While Bro. W. N. Robinson was driving with his family to the parental home Sunday evening, a rut in the street caused the surrey in which they were riding, to lurch heavily, throwing their little daughter, Lucille, out in such a way that the wheels on one side, passed over her breast. Fortunately, the accident occurred near Bro. J. A. Robinson's, where the little one was quickly carried; she was undressed and to the astonishment of every one who witnessed the distressing occurrence, not a vestige of an injury could be found. It was marvelous that her life was not crushed out, as the surrey is quite heavy, and with its occupants its weight was considerably increased. It was indeed a blessing that she was so miraculously preserved. Lexington street has been in a very miserable condition ever since the sewer was put in, but as the intention is to pave it this summer, no work has been put upon it of any moment. The little one seems all right at last accounts.

Next Monday evening the regular monthly business meeting of the branch will be held. One of the important matters to be decided is the election of a branch presiding elder to fill the vacancy occasioned by the removal of Bro. G. E. Harrington, who served so long, so faithfully and well. This is a matter in which every member is interested, and all who are able to be present should be there to express their choice. It is a matter of so deep an import, that it should be made the subject of earnest prayer for divine guidance, that the choice may fall upon the individual whom it is the Lord's will to act as president. No one should support an individual simply because he may be a favorite, but the chief thought should be: Will he be the best man for the work—the branch? and when choice is made, should it not happen to be your candidate, as you love God, and your brethren, and desire His work to prosper, give the one chosen, your most earnest, prayerful and heartfelt support, for the work's sake; then will peace flow as "a cherishing fountain," souls be saved, and God glorified.

LAMONI, IOWA.

Pleasant weather, fruit trees blooming. Farmers and gardeners busy.

Sr. Sawley arrived at the Home from Valley Junction, Wisconsin.

The board of College trustees is offered as follows: Wm. Anderson, president; Dan Anderson, treasurer; and Mr. I. W. Allender, secretary.

Bro. G. H. Derry has been re-elected mayor of the city for a term of two years.

Sr. Chas. Shippy, from Fairbanks, Ia., who, with her husband, had been attending the General Conference here, was taken with pneumonia week before last, and died on the 23d, at Elder John Shippy's; her remains were taken to Fairbanks for burial.

Bro. D. T. Hockett, age 63, died at Davis City, Iowa, 21st; funeral sermon by Elder Fred B. Blair.

Bertha, a daughter of Bro. and Sr. B. M. Anderson, and a daughter of Sr. Heathman, were baptized on the 24th inst., by Apostle R. C. Evans; they were confirmed at the Wednesday night prayer meeting, the 25th, by Elders L. Gaultier and T. J. Bell.

The principles of the gospel were expounded yesterday, Sunday 29th, morning and night at the brick church and Saints' Home by Apostles J. W. Wight, J. R. Lambert and H. C. Smith, respectively, the latter at the Home was assisted by Bro. E. Sparks. The afternoon social service, at the church, was in charge of Elders J. A. Gunsolley and R. M. Elvin, and Priest David Keown.

Branch headquarters, 716 W. Van Buren St. Sunday meetings 2:45 and 7:45 p. m.; Lang Mission, 3411 Cottage Grove Ave., 10:45 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.; West Pullman branch, 12024 Union Ave., 10:30 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.; Parkside Mission, 7124 Stony Island Ave., 3:00 and 7:30 p. m.; 503 W. 37th St. (colored mission), 10:30 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.

We are on the move this week, in order to be convenient to our headquarters, 716 Van Buren street. Our residence number will be 395 Ogden avenue, on the west side.

Sr. F. M. Pitt, familiarly known as "Sadie," had a severe attack of sickness, but through tender care and administration, is convalescing. They will move soon to the west side.

Bro. J. L. Benson, who has been in attendance at a dental college here, departs tomorrow for his home in Iowa. We regret very much to lose Bro. Joseph from our nice circle of young Saints, but, under promise of returning in September, we consent for him to go. May peace and strength go with him.

Since our return from Conference we have enjoyed the hospitable roof-tree of Bro. and Sr. W. H. Deam. Our home without our son was uninviting, and almost unendurable until we could change locations and scenery. The hearty welcome and many words of comfort, and deeds of tangible benefit help to bridge over the dark abyss of bereavement. We thank and praise the Lord for such associations.

Now for a good, large, spiritual, harmonious union meeting for next Sunday, at the Lang mission, 3411 Cottage Grove avenue, to commence the new Conference year with. Let all come praying for a spiritual feast.

Our meetings yesterday were marked with a spirit of earnestness that was encouraging. The new font at the Lang mission, with the scenery done by Bro. C. A. Sherman, adds much to the mission, and we hope to see it used frequently. Already eight have passed through the waters of regeneration.

Dewey day, the general Methodist conference, with the bitter attack of Dr. Dowie against the Methodist church, are creating a little extra sensation in our already very sensational city.

DENVER, COLORADO.

Church, corner of 22d and Arapahoe Sts. Services Sunday:—Sunday School at 9:45 a. m.; preaching at 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.; sacrament service the first Sunday in each month at 6 p. m. Prayer meeting Wednesday evening, Zion's Religio-Literary Society Friday evening.

April has witnessed more moisture this year than any previous one on record; the Platte river has almost reached the danger line; telephone, telegraph and electric lines have suffered terribly from the heavy snow; railroads have been blocked for several days at a time and the tracks are very soft, and it is still raining and snowing alternately. It stormed all day Easter Sunday, so there were no services at the church, also on last Sunday, the 29th, the same conditions prevailed.

Bro. J. W. Gilbert, having taken examination for the civil service, was notified, while at the General Conference, to report for duty, and he is now working extra in the Denver post-office.

Bro. Frank Schmutz has only partially recovered his voice and can talk but very little.

Owing to bad weather and other causes there has not been any meeting of the Literary Society for several weeks.

Elder C. R. Duncan returned from Conference Wednesday.

Our meetings at Lakewood are quite well attended and considerable interest manifest.

ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI.

Bro. M. H. Bond, A. C. Barmore and F. M. Slover of the traveling ministry have paid us a visit recently going from Conference. All seem to be in excellent spirits.

Sr. J. C. Hitchcock has not yet returned from Conference; visiting in Lamoni and vicinity.

Seems to like the "regions round about."

The Utah elders seem to be somewhat discouraged with the spiritual status of St. Louis, and are, I judge, from what one of them told me a few days ago, contemplating turning us over as a city to the buffetings of Satan. Some few of them may be left to watch the faithful.

Sr. S. R. Burgess and her daughters, Florence and Sybil, are among the late arrivals from Lamoni.

Bro. Bert Fry of near Woodbine, Iowa, is sojourning with us. A valuable addition to our musical force, also to our young men on the threshold of gospel activity.

Bro. M. H. Bond was speaker at St. Louis yesterday morning and evening. After morning services Bro. Barmore in a fifteen minute talk made some splendid points. Bro. Barmore speaking at Cheltenham to good audience in evening. Other appointments for the day, Bro. Christensen and Ivor Davis, Oak Hill; Bro. Barmore, Alma; Bro. Hitchcock and Fred Johnson, Belleville.

Bro. Bond's sermon yesterday morning was fruitful of some new and exceptionally strong points against the polygamy question. Some of his expressions regarding the God intended relation that should exist between man and wife bordered onto the sublime.

Church building still continues to trouble our minds and harrow up our soul both day and night, and it is fervently hoped we will decide to do something or do nothing soon.

We are anxiously looking forward to the time of the arrival of our new missionary. Can give him this assurance now that he will find the Saints in this district a kind, warm hearted people, and while some of us are not yet angels, we try to be nice to our missionary.

St. Louis district reunion early in August. To be even a greater success than last year, at least so indications are at present.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA.

Services at Golden West Hall, 329 Post street, every Sunday. Sunday School 10 a. m., preaching 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.; prayer meeting first Sunday of each month at 12:15 noon. Elder C. A. Parkin presiding elder, residence 3010 16th street.

Our Sunday School held its regular session at 9:30 a. m.; there was quite a good attendance, and the lessons well considered. We had preaching at 11 a. m. by Chas. A. Parkin. He also went to Oakland and addressed the Saints there at 2 p. m. The writer spoke at Oakland at 8 p. m. We are keeping that pulpit supplied as well as our own during the absence of our missionaries.

Sr. J. B. Price passed from earth life last week. She was buried in the Odd Fellows cemetery Wednesday last. The services were conducted by Chas. A. Parkin. She was laid to rest in a plot owned by her son-in-law, Bro. Chas. Kaighin. She was an old time Saint, well known and much respected.

There was better attendance than usual at the Wednesday evening prayer meeting, and a very pleasant time was had, the time being spent in prayer and considering the things of the kingdom.

The Sisters' Prayer Union met Thursday afternoon, all present enjoying the meeting.

The Religio held forth Friday evening, and a very interesting hour was spent in Book of Mormon study. In the exercises all who were on the program responded, which added much pleasure to the entertainment of all. The Religio holds its own quite nicely, and is an interesting feature in the work.

SECOND KANSAS CITY BRANCH.

Corner Sixteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue. Sunday School 9:30 a. m., preaching 11 a. m., prayer meeting 2:30 p. m., preaching 7:30 p. m.

Elder M. F. Gowell, of Westport, was with us Sunday; he will labor in Southern Illinois district.

Priest Thomas Grabske and family have located here. They came from Pullman, Illinois.

Priest John Swanson, of San Jose, California, who is superintendent of the Central California Sunday School association, together with our branch priest, Thomas Newton, had charge of the morning preaching service. Teacher Fredrick Koehler occupied the stand, choosing the eleventh to thirteenth verses of sixth chapter of Ephesians. He brought out the possibilities that will follow by living up to all the commands of God.

Bro. and Sr. A. W. Babcock, from St. James, Missouri, have located here. They will be of much assistance in the branch work.

LETTER DEPARTMENT.

LAMONI, Ia., April 28.
Editor Ensign:—Conference is over and we are now about ready to "roll up our sleeves and wade into" the work before us. We have planned to leave here about May 7th, and after stopping en route, we expect to reach Sacramento about the 15th. We expect this year, in filling our office as district president of the northern California district, to visit as many of the members of that district as we can find. I would be glad to hear from the scattered Saints and know their needs, and if possible will visit them. We hope for a grand year in gospel work in California, and trust that the Saints will be alive to the Master's work.

We must not expect all smooth sailing, but when trials come, remember that the work was planted by the Creator and will finally triumph. If the Lord will give me the physical strength, I expect to make this one of the busiest years of my life. Believing that all things work together for the good of those who love and serve the Lord, I am,

Your brother in Christ,

FRED B. BLAIR.

Mission address, 3010 16th street, San Francisco, California.

BYERS, Ohio, March 18.

Dear Ensign:—When last writing to your columns I was at Richmond, Virginia, having just commenced a series of meetings to be conducted over two Sundays. Toward the close considerable more interest was manifested. I preached in Kearsse's Hall in Fulton, at 4 p. m., closing at 5:30, and then again at the home of Sr. Corson, at 8 p. m., where quite a congregation had gathered to bid me a "good-by" and "God be with you," as I had announced at the hall that I would leave that night on the 10:30 train. I feel that a good work may be done there by the efforts of a future appointee of the church. I spent a short visit with Bro. and Sr. Coffman at New Hope, and a visit to our old Sr. Hunter, at Staunton, Virginia, and her pleasant family. There I looked up the proceedings of the court in the case of Sr. Rebecca Landis vs. John Holler, and made reports to her before boarding the train toward home. And not receiving any word from Bro. W. R. Odell, of Centerville, West Virginia, as to whether it would be best to hold a few meetings there, I went on to the Larrange branch, near Ironton, Ohio, and held one service at Bro. J. C. Smith's.

Finding that Bro. T. J. Beatty and S. J. Jeffers had closed a successful campaign there, I boarded the "Charlot" next morning for Byers, where I landed at 3 p. m. I remained here only nine days, having made arrangements with my sister in Columbus, Ohio, to hold an eight days' meeting there, and then on to Green Hill, Indiana, and then to Lamoni by the 1st of April; but arriving at Columbus, I had only preached two sermons and was just getting a little interest awakened, when my sister and myself were notified that our father (whom I had left very ill) was not expected to live, so I returned home with her on the 13th, where I am at the present writing, still attending on my father; he is some better, and I hope he may be so far recovered that I can leave for Conference in a week. Hoping to meet you at the General Conference at Lamoni this A. D. 1900, and at Richmond, Virginia, April A. D., 1901, I remain your co-laborer in the Master's work.

J. L. GOODRICH.

DAYTON, Missouri, April 28.

Editor Ensign:—Bro. R. W. Davis and the writer have been assigned to labor with the tent in Oklahoma, and as we are dependent on the Saints for information as to where it can be used to advantage, we request those who desire tent meetings in their localities to write us as soon as possible, stating when desired, etc. Unless we have your co-operation in this line the usefulness of the tent is crippled. We will likely hold a meeting in the vicinity of the Oak Grove branch in the fore part of May.

If you desire the tent in your community, write us as soon as possible. We have a good, strong force in our field this year and ought to be able to do a good work.

BLENDVILLE, Mo.

COOKS POINT, Texas, April 6.

Editor Ensign:—We left McMinnville, Tennessee, on Wednesday, the 28th of March; arrived at Hearne, Texas, the 30th, late in the evening; met our son Adam and two of his children, whom we were inexpressibly glad to meet. We went out in the country about five miles to Central branch of the church, where we met a large number of Saints and some more of our children; we had a grand reunion. I preached three times for them with good liberty to attentive and interested congregations. We left them on April 2d and came home in Burleson county. We met a good number of our neighbors and members of the church at Stone City, about two miles from our house, who escorted us home, where we met more Saints; how glad we were to be at home and to meet children, Saints and friends again, and how busy wife has been readjusting household goods and planting flower seeds brought from old Tennessee, though rather late for Texas. We took dinner at Bro. C. A. Sherrill's on the 4th inst., where we found the finest vegetables of the season such as cabbage that had commenced to head and large lettuce good and tender, and other good things to eat. These vegetables are the result of old Bro. W. W. Squire's labors; he is the gardener at Cooks Point branch. We next called on Mr. J. V. Pressley; found his family well and planting cotton. They had killed a turkey and had it cooked nicely and a great many other good things to eat. After supper had some music by Sr. Amanda Pressley; they know how to make friends feel at home.

Yesterday went to see Bro. Aaron Norcross and family, where we had a good time; he did not forget that a missionary who had been away from home twenty months needed something to sustain the body, so he gave me some money to buy breadfruit and said, "Come next time to carry some meat home with you," for which we are thankful. Bro. W. M. Sherrill heaved a good shoulder of bacon the first evening we came home, and we have access to the finest garden in the neighborhood; how good it is to meet such Saints and friends again.

We aim to commence meetings here next Saturday night and continue as long as the interest demands. Bro. S. R. Hay, of Texas Central branch, came over yesterday evening to be with us in the meetings and do some preaching also; he is a whole souled brother, and in a few days he and I intend to go to Lee county, about fifty miles west of Cooks Point; intend to do some preaching and visit some Saints whom the Brigamites have been troubling some. I understand that there are five hundred Brigamite missionaries in Texas this year. We expect to make it warm for them if we labor in Texas this year, which we hope to do. The people in Tennessee wanted me to stay there this year. "There is a grand opening there where we labored the twenty-one months. I hope a good elder to do missionary work will be sent there this year."

I am yours in gospel bonds,

E. W. HUNLEY.

EXCELSIOR, Pa., March 19.

Editor Ensign:—I am striving to live the faith of a Latter Day Saint. We have a splendid Sunday School at our house, though our school is not so very large, but the interest is good, both among the great and small. I thank God for this and another thing for which I thank him, is that I had courage to step out from the world, and show to that I live this good work. I want to try to live more like Jesus each day, that I may be a help both to the church and in my home in my little family.

We have not had preaching for about three months, but hope it will not be long before some of our elders will be making their appearance among us again, trusting that more will obey the gospel here when another opportunity comes, knowing that there are others here interested in the work, if they would only have courage to come out from the world.

May God's watchful care be over us all, and at last gather us home with the redeemed. With well wishes to all, I remain,

Your sister in the faith,

MRS. EVA HARRUP.

FIVE LAKES, Mich., April 20.

Editor Ensign:—I have just been reading the addresses to the Conference of President Joseph Smith and the Patriarch Alexander Smith, in the last Ensign, and I could not but shed tears of sadness on the one hand, and of joy on the other. May the dear Father bless them in their work of love for the Master, with all His servants who are contending for the right, in building up the kingdom of God here on the earth, and winning souls to Christ by the word and example in their daily life and walk.

I have spent the most of the winter laboring for the Master, and have been greatly blessed; have had the best of liberty and health. Have one baptized one, others wanted to be baptized, and will, when they get a proper understanding of the step they are about to take.

In one place where I have labored some two heads of a family, who were convinced of the truth, made up their minds to be baptized with Christ, to rise and walk in newness of life, but the ill temper and bad example of a brother Saint put a damper on the good that was done, and those dear people are standing outside, for whom Christ died. It's awful to hear a man get up in meeting, tell that he knows this work is of God, and invite people to accept of it, and in the next breath deny it by his example.

I have been well treated by those in and out of the church, and I am not ashamed nor afraid to open my Bible to anyone, and show them the stock of good I have to offer them, and tell them it would cost them nothing to examine them, and if they enter into a contract, and it don't prove to be as recommended, they won't have to pay anything to get free, etc. The other day while talking to a Baptist preacher, he asked me what church I was preaching, I told him it was the church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints; he said: "Oh, I have heard of them, knew a man that belonged to them and left." I said I understood that there was more than one church calling themselves Latter Day Saints, and handed him a card, "What We Believe," after he read the card, he handed it back and said, "That's all right, no fault can be found with that."

PRYOR CREEK, I. T., March 30.

Editor Ensign:—The Ensign is a welcome visitor in my house. I can do nothing else when I get my paper, until I read it through. I thank God and praise his name for the angel's message. I want the prayers of the Saints that my children may accept the gospel and enter into the kingdom by water baptism.

The leading preachers of the Holiness church here came to my house and asked me what was our belief in regard to marriage. My answer was that God made man and placed him in the garden, and made one woman, Eve, for him, and if God had believed in polygamy he would have made more and placed them there with him. I gave the preacher five of my papers and asked him if he would read them; he said Yes, and took them, and I have not seen him since.

I am giving my ENSIGNS to the people to read, and some are anxious for them. As there are no other Saints around here I would be glad to have the elders come around this way and instruct my children, as I know that the gathering is nigh at hand.

Your sister in the gospel bonds,

MRS. ANNIE NEAL.

PEORIA, ILLINOIS, March 13.

Dear Ensign:—Your pages are eagerly read each week to learn of the gospel news in various parts of the world. There is always something for each one to gain good from, if they are only looking for it.

The work here in Peoria is advancing, we believe, and I have thought this evening to write something in regard to the meetings that have been held there lately. The first Sunday of the month being sacrament day, it was decided to give up the regular morning preaching service, and have prayer and testimony meeting instead. It was a meeting long to be remembered. The two contending powers were there, however, and kept those who had the spirit of prophecy from speaking what the Spirit wished to be given. The Spirit of the Master was present to a great degree, and all felt encouraged and helped, but sorry that the Spirit did not have full control. That evening was the regular time for the Religio prayer meeting, and when we met we felt the influence of the Spirit as in the morning.

A sister, who had been blessed in the morning meeting with a vision, but who had felt too weak to tell what she had seen, now related the same, and was blessed of the Spirit to such a degree that all felt its holy influence. The vision was in regard to the work here, and also the work in all parts of the world. The work to be done must be done by all. Each one is needed, and when all work together the work can be done. If one, though, stands back and refuses to work because others can do more the work will be retarded to that extent, and that one will suffer, while if all work, no difference how humble their work, the work will rapidly move on, and each one will be blessed according to what he does. If he does the very best he can, it will help the work that much and the individual will be blessed just as much as the one who does more. May the Lord help each one to work faithfully and be earnest. The work demands this of us all, and it seems to me that the time is here when we need to sacrifice of our time, our means and our work for the cause we profess to love. Are we sacrificing or not?

After the Spirit had helped this one to give what was shown her, it seemed that there was more liberty. A brother who had felt the spirit of prophecy in the morning, was now able to speak the words, as voiced by the Spirit; words of exhortation, rebuke and direction were given to one who has been having a severe battle to overcome some habits that are not in accord with the commands of God. We hope the words may be heeded and, through prayer, and faithful, earnest trial on the part of the one spoken to, the victory may be gained. The Lord will not do all things for us, we ought not to ask Him to do all for us, but use that which He has already given us and then our prayers will be of some avail.

The subject as taken by the Religions for that evening was "True Riches." The text for that evening was "I will give thee hidden riches," and the speaker Bro. Ordway was blessed in presenting thoughts regarding the same. The more one thinks of the subject the more precious the riches the gospel brings and the less precious the riches of this world. We often say that the world does not realize the blessings we have. As Christ said to His disciples I have meant that you know not of, so we often say in regard to the ones who do not realize anything of the blessings we receive. But, Saints, do we fully realize the blessings we might, have if we only lived for them? I believe that if we only lived humble as we ought; lived, worked and prayed for these spiritual blessings we would more often receive them. We would not then complain of the famine in spiritual things. God is willing to bless us if we only seek for those blessings. As we heard one say at our late Conference, "God is pleased with our asking if we only ask in the right way, and in asking for blessings feel to say, They will be done."

Last Sunday was another day of blessings. In the morning we met for Sunday School. While we find many things to discourage at times there are many things to urge one to continue on. There seems to be plenty of opportunity for work, so suppose none ought to complain. We then listened to a good sermon by Bro. F. A. Russell. By the aid of the Spirit he was able to bring forth from God's word thoughts that were encouraging and that taught us of things pertaining to the riches of eternity. One thought expressed in Colossians 2:8 was very forcibly expressed by the speaker. The things mentioned there would "spoil" us for the inheritance of celestial glory.

In the evening the Religio held their meeting. It was very interesting. We then listened to another sermon. The speaker was again blessed, and the hearers also. God's word seems plainer, the work seems more blessed, and we feel like striving to make our lives conform to the standard as set up by Christ, after a Sabbath spent in the service of the Master. In fact it makes us feel like trying harder than ever to be what we call an "every day christian." Blessings of a temporal and of a spiritual nature make us feel like pressing on. How is it though when clouds overcast our spiritual sky, and blessings are withheld for some cause, are we then still of the determination to go on in the Master's work? Then is the time we must walk by faith and must be humble, and strive to abide in Christ as well in the dark times as in the sunlight.

We believe we can say of a truth that the work is looking up here. Although but a little band, compared with the numbers in this large city, still if we heed the admonition as given, the work will advance. May God help us to be faithful, earnest and wise workers in the cause of Christ. In the faith.

ENDURING TO THE END.

Sermon by President Joseph Smith Delivered Sunday morning, March 11, 1890, at Independence, Missouri.

The topic of thought which occurs to me this morning is suggested in the sentiment expressed in the hymn which has been last sung. The hymn points out the thought that those who have enlisted in the service of Christ have enlisted for life, that there must be no sleeping soldiers, from the picket to the guard, and that he that endureth to the end is to be the one who shall receive of the glory of the triumph which is to follow. This suggests my text, "He that endureth to the end shall be saved."

The conditions surrounding us this morning in both the political, economical and the religious world, all point to a culmination of events which have been previously decreed of God; and as it will be but a few years until seventy years will have elapsed since the establishment of the church, we might profitably spend the time in discussing what has transpired during the three score years and ten that have passed. But the time does not permit, and only a casual glance can be taken at some of the things that attract our attention.

Many of the prophecies that have been uttered in the past, it has been said have failed, from a consideration of the thought that immediately upon the footsteps of the prophecy there did not follow the awful things that were predicted. Those of us who have lived since the utterance of the prophecies, can how look around us and see a condition of things previously specifically stated; and while many have been discouraged and have fallen by the wayside, there is, fortunately, both for the prophecies and for our hopes predicated upon things which are correlated to the prophecies—I do not say they are incidental to them—but are related to them, we see a fulfillment so grand in its character as a whole, that we have our faces set forward with unflinching determination to abide "unto the end."

It was my fortune, the other day, to see in the public prints what, doubtless, many of you saw, a map illustrating the present status of what is known as the bubonic plague; the point where it started, and the different places in which it had found lodgment; and by diagram, showed places where it had become a fixture, planted, as it were, in the soil—like our diseases are—where it had become endemic, and where it is what is called "sporadic," the now and then case only, developing from outside causes like other diseases and immediately passing away. Any Latter Day Saint who has examined that map with the reflection that it had been uttered years ago in latter day prophecy that the time would come when God had pleaded with mankind by the voice of tempest and earthquake and the preaching of the gospel, he would pour out a consuming sickness that should devastate the world; and we have only to contemplate the awful things that are transpiring in India, the awful things that are transpiring in South Africa, the things that have followed the Czar's effort to secure a disarmament of the nations, and to take cognizance of the position that our own nation has assumed since we last assembled in Conference here, to make us think that God has not only concluded to hasten his work in its time, but he has also concluded that there may be and shall be a culmination of his intentions toward the political and national world.

I do not know how many of you were struck with this map as it struck me, and I confess it startled my mind, and it started within me, if possible, a sterner resolve to hold steadfastly to the hope in Christ which had been borne in me by virtue of the ministrations of the angelic message, brought in the time which is past.

The allotted years of man have passed since the church was organized, and little more than that since the voice of inspiration began to come by which men were aided in their efforts to preach the gospel of the Son of God, and their footsteps were directed from time to time by the voice of inspiration, until, moving from New York to Ohio, they had the fulfillment of the promise made to them by revelation when they were directed to go from New York to Ohio, in which God would give them a law that should be sufficient in its terms not only for conditions existing then, but in the New Jerusalem.

We have sung, and do sing, that change and decay occur in all human affairs, and yet through the song there burns the consistent fire of the theory that "he that endureth to the end shall be saved." Not only enduring things which are personal in their character, that make their attack upon the individual, that bring sorrow and distress of body and mind, but those things which attack the collective bodies to which we belong, and especially those things which attack the existence of the church itself in its organic form.

From this expression, "He that endureth to the end," I gather this thought: first, that whatever may happen in the nations, whatever may occur to societies, whatever may transpire touching the history of the church, and whatever character of division may ensue, whether apostasy shall come from this or that cause, whether there may be personal defection and quorum disruption, it is still insured unto the individual—the simple, earnest-minded man or woman—that so long as that individual shall maintain his integrity before God, his salvation is secure.

I gather the second thought, and that is, that if it be true that he that endureth to the end shall be saved as an individual, so shall that collective body which serves God and Christ in the sacredness of personal integrity, individual honor and upright-ness, so shall it be given unto it in its organized capacity, that the church itself, if it endures, shall be saved; and the whole organization represented here today is built upon that thought. And while, at first, and for a few years, it pleased individuals to say that so far as the Reorganized church is concerned, they could not discover that it had any policy, they could not see what was the character of its cohesion, it has lately developed and developed largely upon the minds of individuals within, and of individuals without, that there has not only been a policy, but that it has been a persistent policy, and seemed to have had its foundation in this one thing, that it was to remain steadfast in the word of God.

Leaving all these side issues, all those things that are incidental, all purely traditional teachings, all those things which may have grown up out of the enthusiasm of individuals from the incoming of influences from without, leaving them to slough off as they may, and take the result which necessarily must follow of the things which are temporary and individually incorrect, let them, like all transitory things, pass away, and leave things which are enduring to stand out clearly in the sunlight of God's truth to be seen of all men. There is a grand hope in the thought; and as I stand this morning to represent the church, I have been made to know within the last few years, yes, since last we met in conference here, that it has developed and has been met with a corresponding degree of response largely from them without, and from them within, that the Reorganized Church had indeed come to stay—to "endure to the end."

I call the attention of all of you to the thought that it is a little singular that the church, using the term to mean that body of men and women who have stood steadfastly for the word and for that which had been done in the history of the church during the lifetime of the prophet, that from first to last, in every public enunciation of the church upon doctrinal topics, there has never been a necessity either for a renunciation or a reconsideration; and when the Reorganized Church took up the work and when they essayed to step forward and perform the task assigned them, they took up the work as it was left at the decease of the prophet and patriarch; they have not been from that time forward under the necessity of revising the creed as stated from the first; notwithstanding the fact that they have seen traditional theory after traditional theory come to light and pass away. The things which may have been said by some, in there austere character or in there dogmatical consideration, have been dispensed with by the people, in the final adherence to God's word; these things stand and are still prominent as the sunlight in God's heaven, and you and I are rejoicing today in that fact.

Now, what is it that we have had to endure as individuals? It was called to my mind by the reading of a speech said to have been delivered in Kansas City by a nephew of General A. W. Doniphan, in which he recited the causes and some of the history of the things which transpired in Jackson, Daviess and Caldwell counties; but in the history which he gave of those things, he forgot to state how many of the poor people who were represented and called Mormons at that time, met their deaths at the hands of a mob, an unauthorized collection of men enforcing their own ideas against an innocent people. General Doniphan told my brother, Alexander, and I, at the town of Richmond, when we went to see him, that not one of the people called Latter Day Saints was arraigned for crime in those counties. Mr. John Doniphan said those who were killed were but few; but he forgot the grave in the well where eighteen bodies of individuals lay, who were shot down in cold blood. Missouri forgot it.

I only bring it to mind this morning to enforce the sentiment that, as individuals, we have been constantly under obligations to be on the alert to defend our individual faith against the encroachments and seductive machinations of unbelief and infidelity, born of the thought that we have seen some of the things that have been traditionally taught us to fall, as it were. And we have not only been under obligations to face and overcome that, but also personal persecutions may have come to us by reason of our own want of wisdom, that, by our overt acts, we have invited persecution to come upon us. I know that it has fallen to the lot of some to be unnecessarily persecuted without cause on their part, but I do know on the other hand, the misfortune of some to invite persecution by the unwise course which they have pursued, not only to the outside world, but to those to whom they should have presented a front of love and invitation, rather than that of hatred and repulsion—I know that.

Let me give you an instance—as I do not propose to make a set effort in any one direction—but only a few years ago, in the north part of this state, an elder went in there, and his course from first to last was a breathing out of denunciation and slaughter against the inhabitants of this state, unless they should repent and turn away from the course which they were pursuing. At the same time he must have known, as I knew, and other men knew, that the present inhabitants of the northern part of the state were not responsible for the things which transpired in 1838 to 1839. There had been a change in the population as there has been in the city of Independence, and all this region of country. There has been a change of occupancy, no matter how it has come to pass; it has been subservient to the will of God and for the establishment of the principles of life and peace, through the order of the gospel of the Son of God, and by properly accredited men; hence, when this man pursued this course, it aroused strong antagonism against him, and things must have ensued that followed in 1833 if his course had not been stopped. And why? Simply because in 1834, after the people had been dispersed from this country, the Lord saw fit to speak to them and told them specifically, that they should remain in the regions round about, and talk not of judgment, and boast not of mighty faith; to gather in one locality as much as was consistent with the feelings of the people, and walk consistently before God, and they should find favor in the eyes of the people. For what purpose? That they might ultimately say to them, "give us justice, we pray thee, for the things of the past." How? As much as can be done by society. There were wrongs inflicted upon the people that never could be repaired, and they will have to stand the arbitration of time. The sufferings and wrongs and prayers of the people have gone up before the thrones of God, and those who have been guilty shall bear the brunt and take the consequences. Those who have been innocent and have likewise suffered from the result, they too must bear what has come upon them, "enduring unto the end."

I can illustrate that in a personal way, without egotism, I presume. I was shogged from the side of my father by a sword in the hand of an armed guard, when he had come to his home to take a farewell of his loved ones; and as I sought to reach his side, as his child, to have a farewell kiss, I was pushed away from him by the guard; and from that time on, I was one of those who partook, with others, of the personal persecutions that came unto the people. And in the settlement of Quincy and Nauvoo, much of the harm that came to the people was the result of inconsiderate and unlawful persecution. There were things that tried individuals to the utmost, and as individuals they had to suffer, and they have yet to suffer from the things that transpired then and continued to transpire until after God had seen fit to set the people at work in the right way to overcome the things that had existed before.

One of them was to "gather in the regions round about, be very faithful and humble and prayerful before me, etc., talk not of judgment." Let that be in the hands of God. Never raise those issues that had once gone up to the Court of Final Appeal; let that alone, and go on about our Master's business, preaching the gospel and winning souls to Christ, even from among those who may have been of the blood of the persecutors in the days that are past.

I am thankful this morning that we are here in evidence—strongly in evidence—of the ben-official results of following that policy. It was the heaven's policy; it was the policy revealed of God. And you and I and all of us, who have been willing to take this as it has been given to us, recognizing it as the word of God, have seen the benefits of it, and hence we have been encouraged to endure some things which otherwise would have been unbearable.

The Apostle Paul was tried a great deal. I believe the Apostle Paul endured unto the end, at least, he congratulated himself that he had or would; but there was one thing that the Apostle Paul never complained of, so far as I read his writings. He said he was tried by false brethren, but he never did say he was tried by brethren of the best intention, who foolishly made mountains of small things, and disturbed the good-will of everybody else, and especially of those whom they were pleased to call their leaders. If I could, without betraying confidence, without bringing to light some of the weaknesses of human-kind, if I could I would read questions to you that are sent to me from the different parts of the church; questions that have been settled by answer time after time, and which still come up every now and then to be settled again; and questions that no human being alive can ever settle, or which ever will be settled until we are released from the trammels of the flesh; and because I cannot answer them I have to endure. Sometimes those kind of interrogations are very amusing to me, and sometimes they are very provoking. But they say, "To him of whom much is required, much will be given." I do not know whether that is exactly a reproduction of the statement or not, but I think what they who quote it mean, is, that "Of him to whom much is given, much will be expected." Does it not follow that any individual to whom anything shall be given, that in proportion to that which is given, there shall be met a corresponding degree of responsibility? Hence, there is nobody exempt from this principle of enduring. I am thankful about that.

Some are tried as if to death by personal sickness, constant irritation, until they become nervous and worn and weak, and startle at everything. Their hearts become deranged and they finally die of heart disease, heart failure. There is one kind of heart failure that I hope will never strike any of the elders of the church, and that is heart failure from fear that God will not, or cannot, take care of His own cause.

As a body, we have a great deal to endure, and it results from the very nature of our reorganization. For instance, along at the first of the reorganization, this question arose: "Shall re-baptism be required?" At that time it had great consequence to us. There were but a few who might be called charter members of the Reorganization. There were not so many in all the church in 1860 when I connected myself with the movement, as there are gathered in this room today, not so many by several. And yet all over the land there existed individuals who had been members of the church in the days of my father and his prosperity, and the question arose: "Shall we, as a Reorganization, as the charter members of the Reorganized church, shall we insist upon re-baptism into the body?" Well, we discussed it; some held that we should, and others that we should not. Every organization that had arisen or had attempted to rise, had enforced it and had re-baptized individuals who came to them; and I really believe they did baptize them out of the original faith into something new; at least out of the spirit that they first received, into that which followed the different branches of the church; the miserable effects of that some of us have seen. We purposed to leave that question unto the arbitration of the Spirit of God, and we made it a subject of prayer; and when we met next for prayer meeting, by prophecy by two or three, we were informed that we must not require re-baptism, but that those who had been legally baptized prior to the death of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, must be received on their original baptism. When it finally crystallized into what should be the position of the church, it was practically this, that those who had been baptized prior to June 27, 1844, their baptisms must be considered as legal and they accepted upon these baptisms; and they that had held the priesthood in the past, in the days of the prophet, the office and calling should also be recognized. And if those who saw fit to be re-baptized should do so, they being so re-baptized in token of a renewal of their covenant, there should be given to them an added portion of the Spirit which they had received at the beginning. There was a number of those who availed themselves of that promise, and they testified that they did receive a renewal or an additional portion. I did not avail myself of the re-baptism, for specific reasons that I believed at the time to be politic and sound, I refused to accept a re-baptism; and since that time I have been thankful for it. I had but the one baptism, under the hands of my father; if it is not good, then I am a lost man if baptism saves men. But I have been sufficiently satisfied that if there had ever been a legal baptism in these modern times, mine was one.

The second proposition was somewhat like unto it, that those who had received baptism under the hands of those who had received authority and were known not to be in transgression, they also should be received. And then came that sweeping declaration, that all the baptisms which should be testified of by the Spirit should be received; in the supposition that the Spirit would not endorse a baptism that was not legal in the sight of God. That led us into a contest; it opened before us opposition and that opposition has largely continued up to the present time, and we have been under the necessity of enduring a great deal on account of it.

Again, it has been said that we did not baptize for the dead. It is true. While a great many of the eldership may have believed it for years, according to our understanding of the revelations, it was a permissive ordinance, to be carried on under the influence of direct communication or revelation from God, and that neither I nor any other man was authorized to be baptized for any one until it had been certified to us that there was a corresponding desire to be baptized on the part of the ones on the other side. As a consequence of this position we have been chided, "Well, you have not been baptizing for the dead." There has been some anxiety on the part of our own membership for it, and I am prepared to say for myself, that whenever I shall be satisfied that God has given us a permissive order, I am ready to baptize in a font erected for the purpose, or in the salt waters, or in the native waters of the country that we find ourselves connected with. Can anybody find fault with that?

Again, it has been said that we are building no temples. But thanks be to Almighty God, the only temple that was ever built under the direct commandment of God upon this land that we know anything about stands today and is in the possession of the church—the only one. There was another that was commanded of God. It was in process of erection, and after it became enclosed, was prepared for individuals to gather into it and hold meetings; but it was so polluted, as I believe, that God has not permitted one stone to remain upon the other. It has been as literally razed to the ground as ever the temple at Jerusalem was, under the condemnation of God's insulted Spirit. I know whereof I speak. It was never finished, and after the Saints left Nauvoo it was torn from centre to circumference, and not one stone this day remains above another as originally placed.

This has been the character of some of the things that we have been obliged to endure as a church. And again, we find that some doctrines had been injected into the philosophy of the church contrary to the word of God previously received. What was to be our attitude towards them? As an individual I was directly told what I should do in reference to them. I set my face in that direction as directed, and, please God, I have never swerved to the right or to the left; and I never expect to, because I shall have to answer to Him for what He told me, in the great Judgment day, and I purpose to answer with an untrammelled conscience, so far as my fellow-men are concerned.

What has been the result? Well, Mr. Roberts did not get in to Congress. I do not say that we had anything to do with keeping him out; but I do say that what was presented was of such a character that it was plain to those to whom it was sent that what Mr. Roberts did was directly contrary to the revelations of God and the commandments of the church that they should obey the law of the land in which they lived. We never have had to disregard the law of the land—and it must necessarily follow—because God had inspired wise men to write the Constitution and establish the laws under it. And He knew whether or not He intended that His church should declare the angel's message, preach the gospel and triumphantly survive unto the end under that republican form of government as instituted by Him. If He did not know, we have given Him credit for a knowledge which He did not have. We are not prepared to say that. He knew what He was doing. He knew the church must develop. We stand pretty fairly today, brethren, on that remarkable basis, and we have endured pretty near unto the end of that thing—pretty near there.

Again, it was commanded away back here in the olden Book, "Thou shalt worship God and him only shalt thou serve." The wise man said, "Fear God and keep his commandments, for this is the whole duty of man." We have lived in this power of endurance until the time has come that that proposition made by one of the leading men of the church in father's day and who essayed to lead after his death, when he put his hands upon the books and said, "These books are not worth the ashes of a rye straw; they were to the church what a boy's last year's jacket may have been, and now that she has grown she has no further use for them;" we have seen the time come when their elders going abroad are carrying the epitome of faith as published in 1842, and preaching the revelations as given and published in the Doctrine and Covenants from 1835 to 1846. Have we endured faithful in that direction? I think so. There remains some things yet for us to endure, but praise God, if we shall continue in honesty and uprightness and in a straightforward way, we have nothing to fear. Not a man of us who has been out in the field that has been obliged to turn his back upon those who have been arrayed against us and have attacked His church, because the fortifications thereof have been defective—not a man. There is one here from Australia, one from California, one from England. They have been engaged in discussion. Bro. I. N. White is at work up in Viroqua, Wisconsin, in defense of the truth, and I guarantee from these triangular points of the compass these men would rise up and say that so long as they stood steadfastly in the word of God, they have been enabled to endure unto the ends of their discussions and debates and have not suffered. The faces of the sons of Jacob, in this respect, have not been permitted to wax pale. How is it, brethren?

I counsel you as individuals, no matter what may be the personal troubles that assail you, no matter if our frames may be falling into weakness and decay, no matter if our steps should grow feeble and our hairs white, we have only to wait a little while longer until we shall be received into our final rest and all these things that we have suffered in the past shall inhere to our credit, and what we have lost shall be restored to us and no matter if upon the right hand and upon the left, the Reorganization is assailed as a church, if we only stand steadfastly as we have in the past, we shall endure unto the end. And those individuals who have forsaken us from time to time will be able to say through the ministrations of the Spirit to them finally, "Well, we have erred. Let us come back to the house of God. His army is becoming great; His banners are still floating before us and we will enlist again and do better than we have done in the past." And we should be ready with open arms to receive these, not imputing their errors to them, but as honest failures of good desires in the intended service of the Lord Jesus Christ.

We, ourselves, have made mistakes. I confess I have, and one mistake I have made is in the too free expression of opinion now and then, when it would have been a great deal wiser for me to have kept still. I thank you.

AS I VIEW IT.

BY ELDER J. S. STRAIN.

A great deal is being said in regard to the time of the Saints gathering, but it seems to me as though it was premature to be using so much time and space, and exhausting so much grey matter in the discussion of a subject about which we know so little, and are, as yet, so illy prepared to undertake. One thing is evident to my mind, and that is, that before we are prepared for so important an event, a great reformation will have to take place in the church of Jesus Christ.

On page 269 Doctrine and Covenants, the Lord has said they shall gather unto the places round about, but not in haste nor by flight, but let all things be prepared before you. Observe the commandments which teacheth to purchase all lands by money, which can be purchased for money, in the region round about the land which I have appointed to be the land of Zion, etc. And in verse 10 of section 98, they are again enjoined to have all things ready; and on page 179, verse 12, we find the same injunction not to gather in haste. Again on page 33 God says, I will gather them as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, if they will not harden their hearts.

I gather from all this that the gathering will be upon compliance with all the commands of God, and until we do this in spirit, as well as letter, no attempt to gather will be successful.

On page 115, Doctrine and Covenants, we have the following: "Listen to the voice of Jesus Christ, your redeemer, the Great I Am, whose arm of mercy hath atoned for your sins, who will gather His people even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, even as many as will hearken to my voice, and humble themselves before me, and call upon me in mighty prayer." This plainly shows the conditions to be complied with before the church would be in condition to begin the important task of gathering to Zion. Let me ask, Is the church in any better condition to undertake this work today, than it was when the Lord gave the foregoing commands? Let us calmly look at a few facts. The church is gaining in wealth, knowledge, prestige and influence, and making some gains in numbers, yet we have those in the church today who withhold their tithes, or, at least, give but a small fragment of what the law requires. The truth may hurt, but let it be spoken. Many poor widows and others, who earn their living by daily wages, give far more than some of the rich, according to their ability. If the members of the church would obey the voice of God in giving as He prospers them, we could put one hundred more missionaries in the field, and pay their family their monthly allowances, pay the college debt, and have money in the treasury. In my opinion there will have to be a great change in the spiritual condition of the church before we talk of gathering to Zion. Covetousness, which Paul says is idolatry, must be rooted out of our hearts, and the love of money, which is the root of evil, must be eradicated, and benevolence and a love of cheerful giving substituted in lieu thereof.

It fills the heart with joy to think of that glorious time when the people of God will be prepared to go to Zion, and perfect God's plan of creating a co-operative, spiritual socialism; where love will reign supreme, where every act will be for the general good of all, and where written evidences of debt should be destroyed, and no man will ask interest, or require usury.

If, however, the call shall be made to gather in the regions round about, there are, doubtless, those who are prepared to obey, thus creating a nucleus, or at least giving an example of what could be done. Whether the call to gather comes soon or late, one thing seems certain, and that is, that Lamoni, and possibly other large branches near, would remain as stakes of Zion. It is to be hoped, that in case the important matter is undertaken, that no real estate syndicates will be formed to conduct the transfer of landed property. No set of men should be permitted to act middle men in any transaction connected with the work. There has already been some very uncomplimentary things said of such speculations in other quarters. God hasten the glorious time when we shall see eye to eye, and when we shall be of one mind and one heart, and Zion's peace be as a flowing river.

Don't fail to read Bro. J. H. Mc-Mullen's Crystal Cement "ad" on page 7.

AN HONEST MILLION.

I have never been so impressed by a place where there was so little to see as by Nazareth, once the home of the one whose gentle life and wise teachings have so remarkably influenced the civilized world. The place is not particularly impressive, but one's thoughts are thronged with memories of teachings which began at mother's knee, then continued in the Sunday School, church, etc., and connected with every sacred relation, as christenings, weddings and funerals. And here was His home! We are treading the very streets that He trod. The views that meet our eyes in every direction are scenes once familiar to Him. Yonder plain of Esdraelon, which we crossed in coming here, was well known to Him. Yonder mountain is practically the same now as it was when it was a familiar figure in His daily landscape. I went to bed that night with an impressive realization that I was to sleep in the town which was once His home. And when leaving next day I often turned my horse about to look again and again at the little town and its surrounding hills and valleys—scenes of His daily life.

In the last few years, during which the industrial question has assumed such great importance in our country, my mind has often gone back to those scenes in Galilee. I have thought of the principal actor, not as a teacher, but as a workman—the Carpenter of Galilee. Millionaires and multi-millionaires have become numerous in our country, bringing in their wake an army of unemployed, many of whom, by force of conditions, degenerate into tramps and vagabonds. Both these classes, the millionaires and tramps, are a detriment to the best interests of our country. I have made a calculation bearing upon the honesty of these millions in private coffers, and to help us to realize what a sum a million dollars is, and what it is to actually earn a million dollars. All will agree that when a workman can save $1 every working day in the year he is doing well.

Our era begins with the birth of this Carpenter of Galilee. Let us suppose that he was able to begin work on the day of his birth, and that each working day he was able to save $1 above his living expenses. Let us suppose that he never loses a day by sickness or bad weather, and that his life and health and strength are miraculously prolonged until he shall earn one million dollars by saving $1 for every working day. Then we will be able to realize what an honest million is.

We will trace our workman who began work on the day of his birth. At the historic time of his death, at the age of 33, what would he be worth? The calculation is easy; 365 days minus 52 Sundays, equals 313 working days in each year. Multiply that by 33 years, and we have 10,329 days; but we must add eight days for eight leap years. This would make 10,337 —and $1 per day saved would equal as many dollars—$10,337. Far from a million, yet labor began at birth and never a holiday nor a day lost by sickness! Let us suppose that he had lived the allotted 70 years; then how would the account stand? Only $21,927! Our workman has a long and weary task before him to earn so large an amount as a million dollars. Our hero must trudge along through summer's heat and winter's storms. Years and decades come and go, until they grow into centuries, and still he works on, for his task is only begun. He sees kingdoms and empires rise and fall, but still he labors on, for the greater part of his task is still before him.

Christians are persecuted in various countries, the Roman Empire disappears, the dark ages come, and still he labors on, his task not yet completed. The crusades are fought, America is discovered, modern science awakens the world from its shroud of darkness, and still he labors on. The stirring events of modern history transpire and bring us down to the present moment, and—would you believe it?—our Carpenter is still laboring on, not yet having saved a million dollars, yet not having missed a single working day from sickness or any other cause in all these centuries. Let us see how his task would stand at this time. We are not counting interest, but purely the earnings of labor. We have seen that his savings would be $313 per year; this would be $31,300 per century, but adding 25 days for 25 leap years per century, it would be $31,325 per century. To determine how this account would stand, multiply $31,325 by 19, and the result is $595,175. So the task at the present time would be only a little more than half done. Let us in imagination bring him before us. Here he comes, time-scared, storm-scared, labor-scared. We ask him questions. He tells us interesting stories of how he has builded homes for princes and peasants in many countries, of how he worked on the Colosseum, the Alhambra and St. Peter's. He mentions familiarly such masters as Michael Angelo. He praises his good fortune in having steady employment during all these centuries, and that his wages are always promptly paid, and that he was allowed to make up the time lost by going from one job to another, by night work; but suddenly he says: "I must not tarry, I am the drudge of the ages, with the task of earning a million dollars. I must get it honestly, therefore, I must earn it. My task will require many, many years, even centuries yet, so adieu." With this he leaves us. But does he not leave many reflections concerning our millionaires and their millions? What shall we say to those who obtain not only one million, but many millions in the few years of the adult period of a single life?

It is plain that no man can earn a million dollars in a brief human life, however hard he may work. But many have become millionaires, and while it is impossible to do so honestly, in a strictly ethical sense, we will admit that some have done so legally. This shows that these men have been enabled to do this only by the many advantages of the institutions of this country, and aided by the protection of the law. Then, do these men owe nothing to the country and to the law? Indeed, they owe much. But as a rule they systematically "dodge" taxes during life, and at death are permitted to make any disposition of their vast possessions that they may desire to order in their will, without any contribution to the government that made possible the accumulation of their vast fortunes. Is it not just and fair that a percentage should go to the government? The people of other countries think so, but we, as usual, are behind.—Dr. C. F. Taylor in The Medical World.

JOSEPH'S LAND SUPPLIES THE WORLD.

The announcement of a large wheat shipment to Japan sent from a Pacific port lends interest to some figures which the Treasury Bureau of statistics has prepared regarding the growing demand for American foodstuffs and manufactures in the Orient. Nearly six million dollars' worth of our flour went to the Orient last year, against about four million dollars' worth in the preceding year and nearly all of it to China, Japan and Asiatic Russia; the large proportion of that which reached China passing through Hongkong, to which it was accredited in our export statements. Shipments of breadstuffs in the form of wheat to the Orient, however, have been in the past rare, and the large shipment of wheat just announced, shows the growing demand for our breadstuffs in that section of the world, which buys annually a billion dollars' worth of goods, and which has been in the past taking less than 6 per cent of its purchases from the United States.

That our sales to the Orient are growing rapidly, however, is shown by the latest export statistics. They show that while there has been a continued growth in our exports during the past fiscal year, by far the largest percentage of growth has been in our trade with the Orient. To Europe, our exports during the eight months ending with February, increased 5.4 per cent as compared with the corresponding months of the preceding fiscal year; to South America, 8 per cent; to North America, 13.3 per cent; to Asia, 38 per cent; to Oceania, 51 per cent, or to Asia and Oceania combined, 44 per cent; while to Africa there was a slight reduction owing to the disarrangement of commercial conditions there by reason of hostilities. Taking our exports as a whole, it is found that the increase during the eight months has been 9 per cent, while, as already indicated, the increase to Asia and Oceania has been 44 per cent. This increase in our sales to the Orient occurs in every country classified under the head of Asia and Oceania, to China the increase being from $9,247,738 in the eight months ending with February 1899, to $10,355,455 in the eight months ending with February 1900; to the British East Indies, from $2,845,196 to $3,124,169; to Hongkong, from $4,732,072 to $5,136,162; to British Australasia, from $12,525,365, to $17,999,403; to the Hawaiian Islands, from $5,608,000 to $8,546,859, and to Japan, from $10,505,854 in the eight months ending with February, 1899, to $18,344,179 in the eight months ending with February, 1900.

This phenomenal increase in our exportations to the Orient and especially to Japan, is the more surprising because of recent information from Japan which shows that the general importations of that country have been greatly decreased under its new tariff, which is mildly protective. The total imports of Japan in the year 1899 were 220,367,622 yen, against 277,502,157 yen in the preceding year, the value of the yen being 49.8 cents. Thus it is seen that while Japan is decreasing her general imports, she continues to rapidly increase her imports from the United States.

The remarkable growth of our exports to the Orient, however, only becomes fully apparent when the figures of the present exports are compared with those of a few years ago. For instance, our exports to Japan in the fiscal year 1893 were but $3,195,494, and in 1899 they were $17,264,688 and seem likely to be $26,000,000 in the fiscal year 1900. To China our exports of 1893 were $3,900,457, and in the present fiscal year will be in round terms $15,000,000. To Hongkong our exports during the period have doubled, being $4,216,602 in 1893 and promise to be over $8,000,000 in the present fiscal year. To Australasia the exports of 1893 were $7,921,228 and promise to be fully $24,000,000 in the present fiscal year. To Asiatic Russia the exports of 1893 were less than a quarter of a million dollars, but will reach fully $2,000,000 in the fiscal year about to end. Even more remarkable, however, is the growth in our exports to the Hawaiian and Philippine Islands. To the Hawaiian Islands the exports of 1893 were $2,827,963, in 1899 $9,305,470, and in the fiscal year 1900 promise to be fully $12,000,000; while our exports to the Philippines which in 1893 were but $154,378, will in the present year exceed $2,000,000. Considering our exports, Asia and Oceania combined, the total for the fiscal year 1893 is $27,421,831, for 1899, $78,235,176, and for the fiscal year about to end will exceed $100,000,000. The following table shows our exports to the principal countries of Asia and Oceania in the fiscal years 1893, 1899, 1899 and 1900, the estimate for 1900 being based upon the actual figures for the eight months of the year already reported.

Australasia, 7,921,228; Hawaii, $2,827,668; Philippines, $154,378; all Asia and Oceania, $27,421,881.

1896.—Japan, $7,689,685; China, $6,921,933; Hongkong, $4,691,201; Asiatic Russia, $568,002; British Australasia, $12,748,074; Hawaii, $3,985,707; Philippines, $162,446; all Asia and Oceania, $42,827,258.

1899.—Japan, $17,264,688; China, $14,493,440; Hong kong, $7,782,525; Asiatic Russia, $1,543,126; British Australasia, $19,777,429; Hawaii, $9,305,470; Philippines, $404,193; all Asia and Oceania, $73,285,178.

1900 (Est.)—Japan $26,000,000; China, $15,000,000; Hong kong, $8,000,000; Asiatic Russia, $2,000,000; British Australasia, $2,000,000; Hawaii, $12,000,000; Philippines, $2,000,000; all Asia and Oceania, $100,000,000

Mormon War Veteran.

Charles Venable died at his home in Jackson township Sunday morning at 11 o'clock of general debility. The funeral occurred at 2 o'clock Monday at the family cemetery.

Charles Venable was born in Prince Edward county, Virginia, over 81 years ago and came with his parents to Missouri in 1835, when Livingston county was a wilderness inhabited for most part by Indians, wild beasts and game. He was a member of Col. Bill Jennings' company which took such a prominent part in the Mormon war in 1838 which resulted in the "Joe Smithites" being driven from Caldwell, Daviess and Livingston counties after several massacres. The massacre of Haun's Mill in Caldwell county was probably one of the fiercest engagements of this war and Captain Comstock of Greene Township was prominent in that charge. The deceased could tell more of the stirring and thrilling events of Livingston county's early history than any other man living, and his passing takes one of the prominent landmarks of the county from the field of action.—The Chillicothe (Mo.) Mail and Star, April 29d.

CURED OF CANCER.

ONE OF MICHIGAN'S MOST PROMINENT CITIZENS, AT THE AGE OF 74, CURED OF CANCER, PRONOUNCED INCURABLE BY SEVERAL PHYSICIANS, CURED BY DR. W. O. BYE.

CALEDONIA, Mich., Aug. 19, '99.

DR. W. O. BYE:

Dear Sir:—I can report my cancer as entirely healed up and shows but a very slight scar, which is more than I expected, considering the very large cavity after the cancer came out. I had shown it, previously to using your treatment, to our local physicians, and they all pronounced it incurable except one, who thought perhaps the knife would help, but advised not to meddle with it; but your cure has done the job, and that without any pain, and I am sure I am very grateful.

Very truly, J. B. PROCTOR.

This case was cured with home treatment. A free book is sent telling what they say of the treatment. Address Dr. Bye, Drawer N, Kansas City, Mo. (If not afflicted cut this out and send to some suffering one.)

FREE BLOOD CURE.

AN OFFER PROVING FAITH TO SUFFERERS.

Ulcers, cancers, eating sores, painful swellings, effects of blood poison, persistent eruptions, that refuse to heal under ordinary treatment, are quickly cured by B. B. B. (Botanic Blood Balm), made especially to cure all terrible, obstinate, deep-seated blood and skin troubles. Is your blood thin? Are you pale? All run down? Have you eczema? Pimples? Blotches and bumps? Skin or scalp humors? Boils? Eruptions? Skin itches and swollen? Aching bones? Rheumatism? Scrofula? Catarrh? To cure all these blood troubles take B. B. B. (Botanic Blood Balm), because it drains from the blood and entire system all the poisons and humors which cause all of these troubles, and the cause being removed, a permanent cure follows. All the sores heal and new, rich blood is made.

Everyone says that B. B. B. is the most wonderful blood purifier of the age; and no wonder, for it has cured the most deep-seated, obstinate cases (even the most deadly cancer) after doctors and patent medicines had failed. Thoroughly tested for thirty years and never known to fail. Our faith is so great in B. B. B., that we will send to any sufferer a trial bottle free, so that they may test the medicine at our expense. Large bottles for sale at the drug store for $1.00, or six large bottles (full treatment) $5.00. For free trial bottle enclose five cents which pays exact cost of postage (the medicine is free), and address Blood Balm Co., 86 Mitchell St., Atlanta, Georgia, and bottle and medical book will be sent, all charges prepaid. Describe your trouble, and we will include free personal medical advice. Write today.

Daughters of Zion.

The general meeting of the Daughters of Zion organization was held in the primary rooms of the Saints' church, Thursday, April 18, 1900. Was called to order by Sr. M. E. Hulmes, chairman of advisory committee; hymn number 475, "My Faith Looks up to Thee," was sung, and prayer offered by Sr. M. Walker.

In absence of regular secretary, Sr. Audentia Anderson was chosen to act in that capacity, with Sr. Viola Blair as assistant. Minutes of last meeting (1898) read and approved.

Reports from Srs. Hulmes, as president, and Robinson as corresponding secretary, were read. Report of the treasurer read, and, with the financial reports from chairman and corresponding secretary, was submitted to an auditing committee appointed by chair. Srs. L. Schmutz, of Denver, M. Fisher of Boston, and C. B. Kelley of Lamoni, were named as this committee.

Reports from the following local societies were read: Lamoni, Iowa; Independence, Missouri; Nebraska City, Nebraska, Pleasant Hill branch, Alabama; Garland, Alabama; Wheeling, West Virginia; Kansas City, Missouri; San Francisco, California; Stratford, Canada; Chilliwack, British Columbia; Kansas City, Kansas.

Auditing committee reported financial reports are correct, their report adopted. Verbal report from Denver local was given by Sr. L. Schmutz. Chairman reported a new local organized at Persia, Iowa, by Sr. M. J. Atkinson.

Srs. M. E. Hulmes and B. C. Smith were appointed a committee to consider the matter of sending a delegate to the National Congress of Mothers, with power to act as their judgment shall direct, the body favoring the sending of such delegate if found practicable. Srs. M. Walker and Dr. B. A. Greer made short and interesting talks, both being helpful and encouraging in their nature.

Articles four and six of the constitution were amended so as to provide that the word "chairman," in referring to the presiding officer of the general meeting, and that of local organizations, be changed to "president."

Sr. Schmutz, of Denver, spoke of the work there, asking some questions, and suggesting some changes, expressing much interest in the movement.

Election of officers resulted in the selection of Mrs. E. Etzenhouser, of Kansas City, Mrs. M. E. Hulmes, Mrs. Clara Frick, Mrs. B. C. Smith, and Mrs. H. E. Robinson, of Independence, as members of the advisory committee. Mrs. C. B. Stebbins was sustained as recording secretary, and Mrs. Anna Murphy was chosen as treasurer.

According to constitution, the advisory committee select their chairman and corresponding secretary from among the members constituting that committee.

After short talks from various members present, the meeting adjourned, being dismissed by prayer by Mrs. Schmutz.

Nineteenth-Century Progress.

During the first decade of the nineteenth century, the baleful effects of the French Revolution were still felt. Not only was the face of Europe changed by that great upheaval, but liberal-minded men were driven to conservatism in politics, and the cause of political reform was put back a generation. The unfortunate association of liberty with the guillotine, of political freedom with the Reign of Terror, had turned men's minds away from the Utopian dream of universal freedom. Self-preservation is the first law of nations as well as of individuals, and in the face of the general alarm caused by Napoleon's towering ambition, the hands of rulers were strengthened and the liberty of the people lessened.

The close of the first decade of the nineteenth century saw Napoleon Bonaparte at the height of his extraordinary career. The inspired adventurer, whose life was more romantic than any told in the pages of fiction, had risen in a few years from the position of a sub-lieutenant in the army of the Revolution to an imperial throne, and was in 1810, apparently, firmly seated thereon. He had triumphed over all the countries of Continental Europe; England alone refused to acknowledge his supremacy.

The last decade of the century shows a remarkable change in the map of Europe and of the world: Russia has far outgrown her early limits; France has lost her pre-eminent position; Prussia has taken the place of her former enemy and become an imperial power; Italy, from a half dozen small states, has been united into a kingdom; England has been making a mighty effort to subdue a handful of Boer farmers in South Africa; in the East, Japan has pierced the bubble of China, and shown the inherent weakness of the oldest empire in the world. In the West, the United States, which, at the beginning of the century contained only sixteen states, with a population of five millions, has increased to forty-five states, with seventy-five millions. The House of Bonaparte has disappeared from the political horizon, the House of Hapsburg has ceased to represent a first-class Power, while Spain has sunk lower and lower in the scale of nations.—Self Culture Magazine for May.

Skirts as Carriers of Diseases.

The Philadelphia Ledger says that "a bacteriologist" asked a woman who did not usually have to go on very dirty streets, if he might make an experiment on one of her skirts. It was a comparatively new one, and received daily brushing. He found on part of the skirt binding at the hem the following small menagerie: Two hundred thousand germs, many bearing diphtheria, pneumonia and tonsillitis; also collections of typhoid and consumption-microbes.—Ex.

Alum Baking Powder Law Upheld.

Judge Clark rendered a decision on Saturday in St. Louis, convicting Whitney Layton, of that city, on a charge of selling a baking powder containing alum, and fixed the fine at one hundred dollars.

The law of Missouri forbids the manufacture or sale, within the state, of alum baking powders. The money paid in fines goes to the Good Road Fund of the county. Every citizen has an interest in the full enforcement of the law—first, that the highways of the state may be improved, and second, that the health of the people may be defended from alum baking powder. Grocers will escape prosecution by immediately throwing out of stock any cheap alum powders they may have. The constitutionality of the law having been established, the prosecuting authorities in each county will enforce the law and there is already some competition to see which county will get the most money for its Road Fund. If prosecutions are promptly begun, each county should collect thousands of dollars for good roads before summer. Grocers have had several months' warning already.

Any chemist can easily determine the presence of alum in baking powder, but as a suggestion we print the names of some of the alum powders sold in the state, as follows: Pure Food, Jack Frost, Shepard's, Bon Bon, Hotel, Champion, Calumet, Forbes, Perfect, Eddy's, Mamma's, K. C. Liberty Bell, Manhattan.

CONFERENCE MINUTES.

Southern Nebraska district conference convened with the Wilber Saints January 14, 1900, J. W. Waldsmith in charge. Secretary being assistant C. H. Porter was chosen secretary pro tem.

Reports were received from the following Seventy: W. E. Peak and C. H. Porter. High Priests: J. W. Waldsmith and M. H. Forscutt. Elders: W. M. Self, A. J. Myers and W. Savage. Priests: Jesse Spurgeon, S. K. Sorenson, R. O. Self, Robert White, S. Broilier, H. W. Belville and Ed. Robertson. Teachers, David Broilier. Deacons, H. E. Christy.

Bishop's agent reported: Received $476.72; expended $477.58; balance due agent 86 cents.

On motion the Palmyra branch was declared disorganized, and the district president authorized to take charge of the books, and the bishop's agent was instructed to take charge of the church property at Palmyra.

The question of district expenses was called up and the following resolution was adopted:

Resolved, That we do not think it wise or expedient to lay a material contribution on the members of the district to meet the expenses of the conference; and be it further Resolved, That in our judgment it is necessary that a district fund should be created, and that wherever a conference is held a liberal contribution should be made to said fund, and that all moneys so contributed should be used only by order of the district conference to meet the legitimate expenses thereof.

Reports were received from Nebraska City and Blue River branches.

