid by President Smith. The Nauvoo stone was secured by the pastor, O. C. Henson, Jr., for a keepsake. When he saw its value as an addition to this building, he immediately suggested its use.

Our Heritage

By Geraldine Wyatt

THE OTHER EVENING it was my privilege to be with a group in our community who watched a film on the internal troubles and general living conditions in Iran. After the film was shown a distinguished young man answered questions about this controversial Asian country. In acknowledging the terrible poverty and illiteracy of the great mass of people and the squalor of their way of living, and after answering questions about the government, he made a simple, touching statement—one which too many of us take for granted: "You, who have been born in the United States, do not realize how very fortunate you are." This young man had great qualifications enabling him to judge the rich advantages we Americans have and hold. He is a native of Iran, and for the past five years has been in the United States as a student.

Recently much publicity has been given to books, articles, and educational films which point up our American heritage—the theory being that if the citizens become familiar with the finest traditions in American history, no "ism" can dominate or even tinge their thinking.

AS A RELIGIOUS ORGANIZATION believing in latter-day revelation, we are primarily interested in the religious heritage of this continent. Christian ethics and good government cannot be too far apart. For a good Christian is always an excellent citizen.¹ The two are complementary to each other. Searching the revelations given concerning this land, from ancient times on down to the present, and searching the recent historical records, one cannot help but believe the political greatness of this country is a result of the spiritual heritage of this land. And in accordance with the prophecies given, the freedom of the people will be as lasting as their Christianity is constant. There are, of course, different levels of freedom, as there are different degrees of Christian conduct. Moroni wrote:

Behold, this is a choice land, and whatsoever nation shall possess it, shall be free from bondage, and from captivity, and from all other nations under heaven, if they will but serve the God of the land, who is Jesus Christ who hath been manifested by the things which we have written.²

Centuries afterward, and with their historical and sacred records available, it is very easy to see why the civilizations of the Jaredites, the Nephites, and the people of Zarahemla fell. The integrity of Christlike living was not maintained, even though at the start of their settlements on this hemisphere they lived in close communion with God.

IN OUR OWN TIME it is very interesting to note that the successful settlements in this country were made in the interests of Christianity, these people sincerely trying to serve God according to their best knowledge. The Pilgrims, the Puritans, the Quakers, and even later the Mennonites, who brought with them seed for the first successful plains crop—winter wheat, all contributed to the greatness of our nation.

Incidentally, the Quakers' greatest contribution was undoubtedly the furnishing of honorable men for the various Indian agencies. Because of their peace policy they had been so successful in establishing amicable relations with the Indian tribes of the East, Quakers were specifically sought out to bring about peace with the savage Plains tribes after all other means—including war—had failed.

Not only were successful colonizing groups religion minded, but some of the most outstanding individual contributions to our nation's progress were made by godly people. For instance, the first American man to cross the mountains and the formidable trackless desert to the settlements of California was a noted Christian gentleman, Jedediah S. Smith. Even his clerk, Harrison G. Rogers, was a very religious man. In his journal of this difficult feat are written prayers for the success of their journey. Though both men and most of the members of the expedition met violent deaths within a few years or months afterward, this first crossing set a precedent and opened the way for practical American settlement of California. The Spaniards were so sure it was impossible.

Another outstanding Christian man whose influence reached out across the rough frontier was Colonel Alexander Majors, of the firm, Majors, Russell, and Waddell, operators of the overland stage and freighting business. He never drank nor swore. His employees had to sign a contract not to swear, gamble, or drink. The success of the Pony Express, a project of this firm, was due to the fact their employees maintained such high standards of integrity—a practical religion.

IN CONTRAST to this ethical conduct, we have the history of our Southwest—onetime Spanish stronghold. The Spanish conquistadors considered themselves Christians and took priests along on their exploratory expeditions. Some of the priests were so devoted to their beliefs they died martyrs in attempting to promulgate their gospel. However, genuine Christianity produces a love and concern for the well-being of one's fellow-man; this was alien to the philosophy of the Spaniards whose greed for gold was the paramount drive of their lives. To gain wealth they perpetrated all manner of cruelties upon the Indians. The curse Samuel the Lamanite prophesied would come upon the wealth of the Nephites was refulfilled in regard to the Spaniards. Unconquered Indians constantly raided and harassed them. When we went into the country in 1846 the Spanish colonists had been forced to relinquish many of their settlements; they were terrified of traveling on their roads and had even abandoned some of their much-coveted, rich mines. The wealth they had acquired so ruthlessly had "become slippery."³

Both individually and nationally many Americans of the past have sensed the moral and physical greatness this nation was to achieve. But we of the church have a greater heritage than any in our knowledge of God's dealings with mankind on this hemisphere. This should fit us to be the finest citizens in the land, not because this knowledge would make us fear the wrath of God, but because we know the possibilities of our nation and have in our records the incentive to make those possibilities realities—a godly people laboring for his kingdom.

1. "Let no man break the laws of the land, for he that keepeth the laws of God hath no need to break the laws of the land."—Doctrine and Covenants 58: 5.
2. Book of Mormon, Ether 1: 35.
3. Book of Mormon, Helaman 5: 41-48.

IN TUNE

Whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap.—Galatians 6: 7.

Those who look for beauty will find it. Those who listen for the voice of truth will hear it. Those who love will be loved. The universe moves on in perfect order, and only man is out of tune. He is out of tune because he has lost contact with his Creator—the only Source which can guide him in right channels and make his life a happy one.

He who created the universe and set the course of the stars is able to guide man in all his doings, if man will but seek that guidance through prayer and obedience to divine law.

Life is a miracle and a wonder in all its phases. In fortune or in misfortune, we must take it as it comes—for richer or poorer, in sickness or in health. The first debt we owe for our life is a debt of gratitude.

The Lesson

By Leona N. Hands

OH, WHAT a beautiful morning; oh, what a beautiful day," Ellen Reid sang, her hands busy washing the breakfast dishes, but her mind and heart enjoying the bright rays of sunlight making gay rainbows in the soap bubbles.

A stray breeze stirred the ruffled curtains at the kitchen window and brought to her ears the high treble of childish voices from the back yard where her small twins, Jean and Joan, played happily in the sand pile.

Clad only in pink sun suits the two little girls made a pleasing picture. Their well-rounded bodies were tan and healthy. They were happy, good-natured children, for which Ellen was deeply thankful. Otherwise, she would never be able to accomplish so much.

Not that Ellen didn't enjoy the busy life she led. She rejoiced in her own good health and loved keeping house. It was a joy to have a home and family. Her work was a constant labor of love.

There was only one cloud in Ellen's sky, but it was a big one. Try as she would there was never enough money to go around. She did all her own work, baked bread and cookies, and sewed for herself and the babies. In every way that she knew she saved to keep down expense. But it was still a struggle to make ends meet.

There was a grain of comfort in one thought. She was not alone. Hard times were upon the land and everywhere people were facing the same gigantic problem—to make a living and keep out of debt.

BUT TODAY ELLEN'S HEART was full of song, for her cup of happiness was full and brimming over with thanksgiving. Under the kitchen sink sat a basket of ripe, golden peaches, heaped up, rounded over, and just waiting to be put into cans for winter eating. Peaches were her family's favorite fruit, but the crop was poor with prices too high for Ellen's purse to meet. There had been small hope of getting any to can.

Ellen had reckoned without the thoughtfulness of a kind-hearted neighborhood grocer. Early this morning she and the twins were in the store buying a few staple groceries. Mr. Collins had waited on her himself. Placing the articles in a sack, he chatted pleasantly, then asked, as if in an afterthought, "I wonder if you could use a bushel of peaches, Mrs. Reid? They are ripe and ready for canning. I'm looking for someone who can do them up right away." He named a price that caused Ellen's eyes to shine with pleasure.

"Pay me next week," he insisted, smiling at Ellen good-naturedly. He carried the bushel of peaches out to the wagon Ellen had brought the twins in. Before they could protest, he produced a peppermint stick for each small girl from his big white apron. "To make the walk home a little shorter," he said, giving Jean and Joan a wink that brought the smiles back to their round sweet faces.

SCARCELY ABLE TO BELIEVE her good fortune at acquiring such a bargain, Ellen got home as quickly as possible. Placing the twins in the fenced-in back yard to play, she hurried to the basement for canning equipment and fruit jars. With luck she could have one canner of peaches finished before lunch time.

Never were breakfast dishes done in such short order. The fruit jars were next. A good sudsing and scalding would be all they needed, for they had been put away spotlessly clean.

She did manage to get a full canner of peaches done before lunch time, but the afternoon brought an unexpected interruption. Scarcely had the twins fallen asleep when a neighbor telephoned. Could Ellen take care of the baby while she went to the dentist with a throbbing toothache? Ellen did not have the heart to refuse. "Bring him over," she agreed, sympathetically.

Teddy, the baby, who was just beginning to walk, proved cross and peevish. He screamed his protest when Ellen attempted to put him down for a nap. She tried lying down beside him, crooning a lullaby and patting him gently, but he would not be comforted.

Ellen was not at all surprised to see the bedroom door open suddenly and her two girls appear. Awakened from their all-too-brief naps, they wept in sympathy with the crying baby. Trying to amuse three fussy children turned the afternoon into a nightmare of activity. Not a single peach went into the cans.

It was late afternoon before the baby's mother returned and took him home. Ellen turned her attention to getting an early supper. Her surprise for Bob was spoiled, but he would still be pleased with her bargain. And with his help the peaches would be all canned before bedtime.

ELLEN WAS RIGHT. Bob listened to her account of the day's happenings, praised her for acquiring the peaches at such a reasonable price, and volunteered to put the twins to bed, then help her with the canning. "It shouldn't take too long with both of us working at it," he assured her cheerfully.

But it was long after midnight before Ellen placed the last jar of peaches on the worktable and prepared for bed. A call from the office of the meat-packing plant where Bob worked caused him to grab his hat and coat and leave immediately. A carload of meat had just come in, the night watchman reported, and it had to be unloaded immediately and placed in the big refrigeration rooms.

"Sorry, honey," Bob said with genuine regret as he left the house. "There's no help for it. At least I got the girls off to bed first."

Weary and tired though she was, Ellen felt amply repaid for her efforts. Twenty-eight quarts of peaches to store away for the winter was well worth the work. Visions of peach salad, pie, upside-down cake, fat tarts dotted with brown sugar and butter, and dozens of dishes of plain sliced peaches filled her dreams that night.

STORING THE DELICIOUS FRUIT away the next morning in neat rows on shelves in her fruit cellar, Ellen vowed she would not open a single jar before winter. Yet it was but a few weeks later that she quickly changed her mind and hurried to the basement. Mother Reid was coming to spend the day, and peach pie was her favorite dessert.

As Ellen snapped on the light in the fruit closet and reached for a quart of peaches, she gave a quick cry of dismay. The top peach in the jar was turning brown. Her eyes flew to the remaining jars of fruit. Quart after quart revealed the same condition; some with only one brown peach, but others with two and even three.

Alone in the small room, Ellen covered her face with her hands and wept tears of frustration and discouragement. Then she dried her eyes and stood silently thinking. What had she done or left undone the day she canned the fruit? She had not varied her method of processing the peaches. It was exactly the way she had always preserved them.

Completely puzzled, Ellen gazed at the jars of peaches. Then the answer came, clear and convincing. She had forgotten to pray while she was canning the fruit. Always it had been her custom to ask God to bless her labors, to keep the fruit and vegetables she canned safe from spoilage. Never before had she lost a single quart—not even pickles or jam and jellies.

Faced with the loss of her entire supply of winter's fruit (for it was all the canning they could afford that year) Ellen was shaken and desolate.

Then, as always, she turned to One who knew all her problems and had never failed to lend a listening ear. There in the small fruit room she poured out her heart to God in prayer. Earnestly she prayed for forgiveness for her thoughtlessness in neglecting to ask the help and blessing of her "silent partner." Then in simple terms she presented her petition to God. "The fruit is part of our winter's living, Father," she said. "We cannot replace it, and our need is great. If it please thee, wilt thou now bless it that it may keep for our use?"

The winter months came and went, and not a week passed but what Ellen went to her cellar for a quart of peaches. Always she said a thank-you prayer to God as she looked at the fruit on the shelves. For none of the jars suffered any further spoilage. Each one had a brown peach or two at the top, but the remaining fruit was golden and sweet to the taste—a constant reminder of the love and mercy of a kind Heavenly Father.

A Mother of Zion

By Marcella Schenck

TIME WRITES OUR AUTOBIOGRAPHIES upon our faces. Whether we will it or not, the story will be there for others to read. You have heard this many times.

I have a favorite pew in the church where I worship. Across the room from me, a saw-tooth window of delicate gray occupies the major part of the eastern wall of the sanctuary. On either side, panels of deep blue wall resemble draperies. Silhouetted against the window are the faces of many Saints endeared to me. One of them stands out quite distinctly on the pearly gray background. My gaze often lingers on that face.

If I were to sketch the profile, you might say, "Not so pretty." But in reality the face has beauty. Written there are honesty, frankness, sincerity, and other virtues. It is the face of an elderly lady, and Time has had opportunity to write its story well.

Have you seen the original of Whistler's "Mother," the famous portrait? You don't forget the delicate softness of old flesh, the filminess of the lace handkerchief in her lap. This person in my church has the same softness of flesh, the same composure. Whistler's mother sits with her feet upon a hassock, resting. My lady sits in a pew, worshipping. She listens, absorbs, and learns. Her face becomes lighted by a spiritual glow that paint and canvas would capture with difficulty. It makes a better Sabbath day for me to have seen the face pictured in its religious setting.

Have you heard the phrase, "A mother in Israel"? It has a depth of meaning. If Zion were here and I could paint this picture, I would name it "A Mother of Zion."

Very early in life we begin writing our stories. Applied make-up can hide the real face only temporarily. Dramatizing changes are only for a performance. Eventually the curtain rings down to show—what? Pity for self or love of others? Bitterness or sweetness? Kindness or selfishness? Laziness or service?

May our faces show both gentle virtues and strong ones. May those who look read a good story in the faces of all church members.

Who Is Everybody?

By Ione Sartwell

YES," SAID THE MAN, "when I look out over those fields of corn, I can't help feeling that I have made the world a little better place in which to live." And there were tears of humility in his eyes. He was a small man and wiry, with a keen mind even at sixty-three. "He was real smart in school," they said of him. Real smart—smart enough to know what would happen to the swampland if someone dug ditches in it.

The point is not merely that ditch-diggers aren't always of the strong-back, weak-mind type. It is not even as simple as the assertion that we may need ditchdiggers in Zion. It goes deeper than that.

In our trend toward being professional and in suiting our professions to the needs of the church, it will become increasingly easier to be professionally and vocationally snobbish. Not theoretically so, of course—but practically? Well—how many times have you heard, "We need everybody in Zion—doctors, lawyers, schoolteachers, ah, housewives—there is a place for everyone"? And all the doctors, lawyers, schoolteachers, and housewives rest secure in their contribution.

THE POINT IS that our examples are in a rut.

Everybody knows that we need doctors, but how often do we remember that because of some insignificant telephone operator the family of the sick one no longer has to chase across country to get a doctor? Everybody knows that schoolteachers are important, but who has ever sung the praises of the girl, probably in some basement, who never even finished high school, but who is binding books so the teacher can teach?

Of course, examples are at best only examples. They're not meant to be all-inclusive. We just use what comes to our minds first. We can't write a dissertation every time we want to point out the need for everybody in Zion. That is certainly true, but what about that nine tenths of "everybody" who need the security of hearing their professions, their vocations, or their jobs recognized in spoken or written language? "I know you love me," say the story-books, "but let me hear you say it."

A LOT HAS BEEN EXPRESSED about the emotional impact of words. Words can arouse the masses, or they can soothe the individual; they can keep a whole people in subjection, or they can boost the individual to a position of authority. The point here is that the lack of words, where needed, can prevent a part of "everybody" from feeling the assurance that he, too, is needed. The most wonderful thoughts in the world are ineffective and uninfluential if not expressed.

We carry the principle into our educational system. "Don't ever let the younger brother feel he isn't as smart as the older one," we say, "just because the older one gets better marks. Talk about [not think about] what he does too."

We carry the principle into our housekeeping. "Tell your wife her pie is as good as the pie your mother used to make. Don't just think it. It will compensate for the hours she spends in the kitchen."

We carry the principle into our personal lives. The girl's eyes shine brighter if the boy says they do. The boy walks a little straighter if the girl says she likes his suit.

We have only to carry the principle into our Zion-building. Give the ditchdiggers, the elevator girls, the dime-store clerks, the tree trimmers, the janitors a chance to glow with pride too. And don't stop with these examples.

APRIL— Restoration Festival Month

April is the month which speaks to our church of the Restoration. It is the month in which we observe the anniversary of the Restoration of the church of Jesus Christ with appropriate services and activities designed to enlarge the understanding and to enlist a greater support of all ages toward the mission of his church on earth.

To Zion's Leagues, this month has a special meaning, for it generally brings the Restoration Festival week. With Easter falling on April 5 this year, it will be necessary in most cases to shift the Restoration Festival week to some other period in the month. Nevertheless, it should still be observed.

The current Zion's League Annual No. 1, under the month of April (pages 121 and following) has a wealth of ideas for the observance of this important date in the history of our church. In each commission field—whether it be worship, study, service, or recreation—there are ideas for developing the historic aspects of the Restoration. There are two changes, however, from five

In the "Big League"

Stephen C. Robinson

STEVE C. ROBINSON, 17, of 2212 Thirty-ninth Street, Des Moines, is now in the "big league." He is in Washington, D.C., as a page in the house of representatives. According to a Des Moines newspaper—

Robinson said he became interested in the Washington job while serving his first "term" as a page in the 1951 Iowa legislature and mentioned it to Paul Cunningham, congressional representative from Robinson's district. "I was beginning to think he had pigeon-holed the idea," Robinson said with a smile. "But I guess he didn't."

Recently A. C. Gustafson, chief clerk of the Iowa House of Representatives, received the following note from Paul Cunningham in Washington, D.C.:

So glad to get your letter about Stephen Robinson, and if you have any more as good as he is I will do my best to take years ago when the Restoration Festival was first introduced: (1) There is no church-wide Zion's League fund-raising project, and (2) we are once more engaged in armed conflict.

There would probably be no objection this spring to any League or district youth group's raising money, within the limits of local policy, and devoting it to some worth-while project. Leagues should certainly be encouraged to make this an opportunity for special attention to men in the service.

Whether it be with a banquet or a special worship service, we hope every League will give some attention to observing the Restoration Festival this year.

them away from you. The Chief of Pages in the House told me this week that Stephen Robinson is the best he has, and said, "If you have any more like him, send them down."

While in Washington, Steve will get "take home" pay of $240 per month, as compared to a little more than $35 weekly that he made at home.

Steve attends classes while he is in Washington. Before he left, he was a senior at Roosevelt High School in Des Moines, and this year was chief justice of the student council, the second highest office in the school. Last year, he served on the student court. Recently he was honored by representing his school at the Kiwanis Club for the month of October.

Last summer Steve made a solo trip to Guatemala where he visited George and Billie Young and Lloyd and Jean Hurshman. An article in the Des Moines Tribune described his seven-week journey:

Not long before Steve started on his trip, his dad chanced to sit beside an American, William Hughes, who lives in Monterrey, Mexico, on a plane from Des Moines to Kansas City. When Hughes learned of the boy's trip, he offered to be of any help he could.

Young Steve started his trip July 16 and in three days he had thumbed his way to San Antonio, Texas, getting several long rides in the process. Within a few more days he was in Monterrey where Hughes put him up for the night, gave him a letter written in Spanish to help him in the event of trouble, and gave him some medicine in case he got some bad food.

An account of Steve's trip also appeared in the Register, another Des Moines newspaper:

Steve was gone 46 days, covered 6,000 miles, and spent $200 he earned himself. . . . His one regret was that he didn't have room in his ruck pack for more souvenirs. As it turned out, the women in the Robinson family fared best. "I brought back Guatemalan print material so my four sisters could make some skirts," Steve said, "and I got a couple of serapes for Mom. But I didn't have a thing for dad or myself."

Steve, the son of Bishop and Mrs. Stephen Robinson of the Des Moines District, was instrumental in helping the Youngs and the Hurshmans with the conversion and baptism of José Aranda.

After completing his high school education, Steve plans to attend Graceland for two years, then enter law school. Three of his sisters, Shirley, Beverly, and Ardis, are graduates of Graceland.

Steve is a priest, having first served as a deacon at the age of fifteen. "While only seventeen, he is an able speaker and is popular in the branches of Des Moines District, where he is asked for repeat sermons. He is a man of faith, believing in much prayer and fasting for others," according to Herbert M. Scott, pastor of the Des Moines Branch.

Steve has always gone with his father to reunions, and he has attended the last three General Conferences. He has served two consecutive years as president of the Des Moines Zion's League and has been assistant junior church pastor.

Question Time

Question:

Please explain why the angel who visited Zacharias was Gabriel, according to Luke 1: 19, and according to Doctrine and Covenants 26: 2c was Elias.

Armed Forces

J. V. C.

Answer:

The word "Gabriel" is not a proper or personal name, but is descriptive of an office, much as we use the words "president," "bishop," and "secretary." Smith's Bible Dictionary says, "The word is not in itself distinctive, but merely a description of the angelic office." Strong's Greek Dictionary gives the meaning of the word as "man of God—an arch-angel," and it is derived from the root word Geber, meaning "a valiant man, mighty." This makes the word "Gabriel" a symbol of office, power, and authority. Daniel and Luke, however, use the word as a proper name. The Doctrine and Covenants identifies this angel as Elias.

Question:

Genesis 9: 23, I.V., speaks of the general assembly of the church of the firstborn and how they shall possess the earth until the end comes. Who possesses it after the end comes?

Ohio

S. S. C.

Answer:

The aggregation of all the obedient righteous from all ages and from all lands, who have been taken home to the Lord, are the church of the firstborn and the ones whom the Lord will bring with him when he returns at his second coming, uniting with the righteous on earth in the Zion of latter days. They will reign with Christ throughout the thousand years.

The millennium is probably a period for perfecting not only individuals but the group as a whole, consolidating it into a unified kingdom under a perfect system of law and order, at the end of which time "he shall deliver up the kingdom and present it unto the Father spotless" (D. and C. 76: 7).

After the thousand years, the last resurrection, and the judgment, the other groups will be assigned their places in other realms, when the whole earth will be given over to the "church of the firstborn," having been cleansed and purified.

Therefore, it must needs be sanctified from all unrighteousness, that it may be prepared for the celestial glory; . . . it shall be crowned with glory, even with the presence of God the Father; that bodies who are of the celestial kingdom may possess it for ever and ever; for, for this intent was it made and created; and for this intent are they sanctified.—D. and C. 85: 4.

They will be the only people on earth, for others will "inherit another kingdom," either a terrestrial kingdom, or a telestial kingdom. The earth will be celestialized to adapt it to the celestialized people—the church of the firstborn. It will be their eternal inheritance.

Question:

By whom and where was the name given to the Book of Mormon?

Wisconsin

MRS. I. D.

Answer:

The Book of Mormon was named after and by its compiler, Mormon, a Nephite prophet and general in ancient America, who wrote an abridgment from Nephite records. They had been kept from the time of Lehi's leaving Jerusalem with his colony about 600 B.C. until the destruction of the Nephite civilization in the fourth century after Christ. We read: "And now, I, Mormon, make a record of the things which I have both seen and heard, and call it the book of Mormon" (Mormon 1: 1, page 687).

After Mormon was killed in battle, his son Moroni finished the record. (See Mormon 4: 1, page 704).

He bears witness of me." And he said, "Last evening as you stood before my door I knew you were the man I saw in my vision. During these last three months my mind has been troubled as to what this message meant, but tonight as you told the story of the Restoration I knew my vision had been fulfilled." That evening we gave this man, upon his request, the Book of Mormon and the Doctrine and Covenants in German.

The next afternoon I took my departure from Basel, Switzerland, for Rotterdam. He was at the train. I mentioned to him how tired he looked. He smiled and said, "I didn't sleep last night. After you left I made myself comfortable and then I began to read that wonderful book, the Book of Mormon. I read all night long and finished a few minutes before breakfast."

Then he said, "Tonight I'm going to read the other book." I said, "I think you ought to go to sleep tonight."

"I couldn't sleep until I read the rest of this," he said.

THREE MONTHS LATER we baptized Joseph Wolf. A few months following that he was ordained to the office of a priest and today he is carrying on our work alone in Switzerland. Surely the Lord has all power both in heaven and in earth, if we will believe on him, trust in his word, and proclaim his message. God has been with us in our work in Europe and with the Saints in the missions abroad. I know that he will bless us here in our work if we will trust in him and testify of his word. God is waiting today to pour out his blessings upon his people. But he waits—must he wait long?

I'm going to ask something of every one of you. I'm going to ask for your cooperation in helping Brother Bolinger and me and others here in the Stone Church area in our missionary work. We need more souls for the kingdom of God. We must bring about a better way of life. We have the answer. We have the plan of salvation. Why must we wait throughout eternity to fulfill this task which God has given us to perform?

I believe, and I have faith and confidence in you people that you will help us, and I have faith in my God that he will help us as we go out and win new souls for Christ. May God bless you in this great work and may he minister to us as we minister to this people.

Letters

Today, As of Old

Big medical terms are not important. Causes are not important either. What is important is that one moment I held in my arms our seven months old son, and the next moment I realized he was a helpless child destined to a life worse than death.

It was Daryl's regular check-up visit to the doctor. "Your boy will not develop mentally past the age of three or four." It was hours before those words struck home. Can any man who has not shared a similar experience know the grief that was mine? A lifetime of hope was shattered in a single moment. The shock came in degrees, and each degree was more hopeless than the one before. Could it be a dream that Daryl would have to be institutionalized? "The best thing is to put him in an institution before you and your wife become more attached to him," the doctor had said.

Even while we waited in the doctor's office, he placed a call to the best cerebral palsy specialist in Chicago, and an appointment was made for ten days later. Ten days of waiting—for what? Could we expect hope from this new doctor? No. Our doctor had said the specialist would tell us how bad it was and what could be done.

The next ten days are hard to describe, but therein lies my story. There was no anxiety, no trying to forget, just a gradual, creeping realization of our situation, and what we could do about it. What could we do?

My wife and I have been workers in the Reorganized Church for several years. She plays the piano and is active in women's work, and I am an elder. We had tended our duties as well as busy people can in a world of business and school. We had always considered the work of God first and tried to make it so in our lives. We always felt that the church needed us. Now we needed it. We were in a position where a test would be put to our religion, a test to see whether or not this thing for which we were giving of our lives could sustain us in our hour of need. What was the fruit of our time, labor, prayers, and tithe?

Our first step was to convince ourselves that such illnesses are the result of the sin of man, and that God would prefer the child perfect.

Our next step was to make ourselves worthy of the blessing that we desired. This we attempted by rededicating our lives and the lives of our children to God and his work, and by fasting and by prayer. We fasted from food, pleasures, music, radio, and everything that would tend to take our minds from the problem in our hearts. We prayed for strength, understanding, and the desired blessing. We prayed in "faith, believing," but were ever mindful that his will was what was important.

The following Sunday the pastor invited the Saints to unite in fasting and prayer until the Wednesday prayer meeting, at which time the child would be administered to by the anointing of oil and the laying on of hands. The honest concern and love of the Saints was evident. The humility with which the problem was approached will be a bright spot in the history of the Decatur Saints.

Near-by branches were invited to join us in prayer for this blessing, and we were assured of their fasting and prayers. The pastor and some others joined me in abstaining from all food for the period of three days, from Sunday until after prayer meeting Wednesday night.

Many of the Saints fasted a meal each day, and some more than one meal each day. Their sacrifice and prayers in our behalf will always be remembered.

I'm sure that I don't know all there is to know about fasting, and so in approaching God I had given up all the things that I was accustomed to that were not necessary. Only water passed my lips and then with thanks. The usual newspaper and news broadcasts were no longer part of my day. Tickets for two concerts—one of them very important to me—were given to friends. My library of records was untouched. The book I had been reading lay unfinished. For the period of the fast all the time that was not spent at my occupation was devoted to prayer and the reading of his Word.

We had both been reared among Saints and knew that God had and could heal the sick. Our backgrounds were rich with such experiences. Our great problem now was to ask "in faith, believing" and at the same time not command God. This seemed a very narrow margin and at times almost a contradiction. How could we have faith that God could, believe that he would, and still reserve the thought that he might not will it that way? We reasoned that we must do both. We reasoned that God would heal him for a testimony. He would heal him because only in a normal condition could he work for God and his cause.

And we promised God that if he chose to heal our boy, we would change the child's name as a constant reminder of the goodness and power of God. Then whenever we called his name, or heard his name called, we would be reminded to thank God for his goodness.

On the other hand, if God willed that he not be healed, then would we "count it all joy" and with strength and understanding present ourselves to God worthy? What a test was ours! To count our afflictions as a joy—it was nearly more than we could imagine.

The prayer meeting was not showy, but well-planned and in good order. There were five elders on the rostrum, two of them being high priests. No theme was given; the theme had been on our hearts for days. There was no outward emotion. The Spirit of God blessed us with assurance from the beginning. Humility and self-analysis prevailed. The same beautiful Spirit blessed the testimonies. Hearts were bared and promises made. The flow of love and concern was continuous, and that feeling was not allowed to subside before the administration.