A communication from Bro. T. W. Williams relating to the "gathering," consecration and equality, and from Bro. F. E. Ordway referring to the delegate system, and providing for the publication of all important matters in the Herald and Ensign three months, at least, prior to final action being taken in the General Conference of the church, were disposed of; the first indefinitely postponed, and the latter laid on the table.

Buffalo and Hall counties asked to withdraw from the Central Nebraska district, and become part of the Southern Nebraska district.

Bro. H. W. Belville was appointed to labor as a missionary subject to the directions of the district president.

On motion the following brethren were appointed as delegates to General Conference: C. H. Porter, M. H. Forscutt, W. M. Self, H. W. Belville, J. W. Waldsmith, R. O. Self and James Ferguson.

A committee of three was appointed by the chair to consider the question of camp meeting and camp meeting work, and report at the next session of the district conference. The committee consists of C. H. Porter, W. M. Self and H. W. Belville.

The following were sustained as the district officers: President, J. W. Waldsmith; secretary, E. D. Briggs; assistant secretary, M. H. Forscutt; bishop's agent, J. W. Waldsmith.

Adjourned to meet with the Nebraska City branch in May, 1900. NEBRASKA CITY, Neb., April 28.

Missouri, Kansas and Southern Illinois Mission.

To all the Saints and Ministry in the above mission, greeting.—Each district will be considered a "mission field" of its own, without dividing, except the St. Louis district, and controlled so far as I can determine at this date, as follows: The Northwest Kansas district by John Alfred Davis; Northeast district by M. T. Short; Nodaway Missouri district by D. C. White; Northeast district by F. J. Chaburn, assistant Joseph A. Tanner; Far West district by J. C. Foss, assistant Swen Swensen; Clinton district by T. R. White, assistant Lee Quick; Spring River district by F. C. Keck; South Missouri district by Henry Sparling, assistant R. T. Walters; St. Louis district in Illinois, and the city of St. Louis and suburbs by Arthur Allen. That part of the St. Louis district situated in Missouri (except the city of St. Louis and suburbs), and all of that part of Missouri south of the St. Louis district, and east of the South Missouri district, by C. J. Spurlock; Southern Illinois district by F. M. Slover. The Central Illinois district will be provided for some time in the near future, if possible. The Independence district will be under my own charge for the time being.

Those placed in charge will instruct the ministry to report all items to them on the first day of July, October, January and March. Those in charge should report to me by the tenth of each respective month named. Nothing need be considered in this pastoral letter to debar any or all to write me in regard to their trials or blessings, and the special needs of the work here and there, in order to secure my advice and assistance when they feel it is absolutely necessary, for the good of themselves and the work that they love so well. Praying God that we may all labor without unnecessary friction, and when the conference year shall have passed, we can look back over our work and truthfully say, we have done what we could to advance the good of the latter day work without murmur or complaint.

Yours in gospel bonds,
I. N. WHITE,
Minister in General Charge.
INDEPENDENCE, Mo., April 27.

NOTICES.

The trouble surrounding the silencing of Bro. Wm. Jacques, of Belleville, Illinois, having been adjusted, this is to notify all concerned that he is again reinstated as an elder.

J. C. HITCHCOCK, Dist. Pres.
St. Louis, Mo., April 30th.

To the Saints of the Western Maine District:—Having been appointed to another mission field, I resign as bishop's agent in your district. Hereafter please send all moneys directly to the bishop, until such time as he shall appoint another agent, or makes other arrangements. Let not your diligence be slackened, but keep up the light and push on to victory. Blessings on you all.

In bonds,
T. C. KELLEY.
INDEPENDENCE, Mo., May 2.

MARRIED

ANDERSON-BEAN.—At Petersville, Mercer county, Illinois, December 31, 1899, Mr. John Anderson of Buffalo Prairie, and Miss Sarah B. Bean of Mable, Missouri, Elder D. S. Holmes officiating.

JONES-FLETCHER.—At the home of the bride, Ladd, Illinois, Mr. Roger Jones of Plano, Illinois, and Sr. Mary Jane Fletcher, Bro. Frank Izatt officiating. They will reside in Lawrence, Kansas.

WITMER-WACHSMANN.—At the residence of the bride's grandmother, Kansas City, Missouri, Wednesday evening, April 25, 1900, Mr. John Witmer and Miss Clara B. Wachsmann, Elder B. J. Scott officiating.

DIED.

TWITCHELL.—At Templeton, San Luis Obispo county, California, Bro. Sanford Lorenzo Twitchell. He was born in Meigs county, Ohio, May 15, 1827; moved with his parents to McDonough county, Illinois. Was one of the State Militia at the time of the imprisonment of the Smiths at Carthage. Removed to California in 1848; married in 1847 to Irene C. Hopper; to them were born 12 children, 8 of whom, with his aged companion, survive him. Was baptized January 10, 1900, by E. Keeler, who also preached the funeral discourse to a large assemblage of friends and neighbors.

MATHEWS.—Mead Burton Mathews was killed on the evening of March 6, 1900. He was nearly 7 years old and was the oldest child of Bro. Reuben and Sr. Adrienne Mathews and grandson of Bro. and Sr. Joseph F. Burton, and great grandson of Sr. David and Sr. Elizabeth. Mead was a bright, ambitious boy, and the evening was delighted to lend the old genteel horse from the pasture to the barn. He evidently had tied the rope around his waist. Just how it happened no one knows, but his mother who was watching for him saw the horse stop suddenly, and then circle around and then run around the pasture twice dragging the boy by the waist; when they got to him he was dead. Services from the East Garden Grove chapel, Elder P. M. Betts officiating. The grief-stricken parents have the sympathy of the entire community.

LANCUID Many a school-girl is said to be lazy and shiftless when she doesn't deserve the least bit of it. She can't study, easily falls asleep, is nervous and tired all the time. And what can you expect? Her brain is being fed with impure blood and her whole system is suffering from poisoning. Such girls are wonderfully helped and greatly changed, by taking AYER'S Sarsaparilla. Hundreds of thousands of schoolgirls have taken it during the past 50 years. Many of these girls now have homes of their own. They remember what cured them, and now they give the same medicine to their own children. You can afford to trust a Sarsaparilla that has been tested for half a century. $1.00 a bottle. All druggists. If you bowels are constipated take Ayer's Pills. You can't have good health unless you have daily action of the bowels. 25 cts a box. "The Great Pills cured my dyspepsia." W. D. CARVILLE, Jan. 10, 1899. Bath, N. Y. If you have any complaint whatever and desire the best medical advice you can possibly receive, write the doctor freely. You will receive a prompt reply, without cost to you. Dr. J. C. AYER, Lowell, Mass.

WORK BENEFICIAL.

There is very little room in this busy world for the drone, whether animal or insect. From the beginning of creation it seems to have been made a condition of happiness and contentment that the powers of both mind and body should be usefully employed. The bee that will not labor to lay up the winter's store is driven out of his comfortable quarters to miserably perish when the summer is ended. The infant mind of the highest created intelligence from the moment that knowledge begins to dawn upon it, commences intuitively or naturally to employ itself; the little child must of necessity have something to employ both mind and body, else it becomes restless and unhappy, and the wise parent will see that such work is furnished it, as mind and body develop, as will serve to instruct and build up as well as amuse.

The same analogy is found in the spiritual life. With what wonder and delight the newly awakened mind, upon which has dawned the light of the Sun of Righteousness, dwells upon the intelligence revealed by the Spirit. How he wonders at the darkness which has hitherto hid the beautiful things of the kingdom of God from his vision and understanding, and if he continues to exhibit the same zeal and devotion, his interest will deepen and his understanding be enlarged. New heights, new depths, new beauties will open to his comprehension continually, until truth takes up her abode with him and he becomes, like Daniel of old, a man of excellent wisdom. But too often other pursuits in the demands of physical life make inroads upon time and thought, by which his researches in the spiritual kingdom are restricted, and as the interest of this world increases, those of the higher and better life are so curtailed that its luster is dimmed and progress is lessened.

Activity is a necessity for health and growth in spiritual things as clearly as it is in the physical dominion; either mental or physical laziness and inactivity is destructive in its effects, as well as condemnable. The Lord has frequently spoken, both in early and latter times, admonishing the people that the idler is not acceptable to Him, and, unless he repents, will be cast out; and this is not to be wondered at when it is considered that He, Himself, has been directing the stupendous work of the creation, and has informed us that there is no space in which His handiwork has not been shown. No rest is so sweet, no sleep so satisfying and refreshing as that which follows good, honest labor, whether of brain or of brawn; no food is so sweet as that which is garnished by a good appetite superinduced by legitimate industry. It is a sad commentary, however, upon the wisdom and justice of some men who share in the beneficent mercies of the Creator, that they so grievously oppress and burden those employed by them that they are often so exhausted by the labor required in their daily employment that they can neither enjoy nor properly assimilate the food eaten to replenish the waste tissues of the body—this is not legitimate labor, but is an injustice born of selfishness, greed and avarice.

The parable of the talents; of the sower, and of the vine dresser, all indicate the value of activity and diligence as well as the reward which awaits the careless and indifferent. Every individual's best interests demand earnest, faithful work, and if, perchance, temporal success should be denied in this life, the day which is to try every man's work of what sort it is, will show different results, and, therefore, all may be encouraged to toil on until the conflict is ended.

It is too true, that Satan finds plenty of employment for those who will not do their duty before the Lord; he forces them into his service, though they may be deceived into thinking they are merely doing as they please, being liberal(?)minded, but the individual who refuses to do the will of his Creator when he knows what that will requires of him, is, in spite of himself, working in the interest of the adversary, and will, as a consequence, receive a reward accordingly. In this may be found another reason why the Lord is displeased with the slothful—they become the willing tools of the adversary of all righteousness, and often are his agents in spreading evil and ruin in the world. Good, honest work in any department of legitimate effort is beneficial alike to body and mind, and all should be anxious to do their part that health may be conserved and such development made possible as will glorify the Creator and save the soul.

EXPERIENCE WORKETH HOPE.

Without the principle of hope, this life would be, to most mortals, an undesirable and discouraging experience. As it is, men and women often become disheartened over successive failures in their endeavors to attain an object upon which they have concentrated efforts for a long while, and losing hope for any future attempt, they have given up, and become an easy prey to the tempter in whatever disguise he may have presented himself. In some cases life has become so burdensome that the awful step of self-destruction has been deemed the only escape, taking which, they dropped one burden only to assume one infinitely heavier and more enduring.

Some natures are more inclined to hopefulness than are others. It is easy for them to see the brighter side amidst unfavorable surroundings, and those who come within the sphere of their influence, are cheered and brightened by such association. But the hope which comes by experience is always sweet, comforting and helpful; it has the stability of a sure foundation, and is of the character that "maketh not ashamed." Especially is this true in a gospel sense. Theories may be enticing, look plausible and seem promising, but when an individual, complying with the commandments of the Lord in the gospel, experiences a fulfillment of the promises attaching to such obedience, all pleasure in the fine theories he may have held fades into forgetfulness, in the blessed experiences received for obedience rendered. It is only by experience that we attain the hope, which, the apostle says, is "as an anchor to the soul, both sure and steadfast, and which entereth into that within the veil" (Heb. 6: 19), and faithful, diligent and lawful service to God is sure to bring such a reward as will bring the fullest and most complete satisfaction.

Hope is a blessed boon to the human family, without which life would often seem dark and discouraging. It enables its possessor to look, as he should, upon the brighter side of all things, and he who is possessed largely of this attribute, will generally possess a good degree of charity and compassion, by which the burdens of life are lightened, both for himself and fellowmen. Cultivate this gift of heaven then, and be happy in it yourself while you also bless others with its sweet influence, and not only will the Lord accept your good works, but your brethren will call you blessed and enjoy your companionship and association, while the world will be brightened by your being a part of it.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

AN earnest effort is being made by the Saints at Springfield, Missouri, to build a church at that place.

BRO. GEO. H. BRUSH, Ridgely, Tennessee, says he has quite a number of ENSIGNS and Glad Tidings which he will gladly send to any who need them, but he is unable to pay the postage on them.

ELDER H. O. SMITH is now residing at 1321 Ridenbaugh street, St. Joseph, Missouri, instead of 1343 Buchanan avenue. Make a note of it so that your correspondence will reach him promptly.

ELDER DAVID W. THOMAS has with his family located in the suburbs of Springfield, Missouri, and being live Sunday School and church workers will be a help to the branch there. They were formerly of Lamoni, Iowa, but more recently of Illinois.

SR. H. E. REYNOLDS, Tekama, Nebraska, requests the Saints in St. Joseph, Missouri, to call on her sister, Mrs. William Belville, who has lately moved there and is located at 2805 Penn street. Herself and husband are both members of the church.

BRO. F. M. McDONALD, Mount Pleasant, Iowa, extends an earnest invitation to any of the ministry who may be passing Mt. Pleasant, to stop over and visit him. He says:

Take the Brazolton House bus at my expense, and they will bring you to my house.

We have an article from the pen of Bro. R. Etzenhouser on the Book of Mormon characters, referred to in his discourse on "Umorah" at the late General Conference, which will be of interest to our readers. We will probably publish it next week; look for it.

BRO. C. W. ETHRIDGE, Effingham, Kansas, though not privileged to enjoy the advantages of branch associations, is strong in the faith and testifies that if the isolated ones will maintain their integrity and fight the battle in the fear of the Lord, having their trust in his power, they will be victorious. He has realized in his own experience since being called to remove from the Netawaka branch, that the Lord has blessed him with a goodly portion of His Spirit, and his earnest desire is to see the work of the Lord prosper. He asks the Saints to pray for the isolated that they may remain faithful and true.

BRO. S. O. FOSS sends us an interesting account of the work at Bar Harbor, Maine, and in central Maine, and of his labors there; but as he failed to either date his letter or put an address on it, we were forced to convey it to that receptacle whence are consigned many fond hopes. Try again, Bro. S. O., and don't forget to say where you are "at."

MR. J. H. WILLIAMS, Wallis Station, Austin county, Texas, renewing for the ENSIGN, says: I do not belong to the church now; would like to join if I had a chance. There are none of the Saints here, could you tell me where the nearest branch is? or if you know of any elder near here, I would like to see him.

We are unable to answer these inquiries; perhaps Bro. H. A. Stebbins, Church recorder, Lamoni, Iowa, could advise him where the nearest branch is located.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

MR. J. R. HELM, Schell City, Missouri:

What few Saints there are here are noble Saints and strong in the faith. I have not yet joined the church, but am satisfied of the truth of the work.

SR. NELLIE COLE, Inland, Michigan:

It is very seldom any of the elders come this way, and our branch is nearly all gone; some moved away, others grown cold; a few are trying to keep the campfire blazing. I feel that it is good to be a Saint in latter days, and know that God's Spirit will always be with us if we live for it.

BRO. C. J. LUNDEEN, Union Fort Branch, Utah:

As a branch we are striving to keep together in unity of spirit. Although our homes are several miles apart, we strive to sustain our regular meetings twice a month, and the church papers are a source of comfort and strength to us. I hope we may all prove faithful and meet in the sweet by and by.

SR. IDA MINKLER, Lorain, Ohio:

I can sympathize with the isolated one. We go to Cleveland occasionally to church and have been to Kirtland. Bro. Etzenhouser gave us some good sermons here in our house over two years ago, which were appreciated very much. I tried to get a church but prejudice is so strong, it was impossible. People seem to be afraid of being contaminated by the truth.

SR. NETTIE SCHADER, Norman, Oklahoma:

We have not been here long and do not know whether or not there are any Saints living here, but think if we get the Ensign we will hear more about the whereabouts of the Saints and elders of this district. Would be glad to have an elder stop here any time they are in this neighborhood. We live about eight miles northeast of Norman.

GENERAL CHURCH NEWS.

INDEPENDENCE.

R-a-1-y.

Rally day, May 27th.

Sr. Blatt is improving.

Sr. John Crick is suffering somewhat from heart trouble.

Bro. J. C. Foss expects to be at St. Joseph, Missouri, next Sunday.

Sr. P. Peterson has been suffering from rheumatism the past week, but is better again.

Sr. W. S. Loar was quite ill with paralytic symptoms last week. Administrations relieved her Sunday.

Bro. Levi Cheney is able to get out of doors occasionally but seems quite feeble, though comparatively free from distress.

Bro. H. J. Davison departed for Chicago Saturday evening last, and Bro. R. C. Evans on Tuesday. The stay of these brethren among us was much appreciated; both were useful.

Sr. Newkirk was removed from her home to her mother's last week. She was suffering from hemorrhage of the bowels quite severely Sunday, but received relief from administrations. She is still quite weak.

Every member of the branch should make necessary preparations to be present on Rally day. Last year Rally day was a grand success and we should make it even better this year. Bro. James and the choir will have an interesting musical program to present, and good speakers will be secured. Don't fail to be present on time. Eat cold lunches and omit cooking as much as possible that day.

Sr. Letitia Crick, who had a fall last winter injuring her right arm, had her injuries examined recently, and it was found that there is a serious dislocation of the arm at the shoulder. It has been thought all along that it was simply sprained. Her age makes this accident the more serious, as to have a surgical operation would tax her nervous system. She desires the Saints to pray for her recovery.

Pres. Joseph Smith will be present and is expected to preach next Sunday morning. Greet him with a large turnout. At night, as previously announced, Elder R. Etzenhouser will deliver his able and interesting lecture on Cumorah, illustrated by a very large and beautiful landscape painting, the handiwork of our well known artist, Bro. Victor Kress. The auditorium and gallery should be well filled on both occasions next Lord's day.

Bro. Alma Pitt, well known as a boy in Independence, but now developed into the manliest kind of a young man of 24, being fully convinced that our heavenly Father's decree that it is not good for man to be alone, is right, succeeded in persuading one of our estimable young sisters, then in Chicago but more recently of Kansas City, Sr. Mamie Clark, to take the same view of it; consequently Bro. Alma arrived in Kansas City last Saturday and on Sunday evening, at the home of the bride's parents, the magic words were spoken by Bro. F. G.

Pitt which united these two excellent young Saints for a life's work and journey. We had not the pleasure of meeting the bride, but judging from the radiant countenance of Bro. Alma when he called at the ENSIGN office Tuesday to say good-by, there was no mistaking the feelings with which he regards his venture. The happy couple left for Chicago, their future home, Tuesday evening. May the sun shine oershadow the clouds all the way along their pathway is our prayer.

Bro. J. W. Brackenburg left Monday morning for California to take charge of some property there for the McCauley estate. He will probably be gone for some time, though, we are glad to know, not permanently. Bro. Brackenburg is one of the "old timers," and has therefore a wide acquaintance in and out of the church. He is consistent in his life, a good man, and highly esteemed. He will be missed, at least by the Saints, as well as his relatives, as he has so long been a familiar figure among them; but we are sure wherever he may be the work of the Lord, which he loves so steadfastly, will be honored, and men enlightened so far as he has opportunity. God bless Bro. Brackenburg, prosper his way and bring him back to us again safely.

Sunday was fraught with blessings to the Saints who composed the audiences at the various services in the church. Over three hundred were in attendance at the Sunday School. At eleven o'clock Bro. Joseph Luff, as previously announced, delivered the memorial sermon for Grandma Jane Mooney who died February, 1899, his absence preventing an earlier compliance with the request made prior to Sr. Mooney's demise. A high and deserved tribute was paid to her character. She was a worthy Saint, who, while her own life had many sorrows, always carried cheer and sunshine to others. At the close of the service many of the congregation proceeded to Shultz's pond to witness the baptism of Sr. W. N. Robinson, her husband being the happy administrator of the holy ordinance; it was an impressive scene. She was confirmed at the afternoon communion service under the hands of Apostle R. C. Evans and Elder Ellis Short, and was warmly welcomed into the fold by the Saints. A good season of testimony followed, the Holy Spirit bearing witness in the testimonies given. About 3:40 p. m. the meeting was turned over to Bro. I. N. White, missionary in charge, and Bro. Ellis Short, W. R. Pickering and W. H. Pease were ordained high priests under the hands of President Alexander H. Smith, Apostle R. C. Evans and Bishop R. May respectively. Bro. J. D. White was set apart as second counselor to the president of the 5th quorum of Elders, and Bro. J. W. Layton second counselor to the president of the 3d quorum of Priests by the same brethren, President A. H. Smith and R. C. Evans being respective spokesmen. The Spirit's presence in these ordinations brought joy and praise to all hearts. At the conclusion of these solemn rites, President Smith bore witness to the calling of Bro. Ellis Short and W. H. Pease to the bishopric, which office will probably be conferred in the near future. At night Apostle R. C. Evans delivered a telling discourse from the text, "Behold I come quickly."

The branch met in regular business session of the month Monday evening, May 7th, presiding priest, J. W. Layton, in the chair, assisted by district president, R. May; J. W. Luff, secretary. Reports of officers were read, including one from President G. E. Harrington expressing his appreciation of the cordial support given him by the Saints during his incumbency of the presidency of the branch. Treasurer reported for month of April, receipts $44.75, expenses $37.90, balance $6.85. Treasurer's report for six months was also presented, showing receipts $214.10, expenses $208.25. The building committee also reported receipts to February 4th, $1,073.35. Expenditures to February 26th, $1,060.00; balance $13.85. Final action was taken in the case of Sr. Theresa Thomas Christensen, and she was declared disqualified from church membership until restitution is made. Letters from Stewarts-ville, Missouri, branch for Bro. J. G. Pointer and wife and two daughters were read, and on motion they were received as members of this branch. Letters of removal to First Kansas City branch for Bro. W. R. Bozarth and St. Nettie Clow-Eastwood were granted. On motion the election of officers was then taken up resulting in the following selection: W. H. Garrett, president; J. W. Layton, priest; Lester Brackenburg, teacher; B. C. Smith, deacon and treasurer, and Orville James, chorister. The deacon nominated Bro. Horton for janitor which was ratified by vote of the branch. This completed the business and adjournment was taken.

The Metropolitan Railway Company is progressive, and seems to be inclined to accommodate its patrons as far as it can, consistently. There is a strong movement on foot, and meetings are being held along its Independence line, east of Sheffield, looking to the securing of a five cent fare between Kansas City and Independence. The company has made this concession as far as Sheffield, and in common with all residents of this city, we believe that this concession should be extended to cover Independence. We believe it would pay them to do so; and we further believe they will cheerfully make the reduction as soon as they can see that they will be justified in doing so. But no good business man would long run a business at a loss, or even inaugurate a policy which would be a losing one. President Holmes is a shrewd business man—his success with the Metropolitan system evidences that—and being in the street railway business, is as fully alive to the chances for competition as any other man, probably a good deal more so. We are of the opinion that our friends who are actively moving for a five cent fare, had best leave out reference to other prospective roads, as, in our estimation, for the reasons given above, it is worse than futile; tends to defeat the very object for which all are seeking. We think that all that is needed is to convince President Holmes that the interest of his company will not suffer by making the concession asked, and as a business man, as well as the accommodating gentleman he has shown himself to be, having the growth of Kansas City and suburbs, as well as of the interest he represents, at heart, he will do all, and even more than the present proposition asks of him. Let's talk business.

LAMONI, IOWA.

Good rains, crops and gardens growing.

Sr. A. P. Dancer, the matron at the Saints' Home, went to visit friends at Shaler, Sac county, Iowa, last week. Sr. Belle Wisdom is matron pro tem.

Apostle W. H. Kelley departed to Malvern, Iowa.

At the last business meeting, 1st inst., several were recommended for ordination, some letters granted and some received by letter.

A prayer and testimony meeting was held by the Religion on the night of the 4th; the subject was "unity."

Yesterday, Sunday 6th, the preaching in the morning at the Saints' church was by Elder John Smith; his text was the 17th chapter of St. John, his theme was "The import of unity." It was an intellectual treat. Meda Baker, a daughter of Sr. Walstrom, was baptized Sunday, 6th, by Elder Walstrom and confirmed by Apostle Wight and Elder Stebbins. The afternoon sacrament service was in charge of Elder Gunsollet, assisted by Apostle Wight and Elder Stebbins. Bro. Paul, Brackenburg and Mather were ordained deacons, and Elbert Smith and Sorenson elders, by Apostles Wight and Lambert, Bishop E. L. Kelley and Elder Stebbins. At night Elder J. D. Stead preached at the church and Elder Stebbins at the Home.

CHICAGO, ILLINOIS.

Branch headquarters, 716 W. Van Buren St., Sunday meetings 2:45 and 7:45 p. m.; Lang Mission, 3411 Cottage Grove Ave., 10:45 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.; West Pullman branch, 12024 Union Ave., 10:30 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.; Parkside Mission, 7124 Stony Island Ave., 3:00 and 7:30 p. m.; 608 W. 37th St. (colored mission), 10:30 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.

Another milestone has been passed and it proved to be a bright and comforting one, cheering the weary pilgrim on his way Zionward. Our reunion meeting was a success. The indwelling testimony and peace testified to by many and enjoyed, we trust, by all, was a rich blessing to God's people. Great throngs of Saints are not essential to such blessings, but where the few come together in unity and devotion there the good Spirit loves to dwell. If this meeting is a firstfruit of the year's experience in Chicago, we may expect a rich harvest. Bro. William Strange and the elder were in charge.

We enjoyed very much the Sabbath School at Lang mission, Bro. S. C. Good in charge. Some very interesting and intricate questions were developed in our class.

Bro. H. J. Davison arrived in the city yesterday morning after traveling all night without sleep. Though weary he was willing to "go to work." He celebrated his forty-seventh birthday by preaching twice, attending a Sabbath School and a three hour sacramental service. A day we trust long to be remembered by him and those who heard him. He will remain a few days ere wending his way eastward to his field of labor.

Our flat hunting and moving, etc., has prevented our pastoral work; also our correspondence. We hope soon to be fitted up in our new quarters and take up both again with new vigor. Wife is bearing bravely the heavy bereavement and keeps up moderately well in bodily health. She will be a closer companion than ever in our missionary work.

We begin tonight a protracted effort at the Park Side mission, 7124 Stony Island avenue, to continue during good interest. The local brethren will aid in this. Bro. R. C. Evans was announced there tonight. Bro. H. J. Davison will probably occupy tomorrow night. We hope the Saints will rally to our help all they can.

Bro. Alma Pitt started Zionward Saturday evening, stopping off at Kansas City, not to locate, however, but to capture a prize and return. It will be Sr. Mamie Pitt, instead of Sr. Mamie Clark, hereafter. We heartily wish them both long and happy life. They have both done well and we are pleased to know they will reside in Chicago.

Bro. F. M. Pitt has located on the west side at 258 North Troy street. J. M. TERRY.

ST. JOSEPH, MISSOURI.

Last Sunday closed the ministerial labors of Elder H. O. Smith in this city. For the past two years, by General Conference appointment, he has been missionary in charge of the work in this place, and has been a faithful, earnest laborer, never failing to be at his post of duty promptly, and encouraging others by kind words and gentle persuasion to observe and remember their duties.

Seven were baptized on Sunday afternoon; Miss Irene Peck and Maud Guinand by Bro. C. E. Guinand, and Basil Sturgis, Rachel A. Drazay, Raymond H. Fairbanks, Wm. Robert Thomas Nanny, and Jennie Marcine Kinder by Elder H. O. Smith.

Sr. Peck will go to Pacific Grove, California, this week, there to make her future home. She will be alone as to church fellowship. California missionaries please note.

Last Wednesday evening occurred the largest business meeting ever held in the St. Joseph branch, the order of the evening being the semi-annual election of officers. The result of the balloting was as follows: Wm. Lewis, president; D. J. Krahl, priest; G. W. Best, teacher; Coventry Archibald, deacon; John L. Bear, secretary; Pearl Best, recording secretary; R. Winning, chorister, with power to choose organists.

Our mission in South Park is flourishing. Sunday School is held and preaching services.

This is the first time in fourteen years that St. Joseph has been left out in General Conference appointments of missionaries.

G. L. K.

ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI.

Dewey's been here the past few days, well entertained by the citizens.

Bro. M. F. Gowell, en route to his mission field, stopped over Sunday with us, speaking three times here yesterday. He is announced at Cheltenham for three nights this week.

Bro. M. H. Bond left Friday morning for his mission field, his daughter, Lottie, going at the same time, en route to some point in Michigan. Bro. Trowbridge and wife seem to feel a little orphan.

The prayer meeting yesterday afternoon had some especially interesting and beneficial features.

Bro. James Christensen represented our work at Belleville; Bro. Barraclough, Caseyville; Bro. Davis, Oak Hill; Bro. Gowell, Cheltenham in afternoon and Bro. Hitchcock at night; Bro. Gowell, St. Louis, both morning and evening, yesterday.

Sr. John Molyneux is very sick at present, also Joseph Radford, though prospects for recovery of both are good.

Sr. Alice Robyne, around whom the death angel seemed to hover very closely for a time in the recent past, attended services yesterday. She expressed herself as being satisfied that the prayers of the Saints in her behalf had prevailed.

Sr. Peters was among the sick last week, calling for the administration. Although quite sick, the Lord appeared to recognize her faith. A very encouraging feature of our work here is the fact that many of the Saints put more faith in God, and less in men than formerly, with very satisfactory results usually.

Bro. J. D. White, the hustling preacher of Independence district, was with us during the past week. Some regrets are expressed that he was not returned to this field this year.

Bro. J. G. Smith, our bishop's agent, has been visiting in Wayne county, Illinois, the past few days.

With hope of success and fairly bright hopes before us, we gladly work on.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA.

Services at Golden West Hall, 320 Post street, every Sunday. Sunday School 10 a. m., preacher 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.; prayer meeting first Sunday of each month at 12:15 noon. Elder C. A. Parkin presiding elder, residence 3010 16th street.

A very pleasant session was held by the Sunday School at 10 a. m. under the supervision of the energetic superintendent, Sr. Ella Lytle. Preaching at 11 a. m. by Chas. A. Parkin.

Death has again visited our people, and Bro. Joseph White has been called home after a siege of suffering of some years duration. He was the son of Sr. Susan White whose name is well known in our church papers. Bro. Parkin officiated at his funeral Sunday afternoon. Interment at Mount Olivet cemetery, San Mateo county, California.

The writer was the speaker at Oakland at 2 p. m., and also addressed Saints and friends in San Francisco in the evening. Elder J. A. Saxe was the speaker at Oakland in the evening.

There was a good attendance at the Wednesday evening prayer meeting, and a peaceful spirit prevailed. Thursday afternoon the Sisters' Prayer Union met.

All took part at the Religio Friday evening. The studies were interesting and the entertainment good. The critic's report was a special feature of the evening.

Our warship "Iowa" is now in our bay, also a French warship, and several transports, all painted white, with yellow smokestacks. They are all immense iron vessels, sailing between here and Manila.

SECOND KANSAS CITY BRANCH.

Corner Sixteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue. Sunday School 9:30 a. m., preaching 11 a. m., prayer meeting 2:30 p. m., preaching 7:30 p. m.

The Sunday School was in charge of Bro. August Koehler. There were forty-five in attendance. Bro. Wm. Clow reviewed the school very interestingly. He is again located at Independence, Missouri.

The morning preaching service was conducted by Elder Joseph Emmott, assisted by Elder William Newton. The speaker was Bro. Wm. Clow.

In the evening Elder Newton addressed the congregation on "Christ's Commission to His Apostles." He produced clear out logical testimony that the signs should follow the believer, and that the spiritual gifts of the gospel should be enjoyed by the obedient and faithful now just the same as in the time of Jesus.

Bro. Ammon White attended the Religio last Friday night and stirred up the society to increased energy and diligence. Come often, Bro. Ammon; your efforts are effective.

LETTER DEPARTMENT.

CHICAGO, Ill., April 12.

Editor Ensign:—The subject of this memoir, who was Sr. Anthe Chobar, was born in the township of Wesley, Will county, Illinois, August 17, 1879; died April 7, 1900, and was, therefore, 20 years, 8 months and 21 days old.

Baptized with her parents into the church by Elder F. G. Pitt in the month of June, 1895. Your writer never met the sister alive, therefore, can say nothing from personal knowledge, other than that gathered by conversations with her parents and others on the day of her burial. Though young in years the suffering events of her life were of that character that do not often occur in a long life. At the early age of six years she was afflicted with typhoid fever which left her a subject of decrepit rheumatism till death; in addition to that, it eventually reached the optic nerves, and left her totally blind for the past five years, and quite a sufferer, consumption closing her life scenes. In the midst of it all, however, she bore her affliction patiently and was the comforting and consoling companion of her mother, who two weeks prior to her daughter's death, was also stricken down with sickness and could not be removed from her bed to attend the funeral. Therefore, the funeral sermon (by your writer) was delivered in the sick chamber, the house being full of attentive listeners and sorrowful friends. Her chief desire was to go with her daughter. The funeral took place on April 9th, about eight miles from Wilmington, Illinois.

INDEPENDENCE, MO., May 5.

Editor Ensign:—As I am going away for a short time I thought I would say to the ENSIGN and its readers, that I shall not only miss the ENSIGN but the readers also, and the communion of the Saints. I have been a citizen of Independence for over twenty-three years, to say nothing of being here in 1832-3. Independence is a grand old town, and there are a good many good people in it, besides the Saints—as good neighbors as I ever lived by. I think I have some warm friends who do not belong to our church.

When Bro. Beagle and I came here twenty-three years ago the first day of last April, there was not a member of our church in the town. Bro. Pilgrim, Eitzenhouser, Campbell and Sr. Noble lived in the country, from two to six miles out.

In the Herald of November 15, 1877, I notified the church that they could buy one thousand acres of land near Lees Summit, in Jackson county, Missouri, all in a body, with houses, orchards, bars, wells and fences, all in good condition, for twenty dollars per acre; but that is past.

I shall miss the companionship of the Saints and neighbors much; will they miss me? No, one dropping out of their midst will not be missed, so many new ones coming in so often. I hope I shall not be gone from your company. Very long for this is my home. I have not done much for the church, but have done what I could.

May the God of Saints ever bless his people will be my prayer in my absence. Ever praying for the ultimate redemption of Zion, I remain

Your brother,
J. W. BRACKENBURY.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., May 8th.

Editor Ensign:—On Monday evening, May 7th, Bro. and Sr. H. O. Smith received a genuine surprise. About seventy-five of the Saints gathered in a body and presented themselves at their home. A most hearty welcome was extended them and during the evening it seemed that each one, by a smile, a word or a deed tried to gladden the heart of the departing missionary. Bro. R. Winning opened the preliminaries of the evening with a speech, the principal object being hidden until the last, when, in behalf of the Saints of St. Joseph, he presented Bro. and Sr. Smith with a purse containing $37.30.

A beautiful scarf pin was also presented by Bro. D. H. Blair's Sunday School class. Following these presentations, refreshments, consisting of ice cream and cake, were served. Several musical selections were given by the Kinneman quartet, and one by Bro. H. O. Smith. The hours flew swiftly and the time drew near to bid the "God-speed" which was done with heartiness.

On the 24th of April the sad word came to Bro. D. J. Krahl that his father, who was living at Stewartsville, Missouri, had passed away at 2 o'clock on that day. He had been a great sufferer, being afflicted since last June with heart and kidney trouble, unable to wait on himself the greater part of the time. About one week previous to his death he had started to doctor with a specialist, and the dropsical swelling had entirely subsided; so much better was he feeling that he remarked that he expected to be at his work in ten days. The day of his death he had eaten a hearty dinner, sat down in a rocking chair, put on his slippers and was talking very cheerfully of his freedom from distress, and anticipated immediate return of health; but ah! no, it was not thus to be, for the messenger of death called, and without one moment's warning his spirit was called away. The earthly abode of his spirit was lovingly laid to rest in the Saints' cemetery at the DeKalb branch about two miles from Stewartsville.

OAK HARBOR, O., April 15.

Editor Ensign:—There is a little handful of Saints at Locust Point, and, thanks be to the dear Lord, I belong to the little band. Bro. F. C. Smith baptized ten of us, and since then I have been wonderfully blessed, for which I praise the Lord. I am so thankful that the dear Lord showed me the true light of the gospel through Elder F. C. Smith. We heard more Bible what little time Bro. Smith preached here than we heard before in a whole life time, and he told lots of things that we never knew were in the Bible. It hurt the Brethren people so much they would not let our elder in the church to hold meetings, so we had to go in the dancing hall; but the Lord met with us just the same and we had good meetings. I do rejoice that I have obeyed the true gospel, and am trusting in Jesus, and patiently waiting his coming.

Dear Saints, pray for me that I may prove faithful, and also pray for my husband that he may walk in the true light of the gospel. Oh, what a blessed meeting it will be when the dear Lord comes to gather his Saints. May he bless and help us all to do our duty, in my prayer. We would like to have an elder come and preach for us, if we knew where to write for him.

Your sister in the one faith,
N. A. MYERS.

HEP WORTH, Ont., April 19.

Editor Ensign:—Dear Saints, I am still trying to press onward in this grand and glorious work of God; he has shown me the light and I do give glory and praise to him for his goodness to me in these latter days. Our church is about five miles from here, but there is Sunday School at our place every Sunday at half past two. We hope that the time may soon come when all the Saints will be ready to be caught up in the clouds to meet our Savior at his coming; and if we continue faithful and bear the cross bravely for him we need not fear.

I have been reading the history of Joseph Smith the prophet; it is a very interesting book. I have been baptized, also father, mother, five sisters and two brothers; there are three yet outside the church, but hope they may soon be led to obey the gospel of Jesus Christ, for it is the power of God unto salvation. Our branch is increasing all the time.

Bro. Gerrie is our elder and he preaches very well for being young in the work. Elder Compton is at our place; just now he is sick with a cold.

Brothers and sisters, pray for me that I may grow more in the faith, and when the time comes that we may be able to wear the crown that is laid up for us by the Master if we continue faithful.

Yours in the gospel,
PHILINA BARNES.

WHITE ROCK, Kas., April 7.

Dear Ensign:—When you come to us on each recurring Saturday, you bring us the only communication with Saints that we are privileged to enjoy; consequently you are devoured with avidity, and laid down with a sigh, wishing you were twice as big as you are.

We are among the isolated ones, deprived of church privileges, there being only one other family of Saints in this neighborhood, and they four miles distant. There has been very little preaching done here, and what was done was some three or four years ago. Prejudice is a rank growth and the United Brethren and Methodists rule the country. My husband and I have been in the true fold of Christ eleven months today, and I can say we have received of the "signs following" blessings enough to prove to us beyond the shadow of a doubt that it is the true fold, and that this work is the pure gospel of apostolic days restored. We have had sickness banished in answer to prayer, where the symptoms were so severe that only the divine hand could allay them so suddenly, yet they vanished in a night.

We would be glad to have an elder come this way; he shall lack neither food nor shelter, and have an excellent yard in which to set the gospel tent, if it should happen along some day. We came from Colorado last fall, on our way to Zion, and have stopped here in these regions to acquire wherewithal for our inheritance, when we expect to press on into Zion's borders.

Dear Saints, one and all, pray for us that we may ever be faithful and have a word for the hope that is within us. Ever praying for the welfare of Zion and the speedy obeying by all Saints of Section 42 of Doctrine and Covenants, I remain,

Your sister in the one faith,
MRS. LORRA M. JOHNSON.

TULARE, Cal., April 25.

Editor Ensign:—It has been seven months since we have heard a missionary's voice. If any will have occasion to pass through this place, which is on the main line of the Southern Pacific, and they will stop, they will receive a hearty welcome to tarry with us. Although we are not spiritually dead by any means, but we do love to receive words of instruction and encouragement from others.

Last Sunday we drove ten miles to hear our worthy Priest C. W. Deuel preach his first sermon, it was filled with thoughts good for reflection.

A few weeks ago Walter Marshall, a lad of sixteen summers, walked ten miles to attend a prayer meeting near Bro. Deuels and to be baptized. His conversion is due wholly in being associated with our young brother, John Wiles, while working together. John takes advantage of every opportunity in explaining the gospel to those with whom he comes in contact. He is well versed in the Bible and church literature, devoting his spare time to studying. Walter is following his example, is a bright boy for one of his years. We hope to see both of them called to the ministry.

By the way we must not forget to mention Bro. Deuels' artesian well and pond, where the weary elder may find rest and catch the appetizing fish. We will vouch that he can also have access to the strawberry, blackberry and melon patches. Let us know when you are coming.

MRS. MARY A. TWADDLE.

BANQUOR, Me., April 18.

Dear Ensign:—Perhaps some of your readers would like to hear from a few isolated Saints who are trying to live worthy of the name Saint. We feel oftentimes that it is hard to be separated from the brothers and sisters and church privileges, yet we know that God's hand is over us, and he will lead and guide his children if they firmly trust him and try to live lives that would be acceptable in his sight. How glad I am of the hope I have of a better life. I feel to thank my heavenly Father more each day I live for leading me into the marvelous light of the gospel of his dear Son, this same gospel which has been restored to earth in these the latter days.

My heart goes out today for all humanity. Oh, that all would hear and accept the glad tidings of great joy, and keep the faith that was once delivered to the Saints. We know that our probation here is short, and growing shorter every day, so let us as Saints endure to the end, be faithful in all things, observe all the commandments, Jesus Christ being our helper, and we shall be crowned with glory and reign with him a thousand years.

I was adopted into the kingdom three years ago last January, and it is my desire to live faithful until Jesus comes to reign and make up his jewels.

Ever praying for Zion's redemption I remain,

Your sister in the gospel,
MARGIE E. CLOSSON.

CRED MAKING.

SERMON BY ELDER I. M. SMITH.

I call your attention to two paragraphs of scripture; the first will be found in Revelation 22: 18, 19:

"For I testify unto every man that heareth the words of the prophecy of this book, If any man shall add unto these things, God shall add unto him the plagues that are written in this book: and if any man shall take away from the words of the book of this prophecy, God shall take away his part out of the book of life, and out of the holy city, and from the things which are written in this book."

The other statement you will find in 2 Peter 1: 3, 4:

"According as his divine power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness, through the knowledge of him that hath called us to glory and virtue: whereby are given unto us exceeding great and precious promises: that by these ye might be partakers of the divine nature, having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust."

I do not flatter myself that I shall be able to present anything new in regard to these passages of scripture, for I judge they are familiar to all Latter Day Saints. It sometimes happens, however, that an old song sung to a new tune is interesting, and I hope by the help of the Spirit of God to be enabled to present some thoughts in connection with these texts that will edify and instruct.

You are well aware that these two passages of scripture are used as the strongest arguments of our opponents against our position concerning the Book of Mormon and continued revelation. Wherever we go and present the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ, and tell the people that God has again spoken from the heavens, as in ancient times, we find people who are willing to justify themselves in rejecting it upon the ground that the Apostle Peter says, "all things that pertain unto life and godliness" are "given to us," and that, therefore, the revelations given to this church are frauds, that they are impositions, and that they are an outrage against that blessed Bible. In the first place it will be necessary for us to understand what the Apostle John means when he says: "If any man shall add unto these things,"

It seems to me that any person, who would but stop and think, would be able to see that John had reference only to the book of Revelation, which he had just written; for the books of the New Testament had not then been compiled into one volume, as they are at the present time. Those letters and books composing the New Testament were scattered over different parts of the world; one perhaps at Galatia, one at Ephesus, another at Corinth, and another at Philippi, etc.; and the Apostle John simply had reference to the one he was then writing. Now, for me—or any other man for that matter—to take up the book of Revelation, and insert thoughts or ideas into it which would change the sense, and then palm it off on the people as the Revelation of St. John, would be adding "unto these things." Or if I should take up the book of Revelation and take out some words or sentences, changing the sense, and then palm it off on people as the Revelation of St. John, I would be guilty of taking "from the words of the book of this prophecy."

But, while this text refers directly only to the book of Revelation, the principle it teaches is applicable to every revelation that God has ever given to man, whether the revelation be long or short, whether it contains ten words or ten thousand words. Man has no right to add to nor take from anything that God has given—has no right to do so now, never did have the right to do so, and never will have. You will remember the text says: "If any man shall add to," or "take from," etc., nothing is said about what God proposes to do in the premises; there is nothing said about whether he will give more revelations, or whether he will withhold them. Mind you, he places this restriction upon man, and leaves himself free to do as seemeth him good.

Now, if you will turn back with me to the fourth chapter of Deuteronomy, I will show you there that as early as the days of Moses, men were forbidden to add to or take from God's word:

"Ye shall not add unto the word which I command you; neither shall ye diminish ought from it, that ye may keep the commandments of the Lord your God which I command you."—Deut. 4: 2.

A little farther on, in the same book, Moses repeats this command:

"What thing soever I command you, observe to do it: thou shalt not add thereto, nor diminish from it."—Deut. 12: 32.

Here, that it might be impressive, the thought is repeated that man shall not add to nor take from that which Moses, the great prophet of God, had given unto the children of Israel. The same command is again repeated in Proverbs 30:

"Every word of God is pure; he is a shield unto them that put their trust in him. Add thou not unto his words, lest he reprove thee, and thou be found a liar."—Prov. 30: 5, 6.

Now, while it is true that Revelation 22: 18, 19 refers (directly) only to the book of Revelation, and that Deuteronomy 4: 2, and 12: 32 refer (directly) only to the five books of Moses, it is true, also, that the last quotation refers to "every word of God," in whatever book it may be found. And the same is true of the following:

"I know that, whatsoever God doeth, it shall be forever: nothing can be put to it, nor anything taken from it; and God doeth it, that men should fear before him."—Ecc. 3: 14.

This establishes what I said a while ago, that the principle taught in Revelation 22: 18, 19, is applicable to every revelation that God has ever given to man—"nothing can be put to it, nor anything taken from it." God tells us through Moses, the first writer of the Old Testament, that "man" must not add to nor take from his word; and then tells us again through John the Revelator, the last writer of the New Testament, that "man" must not add anything to nor take anything from that which he had given. Why? Because "every word of God is pure," and came from the lips of a being of infinite wisdom, and infinite knowledge; and, if man should take that up, with his imperfect understanding of God's will, and of God's purposes, and should begin to add to or eliminate therefrom, he would render the word of God imperfect, or, rather, his substitute for the word of God would be imperfect—it would no longer be the word of God. The Psalmist says:

"The words of the Lord are pure words: as silver tried in a furnace of earth, purified seven times."—Psa. 12: 6.

Again he says: "Thy word is very pure: therefore thy servant loveth it."—Psa. 119: 140.

Not only are his words pure, but his law is perfect. Of this the Psalmist says:

"The law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul."—Psa. 19: 7.

And the Apostle James says: "But whose looketh into the perfect law of liberty, and continueth therein, * * * this man shall be blessed in his deed."—James 1: 25.

Perhaps you are thinking, "If his law is perfect, we don't need any more revelation." But you will please remember that the Psalmist said "the law of the Lord is perfect" about one thousand years before the birth of the Savior, and that the Lord kept right on giving revelations to man—Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, Daniel, and all the prophets, wrote after that statement was made. And, according to the chronology as given in our Bibles, James calls the gospel "the perfect law of liberty," in the year A. D. 60, and after that, Paul wrote his epistles to the Ephesians, Philippians, Colossians, first and second Timothy, Titus, Philemon, and Hebrews; Peter wrote his second letter, John wrote his first, second and third epistles, his gospel, and also the book of Revelation, all written after James calls the gospel "the perfect law of liberty." We believe that "the law of the Lord is perfect," "the perfect law of liberty," that "every word of God is pure," "very pure;" but we believe this also:

"If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not; and it shall be given him."—James 1: 5.

And this: "For precept must be upon precept, precept upon precept; line upon line, line upon line; here a little, and there a little."—Isa. 28: 10.

That is, we believe that every revelation that God has ever given to man is perfect, for the purpose for which it was given, whether that revelation be long or short.

that the canon of Scripture is full and complete, as he has never told us that the day of revelations and angelic ministrations is past, as God has never told us any of these things, we have refused to accept them simply upon man's assertion. To assert and to teach such things, when God has not taught them, seems to us too much like adding to the word of the Lord. The Lord has never told us that the Bible contains all the wisdom and knowledge of God, neither has he, so far as we know, authorized any man to tell us so. He has never told us that any man who claims to have received a revelation from God must be at once denounced as an impostor and false prophet, nor has he told us that any man who claims to have had a revelation from God is guilty of adding to the word of the Lord as revealed to us in the Bible. Men have been dinning these things into our ears for years past; and, during those years, we have been asking them to give us a "thus saith the Lord" for their assertions, but have asked in vain. It is not receiving revelations that is forbidden. No inspired writer, from Moses to John the Revelator, has ever said that man shall not receive any more revelations from God, neither has any inspired writer told us that God will not give any more revelations to man. No, friends, those men of God who wrote "as they were moved by the Holy Ghost," have never told us these things. Uninspired men who write as they are moved by the wisdom of men, are the ones who have been teaching these things. Inspired writers, from Moses to John the Revelator, have told us that "man" must not add to nor take from anything which God has revealed; that "every word of God is pure," that "nothing can be put to it nor anything taken from it," that "the law of the Lord is perfect;" but, during all that time, the Lord kept right on giving "precept upon precept" and "line upon line;" during all that time, when men lacked wisdom and went to God in prayer and faith, the Lord heard their prayers and gave them the necessary wisdom. And, if Moses saying that men should not "add to" nor "diminish aught from" what he had written, does not mean that God will give no more revelation after his day, then this scripture in Revelation does not mean that God will reveal nothing more after it was written; if Joshua, Samuel, Jeremiah, Daniel, Matthew, John, and all the writers of the Bible after Moses' day, do not come under condemnation for receiving and writing revelations after Moses had said, "Ye shall not add unto the word which I command you," then a man should not be considered a criminal nor an idiot for believing that man may receive revelations from God after John wrote:

"If any man shall add unto these things, God shall add unto him the plagues that are written in this book."

dice and tradition, that this text does not intimate, does not contain even the shadow of an intimation that revelations from God were to cease when the book of Revelation was finished.

I am satisfied that some before me have been in the army during the late war, and have gone out to face the enemy, and, you know, sometimes you had to take a strong battery, and in taking that battery you had to fight manfully. Now, when you had captured that battery, driven the enemy from it after much toil, perhaps the sacrifice of many precious lives, did you take that battery and throw it away, or did you turn it, face it about, and use it against the enemy that had been using it against you? I dare say that you would answer me that if the guns had not been spiked, you would turn them up on the enemy. And just so I propose to do with this text this morning. Having captured it from them, I propose using it against them, or see, at least, whom it condemns. If it be the Latter Day Saints, let them bear the condemnation; if it is some one else, let them bear the judgment that their works deserve.

We start now with the understanding that every word of God is pure, that the law of the Lord is perfect, that it is the perfect law of liberty. And, it being perfect, complete and pure, if you begin to add to it or take from it, you make it imperfect, incomplete and impure; and that no power, less than the one which gives the law, has a right to revise that law.

And, to simplify matters, and get before your minds, as clearly as possible, the thoughts which I desire to present, I shall ask you to draw upon your imaginations this far: Let us imagine that we have met, this morning, for the purpose of organizing a new church, and to draw up the articles of faith by which we purpose being governed—that we have become thoroughly convinced, from reading the Scriptures, that all the churches of our day are more or less in error, and that this is to be a new one, organized and built up according to the teaching of the Bible. And, as we can't very well agree upon what is to be the faith of this church till it is organized, we shall proceed at once to organize. Jesus says:

"Upon this rock I will build my church."—Matt. 16: 18.

And Paul says: "And now hath God set the members every one of them in the body as it hath pleased him."—1 Cor. 12: 18.

Now, if Christ is the builder of his church, if he "set the members every one of them in the body," we must go to the Bible and learn from it, if possible, what kind of a church he built. We read, first:

"And he ordained twelve, that they should be with him, and that he might send them forth to preach."—Mark 3: 14.

"And when it was day, he called unto him his disciples: and of them he chose twelve, whom also he named apostles."—Luke 6: 13.

"After these things the Lord appointed other seventy also, and sent them two and two before his face into every city and place, whither he himself would come."—Luke 10: 1.

"And God hath set some in the church, first apostles, secondarily prophets, thirdly teachers, after that miracles, then gifts of healings, helps, governments, diversities of tongues."—1 Cor. 12:28.

"And he gave some, apostles; and some, prophets; and some, evangelists; and some, pastors and teachers."—Eph. 4:11.

"Paul and Timotheus * * * with the bishops and deacons."—Phil. 1: 1.

"And when they had ordained them elders in every church. * * *"—Acts 14: 23.

Now, from the above texts, we learn that the Savior, in organizing his church, placed in it apostles, prophets, evangelists, seventies, pastors, bishops, elders, teachers, deacons, miracles, tongues, gifts of healings, helps and governments. Shall we ask the Lord to set all these in our church, which we are organizing this morning? Some one says, "No; we don't need some of those things in the church now."

Which ones are not needed now? "Well, we don't need any apostles, we don't need any prophets, we don't need any seventies, we don't need any miracles, gifts of healings, nor diversities of tongues." But didn't the Savior put all these in his church, and haven't we agreed that when God does anything, nothing can be put to it, nor anything taken from it? "Yes, but those things were necessary then; now we don't need them." Well, if they are not necessary, we will have it understood, to begin with, that this church will have no apostles, prophets; seventies, miracles, healings nor tongues—that we don't believe in such things in our day. Yet our text says,

"If any man shall take away from the words of the book of this prophecy, God shall take away his part out of the book of life, and out of the holy city, and from the things which are written in this book."

There is just as much condemnation for taking from God's word as there is for adding to it.

We shall organize our church, then, with evangelists, pastors, bishops, elders, teachers, and deacons. But how are these to be called? Again we take up the Bible and read:

"Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he would send forth labourers into his harvest."—Luke 10: 2.

"And no man taketh this honour unto himself, but he that is called of God as was Aaron."—Heb. 5: 4. (Aaron was called through the prophet, Moses. See Ex. 28: 1.)

"Now there were in the church that was at Antioch certain prophets and teachers. * * * As they ministered to the Lord, and fasted, the Holy Ghost said, Separate me Barnabas and Saul for the work whereunto I have called them."—Acts 13: 1, 2.

The Bible says that men must be "called of God as was Aaron," but as Aaron was called through a prophet (and Barnabas and Paul were called in a similar manner), and as we have no prophets in our new church, we can't expect men to be "called of God as was Aaron." So we decide that if a man feels "impressed" that he ought to go and labor for the Lord, he doesn't need to be called by the Lord speaking to "prophets and teachers" in the church, as he did in apostolic times. But, in this, we have committed a double wrong; we have disposed of the Lord's way of calling men, and have substituted one of our own—have both taken from, and added to, the word of God.

Now, that we have decided upon the form of organization, and the manner in which the officers are to be called, let us proceed to an examination of the Bible, and see how much of it we can accept as our rule of faith and practice. "But," says one, "I thought we agreed that the gospel is 'the perfect law of liberty,' and that we were to take the New Testament in its entirety, neither adding to nor taking from the word of God. Well, we shall read some of the New Testament and see if we can all agree to accept it. So we begin with the first of Matthew and read along all right till we run up against this:

"And no man knoweth the Son, but the Father; neither knoweth any man the Father, save the Son, and he to whomsoever the Son will reveal him."—Matt. 11: 27.

But here another objection is raised, and it is argued that although God did make himself known to men by revelation in the days of the Savior and his apostles, things have changed since then, and that we can know God now by reading of him in his word. A vote is taken, the congregation declare that this position is correct, and this new church, which was to be built according to the Scriptures, teaches that men can know God, now, without its being revealed to them by the Son—they can know him by reading his word. The same double sin of taking from God's word and teaching the opinions of men in its stead.

I turn over a little further, and read, Matthew 16: 18, where Jesus says that Peter had received a knowledge that Jesus was the Christ, by the revelation given by the Father, and Jesus says that "upon this rock I will build my church," that is, upon the revealed truth that Jesus is the Christ. But we soon decide that a church, now, should be built upon the Bible, and the Bible alone; so we do away with this text and build upon—our interpretation of the Bible. In the next verse, Matthew 16: 19, Jesus says unto Peter:

"I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven: and whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth shall be bound in heaven: and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven."

I turn to Matthew 18: 18, and I find that this promise is extended to the church, or especially to the officers of the church, and he says to them: "Whatsoever ye shall bind on earth shall be bound in heaven," etc., making it apply to the church. But we conclude that the church cannot have the keys of the kingdom of heaven in the nineteenth century, so we take that text out, too, and undertake to run our new church without the keys of the kingdom. We read on, then, till we come to Matthew 19: 13-15:

"Then were brought unto him little children, that he should put his hands on them, and pray: and the disciples rebuked them. But Jesus said, Suffer little children, and forbid them not, to come unto me: for of such is the kingdom of heaven. And he laid his hands on them, and departed thence."

I turn next to Mark 10: 16 and I read the same statement, only he says that Jesus took up the little children in his arms, put his hands on them and blessed them. It takes the congregation but a moment to decide that it would be more becoming to bring the little children to the ministers of the church, now, and have them sprinkled; so we decide to leave out the blessing of little children, by the laying on of hands and prayer, and substitute "christening" in its stead—taking away the example of the Master and "teaching for doctrine the commandments of men." And yet part of our text says:

"If any man shall take away from the words of the book of this prophecy, God shall take away his part out of the holy city."

In Mark 11th chapter, commencing at the 22d verse, we read:

"And Jesus answering saith unto them, Have faith in God. For verily I say unto you, That whosoever shall say unto this mountain, Be thou removed, and be thou cast into the sea; and shall not doubt in his heart, but shall believe that those things which he saith shall come to pass; he shall have whatsoever he saith. Therefore I say unto you, What things soever ye desire, when ye pray, believe that ye receive them, and ye shall have them." (See also Matthew 21: 21, 22.)

But our "new fangled" church this morning soon makes up its mind that such faith as is spoken of here, was confined to the apostolic age, and that it would be folly to preach that now; so we take that out of the gospel—as we expect to preach it; and yet God says:

"Whosoever shall take away from the words of the book of this prophecy, God shall take away his part out of the book of life, and out of the holy city."

We read on, then, till we come to Mark 16: 15-18, the great commission given by Christ to the apostles, and where Jesus says:

"Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature."

We believe that and put it in our creed.

"He that believeth and is baptized, shall be saved."

We do not believe that baptism is essential to salvation, therefore we will not incorporate that in our creed; but we believe that he that believeth shall be saved, and will put that in, and,

"He that believeth not, shall be damned."

We believe that and will also place that in our creed.

"And these signs shall follow them that believe; In my name they shall cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues."

We do not believe that, and shall not preach it either.

"They shall take up serpents; and if they drink any deadly thing, it shall not hurt them; they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover."

We do not believe men can drink poison, and it not hurt them, they would surely die; neither do we believe in laying hands on the sick, and they shall recover. We, therefore, shall not place such a belief in our creed. And yet the text says:

"If any man shall take away from the words of the book of this prophecy, God shall take away his part out of the book of life, and out of the holy city."

We next turn to John 3: 5, and read:

"Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God."

An objection is at once raised here, that this is too narrow; that men can say, "Lord save me now," and be saved in a moment—between two pulsations of the heart; that the thief, who was crucified with the Savior, simply said, "Lord, remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom," and was saved immediately; and that we can be saved, now, just like the thief on the cross. But some other good brother modestly suggests: "It may be nice enough to be saved 'like a thief,' if it suits one's fancy, but, for my own part, I would rather be saved 'like a Christian.'" But, as the Savior was baptized of John, in Jordan, and then received the Holy Spirit afterward (Matt. 3: 16), being thus 'born of water and of the Spirit,' and, as he said, "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, take up his cross, and follow me" (Matt. 16: 24); and, as he further says, "He that entereth not by the door into the sheepfold, but climbeth up some other way, the same is a thief and a robber" (John 10: 1), then I suppose, if a man isn't 'born of water and of the Spirit,' he will have to be saved 'like a thief,' if he is saved at all, for he will have to climb up 'some other way.'" But the members of the congregation promptly "sit down on" this brother as "an old fogy," and vote to take out the word "water" and put the word "truth in its stead, making the text read, "Except a man be born of the truth and of the Spirit"—"take away from" and "add to;" a double condemnation.

We next read Acts 2: 38:

"Then Peter said unto them, Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost."

And before taking any position on it we read Acts 22: 16, where Ananias said unto Saul,

"And now why tarriest thou? arise, and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling on the name of the Lord."

Having already decided that a person can be saved, freed from sin, by simply giving his heart to God, and that too in a moment, we, of course, cannot see the necessity of telling people to 'repent and be baptized * * * for the remission of sins,' nor of telling them to 'arise and be baptized and wash away your sins,' so out go these two texts. Yet we know what the penalty is—our name is to be "Taken out of the book of life, and out of the holy city" for doing so.

The next principal of the gospel, as taught and practiced in New Testament times, is just as obnoxious to modern church goers as being "baptized for the remission of sins." We find it in the following texts:

"Now, when the apostles which were at Jerusalem heard that Samaria had received the word of God, they sent unto them Peter and John: Who, when they were come down, prayed for them, that they might receive the Holy Ghost: * * * Then laid they their hands on them, and they received the Holy Ghost."—Acts 8: 14-17.

"When they heard this, they were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus. And when Paul had laid his hands upon them, the Holy Ghost came on them; and they spake with tongues, and prophesied."—Acts 19: 5, 6.

And Paul, in Hebrews 6: 2, enumerates "the principles of the doctrine of Christ" and gives, as the fourth principle, the "laying on of hands." The laying on of hands, then, was taught and practiced, for the reception of the Holy Spirit in the church which Christ built—after individuals had been "baptized for the remission of sins." Shall we teach and practice it in the new church which we are building "according to the Bible" this morning? "No," some one says, "it is out of date; it was all right in the days of the apostles, but it is done away with—is not for us." So we decide to risk getting the Spirit in some other way, and drop this "principle of the doctrine of Christ" from the gospel—as it is to be preached by us.

But we do not stop at this; we continue to read the New Testament, and continue to find things taught there that this new church of ours can't accept. In 1 Corinthians 12: 8-11, we read of the gifts of the Spirit which the Lord promised to his children, that "the manifestation of the Spirit is given to every man to profit withal."

"To one is given by the Spirit the word of wisdom."

That is good; we will insert that in our creed.

"To another the word of knowledge."

Yes, that is good too, so we will put that in.

"To another faith by the same Spirit."

The gift of faith; we believe in that; we will put that in also.

"And to another the gifts of healing."

We do not want that in our creed, we do not believe any one has the gift of healing now.

"To another the working of miracles."

We do not want that, we will strike that out; it is preposterous to believe in such things.

"To another prophecy; to another the discerning of spirits."

We will eliminate these from our creed, for we do not believe in them, for such are done away.

"To another divers kinds of tongues."

Well, we do not believe that, and we do not want it in our creed, for it is folly to believe in such things in these days.

"To another the interpretation of tongues."

As we have done away with the gift of tongues, we do not want the gift of interpretation, so we will strike that out too.

We next read 1 Cor. 14: 1:

"Follow after charity, and desire spiritual gifts, but rather that ye may prophesy.

We say it is all right to follow after charity, but that advice to desire, to prophesy, is all a delusion; so we will not place that in our creed. And ye read further in verse thirty-nine.

"Covet to prophesy, and forbid not to speak with tongues."

We do not believe that, so we take it out also. And in this same chapter, 1 Corinthians 14: 26, we also find this:

"How is it then, brethren? when ye come together, every one of you hath a psalm, hath a doctrine, hath a tongue, hath a revelation, hath an interpretation."

Now, shall we teach this in our new church? Shall we tell our members that, if they live for it, they too, may come together from time to time and have the gift of tongues, and receive revelations from God? Upon a vote being taken, it is decided that this, too, is done away—is not for us; so out it goes along with the others.

These are principles of the doctrine of Christ, the greatest bulk of which we have left out of our creed and, as a consequence, have taken them from the word of God; and yet my text says:

"If any man shall take away from the words of the book of this prophecy God shall take away his part out of the book of life, and out of the holy city."

We next examine Ephesians 4: 4, 5:

"There is one body, and one spirit, even as ye are called in one hope of your calling; one Lord, one faith, one baptism."

Well, we do not believe that; just having one church; just having one body; one system of faith. We do not believe that, it is of no consequence that we should believe it; and, lest men shall say we are narrow-minded, we will teach that there are many bodies, many different systems of faith, and that a man can be saved in one just as well as another—just so a man's conscience is clear is all that is necessary. So away goes the "one body" and the "one faith," doctrine, and the doctrine of many churches and the many different systems of faith is substituted for it. We know the apostle says:

"Now I beseech you, brethren, by the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye all speak the same thing, and that there be no divisions among you; but that ye be perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment."—1 Cor. 1: 10.