Again, we were cautious to avoid show in the administration; rather we desired strength and unity. I brought the child forward and held him in my arms before the high priests who were to administer. Two other elders stood at their sides. In front of them, and making a circle behind me, were five other members of the priesthood. The child was encircled with the power of the holy order of the priesthood. The prayers for anointing and confirmation were short, intelligent, and unaffected by emotion. The doxology closed the hour and a half meeting.

With all thanks to God and the wonderful work of his Restoration, we report that our prayers were answered, and God chose to heal. What joy was ours, as the reports came from four different examinations that he was normal!

It was with gratitude and joy that the next prayer meeting was one of thanksgiving. The day following was dedicated to fasting and prayer. Surely God heard our prayers—both of petition and gratitude.

May this account be a source of hope and joy to others. May it be added to the many accounts that testify to the goodness of our God and his operations through his holy priesthood in these last days. May the name Michael be a constant reminder to his parents, relatives, and friends, that God "changed" a little boy named Daryl.

Young People Attend Rally

PEORIA, ILLINOIS.—The annual bazaar and supper was held in the church room at the Peoria Women's Club the evening of November 17, and $420 was cleared.

Seven Peoria Zion's Leaguers with their supervisor, Elvin Duke, and the assistant supervisor, Leatha Williams, attended the youth rally held at Davenport, Iowa, November 20-30. Youth director of the General Church, Carl Mesle of Independence, Missouri, was guest speaker.

The evening of December 7, Elder William H. A. Norris gave a travelog on Mexico. A supper and entertainment sponsored by the Zion's League were also a part of the program.

On the afternoon of January 28, an inter-denominational meeting was held at which the Jewish congregations of the city were hosts. This meeting was held at the Jewish Temple, 521 North Monroe Street and Rabbi Joseph L. Ginsberg lectured on Jewish religious ceremonies and customs. The women's department with other women's groups of the city were invited, and Sisters Wayve Frye and Marcella Brady attended.—Reported by GLADYS L. HEGWOOD

Plans Progressing on New Church

SPOKANE, WASHINGTON.—The regular prayer meeting service was held on Wednesday, December 31, New Year's Eve with a pancake supper following. Just prior to midnight a worship service was held. The supper was sponsored by the Marietta Circle of the Spokane Branch women's department.

The annual branch birthday dinner was held January 30, sponsored by the Emma Hale Smith Circle of the North Hill Mission of the branch. There were twelve tables, each representing a month of the year, arranged and presided over by a hostess whose birthday occurred in the month of her table. The prize for the best-decorated table was awarded to Donna Lewis.

Elder T. A. Beck, district president for the Spokane District, spent January 31 and February 1 visiting branches in the district.

A box social was held at the branch on February 14, sponsored by the young adult department. The event was arranged on behalf of the new church building fund.

A baptismal service was held on the evening of February 15 at the branch. Anne Kendall was baptized by Elder W. F. Farber and confirmed by Elders R. V. Webb and P. A. Worthington. Larry Farber was baptized by his father, Elder Farber, and confirmed by Elders Farber and A. F. Coleman.

The new church building committee met at the home of Elder Harley Clark Monday, February 16. Plans are rapidly taking shape for the anticipated structure and it is hoped progress will be such that construction can be started by June 1, 1953.—Reported by D. W. GORDON

Women's Department Organized

EUGENE, OREGON.—The women's department of the branch was organized at the home of Caroline Shultz on January 22. The charter members are Caroline Shultz, Patsy McKee, Rena Whittington, Guelda Barnhart, Zela Peacock, Eileen Fullerton. Officers are leader, Caroline Shultz; assistant leader, Patsy McKee; secretary-treasurer, Zela Peacock.—Reported by ZELA E. PEACOCK

Branch Officers Elected

EUGENE, OREGON.—The Eugene-Springfield mission was organized into the Eugene Branch, under the leadership of the district president, J. L. Verhei, assisted by Elders Roy D. Kaiser, F. E. Chapman, and Harold Carpenter. The following officers were elected: pastor, Lowell D. Shultz; secretary and treasurer, Guelda Barnhart; auditor, Zela Peacock; church school superintendent, Ephraim Barnhart; music director, Zion's League leader, publicity director, and librarian, Rena Whittington; women's leader and solicitor, Carolyn Shultz; social leader, Jeanie Barnhart; dramatic leader, Patsy McKee; finance committee, Lowell Shultz, Guelda Barnhart, James Wood, Ephraim Barnhart, and William C. Buckbee.—Reported by Rena R. Whittington.

New Group Organized

TORONTO, ONTARIO, CANADA.—Another year has closed in the branch and at the annual business meeting in September, Pastor John E. Booth chose as his counselors K. N. Pugsley, Elwood Smythe, and T. G. Packer. Baptisms for the year totaled twenty-two and the present membership is nearly one thousand. The young adult group and the Zion's League have been very active during the year and several of the young people attended the youth camps at Port Elgin and Camp Geneva at Orilla, Ontario.

A new church school group has been meeting in the home of Alex and Dolores McCormack in the northwestern suburbs of the city. Under the direction of Elder Elwood Smythe, interest is growing in this new section of Greater Toronto. An east end group has been meeting during the winter months for prayer services for two or three years with the hope of expanding the church work in this area of the city.

Several of the older members have died during the past years. They include Mary Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. James V. Clark, James Whitman, Amy Owen, John Hughes and Bella Woods.

A successful missionary series was conducted by Missionary A. Pelletier during October and November, after which six people were baptized.

At the anniversary dinner, January 19, 1953, about three hundred people celebrated the twenty-second anniversary of the present church building on Bathurst Street near St. Clair Avenue. Apostle C. G. Mesley was guest on this occasion and also a week later, he returned to Toronto to speak to the Sunday night congregation on the subject of "The City Without Walls." Plans have again been revived to do further construction work on the church building.

Many of the people in the branch have been deeply grieved over the passing of Brother John F. Sheehy who was the pastor for four years. Brother and Sister Sheehy were both loved by their friends in Toronto and sympathy is extended to Sister Sheehy in her loss.

An invitation is sent to those visiting the area to attend services with the Saints in Toronto. John Booth, pastor, and his wife, Helen, formerly of Detroit and Columbus, will be very happy to greet any newcomers.—Reported by BLANCHE E. HEWITT

New Study Class Begun

PITTSBURG, KANSAS.—Dr. Roy Cheville, of the Graceland College faculty, was the speaker on February 15. He was in Pittsburg to participate in Religious Emphasis Week at Kansas State Teachers College. A Catholic priest, a Jewish rabbi, and three Protestant leaders were also present at the college for class discussions, informal talks, and luncheon meetings. Dr. Cheville conducted a "think session" one morning which was a new part of the religious emphasis program. He was the speaker at the faculty coffee hour one afternoon also. At the "skeptics' hour" one afternoon all the leaders were present to answer questions directed to them by students and others.

This is the first time the R.L.D.S. Church has been represented during Religious Emphasis Week. Four church members who are college students were on the planning committee for the week's program. They were Kenneth Stubbart, Kenneth Cooper, Conrad Faulk, and Newell Yates.

Elder Carl Mesle spent the day with the Pittsburg group on February 1. He taught the young people's class at church school and also preached the morning sermon. In the afternoon Brother Mesle met with the college group and showed slides. Participation was good in the fellowship service which followed. Mae and Warren Jackson are the leaders.

On February 9, Helen Lewis was hostess at a Zion's League valentine party at her home. A roller-skating party was held February 16. Leaguers from Weir, Scammon, and Walnut were invited. About seventy young people attended. Refreshments were served afterward at the church cottage.

The Zion's League sent handkerchiefs and valentine cards to the older members of the congregation.

Dale Swall, former college student at Pittsburg and Graceland graduate, stopped at the branch on his way home from Korea. Elder and Mrs. J. W. Jones held open house for him on February 16.

A teacher-training class was recently organized and meets on Sunday nights at 6:30 p.m. The group is studying A Short Course for Teachers by Thelona Stevens. Mrs. Roy Heller is conducting the class.

The women's department held its general meeting at the church cottage February 5, with Mrs. J. W. Jones as hostess. Sister Jones conducted the devotions and Mrs. Roy Heller presented the lesson on good reading. Recent group hostesses have been Miss Kathryn Cochran and Mrs. Warren Jackson.—Reported by ESTHER HELLER

New Building Purchased

KITSILANO, BRITISH COLUMBIA.—The first meeting was held in the new church on February 1. The group started as a mission eight years ago, and is now meeting in a building which they have purchased. The building, located on Third and Vine Streets, was formerly the property of St. Stephen's United Church. Bishop Monte Lasater preached the opening sermon to a group of seventy Saints. He also gave the Communion address that day. The pastor, Bert Embleton, preached the evening sermon. These services were held in one of the meeting rooms in the building. On the main and upper floors there are five other rooms each about half the size of the one where the opening services were held. The main auditorium is without pews or chairs yet and the building has a large balcony. There is a pipe organ. Sister Lila Hale played for the opening service. The basement has a furnace room and a large kitchen, which is not yet equipped, and a large lower auditorium with classroom booths.

The building has been vacant for some time and much work is being done in cleaning and remodeling for the official opening on March 29. Brother Lasater, Brother Koury, Brother Clark, and visitors from branches in British Columbia and Washington are expected to be at the services.

The Daughters of Zion of the Vancouver Branch donated $25 to the building fund.

The women's group put on a sale of home cooking and the proceeds were contributed to the building fund.—Reported by ANN DAVIS

Babies Blessed

MOORHEAD, IOWA.—The following officers were elected at the business meeting: pastor, Chester Davis; church school superintendent; Cloyd Mann; women's leader, Floris Davis; music leader, Ione Johnson; clerk, Jeannette Weldon; children's leader, Eva Mann; junior pastor, Glenn McDole; young people's leader, Terry Weldon; treasurer, Wilbur Mann; historian, Loren Mann.

On December 22 a potluck supper and Christmas party were held.

Three babies were blessed on December 28. They were Wesley Loren, son of Mr. and Mrs. Loren Mann; Bonnie Jean, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Shaeffer; and Carol Ann, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Skaw.

Mrs. Lenna Strand and Mr. and Mrs. Terry Weldon and infant daughter Kathleen have moved to Omaha.

Glenn McDole and Loren Mann were chosen to take over the leadership of the young people when Brother Weldon moved.

On February 15, Evangelist Elvin Baughman began a series of Sunday night lectures with slides.—Reported by JEANNETTE WELDON

Collect Money for Needy

NIAGARA FALLS, ONTARIO.—In January the annual father and son banquet was held. District President John Booth of Toronto was the guest speaker. The banquet was served by the women's department under the direction of Sister Sadie Hart.

On February 14, the women's department held open house for their valentine party. Each department participated and the Zion's League provided entertainment. The Skylarks served the lunch under the leadership of Mona Cochran.

The relief fund for England and Holland was well supported by each department and special collections. A total sum of $69.25 was sent to the local paper for distribution.

Money-making projects have been successful. The women have had bake sales, and the Zion's League sponsored a spaghetti supper in the basement of the church.—Reported by AUDREY WARE

Branch Officers Elected

BARBERTON, OHIO.—The following officers were elected in October: Frank Milliser, pastor; Lillian Milliser, secretary and publicity agent; Alvin Jones, treasurer; Earl Braman, solicitor; Lodema Spurrier, church school director; Rebecca Patterson, women's leader; Charlotte Jones, Zion's League supervisor; Gordon Harrod, chorister.—Reported by FRANK MILLISER

Seventy in Area

EL PASO-LAS CRUCES, TEXAS.—Seventy Wayne Simmons stopped in the area, en route to California, February 15-21. He worked mainly with the Latin-American people. Meetings were held alternately between El Paso and Las Cruces.—Reported by BANTZ J. DAVIS

MISSION PLANS BUILDING

The Walnut Park mission of the Center Stake of Zion met March 9 and raised $1,100, in contributions and pledges toward the $1,800 necessary to begin building their church. They plan to build this spring.

ATTEND INSTITUTE

Twenty-five young people from the Center Stake of Zion attended the Sino-Japanese Institute at Graceland College March 7 and 8. The young people represented the different Leagues in Independence.

BAPTISM FOLLOWING RALLY

The closing service of the Youth Rally March 2-7, sponsored by the Zion's League of the Center Stake of Zion, was a fellowship service. Elder Charles Neff was the speaker. Following the service one of the young people was baptized. Elder Almer Sheehy was the speaker each evening except the last.

STUDENT NURSES CAPPED

Thirty-one student nurses in the Independence Sanitarium and Hospital were capped at a candlelight service at the Stone Church on February 22. These girls came to Independence in September from ten states and Hawaii. Chaplain Almer W. Sheehy gave the invocation, and the nurses chorus, directed by Miss Viola Stobaugh, sang. The address was given by Homer M. Clements, county superintendent of schools.

Slave Boy in Judea

BY JOSEPHINE SANGER LAU

illustrated by Joseph G. Ferris

Captured by Romans in the forest of Gaul, Madoc is sold as a slave to a Roman centurion stationed in Judea. The boy vows to escape. Then Madoc and his master meet the followers of Jesus and come to believe in the things he taught. Many unexpected things happen and Madoc's life is completely changed. For the Junior High group. WANTING TO LIVE

A famous New York woman was recently nearing the end of her life. In her time she had been surrounded by people, had entertained the rich and the famous, diplomats and nobility, travelers and scholars of three continents. Her experience had been rich and wonderful. She had shown her country's kindness and hospitality to uncounted numbers of people. Now she lay on her bed, alone except for her nurse.

Even so, in her eighties, there was more that she wanted to do. She could not bear to give up the interesting and exciting adventure life had brought her. She exclaimed to the nurse, "Don't let me die!"

We may sometimes delay, but we cannot always avoid the inevitable end. We cannot cling to life when physical conditions fail. No matter how much we wish, we cannot always keep those we love. The prayer, "Don't let me die," should be addressed to God, and its fulfillment must take place in his eternal kingdom.

LOOK OUT!

A balloon is a beautiful thing as long as it is kept blown up; but when deflated it is but a wilted bit of rubber. How like balloons are some people—keep them "blown up" and they sparkle and are good fun, but too much "gas" and away they go, floating in the clouds of their own self-satisfaction, then bang! They shrivel into the humiliated nothingness of human clay again. The solidity and reliability of the overinflated toy balloon is more to be depended upon than that of the human "puff-ball" who needs a constant supply of flattery administered to keep him out of the valley of spiritual depression.

THE KINGDOM MOTIVE

Every doctrine of the church should find its fullest expression against the kingdom background, and every ordinance seek to promote the kingdom purpose. F. Henry Edwards

FREEDOM

There is freedom only in being what our Creator intended we should be. That is the freedom which Christ came to give.

When you educate a man, you educate an individual—when you educate a woman, you educate a whole family.—Dr. Charles D. McIver

FROM HEADQUARTERS

We'd Like
You to Know . . .

John R. Darling

BROTHER DARLING was baptized ten years ago, at which time he was working in the field of education as instructor at the State Teachers College in La Crosse, Wisconsin. Although he entered full-time church service a few years later, he continued in his vocational field and is now Associate Director of Religious Education for the General Church.

He was graduated from the Cherryvale, Kansas, High School in 1929 and entered Kansas State Teachers College at Pittsburg where he received his B.S. and M.S. degrees in 1933 and 1934. He has also taken additional work at the University of Colorado and at Northwestern University.

Upon graduation from Pittsburg in 1934 he obtained the position of principal of an elementary school in Holton, Kansas, and the following year he was invited to join the high school staff in Holton, where he taught for the following four years. During this time he became head of the English department, and it was from this position that he went into the State Teachers College at La Crosse, Wisconsin, where he continued in the teaching profession until he accepted General Church appointment six years later.

Brother Darling's conversion came about through a number of influences and persons. His wife, the former Beatrice N. Deaver whom he married August 4, 1934, was reared a Reorganized Latter Day Saint; this quite naturally brought him in contact with the church, its literature, ministers, and persons who, over a period of years, influenced his joining the church on July 5, 1942.

He was ordained an elder on August 1, 1943, and a high priest on October 8, 1948. He has been Associate Director of Religious Education for about six years and was Assistant Director the two preceding years.

He is a member of Phi Alpha Theta, the national honorary social science fraternity. In addition he serves in two areas of responsibility in the Division of Christian Education of the National Council of the Churches of Christ in the United States: the Directors' Section, and also in the Visual Education Fellowship of the Department of Audio, Visual, and Radio Education.

Reading and theological research are his hobbies. He is also interested in architecture, community planning, mechanics, and consumer education.

The Darlings have a son, John R., Jr., fifteen, who is active in youth and Zion's League activities. He is a leader in Scout work, and received his Eagle award this fall at the Eagle Court of Honor in Kansas City. He also has his "God and Country" religious award in Scouting. We will hear more from young John.

PRESIDENT IN SOUTH

President Israel A. Smith is still in the South with Apostle Percy Farrow. They are touring the southern field.

AT MINNEAPOLIS DISTRICT CONFERENCE

President W. Wallace Smith was in Minneapolis, Minnesota, March 14-15, for the district conference which was held at the Minneapolis Branch. Brother Smith was associated with District President Wesley Elvin and Pastor Roger Lundeen. Sister Smith accompanied him on the trip. She taught two women's classes and a Zion's League class. Brother Smith preached the Sunday morning sermon.

HOME FROM CENTRAL AMERICA

Apostles Charles R. Hield and Paul M. Hanson have returned from a trip to Central America and Mexico. They visited the ruins in Guatemala, Zaculeu, Kaminaljuyu, Tikal, Uaxactun, Utatlan, Quirigua; and in Mexico, Tula, Monte Alban, Mitla, El Tajin, Cempoala, the area of Tres Zapotes, Teotihuacan. Both men took colored slides and black and white pictures of the ruins. One of the best results of the trip was the contacts made with the officials in archaeology in Mexico and Guatemala, according to a report by Brother Hield. The men also contacted the Saints in Mexico and those in Guatemala, holding a Communion service in Guatemala. The Federal Government has also cleared the Aranda family to come to the United States. There are still a few details to be ironed out, but they are possibly due to arrive in the next two or three months.

APOSTLE HOME FROM SOUTH

Apostle Reed M. Holmes returned to Independence March 17, after working in the southern area for a month. He held religious education institutes for the Alabama District at McKenzie; for lower Florida at Tampa; for Mobile and Pensacola Districts at Mobile; and for Kentucky, Tennessee, Arkansas, and Louisiana, at Memphis. In addition, the preliminary work for each institute was done in the following branches and missions: Birmingham, Evergreen, Orlando, Fort Lauderdale, Miami, Pensacola, Berrydale, Pascagoula, Bay Minnette, New Orleans, West Monroe, Little Rock, Caraway, and Paris. Brother Holmes reports that the opportunities for development in the South are exceptional, and he was very pleased with the fine response the people gave as well as the growth which is evident.

APOSTLE CHESWORTH IN ILLINOIS

Apostle D. O. Chesworth preached each evening for two weeks at the Brush Creek, Illinois, Branch. There was an average attendance of 126 each night. The last week attendance averaged 160 a night despite the many cases of sickness. Mrs. Russell Ellis, wife of the director of religious education for Southeast Illinois District, and eighteen-year-old daughter, Georgia Faye, were baptized on February 22.

PREACHES IN KANSAS

Elder Charles Neff was in Hutchinson, Kansas, March 15, where he preached in the morning and evening. Robert Wilson is the pastor of the Hutchinson Branch.

A Sane View of the Race Question

IN RECENT YEARS the question of racial equality has enlisted the active support of zealous members who have believed it necessary for the General Conference to legislate about it. Happily, in my opinion, no drastic action has been taken, and for good reasons, in my opinion: they are that there is nothing in our church organic law or in Conference action that even suggests any inequality between the races. Why should we essay to correct error where none has existed?

The late President Joseph Smith left many evidences of his wisdom and foresight with respect to questions that are now projected much more prominently than they were in his day.

He wrote an editorial many years ago, which we find in the Herald for February 15, 1875, which sets out what I believe should be the attitude of everyone professing faith in Christ and the principles advanced by him. For its wholesome treatment of the question (racial discrimination) we devote space for a reprinting, as follows:

We are pained to learn that some few elders are making unnecessary distinction between the whites and colored races in regard to gospel ordinances and fellowship.

It is high time that the prejudices of gospel believers were laid aside, and the right to receive and enjoy the blessings of the "covenant of peace" conceded to "all men"—"every creature."

It is unjust to the church for one, two, or more elders to teach, preach, or advise a distinction and exclusion from church fellowship and communion upon the ground of race or color, while the "articles and covenants of the church" nowhere warrant such exclusion, and the practice of the church has never sanctioned it.

We want no elder to misunderstand us on this point. While we believe that all men should meet in church fellowship and communion, we are not to be called an amalgamationist, a miscegenationist, nor one who is willing to sacrifice the dignity, honor, and prestige that may be rightfully attached to the ruling race so rapidly becoming the absorbent one of all races of men. But if the Anglo-Saxon or white race is the dominant one, it is a very humiliating and doubtful evidence of superiority to insist that any weaker race shall be excluded from heavenly graces, gospel privileges, church communion, and the common fellowship of the spirit, simply because it is a weaker race.

Peter said well when he announced: "Perceive that God is no respecter of persons; but in every nation he that feareth him, and worketh righteousness, is accepted with him."—Acts 10: 34, 35.

Paul struck the keynote of human freedom when he said: "And hath made of one blood all nations of men for to dwell on all the face of the earth, and hath determined the times before appointed, and the bounds of their habitation; that they should seek the Lord, if they are willing to find him."—Acts 17: 26, 27, I.V.

If they who are of one blood, but of different nationalities, seek God and find him, will they find him in places and in societies where they are excluded? We think that this question is decidedly answered in the Book of Mormon: "But all men are privileged, the one like unto the other, and none are forbidden."—II Nephi 11: 105. "And he hath said, Repent all ye ends of the earth, and come unto me and be baptized in my name, and have faith in me, that ye may be saved."—Moroni 7: 36.

We think it derogatory to the teaching of Jesus, as found in the New Testament, Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants to insist upon a separation of the races. The same God that made the white man white, made also the black man black, and if he chooses to say to all, "There is neither male nor female, bond or free, black or white; but ye are all one in Christ Jesus," we think his ambassadors should not let dislike of race or prejudice against color influence them in their ministrations.

We think it would be well for those elders who may have been instrumental in stirring up this distinction against their colored brethren to counsel with their confreres in the ministry and authority that there may be a unity of action.

Obedience to gospel truth, observance of gospel ordinances and commands, the cultivation of Christian graces, and the practice of Christian virtues should and must be the only requirements to the gospel fellowship and church communion; lack of these should and must be the only rule of exclusion.

The Persecuted Turns Prosecutor

One of the numerous periodicals which has attracted our attention of late is Awake, a semimonthly tabloid-like paper published on behalf of Jehovah's Witnesses, which claims to be a religious movement, though alleged in many quarters to be un-American.

This paper is generally quite filled with accounts of the mistreatment and persecution their members are suffering in various countries of the world, with articles of general interest, science, news briefs, and much borrowed material.

The issue for January 22 comes out making prominent on the title page an article, "The Book of Mormon and the Bible—How Do Their Doctrines Compare?"

Turning its pages, we discover three articles, editorials apparently, since they are unsigned, as follows: "The Book of Mormon—Is Its Modern Claim to Divine Inspiration Justified?" "The Book of Mormon and the Bible," and "Mormonism's New Doctrines."

We can hardly pass such a broadside without a challenge, and we will at least give this small but quite blatant journal the benefit of our conclusions on material questions that are applicable to the original faith or to the Reorganized Church. As usual, we find the major objections in fact apply to Mormonism and not to true Latter Day Saintism as we know it.

We are receiving word from many quarters with copies of the paper, and are trying to show our appreciation by acknowledging all letters about the matter.

Concerning News Briefs

You will observe in this week's issue of the Herald the Editor's note at the head of the column having to do with "Briefs." These instructions are included for the observance of the reporters of the various branches and we are in complete harmony with that which is said.

We are anxious that everyone shall have representation in these columns. We ask your active support in giving consideration to the rights of others when writing up news items about happenings in your branch. We are concerned that nothing which is said here will be construed as indicating we are not interested in having the reporters send in the reports of events which have taken place, but we would ask that all of the rules be observed.

We know people are interested in reading an account of their own activities as well as those of others in the columns in the Herald. It is from this angle that we are anxious to have your co-operation so that more places can be represented oftener.

If there are any problems which arise out of this type of procedure we will be glad to have you write us; we shall give adequate consideration to them.

THE FIRST PRESIDENCY
By W. Wallace Smith

Historian Returns to Desk

The church will be glad to know that John Blackmore was able to return to his office last week. He suffered from a coronary thrombosis occlusion disorder last September 12 and was hospitalized for seven weeks. Since January he has been carrying on his duties to a limited extent from his home. He would have returned sooner had the Auditorium been equipped with a passenger elevator, and even now his work will be on a restricted schedule for several weeks. His services in his specialized field have been much missed as they are very helpful to department heads as well as to the General Church administration.

The editors receive clippings from the daily papers and magazines all over the country which have something to say about the church or its history. In most instances while the articles are interestingly written, they show careless handling of the historical data available to the researcher. It is a relief to find a reporter who gets his facts as straight as Fred Klann of the Moline Daily Dispatch.

On December 29 these columns carried a notice of the publicity given the church through Mr. Klann's column entitled "Off the Beaten Path." Not only did he take the trouble to look up available historical data on the history of the church, but he interviewed District President W. J. Breshears and also wrote to Herald House for certain data he wished. In the issues of January 13 and 14 the Daily Dispatch carries six columns based on the Mormon Church with pictures of Joseph Smith, Brigham Young, and the local pastor, Elder Harry N. Palmer. In his interview with Elder Palmer, Mr. Klann reports the stand of the Utah Church that the Negro bears the curse of Cain and therefore "can not become a full member, can not enter the higher priesthood, and consequently can not enter a Saint's temple." A note is inserted stating that the Reorganized Church does not concur in this view but receives the Negro into full membership.

He also discusses the history of plural marriage in the Utah Church and then inserts a note quoting President Israel Smith's defining the position of the Reorganized Church as denying that Joseph ever received any revelation concerning the doctrine of plural marriage or that he ever practiced or taught it.

Surely members in the Moline area appreciate this attempt of Reporter Klann to be authentic.

An Easter Service Suggestion

FOR THOSE CHOIRS and congregations that are tired of doing Easter cantatas and want to do something effective in the way of an Easter worship service, this suggestion may be of some help. It will be suitable for either a Sunday morning or Sunday evening service.

The decoration of the church should be simple—certainly not overdone—and an atmosphere of quiet reverence should pervade.

During the reading of the Scriptures the interpolations of the Easter hymns sung by the choir should not be abrupt. If the organ will play softly a few bars introduction while the narrative is being read, timed to come out just as the reader finishes, the choir may begin to sing without an awkward break or a wait for the pitch.

Since this is a suggested service, those who use it will not feel obliged to follow this particular selection of Scripture, or for that matter this particular selection of Easter hymns. Others may be substituted or added, and Easter hymns may be selected and interpolated in any other places in the reading of the narrative that might seem desirable.

The organ prelude should begin about fifteen minutes before the service and should, preferably, be a selection of Easter carols and hymns. A selection of those hymns in the rest of the service may be used or different ones selected; either will be appropriate. Care should be given to key relationships, however, so that one leads smoothly to the next.

The service should proceed smoothly without starts and stops or awkward waits and without any announcements during its course. Everyone who participates should be coached to know what to do and when to do it without verbal or visible direction during the service.

If possible there should be a printed program in the hands of each worshiper.

ORDER OF SERVICE

Prelude (Fifteen minutes preceding the service)

Call to Worship:

Oh, worship the King, all glorious above,
Oh, gratefully sing his power and his love;
Our Shield and Defender, the Ancient of Days,
Pavilioned in splendor, and girded with praise.

Oh, tell of his might, oh, sing of his grace,
Whose robe is the light, whose canopy, space;
His mercies, how tender; how firm to the end;
Our Maker, Defender, Redeemer, and Friend!

—Adapted from hymn No. 9,
Saints' Hymnal

Opening Hymn

"Lift Your Glad Voices in Triumph on High," Saints' Hymnal, No. 165 —Congregation

Invocation

(Short, not over one minute, invoking God's Spirit to bless the worship of the hour)

Choral Response

Saints' Hymnal, No. 169 (Second line only of first stanza, with "Amen."):
"He lives, he lives, who once was dead;
He lives, my everlasting Head!"
"Amen."

Scripture Reading with Music by the Choir (or congregation) from the Inspired Version of the Bible:

Narrator:

Who hath believed our report? and to whom is the arm of the Lord revealed?

For he shall grow up before him as a tender plant, and as a root out of a dry ground; he hath no form nor comeliness; and when we shall see him, there is no beauty that we should desire him.

He is despised and rejected of men; a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief; and we hid as it were our faces from him; he was despised, and we esteemed him not.

Surely he hath borne our griefs, and carried our sorrows; yet we did esteem him stricken, smitten of God, and afflicted.

But he was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our in-iquities; the chastisement of our peace was upon him; and with his stripes we are healed.

All we like sheep have gone astray; we have turned every one to his own way; and the Lord hath laid on him the iniquity of us all.

He was oppressed, and he was afflicted, yet he opened not his mouth; he is brought as a lamb to the slaughter, and as a sheep before her shearers is dumb, so he openeth not his mouth.

He was taken from prison and from judgment; and who shall declare his generation? for he was cut off out of the land of the living; for the transgression of my people was he stricken.

And he made his grave with the wicked, and with the rich in his death; because he had done no violence, neither was any deceit in his mouth.

Yet it pleased the Lord to bruise him; he hath put him to grief; when thou shalt make his soul an offering for sin, he shall see his seed, he shall prolong his days, and the pleasure of the Lord shall prosper in his hand.

He shall see of the travail of his soul, and shall be justified; by his knowledge shall my righteous servant justify many; for he shall bear their iniquities.

Therefore will I divide him a portion with the great, and he shall divide the spoil with the strong; because he hath poured out his soul unto death; and he was numbered with the transgressors; and he bare the sin of many, and made intercession for the transgressors.—Isaiah 53: 1-12.

Anthem

"Lamb of God, Most Holy," arranged by F. M. Christiansen, Augsburg Publishing House —The Choir

Narrator:

Now on the first day of the feast of unleavened bread, the disciples came unto Jesus, saying unto him, Where wilt thou that we prepare for thee to eat the passover?

And he said, Go into the city to such a man, and say unto him, The master saith, My time is at hand; I will keep the passover at thy house with my disciples.

And the disciples did as Jesus appointed them; and they made ready the passover.

Now when the evening was come, he sat down with the twelve.

And as they did eat, he said, Verily I say unto you, that one of you shall betray me.

And they were exceeding sorrowful, and began every one of them to say unto him, Lord, is it I?

And he answered and said, He that dippeth his hand with me in the dish, the same shall betray me.

But the Son of Man goeth as it is written of him; but woe unto that man by whom the Son of Man is betrayed! It had been good for that man if he had not been born.

Then Judas, who betrayed him, answered and said, Master, is it I? He said unto him, Thou hast said.

And as they were eating, Jesus took bread and brake it, and blessed it, and gave to his disciples, and said, Take, eat; this is in remembrance of my body which I give a ransom for you.

And he took the cup, and gave thanks, and gave it to them, saying, Drink ye all of it.

For this is in remembrance of my blood of the new testament, which is shed for as many as shall believe on my name, for the remission of their sins.

And I give unto you a commandment, that ye shall observe to do the things which ye have seen me do, and bear record of me even unto the end.

But I say unto you, I will not drink henceforth of this fruit of the vine, until that day when I shall come and drink it new with you in my Father's kingdom.

And when they had sung a hymn, they went out into the mount of Olives.—Matthew 26: 13-27.

Hymn:

“’Tis Midnight and on Olive’s Brow,” Saints’ Hymnal, No. 163, Hymnal for Youth, No. 98

Narrator:

Then cometh Jesus with them unto a place called Gethsemane, and said unto the disciples, Sit ye here, while I go yonder and pray.

And he took with him Peter and the two sons of Zebedee, and began to be sorrowful and very heavy.

Then said he unto them, My soul is exceeding sorrowful, even unto death; tarry ye here and watch with me.

And he went a little farther, and fell on his face, and prayed, saying, O my Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me; nevertheless, not as I will, but as thou wilt.

And he cometh unto the disciples and findeth them asleep, and saith unto Peter, What, could ye not watch with me one hour?

Watch and pray that ye enter not into temptation; the spirit indeed is willing; but the flesh is weak.

He went away again the second time and prayed, saying, O my Father, if this cup may not pass away from me, except I drink it, thy will be done.

And he came and found them asleep again; for their eyes were heavy.

And he left them, and went away again, and prayed the third time, saying the same words.

Then cometh he to his disciples, and saith unto them, Sleep on now and take rest. Behold, the hour is at hand, and the Son of Man is betrayed into the hands of sinners.

And after they had slept, he said unto them, Arise, and let us be going. Behold, he is at hand that doth betray me.—Matthew 26: 33-43.

Hymn:

“Go to Dark Gethsemane,” Saints’
Hymnal, No. 160

Narrator:

And while he yet spake, lo, Judas, one of the twelve, came, and with him a great multitude with swords and staves, from the chief priests and elders of the people.

Now he that betrayed him gave them a sign, saying, Whomsoever I shall kiss, that same is he; hold him fast.

And forthwith he came to Jesus, and said, Hail, Master! and kissed him.

And Jesus said unto him, Judas, wherefore art thou come to betray me with a kiss?

Then came they and laid hands on Jesus, and took him.—Matthew 26: 44-48.

When the morning was come, all the chief priests and elders of the people took counsel against Jesus, to put him to death.

And when they had bound him, they led him away, and delivered him to Pontius Pilate, the governor.

And Jesus stood before the governor; and the governor asked him, saying, Art thou the king of the Jews?

And Jesus said unto him, Thou sayest truly; for thus it is written of me.

And when he was accused of the chief priests and elders, he answered nothing.

Then saith Pilate unto him, Hearest thou not how many things they witness against thee?

And he answered him not to his questions; yea, never a word, insomuch that the governor marvelled greatly.

Now at the feast the governor was wont to release unto the people a prisoner, whom they would.

And they had then a notable prisoner, called Barabbas.

Therefore when they were gathered together, Pilate said unto them, Whom will ye that I release unto you? Barabbas, or Jesus which is called Christ?

For he knew that for envy they had delivered him.

When he was set down on the judgment-seat, his wife sent unto him, saying, Have thou nothing to do with that just man, for I have suffered many things this day in a vision because of him.

But the chief priests and elders persuaded the multitude that they should ask Barabbas, and destroy Jesus.

And the governor said unto them, Whether of the twain will ye that I release unto you? They said, Barabbas.

Pilate said unto them, What shall I do with Jesus, which is called Christ?

And all said unto him, Let him be crucified.

And the governor said, Why, what evil hath he done? But they cried out the more, saying, Let him be crucified.

When Pilate saw that he could prevail nothing, but rather that a tumult was made, he took water, and washed his hands before the multitude, saying, I am innocent of the blood of this just person; see that ye do nothing unto him.

Then answered all the people, and said, His blood come upon us and our children.

Then released he Barabbas unto them; and when he had scourged Jesus, he delivered him to be crucified.

Then the soldiers of the governor took Jesus into the common hall, and gathered unto him the whole band.

And they stripped him, and put on him a purple robe.

And when they had platted a crown of thorns, they put it upon his head, and a reed in his right hand; and they bowed the knee before him, and they mocked him, saying, Hail, King of the Jews!

And they spit upon him, and took the reed, and smote him on the head.

And after that they had mocked him, they took the robe off from him, and put his own raiment on him, and led him away to crucify him.—Matthew 27: 1, 2, 11-33.

Hymn:

“O Sacred Head, Now Wounded,”
Hymnal for Youth, No. 99

Narrator:

And there followed him a great company of people, and of women, who also bewailed and lamented him.

But Jesus turned unto them and said, Daughters of Jerusalem, weep not for me, but weep for yourselves, and for your children.

For behold, the days are coming, in the which they shall say, Blessed are the barren, and the wombs which never bare, and the paps which never gave suck.

Then shall they begin to say to the mountains, Fall on us; and to the hills, Cover us.

And if these things are done in the green tree, what shall be done in the dry tree?

This he spake, signifying the scattering of Israel, and the desolation of the heathen, or in other words, the Gentiles.

And there were also two others, malefactors, led with him to be put to death.

And when they were come to the place which is called Calvary, there they crucified him, and the malefactors; one on the right hand, and the other on the left.

Then said Jesus, Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do. (Meaning the soldiers who crucified him,) and they parted his raiment and cast lots.

And the people stood, beholding, and the rulers also with them, derided, saying, He saved others; let him save himself, if he be the Christ, the chosen of God.

And the soldiers also mocked him, coming to him, and offering him vinegar.

And saying, If thou be the King of the Jews, save thyself.

And a superscription also was written over him, in letters of Greek and Latin, and Hebrew, THIS IS THE KING OF THE JEWS.—Luke 23: 27-39.

Hymn:

"Alas! And Did My Savior Bleed,"
Saints' Hymnal, No. 159

Narrator:

And it was about the sixth hour, and there was darkness over all the earth until the ninth hour.

And the sun was darkened, and the veil of the temple was rent in the midst.

And when Jesus had cried with a loud voice, he said, Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit. And having said thus, he gave up the ghost.

Now when the centurion saw what was done, he glorified God, saying, Certainly this was a righteous man.

And all the people who came together to that sight, beholding the things which were done, smote their breasts, and returned.

And all his acquaintance, and women who followed him from Galilee, stood afar off, beholding these things.—Luke 23: 45-50.

Hymn:

"When I Survey the Wondrous Cross,"
Saints' Hymnal, No. 162, or Hymnal for Youth, No. 96

Narrator:

Verily, verily, I say unto thee, We speak that we do know, and testify that we have seen; and ye receive not our witness.

If I have told you earthly things, and ye believe not, how shall ye believe if I tell you heavenly things?

I tell you, No man hath ascended up to heaven, but he who came down from heaven, the Son of Man who is in heaven.

And as Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of Man be lifted up;

That whosoever believeth on him should not perish, but have eternal life.

For God so loved the world, that he gave his Only Begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him should not perish; but have everlasting life.

For God sent not his Son into the world to condemn the world; but that the world through him might be saved.—John 3: 11-17.

"God So Loved the World," Stainer

Narrator:

In the end of the Sabbath day, as it began to dawn towards the first day of the week, early in the morning, came Mary Magdalene, and the other Mary to see the sepulchre.

And behold, there had been a great earthquake; for two angels of the Lord descended from heaven, and came and rolled back the stone from the door, and sat upon it.

And their countenance was like lightning, and their raiment white as snow; and for fear of them the keepers did shake, and became as though they were dead.

And the angels answered and said unto the women, Fear not ye; for we know that ye seek Jesus who was crucified.

He is not here; for he is risen, as he said. Come, see the place where the Lord lay; and go quickly, and tell his disciples that he is risen from the dead; and, behold, he goeth before you into Galilee; there shall ye see him; lo, I have told you.

And they departed quickly from the sepulchre, with fear and great joy; and did run to bring his disciples word.—Matthew 28: 1-6.

He Is Risen

By Stan Mackenzie

"He is risen!" "Behold, I am alive forever more!" These are magnificent testimonies of the triumph of love over sin. Through the centuries they have filled with new and renewed hope and joy countless thousands who have realized and accepted the Good News. In the short span, by God's view, of twenty centuries these two testimonies have transformed the lives of millions of people and thereby changed the course of world history for the better, rescuing still other millions from physical and moral slavery. Language is impotent to express the gladness and well-being to mankind because of the fact of the Resurrection.

Then how dreadfully tragic if Peter, James, John, and the few other Galileans who first heard the Good News had "treasured it in their hearts" alone instead of giving their lives to spread it as widely as accuracy of knowledge, depth of faith, and love of fellow-men would permit.

The King James Version of the Bible, in spite of acknowledged errors and man-made interpretations, has been published as the good news in more than a thousand languages; it has served to lift the hopes and better the lives of untold numbers of people all over the world. Let us consider, then, how increasingly zealous we of the Reorganized Church should be in spreading the good news when we have had it restored to us with fullness and accuracy—the same potent good news that Jesus delivered to the Galileans.

Easter - 1953

A Worship Service in Story and Song

By Alma Louise Utz

Easter—1953: A troubled, discouraged world pauses in the midst of chaos and confusion to remember One who once was dead, but is now risen—a living Christ, Savior of all those that believe.

In observance of this day of Resurrection, let us recall to memory scenes and events which we might have witnessed in person had we been among those living almost two thousand years ago. Let us retell in Scripture and song the greatest story the world has ever known: the story of the son of God who came to earth, dwelt among men, and referred to himself as the Son of Man. "Thou shalt call his name Jesus," the angel of the Lord said unto Joseph, "for he shall save his people from their sins."

And so it was, that while they were there [Bethlehem], the days were accomplished that she should be delivered. And she brought forth her first-born son, and wrapped him in swaddling clothes, and laid him in a manger, because there was none to give room for them in the inns.

"Away in a Manger," Saints' Hymnal, No. 149.

And the child grew, and waxed strong in spirit, being filled with wisdom, and the grace of God was upon him. Now his parents went to Jerusalem every year at the feast of the passover. And when he was twelve years old, they went up to Jerusalem, after the custom, to the feast.

And in those days came John the Baptist, preaching in the wilderness of Judea—and baptizing in the river of Jordan. And then cometh Jesus from Galilee to Jordan, unto John, to be baptized of him.

"Thus Was the Great Redeemer Plunged," Saints' Hymnal, No. 363.

Born not into the great magnificent palace of Herod the king, but come down to earth in Bethlehem's lowly manger, the Savior of all men walked barefoot on the shores of blue Galilee and said unto those who would follow: "The foxes have holes, and the birds of the air have nests; but the Son of Man hath not where to lay his head."

"Thou Didst Leave Thy Throne," Saints' Hymnal, No. 154, stanzas 1, 2, and 3.

And Jesus went about all Galilee teaching in their synagogues and preaching the gospel of the kingdom; and healing all manner of sickness, and all manner of diseases among the people which believed on his name. . . . And they brought unto him all manner of sick and lame and blind and those possessed with devils, and he healed them.

So it was that he walked among men, yet was apart.

SOLO: "The Stranger of Galilee" (available from any good music company).

Jesus took the colt and sat thereon; and a very great multitude spread their garments in the way . . . saying, Hosanna to the Son of David; blessed is he who cometh in the name of the Lord! Hosanna in the highest!

"All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name," Saints' Hymnal, No. 33.

Now when the evening was come, he sat down with the twelve. . . . And as they were eating, Jesus took bread and brake it, and blessed it; and gave to his disciples, and said, Take, eat; this is in remembrance of my body which I give a ransom for you. And he took the cup, and gave thanks and gave it to them, saying, Drink ye all of it. And I give unto you a commandment, that ye shall observe to do the things which ye have seen me do, and bear record of me even unto the end. . . . And when they had sung a hymn, they went out into the mount of olives.

"'Tis Midnight, and on Olive's Brow," Saints' Hymnal, No. 163.

Then came they and laid hands on Jesus, and delivered him to Pontius Pilate, the governor. And the governor said, What evil has he done? But they cried out the more, saying, Let him be crucified. . . . Then Pilate washed his hands before the multitude, saying, I am innocent of the blood of this just person; . . . and when he had scourged Jesus, he delivered him to be crucified. . . . And when they were come unto a place called Golgotha, they crucified him.

"He Tenderly Looked at Me," Inspiration, No. 95. John T. Benson Publishing Company, Nashville, Tennessee.

And one of the malefactors who was crucified with him said to Jesus, Lord, remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom. And Jesus said unto him, Verily, I say unto thee; today shalt thou be with me in Paradise. . . . And when Jesus had cried with a loud voice, he said, Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit. And having said thus, he gave up the ghost.

A good and just man, Joseph of Arimathaea, begged the body of Jesus from Pilate and laid it in a sepulcher, which was hewed in a stone, wherein never man before was laid. The chief priest and Pharisees came unto Pilate, saying "Command that the sepulchre be made sure, lest his disciples steal away the body and say he is risen from the dead."

"Christ Arose." May be found in numerous hymnals including Rodeheaver's Gospel Songs, The Rodeheaver Hall-Mack Company, Winona Lake, Indiana.

Golgotha, cursed place of scorning,
There the blessed Jesus died;
He, who came to earth a Savior,
On the cross was crucified.

He who bore the thorn-crown halo,
As to Calvary he trod,
Though born in Bethlehem's lowly manger,
Was indeed the Son of God.

Alone, despised, forsaken,
Jesus, Holy Nazarene;
Death for him could hold no terror
So he rose, o'er death supreme.

Easter the Year Around

By Charles A. Reedy

THE MEANING OF EASTER is often reflected by sincere church members during the Lenten season. They attempt to emulate the Master in their small way in order to achieve a deep sense of humility and to start a new life of consecrated service to the great cause of saving the souls of mankind. They wish to prove to themselves and the world that they, too, can sacrifice fleshly desires and material things in that the church and its teachings shall be first in their lives.

For forty days they strive to follow the pattern of Jesus Christ. They remember the story of the Master who fasted and prayed alone in the mountains that he might become spiritually strong and be able to overcome temptations; that, so nourished by the Holy Spirit, he would be able to finish his task of coming to this earth to bring redemption to every living soul. They remember his sacrifice of dying on the cross so that a new way of life would be given to the world, of his victory over death and sin, and of his gift for those who believed and lived by his precepts.

But in numerous cases, the very sacrifices that people make and the material things they give up for forty days are the harmful things or habits they should not have in the first place. A return to those questionable activities for the other three hundred and twenty-five days brings a renewal of damage to both soul and body.

To a great extent, the pattern of sacrificial living during the Lenten season should be followed in detail throughout the entire year. Only in that way shall our endeavors in higher living be crowned with success and the true essence of Christianity be achieved. As we thus live, we can say the old life encumbered with sin has been overcome and we walk in the newness of life here on earth rather than waiting until we gain immortality.

Easter is symbolic of nature's coming to life. God's hand everywhere shows us that there is no death, but that we shall awaken and rise up in a future day to live with him.

We should set as our goals those high standards of daily living by which we will be measured as worthwhile children of God. We live in a world which beckons with alluring temptations, with sin carefully hidden or disguised as glittering attractions. These can destroy our happiness and eventually our souls. Such things can become so precious to us that we unknowingly worship them. Greed, selfishness, and hatred warp our very hearts and consciences.

But if we follow the teachings of Jesus Christ, his words of comfort promised to his followers will come true: "I came that ye shall find happiness in abundance." That happiness will only come when we rededicate ourselves wholeheartedly to the divine will of God and make a sacred pledge that we shall henceforth live on the same spiritual plane as Christ did. Then our lives will serve as guideposts of heavenly virtues, as beacon lights in a wicked world showing the way to personal righteousness, portraying the true meaning of Easter every day of the year.

HOW DO YOU FOLLOW CHRIST?

And Peter followed him afar off.—Luke 22: 54.

And the Lord said, I tell you, Peter, that the cock shall not crow this day before that you will thrice deny that you know me.—Luke 22: 34.

PETER WAS ONE of the disciples closest to the Master. He forsook his nets for the call of Christ who said, "Come and follow me and I will make you fishers of men." He shared many of the experiences of Christ's three years' earthly ministry. He was one of the beloved disciples who went with Christ to the mount of transfiguration and witnessed the power and revelation of God. It was Peter who answered, "But whom say ye that I am?" with "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God."

Peter said, "Lord, I am ready to go with you, both into prison and unto death." But Peter was so human! He was the same as we are today. We're always telling about how good we are going to be, how loyal, how strong, and how brave; but when we're put to the test, we often fail.

We profess to believe in the Bible, the church, the kingdom. But we don't study in order to understand the Bible. Our deeds do not exemplify our belief in the church. We don't act as if we believe in the kingdom; our time, money, and loyalty are all invested in the things of this world.

It is easy to be brave when there is a crowd back of us. It is easy to be loyal when the masses of people are expressing loyalty. It was easy for Peter to be brave when there were ten other disciples with him. It was easy for him to be loyal when he was sure that no one could harm Christ. But when the other disciples all forsook their Lord and fled, and he saw the soldiers take Christ to a mock trial and condemn him to be crucified, Peter followed afar off.

The accusation of a servant girl made him angry, and he denied thrice that he had been a follower of Christ. Then he cursed and the cock crew. The Scripture says Peter went out and wept bitterly. But Peter did follow—even though afar off—and on the day of Pentecost by the power of the Holy Ghost he closed the gap between words and deeds and became Peter the rock.

How do we follow Christ today—by word only, or by words backed with works? Are we willing to go all the way with Christ by giving our time, talents, possessions—our lives?

Life in Our Time

Part III: Our Feet on the Ground

By Don Savage

TWENTY-FOUR HUNDRED YEARS AGO Daniel was shown a period in the last days when "there shall be a time of trouble, such as never was since there was a nation even to that same time" (Daniel 12: 1). In that day wonderful things were to transpire relative to the kingdom of God. Apparently we are entering that era, for truly this is a time of great worldly struggle from which no nation is exempt.

EUROPE, still prostrated by her worst war in history, is again torn into two armed factions. Some godless rulers waste life in their great horrible prisons. The iron and clay toes of Daniel's image are seemingly bent on proving over and over their inability to cleave together.

ASIA is very sick. India's masses seeth with religious hatred, and war between Mohammedan and Hindu is the rule of the day. China is in arms again. After fighting Japan and a civil war for twenty years, she now spills her young men's blood in Korean rice paddies, while on Formosa mighty armies eagerly await the command to invade their homeland and kill their brothers. Burma, the scene of so much sorrow in late years, again boils with rebellion from within. Indonesia and her Dutch rulers fight for money and power. Iran and Iraq fester in fear of having their black oily treasure wrested from their hands by either East or West. In Palestine, Jew and Arab quarrel over Judean hills.

SOUTH AMERICA, weary from centuries of private wars, lies on her material treasures of mineral. She hates North American merchants who exploit her resources, yet is unable to capitalize upon them herself without their help.

NORTH AMERICA. The United States is engaged in another war, this time with some Koreans whom most Americans never thought about until a couple of years ago. Armed forces of the States now fight China, to whom in the last decade billions of American dollars were allotted to fight Japan, now a protectorate. Canada and Mexico are officially at war along with the United Nations. North America has the dangerous prosperity of war.

AFRICA. The headline before me shouts, "African Rioting Kills . . . White Supremacy Issue . . . Missions Are Put to Torch."

There is no lasting peace on earth. We are already within the time spoken of by Joseph Smith when "every man that will not take his sword against his neighbor, must needs flee unto Zion for safety" (Doctrine and Covenants 45: 13).

LATTER-DAY LAW emphatically declares it a Christian's duty to support his government as long as that government acts for the good of its people.

We believe that governments were instituted of God for the benefit of man, and that he holds men accountable for their acts in relation to them, either in making laws or administering them, for the good and safety of society. . . . We believe that all governments necessarily require civil officers and magistrates to enforce the laws of the same, and that such as will administer the law in equity and justice should be sought for and upheld by the voice of the people (if a republic), or the will of the sovereign. . . . We believe that all men are bound to sustain and uphold the respective governments in which they reside, while protected in their inherent and inalienable rights by the laws of such governments, and that sedition and rebellion are unbecoming every citizen thus protected, and should be punished accordingly; and that all governments have a right to enact such laws as in their own judgments are best calculated to secure the public interest, at the same time, however, holding sacred the freedom of conscience.—Doctrine and Covenants 112: 1, 3, 5.

This is the law of the church. Man is to support his government in fullness of heart except when that rule tries to force him to do things he knows are contrary to the law of God, or when that rule becomes so corrupt or impotent as to no longer fill its obligation as a governor or protector.

Most of the Saints in the world today are blessed to live in lands where they have a voice in the affairs of their country. Therefore it is their individual duty to seek good men to fill the offices, and to influence those men to make godly and justifiable laws.

Obviously the time of opportunity for selection of candidates is before the elections. In the United States, for example, it was a citizen's moral and legal right to critically examine Mr. Eisenhower and Mr. Stevenson before November 4, the day of voting. But now that Mr. Eisenhower has been selected no citizen has the moral right to withhold support simply because he preferred Mr. Stevenson. Rather it remains each person's obligation to promote in every legal manner good ideas and sound counsel in his land. Intelligent people do not want all of their thinking done for them, nor do proper officers wish to do it all. But how can anyone know whom to select for office, or what and when to ask counsel, if God's Spirit has no voice in him? The lives of Christ's followers today require that they be attuned to the Spirit of Christ.

Because of our freedom of speech and choice of officials we say we live in the free half of the world. The implication is, of course, that persons without these privileges live in the not-free half.

Now is the day for the voicing of heaven-inspired counsel in our governmental circles. Today is the day to cherish and remember our freedom. The times in which we live demand men who are zealous, not lukewarm or cold. Sustenance and building of good government is a part of man's stewardship for which he will have to answer to God.

KEEPING BOTH FEET solidly on the ground in today's swirl of "modern trends" presents to the Christian one of his most difficult problems. Every minute of his waking hours, hands are beckoning him into some group's system of thinking and its attached standard of morals. Most of these "new ways of life" are a curse to the earth, the evil result of some man's greed. In the midst of this strife we remember God's word admonishing his people to do things to avoid being tossed about like straws in the wind.

Therefore, verily I say unto you, my friends, Call your solemn assembly, as I have commanded you; and as all have not faith, seek ye diligently and teach one another words of wisdom; yea, seek ye out of the best books words of wisdom; seek learning even by study, and also by faith. . . . become acquainted with all good books, and with languages, tongues, and people. . . . O the vainness, and the frailties, and the foolishness of men! When they are learned, they think they are wise, and they hearken not unto the counsel of God, for they set it aside, supposing they know of themselves; wherefore their wisdom is foolishness, and it profiteth them not. And they shall perish. But to be learned is good, if they hearken unto the counsels of God.—Doctrine and Covenants 85: 36; 87: 5; Book of Mormon, II Nephi 6: 58-61.

It is probably admirable that some men can today through faith alone keep their face turned steadily toward the kingdom despite the mad rush of ideologies about them. But surely it is a dangerous course. For study brings that tangible understanding which bit by bit replaces belief with knowledge and leaves his mind free to go on and faithfully probe greater mysteries.

Would you want to risk your life in an airplane built by men who never had bothered to study anything of the principles of aerodynamics? Or would you wish to drive with your family across a bridge built by men who concluded it was unnecessary to study any of the complexities of bridge-building? We will assume that these men believed with all their heart that there is a safe way somehow to build airplanes and bridges. Or would you permit a serious operation to be performed upon you or one of your loved ones by a man who honestly believed you could be helped, but who knew nothing of surgery?

In each case you would say, "I doubt not the integrity of these men. But their belief, though firm, is insufficient. Capability is educated ability, and since the actions suggested are so vital to my well-being, I want very capable people to perform them."

And thus it is with the workers in Christ's kingdom. Our faith in his plans and goals alone insists that we study, whenever possible, subjects relative to our part in his work. Native talent directs to an extent what that work shall be, and I am sure that more than we know, God uses men in the fields in which they have made sincere preparation.

I HAVE SUNG with my Zion's Leaguers a song, one line of which bubbles, "I've got that 'want to be a missionary' down in my heart." Everyone, of course, sang lustily, but I suppose it was understood that not all really wanted their life's work in that field. However, whatever title we might insert in place of "missionary," our steps toward that end would be similar.

The kingdom needs devoted personnel trained in all fields. For the kingdom is made of people, and their multitude of needs, spiritual and material, have to be supplied. To the plumber, real or potential, "all good books" may well include, besides the Holy Scriptures, textbooks on hydraulics and fluid transmission. To the homemaker, those would not be good books. Instead she needs to study home economics and child counseling. Child counseling might also be a good book for the missionary, but a study of people and governments would do him more good than home economics.

And thus it is. We could go on and on. The Lord urges us to be good stewards in our daily work, and a part of that stewardship is study. He encourages study of spiritual matters by all so as to insure their personal salvation as well as to guide their feet into proper business and social channels.

The times in which we live hold the promise of the kingdom of God being established on earth. Could there be a greater promise? But if you were going to build the kingdom, what sort of laborers would you select? Sincere, faithful people who had striven to prepare themselves for service, or sincere, faithful people who had not? The times in which we live allow opportunity as never before for everyone to become a master craftsman in his labor. You have in your hands the opportunity to actuate the interests of your heart.

And finally, what shall we say of the kingdom?

The kingdom will be built (Section 34: 6).

The kingdom will be built by the gathering of the Saints (Section 83: 2).

The kingdom will be built beginning at Independence, Missouri (Section 83: 2).

The kingdom will be built sooner than many suppose (Section 142: 5).

The kingdom will not be built in haste (Section 127: 7).

The kingdom will be established by peaceful means (Section 63: 8).

The kingdom will require labor (II Nephi 11: 109).

The kingdom will be built (Section 98: 4).

IT HAS BEEN A STROKE of infinite wisdom that throughout the years God has specifically sent missionaries to such countries as today are capable of participating in the building of Zion. One of the weaknesses apparent in men has been their utter failure to recognize the wonders of history in their day. The birth of Jesus brought no headlines in his day. Neither did the birth of Abraham. Who in 1830 thought the Restoration would amount to anything? Did the restoration of Israel to Palestine in 1948 cause a big stir? Neither will the establishment of Zion in its infancy gain much attention. Ridicule rather than praise will probably be its lot—but it will come.

As a church, we are small. We can do little about helping the Jews return to Palestine in a material way. The great nations hold no particular respect for us. We cannot do much about the rising power of the Great World Church. But there are things we can do. We can be a righteous people, strengthening each other day by day in the bonds and bands of Christ. We can be good citizens, keeping the laws of the land and ever giving thanks to God for those laws. We can build Zion at the counsel of our leaders to be an ensign to the nations, "Zion . . . shall come forth out of all the creations which I have made" (Doctrine and Covenants 36: 13). And there will be our comfort, hope, and reward.

(The end)

Proof of Immortality

By Robert J. Miller

WILLIAM JAMES, one of America's foremost psychologists, once said, "The best proof of immortality is to see a man living it." From a careful study of the Scripture, we know that death must come to all because of man's choice and the curse which God found necessary to place upon the earth.

God gave the reason for this curse. After man had sinned, had he also partaken of the tree of life, then he would have lived forever in a state of sin. But God had a higher destiny than that for his choice creation. It became necessary, therefore, for man to be cast forth from the garden of Eden, wherein was the tree of life, and to earn his salvation by a plan which God had devised that mercy might not rob justice, nor justice defeat divine love. By and through Jesus Christ we have our hope of immortality.