But it can't be, it is too much to expect of us, so we shall not teach it.

We turn to James 5: 13-15, and read:

"Is any among you afflicted? let him pray. Is any merry? let him sing psalms."

That is a very glorious idea; if you get merry, sing songs to God. Well, we will put that down. If you want to pray, that is all right; make your wants known to your heavenly Father. We can put that down in our creed.

"Is any sick among you? let him call for the elders of the church; and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord."

Well, it is all right to send for the elders and let them pray; that is good doctrine, and we are going to put that in our creed; but anointing with oil, we do not believe in, even though the apostles anointed with oil. We do not believe in it now; it was good doctrine then, but not now. But we read that:

"The prayer of faith shall save the sick, and the Lord shall raise him up; and if he have committed sins, they shall be forgiven him."

We do not believe the Lord will raise up the sick now, and so we eliminate that from the word of God; and that sins shall be forgiven through the laying on of hands and anointing with oil, we do not believe, and we eliminate that from the word of God; yet we are told:

"If any man shall take away from the words of the book of this prophecy, God shall take away his part out of the book of life," etc.

We read in James 1: 5:

"If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not; and it shall be given him."

But we do not believe that, we do not want that now; so we leave it out.

We then read this, from the Apostle John:

"And this is love, that we walk after his commandments. This is the commandment, That, as ye have heard from the beginning, ye should walk in it."—2 John, 6th verse.

And before taking any position on it, we read this, from the angel which came to John on the isle of Patmos:

"But that which ye have already hold fast till I come."—Rev. 2: 25.

Now, we are told in these two texts that the children of God must walk as they had "heard from the beginning," and they were to "hold fast" that which they then had "till I come." But how can we? Why, if we walk as they had heard from the beginning, we would have to preach and practice "baptism for the remission of sins," for Mark says:

"The beginning of the gospel of Jesus Christ, the Son of God;  John did baptize in the wilderness, and preach the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins."—Mark 1: 1-4.

Peter taught the same on the day of Pentecost (Acts 2: 38), and Ananias taught the same to Saul of Tarsus (Acts 22: 16). Then we shall have to teach and practice the laying on of hands (after baptism) for the reception of the Spirit, for the blessing of little children, for ordination of officers in the church, and also in administering to the sick. We would have to "covet to prophesy and forbid not to speak in tongues." We would have to "follow after charity and desire spiritual gifts, but rather that ye may prophesy." You see they had "heard from the beginning" all these things, and now John tells us, "This is love, that we walk after his commandments," and that the commandment is, "As ye have heard from the beginning, ye should walk in it." And then the angel tells us that what they then had—all these things, and also apostles, prophets, revelations, tongues, interpretation of tongues, and angelic ministrations—they were to "hold fast" till the coming of the Savior. But we have been taught that these things were given to establish christianity, and that they were to cease when the twelve apostles, and those upon whom they laid their hands, all died, and, if that is correct, then it would be impossible to "hold fast" to these things till Jesus comes. And, as it will be impossible for us to teach our creed, and, at the same time, teach these two texts of Scripture also, we will leave out these two verses along with the rest which we have taken out.

We get along fairly well now, till we get to this:

"And I saw another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people, Saying with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to him; for the hour of his judgment is come."—Rev. 14: 6, 7.

This, mind you, is in "The words of the book of the prophecy," of which John says, "If any man shall take away from" it that "God shall take away his part out of the book of life, and out of the holy city, and from the things which are written in this book." And the voice which called to John out of heaven said, "Come up hither and I will shew thee things which must be hereafter" (Rev. 4: 1); so it is plain that John is writing of things which are to come to pass after his day. And, besides this, the angel who brings the gospel is to declare that "The hour of his judgment is come," showing that the gospel is to be restored, and preached "to them that dwell upon the earth" just before "the end shall come" (Matt. 24: 14).

Then in the fifteenth verse of this same chapter, Revelation 14, we are told that "another angel" is to cry,

"Thrust in thy sickle, and reap; for the time is come for thee to reap; for the harvest of the earth is ripe."

And Jesus says: "The harvest is the end of the world; and the reapers are the angels. * * * The Son of man shall send forth his angels, and they shall gather out of his kingdom all things that offend, and them which do iniquity."—Matt. 13: 39, 41.

But, notwithstanding all this evidence supporting the restoration of the gospel, by an angel, just before the hour of God's judgment—"at the time of the harvest," "the end of the world,"—we decide that there is no necessity for an angel bringing the gospel, that angelic ministrations are things of the past, and that those who preach such things are fanatics and deceivers. So away goes that part of "the words of the book of this prophecy," even though it may cause our names to be taken "out of book of life."

Now, friends, we have hastily run through the New Testament this morning and, in forming our creed, we have left out so much that we haven't very much of the gospel of Christ left. Ingersoll would say, "Just about enough to swear by in the courts." But when we get through, we take up the Bible and say, "Here is the blessed book, we believe in the Bible, and the Bible alone; we are going to build, and we build upon the Bible alone. There is the word of God; there is the blessed book we are required to build upon. Now we are going to have no more revelation; we are going to have nothing more revealed from the heavens, nothing more at all; here is the last will and testament of our Lord Jesus Christ, and now the heavens are sealed, and God will give us nothing more. You begin now to see the difference between the creed of the Lord Jesus Christ, and our creed. Jesus has given the law, and commands us not to add to it nor take from it, not to attempt to revise it in any sense; but we have taken up this law and have revised it, have added to it and taken from it, and now we say, "Lord, do not give us any more; we have our creed; we have organized our church upon this basis; we want you to come into our church if you will be a silent partner, but we propose to run this thing ourselves. In this nineteenth century we have become wise, and we consider ourselves sufficient for this work; and if the people shall find out that we depend upon you, they will think we have lost our respectability; hence we do not want anything more, we are going to stop right here and shut the door against anything more from God." Here is the difference: God gave so much of his word as he wants man to observe, and gave it as he wants it; and then we, in our creed making, say, "We accept so much of it as suits us, and reject what does not"—and that is a very considerable part. In other words, God gives his law as he wants it, and says that "man" must not "add to" it nor "take away from" it; "man" comes along and adds to it and takes from it till it suits him, and then says that God must not add anything more. God has said by the prophet Isaiah, 55th chapter:

"For my thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways, saith the Lord. For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways, and my thoughts than your thoughts."

Let us beware, then, of the creeds of men; of "teaching for doctrine, the commandments of men," for Jesus says of those who do so, "In vain do ye worship me."

The Latter Day Saints take the Bible and believe it to contain the word of God; believe it where it says,

"Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God."

Believe it where it says:

"To the law and to the testimony; if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them."

Believe it where it says:

"Whosoever transgresseth, and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God. He that abideth in the doctrine of Christ, he hath both the Father and the Son." (2 John, 9th verse).

The Latter Day Saints believe the word where it reads:

"If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, * * * and it shall be given him."

"INCURABLE" HEART DISEASE SOON CURED.

FRANKLIN MILES, M. D., LL. B., WILL SEND $2.50 WORTH OF HIS SPECIALLY PREPARED TREATMENT FREE TO AFFLICTED READERS.

To demonstrate the unusual curative power of his new individual treatment for diseases of the heart, the nerves, stomach or dropsy, Dr. Miles will send, free, to any afflicted person, $2.50 worth of his new treatment.

It is the result of twenty-four years of careful study, extensive research, and remarkable experience in treating thousands of heart, stomach and nervous diseases, which so often complicate each case. So certain are the results of his New Individual Treatment, in a field which requires give all patients a trial, that a Few physicians have such confidence in their skill. Few physicians so thoroughly deserve the confidence of their patients, as no false inducements are ever held out. The doctor's private practice, so extensive as to require the aid of twenty assistants. His offices are always open to visitors.

Col. N. G. Parker, Ex-Treasurer of South Carolina, says: "I believe Dr. Miles to be an attentive and skillful physician, in a field which requires the best qualities of head and heart." They accept it and preach it because they believe men lack wisdom, even the wisdom of God, in order that they may carry on the work of God successfully; and they believe, that except they abide in the doctrine of Christ, except they speak the things that God has placed in his word, they will come under condemnation. Hence it is, that they accept, teach and practice all those things which we have been rejecting and refusing to put in our new church and its creed, this morning: "Baptism for the remission of sins," "laying on of hands" for the reception of the Holy Spirit, "laying on of hands" for the blessing of little children, for ordinations, and for the healing of the sick, in connection with the "anointing him with oil." They believe and teach the same kind of church organization as existed in apostolic times, the same gifts and blessings of God's Holy Spirit; the restoration of the "everlasting gospel" by an angel, just before the hour of God's judgment, or the "end of the world"—in fact, they believe the gospel of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ, in its entirety, and that there is no other gospel that will save, "none other name under heaven," and that men must take upon them the name of Christ and live by his law in order to be partakers of the inheritance "reserved in heaven for you." Are they orthodox? Are those who reject those parts of the gospel referred to above, teaching the opinions of men as a substitute, orthodox?

"If any man shall add unto these things, God shall add unto him the plagues that are written in this book; and if any man shall take away from the words of the book of this prophecy, God shall take away his part out of the book of life, and out of the holy city, and from the things which are written in this book."

Let us now examine the other part of our text, that part found in 2 Peter 1: 8. This is thought by some to be against our position on continued, or present revelations from God, but we think it is in our favor, and against those who reject the doctrine of present revelation. We believe that men have put their own "private interpretation" upon this text, and that they preach their "interpretation" instead of the text. First, I will quote the text as it is:

"According as his divine power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness, through the knowledge of him that hath called us to glory and virtue." (2 Peter 1: 8).

Now, let us quote it as it is commonly understood:

"According as his divine power hath revealed unto all men all things that pertain unto life and godliness, through the apostles."

Peter says nothing about what God had revealed, but he speaks of those things which God had "GIVEN," not to all men, but "unto us"—"UNTO US." Now, don't forget that Peter is talking about what God had "given" to them, and not about what the Lord has revealed to all men in his word. And the apostle says the Lord "hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness," so, if we can learn from the Scriptures just what things God had "given" to them, then we shall know what things "pertain unto life and godliness."

"And he gave some apostles, and some prophets."—Eph. 4: 11. The first things that God "GAVE" to them were apostles and prophets.

Then we read next in Matthew 16: 19, where Jesus says to Peter: "I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven: and whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth shall be bound in heaven: and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven."

We find he "GAVE" unto the apostles the keys of the kingdom of heaven, to open the door of the kingdom, to induct men and women into the same. But what else did he give? Turn to Luke where he sent them out to preach, where he says:

"I give unto you power and authority over devils, to cast unclean spirits out of those possessed with them."

And what else did he give? Turn to John 14: 15, 16:

"If ye love me, keep my commandments. And I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you forever."

And this Comforter "shall guide you into all truth and show you things to come." (John 16: 13).

Now turn to 1 Corinthians 12; and it reads:

"But the manifestation of the Spirit is given to every man to profit withal. For to one is given by the Spirit the word of wisdom; to another the word of knowledge, by the same Spirit; to another, faith; by the same Spirit; to another, the gifts of healing; by the same Spirit; to another, the working of miracles; to another, prophecy; to another, discerning of spirits," etc.

Here we find what God gave unto that church. He gave them inspired apostles; he gave them the keys of the kingdom of heaven; he gave them power over unclean spirits; he gave them the Spirit that would open the windows of heaven and bring down the things of the Father and the Son to give unto them. He gave them this Comforter, and the gifts of the Spirit; and, most of all, he gave his presence; for we read that the church is builded for a habitation of God through the Spirit; that God himself, the source and fountain of life, together with the Redeemer, might dwell in their midst; hence, they had all things which pertain to life and godliness; and the Apostle Peter might well say so.

Yes, friends, a church to which God "hath given" inspired apostles and prophets; a church to which God "hath given" the keys of the kingdom of heaven; a church to which God "hath given" power over devils and unclean spirits; a church to which God "hath given" the Spirit which guides into all truth, shows things to come, and takes of the things of God and shows them unto his people; a church to which God "hath given" the gifts of wisdom, knowledge, faith, healings, prophecy, miracles, discerning of spirits, tongues, and the interpretation of tongues, along with the privilege of asking him when they "lack wisdom," with a "thus saith the Lord" that "it shall be given him;" a church to which God "hath given" all these things, and in which he and the Savior both take up their abode, can well say, "According as his divine power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness." But you can see that the church we have been organizing this morning is quite different from this one—the one of which the apostle says that God "hath given to us all things that pertain unto life and godliness."

In organizing our new church, and drawing up the articles of faith by which it is to be governed, we have discarded, as unnecessary, all but a few of the things which God gave to that church, and then we stand before the people and say that God has given to us the New Testament in which the history of these things is recorded, and that because God has given us the history of these things, we have all things that God gave "to that church." There is quite a difference between the history of the things and the things themselves; there is quite a difference between eating a good meal, and somebody else eating it for you and then telling you how good it was.

If God had given unto them apostles, if God had given unto them the keys of the kingdom of

CANCER.

A BLOOD DISEASE AND CURABLE.

Editor of Zion's Ensign.—Twenty or twenty-five years ago, old Dr. Gillam, the distinguished specialist of Atlanta, demonstrated that Cancer, in any form, was due to a malignant, deadly poison in the blood, and by using B. B. B. (Botanic Blood Balm) this poison was gradually drained from the system, then the sores healed, and a real permanent cure was made. Up to the present time B. B. B. has cured hundreds of cases where the knife, doctors and patent medicines failed to cure. Here is one case. Mrs. E. Story, of Fredonia, Alabama, writes under date of October 15, 1898:

"Lately an eating Cancer broke out in my head and ears, and ate all the small bones out of my mouth, and I could scarcely eat and talk. I could eat a little strained soup, that was all. I tried nine doctors, but none could cure me, my case was pronounced hopeless, so I tried B. B. B., and was cured. The disease made me most deaf. B. B. B. helped my hearing. Respectfully, "MRS. E. STORY."

We will send any reader of Zion's Ensign a sample bottle of B. B. B. free of charge, and prepaid, so they may test the medicine and know for themselves that B. B. B. is the remedy for cancer, eating sores, ulcers, persistent eruptions, and all malignant blood troubles. It is remarkable how quickly it heals every sore, improves the digestion, and gives a clear, healthy appearance to the skin. B. B. B. is for sale in large bottles by druggists at $1.00 or six bottles (full treatment) $5.00. Complete instructions go with each bottle. For trial bottle and other information enclose five cents which pays exact cost of postage (medicine is free) and address Blood Balm Co., 86 Mitchell St., Atlanta, Georgia. Describe your trouble, and personal medical advice will be given.

Oil Cure For Cancer.

Dr. BYE has discovered a combination of oils that readily cure cancer, catarrh, tumors and malignant skin diseases. He has cured thousands of persons within the last six years, over one hundred of whom were physicians. Readers having friends afflicted should cut this out and send it to them. Book sent free giving particulars and prices of oils. Address DR. BYE, Drawer N, Kansas City, Mo.

heaven, if God had given unto them power and authority over devils, if God had given them the spirit of revelation, the spirit of wisdom, if God had given them the Comforter which takes the things of the Father and shows them unto his children, if he had given unto that church all the spiritual gifts spoken of in the 12th chapter of 1 Corinthians, that every one might profit withal, and if these things were given that the people of God might attain to life and godliness, how can we in these days attain to life and godliness without them?

But if God "hath given unto us" inspired apostles and prophets, if he "hath given unto us" the keys of the kingdom of heaven, if he hath given unto us" power over devils and unclean spirits, if he "hath given unto us" the Spirit of revelation, if he "hath given unto us" the Comforter which takes of the things of God and shows them unto us, if he "hath given unto" the church which we represent all the spiritual gifts spoken of in 1 Corinthians 12, if God hath, indeed, "given unto us" all these things in these last days, then we can stand before the people and say that God "hath given unto us" all things that pertain unto life and godliness," because he "hath given unto us" the same things which he gave unto the church which was represented by the Apostle Peter when he made the above claim. And, as the Latter Day Saints claim that God "hath given" to them all these things, they can claim with the Apostle Peter, consistently too, that God "hath given" unto them those things which are necessary to "life and godliness." But they, or any other church, would be inconsistent in claiming to have "all things that pertain unto life and godliness unless the Lord had indeed given to them just what he had given to the church in the days of Peter.

Now, please remember that the Lord had "given" all the above to his church in the apostles' day, and that the Apostle Peter said:

"According as his divine power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness, through the knowledge of him that hath called us to glory and virtue.

And that the Apostle John said:

"If any man shall add unto these things, God shall add unto him the plagues that are written in this book: and if any man shall take away from the words of the book of this prophecy, God shall take away his part out of the holy city, and from the things which are written in this book."

If you want to be on the safe side, if you want your name written in the book of life, if you want a name and place in the holy city, if you want to be free from the plagues that are written in this book, teach it and practice it—accept it as it was given. My friends, do not undertake to add to nor take from it; do not undertake to revise or change the word of God, for his word is perfect. If you undertake to change it, the wise man says you will be found a liar. We do not want to be liars; therefore let us accept God's word as it is given.

An Open Letter to Rev. Clark Braden.

Mr. Braden:—Yours of the 3d before me. You must be getting short of "funds," and want to make another "raise," that is all that there is in these debates to you. You are not wanted again at Orchardville, Alma or Viroqua. I knew you would be "ousted" from the Alma college after that debate, and so you were.

You say you are endorsed (?) by state boards to meet me in debate. Where are those endorsements? They have never come to light. Will you send to me an endorsement of yourself, from the Iowa, Kansas, Missouri and Illinois state boards of your church, that you are an accredited representative of the Christian—Campbellite church; sound in the faith as they hold and teach it; and a christian gentleman to an opponent while in debate? Send to me such an endorsement, countersigned by your congregation where the debates are to be held, then I will give you an opportunity to "work your flocks," to "feather your nest," in every Christian—Campbellite chapel in Illinois, Missouri, and Kansas, where your people want a debate.

You talk about me backing out, a coward, etc. Braden, you know this is false. A bigger coward, I dare say, never lived, than you are, yourself. I rather meet you in debate than any other man on earth; but I want you to be "endorsed" to represent your church, and not Braden. During other debates with you, your preachers and members too, have continually rung into my ears: "Our church don't believe nor teach that; it's only Braden's theory; we are not to be held responsible for such," etc. This is one of the reasons you must come endorsed by the chief editors of your church journals to speak by authority for the Christian—Campbellite church. Nothing short of this will be accepted by me; and so shall I advertise both far and near.

Here is my endorsement from my church; it will speak for itself:

To all to whom this may come; Greeting: This will certify that Elder I. N. White, of Independence, Missouri, is an officer of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints; is in charge of missionary and church work for said church in Missouri; is an accredited representative of said Reorganized Church, is in good standing in said church, in full fellowship with the brotherhood of the members and eldership, and sound in the faith as preached and practiced by said Reorganized church; is a Christian gentleman to an opponent, and worthy and trusted under the Master's care to present the faith of said church, and to advocate and defend the same in private debate and public discussion with Rev. Clark Braden, of the Christian or Disciple Church, or any other properly accredited officer or minister of said Christian or Disciple Church. And the said Elder I. N. White is hereby recommended as a representative of said Reorganized Church to the hearing and consideration of the people of the place where debate or discussion with a representative minister of said Christian Church may be held.

Trusting that should such a discussion be had, the object will be to maintain the purity of the truth and the power of the gospel to save, I am,

Respectfully,

NOTICES.

To the associate ministers and to the local officers, Saints and friends of the Northern Illinois and Wisconsin mission, I wish to say: Inasmuch as it has been considered best to change my mission to that of Michigan and Indiana I leave you with feelings of respect. I have no word of complaints against any officer or Saints in the mission, and I hope there are none against me by any. I have tried to deal in kindness with all for their good. I found will-

INDIGESTION

If you have it, you know it. You know all about the heavy feeling in the stomach, the formation of gas, the nausea, sick headache, and general weakness of the whole body. You can't have it a week without your blood being impure and your nerves all exhausted. There's just one remedy for you—

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

There's nothing new about it. Your grandparents took it. 'Twas an old Sarsaparilla before other sarsaparillas were known. It made the word "Sarsaparilla" famous over the whole world. There's no other sarsaparilla like it. In age and power to cure it's "The leader of them all."

After suffering terribly I was induced to try your Sarsaparilla. I took three bottles and now feel like a new man. I would advise all my fellow creatures to try this medicine, for it has stood the test of time and its curative power cannot be excelled.

ing helpers in time of need, and I learned to love and respect the Saints and officers of the mission. I never had to say that I needed anything, for I was well cared for and my temporal wants were supplied; I hope my thanks will be accepted by all who so kindly cared for me.

I hope my place may be more than supplied by the one appointed to succeed me; he is one of the noble men of the church, and is not afraid to stand for what he conscientiously thinks is right; hope he may succeed well in the mission.

In conclusion would say without multiplying words that I hope these few words I have written may be received in the same spirit in which they have been written, as a small token of my feelings to all. Hoping we may all live faithful to the end, and that we may meet in the sweet by and by, where sorrow and sadness and tears shall be wiped from all faces is the desire and prayer of,

PASTORAL.

To the Ministry and Saints of the Michigan and Indiana mission, greeting:—Having been appointed in charge, I wish to say that the work will be divided as follows: the northern and eastern districts in Michigan will be controlled as a mission field, by J. J. Cornish, and the southern district, or that portion which is in Michigan, will be under the watchcare of Warren E. Peak, as sub-missionary in charge. That portion of the southern district in Indiana and the balance of the state, will be controlled and cared for, as sub-missionary, by G. A. Smith. All others of the ministry will please report to the above named, each reporting to the one placed in charge of the field, in which labor is performed; those in charge will in turn, report to me as required.

I come to the mission and wish to say to my associate ministers and laborers for Christ, let us be united in the labor of love, and in the sacrifice required of us to make, let the past rest in silence, and let us anew, our journey pursue. And never stand still till our Master appears.

Yours in the great conflict,
JOHN H. LAKE,
Missionary in charge.
TEMPLE, Lake Co., Ohio, April 30.

To the Saints of the South Missouri district:—Having been appointed by the late General Conference to labor in a new field, I wish to express to you my thanks for the many acts of kindness shown me by you during my six years missionary work among you. Truly I have been benefited by church associations with you and believe that some of you have been benefited by my counsel and example, although I do not say that I have made no mistakes. I am glad to note that three other missionaries have been appointed to this field of labor and that Elder Sparling of Springfield has been retained in this mission. You should all work with a proper zeal to move the cause of Zion in these parts during this conference year. You should show your love for the work by looking after it both locally and throughout the district. Don't muzzle the mouth of the ox that treadeth out the corn, but loosen each other's burdens and so fulfill the law of God.

I expect by the grace of God to enter with hopefulness into the field of labor to which I have been appointed. I leave the old field with love to all and malice toward none and ask an interest in your prayers that the blessings of God may continue to follow my ministrations.

BE CLEAN.

To be clean, both morally and physically, is an absolute necessity to proper development in all who profess allegiance to God. Filthiness of person or character is entirely incompatible with the calling of heirship in the kingdom of heaven; all the teaching of holy writ is against such a condition, it only being agreeable to the feelings of the indolent, the careless and the neglectful, in a world where the supply of water is so abundant. Nature soon spreads the story of the neglect of the sanitary demands of the body, and if the neglect be extended, no matter how neat and winsome the woman may appear outwardly, or how manly and intelligent the man, the protests of outraged nature makes them the opposite of pleasant and agreeable companions. The apostle, referring to saintly duties, says:

And having an high priest over the house of God; let us draw near with a true heart in full assurance of faith, having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, and our bodies washed with pure water.—Heb. 10: 21, 22.

Having therefore these promises, dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God.—2 Cor. 7: 1.

The Israelites, as the chosen people of God, of old, were very strict in the observance of their ablutions, and the faithful Hebrew of today carefully observes these washings: every society or congregation, we believe, have their bathing places for ceremonial observances. Some we know do, and we judge all have who observe the teachings of their great lawgiver. Then again, the Scriptures are very pronounced in deprecating uncleanness, and no one, more especially among Latter Day Saints, need lack in understanding of the mind and will of the Lord in this regard, particularly as He has thus instructed His people in latter days:

 And let all things be done in cleanliness before me.—D. & C. 42: 12.
 Learn to impart one to another as the gospel requires; cease to be idle; cease to be unclean.—Doc. & Cov. 85: 38.

Men of God who bear the vessels of the Lord, be ye clean in your bodies and in your clothing. Be clean, be frugal.—Sec. 119: 3, 9.

These quotations will be sufficient to make it plain to the understanding of all who are in a condition to comprehend, that it is a matter of importance to all who profess Christ, to practice personal cleanliness. Because an individual may be forced to engage in an occupation such as a machinist, car galvanizer, coal miner, etc., compelling them to be grimy, and sometimes uncouth in appearance, is no evidence of uncleanness such as is referred to in the Scriptures; for these individuals usually are very partial to a liberal use of soap and water, and may be far more cleanly in their habits than some individuals who never see the inside of a mine, a machine shop, or amidst the trucks of a car. It is the careless, the indolent, and indifferent ones; those who have plenty of opportunities, but who are too neglectful to make use of them, to whom these admonitions are given, and if they were more generally heeded by some people there would be less calls for the services of the physician, or even the elders. "Wisdom is justified of her children."

But if it is so necessary as we have seen, that every child of God should diligently practice cleanliness of the physical man, what shall be said of the spiritual man, the moral side of our nature? How often are godly men and women shocked and pained at the loose manner of speech of a friend in whom they had placed much confidence, as being christian, God-fearing followers of the sinless Christ. It has come to pass in these iniquitous times, that let a number of men who pass as high toned, upright, moral(?) men (so far as conjugal and business probity is concerned), assemble for business or social purposes, and in a short time some one will start to relating a libidinous, unclean story, the intensity of attention paid to which is worthy of a better cause, and the applause which follows, if the story be a particularly rank one, speaks volumes for the condition of the spirit entity possessed by those individuals. Then some one else must follow with another, and if the crowd is large enough, hours may pass, for time flies quickly you know when there is congenial fellowship. But oh, the shame of it, this is not the worst; for it has been stated by some considered good authority, that in the fashionable circles of society, not even fair woman is exempt from this unholy and unseemly vice.

While we strongly believe and affirm that God has never made two codes of morals, one for man and another for the woman, but that both alike are required to practice virtue and holiness (in thought and speech as well as action), yet for woman the civilization of this age has placed a standard of purity and loveliness of character that is made the synonym of all that is true and good, and many, many are nobly filling this requirement; but this only makes the deflection of others the more startling and shocking when testimonies of the nature described are borne.

Of men and women in the lower walks of life, whose opportunities for improvement and culture have been lacking, such conduct is not so surprising; their environments, the atmosphere and surroundings in which they may move, may conduce to their degradation, or rather to the blunting of their moral susceptibilities; but for those whose educational privileges have been good, many extremely so, there does not seem to be a shadow of excuse for unseemly conversation; for if devoid of religious experiences, their conceptions of what constitutes a gentleman (or a lady, if it unfortunately be the gentler sex) should sternly bar any conversation that either could not, with perfect propriety, relate in the presence of the opposite sex.

Be ye clean that bear the vessels of the Lord, commands the Lord through the prophet Isaiah (52: 11).

"Be ye clean that bear the vessels of the Lord" (D. & C. 38:9), repeats the Lord through the great latter day prophet.

The elders and men of the church should be of cheerful heart and countenance among themselves and in their intercourse with their neighbors and men of the world, yet they must be without blame in word and deed. It is therefore not seemly that they indulge in loud and boisterous speech, or in the relating of coarse and vulgar stories, or those in which the name of their God is blasphemed.—D. & C. 119: 3.

How much more plainly can our heavenly Father make known his will in these things than in the scriptures quoted? and who is that faithful and wise servant whom the Lord when he cometh shall find heeding these with his other commandments? and what will be the result of such observance when He comes?

We are very much gratified to say that it is seldom indeed that the relation of coarse or vulgar stories, or looseness of conversation is heard among the Latter Day Saints, so far as our observation extends; and a testimony recently reached us from a lady who has a very large acquaintance in worldly society at home and abroad, through business and social interests, which truly gladdened our heart. She is not a member of the church of Jesus Christ (Reorganized) but has some acquaintance with its members and has been a very close observer; and in a conversation with her daughter (who was not then a member but has since united with the church), she remarked, "There must certainly be something in the religion of those people for they are the cleanest people I ever met." This is as it should be, and God is honored in such testimony.

The apostle says:

But fornication, and all uncleanness, or covetousness, let it not be once named among you, as becometh Saints; neither filthiness, nor foolish talking, nor jesting, which are not convenient; but rather giving of thanks. For this you know, that no whoremonger, nor unclean person, nor covetous man, who is an idolater, hath any inheritance in the kingdom of Christ and of God. Let no man deceive you with vain words; for because of these things cometh the wrath of God upon the children of disobedience. Be not ye therefore partakers with them. For ye were sometimes darkness, but now are ye light in the Lord: walk as children of light. Proving what is acceptable unto the Lord. And have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them. For it is a shame even to speak of those things which are done of them in secret. See then that ye walk circumspectly, not as fools, but as wise, redeeming the time because the days are evil.—Eph. 5: 3-8, 10-12, 15, 16.

Let no corrupt communication proceed out of your mouth, but that which is good to the use of edifying [or to edify profitably—margin], that it may minister grace unto the hearer. And grieve not the Holy Spirit of God, whereby ye are sealed unto the day of redemption.—Eph. 4: 29, 30.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

In last week's issue, in an article entitled "An Open Letter to Rev. Clark Braden" the proof readers overlooked the omission of Bro. I. N. White's signature by the compositor, although it was plainly written at the bottom of the article, and the omission was not discovered until the first side of the paper containing the matter had all been printed. We beg pardon for the oversight.

We are glad to learn from the Dow City (Ia.) Enterprise of May 11th that Bro. Charles E. Butterworth, who has been so seriously ill the past few weeks, and who, it was feared at one time, might not recover, was at the time of the issuing of the Enterprise improving, and it was thought he would get well. This information will gladden the hearts of all Bro. Butterworth's friends—and they are legion—who have anxiously and prayerfully awaited the outcome of the attack. We are hopeful that he will live to yet bring many more precious souls to the knowledge of the truth as it is in Christ. He is a faithful, wise minister and a stalwart in gospel lines. May his complete recovery be speeded.

BRO. ETZENHOUSER thinks our reference in last week's issue regarding the publication in this week's ENSIGN of his explanation of views, etc., was not altogether correct, as it was not intended for a dissertation on the "Hill Cumorah," but simply as information for those who had recently secured photos from him. He may furnish the "article" later. The item was written under a misapprehension of Bro. Etzenhouser's intentions.

JOHN SMITH, G. W. Blair and Ed Mader constitute the force in the business manager's room of the Herald office force—Lamoni, Iowa, Independent Patriot.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

W. S. STRICKLIN, The City, Mo.:
Would like to say to elders and Saints that I have rented my lease in Indian Territory and moved to this place. Any of the elders passing through here, would be glad to have them stop. The Saints are encouraged some here. We have had some grand meetings of late, the Spirit being present, to the strengthening of the Saints.

ELDER JOHN KALER, 65 Nelson St., Rozelle, Sydney, Australia, says, March 27:

The black plague is slowly spreading in spite of all efforts to keep it down, but I trust the Saints will escape by faithfulness and trust in God. Myself and family are well. Love to all the dear Saints in Zion; may the Lord bless them and help them to be diligent in the great latter day work.

ELDER W. S. MACRAE, Blendville, Missouri:

The enclosed clipping is from the Joplin Daily Globe. Bro. Hobert was well known in Southwest Missouri and Southeast Kansas as a faithful, devoted Saint, and had the love and respect of all who knew him. We extend our sympathy to and prayers in behalf of Sr. Hobert and family: "Webb City, Mo., April 23.—Elder George W. Hobert, a preacher of the Church of Latter Day Saints, was instantly killed in a shaft on the Whitworth land, southwest of town, about noon today. Elder Hobert and J. H. Riley were engaged in working a shaft for coal. They were down 28 feet. Hobert was working below and Riley had charge of the windlass. A tub filled with water was being hoisted when the key which held the gudgeon slipped out. This left the windlass man powerless in controlling the load, and the tub fell back, striking the man at the bottom on the head. He had probably been in a sitting position with his head forward, as he was struck on the back of the head. His skull was not crushed, but his neck was broken and death was instantaneous. Riley, the windlassman, got assistance and went down into the shaft a very short time after the accident occurred, but found his fellow workman stone dead. The body was turned over to Coroner Whiteley, who examined the only two witnesses who knew anything about the accident, and gave out as his finding that the death was accidental and unavoidable.

Elder Hobert was about 40 years of age, and leaves a wife and six children. The family live on Barritt Heights."

GENERAL CHURCH NEWS.

INDEPENDENCE.

Bro. C. P. Faul, of Stewarts-ville, and Bro. Swen Swenson, of the Far West, Missouri, mission, were visitors in Independence this week.

Sr. T. J. Franklin was able to be at church all day Sunday. Though not feeling very strong physically she expressed herself as strong in the faith.

Elder F. C. Warnky has moved from Argentine, Kansas, to Kansas City, Missouri, and will be at home to his many friends at number 2422 Wabash avenue.

Elder T. W. Chatburn will preach at the Saints' church next Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, and Elder A. H. Parsons at 8 p. m. Communion service at 2:30 p. m.

Rally day, May 27th. President Smith has been asked to be present but has not yet signified his ability to do so. We all hope he may. His presence last Sunday was appreciated by the Saints.

Bishop Hilliard has been requested by the local society of the Daughters of Zion to deliver a sermon on the subject of the duties of parents to their children and will do so probably in the near future.

The missionaries who are yet with us are busily engaged in completing their arrangements for an early departure to their respective fields. Their assistance in the work here has been timely and appreciated.

Bro. Joseph Luff has raised his house and made some other improvements, and is now putting a finishing touch to the outside in a coat of paint. He seems to swing the brush with the same characteristic energy exhibited when he is in the pulpit; he puts force into it.

Bro. Geo. Hayward has a very fine phonographic instrument and a sufficient number of records for it to occupy several evenings very pleasantly. We may induce him to give us a concert some of these days. Bro. Hayward does not do things by halves. Sr. Hayward is visiting their daughter in Kansas just now, and Bro. George looks a little lonesome.

Bro. T. W. Chatburn having made a trade of properties with Bro. E. Etzenhouser, took possession of his new home on Bowen street opposite the stone church, Tuesday, and is hard at work getting straightened up. Bro. L. P. Caldwell and family now occupy the Lafferty house next to Bro. Barbee's, and Bro. Pointer and family, late of Stewartsville, the Etzenhouser property on Electric street vacated by Bro. Chatburn and family.

Bro. and Sr. F. G. Pitt left for Chicago Thursday of last week en route to Bro. Pitt's mission field, eastern Pennsylvania. They will probably remain a few days in Chicago visiting their sons, Bro. F. M. and Alma Pitt, and families, as well as putting in a good, strong stroke our assisting our good Bro. Terry in his work. Bro. Terry is fruitful in resources and always willing to give his flock and others the benefit of any good talent he can secure; so it is safe to conclude that Bro. Pitt will not get tired resting while on his way. We hope also that our energetic young Bro. C. Ed. Miller will get a chance at him in Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, when he leaves Chicago. Get your net ready, Bro. Miller.

Bishops G. H. Hilliard and R. May left Tuesday of last week with a two horse rig for a trip through the country in the "regions round about" looking up the "privileges" of the land and visiting the various branches along the route. Bishop May leaving Bishop Hilliard at Burtville, Missouri, over Sunday, returned to Independence to attend to some matters connected with the church debt and left again Monday morning to join Bro. Hilliard at Warrensburg.

June 3d—Children's Day. A good program will be rendered. Let everybody come and enjoy it. The little ones are in their happiest moods and it makes every one else happy—or at least it should—to see their enjoyment of this day in the year given over to services in their particular interests. Usually a number present themselves for baptism on that day, and parents should see that those desiring to unite with the church have a clear understanding of the reasons for baptism.

Bro. and Sr. W. T. Bozarth, their son, W. R., and Bro. and Sr. W. H. Mills left in a covered wagon Tuesday afternoon on their somewhat lengthy journey to Colorado, where they expect to make their home until their health is recuperated. Bro. W. T. Bozarth's asthma has troubled him considerably recently, and it was with regret he left the Zion land. What is our loss is Colorado's gain, however. Bro. Bozarth is an able and willing minister of the gospel and will do good service wherever he is. May the Father bless them all with a speedy return to perfect health, and a safe return home in due time. Sr. W. T. Bozarth, Bro. W. R. Bozarth and Sr. Mattie Mills are good and able workers in Sunday School and Religion lines, and our brethren in Colorado will do well to set them to occupying while they remain.

Sunday was a fine day and a good attendance was observable at all services at the Saints church. In the Sunday School there were 110 in the primary department alone, which was one-third of the total attendance. At eleven o'clock President Joseph Smith preached a practical and instructive discourse from Matthew 5: 20, which was well received and favorably commented upon. At the afternoon services a fair degree of the Spirit was enjoyed; shortly before the hour for dismissal the charge of the service was given to President Smith, and Bro. Ellis Short and W. H. Pease being called to the platform, he after a fervent invocation of the divine guidance, proceeded, being assisted by Apostle Joseph Luff, to ordain Bro. Short a bishop, according to instructions of the late General Conference. Bro. Pease was ordained a counselor to Bishop R. May by Apostle Luff and President Smith. It was truly a solemn yet joyous experience, the Holy Spirit being present in a marked degree in the ordinations. At night Bro. R. Etzenhouser lectured with good liberty upon the subject of the Book of Mormon, using his landscape painting of the hill "Cumorah." It was a profitable and satisfactory day, though somewhat warm.

Bro. T. W. Chatburn received a letter last Saturday from Denver, Colorado, that his son Alma, who has been residing there the past two years, had met with a serious accident while riding a bicycle which collided with a wagon, by which his arm was broken and it was feared he had also sustained concussion of the brain. He is lying at the county hospital. He has the advantages of youth on his side and we hope later information may show more favorable results. Bro. Alma is well known here, being employed in Bro. R. May's cooperage for a number of years.

Later advices state that Bro. Alma is doing nicely and is about out of danger.

The Young Men's Educational Society met Monday evening in the north room of the church and elected the following officers to serve the ensuing quarter: President, J. W. Layton; vice president, Nephi May; secretary, Junius Short; treasurer, Arthur Daniels. Program committee, J. W. Layton, Isaac White and Hosea Lee. A motion to change the meeting nights to the first and third Thursdays of each month was negatived, and meetings will continue to be held the second and fourth Monday as usual. Bro. W. H. Garrett has been asked to deliver an address on social purity at the meeting of June 11th. All the young men of the branch should take a deep interest in this society that they may be the better qualified for church work to which they may be called in the future. It is proposed to have a short parliamentary practice lesson at each meeting when the time will permit, and this will be an exceedingly valuable feature of these meetings, in fitting all to participate in the business meetings of branch and conferences.

LAMONI, IOWA.

Elder R. M. Elvin has been proclaiming the angel's message at Leon since Conference.

A new branch is to be organized at Cleveland, Lucas county, Iowa, this district, and a church built there.

Bro. J. P. Anderson and W. J. Mather organized a Religion at Evergreen on the 8th; A. Anderson, president; Bert Barrett, vice president; S. Richards, secretary; Peter Rew, treasurer; Martha Dillon, organist; Anna Barrett, chorister; Henry Austin, librarian; Will Thorp, janitor. Meeting to be held on each Friday night. An interesting and instructive program was rendered by the Lamoni Religion on the night of the 11th.

The Daughters of Zion held their regular meeting at 2 p. m., Friday 11th.

Bro. Richard Judson, age

about 77, father of Bro. Arthur Judson, died the 12th, west of town, and was buried Sunday afternoon, the funeral sermon was by Elder Stebbins.

Bro. Peter Taggart arrived from Chicago last week, and he is now dwelling at the Saints' Home; he is a good helper and a good hand to sit up and attend the sick, for his age, being now in his eightieth year.

D. J. Lanyon, a son of Bro. and Sr. W. C. Lanyon, sent from Manila, P. I., where he is in the U. S. service, some souvenirs in the line of silk embordered handkerchiefs, sea shells, leaves, boxes, photographs, etc., some of which were of curious workmanship, showing the ingenuity of the natives.

A good prayer and testimony meeting was held at the Home on Thursday night, the 10th, in charge of Bro. G. W. Blair and A. K. Anderson.

The prospects in this region bid fair, so far, for plenty of fruit and good crops and garden stuff.

Yesterday, Sunday 13th, a good swarm of Sunday School workers at 9:30. The 11 a. m. preaching at the church was by Bishop Wm. Anderson, the texts were Mark 11: 22 and Matthew 5: 48. It was an excellent effort, well received and enjoyed. At night Elder F. A. Smith was the speaker.

Elder R. M. Elvin preached a very entertaining and edifying discourse at the Home at night, his text being John 8: 29, "Not my will but thine be done."

A LAMONIAN.

May 14.

CHICAGO, ILLINOIS.

Branch headquarters, 716 W. Van Buren St., Sunday meetings 2:45 and 7:45 p. m.; Lang Mission, 3411 Cottage Grove Ave., 10:45 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.; West Pullman branch, 12024 Union Ave., 10:30 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.; Parkside Mission, 7124 Stony Island Ave., 3:00 and 7:30 p. m.; 508 W. 37th St. (colored mission), 10:30 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.

Bro. J. W. Adams of Eliza, Illinois, spent Sunday at West Pullman. He occupied at Park Side on Wednesday evening, giving us a good gospel sermon. Bro. Adams is an earnest worker and his field the Kewanee district. Success to him.

We spent an hour at the general conference of the M. E. church now in session here, and was interested in studying their "methods." They were wrestling with some "revisions" of their "discipline." The general discipline and conduct was commendable.

Our meetings yesterday were good. We spoke three times with freedom. The Religion was good; the critic's report contained some excellent suggestions. The "deaconess" was the critic. We also had an excellent meeting on Thursday night with good attendance and excellent spirit. Some investigators were present and partook of the good influence. Withal we are pleased to note the work is onward here with prospects of an ingathering soon.

Bro. and Sr. F. G. Pitt arrived from Independence on Friday. He occupied at Park Side mission at 3 p. m. and at Lang mission at night. He will be busy in the work during his stay with us wherever opportunity may offer.

The meetings at Park Side will continue this week, hoping to reach a greater number than we did last week. We also will hold services at the headquarters during a part or all the week, thus running two meetings at the same time. Bro. F. G. Pitt will assist in these meetings, also the local brethren.

We sympathize with St. Joseph, Missouri, in being left without a pastor, but knowing much of the "local material" do not fear but what the work will be looked after. Also the impartial care of the missionary in charge will guarantee protection for one of the most important points in the church, as St. Joseph certainly is. Though absent from them my interest continues in their welfare just the same.

Our worthy and efficient deacon, Bro. Elmer E. Johnson, is in poor health, being unable yesterday to remain during all the services. Prayers in his behalf are asked. Elmer is one of our most energetic workers, being an all around man and is at home with Sunday School, Religion or branch work peculiar to his office. The Saints and the cause need his services. Pray for him.

J. M. TERRY.

395 Ogden Ave., May 14.

ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI.

Bro. J. T. Davis, of Baker, Kansas, came in Friday. He spoke at our chapel twice yesterday. His firm, determined way of presenting the gospel was both interesting and effective.

Our people here were very much shocked Saturday to learn of the sudden death of Sr. John Molyneaux, one of the good old veterans of the cause. In the early forties she heard the Master's voice in her native land, England, and knew it. Accepted the gospel, came to America, and, from the best information we can obtain, patiently underwent the subsequent disappointments attending crossing the plains and meeting the conditions there existing. Being a worshipper of God instead of men, she turned her back upon error, and united with the Reorganization. Thirty years and more of faithful service in our ranks attested her loyalty to right. As an appropriate ending for such a life, when the death angel called, she answered as peacefully and willingly as if going for a morning drive.

Bro. T. J. Elliott, Belleville; G. F. Barraclough, Oak Hill, and Ivor Davis, Cheltenham, were the appointments yesterday.

The street car strike continues with much severity. It is difficult for those not so afflicted to realize what a serious drawback it is to our church work. For example, our faithful bishop's agent, Bro. J. G. Smith, also his wife, walked about six miles to church yesterday.

Despite the unfavorable circumstances attending yesterday, viz., hot weather, car strike, and death of one, our church attendance was quite good, especially in the evening. We find it uphill work to induce many strangers to attend; that is, strangers to the truth.

Sr. Christensen returned Friday, from General Conference and visiting en route home.

Bro. Gowell left us Friday, going on to his field, the Southern Illinois district. His visit to St. Louis was appreciated by our people here; hope he will stop over with us again.

May 14.

ST. JOSEPH, MISSOURI.

Elder J. C. Foss, lately appointed missionary to Far West district, preached here Sunday morning and evening.

Elders Marcus Shaw and G. J. Whitehead held preaching service at Avenue City, Missouri, on Sunday.

A Prayer Union was organized at Aspey mission, on last Friday, afternoon, Mrs. Gardner, Shaw and Manning assisted in the organization.

An effort is being made to organize a choral society.

Bro. John A. Gardner spent a few days of his vacation at Kansas City and Independence, returning Monday morning.

Sr. James Christensen, son and daughter, of St. Louis, Missouri; spent last week in the city visiting friends.

Elder H. O. Smith left for his mission in the southwest, on Friday morning. He accompanied Elder Columbus Scott to Oklahoma, Texas, where Elder Scott engages in discussion with Elder Chism, of the Christian church. Discussion begins on the 15th inst.

Pres. Joseph Smith preached an excellent sermon at the church this (Monday) evening. He is en route to Lamoni, Iowa.

DENVER, COLORADO.

Church, corner of 22d and Arapahoe Sts. Services Sunday—Sunday School at 9:45 a. m.; preaching at 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.; sacrament service the first Sunday in each month at 6 p. m. Prayers meeting Wednesday evening. Zion's Religio-Literary Society Friday evening.

The weather the past few days has been warm enough for July preceded by so much moisture everything in nature is turning to green very fast; while the river and Cherry Creek are still full of water, the danger from flood is past unless something unforeseen happens.

Elder C. R. Duncan has gone to Conifer to move his family to Colorado Springs.

After the preaching service at Lakewood last Sunday we remained and took part in the Sabbath School, we think with good effect, sometimes I think more good can be done by a little sociability in this way than by preaching. It is quite an effort to keep up these meetings as we have three meetings each Sunday at the church in the city, and the first Sunday in the month four, so on last Sunday we attended five meetings; and as nearly all of us have to work six days a week it makes Sunday about the busiest day of the week, and yet the conference seems to think we don't need any help in the Denver mission. "I wonder why."

Our Religio has taken on new life, it was announced at the meeting two weeks ago that a resolution would be introduced at the next meeting to disband.

The pastor took up the matter the following Sunday morning, and the result was a large turnout last Friday night and a unanimous vote to table the resolution. The program was excellent. I think a great many do not realize the good that is being done by this society.

Sr. Lenore Schmutz returned from Conference Thursday morning.

Bro. Chas. Everett left Monday for a six weeks trip through the northwest, in the interests of Chas. Wathen, wholesale jeweler.

Bro. E. F. Shupe has bought property at 3633 Clayton street, and moves there this week. Please take notice in writing him.

Sr. Jessie Bible has been quite sick with quinsy, she had her throat lanced three times without any good results; she was administered to Wednesday night, Thursday the gathering broke and she was at church on Sunday.

Bro. Alma Chatburn met with a serious accident Thursday. He was riding his wheel and came in collision with a wagon, breaking his arm and receiving other injuries which, at the time, were thought quite serious, but it is thought now that he will pull through all right. He is at the hospital. The doctor stated Sunday evening that unless something unforeseen occurs, he is out of danger, but will be confined to the hospital some time.

Preaching at the church Sunday morning by the pastor, and in the evening by Elder J. W. Gilbert.

FIRST KANSAS CITY BRANCH.

Chapel, 2324 Wabash avenue. Take 15th street line to Prospect Ave., transfer to Prospect, get off at 24th, and walk one block west or to the right hand. Time of meetings: Sunday School at 9:30, preaching at 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m., social service at 12:30 p. m. Prayer meeting, Wednesday evening at 7:30; Religio, Friday evening at 8. Strangers are cordially invited.

Sunday was pleasant and the attendance was good. Children's Day practice is increasing the attendance, especially in the primary department. June 17 has been chosen as the day.

Elder J. D. White, missionary, delivered both the morning and evening sermons. They were pronounced excellent.

At the last business meeting all the officers were sustained for the next six months. Bro. Arthur Gillen was elected chorister and Sr. L. Sandy organist. A farewell party was given Bro. and Sr. Will Bozarth at the home of Sr. M. Eunice Winn; about thirty-five were present. We are sorry to lose them but our loss will be the gain of others. They go to Denver.

The brethren of the branch and some from the Second Kansas City branch met on May 7th to discuss social purity and kindred topics; and so much interest was manifested that arrangements looking to a permanent organization were made. Next meeting Tuesday evening, May 21st. An invitation is extended to those interested along these lines.

Among the visitors on last Sunday we noticed Bro. Harvey Sandy, of Emporia, and Bro. John Gardner, of St. Joseph, Missouri.

Bro. Bert Dawson, of St. Louis, Missouri, is an acceptable addition to our number of young people.

Elder F. C. Warny and family have moved to their new home on Wabash near Howard avenue, east side.

Elder R. Etzenhouser is announced to deliver his illustrated Hill Cumorah sermon on Sunday at 11. None should miss this.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA.

Services at Golden West Hall, 320 Post street, every Sunday. Sunday School 10 a. m., preaching 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.; prayer meeting first Sunday of each month at 12:15 noon. Elder C. A. Parkin presiding elder, residence 3010 16th street.

Sunday, April 22d, we had preaching at 11 a. m. by J. H. Anthony; a good attendance was present to hear him. Wm. Hart was the preacher at Oakland at two o'clock, and the writer at 7:45 p. m.

A very interesting meeting was had by the Religio Friday evening at the home of C. A. Parkin, 3364 Seventeenth street. The attendance was small but the interest was very good.

Last Sunday the Sunday School met as usual at 10 a. m., and an interesting service was held. Preaching at 11 by Chas. A. Parkin. At 2 p. m. your correspondent was the speaker at Oakland. Bro. Parkin addressed the Saints and friends at the same place at 7:45 p. m. J. A. Saxe spoke here in the evening. There was a good attendance out to listen to him and it was a very fine effort. The speaker had good liberty and the listeners were very attentive. A number of strangers heard the gospel preached today and we hope for good results.

LETTER DEPARTMENT.

AKRON, Ohio, April 30.

Dear Ensign—I thank you for your notification of the necessity of renewing my subscription. If I desire the privilege of partaking of the precious food your pages contain, I should certainly be willing to support your effort; and how any home, that is called a Saint's, can do without either of the church papers, is a mystery to me; it seems to me that they have lost at least part of the spirit of the work. When you arrive at my home the first thing I look for is your letter department, and how often is my heart made to rejoice, and the tears or joy made to course over my cheeks, when I learn how our heavenly Father is blessing his children through trials, temptations and persecutions; and how willing we should be to endure with patience those trials, for we learn from the word of God that it is only those who have been tried and proved true, who shall receive the reward, eternal life with God and His dear Son.

We are doing all that we can to forward the work in this place; prejudice still runs high; Satan is not asleep; we now hold forth at a school-house about three miles west of here; have good houses and good attention. Have preached three Sunday evenings and will continue for a while; some say they believe we have the truth, and I never fail to tell them I know we have. A lady told me she would like to be baptized, but remain in her old church; I told her she would have to give up her old church and old ways before she could be baptized by a Latter Day Saint.

Since I last wrote you, we have added another brother to this branch, Bro. Joseph Hartz—brother-in-law to Sr. Cora—and his dear companion, who has always been a friend to the cause, and a regular attendant at our meetings, gave her name last Sabbath for baptism. I expect to baptize her next Sabbath, and there is a possible chance for her mother-in-law, whom we call Mammy Hartz, to be baptized with her; may God bless them with the necessary courage.

We still have our Sunday School and prayer meeting Sabbath afternoon.

The sisters have organized a Sisters' Prayer Union; they meet on Thursday afternoons, and God has been blessing them greatly in their meetings. We have great reason to be thankful and praise him from whom all blessings flow. Still contending for the faith once delivered to the Saints, I remain

Your brother in the faith,
Jas C. McCONAUGHY.

GORDON, Ala., May 6.

Editor Ensign—I have spent this day in reading your columns and the Herald and Hope, and have been made to take courage and press on. I am isolated, no Saints here besides myself, wife and two daughters.

We have a very prejudiced people to live among, but in sickness we are the first sent for and feel glad we can serve them. Our papers are read by a few, and we have a school-house in which I think there can be some preaching done when Bro. Tucker or Kelley, or some other elders come to see us, which I hope will not be long.

I work for the Plant system of railroads as bridge watchman, and have been here since the 1st of September, 1884. I am treated kindly by all the officials except the superintendent, and he makes it hard on me at times, but I pray for him every time he abuses me, and often when all is going well. The thing that bothers me the worst is having to stay at my work all day Sunday; but there is but little labor on this day, however, and I sit in my little house and read and write and study, so there is some advantages after all. But I have some severe trials at times; I want to be with the Saints, and I truly hope there are some honest souls in this point to be gathered in soon.

Yours in hopes of eternal life,
A. J. VICKREY.

TUSCALOOSA, Ala., Feb. 10.

Dear Ensign—As some of your readers are aware, I am still in the hospital, and as may be imagined, I am still suffering terribly with "home-sickness." Am sorry to say that I am yet unable to discover any relief to bodily affliction. Nerve trouble still awful, as hard convulsions are severe and numerous. Every day hopes are to hear tomorrow that dear father, who I feel so anxious to see, may arrange real soon for my return home. Only those who have been forced to remain so long from loved ones, especially when all are afflicted, can imagine how painful it is. It may be that some can realize by experience what punishment it is, but with all this I feel that I am greatly blessed in some ways, and of course this brings some comfort, and I will attempt to again describe the silver lining to the dark cloud.

No doubt, but many, especially elders, who have been placed where prejudice was plentiful among the most popular, and where Saints were few, can imagine how delighted I feel at night when the interested crowd, or Mrs. N. Norrel (whose weight is 267 pounds, she is a member of Baptist church, and blind), Mrs. J. Wilson (Baptist), Mrs. S. E. Palmer (Baptist), Misses D. Saultz (Baptist), Carrie Portis (Methodist), S. Hoff (Catholic), Annie Holt (Episcopalian), and Anna Reed (Baptist), yes, this crowd, and sometimes others, meet in the evening and call me to come on if I feel able to read, as they are ready to listen. All of them listen so attentively while I read either Testament or church publications, and several seem ever anxious to hear contents of all letters written me by dear Saints. Some have already expressed their desires to make known to those kind Saints, how thankful they feel toward them for their kindness in sending me those nice papers to read to them. Of course one sentence often called for another on the subject, and Miss Portis, who continues such a strong believer in our faith (she is now near me reading her Testament, after passing through a hard convulsion), remarked in such a weak, gentle tone, "As I have before said, I am no longer a Methodist; I enjoy reading the Bible now, and how I wish Bro. Turpen could come and baptize me; and I also wish you could all see it, it's such a pleasure to me."

I was oh, so fortunate a few days ago, some kind, thoughtful friend sent me such a nice Bible; the kind I have felt so anxious to possess for years. I think a dear, wealthy friend in Evergreen sent it, as I received a letter from her some time ago, inquiring if I had received the Bible she sent me. It was some time after I received the letter before the Bible reached me, and if a Saint sent it, I trust they will let me know immediately, so their name, date, etc., can be placed therein, and it can be kept more as a real relic. Since receiving it, we have commenced in first of New Testament, and when I am able, and mouth and tongue are not too sore (from having bitten so badly when spells are severe), we try to read eight or ten chapters every morning or night, and as you all know, find much Saints' belief.

Yesterday we greatly enjoyed reading Herald and Ensign, especially letters concerning healing and the interesting piece, "He is guilty of all," by Bro. Porter. Experience letters are so encouraging, and Bro. T. C. Kelley, can't you tell us more about some cases of healing that you have witnessed? Please excuse me if I am asking too much, and just think how consoling such is to we who are so terribly afflicted. How I wish I could often join the crowd when gift of tongues, etc., is enjoyed; so little of such have I had the privilege of witnessing.

Bro. Nunley, several join me in sending thanks to you for the "experience letter," which I shall keep for papa to read after my return home. Love and many thanks also to dear Sr. Spurgin, of Dawson, Nebraska, for her thoughtfulness; I shall keep all such advertisements, etc., for papa to read after my return home. All letters written by dear Saints are highly appreciated and greatly enjoyed by us, and we often wish we were situated so as to answer every line written by their dear hands, and that we could receive one or two such letters every day. Several expose their curiosity, after the mail-carrier passes through, by inquiring of me if I have received any mail.

Well, dear Sr. Page (of California), I must, before closing, explain why I haven't sent your book-mails. I find it impossible to get ribbon here to paint (only as Saints send it), and Miss Buck (matron) hasn't yet brought what I gave her to sell. As soon as I can get the ribbon, will send your marks immediately, and trust you will consider and excuse my seeming negligence. I again ask all to please ever remember me in your prayers, that I may be given strength to overcome my many weaknesses, so as to reach the bright home in heaven. My greatest desire is to be given patience to endure all trials and afflictions, and more faith and charity, and also to help me (as felt that I was once commanded in a dream), to guard my tongue and forgive enemies, or in other words to "return good for evil." These are my greatest desires; really I feel much more anxious for this and for all doubt to be taken from my weak heart, than to be given great worldly possessions, or the best of health, as much as I suffer.

Please excuse me for writing this, we are told, you know, that "an honest confession is good for the soul," and I have done this hoping that many will pray for me daily, and that we may all meet and enjoy hereafter. With much love to all Saints, especially those who have been so thoughtful of me, and those who reside in the Saints' Home.

I am your devoted sister,
JENNIE PAGE.

WHAT WOULD JESUS TEACH?

[The following article was offered Rev. Chas. M. Sheldon for use in the Topeka Capital during the week he held editorial control in an effort to publish a paper as Jesus would do it. He could not make use of the article in time.—Ed. ENSIGN.]

REV. MR. SHELDON;

Dear Sir:—I wish you much success in your effort to publish a paper "as Jesus would." I do not know whether you wish any help in the way of contributed matter or not: but as Jesus did, while on earth, use some of the contributions of Moses and other prophets, in making plain his message, I think he would, if here now, again use the same, and also the contributions of himself and his apostles, in setting forth his doctrines among men; and so I venture to offer a few thoughts touching upon the great question of salvation through Christ (for surely that is the one thing Jesus would try to make plain), and I trust I shall be able to present aright the doctrine of Jesus himself as set forth in the New Testament; and surely he would not refuse to publish his own doctrine in a paper of which he was the editor and manager.

First, then, he proclaims himself the "light of the world," and further saith:

"He that followeth me shall not walk in darkness but shall have the light of life."—John 8: 12.

And again, through John, his beloved disciple, he says:

"If we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin."—1 John 1: 7.

Two things are here set forth by John as contingent upon walking "in the light."

First, we have fellowship one with another.

Second, the blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth us from all sin.

It is a wonderfully blessed thing to "have fellowship one with another" as in the text, because in holding such fellowship one was brought into spiritual relationship or companionship, not only with those who were called Saints and who were blessed with the "fellowship of the Spirit," but also with the prophets of God and the apostles of Christ; and, best of all, one holding fellowship with them held it also with Christ and his Father. As witness:

"That which we have seen and heard declare we unto you, that ye also may have fellowship with us: and truly our fellowship is with the Father, and with his Son Jesus Christ."—1 John 1: 3.

Very reasonable is it to believe that the blood of Jesus Christ will cleanse such from all sin. It could not be otherwise.

Now, this blessed condition of fellowship with saints, with holy apostles and prophets, with Christ and his Father, of cleansing from all sin, can be secured by those, and only those who will "walk in the light," or, in other words, walk in Christ, for he is the light, yea the TRUE LIGHT, by following whom, we shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life.

How then, can we walk in him? First, we must believe in him. For it shall come to pass that "whosoever shall call on the name of the Lord shall be saved. How then shall they call on him in whom they have not believed? and how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard? and how shall they hear without a preacher?"—Rom. 10: 14.

The same writer says (Heb. 11: 6), "Without faith it is impossible to please him" (God). How can we have faith in that of which we have not heard? Not at all. Then we must hear in order to have faith, or believe, and we must believe before we can call, in a proper way, upon the Lord, or walk in him and be saved, or have the light of life.

This implies an acceptance of, and faithful obedience to, all the principles of the gospel as taught by Christ and his inspired apostles; otherwise, we will not be walking in his footsteps, walking in the light, hence will not have fellowship with Christ and his apostles; nor will Christ's blood cleanse us from sin, but we shall die in our sins and where Christ is we cannot go. See John 8: 21. On this point John bears testimony thus:

"Whosoever transgresseth and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God. He that abideth in the doctrine of Christ, he hath both the Father and the Son."—2 John 1: 9.

Again he saith: "He that hath the Son hath life; and he that hath not the Son of God hath not life."—1 John 5: 12.

Now, if he that abides in the doctrine of Christ hath the Son, and he that hath the Son hath life, then he that abideth in the doctrine of Christ hath life. That is very plain. And that is precisely the thought expressed by Jesus: "He that followeth me * * * shall have the light of life." If following Jesus brings life, eternal life; if abiding in the doctrine of Christ brings life, then following Jesus and abiding in his doctrine must be the very same thing since they bring the same result. And further, if walking in the light brings one into fellowship with God, with Christ, and his apostles, prophets and saints; and also brings cleansing from all sin by the blood of Christ, then walking in the light means precisely what following Christ and abiding in his doctrine means, and implies the very same service.

Now, would Jesus teach that same doctrine today if he were here? Would he call and ordain ministers and send them out with the same message as he did before? Would he give them more or less power than he did when on earth? Would he bless those who accepted him as he did during his earthly ministry? If not, why not? Would we not hear the same beautiful words of the "sermon on the mount?" Would not his moral standard be equally as high as of old? Would his scale or standard of righteousness to which he would want us to attain be any lower than when he said: "Except your righteousness shall exceed the righteousness of the scribes and Pharisees ye shall in no case enter into the kingdom of heaven" (Matt. 5: 20)? Would he make changes along any of these lines? We think not.

If he should now choose, ordain and send out ministers, would he not expect, yea, demand of them that they preach and practice just as those did whom he did call and send out while on earth? Certainly so. And if his ministers—whether apostles, seventies, bishops, elders, evangelists or deacons—whom he would now choose, should preach the same gospel or doctrine in every respect as did Jesus and his faithful ministers while they were here on earth, would such preaching or teaching be acceptable to Christ? Yes, most assuredly, if he is "the same yesterday, today and forever." Would such teaching or preaching of such doctrine save those who should believe and obey it? Oh yes, for do we not read: "Take heed unto thyself, and unto the doctrine; continue in them: for in doing this thou shalt both save thyself, and them that hear thee."—1 Tim. 4: 16.

The writer (Paul) of the above verse was an apostle of Jesus Christ. He was writing to Timothy, a fellow minister, and the apostle gives him to understand that if his ministrations was to be made effectual in saving souls, it must be by continuing in the doctrine which he had learned, which was the doctrine of Christ. And why? Because "He that abideth [continues] in the doctrine of Christ hath life, as we have before seen from John's writing.

If Jesus would do and teach now as he did while he was on earth nineteen centuries ago, and if the same teaching on the part of his ministers would still be acceptable to him, and if a belief in and acceptance of, or obedience to that teaching would save the people, and if we have anything like a correct representation of the doctrine of Christ and his early ministers in the Bible, who no Bible believer can doubt, then all we need to do to find out what Jesus would do and teach, or what his true and duly accredited ministers should now do and teach, and also what the people should now believe and accept in order to be saved, is to go to the Bible and read what it says touching the great question of salvation, and then we know, not only what Jesus would do himself, but what he would have us do in order to be saved.

It is not possible to quote all that is said in the Bible on all points of the doctrine of Christ in a short paper such as this, but I beg leave to present a few statements made by him and his apostles representing him, in regard to the doctrine in which, if a man abide, he "hath life."

First, He preached faith in himself and his Father, as the first principle of gospel doctrine.

"Ye believe in God, believe also in me."—John 14: 1.

If ye believe not that I am he ye shall die in your sins."—John 8: 24.

"He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved."—Mark 16: 15.

Second, Repentance was preached as a saving principle.

"Repent ye and believe the gospel."—Mark 1: 15.

"Except ye repent ye shall all likewise perish."—Luke 13: 3.

"Repentance and remission of sins should be preached in all the world, beginning at Jerusalem."—Luke 24: 47.

Third, Baptism in water for the remission of sins was preached by him as a saving ordinance.

He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved."—Mark 16: 16.

"Repent, every one of you and be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost."—Acts 2: 38.

"Verily, verily, I say unto thee, except a man be born of water [baptized in water] and of the Spirit he cannot enter into the kingdom of God."—John 3: 5.

Fourth, Laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost was taught as a principle of Christ's doctrine.

"Then laid they their hands upon them and they received the Holy Ghost."—Acts 8: 17.

"And when Paul had laid his hands upon them, the Holy Ghost came upon them; and they spake with tongues and prophesied."—Acts 19: 6.

Fifth, Resurrection of the dead was one of the leading features of the doctrine of Christ. See John 5: 25, 28; Acts 24: 15; Rev. 20: 6, 12.

Sixth, Eternal judgment was taught as one of the principles of faith and doctrine of Christ. And in this Judgment every man shall receive reward or punishment according to his works. 2 Cor. 5: 10; Rev. 20: 13 and 22: 12.

Once more, in confirmation of the foregoing, I quote:

"Therefore [not] leaving the principles of the doctrine of Christ, let us go on to perfection; not laying again the foundation of repentance from dead works, and of faith towards God, and of the doctrine of baptisms, and of laying on of hands, and of resurrection of the dead, and of eternal judgment."—Heb. 6: 1, 2.

Much more might be given to show that the first six fundamental principles of the doctrine of Christ were, (1), faith; (2), repentance; (3), baptism in water for the remission of sins; (4), laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost; (5), resurrection of the dead; (6), eternal judgment. But we have adduced enough to show that Jesus did teach these things, and we believe he would teach the same if he was here now.

If he did teach these things and a number of people should believe them and should be baptized, how would he organize them into a church? "And he goeth up into a mountain, and calleth unto him whom he would: and they came unto him. And he ordained twelve, that they should be with him, and that he might send them forth to preach."—Mark 3: 13, 14.

"And he [Christ] gave some apostles; and some, prophets; and some, evangelists; and some, pastors and teachers."—Eph. 4: 11.

"And God hath set some in the church; first apostles, secondarily prophets, thirdly teachers, after that miracles, then gifts of healings, helps, governments, diversities of tongues."—1 Cor. 12: 28.

In Luke 10: 1 we read that Jesus chose a quorum of seventy. In Acts 20: 17 and 1 Peter 5: 17, elders are mentioned, and in 1 Timothy 3: 1, 2, 8, bishops and deacons are spoken of.

From this we learn that Jesus did, and hence would organize his church by calling and ordaining as his ministerial representatives, apostles—twelve and seventy—prophets, bishops, evangelists, elders, deacons; and he would let them understand that only such men as he wanted and would call, could fill the requirements of a minister of the doctrine and ordinances, by abiding in which, life eternal is secured.

Having thus organized them, what promise would he make them? "If ye love me, keep my commandments. And I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another comforter, that he may abide with you forever."—John 14: 15, 16.

Was that promise good to that generation only, or was it to all?

"And ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost. For the promise is to you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call."—Acts 2: 38, 39.

What gifts would Jesus bestow upon the members of his church thus organized, through this Holy Ghost, the Comforter?

"For to one is given, by the Spirit, the word of wisdom; to another the gifts of healing by the same Spirit; to another faith by the same Spirit; to another the gifts of healing by the same Spirit; to another the working of miracles; to another prophecy; to another discerning of spirits; to another divers kinds of tongues; to another the interpretation of tongues; but all these worketh that one and the selfsame Spirit, dividing to every man severally as he will."—1 Cor. 12: 8-11.

"He [the Comforter] shall guide you into all truth, * * * and show you things to come."—John 16: 13.

Jesus did give such gifts to his people; would he not do it again? We think so.

What fruits of the Spirit would he give?

"But the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance: against such there is no law."—Gal. 5: 22, 23.

Now, if we have the Spirit of Christ, some of these fruits and gifts will surely manifest themselves in us. This was and is as Jesus would.

Striving to be religious along the lines thus briefly indicated has brought to the writer much joy and pleasure, and he has been the recipient of the blessings and gifts of the Spirit, the Comforter, and so has had "great joy" in the Lord. He wishes very much that others, many others, may also have the same "great joy," and he believes if Jesus were editing a paper, everything that ever had place in his system of faith and doctrine, would still have its place there, and in the columns of his paper would be published the means of a free and full salvation as well as the blessings which the gospel brings to its devotees in this life.

He further believes that Jesus has not changed his plan by which he saved sinners; nay, he believes that plan is as unchangeable as he is himself; hence, he would, will and does work along the same lines, and by the same methods, gospel methods, as of old; hence, to those who obey his gospel as taught by himself and apostles, he gives the "Comforter," and by the Comforter, just such "blessings as he did of old. And, if this Spirit be in us, he who raised up Christ from the dead, will also quicken "our mortal bodies" (Rom. 8:11). But if not—well, that won't be as Jesus would, nor as we would.

If the spirit of Jesus be in us, then we will be prompted and led to accept and obey, so far as in us lies, all the teachings of Jesus, both as to morals and doctrine (if they could be separated), and to constantly abide therein, for, as we have already seen, he who does so has "life," and that is what Jesus would like to have us accept, for he saith:

"I am come that they might have life and have it more abundantly."

Very respectfully yours,
T. C. KELLEY.

BOOK OF MORMON CHARACTERS.

The transcript made by Joseph Smith of the characters on the plates from which he translated the Book of Mormon, which Martin Harris conveyed to Professor Anthon, and which, with the manuscript of the Book of Mormon, remained in the custody of David Whitmer, has had its history developed from different standpoints, as all else pertaining to Latter Day Saints.

In the Hancock-McDowell debate at Fayette City, Pennsylvania, March 5-19, 1900, the language in which the Book of Mormon claimed to be written, became an issue, Mr. Hancock exhibiting an excellently executed chart containing the characters upon the above mentioned transcript. In comparison therewith he presented the hieroglyphic characters found on page 421 of John T. Short's American Antiquities, stating, that being the written language of Central America in the times of the Mayas, and there being no similarity with those of the Book of Mormon, the Book of Mormon claim as to reformed Egyptian was false.

At this time and juncture of the debate his triumph on that point seemed complete to the audience, but Bro. McDowell produced comparisons as follows: Book of Mormon characters from the transcript in comparison with Egyptian taken from a table in Webster's dictionary of some years ago. (Bro. McDowell holds the original page).

Next, as the reformed Egyptian was a composite language, made from Egyptian and Hebrew, both somewhat changed, not necessarily all the characters however, and some but slightly, he presented Book of Mormon characters in comparison with Hebrew from a family Bible issued by G. L. Benjamin, Fond du Lac, Wisconsin, copyrights, running from 1872 to 1882. Reference to several tables of Hebrew will reveal variations in different eras, before and since the days of Ezra, and also within the Christian era. (The page from which this Hebrew comparison was made, is in my possession).

Next, Bro. McDowell presented Book of Mormon characters in comparison with Phonetic from Pernin's Universal Phonography in ten lessons, by H. M. Pernin, published at Detroit, Michigan, copyrighted in 1886. (Comparison made from 1895 edition).

Mr. Hancock became as silent as the Sphinx of Egypt on all that pertained to Book of Mormon characters, reformed Egyptian, etc. The above will furnish data to the brethren who secured photographic copies 8x12 from me at Lamoni, in sets of three. Others who wish to work up on this line can correspond with me for such limited aid as I may be able to furnish. Bro. McDowell kindly presented me the charts he used in the debate from which the above photograph copies were made. On Egyptian some suitable data will be found on pages 83 to 86 Palmyra to Independence; on Hebrew 63 to 74. As to Phonetic writing, 41, 43 and 81.

Mr. Hancock, while posing as versed in Maya Hieroglyphics, must have been ignorant, or, supposed Bro. McDowell to be, on Maya Hieratic and Demotic. He could not possibly have played into Bro. McDowell's hand to his own disadvantage more than he did on this feature of the debate. This was, no doubt, the pitched battle on the "characters." Others will, no doubt, try to invalidate them. Let them do so.

In bonds,

INDEPENDENCE, Mo., May 6th.
P. S.—The editor in a kindly manner, in reference to the above, mentioned last week as an article on Book of Mormon characters. It is rather an explanation of matter on photographic views furnished brethren of the ministry. Later I will probably furnish an article.

GENERAL SUGGESTIONS.

NETTIE I. HEAVENER.

We believe, in Sunday School work as well as in any department of church work, that what is needed is practice rather than theory. Some theories are all right when put into practice. We will try to tell of some things we have tried in our work, though our remarks may be general, not confined to class work entirely, but may extend to various phases of the work.

As a starting point, we believe it will be helpful in our Sunday School conventions if each school will send delegates who will be able to glean good from the work and reject that which will be of no value. I have heard some complain because their schools gain no good from the Convention. In many cases this is true, but I believe there is a remedy for this. I know of one school where delegates were sent who, upon their return, seemed to have received but little help. Now, there must have been something wrong either with the work done or the delegates. If there are no helpful thoughts given that could be taken home and put into practice, the work certainly must be a failure. If the delegates fail to carry home with them what is given, they are remiss in their duty. Workers in the Sunday Schools: Tell others of those things that have helped you. Delegates: Take notes, or if you have a good memory, store your mind with all the good you can get, but don't let it stay there. Go home to your own schools and give others the benefit of what you have received. If you learned anything put it into practice. If you don't do this, the convention will be merely a form, a dead letter. If you can truthfully say that you could not learn anything because there was nothing to learn, go to work to try to bring about a different order of things. Put your shoulder to the wheel and get others to do likewise, and make the work more of a success. If illustrations are given take your note-book, copy them. Don't trust to your memory. Those delegates to whom I referred told just enough of some illustrations to make us wish that all was known. Not enough was given to be helpful. Pencil and paper would have avoided this. The work of the delegates is to gain some help for their respective schools. If this is not done, there must be something wrong with the work.

We have often said that what we need in class work is variety. "But," says one, "What shall we have?" We will try to tell of some things we have found helpful in our own work. The child's mind will soon become inactive if kept on one thing too long; but you will soon discover that his eyes and ears will not be inactive to the things around him, and soon his body will become active, and we wonder why that child will not keep still. The more active his mind the less active his body will be. It will help in keeping the mind active if we give it different food to feed upon. When the children were tired and the lesson for the day was finished, we have tried telling them some story of the lessons we have had in the past, and have them tell the name of the one we were talking about. The children always seemed to enjoy this and we found it not only interesting, but helpful as well; and this latter we believe to be the more important factor in all of our work. We have also done this way with cities, telling of things that happened there, then have them guess the name.

We have sometimes written little slips, telling of different things about a person or a city, and leaving blanks for the names. Then the next Sunday have them read the paper supplying names and telling where found. Sometimes it is well to let the children write of some person or city and let the rest of the class give the names. To help them in learning the different books, have them turn in their Bibles where they can find about Joseph, Moses, Paul, Miriam, or whoever you may wish to name. The children will be delighted with this.

We have found that much writing could be done by the children during the week, and prove a help to them. Work of this kind will be helpful to teacher as well as to pupils. "But," says one, "we don't have time for all this extra work." My answer is, "Take time." You will be repaid for all that you do if you do it for the sake of Him who came to the world to save us. I said "repaid," but as I think it over the thought comes to me that it is only a debt we owe, and it is our duty to pay it. Christ did so much for us, let us give of our time and service for others. When at our work which we have to do to sustain these bodies, let our minds, a part of the time at least, be active in the Master's work. If you cannot preach the gospel you can help to spread the truth abroad by giving of your time and talents in the Sunday School.

But, says one, it is discouraging to teach month after month and see no results, none who obey the gospel. Yes, it is often that way, but I often think of what Bro. A. J. Keck, who, a few years ago was in the district, said upon this subject. He said, "None of your class may ever obey the gospel, but that must not be taken as a standard in judging of work done. Though they may never yield obedience you may help them to live so as to obtain a higher glory than they otherwise would. Is not that worth working for?" Let us think often of these words and take courage. Surely this is enough to make our hearts rejoice if we can accomplish even this. Let us remember, too, that our lives will preach stronger sermons either for or against the truth than the one hour each Sunday in the class can do. Children notice much more than we think many times.

Let us each be prayerful in our work; more things are gained by prayer than the world dreams of. If we keep ourselves humble and prayerful, God can and will bless us in our work, and can use us as his servants, but otherwise we have no promise. "When ye do those things which I command, then am I bound," saith the Lord. If we do not do our part we cannot and ought not expect the Lord to help us. The Sunday School is a help in church work, and we ought not expect the Lord to bless us in our work there if we trust in our own strength, any more than we ought to expect the elders to go out in the field and accomplish good if they trust in their own abilities. May the Lord help us each to realize the needs of the work; but first may he help us to realize our own needs so that we may get ourselves in such a condition that the Lord may be able to make us of use in his service.

Before we can teach others, we must learn for ourselves; so let us study to partake of the spirit of the lesson, and make it a part of ourselves, and then let us do all to the honor and glory of God. There is one thing we should be careful to guard against; that is, in confining ourselves too much to some certain form of questions. We were called upon, not long ago, to teach a class of children. After telling them the story of the lesson, for the benefit of some who knew nothing of it, we began to ask questions, when up went several hands, and the children said, "We can't answer the questions that way, we always have them just as they are in the quarterly." Teachers, let us get away from the idea that we must go through with the lesson in a certain way; let us be ourselves, and help the children to get the thought of the lesson so that they can answer a question even if asked in a different way. Let us pray that the Spirit may direct us and help us to make use of the knowledge the Lord has blessed us with, and then to give us additional knowledge and wisdom. Let us be willing to give of our time to study and learn of anything we can do to make the work more successful. If we accept any work in the Sunday School, let us do it with a zeal, willingness and earnestness worthy of those who have tasted of the heavenly gift. Let us be on time at our place of duty, and also be there regularly, if we are not we cannot expect the children to be.

There is a passage of scripture found in Romans 12:2 that we may well remember: "Be not conformed to this world but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good and acceptable and perfect will of God." If we are working more for the things of this world, and thinking more of its pleasures than we do of what we can do for the Master, there is need of our being transformed. Let us try to overcome the things of this world, to get our mind above its vain, fleeting things, and have our minds filled with the spirit of the Master who gave his time, his labors, to the doing of the Master's work, and then said, "Father, thine be the glory."

"But," says one, "in this busy time, and when we are so tired, we cannot do so much. We are often too tired to pray for the help we need, let alone the thought of going ahead and working." I have also heard some excuse themselves for not knowing more about the Bible, and thus learning of the way of life and truth, by saying they were so busy, and didn't have time to study the Bible. I wonder if the Lord will tell us to work out our salvation, and then not give us time to learn how to accomplish that? I wonder too, if the Lord will ask us to work for him after we have accepted the way of life and truth, and then not give us time to do that work well? By doing it well, we mean to do it the very best we can. The Lord's work, we believe, is too great, too sacred, to admit of any half-heartedness, or unwilling service. We need to throw our whole heart and soul into the work, that is the means of our salvation. Then when we are warned let us warn our neighbor, and in the Sunday School is one place we can do that. "But," says one, "your ideal is too high, we cannot reach it; it is so easy to talk but not so easy to practice." However that may be I maintain that we will come nearer reaching a high ideal if we are striving for it than if we are not, and all surely believe that we want to reach as high an ideal as possible. If we do, then let us strive for it, it is our motto. We do not know whether we could be as Joseph, as Daniel, or others of ancient times if we were surrounded by like circumstances. We might fail; but the question for us to solve is this, will we do our duty now wherever it is made known to us, and be true to the trust that is given us? If we are loyal in our work every day, and work in the present, we need not fear for the future. The Sunday School is the nursery of the church; let us enter into the work of feeding the lambs, and give the Lord the best of our labors. Let everything pertaining to the Master's work be first, and other things secondary. Wherein we have given exhortation we should also take it to ourselves, feeling the need of it more and more as time passes. This is a day of sacrifice, a day when our own pleasure must be given up for the sake of the Lord's work. I mean our worldly pleasure.

Our time, our service must be the Lord's, and although discouragements often come and difficulties must be contended with, God requires of us a willing service and an obedient mind. The greater the discouragements, the more need for working. The more we work, if done in the right spirit, the more we will feel the need of prayer, and prayer will keep us nearer the Father, and more strength will be given us. The discouragements may thus work for good. There are some thoughts in regard to pride that I wish to express. The question has been asked, shall we speak to those of our classes when we meet them, or shall we hold ourselves aloof from them, and maintain a kind of pride? Friends, which shall we do? What would Christ have done? That will answer the question for us. Study of his life, of his walks among the children of men, whenever we may in sacred word, I do not believe we can find an instance where he showed the spirit of pride that would say, "I am better than thou." If Christ, the pure holy one, was so meek and lowly, so unwilling to act as if he were above others, what shall we, who claim to be working for Christ, but who are so weak and erring, do? Let us at least try to follow Him. If there is a scholar whom I consider worthy of being in my class, I do not believe I would be worthy of being his teacher if I felt so proud that I could not speak to him on the street or elsewhere. No, Sunday School workers, let us rise above this. We have too much pride, we are conformed too much to the things of the world. I include myself among the number, and feel that I have need to take the lesson home. Pride of a certain kind is all right, but the kind that would cause us to slight those of our number, for any reason, is not permissible. In our large cities what can we accomplish if we are lifted up in pride. Let us be willing to go among the poor and lowly Christ did. One has a soul to save as well as another. Let us visit the members of our school and make no distinction. Christ's standard was not riches of this world, but riches pertaining to the world to come. There was no distinction, Christ visited all. His standard was, Do good to all men, and the standard he set up for those among whom he visited was purity of life, humbleness, etc. Let us not allow our pupils to feel that one of their number is better than another because better dressed. But if we are too proud to speak to our members, or treat one better than another, what kind of an example are we setting for the children? This kind of pride ought to have no place in our work.

Let us help the children to grow spiritually, to be better than they would without the teaching. We may get discouraged many times in our work, but if we do our duty, the Lord will bless, and when we have faithfully done our duty, even though we cannot see any direct results, we will have the satisfaction of knowing that we have done the best we could.

I wish to leave this question with you, and it will apply in all departments of the Lord's work. It is a question found in 1 Chronicles 29: 5, and was asked by King David. I wish the Spirit of the Master might carry the question home to each one of us, and that we might answer it acceptably in the sight of the Lord.

This is the question: "And who then is willing to consecrate his service this day unto the Lord." ORANGE PHARISE, III.

REASONS FOR LOST FAITH.

The Rev. William Forkell, who has just resigned as pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal Church of Green Bay, Wisconsin, sets forth his reasons in the following letter to The Tribune:

"GREEN BAY, Wis., Feb. 2.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I resign voluntarily because of my inability to feel at home in an organization whose characteristic dogmas I cannot heartily accept. After a struggle of some six years with the question as to my theological fitness as a Methodist preacher, during which time I have tried to do my fullest duty, and have not altogether failed, I have at last taken the only step an honest man can take—viz, resign from the Methodist ministry.

The dogmas I cannot find myself in harmony with are:

"First, The deity of Jesus (as distinguished from the divinity of Christ), as implied in the first paragraph of the articles of religion. The divinity of Christ, as I believe, is not contingent upon supernatural physical condition, but rather upon his entire surrender to the influences of God. That which is in all men but a spark was in him a living flame.

"Second, The interpretation of the theory of the atonement as though it were the payment of a penalty to 'reconcile the Father to us,' as implied in paragraphs 2 and 3. Nowhere does the Scripture allow the theory that Jesus changed God's mind, but rather that 'God was in Christ reconciling the world to himself.' Jesus did not suppress God's anger, but expressed God's love to such a degree that it wins (reconciles) us to God.

"In the same paragraphs 'original guilt' is mentioned, a doctrine to me unbelievable. Man was made a character-developing being, and as such must needs have the privilege of knowing good and evil, choosing between which develops character: the fall of man was in reality a rise of man out of brute innocence into tried virtue.

"Closely related to this is the doctrine of substituted righteousness, as founded on paragraphs 9 and 10. Jesus came into the world, not to cover up sin, but rather to uncover and 'condemn sin in the flesh' by the life he lived amongst us. 'Salvation' means more than escape from the punishment of sins; it certainly means a change of inclination from sinning to a life of rightness. Salvation means character. Heaven cannot be earned by another for us, no more than education. Salvation is not primarily intended as a ticket to heaven, or a life insurance policy for the other world; it is a spiritual capacity to know and enjoy God. 'Jesus paid it all' is a dangerous doctrine, not to say an immoral one, and its effects are seen on every hand in the many abortive Christian attempts.

"The forgiveness of sins is not a matter of commercial adjustment between God and Jesus; sins are forgiven as soon as they are given up. We must join God in the forgiveness of our sins. The words 'propitiation,' 'satisfaction,' and 'oblation' savor too much of the times when stakes and dungeons figured prominently in the 'church militant' arsenal. Christ is the winning power of God amongst men, and we as Christians are to join him in the 'redemption' of the world, by explaining God to the world, as he did. The word 'atonement' does not occur once in the original New Testament. Wherever it is used it gives the meaning of winning or reconciling.

"The doctrine of endless punishment, though not in the articles of religion, is nevertheless a test of the loyalty of the Methodist preacher to the theology of his church. This theory I cannot accept in the light of the eternal love of God. All punishment in human relations must be corrective in its aim and loving in its motive; and how can we for one moment attribute to God's nature what we would vehemently condemn in human relations? I believe more than ever in the fact that all sin will be punished; the way of life is a 'narrow way,' sin becomes more and more fearful as the soul rises toward the ideal; the purest and tenderest human relations feel the horror of sin the most; sin becomes black under the white light of God's truth and love; punishment is as certain as that fire burns, cold freezes; and the purpose of the pain is to warn us away from further harm.

"The thought that even the worst man should suffer forever would turn my heaven, should I gain it, into unrest and pain. I would ask that God allow me the privilege of spending part of my eternity in that dismal and horrible realm and thus save one soul from torment, rather than 'sit and sing my (selfish) soul away in endless bliss' amongst angels; I expect an appointment in the great beyond among those who need a word of cheer and a helping hand; heaven bought at the expense of such torment of millions, yea, even to a single soul, is too dearly bought. I could not enjoy it even though I could room next door to Gabriel.

"I could not believe the doctrine of endless punishment unless I accept the inevitable conclusion that God had abdicated his throne and surrendered to demons. No, 'the Lord reigneth, let the people rejoice.' These are the lines on which I differ from the supposed (?) views of the Methodist Church. I might say 'there are others,' but in time they will speak. For six years I attempted to do what older ones than myself advised me to do—viz: suppress my convictions and preach on general lines, or as some say, 'preach the gospel, and do not delve into those subjects.' I tried it and failed; the mind was made to think; truth never injures, error always does. We demand that the student of anatomy tell us all he knows; the scientist is paid

"INCURABLE" HEART DISEASE SOON CURED.

FRANKLIN MILES, M. D., LL. B., WILL SEND $2.50 WORTH OF HIS SPECIALLY PRESCRIBED TREATMENT FREE TO APPLICED READERS.

To demonstrate the unusual curative powers of his new individual treatment for diseases of the heart, the nerves, stomach or dropsy, Dr. Miles will send, free, to any afflicted person, $2.50 worth of his new treatment.

It is the result of twenty-four years of careful study, extensive research, and remarkable experience in treating thousands of heart, stomach and nervous diseases, which so often complicate each case. So certain are the results of his New Individual Treatment, as ever held out, that he has given all patients a trial free.

Few physicians have such confidence in their skill. Few physicians so thoroughly deserve the confidence of their patients, as no false inducements are ever held out. The doctor's private practice is so extensive as to require the aid of twenty assistants. His offices are always open to visitors.

Col. N. G. Parker, Ex-Treasurer of South Carolina, says: "I believe Dr. Miles is a more genuine and successful physician, in a field which requires the best qualities of head and heart." The late Prof. J. S. Jewell, M. D., editor of the Journal of Nervous and Mental Diseases, of Chicago, wrote "by all means publish your surprising results."

Hundreds of incurable cases cured. Mrs. Frank Smith, of Chicago, was cured of heart dropsy, after five leading physicians had given her up. Hon. C. M. Buck, banker, Paribault, Minn., writes: "I had broken completely down. My head, heart, stomach and nerves were all so sore that I was unable to get up for years. Feared I would never recover, but Dr. Miles' Individual Treatment cured me after six well known physicians of Chicago and elsewhere had completely failed." Mrs. P. Countryman, of Pontiac, Ill., says: "Seven years ago when I was sixty Dr. Miles for Individual Treatment, three physicians said I could not live two weeks. I could not walk six feet then; now I can do all my work."

A thousand references to, and testimonials from Bishops, Clergymen, Editors and many other prominent men will be sent free on request. These include many who have been cured after from five to fifteen physicians had pronounced them incurable.

Address The Dr. Miles Medical Association, 201 to 209 State St., Chicago, for free treatment.

for thinking new thoughts; the astronomer has an observatory built for him; but in many instances we train our preachers to think 'our' way of 'our' God in 'our' church; in other words, we groove paths for thinkers in theological study, instead of demanding independent and inspired thought. Theological gramophones are not wanted in this day.

"In closing, I desire to say, in justice to the church, whose spirit I shall ever love, that I leave of my own accord, and in face of the unanimous petition of the members of my church to remain, and the consent of the authorities, but I could not remain and be an honest man; hence the step. I felt that I must be true to the light that has come to me with so much inspiration, and to suppress my convictions would make me untrue to God and man."—William Forkell in Chicago Tribune, Feb. 12, 1900.

A Thing Worth Knowing.

No need of cutting off a woman's breast or a man's cheek or nose in a vain attempt to cure cancer. No use of 'applying burning plasters to the flesh and torturing those already weak from suffering. Soothing, balmy, aromatic oils give safe, speedy and certain cure. The most horrible forms of cancer of the face, breast, womb, mouth, stomach; large tumors, ugly ulcers, fistula, catarrh; terrible skin diseases, etc., are all successfully treated by the application of various forms of simple oils. Send for a book mailed free, giving particulars and prices of oils. Address DR. BYE, Drawer N, Kansas City, Missouri. (Cut this out and send to some suffering one.)

Gems From the Late Conventions and General Conference.

The Sunday School and Religion are claiming the attention of all. It has come to pass that everywhere you go, almost, some one wants to know of our work. Surely the Lord hath led us into green pastures. Evidences of His favor abound upon every hand.

Many have learned trust and faith in God by living experiences.

"To be of use" is our ambition; "Onward and Upward" our motto; and if humble and faithful, celestial glory shall be our reward.

The creed of the church is "all truth." Should the creed of the Sunday School be any less than all truth?

There is not a man among us but who would prefer to fight his enemy, though it might be the arch enemy of mankind, openly, than to fight him under cover.

We are admonished to contend earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints, but I do not know of any man in Christ who is authorized to contend over-harsh for his own views.

I believe that the grandest character in Christ is the one that can suffer the most. To suffer patiently and cheerfully is said to be the greatest proof of courage.

God has promised that he would temper his providences unto his people. It seems to me that the church just at the present time, notwithstanding there are clouds in the horizon, stands in a better position to receive greater blessings than she has ever received before. The Spirit is ready to bless and sanctify and help the ministry.

The Increase of the English Tongue.

It is against all reason to expect these strange people to adapt themselves at once to American methods and it is certainly problematical if the Americans will try to become acclimated in their habits. Our people consider themselves the finest products of civilization, and when we take charge of a new population it is not to learn its language or to adopt its habits, but to gradually make it recognize our own merits and to try as much as possible to become like our own selves. Of course, all this means an enormous increase in the spread of the English language, and if any one wants to measure the century there is no better way than to take the fact that whereas one hundred years ago the Spanish language outnumbered the English more than six millions, today the English surpasses the Spanish by nearly three to one.—Saturday Evening Post.

Massage the Baby's Scalp.

Vigorous massage of the scalp to stimulate it is necessary in treating a child's hair that does not grow luxuriantly. Whatever tonic is chosen, most of the good derived from it depends upon its being thoroughly rubbed into the roots of the hair. This should be done at least three times a week. The hair should be cut if it is very long and thin.—May Ladies' Home Journal.

Dr. McGiffert and Presbyterianism.

As in the Briggs case there are now two opposing forces within the Presbyterian body whose points of variance are not simply with relation to the man over whose book a controversy now rages. The New York Presbyterian, to which Professor McGiffert, of Union Seminary, belongs, has voted nearly three to one against a heresy trial. But his purpose is to remain a Presbyterian that he may help to liberalize Presbyterianism. Arrayed against him is the conservative force that in every presbytery is looking after the election of commissioners to the General Assembly at St. Louis in May. This element is not affected by the vote in the Union professor's home presbytery. The leaders are not here, but in Cincinnati, Pittsburg and Chicago Presbyteries. There are here, though, loyal followers of such leaders, and until the last court of resort has acted there will be strife. Professor McGiffert may give way, although nobody now expects to see him do so. The force opposing him will not give way until it wins or is defeated by a decision from which there is no appeal. This is the Presbyterian situation.—The Congregationalist (Presbyterian), Boston, February 22.

500 An Hour.

Dear Friends—The half has not been told. Our courage has failed us to present all the shocking details. Every time the clock strikes the hour it tolls the death knell of at least five hundred victims in India who died for want of food.

Your contribution today may save scores, hundreds, yes, thousands of lives tomorrow. Twenty dollars will support a thousand lives for one day. A thousand dollars will save as many for two months. Two dollars will save a life until the next harvest, and that practically means that it will save it for good. We cable free of expense all you contribute. What will you give? What thou dost do quickly, for the Master's business requires haste. Send your contribution to India Famine Relief work, under direction Christian Herald. Office: Bible House, New York City.

PASTORAL.

Being placed in charge of the Par West, Missouri, district with Bro. Swen Swensen as assistant, we would cheerfully advise those who are to labor under our direction to enter the field as brave soldiers of the cause; wherever you can find an open door, there enter and preach the gospel and gather in the people. Never mind about troubles that may rise, but leave that for local authorities to settle. Push out and open up new fields and God will bless you with liberty and freedom of the Spirit to present his word. Any advice you wish consult those in charge and let us make a noble record this year to the church.

Bro. Walter W. Smith will labor with Bro. Swensen, and Bro. S. F. Cushman with J. C. Foss. Waste no time nor ammunition, but let the people know that we are alive and about our heavenly Father's business. Each one report to J. C. Foss your labor done, number of sermons preached, baptisms and all items of interest, on the first day of the following months, so I can report to Bro. I. N. White, missionary in charge; July, October, January and March. My field address is St. Joseph, Mo.

J. C. FOSS, SWEN SWENSEN.

INDEPENDENCE, Mo., May 7.

To the Saints of the Southeastern mission, Greeting:—Having been appointed in charge of the above mission, I take this method of asking for the hearty co-operation of all the Saints, and especially the ministry, in the mission, that our work may be more effectual for good during the year.

It is a little hard, at the present time, to arrange sub-mission fields and men for them in charge, for the reason that conditions are such that very few, if any, of the brethren who would be in condition to take sub-charge, will be likely to labor all the year in any one portion of the mission. For the present, therefore, no one will be appointed in charge of special fields, but each one of the brethren appointed to labor will please take special interest in whatever field they may be laboring at any time, and report any and all needs of the work, labors performed, and everything that should be reported to the missionary in charge, directly to me.

Let the local officers in branches and districts be encouraged to occupy, each in his place, and let them assist all they can in making new openings, and warning the world.

Will the missionaries please report labors, etc., on the first days of July, October, January and March. Please don't forget dates, nor fail to be prompt in reporting.

Possibilities for the accomplishment of much good are ours if we are united in our work, and labor for the glory of God. Let us try to improve the golden opportunities e'er they pass away. It means work, but that is what is needed to develop and purify the soul. May we each be wise and good; and may this conference year witness a faithful performance of our duties and a consequent harvest of good.

My permanent address is Independence, Missouri. After the 20th of May my mission address, for a time, will be Sedalia, Kentucky.

In bonds, T. C. KELLEY, INDEPENDENCE, Mo., May 8.

Colorado, Eastern Wyoming and New Mexico Mission.

It being improbable that I shall be able to enter the above named field for some time, I have, with the concurrence of the president of the church, appointed Elder J. B. Roush to take the active oversight thereof. All laborers who have been assigned to that field will please report to Bro. Roush, whose address is Wray, Colorado, and move as he may appoint.

Bro. Roush may publish a general announcement for the benefit of the field and workers, and I will refrain from further counsel at present other than to exhort all to diligence, patience and humility and to co-operate together for the general good. May the good Master crown the year with abundant good.

In bonds, JOSEPH LUFF, INDEPENDENCE, Mo., May 14.

NOTICES.

Preaching services will be held at grove near Arlington, South Dakota, beginning Friday, June 16th, at 11 a. m., holding over Sunday, June 17th, under the auspices of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. The scattered Saints in Howard, White, South Dakota, are invited and as many as can avail themselves of the privilege will please inform Bro. A. C. Stone, Arlington, as soon as possible, who, together with Sr. Stone, will arrange for their entertainment.

The purpose of this arrangement is to give publicity to the doctrine in the above locality, desirous that the Saints scattered as above will make an effort to attend.

JAMES CAFFALL, Missionary in Charge. We live two and one-half miles west and one and one-half miles north of Arlington. A. C. STONE.

To the Saints and Friends of the Kirtland District, Greeting:—In the report of the conference held at Sharon, Pennsylvania, March 5th and 6th, as found in Saints' Herald, Bro. F. J. Ebeling, David Allen and the writer were appointed to solicit means to purchase a tent to be operated in the district.

As we have five missionaries appointed to labor in Kirtland district, and I am requested by Bro. W. H. Kelley to lend a helping hand in getting the tent started, I want to ask each one who can help in this matter of raising the money for a tent to consider themselves a committee of one to obtain all they can in the next ten days after reading this letter, and send it to Eben Miller, Box 28, Cleveland, Ohio, stating that it is for the tent. This request will not interfere with the efforts of Bro. Ebeling and Allen; they can work up the interest as far as they can reach in the meantime, and report to Bro. Miller as soon as possible.

There are some few dollars on hand; I do not remember just the amount as reported by the former tent committee. Would like to see this tent bought and gospel work started under its dedicated canvas by June 1st.

Let everybody come to the help of the Lord and it will be done. I shall leave for Ohio shortly.

In bonds, A. H. PARSONS, INDEPENDENCE, Mo., May 11.

To the Saints in the St. Louis district in Missouri exclusive of St. Louis and suburbs; Greeting:—I wish to say to you and also to the Saints in southeast Missouri that Bro. Geo. W. Beebe and the writer having been appointed to labor among you and in said district, expect to be in the new field in a few days. Those desiring preaching please write me at once at Acorn Ridge, Stoddard county, Missouri, in care of W. T. Hill.

Now, brethren and sisters, while I am a stranger to you I am not a stranger to this work and its needs, and I ask the prayers and hearty co-operation of you Saints that our work in the mission may lack no essential to make it a success.

Your brother in Christ, C. J. SPURLOCK, POMONA, Mo., May 13.

Benefit to Sunday Schools is the District Association?" Let delegates bring thoughts on this question. It has been suggested that each Sunday School reports be sent to the district secretary by June 1st. Sunday School secretaries will please notice this change.

BESSY RICHESON, Dist. Sec. STATE CENTER, Iowa.

The Sunday School convention of northeast Kansas district will convene at Scranton, Kansas, June 8th, 2 a. m. It is expected that each school in the district will be well represented.

HARRY THOMAS, Supt. NETAWAKA, Kans., May 8.

The Northern Indiana and Southern Michigan Sunday School workers will meet in convention at Coldwater, Michigan, at 9:30 a. m., June 8th.

Will our superintendents kindly see that all reports are full and properly signed? Your presence is needed for the good of the convention. Will you be there?

MRS. J. H. ROYCE, Supt., G. F. WESTON, Sec. BARODA, Mich., May 12.

The Sunday School convention of the Northeast Missouri district will convene at Higbee, Missouri, June 14th, at 7:30 Thursday evening, and we hope that all the delegates, and the teachers and officers of the Higbee school will be present. At 9:30 Friday morning there will be prayer meeting; business session at 10:15; institute work in the afternoon, and a program in the evening. Send secretaries' reports and superintendents' reports to the district clerk, Bro. George Tryon, Huntsville, Missouri.

In Memoriam.

In memory of Elder John T. Kineman, who was born in Madison county, Indiana, October 14, 1820, baptized December 14, 1870, by B. V. Springer: WHEREAS it has pleased our heavenly Father to remove from our midst and take unto himself our esteemed brother and worthy president, Elder John T. Kineman, who was ordained president of the Third Quorum of Elders at Gallands Grove, Iowa, by W. H. Kelley, James Caffall, J. C. Crabb and R. J. Anthony, September 30, 1879, and with wisdom and ability served until his demise; and

WHEREAS he was a man of integrity and of sterling worth to the church, a competent exponent of the angel's message, an able defender of the truth and ever ready to sacrifice for the cause he loved; and was a kind and loving husband and father, and like one of old commanded his children after him in righteousness; and while we, the members of the Third Quorum of Elders, keenly feel the loss of our brother, his wise counsel and executive ability, how much more are those near and dear by the ties of nature called to mourn; therefore be it

Resolved, That we, the members of the Third Quorum of Elders, extend our heartfelt sympathies to the bereaved family and our prayers in their behalf, that the Spirit of Him who is a husband to the widow and a father to the fatherless may abide with them to keep them in the faith once delivered to the saints; and while all suffer because of being deprived of the association of our brother, yet our loss is his gain. May we all so live as to be worthy the communion of God's Holy Spirit, that when the trump shall sound both loud and long we may come forth in the first resurrection and be changed from mortality to immortality to meet our Savior, our brother, and all the redeemed of earth, where parting shall be no more.

BROADEN OUT.

The individual who is accustomed to look only upon one side of a question is very unfortunately constituted; the ability to patiently and thoroughly investigate all that relates to a question, weigh evidences pro and con is a characteristic worthy of careful and persistent cultivation. A narrow, onesided, prejudiced view of any matter is detrimental to any person, and is a thing to be shunned and discouraged at all times as a hindrance to development of character worthy the source of all intelligence.

Truth is always profitable, uplifting and progressive, but notwithstanding this fact, error, its opposite, is, generally speaking, the most favored of the masses; and strange as it may appear, the popularity of error is not by any means confined to those whose educational opportunities have been either meagre or neglected; but this adherence to error is found strongly entrenched in minds of the highest educational attainment so far as worldly or book lore is concerned, and among men and women of the brightest intellect, those capable of comprehending clearly were their prejudices and erroneous trappings laid aside.

Peter, the apostle, writes of a class existing in his day who, apparently, gave him some concern, and their counterpart is found almost, if not altogether, everywhere in the civilized world. Of them he says, speaking of the writings of the Apostle Paul:

As also in all his epistles, speaking in them of these things; in which are some things hard to be understood, which they that are unlearned and unstable wrest, as they do also the other scriptures, unto their own destruction.—2 Pet. 3: 16.

That is where the trouble lies theologically; the effort to make the Scriptures support certain views and ideas, instead of making the theories entertained harmonize with "what is written," must result in a one sided view, and error is the fruitage. The same course is pursued with regard to matters in other lines of thought, politically, scientifically, or commercially, and a narrow, mistaken policy is sure to follow the carrying out of such methods. It is natural for all independent thinking minds to assume that the conclusions they have reached are correct; and with some individuals, so tenacious are they in holding to those ideas, that however plain to others the proofs of their error are they still hold to them; and this fact, we presume, has given rise to the adage that "a man convinced against his will is of the same opinion still," or something to that effect.

Those who accept the teachings of the Savior or his apostles and servants, as they were moved by the Holy Ghost, and who profess to be children of God, should not be among the class which takes contracted views of questions whether relating to the present or future life. There is no broader philosophy than the gospel of Jesus Christ. Every man and woman, regardless of race or condition, is placed upon an equal footing so far as the uplifting and saving power resident in it is concerned; the same service and obedience is alike demanded from the king on the throne to the peasant in the humble cottage, and to all alike are the promises extended if faithful service is given. The gospel also designs that every man shall be equal so far as the demands of this life go, every one to receive according to his wants and needs. The necessities of some are greater than others, and of course they should receive a greater proportion than some whose needs are less, and who, if they received a greater amount, would have more than they needed; but when every one receives as their necessities require, then all are on an equal footing, and that is the law contemplated in the gospel. Can anything be broader than that?

Now, the individual who delights in those things which the law of God classes as sinful and unlawful is not a broadminded person; he only sees the present and fails to consider that the more enduring and important life is yet to be experienced; but the individual who builds for the future by basing his hope upon a sure foundation, and correctly estimates that which is for his best interest from a right view of both sides of the question. It is a fact that obedience rendered to heavenly mandates secures a development of character uplifting in its effects, not only in the life to come, but in the present existence; while service devoted entirely to the pleasures or pursuits of this life have the opposite tendency; the latter course fills the mind with greed, makes the spirit selfish and the heart callous to the welfare and happiness of others, all of which is entirely foreign to the best interests of the individual who is so unfortunate as to possess such a nature of character. Hence, the "old paths" "wherein is the good way" are the best to follow, and those who truly walk therein are not only blessed themselves, but become a blessing to others around them, and thus they fulfill the design of the Lord in their probation in this life.

It is judged by a great many good, earnest people of this age that those who insist that the gospel ordinances instituted by the Savior and his apostles under Him, of baptism, by immersion for the remission of sins, and the laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost, are narrow minded and beyond the age; that to expect or claim that the signs will follow believers now as of old, is indicative of a contracted and benighted intellect. Because these doctrines are not insisted upon by what is termed the orthodox churches of the day, and because they do not possess the gifts promised of the Savior in Mark 16, and more fully explained by the Apostle Paul in 1 Corinthians 12, 13 and 14, it is accepted as conclusive testimony that there is now no occasion for them, and consequently they are not manifest. It does not seem to occur to them—except that there and there among the various assemblies may be found an individual in whose mind doubts arise—that possibly the fault may lie with them; that when the Apostle Peter on Pentecost day, speaking under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit declared, "for the promise is unto you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off even as many as the Lord our God shall call," he meant all that he said, and that if God has truly called them to seek his salvation, that then his promises extend as fully to them as to those whom the apostle was addressing on that memorable occasion. They need to broaden their investigation and their views considerably before they will arrive at the truth of the matter.

The old idea which some of the Saints used to entertain that only among them was truth to be found, was an evidence of a shortsighted and contracted vision. Truth, and religious truth too, has always existed outside of the pale of the church of Jesus Christ. The necessity of faith in God and in Jesus Christ as the divine Son of God, is as much a truth when taught by a Luther as when Paul declared it. The doctrines of repentance and baptism by immersion for the remission of sins lose none of their force as truths when taught by one not identified with the church of Jesus Christ, even though he does not hold authority from God to administer in the ordinances of His kingdom; he could teach those truths even though he had not himself been baptized. So far as churches have held and taught the truths of the Bible as directed by Christ and His apostles, so far have they taught truth, and God has and will recognize that which is truth. There is a couplet that runs something like this, "Truth is truth wherever found, on christian or on heathen ground," and it's pretty sound doctrine too. Of course, where the greatest amount of truth is found, there will the Lord manifest Himself most abundantly, and nowhere will such manifestation be found so frequent and so completely, as in the church of His own planting, the church of Jesus Christ. That church will have apostles, prophets, evangelists, pastors, elders, teachers and deacons as officers. It will teach faith, repentance, baptism, laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost, healing of sick, etc., resurrections (first and second) and eternal judgment. (Heb. 6: 1, 2). It will have the gifts and powers of the gospel as enumerated by the Savior in Mark 16, and by Paul, 1 Cor. 12, 13 and 14, because these were all in the church under Christ and his immediately appointed ministry; and they will preach the gospel as it was taught in the beginning, and because of such adherence to the truth they will be acknowledged as are no other people. But at the same time there is truth in other churches; there are sheep in other denominations who hear and recognize the Savior's voice and are following Him and will continue to so follow and be lead into the true fold.

Let every one then seek to be as broad in their views as the Lord manifests in His word it is His will they should be, and a better understanding and comprehension of all truth will result.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

ANOTHER Magnetic Healer and one who enjoyed a very extensive practice and became wealthy in a very short time, has come to grief. This man published a journal, one of his scriptural mottoes being "They shall lay hands on the sick and they shall recover." The government made a case against him for fraudulent use of the United States mails with the result as stated below:

WELTMER ORDER PERMANENT. Nevada, Mo., May 15.—(Special). Orders were received today by the Nevada postoffice to deliver no mail to the Weltmer institute, but to return to the senders where same bore return card. Mail bearing no return address will be sent to the dead letter office. The recent order of the department to hold matter pending investigation, lead up to the present permanent fraud order. Feeling here between the sympathizers of the institution and those who have led the fight against it, is quite bitter, and today a couple of prominent ministers, Rev. Mr. H. R. Best, of the First Baptist church, and Rev. Mr. Joseph King, a leading South Methodist divine, while passing the institute, were hissed and jeered by a crowd of students and employees. The future course of the management has not yet been made public, Mr. Weltmer being still in Washington, where he went to defend his case before the postoffice department.—The Kansas City Journal, May 16th.

BRO. J. J. CORNISH, Reed City, Michigan, says he has baptized two since General Conference, and that the workers are all doing what they can to move the cause along.

UNTIL further notice the address of Bro. A. Haws will be 922 Third street, Oakland, California, the recurrence of his old physical trouble necessitating his return home.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

ELDER F. M. SLOVER, Parrish, Illinois:

I am busy at work here in the Master's cause. Bro. M. F. Gowell will join me here Saturday and aid me in the work. I feel encouraged to go forward until I meet you in General Conference in Independence in 1901. I hope to live worthy of the Master's help in gospel work all along the line. Your valuable paper is anxiously looked for every week by me, and is read with much interest. I hope that it may ever live to do much good in heralding the glad news of the restored gospel.

ELDER A. WHITE, Knobnoster, Missouri:

I came here Saturday, the 19th inst, found the Saints well, but very hungry for preaching. I spoke in the church at 11 a. m. and at night, to about twenty, or twenty-five, good attention. We held prayer and testimony meeting at 2:30 p. m. I expect to remain here through the week and preach every night, if interest is shown by the people. Then I expect to go to Bayville. The Saints here complain of being neglected by the traveling ministry, and those in charge of the district.

ELDER D. C. WHITE, Guilford, Missouri:

J. Arthur Davis and myself came to this place to hold a week's meeting, but rain for five days prevented us from doing any preaching. We shall make an effort to open the work (if a place can be had) at Savanah, and just as soon as the weather clears up, will commence tent work—the tent is at Mound City. We would ask that the Saints throughout the Mowday district would let us know of any place or point that preaching is wanted, and we shall try and see that the interest is cared for. Bro. C. P. Welsh, Davis and myself are ready to do the Master's work. If you have a place for preaching let me hear from you at Lamoni, Iowa

AN INDUCEMENT.

In order to raise some money within the next few weeks, we have decided to make the following offer:

To those who remit their subscription to the ENSIGN one year in advance we will send a copy of our Historical Engraving for 25 cents; that is, for $1.25 we will send the ENSIGN for one year and a copy of the engraving. This picture sells at 50 cents each and is the same which we formerly sold at 75 cents.

This offer applies to either renewals or new subscriptions. If, however, any one secures a subscription from another party, they, as well as the subscriber, will be entitled to the picture at 25 cents each, but in order to secure it at this price the order must be accompanied by the amount to pay ENSIGN subscription one year in advance, and 25 cents for each copy of the engraving; otherwise the regular price of 50 cents will be required to obtain it. The size of this Engraving is 20x28 inches, and it contains photos of the members of the Quorum of Twelve; the standing High Council; the seven presidents of Seventies; seven brethren representing the different priesthoods in the church; the martyrs, Joseph and Hyrum Smith; the present president and patriarch of the church; the Bishopric; the three witnesses to the Book of Mormon; the church recorder, secretary and librarian; the Saints' Home; Graceland College; the Nauvoo and Kirtland temples; the Hill Cumorah; the Temple Lot; the Saints' church at Independence and the church at Lamoni, etc.; in all, sixty-eight pictures artistically grouped in one. We send with every picture a key which explains it throughout.

Send along the amount at once, and thus help us financially and secure this beautiful engraving at one-half regular price. Address all orders to

GENERAL CHURCH NEWS.

INDEPENDENCE.

Bro. A. Haws left for his home, Oakland, California, Monday, his health not permitting his continuance in the field.

Bro. and Sr. Earl Corthell are the proud possessors of a young nine pound son who joined their family circle Thursday of last week. Congratulations.

Bro. and Sr. John A. Robinson, Jr., have issued cards announcing the advent of a ten pound son whom they have named Harry Alma. Congratulations are in order.

Bro. and Sr. A. H. Parsons left Wednesday morning for Ringgold county, Iowa, where they will spend a few days, from whence Bro. Parsons will move on to his mission. He expects to reach Cleveland, Ohio, for the first Sunday in June.

Bro. W. H. Kelley and T. C. Kelley left yesterday (Wednesday) morning to pay a few days visit to relatives in Missouri and southern Illinois, from which points Bro. T. C. will proceed to his field the first Sunday in June. The missionaries are scattering out, and we feel lonesome.

There will be a collection taken at the Sunday School next Sunday for the India famine relief fund. All should come prepared to contribute as liberally as possible. All the Sunday Schools of Independence have agreed to take this collection next Sunday. It is sorely needed.

It has been found necessary to change "Children's Day" from the first to the second Sunday in June which will be the 10th. Those who are drilling the children have decided that the time is too short to get ready by June 3d. Keep it in view then. Children's Day Sunday, June 10th.

Three more children of Latter Day Saints, themselves members of the church, graduated at the Independence High School Tuesday, the 22d: Bro. Kerney Lee Kelley, eldest son of Bro. and Sr. T. C. Kelley, Sr. Lottie Belle Gould, daughter of Bro. and Sr. C. G. Gould, and Sr. Nellie May Hidy, daughter of Bro. Geo. H. Hidy. All acquitted themselves creditably.

Bro. Frank Criley's household goods have arrived from Lamoni and been placed in his fine residence on Maple avenue. Part of his family have also arrived and are staying with Bro. and Sr. G. H. Hulmes. Sr. Delle, the eldest daughter, graduates at Lamoni the first part of June, after which the family will take up their residence here. Sr. M. E. Hulmes will also return here permanently.

Come to the church and Sunday School next Sunday, annual Rally day. If President Joseph Smith is unable to be present, Bro. Joseph Luff will preach at the morning hour, and a good speaker will also occupy at night. Every member of the branch should be sure to attend all the services next Sunday. The chorus will furnish good music. Members of other branches will be welcomed and there will be plenty of room, but it is especially desired that all members of the branch attend. Provide your dinner before hand and eat a cold lunch if needful, so that all may have opportunity to be present at every service.

The Brn. Bartholomew with their troop of trained horses, some twenty in number, left this (Thursday) morning for Sedalia, Missouri, from which point they go east; Bro. Mark White accompanied them. They certainly have an exhibition well worth the price of admission. Men, women and children are always delighted with the surprising and cute tricks of these beautiful animals, and are enthusiastic in their applause. Bro. Bartholomew has a rare faculty of bringing out the wonderful intelligence possessed by the horse, and we heartily advise every reader of this item to visit this exhibition whenever it reaches their city. The Brn. Bartholomew are polished gentlemen as well as good members of the church, and are highly esteemed by the Saints and others here, and this may also be said of other brethren with them. We hope their tour may be as successful as it deserves to be.

Last Sunday was a pleasant and profitable season for the Lord's people; Bro. T. W. Chaburn occupied at the morning service in the church very acceptably, and at night Apostle W. H. Kelley being present, consented to preach, Bro. A. H. Parsons who had previously been announced for the occasion kindly vacating in Bro. Kelley's favor. Good sized audiences heard both efforts. The afternoon service was comforting, admonition and promise being given to the Saints and ministry. The Sunday School enrollment is now 485, but 379 were present at the session, however. The secretary said in her report, "We are wondering where are the other 106?" Will the parents answer, and will they please see that every scholar is present next Sunday? Rally day.

Through an oversight we failed to record a very pleasant social event enjoyed by a crowd that filled the house and yard of Bro. and Sr. R. Etzenhouser, the evening of May 4th, the occasion being the thirteenth anniversary of their wedding. It was an entire surprise to Sr. Etzenhouser at least, and none the less enjoyable to herself and family that she was kept wholly in the dark regarding it until her return from a skillfully planned invitation to supper. The present of a nice set of dishes was a memento of the occasion which will doubtless bring her many pleasant reminiscences of the event. Bro. R. C. Evans, always genial and happy, added to the enjoyment of the evening, and yielding to the entreaties of those present, sang a song of Zion's redemption, to the appreciation of the hearers; others also contributed to make it a very satisfactory and pleasant time. This will be stale news here, but to Bro. and Sr. Etzenhouser's many friends in other fields it will be just as interesting as though we had told it two weeks ago as we should have done.

LAMONI, IOWA.

Rain enough, seemingly, last week to last all summer.

Yesterday, Sunday, the sun shone bright and warm. A good attendance greeted the teachers of the Sunday School at 9:30 a. m. At 11 Pres. Jos. Smith, assisted by Elder Clapp, delivered an excellent discourse on the words of the Master in his sermon on the mount, "Except your righteousness shall exceed that of the scribes and Pharisees, ye shall in no case enter into the kingdom of heaven." (Matt. 5: 20, I. T.) At the afternoon social service, Pres. Joseph Smith in charge, Elder F. M. Weld was ordained first counselor to Bishop Anderson, and Elder F. M. Smith second counselor by Pres. Jos. Smith, Apostle H. C. Smith and Bishop Anderson, Pres. Jos. Smith was spokesman in the ordination of Bro. Weld, and Apostle H. C. Smith in the ordination of Elder F. M. Smith; the good Spirit prevailed and all were refreshed by the presence of the Holy Spirit, and the prayers, sacred songs and testimonies were consoling and enlightening. Towards evening a number repaired to the Saints' Home where a young man was buried in the font in the waters of baptism, by Apostle H. C. Smith, and confirmed in the first parlor by Apostle Smith and Elder Gunsolley.

At night at the Saints' church Elder David A. Anderson was the speaker, and at the Saints' Home Elder Stubbart was the speaker.

Another inmate arrived to dwell at the Home last week, Bro. Daniel Jones, from Washingtonville, Ohio, age 69.

At Andover, Missouri, 14th inst., Mr. M. H. Stanley and Miss Mary T. McNeley were made one by Elder H. N. Snively.

Bro. John Harp, one of our active local preachers, departed to Springdale, Arkansas, where he expects to move his family.

Elder C. Scott went to Oklahoma, Texas, to debate with a Christian minister by the name of Chism.

On the evening of the 16th a surprise party occurred on Srs. Frank Criley and Hulmes, at which Sr. E. L. Kelley presented a set of silver spoons to Sr. Criley and a handsome souvenir spoon to Sr. Hulmes, as tokens of esteem and remembrance from their Lamoni friends; a pleasant time was enjoyed.

Elder A. B. Hanson, the former pressman at the Herald office, departed to his mission field in Nebraska.

Elder J. C. Clapp held forth at Davis City, seven miles east of here, on Sunday 13th.

Sr. C. B. Stebbins and some others who have been quite ill of late, are on the mend; Sr. Stebbins was able to ride out yesterday, with Bro. Stebbins, and enjoy the bright sunshine and fresh air.

A LAMONIAN.

May 21.

ST. JOSEPH, MISSOURI.

Elder Wm. Lewis was the speaker here Sunday morning. Elder C. E. Guinand at night.

One baptism took place yesterday afternoon in the church font. It was that of a Mrs. Schaffer who has been helplessly ill for some time. She had received the ordinance of administration several times under the hands of Elder Marcus Shaw who has also explained the gospel to her from time to time through an interpreter, she being unable to speak English. Last week she expressed a desire to be baptized. Bro. August Ehlers administered the ordinance, and Bro. Shaw officiated in the confirmation. He was blessed with a marked degree of the Spirit therein.

The continuous rains of last week interfered with the attendance at several of our meetings, but the glorious sunshine that beamed forth on Sunday morning gladdened our hearts, revived our spirits, and made us more appreciative of God's blessings.

The Sunday School voted to give the children an outing at the lake free of expense when the attendance reached one hundred and fifty. All are in quest of new scholars now.

The Ladies' Aid Society will give a strawberry festival in the church basement on the 28th inst.

Elder I. N. White is expected here next Sunday.

Elder John Davis was at the morning preaching service, arriving too late to speak to the people however.

Bro. C. E. Guinand spoke at the South Park mission, and Bro. G. J. Whitehead at Aspey mission Sunday night.

ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI.

Our street car strike continues with much assurance.

Bro. J. G. Smith's recent trip to Wayne county, Illinois, was occasioned by the marriage of his son, David E., to Miss Hattie Green, daughter of Bro. J. J. Green. Having thus taken one step in the right direction it is to be hoped they will take another, following the example of their worthy parents, in becoming citizens of the kingdom of God.

Bro. J. T. Davis is with us yet. He held meetings at Belleville, Illinois, during the past week; preached three times here yesterday, twice at St. Louis and at Cheltenham in the afternoon.

Sr. Grace Anderson has been enjoying her vacation during the past week, resting from the numerous "calls" that infest a telegraph office.

The funeral services of Sr. John Molyneux were held from the church Monday last. Many of the Saints followed to the beautiful cemetery, where her body is to remain until the first resurrection.

Our prayer meeting yesterday afternoon was good. The spirit of prophecy was present to the especial blessing of some and edification of all. "True, 'How gentle God's commands,' and what a splendid privilege to live in such close communion with the great Head.

T. J. Elliott represented our work at Caseyville, Illinois, yesterday; Bro. Christensen, Oak Hill; Bro. Barraclough, Cheltenham (night); Bro. Hitchcock, Belleville.

Bro. Daniel DeJoung, one of our young men, was quite seriously sick last week, apparently an attack of pneumonia fever, and while he has been a member of the church but a short time comparatively, he decided to put some of our teachings to test, and called for the administration. His presence at Sunday School yesterday morning was an evidence of the blessing he received, and especially to those who knew his condition.

When we see our young men and maidens manifest faith in this direction, as has been the experience of our people here recently, it's a good evidence of increased confidence in God. A very hopeful sign.

We very much regret the removal of Sr. Balsam and daughter to Denver, Colorado, but feel sure the Denver Saints will profit by our loss.

The Sisters' Prayer Union

meets this week with Sr. Crocker, 2625 Thomas street. Their faithfulness in this direction is commendable. J. C. H. May 21.

CHICAGO, ILLINOIS.

Branch headquarters, 716 W. Van Buren St., Sunday meetings 2:45 and 7:45 p. m.; Lang Mission, 3411 Cottage Grove Ave., 10:45 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.; West Pullman branch, 12024 Union Ave., 10:30 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.; Parkside Mission, 5124 Stony Island Ave., 3:00 and 7:30 p. m.; 508 W. 37th St. (colored mission), 10:30 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.

We are pleased to state that, no preventing providence, we will have baptism next Sabbath at the morning service at the Lang mission, 3411 Cottage Grove avenue, where Bro. and Sr. Penny are expected to be buried with Christ in baptism, with any others who may desire to come in with us. Bro. and Sr. P. were converted to this faith more through the direct visitation of the Spirit than any other agency; however they were in the hands and taught by thorough and competent members of the church with whom they neighbored.

We spent yesterday at West Pullman filling our regular third Sunday appointment, speaking morning and evening, returning home after the evening service.

Bro F. M. Pitt occupied at headquarters yesterday, also at the morning hour at Lang mission. We have not heard particulars, hence cannot write, but feel assured that all was well.

Bro. Wm. Henry Fuller, our new colored missionary, has arrived and taken up his abode with Bro. G. H. Graves with whom he will labor for the cause. They will commence street preaching as soon as the weather permits.

Sr. Grace Johnson, after a visit to her grandmother in Kansas, and friends in Kansas City, has returned to cheer the hearts of Saints and friends in Chicago. We welcome her back.

Monday night next is our priesthood meeting. Questions of importance will be presented; let all who can attend and help the cause along.

Sr. Wm. Butcher lives at Belvidere, Illinois, an isolated Saint. She was baptized twenty-three years ago in England, by Bro. Bradshaw. Any Saints or elders passing that way will be made welcome. She lives at 321 West Menominee street.

Two years ago yesterday I arrived in the city of Chicago. To me it has been a remarkable experience. Blessings and trial have been our lot, yet today we stand closer to the cause than ever before. We hope to continue. J. M. TERRY. 355 Orden Ave., May 21.

FIRST KANSAS CITY BRANCH.

Chapel, 2324 Washburn avenue. Take 15th street line to Prospect Ave., transfer to Prospect, get off at 24th, and walk one block west or to the right hand. Time of meetings: Sunday School at 9:30, preaching at 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.; prayer meeting Friday evening at 7:30; Religion, Friday evening at 8. Strangers are cordially invited.

Attendance at all services on Sunday was good.

Elder R. Eitzenhouser delivered his illustrated "Hill Cumorah" lecture at 11 a. m. to a very appreciative audience.

The evening sermon by Bishop R. May was well received.

The singers of the branch under direction of Bro. Gillen, are making great improvement.

A series of meetings was announced, beginning Thursday evening. Speakers from abroad are expected.

The brethren of the branches have perfected their organization, and by request we give their obligation:

We, whose names are hereto subscribed, and those who may hereafter be admitted to the privileges and benefits resulting from this contract, do hereby agree and contract, and by enrolling our names as members of this society, do solemnly promise, that we will try, by a special and continued effort, to raise ourselves to a higher standard of moral purity, by cultivating pure thoughts and exercising our minds along channels that are elevating and ennobling; that we will refrain from using all vulgar and indecent language, as well as anything suggestive in that direction; that we will try at all times to show by our actions that we are making an effort to subdue and bring under proper control our passions and all those propensities which have a tendency to cause us to do evil.

They call themselves "The Sons of Zion," and are hopeful of great benefit. Bro. Fred Koehler is to deliver an address at the next meeting, June 5th. A cordial invitation is extended to all brethren over eighteen years old.

R. E. PORTER.

SECOND KANSAS CITY BRANCH.

Corner Sixteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue. Sunday School 9:30 a. m., preaching 11 a. m., prayer meeting 2:30 p. m., preaching 7:30 p. m.

Elder Albert Haws offered the opening prayer at Sunday School, and Priest John Swenson reviewed the school.

Bro. I. N. White was a visitor at Sunday School and discoursed at the eleven o'clock service on "The Unity of the Faith." It was a strong, converting effort, founded on the Bible teachings and was very encouraging and edifying.

Elder John D. White, our local missionary, occupied the stand during the evening service, stirring up the individuals of the branch to diligence in the discharge of duty, and the necessity of unity and co operation in the labor of spreading the gospel. Bro. John D. White's mission headquarters is with Hulmes & Kress, 609 Main street, Tel. 1358.

Bro. Albert Haws starts to his home in Oakland, California; this week. JOHN C. GRAINGER. 2124 East street, May 21.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA.

Services at Golden West Hall, 320 Post street, every Sunday. Sunday School 10 a. m., preaching 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.; prayer meeting first Sunday of each month at 12:15 noon. Elder G. A. Parkin presiding elder, residence 3010 16th street.

We had preaching Sunday morning by Chas. A. Parkin; there was a good attendance, the hall being well filled. At 12:15 we met to partake of the sacrament and participate in a fellowship meeting. The spirit of worship was with us, and the time was well spent. Beside the regular opening ceremony, there was one prayer offered, seven hymns sung, and fifteen testimonies given.

In the evening the writer had the pleasure of being the speaker. Quite a number of strangers were present during the service, also a number of visitors. Bro. Adamson, from Santa Rosa, being among them. J. A. Saxe went to Oakland in the evening and preached there.

The officers of the branch held a priesthood meeting Monday evening.

The regular prayer meeting was held Wednesday evening, attendance small, but the meeting good. Sisters' Prayer Union Thursday afternoon.

Our city is passing through a peculiar experience. The city fathers seem to think it necessary to economize, so the street lights are turned off every night at 12 o'clock, which makes it very dark. Quite a number of robberies have been reported and "foot pads" are becoming more numerous, the darkness making it very convenient for them. Where has the city's money gone? Maybe the politicians could answer.