Repeatedly Jesus told his hearers that he was the way, the truth, and the life, and that no man could come to the Father but by him. He said, "I am the resurrection and the life; he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live; and whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die" (John 11: 25, 26). These are words of promise and comfort.

Jesus proved the statement William James made. He obeyed the entire law of God, and by virtue of his complete surrender he was able to lift the curse which is upon the earth and arise from the dead. He was, and is, our living proof of immortality.

Whether Mr. James had only man in mind or the Son of Man in the statement he made, I do not know, but I am sure that in either case it has an application.

As Son of Man, Christ was able to overcome death because of the Spirit in him which came from God. As man, we are able to prove the promise of immortality because of the spirit of life which is in us of God, and because obedience to these laws which govern our existence manifest to the world the eternal powers of God in man.

The testimony of Christ can never die as long as there are men upon the earth. Regardless of how good or bad they may become, they will always prove by their behavior the blessings of obedience to divine law.

Chaplain Sheehy and a class of Student Nurses

The Work of the Kingdom at the San

By Chaplain Almer Sheehy

FOR TWENTY MONTHS I have served as chaplain at the Sanitarium. As a General Church appointee I work directly under the supervision of the First Presidency. During this period of service I have observed with pleasure numerous activities which reveal the functions of this institution of the church as kingdom-building action.

The first words of the revelation to establish the Sanitarium (Doctrine and Covenants 127) are "It is the will of the Lord . . ." Many of the activities at the San now are indeed "the will of the Lord." At least I am happy to give this testimony.

This is not a report. It is rather a humble presentation of my observations as chaplain of the daily activities which are for the benefit of humanity and therefore activities of the kingdom.

Each morning (Monday through Friday) at 6:45, student nurses, registered nurses, supervisors, and employees, with occasional ambulatory patients and relatives of patients, meet for a fifteen-minute devotional. Attendance, even for the student, is voluntary. This chapel service is under my direction. Invited to bring inspirational talks are the pastors of the R.L.D.S. churches, ministers of the sectarian churches of the community, leading citizens—the mayor, city judge, county judge, and public school administrators—doctors of the staff, and General Church appointees. The day at the San, therefore, starts with prayer, song, Scripture, and inspirational thoughts. This is the kingdom way of starting the day.

Fellowship services are conducted at least once a month for students and friends. These meetings are planned by a worship committee composed of representatives of each of the three classes of the student body, a faculty advisor, and the chaplain.

Classes in R.L.D.S. doctrines, beliefs, and comparative religion are taught.

Special religious services are held. The capping service is one. This is held at the Stone Church after the freshmen students have met all the requirements of probation. The white cap presented in a religious service both honors the student nurse and indicates her ability to become a registered nurse.

THE CHAPLAIN'S OFFICE is available for conferences and counseling at all hours of day and night. Student nurses seek help when they are homesick, when they have roommate difficulties, when study, dating, and marriage problems arise. Changing concepts with reference to science and religion call for numerous conferences. Students seek counsel pertaining to the patriarchal blessings. Hospital employees and personnel seek pastoral guidance with relation to fellow-worker attitudes, hours of work, and home problems.

Literature of the church is distributed as wisely as possible to patients, friends, and employees. This includes the Inspired Version, Book of Mormon, Doctrine and Covenants, The Call at Evening, Fundamentals, The Story of the Church, and missionary tracts and pamphlets. At least fifty Heralds are distributed weekly to patients who are most apt to be interested and benefited by them. The children receive the Stepping Stones and Zion's Hope.

Names of those interested in church membership are sent to the Center Stake Missionary Co-ordinator for follow-up ministry.

"Your Sunday Morning Visitor," a weekly bulletin prepared by the Chaplain, is placed on the breakfast tray of each patient. The bulletin is a single sheet of paper, one side of which is mimeographed and is changed from week to week; the printed side contains "What We Believe," which is a copy of an epitome of faith prepared by Presiding Evangelist E. A. Smith. The mimeographed part is composed of interesting information, humor, poetry, Scripture, and devotional material, similar to that contained in Daily Bread. This bulletin also extends an invitation to the patient to call upon the chaplain at any time for his services. Questions and favorable comments have been made by patients with reference to the contents of the bulletin. These often lead to a friendly discussion of church doctrine and practice, faith and prayer, and religion in general.

IT IS THE ENDEAVOR of all who have caught the spirit of the San to help create and maintain an atmosphere of Christian brotherhood in order to foster Christian conduct. An increasing number of employees at the San are humbly and consciously striving to establish a spiritual tone and atmosphere that all who enter her doors will immediately observe the distinctiveness of the hospitality and Christian love which characterizes this church-sponsored hospital and school of nursing.

The San encourages the kingdom life by maintaining an atmosphere where "prayer would want to be made." Many prayers of faith are reverently offered daily in private rooms, semiprivate rooms, wards, the emergency room, labor rooms, and departmental areas. Part of my service is to make presurgery pastoral calls immediately following the chapel devotional. Most patients who are to experience surgery request prayer. Most of the members of the church ask for administration, and I administer to twelve to fifteen patients daily. There are as many more prayers of faith in the ordinance of administration offered by the pastors and elders of the Center Stake and Kansas City Stake. Many testimonies could be given with conviction as to the value of these prayers. Evangelist Arthur Stoft joins me every Friday morning in ministry to the sick. The spiritual ministry belonging to the Order of Evangelists enhances the kingdom work of the San. Since such sacred ministry is so greatly needed by so many, Brother Stoft is called many times more than his regular day of priestly visits.

The physicians and other trained professional people at the hospital intelligently rely upon prayer. One of the outstanding experiences in my ministry at the San—one that has enriched and increased my efforts and desires to help build the kingdom of God—is the participation in a team-ministry. The doctor, nurse, and chaplain work together as a team to restore the physical and mental health of every patient as soundly, rapidly, and completely as possible. Doctors daily ask the chaplain to take "spiritual medicine" to their patients. This team is able to work because of the teamwork of the board, the administration, the school of nursing, the technicians, nurses' aids, the kitchen, the housekeepers, the laundry, and the maintenance and engineering departments. Teamwork has kept many in continuous and noble service with both consecration and competence for long periods of time—ten, twenty, thirty, and even thirty-three years. The kingdom characteristics of stability, steadfastness, faithfulness, and dependability have been observed and developed.

Ministers of other denominations, as well as R.L.D.S. pastors, are notified by cards of any of their parishioners who come as patients to the hospital.

Loved ones of deceased individuals are taken to the chaplain's office for comfort, prayer, and assistance in making appropriate plans. I have conducted thirty-seven nonmember and nonaffiliated funerals and, on the average, officiate at two funerals a week.

Numerous patients speak of and write letters about the friendliness, skill, and character of the professional people and the religious atmosphere of the San. After hospitalization of five days or more, some former patients attend the Reorganized Church who previously did not; some attend the churches of their faith who previously did not. A few have asked for baptism in the Reorganized Church. A "stay" at the San increases good will and enlarges the understanding of many patients with reference to the sponsoring church and its share in kingdom-building.

THE SAN cares for patients from many states and Canada. Before and after General Conference, patients come in from many other parts of the world. Students come from Canada, Hawaii, and Great Britain, as well as the States. Like the international church that sponsors her, the San has a cosmopolitan atmosphere. A goodly percentage of these students return to home areas or go elsewhere to serve professionally as registered nurses and to take active part in church work.

The San attempts to answer the call of suffering humanity in her geographical area. Two thirds of the San patients are nonmembers. There are more than eight thousand patients annually at the San. These mainly are people from Jackson and surrounding counties.

This, however, presents a great challenge. The world needs an increasing number of nurses who possess both skill and tenderness. The San affords many opportunities to people with training and to those who are seeking training. For young women the school of nursing offers an excellent training program. There is a definite shortage of nurses the country over. The field is white already for harvest in the nursing profession. For the kingdom's sake, may the laborers be many.

Capping Service—Stone Church

Mary the Mother

By Lois Ernsberger

DULLY MARY WATCHED the soldiers divide the clothing. They admired the cloak and then decided to cast lots to see who would receive the garment. She twisted her fingers in agony for her first born and strained to see his face through her tears. He hung there quietly, with a compassionate look in his eyes shining through the pain. He stirred slightly and, opening his eyes, looked at her intently. Beside her stood John, the beloved disciple. And Jesus' gaze shifted to him. Love for both of them lighted his face.

Mary could see he wanted to speak. He is getting weaker, she thought. This nightmare couldn't last much longer. He opened his lips and with great effort spoke, "Woman, behold thy son," with a slight indication to John.

Mary was puzzled for an instant. "Behold her son," but surely—of course He was her son. Watching closely Mary saw his eyes shift to John. In a weaker voice he said to the disciple, "Behold thy mother!"

John nodded vigorously as though he had known all along what Jesus had in mind. He put a strong arm around Mary, and Mary—not realizing how weak she had been getting—was grateful. She closed her eyes and leaned a little more on that protecting arm.

IT SEEMED AS THOUGH it was only yesterday that the angel spoke to her. She remembered the room plainly—the plaited bamboo mat and prayer rug in her simple little room. A ray of sun strayed through the tiny window. Mary felt frightened, for she knew someone else was in that room too—but no one visible. In her fright she could think of only one thing to do: pray. And she knelt on the little rug and poured out her heart to her God. When she opened her eyes she saw the angel. Now she was more frightened. Her face turned white, and she began to tremble. The angel, noticing her distress, said, "Fear not, Mary: for thou hast found favor with God."

This pleased Mary. She had always tried to be humble and kind, to say her prayers regularly, and to help her mother willingly. True, she had at times dreamed of being the virgin who was to bring forth the Messiah, and she was of the house of David too. But that was a childish dream, of course. Some more worthy girl would be so honored. And therefore the angel's next words were all the more startling to her, "Behold, thou shalt conceive in thy womb, and bring forth a son, and shalt call his name Jesus."

Now Mary swayed as though she would faint, and the blood rushed to her face, dying it a deep pink. Her hands felt hot, but hark . . . the angel was still speaking, "He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest: and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David. And he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end."

Mary didn't quite understand all this. But in a puzzled voice she asked the angel, "How shall this be, seeing I know not a man?" True she and Joseph were betrothed. The judgment had been passed. They had already countless gifts, and she had sat idle all a Sabbath day with her hair falling free of their customary braids. This was a symbol of her maidenhood for all to see. But the angel answered the question. "The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, and the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee: therefore also that holy thing which shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God."

STANDING THERE AT GOLGOTHA Mary could still remember the flood of joy that had rushed over her. She had acknowledged many times that with God nothing was impossible, and in all humbleness she had answered the angel, "Behold the handmaid of the Lord; be it unto me according to thy word."

Mary opened her eyes and looked anxiously at her son. He moved restlessly . . . painfully. But knowing that all things were now accomplished, he said, "I thirst." Mary made a move as though to get him water, but already the swaggering soldiers were handing a sponge dipped in vinegar up to his lips. John drew her back into the circle of his arm, and Mary once more drifted back into the past. . . .

The months that followed were painful to remember. It seemed that an unearthly radiance emanated from her being. From a light-hearted, carefree girl she suddenly seemed to prefer solitude. People eyed her wonderingly, and soon gossip was rampant. Surely a spirit possessed the girl, people claimed. Aye, but what manner of spirit?

Home Column

Mary brushed these memories from her. They were over. What was done was done, and she was not sorry.

"It is finished!" Mary's eyes flew open. Her mother heart ached. It couldn't be, but at sight of the bowed head, the motionless body, she knew indeed it was finished for her son, her first born.

MARY BOWED HER HEAD and wept as memory assailed her thoughts—Jesus as a newborn babe—so good, so happy, never cross—the Wise Men, those valuable gifts, their awe—Jesus growing up—the tall slender lad of twelve confounding those doctors in the Temple—their frantic search, then their very human reaction at finding him safe—and Jesus' reply to their queries, "Know ye not that I must be about my Father's business?" Neither parent had had any reply to this. Indeed they knew. And Mary had pondered these many things in her heart.

Years passed, and more and more Jesus was away. More and more strange stories reached her ears. And it had seemed cruel and not at all like her son to forget his mother. But she knew he would come back one day. Ah, yes—she knew. . . .

"Come, Mary, my mother," John was speaking. "It is best we leave this place." So Mary allowed herself to be led away. She felt drained of all emotion. Her eyes were dry and her mind dull. She couldn't seem to remember any more, and suddenly it didn't matter. All she wanted was sleep—the healing escape of sleep.

The excited babel of voices awakened her. Mary lay quiet trying to think what it was that nagged her mind so. "Jesus!" The name spoken by someone outside her window brought it all back, and Mary leaped from her pallet. The first streaks of dawn dyed the sky through her window, and Mary strained to hear what the voices said. As she listened she relaxed, and a smile lighted her eyes.

"I knew he would return," she murmured.

The Miracle of Creation

By Lois Braby

WHAT IS MAN that thou art mindful of him?" What are we that God should give us one of the most marvelous of all gifts—the power of creation. Few people ever stop to think what a miracle childbirth really is. They feel it is only a process that takes place according to the laws of Mother Nature, but how shallow is their thinking. Childbirth is truly a miracle—a miracle of God and man working together in love and understanding.

Before our daughter arrived, I never thought too much about this power, and when I did I only viewed it as a natural, everyday happening—nothing spectacular. But our little girl is here now, and our views have changed; in fact, our whole lives have changed in many ways. This is a part of the miracle.

The day that our little Vicki arrived, my grandfather administered to me, and I felt the beginning of that miracle in the touch of his hands. God was watching over this event, because it was as much his creation as ours and we had asked him many times to be there. The pain of childbirth is a small price to pay for the gift we received. I didn't expect more than one miracle that day, but when I saw my daughter and I realized for the first time what a mother's love can be, I knew another had taken place. I felt unworthy of the joy God had given me.

Since Vicki came, I have known the true meaning and depth of love; our home and our hearts have expanded to hold her, and in doing so our love for each other and our appreciation of God have also increased. I didn't imagine what boundless joy life could hold until I held our own child in my arms and realized the miracle of God's love.

When I look at our little girl, my heart fills to the brim with love, gratitude, and hope—hope that I am worthy to guide her footsteps, to teach her of God, to help build her personality and prepare her for life. The task is great, but so is my faith, and I know in my heart that as long as I ask God to help me, He will. I have taken part in a miracle. I pray that I may never forget God's part and never cease to be thankful for his gift to us.

Gethsemane

Let me go into the garden
Alone.
Do not ask to come with me
For I must struggle with my soul.
Sit you by the gate and watch.

Give me strength, my Father,
That I may do the right.
And give me vision
That I may see the right.
Be calm, my soul!
*Let pass, O Lord, let pass this cup
From my lips,
For it is full of gall
And the taste is of wormwood.*
Give me love, my Father,
That I may die for unknown men.
And give me courage
That I may not falter in the mockery of trial.
Be calm, my soul!
*The price, O Lord, the price is too great,
And my flesh is weak.
Require not
That I should die in human agony.*
Give me peace, my Father,
In the long hours,
And forgiveness in my heart
That I may not hate the haters.
*Thy will, O Lord, thy will, not mine,
Be done.
Only give me loyalty of friends
To comfort me.*

What,
Could ye not watch with me
One hour?

JOSEPHINE MONTGOMERY

As I Saw Korea

By Corporal Dale Swall

And they were all young men, and they were exceeding valiant for courage, and also for strength and activity: but behold, this was not all: they were men who were true at all times in whatsoever thing they were entrusted; yea, they were men of truth and soberness, for they had been taught to keep the commandments of God, and to walk uprightly before him. . . . Now they had never fought, yet they did not fear death: and they did think more upon the liberty of their fathers, than they did upon their lives; yea, they had been taught by their mothers, that if they did not doubt, that God would deliver them. . . .

Now behold, there were two thousand of those young men who entered into this covenant, and took their weapons to defend their country.—Alma 24: 76, 77; 26: 56; 24: 74.

THIS FINE STORY in the Book of Mormon appealed to me some years ago, but today it carries a deeper significance. The purpose of these young men—to think more upon the liberty of their fathers than their own lives—is the same purpose to be considered by everyone who is troubled by present world conditions, especially those in uniform.

With two years of military service hanging over his head, each physically fit young man needs to understand the present situation which because of limited insight—his own and that of his associates—is sometimes difficult to do. Many see these two years as time they are being cheated of—two years with no meaning, two years during which it makes no difference how they think or act. This philosophy is personally harmful and adds very little to the basic cause for which America supposedly stands.

Only a few see it as a conflict of ideologies. If we are in Korea just to save the South Koreans from the Communist threat, it would seem quite worthless. Because of earlier wars and occupations she has been stripped of almost everything, including the desire to help herself. Korea is the beginning, and it is said, "as Korea goes, so goes all of Asia." Lest we think that two distinct forces are being pitted against each other, the one being good (the Western world) and the other being bad (the Eastern world), we need to examine ourselves carefully and the land in which we live. We seem to have the resources and the knowledge to help others, but we lack inner strength and spiritual unity. Without these we cannot help anyone, not even ourselves.

We have become rich and powerful, more so than any other people in history. We feel this and so have been lifted up in pride, not giving heed to the saying of "he who would be greatest must be servant to all."

It would be good for all, especially those called into service, to take inventory of the purposes they are serving and the sacrifices they may have to make.

Because I have spent eighteen months in army service, a good part of this time with a front line combat unit in Korea, I have given much thought to the reason and purpose of the time that others must spend. Being a Reorganized Latter Day Saint, I have made a covenant and must remain true at all times. Being in the service, many find it easy to forget who they are, and so they do things they would not do if they were home in their usual social surroundings. These eighteen months of service have given me an opportunity to see this side of life.

MANY TIMES IN BASIC TRAINING we heard, from our instructors, the phrase, "when you get to Korea." Many of us silently kidded ourselves by thinking we might be "lucky" and get to stay in the States or be sent to Germany. This almost never happens. Two were sent to Germany, about forty stayed in the States for officer or leadership training, and the rest of us—some one hundred and twenty—received FECOM orders.

After a tiresome two weeks of sea sickness, we docked at Yokohama, Japan. Here we were processed at Camp Drake, and most of the men were shipped straight to Sasebo and then to Korea. A few remaining ones were stationed in Japan as permanent personnel, and the rest of us were sent to Eta Jima, a beautiful little island where we attended special schools. Here I trained for eight weeks as a cook and then followed the others who had been sent to Korea.

EARLY ON THE MORNING of April 6, 1952, the Japanese ferry which transports army troops from Sasebo, Japan, silently slipped into the harbor at Pusan.

Chaplain Bertram Gilbert and the author

This finally was Korea—"the land of the morning calm." From here we were taken to a replacement battalion. This short trip gave us our first opportunity to see and smell the wretched conditions in which people of this country exist. Dirty, ragged, hungry children seemed to be everywhere, hurrying through the filthy streets, going in and out of cardboard, straw, and adobe shacks. Haggard men carried impossible loads of wood, food, or water on "A" frames attached to their backs, while gaunt women balanced baskets on their heads.

The stay at the replacement center was short, as it is only one of the numerous stops before final assignment is made to a permanent unit. But one incident makes it unforgettable for me. Being away from home on Palm Sunday and knowing that General Conference was in full swing back home, I sat in our tent feeling pretty melancholy. Then a little Korean boy walked in with his harmonica, and someone asked him to play a tune. He played "Jesus Loves Me." I guess I had forgotten, but he seemed to know it, though he had never lived in a country not torn by war.

Permanent assignment to the Fifth Regimental Combat Team came a few days later. At this time the unit was guarding prisoners of war on famous Koje Island. It was comforting to be going farther south instead of north, I thought.

All the replacements stood waiting expectantly as their names were called, and they were assigned to many different duties, mainly as riflemen. All the names were called except mine, so I expected to be placed as a cook. As the trucks pulled away with the other men, a lieutenant came up and asked if my record was correct in stating I could play the piano. I said it was, and then he gave me a choice as chaplain's assistant or rifleman.

EASTER SUNDAY was my first day as chaplain's assistant. There were five services with only enough time after each one to drive to the following service. The day was unusually beautiful, the rain the night before having washed the island clean, and the hills were thickly covered with beautiful native orchid-colored flowers.

Special preparations had been made for each service of this day. Three of these places were outstanding. One was in a valley where an altar of rock, concrete, and unusual sea shells had been erected. On top of the altar was a huge burnished cross. Another was on top of one of the hills—an inspiring height except for the view of the prisoner of war compounds. The third outdoor cathedral was a rice paddy. It, too, had a large cross at the front. This one seemed the most natural spot of them all, for rice paddies to Koreans mean life.

While on Koje I saw only one of the riots which, although it didn't amount to much, did give fair warning of future trouble and finally the dividing of the larger compounds into smaller ones. By the time this division took place my unit moved into a reserve position to continue training for the line.

Only a small part of Koje is used for POW's. The rest is full of valleys of rice paddies, villages, and never-ending hills. The villages on this island are probably less wrecked by the war than any other place in Korea. Here men worked in their rice paddies while women washed clothes in the clear mountain streams, beating the dirt out with wooden clubs. Children who were old enough to work were kept busy too, and those younger toddled beside or slept on the "mama san's" back.

IT WAS NEARLY the middle of June when our unit moved into a front line position in the famous "Punch Bowl." This name is derived from the terrane which forms a huge bowl. Early on summer or fall mornings the valley filled with fog completes the illusion of a punch bowl.

Going through the "lines" and conducting services on Sundays kept the chaplain and me busy. Each Sunday we conducted about six services in different places with good attendance. Many times after the service someone would come up with a "combat story" of how he was just missed and how his faith in God was renewed as a result.

OUR CHURCH being small in comparison to some, I wondered if any Reorganized Latter Day Saints might be in that area. I had thoroughly checked all the records of the enlisted men and none were listed. There was only one other way, and that was to play "The Old, Old Path" at services every so often. One Sunday after the service a tall, clean-cut captain came up and asked where I had got that particular hymn. It was Captain John Bailey of Independence. We had an interesting conversation and as is often the case we found that we knew many of the same people.

Leaving the Punch Bowl we went into a reserve area previously occupied by the Turks; this was called Yang Gu. The same day we got there I was given a four-day pass to Seoul to attend our own conference of service personnel in Korea.

Of all experiences in Korea this meeting with other men of the church was the most memorable. My good friend from Graceland College days, Alma Blair of Creston, Iowa, was there and also several others I had met before. We were few in number, but we all felt the need of spiritual refreshment, and received abundantly. The early morning Communion service highlighted the conference. Through the efforts of Major Millard F. Caldwell (elder) continued contact is being kept with members of the church there, via a newsletter put out the fifteenth of each month.

Shortly after returning from our conference in Seoul, I had a five-day trip to Japan. Most military personnel in Korea get this opportunity at least once. My plans were to go sight-seeing in one of Japan's oldest cities, Kyoto, but I had learned from a previous Seoul experience one can't see much in the rain. Three of those five days it rained, and I stayed put in Kakura content to do a little Christmas shopping. This trip, a high light for many, held little for me.

BACK WITH MY UNIT I settled down once more to my duties as chaplain's assistant. After the services on the first Sunday of December, Captain John Bailey came up and said good-by. He was leaving for Japan shortly on an inter-FECOM transfer. This wasn't the end of the Baileys though.

In reserve I had met a fine Utah Mormon and, knowing about services of that denomination, I offered to take him there in my jeep. I went with hopes of also meeting a Reorganized Latter Day Saint, and I was well rewarded. Here I saw Phillip Bailey of Pleasant Hill, Missouri. Phil lived only nine miles from my home. This was the first time for either of us to attend a Mormon meeting. The next Sunday Phil spent the day with me and I had the opportunity to see him once more before leaving Korea.

My unit again resumed its position in the Punch Bowl. This was my last move with this unit, for about ten days later I was on my long-awaited journey home.

The experience of serving in Korea, although not pleasant in many ways, proved worth while. I was able to see how other peoples live who need physical and spiritual care. This has made me conscious of the many things I had so often taken for granted. It proved to me also that one can have a profitable experience in the army, although two years in service may not be his choice. Last—possibly I should place it first—there is the peace that comes from within and the assurance as given to the two thousand young men of the Book of Mormon, walking at all times uprightly before Him, not fearing death but upholding the principles of freedom and liberty and having faith in God.

Question Time

Question:

Church History, Volume II, page 16, states that those who die before accepting the gospel shall be heirs of the celestial kingdom, providing they would have received the gospel had they remained. II Nephi 6: 51-55, as well as Mosiah 1: 107 and Moroni 8: 25, 26, indicates that these come under the atonement of Christ. However, Doctrine and Covenants 76: 6c states that these who die without law are to have part in the terrestrial world, not the celestial. Please reconcile these. Montana L. S. T.

Answer:

The historical statement referred to reads:

All who have died without a knowledge of this gospel, who would have received it if they had been permitted to tarry, shall be heirs of the celestial kingdom of God; . . . for I, the Lord, will judge all men according to their works, according to the desire of their hearts.

God's fundamental rule for judging men, as so often stated in holy writ, is "every man according to his works." Works and words spring from the heart, reveal the inner motive and desire, and determine the character of the man. It is this standing as to good and evil, truth and falsity, love and hate, which determines his acceptability with God, rather than whether or not he lived in or out of a gospel age or a gospel land.

Among people everywhere there are differences of character, often extreme; some whose whole souls are bent on doing good and their whole lives those of blessing; others are vicious, hateful, oppressive, without mercy or love. Paul mentioned that among those who had not the law there were those who "do by nature the things contained in the law" (Romans 2: 14). And Alma says, "It is requisite with the justice of God, that men shall be judged according to their works" (19: 66). This could not be fulfilled if a whole nation, because of being without the gospel, were placed in the same realm with equal salvation. Liars, sorcerers, adulterers, and murderers, the Lord says, go to the telestial world (Doctrine and Covenants 76: 7), and that without specifying whether they are from gospel or from heathen lands, or whether they lived within a gospel age or not.

The classification of humanity into the four groups as revealed in Doctrine and Covenants 76—celestial, terrestrial, telestial, and perdition—is somewhat general and makes allowance for individual exceptions. The case of Alvin Smith who died before the gospel was restored, and who was seen by vision to be in the celestial glory, is an instance of this. Undoubtedly from nongospel periods and lands many other noble men of upright character with records of good works will find place with the celestials. And as already noted, the extremely wicked, though dying without having heard the gospel, will not have place with the main group in the terrestrial world but in the telestial.

The great judgment will not be by groups but by individuals and, as Alma said, this "is requisite with the justice of God." Group judgment could not be just to all individuals. The divine rule remains, every man "according to his works" to be rewarded according to his merits. CHARLES FRY

Question:

As a reader of the Herald, I would like to know just how authentic the church considers the article, "The Martyrdom of Joseph and Hyrum Smith," by William M. Daniels, published June 23, 1952. Missouri E. D.

Answer:

The article referred to comprises a group of extracts from a pamphlet published in Nauvoo by John Taylor in 1845. It purports to be the testimony of one William M. Daniels, an alleged eyewitness of the assassination of Joseph Smith, Jr. This pamphlet has been reprinted a number of times by different people. In general outline it may be considered reliable. However, in detail it has not been confirmed by other reliable witnesses.

The reader must always keep in mind that some things published after the prophet's martyrdom were not reliable as to their historicity. Governor Ford in his History of Illinois discredits the testimony contained in this pamphlet, claiming that the author was later expelled from the church by the Mormons. Daniel Macgregor prefaces his reprint of the pamphlet with the following statement: ". . . neither affirming nor denying any of the statements found therein . . ." The facts are that this particular testimony of William M. Daniels in its details stands alone. No other competent witness, to our knowledge, has affirmed the correctness of the incidents relating to the ruffian with the Bowie knife, the light bursting from the heavens, and the murderers not being able to move.

The testimony of William Daniels, published in 1845 by John Taylor (who was in apostasy), stands on its own merit, neither to be affirmed nor denied in its historicity in detail. It was not published until the year after the assassination of the martyrs (June, 1844).

Question:

Is it considered advisable to let the election officials use the church building to hold elections in?

Oklahoma

E. R. C.

Answer:

There are so many qualifying factors in each case that it would be impossible to make a positive answer which would fit all situations. It would seem that the decision would depend upon (1) the type and size of the church building, (2) whether or not such use would invade the sanctity of the sanctuary, and (3) the relative value of such use in the matter of public relations.

Each congregation is a part of some community whether it wishes to recognize that responsibility or not. Where such a service is needed by the community and the church is equipped to render it, there would seem to be no real reason for denying the privilege. If, however, the church building is a one-room affair and the voting activities would of necessity be done in the chapel, the matter would need more serious consideration and the decision would have to be reached in the light of the relative value of the various factors concerned. Trial and Crucifixion of Jesus

By Stele A. Bryant

From a Lonely Member

WHILE CELEBRATING the feast of the Passover with his apostles, Jesus continued to teach them. When an argument arose among the disciples as to which would be the greatest in the kingdom of heaven, Jesus perceived a need to teach them a lesson in humility. Securing a basin of water and a towel, he proceeded to wash the feet of every one of them. Although he was their Lord and Master, he was not too proud to be their servant.

In this trying time Jesus needed the strength which only the Spirit of God can supply. He took his followers to the Mount of Olives and, leaving behind all except Peter, James, and John, went forth to commune with his Heavenly Father. While the three disciples waited, Jesus went apart from them and poured out his soul in humble prayer. Fear must have gripped his heart as he prayed, "O my Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me: nevertheless not as I will but as thou wilt."

Returning to the disciples, he found them asleep. Jesus woke Peter and said, "Could ye not watch with me one hour? . . . The spirit indeed is willing but the flesh is weak." Twice more Jesus departed to pray, and each time upon returning found his followers asleep.

In the meantime Judas was leading a group of armed men to take Jesus into custody. They came upon him and the disciples shortly after he had finished praying. Judas stepped forward and kissed Jesus, revealing his identity to those who came to take him.

Jesus was taken to Caiaphas the high priest, subjected to ridicule, and accused of blasphemy. The crowd spit in his face, slapped him, and challenged him to prophesy as to who had smote him.

Peter had mingled with the crowd and on three occasions, when asked if he were a follower of Jesus, denied that he knew him. Jesus had predicted that Peter would deny him three times before the cock would crow. Realizing what he had done, Peter was so filled with remorse that he wept bitterly.

When morning came Jesus was taken to Pontius Pilate, the governor. Pilate questioned Jesus, but he refused to defend himself against the false accusations. It was obvious to Pilate that Jesus had done nothing wrong and that he was being falsely accused. Pilate marveled that Jesus spoke not a word in his own defense. Since he could find no fault with Jesus, he was ready to release him. The Jewish leaders, however, insisted that Pilate condemn Jesus to death on the cross.

It was customary at the Passover feast time to release a prisoner and Pilate would have released Jesus if it had been agreeable to the crowd. The enemies of Jesus cried out that Pilate release a prisoner named Barabbas who was being held for sedition and murder. They demanded that Jesus should be crucified. Pilate, seeing that further effort to release Jesus was futile, turned him over to the soldiers.

The soldiers of Caesar, being hard men immune to the sight of suffering, took this opportunity to make sport of the unhappy occasion. They beat Jesus with whips, forced a crown of sharp thorns on his head, clothed him with a purple robe, and put a reed in his hand. They mocked him and said, "Hail, King of the Jews."

Jesus was compelled to carry his cross but, being weakened by hours of persecution, he needed help to bear his burden. A traveler named Simon was pressed into service by the soldiers to carry the cross.

What suffering Jesus must have endured as great spikes were driven through his hands and feet, and he hung upon the cross to die. Two thieves were also crucified at the same time, one on either side of him. One of them taunted Jesus by saying, "If thou be Christ, save thyself and us." The other thief rebuked the one who railed against Jesus and reminded him that they were being justly punished for their deeds, but that Jesus was innocent. He turned to Jesus and said, "Lord, remember me when thou comest to thy kingdom." And Jesus said, "Verily I say unto thee, today thou shalt be with me in Paradise."

So it was that Jesus died upon the cross. In those days death on a cross was a common method of punishment. The suffering that Christ endured, by being nailed to a cross, was no more than that experienced by many others in the course of history. Coupled with the physical torture, was the mental suffering and anguish that came from being mistreated by those whom he loved so dearly. One of his trusted followers betrayed him to his enemies for thirty pieces of silver; another denied him three times; the rest fled away and left him alone.

His goodness to others was rewarded by all the evil and false accusations that could be heaped upon any man. How was it then that in spite of all that was done against him, he was able to say, "Father, forgive them for they know not what they do." Only Jesus Christ could love so much. No wonder the centurion said while he watched Jesus die, "Truly this man was the Son of God."

My prayer is that many homes which have not established a family altar will do so. Prayer is the great channel through which we contact God. Only through prayer have I been able to bear the grief of losing my husband over a year ago. We had experienced such love and harmony together in our marriage that it seemed I could not go on without him. Home is such a lonely place now that he is gone.

I am living twenty-eight miles from Prescott where a small group of Saints hold services. Elder Bear comes twice a month to preach to us, and we all rejoice in the privilege of listening to such a wonderful person. He drives over a hundred miles to be with us. Brother Tsuji of Phoenix has ministered to us too. Last Sunday Brother Bear was injured in a car accident and now has a blood clot on the brain. I hope all who read this letter will remember him in prayer. He has done much for us, and as a result of his work two of my neighbors will soon be baptized.

A Point in Question

In Doctrine and Covenants 76: 6 the following statement appears regarding the people in the terrestrial world, "Behold, these are they who died without law . . ."

This did not seem to be entirely satisfactory; I could not see justice in consigning men to an inferior condition just because, by no fault of their own, they didn't happen to have come into contact with the gospel in their earth life. Naturally, I felt God could not be at fault in any way and so concluded that there must be additional light on that matter somewhere else.

So, when I read the account of Joseph Smith's vision as recorded in our Church History, Volume 2, page 16, I felt that this was the additional light needed, for it satisfied my sense of justice. From this account I concluded that those who died without law are, by God's unerring foreknowledge (not predestination), divided into two classes; namely, those who would have accepted the gospel had they heard it, and those who would not have accepted it. I concluded also as a kind of corollary, that those of the first class are naturally the type who live up to all the light that they have and therefore are justly entitled to come forth in the first resurrection.

With all this in mind, I feel that what is intended in Section 76, paragraph 6, is "Behold, these are they who died without law [who would not have received the law had they known it]." By the same token, in Section 45, paragraph 10 ". . . and they that knew no law [but would have received it had they known it] shall have part in the first resurrection."

This is not to infer that the statements under consideration in the Doctrine and Covenants should be altered in harmony with the ideas expressed herein, as I would prefer to leave that to abler and more authoritative minds, but I do feel that the information given in Volume 2, page 16 of the Church History is vital and necessary to more complete understanding of the point in question.

It seems to me that this item in the Church History should be brought into prominence somehow in connection with these points in the Doctrine and Covenants.

Briefs

Editor's Note to Reporters: We are trying to share these columns with several hundred branches. It is obvious that to be fair to all, you should make your reports brief (300 to 500 words) and send them in not oftener than twice a year. "Herald" readers are interested in your branch activities which have church-wide interest. If we find it necessary to further condense your reports, we hope you will understand.

Visitors in Branch

SAN ANTONIO, TEXAS.—President of Seventies Z. Z. Renfroe held a series February 1-8. Sister Renfroe accompanied him on the trip. On January 28, a reception was held for them. They visited Saints during the day, and Brother Renfroe preached in the evening. The last day of the series was Boy Scout Sunday, and Scoutmaster Arthur Perales and his troop of eighteen Scouts participated in the program. The choir, under the direction of Miss Emma Jackson, sang. Claud Reaves sang a solo.

Missionary Fred Banta and his wife Janet of Nauvoo, Illinois, visited in the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. P. Hall, during the Christmas holidays. Brother Banta spoke at the church on December 28. Other recent speakers have included Robert Wakeman of Uvalde, Texas; H. J. Sowyer of California; Ted Dorow, and Fantly Hall. Pastor Floyd E. Jett was the speaker on February 22. Bobby Galbraith sang a solo at the service, and the choir also sang.

A chicken supper was held January 23 at the educational building. It was sponsored by Brother and Sister Ted Dorow, assisted by the Martha and Dorcas Circles of the women's department. Over $134 was raised for the organ debt.

On February 14, a silver tea was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Dick Duke on Canterbury Hill, sponsored by the Dorcas Circle. A short program was given by music pupils of Miss Emma Jackson. They included Penny and Shirley Neely, Harriet Rayborn, and Miss Rachel McKinney. Sisters F. P. Hall and Claud Reaves served refreshments, and Sisters E. H. Sasse and A. S. Marin were hostesses. About $44 was raised which also was applied to the organ fund.

On February 21, a Mexican supper sponsored by the La-Da-Sa Circle was given at the educational building, which raised $118.

The evening service on February 22 was a book review of Feather in the Wind, written by Madelyn Galbraith. The book was reviewed by Mrs. F. W. Hall.—Reported by RUTH HARP

Apostle Holds Series

BRUSH CREEK, ILLINOIS.—A series of meetings was held by Apostle D. O. Chesworth February 15-27. Flora, Brush Creek, and Poplar Creek Branches attended.

Brother Chesworth, accompanied by Missionary Sam Anderson, visited in the home of the Saints. On the final night of the series a reception was held for Brother Chesworth and he was presented a gift. The women's department of the three branches also sent a gift to Sister Chesworth and their son.—Reported by MARVA MAE MOORE

Building Program in Stake

KANSAS CITY STAKE.—President Israel A. Smith spoke to the priesthood of the stake and their wives at a meeting on January 29. About 250 people were present. The dinner was prepared and served by the women's department of the Shawnee Drive congregation. Bishop Howard Miller was toastmaster.

Sister Frank Westwood is the new stake girl's promoter.

The stake conference was held on March 4, under the direction of Stake President F. O. Davies.

The emphasis throughout the stake is either on constructing new church homes or improving the existing ones. Quindaro has recently voted to raise $10,000 for construction of new classrooms. Chelsea has just completed plastering the basement and furnishing the kitchen at a cost of about $3,000. Prairie Village is making a selection of a site for their church home. Raytown is also planning their site for building.

Missionary series were held at Shawnee Drive and Grandview March 8-15. Seventy Allen Breckenridge was the speaker at Shawnee Drive. Elder Arthur Rock was the speaker at Grandview, Kansas.

New District Organized

OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLAHOMA.—The organization meeting of the Oklahoma City District was held February 8, under the direction of Apostle D. Blair Jensen. Elder O. O. Dollins, Sr., of Wilburton, Oklahoma, was elected district president. He named Richard J. Jones and G. Stewart Wight, both of Oklahoma City, as his counselors. The following officers were elected: secretary, Doris Butler; women's leader, Ruth Goodwin; director of religious education, A. J. Goodwin; music department leader, Mary Vickrey; youth leader, O. O. Dollins, Jr.; children's leader, Minerva Yerrington; treasurer, Leonard DeHart; auditors, Harry Piatt and Paul Norris; finance committee, Harvey Dollins, K. G. Sinclair, and Clarence McGowen. E. F. Yerrington was sustained as bishop's agent, and R. J.

Jones was sustained as evangelist. Billy Slanaker was recommended for the office of elder, and Richard Boren for the office of priest. Brother Slanaker was ordained an elder by Evangelist Jones. Brother Boren could not be present at the conference.—Reported by DORIS BUTLER

Tulsa District Organized

TULSA, OKLAHOMA.—The Saints of the new Tulsa District met in their initial business meeting February 21 in the main auditorium of the church in Tulsa. The meeting was directed by Elder Alfred H. Yale. President W. Wallace Smith, Apostle D. Blair Jensen, and Elder O. J. Stephens were on the rostrum with Brother Yale.

The following officers were elected: district president, Alfred H. Yale; counselors to district president, O. J. Stephens and John Gorker; secretary, Mrs. E. Louis Bailey; director of religious education, Jess Davis; children's supervisor, Mrs. Jessie Mae Howard; supervisor of young people, John Gorker; supervisor of women, Mrs. Doris Kelley; supervisor of music, Mrs. Frances O'Neal; historian and treasurer, W. J. Sherman; bishop's agent, Alan D. Kelley; auditors, Robert J. Cavanaugh and Robert Beck; finance committee, Dale Batton, H. O. Harder, and W. R. Yeubanks; reunion committee, O. O. Dollins, 1955; O. J. Stephens, 1954, A. J. Goodwin, 1953.

Brother Smith spoke, stating one of the purposes for dividing the Central Oklahoma District into two districts was to more closely unite the people in closely populated areas. Prior to Brother Smith's address the information regarding membership was presented. There are approximately fifteen hundred members in the Tulsa District, and approximately one thousand members in the Oklahoma City District.—Reported by MRS. E. LOUIS BAILEY

League Banquets Held

CENTRAL MICHIGAN DISTRICT.—The theme of the two valentine banquets held in the district at the Marion and Tawas City Branches for the young people of the district was "Youth and Evangelism."

The youth council chairman, Elder Burt Benjamin, was in charge of the one held at Tawas City at which about six hundred young people were in attendance. Elder Elroy Hanton of Eastern Michigan District delivered the message on the theme.

The youth council secretary, Elder Robert Ball, was in charge of the banquet at Marion, which was attended by eighty people, and Elder John Wiley of Mt. Pleasant delivered the message on the theme.

The menu for the banquets was planned by the youth council, and the food was furnished by the Leagues of the sixteen branches in the district.—Reported by ROBERT BALL

Evangelist Holds Series

IDAHO DISTRICT.—Evangelist J. F. Curtis started a series of meetings January 25 at Pocatello which closed February 8. District President Harry S. Fry and Mrs. Fry spent the opening day assisting Brother Curtis, and on January 28 Elder Elvin Dennis, assistant to the district president, and wife from Hazelton and Elder Tom Ultican and wife from Rupert drove over to Pocatello for the evening service. On February 1, Elder Orval Bank and wife from Montpelier spent Sunday morning with the Saints, and on February 8 Elder Dennis and family again spent the day with the Saints and assisted Evangelist Curtis in closing his series. In the afternoon there was a baptismal and confirmation service. Brother Dennis gave a talk to the Saints assembled for the service. The persons baptized and confirmed were Mr. and Mrs. Everett Alldredge of Pocatello, and Mrs. Amelia Barnett and Dale Bolingbroke of Arbon. During Brother Curtis' stay in Pocatello he blessed the following three children: James Reed Cunningham, and Rhona May and Jerry Lee Alldredge, and gave thirteen patriarchal blessings. He left Pocatello February 9 to open a series in New Plymouth.

Seventy Luther S. Troyer spent a few days in Twin Falls in January and Seventy G. Wayne Smith was in Twin Falls, February 1-22. Both showed slides and gave lectures and sermons, and a number of tracts were distributed during their visits. Mr. Arthur Dey has recently been appointed as reporter for the Twin Falls group as Mr. Ivan Montgomery asked to be relieved of this duty so he could devote more time to the Castleford group.

On January 30, the Ladasa Club of Boise gave a birthday dinner in the lower auditorium of the church and a large crowd was reported present. The Boise Branch basketball team is making headlines again this year.—Reported by RUBY Y. BROWN

Class for Latin Americans

ALAMO, TEXAS.—The women's department sponsored a father and son banquet on February 16 at the Community Building. Seventy fathers and sons were in attendance with all the boys and their leaders from Valley Bay's Ranch as guests. All proceeds were given to the Auditorium Fund.

Elder Charles Kornman is holding cottage meetings in the area.

Brother Wayne Jackel conducts a class for Latin Americans every Sunday at 7:00 p.m.

Sister May Jackel, assisted by Brother W. W. Wisdom, will soon begin a class teaching English to the Latin Americans.—Reported by BLANCHE SOLOMON

Branch Organized

OREGON CITY, OREGON.—The Oregon City mission was organized into a branch on January 25, under the direction of District President J. L. Verhei. The people in the branch are working hard to raise money to build a church, for this is the oldest mission in the district. Elder Clark Livingston was elected first branch president.—Reported by MRS. ROBERT GOOD

Missionary Holds Series

LONGVIEW, TEXAS.—District Missionary Norman Cox held cottage meetings in Longview, Texas, and the surrounding area, February 1-15, in the homes of members and non-members.

At the close of the series, two granddaughters of Brother and Sister Carl Aaron, Charlotte Smith and Dolores Ann Blakely, were baptized and confirmed by Brother Cox.—Reported by RAYFORD HANSON

In the end of the Sabbath day as it began to dawn toward the first day of the week, early in the morning, came Mary Magdalene and the other Mary to see the sepulchre. But when they looked, they saw the stone rolled away and two angels sitting thereon, clothed in long white garments; and they were afraid. And the angels said unto the women, Fear not ye; for we know that ye seek Jesus who was crucified. He is not here. Come, see the place where the Lord lay; and go quickly, and tell his disciples that he is risen from the dead; and, behold, he goeth before you into Galilee; there shall ye see him.

A Savior risen! Rejoice!
Lift up your heads and sing.
A Savior risen! Victorious!
O Death, where is thy sting?
A Savior risen! Triumphant!
O'er all our grief and fear.
A Savior risen in Glory
To bring salvation near.

"I Know That My Redeemer Lives," Saints' Hymnal, No. 256.
Benediction.

SHAW.—Elmer Grant, was born September 28, 1872, at Lancaster, Wisconsin, and died February 13, 1953, at a rest home in Battle Lake, Minnesota, after having a stroke five days previously. He was baptized into the Reorganized Church on June 11, 1899, and was ordained a deacon on February 4, 1918. He had resided in Clitheral, Minnesota, for the past seventeen years. His wife preceded him in death in 1941.

Surviving are four sons: Walter of Montana; Lester of California; Ben and Earl of Clitheral; and a daughter, Nettie, of the home. Burial was in the old Clitherrall cemetery.

ANDERSON.—Jacob P., son of John and Anna Anderson, was born April 7, 1874, at Glenwood, Utah, and died February 15, 1953, at Rochester, Minnesota. He moved with his parents to Nebraska when he was two years old; here he attended school, and from 1893-95 was a student at the University. From 1903 to 1906 he taught at Graceland College and operated a nursery at the farm home of his brother, John; then he homesteaded in Kansas for five years. In 1911 he enrolled at Iowa State College, and in 1916 received his Master's degree. For three years he was horticulturalist at the Sitka Experiment Station in Alaska, then established the first privately owned greenhouse in Alaska at Juneau. In 1938-39 he was a member of the Alaska legislature and supervisor of the census taken in 1940. The honorary degree of Doctor of Science was conferred on him by the University of Alaska in 1940. In 1941 he returned to Iowa State College to be a member of the staff in the botany department; here also he worked on a research project, "Flora of Alaska," continuing his writing as long as his health would permit. During his lifetime he won recognition as a botanist the world over. He had been a member of the Reorganized Church since June 3, 1883, and held the office of priest.

He leaves no immediate survivors. Funeral services were held in Nebraska City, Nebraska, Elder Floyd W. Hirst officiating.

HAMMER.—Joseph A., son of Joseph and Minerva Hammer, was born May 16, 1892, in Allendale, Missouri, and died February 15, 1953, at the Veterans' Hospital in Kansas City, Missouri. He had suffered severely for the past year with cancer. He attended Graceland College and on September 19, 1923, was married to Inez De Hart. For twenty-five years he owned and operated the Omar Cleaners in Kansas City. He had been a member of the Reorganized Church and attended Central Church in Kansas City.

He is survived by a son, Joseph Parker Hammer, and two daughters: Mrs. Leo Paulich of Manhattan, Kansas, and Miss Judy Hammer of the home. Funeral services were held at the chapel in Floral Hills Cemetery. Elder E. W. Lloyd officiated.

BARKSDALE.—Margaret, daughter of John and Addie Zimmerman, was born May 18, 1890, and was killed March 12 in an automobile accident. She was reared in Jackson County, Missouri, and spent most of her life there. In 1911 she was married to Henry Lunceford, who preceded her in death in 1924. In 1926 she married William Barksdale, who survives her. She had been a member of the Reorganized Church since 1917.

Besides her husband, William, she leaves a son, Carl Lunceford of Rolla, Missouri; and two sisters: Anna Reinkind of Kansas City, Missouri, and Mary Bedsaul of Denver, Colorado.

HEAP.—Myra, was born August 9, 1882, at Fall River, Massachusetts, and died November 12, 1952, in Attleboro, Massachusetts, after a long illness. She had been a member of the Reorganized Church since 1896. Although blind since six, she had worked for many years in the jewelry business.

She is survived by a sister, Mrs. John D. Colbourn of Cranston, Rhode Island, and a brother, Raymond Heap of Attleboro. Funeral services were conducted by Elder Ralph Power at the Reorganized Church in Attleboro. Interment was in North Purchase Cemetery.

Ways of Teaching

by KAREN ANDERSEN

"Ways of Teaching" is the essential companion of every church school teacher. In clear, concise words, the book discusses the work of the church school, how to teach so that children will learn, and many other important topics. This booklet is recommended by the Department of Religious Education. Published by the Mulenberg Press.

THE SEARCH

She couldn't have been over five, and her dark hair hung down in picture-book curls—the sweet old-fashioned kind. Her eyes were deep brown pools of innocence and trust. She was looking for Bob, and she thought surely that he must live somewhere down here. Were there any children here and could she look at them to see if Bob might happen to be among them? Sorry, but no children here—none at all. However, we have been in need of a little girl, and would she like to stay with us? No, not today. She was really looking for Bob.

Ten years from now, how that search for Bob (or some other forgetful friend) might be intensified! An absent Bob, out with another date or away to war.

Without knowing it, little folk often touch the heart. Long after they are gone, memories remain of their sweet faces. L. J. L.

CHRISTIAN LIVING

Blend 1 cup of Love
With 1/2 cup of Kindness;
Alternately add in small portions:
1 cup of Appreciation
With 3 cups of Pleasant Companionship
Into which has been sifted
2 teaspoons of deserving Praise.
Flavor with 1 teaspoon of carefully chosen Advice.
Lightly fold in 1 cup of Cheerfulness, to which has been added a pinch of Sorrow;
Pour with tender care into clean
Hearts and let bake until well matured.
Turn out on the surface of Society,
Humbly invoke God's blessing,
And it will serve all mankind.

BIBLE HELPS

You can get more practical value from the Bible, notes the American Bible Society, if you read it this way:

1. Slowly, and with mind alert;
 2. Carefully and with prayer;
 3. Expectantly and with anticipation;
 4. In a spirit of enjoyment;
 5. With eagerness to respond inwardly;
 6. Seeking a personal message;
 7. Repeating aloud verses which you like;
 8. Keeping a definite time each day for reading;
 9. Copying out a key verse to carry with you for rereading through the day.

Montague L. Parker

LIKE MANY ANOTHER LAD brought up in a Reorganized Latter Day Saint home, Monte early had an ambition to preach. He recalls a large catalpa tree in the back yard of the O. W. Parker home in Lamoni, Iowa, where he played with his sister and brothers. At times they would dramatize a church service, and Monte would wax loud and eloquent in boyish fashion of preaching.

Ed Garver, a linotype operator on the Herald night shift, boarded with the Parkers, and Monte had the job of carrying his supper down to him. While there he practiced operating the machine. This was the beginning of his life's trade of printing. Part of his high school time he worked after school as an operator. Later he did clerical work in the Presiding Bishop's office.

In 1920 he came to Independence for medical treatment. After his recovery he completed a short course in geology and surveying in Kansas City, Missouri. For a time he was active in the Stone Church youth work. During World War II he decided his fortune and happiness lay in the West and wound up his travels in Los Angeles, California. Several years had been wasted before he found his place in a study group. John Blackmore, who then was pastor, got a dozen young men together in a study group. Monte was invited and found much interest in the class.

This interest was carried along after his return to Independence by the fellowship group led by Evangelist Roy V. Hopkins at the Stone Church. He became president of the group for two years. It was while attending this group that he came to a decision to consecrate all his powers of mind and body to the Lord's work. He was soon called to the office of deacon, and later was asked by Bishop Stanley Kelley to be the bishop's agent for Stone Church. On December 5, 1947, he was ordained to the office of elder. When the Center Stake of Zion was organized in 1950, he became counselor to the stake bishop. At the 1952 General Conference he was elected to serve on the Board of Publication.

He was born in Pleasanton, Iowa, April 23, 1903. After being graduated from Lamoni High School in 1919, he attended Graceland College for three semesters. Illness interrupted his work there. He married Thelma Roof Hutchings in 1940. They are both active in group work. She is a member of the Laurel Club and is in charge of the hostess desk at the Stone Church.

News and Notes

FROM HEADQUARTERS

HOME FROM SOUTH

President Israel A. Smith returned to the office on March 27, following an extensive trip through the South in the company of Apostle Percy Farrow.

PRESIDENT EDWARDS IN ST. LOUIS

President F. Henry Edwards was in St. Louis, Missouri, March 21 and 22, for the St. Louis District conference. He was associated with Brother Alma C. Andrews and District Missionary John G. Wight. He noted that there was good attendance and a fine spirit at the conference.

PREACHES IN CENTER STAKE

President W. Wallace Smith preached at the South Chrysler Church in Independence on March 22.

HOME FROM MICHIGAN

Apostle C. George Mesley has returned from Michigan where he attended a district conference in northern Michigan and spent two weeks in the Detroit International Stake, participating in the stake conference and youth convention which included a banquet at Windsor. He preached at a men's club activity in the stake.

IN OKLAHOMA

Bishop G. L. DeLapp and Apostle D. Blair Jensen have returned to Independence from a trip through the districts of Oklahoma.

SPEAKS AT GRACELAND

Elder Charles D. Neff spoke at Graceland College on March 22 at the morning service. His topic was "The Home Front in 1953." That evening he delivered the sermon at the Lamoni church.

DR. McDOWELL IN THE EAST

Dr. F. M. McDowell, in company with Seventy James Menzies, conducted a series of priesthood institutes at Kirtland, Ohio, for the Kirtland District; at Toledo, for the Northwest Ohio District; at Columbus for the Columbus District; at Middletown and Jackson for the Southern Ohio District; and at Pittsburgh for the Pittsburgh District (invitations also went to priesthood of Youngstown and West Virginia Districts). This is a continuing effort to build a workable program for priesthood in harmony with the needs and possibilities of each area to be conducted by the administrative officers of each area and to be channeled through the local priesthood.

DR. LINK TO SERVICE

Dr. Vance E. Link left Independence March 28, for Montgomery, Alabama, where he will begin an indoctrination course with the Army Air Force at Gunter Base. Later he will be stationed at Reno, Nevada, where he will be joined by his family.

CONDUCT PROGRAM AT BUTLER

Edna Easter of the General Church Department of Religious Education was in Butler, Missouri, March 22. The program concerned the girls' work in the branch, and Brother and Sister Fritz Oeser of Independence shared in the program with Sister Easter.

Apostolic Witness

IT IS THE FAITH of the church that in his own life the Lord Jesus Christ revealed the nature of Divinity and the true wonder of humanity. He was the "Word made flesh," the "Prince of life," the "Author and Finisher of our faith." He, and he alone, is the "Captain of our salvation." There is no other name "under heaven whereby man can be saved."

It has always been difficult to persuade men to share this faith and so to believe on the Lord Jesus Christ with all their hearts, and to accept him as their friend and example and Redeemer. One reason for this is that our Heavenly Father would defeat his own purpose if he should endow his Son with such obvious authority that men would not feel free to inquire concerning his message, and would follow him out of fear of his displeasure. The Son must hide his greatness, lest it blind us. So Jesus came into our world as a baby, and grew into manhood as do other men. And, for the completion of his work he relied on the persuasive power of the Spirit, and the testimony of men enlightened by that Spirit. The testimony of his Spirit-blessed disciples has been the greatest single factor in bringing men to Christ.

The Lord Jesus Christ is the "Messenger of Salvation." But we do not come to know this in the same way that we learn that two and two make four. The two types of knowledge are on different levels. Mathematical insight is necessary if we are to understand mathematical relations; and spiritual insight is necessary if we are to know the truth in the realm of the Spirit. This spiritual insight must come from God. It can come from nowhere else. And even God can give it only to men who are in spiritual earnest. The Esaus of our race, who place no value on their spiritual heritage, can never be at home in the realm of the Spirit. But men like Peter are made blessed by the insight which comes from their Heavenly Father, and which cannot be revealed by "flesh and blood."

For this reason, and for many others that we cannot fully fathom, the Master chose twelve of his disciples to be with him in a very special sense. They were not apostles at first, since they saw him only as other men saw him. But, after a time, the Lord Jesus without and the Spirit within opened their eyes. They grew toward maturity of both insight and devotion. The time came when Peter could say: "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." To the facts of the Christian message they added richness of spiritual insight. They were saved from the fear of men, of failure, and of death. Their feet were set firmly on the highway of life. They knew that they had not "followed cunningly devised fables." They knew that "repentance and remission of sins" must "be preached in his name among all nations." So, when they were endowed with power from on high, they became the witnesses for the Lord in all the world.

THE NEED for apostolic witness did not pass with the death of the first apostles. It was not the kind of thing to be written fully in a book, even in the Bible. Their testimony was of the very life of the witnesses. So, in time, other apostles took the places vacated by the first witnesses, in order that the apostolic testimony might be maintained. The Apostle Paul, who was not one of the original Twelve, could write to the Corinthian Saints: "Am I not an apostle? . . . Have I not seen Jesus Christ our Lord?" and everyone knew that the "seeing" to which he referred had primary reference to a spiritual experience which made him a far more important witness for the Lord Jesus than any merely physical seeing could ever do.

It is of major significance, and one of the many evidences of the divinity of the Restoration, that on the very day the church was organized the word of God came to Joseph saying:

There shall be a record kept among you, and in it thou shalt be called . . . an apostle of Jesus Christ . . . through the will of God the Father and the grace of your Lord Jesus Christ.

It is of further major significance that Joseph and one of his immediate associates (Sidney Rigdon) testified:

And now, after the many testimonies which have been given of him, this is the testimony, last of all, which we give of him, that he lives; for we saw him, even on the right hand of God. And we heard the voice bearing record that he is the Only Begotten of the Father; that by him, and through him, and of him, the worlds are and were created; and the inhabitants thereof are begotten sons and daughters unto God.¹

And it is again significant that the organic structure of the church provides for an Apostolic Council of "special witnesses of the name of Christ in all the world." With the restoration of the gospel, apostolic witness has been renewed.

THE PRIVILEGE and obligation of apostolic witness is not confined to members of the Council of Twelve. It is shared by the Seventy and others. In the revelation of 1913 the church was told that there were "others still in reserve" who were "fitted through the testimony that Jesus is the Christ, and the doctrine is true, to serve as . . . apostles. . . ."