We are having beautiful weather, and all nature is gay.

LETTER DEPARTMENT.

ARKANSAS CITY, Kan., May 17.

Editor Ensign:—This finds Bro. R. W. Davis and I this far on our way to our field of labor; we were detained about ten days near Mound Valley, KS, attending the Keck and Shick debate, which closed May 10th. First proposition, "Was Joseph Smith a prophet of God," was well maintained by Bro. Keck. And we were agreeably surprised in Elder Shick on this proposition he said very nice, but when it came to his church he got off a few times, wanted a sign, said he had one blind eye, and if we would heal it he would join us and preach Joseph Smith the balance of his days. Elder P. W. Shick is an old debater, has had something over sixty debates, and I suppose he is about as good as they have. But when a man is on the wrong side experience doesn't do him much good.

The Saints are well respected in that part of Kansas and have lots of friends. It makes the elders feel good when they go into a place and find the Saints living their religion.

I will say to the Saints of Oklahoma and Indian Territories, especially the scattered ones, if you have an opening and want preaching, write us at Sumner, Oklahoma Territory, and we will make a note of it and try to get to you some time during the year.

Yours for the gospel, W. M. AYLOR.

SUMNER, O. T.

BLACKWELL, O. T., April 22.

Editor Ensign:—It always encourages me so to read the letters from the Saints in all parts of the world. I am very glad this afternoon as I sit meditating on this beautiful gospel, that it grows pleasanter, and seems more sweet to me each day I live, and there comes a feeling of regret that my ways are not more Christ like and my life better. I realize that I have much to overcome and a great many times find that I follow the evils of my nature to step forward and depart from me the blessed Spirit which will always be present with us if we are living right, overcoming instead of being overcome.

My life in the church has been filled with all kinds of experiences; I have had my dark hours and many more bright ones. I do not enjoy living away from church privileges, yet the gospel is always as comforting wherever our lot may be cast. My husband and I were baptized three years ago last August by Bro. Stebbins while attending the reunion of the Northwest Kansas district at Goshen (now Idylwild), Clay county, Kansas.

We had both been connected with the M. E. church, but for a few years had been seeking the kingdom of God, not finding it there; had been connected with the Missionary Alliance in New York city, yet on investigation found all out of harmony with God's word. Yet I was prejudiced; my husband had been investigating this gospel for six years, and was past that. We were especially directed and especially taken to that reunion with no intention of being baptized. I fully believed God sent us there to enlighten those deluded people; many of the Northwest Kansas Saints know of our experience at that time. God moves in a mysterious way (to our human minds) his wonders to perform. We obeyed the gospel the day before the reunion closed to the consternation of our friends, but I am so glad to know, to the glory of God.

God bless the dear Saints everywhere. We expect the work opened up here this spring; we have as yet had no preaching here, but are trying to wait patiently.

Yours in this latter day gospel, INA S. BRVENS.

P. S.—We hope soon to hear that those who have charge of the district tent this season are wending their way toward Blackwell. We are desirous of having the gospel preached here. I. S. B.

SPRINGFIELD, S. D., April 26.

Dear Ensign:—We seldom see a letter in your columns from Dakota, so I write to let the Saints know we are alive, and also to fulfill a promise made seven years ago to Bro. Kaler and the Denver Saints, to let them hear from me through the ENSIGN.

I was baptized seven years ago by Bro. E. F. Shupe, of Denver, and though I have never neglected the step then taken, still I know I have not been as faithful as I might, or lived up to the light as I should have done, for which I pray that the Lord will forgive me, and I ask the Saints to pray for me that I may be more humble and faithful, that I may set a good example before the world.

Bro. Swensen, we would be glad to have you come here again, or any of the elders who might come this way would be gladly welcomed. There are seven members here, all adults.

Ever praying for the welfare of Zion I remain,

Your sister in the faith, Mrs. RUTH A. BARNES.

CENTRALIA, Kans., Apr. 15.

Editor Ensign:—We have a union Sunday School at our school-house, and preaching services every two weeks by a Mr. Shoemaker. We had a Saints' Sunday School last summer, with Bro. Frank Pierce as superintendent. Bro. Pierce is a good Sunday School worker, and knows how to make Sunday School interesting for both old and young; it was surprising to see how much more the children learned from our books than they do from the union books. We would like to continue our own Sunday School, but as there are only a few of us, and as prejudice is strong against us, it is difficult for us to carry on a Sunday School; but if we can only live faithful our reward is sure.

We are glad to have the elders stop with us when it is convenient for them to do so, as their sermons are always instructive and encouraging.

My prayer is that we may ever have our lamps trimmed and burning and be ready when he says come.

Your sister, MAGGIE MCCRAY.

BEARDSTOWN, Ill., April 13.

Editor Ensign:—We have a branch of about eighteen members, church foundation on 13th and Monroe street. Beardstown is a sandy place on the Illinois river, between Peoria and St. Louis, of about six thousand inhabitants; the churches have shut their door against us, but, thank God for his word that the stone that the builders reject shall become the head of the corner. For sometime before I came into the faith I had a desire to be a Christian, but I had become so disgusted with the churches and those who professed to be Christians, that I gave up the idea. I was taken very sick and I wanted to die, and prayed night and day for God to take me out of this cold and unfriendly world. One day, in my agony of pain, I fell asleep for a moment, leaning against my companion. I dreamed I had died and was going along by the side of a stream of water; I saw before me the path divided, and saw to the left a dark cloud over the path, but beyond the cloud was bright sunshine; in the path at the right I saw my mother's footsteps, and I said I'll take the one that mother trod. As I went along a great animal jumped up out of the water and caught me; I cried out and awoke. I thought over the matter and decided not to take the path my mother had taken. I prayed that God would show me the right path in which to go, and a few nights after I had a vision and this promise was made to me: I should get well and the right path would be shown me as I would get stronger.

I was just able to go to hear Bro. M. H. Bond preach, and while I listened he would look straight at me and answer my very thoughts; things that had all my life been questions, he would answer, and these words came to me time and again, "the path is shown you now, take it," which I did; my husband and my mother fought against it, and only one friend have I in my mother's family, but when doubt appears I reflect upon how the way was made plain to me, then there is no doubt or fear.

When I was confirmed and Elder Bond said I should know things by dreams, I looked at him, wondering how he knew that. I thought he was a mind reader sure. I was married just four years the day that Bro. Bond came to this place, was baptized on same day of week that I was married. I often see names in ENSIGN that bring me back to childhood; my maiden name was Harmon, birthplace Oxford, Missouri, and have been in the faith three years.

I had always been taught that the healing power was done away with long ago, and the first I ever saw healed was through Elder M. T. Short. A little son of Bro. Reynolds was sick with lung fever; after the administration he broke out in a heavy sweat and wanted to put on his clothes and get up, but his mother did not let him, he then went to sleep and arose next day and went about as usual; he was suffering great pain when we entered the house but the fever left him the same hour. After that I was administered to by Bro. G. H. Hilliard and relieved of a tape worm, and that is evidence enough for me that the healing power is not done away with.

I believe we must be faithful and careful in this work; the disciples once asked Christ why they could not do the healing that he could, he answering, on account of lack of faith; that such goeth out only by fasting and prayer. May we all be prayerful and faithful, and condemn not each other, for we know not what each have to bear. May God protect those both on land and at sea who are in his service. I remain,

DELROT, Iowa, May 15.

Editor Ensign:—We send Sr. Lumley's obituary notice; we are very sorry it was not published sooner, but as we were not taking the ENSIGN I was not aware that it was not. I think, however, it was sent to the Herald. She had sent her ENSIGNS to friends, urged people to subscribe and had taken subscriptions, written for its columns and so anxious for its weekly visits. I feel we have done her an injustice by not sending in her obituary notice, therefore I send it now. When I wrote you the postmaster's card to stop the paper I should have explained more fully had I understood that it had not been sent. We regret the notice of her death had not been given sooner to the pages of the ENSIGN as she often contributed to its columns, and the church literature was one of her greatest comforts. But we will abide by the old adage, "Better late than never." Your sister in Christ,

ELLEN HORN, Clerk of Delrot branch.

THE TWO COVENANTS.

ELDER I. M. SMITH.

"Tell me, ye that desire to be under the law, do ye not hear the law? For it is written, that Abraham had two sons; the one by a bond maid, the other by a free woman. But he who was of the bond woman was born after the flesh; but he of the free woman was by promise. Which things are an allegory: for these are the two covenants; the one from the mount Sinai, which gendereth to bondage, which is Agar. * * * Now we, brethren, as Isaac was, are the children of promise. But as then he that was born after the flesh persecuted him that was born after the spirit, even so it is now. Nevertheless what saith the Scripture? Cast out the bond woman and her son: for the son of the bond woman shall not be heir with the son of the free woman. So then, brethren, we are not children of the bond woman but of the free."—Gal. 4: 21-31.

As these things are "an allegory," and are "the two covenants," it will be necessary for us to get the meaning of those two words fixed in our minds before attempting to analyze the foregoing text.

Allegory is "a figurative sentence or discourse in which the principal subject is described by another subject resembling it in its properties and circumstances."

Covenant is "a mutual consent or agreement between two or more persons, to do or forbear some act or thing; a contract; stipulation." Also "a writing containing the terms of agreement or contract between parties."

The text quoted is quite lengthy and presents several thoughts that are well worthy of careful consideration. Among them I shall ask you to note the following:

First, Abraham had two sons.

Second, One of his sons was born to him "by a bond maid."

Third, The other "by a free woman"—his wife.

Fourth, The bond woman's child was "born after the flesh."

Fifth, The free woman's child "was by promise."

Sixth, These things "are an allegory."

Seventh, They represent "the two covenants."

Eighth, The bondwoman represents the covenant given "from the mount Sinai."

Ninth, This covenant "gendereth to bondage."

Tenth, The free woman represents the covenant given to Abraham "by promise."

Eleventh, The children of this covenant are free.

Twelfth, The bond woman and her son are to be "cast out."

Thirteenth, The bond woman's son "shall not be heir with the son of the free woman."

Fourteenth, The Saints of God "are not the children of the bond woman, but of the free"—not children of the Sinaitic covenant, but are children of the gospel covenant.

The first intimation we have of this covenant "from the mount Sinai," of which I have been able to find any definite record, is found in the nineteenth chapter of Exodus:

"In the third month, when the children of Israel were gone forth out of the land of Egypt, the same day came they into the wilderness of Sinai * * * and there Israel camped before the mount."—Verses 1, 2.

This locates the children of Israel, at that time, in the wilderness of Sinai, "before the mount."

"And Moses went up unto God, and the Lord called unto him out of the mountain, saying, Thus shalt thou say to the house of Jacob, and tell the children of Israel; Ye have seen what I did unto the Egyptians, and how I bare you on eagle's wings, and brought you unto myself. Now, therefore, if ye will obey my voice indeed, and keep my covenant, then ye shall be a peculiar treasure unto me above all people: for all the earth is mine. And ye shall be unto me a kingdom of priests, and an holy nation. These are the words which thou shalt speak unto the children of Israel."—Verses 3-6.

Notice in the above that Moses "went up unto God," the Lord spake to Moses "out of the mountain," and gave him a message to carry to the children of Israel. This message was not to all nations; it was only to the house of Jacob, the children of Israel.

After calling the attention of the people to what he had done for them, in bringing them out of Egypt, the Lord promises to bless and prosper them in the future, and make of them "a peculiar treasure," if they would obey his voice and "keep my covenant." The covenant had not yet been made, nor had the terms of the covenant yet been stated; neither did the children of Israel, so far as we know, have any definite idea as to what the terms of the covenant would be.

But when Moses "called for the elders of the people, and laid before their faces all these words which the Lord commanded him" (v. 7), the record says:

"And all the people answered together, and said, All that the Lord hath spoken we will do. And Moses returned the words of the people unto the Lord."—v. 8.

Then the Lord said that he would come unto Moses in a thick cloud, "that the people may hear when I speak with thee, and believe thee forever." (v. 9).

"And the Lord came down upon mount Sinai, on the top of the mount." (v. 20).

And then, the congregation having been sanctified, and commanded not to break through and touch the mount, nor to gaze, the Lord proclaims his covenant from the mount Sinai, as follows:

"And God spake all these words, saying, I am the Lord thy God which have brought thee out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage. Thou shalt have no other gods before me. Thou shalt not make unto thee any graven image, or any likeness of anything that is in heaven above, or that is in the earth beneath, or that is in the water under the earth: thou shalt not bow down thyself to them, nor serve them: for I the Lord thy God am a jealous God, visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation of them that hate me; and showing mercy unto thousands of them that love me, and keep my commandments. Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain: for the Lord will not hold him guiltless that taketh his name in vain. Remember the Sabbath day, to keep it holy. Six days shalt thou labour and do all thy work: but the seventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God: in it thou shalt not do any work, thou, nor thy son, nor thy daughter, thy man-servant, nor thy maid-servant, nor thy cattle, nor thy stranger that is within thy gates: for in six days the Lord made heaven and earth, the sea, and all that in them is, and rested the seventh day: wherefore the Lord blessed the sabbath day, and hallowed it. Honour thy father and thy mother: that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee. Thou shalt not kill. Thou shalt not commit adultery. Thou shalt not steal. Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor. Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's house, thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's wife, nor his manservant, nor his maid-servant, nor his ox, nor his ass, nor anything that is thy neighbor's."—Ex. 20: 1-17.

After speaking "all these words" unto Israel, "from the Mount Sinai," the Lord said to Moses:

"Now these are the judgments which thou shalt set before them."—Ex. 21: 1.

He then proceeds (chapters 21, 22 and 23) to give special laws regarding servants, wives, man-stealing, manslaughter, smiting out an eye or a tooth, usury, the seventh year, the seventh day, feast days, etc., etc. And when the Lord had given to Moses "the judgments," "Moses came and told the people all the words of the Lord, and all the judgments."—Ex. 24: 3. (Italics mine).

Remember now, that the record says (Ex. 20: 1), "And God spake all these words," and then follow the ten commandments; and also that it then says (Ex. 21: 1), "Now these are the judgments which thou shalt set before them," after which follow the special laws regarding servants, wives, feast days, etc. Now, Moses brings the two together, and told the people "all the words of the Lord, and all the judgments." And when he had done so—had told them "all the words of the Lord," the ten commandments and "all the judgments," the special laws regarding servants, usury, etc.—the record says:

"And all the people answered with one voice, and said, All the words which the Lord hath said will we do."—Ex. 24: 3.

dren of Israel what he will do for them if they will obey his voice, and "keep my covenant;" and, when he told them the terms of the covenant, the people said, "All the words which the Lord hath said will we do." Isn't that "a mutual agreement?" Isn't that "a contract," entered into by "mutual consent" of both parties?

But a covenant is also "a writing containing the terms of agreement or contract between parties;" and we read in the next verse (Ex. 24: 4): "And Moses wrote all the words of the Lord." This writing, then, was a written "contract," or written "agreement" between God and the children of Israel, as witness the following:

"And he took the book of the covenant, and read in the audience of the people: and they said, All that the Lord hath said will we do, and be obedient. And Moses took the blood, and sprinkled it on the people, and said, Behold the blood of the covenant, which the Lord hath made with you concerning all these words."—Ex. 24: 7, 8. (Italics mine).

The Lord dictated the terms of this covenant and calls it "my covenant," while Moses refers to it as "his covenant;" but, when the people accepted the Lord's terms, and agreed to do all that he had said, it then became "a mutual agreement."

God made this covenant with the children of Israel at Mount Sinai; Moses wrote the words of the covenant in a book, called "the book of the covenant;" and he then "dedicated" the covenant by sprinkling both the people and the book with blood, which he called "the blood of the covenant." And this being the only covenant that the Lord made with Israel at that place, of which we have any record, it must be the one referred to by Paul as being "from the Mount Sinai, which gendereth to bondage." It is also called by the same apostle "the first covenant."

"Whereupon neither the first testament was dedicated without blood. For when Moses had spoken every precept to all the people according to the law, he took the blood of calves and of goats, with water, and scarlet wool, and hyssop, and sprinkled both the book, and all the people, saying, This is the blood of the testament which God hath enjoined unto you."—Heb. 9: 18-20.

The word "testament" is used here instead of "covenant;" but, in the Revised Version of the New Testament, this word is rendered "covenant" the same as in Exodus.

Paul says that Moses, before sprinkling the book and the people, spake "every precept," and that too, according to the law.

The meaning of "precept" is, in a general sense, any commandment or order intended as an authoritative rule of action, but applied particularly to commands respecting moral conduct.

The ten commandments and the judgments too, are commands respecting moral conduct.

Hence, they are "precepts" both in a general and in a particular sense. And, as Moses spoke "every precept," he spoke both the ten commandments and the judgments to all the people; and when they had answered, "All that the Lord hath said will we do," Moses "dedicated" this "first covenant" by sprinkling "the blood of the covenant," the blood of calves and of goats, on the book and on the people.

The "first covenant" then and "the one from the Mount Sinai," are one and the same; and it includes both the ten commandments and "all the judgments." The ten commandments, because of the prominent position which they occupy in this Sinaitic covenant, having been spoken by the Lord in the hearing of all Israel, and also having been written by the finger of the Lord on two tables of stone, are often called "the covenant."

Moses says: "And the Lord speaking to you out of the midst of the fire: * * * And he declared unto you his covenant, which he commanded you to perform, even ten commandments; and he wrote them upon two tables of stone."—Deut. 4: 12, 13.

The next verse says: "And the Lord commanded me at that time to teach you statutes and judgments." But the "statutes and judgments" are not the covenant; they belong to it and are, in fact, an authoritative exposition of its applicability to the various affairs of life. It was a divine covenant which God had declared unto Israel, and it was only right and proper that it should be expounded by divine wisdom. But while it is true that the "statutes and judgments" belong to and go with the covenant, as a fuller explanation of its application and enforcement, yet Moses says that "the covenant" is that which the Lord spake in the hearing of all Israel "out of the midst of the fire," that which He wrote "upon two tables of stone," "even ten commandments."

Speaking again of this covenant, Moses says:

"The Lord our God made a covenant with us in Horeb. The Lord made not this covenant with our fathers, but with us, even us, who are all of us here alive this day. The Lord talked with you face to face on the mount, out of the midst of the fire * * * saying, I am the Lord thy God, which brought thee out of the land of Egypt, from the house of bondage." (Deut. 5: 2-6). And then follow (verses 7-21) the ten commandments in full; and the next verse, verse 22, says:

"These words the Lord spake unto all your assembly in the mount, out of the midst of the fire, of the cloud, and of the thick darkness, with a great voice; and he added no more; and he wrote them in two tables of stone, and delivered them unto me."

Here, as in Exodus 20: 2, the Lord sets his seal to this covenant in no uncertain manner: "I am the Lord thy God, which brought thee out of the land of Egypt, from the house of bondage." And here, again, he clearly shows that the covenant, proper, is that which the Lord spake to Israel "out of the midst of the fire," that which he wrote "in two tables of stone," "even ten commandments." And you will please notice very carefully what is said of this covenant in verse 8: "The Lord made not this covenant with our fathers." The Lord had made a covenant with their fathers; but Moses says it was not "this covenant." The covenant made with their father is referred to by Moses as follows:

"Wherefore it shall come to pass, if ye hearken to these judgments, and keep and do them, that the Lord thy God shall keep unto thee the covenant and the mercy which he swore unto thy fathers."—Deut. 7: 12.

A covenant had been sworn unto their fathers, and Paul says of it: "And this I say, that the covenant, which was confirmed before of God in Christ, the law, which was four hundred and thirty years after, cannot disannul, that it should make the promise of none effect."—Gal. 3: 17.

Again he says in the same chapter: "And the scripture, foreseeing that God would justify the heathen through faith, preached before the gospel unto Abraham, saying, In thee shall all nations be blessed." (Gal. 3: 8). And in verse 16 he says, "And to thy seed, which is Christ."

The gospel, then, was preached unto Abraham; he was assured that through his seed, "which is Christ," "shall all nations be blessed;" and this covenant with Abraham "was confirmed before of God in Christ," four hundred and thirty years before the covenant "from the mount Sinai" was made with Israel. But these two covenants are not the same. God did, indeed, make a covenant with Abraham; but Moses said, "The Lord made not this covenant with our fathers." The covenant which Moses here calls "this covenant," and which he says was not made "with our fathers," is the one of which he says, "The Lord our God made a covenant with us in Horeb." And speaking of it in another place he says: "Also in Horeb ye provoked the Lord to wrath, * * * When I was gone up into the mount to receive the tables of stone, even the tables of the covenant." (Deut. 9: 8, 9). And of these two tables of stone, he says:

"And the Lord delivered unto me two tables of stone, written with the finger of God: and on them was written according to all the words which the Lord spake with you in the mount, out of the midst of the fire, in the day of the assembly."—Verse 10.

Again he says: "And it came to pass, at the end of forty days and forty nights, that the Lord gave me two tables of stone, even the tables of the covenant." (v. 11). " * * * And the two tables of the covenant were in my two hands."—v. 15.

Three times, in this chapter,

Moses calls those two tables of stone "the tables of the covenant;" and in verse 10 he says that the writing which was on them was "according to all the words which the Lord spake with you in the mount out of the midst of the fire."

When Moses broke the first two tables of stone the Lord told him to: "Hew thee two tables of stone like unto the first: and I will write upon these tables the words that were in the first tables, which thou brakest." (Ex. 34: 1). And when Moses had prepared the two tables and had gone up "unto mount Sinai," the Lord descended in a cloud and stood before him:

"And the Lord said unto Moses, Write thou these words: for after the tenor of these words I have made a covenant with thee and with Israel. And he was there with the Lord forty days and forty nights; he did neither eat bread, nor drink water. And he wrote upon the tables the words of the covenant, the ten commandments."—Ex. 34: 27, 28.

This last quotation is too plain to need any comment: "And he wrote upon the tables the words of the covenant, the ten commandments."

THE TABLES OF THE COVENANT WERE PUT WITHIN THE ARK OF THE COVENANT.

After Moses had written "all the words of the Lord" in "the book of the covenant," the Lord said unto him: "Come up to me in the mount, and be there: and I will give thee tables of stone, and a law, and commandment which I have written: that thou mayest teach them." (Ex. 24: 12). Verse 18 says that Moses went up, as the Lord commanded, "and Moses was in the mount forty days and forty nights." And while in the mount, before receiving the tables of stone, the Lord said to Moses:

"And let them make me a sanctuary; that I may dwell among them. According to all that I show thee, after the pattern of the tabernacle, * * * And they shall make an ark of shittim wood * * *"—Ex. 25: 8-10.

"And thou shalt put into the ark the testimony which I shall give thee."—v. 16.

"And thou shalt put the mercy seat above upon the ark; and in the ark thou shalt put the testimony that I shall give thee."—v. 21.

And the next verse, verse 22, the Lord promises to meet with and talk with them from between the two cherubim which were upon "the ark of the testimony."

Again we read: "And he gave unto Moses, when he had made an end of communing with him upon mount Sinai, two tables of testimony, tables of stone, written with the finger of God."—Exodus 31: 18.

Remember, now, that the Lord, when directing Moses how to build "the ark of the testimony," said: "And thou shalt put into the ark the testimony which I shall give thee." (Ex. 25: 16). And we have now learned that when the Lord had made an end of talking with Moses he gave him "two tables of testimony, tables of stone, written with the finger of God."

When Moses came down from the mount "the two tables of testimony were in his hand." (Ex. 32: 15). But when he saw the people worshipping the calf his "anger waxed hot, and he cast the two tables of stone out of his hands, and brake them beneath the mount." (Ex. 32: 19). And then, as already explained, the Lord told Moses:

"Hew thee two tables of stone like unto the first: and I will write upon these tables the words that were in the first tables, which thou brakest." (Ex. 34: 1). "And he wrote upon the tables the words of the covenant, the ten commandments." (v. 28). And when he came down from the mount the second time, "the two tables of testimony" were again "in Moses' hand." (See v. 29).

The foregoing texts make it clear that "the testimony" (which the Lord promised to give unto Moses and which he commanded Moses to put into the ark. See Ex. 25: 16, 21), the "tables of testimony," "the tables of stone," and "the tables of the covenant," are all one and the same thing; and the ark into which they were to be put is sometimes called "the ark of the covenant," and sometimes "the ark of the testimony." Following up this "ark," and this "testimony" we read again: "And it came to pass in the first month, in the second year, on the first day of the month, that the tabernacle was reared up." (Ex. 40: 17). "And he took and put the testimony into the ark, and set the stones on the ark, and put the mercy seat above upon the ark: and set up the veil of the covering, and covered the ark of the testimony; as the Lord had commanded Moses."—verses 20, 21.

Notice here, that "the tabernacle was reared up," that Moses "put the testimony into the ark," and that he then "brought the ark into the tabernacle;" and that there may be no doubt as to this being the covenant which is called in the New Testament, the "first covenant," I shall ask you to read, in connection with the above, the following from the Apostle Paul: "Then verily the first covenant"—notice now that he is talking the "first covenant." "Then verily the first covenant had also ordinances of divine service, and a worldly sanctuary [Ex. 25: 8]. For there was a tabernacle made [Ex. 40: 17]; the first, wherein was the candlestick and the table, and the shewbread; which is called the sanctuary. And after the second veil, the tabernacle which is called the Holiest of all; which had the golden censer, and the ark of the covenant [Ex. 40: 21] overlaid round about with gold, wherein was the golden pot that had manna, and Aaron's rod that budded, and the tables of the covenant [Ex. 40: 20]."—Heb. 9: 1-5.

The "words of the covenant" were written upon two tables of stone and these two tables of stone are called "the tables of the covenant" because they contain "the words of the covenant, the ten commandments;" these "tables of the covenant" are placed within the ark, and the ark is called "the ark of the covenant" because it contains the two tables of stone upon which "the words of the covenant" are written; this "ark of the covenant" is put within the tabernacle, in a place called the "Holiest of all," or the "Holy of Holies," where the Lord promised to meet with Moses and commune with him; and this is the covenant to which Paul refers as "the first covenant."

Moses, speaking of this to Israel, said:

"At that time the Lord said unto me, Hew the two tables of stone like unto the first, and come up unto me into the mount, and make thee an ark of wood. And I will write on the tables the words that were in the first tables which thou brakest, and thou shalt put them in the ark. And I made an ark of shittim wood, and hewed two tables of stone like unto the first, and went up into the mount, having the two tables in mine hand. And he wrote on the tables, according to the first writing, the ten commandments, which the Lord spake unto you in the mount out of the midst of the fire in the day of the assembly: and the Lord gave them unto me. And I turned myself and came down from the mount, and put the tables in the ark which I had made; and there they be, as the Lord commanded me."—Deut. 10: 1-5. (Italics mine.)

"And the Lord spake unto you out of the midst of the fire: * * * And he declared unto you his covenant, which he commanded you to perform, even ten commandments; and he wrote them upon two tables of stone."—Deut. 4: 12, 13.

From these two texts we get the following important thought, which I wish to repeat:

First, The writing on the second set of tables was "according to the first writing, the ten commandments."

Second, The writing on the tables of stone was that "which the Lord spake unto you out of the midst of the fire in the day of the assembly."

Third, When the Lord spake unto Israel "out of the midst of the fire," "he declared unto you his covenant."

Fourth, "His covenant," which he declared from mount Sinai, and which he wrote upon two tables of stone, is that "which he commanded you [Israel] to perform."

Fifth, "His covenant," that which he "spake unto you out of the midst of the fire," "even ten commandments," and "which he commanded you to perform," was "written upon two tables of stone" and put into the ark as a "testimony" unto Israel.

The "tables of the covenant" remained in the "ark of the covenant," and the ark remained in the tabernacle until the days of Solomon. But when Solomon had finished the temple he assembled the elders of Israel, the heads of the tribes, and chief of the fathers.

"That they might bring up the ark of the covenant of the Lord out of the city of David, which is Zion. And they brought up the ark of the Lord, and the tabernacle of the congregation * * * 'And the priests brought in the ark of the covenant of the Lord unto his place, unto the oracle of the house, to the most holy place, even under the wings of the cherubim. There was nothing in the ark save the two tables of stone, which Moses put there at Horeb, when the Lord made a covenant with the children of Israel, when they came out of the land of Egypt."—1 Kings 8: 1, 4, 6, 9.

What was in the ark when it was put into the temple? "There was nothing in the ark save the two tables of stone." Please remember that, and then read the following from the same chapter:

"And I have set there a place for the ark, wherein is the covenant of the Lord, which he made with our fathers, when he brought them out of the land of Egypt." (v. 21).

As "the covenant of the Lord" was in the ark, and "there was nothing in the ark save the two tables of stone," the covenant of the Lord and the ten commandments are again shown to be one and the same.

In 2 Chronicles 5: 10 we are again told that "there was nothing in the ark save the two tables which Moses put therein at Horeb," and, in 2 Chronicles 6: 11, Solomon, after telling of his building a house unto the Lord, says: "And in it have I put the ark, wherein is the covenant of the Lord, that he made with the children of Israel."

"The covenant of the Lord," then, is the same as that which was written on the two tables of stone, "even ten commandments;" and this is the covenant, too, that the Lord made with Israel when he brought them out of the land of Egypt, the covenant which he declared unto them "from the mount Sinai," "out of the midst of the fire;" hence, this is the covenant "from the Mount Sinai, which gerereth to bondage, which is Agar."—Gal. 4: 24.

And now, having shown that the covenant "from the mount Sinai" is the covenant which the Lord spake unto Israel "out of the midst of the fire," and having shown that the covenant which the Lord spake "out of the midst of the fire" is the same covenant that he wrote upon two tables of stone, "even ten commandments," and having shown that this is "the covenant of the Lord" which was in "the ark of the covenant" and which Paul calls (Heb. 9: 1-4; Heb. 9: 18-20) the "first covenant," and having shown that this covenant which was in the ark is the covenant "which the Lord made with the children of Israel when he brought them out of the land of Egypt," I shall ask you to go with me and examine that other covenant referred to in Galatians 4: 24; the covenant which is there represented by the "free woman," and which is called, elsewhere, "The New Covenant;" the covenant which is "by promise," and whose children are free.

THE NEW COVENANT.

The first text I shall notice under this heading is the promise of the Lord to Jeremiah:

"Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel, and with the house of Judah: Not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers in the day that I took them by the hand to bring them out of the land of Egypt; which my covenant they brake, although I was an husband unto them, saith the Lord: but this shall be the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel; After those days, saith the Lord, I will put my law in their inward parts, and write it in their hearts; and will be their God, and they shall be my people. And they shall teach no more every man his neighbor, and every man his brother, saying, Know the Lord: for they shall all know me, from the least of them unto the greatest of them, saith the Lord: for I will forgive their iniquity, and I will remember their sin no more."—Jer. 31:31-34.

A few points in the above demand our careful consideration:

First, The Lord promises, at some time in the future, to make a new covenant with Israel.

Second, This new covenant is not to be according to the covenant which the Lord made with Israel when he brought them out of the land of Egypt—not according to the ten commandment covenant which he spake unto them "out of the midst of the fire."

Third, The reason assigned for making a new covenant is that Israel had broken the covenant of the Lord which he made with them when he brought them out of Egypt.

Fourth, This new covenant is to make provisions for the remission of sins, and also for giving the people a knowledge of God. (See v. 34.)

If the Lord had said, Behold the days come, saith the Lord, that I will revise my covenant which I made with Israel, etc., then we might expect the old covenant to be revised and made applicable to Israel, and to all people, in all ages and in all countries. But he does not say it that way. This is not to be a revision or patching up of the covenant—"from the mount Sinai;" it is to be a new covenant.

Moses, who stood between God and the people when the law was given, had predicted, long before the days of Jeremiah, that Israel would break the covenant of the Lord.

Hear what the Lord said to him:

"And the Lord said unto Moses, Behold, thou shalt sleep with thy fathers; and this people will rise up, and go a whoring after the gods of the strangers of the land, whither they go to be among them, and will forsake me, and break my covenant, which I have made with them."—Deut. 31:16.

Again he says, when the Lord shall have brought them into the promised land, and they shall have filled themselves and waxen fat, then will they turn unto other gods, and serve them, and provoke me, and break my covenant."—Deut. 31:20. And, telling what answer shall be given to the nations, as to why all the predicted calamities had come upon Israel, he says: "Then men shall say, Because they have forsaken the covenant of the Lord God of their fathers, which he made with them when he brought them forth out of the land of Egypt: for they went and served other gods, and worshipped them, gods whom they knew not, and whom he had not given unto them."—Deut. 29:25, 26.

From the above we learn that Israel would "turn unto other gods," go "after the gods of the strangers," and "serve other gods;" and that, in so doing, they would forsake or break the covenant which the Lord made with them when he brought them out of the land of Egypt—the first requirement of which was: "Thou shalt have no other gods before me." And we have just learned from Jeremiah 31:31, that because Israel would break that covenant, the Lord would make a new covenant with them.

And Paul, speaking of the new covenant, says:

"But now hath he obtained a more excellent ministry, by how much also he is the mediator of a better covenant, which was established upon better promises. For if that first covenant had been faultless, then should no place have been sought for the second. For finding fault with them, he saith, Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, when I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel and with the house of Judah."—Heb. 8:6-8.

Then the apostle goes on to say (verses 9 to 12) that this "new covenant" is "not according to the covenant" which the Lord made with Israel when he "took them by the hand to lead them out of the land of Egypt;" but that this covenant will enable them to "know the Lord," and will bring to them a full and complete pardon of former sins, so that the Lord "will remember no more" "their sins and their iniquities." And then he adds: "In that he saith, A new covenant, he hath made the first old. Now that which decayeth and waxeth old is ready to vanish away."—v. 13.

Analyzing this chapter (Heb. 8:6-13), we notice:

First, Paul, speaking of "the two covenants," calls one of them "that first covenant," and the other one "the second;" calls one of them the "old," and the other one the "new."

Second, The Lord's saying, "A new covenant," shows that "he hath made the first old."

Third, As the Lord had "made the first old," it follows that the "first covenant" and the "old" are one and the same.

Fourth, "That first covenant," the old, is the one which the Lord made with Israel when he brought them "out of the land of Egypt;"—for proof that it is "the one from the mount Sinai" please read again Hebrews 9:18-20, in connection with Exodus 24:3-8; also Hebrews 9:1-4 in connection with Deuteronomy 10:1-5.

Fifth, "That the first covenant had been broken and was then "ready to vanish away."

Sixth, The Lord was offering to Israel, at that time, the "new covenant;" the one of which Jeremiah had prophesied years before.

Seventh, The Savior is "the mediator" of this "new covenant," hence it is the gospel covenant. "And for this cause he is the mediator of the New Testament."—Heb. 9:15.

Eighth, The new covenant is "established upon better promises" than the old one.

Ninth, It is also "a better covenant."

It is better, as already shown.

First, Because it makes provision for mercy being shown to the penitent transgressor: "For I will be merciful to their unrighteousness."—v. 12. (Under the first covenant the transgressor "died without mercy." See Heb. 10:28 and Deut. 17:2-7.)

Second, Because it makes provisions for full and complete forgiveness: "And their sins and their iniquities will I remember no more."—v. 12. (Under the first, "there is a remembrance again made of sins every year."—Heb. 10:3.)

Third, Because it enables all to "know the Lord." "for they shall all know me, from the least to the greatest."—v. 11. "And this is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent."—John 17:3.

It is a better covenant: it blends mercy with justice, blots out sins, and gives eternal life to all who obey it; and it is "established upon better promises," the promise of eternal inheritance."—Heb. 9:15.

WHITE-BRADEN CONTROVERSY.

Editor Ensign.—It seems like the Christian—Campbellite church has put on its "war paint." My challenges to Braden somehow or other have found their way to hundreds of congregations that claim Alexander Campbell as the "restorer of the faith." These challenges have stirred up a "hornet's nest" in many of their congregations and the membership are pressing the custodians of their pulpits to arise and answer why this challenge is allowed to go "marching along" without being met by Braden. Braden has been written to, and it seems he answers that he has complied with the stipulations found in my challenge and has been endorsed by "editors," by "state boards" and by "district boards," and it is I. N. White that has "backed square out." Then the pastors of these various congregations write me seemingly copying largely from Braden's answer to them. My answer to them generally gives them a complete setback. Then they write Braden and enclose my challenge and endorsement. Then these editors are "pumped" and "worked" and as yet no endorsement; and Braden is mad.

So the end is not yet. I enclose a copy of a few of these open letters, so our people may know just how to manage this affair when these preachers run Braden in to do their dirty work without a solitary endorsement from any one. Let this Christian—Campbellite church endorse Braden to do their work as my challenge demands or call the "creature in." Which will they do?

INDEPENDENCE, Mo., May 5.

AN OPEN LETTER TO REV. JOHN C. IRVIN.

INDEPENDENCE, Mo., 5-10-1900.

REV. JOHN C. IRVIN, Phillipsburg, Kans.

Dear Sir.—Yours of 7th inst. before me. You say: "The Christian Church as such has no accredited representative because there is no such organism in existence!" You had better write Braden at once, to take in "his shingle" as he has affirmed "The Christian Church" as an "organism" four times with me; and this "organism" he has claimed is "commonly called Campbellites." Pray tell me the name of this creature that Braden proposes to affirm? Has this Campbellite creature lost its name since 1894? Here is an endorsement of Rev. J. B. Briney of the "Christian Church"—an "organism" of some kind in August 20, 1894, from the chief editor (J. H. Garrison) of the Christian Evangelist:

St. Louis, Mo., Aug. 20, 1894. To whom it may concern:

Bro. J. B. Briney, pastor of the Christian Church at Moberly, Missouri, is universally regarded in the brotherhood, among whom he is an honored minister, as an able and representative man, capable of defending the truth as we hold and teach it, against all gainsayers. He is a Christian gentleman to an opponent and strong in logical reasoning. We can heartily endorse him as a representative man and an able defendant of the faith. (Signed.) J. H. GARRISON. Editor of Christian Evangelist.

Let this editor and the editor of the Standard endorse Braden as the challenge demands; then send to me and the war is on to your heart's content. See to it at once. Where are those endorsements from the "State boards" you talk off? They are laid away, are they? Let Braden meet my challenge as it is, or say he cannot; dare not.

Yours resp'y,

AN OPEN LETTER TO REV. D. A. HUNTER.

INDEPENDENCE, Mo., 5-10-1900.

REV. D. A. HUNTER, Blanchard, Iowa.

Dear Sir.—Yours of 8th inst. before me. You need not fret yourself about me meeting "your man"; he has been met; can be met again. I am ready for him seven days in a week. You call him your "representative;" "selected and endorsed." (?) I have failed to receive these "endorsements" you are claiming for "your man." Where are they? I enclose you my challenge and endorsement too; please send me an equivalent one for your "selected" man. Let it be signed by the men the challenge calls for. Let them endorse your "selected man" as being "sound in the faith as they hold and teach it." That he is a Christian gentleman to an opponent in debate—"an accredited representative of their church." Do all of this and the debate is on ad infinitum.

"INCURABLE" HEART DISEASE SOON CURED.

FRANKLIN MILES, M. D., LL. B., WILL SEND $50 WORTH OF HIS SPECIALLY PRESCRIBED TREATMENT FREE TO AFFLICTED READERS.

To demonstrate the unusual curative powers of his new individual treatment for a class of diseases of the heart, the nerves, stomach or dropsy, Dr. Miles will send, free, to any afflicted person, $2.50 worth of his new treatment.

It is the result of twenty-four years of careful study, extensive research, and remarkable experience in treating thousands of heart, stomach and nervous diseases, which so often complicate each case. So certain are the results of his New Individual Treatment that he does not hesitate to give all patients a trial free.

Few physicians have such confidence in their skill. Few physicians so thoroughly deserve the confidence of their patients, as no false inducements are ever held out. The doctor's private practice is so extensive as to require a staff of twenty assistants. His offices are always open to visitors.

Col. N. G. Parker, Ex-Treasurer of South Carolina, says: "I believe Dr. Miles to be an attentive and skillful physician, in a field which requires the best qualities of head and heart." The late Prof. J. S. Jewell, M. D., editor of the Journal of Nervous and Mental Diseases, of Chicago, wrote "by all means publish your surprising results."

Hundreds of incurable cases cured. Mrs. J. W. Smith of Chicago, was cured of heart dropsy, after five leading physicians had given her up. Hon. C. M. Buck, banker, Fairbault, Minn., writes: "I had broken completely down. My head, heart, stomach and nerves had troubled me greatly for years. Before I would never rest. But Dr. Miles' Individual Treatment cured me after six well known physicians of Chicago and elsewhere had completely failed." Mrs. P. Countryman of Pontiac, Ill., says: "Several years ago when I sent to Dr. Miles for Individual Treatment, three physicians had given me up. These three could not walk six feet then; now I can do all my work."

A thousand references to, and testimonials from Bishops, Clergymen, Bankers, Farmers and their wives will be sent free on request. These include many who had been cured after from five to fifteen physicians had pronounced them incurable. Address The Dr. Miles Medical Association, 201 to 209 State St., Chicago, for free treatment.

AN OPEN LETTER TO REV. G. W. TATE.

INDEPENDENCE, Mo., 5-11-1900.

REV. G. W. TATE, West Salem, Ill.

Dear Sir.—Yours of 10th inst. before me. Answering say: "The 'Christian Church' will have no trouble to find me always ready to meet Braden. He is my man. Please help him to comply with the stipulations found in my challenge. 'Work' the editors of the Christian Standard and Evangelist for his endorsement—equivalent to mine which I enclose you. It will be a feather in Braden's cap. Please, when you have them in hand, forward them at once to me and I will set the time. I enclose you one of my challenges so you will know just how to move. What do you, "do quickly." Yours truly, I. N. WHITE.

AN OPEN LETTER TO REV. ISAAC BECKELHYMER.

INDEPENDENCE, Mo., 5-19-1900.

REV. ISAAC BECKELHYMER, Murphysboro, Ill.

Dear Sir.—Yours of 13th inst. copied largely from Braden's, before me. Replying say: Let the Christian—Campbellite church endorse Braden just as the challenge demands and as I am endorsed; and I am your man and you need not look for another. There is something in my challenge to be met and red for by Mr. Braden, besides what you please to call Memoranda; that thing is Campbellism. Don't you forget that. Get the chief editors of the Christian Evangelist and Christian Standard to endorse Braden; (1) that he is an accredited representative of their church; (2) that he is sound in the faith as they hold and teach it;

(3) that he is a christian gentleman to an opponent. The challenge demands this. Will Braden continue to show his cowardice by saying he has accepted my challenge and at the same time fail to put into my hands the endorsement it demands? Dave he show himself a man and do this? I demand it. Or will he continue to act the part of a coward? Which?

I. N. WHITE.

CLEANINGS.

It is written in my heart that this work is true.

"There is no high destiny without honest perseverance; no greatness without self-denial.

"Having an easy time of it is the hardest life a man (or woman) can live. Hardship and struggle are essential to that development of character that alone makes life worth living, or that can command admiration and regard from others. King Alfred the Great said wisely: 'No wise man should desire a soft life if he care for any worship here from the world, or for eternal life after this life is over.'"—Selected by A. Mite.

The Free Delivery of Rural Mail.

All the reports which reach the Post Office Department at Washington indicate the wonderful success of the rural free delivery system, and there are constant applications for its extension. The service is not growing as rapidly as it ought to, but its scope is being constantly widened, as may be imagined when it is stated that the appropriation for the present fiscal year is $300,000 as against only half that sum during the previous year. There are now upwards of four hundred rural mail carriers in the United States, and during the year just closed they carried close to ten million pieces of mail. The headquarters of these carriers are established in the post offices of the smaller towns, and from these their routes branch out very much the same as do those of the carriers in the city from the main office, save that, the mail-distributor in the country districts must traverse a route of from twenty to twenty-five miles, whereas his co-workers in the city may not travel more than a fourth of that distance. At present there are routes in forty different states and one territory. Each carrier receives a compensation of $400 a year, which is made to cover horse-hire. This sum is not as meagre as it at first appears, for as a rule the mail-carrier need work but four or five hours a day, and in many cases farmers' sons are able to look after a route in addition to doing their regular work. The rural carrier does not of necessity wear a uniform, but as a rule they provide some insignia of the service in which they are engaged. On one route in Maryland a covered wagon drawn by two horses constitutes a traveling post office which mail matter is sorted en route just as is done on the railway mail cars. The postal clerk who travels with the wagon is authorized to issue money orders and to register valuable packages.—Self Culture Magazine for April.

Onslaught on Preachers.

TOLEDO, O., May 13.—Rev. Mr. E. E. Patton, a prominent young Christian minister of this city, preached from the stage of Bur's opera house tonight and made a terrible onslaught upon preachers and churches generally. Said he:

"By the practice of the church more people are doomed to eternal perdition than were ever caused by the saloons or any other influence. Place no faith at all in your churches. Mark my words that there will be a reformation that will shake the religious world to its foundations. Isms and schisms will be parts of a broken parachute."

Rev. Mr. Patton will, at once, arrange for a church edifice, with regular church services, and will have in the building billiards, pool, bowling, etc., in the way of amusement, but no liquor or tobacco.—Ex.

Chadron, Neb., March 1.—Chadron now has a man who proclaims that he is as pure and good as Christ, and possesses all the virtues of the Son of God. He declares he can heal the sick, give sight to the blind, and do all the miraculous things that Christ did on earth. He insists that he can not heal a sinner, only saints being possessed with the power of receiving God's blessings; that Christ could heal no unbelievers, and that he cannot heal them.—Hay Springs (Neb.) Leader, March 2.

Looks Puzzling, But It Isn't.

Here is a little exercise in punctuation that a normal school young woman recently brought home to puzzle her father:

It is not and I said but or.

Looks a little confused, doesn't it?

Simple though.

A few quotation marks and two commas will fix it all right. For instance:

"It is not 'and,' I said, but 'or.'"

Here is a still simpler catch that may bother you some:

"All O."

Not much in it, perhaps, but enough to make it troublesome. Too hard? And yet it's "Nothing after all."

RHEUMATISM.

A BLOOD DISEASE AND CURED BY B. B. B.

BOTTLE FREE TO SUFFERERS. Rheumatism is as much a blood disease as cancer, ulcer or scrofula, and to cure to stay cured, it should be treated as such; hence Botanic Blood Balm (B. B. B.) should be used. It neutralizes the specific poison that causes rheumatism, expels it from the system, and permanently cures after everything else fails. George W. Leonard, of Atlanta, writes under date of July 2, 1899, that he was cured of Rheumatism ten years ago by B. B. B.; that before that he suffered most excruciating pains in bones and limbs. His hands would puff up and swell, his knee caps would get so stiff he could hardly bend them, and he could hardly walk without the aid of a crutch. He tried doctors and medicines, but none reached the root of the trouble, which was in the blood. Sometimes he thought he had found a cure, but alas, his symptoms would come back again until he was cured ten years ago by the use of eight large bottles of B. B. B., and he has been perfectly well ever since. John M. Davis, of Tyler, Texas, had been subject to attacks of inflammatory rheumatism since ten years of age, yet he was permanently cured, with no trace of the disease left, by eight large bottles of B. B. B. To further convince you that B. B. B. cures the most obstinate case, we will send a sample bottle free if you may test the remedy at your expense. Can anything be fairer?

You will find large bottles for sale by all druggists for $1.00, or six bottles (full treatment), $5.00. For free trial bottle enclose five cents, which pays exact cost of postage (the medicine is free), and address BLOOD BALM CO., 86 Mitchell St., Atlanta, Ga., and bottle and medical book will be sent, all charges prepaid. Describe your trouble, and we will include free medical advice.

AFTER an experience of over ten years with other firms at the Kansas City Stock Yards, I have opened a commission business under the style of W. O. The Combination Oil Cure for Cancer

Has the endorsement of the highest medical authority in the world. It would seem strange indeed if persons afflicted with cancers and tumors after knowing the facts, would resort to the dreaded knife and burning plaster, which have heretofore been attended with such fatal results. The fact that in the last six years over one hundred doctors have put themselves under this mild treatment shows their confidence in the new method of treating those horrible diseases. Persons afflicted will do well to send for free book giving particulars and prices of Oil. Address Dr. Bye, Drawer N, Kansas City, Missouri.

One Thousand—for Graceland College.

Are you one of this number? And if not, why not? The proposition that one thousand subscriptions at $25 each be obtained at once so as to clear the college of all indebtedness and place it where it can run without this great disadvantage is now before us. No part of this subscription is to be paid unless the entire number is obtained.

There are now extant in the hands of elders, agents and Saints, 216 subscription lists. We have 200 more lists on hand and would be glad to supply any good brother, sister or friend in any part of the world who would like to make the effort to help the college work. In this way they will also help the church work, and help to aid young men and young women for years to come in gaining proper information and training for the practical duties of life.

Remember we have but about sixty days now to finish the lists, the expectation from the time of last General Conference being that the lists could be completed within ninety days. Full list of names together with subscriptions will be published through the Herald and Ensign as soon as the work is completed.

The attention of all Saints and friends of education and the truth is especially called to this proposition, and NOW.

Very truly and respectfully, E. L. KELLEY, Presiding Bishop. Lock Box 18, Lamoni, Iowa. Bishop's Notice.

To the Saints of the Independence, Missouri, District, Greeting:—It has pleased God, and in accordance with the promises made to the church in 1873, BLUES Ever have them? Then we can't tell you anything about them. You know how dark everything looks and how you are about ready to give up. Somehow, you can't throw off the terrible depression. Are things really so blue? Isn't it your nerves, after all? That's where the trouble is. Your nerves are being poisoned from the impurities in your blood.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla purifies the blood and gives power and stability to the nerves. It makes health and strength, activity and cheerfulness. This is what "Ayer's" will do for you. It's the oldest Sarsaparilla in the land, the kind that was old before other Sarsaparillas were known. This also accounts for the saying, "One bottle of Ayer's is worth three bottles of the ordinary kind." Write the Doctor. If you have any complaint whatever and desire the best medical advice you can, possibly receive, write the doctor freely. You will receive a prompt reply, without cost. Address: Dr. J. C. AYER, Lowell, Mass.

Doctrine and Covenants 117:10, that other bishops should be appointed; and it also pleased God to designate your humble servant to be ordained to the office of Bishop. I enter upon this work with a feeling of considerable responsibility, yet I have the assurance that God, who doeth all things well, will be my help in time of need. I want to do my duty and dignify the office, and in order to do this I must have your co-operation in this department of the work. My experience as bishop's agent for the past nine years has taught me considerable.

I expect to establish a store-house in Independence, or what will answer for the present as such, and will receive tithes and offerings in money and in kind, but in paying tithes and offerings "in kind," the Saints must not think that they can turn in everything, good or bad. Hear what the Lord said to Israel of old, Deuteronomy 14:22-25:

"Thou shalt truly tithe all the increase of thy seed that the field bringeth forth year by year: And thou shalt eat before the Lord thy God, in the place which he shall choose to place his name there, the tithes of thy corn, of thy wine, and of thine oil, and the firstling of thy herds and of thy flocks; that thou mayest learn to fear the Lord thy God always. And if the way be too long for thee, so that thou art not able to carry it; or if the place be too far from thee, which the Lord thy God shall choose to set his name there, when the Lord thy God hath blessed thee: then shalt thou turn it into money, and bind up the money in thine hand, and shalt go unto the place which the Lord thy God shall choose."

This is good instruction to us in every point, and ought to be carried out now by every Saint in the land, if we expect to be blessed of God. Bring up the money in thine hand, to my mind means this: that if the distance is too far, turn your tithes into money and bring the money up in thine hand; or, in other words, do not use it for any other purpose, as it is sacred money and belongs to the Lord, deliver it to the place where the Lord thy God has appointed. The children of Israel seemed to have been very forgetful of the instruction the Lord gave them; it would seem that they used their tithes and offering moneys as they pleased and robbed God, and the Lord, through his servant Malachi, gives them a fearful rebuke.

"Even from the days of your fathers ye are gone away from mine ordinances, and have not kept them. Return unto me, and I will return unto you, saith the Lord of hosts. But ye said, Wherein shall we return? Will a man rob God? Yet ye have robbed me. But ye say, Wherein have we robbed thee? In tithes and offerings; ye are cursed with a curse: for ye have robbed me, even this whole nation. Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it. And I will rebuke the devourer for your sakes, and he shall not destroy the fruits of your ground; neither shall your vine cast her fruit before the time in the field, saith the Lord of hosts. And all nations shall call you blessed: for ye shall be a delightful land, saith the Lord of hosts."—Mal. 3:7-12.

Can we have faith in God and trust him? Jesus said, Luke 8:46: "And why call ye me Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say?"

How about every member of the Independence district? This law of tithing is enjoined upon the Saints in the last days. Doctrine and Covenants 64:5: "Behold, now it is called today (until the coming of the Son of Man), and verily it is a day of sacrifice, and a day for the tithing of my people; for he that is tithed shall not be burned (at his coming)."

"Verily I say unto you, it shall come to pass that all those who gather unto the land of Zion, shall be tithed of all their surplus properties, and shall observe this law, or they shall not be found worthy to abide among you. And I say unto you, if my people observe not this law, to keep it holy, and by this law, sanctify the land of Zion unto me, that my statutes and my judgments may be kept thereon, that it may be most holy, behold, verily I say unto you, it shall not be a land of Zion unto you; and this shall be an ensample unto all the stakes of Zion. Even so. Amen."—D. & C. 106:2.

It will take about $6,000 for this district this year for missionaries' families, the poor, etc. We hope to collect this amount in the district, and it can be done if every one will do their duty. I would like to see every name on the tithing list. It is the bishop's duty to travel among the branches, searching out the poor. We expect to give this part of the work our special attention, that none may suffer who are worthy.

It is also the bishop's duty to be a judge in Israel, assisted by two counselors. We expect to establish a bishop's court; this court will have original jurisdiction as also an appellate court. I have chosen for one of my counselors, Bro. W. H. Pease, high priest, and president of the Armstrong branch, and now recommend him to the esteem of all the Saints. The other one is chosen but not yet ordained.

I have chosen bishop's agents in the following branches: First Kansas City, Missouri, Wm. McLaren; Second Kansas City, Missouri, Frederick Koehler; Armstrong, Kansas, J. H. Stratton; Chelsea Park, Kansas, James Anderson; Lee's Summit, Missouri, Joseph Curry; Holden, Missouri, Frederick Scarellif; recommending those agents to their respective branches, and praying that the Lord may bless them in their labors of love for the Master. For the present there will be no agent appointed for Independence. Tithes and offerings in money will be received at my office, West-Maple avenue, and tithes and offerings in kind, will be received at my warehouse, South Liberty street, Independence, Missouri.

RODERICK MAY, Bishop Independence District. INDEPENDENCE, MO., May 19. Convention Minutes.

District Sunday School Association of the Philadelphia district convened at Baldwin, Maryland, May 12th and 13th, Superintendent O. T. Christy in the chair, E. B. Hull, secretary. Philadelphia school reported enrollment 60, Baldwin 25. The treasurer reported on hand at last report $6.56, collected $6.46, expended $3.00, on hand $5.02. Resolution prevailed that the delegate system be dispensed with, providing it does not conflict with rules of the General Association. Resolution was also passed recommending to the schools, the recognition of the 2d Sunday in June as Children's day.

Saturday evening an entertainment was given by the schools, which was enjoyed by all; much praise could be given to the participants. Sunday was devoted to Sunday School, social service, and preaching in the evening by H. H. Bacon. Adjourned to meet in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, the date left to district superintendent.

DIED. BUSSELL.—At Wolbach, Michigan, December 16, 1899, Dora Myrtle, daughter of Sr. Lucy Bussell, aged 1 year, 1 month, and 13 days. Blessed August 10, 1899, by Elder Payne.

LUMLEY.—Sister Frances A. Ernest, nee Lumley, was born April 11, 1839, at Toronto, Canada; was baptized into the Latter Day Saints' church September 19, 1870, at Parks Mills, Potawatamie county, Iowa, by Elder E. C. Brand; died January 8, 1900, after one week's illness, with pneumonia.

Aunt Fannie, as she was commonly called, was healed of blindness at the time of her baptism. She remained firm in the faith, ever bearing a faithful testimony to the truthfulness of the latter day work, through cloud and sunshine. She had been afflicted for many years, but was as well as usual until the last week's illness. She was very patient, and among her dying words were, "I am going fast," and, "I'll soon break off the yoke of my bondage and be free in the joy of the Lord." She hadn't a living relative that she knew of, besides her husband, but the Saints kindly cared for her wants. The funeral sermon was preached at the Saints' chapel, by Elder C. J. Hunt, and her body laid to rest in Dolot cemetery to await the morn of resurrection.

ZION'S ENSIGN.

A Literary and Religious Newspaper, published in the interest of social, scientific and religious truth, every Thursday, at Independence, Jackson County, Missouri.

PRICE, $1.00 PER YEAR, IN ADVANCE.

ENSIGN PUBLISHING HOUSE, or the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

W. H. GARRETT, EDITOR.

Make all remittances, and address all communications to ENSIGN PUBLISHING HOUSE, Box B, Independence, Jackson County, Missouri.

New subscriptions can begin at any time. If possible to avoid it, never send silver as it is liable to wear through the envelope and be lost.

Always give the name of the post office to which your paper is sent or we can not find your name on our lists.

When desiring your address changed, give both the old and new address.

Papers will be discontinued one month from the time subscriptions expire, unless ordered continued.

In making remittances, money orders are preferable for they are absolutely safe. If you can send it, do not send coin or stamps. Canadian stamps are an entire loss, and Canadian currency is only worth ninety cents on the dollar to us, for that is all we can get for it at the banks. Letters should be addressed, and orders and drafts made payable to ENSIGN PUBLISHING HOUSE, Independence, Mo.

IF THEY ONLY WOULD, BUT ALAS!

"As a religious system Mormonism is young, but it has made rapid strides. The country is full of Mormon missionaries, and their teaching is an 'ism' that will have to be met and overcome by the word of God."—Miscellaneous item in Gospel Advocate, Nashville, Tennessee, May 24th. (Italics ours).

We like the spirit of this item, feeling assured that the only legitimate way in which differences in any religious belief can be adjusted is by an appeal to something which is accepted as a standard by all classes of believers, and that standard is found in the "word of God." Surely all who believe in God at all, if their profession is of any value whatever, should be willing to accept His word as the conclusion of the matter, and an "end of the controversy." This would be a rational and consistent solution of every dispute concerning what is, and what is not truth, and essential to divine acceptance, and if the Latter Day Saints or any others, are believing and teaching principles which the word of God does not authorize them to believe and teach, the sooner they discard such errors and get hold of the truth—that which is authorized of God—the better for their happiness and safety; and the individual who kindly and clearly makes plain this error of belief, is indeed a benefactor, and as Paul says, will "save a soul alive." But, alas for consistency, such is not the experience of the Latter Day Saints in meeting those who oppose them. On the contrary with very rare exceptions, when their opponents find it impossible to successfully controvert from a Scriptural basis the doctrines taught by the Saints, they invariably (with an occasional honorable exception) turn to slander and falsehood, and endeavor by working upon the prejudices of the people, to accomplish in that way what they could not do by an appeal to the word of God and the intelligence of the audience.

For instance, this same issue of the Advocate in which the item at the head of this article is found, contains more than two columns of the vilest falsehoods concerning Joseph Smith, gathered by one, R. B. Neal, from what he terms "a copy of this rare and valuable(?) old book," "printed in 1834, that gave a full expose of the 'Golden Bible' alias 'Book of Mormon' fraud." He goes to the length of almost two columns in giving a sworn statement of one, William Stafford, dated Manchester, New York, December 8, 1833, in which the old money digging, treasure hunting stories about the Smiths are reshaped, with the "black sheep" story included; and this good Christian(?) minister, Neal, wants everybody to send him a half dollar to enable him to have this rare and valuable book reprinted, each one so subscribing being entitled to a copy when printed.

To any candid and unprejudiced mind this procedure is a confession of weakness on the part of the opponents of the Church of Jesus Christ (Reorganized). This church believes, teaches and practices more of the New Testament doctrines than any of their opponents. Why then is it thought needful by educated men who oppose the teachings of this church to appeal to the prejudices and the baser passions of humanity, by resorting to the dissemination of falsehoods and slander, especially against those who are not now living to defend themselves? If these opposers are so sure that the Latter Day Saints are in error (and we are now speaking for the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints), why do they not confine themselves to the Scriptures and show their cause, bring forth their strong reasons? The members of this church base their hope of eternal life upon the same source as do all other men in the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ, and present the reasons for their belief and faith from a Biblical standpoint; why do not their opponents meet the issue upon that basis instead of descending to vituperation, falsehood and abuse? It seems the plainest kind of a proposition that the reason why they will not so confine themselves to the word of God is by reason of their inability to successfully controvert the doctrines taught by the Saints because they are authorized by the word of God.

Is it not a fact that these opponents will debate with each other, time after time, and confine themselves to legitimate discussion? They are never found dragging in the characters of Wesley, Calvin, Luther, Campbell, or any of the individuals who are recognized as being at the head of their respective organizations in their time, as though the truth or falsity of their Scriptural claims depended upon whether or not these leaders were perfect in their lives. Why is this, if it is not because they recognize that they stand upon common ground, as not being in harmony with the organization established and authorized by the Savior? Each must see in the other some omission from that plan. But with the Latter Day Saints it is altogether different. All the other organizations believe they claim too much because they insist on a church organization precisely as Jesus instituted it, with apostles, prophets, elders, pastors, teachers, deacons, etc., with ordinances of baptism for the remission of sins, laying on of hands for gift of the Holy Ghost, healing of sick, blessing of children, etc., with the signs following the believer (Mark 16: Cor. 12, 13 and 14), etc., and not being able to successfully controvert such doctrine from the "Word of God," the next and only resource left seems to be to try to divert the inquiring mind from these points of doctrine to the alleged unfavorable characters of those recognized as leaders of the church in the early days.

It is another passing strange thought to an honest, candid mind that all this blackening of character is confined to the dead. Not the faintest breath of suspicion or innuendo is, or can be raised against the sons of Joseph Smith who are the present leaders of the church; and who teach and practice identically the same doctrines as did their father. Is it not remarkable that if the doctrines and teachings of the first leaders of this church were so erroneous and unworthy of acceptance by intelligent men and women, that these men now leading the same church, with forty thousand others, are living lives and forming characters of the highest worth, so that in every community where they reside, and are faithful to their church covenants, they are esteemed as good neighbors and desirable citizens? The same cause under like circumstances will always produce the same effect in every age. Why, if the tales of these calumniators are true, is there this difference in results?

Again: In the light of the testimony presented in the consistent lives of the faithful Latter Day Saint today, it must be admitted that, supposing the dark and improbable stories told by the enemies of Joseph Smith have even a coloring of truth, it only proves one thing, that he did not live up to the requirements of the doctrines he taught, and, therefore, his defections, however much they may have controverted the doctrines of the church, cannot, in any sense, affect the truth and purity of those doctrines. What folly then to try to use such statements as arguments against the doctrines now, when their efficacy is shown in the lives of his sons and followers today.

"But," it will probably be asserted, "their statements are sworn to." O, yes. But it was not a difficult matter to have men swear to almost anything against the "Mormons" in those days. Prejudice and passion with direct persecution ran high; and the devil was active in inspiring opposition, and trying to stamp out the work. Anyone could make affidavit to statements against the Smiths then; without the slightest fear of prosecution for perjury. Imperfect mails and no railroads or telegraphs existed in those days; the men accused were over a hundred miles from there, living at Kirtland, Ohio, and busy with church work; and even had they known of the affidavits named, would probably have paid no attention to them, knowing the Lord would judge between them. But a few years ago two of the prominent elders of the church, Messrs. W. H. and E. L. Kelley; now of Lamoni, Iowa, made a special trip to Manchester, New York, to investigate this matter; they did not announce themselves as members of the church, and were therefore in a position to obtain unbiased reports and statements. They made careful search and inquiry of all the oldest inhabitants, and in every instance those who knew anything about the matter outside of hearsay, testified to the good character of the Smith family, as citizens and neighbors, though not giving much credence to the claims of the finding of the plates of the Book of Mormon. Time had allayed prejudice and passions and they were able to speak in an unprejudiced manner; hence their statements are much more reliable and worthy of credence, than even the sworn affidavits of men filled with hate, prejudice, and the spirit of the evil one.

R. B. Neal will believe with all his soul, that the Pharisees were responsible for a falsehood when they instructed the soldiers set to guard the tomb of the crucified Savior, to tell the officers that while they slept, the disciples of Jesus came and stole his body. But not for a moment can he give credence to the thought that a man, moved by the same inspiration which led the Pharisees in their deceptions, would falsify about a servant of the same Jesus Christ, and swear to it, especially when he knew that because of the persecutions and prejudices of the people no legal proceedings would follow. O, no. But such inconsistency is a common thing, when "Mormonism" is under consideration, and when these men find that they cannot successfully meet the scriptural arguments of the Latter Day Saints, they turn to just such inconsistent and unchristian work as outlined above.

It is such methods, pursued by prominent ministers of the followers of Alexander Campbell and others, that has forced some of the ministry of this church into an aggressive campaign. Take, for instance, Elder I. N. White. Some years ago the Saints were peacefully holding a reunion at El Dorado Springs, Missouri. Among those present were Bro. Joseph Smith, E. L. Kelley, I. N. White and some other prominent men of the church. While this meeting was in progress, Elder Clark Braden, of the Christian church appeared on the scene and began in his usual abusive and unchristian style, an attack on the Saints in some five or six lectures on what he called "Mormonism." It being in Bro. White's field of labor he was designated to reply to the strictures and animadversions of the lecturer, but so opposed was Mr. Braden and some others, who seemed to have control of the buildings of the town, to give Elder White an opportunity to reply, that every place was closed against him; and it was only through the assistance of the mayor that the pavilion in the park was opened to him, and some 1,200 or 1,500 people thus got to hear the other side. Mr. Braden's persistent animosity and unfair attacks on the character (not the faith) of the first elders of the church, has ever since that time kept Bro. White following him up and correcting the slanders and misrepresentations made. This is not a pleasant work for Bro. White, nor any other elder for that matter. He would much rather perform the work incumbent upon him, in preaching the gospel and building up the kingdom of righteousness, as being more agreeable and in harmony with his inclinations. He does not seek any debates because he prefers that kind of work; but when the work which he represents is attacked and misrepresented, he, and every other true man, feels it his duty to defend that work and set the facts squarely before the people; and in every instance it has been shown that at the conclusion of his defense, the majority of the people in the vicinity where it is made, see the matter in a different light, and are friends of Bro. White and the cause he represents, and often baptisms follow; while the opposite is the case with his opponent. This speaks volumes, both for the cause he represents and the efficiency of Bro. White's defense.

As a rule, we have not deemed it worth while to take any extended notices of newspaper attacks such as R. B. Neal and others of his class make from time to time, not being able to reach the same readers, and confident that the class whom it does reach are but little affected by it. So we move on our way, seeking to establish right principles in the hearts of the children of men, leaving those who fight against this work to answer in the Judgment for their folly. But the contrast in these two sentiments in the same number of the Advocate seemed so strong, we deemed the occasion opportune for presenting some thoughts along this line, leaving the candid reader to judge which of the two is most in harmony with the Spirit and genius of a Christian.

THE Searchlight, the organ of the Hedrickite brethren, has been discontinued, and the Evening and Morning Star, has been launched upon its voyage in its place. Elder J. R. Haldeman, former editor of the Searchlight, occupies the editorial chair in the new paper, and A. L. Hartley, whom those attending the late Conference at Lamoni, will remember as being present in connection with Elder Frisbee, and making an address one afternoon, is the business manager. Aside from the change in the name, there is but little difference observable in the two papers; while, however, the former was for some time past printed in the ENSIGN office, the latter is now printed by themselves in the building on the Temple Lot. We hope its influence may tend to the establishment of righteousness.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

SR. ROBT. MOPHERSON, Haigler, Nebraska:

Bro. Roush preached here last summer, so many want to hear him preach here again, hope he will come; there are only three Saints here. We are but a few miles from Colorado, and any elders coming this way will be made welcome at our home. My husband is not a member of the church, but he always gives me the money for the church papers. Pray for him that he may enter the fold.

SR. M. A. CHRISTY, Fairbury, Nebraska:

We have a little church here and hold preaching service every Sunday evening, Sunday School at 10 a. m., every Sunday. Although but few of us are trying to do God's will; we hold prayer meeting every Tuesday evening; Bro. A. J. Hays is our elder and a fine man in and out of the church. We contemplate having our church dedicated this spring and strive to do our duty in trying to build up the work here. There is much prejudice to contend with but none are so blind as those who will not see. Sr. Hoover requests the prayers of the Saints that if it be God's will, she may be restored to health. She has not been able to sit up for months, and is a great sufferer. She is worthy of our prayers.

GENERAL CHURCH NEWS.

INDEPENDENCE.

Bro. John S. Lawton, the oculist, of St. Joseph, is in town on professional business; will likely remain a week or ten days.

Sr. T. J. Franklin was out to services Rally day, as was also Sr. Roy Newkirk, whose serious and remarkable case has been reported from time to time in these columns. She seems to be steadily gaining, for which all the Saints are grateful.

Bro. R. Etzenhouser purposes leaving for his mission in California tomorrow (Friday), stopping off at Denver, Colorado, next Sunday, and at Salt Lake City, Utah, the following Sunday. Get out a crowd, Bro. Shupe, and have Bro. Etzenhouser "show" them his nice painting of "Cumorah" and surroundings, and give you his lecture on that subject. It is worth hearing.

Sr. Earl Cortthell has been having a very serious time the past week with puerperal fever. Monday her temperature went to 107, the highest known or heard of in the twenty years practice of Dr. Sheley, who attended her. She was sinking rapidly and it was thought she was dying, but elders being called, she rallied under administration and at five o'clock that evening her temperature was nearly normal, being 99, while the normal is 98.2-5. She rested well through the night Monday and is getting along nicely.

Surprisers sometimes take considerable liberties; Monday night while Bro. and Sr. R. J. Parker were enjoying supper with Bro. and Sr. Clarence Bowen, a number of Saints gained admission to their home, took down a bed in one of the rooms and set it out doors, then sat down in the dark to await the return of the victims; all being in readiness, a messenger was sent to call Bro. and Sr. Parker home to see Bro. and Sr. Tom Crick "on business." On opening the front door there was a scene, lights soon flashed up and hand-shaking all around was the order. Singing, social chat and the crokinole board caused the time to speed away. About ten o'clock, when Bro. Parker had finished reading a piece about the experiences of the missionary in some places, Bro. W. H. Garrett called his attention to the object of the visit and, on behalf of the Saints, presented him with copies of the Inspired Translation of the Bible, the book of Doctrine and Covenants and Saints' Hymnal, all in flexible binding, as a token of esteem and affection, and appreciation of his unselfish labors in the branch. Bro. Parker was, of course, surprised, and stated some kind providence must have whispered his necessity to the Saints, for those books were just what he was wanting, but hardly knew how to get them, extending his thanks for the gift. A small sum in cash was also handed him, to enable him to get his name put on the books.

Bro. and Sr. Geo. Nesbitt, who had charge of the matter, not having had time to have it done.

Shortly after the presentation the party left, leaving Bro. Parker to put up his bed again and get things straightened up once more in their nice cozy home.

Rev. J. D. McClure, representing Rev. Clark Braden, visited Independence, Monday of last week, bringing some endorsements from state boards and from some papers of the Christian denomination, testifying to Rev. Braden's ability, etc., in answer to Bro. White's challenge. Bro. White being on the eve of departure for St. Joseph and other points in his field, asked for copies of the papers presented, and promised to take the matter up with Mr. Braden direct when he had gone over there. It appears that Elder McClure then canvassed among his brethren in Independence to obtain their support for a debate between Braden and White at this place, but, according to a statement in the Daily Letter of May 26th, did not meet with much encouragement from his Christian brethren. It is probable that Mr. Braden cannot obtain the kind of an endorsement here that Bro. White requires. One thing is certain, Mr. Braden will either have to secure the use of the Christian church here while the faith of the followers of Mr. Campbell is being considered, or a public hall will have to be engaged for the entire debate should one materialize. The Saints will not consent to have the stone church used while their faith is being assailed unless the Christian church is opened for use while the other side is being heard. Monday evening Elder McClure (presumably) had some boys distribute through the stores a circular headed "Challenges and Back-outs," of course publishing that Bro. White is doing the "back-out" act. It is full of misleading and unfair statements, and shows plainly its authorship. It will be a boomerang in all probability.

Sunday—annual rally day of the branch—was a fine day. 425 were in attendance at the Sunday School, and a regular collection of over four dollars, besides a special collection of over $8.00 for the India famine sufferers, was taken. At eleven o'clock the main auditorium was well filled and a number in the galleries. An elaborate and splendid musical program was rendered by a chorus of about fifty, under the able direction of Bro. Orville James. The program was: "Praise God from whom all blessings flow," by chorus and congregation. Chorus, "The Heavens are Telling." Hymn No. 3-8. Prayer. Anthem, "The Earth is the Lord's." Announcement of object and intention of rally day. Soprano solo by Sr. W. N. Robinson. Sermon. Double quartette, "The King of Love My Shepherd is." Announcements. Closing hymn, 182. Bro. Joseph Luff preached a practical, uplifting sermon from which much good instruction was received. The afternoon service was good and enjoyable. At night a fine musical program was again presented, Bro. James being soloist as well as director. The opening hymn, 190. Prayer. Anthem, "Gloria," from Mozart's 12th Mass. Announcements of rally day. Tenor solo, Bro. Orville James. Sermon. Anthem, "Praise Ye the Father." Closing hymn. Bro. T. W. Chaburn delivered a stirring discourse on the doctrine of Christ in an effective manner. A number of visiting Saints were present and much enjoyed the service. The Convention of the Christian Endeavor Society, at the Presbyterian church, drew a large crowd, and doubtless lessened the attendance at the Saints' church. Ten dollars and sixty-two cents was collected at the morning service for the India famine relief. No previous notice of this collection had been given, otherwise a greater sum would doubtless have been realized.

LAMONI, IOWA.

Summer weather. Sr. Whicher and family moved to Omaha, Nebraska.

Apostle Wight went to Des Moines to do missionary work.

Apostle Lambert and Elder Weld have been up to Cleveland, Iowa, in the interests of the church.

Dr. Horner, of Davis City, has bought out the practice of Elder J. H. Hansen, M. D., and expects to settle here soon.

Sr. Louise Smith gave a pleasant entertainment to about twenty of her young friends, at her home on the 17th.

Elder John Smith, business manager of the Herald office, has bought a residence north of the office, formerly the property of Elder V. White.

Elder Stead has purchased a lot and has decided to build a dwelling thereon, 35x44.

Bro. and Sr. Elbert Smith returned from Elgin, Illinois, where they have been visiting Bro. Smith's father, Elder David H. Smith. Bro. James Kelley, a brother of Bishop Kelley, is visiting here from Pottawatomie county, Iowa.

Elder H. A. Stebbins preached yesterday at 4 p. m. in the Greenville church, southeast of here.

The preaching here yesterday, Sunday 27th, at the church, was by Apostle H. C. Smith in the morning, his text was Psalms 37: 37, his theme was complete perfectness. The afternoon service was in charge of Elders Gunsolley and M. J. Danielson; spiritual refreshment was enjoyed. At night Elder C. Scott preached, his text was, "Seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness." At the same hour at the Home Elder Salyards discoursed on the way of righteousness and peace.

A LAMONIAN.

May 28.

ST. JOSEPH, MISSOURI.

Elder I. N. White preached two excellent sermons here yesterday, greatly edifying all present. Elder White will remain with us over next Sunday, meetings will be held each night this week.

Preparations are being made for Children's Day next Sunday. Srs. E. Fifer, Maggie Blair and Viola Blair have the matter in charge.

Our Religion is progressing in interest; Book of Mormon lessons are being taken up with more purpose.

Our Sunday School attendance did not reach the 150 mark yesterday; there were present, however, 121, which was a gain of 12 over last Sunday's attendance.

Wednesday evening's prayer meeting was a very spiritual one. So many good thoughts were brought out, seeming to be prompted by the Holy Spirit, that when the hour for dismissal came we were still loth to separate.

The strawberry festival to be given by the Ladies' Aid Society this evening was postponed one week on account of the meetings held this week by Elder I. N. White.

Bro. and Sr. G. W. Best were suddenly called to Chelsea, Kansas, last week by the death of Bro. Best's sister, Mrs. Jennie Scott. She died in the hospital at Wichita, Kansas, having been operated upon for cancer. She passed away forty-eight hours after the operation. She was a very dear sister to Bro. Best and we extend to him our heartfelt sympathy.

Sr. Silvers, from Rea, Missouri, is visiting in the city, and she found her old accustomed place at services yesterday.

Sr. Manning, one of our elderly sisters, met with an accident last week which seemed to be quite serious for a time, but through administration and supplication to God she was relieved to that extent that she was able to be at meetings yesterday. We have testimonies all along the line that God is our ever faithful friend.

Sr. Knipsband, from Norborne, Missouri, one of our isolated ones, was present at church services yesterday and enjoyed the privilege. She will remain in the city some time.

Bro. O. White, son of I. N. White, dropped in on us yesterday, found his way to the church, and was not a little surprised to see his own father in the pulpit.

May 28.

CHICAGO, ILLINOIS.

Branch headquarters, 716 W. Van Buren St. Sunday meetings 2:45 and 7:45 p. m. Lang Mission, 4111 Cottage Grove Ave., 10:45 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.; West Pullman branch, 12024 Union Ave., 10:30 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.; Parkside Mission, 7124 Stony Island Ave., 3:00 and 7:30 p. m.; 508 W. 37th St. (colored mission), 10:30 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.

The good Saints of Chicago, wishing to see the "elder" properly clad as a representative of this beautiful gospel, presented him with a neat purse, accompanied by a subscription list headed in part as follows: "For the purchase of a suit of clothes for Bro. J. M. Terry in appreciation of the pleasure we feel in having him returned to us this conference year." We are grateful, truly, for the kindly appreciation and the material aid. The suit has been purchased.

We were highly pleased at meeting for the first time in years, our long ago co-worker in church service, Bro. (Dr.) A. McCallum, now of Independence, but of Stewartsville, Missouri, in days ago. Being in the city on business he found the house of prayer, at which his voice was heard in praise and testimony. It cheered our souls to see and hear him after years of separation. He was accompanied by his brother, Alpheus, a resident of our city.

Yesterday was a star day for the work in the city. In the morning at the Lang mission Bro. and Sr. Penny were baptized and confirmed. A beautiful bright light was seen in the confirmation indicating divine acceptance. They both received a satisfying portion of the Spirit and rejoice in finding the truth. Our afternoon service at 716 Van Buren was good in spirit and unity, and all rejoiced in the blessed work. The 2:45 topic was "The Gathering;" the evening, "Tradition true and false." The Religio prayer meeting was excellent.

Bro. F. G. Pitt and wife departed on Friday, at 8 p. m., toward their mission field. Bro. Miller's "net" will catch them as they will Sunday in Pittsburg. Bro. Pitt goes under good promise, and we wish for him abundant success.

At our Thursday night meeting, Bro. F. M. Pitt being called thereto, was ordained to the office of elder, his father, F. G. Pitt, being spokesman. Bro. Fred officiated yesterday, for the first time, in his new office.

Don't forget union service next Sunday at usual place, 3411 Cottage Grove avenue. Extra seats will be provided, so let all come with a measure of the good Spirit, that we may again rejoice together. 3 p. m. sharp, the time.

A series of meetings will begin at the Lang mission on June 4th. Subjects have been announced for seven evenings, the first of which is, "Did the World Need a Restoration by an Angel?" We hope to reach some. May the Saints aid in these services.

We were invited to deliver the memorial sermon at Plano on 27th, but were so bound by previous engagements that we could not respond. We hope nothing was lost by our absence.

Bro. and Sr. Elbert A. Smith spent one day with us last week, taking in hurriedly some of the curiosities of Lincoln park. They reported a very pleasant visit at Elgin, Illinois. They soon hasten away to their mission field, California. Success and health be with them.

J. M. TERRY.

DENVER, COLORADO.
Church, corner of 22d and Arapahoe Sts. Services Sunday—Sunday School at 9:45 a. m.; preaching at 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.; sacrament service the first Sunday in each month at 6 p. m. Prayer meeting Wednesday evening. Zion's Religio-Literary Society Friday evening.

The weather is very warm. Bro. Duncan's little girl fell off the porch one day last week and broke her leg, so Bro. D. is detained at home for some time.

Bro. and Sr. Bozarth, Jr., of Independence, are in the city. Bro. Bozarth is a machinist and hopes to find employment in some of the shops of the city.

A fire in the engine room of the Globe smelter, Saturday night, will throw eight hundred men out of employment for probably two months. Bro. Stuart is working there.

Bro. Alma Chabburn is improving.

Elder J. Frank Curtis came up from Colorado Springs Friday, to assist in tent work. The weather is all that could be desired for the undertaking.

Bro. John Brennan, of Trinidad, is in the city looking for employment and a location for his family that they may enjoy the association of the Saints.

Bro. Frank Schmutz has returned from Independence, but is not much improved in health. His case is a peculiar one.

Elder J. B. Roush is expected to arrive this week to take charge of the tent.

Preaching at the church Sunday morning by Elder Frank Curtis, and in the evening by the pastor.

May 28.
ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI.

Extremely warm, and the strike continues, seemingly unchanged materially.

Bro. W. H. Pease and wife, of Kansas City, Kansas, visited our city Friday, remaining over yesterday. Bro. Pease spoke for us both morning and evening. His pleasant practical talk to the Saints in the morning was excellent. In the evening his theme was the Book of Mormon, which was handled nicely. If invitations prove effective, I am quite sure they will visit us again.

Bro. Sidney Hawkins, of Belleville, Illinois, visited in the city yesterday, attending church both afternoon and evening.

The funeral services of Sr. Josephine Woodward took place at the church Tuesday last. Notice appears elsewhere we believe. While her four sons are all young men, the fact that they are without the fold, rendered the funeral sad indeed.

Our prayer meeting yesterday afternoon was unusually good; despite the heat and dust, well could we say, "Tis good to be a Saint."

Commencing the first Sunday in June, and continuing for the four summer months, our prayer and testimony meeting on Sunday will be held at 6 p. m. instead of 2:30 p. m.

The Religio is to give a special literary program next Thursday night. One of the important features will be the discussion of Mr. Sheldon's book, "In His Steps," and can his theory be practically applied.

We are expecting Bro. T. J. Bell, of Lamoni, with us next Sunday, en route to his mission field in Indiana.

Bro. J. T. Davis, after holding meetings at Cheltenham a few days last week, left for his field of labor. J. C. H.

MAY 25.
SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA.

Services at Golden West Hall, 320 Post street, every Sunday. Sunday School 10 a. m., preaching 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.; prayer meeting first Sunday of each month at 12:15 noon. Elder C. A. Parkin presiding elder, residence 3010 16th street.

We had preaching Sunday morning by A. M. Chase, who was on his way to his field of labor. At 7:30 p. m. Thomas Daley favored us by occupying our pulpit. Both the speakers were welcome, and a good sized congregation listened to them. They both have left us again and gone to their respective fields, Bro. Chase to the Central district, and Bro. Daley to Nevada.

Bro. Chase preached at Oakland Sunday afternoon.

Chas. A. Parkin went to Santa Rosa and preached there.

Prayer meeting was held Wednesday evening, with the usual attendance and enjoyable time. Prayers of thankfulness and songs of praise occupied each mind.

Sisters' Prayer Union met as usual Thursday afternoon, and the time was well spent.

The "Religio" held forth Friday evening; the attendance was small, thirteen being the number present, but those there felt repaid for their trouble in attending, as an enjoyable time was had, and the time passed pleasantly by. The critic's report is becoming quite an interesting feature.

The Sunday School is to hold a picnic at Golden Gate park May 30th, Decoration Day.
GEO. S. LINCOLN.

MAY 20.
LETTER DEPARTMENT.

SOLDIERS GROVE, Wis., May 20.

Dear Ensign:—I am now laboring alone in a new opening where Bro. Leonard Houghton baptized nine last fall and winter, and created a fine interest. There are several here now seemingly deeply interested, and about ready to accept the gospel. Indications are that a good work will be accomplished in this part of Crawford county, among the hills and valleys along the old Kickapoo river.

We feel well in the good work, and am hopeful, as a result of humility and close study, to do a better work in gospel service than ever before in our life.

Yours in the conflict,
F. L. SAWLEY.

MOUND CITY, Mo., May 23.

Editor Ensign:—Bro. D. C. White and the writer left Guilford, Missouri, May 21, for Savannah, the county seat of Franklin county, Missouri. Held three meetings in the "old Catholic church," first of our preaching done in this place for some years. We had good meetings and were treated royally. The leading men of town and county were out to hear us. Bro. and Sr. W. G. Bronson paid for the use of the old church; they are people who will do all in their power for the gospel. Good was done at the place for the church.

On the 25th inst. we came to this place, preached on Sunday for the "Rose Grove" branch, out in country eight miles. Today we put up our gospel tent at this place and wish to hold two or three weeks' meetings if interest justifies. Bro. C. P. Welsh is here; we will hold meetings out in the country at the same time, so you see we are going to keep the wheels moving.
Truly,
J. ANTHONY DAVIS.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., May 15.

Editor Ensign:—The long looked for conference has come and passed and the missionaries have had their term of sentence pronounced upon them; some have gone to their fields of labor, others have returned home, some sick and afflicted and others almost blind; but still duty calls them away into new fields, far from home and loved ones. Oh, how I wish Christ would come, and this struggle and warfare was over with; when there will be no more blind and afflicted amongst us.

My husband reached home soon after conference, in a very critical condition, and he has suffered something terrible ever since with a gathering in his head. It has been something over thirty days since it started and the end is not yet. Will say to his friends and correspondents that he will answer all letters as soon as able; and expects to reach his field of labor as soon as possible. His home address hereafter will be 1224 Wall street, Los Angeles, California. Hoping and praying Christ will come soon, I remain as ever in the work.

Yours in gospel bonds,
SR. HIRAM HOLT.

STEWARTSVILLE, Mo., May 21.

Editor Ensign:—Sunday 13th, I spoke twice at St. Joseph; on Monday evening, President Joseph Smith addressed a fair gathering. So far as I learned, the Saints in St. Joseph are feeling very well in the great latter day work. On Friday night I spoke at the Aspey mission, enjoyed fine liberty. Yesterday I spoke twice at this place to fair sized congregations with excellent liberty. The good Spirit was present all day to bless, comfort and cheer, some splendid promises were given to us if faithful; one good brother was called to be ordained an elder. On Saturday night I presented the doctrine of our church to the Rev. Mr. McKenzie of the Christian faith, for two hours, at the house of Bro. and Sr. Hayden; Sunday morning we had it for one hour longer.
Yours truly,
J. C. FOSS.

WHITE, S. D., May 13.

Editor Ensign:—When I learned that I was to leave my former beloved field of labor, co-laborers and Saints, and go to the great extending prairies of the Dakotas, I began to hunt up the old Ensigns and find, if possible, some letters from there, so as to gain some little comprehension of what I might find in the coming months. But I was a little disappointed in not finding a great many letters from the Dakotas.

So I will write a few lines, and wish to say to the readers of the Ensign that being among those appointed to labor in the Dakotas, and from what they now seem to me to be, a vast new field of gospel work, with a few widely scattered Saints, I should be pleased to receive the names and addresses of any isolated Saints or friends to the Lord's work, and in co-operation with my brethren of the missionary force I shall be pleased to visit all such, and, if possible, get openings for presenting the gospel. Any one knowing of such will oblige me by sending the above to my permanent address, White, Brookings county, South Dakota. I hope the dear Lord may give grace and strength for the work to be done in this great field.

After several years of gospel service I have never entered a year's work feeling so much the need of Divine assistance as now. But I hope to humbly and prayerfully do the best I can, and if, at the end of the year, little has been accomplished, I can honestly submit my service to the Lord.

Yours in Christ,
LEONARD HOUGHTON.

SHENANDOAH, Ia., May 14.

Editor Ensign:—I left Independence and my loved ones May 31, for my field of labor; stopped off at Hamburg, and commenced work the same night. Audiences not very large, but attentive and anxious to hear. Staid there just one week, preaching nights and Sunday; baptized three on Sunday, two worthy young men of good report, and a twelve year old son of Bro. Nathan Mortimore. We had an excellent Sabbath School attendance, and God owned us as his, and gave us a goodly degree of his Holy Spirit in our confirmation and testimony meeting in the afternoon.

In this place the faithful few are striving their best to hold up the banner of truth to the breeze. Long may it wave, yea, until all who will, shall be free indeed through obedience to the truth.

We left the dear ones of Hamburg on Thursday, May 10th, for Mill Creek, near Riverton, where we preached three nights in the school-house, and held two good meetings on Sunday 13th, and enjoyed ourselves hugely with the dear Saints located there, and friends who met and worshipped with us. I must not forget to mention their Sunday School organized but a short time ago; about thirty-five in attendance, all interested, and, if faithful, we predict for them success and the Master's blessing to rest upon and abide with them.

Came here last night just in time to hear Bro. James Roberts wind up his sermon. Shall stay here over next Sabbath, then move on to the Pottawattamie district to attend conference at Underwood, Iowa. Then to the conference of Fremont district at Henderson, June 9, 10. We have other points of interest to make as soon as possible.

To my co-laborers in the great work entrusted to our care in these two districts, as we did well last year and accomplished much good, let us, my dear brethren, not slacken our hands—all of us, both general appointees and the local force, for we are all one in this work; one is not without the other. We are dependent upon each other very largely in order that we may accomplish much good. May God be with us all in this year's effort, in power, and enable us to realize the desires of our hearts in righteousness, is the earnest prayer of your fellow laborer and servant.

Editor Ensign:—We are the only family of Saints in this part; we moved here last November from Denver, and haven't seen any one of our church since. I find that Utah elders have canvassed this country completely and of course told the people that they are the original church and that a man could not have but one wife, and so on.

Since that there has been an elder of the Dowle faith here, and baptized eighteen by trine immersion, and now we have a man here from Missouri who claims to belong to the church of God and that he has been holding meetings all over Iowa and Missouri for the last fifteen years, and that he, with five hundred others, heard President Joseph Smith say that he was the president of the Utah church as well as ours; we gave the gentleman to understand that if he thought he could prove any such thing he could have a chance; but however, we are by the grace of God to live our religion and to hold fast the faith that was once delivered to the Saints and to endure to the end that we may receive the crown that is at the end.

Our desire is to serve the Lord in the beauty of holiness and to exemplify the character of Christ. In our experience we have found that the Lord is faithful to keep his word if we only live right before him.

I have an appointment out at our school-house each Sunday, and have hopes of doing some good, as there seems to be some parties interested; but as I am only a priest I would be glad to have an elder come down.

Still hoping and praying for the upward movement of this latter day work, I remain
Your brother in Christ,

SOUTH WILMINGTON, Ill., April 30.

Editor Ensign:—We moved to this place last August and have not been to a prayer meeting or heard a Latter Day Saint sermon preached since; there is no church here of any kind as it is just a new place and the people do not think of anything but drinking, swearing or card playing; in fact, everything but God or their soul's salvation. Since we came here we have been called to pass through a severe trial; our aged grandparent passed away very suddenly. Our loss is his gain. We ask all the Saints to pray for us in our lonely, isolated condition, that he will bless us with his Spirit to lead us into all truth, and that we may overcome all our temptations as there are many of them.

If any of the elders are passing through Gardner, Illinois, on their way to or back from General Conference, we would like to see them stop off; we live two and one-half miles from there, but if they will drop us a line we will meet them; it is on the C. & A., 98 miles south of Chicago. We have been talking and lending our Ensigns to some of our neighbors, and they seem greatly interested and say they would like to hear one of our elders preach.

But Paul gives us to understand that "the way into the holiest of all was not yet made manifest, while as the first tabernacle was yet standing."—Heb. 9: 8.

And then, after telling us:

"For the law having a shadow of good things to come, and not the very image of the things, can never with those sacrifices which they offered year by year continually make the comers thereunto perfect."—Heb. 10: 1, He says:

"Then said he, Lo, I come to do thy will, O God. He taketh away the first, that he may establish the second."—Heb. 10: 9. It was necessary to take "away the first," because "the way into the holiest of all was not yet made manifest while as the first tabernacle was yet standing;" but, when he had taken "away the first," he could then "establish the second."

Remember, now, that Paul said:

"For if that first covenant had been faultless, then should no place have been sought for the second." (Heb. 8: 7). "He taketh away the first that he may establish the second."

And then he adds:

"By the which will we are sanctified through the offering of the body of Jesus Christ once for all."—Heb. 10: 10.

And further on, in the same chapter, he says:

"Having therefore, brethren, boldness to enter into the holiest by the blood of Jesus, by a new and living way, which he hath consecrated for us, through the veil, that is to say, his flesh."—vs. 19, 20.

It is then, a "new" way indeed. Paul said the first covenant "waxeth old," that it "decayeth," and "is ready to vanish away;" and that "he taketh away the first that he may establish the second;" and now he says that we enter in "by a new and living way."

Not only is it a new way; it is a living way. And if Paul's reasoning is correct: "In that he saith, A new covenant, he hath made the first old," then, "In that he saith," a "living way," "he hath made the first"—dead.

But has he made the first dead? Listen to Paul:

"Wherefore, my brethren, ye also are become dead to the law by the body of Christ; that ye should be married to another, even to him who is raised from the dead, that we should bring forth fruit unto God."—Rom. 7: 4.

How did they become dead to the law? "By the body of Christ," Paul says? And why did they become dead to the law? "That ye should be married to another," is the reason given here.

Again, Paul says in the same chapter:

"But now we are delivered from the law, that being dead wherein we were held; that we should serve in newness of spirit, and not in the oldness of the letter."—v. 6.

According to this, "we are delivered from the law," and the law "wherein we were held" is also become dead. And for what purpose? "That we should serve in newness of spirit, and not in the oldness of the letter."

The law had been given to Israel and was binding upon them until it was taken "out of the way" and they were "delivered from the law;" but, when the law was taken out of the way, being dead, and they were delivered from the law, then they could enter in by this "new and living way," "be married to another, even to him who is raised from the dead," and serve God "in newness of spirit, and not in the oldness of the letter." And it will not do to try to dodge the force of Paul's teaching here by saying he referred to "the ceremonial law," for the next verse says:

"What shall we say then? Is the law sin? God forbid. Nay, I had not known sin, but by the law: for I had not known lust, except the law had said, Thou shalt not covet."—Rom. 7: 7.

Paul is talking of the law that says, "Thou shalt not covet," and that is found in the decalogue—the last commandment of the ten.

It will not do, either, to take the position that a man becomes "dead to the law" by obeying it; that he is "delivered from the law" by living up to all its requirements. Paul says:

"How shall we, that are dead to sin, live any longer therein."—Rom. 6: 2.

"Being then made free from sin, ye become the servants of righteousness."—Rom. 6: 18.

Does a man become dead to sin by obeying it? Is a man made free from sin by living up to all the requirements of sin? Hardly so easy as that, else there would be more people dead to sin than there are. No, the man who is "dead to sin" (Rom. 6: 2) is "made free from sin" (Rom. 6: 18), and the man who is "dead to the law" (Rom. 7: 4) is "delivered from the law" (Rom. 7: 6).

It would be very inconsistent to say we are "dead to sin," "made free from sin," because we have quit obeying sin, and have altogether turned away from it, and then to say we are "dead to the law," "delivered from the law," because we obey the law, live up to all its requirements. Paul says the Saints were dead to sin, and that they were dead to the law; that they were made free from sin, and that they were delivered from the law. They were dead to both, and free from both, but they were "alive unto God through Jesus Christ our Lord," and were still "under grace" and were the "servants of righteousness."

Yes, in that he saith a "living way," he hath surely "made the first dead." "That being dead wherein we were held," we now "enter into the holiest by the blood of Jesus"—BY THE BLOOD OF JESUS.

Hence we read:

"And he took the cup, and gave thanks, and gave it to them, saying, Drink ye all of it; For this is my blood of the new testament, which is shed for many for the remission of sins."—Matt. 26: 27, 28.

"And he said unto them, This is my blood of the new Testament, which is shed for many."—Mark 14: 24.

"Likewise also the cup after supper, saying, This cup is the new testament in my blood, which is shed for you."—Luke 22: 20.

"This cup is the new testament in my blood: this do ye, as oft as ye drink it, in remembrance of me."—1 Cor. 11: 25.

"And for this cause he is the mediator of the new testament, that by means of death, for the redemption of the transgressions that were under the first testament, they which are called might receive the promise of eternal inheritance."—Heb. 9: 15.

(In all these texts the word "testament" is rendered "covenant" in the revised version).

"And to Jesus the mediator of the new covenant."—Heb. 12: 24.

The two covenants are here contrasted as the "first covenant" and the "new covenant." Jesus is the mediator of the new covenant, and his blood is called "the blood of the new covenant," or testament, in contrast with "the blood of the covenant" which the Lord made with Israel at mount Sinai, the blood of calves and of goats.

The first covenant also had a mediator. Paul says of the law: " * * * And it was ordained by angels in the hand of a mediator."—Gal. 3: 19.

And Stephen said of Moses: "Who received the lively oracles to give unto us."—Acts 7: 38.

And Moses said of the time when the Lord spoke his covenant to Israel from the mount Sinai:

"I stood between the Lord and you at that time, to shew you the word of the Lord: for ye were afraid by reason of the fire, and went not up into the mount."—Deut. 5: 5.

Moses, then, was the mediator of that first covenant; it was he who received the lively oracles to give unto Israel. A great deal has been said in behalf of the ten commandments, their importance and perpetuity as God's moral law, because of the great display of God's power in proclaiming them from out the midst of the fire; but the fact remains on record that Moses stood between the Lord and the people at that time; that he "received the lively oracles" to give unto Israel, and that he was the mediator of that covenant. The Lord is supposed to know why he made such a display of his power before Israel in declaring this part of his law to them as he did, and he is very careful to tell us why he did so. Listen to him:

"And the Lord said unto Moses, Lo, I came unto thee in a thick cloud, that the people may hear when I speak with thee, and believe thee forever."—Ex. 19: 9.

er, and I will make them hear my words, that they may learn to fear me all the days that they shall live upon the earth, and that they may teach their children."—Deut. 4: 10.

Moses was the mediator, and the Lord does this that the people might believe Moses forever, and might fear the Lord. And please notice that the Lord says, "That the people may hear when I speak with thee." He was speaking with Moses, and it was Moses who received the lively oracles, even though the people were permitted to hear when the Lord spake. This great manifestation of God's power then, in proclaiming the ten commandments in the hearing of all Israel, was not because they were more sacred than any other commandments of God, but that Israel might know that Moses was the Lord's mouth-piece to them, and that they might believe him forever.

We have, then, two covenants and two mediators; Moses the mediator of the first covenant, and the Savior the mediator of the new covenant; and the blood of the first covenant was the blood of calves and of goats, while the blood of the new covenant is the blood of our blessed Redeemer. Yes, the Savior is indeed the "mediator of a better covenant, which was established upon better promises."

But, while we have these two covenants clearly placed before us in the Bible, we must remember that "the first covenant" had been broken, had been made "old" and was "ready to vanish away," when our Savior was manifest in the flesh, and shed his blood, that he might offer to Israel—and through them to the entire world—this "new covenant." And we should remember, too, that "he taketh away the first that he may establish the second," because "the way into the holiest of all was not yet made manifest, while as the first tabernacle was yet standing." And, lastly, let us remember that "if that first covenant had been faultless, then should no place have been sought for the second." (Heb. 8: 6). And, in the light of the above, please examine the following:

"For there is verily a disannulling of the commandment going before for the weakness and unprofitableness thereof. For the law made nothing perfect, but the bringing in of a better hope did; by the which we draw nigh unto God."—Heb. 7: 18, 19.

"Disannul" means: "render void;" hence the commandment going before was rendered void, by "the bringing in of a better hope;" and it is by this better hope, "a better covenant which was established upon better promises," that we now draw nigh unto God." But, says one, it can't be "the law of the Lord" that was disannulled because of the "weakness and unprofitableness thereof," because Paul says:

"Wherefore the law is holy, and the commandment holy, and just and good. For we know that the law is spiritual."—Rom. 7: 12, 14.

"But we know that the law is good, if a man use it lawfully."—1 Tim. 1: 8.

Yes, Paul says all these things of the law; but the same Paul that says, "the law is holy, and the commandment holy, and just and good;" the same Paul that says, "the law is spiritual," and that it is "good, if we use it lawfully;" the same Paul that says these things, also says, "there was verily a disannulling of the commandment going before for the weakness and unprofitableness thereof;" hence it must be possible even for a law that is spiritual, holy, just and good, to become weak and unprofitable, under some conditions. Let us now take a look at the conditions then existing:

"For we have before proved both Jews and Gentiles, that they are all under sin."—Rom. 3: 9.

"But the scripture hath concluded all under sin."—Gal. 3: 22.

"For God hath concluded them all in unbelief, that he might have mercy upon all."—Rom. 11: 32.

"There is none righteous, no, not one."—Rom. 3: 10.

All, both Jew and gentile, were "under sin," "in unbelief," and "none righteous, no, not one;" all were "dead in trespasses and in sins." (Eph. 2: 1.)

Israel had "the law of the Lord," given to them "from the mount Sinai," but:

"He that despised Moses' law died without mercy."—Heb. 10: 28. (See Deut. 13: 8, 9; Deut. 19: 11-13.)

"Every transgression and disobedience received a just recompense of reward."—Heb. 2: 2. (See Deut. 17: 2-7.)

All were "under sin," and "in unbelief;" no mercy was to be shown them by the law, but every transgression was to receive its merited penalty; now tell me, "ye that desire to be under the law," what could the law do for the human family, under those conditions? Could it take away their sins?

"For it is not possible that the blood of bulls and of goats should take away sins."—Heb. 10: 4.

"And every priest standeth daily ministering and offering oftentimes the same sacrifices, which can never take away sins."—v. 11.

No, the law could not take away nor remit their sins. It is:

"And the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin."—1 John 1: 7.

"For this is my blood of the New Testament, which is shed for many for the remission of sins."—Matt. 26: 28.

It is our Savior's blood, the blood of the new covenant, that cleanses from sin.

Well, could the law justify the human family in the sight of God?

"For by the works of the law shall no flesh be justified."—Gal. 2: 16.

"But that no man is justified by the law in the sight of God, it is evident: for, The just shall live by faith."—Gal. 3: 11.

There is no justification for man then, by the law. But:

"And by him [Christ] all that believe are justified from all things, from which ye could not be justified by the law of Moses."—Acts 13: 39.

"Knowing that a man is not justified by the works of the law, but by the faith of Jesus Christ."—Gal. 2: 16. (See also Rom. 3: 28.)

Could the law bring perfection?

"For the law made nothing perfect."—Heb. 7: 19.

"For the law having a shadow of good things to come, and not the very image of the things, can never with those sacrifices which they offered year by year continually make the comers thereunto perfect."—Heb. 10: 1.

No, the law could not make man perfect. Perfection, like the "remission of sins," and justification, comes through the atonement of Christ.

"For by one offering he hath perfected forever them that are sanctified."—Heb. 10: 14.

"For the law made nothing perfect, but the bringing in of a better hope did."—Heb. 7: 19.

Perfection comes by "the bringing in of a better hope" through the "one offering" of our Savior.

Did righteousness come by the law?

"For if righteousness come by the law, then Christ is dead in vain."—Gal. 2: 21.

"But now the righteousness of God without the law is manifested, being witnessed by the law and the prophets."—Rom. 3: 21.

The law was a witness of the righteousness of God, but this righteousness was manifested without the law.

"Christ is the end of the law for righteous to every one that believeth."—Rom. 10: 4.

"For as by one man's disobedience many were made sinners, so by the obedience of one [Christ] shall many be made righteous."—Rom. 5: 19.

"And be found in him, not having mine own righteousness, which is of the law, but that which is through the faith of Christ, the righteousness which is of God by faith."—Phil. 3: 9.

Paul said he didn't want the righteousness "which is of the law," but the righteousness which is by faith, the righteousness which is of God, and which is revealed in the gospel of Christ (Rom. 1: 17.) ("And the law is not of faith."—Gal. 2: 12.)

Well, if righteousness did not come by the law, could it give life?

"For if there had been a law given which could have given life, verily righteousness should have been by the law."—Gal. 3: 21.

But, "if righteousness come by the law, then Christ is dead in vain."—Gal. 2: 21.

No, life did not come by the law; it must come by some other means, if it come at all.

"Our Savior Jesus Christ hath abolished death, and hath brought life and immortality to light through the gospel."—(2 Tim. 1: 10.)

"But the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord."—Rom. 6: 28.

"And this is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent."—John 17: 3.

And this knowledge, which is eternal life, is given through that "better covenant, which was established upon better promises." "For they shall all know me, from the least to the greatest." (Heb. 8: 11.) Eternal life comes through Jesus Christ our Lord, not by the law.

Now, as all were "under sin," "in unbelief" and "dead in sin," and; as the law could not take away sins, could not justify man in the sight of God, made nothing perfect; could not establish righteousness, and could not give life; then it certainly became weak and unprofitable after it had served its purpose as a school master, and as a witness of the righteousness of God.

"For if that first covenant had been faultless, then should no place have been sought for the second." But, had it been a faultless covenant, it would have made provisions for mercy being shown to the penitent transgressor, would have made provisions for full and complete remission of sins, and would have brought man, when thus forgiven, justified and made righteous, to the knowledge of God, which is eternal life, even as the new covenant does. If the law, the covenant from the mount Sinai, could have done all this for man, then should no place have been sought for the second; but, as it could not do this, the Lord "mercifully took it out of the way and gave to the world a better covenant: a covenant that could take away sins, establish righteousness and give to man eternal life. And all this is done by the gospel covenant, the one of which our Savior is the mediator as witness the following:

"But now in Christ Jesus ye who sometimes were far off are made nigh by the blood of Christ."—Eph. 2: 13.

The apostle here testifies that it is by the blood of Christ that the Gentiles are made nigh unto God, and he then goes on to tell us how this was done:

"For his our peace, who hath made both one, and hath broken down the middle wall of partition between us; having abolished in his flesh the enmity, even the law of commandments contained in ordinances; for to make in himself of twain one new man, so making peace; and that he might reconcile both unto God in one body by the cross, having slain the enmity thereby."—Eph. 2: 14-16.

Notice: First, "The 'enmity' that had existed between the Jews and the gentiles, was 'the law of commandments contained in ordinances.'"

Second, Christ "abolished" this enmity, the law of commandments, "in his flesh."

Third, In so doing he brake down this "middle wall of partition."

Fourth, Both Jew and gentile are now reconciled unto God "by the cross."

Fifth, It was also "by the cross" that the enmity had been slain.

And now that the enmity had been "slain" and "abolished," Paul says that Christ hath "quickeneth together with him" those who had before been "dead in your sins," and that he had forgiven them "all trespasses." "Blotting out the handwriting of ordinances that was against us, which was contrary to us, and took it out of the way, nailing to the cross." (Col. 2: 14.) The "law of commandments" was "slain" "by the cross," "abolished in his flesh;" and now Paul says that Christ nailed it to the cross and took it out of the way. And since our Savior has slain the law of commandments by the cross, and nailed it to his cross; and since he has broken that law, abolished it in his flesh, and took it out of the way, Paul says to the Saints:

"Let no man therefore judge you in meat, or in drink, or in respect of an holyday, or of the second." Which are a shadow of things to come; but the body is of Christ."—Col. 2: 16, 17.

It is sometimes assumed, however, that the above texts do not include the ten commandments; that Paul is speaking of the law of commandments "contained in ordinances," and of the handwriting "of ordinances;" that an ordinance is a ceremony, and hence he is speaking of the "ceremonial law," and that only, as being abolished. But assumptions are not proof; and some of them, among which we may safely reckon the above, are not provable.

Paul is speaking of "the law of commandments contained in ordinances," and of "the handwriting of ordinances." But what is an ordinance?

"1. A rule established by authority. A permanent rule of action. An ordinance may be a law or statute of sovereign power. In this sense it is often used in the Scriptures. It may also signify a decree, an edict, or rescript.

"2. An observance commanded. [Ex. 31: 16].

"3. An appointment.

"4. Established rite or ceremony, [baptism, Lord's supper, etc.]"

Isn't "Thou shalt have no other gods before me" a law? a statute of sovereign power? If so, then it is an ordinance. Isn't "Remember the Sabbath day, to keep it holy," a rule of action? Was it not a law, a statute for Israel? If so, it was an ordinance. The decalogue, in fact, was a law of commandment, and was contained in ten distinct ordinances. It was a "handwriting of ordinances," the handwriting of the Lord himself, setting forth, in ten separate and distinct ordinances, the covenant of the Lord which he made with Israel when he brought them out of the land of Egypt. But in what sense was it "against us?" And in what sense was it "contrary to us?" In this sense: All people, Jew and gentile, were under sin, and the penalty was death; there was no provision for mercy being shown to the repentant transgressor, in the ten commandments; hence it was against us, and contrary to us, because it condemned them, and made no provision for their escape from the consequences of their past transgressions. Even if they should repent; and could live all the rest of their lives without breaking any of the commandments, still that law would not be satisfied, and their past transgressions would not be cancelled nor forgiven. It was "against us" and "contrary to us," and so the Lord, in his mercy, disannulled it, abolished it, "took it out of the way, nailing it to the cross." And now we enter in "By a new and living way, which he hath consecrated for us, through the veil, that is to say, his flesh."

"By so much also was Jesus made the surety of a better covenant."

Another reason why this covenant from the mount Sinai was against us was that it "gendereth to bondage." (Gal. 4: 24.) And Paul, after telling us in this same chapter that the Scripture saith, "Cast out the bond woman and her son," and that "we are not the children of the bondman, but of the free," says:

"Stand fast therefore in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free, and be not entangled again with the yoke of bondage."—Gal. 5: 1.

From what "yoke of bondage" had Christ made them free? Listen to Paul: "But now we are delivered from the law, that being dead wherein we were held; that we should serve in newness of spirit, and not in the oldness of the letter."—Rom. 7: 6.

Christ had made them free from the "yoke of bondage," had delivered them from the law, that they might serve in newness of spirit; and hence Paul's admonition: "Be not entangled again with the yoke of bondage," the covenant "from the mount Sinai, which gendereth to bondage."

And with this agrees the united counsel of the conference at Jerusalem. Some of the Pharisees who believed, contended that it was necessary to circumcise the gentile converts, and to command them to keep the law of Moses. Peter, speaking to this, showed that he had been the first to go to the gentiles, that the Lord "put no difference between us and them, purifying their hearts by faith," and then said:

"Now therefore why tempt ye God, to put a yoke upon the neck of the disciples, which neither we nor our fathers were able to bear."—Acts 15: 10.

After the discussion was closed it pleased the apostles and elders, with the whole church, to send chosen men and to write unto the gentiles as follows:

"Forasmuch as we have heard, that certain which went out from us have troubled you with words, subverting your souls, saying, Ye must be circumcised, and keep the law: to whom we gave no such commandment."—Acts 15: 24.

The law was "a yoke" which "neither we nor our fathers were able to bear." It was a yoke of bondage from which Christ had made them free; they were commanded not to be entangled with it again; and those who were so zealously teaching that the gentile converts should "keep the law" were, according to the decision of the apostles and elders, with the whole church, "subverting the souls." And further on they say:

"For it seemeth good to the Holy Ghost, and to us, to lay upon you no greater burden than these necessary things; That ye abstain from meats offered to idols, and from blood, and from things strangled, and from fornication: from which if ye keep yourselves ye shall do well. Fare ye well."—verses 28, 29.

No keeping of any special feasts, no burnt offerings, no keeping of the Sabbath, nothing of that kind was enjoined upon the Gentile converts by this famous counsel of apostles and elders. No, "the law of commandments contained in ordinances" had been taken out of the way, and Paul said: "Let no man therefore judge you in meat, or in drink, or in respect of an holyday, or of the new moon, or of the sabbath days."—Col. 2: 16.

And again he says: "One man esteemeth one day above another: another esteemeth every day alike. Let every man be fully persuaded in his own mind."—Rom. 14: 5.

But didn't Paul keep the law? Yes, as a Jew, he kept the law; but not because it was required of him in the gospel. He said: "I must by all means keep this feast that cometh in Jerusalem."—Acts 18: 21.

"For he hastened, if it were possible for him, to be at Jerusalem the day of Pentecost."—Acts 20: 16.

And when he got there he was told by James and all the elders (Acts 21: 18), that the report had gone abroad that he was teaching the Jews to forsake Moses, and not to circumcise their children nor walk after the customs (v. 21); and he was further advised to purify himself, along with others, that "all may know that those things, whereof they were informed concerning thee, were nothing; but that thou thyself walkest orderly, and keepest the law." (Acts 21: 24.) Yes, Paul kept the law, as a Jew, just as I keep the law of my country, as an American. The law of Moses was a national or political law, as well as a religious law, and the followers of Christ who lived there, and were Jews, respected the law of their country. But please note what follows the quotation made above:

"As touching the Gentiles which believe, we have written and concluded that they observe no such thing, save only that they keep themselves from things offered to idols, and from blood, and from strangled, and from fornication."—Acts 21: 25.

Paul, as a Jew, kept the law; but the gentile converts were not required to "observe any such thing." Paul, in speaking of keeping this feast at Jerusalem, said:

"Now after many years I came to bring alms to my nation, and offerings." (Acts 24: 17.) Those alms and offerings were made to the nation as an act of loyalty to his country and not as a part of the gospel, or as being connected in any sense with the christian worship. Paul did many things for the sake of peace and for the good of the work that were not required of him in the gospel. When he took Timotheus with him to preach, he took and circumcised him because of the Jews which were in those quarters: for they knew all that his father was a Greek." (Acts 16:8). He knew and taught that "circumcision is nothing and uncircumcision is nothing," but for the sake of peace he was willing to observe customs that were not required of him in the gospel; but he did not circumcise Timotheus because it was a gospel requirement; it was "because of the Jews which were in those quarters." And it was done, no doubt, upon the principle stated below:

"And unto the Jews I became as a Jew, that I might gain the Jews; to them that are under the law, as under the law, that I might gain them that are under the law; to them that are without law, as without law, (being not without law to God, but under the law to Christ) that I might gain them that are without law. To the weak became I as weak, that I might gain the weak: I am made all things to all men, that I might by all means save some. And this I do for the gospel's sake, that I might be partaker thereof with you."—1 Cor. 9: 20-23.

"Wherefore, if meat make my brother to offend, I will eat no flesh while the world standeth, lest I make my brother to offend."—1 Cor. 8: 13.

Paul would abstain from eating flesh, observe the law of circumcision, keep the Sabbath, keep the feast of Pentecost, observe the Jewish laws of purification, or anything else that he could do—that did not actually conflict with the gospel—to keep peace in the church and to keep contention out. But all this does not change the fact that the law had been disannulled, abolished and taken "out of the way," because of its weakness and unprofitableness, and that "the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus" is now the living way in which the followers of Christ are to walk.

Paul seems to have kept the law in its entirety when in his own country, both moral and ceremonial. And Ananias, who baptized Paul, was also a devout man according to the law. (See Acts 22: 12). But while Paul kept the law himself, feast days, circumcision, laws of purification and all, and while it is quite probable that most, if not all, of the first Jewish converts kept the law too, yet Paul taught the gentiles that it was done away and that it is now the new covenant that God requires men to obey.

He says: "But if the ministration of death, written and engraven in stones, was glorious, so that the children of Israel could not steadfastly behold the face of Moses for the glory of his countenance; which glory was to be done away; how shall not the ministration of the spirit be rather glorious?"—2 Cor. 3: 7, 8.

Here we learn that the ministration of death is that which was written and engraven in stones, the same that caused Moses' face to shine so that the children of Israel could not look at him. Hence it is the ten commandments. (See Ex. 34:27-33). And this ministration of death is contrasted with the ministration of the spirit, and is shown to be the inferior of the two, which harmonizes with the statement that Christ is "the mediator of a better covenant." It also harmonizes with Paul's teaching here in this same chapter:

"Who also hath made us able ministers of the new testament; not of the letter, but of the spirit: for the letter killeth, but the spirit giveth life."—2 Cor. 3: 6.

Again, it is the ministration of the "new testament," the spirit, in contrast with the ministration of the letter, the ministration of death written and engraven in stones. And you will please notice that whatever glory attached to this that was "written and engraven in stones" was to be done away (v. 7). Not only the glory but also the thing which "was glorious" was itself done away.

"For if that which is done away was glorious, much more that which remaineth is glorious."—v. 11.

What was it that was glorious? "For if the ministration of death written and engraven in stones, was glorious," etc. (v. 7). It was that which was engraven in stones that was glorious, that which caused Moses' face to shine.

What is it, then, that "is done away? "For if that which is done away was glorious," etc. (v. 11). It is the thing that was glorious that is done away. Hence both the thing that "was glorious," "the ministration of death, written and engraven in stones" and also its "glory" are done away. But we are not left in a very bad condition, for Paul says: "For if the ministration of condemnation be glory, much more doth the ministration of righteousness exceed in glory."—v. 9.

The "ministration of the spirit" which is the "ministration of righteousness" remaineth, the apostle says, and "doth much more * * * exceed in glory." But why should Paul use the word "remaineth?" He says one is done away and the other "remaineth," just as though it were already in existence before the other was taken out of the way. It was in existence, in one sense. The law had been "added because of transgressions" (Gal. 3: 19); Paul says, and in using the word "added" he virtually says that there was a law of some kind already in existence. What law was it?

"For unto us was the gospel preached, as well as unto them: but the word preached did not profit them, not being mixed with faith in them that heard it."—Heb. 4: 2.

It was the gospel, then, that was first preached to Israel, when the Lord brought them out of Egypt. But they did not believe, and did not, therefore, accept the gospel covenant. Paul says they "sinned" and could "not enter into his rest" because of unbelief. (Heb. 3: 17-19).

This is the same covenant, too, that was made with Abraham by promise:

"And the scripture, foreseeing that God would justify the heathen through faith, preached before the gospel unto Abraham, saying, In thee shall all nations be blessed."—Gal. 3: 8.

Again: "Now to Abraham and his seed were the promises made. He saith not, And to seeds, as of many; but as, of one, And to thy seed, which is Christ."—Gal. 3: 16.

Yes, the gospel, salvation through faith, was preached unto Abraham; and the promise was made that through him and his seed all nations should be blessed. And the promised seed is declared to be Christ. Now, this same gospel was preached unto Israel, but through unbelief they rejected it, sinned and it did not profit them, "not being mixed with faith." Then the law which is not of faith (Gal. 3: 12) was "added because of transgressions." But this law which is not of faith did not disannull the gospel which had been preached to Abraham:

"And this I say, that the covenant, that was confirmed before of God in Christ, the law, which was four hundred and thirty years after, cannot disannull, that it should make the promise of none effect."—Gal. 3: 17.

No, the gospel of Christ, in which the righteousness of God is revealed, had been preached unto Abraham; the promise had been made that all nations should be blessed through his seed, which is Christ; and the law, which was "added because of transgressions" four hundred and thirty years after, cannot disannull that covenant—the gospel covenant. Hence, when the seed came to whom the promise was made and the law which was added "till the seed should come" was taken out of the way, then "much more that which remaineth is glorious." It is the "ministration of the spirit," the "ministration of righteousness," the gospel of Christ, that existed before the law; and it is the gospel of Christ that "remaineth," since the law "is done away."

PRACTICAL THOUGHTS FOR PRACTICAL THINKERS.

ELDER A. HAWS.

Editor Ensign.—I hope through your columns to reach your readers, and to so deeply impress a few "do something" thoughts upon their minds, that each one may become a practical doer of the word of God, and not a forgetful hearer and theorist. The reading of logical, practical articles, and the hearing of practical sermons are not only beneficial in their effects, but also condemnatory. If the mind is in a proper condition to receive, digest and assimilate the thoughts conveyed in so thorough a manner that they will produce lawful, every day christian works, then they become factors in forming the Christ character, therefore, beneficial. But upon the other hand, if the brain, the seat of government, is wholly occupied with the things of this world, and stultified with strong drink, tobacco, tea, coffee, or other narcotics, then it is unfitted for the deep and lasting impressions that such sermons or articles should produce in order to bring forth legitimate character building works; hence, they become condemnatory in their effects. Let us see to it, therefore, how we read and how we hear, realizing these facts, and that man will be very largely judged by his practical working thoughts, and not so much by his idle theories.

Having said so much about articles and sermons and their effects, I think I had better take a text and get in a double shot on my readers.

"Who may abide the day of his coming? And who shall stand when he appeareth?"—Mal. 3: 2.

In all the walks of life there are standards and tests by which the fitness of men and things are proven, separated, and allotted to place, powers, rewards, and punishments, according to their adaptation; or in other words, a survival of those who have fitted themselves to occupy. This being true in secular life, all seekers after places, powers and emoluments, are very careful to qualify themselves in every particular, especially in the test questions and standards of character of which they must be in possession in order to abide, enter in and occupy legally. Now, is it not reasonable that every man, woman and child, especially those who have been adopted into the kingdom of God, and are looking forward, hoping to abide the day of his coming and enter into the pearly gates and with the Master to occupy place, power, honor and glory as kings, priests, queens, etc.; I repeat, is it not reasonable that all who are thus looking for this coming, abiding, entering in and occupying, should be just as earnest, just as honest, and just as untiring in familiarizing themselves with all of the physical helps, standards of character and test questions to which they must answer, and by which their qualifications for the above named rewards will be judged? Brother, sister, remember that abiding, entering in, and occupying, means something more than being a parrot and memorizing the standards of character and the test questions. It means the real Christ character in good works, that will stand the "refiner's fire and the fuller's soap." Let each one prove him or herself to be wise master-builders, having laid a sure foundation. "Each man's work shall be made manifest: for the day shall declare it, because it is revealed in fire; and the fire itself shall prove each man's work of what sort it is. If any man's work shall abide which he built thereupon, he shall receive a reward. If any man's work shall be burned he shall suffer loss: but he himself shall be saved; yet so as through fire."—1 Cor. 3: 12-15, Revised Version.

DROPSY TREATED FREE.

$3.75 WORTH OF NEW TREATMENT WILL BE SENT FREE TO ANY OF OUR READERS BY THE WELL KNOWN CHICAGO SCIENTIST, DR. FRANKLIN MILES, M. D., LL. B.

Dropsy is a terrible disease in its last stage. At first no disease is apparently more harmless, a little puffing of the eyelids or hands or a slight swelling of the feet, ankles or abdomen. Yet no man is more fearful. The unfortunate patient slowly drowns in the water of his own blood. Dr. Miles' speciality is diseases of the heart, liver, kidneys, nerves and dropsy. To introduce this new Dropsy Treatment he will give away $10,000 worth. Hundreds of testimonials of the most remarkable cures will be sent on request. One gentleman was cured after having been given up by ten Grand Rapids physicians; a lady after six able Chicago doctors had pronounced her case hopeless.

Mr. H. A. Groves of 404 Mountain St., Elgin, Ill., aged 72, was thought to be incurable from dropsy, which reached to his lungs and caused smothering spells; coughs, shortness of breath. He reports: "Dropsy all cured by Dr. Miles' way." Mr. James Pinkerton, editor of the Chicago Sun, Ind., writes: "Mrs. P. was given up by three physician. She owes her life to Dr. Miles' skill. She now performs her household duties at 65 years of age." Alex. Ehler, Calumet, Mich. writes: "I suffered seriously from years from dropsy, rheumatism and heart disease. After taking Personal Treatment I gained 60 pounds and now always feel well." Mrs. M. B. Morelan, of Rogers, Columbiana Co., Ohio, says: "Dr. Miles saved my life by curing me of that awful disease, dropsy and heart trouble. I suffered terribly." Miss Sophia Snowford of No. 282 21st Ave., Minneapolis, testifies that "Three days after commencing to take Treatment for dropsy it was nearly all gone, after two allopathic and two homoeopathic physicians had failed." Mr. A. F. Coburn of Blessing, Iowa: "The Treatment has performed a miracle for Mrs. C. after her leg burst from dropsy." Dr. Miles' Treatment is much superior to any others and to obtain the best result it is prepared for each patient by a skilled person should send for this marvelous Treatment. $3.75 worth sent free upon request. Address Dr. Miles, P. O. 201-209 State St., Chicago. Please mention this paper.

Then the first question that each individual should ask him or herself is, Upon what foundation am I building my character? Am I building for six days in the week upon gold, silver, precious stones, wood, hay, stubble, pride, fine clothes, with many other worldly things, then on Sunday go to the church more to be seen and admired of others than to hear and be profited by the sermons and other services? Brother, sister, let us look into the inmost recesses of our being and examine ourselves as with a searchlight (the word of God), and if we are building our characters upon any or all of these worldly things, let us undeceive ourselves immediately, for just one of these worldly qualifications will disqualify and unfit us for the abiding time, the entering in and the occupancy of places, so much to be desired, with the Master of the house, the kingdom of God.

Some, like those of old, will say, This is a hard saying and who can abide it. But, my beloved brethren and sisters, can you not understand that fire—yes, the refiner's fire and the fuller's soap—is to be brought to bear upon your life works, which is the foundation to your eternal life character? And if it is composed of one or more of these destructible worldly elements which will melt away like dross (which it is), leaving us and our perishable foundation of gold, silver, precious stones, wood, hay, stubble, and all other worldly works to topple into the fire, our works being unprofitable condemn us, and disinherit us from the highest places of power, honor and glory because our works were burned; therefore, we must take just the places, powers, honors, glories and emoluments for which we have fitted ourselves. Justice, mercy, truth, law, and order demand this, so if we will not occupy our rights, cultivate our talents, and gain more, we must take the reward of the slothful servant who took the trouble to go and "dig in the earth and hide his lord's money." There must have been some worldly cause for this digging in the earth to hide his talents which I shall not attempt to portray, but will call upon my practical thinking readers to consider carefully the reckoning time between the master and the slothful and unwise servant; and let us each one say to ourselves, "Am I that slothful servant? Am I burying the talents given by my Creator under unlawful lusts such as selfishness, pride, power, and places among men, with pernicious and cultivated habits of eating, drinking and wearing such things as stultify the brain and unfit the body for the purposes designed and for the improvement of the talents given.

Now, let us see the end of the do-nothing, talent-hiding servant. "Then he which had received the one talent came and said, Lord I knew thee that thou art an hard man, reaping where thou hast not sown, and gathering where thou hast not sowed; and I was afraid, and went and hid thy talent in the earth; lo, there thou hast that is thine. His lord answered and said unto him, Thou wicked and slothful servant, thou knowest that I reap where I sowed not, and gather where I have not sowed: Thou oughtest therefore to have put my money to the exchangers, and then at my coming I should have received mine own with usury. Take therefore the talent from him and give it unto him which hath ten talents. For unto every one that hath [obtained other talents] shall be given, and he shall have [in] abundance: but, from him that hath not [obtained other talents] shall be taken away even that which he hath [received]. And cast ye the unprofitable servant into outer darkness: there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth."—Matt. 25: 24-30.

Thus we see that nothing but practical working thoughts are available, either in this or the life to come. Then let us every one awake to a do-something standard, and stir up our latent talents ere it is too late, that we may not be among the weeping and wailing in outer darkness. This is my prayer.

INDEPENDENCE, Mo., May 7.
New Creed Demanded.

St. Louis, Mo., May 13.—In this city on Thursday next the Presbyterian general assembly will meet in the Washington and Compton Avenue Presbyterian church. Eminent divines and laymen to the number of about 1,000 from every synod and presbytery in the United States will be present.

Only once before, in 1874, has the united body met in this city. The interest of the topics on the programme, and the scope and possible effects of the overtures to be presented, will make this one of the most important assemblies held for the past twenty years.

One of the most important matters to be brought up is the question as to whether or not the Westminster confession of faith shall be revised. This is a question that is disturbing a large part of the Presbyterian church. The following are the sections to which it is said exception is taken:

Third—By the decree of God, for the manifestation of His glory, some men and angels are predestinated unto everlasting life, and others foreordained unto everlasting death.

Fourth—These angels and men, thus predestinated and foreordained, are particularly and unchangeably designed; and their number is so certain and definite that it cannot be either increased or diminished.

Several Presbyterians have asked specifically that the assembly should appoint a committee to consider the whole question of creed revision, while others desire simply that a new creed should be ordered, leaving the old one untouched, the old one preserved intact as an historical document, while the new version shall be the working creed of the church. These overtures will all be referred to the committee on bills and overtures, of which Rev. Dr. Robert F. Sample, of New York, will be chairman. A report will be presented to the assembly and steps may be taken which shall lead to new expansion of Presbyterian faith.