The greatest witness we can have that the testimony of the "special witnesses" is being effective is that others come to share the apostolic ministry. To paraphrase Moses: "Would God that all the Lord's people were apostles, and that the Lord would put his Spirit upon them." To this end, let us all be faithful according to the light which we already have. And, as our convictions mature under the blessing of the Spirit, let all the church join in the apostolic testimony which will bring men to the Captain of their salvation.

Anonymous Contributions

Recently a contributor placed a substantial sum of currency in an envelope and placed it in a pigeon-hole at the general office mail desk at the Auditorium, just addressed to "The Bishop." A receipt as offering has been issued for this, credited as Anonymous.

We call attention to this to let the contributor know that the offering was received, and also to call attention to the fact that it creates a very difficult situation for the bishop's office when funds are handled in this way. Any time that a person wishes to make a contribution and keep it anonymous, we are glad to so record it on our books, but for the protection of both the giver and the bishop's office, it is highly advisable to make personal contact with some one of the bishopric when such anonymous contributions are to be made.

THE PRESIDING BISHOPRIC
By G. L. DeLapp

Dr. A. W. Teel Dies

A telegram received by the presidency tells of the death of Doctor Teel on March 24. While there is always a feeling of sadness upon the passing of a great man who has given years of devoted service to the church, there is also a note of grateful appreciation for one who has given so generously of his talents and training that the life conditions of others might be improved. Such a man was Dr. A. W. Teel, who served as Church Physician from 1926 to 1946. Believing wholeheartedly that a sound mind and a sound body were prerequisites for efficient service in the cause of Christ, he worked diligently toward the accomplishment of this ideal among the Saints. From his busy practice as an eye, ear, nose, and throat specialist he took time to write the excellent health articles which appeared frequently in the Saints' Herald, volumes of 1926 to 1945. Written simply in the language of the layman, these articles gave valuable information on hygiene, sensible diet, and common ailments. From 1931 through 1934, under the heading, "Weekly Health Letter," Dr.

Teel wrote extensively, giving attention to more than one topic in each article.

Not only did Dr. Teel find time to write for the good of the Saints, but he served the church actively in his priesthood responsibility. Following his ordination to the office of elder in the summer of 1918, he became pastor of the branch in Los Angeles in 1924 and later assistant pastor. He was ordained a high priest in May, 1925, and chosen physician to the church April 8, 1926, at the General Conference.

Dr. Teel learned about the latter-day work early in life. He was married in 1899 to Ida May Newberry, whose grandparents had lived in Nauvoo, being members of the old church and workers in the Reorganization. In 1913, he was baptized in Chicago by Elder David E. Dowker.

Dr. Teel was a native of Iowa, although he was living in California at the time of his death. He had previously built up a large medical practice in Clark County, Missouri, where he lived until 1913. His first medical education was obtained at the College of Physicians and Surgeons at Keokuk, Iowa. Subsequently he received both A.B. and A.M. degrees and did wide post-graduate work both in America and abroad.

He served in World War I in France, later being sent to Germany as a member of the Inter-Allied Commission on the repatriation of the Russian prisoners of war. He was a major in the United States Medical Reserves.

This active physician served as a member of the Missouri State Legislature in 1912 and 1913, having as his responsibility the inspection of hospitals and state charities. While in Keokuk he was professor of physiology in the College of Physicians and Surgeons. In California he served as instructor and lecturer on diseases of the ear, nose, and throat in the University of Southern California Medical School. He was on the active staff of the Angelus Hospital, the Hollywood Hospital, and the Research Hospital (Glendale). He was a Fellow of the American Medical Association; a member of the California State Medical Society, the Los Angeles County Medical Society, and the Southern California Medical Society.

Dr. Teel's wife, who preceded him in death by four years, assisted as his office nurse and secretary and no doubt proved a valuable aide in the life of this busy man. The church suffers a loss in his departure, but those in the General Assembly of the Church of the First-born will surely welcome his able ministry with joy.

THE FIRST PRESIDENCY

A letter from Brother D. T. Williams contains the following:

Last Sunday [March 15] at the conference prayer service in Wellsburg, West Virginia, Evangelist Robert Rodgers was making the opening remarks and had proceeded only a few moments when he suddenly took a heart attack and died. The incident caused a near panic in the church filled with people, but the Saints held themselves in check very well, considering what must have been coursing through their hearts and minds.

A tribute by Samuel M. Zonker, president of the West Virginia District, has been received by the First Presidency under date of March 21:

We have been under a severe strain in the passing of Evangelist Rodgers. I feel that the West Virginia District has lost a real father and friend. He came into the church in the early 30's, was ordained a deacon in 1932, a priest in 1933, an elder in 1936, a high priest and an evangelist in 1950; during this period he served faithfully and well.

He died during a district conference at Wellsburg. He had been afflicted since January 4 when he had a severe heart attack. Services were held in the church on March 18 with Elder S. M. Zonker officiating, assisted by Elders John Treiber and Otis O. Melcher.

Evangelist Rodgers' passing is indeed a shock to all the Saints, especially to his companion, brothers, and sisters.

The following is excerpted from a letter from Apostle Don Chesworth:

The Hannibal, Missouri, mission was organized into a branch on March 9 under the supervision of Elder John Puckett. The branch had a membership of sixty-six at the organizational meeting. The pastor is Wayne Peters of Palmyra, Missouri.

History of the Apostolic Council

THE IDEA of the apostolic office continuing after the first century seems to have been ignored by the historians of Christianity. That the first twelve were supplemented by the selection of other members as the ranks became depleted through death is a scriptural fact. Most Protestants express surprise when confronted by the evidence that in addition to the names of the original twelve (Matthew 10: 2-4) the New Testament adds those of Matthias (Acts 1: 26), Barnabas and Saul (Acts 14: 14), Andronicus and Junia (Romans 16: 7), and Silvanus and Timotheous (I Thessalonians 1: 1 and 2: 6).

The term "apostle" comes from the Greek meaning "one sent forth." It was to the apostles that Jesus gave the Great Commission, "Go ye therefore and teach all nations." The promise which followed it was also addressed to them and indicated their permanency as a council, ". . . and, lo, I am with you always, unto the end of the world" (Matthew 28: 18, 19).

One of the distinctive organic features of the Restoration Movement is the inclusion of this council. In our study of comparative religions only one other denomination appears to have included this council in its organization. This small group (Catholic Apostolic Church) came into existence "about 1830." The last of its apostles died in 1901.

The argument usually advanced for the failure in Protestantism of not having apostles is that only those "who from the beginning [of Jesus' ministry] were eyewitnesses and ministers of the word" (Luke 1: 2) were valid apostles. This would exclude Paul and others.

The knowledge that there would be twelve special witnesses first came to the Restoration in June, 1829, when the Aaronic priesthood was first bestowed upon Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery. This was not an act of faith in a church not yet born, but a definite revelation of what was to be. The unusual fact concerning it is that members of the first Council of Twelve were not selected until February 14, 1835. They were chosen by a committee consisting of the Three Witnesses to the Book of Mormon—Oliver Cowdery, David Whitmer, and Martin Harris. This Council consisted of the following: Thomas B. Marsh, David W. Patten, Brigham Young, Heber C. Kimball, Orson Hyde, William E. McLellin, Parley P. Pratt, Luke S. Johnson, William Smith, Orson Pratt, John F. Boynton, Lyman E. Johnson. As some of these left the Council, the following were added: John E. Page, John Taylor, Wilford Woodruff, George A. Smith, Willard Richards, and Lyman Wight.

The first Apostles of the Reorganization were selected in 1853 and consisted of the following seven: Jason W. Briggs, Zenos H. Gurley, Sr., Henry H. Deam, Reuben Newkirk, Daniel B. Rasey, John Cunningham, and George White.

David Newkirk and Samuel Powers were added to the Council in 1855; William W. Blair in 1858.

In 1860 three more were added: Edmund C. Briggs, James Blakeslee, and John Shippy.

Two more were added in 1865: Charles Derry, and Josiah Ells.

In 1873 six were added: William H. Kelley, Thomas W. Smith, James Caffall, John H. Lake, Alexander H. Smith, and Joseph R. Lambert.

One was added in 1874—Zenos H. Gurley, Jr.—and three in 1887: James W. Gillen, Joseph Luff, and Gomer T. Griffiths.

Heman C. Smith went into the Quorum in 1888.

No more changes were made in the Quorum until 1897 when I. N.

White, J. W. Wight, and R. C. Evans were added.

Peter Andersen went into the Quorum in 1901.

Five additions were made in 1902: Frederick A. Smith, Francis M. Sheehy, U. W. Greene, C. A. Butterworth, and John W. Rushton.

Two were added in 1909: J. F. Curtis and R. C. Russell.

In 1913 four were added: James E. Kelley, W. M. Aylor, Paul M. Hanson, and James A. Gillen.

In 1920 M. A. McConley and T. W. Williams became members of the Council.

In 1922 J. F. Garver, D. T. Williams, F. Henry Edwards, E. J. Gleazer, and Roy S. Budd were added to the Council.

Clyde Ellis became a member of the Council in 1923.

In 1932 George G. Lewis was ordained to the Council of Twelve.

In 1938 three more additions were made: C. George Mesley, Arthur A. Oakman, and Charles R. Hield.

In 1946 the ordination of D. Blair Jensen to the Council took place.

The following year three new members were added: W. Wallace Smith, R. E. Davey, and M. L. Draper.

In 1948 two more changes were made in the personnel of the Council when Percy E. Farrow and Reed M. Holmes were added.

The last change was made in 1950 when D. O. Chesworth was called and ordained.

The purpose of this special edition of Saints' Herald is to honor the one hundredth anniversary of the Council of Twelve in the Reorganization. On April 8, 1853, among the small band of the faithful God found and designated seven men to carry the burden. This generation owes much to these men and their successors.

God Lives

Paul M. Hanson

IT IS TRUE that law governs in the spiritual realm as in the material field. Numerous are the testimonies contained in the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants of men and women experiencing conscious relationship with God, leading to their feeling that he cares for all their temporal and eternal needs. Such a marvelous link between finite man and the infinite God is clearly possible through an observance of the conditions attached to law. "The law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul."—Proverbs 19: 7. What mind stupefied by alcohol can find the Almighty? "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God."—Matthew 5: 8. To "see" is to perceive, to become aware of, to know; to be "pure in heart" includes paying strict attention to premises from which one reasons, then—reasoning faithfully and accurately and without bias—ponders and acts upon the conclusions reached.

What is the most important thing in life upon which one should reach a decision? The fact that God is, for without him there is no beginning from which to start and no end toward which to move. With him life falls into a true pattern. With him left out of consideration, there will be befogged minds, fear, insecurity, loneliness, and compromising with evil. Without him the world breaks down. Life falls into place only with God. What can be more solemnizing and thrilling than living a life aware of close relationship with him? All that is within one is challenged into worthy and active expression by such conviction and knowledge.

What a tragic and irreparable loss—if not a shame—for one to live in such a universe of which he is consciously a part, yet not have a knowledge of his Creator!

How can our Heavenly Father be found, and how can the truth of the gospel be perceived? Speaking from experience, I find a multiplicity of causes have led to what I know of God and his work of salvation through Jesus Christ. Here are some of them. Perhaps first I pondered upon my existence as a part of the universe. It appeared reasonable to me in early life that if God lived, communion with him through prayer—especially private prayer—could be experienced. The experiment led to very encouraging results. I made a search for the church of Jesus Christ, for the Master declared, "I will build my church" (Matthew 16: 18). I studied the Holy Scriptures, and the more I learned of Jesus, the more I felt he truly was "the way, the truth, and the life" (John 14: 6). I respected the ordinances of the gospel, passing through the waters of baptism for remission of sins and for identification with Christ and his church. There came to me the fulfillment of the promise of Jesus, even the reception of the Holy Spirit.

Jesus said, "If a man love me, he will keep my words; and my Father will love him, and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him" (John 14: 23). To the extent I have heeded those words I have realized the promise given.

The foregoing forces operating in my life have led to my now being able to say, "I know that God lives; that Jesus is the Christ, the Savior of the world; that in these latter days God has spoken from the heavens through the prophet Joseph Smith, giving an interpretation of the present age, restoring his church and the fullness of the gospel. I know Zion shall be redeemed; God's people shall be gathered together; and his power shall be over them."

The reward of one duty is the power to fulfill another.—George Eliot.

The smallest things become great when God requires them of us.—Fenelon.

I Received It Not of Man

E. J. Gleazer

MY FIRST RECOLLECTION of divine power was experienced when I was a boy of twelve. I was spending my vacation on the farm of my uncle near the city of Belfast, Ireland. One day I was led to go alone to pray. I went to a stable on the farm and while engaged in prayer I was made conscious of a power not my own; there came to me the knowledge that I was in the hands of God and that he would direct in all my affairs. This meant much to me, as I was an orphan. My father and mother died when I was nine years old. In this article I cannot go into details, but in less than a year I commenced to see the realization of what I experienced on that farm.

The way opened up for me to come to America, which up to then had not been planned by those responsible for my well-being. It had been arranged that I should go to a Masonic school where I would receive an education that would qualify me to provide for my living. We soon gave consideration to attendance at some church after my arrival in America. I decided on the Methodist faith, because some of my young friends were members of that body. I found plenty of opportunity to serve in the Sunday school, young people's organization, and as an usher at the regular services. My devotion and interests were such that some consideration was given to send me to college to prepare for the ministry.

About this time in a rather remarkable way I came in contact with members of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and while it required considerable time and argument, I was eventually convinced that this church was of divine origin. However, it was not the discussions or Scripture quotations that convinced, but "a power not my own" that I soon learned was the spirit of God. Even before being baptized, while reading a copy of the hymn, "Admonition," given to Joseph Luff by the Spirit, I had the knowledge that this song was the Word of God to his people.

I had been a member of the Reorganized Church about a year when I was called to be a deacon. I enjoyed the spirit of this office and later was called to be a priest.

I did not apply for church appointment but I knew before my pastor and the apostle of the Eastern Mission returned from Conference held at Independence in April, 1916, that I would be asked to accept full-time ministry. I shared this information with my wife (we had been married six months previous to this Conference). Even before our marriage I explained to her my future work, which had been revealed to me. She now can testify how all that I told her has come to pass.

As a young, inexperienced minister I soon saw the need of divine help. Here again in my many ministerial duties I had experiences that I can now say were of divine origin. Much that I gave in ministry came not by the power of man.

In my calling to the apostleship and the experiences I have had as an apostle, I again testify, "I received it not of man but by the revelation of Jesus Christ." My human limitations, my lack of formal education, my impulsive nature, all testify that whatever success I have had as an administrator or in my preaching ministry came by the power of God.

A Testimony of the Restoration

D. T. Williams

MANY ARE THE EVIDENCES available to prove that the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints is the church in succession to that church organized by Christ eighteen hundred years prior to its coming forth again in this last dispensation of God's grace.

To name one of these for an issue of the Herald dedicated to the leading missionary council of the church seems altogether appropriate, for these elements of reason compose my basis for a rational belief in the God of the Restoration and in the movements to accomplish his purpose—which purpose is to achieve "the immortality and eternal life of man."

First, may we mention God's determination to take an unlearned man and make of him an instrument of power, and God's disposition to use the simple things of this world to confound the wise. It was in this direction he moved when he chose a young, uneducated farm youth to spearhead his attack on sin and selfishness in this cycle of time, known to us as the "latter days." God did not choose for this task those of erudition for two reasons: first, the lives of such were too apt to have been cast in a mold already frozen to the demands of their day, making them adamant to the new ideas with which

God would infuse new life into dead forms through the power of his resurrection in a new movement of light and beauty; second, God apparently wanted to use such an instrument as would self-evidently point to his own intervention in the ways of men in such fashion as to leave no doubt that he was at work in their particular dispensation of time.

One evidence that he accomplished this dual purpose is manifest in the young prophet's revelation of eschatology as set forth in Doctrine and Covenants 76: 4-8. Here was a manifestation of foresight and wisdom far beyond the earthly knowledge or any demonstration of clairvoyance which may within reason be expected of this unlearned and uncultured schoolboy. Yet with all this said, there still remains the astonishing fact that we need have no fear to set this composition of spiritual enlightenment up in contrast with such a splendid work as that of I Corinthians 15, written by that astute and revered apostle to the Gentiles. Paul, discussing a similar theme, moves in his divinely inspired reasoning toward a like end with the young and unlearned youth.

The scholarship in composition is just as manifest in one of these treatises as in the other. The beauty of diction is comparable in both endeavors, revealing God's divine purpose. The clarity of thought loses none of its potency when expressed by the young man of lesser learning as compared with the wise and astute member of Gamaliel's dazzling retinue of scholarship.

No Reorganized Latter Day Saint needs to feel apologetic in contrasting the revelations of the young prophet of the Restoration with those of any other age—even those of Isaiah, the golden-tongued prophet of Israel, as well as those of the venerable and erudite Paul. Why should there be in this area of man's experience such an astonishing phenomenon as is set forth in the facts here related? There is only one answer to this: God in this particular dispensation determined to make it clear to powerful men in an age of great learning and scholasticism that he could bring their wisdom to naught and cover them with confusion if they were not willing to dedicate their great earthly knowledge to him and his purpose—to bring to pass the immortality and eternal life of man—which the young prophet had revealed was the will and purpose of God in the restoration of his church in this last age.

MY ADVICE to you, the reader of these lines, is to peruse Section 76 of the Doctrine and Covenants for added evidence of God's dealings with men in setting up his church in these last days, but not to be satisfied with but one contribution of the Lord to the canon of latter-day revelation. Read Sections 1, 42, 45, 83, 85, and 90. These may be but indicators of God's good grace to us. Many others bear testimony of his power and wisdom.

There are many other evidences of divine intervention which may be pointed out were space available. However, we hope that this small contribution will solicit your attention and your efforts in an investigation of the principles of the gospel as set forth in the claims of the church of Jesus Christ as organized in these last days.

Our personal testimony is that God is in this latter-day demonstration of his light and power made evident to us for our salvation and his eternal glory.

The seeds of our punishment are sown at the same time we commit the sin.—Hesiod.

Revelations of Truth

C. George Mesley

DISTINCTION IS SOMETIMES MADE between revelation as an experience and revelation as a record. We enjoy revelation as an experience on occasions when the Spirit of God in power breaks through the barriers of human limitations to bring light from the mind of God to meet the needs of men. The record of the revelatory experience is expressed in words which sometimes so enlightens the reader that his experiences are similar to those enjoyed by the original receiver of the light from God. Until this happens, either through a paralleling movement of divine light or through the deep personal experiences of the reader of the record, the revelation lies imprisoned in a cage of words.

God constantly invites us to put his words to the test, to taste and see how good is his bounty. Our best testimonies of the truth and power of God come as we embark in faith on this testing process. The word of revelation reads, "God . . . hath made of one blood all nations of men for to dwell on all the face of the earth" (Acts 17: 26). This revealed truth I have had the privilege of facing in experience. It has been my privilege to represent the church in the United States, Canada, Alaska, Hawaii, Tahiti, New Zealand, Australia, and to travel in Europe, Asia, and Africa. In every one of these lands I have tested these words and found them to be true.

Hawaii, sometimes called the melting pot of the world, gave me an outstanding testimony of the truth of our being of one blood under God. I sat at a Communion table there in a most humble home, borrowed for the occasion by Sister Olive Kon of Kohala. Present were seven church members representing Hawaii, Spain, England, Australia, Japan, China, and the United States. The poverty of the home, the racial barriers that others had erected, the varied skin colors, the divergent national backgrounds and cultures, all merged into "one blood" as we sat at the feast of love to which our Savior had invited us. The power of the Spirit of Christ was there. No East or West, no North or South was discernible, "but one great fellowship of love" was ours to enjoy. The words of the Lord came to a man of God. He wrote them in a book: "God hath made of one blood all nations." These words I know to be the truth. They were revealed to me, too, in the experience of that Communion service in Kohala. Their truth came home to me again and again during my brief stay in Tahiti. As I, an Australian, serve in the United States and Canada, these words glow with truth born of many experiences under the Spirit of God.

JESUS SAID, "He who taketh not his cross and followeth after me is not worthy of me" (Matthew 10: 38). "He that loveth father and mother more than me is not worthy of me" (Matthew 10: 37). "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you" (Matthew 6: 33). These pronouncements of the Master remain words in the Good Book until we test them in experience.

To my joining the church of the Restoration my loved ones offered no opposition. They were glad to accept any organization that would change the pattern of my living from careless evil doing to thoughtful good living. But to my acceptance of service as a full-time minister of the church in a land abroad, they expressed most violent opposition. One called me an ingrate, another a murderer. The inheritance that I had helped the family to create was willed to a stranger. Those who had reared me from childhood and given me a home when I had none refused to write to me. All the persuasions of friends were enlisted on the side of honor and security in Australia to outweigh my decision to go to the United States. I faced the decisions of taking up a cross, of loving Christ more than father and mother, of seeking first the kingdom, and they cost me everything I held dear in Australia.

Against these experiences of denial, there has flooded into my life all the compensating friendships and loved ones of my life today. For every opportunity of gain I left behind, a thousand ways of service have opened to me in the church.

THE DISCIPLES of old felt the power of the direct revelation that concerned seeking first the kingdom, but today I have proved in the rich school of experience that these words are indeed the words of light and life. "Seek ye first . . . and all these things shall be added unto you."

Because of these and many other experiences my faith in the word of God has grown stronger. My assurance in the bountiful Scriptures of the Restoration Movement has enlarged so that when God says, "Every man shall be made accountable unto me, a steward," I am impelled to face my stewardship and accounting. When the prophet writes, "All are called according to the gifts of God unto them," I know that his words are true.

His Word has never failed me. Those revelations of truth which I have not yet experienced I accept in faith. Later testing, too, can prove their divinity. I believe in the restoration of the church of Jesus Christ in the latter days and in the great saving truths which it proclaims today.

A Testimony of the Christ

Charles R. Hield

God . . . hath in these last days spoken unto us by his Son, whom he hath appointed heir of all things, by whom also he made the worlds; . . . unto the Son he saith, Thy throne, O God, is for ever and ever; . . . Thou hast loved righteousness, and hated iniquity; therefore God, even thy God, hath anointed thee with the oil of gladness above thy fellows.—Hebrews 1: 1-9.

THE GREATEST TESTIMONY anyone can bear is that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God, the eternal Father.

Members of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, because of the clear record they have in the Three Standard Books—the Bible, the Book of Mormon, and the Doctrine and Covenants—have a special duty and privilege to tell the world about this Christ. Much has been given about his life—past, present, and future.

He says in modern revelation: "I was in the beginning with the Father, and am the Firstborn. . . . Ye were also in the beginning with the Father."—Doctrine and Covenants 90: 4.

The Son is most humble and always concedes that his Father is the presiding authority and power of the Godhead. He says: ". . . as my Father taught me" (John 8: 28); "My Father is greater than I" (John 14: 28); "The Son can do nothing of himself" (John 5: 19). The Apostle Paul wrote: "And when all things shall be subdued unto him, then shall the Son also himself be subject unto him that put all things under him" (I Corinthians 15: 28).

Christ is the Creator. "By him were all things created" (Colossians 1: 16). "By him, and through him, and of him, the worlds are and were created" (Doctrine and Covenants 76: 3h). "Jesus Christ, the Son of God, the Father of the heavens and of the earth, and all things that in them are" (Ether 1: 101). See also III Nephi 4: 44, 45.

Christ was no doubt involved in the battle of heaven when one third of the hosts revolted under Satan (Doctrine and Covenants 76: 3). Christ is in charge of the world, of the church, of our salvation. "Christ is the head of the church" (Ephesians 5: 23). The church is called after his name, the "Church of Jesus Christ." He appeared personally in his spiritual body to the Brother of Jared, about 2200 B. C. (See Ether 1: 77, 79-81.) Jesus Christ is called "the God of the land" (Ether 1: 35), "the God of Abraham, and of Isaac, and the God of Jacob" (I Nephi 5: 240), and "the God of Israel" (III Nephi 5: 14). This Christ is in charge of the righteous as well as the wicked. He says in modern revelation: "I am the same which have taken the Zion of Enoch into mine own bosom . . . for I am Christ; . . . the residue of the wicked have I kept in chains of darkness" (Doctrine and Covenants 38: 1). Christ is the one who gave the law of Moses: "the law is fulfilled that was given unto Moses . . . I am he that gave the law" (III Nephi 7: 5, 6). See also Matthew 9: 19, Inspired Version. The day before he came and took a physical body he spoke to Nephi, the grandson of Helaman, "on the morrow come I into the world" (III Nephi 1: 13).

MOST OF THE PEOPLE of the religious world think mainly of the Christ during his short stay in Palestine. We, as others, know from the Bible how he organized his church, selected his twelve apostles, his seventy, and other co-workers.

He baptized and ordained. We know of his crucifixion and of the earthquake at the time of his passing (Matthew 27: 55, 56). We know that he went to preach to the spirits in prison (I Peter 3: 19). We know of the destruction of the wicked in America by the Christ: "The great city of Zarahemla have I burned with fire, and the inhabitants thereof . . . that great city of Moroni have I caused to be sunk"; the city of Moronihah, Gilgal, Oniha, Mocom, Jerusalem, Gadiandi, Jacob, Laman, Gad, "because of their wickedness. . . . Behold I am Jesus Christ, the Son of God" (III Nephi 4: 26-44). When he left America he said: "Now I go . . . to shew myself unto the lost tribes of Israel" (III Nephi 8: 4).

What a busy individual is this Christ! "My Father worketh . . . and I work" (John 5: 17). He is our "advocate with the Father" (Doctrine and Covenants 28: 2b). He is the "one mediator between God and man" (I Timothy 2: 5).

AS MEMBERS OF HIS CHURCH we should be happy knowing that Christ still presides over the organization and comes and speaks to us personally. God and Christ both appeared to Joseph Smith in the grove, both spoke, and one pointing to the other said: "This is my beloved Son, hear him" (Times and Seasons 3: 748). Christ appeared at the dedication of Kirtland Temple. He still speaks to us today by revelation: "Listen to the voice of Jesus Christ, your Lord, your God, and your Redeemer" (Doctrine and Covenants 26: 1). "Thus saith the Lord your God, even Jesus Christ, the great I AM, Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end, . . . I am the same which spake and the world was made" (Doctrine and Covenants 38: 1). He spoke to the high priests at Kirtland: "I am he who was born of the Virgin Mary." He calls the church to build Zion and the new Jerusalem. He will bring back the lost tribes and return the city of Enoch.

At the end of the world he will appear in the heavens and be with the righteous in the millennium. There he will teach many things (see Doctrine and Covenants 98: 5). Much work must be done during this thousand years, for he says: "I will come. . . . Then shall the heathen nations be redeemed, and they that knew no law shall have part in the first resurrection" (Doctrine and Covenants 45: 6, 10). We all should be prepared to help the Christ in this big task of conversion.

We learn, too, a final battle between the forces of Satan and those of righteousness. Christ no doubt will be in that also. Then comes the final judgment. "The Father judgeth no man, but hath committed all judgment unto the Son" (John 5: 22). Finally Christ will be in celestial and terrestrial glory, still ministering to people. Those who merit celestial glory will help him.

What a Christ! What a planned life! He is a contractor, creator, physician, scientist, mediator, advocate, general, the King of Kings, Lord of Lords, the Prince of peace. Yet he calls his people his "friends" (Doctrine and Covenants 90: 8) and says: "If you keep my commandments, you shall . . . be glorified in me, as I am in the Father" (Doctrine and Covenants 90: 3). No wonder the heavens called him "Wonderful, Counselor, the Mighty God, the Father of the heavens and the earth." No wonder God, the Father, said of him at his baptism: "This is my beloved Son in whom I am well pleased!" This Son comes to us, however, and asks our help. He asks us to plan our lives as his life was planned. He wants us to grasp the meaning of life and see the end from the beginning. He pleads: "As my Father hath sent me, even so send I you." We of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ indeed have a wonderful and vital testimony to give to the world of this Christ. He is! He lives! Under the Father he is in charge of the world! He lives and pleads with us to follow his example; he asks us to build with him the kingdom of God.

These Things I Have Seen and Heard

Reed M. Holmes

MY TESTIMONY begins long before I was born. About 1840 a young man on fire with the new Restoration walked down the coast of Maine. Near Rockland he secured lodging in the David Seavey home. He carried two books instead of the traditional one. One was the Bible; the other was the exciting new and controversial Book of Mormon. His enthusiasm was contagious, and the Seavey family was converted. One of the Seavey daughters, Elsie, had married Wentworth Holmes of Norridgewock, Maine. Every fall they made a trip to the seacoast for their winter's supply of codfish and to visit with the family. In the fall of 1841 they heard the story of the restored gospel. Great-grandmother accepted it at once, but not Wentworth. He went home and studied the Bible by the light of the fireplace, attempting to prove that the Restoration was a hoax. One time he was so wrought up at his inability to prove his point that he threw the Bible down exclaiming, "The Bible is changed into a Mormon Bible."

In February, 1842, Wentworth and Elsie Holmes were baptized at Fox Island, Maine, by Elder Herrick. Shortly after that the family migrated to Illinois, and from that day to this—with some ups and downs and a few ins and outs—the family has remained with the church. I can truly say that my faith is the faith of my fathers.

I have learned that one's faith can be tried, especially during the searching and sometimes floundering years of university life, but I am grateful that the pull of family background and the help of many friends continuously drew me into the stream of church life.

It is not sufficient for any of us to believe just because our parents and friends have influenced us in a certain direction. Our basis of faith must be earned and our convictions tested in experience. I am grateful that my convictions are standing the test and that reasons of the mind have been added to the reasons my heart has for continuing in the Restoration.

I HAVE HEARD the voice of prophecy and have marveled at the myriad ways in which the Lord seeks to lead his people. In recent years I have come to realize the great significance of the marvelous thing that happened when the boy Joseph knelt in the grove. When the vision appeared and the voice spoke, the veil was lifted; here was direct experience with God and the risen Christ! I have sat under the instruction of religious leaders who have denied the resurrection of Jesus. I know something about the secular spirit of our age. This testimony of Joseph Smith and the Book of Mormon that Jesus is the Christ is to me the keynote of the Restoration, the assurance of the kingdom of God, and the very spirit of prophecy.

Once I was skeptical of the divine claims of the Book of Mormon, but continuing investigation has brought evidences of its validity. The greatest evidence to me has come in the pages of the Book itself, not in the startling evidences being uncovered among the ruins of pre-Hispanic America.

There are many things that proclaim the authenticity of the restored gospel, such as the prophetic insight of Joseph Smith and the new emphasis upon the doctrines of free agency and accountability. Essential elements of primitive Christianity have most certainly been restored, and the light of the gospel shines in such a way as to reveal truth that had been covered by the darkness men have preferred for centuries. I am frequently surprised at the wisdom that becomes more and more apparent in the provision for ministry to the many needs of man in our system of priesthood. I am often caused to marvel at the provision of checks and balances in church organization and government which rescue us from error when human wisdom does not go far enough and the law is there to protect us from misfortune.

I have seen lives changed in response to the gospel; I have seen persons healed of physical afflictions; but even more important I have witnessed the healing of souls; I have seen the spirit of reconciliation promoted through church fellowship so that it is common practice to call each other brother and sister. Sometimes our church ties seem to be even stronger than those of blood relationship. This feeling of fraternity is to me a prophecy of peace at a time when peace seems but an illusion to many and an impossibility to others.

It is my earnest conviction that the restored gospel is in truth the everlasting gospel brought again to earth, the long awaited vision of ancient prophets, and the only enduring hope for generations to come.

I am grateful for the vision of the kingdom and for the vast enterprise of carrying the gospel to the corners of the earth—far and near. I am grateful for the opportunity to be of service in so great a cause. I wish to record my appreciation for those who have ministered to me through the years, and for parents, wife, and children, whose devotion is such as to encourage my further dedication to the cause of Christ.

A Testimony of Jesus

D. Blair Jensen

MY EARLIEST MEMORIES run back into church activities and associations. Quarterly conferences, reunions, Sunday schools, and Religio activities seem just always to have been.

To have been born and reared in the church is a privilege. With such privileges come responsibilities. It has not been given to many of us to have been born of parents whose lives were spent in the Restoration Movement. I have observed that often our realistic appreciation of the church and its values is attained only after we have reached maturity. Only after we have experienced for ourselves do we have the deeper and ripened testimony of conviction.

In early manhood these fruits of conviction became mine. Personal experiences pyramiding upon the teachings and experiences passed to me by my forebears have united in my life to give to me as my own the testimony that Jesus is the Christ of our Lord and through him the Father seeks to bless mankind. In the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints I see the vehicle through which our Lord in this generation calls men to return to him and to learn of him that their ways may be according to his intent.

I am appreciative of his goodness to me, which has been unbounded and is a measurement of his love as in contrast to my worthiness.

God's Witness to Us

P. E. Farrow

OUR STATEMENT OF BELIEF, usually called the Epitome of Faith, appropriately gives as its first principle: "We believe in God the Eternal Father, and in his Son Jesus Christ, and in the Holy Ghost."

That Jesus is Christ, the only begotten Son of God, is at the heart of all effective religious testimony. A modern theologian has said, "All that preceded Christ predicted him. All that follows after testifies of him."

The Old Testament sages were inspired by the prophetic knowledge of the coming Messiah. Their testimony was marked with resplendence as they foretold his coming. As an example, consider the beautiful and meaningful language of Isaiah 61:

The Spirit of the Lord God is upon me, because the Lord hath anointed me to preach good tidings unto the meek; he hath sent me to bind up the broken-hearted, to proclaim liberty to the captives and the opening of the prison to them that are bound; to proclaim the acceptable year of the Lord, and the day of vengeance of our God; to comfort all that mourn; to appoint unto them that mourn in Zion, to give them beauty for ashes and the oil of joy for mourning, the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness; that they might be called trees of righteousness, the planting of the Lord, that he might be glorified.

Likewise consider Isaiah 55: 5:

But he was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities; the chastisement of our peace was upon him; and with his stripes we are healed.

Adding to this soul-inspiring and uplifting testimony of the prophets preceding him, John the Baptist in his ministry encircled the great promise that he made, "There cometh one mightier than I after me."

The New Testament disciples were enraptured by the appearance in their midst of the Master and were held in continuous awe by the manifestation of his love and power. Inspired by his teachings they joyfully declared him to be the Messiah. The chosen and commissioned apostles left all they possessed to follow him, and for the sake of the testimony which they bore of him finally suffered death in his cause. Thus they were faithful unto death in the promise which he made to them when he said, "Ye shall be witnesses unto me."

THE RESTORATION MOVEMENT has as its supreme objective the responsibility to testify to all nations that Jesus Christ is the Son of God and the Savior of the world. Every means placed in the hands of the church with which to minister and do its work converges on this truth. Every experience of divine revelation enjoyed in bringing the church out of obscurity and darkness portrayed its own relationship to the central testimony that Jesus is Christ and was given to the end that the world might be renewed in the knowledge that God and Christ are one in their purpose to redeem mankind.

The Restoration Movement began with the renewal of the apostolic revelation that Jesus is Christ. Joseph Smith testified that when the two personages appeared to him in his father's grove, one pointed to the other and said; "This is my beloved Son, hear him." The maturing ministry of the chief elders of the Restoration was enriched with the enlightening knowledge that he lives and is on the right hand of God.

And now after the many testimonies which have been given of him, this is the testimony, last of all, which we give of him, that he lives, for we saw him, even on the right hand of God.—Doctrine and Covenants 76: 3.

The record of the Book of Mormon was preserved and brought forth for the express purpose that both Jews and Gentiles might know that Jesus is Christ and that he will manifest his power—the power of God—unto all nations. Thus the revelation of Christ is demonstrated to be a perpetual pervasive power within the church as men are given to know for his own purpose that he lives and that God the Eternal Father likewise lives.

MY TESTIMONY is that the apostolic ministry continues with effect now as men are given to know and the power to witness that Jesus is Christ. Possessed by this knowledge and motivated by it men labor today in his vineyard to bring to pass his will by declaring this Word of light and truth in a darkened and sinful world. "God lives and moves in his mysterious way his wonders to perform."

In all ages he has sought out and inspired men with the knowledge of his truth that they might minister for him and in his name. Experience has caused me to know that it is by his Spirit that he seeks men today. By that same Spirit he has manifested that Jesus lives and that the gospel is the power of God unto salvation; and that the church revealed heretofore and again restored to earth is his instrument charged with the authority and power to declare his Word of truth. Undergirded with this truth, humbly but with full confidence and assurance, I testify of the goodness and grace of God manifested as he inspires and leads me to do his will.

Sin is reversion to a lower type after perception of a higher.—Oliver Lodge.

I Count It a Joy

D. O. Chesworth

ONE ASSIGNMENT, while I was under General Conference appointment during the past eleven years, permitted me to visit the branches of the church in Maine's Penobscot region. There I gained a very limited knowledge of the story of the boats, which have for eighty years enacted an interesting episode in Penobscot Bay history. The "Vinal Haven"—the people's little boat—was built to compete with the mighty "Governor Bodwell." One good look led S. L. Winslow to write of her, "Make a slight pause—and swallow, swallow hard."¹

During the past twenty-five years in various attempts to witness concerning the stupendous assignment of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, some have looked at me with such a glance of amazement, after listening to the Restoration Story, that surely similar words of the gentleman from Maine would express their thoughts, "Make a slight pause—and swallow, swallow hard!"

I'm certain that no one would depreciate the meritorious stewardship which the people of this faith have accepted in their willingness to offer to the world the Church of Jesus Christ Restored. As the band of followers becomes increasingly united and the eldership continues to prepare through study,² and as our ranks consistently are strengthened numerically, surely those not yet affiliated with us will see a cause of value and excellence and will desire to be numbered in the same fellowship.

IT IS A particular privilege to recommend this unique institution to all who are seeking the better way of life. My great esteem, admiration, and gratitude for the church are curbed in this testimonial only because of my limited vocabulary to properly express all that our Lord has so beneficently given to mankind through his church. As a teen-age lad I sought to know whether or not one church had more than another to offer to the world to lift its standards. With this thought burdening my mind, I visited many churches alone and rejoice now, as I reminisce, that I was able to worship in most of them. Diligent research and earnest prayer prepared me for a life in the priesthood of the church to which my grandmother's grandfather had belonged several generations earlier. That this call to the priesthood was of God I can never deny, and despite my various limitations I am propelled by that initial statement from above, "Today you will be called into my Holy Priesthood." One is not necessarily left alone with a singular mountaintop experience, and I testify that on multitudinous occasions He, who is full of mercy and gentleness, has condescended to my low station to lift and to drive me forward with the vibrancy of testimony.

A series of ordinations followed the one on that historic day in 1928 which made it possible for me to tell many people of the love of the Galilean and to implant in the hearts of some his purpose in building on the earth today a society of believers who will be motivated by Zion's ideals in their daily walks of life. It may be of significance to refer to a prophecy delivered to me by Elder John E. Rogerson following my second sermon, which I preached before my eighteenth birthday. This lovable veteran told me, after the sermon, that as he entered the auditorium of worship that morning the voice of prophecy told him that if I would continue to be humble, prayerful, and active I would someday serve in the leading quorums of the church.

IT HAS PLEASED the Lord to continue to direct his people through the latter-day prophet and give revelation and admonishment as he deems urgent for us. I count myself blessed in the joy of sharing the task of keeping his disciples informed of this divine instruction. Opportunity is provided in the expression of preaching, through which "gift"³ I have been abundantly blessed on occasions and have, at rare times, felt his presence in the congregation.

As a missionary, I have thrilled at the opportunity to minister in thousands of homes, majorly in twenty of the forty-eight states, besides Washington, D.C., Ontario, Canada, and other areas of the United States and British Columbia. What a privilege to bear testimony, read the Scriptures, and join in the family prayer of Saints! I have reminded them of the promise of the Lord, through Joseph Smith, Jr.: "No one can assist in this work except he shall be humble and full of love, having faith, hope, and charity, being temperate in all things whatsoever shall be intrusted to his care."⁴ Furthermore, "Though [they] exalt [themselves] as the eagle, and though [they] set [their] nests among the stars, thence will [God] bring them down."⁵

In this great day of evangelism, how shall we come before the Lord? Shall we not bow ourselves before the high God? Shall we come before him with burnt offerings, with calves of a year old? Will the Lord be pleased with thousands of rams, or with ten thousand rivers of oil? Shall we give our first born for our transgression? "He hath showed thee, O man, what is good; and what doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God.”⁶

I have knelt at the altar with priesthood and member and have found what wealth cannot purchase. This peace of conscience was pro-pounded by King Benjamin many years ago.⁷ Cherishing my heritage in the church and being constantly in debt to my God for sharing this assignment with me, I move forward assured that the Lord Omnipotent who reigneth, who was, and is from all eternity to all eternity, will strengthen his servants in healing the sick, raising the dead, causing the lame to walk, the blind to receive their sight, the deaf to hear, and in curing all manner of diseases.⁸ Then “shall come to pass, that the mountain of the house shall be established in the top of the moun-tains . . . and people shall flow unto it. And many nations shall come and say, Come and let us go up . . . and he will teach us of his ways, for the law shall go forth of Zion.”⁹ Until this day and while many shall remain in sin, surely “the stone shall cry out of the wall, and the beam out of the timber shall answer it.”¹⁰

“Make a slight pause—and swal-low, swallow hard!” For we believe that the Lord, mighty and strong, who is the king of glory, shall estab-lish his people in righteousness and redeem them.¹¹ To this task of re-demption the Restored Church pledges itself in earnest and in the spirit of evangelism. I count it a joy to witness for his church.

By These Things

M. L. Draper

IT IS THE WHOLESOMENESS of the restored gospel which appeals to me. Our belief in the doctrinal gospel principles, the marvelous structure of the church, the Book of Mormon testimony that Jesus is the Christ, priesthood authority, the Zionic program, and our experience with the spiritual gifts are significant. But what really counts is the blend of all these distinctive features of the Restoration Movement into the perfect whole which we call the “fullness of the gospel.”

From my earliest childhood the example of my parents led me into the fellowship of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. In my tenth year I was baptized and confirmed a member. But the reason for my participation today lies in a firm conviction of the divine origin of the work as developed in me through rational thought, spiritual experience, and divine revelation. “For I neither received it of man, neither was I taught it, but by the revelation of Jesus Christ.”

Many of the spiritual gifts have come into my experience. Among them are spiritual dreams, prophecy, tongues and interpretation, divine healing, and the sure knowledge of some facts which are understood only through the gift of the Spirit. These gifts have been very helpful in confirming my faith and a source of strength in time of special need.

ONE OF THE IMPORTANT spiritual experiences of my life is that which concerns my calling to the apostolic office. Following a reunion at Columbus, Kansas, in 1932, at-tended by Brethren F. H. Edwards, John Sheehy, and Amos T. Higdon among others, at which a prophetic gift through Brother Higdon was ac-companied by a flood of spiritual power in my being, I gave myself to study and spiritual disciplines at every opportunity. As a fourteen-year-old boy, I was deeply stirred on many occasions by the cleansing and redeeming power of the Holy Spirit. Many nights I fell asleep after my pillow had been wet with tears of joy in the fellowship of the Spirit.

One night I had a vivid dream. I saw a great multitude of people on a hillside. They were listening with varying degrees of interest to the exhortations of a small group of men who stood in the valley between this hill and one near by on which were arranged all the instruments of a great symphony orchestra. I sensed the earnestness, the urgency, the sin-cerity with which these men preached. I observed the joy with which they saw some of the people respond to their invitation to mount the hill of harmony and take up their instruments to play.

Then I found myself with the preachers. My turn had come, and I was preaching. Never with any greater sense of urgency, nor with deeper convictions, nor with greater powers of expression have I preached than I did that night in the dream. And indescribable are the feelings of joy that welled up in me as some people heard, listened, and obeyed the invitation of the Spirit through my preaching.

Then I awoke. The same spirit of urgency, of invitation, of longing for the souls of men rested upon me. And I knew, but could hardly accept the thought, who the preachers were. They were the members of the apostolic quorum of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

OTHER EXPERIENCES of confirmation soon followed. During the following year, Apostle Gleazer prophesied to me in the Southern California Reunion respecting my call to ministerial service. A year later he spoke inspirationally to indicate my future service in "the councils of the church."

In March, 1947, while engaged in the activities of the Far West Stake conference by the invitation of Apostle C. G. Mesley, another experience indicated that the time had come. I believe it was brother I. M. Ross of the High Priests' Quorum who was testifying. The Holy Spirit whispered to me that Brother Ross was moved by inspirational impulses. At about that moment he stopped, and after a brief pause, said, "I have been given to know something which I am not now at liberty to reveal."

I knew the content of his information; I knew that it related to my call. This was confirmed after the service when he sought me out to tell me so, without yet revealing specifically the nature of the inspiration. It was no surprise then, a few days later, when President Israel A. Smith called me into his office and asked, "Maurice, have you ever had any indication that you should serve in the Quorum of Twelve?" Deeply moved by the Spirit at that time, I could only reply, "Yes, Brother Smith, I have."

The intelligence of the gospel plan, the challenge of its world vision for the kingdom of God, the wholesomeness of its ministry, and the manifestations of the Spirit, all unite in assuring testimony that this is the church of Jesus Christ. I testify that this is the work of God, that Jesus is the Christ, and that the kingdom of God shall surely be built on earth as men respond to his will. "By these things we know" about the great and marvelous work which has come forth among the children of men.

One on God's side is a majority.
—Wendell Phillips, speech at Harper's Ferry, Nov. 1, 1859.

Tangible Evidences

R. E. Davey

IT IS PROFITABLE for one to occasionally look back through his experiences in life and associations in the church so as to remind himself anew of the evidences and assurances that God has moved and continues to move in the unfolding work of the church of the Restoration.

As I have passed through the years, I have enjoyed a reasonable share of experiences which clearly indicate that God is still concerned about his people, that the gospel of Christ is true and its promises dependable. Had it not been for the fulfillment of these promises I most certainly would never have been able to move out into the active work of the church as one of its appointees, nor would it have been possible without the continued goodness of our Heavenly Father and the blessings of the gospel for me to have continued to give what limited ministry I have been able to perform.

I have been privileged to see and to participate in many tangible evidences of the power of the gospel. I have seen many raised from their beds of pain and sickness, and often I have been directed by the Spirit of God in my ministerial labors. Although such experiences as these bring strength and assurances, it is not in these that I find my greatest testimony of the divinity of the church.

TO ME one of the greatest testimonies of the divinity of the church and its gospel message is what I have seen it do in the lives of people who have honestly and sincerely surrendered themselves to it and have given it an active place in their lives. I have seen the gospel take hold of people and lift them out of the pit of sin and selfishness, and plant their feet firmly on the highway that leads to the kingdom of God. I have seen it take a man concerned only about his own interests and transform him into a consecrated minister, willing to give himself in service to others. Thus I know that the power of God is at work, and that the gospel does transform lives and save souls.

When one keeps fresh in his mind the evidences found in the prophetic Word of God and its marvelous fulfillment in the coming forth and continuation of the church, when he studies the outstanding provisions found in the church to meet all the diversified needs of mankind—the completeness of its organization to enable it to accomplish its task, the unique provisions made for things not even dreamed of in the days of its birth—he sees the movements of Divinity. Surely God moved to bring forth this church, for no human mind, regardless of its extent or reach, could have established this church or its gospel message.

Thirty-three years in the general ministry has enabled me to observe the church of the Restoration in operation in many areas and with many people. Out of this experience I can bear my testimony that this is indeed the church of the living God, and its gospel message is the gospel of Christ and the power of God unto salvation. It also gives me the assurance that in spite of human weaknesses and failures, this work of God shall move on victoriously until the kingdom has been achieved to shine forth in its redemptive powers to the whole world, until ultimately the nations shall be led into the paths of righteousness and peace.

Daughters of the Kingdom

By Gladys Gould

THE LAST DISPENSATION of the fullness of times had barely been ushered in, the church organized, priesthood called, ordained, and commissioned when in July of 1830 a revelation came to the women of the church. It was addressed to the wife of the prophet.

The message began:

Hearken unto the voice of the Lord your God,
while I speak unto thee,
Emma Smith, my daughter,
for verily I say unto thee,
All those who receive my gospel are sons and daughters in my kingdom.

The message ended:

Verily, verily I say unto thee,
that this is my voice unto all. Amen.

Within this message was direction for Emma Smith alone—counsel meet for an elect lady, in keeping with her talents, her responsibilities, and the needs of her generation. But since it is also His voice unto all the daughters of his kingdom, it speaks to us in our generation. This general counsel we take from Section 24, that each woman of the church may apply it to herself in 1953:

Hearken! daughter in my kingdom,
If thou art faithful and walk in paths of virtue before me
I will preserve thy life,
And thou shalt receive an inheritance in Zion.
Murmur not. . . .
Thy calling shall be for a comfort . . .
with consoling words
in the spirit of meekness.
Thy time shall be given . . . to learning much.
Thou needest not fear . . .
Thou shalt lay aside the things of this world,
and seek for the things of a better.
My soul delighteth in the song of the heart:

Yea, the song of the righteous is a prayer unto me
And it shall be answered with a blessing upon their heads.
Wherefore, lift up thy heart and rejoice.
And cleave unto the covenants which thou hast made.
Continue in the spirit of meekness, and beware of pride. . . .
Keep my commandments continually,
And a crown of righteousness thou shalt receive.
Except thou do this, where I am thou canst not come.
And this is my voice unto all. Amen.

"Daughters in my kingdom" He has called us. While waiting at a bus stop one evening I saw a young father approach with his small daughter of approximately three years—a winsome child. In adventuresome spirit, she paused to explore with curiosity any object that caught her attention—dog, cat, child, rock, or lamp post. Her father, whose face glowed with loving interest in her, respected her independence and did not interfere. But his hand was extended protectingly just above her head, ready to shield from harm and to gently guide her in the right direction. As she found new objects she would lift a pleased face to share her delight with him. Their joyous companionship was very evident. Such father and daughter relationship with our Heavenly Father is dependent upon certain qualities in our nature.

FAITHFULNESS AND VIRTUE are expected. His first desire is to guide his daughters in "paths of virtue," for his kingdom is composed of the pure in heart. With this, belongs the counsel to "cleave unto the covenants thou hast made."

Our first covenant with him, as we entered the gate into his kingdom, was that we would arise from our burial of self in baptism to walk with him in newness of life. We share with him our joys and problems, yielding to his guidance in the path that leads to kingdom growth.

Our second covenant with him is that, as we partake of the emblems of the broken body and spilt blood of his beloved Son, we are willing to take upon us the name of that Son, and always remember him and keep his commandments, that we may always have his Spirit to be with us.

We are now in fellowship with the Father, Son, and Holy Spirit.

The marriage covenant includes another partner to share in the companionship with the Divine. And to this human partner a woman owes as faithful loyalty as to her Heavenly Father. They have so mutually agreed.

We are included in the everlasting covenant the Father made with Enoch that when his "posterity shall embrace the truth and look upward, then shall Zion look downward, and all the heavens shall shake with gladness, and the earth shall tremble with joy."¹ Daughters of the kingdom bring joy to heaven and earth as, in home and classroom, they train posterity to look upward in faith and in righteous endeavor to fulfill this everlasting covenant.

Faithfulness to our covenants will keep our feet in paths of virtue and build our homes into a Zion.

CONSECRATION IS REQUIRED: "Lay aside the things of this world and seek the things of a better." To what things do we give most of our time, our seeking? Do we put to one side, as of secondary value, material things which are earthly and transient? Do we painstakingly seek the spiritual qualities of love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, and temperance, which shall endure as long as his kingdom endures? We are told much of our time shall be given to learning that which develops our individual talents, whatever they may be, so we may use them unselfishly, not to our glory—to his glory.

Women are called. They are called to be "a comfort, with consoling word in the spirit of meekness"—a comfort to the members of the home, to anyone in need of consoling words.

As a comforter, meek in spirit, my mother set a memorable example. Her idea of service in the kingdom was to be faithful to home responsibilities and to minister to the sick and needy, not in prayer alone, but in a practical way. She carried to the homes she visited a basket of home cooking and the spirit of good cheer; she brought away a bundle of washing, mending, or any sewing that needed to be done. She did this, not dutifully, but with pleasure and honest satisfaction. These were her talents. When approached with the suggestion that she, as the oldest mother of her branch, be honored at the church on Mother's Day, she replied, "Sunday is the Lord's day. Let's honor him."

Our attention is directed to opportunities to comfort seemingly so small that we could easily overlook them—"Murmur not"; "Lift up your head and rejoice." The gift of song is to some a talent to cultivate and use in solos, anthems, and oratorios to bless the congregations of Saints. To all of us it is a gift to use in our homes.

A young member of the priesthood told of coming home from a hard day's work to an exhausted wife and three small, fretful daughters who were sick with measles. The mother complained; the children wailed; and as the father clumsily tried to prepare an evening meal, the situation became more confused. But while the children were being tucked in for sleep, their mother began to sing the songs they loved. The father, wrestling with the dishes, was surprised to find that merely this change from complaint to song had banished his sense of burden and restored the tranquillity of his household.

OBEDIENCE is enjoined. "Keep the commandments continuously," as we have covenanted. No spasmodic attempts at maintaining a family altar, or church attendance, or prayer meeting participation, family budgeting, financial sharing, or

Word of Wisdom practice are envisioned here, but a habit-forming continuance in these observances in which a woman's influence may be of utmost worth.

Our Father's love has provided "all the good things which come of the earth . . . to gladden the hearts"² of his children, and his wisdom has directed us in its use, warning us against intemperance and adulterations and poisons in food that we might build clean, strong, bodily temples to house his Spirit. He depends upon us to offer to our families and friends and to the public such wholesome food and drink as we would offer to the Master himself as our guest. Have you ever considered which foods you would enjoy placing before him at your table or at your church supper? As we attempt to assist in building altars to him, may the means we use be such as to invite the cloud of his Presence to rest above that house and bless it.

SOME NATURAL REWARDS to faithful daughters of the kingdom are vouchsafed:

1. Peace. "Thou needest not fear." Lives consecrated to seeking a better world, here and hereafter, are too full for worries and fears, and the consciousness of right-seeking builds trust.

2. A crown of righteousness. This we fashion and make a part of us by our continuous right choices day after day.

3. An inheritance in Zion. Emma Smith dreamed of it. We, too, dream. Abraham was given the "Promised Land" of Palestine in his day, yet owned "not so much as to set his foot on"³ but merely "sojourned in the land of promise as in a strange country"⁴ . . . and confessed himself a stranger and pilgrim on the earth. Yet when he questioned the Lord concerning his inheritance he received the assurance, "Though thou wast dead, yet am I not able to give it thee?"⁵ As we become worthy subjects and concern ourselves also about the inheritances of others, our own security becomes more assured.

We are cautioned with respect to heeding the counsel in Section 24: "Except thou do this, where I am thou canst not come." These words could break our hearts. But unless our lives are now abiding places for his Spirit, how can we be his companions eternally?

If we love one another, God dwelleth in us and his love is perfected in us.⁶

It is as simple as that.

May we, so graciously designated as daughters in his kingdom, realize that this demands an interest in all kingdom affairs, to see that its laws are kept within our lives and in our homes. On this April 6, anniversary of the restoration of kingdom privileges to our day, we treasure anew the counsel then given, with gratitude. Wherein we sense that we have failed to measure up, that we have fallen short in service to those we love, shall we determine to arise daily to fresh newness of life, inspired by our continuous learning, with vision enlarged through faithful practice of virtue, consecration, obedience and love?

"Except thou do this, where I am thou canst not come."

A Career in Choices

By Charles Kornman

I WAS JUST A BOY interested only in what each day had to offer—past mistakes were forgotten; the future with all its appeal was no farther away than the next moment. It was Wyoming—Buttons, Rags, Betsy, and I were inseparable companions—a horse, a dog, a twenty-two rifle, and a thirteen-year-old boy. That summer I had two experiences I shall never forget. The first was in the cool of the evening as I sat in the barn window and looked at the foothills of the Bighorns three miles away with the feeling that Someone was beside me as I saw the beauty of the night. The second was an autograph book that my mother gave me—my birthday was the occasion, I think—with a bit of poetry in it. Somehow that bit of verse captured my fancy, and I've never forgotten it even though I lost the book within a week after it was given to me.

Dear Son:

Your future stretches out before you
Like drifts of pure white snow.

Be careful how you tread it,
For every step will show.

Love,

Your Mother

Look back over your own life for a moment. Isn't it true that you are now what the paths you walked indicate? The things you did, the things you thought, the things you said, the things you let master you, the things you were able to master—are you not today the result of all these? Certainly! You are the result today of the paths you have walked in the past. You are today the result of your reaction to your world of yesterday.

NOW CHOICES are inevitable. Even "he who chooses not to choose has chosen." And judgment follows the choosing. You will become that which you are now choosing to do. Joe Berry put it like this: "What you are is God's gift to you. What you become is your gift to him." Today you are becoming what you will be tomorrow. And in spite of the song, tomorrow does need to be prayerfully considered as we choose today.

Things are still things, and righteousness or evil is connoted by the way we use them. We judge ourselves; our friends and our neighbors judge us; even God judges us by the use we have made and are making of our things. Whisky, tobacco, narcotics are not evil in themselves, just as television, dates, prayers, milkshakes are not good or evil in themselves. They are things. Righteousness is the right use of things by people. Evil is but a disarrangement of the letters of the word "live." Evil and righteousness are never apart from personalities. Evil or righteousness enter the scene when people are presented with the choice of what they are to do with the things that are before them. Almost axiomatic is the statement that eternal judgment is predicated on what we do with what we have. Not how much we possess but what we do with our possessions is determining our place in eternity. These days of choosing will result one day in an eternal choice when "character will be fixed" and the standard will be Jesus Christ and the way that he chose.

SECTION THIRTY-NINE of the Doctrine and Covenants is perhaps illustrative of this. James Covill was an ardent seeker for truth. The quality of the revelation from the Lord reveals something of the ardor and ability of Mr. Covill, but he was and is judged not by the revelation which came to him, but by what he did with that knowledge. Section forty tells of the path he took.

Ends and means are inseparable. By this I mean that a person does not have two choices with respect to both ends and means. A man wants to become a jeweler. He does so by studying, practicing, and doing those things that a jeweler does. He does not pick cotton with the hope that after three months of picking he will be a jeweler. No amount of practice or labor in cotton culture will make a man a jeweler. Just so does a man become an honest man—by being honest. No amount of dishonesty will make an honest man of him. The end determines the means (this is a long, long way from saying that the end justifies the means) and is inseparable from it. "I am the Way," said Jesus. "If a man come up any other way, the same is a thief and a robber." The Master was saying that if celestial glory is our choice of an end, the only means available is celestial living. It is a law of our being: the way we live here determines where we shall live in eternity.