Next to creed revision the topic of the most importance from a general point of view will be the much discussed case of Herman Warszawak, the converted Jew, whose troubles have been aired in the courts of the church for several years.

Other overtures relate to the office of the stated clerk of the assembly, Rev. Dr. William H. Roberts, who had held that position for sixteen years. The salary up to last year was $3,000, but when it was increased to $4,000, other eyes were turned toward the office, which is permanent. Efforts have been frequently made to wrest it from Dr. Roberts, and they will be renewed again at this meeting.

Rev. Dr. George B. Stewart, president of the Auburn Theological seminary, but formerly of Harrisburg; Rev. Dr. Daniel W. Fisher, of Hanover, Indiana; Rev. Dr. Wm. McKibbin, of Cincinnati, and Rev. Dr. Charles A. Dickey, of Philadelphia, are among those who have been put forward for the office by interested friends.—Kansas City Journal, May 14.

PASTORALS.

To the Saints in South Missouri District, Greeting:—As the church has again seen fit to send us four general chibh' missionaries to labor in the district the coming year and has placed in charge as sub-missionaries, Bro. R. T. Walters and the writer, we ask the full co-operation of all Saints in the district, and especially all local branch officers, that the work may move forward in unity along the whole line. We trust that the Saints will take every advantage offered them in helping the ministry in learning new openings, and also lend them the help they might need in a financial way. Always remember that it takes more than a "God bless you" to pay railway fare and keep a missionary looking respectable, so that he may appear before the public an honor to the church and credit to the Saints with whom he labors.

Also I wish you to remember that I am still bishop's agent, and I shall be glad to enroll your names the coming year on my books; remember that God has promised to bless you in proportion as you bless others. You may pay tithing to Elder R. T. Walters who will give you a receipt for the same, so let us all try and push the work along.

The scattered Saints who wish preaching will please address me as below, and we will try to comply with your request. If there are any of the priesthood who can spend their whole time, or even six months of their time in missionary labor, please write me; but if you can only send part of your time you will labor under district president. No one holding the priesthood should be idle but move out and do your duty. The Saints at Springfield and also those near Ave are putting forth an effort to build church houses; let all the Saints help all they can. If there is any good carpenter in the district who would like to give the church in Springfield a little labor, I think I can safely promise you good board and your train fare, also the same to a good helper; let us hear from some one or two.

To the Saints and friends of the North-eastern Illinois District:—Having been appointed sub-missionary in charge in the above named district, we desire to ask the hearty co-operation of all interested in the spread of the gospel of Christ. Our missionary force for the present year is limited, it is true, but we hope to accomplish something for the advancement of the cause of righteousness; and this can best be done by each putting forth a special and earnest effort to carry or send the gospel message to those who are in darkness. It is our desire to make as many new openings as we possibly can during the year, and ask the Saints to give us all the assistance possible, to secure places for preaching the word. We especially ask the aid of all scattered Saints and friends in this direction; do all you can to get the truth before your neighbors and friends. See to it, that your daily walk is such that will command their respect and reverence for your religion. Any of the Saints or friends who can secure places to preach, please write us about it, and we will respond as soon as possible. My mission address will be Plano, Illinois, care Box 134.

Yours in gospel work,
H. E. MOLER.
RADCLIFF, Ohio, May 14.

To the Saints of Oregon; Greeting:—Having been returned to that field this year I wish to say, I shall reach my field as soon as practicable and I wish to correspond with all Saints and friends to the gospel as to the prospects of preaching in their neighborhood, and I wish to co-operate with all and to make as many new openings as possible. So let me hear from the scattered ones especially, and I wish to remind you all that it costs money to ride on the railroad or steamboats, and as I am short in that direction and will have to have help to reach my field, I ask all who can to assist, as I do not like to call on the bishop, he having all he can care for now; so please, Saints, remember this; the work is "entrusted to all" and not to the elders alone.

My home address is San Bernardino, California. Anything addressed here will reach me wherever I am. I will give my field address when I reach my field. Ever praying for the triumph of truth, I am,

Your brother in Christ,
D. L. HARRIS.
SAN BERNARDINO, Cal., May 17.

To the Saints in the Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana District, who reside in Michigan, Greeting:—As I have been placed in charge of that part of your district which is included in Michigan, and have not had time to consult with Bro. G. A. Smith, who has charge of that part of the district which is in Indiana, I would advise those missionaries who have been appointed to labor in the district, to enter the mission at the nearest point to them and labor as wisdom directs till permanent arrangements are made, as to which state you are to labor in. These arrangements will be made by consultation with the sub-missionary in charge of Indiana, and Bro. J. H. Lake, president of the mission, as soon as possible.

I would like to hear from the presidents of the different branches in my charge, as to your present condition and need of assistance from the missionary force, and if the scattered members, who desire to be visited by the missionaries, will let me know of your desires and the opportunities in your localities, I shall endeavor to have your requests granted. Any information the Saints see fit to give me as to the condition or needs of the field will be thankfully received, as I am unacquainted with the mission.

Dear Saints, as we are entering upon another conference year, after the close of a very important General Conference—one which confirms the Saint in the fact that "God is in the work and will carry it on to success"—let us renew our determination to labor for the advancement of Zion's cause until we see her "as fair as the sun and as clear as the moon," and her banners may be terrible to all nations; or else hear the Master's voice saying, "It is enough. My permanent address is Gallen, Michigan.

Yours in gospel bonds,
W. E. PEAK.

Announcements for Southern Illinois.

To the Saints in the Southern Illinois District, Greeting:—As I have been assigned to labor in your midst the coming year as best I can with the help of the Master, and there having been appointed with me Bro. J. T. Davis and M. F. Gowell, I, therefore, take this method to ask you all, both brethren and sisters, to remember us in your prayers that our labors may be a success to the work and an honor to the One who has called us to labor. And in order that we may be enabled to reach as many of the Saints and friends as possible at as early a date as will be the most convenient I have deemed it wise to make appointments for meetings to be held at the following places, viz., at the Brown church, beginning Friday, June 15th, at eight p. m., and lasting until the 19th. At the Green school-house, beginning Friday, June 22d, at 8 p. m., and lasting until the 26th. At the Cola church, beginning Friday, June 29th, at 8 p. m., and lasting until July 2d. At Dryrock, beginning Friday, July 6th, at 8 p. m., and lasting until the 12th. At Springerton, beginning Friday, July 13th, at 8 p. m., and lasting until the 19th. At Bowyer, beginning Saturday, July 21st, at 8 p. m., and lasting until the 25th. At Kibbie, beginning Friday, July 27th, at 8 p. m., and lasting until August 1st. At Hazel dell, beginning Saturday, August 4th, at 8 p. m., and lasting until the 8th. At the Saints' chapel, beginning Thursday, August 9th, at 8 p. m., and lasting until the 12th. At Brewer chapel, beginning Friday, August 17th, at 8 p. m., and lasting until the 19th.

Other places will be looked after later. Either Bro. Davis or Gowell will be with us at all of the above named places, and we ask the co-operation of all the Saints, both ministry and laity, in these meetings, in order that they may prove a success to the work. All are invited to come and help make these meetings a success. Come and bring the Spirit of the Master with you.

Remember that our district conference will convene at Brush Creek, June 9th, at 10 a. m.

NOTICES.

To the Members of the Second Quorum of Seventy:—We would like the addresses of all members who have been taken into the quorum since April, 1897, or since the issuing of the last circular letter. Any who have changed their address please notify us. As soon as ordained we request the following named brethren to send us their items of birth, baptism and ordination, as well as their addresses; viz., Richard E. Howlet, Benjamin St. John, James R. Beckley and A. E. Mortimer. The dates of birth and baptism of Wellington D. Ellis are desired. Most of the above is desired to enable us to prepare a new circular letter as provided for at the last Conference. Please address me at Plano, Illinois, care Box 134.

DIED.

MYERS.—At Streator, Illinois, hospital, May 13, 1900, of lung trouble, Sr. Eliza Myers, wife of Geo. Myers. She was 38 years of age at her demise. Deceased was born at Kewanee, Henry county, Illinois, February 11, 1862; was the youngest daughter of Bro. and Sr. Reese, formerly of Kewanee. She united with the church at Kewanee in her young days. A husband and four children mourn their loss. Funeral services at the home of her sister, Sr. Wm. J. Howell, sermon by Elder Jacob Stanley; text, Rev. 21: 4.

WARREN.—At Lynn, Massachusetts, of consumption, May 10, 1900, Laura J. Warren. She was baptized September 22, 1855, by John C. Huxley, priest, and manifested a Christ-like spirit of patience and heroic resignation that was stimulated by the testimony of Jesus restoring with her unto the end of her stay here. She leaves a husband—Bro. Chas. S.—three sons and four children; two sons and one daughter are in the church, and if a mother's prayers and example are fruitful, Mrs. J. Howell, also unite with the family of God. Funeral services at Memorial chapel, Lynn; sermon by Elder R. Bullard.

THE LIVING WAY.

The ways of life are full of pleasures and comforts. The springtime of the years are prophetic of promises of good, and the senses feast upon the beauties and fruits as they appear in their season. In the conflicts of life, where strength and endurance is demanded, it is to the sturdy, quick witted, persevering young man, and the bright, sympathetic, resourceful young woman upon whom rests the hopes of the nation or the church. The old, gray haired veteran who has, and is still leading an upright life, has the respect and love of all good men and women, and their counsel is, as it should be, sought and valued. But they have borne their burdens in the strength of their youth, and because of their noble, self-sacrificing, faithful efforts, they leave to the younger generation a work which has been brought up towards perfection, so that they enter upon the work under more favorable conditions and circumstances.

It is true, that they who today take up the work the fathers have relinquished because of the claims of age and waning powers of physical endurance, have their perplexities, their temptations, their difficulties now, as all have had in the past: but they have the experiences of those who have wrought before, to comfort, to strengthen and to enlighten their pathway. They have less occasion for doubts and fears concerning the ultimates of the work they are doing for the Lord, if they are abiding in the "vine," for God has surely given them abundant testimony from many witnesses of His power and willingness to carry out and fulfill to the uttermost, all His promises. And in connection with this fact, youth being the synonym of hope and buoyancy of life, it seems but a natural result, that where endurance and capacity for work is required, the young are the hope of the church.

On the other hand death and decay are both saddening and painful in their effects. The variegated foliage of the autumn challenges our appreciation of the effects of color, but this admiration of the beautiful and delicate tints is tinged with sadness. They are but the harbingers of death and decay; and soon the sere and yellow leaf proclaim the fulfillment of the purpose of their creation. So while love and respect are freely given to the aged warrior in the "army of the Lord," and the knowledge and wisdom attained by reason of long and faithful service, has weight in councils, yet the feeble step, the dimmed sight, the gray hairs are the unerring evidences of the fast approaching end, when, having finished their work, they, in the paradise of God, shall rest for a season, awaiting the rejuvenating and restoring powers of the first resurrection, no more to experience the effects of decay and death.

These two conditions, life and death, confront every soul born into this world; not merely "the life that now is," but more especially "the life that is to come;" and every one should be interested in securing the highest condition of life possible of attainment, not only now, but in eternity. It is a fact that the success attainable in this life is largely dependent upon individual effort and ability, and the Scriptures assure us this is equally true of the higher life in the hereafter. Jesus the Christ was manifest in the flesh to teach all men what to do and how to do it, in forming such characters as would rightly and fitly represent God and Christ, and as becomes those who are heirs of life and glory. There should be no misunderstanding of that which is required in order that men should become transformed into His image. Doing the things which He did, and which He commanded to be done, and doing them after the pattern and in the manner in which He did them, and instructed they should be done, must, of necessity, make every one "like Him;" there can be no higher standard, there should be no lower—there can be no less, if "the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ" (Eph. 4: 13) is to be reached.

Christ is the way, the living way, the truth and the life; let every one who is seeking the true church of Christ, "search the Scriptures," being careful to neither put upon them any private interpretation of your own, or permit any one else to do it for you. When He says to have faith in God and in His Son Jesus Christ, believe, obey Him. When He says repent of your sins and be baptized for your remission, accept His teachings, obey them, being careful to follow the form in which He set the example; it is of the utmost importance to do so. When He promised that the signs should follow the believer, accept it as being just exactly as He said it, and if you are a believer He meant you, individually, as surely as He ever spake or made promise to any. Search out the church which teaches and has all these doctrines as cardinal principles of the faith they hold and teach; obey the gospel under their ministry, if you find they are teaching in harmony with the Bible, no matter what prejudiced men and women may say derogatory to that faith, and if you have found the Lord's church and obeyed His gospel under His authority, you will receive such personal evidence that your faith will not thenceforth stand in the "wisdom of man," but in the power of God; for His promises are sure and steadfast, and never fail.

REVISIONS.

At the general assembly of the Presbyterian church in St. Louis, and the general conference of the Methodist Episcopal church in Chicago recently, important actions were taken, affecting the creeds, which have for generations been the standard of belief for thousands of good people. In the former body some radical changes are proposed with regard to the doctrine of predestination; and in the latter one of the features which has so long been one of the distinguishing doctrines of church polity, that of itinerant ministry, has been abolished and a minister who suits his congregation can now remain as long as it is mutually satisfactory and agreeable. Another radical measure was the admission of lay delegates in equal proportion to the ministerial delegation. Creed revision is becoming a matter of necessity with the popular sects of the day, because the "fathers" had more or less contracted views and did not build as wisely as they would have done had they been guided by the inspiration of the Spirit of all truth. Seventy years have passed since the re-establishing of the church of Jesus Christ, and not a doctrine of the church, taught from the hour of its restoration to the present, has had to be changed or revised, and if the Lord Jesus should not come in glory for another century, there would be no necessity for any change in its fundamental doctrines, for the church stands upon the rock of eternal truth, and the doctrines it teaches are those its Lord instituted, and will save to the uttermost all those who obey them.

Let us continue to "stand fast in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made you free."

ABOUT PASTORALS.

The custom of issuing pastorals by missionaries placed in charge of fields of labor, seems to be reaching such proportions that we deem it wise to offer a suggestion or two by way of information to all concerned.

We believe that such notices are proper and pertinent, as being the only practicable way of conveying necessary information and advice to a large number without a great deal of time and labor in writing; at the same time we think that if a little care is given the matter, all that is necessary to be stated in these pastorals can, in many instances, be said in considerably less space than is sometimes occupied. It is necessary to use what is called "brevier" type in setting up notices in the ENSIGN, and such work costs us considerably more than the "long primer," which is used on other pages; hence, it is a matter of dollars and cents which moves us in writing this article, believing that it is necessary (and only necessary) that the attention of our good brethren be called to the matter, to secure their co-operation. Our space is very limited, and with other notices of conferences, etc., it is always "running over." We shall not presume to say what should or should not be put into pastorals, but only ask that those who write them will study over the matter and cull out all that can be eliminated profitably before sending it to the printers so that the same results will be reached, while the expense is lightened as much as is consistent with the interests of the work.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

BRN. A. J. KECK and H. E. Moler are conducting tent services at Wilmington, Illinois, with good prospect of a number of additions soon.

BRN. F. A. RUSSELL and J. W. Adams closed a series of meetings at Millersburg, Illinois, in time to attend the Sunday School convention and conference at Joy, June 1-3, at which everything passed off pleasantly. Brn. G. H. Hilliard and T. J. Sheldon, besides the district force, were present.

The following clipped from the Middletown, Ohio, Daily Signal, pays a deserved tribute to our talented young sister who is a ready defender of the faith, and with a facile pen has maintained the truth on several occasions in the columns of the Signal. The ENSIGN heartily joins in the felicitations offered our sister on her success:

The Phonographic Institute gold pen offered by the Phonographic Institute of Cincinnati was won by Miss Edith Wren of this city. The prize was offered for the neatest and most correct transcript of a certain opinion delivered by Judge Brewer of the United States Supreme court. Miss Wren is a young lady of marked ability, formerly of Amanda, Ohio, who has a thorough knowledge of the English language, a good education and is ever ready with her pen. She graduated at Littleford's Shorthland school and in the contest for the prize won the honor over ninety-four competitors, who were all regarded as good stenographers.

The Phonographic Magazine says that among the ninety-four transcripts there were many good ones, but all things considered Miss Wren's shorthand production, which is reproduced in the magazine, was most worthy of the prize. We congratulate the lady and are proud to hear such good report, which reflects credit not only upon the individual, but upon the city, whose girls and boys show marked ability in the various walks of life.

BRN. J. N. STEPHENSON, writing from Quincy, Missouri, and sending remittance for a new subscriber to the ENSIGN, sensibly remarks:

I shall make a great effort to get the ENSIGN in the hands of as many as possible, as one subscription may be equal to a great many sermons when it comes to removing prejudice. I hope the ministry will not overlook this matter.

As a means of introducing the gospel message, removing prejudice and preparing the people for the ministrations of word, doctrine and ordinance by the ministry, we know by experience and many testimonies that the ENSIGN is filling that field, and we know of no better medium to do this work. Our aim is to make it a valuable aid to the missionary as well as a comfort to the Saints; and that it may the more fully answer this purpose we trust the brethren will write often for its columns, letters and articles, short, educational and instructive, and like this wide awake brother, talk subscriptions in and out of the church. Where the ministry find individuals who are interested in the work, but not prepared to obey the gospel while they remain with them, it would be a wise act to induce them to subscribe for the ENSIGN for three months (25 cts.), six months (50 cts.), or a year ($1.00) before leaving them, so their interest may be kept alive and a longer acquaintance with the doctrines taught giving them a better understanding of their duties in the matter. Try this plan this year, brethren, and write us for free sample copies when you need them for canvassing.

We are indebted to Bro. Richard Ellis, presiding elder of the Sidney, Australia, branch, through our genial brother, Elder Gomer Wells, late missionary to Australasia, for photographic views of the Saints' chapel, 65 Nelson St., Rozelle, Sydney, Australia, both exterior and interior, and of the "missionary cottage" on the same lot, in rear of the church, occupied, we believe, by Bro. John Kaler and family. Anyway, Sr. Mary Kaler and little son are sitting in the doorway and look very much at home; the numerous vessels containing flowers and plants, as well as the flowerbeds in the yard, show that lovers of nature's beauties abide there. The exterior view shows President Ellis in front of the gate—a portly brother, who looks as if he would make the 200 pound mark on the scales thump the beam. The interior shows Bro. C. E. Butterworth, missionary in charge, in the pulpit, with Bro. Ellis and Bro. Joseph W. Smith, priest, at a table in front. We thank the brethren for these interesting views.

HERE'S ANOTHER "ORIGIN."

The numerous and varied "origins" of the mythical "Mormon Bible" are truly wonderful, some of them are amusing.—Among the latter class is this, which may be called the latest.

THE MORMON BIBLE.

UTICA, Mo., June 2.—Mrs. Diadama Chittenden celebrated the 87th anniversary of her birth Thursday. She was born at Shipton, Lower Canada, May 31, 1813, her maiden name being Whitney.

In 1852 she was married to Roderick M. Chittenden, and located in Utica in 1860, where she has resided continuously ever since. She was for many years engaged in the mercantile business with her husband, and in the early '60s did much buying, purchasing supplies at Quincy, Lexington and other points.

Mrs. Chittenden made many long trips on horseback in those days, and encountered many difficulties and adventures, always being active and alert and able to cope with all obstructions. This activity she still retains, and at her present great age she is able to do all her own work, to sew and read without the aid of glasses, and, being a highly educated lady, she keeps fully in touch with the events of the day. She is an entertaining conversationalist, and relates many interesting incidents connected with her early life.

One of her vivid memories is of the origin of the Mormon Bible. As she remembers, there was a Mr. Spafford, a millwright and miller in the employ of Esquire Wright, of Conneaut (then called Salem), Ashtabula county, O. He was afflicted with consumption and did but little manual labor, though he had the oversight of several industries.

In general conversation with some associates one day he made the assertion that they knew nothing about the Bible, and to prove it he said he would write a chapter of his own and then read a chapter from the Bible, and he claimed they could not tell which was which. The tests were many, and chances were against Spafford, but he won, and it helped much to relieve his last days.

In the employ of Squire Wright was a boy named Joseph Smith, who was observed to be an attentive listener at many of the readings.

Shortly after, Spafford died, and, although these papers were diligently searched for, they were never found.

Some years after, the Mormon Bible, said to have been "revealed" to Joseph Smith, appeared, and the three acquaintances of Spafford—Dr.

Hart, Esquire Wright and Zaph Lake—after examining it, made an affidavit and published it in the Salem Reporter to the effect that the greater part of the Mormon Bible was identical with the manuscripts written by their friend Spafford.

AN INDUCEMENT.

In order to raise some money within the next few weeks, we have decided to make the following offer:

To those who remit their subscription to the ENSIGN one year in advance we will send a copy of our Historical Engraving for 25 cents; that is, for $1.25 we will send the ENSIGN for one year and a copy of the engraving. This picture sells at 50 cents each and is the same which we formerly sold at 75 cents.

This offer applies to either renewals or new subscriptions. If, however, any one secures a subscription from another party, they, as well as the subscriber, will be entitled to the picture at 25 cents each, but in order to secure it at this price the order must be accompanied by the amount to pay ENSIGN subscription one year in advance, and 25 cents for each copy of the engraving; otherwise the regular price of 50 cents will be required to obtain it. The size of this Engraving is 20x28 inches, and it contains photos of the members of the Quorum of Twelve; the standing High Council; the seven presidents of Seventies; seven brethren representing the different priesthoods in the church; the martyrs, Joseph and Hyrum Smith; the present president and patriarch of the church; the Bishopric; the three witnesses to the Book of Mormon; the church recorder, secretary and librarian; the Saints' Home; Graceland College; the Nauvoo and Kirtland temples; the Hill Cumorah; the Temple Lot; the Saints' church at Independence and the church at Lamoni, etc.; in all, sixty-eight pictures artistically grouped in one. We send with every picture a key which explains it throughout.

Send along the amount at once, and thus help us financially and secure this beautiful engraving at one-half regular price. Address all orders to:

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

H. G. SAMSON, Milo, Calhoun county, West Virginia:

I have been confined at home since September, yet I have made four openings; have five calls to preach. I wish some help; there can be a stake here soon.

ELDER J. F. MINTON, Magnolia, Iowa, June 4th:

Just closed an eight day series of services here in the tent, during which time thirteen sermons have been preached, two Sunday School sessions held, one sacrament service, six sessions of Scripture study, one babe blessed, sick administered to eight times, and several marvelous evidences of God's approval of our work, a continuous evidence of the world's and devil's disapproval, and yet I am happy.

BRO. L. C. DONALDSON, Riverton, Iowa:

We have organized a Sabbath School with an average attendance of 25. James Comstock is superintendent and I am teacher of the Bible class and we have three classes.

BRO. W. H. SMART, Fairland, Indian Territory:

Bro. F. C. Keck and I will go tomorrow, June 8th, to organize a Lamanite branch of about eighteen or twenty Lamanites in this territory. It will go by the name of the Lamanite branch. Bro. Keck has been with me about a month.

SR. (MRS.) M. J. FELL, Big Timber, Sweetgrass county, Montana:

I have no church of the Latter Day Saints to attend, and there are besides myself only my brother and wife in this place, but I do not feel discouraged in well doing. I give our books and papers to all who will read them and never let an opportunity pass when I can get a chance to defend the truth in its fullness. No one seems to get angry with me. Even my own pastor whom I had to ask to take my name from his books so I could serve God in His own way, told me when we were talking, "Sr. Fell, God has surely done wonders for you; live faithful." I have lost no friends, but they all talk and ask me questions about our faith and belief and will read our books. I tell them they are nearer my heart now than when I belonged to their church, for I love them and pray God to help them to see. Dear brethren and sisters, when you meet in prayer, do pray for us, scattered sheep as we are.

GENERAL CHURCH NEWS.

INDEPENDENCE.

Bro. T. W. Chatburn departed en route to his mission field Friday last, and Bro. R. Etzenhouser Saturday, the latter being detained one day by illness at home. Bro. R. J. Parker goes to his field this week.

Srs. Earl Corihell and H. H. Robinson, who have been so seriously ill, are both recovering nicely, and will soon be convalescing if they keep on. The Saints will all be glad to see them out again.

Sunday was a pleasant day, 329 was the number at Sunday School. At 11 o'clock Bro. B. J. Scott was the speaker, and at 8 p. m. Bro. R. J. Parker occupied; both efforts were appreciated. The afternoon service was of an excellent character.

Sr. Fannie Lee has been quite ill but is improving. Her mother; Sr. J. H. Lee, who had her knee severely injured while alighting from a car in Kansas City a few weeks ago, is slowly recovering, though she as yet has no use of the injured member.

Sr. Frank Criley arrived from Lamoni, Iowa, last Saturday evening, and the family are now occupying their fine home on Maple Avenue. Their daughter, Sr. Della, graduated at Lamoni June 1st, and is spending a few days with her friends there before coming home.

Sr. M. E. Hulmes, chairman of the Advisory Board of the "Daughters of Zion," has taken up her permanent residence in Independence, where all matters pertaining to this board should be addressed hereafter. The local society meets monthly in the north room of church. All the sisters who have attained majority should be active members of this good organization.

The Young Men's Educational Society will meet in the north room of the church next Monday evening at 7:45. Bro. Garrett is to give them an address upon "Social Purity," at the request of the society.

Bro. R. May was at Burtville Sunday, assisting Bro. Alfred White. He reports a crowded house, hardly standing room, and that the prospects for a good work are the best he has seen there. Bro. Wm. Newton will probably be there for next Sunday and continue in that neighborhood for a few weeks.

The meeting of the young ladies' organization of the branch last Monday evening was well attended and quite interesting. We have not received other particulars, but we are glad to note the interest taken and predict much good will result from the movement if it is sustained as it should be and as we hope it will.

Next Sunday is "Children's Day." Everybody come and see how the little folks enjoy it. Both morning and evening will be occupied with these services. There will be baptisms after the morning hour, and the pastor desires to meet those who are to be baptized for a few moments after the close of the morning exercises, or perhaps after the Sunday School exercises.

The regular monthly conference of the branch was held Monday evening, President W. H. Garrett presiding, J. W. Luff secretary. Usual reports of officers were read. Treasurer's report showed total receipts for May $43.51, expenses $35.42, balance $8.09. Auditing committee reported. Letters of removal to the First Kansas City branch were granted for Bro. and Sr. F. C. Warny and their children, Russel, Lester, Mabel, Myrtle, and Maude, and to Srs. Burch and Gard. Bro. and Sr. J. D. White, on letters from St. Louis, Bro. and Sr. B. J. Scott and son, David Alpha, from First Kansas City, Bro. and Sr. Enoch Brown and Bro. John N. Forbes, Platte Valley, Nebraska; Sr. Adella Burwell Smith, Bayport, Michigan, and Bro. J. B. Smith, on certificate of baptism from Elder J. J. Cornish, were admitted as members of Independence branch. By a vote of 34 for, and 29 against the Sunday afternoon service was continued at 2:30, the effort to change to 12.15 or 6.30 p. m., during the summer months, being unsuccessful.

LAMONI, IOWA.

Pres. Joseph Smith declared the gospel at Greenville, Sunday 27th ult.

Commencement exercises were held at Graceland College and brick church, 1st inst., at 10 a. m. and 7:45 p. m. respectively. The oration at the college was by Bro. James Kelley. At the church ten public school scholars graduated and delivered orations. They were Brn. Hale W. Smith, youngest son of Pres. Joseph Smith; Henry Danielson, son of Home Superintendent M. J. Danielson, Floyd Hopkins and Arlo Huntsman; Srs. Clara Lasley, Hessel Vanderflugh, Florence Baggerly, daughter of Elder I. P. Baggerly; Della Criley, daughter of Elder Frank Criley, and Irene Reed. The diplomas were presented by Elder Gansolley and Prof. Briggs. The compositions were all good and appropriate and well received.

A farewell by the superintendent and teachers of the Star of Bethlehem Sunday School was tendered to Bro. and Sr. David Anderson, 2d inst., at which Bro. G. W. Blair, Sunday School superintendent, presented to Sr. Roxanna Anderson a beautifully engraved silver card receiver in appreciation of her faithful services in the Sunday School.

Bishop E. L. Kelley went to Audubon, Iowa, to attend a district conference.

Winifred B., eldest son of Bishop Kelley, recently returned from the Iowa State University, where he has been studying law for a time.

Yesterday, June 3d, at the Saints' church the morning sermon was by Elder Salyards. Bishop Anderson presided over the afternoon sacrament service. A child of Bro. and Sr. Judson was blessed under the hands of Elders Scott and Gansolley. Earnest prayers were offered for Bro. I. N. W. Cooper. A number of living testimonies were given and all were enlivened, comforted and edified thereby. The night sermon was by Elder Elvin, his text being a proverb of Solomon, "Words fitly spoken are like apples of gold in pictures of silver." The night sermon at the Saints' Home was by Elder C. Scott on the restoration in latter days, his chief text being Isaiah 29: 29.

CHICAGO, ILLINOIS.

Branch headquarters, 716 W. Van Buren St., Sunday meetings 2:45 and 7:45 p. m.; Lang Mission, 3411 Cottage Grove Ave., 10:45 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.; West Pullman branch, 12024 Union Ave., 10:30 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.; Parkside Mission, 7124 Stony Island Ave., 3:00 and 7:30 p. m.; 508 W. 37th St. (colored mission), 10:30 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.

We were most agreeably surprised recently by the presentation of an enlarged picture, most exquisitely executed and nicely framed, of our dear deceased son. The picture was made and presented by our young artist, Bro. Clare A. Sherman.

Bro. Arthur Gorbett, one of Uncle Sam's letter carriers, spent his vacation at Kansas City and Independence. He returns in good cheer and full of praise for Zion and her environs. We want to keep Bro. Gorbett as one of our faithful workers as long as possible, but when the way is prepared and the face turns Zionward we can't say nay. Our hearts yearn for the redemption of Zion and the gathering of her children.

Sr. Nettie L. Hughes, of the Second Kansas City branch, in passing through the city en route home from Michigan, attended our sacrament service yesterday and spoke encouragingly of the work and her good desires therein.

By a united and earnest effort our Sunday School workers succeeded in largely increasing the attendance at our Sunday School. Next Sunday is designated as rally day, and on Saturday evening there will be given a Sunday School entertainment at the hall, 716 Van Buren. All are invited.

Bro. E. E. Johnson and the deacons attended the conference at Delavan, Wisconsin, on the 2d. Elmer is still wrestling with poor health. We hope his outing will do him good.

Bro. John Midgorden, Goodman and Alonzo Hayer, the building committee of the Mission church, were in the city on the 30th ult., and purchased chairs for their new building; they selected a very neat opera chair which, with good preaching, will bring comfort to the occupant. They intend having the church ready for dedication at the quarterly conference which convenes there on 23d and 24th of this month. Bro. Joseph Smith and our missionary in charge, Bro. Heman C. Smith, are expected to be in attendance. The Mission Saints have the honor now of building the first and last church house of the Reorganization.

We are glad to report another excellent union meeting yesterday which was well attended, and many excellent testimonies were heard. Remember, in three weeks from Sunday we hope to have another one still better.

We have divided the city into sections, and the brethren to labor, and expect to commence street work as soon as possible. We hope to do much in this line during the season. Bro. Graves and Fuller have already done some work in this way. We can assure the priesthood of Chicago if they will with all diligence lay to the work and look only to the preaching of the gospel and building up of God's people, and labor in earnest union, they will find peace and joy to their souls as a cherishing fountain. The prevailing verdict of the Saints here is the work must move on.

J. M. TERRY.

ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI.

Elder T. J. Bell, of Lamoni, has been with us since Friday. Spoke at our church twice yesterday.

Bro. Christensen and family contemplate moving to Benton, a suburb of St. Louis. While the fresh air is a great temptation to people in the summer, we dislike very much to see the Saints locating too far from church. When we have to go a long way, small excuses usually serve as an excuse for remaining at home.

At our last priesthood meeting Bro. Thomas was telling of when he used to walk some nine miles to attend council meetings of the priesthood, getting home about two o'clock in the morning. We need more of that kind of faith now days. We have some of it here; in fact, considerable bordering onto it, but then there are people in the world who think attending church a few times per week is a great and mighty task, when the church is not more than a mile away. "Deny yourself, take up your cross and follow me."

Bro. T. J. Elliott represented our work at Belleville yesterday, Bro. Barraclough, Caseyville; Bro. Davis, Oak Hill; Bro. Christenson, Cheltenham in afternoon, Bro. Hitchcock at night.

The special literary program of the Religio last Thursday evening proved quite a success. No vote was taken to decide whether the teachings of the book "In His Steps" could be practically applied to our lives.

Another good prayer meeting yesterday. One of the kind that makes us glad we are Latter Day Saints.

Sunday School business meeting Friday night, at which time arrangements are to be made for the Fourth of July picnic.

SECOND KANSAS CITY BRANCH.

Corner Sixteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue. Sunday School 9:30 a. m., preaching 11 a. m., prayer meeting 2:30 p. m., preaching 7:30 p. m.

Sr. Eva Bailey, district president, reviewed the Sunday School last Sunday, and suggested that the teacher lead the child to do most of the talking and asking questions. The morning preaching service was conducted by Bro. John Swenson. Bro. Thomas Newton preached on the twentieth chapter of Revelation.

Sr. Grace Cairns was baptized in the Armstrong font and confirmed at our afternoon prayer meeting by Elder Joseph Emmott, who also preached the evening sermon to an appreciative audience composed mostly of young people, who are very much in evidence lately. His theme was the "Unchangeability of God," using the following for a text, "Every good and perfect gift cometh from God and he changeth not."

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA.

Services at Golden West Hall, 320 Post street, every Sunday. Sunday School 10 a. m., preaching 11 a. m., and 7:30 p. m.; prayer meeting first Sunday of each month at 12:15 noon. Elder C. A. Parkin presiding elder, residence 3010 16th street.

We had preaching here Sunday morning by Elder J. B. Price. Chas. A. Parkin went to Fulton, Sonoma county, and preached there. The writer preached at Oakland at 2 p. m., and in this city at 7:30 p. m.

Bro. Fred B. Blair was here and preached for us a week ago. He is now at Santa Rosa.

Bro. Philips is at Sacramento. Our new missionary, Bro. Allen, passed through our city a few days since.

The Religio had a fine meeting Friday evening, good attendance and quite a number of visitors present.

The Sunday School held its picnic Wednesday at Golden Gate Park. The day was beautiful, clear and warm, and a very enjoyable time was had. The refreshments were good and promptly attended to. The merry-go-round was well patronized by the children, each one being supplied with tickets for two rides, by the school.

Decoration day was duly celebrated here with a parade, firing of cannons, and decorating the graves of our heroes. General Otis, from the Philippines, arrived here in the evening, and the cannons saluting him was a fit closing of the day.

LETTER DEPARTMENT.

EAST DELAVAN, Wis., June 4.

Editor Ensign:—The conference of the Southern Wisconsin district was held at this place June 2d and 3d, and we had a fine conference; a good spirit prevailed all the way through. We had good weather and good roads, and the Saints return to their homes today rejoicing, feeling encouraged in the work of the Lord. The reports were good, and you would have been pleased to have heard the bishop's agent's report read; our Saints of this district are coming to the front on tithing, and we hope and pray they will continue, as the Lord will bless them. Some will help on lifting the College debt.

The missionaries go out to their fields encouraged and feeling thankful that the Master still blesses and that the work is still onward in this state.

In bonds,

W. A. McDOWELL.

INDEPENDENCE, Mo., June 5.

Dear Ensign:—I am glad to say that the work in the district is progressing fairly well. During the past eight or nine years in which I have acted as president of the Independence district I have prayed that the Lord would send more laborers into this part of His vineyard. My heart is now made glad that some deliverance has come; a mission in Kansas City, which I have long looked for, has now come, and a brighter day I still hope for, when we shall have thousands for every hundred we have now. I pray that every Saint will do their duty. Elder John D. White, who has been appointed to that field, is doing good work. I can heartily recommend him to the confidence of all the Saints in Kansas City, Missouri, and Kansas City, Kansas.

Elders Alfred White and Wm. Newton have been appointed as general missionaries in this district; I can also heartily recommend them to the confidence of all the Saints in this district, as men of God and faithful workers in his vineyard. We expect to prosecute the work in the district as faithfully as we can, and we ask the local elders and the Saints to assist, and where an opening can be made that cannot be filled by the local ministry, report to the missionaries if they are near you; if not, write me at Independence, Missouri.

Yours in bonds,

R. MAY.

COVE, Ark., May 24.

Editor Ensign:—I write you again, that those who are interested in the Saints away down in southwest Arkansas, may hear from us through the columns of your paper. The work in these parts is onward and upward, and Sunday was a "red-letter day" for us here. While in many places, the Saints have good preaching, and splendid opportunities for improvement in the various departments of church work, but few are more favored than we at times, Sunday being one of the times.

Bishop Ellis Short and wife arrived on Thursday from Kansas City, also J. W. Jackson of the seventy. Friday evening J. D. Irwin, also of the seventy, came. On Saturday our district president, Earl D. Bailey, and family came up from Grannis, and our little town was well nigh full of "high up officials." It was of no little interest for one to pass around the old Stanley Saints and hear the remarks, "Say, Bro. and Sr. Short and Bro. Bailey are in town, now if Sr. Eva was here we would be glad; this puts me in mind of old times," etc. The pleasant smile and the hearty hand shakes, to me, indicated that these old Stanley Saints meant every word too. For many of them first heard the gospel over there, and under the ever faithful work of Bro. and Sr. Short, Bro. Bailey, Eva; and that of Bro. W. R. Pickering also, will ever be remembered by these Saints while life lasts.

Sunday morning was bright and clear: 10 a. m. found our Sunday School crowded, having all that we could well seat. After an interesting session and a practical, well rendered review by Sr. Amy Moxon, preaching was had. The speaker was our worthy, district president, Earl D. Bailey, who discoursed upon the divinity of the work of Joseph Smith. The sermon was plain and full of the Spirit, being gladly received by the hearers. The afternoon prayer and testimony meeting was in charge of Bishop Short and J. W. Jackson; this meeting was one of unusual interest. After the time for this meeting to stop, Bishop Short gave the Saints a talk on the duties of the Saints, the work of the Bishop, in part, also giving us the evening discourse, being assisted by Elder J. Cole Moxon. Monday morning, baptism was administered to three, Elder Bailey officiating, one being the wife of Bro. Spencer, late from Colorado, but formerly of Lamoni, Iowa.

Monday night Bro. Irwin was the speaker, and gave us one of those earnest, interesting sermons so common to Bro. J. D. Tuesday evening Bro. J. W. Jackson occupied the stand, assisted by Elder A. Z. Ridd. Tonight Bishop Short will discourse on the "temporal" part of the gospel. Expect to have meetings all the week and over the coming Sunday. Thus the work moves onward, and may it ever continue till he whose right it is, comes to reign as King of Kings and Lord of lords.

Yours in bonds,

FULTON, Iowa, May 31.

Editor Ensign:—Are there not some of the Saints who are desirous of adopting a nice baby? Sr. Teters who died last fall, left a young baby. The father, Bro. Wm. Teters, having several small children, is unable to take care of it longer, and would like to give it to some good Saints. It is a lovely baby, now nearly eleven months old. Any one desiring any information can correspond with me as I have the correspondence in charge. Address me at Fairbank, Buchanan county, Iowa.

In bonds,

J. RUSSELL SUTTON.

PAPERFE, Tahiti, April 24.

Editor Ensign:—It has been a long time since I sought to send a few lines to your paper, but I have been busy reading what others have written. We are so far away that it seems like sending stale news from here when they are so long time in making their appearance.

Our conference passed off much as other conferences do, with the exception that I believe we are in advance here of some things in America, and in other things far behind.

Tomorrow we go to the Tuamotus and may not be back till January or February next year, but we will continue to get our mail at Paperfe. We do not have very many members here and so we think to travel among the various islands where we have the largest membership, and cut ourselves away from all English speaking people until we learn the language more perfectly. We understand quite a little of the language and speak a little, very brokenly. This mission is so very different from others that we have scarcely gotten accustomed to its needs yet. In our work heretofore, we have made a specialty of leaving the branches alone and spreading the good news to others, but here there is no opportunity of doing that. We have two thousand members in this mission and when Bro. Burton goes home there will be only one white missionary, or rather one foreign missionary here. Bro. John Hawkins and Bro. Herman Janson have lived here for years, one an Englishman, the other a Swede.

On account of the news that the plague was prevalent in San Francisco and Sidney, all boats have been quarantined for a time, and the goods fumigated. The last boat from San Francisco has been in quarantine twenty-five days now. Later news however, says there is no plague in San Francisco, nor has there been, and there is liable to be trouble between the ship company and the government. A few days ago there was talk of closing the port for eleven months, but since the last news from San Francisco, we have heard nothing of it. Bro. and Sr. Burton leave on the Gallilee in about a week. They have been detained about three weeks on account of the quarantine. Bro. Burton's health is better, ours is good. Were it not for lack of news from America, and the length of time between mails, we would be comparatively happy.

I was silenced by the government for a time, but since they learned that we were friends of the government and not trying to get the natives to become American, they have liberated us, and, we trust, are our friends.

In bonds,
J. W. PETERSON.

WEST OAKLAND, Cal., May 27.

Dear Ensign:—I see that my subscription runs out today so I must hasten to renew, and avoid carelessness which has terrible consequences as I have been shown of late. Call it what you like. I fancied that I saw the slumbering church wake up to duty and began to gather the good fish out of the nets (or branches) into vessels, or Zion and her stakes—all who were determined to come up higher and be pure in heart. But some had to be thrown back into the nets for the destruction of the flesh with its affections and lusts. Presently a terrible howl came up from the rich and all who had neglected to do good when opportunity offered after they had been brought to know the truth, and others down in the darkness were howling too. Oh, the terrible howlings; I cannot describe it, it is still ringing in my head. And I thought our loving Redeemer was shaking his finger, saying, "Why call ye me Lord, Lord, and do not the things I say." And our good Father looked very stern and disappointed as though he would have to use the wrath of man to help finish his purposes on earth.

Now, dear brothers and sisters, what shall we do? Oh! let us throw off the devil's livery such as dressing in costly apparel, and everything that hinders our coming up higher, and learn that it is more blessed to give than to receive. Now, we can make to ourselves friends with means and money by giving to Christ, his cause and little ones, etc., etc. In his favor is life, and at his right hand are pleasures forevermore. Zion must be redeemed, the school of the prophets built, the revelations of heaven come through it, the house of God fixed as a city on a hill that cannot be hid, the pillar and ground of truth. God is feeling after us, then let us fully consecrate our all to the will and service of the Master.

Come along, my dear, noble ENSIGN, it would take eternity to tell the good you are doing; cheer up, you have the greatest future before you of any preacher I know. You started right with foot on all quarrelling, etc., etc. Go on, and bring us the mandates of heaven, then we can all speak the same thing and be filled with the light of revelation. Truly, 'tis a glorious thing to be in the light and have fellowship one with another, and truly our fellowship is with the Father and with the Son, cemented together with charity that never fails to make pure in heart. We have only to give ourselves up and be like clay in the hands of the potter, then he will fix us up all right by and by.

THE Autobiography of Elder Joseph Luff, of the apostle's quorum, is a book full of interest from beginning to end. Bro. Luff is so widely and so favorably known in and out of the church in his years of service in gospel work, that the mere mention of a work of this kind being offered should create a desire to possess it. Two fine sermons are included in its pages and the price is so reasonable that every Saint's home should have this book in their library. It's a splendid thing for the Sunday School library also. 75 cents cloth, postage prepaid.

ZION'S ENSIGN.

THE TWO COVENANTS.

ELDER I. M. SMITH.

(CONCLUDED.)

It is sometimes assumed that the decalogue is God's "moral law," and that it was never abolished; that it was only that part of the law which some are pleased to style "the ceremonial law" that was taken "out of the way." But this is an assumption for which there is no warrant in God's word. Search the Bible, from the first chapter of Exodus to the last chapter of Revelation, and you will find that neither God nor any of the prophets or apostles ever refer to the ten commandments as the "moral law;" neither do they ever refer to the remainder of the law as "the ceremonial law." No such distinction is made anywhere in God's word; and no inspired writer has ever intimated that any such distinction ever would be made. But Jesus taught:

"For verily I say unto you, Till heaven and earth pass, one jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law, till all be fulfilled."—Matt. 5: 18.

Nothing, not even the offerings and sacrifices, were to be taken from the law till all of it should be fulfilled. It was all to go together. The Savior said:

"Whoever therefore shall break one of these least commandments, and shall teach men so, he shall be called the least in the kingdom of heaven: but whosoever shall do and teach them, the same shall be called great in the kingdom of heaven."—Matt. 5: 19.

And, when he had healed the leper, he told him:

"Go thy way, shew thyself to the priest, and offer for thy cleansing those things which Moses commanded, for a testimony unto them."—Mark 1: 44.

Matthew records it: "And offer the gift that Moses commanded, for a testimony unto them."—Matt. 8: 4.

(For information on the gifts to be offered for cleansing leprosy, read Lev. 14: 1-32.)

The Savior also taught, both his disciples and the multitude:

"The scribes and the Pharisees sit in Moses' seat: All therefore whatsoever they bid you observe, that observe and do."—Matt. 23: 2, 3.

Paul taught, many years later: "Put them in mind to be subject to principalities and powers, and to obey magistrates."—Tit. 3: 1.

Peter said:

"Submit yourselves to every ordinance of man for the Lord's sake: whether it be to the king, as supreme; Or unto governors, as unto them that are sent of him for the punishment of evil doers, and for the praise of them that do well."—1 Pet. 2: 13, 14.

"Render therefore unto Caesar the things which are Caesar's; and unto God the things that are God's."—Matt. 22: 21.

To obey magistrates, keep the laws of the land, was taught by the Savior and his apostles: so far, at least, as the saints could obey the laws of the land without breaking the law of Christ. But this was to be done "for the Lord's sake," Peter says; while Paul says, "and this I do for the gospel's sake:" that is, became as a Jew, to the Jews, and as a Roman to the Romans, etc., etc.

And this principle of obedience to magistrates, obedience to the laws of the land, must not be overlooked, nor ignored, in the investigation of this subject. It enables us to understand how Paul could conscientiously conform to the Jewish law of circumcision and, at the same time, teach that "circumcision is nothing, and uncircumcision is nothing;" and how he could conform to the Jewish laws of purification and, at the same time, teach that the law had been abolished. He obeyed magistrates, the laws of the country where he was, "for the gospel's sake."

And, so far as "the law of the Lord" from Mount Sinai is concerned, it will not help you to keep one part of it—the ten commandments, for instance—unless you keep it all:

"For whosoever shall keep the whole law, and yet offend in one point, he is guilty of all."—Jas. 2: 10.

"For as many as are of the works of the law are under the curse: for it is written, Cursed is every one that continueth not in all things which are written in the book of the law to do them."—Gal. 3: 10.

Is the law in force now? If so, then every jot and every tittle must be obeyed, even the "least of these commandments." If one fails to continue in "all things which are written in the book of the law to do them," even if he fails "in one point," he is cursed and is guilty of all. But the law was not in force when James and Paul made the above statements: it had been "abolished." Hence, when they taught, "beware of idols," "steal no more," "lie not one to another," "honour thy father and thy mother," etc., etc., they taught it not as the law, but as the gospel. When Paul kept the Jewish laws of purification, or circumcised Timotheus, it was not because he felt that he must "keep the law," it was "for the gospel's sake," "because of the Jews that were in those quarters," and, "that I might gain the Jews." He obeyed the laws of his country as a loyal citizen.

But our Savior honored and respected that part of the law which is called, by some, "the ceremonial law" as much as he did the ten commandments. Among the last things he did before he was betrayed, was to observe the Passover.

"Then came the day of unleavened bread, when the passover must be killed. And he sent Peter and John, saying, Go and prepare us the passover, that we may eat. And he said unto them, With desire I have desired to eat this passover with you before I suffer."—Luke 22: 7, 8, 15.

The Savior did not come to destroy any part of the law. He said:

"Think not that I am come to destroy the law, or the prophets: I am not come to destroy, but to fulfill." (Matt. 5: 17). And then follows the statement that none of the law shall pass "till all be fulfilled."

But we are met here with this: "Fulfill does not mean to abolish, nor to disannul." And we are referred to the words of the Savior, "For thus it becometh us to fulfill all righteousness."—Matt. 3: 15. But this is simply a play upon words. "Fulfill" may or may not mean to disannul, it depends upon the sense in which it is used. Adam said that man should leave father and mother and "cleave" unto his wife; (Gen. 2: 24); while Zechariah said that the mount of Olives should "cleave" in the midst, and half of it go north and the other half south (Zech. 14: 4); but it would not be sensible to contend that "cleave" means to unite or join together, in the latter text, simply because it means that in the former. Just so with "fulfill:" sometimes it means to disannul, while at other times it may mean simply to obey. A man steals a horse, and is sentenced to serve five years in the states prison; he goes and serves his time out faithfully, fulfilling all the requirements of that sentence; now that sentence is fulfilled. It is also disannulled, and is no longer binding on that man—never was binding on any one else. That sentence now becomes a dead letter. It may remain on the records, but it is absolutely dead. Just so with "the law:" it was "added because of transgressions," just as the sentence was passed upon the man for breaking the law of his country; it was added for a definite time, "till the seed should come to whom the promise was made," just as the man was sentenced to prison for a definite time, five years; our Savior, "the seed to whom the promise was made," came and fulfilled the law, by obeying all its requirements, just as the man fulfilled his sentence, by obeying all its requirements; and now, when Christ had fulfilled the law and "took it out of the way," disannulling it, Israel was "delivered from the law," that wherein they were held "being dead," just as the man, after serving his time out, was delivered from the power of that five years' sentence, it now "being dead"—disannulled.

The prison laws governing this man during his term of five years may have been good, wholesome prison laws, good for lawbreakers; but who would be so unreasonable as to try to make those laws binding upon all the citizens of our free republic? Would you? If not, then how about the law? It was added, because of transgressions, till the seed should come to whom the promise was made."—Gal. 3: 19.

But we know that the law is good, if a man use it lawfully; knowing this, that the law is not made for a righteous man, but for the lawless and disobedient, for the ungodly and for sinners, for murderers of fathers and murderers of mothers, for man-slayers."—1 Tim. 1: 8-9.

Yes, the law is good for that class of people for whom it was made. But is a law that was made for the lawless, for the ungodly, and for murderers, a good law for men and women who have been made "free from the law of sin and death?" The law was given to Israel after they had rejected the gospel: "added because of transgressions;" it was given for a definite time: "till the seed should come," which is Christ; it was made for a certain class of people, for the lawless, the ungodly, and for all criminals; and now to take this law, after the seed has come "to whom the promise was made," and try to bind it upon the church of Christ is as unreasonable as trying to make the prison laws of some state's prison, binding upon all the free citizens of that state. The law is good if a man use it lawfully. But it must be used as a schoolmaster; it must be used for the lawless and for criminals, and it must be used within the time for which it was given, "till the seed should come to whom the promise was made." To use it for any other purpose or for any other time, only that for which it was given, would be to use it unlawfully.

"THE LAW," "THE LAW OF MOSES," "THE LAW OF THE LORD," "THE LAW OF GOD."

To assume that the law means the ten commandments and the ten commandments only, in one text, and then to assume that the law, in another text, means everything else in the law except the ten commandments is, to say the least, drawing largely upon the imagination, and is an assumption that cannot be sustained by the Bible. It is on a par with the assumption that "the law of the Lord," or "the law of God," means the ten commandments, and that the law of Moses means everything in the law except the ten commandments. Those expressions—the law, the law of Moses, the law of the Lord, and the law of God—are used interchangeably by the inspired writers all through the Bible; and there is not one text where those writers refer to the ten commandments as "God's moral law," or where they refer to the law of Moses as the "ceremonial law." I know that some writers and speakers use the terms, "God's moral law," and "the ceremonial law," as flippantly as though the Bible was full of such expressions; and they are always prepared to tell just when the moral law is meant, and just when the ceremonial law was in the mind of the inspired writer. But all this nice distinction is made by uninspired men who have a hobby to ride. The men who wrote the Bible, men of God who "spoke as they were moved by the Holy Ghost," made no such distinctions, as you will see by a careful examination of the following texts—all italics being mine.

"THE LAW OF THE LORD."
"He appointed also the king's portion of his substance for the burnt offerings, to wit, for the morning and evening burnt offerings, and the burnt offerings for the sabbaths, and for the new moons, and for the set feasts, as it is written in the law of the Lord."—2 Chron. 31: 3.

"Blow up the trumpet in the new moon, in the time appointed, on our solemn feast day. For this was a statute for Israel, and a law of the God of Jacob."—Pa. 81: 3, 4.

According to these texts, the burnt offerings for the morning and evening, for the sabbaths, for the new moons, and for the set feasts are all a part of the "law of the Lord;" while to blow up the trumpet in the new moon, and on our solemn feast day, is a "law of the God of Jacob."

"And when the days of her purification according to the law of Moses were accomplished, they brought him to Jerusalem, to present him to the Lord."—Luke 2: 22.

"(As it is written in the law of the Lord, Every male that openeth the womb shall be called holy unto the Lord.)" (v. 23). Where is this written? "In the law of the Lord."

"And to offer a sacrifice according to that which is said in the law of the Lord, A pair of turtle doves, or two young pigeons."—v. 24.

"And he [Simeon] came by the Spirit into the temple: and when the parents brought in the child Jesus, to do for him after the custom of the law."—v. 27.

Here the same writer, in the same chapter, and speaking of the same thing, refers to the Mosaic law as "the law of Moses," "the law of the Lord," and "the law."

"God's law" given by Moses.

"They clave to their brethren, their nobles, and entered into a curse, and into an oath, to walk in God's law, which was given by Moses the servant of God, and to observe and do all the commandments of the Lord our Lord, and his judgments and his statutes."—Neh. 10: 29.

God's law as given by Moses, included the commandments of the Lord, and also his judgments and his statutes. Please notice that the judgments and statutes are as much the Lord's as are the commandments. They all belong to God's law.

"The law of Moses" given by the Lord.

"This Ezra went up from Babylon; and he was a ready scribe in the law of Moses, which the Lord God of Israel had given."—Ezra 7: 6.

Nehemiah says: "God's law, which was given by Moses." Ezra says: "The law of Moses, which the Lord God of Israel had given."

Of the book which Hilkiah, the priest, found in the temple, in the days of Josiah, king of Judah, we read:

"And when they brought out the money that was brought in to the house of the Lord, Hilkiah the priest found a book of the law of the Lord given by Moses. And Hilkiah answered and said to Shaphan the scribe, I have found the book of the law in the house of the Lord. And it came to pass, when the king had heard the words of the law, that he rent his clothes."—2 Chron. 34: 14, 15, 19.

"And he read in their ears all the words of the book of the covenant which was found in the house of the Lord."—v. 30. (See 2 Kings 23: 2).

"And the king stood in his place, and made a covenant before the Lord, to walk after the Lord, and to keep his commandments, and his testimonies, and his statutes, with all his heart, and with all his soul, and to perform the words of the covenant which are written in this book."—2 Chron. 34: 31. (See also 2 Kings 23: 3).

"His commandments, and his testimonies, and his statutes," are all in this covenant in the book of the covenant. (See also Ex. 24: 3-8).

"And they removed the burnt offering, that they might give according to the divisions of the families of the people, to offer unto the Lord, as it is written in the book of Moses."—2 Chron. 35: 12.

"Now the rest of the acts of Josiah, and his goodness, according to that which was written in the law of the Lord."—v. 26.

This book is called "a book of the law of the Lord," "the book of the law," "the words of the law," "the book of the covenant," "this covenant," "the book of Moses," and "the law of the Lord."

And Nehemiah speaks of this book as follows:

"And all the people gathered themselves together as one man into the street that was before the water gate; and they spake unto Ezra the scribe to bring the book of the law of Moses, which the Lord had commanded to Israel."—Neh. 8: 1.

"And Ezra the priest brought the law before the congregation both of men and women." (v. 2). "And the ears of all the people were attentive unto the book of the law."—v. 3.

"So they read in the book in the law of God distinctly, and gave the sense, and caused them [the people] to understand the reading."—v. 8.

"And they found written in the law which the Lord had commanded by Moses, that the children of Israel should dwell in booths in the feast of the seventh month."—v. 14.

"Also day by day, from the first day unto the last day, he read in the book of the law of God." (v. 18). "And they stood up in their place, and read in the book of the law of the Lord their God one fourth part of the day."—Neh. 9: 3.

"God's law, which was given by Moses the servant of God." Neh. 10: 29.

It is again, "the book of the law of Moses," "the law," "the book of the law," "the book of the law of God," "the book of the law of the Lord their God," and "God's law." And keeping in mind that God's law was given by Moses, I ask you to read this:

"For the law was given by Moses, but grace and truth came by Jesus Christ."—John 1: 17.

And this law that was given by Moses is the law that says,

"Thou shalt not kill," for the Savior says:

"Did not Moses give you the law, and yet none of you keepeth the law? Why go ye about to kill me?" (John 7: 19). To kill, then, would be the breaking of the "law" which was given by Moses."

But here is a text that seems, at first sight, to discriminate between what the Lord says and what Moses says: "Only if they will observe to do according to all that I have commanded them, and according to all the law that my servant Moses commanded them."—2 Kings 21: 8.

Should it be claimed from the above that what God commanded them is the ten commandments, and what Moses commanded them is the statutes and judgments; then we ask, how about this text?

"Remember ye the law of Moses my servant, which I commanded unto him in Horeb for all Israel, with the statutes and judgments."—Mal. 4: 4.

This makes the law of Moses separate and distinct from the "statutes and judgments;" hence it makes the law of Moses to mean the ten commandments. Should it be argued that this text is corrected by the translators of the Revised Version, and is made to read "even statutes and judgments," instead of "with the statutes and judgments," my reply is: The other text is corrected by the same translators, in another place, 2 Chronicles, and is there made to read:

"So that they will take heed to do all that I have commanded them, according to the whole law and the statutes and the ordinances by the hand of Moses."—2 Chron. 33: 8.

This is the same text found in 2 Kings 21: 8, and it represents, correctly too, that the Lord commanded "all the law and the statutes and the ordinances by the hand of Moses." And to this agrees the following:

"And it [the law] was ordained by angels in the hand of a mediator."—Gal. 3: 19.

And this: "I stood between the Lord and you at that time; to shew you the word of the Lord."—Deut. 5: 5.

And this: "And I will give thee tables of stone, and a law, and commandments which I have written; that thou mayest teach them."—Ex. 24: 12.

The people were permitted to see the lightnings and the smoke, and to hear the thunders and the sound of the trumpet, and to hear the Lord speaking with Moses when he declared the ten commandments; but the Lord spake with Moses (Ex. 19: 9), and Moses had to stand between the Lord and the people to shew them the word of the Lord (Deut. 5: 5), and to teach them that which was engraven on the tables of stone (Ex. 24: 12); hence it is called the law of Moses, or the words of Moses, because it came to Israel through him—was given by Moses. Look, for example, at these two texts:

"For God commanded, saying, Honour thy father and mother."—Matt. 15: 4.

"For Moses said, Honour thy father and thy mother."—Mark 7: 10.

Matthew says that God commanded this, while Mark says that Moses said it. Which is right? Both are right: God gave it to Moses and Moses taught it to Israel.

"And I will give thee tables of stone, and a law, and commandments which I have written; that thou mayest teach them." (Ex. 24: 12). And the Lord then gave him the ten commandments. And you will please note that the Lord says, "I will give thee a law and commandments." Are the commandments something different from the law? If not, then why should "according to all that I have commanded them, and according to all the law that my servant Moses commanded them" be considered as two laws? Why should "all that I have commanded them" be considered as a different law from "all the law that my servant Moses commanded them"? It is quite common for Bible writers to connect two clauses or sentences meaning the same thing, by the conjunction "and."

"Now therefore, if ye will obey my voice indeed, and keep my covenant."—Ex. 19: 5.

"Keep my covenant" is the same as "obey my voice;" but they are connected by "and" just as the text in 2 Kings 21: 8. God gave this law to Israel and it consisted of his commandments, his judgments and his statutes—one law. "What God hath joined together" man will hardly be able to separate.

NOT UNDER THE LAW.

"Tell me, ye that desire to be under the law, do ye not hear the law?"—Gal. 4: 21.

"For sin shall not have dominion over you: for ye are not under the law, but under grace. What then? shall we sin, because we are not under the law, but under grace? God forbid."—Rom. 6: 14, 15.

"But before faith came, we were kept under the law, shut up unto the faith which should afterwards be revealed. Wherefore the law was our schoolmaster to bring us unto Christ, that we might be justified by faith. But after that faith is come, we are no longer under a schoolmaster."—Gal. 3: 23-25.

This "desire to be under the law" made much trouble in the church in Paul's day, and he here teaches that God's people had been "kept under the law" as their schoolmaster till Christ came; but after Christ came and established the faith they were "delivered from the law" and were "no longer under a schoolmaster."

And in the next chapter the apostle illustrates what he here teaches, as follows:

"Now I say, That the heir as long as he is a child, differeth nothing from a servant, though he be lord of all; but is under tutors and governors until the time appointed of the father. Even so we, when we were children, were in bondage under the elements of the world; but when the fulness of the time was come, God sent forth his Son, made of a woman, made under the law, to redeem them that were under the law, that we might receive the adoption of sons. And because ye are sons, God hath sent forth the Spirit of his Son into your hearts, crying, Abba, Father."—Gal. 4: 1-6.

"But if ye be led of the Spirit, ye are not under the law."—Gal. 5: 18.

How long is the child kept "under tutors and governors?" Paul says, "Until the time appointed of the father." Just so with God's people; they were kept under the law until the fulness of the time was come, and then God sent forth his Son to redeem them that were under the law, that they might receive the adoption of sons. And "because ye are sons," the apostle says, "God hath sent forth the Spirit of his Son into your hearts;" and then, "But if ye be led of the Spirit, ye are not under the law." And elsewhere he says:

"For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God."—Rom. 8: 14.

The sons of God are those who are led by his Spirit; those who are led of his Spirit are not under the law; hence the sons of God are "not under the law." "For Christ is the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth."—Rom. 10: 4.

"Christ is the end of the law" because it was given as "our schoolmaster" to bring us unto Christ. But when Christ came he abolished the "schoolmaster" and "took it out of the way." And with this agrees the following:

"Wherefore then serveth the law? It was added because of transgressions, till the seed should come to whom the promise was made."—Gal. 3: 19.

"And to thy seed, which is Christ."—v. 16. Christ is the seed to whom the promise was made, and the law was added because of transgressions till he came. But he came to redeem them that were under the law, delivered them from the law; and now that they are led of the Spirit, they are no longer under the law.

But, says one, I am not under the law. I obey the law and live above it. The law is still binding and in force, and is for us and for all people; but I am led of the Spirit and am not under the law because I obey it. But listen to Paul:

"Now we know that what things soever the law saith, it saith to them who are under the law."—Rom. 3: 19.

What does the law say? It says, "Thou shalt have no other gods before me." But to whom does it say that? "To them that are under the law."

The law says, "Remember the Sabbath day, to keep it holy;" but it does not say that to you unless you are under the law.

The law says, "Thou shalt not kill." But does it say that to you? Not unless you are under the law; for "what things soever the law saith, it saith to them who are under the law."

The law does not say to you, "Honour thy father and thy mother," but it said that to Israel.

The law does not say to me, "Thou shalt not steal," but said so to Israel.

The law does not say anything to you or to me. No, for Paul says:

"We are delivered from the law, that being dead wherein we were held," and we serve God now according to the "new and living way which he hath consecrated for us, through the veil, that is to say, his flesh." And this new and living way—the gospel—says, and says to you and me too, "lie not," "steal no more," "beware of covetousness," "honor thy father and thy mother," "keep yourselves from idols," etc., etc.

We are not at liberty to lie and steal and murder and worship idols, simply because the law has been abolished, or because we are not under the law, for all those things are forbidden in the gospel; and we have already learned that the law cannot disannul the gospel covenant that was given to Abraham four hundred and thirty years before the law. "Thou shalt not kill," "thou shalt not steal," and many other similar commands were not repeated when the law was "abolished" and "took out of the way" and then re enacted by the Savior; they were a part of the gospel before the law was given and they remained in the gospel after the law was abolished. It was "the law" as a code, as a system of laws, that was abolished. And it was abolished in its entirety, the whole thing from beginning to finish. But when that code or system of laws was abolished, "the ministration of righteousness" remaineth; and the disannulling of the law as a code does not disannul the gospel, nor any part of it—nothing that belongs to the gospel.