I AM CONVINCED there are many laws and principles that can be applied to the business of making choices, but out of all of them I am going to pick just one as being important. I shall call it "listening."

There was a young boy of another century who was faced with the greatest choice of his young life, and the first bit of advice that came to him from God was "This is my beloved Son, hear him." A lot of us today can bear testimony that young Joseph Smith did listen before he made his choice.

Graceland GAZETTE

■ President E. J. Gleazer, Jr., received word February 4, 1953, that by vote of the committee of doctorate study of the Harvard University Graduate School of Education he has been recommended to the faculty for the degree of Doctor of Education. The degree is effective now, although formal conferral will be made on June 11 at the Harvard University commencement convocation in Cambridge, Massachusetts.

■ Spanish songs, strumming guitars, and Mexican dancing highlighted an evening of Mexican feasting on February 19 at the first of a series of international dinners to be sponsored by the college Food Service Department. Tortillas, tamales, and enchiladas were Mexican dishes on the menu; leche, agua, and mantequilla were also served in the festively decorated dining room.

Listening is important in our choices, too. We need to pray; the Lord has admonished us over and over to pray about our choices, but equally strong has been the emphasis to listen when he speaks. God always answers our prayers. He has many ways of answering them—as many as there are people who pray. So few are willing to listen. Are we not all guilty to some degree of the sin of deafness? "Hearken to my voice," saith the Lord.

How does one listen to an elk bugling on a cool autumn night, or to a stream gurgling on its way down the valley, or to a great symphony, or to words of endearment by a loved one? He listens with his whole being, doesn't he? Not only his ears but his heart and his mind enter enthusiastically into the listening. He who would hear when God speaks must listen for his voice.

He who would make a career in choosing wisely must ask God for help. He who would receive help in choosing must listen.

■ Rabbi Myron M. Meyer lectured to the Graceland student body on the subject, "Prejudice," in the Student Memorial Center on Thursday, February 26. During the sixth period he spoke in the chapel about "The Synagogue Meeting." Rabbi Meyer represented the Jewish Chautauqua Society, and his visit to the Graceland campus was sponsored by the National Federation of Temple Brotherhoods.

■ "Ten Nights in a Barroom," a melodrama of the last century, was presented March 2, 3, and 5 in the Playshop. The cast included Dave Freeman, Dave Lorance, Dave Specht, David L. Johnson, Jim Dixon, Ralph Gunn, Ron Duke, Kathy Hanawalt, Sherry Beil, Olive Reine, and Gwen Olney. Olios were presented between the acts featuring the Texan Quartet, a duo with Joe Parkes and Barry Fuller, and a Dave Johnson-Gwen Olney duet.

■ Speakers for the graduation exercises have been announced by Bruce Logeman, president of the sophomore class. President E. J. Gleazer, Jr., will present the address at the commencement convocation which will be held at 9:30 a.m. on Friday, May 29. The baccalaureate sermon will be delivered by Raymond Zinser on Sunday, May 24.

■ The Dingling Brother's Circus had its grand opening in the Memorial Student Center on February 28. The circus began with its traditional parade. Features of the circus were a magician act, Bert Canterbury and his talking mule, strong man, ventriloquist, acrobatic act, and a flee circus. The side show included fortunetellers, siamese twins, wonders of the world, the last of the race, fat woman, snake charmer, and photograph booth. The ringmaster of the evening was Richard Johnston.

He was assisted by several clowns. Free popcorn and apples were served to all attending.

■ The fifty-third annual convention of the Grand United Order of Freshmen Hobos convened in Kelley Hall on Saturday, February 28. It was an evening of games and entertainment climaxed by the crowning of King Garbage Pete and Queen Dirty Lil. Class members came dressed in their "hobo best." Entertainment included hobo songs and a hobo wedding.

■ The Campus Planning Committee met to examine topographic drawings of the southeast campus area. These were prepared by an engineer for the purpose of recommending to the Board of Trustees a definite site of location for the new athletic field and track. Funds for this project are to come from the 1953 Alumni Association Fund.

■ Regular classes were dismissed Monday, February 23, while Graceland students attended the Dating and Marrying Conference which was held on the campus Sunday and Monday. Mrs. Evelyn Millis Duvall was the guest lecturer during this institute. She is a noted author and sociologist from Chicago, Illinois, having received her Doctor's degree in 1946. Mrs. Duvall has done extensive research in the field of marriage and family relations; this event, as expected, was one of the high lights of the year's college experiences. Some of the topics discussed were "Getting Married Isn't Like It Was in Our Grandparents' Day," "What Kind of Dating for What Kind of Marrying," "As I See Today's Young People," "What Are the Chances of This Charming Couple to Make a Go of Married Life," and "Qualifying for Family Membership."

Children Blessed

LEAVENWORTH, KANSAS.—On January 11, three children were blessed: Linda Mae Stickney by Elder Clarence Tyree, assisted by Elder John W. Gross; Scott Lee Stickney by Elder Gross, assisted by Elder Tyree; and James Paul McIntyre, Jr., by Elder Alan Tyree, assisted by Elder Gross. Mr. and Mrs. R. Scott Stickney of Joseph, Oregon, are the parents of the Stickney children. Sgt. and Mrs. James McIntyre are the parents of James Paul.

Herbert Lynn, the Kaw Valley district president, was in our city the last week in February and the first week in March.

Visiting speakers have included Otis Athey, L. A. Fowler, Dick Howard, Lou Richards, Monty Parker, and Clifford Carlson. A party for the adult class was held on February 8 and nonmember friends were invited.—Reported by MILDRED DORSEY

Branch Organized

HARBOR BEACH, MICHIGAN.—The mission was organized into a branch on February 22, under the direction of District President John Blackstock of Prudenville, Michigan. The following will serve as officers for the branch: pastor, Elder John Rogers; associate pastor, Elder Harold Richards; secretary, Mary Lou Richards; treasurer, Emerson Wood; auditors, William Volz, Kenneth Davis, Mrs. William Ledsworth; church school director, Harry Volz; director of women and church hostess, Mrs. Kenneth Davis; director of youth and publicity agent, Mrs. John Rogers; music director, Mrs. Harold Richards; building committee, William Volz, Kenneth Davis, Emerson Wood, and Herbert Swoffer; book steward, Sandra Wood; flower committee, Mrs. Bob Jeffers, Mrs. Mae Pease, Mrs. Emerson Wood, and Mrs. Herb Volz; solicitor, Kenneth Davis; historian, Mrs. E. G. Richardson.

The business meeting was followed by a dedication service. Brother Blackstock delivered the morning sermon.

The women of the branch and the Zion's League continue to sponsor projects to raise money for the building fund.

The mission was organized in January, 1951, by Elder J. V. Pement.—Reported by MRS. JOHN ROGERS

Servicemen Help Group

LAWTON, OKLAHOMA.—Brother John Decker of the Port Huron, Michigan, Branch helped in the branch while he was stationed at Fort Sill. His brother, Harold Decker and wife Jean, visited with the Saints when they were in Dawson. Brother Harold Decker was in charge of the Communion service in February, assisted by Brother John Decker. Harold and his wife are members of the Croswell, Michigan, Branch.

Another recent visitor was Sister Joe Cook of Omaha, Nebraska, wife of Pvt. Joe Cook who is stationed at Fort Sill.

Elder Stewart Wight of Oklahoma City was in charge of the Communion service March 1, assisted by Bill Bruch of Cameron, Missouri, and Dean Miller of Temple, Oklahoma. About twenty Saints attended the service which was followed by a group dinner held at the home of Sister Marie Detty and her daughter, Virginia Pate. The dinner arrangements were planned by the women's group under the leadership of Sister Hattie Johnson. The Lawton group consists of only two permanent families. The other members of the congregation are the men in the Army, stationed at Fort Sill. The number varies; sometimes there are just two or three, and at other times there are twenty to thirty members. Many of these military men and their families have assisted in the work of the group. Among these have been Lt. Francis Pressler, Elder Seth Osborn, Lt. F. L. Lysinger, Gene Atkins, Captain Marvin Lindmark, Harold Shultz, Allen Stiles, and others. Many of this group are serving in Korea at this time. Recent members who have joined the group are Bill Bruch and Gary Myers. Brother Myers is from Independence.—Reported by MARIE E. DETTY

HANNIBAL, MISSOURI.—John Puckett of Jefferson City, Missouri, Seventy to the Missouri Missionary Area, met February 18 at a special meeting at the church, 3404 Market Street, Hannibal. The service was for the ordination of Cecil Peters, son of the pastor, Elder Wayne Peters. He was ordained by his father, assisted by Brother Puckett.

Mrs. Fern Wright of Oakwood, Missouri, and Mrs. Orlene Stine of Barry, Illinois, were baptized at the church on February 8, at Bevier, Missouri. The candidates were baptized by Brother Wayne Peters. Twenty-one Saints from the Hannibal mission were present. The confirmation service was held February 15 at the Hannibal church, Elders Wayne Peters and Floyd Bowman officiating.

Elder John Wight of Columbia, Missouri, held a series September 14-21.—Reported by MRS. EDGAR CASH

League Has Frost Frolic

NAUVOO, ILLINOIS, DISTRICT.—The Burlington, Iowa, Zion's League was host to the Nauvoo District young people at their annual frost frolic held on February 7 and 8.

The activities began with skating at the local roller rink in Burlington. Following this, the young people assembled in the church basement for entertainment planned by the Burlington League.

A queen and king for the frolic were chosen by popular vote. Merits to be considered for this honor were the all-round qualifications of a good Leaguer. Paula Savage from Burlington and Darwin Sweezer from Fort Madison were elected. They were presented with a copy of the Church Member's Manual by the district League leader, Mrs. Betty Tripp.

Following this presentation a mixer was held. Ralph Welday, Graceland College student home for the week end, won first prize in this game. Several other games were played and refreshments were served.

The young people and their supervisors spent the night in homes of the Burlington Saints.

At eight o'clock Sunday morning, they met in the church auditorium for a fellowship service conducted by Brother Leonard Duke of Burlington.

Sister D. J. Williams, Burlington, taught the young people's class for church school, and preaching was by the pastor, Brother D. J. Williams.

Following the morning services dinner was served to the Zion's Leaguers in the lower auditorium.

The Burlington Zion's League is under the direction of Brother and Sister Arnold Weinman.

The next district activity for the Leaguers is scheduled for April, at which time Elder Carl Mesle, General Church director of young people, will meet with us for the annual Restoration Festival, to be held at Fort Madison, Iowa.—Reported by BETTY TRIPP

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI

The annual Graceland banquet was held at Fort Madison, February 27. Welcome was said in the following languages: Danish, Mrs. James C. Page; Spanish, Mrs. Joseph Jones; German, Raymond Repplinger; Welsh and Hawaiian, Mr. and Mrs. D. J. Williams; French, Charles Gunn; and English, Arnold Ourth. The valentine theme was carried out in the decorations and group singing led by Mrs. Fred Banta. There was a box which contained valentines with no names on them. The verses, written by Betty Tripp, disclosed the love story of each of the alumni, and the group identified to whom they belonged. Alumni from Nauvoo were Elbert Lambert, Mildred Sanford Smith, Betty Sanford Tripp, Janet Hall Banta, and Arnold Ourth; from Colusa, Joseph Jones; from Fort Madison, Thelma Gunn Francis, Genevieve Hougas Francis, Fern Tripp Larson, and Doris Carmack Breeze.

The toastmaster, Harold Smith, read part of a letter from Blair Bryant, who was a guide at Nauvoo last summer, describing the difference in a large university and Graceland. This served as an introduction to the guest speaker, Clifford Cole, dean of men at Graceland. Students attending Graceland this year from the Nauvoo District are Ralph Gunn, Larry McKiernan, Alice Johnson, Fort Madison; Ruth Hagmeier, Keokuk; Ralph Welday, Marilyn Duke, Burlington; Ray Brown, New London; and Lloyd Tripp, Lee and Lynn Ourth, Nauvoo.

In January, the Zion's League, under the leadership of Mrs. Floyd Hartman, put on their annual inventory service. The young people dramatized three scenes from the Bible: "Daniel and His Friends," portraying the stewardship of health; "The Good Samaritan," the stewardship of helpfulness and love; and "Christ in the Temple," the stewardship of the Father's business. Branch Solicitor Ralph Tripp then accepted the inventories of the members. He informed the group that within the last ten years the number of inventories sent in by the branch has increased from six to forty-seven.

Brother Harold Smith, "The Nauvoo Miller," attended the Professional and Business Men's Institute in Independence and made tape recordings of sermons and lectures for the benefit of the branch. The talks by Bishops G. L. DeLapp and Walter Johnson and Elder Sanford Fisher of Boston have been heard.—Reported by FLORENCE OURTH

Auditorium Fund Raised

DETROIT INTERNATIONAL STAKE.—The women of the stake announce the success of their Auditorium fund dinner, held February 24, in Detroit, which netted $2,000.

The food for the well-planned dinner was donated, and each ticket sold was a five-dollar donation.

A short program followed the dinner with Bishop Livingston as the guest speaker. Bishop Livingston showed slides of the Auditorium and slides of various parts of Europe.—Reported by MINNIE TRUDELL

Apostle in Branch

CINCINNATI, OHIO.—On November 2, Bonnie Perry was baptized by the pastor, Elder Everett L. Smith. The service was held at the Middletown, Ohio, Branch. The confirmation service was held on November 16. Karen, the daughter of Brother and Sister Perry, was blessed by Elder Smith on the same day.

The church school Christmas party was held December 21. Gwen Manning and Loraine Smith were home from Graceland. The young people had a New Year's Eve party at the home of Dick and June Reid.

On January 18, Jack Thomas and Everett Smith, Jr., were ordained to the office of deacon. The charge was given to the two men by Elder Joe Williams, Jr. Everett Smith, Jr., was ordained by High Priest Floyd Rockwell and Elder Everett L. Smith. Jack Thomas was ordained by Elders Everett L. Smith and Joe Williams, Jr. After the ordinations, Brother Rockwell, who is the district president, spoke to the congregation.

Mrs. Thelma Cline, who is one of the charter members of the branch, visited with the Saints during the latter part of January.

Apostle D. T. Williams arrived in the city on January 30 for a three-day visit. He adressed the group Friday and Saturday evenings in the room of the YMCA Building. He preached twice on February 1.

During the first week in February, Evangelist E. Y. Hunker held a series in Middletown, Ohio. He also gave patriarchal blessings while with the Saints.

District Missionary Calvin French and his wife LaVon visited in the branch on Sunday evening, March 8, at which time Brother French preached the evening service.—Reported by JUNE REID

Special Day Observed

SACRAMENTO, CALIFORNIA.—A special business meeting was held January 14 to obtain branch approval of the recommendation for ordination of Nielse George Olsen. The recommendation was also approved at the district conference held at Berkeley, February 21.

Religious Education Day was observed on January 18, with district director, Mrs. Mary Stark of Modesto, in charge. At the church school hour she addressed the combined adult and young people's classes. Pastor Myron R. Schall spoke at eleven o'clock. The choir presented special music for the occasion. A potluck dinner was served at noon. E. J. Gleazer, Jr., President of Graceland College, was the evening speaker. An informal reception in the lower auditorium followed the service. Alumni and prospective Graceland students were especially invited to meet and talk with Elder Gleazer. Some of the branch young people attended a Graceland meeting held at Berkeley the previous evening.

The Zion's League held a winter carnival at the church on January 23. They also took a trip to the mountains for a snow party on February 28. The annual valentine's banquet was held on February 14, directed by the young people. A musical program titled "My Song of Love" was presented, using numbers from operettas and stage shows, and directed by Celia Schall and Phillipa Gann.

The annual service for the filing of inventories was held following the Communion service on February 1. This service was presided over by Bishop E. C. Burdick. The Communion service was directed by the pastor.

On February 15 Pastor Myron R. Schall preached. A men's quartet sang.

A special service was held on the evening of February 24, when President F. H. Edwards was the speaker. A reception in the lower auditorium followed the service.

At the Communion service on March 1, Nielse George Olsen was ordained to the office of priest by Bishop E. C. Burdick assisted by Elder Myron R. Schall.

A daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. Richard Ferris on January 18, and a daughter to Mr. and Mrs. Ellsworth Vincent on February 9.—Reported by LENA SWANEY

New Church Near Completion

OCEAN SPRINGS, MISSISSIPPI.—Elder Dave Givens was the speaker at the Communion service February 1, and the service February 8. A. Wayne Hough of the Mobile District presidency was the morning speaker.

On February 15, the morning speaker was Wayne Livesay, and the evening speaker was Joe Arguelles. The morning speaker on February 22 was Elder Herbert Patrick and the speaker for the evening service was George Goff.

The priesthood conducts weekly visits and also one cottage meeting a week. Work on the completion of the church building is progressing.

DEATHS

THAYER.—Charles Hobart, son of George and Ella Thayer, was born February 3, 1895, in Michigan, and died February 2, 1953, at his home in Warsaw, Missouri. His first wife, Pearl Arthur Thayer, died in 1946, and on August 10, 1952, he was married to Mrs. Mable Coffey, who survives him. He was a veteran of World War I and since 1905 had been a member of the Reorganized Church.

Besides his wife, Mable, he leaves two daughters: Mrs. Charlene Nawhiney of Springfield, Missouri, and Mrs. Betty Hettrick of Tucson, Arizona; a son, Charles H. Thayer, Jr., of the Navy; a brother, Harold Thayer of Marshall, Missouri; a sister, Mrs. Harry McDonough of Boonville, Missouri; and one grandchild. Funeral services were conducted at the Reorganized Church in Marshall, Stake President H. J. Simons and Pastor R. P. Richardson officiating. Burial was in Ridge Park Cemetery in Marshall.

JOHNSON.—John, son of John and Anna Johnson, was born at Coleville, Utah, on November 21, 1865, and died February 15, 1953, in Independence, Missouri. The family lived in Utah until John was six, then moved to Forest City, Missouri, where he was baptized into the Reorganized Church on July 5, 1874. Later they moved to Idaho and then to Montana, where on December 7, 1891, he was married to Hettie Ann Sears; five children were born to them. One son died in infancy; a daughter, in 1940, and Mrs. Sears in 1946. Since 1924 Brother Johnson had resided in Independence.

Surviving are two daughters: Mrs. Jessie Kendall of Missoula, Montana, and Mrs. Mabel Davey of Independence; a son, J. Delbert Johnson of Independence; five grandchildren; and ten great-grandchildren. Funeral services were held at the Roland Speaks Chapel in Independence, Elders Glaude A. Smith and Gomer Wells officiating. Interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery.

NEWTON.—Walter, a native of England, died January 11, 1953, at the University of Kansas Medical Center, Kansas City, Kansas, at the age of seventy-five. Before his retirement in 1941 he was a dairyman. He had been a member of the Reorganized Church since December 24, 1888, and attended Quindaro Branch.

He is survived by his wife, Elizabeth; seven sons: Harold W. Lawrence L., George A., and Eugene W., all of the home; James C. of Compton, California; Edward G. of Denver, Colorado; and Orville P. of DeSoto, Kansas; three sisters: Mrs. Alice Harrington of Independence, Missouri; Mrs. Anna Leyendecker of Houston, Texas; and Mrs. Harriet Conklin of Holt, Minnesota; two brothers: William of Kansas City, Kansas, and Steven of Denver; six grandchildren; and one great-grandchild. Funeral services were held at the Echternacht Chapel, High Priest John Tucker officiating. Burial was in Mound Grove Cemetery, Independence.

LEWIS.—Mary, daughter of Levi and Sarah Jackson Wilson, was born February 1, 1859, and died November 23, 1952, at the Decatur County Hospital. With the family she moved as a girl to western Iowa, living first at Gallands Grove and later at Moorhead. On January 9, 1873, she was married to Dorman Lewis; seven children were born to them. Her husband died on May 4, 1919; three children, Ada, Arthur, and Odessa, also preceded her in death. She became a member of the Reorganized Church in her youth and spent her declining years in Lamoni, Iowa.

Surviving are four children: Bessie Jensen, Florence Gamet, Earl and Vere Lewis; two sisters: Mrs. Emmet Lewis and Mrs. Fred Pellisser; eighteen grandchildren; thirty-four great-grandchildren; and two great-great-grandchildren. Funeral services were held at Marsh Chapel in Lamoni, Pastor Robert S. Farnum and Apostle D. Blair Jensen, a grandson, officiating. Burial was in the Preparation Cemetery.

QUICK.—Elizabeth, daughter of Cager and Catherine Martin Lucas, was born January 12, 1874, in southern Indiana, and died February 17, 1953, at the Main Street Mercy Hospital, Mapleton, Kansas. On November 29, 1892, she was married to Lee Quick, who survives her. She had been a member of the Reorganized Church for many years.

Besides her husband she leaves a son, Fred H. Quick of Mapleton; four daughters: Mrs. Frank McCollam and Mrs. Arthur Dennis of Mapleton; Mrs. Lloyd Weded of Los Angeles, California; and Mrs. Melvin Shipley of Miami, Oklahoma; four brothers: Newton Lucas of Coeur d'Alene, Idaho; Charley Lucas of La Harpe; Tom Lucas of Walnut; and Elmer Lucas of Sumner, Iowa; two sisters: Mrs. Frank Stanford of La Harpe; and Mrs. Iva Robinson of Tulsa; sixteen grandchildren; and twenty-three great-grandchildren. Funeral services were held at the Reorganized Church in Mapleton. Burial was in the Mapleton cemetery.

LIGHTFOOT.—Mary A., daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Adolph Oppermann, was born May 3, 1871, at Auburn, Nebraska, and died March 4, 1953, at her home in Kansas City, Missouri. On May 1, 1897, she was married to Alma L. Lightfoot, a member of the Reorganized Church. In that same year she was baptized by her husband, and in 1904 they moved to Independence where they attended Stone Church. Five years later they made their home in Kansas City and became members of the Central congregation.

She is survived by her husband; two daughters: Mrs. Arthur J. Stout of Northfield, Illinois, and Miss Edna Lightfoot of the home; a son, Lyle E. of St. Clair Shores, Michigan; and one sister, Mrs. Gladys Average of Kansas City. Funeral services were conducted by Patriarch A. E. Stoff and Elder E. W. Lloyd at the Carson Chapel in Independence. Interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery.

PEEPLER.—Alice McClain, was born May 1, 1873, in Kentucky and died February 17, 1953, at her home in Fulton, Kentucky. She was married on February 17, 1895, to T. Lee Peeples, who survives her. She was a member of the Reorganized Church.

Besides her husband she leaves a daughter, Mrs. Zela Hart of Fulton; and three sons: Otis, Ollie, and Osmer, all of St. Louis, Missouri. Another son, Paul, died in infancy. Services were held at the Whitnel Funeral Home in Fulton, Elder J. H. Yager officiating. Interment was in Booz Chapel Cemetery at Fulton.

HAYES.—Lawrence W., was born February 3, 1876, at Prairie View, Michigan, and died March 12, 1953, at his home in Kansas City, Kansas. He was married in 1899; his wife, Dora, survives him. On July 22, 1906, he was baptized into the Reorganized Church; he was ordained a priest on March 20, 1910, and elder on August 13, 1911, and a high priest on July 25, 1916. He was a graduate of Manhattan State College and was a resident of Topeka, Kansas, for a while; during his residence there he served as pastor of the Topeka congregation. In 1912 he moved to Kansas City, became a charter member of the Grandview congregation, and served as pastor of that group. For thirty-three years he was a member of the Kansas City Stake high council, retiring in 1951 because of ill health. In the business world he was known as a man of integrity and dependability; for over thirty years he was employed by the Kansas City Terminal Railways Company.

Besides his wife he leaves a son, Wilbur S. Hayes, and a daughter, Mrs. Gus Schmidt, both of Kansas City, Kansas; two sisters: Mrs. Tom D. Costello of Chicago, Illinois, and Mrs. Ethel Rigby of Redlands, California; four grandchildren; and one great-grandchild. STORM WARNINGS

Here in Midwestern America the first weeks of the new year were mild and pleasant, like a long leisurely approach to spring. Then one sunny afternoon the radio warned us that there was snow in the mountains and gales were blowing it this way. Hardly a moment too soon we lowered our ear flaps to blizzard position and turned up our coat collars. We bought week-end groceries early and hibernated at home. Then the storm came, and we were snug (and smug) in the security of being prepared.

In the climate of the soul, too, there are times of sunny weather, and these days of peace and happiness are broken by the winds of fear and tempests of danger. If we can keep our ears tuned for the storm warnings of the Spirit, we can be prepared for the times of trouble when they come. L. J. L.

THE HYMNS I LOVE

I love to sing the old, old songs
I sang when in my youth,
The grand old hymns of faith and praise
That ring with tones of truth.

The sweetness of their melodies,
The message they impart,
Has stayed with me throughout the years,
Implanted in my heart.

My mother sang them at her work,
And this I often do;
I hope the youth within my home
Will learn and love them, too.

LACK NOT CHARITY

Who chooses not to speak a kindly word,
Or offer just a little bit of praise,
Or share the load upon a brother's back
The law of God completely disobeys.

And though he clothes himself in royal robes
Of "righteousness" and assumed piety,
His soul, one day, in nakedness will cry
To God above to show him charity.

So let our charity be strong and true,
The Master Workman we cannot deceive,
For as we mete to others so will we
In that great Judgment Day likewise receive.

FROM HEADQUARTERS

AN ANNIVERSARY OF SERVICE

Elder Paul M. Hanson will complete forty years as a member of the Council of Twelve on April 19, 1953. Of the sixty apostles who have served in the Twelve in the last one hundred years, only Elders E. C. Briggs, W. H. Kelley, and John W. Rushton have rivaled Brother Hanson in length of service. For nearly twenty years Apostle Hanson has been president of his quorum.

Born at Crescent, Iowa, January 8, 1878, and baptized when he was fifteen, Brother Hanson ministered with distinction as priest, elder, and Seventy before being called to the Twelve. Since 1913 he has had charge in every land where the work of the church is organized: Australia, Denmark, French Oceania, Great Britain, Hawaii, Holland, New Zealand, Norway, Palestine, and Sweden, as well as in most of the stakes and districts of the domestic field. And, as is well known, his extensive travels in Central and South America have reinforced his sound scholarship and made him our foremost apologist in the Book of Mormon field.

The church is and will be very greatly indebted to Apostle Hanson for his own stalwart character, his convincing testimony, and his kind and wise and dignified leadership. On behalf of the church we extend to him and to his gracious companion our heartfelt thanks and assurance of our deep affection.

Other presidents of the Twelve in the Reorganization have been Jason W. Briggs (1853-86), A. H. Smith (1890-97), W. H. Kelley (1897-1913), G. T. Griffiths (1913-1922) and J. A. Gillen (1922-1934).

PRESIDENT HOME FROM SOUTH

President Israel A. Smith has returned from a trip in the South where he traveled with Apostle Percy E. Farrow. He visited the following branches and missions: Jacksonville, Orlando, Fort Lauderdale, Miami, Key West, Tampa, and Pensacola, Florida; Mobile, Alabama; and Escatawpa, Mississippi.

VISIT COLUMBIA BRANCH

President and Mrs. F. Henry Edwards were in Columbia, Missouri, March 29. Brother Edwards reported an excellent meeting with the Saints and college students in the branch.

GIVES DEDICATORY ADDRESS

President W. Wallace Smith was in Houston, Texas, March 29, where he gave the address at the dedication service of the new educational plant of the church. Elder Roy Vandel is the pastor in Houston. Brother Smith stopped in Dallas on his return home and spoke there on Monday night.

BISHOP SPEAKS IN LAMONI

Bishop G. L. DeLapp spoke to the Lamoni Stake Men's Club March 31, in Lamoni, Iowa. The topic of his speech was "The Real Worth of Every Individual."

MEETS WITH CHAPLAINS

Apostle D. T. Williams has returned to the office following a trip where he met with the heads of the Army Chaplain Service in a series of conferences in the Pentagon. He also attended conferences in the following districts: Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; Boston, Massachusetts; Wellburg, West Virginia; Oak Harbor, Ohio; and Ironton, Ohio. He also preached for the Washington, D. C., congregation on a Sunday in February, and spent one week end in New York City, and Norwalk, Connecticut.

HIELD IN TEXAS

Apostle Charles R. Hield has returned from a trip to the Southwest. He attended a district conference in San Antonio, March 20, 21, and 22. On March 28 and 29, he attended a conference for the Arizona, New Mexico, and Southwest Texas area at Tucson.

MISSION ORGANIZED

The Jacksonville, Florida, Group was organized into a mission by Apostle Percy E. Farrow on March 5. The mission is in the unorganized Florida area. The pastor is Elbert Powell, 618 Basswood Street, Jacksonville, Florida, and the place of meeting is Union Hall, 118 Twenty-first Street. The mission has about forty members.

AT DISTRICT CONFERENCE

Apostle D. Blair Jensen attended a district conference for the Kaw Valley District at Lawrence, Kansas, March 28 and 29. Seventy Herbert Lynn, district president, was associated with Brother Jensen at the conference.

PREACHES AT AURORA, ILLINOIS

District services were held at Fargo, North Dakota, March 28 and 29. Apostle D. O. Chesworth was there with Elder Delbert Smith. Seventy Cecil Ettinger concluded a preaching series there on Saturday night. Brother Ches-