AN ILLUSTRATION.

As an illustration of how the law as a code could be disannulled and become dead, while much that was in the law is still in force as a part of the gospel, let us take the original "Articles of Confederation" between the states and the "Constitution of the United States."

During the war for independence the colonies or states united under a code or system of laws known as the "Articles of Confederation" for their common protection and welfare. "But experience at length seemed to show that, how wisely soever it may have been framed for a time of war, it was not adequate to all the needs of the country in a time of peace;" and when the Constitutional convention met in May, 1787, to revise the Articles of Confederation, "the defects of the old system were such that it was finally determined by the majority to form a new system"—the Constitution.

Those Articles of Confederation, among other things taught, First, That this was to be a "perpetual union." See preamble.

Second, Each state was to recognize the public acts of every other state. See Art. 4.

Third, No state, without the consent of Congress, was allowed to: (1) Enter into any alliance or treaty with any other power. (2) Keep vessels of war in time of peace. (3) Engage in war. (4) Nor grant commissions or letters of marque and reprisal to vessels of war. See Art. 6.

Fourth, Congress, alone, had the right to: (1) Grant letters of marque and reprisal. (2) Regulate the alloy and value of coin. (3) Establish and regulate post-offices. (4) Build and equip a navy. (5) And regulate the land and naval forces. See Art. 9.

Those Articles of Confederation served their time and purpose, and upon the adoption of the Constitution were disannulled and abolished, and the states were no longer under them. But, instead of the "perpetual union" being dissolved when the Articles of Confederation became dead, the Constitution, the new covenant between the states, provides for a "more perfect union." See preamble. Each state now must recognize the public acts of other states just as much as when they were under the Articles of Confederation: not because the articles say so, but because the Constitution says so. See Art. 4, Sec. 1. A state now, is just as much prohibited from making treaties, keeping vessels of war, engaging in war, granting commissions to vessels of war, etc., etc., as it was while under the original articles of confederation; not because these things are forbidden in the articles, but because the constitution, the living law, forbids them. See Art. 1, Sec. 2:10.

No man would be silly enough to contend that any state had the right to engage in war, make treaties, etc., etc., as soon as the articles of confederation were taken out of the way; and yet some men will tell you that, if the ten commandments are abolished, a man now is at liberty to steal, lie, and do anything else forbidden in the decalogue. It hardly seems possible that any man should be so blinded, for the gospel, the new covenant—the one established when the first was taken "out of the way"—positively forbids stealing, lying, murder, etc., etc., just as strongly as the law forbade them; and we have learned that the law could not disannul this gospel covenant, but that it "remaineth," when that which was written and engraven in stones was done away. No man who believes the gospel of Christ, the New Testament, to be now in force and binding on man, can believe that a man has a right to steal, lie, and worship idols, simply because the first covenant, including the ten commandments, has been disannulled and taken out of the way.

We stand related to the gospel now, as the states stand related to the Constitution; and we stand related to the law now, as the states stand related to the Articles of Confederation: what the Constitution says the states must obey, regardless of whether it was in the Articles of Confederation or not; and what the gospel says we should obey, regardless of whether it was in the law or not: what the Articles of Confederation say is not binding on the states now, unless it is also taught in the Constitution; and what the law says is not binding on us now, unless it is also taught in the new covenant, the gospel.

The Articles of Confederation say that the delegates to Congress shall be "annually appointed," but the Constitution says every two years, for the representatives, and every six years for the Senators. By which are the states now governed?

The Articles of Confederation say that each state shall maintain its own delegates, but the Constitution says that the members of Congress are to be paid out of the United States treasury. Which is the law now? Who would think of saying that all the members of Congress must be elected annually by the people of the different states, as under the Articles of Confederation?

The law says, "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy;" but the gospel says:

"One man esteemeth one day above another: another esteemeth every day alike. Let every man be fully persuaded in his own mind."—Rom. 14: 5.

The law says, "But the seventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God: in it thou shalt not do any work;" while the gospel says:

"Let no man therefore judge you in meat, or in drink, or in respect of an holyday, or of the new moon, or of the Sabbath days: Which are shadows of things to come; but the body is of Christ."—Col. 2: 16, 17. Which is binding on us now? Which will you accept, the new or the old? Which will you obey, the law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus, or the law that "was added because of transgressions," till Christ come? Will you obey the law that was given to you and to all mankind, the gospel, or will you obey the law that was given to Israel only? Paul says, "If that first covenant had been faultless, then should no place have been sought for a second." But, like the Articles of Confederation, in one respect the law was good for the purpose for which it was given, as "a schoolmaster" for Israel, until the coming of Christ, but it was not adequate as a law of salvation: it could not take away sin, bring perfection, establish righteousness, nor give life. Hence, "for the weakness and unprofitableness thereof," in the above important respects, there was "a disannulling of the commandment going before." "He taketh away the first that he may establish the second"—as the Articles of Confederation were taken away that the Constitution might be established.

An Incident.

The words which we quote below will give our friends some idea of the attitude of the priests in South America toward the introduction and circulation of the Bible among the people there. The incident that called forth this expression occurred in one of the interior towns which the writer entered in company with two others who were distributing Bibles. When it became known what our object and business was, the people were ordered, under penalty of excommunication, not to buy a Bible, while an effort was made to gather all the Bibles distributed in the adjacent territory, and the parish priest sent the following note to our landlord:

June —, 18—. Mr. _____ City.

Esteemed Sir:—It causes me deep pain, but duty impels me to intimate to you, that you being a Roman and Apostolic Catholic, it is not lawful for you in any respect to give hospitality to heretics, without making yourself liable to a terrible censure Reserved to the Roman Pontiff. It is true that ignorance respecting the law, and at the same time of the individuals that you at present have in your house were or not such heretics, would have excused you from having incurred the said censure; but now that by the present, your priest advises you of it, you would be inexcusable, if by your consent they continue to lodge without taking serious measures to make them disoccupy. Our interests as Catholics before any other interest.

Your affect. servant and friend, Rev. _____

The above is a translation from the Spanish, and when our landlord stated the case and showed us the letter, we of course made preparations to leave his place at once, and secured a room in an old house that was partly in ruins, where we swung our hammock and stayed some days. Strange to say our landlord's wife was very much opposed to our being put out. As a rule the women are much more loyal to the commands of the priest than are the men.—Rev. R. W. Crichton, in The Venezuela Notes, Toledo, Ohio, for March, 1900.

A Victory for Laymen.

Chicago, May 3.—By a unanimous vote the delegates to the Methodist General Conference decided to give equal lay representation in all Methodist conferences. The announcement of the vote was greeted with cheers, as it was a victory which had been fought for 100 years. A fight was expected over the matter, but it did not materialize.

The matter was introduced by the Rev. J. M. Buckley, of the Central New York conference. He asked for a vote on equal lay representation in all Methodist conferences, annual and general. The proposition was read and the unanimous approval followed. The book of discipline in reference to representation was changed to read thus:

"The lay delegates shall consist of one layman for each annual conference, except such conferences as have more than one ministerial delegate, which conference shall be entitled to as many lay delegates as ministerial delegates.

"The General Conference shall not allow of more than one ministerial representative for every fourteen members of an annual conference; nor of a less number than one for every forty-five; nor of more lay delegates from any annual conference than there are ministerial delegates from such annual conference; provided that no conference shall be denied the privilege of one ministerial and one lay delegate."

A determined effort will be made to raise the ban on dancing, card playing and theater going, and arguments advanced for the consecration of bishops of limited jurisdiction, the dropping of the time limit on pastorates, and the referring of the election of conference editors, secretaries and book agents to the committees governing the different societies. It is also expected that some steps may be taken looking to the reuniting of the South branch of the church with the main body. There will be a general morning session of the entire conference every day except Sundays.—The Kansas City Star, May 4th.

Passing of the Shakers.

The Shaker sect is rapidly passing out of existence. According to recent returns the Shakers, who in 1870 had eighteen communities, with about nine thousand members, have now shrunk to about one thousand souls in all. The only means of keeping up the numbers of the Shaker communities is in accessions from the outside world, the rule of celibacy being their distinctive law. Their life of isolation and monotony appeals to few persons, nor is the idea of working merely to throw one's earnings into a general fund very much more attractive. The consequence is that the Shakers, whose community life was founded as far back as 1758, have witnessed the summit of their prosperity and are in almost the last stages of their decline. But for the commercial value of their community properties, it is said, they would have already dispersed.—The Baltimore News.

Baby Sinners on Judgment Day.

The talk about the revision of the Westminster Confession has brought to light a poem written by a clergyman who was settled in Malden, Massachusetts, from 1656 to 1705. It was a description of the great and last judgment, and the poet thus represented the Lord replying to the cry for mercy from babies that had not lived a day:

You sinners are, and such a share as sinners may expect
Such you shall have; for I do save none but my own elect.
Yet to compare your sin with theirs who lived a longer time,
I do confess yours is much less, though every sin's a crime.
A crime it is, therefore, in bliss you may not hope to dwell,
But unto you I shall allow the easiest room in hell.
—The Kansas City Journal, May 14.

LONG articles appear in religious journals to prove that there is no real decline in the churches. Yet the net increase in membership of the Presbyterian church has fallen from 40,908 in 1894, to 8,030 in 1899; of Congregational churches from 19,018 to 2,370, while the net gain of the Methodist Episcopal church in 1895 of 76,000, is changed to a net loss of 3,700 last year. Reports from nearly all denominations show a steady falling off in growth for the past ten years. It is by facing, not ignoring, the facts that the conditions will be changed for the better.—The (Boston) Congregationalist (Presbyterian), Feb. 22.

DROPSY TREATED FREE.

83.75 WORTH OF NEW TREATMENT WILL BE SENT FREE TO ANY OF OUR READERS BY THE FOLLOWING KNOWN CHICAGO SCIENTIST, DR. FRANKLIN MILLS, M. D., LL. B.

Dropsy is a terrible disease in its last stage. At first no disease is apparently more harmless, a little puffing of the eyelids or face, or a slight swelling of the feet, ankles, or abdomen. Yet no death is more fearful. The unfortunate patient slowly drowns in the water of his own blood. Dr. Mills' specialty is diseases of the heart, liver, kidneys, nerves and the bowels. He has cured many cases of dropsy. To introduce this new treatment he will give away $10,000 worth. Hundreds of testimonials of the most remarkable cures will be sent on request. One gentleman was cured after having been given up by the Grand Rapids physicians; a lady after six able Chicago Scientists had pronounced her case hopeless.

Mr. H. A. Groce, of 404 Mountain St., Elgin, Ill., aged 72, was thought to be incurable from dropsy, which reached to his lungs and caused smothering spells, coughs, shortness of breath. He reports: "Dropsy life gone; better every way." Mr. James Pinkerton, editor of the Russaville Sun, Ind., writes: "Mrs. P. was given up by three physician. She owes her life to Dr. Mills' skill. She now performs her household duties at 65 years of age." Alex. Ethier, Calumet, Mich., states: "I suffered seriously for years from dropsy, rheumatism and heart disease. After taking Personal Treatment I gained 60 pounds and now always feel well." Mrs. M. B. Moreland, "Dodge," Columbus Co., Ohio, says: "Dr. Mills cured my life by curing me of that awful disease, dropsy and heart trouble. I suffered terribly." Miss Sophia Snowberg of No. 282 21st Ave., Minneapolis, testifies that "Three days after commencing the treatment for dropsy it was nearly all gone, after two allopathic and two homeopathic physicians had failed." Mr. A. P. Colburn of Blessing, Iowa: "Dr. Mills' Treatment has performed a miracle for Mrs. C. after her leg burst from dropsy." Dr. Mills' treatment is much superior to any other known to obtain the best result it is prepared for each patient. Every afflicted person should send for this marvelous Treatment. $3.75 worth sent free upon request. Address DR. MILLS, No. 201-209 State St., Chicago. Please mention this paper.

EXPERTS of acknowledged reputation have been engaged by the University of California to make explorations and excavations in parts of the world which are rich with relics of ancient learning. The entire expenses will be borne by Mrs. Phoebe A. Hearst. The material collected by the archaeologists will be placed in the archaeological museum which will be established at Berkeley. Dr. George A. Rosiner will have charge of the explorations in Egypt. Dr. Uhle will pursue investigations in South America, Yucatan, California and New Mexico. New Mexico will be searched for specimens by Dr. Philip Mills Jones. Dr. Alfred Emmerson, recently professor in the School of Archaeology at Athens, will work in Greece and Etruria.—Scientific American, May 12.

The Old Men and Women do Bless Him.

Thousands of people come or send every year to Dr. Bye for his Balmly Oil to cure them of cancer and other malignant diseases. Out of this number a great many very old people, whose ages range from seventy to one hundred years, on account of distance and infirmities of age, send for the home treatment. A free book is sent, telling what they say of the treatment. Address Dr. Bye, Drawer N, Kansas City, Mo. (If not satisfied, cut this out and send to some suffering one).

THERE is nothing like poverty to give one a practical knowledge of the scarcity of the milk of human kindness.—Ex.

The Dominion of Canada.

To the Ministry and Saints of the Above Mission, Greeting:—Having been appointed in charge of this mission for another year, I address you with pleasure. When I think of the years of association we have had together, years fraught with toll and sacrifice, sunshine and gloom, suspense and tranquility, my soul doth bless the Lord that I am permitted to return to you.

Never in all the past were prospects so bright for the advancement of our work in this Dominion as now, and I trust that we all will feel that we are called of God to perform our part promptly and well.

During part of the past year we were successful in obtaining the labor of four extra missionaries. By pressing the requirements of this large mission upon the general church authorities, we have secured the permanent appointment of those four, and two others. Now these six General Conference appointees are all good men, and while we are all, doubtless, glad to know that we have six new missionaries, I trust we will all remember our duty to those missionaries and their families, now lonely, at home, and give tangible evidence of our love for God, the work, the missionary, and the lonely ones at home, by paying our tithing, and by a life of prayer and good works, so that in all parts of this large mission the cause of Zion may advance.

To the Saints in British Columbia, I would say: We deem it wise to request Elder Daniel MacGregor to remain in charge of the work there; report your needs to him, and he will report to me. D. V., I fully expect to visit you in October.

Let the Saints in Manitoba be patient, your several petitions have been heard, and after June conference we hope to arrange to send an elder to labor there if finances permit. Will Manitoba Saints send me their addresses and oblige?

That the many parts of this Dominion, which have not heard the beautiful gospel, may soon hear and obey, I trust the local staff in each branch will live in harmony with the law, so that wisdom, love, diligence and tranquility will reign in your respective branches. Should this blessed condition obtain, it will unshackle the hands of the missionary force, so they can give much more time to the new and untried fields.

As I have requested all the missionaries to meet me at the St. Thomas conference, June 16, 17, I will not, at this time, make any appointments; let them remain in their present field till time for conference when they will receive further instructions as to future labor.

Will each missionary observe the law fully this year; you are requested to report to me on the first days of July, October, January and March, giving all the items of labor performed: (1) services attended; (2) times preached; (3) times assisted; (4) other services held; (5) baptisms; (6) confirmations; (7) assisted in confirming; (8) total ordinations and to what office; (9) organizations effected; (10) marriages; (11) children blessed; (12) administrations to sick; (13) new openings. Before entering into debate please confer with me.

I have heard remarks and read statements in the Herald that have caused many to think that our late General Conference had much to discourage and weaken in it. Permit me to say, I attended every business meeting of the conference, and of the apostolic quorum, and as many prayer, preaching and Sunday School meetings as my official duties would permit me to attend. In the fear of the Master I say, Never in all the past conferences have I seen so much to encourage, build up and strengthen as I saw, felt and realized in the conference just closed. "Is true, evil was condemned, firmer and more improved business methods were suggested, strong, good, honest men gave expression to views regarding methods which they thought might be adopted for the triumphant, rapid march of Zion's cause. These methods were not matured and the wisdom of adopting them was honestly questioned by some, while others, "true as steel," thought these methods were the one thing needful. This evinced a splendid evidence of moral worth, independence and individuality, and forever crushed the cruel suspicion "that the church is controlled by a designing few." To me all this is hopeful and encouraging; the prophet never gave better evidence of being God's appointed leader to the church; the Patriarch never enjoyed more of the spirit of his high and holy calling. The presiding bishop, in his report to the apostolic quorum, said in substance "the financial arm of the church was never so strong as at present, you may, without fear, send to the mission field every man whom you know God has called to the work. As a result we have, from this late conference sent out the largest missionary force ever appointed by the Reorganization.

God favored his church, in that, at this conference there were more high priests, seventies and bishops ordained than in any previous conference of the Reorganization; surely the white rose of hope never blossomed, bloomed nor freighted the air with sweeter aroma of success than now. May "our Father's" sweet peace be on Zion's children, now and ever, is my prayer.

Appointment of Bishop's Agents.

WESTERN MAINE DISTRICT.

The Saints of the Western Maine district of the Reorganized Church will please take notice that owing to the change of the mission of Elder T. C. Kelley from the Eastern to the Southeastern mission he has resigned the position of bishop's agent for the Western district of Maine, and that Bro. S. G. Cunningham of West Surry, Maine, has been duly appointed agent in his stead. We bespeak for Bro. Cunningham the confidence, aid and co-operation of the Saints in the Western Maine district. Let each and all put forth a helping hand and thus give encouragement to the new agent and materially aid in the work of the Master.

For the faithful and timely labor of Bro. T. C. Kelley as agent the past two years, in connection with his duties as an active missionary, the Bishopric extend to him special thanks; and we trust that the Lord will bless the new agent and all the Saints in their efforts to aid the gospel work.

In behalf of the Bishopric,
E. L. KELLEY,
Presiding Bishop.
LAMONI, Iowa, May 26, 1900.

SOUTHERN INDIANA DISTRICT.

To the Saints and Friends in Southern Indiana:—This will give notice of the resignation of Bro. W. C. Marshall, bishop's agent for the Southern Indiana district of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and the appointment of Bro. David Hurlbaugh of Byrneville, Indiana, as agent.

Bro. Marshall resigns the agency so that he can give more time to travel outside of the branches in his field of labor, and heartily with other of the ministry of the district endorses Bro. Hurlbaugh for agent. We take pleasure in making the appointment at the instance of the brethren and trust the Saints will find in Bro. David Hurlbaugh an active and energetic worker in his office. We also trust that no one will be found to criticize the agent for teaching and preaching the law as required in the discharge of the duties of his office. Only criticism if he does not.

We especially thank Bro. W. C. Marshall for his faithful work while agent and trust the Lord may bless him with all Saints in the discharge of his great obligations as a missionary for the Master.

In behalf of the Bishopric,
E. L. KELLEY,
Presiding Bishop.

One Thousand—for Greenland College.

Are you one of this number? And if not, why not?

The proposition that one thousand subscriptions at $25 each be obtained at once so as to clear the college of all indebtedness and place it where it can run without this great disadvantage is now before us. No part of this subscription is to be paid unless the entire number is obtained.

There are now extant in the hands of elders, agents and Saints, 216 subscription lists. We have 260 more lists on hand and would be glad to supply any good brother, sister or friend in any part of the world who would like to make the effort to help the college work. In this way they will also help the church work, and help to aid young men and young women for years to come in gaining proper information and training for the practical duties of life. There is no more worthy object to work for, and none where our work will have a more lasting effect than in this beneficial line. If you only have time to send in your own name, place it on a postal card and send to the undersigned at his address, Lamoni, Iowa.

Remember we have but about sixty days now to finish the lists, the expiration from the time of last General Conference being that the lists could be completed within ninety days. Full list of names together with subscriptions will be published through the Herald and Ensign as soon as the work is completed.

The attention of all Saints and friends of education and the truth is especially called to this proposition, and NOW.

Very truly and respectfully,
E. L. KELLEY, Presiding Bishop,
Lock Box 18, Lamoni, Iowa.

The conference of the Northeastern Illinois district will convene at Mission, Illinois, June 23d, at 10 a. m. It is expected that the new church will be dedicated at this time, and it is hoped to have Bro. Joseph Smith present. Mission is about eight miles from Seneca, on the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific R. R. and about the same distance from Sheridan, on the C. B. & Q. R. R. All persons coming by rail will therefore please notify Bro. Thomas Hougas, St. Venger, Illinois, what road they will come on, what time, day, etc., Do not put off writing Bro. Hougas until the last day, but write him in plenty of time, so that arrangements can be made to meet every one.

ELMER E. JOHNSON, Dist. Sec.

Conference of the London, Ontario, district will meet with the St. Thomas branch June 16th and 17th, instead of 9th and 10th, as per conference resolution. The change of date having been made on account of an expected visit from President Joseph Smith on the 16th. We hope a splendid representation of the district will be present, and an exceptionally good conference enjoyed. Come in time for the Sunday School convention on Friday, 23d p. m. Arrangements will be made with the several railroads of Ontario for reduced rates. Purchase a single fare ticket for St. Thomas, and ask the ticket agent for a delegate's certificate to the L. D. S. conference, and you will get the benefits of the reduced rates on the return trip.

Branch secretaries please make out your reports as soon as possible and send them to Elder R. C. Evans, 474 Adelaide street, London, or send them direct to conference. None should fail to report. Ministerial reports should also be sent.

Convention Notices.

The convention of the Northeastern Illinois district Religion Association will convene at Mission, Illinois, June 22d, at 3:15 p. m. (See conference notice in this issue for directions as to how to reach Mission). The election of officers occurs at this convention, as well as other important business, and it is hoped that all the Religion workers and friends in the district will make an especial effort to be present. Come prepared to take part in the convention, and to help to make it a success.

MAHIE H. CLARK, Dist. Pres.

The London, Ontario, Sunday School convention will meet as per appointment on the day before the district conference at St. Thomas, at 2:30 p. m., Friday, June 15th.

Those who have attended our Sunday School conventions in the past do not need to be told that they are a very important, edifying and enjoyable part of the conference.

Those who come too late for it miss that which cannot be regained in the after sessions of the conference, no matter how good the conference may be. The Sunday School work has come to the front and is supported by every true, intelligent Latter Day Saint, and we feel pleased to know that the church recognizes its value too much to ever let it take a back seat again. We cordially invite the attendance of all at the convention, and pray the Lord will bless you.

Sunday School secretaries make out your reports, and superintendents please write out a brief account of the interest and condition of your schools, and send them to Willie Evans, 474 Adelaide street, London. MAGGIE MACGREGOR, Sec.

ABLE MINISTERS.

Who also hath made us able ministers of the new testament; not of the letter, but of the spirit: for the letter killeth, but the spirit giveth life.—2 Cor. 13: 6.

An able minister is one who is well qualified to dispense the truth, and correctly interpret the teachings of the Word of God. This cannot always be done from the basis of an education or training such as may be acquired at the institutions founded for the purpose of imparting such instruction. In fact, such a course of study too frequently acts as a barrier to a correct understanding of the Scriptures because of a disposition to place an explanation upon them entirely foreign to that which the written word plainly indicates. Such are not reliable as teachers or instructors of those who are seeking to know the way of salvation. The fact that men have, as it seems, always been inclined to place private or personal interpretations upon the Scriptures, moved the apostle to utter a note of warning regarding the matter, and so put every one upon their guard against such unwise and unwarranted assumption; he says:

Knowing this first, that no prophecy of scripture is of any private interpretation. For the prophecy came not in old time by the will of man; but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost.—2 Pet. 1: 20, 21.

The revelations of old were not the products of men; "holy men" were made the medium of communication, but their own wills had nothing whatever to do with that which was revealed; hence, as the poet has sung:

God is his own interpreter,
And he will make it plain.

It is remarkable with what complaisance and assurance some individuals will, without the slightest pretext of authority, assume the role of teacher, and endeavor to make the Scriptures teach that which they do not teach. They will assert certain propositions wholly at variance with what Christ and his ministry taught, and yet seek to make the Scriptures responsible for those propositions, though they expressly declare the very opposite. For instance, it is almost universally claimed by the different religious organizations, that there is now no communication from the heavens as of old. That all men must depend exclusively upon the written word, claiming that it is sufficient, and that it is not necessary for God to speak to the children of men in this enlightened age. But the apostle taught very widely different, in fact, just the opposite to this idea, for he says distinctly, "the letter killeth." The "letter" tells what is required, but conveys no authority to any individual to act in the execution of those requirements; hence, may be a condemning, instead of a commendatory, force. The laws of the United States indicate what is required of foreign born claimants to the rights of citizenship, but it confers no authority upon any one to initiate such claimants into the privileges of a citizen of this country; that authority is conveyed in another way, and derived from another source.

So, Peter says, it is the Spirit that makes alive; that is the medium of all power and authority, and as the Lord has definitely promised that this Holy Spirit should supply his place as the means by which the things of God should be revealed to those who are heirs of salvation, the necessity that he should continue his office work through all generations until Jesus comes again, should be plainly apparent to every reasonable mind. The Savior said of the Spirit:

If ye love me keep my commandments. And I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you forever; even the Spirit of truth; whom the world cannot receive, because it seeth him not, neither knoweth him: but ye know him; for he dwelleth with you, and shall be in you.—John 14: 15-17.

Observe the positive assurance of this promise: "The Father shall give you another Comforter; that he may abide with you forever;" "he dwelleth with you and shall be in you."

Again:

Howbeit when he, the Spirit of truth is come, he will guide you into all truth: for he shall not speak of himself; but whatsoever he shall hear, that shall he speak; and he will show you things to come.—John 16: 13.

These are the instructions of the Lord Jesus himself, and he specifically declares that it is the work of the Spirit, not the written word, to guide and direct. "He will guide you into all truth." How then will it be possible for those who are seeking eternal life to attain it without the guidance and revelations of the Holy Spirit? Hence the necessity of continued revelation now as of old.

That it was intended of the Father that all His children, in every age, should be thus enlightened and directed, will be shown when we call attention to the declaration of the Apostle Peter when addressing the assembly in the "one place" on the day of Pentecost, and speaking directly under the guidance of the Holy Spirit, to the different nationalities there represented, and who had been brought into that house out of curiosity at the reports which came to them on the streets of the strange actions of the Saints on that occasion; some of the reporters had evidently asserted that they were a lot of drunken men, which, when Peter had earnestly denied, and explained the manifestations they beheld, and some of them asked what they should do, he declared:

Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost. For the promise is unto you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call.—Acts 2: 38, 39.

This plainly indicates that it is the design of our heavenly Father, that all who accept and obey the gospel under divine authority, shall have the Holy Spirit to "guide them into all truth," which gives them communication with the heavens, and the importance that all who desire to keep the commandments of Christ shall be in possession of this life giving power, must be admitted. "Able" ministers will so teach and practice because it is the expressed teaching of the Lord. The Savior also warned men against being followers of "blind guides" "lest all fall in the ditch together," and "come short of the glory of God."

Because a man may be endowed naturally with the gifts of oratory and eloquence, and have power to sway multitudes, it is no indication of his ability as an "able minister" for Christ, for some who possessed these gifts in a marked degree were infidels or skeptics. Some of the prominent characteristics essential to success in an "able minister" are, a spirit of true humility; a fervent zeal, tempered with wisdom; a disposition and willingness to lay his all upon the altar of sacrifice, if necessary, that he might preach Christ; to give up all worldly ambitions (Ye cannot serve God and Mammon); to leave home and loved ones for months and even years at the call of duty; to endure scoffs, insults and misrepresentations, and even abuse, patiently; to love all men, even his enemies, for the gospel's sake, and try to do them good though meeting with no manifestations of appreciation for such efforts. He must be a careful student of God's word and all good books, that his "treasury" may be stored with information subject to the call of the Holy Spirit, for the enlightenment of others. He must be pure in his life, prayerful and full of faith in God's promises, that his ministrations may be profitable to men and acceptable to God. If, with these and other qualifications of an "able minister," there be added the power to move men by natural gifts of eloquence and oratory, it may be helpful, but these latter are by no means an absolute necessity, for above all and every other force, it is the "Spirit which maketh alive," and it will not dwell in unholy temples, nor make use of "untempered mortar." The admonition of the Apostle Paul to Timothy is worthy of adoption:

Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth.—2 Tim. 2: 15.

If this instruction is rightly interpreted and carried out, it will result in an "able minister of the word."

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

SR. C. C. HURD, Green, Iowa, desires the prayers of the Prayer Union, that if it is God's will she may be healed.

BRO. AND SR. F. G. PITT reached their field Friday, June 1st, and are located at 805 East Allegheny avenue, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, with Bro. and Sr. Hosea H. Bacon. Bro. Pitt says they had a pleasant visit en route with Bro. Miller and Fairley at Pittsburg, Pennsylvania.

BRO. PETER M. HINDS, Cedar Falls, Iowa, is looking forward to the time, which he hopes will be soon, that an elder will visit his place. He will do what he can to assist in getting an opening, and will try to make his home a pleasant stopping place for the elder. There are no other Saints in that region known to him, though he thinks there is plenty of material there from which to make them if they could hear the gospel preached.

BRO. I. N. WHITE corrects a discrepancy in our editorial of May 31st, where we stated that Elder Clark Braden appeared and lectured on what he called "Mormonism" while the Saints were holding a reunion at El Dorado Springs, Missouri, some years ago. Bro. White states that while the meeting was going on Elder Braden sent circulars or handbills announcing that he would shortly visit that section and lecture on Mormonism, and Bro. White was left to take care of the interests of the Saints when he did appear, which he did, not long after the close of the meetings.

SR. MACBAY STOUT, Galena, Kansas, desires the prayers of the Saints in behalf of her husband that his taste for intoxicants might be taken away and that he may obey the gospel. She earnestly prays that he may be spared, until he obeys the truth.

If ever an appeal reached the heart of a son or daughter of the land of "Bobbie" Burns, that of our energetic, faithful young brother, Daniel MacGregor, in this issue, should touch that organ in every faithful lover of truth. "Those who have followed the labors of our worthy brother in his efforts to open up the work in British Columbia, as evidenced in his interesting letters from time to time, will have some idea of the difficulties in that field, and of the brave, undaunted spirit with which he faced and met the obstructions the adversary has thrown in his way. "Read his appeal, and then read it again, and if the spirit in which it was written is upon you, send him at once, while it warms your heart and touches the fountain of your sympathy, whatever you feel you can devote to this item of the Lord's work, without detriment to the demands of His work as represented by the bishops and their agents. The mites will be helpful, but don't send any United States postage stamps.

AS AN evidence of the estimate of worth placed upon our Historical Engraving, which we are now offering as a premium for 25 cents when accompanied by one dollar advance subscription (new or old) for the ENSIGN, by those who have secured a copy, we quote from a recent letter of one of our live, earnest and diligent workers:

I only send one dollar as I have had the "Historical Engraving" for some time, and it is an ornament to my room, and I am proud of it. My husband said when he first saw it, "Well, they don't look like crazy men." I should not like to give it or part with it for twenty dollars, if I could not get another one in place of it.

We are mailing these engravings in strong tubes everyday to those who are taking advantage of our offer. Send in your orders; the only conditions are that you remit us amount to pay ENSIGN subscription one year in advance and 25 cents additional for the engraving. We sent out twenty-five of those engravings one day this week; if you have not secured one, better do it soon. You will not have a more favorable opportunity than the present.

A SPECIAL OFFER.

In order to raise some money within the next few weeks, we have decided to make the following offer:

To those who remit their subscription to the ENSIGN one year in advance we will send a copy of our Historical Engraving for 25 cents; that is, for $1.25 we will send the ENSIGN for one year and a copy of the engraving. This picture sells at 50 cents each and is the same which we formerly sold at 75 cents.

This offer applies to either renewals or new subscriptions. If, however, any one secures a subscription from another party, they, as well as the subscriber, will be entitled to the picture at 25 cents each, but in order to secure it at this price the order must be accompanied by the amount to pay ENSIGN subscription one year in advance, and 25 cents for each copy of the engraving; otherwise the regular price of 50 cents will be required to obtain it. The size of this engraving is 20x28 inches, and it contains photos of the members of the Quorum of Twelve; the standing High Council; the seven presidents of Seventies; seven brethren representing the different priesthoods in the church; the martyrs, Joseph and Hyrum Smith; the present president and patriarch of the church; the Bishopric; the three witnesses to the Book of Mormon; the church recorder, secretary and librarian; the Saints' Home; Graceland College; the Nauvoo and Kirtland temples; the Hill Cumorah; the Temple Lot; the Saints' church at Independence and the church at Lamoni, etc.; in all, sixty-eight pictures artistically grouped in one. We send with every picture a key which explains it throughout.

Send along the amount at once, and thus help us financially and secure this beautiful engraving at one-half regular price. Address all orders to

GENERAL CHURCH NEWS.

INDEPENDENCE.

Sr. C. A. Bishop was quite ill Sunday, but was relieved through administration. She is feeble.

Bro. R. J. Parker left for his field, the Rocky Mountain mission, Thursday evening of last week.

Sr. Earl Corthell had a severe chill Monday evening and her temperature went to 110; it was thought for a time that she could not survive, but relief was obtained and she is improving again, her temperature now being 99, about normal.

Sr. H. H. Robinson has been having a hard time this week. Coughing attacks, difficulty in getting her breath during attacks of vomiting, and pain from a tumor has made it distressing not only to herself but to those around her. We are, however, hopeful for improvement in her condition.

Sr. Schmutz, Sr. Powers, her daughter, and children left for Denver, Colorado, Wednesday. Sr. Powers and family will reside there for some time at least. They will be missed from church and Sunday School here, but the Denver church will be gaining. They are good workers and we wish them abundant success in their new home.

The Church Bells, official organ of the Episcopal church for the Kansas City diocese, is now published in Independence by Mr. A. Newman, and printed at the Jackson Examiner office, this city. Rev. D. G. MacKinnon, rector of Trinity church, is editor. The first number under the new management is bright and newsy and presents a much improved appearance. It will, doubtless be much appreciated by the members of the diocese into whose homes it comes.

Children's Day last Sunday was a very enjoyable occasion for all. The day was clear and comfortable, and nearly four hundred were at the regular session of Sunday School. At the conclusion of these exercises the school marched up stairs singing "Ring the Bells of Heaven;" and when all were seated the church was comfortably filled. The auditorium was tastefully decorated, and there were a number of fine bouquets of flowers. Sr. Edith Clow was adjudged most successful in the excellence of design, her offering being an anchor about three feet long. A bouquet of sweet peas from Sr. G. H. Hulmes was awarded second choice, though a basket of red clover blossoms was much admired. The exercises of the morning were singing by Sunday School, anthem by choir, vocal solo by Sr. W. N. Robinson, an address by the superintendent, Bro. W. N. Robinson, baptism being the theme, and for references to the points he brought out, he had the different classes rise and read from Bible, Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants; it was quite effective. At a quarter past one twenty-four Sunday School pupils and one adult were baptized in Shultz' pond by Bro. W. N. Robinson. The entire time of the afternoon service was required in the confirmation, and the meeting ran over time about half an hour. Bro. J. A. Robinson, Sr., W. H. Garrett, Ellis Short and H. R. Mills officiated. At 7:30 the auditorium was again well filled, and a large number were in the galleries. Songs and recitations followed until nine o'clock when the audience was dismissed, well pleased at the success attained.

We inadvertently omitted last week the mention of the death of Captain Cornell Crysler, which occurred at the home of his daughter, Mrs. John Sullivan, North Liberty street, Saturday, June 2d, Bright's disease being the immediate cause of death. He was postmaster here for twelve years, and was the first Republican to hold the office of mayor of this city after the Civil war closed. He also held the office of city recorder and United States assistant marshal for the census of 1870. He was born in Auburn, New York, September 27, 1829, and married in that state, Miss Nancy Dunlap, who, with three children, Cory, Crysler, Mrs. John Sullivan and Charles S. Crysler, the Kansas City attorney, survive him. He was captain of D company, 122 New York Volunteers Infantry, resigning at Fredericksburg Virginia, in 1863, when he returned to Syracuse, New York. He was an attorney, graduating from the law department of the State University, at Albany, New York, in 1854, and practiced his profession until the breaking out of the war. He was a good man and citizen, a lover of right and justice and on more than one occasion manifested a friendly interest in the welfare of the Saints in this vicinity and used his influence in their behalf because of his love of fairness and justice. Surely he who said, "Inasmuch as ye did it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye did it unto me," will give a blessed recognition to the generous, noble spirit of Cornell Crysler in befriending those who, for the sake of their allegiance to Christ's word, were despised, maligned and unjustly treated. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. Dr. A. D. Madeira, of the Presbyterian faith, assisted by Rev. L. W. Denier, Wednesday afternoon, June 6th.

LAMONI, IOWA.

President Joseph Smith expounded the gospel law at the Evergreen church on Sunday, 3d inst, and departed on Thursday 7th, to Canada.

At the regular monthly business meeting last week three were added by letter, nine letters of removal were granted and one expelled. The branch report for the past four months was 1307, a net gain of 32, 15 of whom were baptized.

Apostle H. C. Smith addressed Religians at their last meeting.

President A. H. Smith accompanied Bishop Kelley to Auburn Iowa, week before last; Bro. Kelley returned and went to St. Joseph, Missouri on the 8th.

Bro. and Sr. D. A. Anderson, Bro. and Sr. E. Smith and Elder C. Scott departed to their mission fields in California and Des Moines district, Iowa, respectively. Apostle Lambert went to attend a district conference at Burlington, Iowa, and from thence he goes to other parts of Iowa and Illinois.

Yesterday, Sunday 10th, Elder Stebbins went with Bro. M. J. Danielson to the Evergreen church west of here to preach.

At the Saints' chapel here Elder Jos. Clapp discoursed acceptably at the morning hour; his text was Luke 13:24. At night Apostle W. H. Kelley, with good liberty, spoke on the promises to Israel and the need of present day revelation to "labor together with God." (2 Cor. 6:1, Inspired Translation.) At night Elder Stead discoursed at the Saints' Home, his subject being the agency of man.

Sr. C. Stebbins is able to be about once more. She attended church Sunday for the first time since the first Sunday in April.

ST. JOSEPH, MISSOURI.

The series of meetings held by Elder I. N. White in this city closed June 3d. About a dozen strangers were present at nearly every meeting. With some of these Bro. White had a personal visit, and they seemed to receive the truth with gladness. We trust the seed sown may bring forth a harvest in due time.

Children's Day exercises, June 3d, passed off very pleasantly. The pulpit was adorned with beautiful palms and flowers, and the sweet songsters in their cages suspended in the windows, seemed to vie with the children in their songs of praise. In the afternoon two children, Arthur Eno and Grace Bacus, were baptized by Bro. D. J. Krahl.

A strawberry and ice cream festival was given by the Ladies' Aid Society Monday evening. Across the church lawn were strung Chinese lanterns and small tables set here and there over the ground made quite a pretty scene. Welty and Negro's Harp and Mandolin Orchestra rendered their services free, and the music was much enjoyed. We have not as yet learned the exact amount of the proceeds.

A number from here attended district conference at Stewartsville, last Saturday and Sunday. The next district conference will be held at Cameron, Missouri, September 29 and 30. District officers elected were T. T. Hinders, president; J. S. Constance, vice president; C. P. Paul and A. Leverton, secretaries. Bro. Walter Smith was chosen district president of the Religio.

Bro. Agenstein, formerly of Omaha, Nebraska, now of Stewartsville, Missouri, passed through the city Friday night on his way to Omaha, called there by the sickness of his mother.

Sr. Pearl Pifer was married on June 2d, to Mr. Huffman; the wedding was private and a complete surprise. They are residing with the groom's parents.

We have two announcements for baptism next Sunday.

DENVER, COLORADO.

Church, corner of 22d and Arapahoe Sts. Services Sunday—Sunday School at 9:45 a. m.; preaching at 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.; sacrament service the first Sunday in each month at 6 p. m. Prayer meeting Wednesday evening. Zion's Religio-Literary Society Friday evening.

Rain Sunday morning nearly spoiled our meetings, but few out to the Sunday School and morning service at the church. Bro. Roush was the speaker. The evening service was transferred to the tent, and the largest congregation of the tent series greeted the writer as he presented the gospel as we believe it; we feel quite encouraged now at the prospect of the tent work.

Bro. Francard, of Kansas City, is making his home in the city; he is employed on a fruit ranch on the outskirts of town.

Bro. Will Blair, of St. Joe, met with us in Religio the first Friday.

Bro. D. A. Anderson and wife stopped off a couple of days last week, and Bro. A. preached

Thursday night in the tent. It was like meeting an old friend to meet Sr. Anderson, as her mother and the writer were old school-mates away back in the early days of the Reorganization. Success to them in their missionary field.

Bro. Roush is assisting in the tent meetings but expects to leave this week for the southern part of the state to do missionary work, and to join in wedlock one of our sisters who has found some one that she likes better than home folks.

Bro. John Brennan has gotten a position as conductor with the Tramway company and will move his family here, making a desirable addition to the Denver branch.

CHICAGO, ILLINOIS.

Branch headquarters, 716 W. Van Buren St. Sunday meetings 2:45 and 7:45 p. m.; Lang Mission, 3411 Cottage Grove Ave., 10:45 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.; West Pullman branch, 12024 Union Ave., 10:30 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.; Parkside Mission, 7124 Stony Island Ave., 3:30 and 7:30 p. m.; 565 W. 37th St. (colored mission), 10:30 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.

Another blessed day's service was rendered by the Chicago Saints on yesterday for which we hope all who participated were rendered better, and the sick strengthened through the prayers offered.

Sr. Gonyo, one of our humble, patient ones, is sorely afflicted by a cancerous affection in the nose. She is reconciled to God's will. Pray for her.

Sr. Sloan, who met a painful accident some time since, was remarkably blessed and relieved from pain through administration recently.

The Sunday School entertainment on Saturday night was well attended and a nice program rendered. While the boys were a little loud in their demonstrations of appreciation, yet good resulted, and through the efforts the "record" of the school was raised to the highest point yet reached since being on the west side. May the good work go on. Bro. "Fred" is proving himself a champion in Sunday School work, and he enjoys a good, hearty support by the Saints.

The Religio is doing an excellent work by holding prayer meetings at the houses of isolated or afflicted Saints. Our home was blessed and cheered by one of these meetings which we failed to report at the time. We needed the cheering voice of the young.

Bro. F. Haynes, of Aurora, Sundayed with us, visiting relatives and attending services. He preached for us at night at 716 Van Buren street, giving good counsel to all present. Come again, brother.

We were delighted in an hour's conversation with Sr. S. C. Swank, of Lincoln, Nebraska, whom we met at her sister's home, Sr. Sloan. We found her a whole hearted Saint of thirty years experience, having been baptized by Bro. G. E. Deuel in his palmy days. We were both acquainted with many of Nebraska's Saints. She longs for church privileges at her home city. She will remain in the city for some time.

Street work is opening up in good shape. Brn. Graves and Fuller have commenced; also Bro. E. J. Lang in his quarter, and Brn. S. C. Good and J. F. Kier open the battle in their section on Wednesday night. We are pleased to note the earnestness and unity of the brethren in this work, and expect goodly returns in blessings upon the brethren as well as salvation of souls. Let the sisters with their musical voices also aid in this work if it is "sectarian," for remember "it is better to be sectarian and right [do good] than non-sectarian and wrong."

Sr. Stevens, one of our effective workers, has passed through a severe sickness; at last accounts she was better.

There will be quite a number from Chicago attend the Mission conference to be held on 23d, going by way of Sheridan.

ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI.

Reunion talk is becoming very prevalent, and it is expected our success this year will be more marked even than last year. Many who were doubtful about going last year appear anxious for the date to arrive now.

Bro. Allen, our missionary, put in an appearance Saturday evening, speaking at the church morning and evening and at Oak Hill in the afternoon.

Appointments yesterday other than as mentioned above: Bro. Barracrough, Cheltenham; T. J. Elliott, Oak Hill at night, Belleville, Ivor Davis.

Mr. Wm. Barracrough (brother of our hustling "George") and wife, of Edwardsville, Illinois, attended services yesterday, and at a meeting held at 5.00 p. m. his wife was baptized. William has been standing on the brink for a long time, and it seemed pretty hard for him to wait any longer yesterday. He says he is coming back again next Sunday, indicating a strong probability of following the wise example of his estimable wife.

Brn. Joseph and Ollie Swift assisted materially yesterday in helping to overcome the difficulties attending church work here on account of the strike, by taking Brn. Allen and Hitchcock to Oak Hill in their surrey. The novelty attending the street car strike has worn threadbare.

Bro. Howard Molyneux went to Lamoni recently to visit. His happy, congenial features are sadly missed from our numbers.

St. Louis district conference meets at St. Louis, June 23d and 24th. Good attendance anticipated. Bro. I. N. White is to be present.

LETTER DEPARTMENT.

LAMONI, Iowa, June 1.

Editor Ensign:—On the 10th ult. I left Lamoni (home) by arrangement made by missionaries in charge, and went to Oklaunton, Texas, where, beginning the 15th of May, I held eight days debate with Elder Chism, of the Church of Christ. Four days of two sessions each, he affirmed the identity of the organization and doctrine of the church he represents with that described in the New Testament, I affirming similarly for the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. We made our home with Bro. J. H. Amend while holding the debate, and was royally entertained. Bro. H. O. Smith, missionary in charge Southwestern mission, was present at the discussion, and was moderator for our side. Bro. T. J. Shepherd lives at Oklaunton, Bro. Shumaker and now Bro. Wilcox, late of Lees Summit, or thereabouts. Our visit was made very pleasant by all those with whom we associated.

We were cordially entertained at Beaver (Waggoner) fifteen miles east, by Bro. A. Z. Moore and family, and other Saints resident there. Met with Saints at both places in social services, and was blessed of divine Spirit on both occasions.

Bro. Ed. Henson was ordained a seventy on Sunday, May 13th, by the direction of Bro. H. O. Smith, by the writer, Bro. A. J. Moore and himself. We were blessed in the ordination, even the outsiders noting the fact, by some special manifestation to them. I arrived at home again from Texas on Saturday, May 26th, and expect to be in my field of labor by June 5th inst.

Elder Chism is a representative of the radical wing of the Disciple church; is active, shrewd, reads Greek but does not translate good, restricts the three elements of the gospel, "Holy Ghost," "power," "much assurance," to the apostolic age, claiming only the one element, "word" (1 Thes 1:5), as essential now, and that the "more excellent way" (1 Cor. 12:31), was to change the Lord's arrangement of the body of Christ, the church, as set forth in chapter twelve, and destroy the offices and functions of its members by doing away the Holy Ghost and its gifts that animate the members of the body; just as though Paul, after describing at length how God "set the members every one of them in the body (church) as it pleased him," would then assume the affrontory or presumption to set forth a more excellent way than God's way of organizing and endowing his church. But the truth is, some then, as now, thought that all were priests or officers of equal office and authority, hence his questions: "Are all apostles? Are all prophets? Are all teachers? Do all speak with tongues? Do all interpret?" To all of which is answered no, "For I show unto you a more excellent way than to suppose all occupy one office in the church; and in pursuance of this idea or truth, Paul says, "Follow after charity and desire spiritual gifts," (1 Cor. 14:1), and repeats the command, at verse twelve, "seek" the gifts, and at verse thirty-seven he tells us that the things he there writes are God's commandments, hence, we are bound by God's commandments to "covet earnestly the best gifts," for the way is open to obtain the gifts of the Holy Ghost till "that which is perfect [was perfect when Paul wrote] is come," when Paul will know as he is know, and we will "all see eye to eye."

Bro. C. wanted members, evangelists and deacons, present and living, now in the church, but claimed the original twelve apostles and prophets of olden times, as his apostles and prophets. But that was not the way with the church as described in the New Testament, hence he had no identity anywhere. He asserted that Paul was chosen in place of Apostle Judas, and that Matthew's surname was Barnabas; and hence, Barnabas was Matthew. But if this be true, either Matthew was ordained twice to the apostleship or he never was ordained till Paul was at Antioch. Acts 13:1-5; 14:14.

The only new idea that he presented during the entire discussion was that the 2300 days of Daniel 8:14, began with the opening of the Peloponnesian war, dating it B. C. 473, and terminating at A. D. 1827, and that the commencement of the cleansing of the sanctuary was the baptism of Wm. Amend, grandfather of Bro. J. H. Amend, November, 1827. Now isn't that imaginative? But what was there about the Peloponnesian war that concerned the sanctuary, the daily sacrifice or the host of Daniel 18:14? Where in the Bible, either testament, is the church called the sanctuary? Palestine and Judah are called sanctuary; the tabernacle and the temple had a compartment called "the sanctuary;" but that department of the church known as the sanctuary is in heaven where Jesus, our great high priest, now ministers for us. Other priests officiate in the holy place and the outer court, but into the Holy of Holies went the high priest alone once a year. In Hebrews 9:1, 2, Paul seems to use the word sanctuary in its metonymical sense, applying the word sanctuary to the tabernacle, but I am unable to find the word applied to the church as such in the Book. So there is no ground for this application for this new chronological idea.

He assumed that all saints are priests and kings—the sisters also. All of equal authority, just like those at Corinth that Paul met. (See 1 Cor. 12:29, 30). Now we can conceive of the idea of all the citizens of a kingdom being believers and professed citizens of a kingdom, but surely all are not kings. We of the United States republic are republicans, but we are not all governors or presidents, therefore, Israel was "a kingdom of priests" (Ex. 19:6), being a government of a priesthood nature and character, but only the males of one tribe in thirteen constituted the official priesthood. All the members of the church of God, all who partake of the heavenly calling are believers in, and members of a government governed by "a royal [kingly] priesthood" (Heb. 3:1; 1 Peter 2:5), but all are not, therefore, officiating priests, only such as are called to so minister. (Heb. 5:4, 5; Eph. 4:8-13). Says Isaiah, speaking of Christ's latter day work and of his ministry, "But ye shall be named the priests of the Lord: men shall call you the ministers of our God."—Chapter 61:6.

Elder Chism tried his hand at trying the work by an attack on the character of some whom God called to establish the work, but in his effort he overdid the matter and so failed in his effort, for the people saw the injustice of the measure and would not approve the course, but condemned it, and Elder's went down before it.

It is not with the spirit of presumption that we state that at the conclusion of our debate I realized the calm, quiet, joyful assurance of the Holy Spirit giving the seal of divine approval of our effort, and I thanked God for the latter day work. I feel satisfied that good will grow out of the discussion at Oklaunton, Texas.

Yours for the truth, C. SCOTT.

TABOR, Iowa, June 7.

Editor Ensign:—Our conference of the Potawatamian district passed off very pleasantly. Elders present of the general missionary force, J. W. Wight, Charles Derry, I. M. Smith, David R. Chambers, with a goodly number of the local elders and priests, with other officers of the district; all equally interested in this great work of latter days; all taking an active part in the business of the district presented before us for consideration, and with the able and efficient work of the secretary, Bro. Chas. Jensen, all moved off lively and satisfactorily.

The preaching and prayer services were all we could ask for. A goodly number in attendance, both members and non-members, both from the country and the little town of Underwood, where to the credit of the members of the branch we have a nice little church in which to meet and worship in God's own appointed way.

Sunday evening, May 26th, we returned to Council Bluffs in company with J. W. Wight, our worthy missionary in charge, where he dis-coursed to a good attentive audience. Monday he moved on to Woodbine, your humble servant staying over the following Wednesday evening. The Saints of Council Bluffs with Bro. Calvin Beebe as president are, as we believe, trying to hold up the banner of truth to the breeze as best they can. There are some good, noble workers in that branch, both in Sunday School and Religio work, as well as in all other matters of interest pertaining to the kingdom of God.

Sunday, June 3d, was Children's day here in the Tabor branch. The exercises of the day as follows: 10 a. m., Sunday School; at 11 a. m. short speeches by Bro. Chas. Fry and H. Kemp. Afternoon five of the scholars were baptized, two of the Tabor and three of the Egypt school, as both schools were united for the day. Then confirmation meeting which was well attended by our neighbors and friends. The Spirit's presence was felt in power in the confirmation of these dear ones; they were truly accepted of Him who said, "Feed my lambs." At night the house was packed full and the little ones as well as the older ones acquitted themselves very praiseworthy indeed. The program was good and nicely arranged by Bro. Chas. Fry and the superintendent and teachers. This school is in excellent working condition, due largely to the entire membership of the branch, as they nearly all attend Sabbath School.

We are still alive in the interest of the work in this field of the Master's great harvest. Both general and local laborers are trying to do what they can. There are no big "I's" or little "Yous"; we are all one as far as I can see, seeking to preach the word and live exemplary lives, striving to let the light of the Christ reflect through us to both saint and sinner, that God may be glorified, his cause honored and the world of mankind blessed. Long may the light and truth with the knowledge and power of the gospel be promulgated through the columns of your faithful little dispenser of truth.

GALVA, Ill., June 12.

Dear Ensign:—The last I wrote you in March while at Chillicothe. We went from there to Dahinda, Galesburg, and on to Burlington, Iowa. We held meetings a week to a good audience of interested listeners, although the weather was rainy. We left many friends there both in and out of the church. From there we journeyed on to the city of the Saints to attend General Conference, it being our first visit to the place. I enjoyed it very much, meeting so many of God's children, both of the ministry and laity, about many of whom I have read in the church papers. After three weeks stay and the day before conference adjourned, I turned my face homeward, arriving at 9 a. m. next day (Saturday). The day following (Sunday) I drove thirteen miles to Millersburg and preached at 11 a. m., and after dinner we went to the creek north of town, and the place where Bro. M. T. Short baptized the writer six and one-half years before, and baptized Brn. Walter and William Wakeland, father and son, and both heads of families. They were confirmed at the afternoon meeting, after which I drove home.

On the Wednesday following I started to Davis county, Iowa, to baptize Bro. Willey, whose wife I had baptized some time before. On my way back I stopped over Sunday in Burlington, Iowa; preached twice and witnessed the baptism of two little boys by Bro. J. B. Wildermuth who was stopping there a short time en route to his field.

On my arrival home again I spent a few days there arranging matters so I could again take the field. While at home I preached some at Union chapel. The next week I made a trip to Chicago; was there two days; met with some of the Saints whom I found alive in the work. I preached once while there. On returning home I received word to meet my co-laborer, F. A. Russell, at Muscatine, Iowa, which I did, and we went to Millersburg, held a series of meetings, and baptized the wife of Bro. Wakeland, and tried to persuade the Saints to heed the admonition to come up higher. As usual, some said we were cranks, while others tried to profit by putting away those things which God has said to avoid. Well, perhaps we are cranks, but cranks are necessary on grind stones, and this church is a large grind stone grinding away at sin and sinners, trying to grind them smooth enough to get in at the door of the celestial kingdom; hence, there is need of some cranks. Well, it matters not what we may be called so God is with us.

We went from there to Joy, to attend district conference, which passed off very nicely. Bro. Hilliard was present and gave us a good sermon on Saturday night. Brn. Sheldon, Cooper and Crabb were the speakers Sunday. We came here to start the tent and succeeded in getting it in running order after some what of an effort, and began operation last night with about thirty inside and a number outside the tent. Prejudice runs high and reports are afloat that we are from Utah and are after women to take west. (We haven't applied for rates yet so we don't know just when we will start). There are five members living here.

Your brother and co-worker, J. W. ADAMS.

Home address, Eliza, Ill.

DANSTOWN, Va., May 30.

Dear Ensign:—On the 19th I left home and after three changes on the railroad I arrived at Evans Station, where I had arranged to meet Bro. J. L. Williams, president of the Union Grove branch in West Virginia; he was waiting for me with horses to conduct me to his home about six miles distant. The weather was unfavorable and we arrived after a dark night's ride, wet, muddy and hungry, but hopeful for the morrow. Bro. W. had arranged for meeting on Sunday at 3:30 a. m. at "Seldom Seen" school-house where we were gathered at three years ago, which appointment we filled and arranged to continue meetings through the week. Public sentiment has greatly changed since I was here before and we were greeted with a fair audience, although the appointments were not very general at all. Interest increased to the close, also the audiences, and we were sorry to close, but our arrangements were made to go to Sand Hill, about 25 miles further. Bro. Jeffries was to meet me at Ripley on Monday and accompany me to Sand Hill, but he did not still here without any arrangements for the future except to go on as soon as possible. I had to promise to return this fall if opportunity was afforded. Invitations were given to dine with me on Sunday night with Mr. Stone, which was accepted. We were certainly "well fed" and cared for and invited to return. Mr. Stone is one of the trustees.

On Friday we had the pleasure of meeting two of the Utah elders, who remained with me on Sunday night, and Sunday and attended all of our meetings. Of course we had some "tiffs" over the "twin relic" question and its concomitant doctrines. Their names are Meehan and Sanders. They believe in the "principle" of plural marriage but not the "practice" since the "Manifesto." They also told me they never heard of the doctrine of "Adam for God," "Blood Atonement," etc., in Utah, nor of the "Journal of Discourses," from which we quote.

Elder Meehan said that if the doctrine of "Adam for God," etc., had ever been taught to him there by the Mormon people he never would have been seen in West Virginia. They thought it very strange that such teaching could have been in the church at all where they were raised up from childhood, and they were entirely ignorant of it. They seem to be "honest and sincere" in their work, but have been blinded from childhood it seems, and the rottenness of the Bible and doctrine are sought to be covered up by the leaders of that church at the present time. We did what we could to inform them and they gave us an order to get one half their mail on our way to Sand Hill, as they both have papers from Utah and do not care for them. There can the Journal of Discourses be purchased and where can it be seen to refer to.

Quite a sad accident occurred to the little babe of Bro. George Williams while they were eating dinner Sunday. The babe was sitting on the floor to be convenient and the little one was also on the floor on the opposite side of the table, and as we suppose crawled under the table and turned the coffee pot over, scalding herself from her body to the bottom of her feet, and solid sent her to a pitiful sight indeed to behold. The child continued in screams until anointed, which was about an hour, as Bro. Williams and I were about two miles from where the time of the accident. After anointing it ceased its cries and soon fell asleep. Today, Wednesday, it seems to be out of danger and the wounds are healing nicely.

Moral. Beware of hot drinks! Do not set the coffee pot on the floor! Best place to leave it is in the tinshop or store. Bro. George says no more coffee is to be made in his home. Well, we will not get away till tomorrow. More anon.

THE HOPE SET BEFORE US.

Funeral Sermon of Sr. Jane Mooney, Delivered at Independence, Missouri, May 6, 1900, by Elder Joseph Luff.

REPORTED BY BELLE ROBINSON JAMES.

I have selected from the Scripture two brief portions from which to form a text; the first, from 1 Corinthians, the fifteenth chapter, fifty-fifth verse; "Oh, death, where is thy sting? Oh, grave, where is thy victory?" The second part is from the Hebrew letter, the sixth chapter, the last few words of the 18th verse, "The hope set before us."

The situation in which I find myself this morning is a trifle embarrassing because of what has already been announced, that the sister whose funeral sermon is to be preached by me, passed away and her remains have been laid to rest in the quietude of the grave for about fifteen months. And I do not think that any amount of persuasion could have influenced me to talk upon the subject at this late date but for one particular thing, and that has already been referred to. The sister, I am safe in saying, at least a dozen times during my acquaintance with her in life, requested me that should I remain longer in this life than did she, I would preach her funeral sermon; and when we met for the last time before I started on my mission in the east two years ago, in her familiar way she patted me with her hand upon my back and said: "Remember, Bro. Luff, the promise made to me, that should I die before you do, you are to preach my funeral sermon." I told her I remembered it, and would attend to it. This furnishes all the explanation that is necessary and all by way of apology that might be called for, for occupying

My baptism into the church took place on the 22d day of May, 1876. It occurred in London, Ontario. Returning from that place to my native city, Toronto, I remember, as I stepped from the cars at the depot, the feeling of weight or the burden of responsibility that seemed to rest upon my shoulders. In the midst of one hundred thousand people I stood alone as a believer in this latter day or last day philosophy. Not one to whom I might turn for counsel, or from whom I might expect a word of encouragement. To stand in the midst of a people who looked with suspicion upon my every movement, and who were disposed to adversely criticize every expression, and interpret all as bearing the marks of hypocrisy, in that I was seeking to defend a religion which, notwithstanding all protestations to the contrary, in the public mind always associated itself with what was known as the Mormonism of the Utah valley.

After my wife's return from London, where she had been visiting, and where she, too, had united with the church, I had her as my sole companion in the faith to help and comfort me, as came the more distressing, and outside of her absolute trust in God, and her dependence upon the confirmation of his divine Spirit which had been furnished her in reference to the truth she had embraced in 1843, she was without religious consolation. There were societies of different kinds around her, and she would mingle with them at times, and in a social way, participate in their movements and contribute her mite to assist them, believing that it was a benefit in a moral sense to the community; but her soul longed and waited and hoped for something that would come to her that would be as a resurrection of the old joy and the old association.

About 1875, as I learned it from her lips, she heard something definite regarding the Reorganization and took a trip from her place of residence in Alliston, Canada, away to Kansas, that she might obtain more information with reference to the gospel and the reorganization of the work.

A tract had fallen into her hands called the "Succession" in the presidency of the church, and in the reading of that little pamphlet there came back to her a confirmation and a rebaptism of the Spirit similar to that which had been given when she was baptized into the church. The result of this was that her affiliation with the Reorganization began at that date.

The following year, I think it was, or in the spring of 1877, I am not certain, probably the fall of '76, she attended conference in London, Canada, bringing with her Sr. Drury, her daughter, who is present with us this morning. I was present on the occasion, and her daughter was there baptized. To me there was something associated with the event, and there still is, that lingers like a sacred halo around the sight as I witnessed it.

My baptism into the church took place on the 22d day of May, 1876. It occurred in London, Ontario. Returning from that place to my native city, Toronto, I remember, as I stepped from the cars at the depot, the feeling of weight or the burden of responsibility that seemed to rest upon my shoulders. In the midst of one hundred thousand people I stood alone as a believer in this latter day or last day philosophy. Not one to whom I might turn for counsel, or from whom I might expect a word of encouragement. To stand in the midst of a people who looked with suspicion upon my every movement, and who were disposed to adversely criticize every expression, and interpret all as bearing the marks of hypocrisy, in that I was seeking to defend a religion which, notwithstanding all protestations to the contrary, in the public mind always associated itself with what was known as the Mormonism of the Utah valley.

I sought to take and maintain a stand for the dignity and the righteousness of the gospel message, and to make a struggle to subdue what, within my mind, was contrary to right; so that the gospel principles might shine in beauty and splendor, or as nearly so as God could make it possible with one of my natural make-up. While in this condition, spending hours sometimes, alone in prayer and in tears, trying to keep up the fight against hard odds, I well remember that Sr. Mooney unexpectedly came to our house from Alliston, and how like a ray of sunlight, or, as though there had been a parting somewhere in the clouds, and the sun had found its way to that particular spot and from the blue etherial there was shining in upon us that day a something that I can never forget and that made the memory of Sr. Mooney linger with me through the years ever since; because, not only was her disposition such as to shed sunlight and the mellow influence of peace and pleasantness about her, and especially when she was with those of like faith with herself; but coming as she did under those circumstances, there was a volume of blessedness in her company that made us peculiarly glad; and I can safely say that there never has been one among the laity of the church unto whom I have extended my hand through the years that have gone since, with more of pleasure and delight, and in whose company I have felt more of real happiness in a gospel way, than hers.

The thought, as I witnessed the baptism of her daughter at the time referred to, that this aged sister had for over thirty years stood alone, without hearing a sermon from the lips of a Latter Day Saint, and while listening to what was falling from the lips of others, who claimed to be God's ambassadors in the world, she had never been able to find the nourishment for which her spirit called, and that after the lapse of all those years, the sound of restoration, of reorganization had charmed her heart to that extent to make her sacrifice what she had and undertake the journeys at her age, that she did, to make manifest her trust in the original faith in the manner in which I witnessed her doing it, impressed me in such a way as to make her stand before me then as a monument of devotion, a monument of fortitude, a monument of consecrated trust to which my thought has turned a hundred times since, and I have wondered if, under like conditions, with the nature that I carry about with me, I would succeed as well as she did. Sometimes, when alone in the world since that time, alone in the sense of being isolated from those of like faith with myself—and questions have arisen that have challenged my fears and in turn have made heavy drafts upon my confidence; and when events have transpired that have stirred my faith in some things to the very depths; I have thought of her and of others, and my thoughts have been, by the grace of God, sanctified unto my strengthening, unto a renewal of my hope and to a consecration of my trust in God, believing that there would some day be an outcome to the strange mysteries associated with this latter day philosophy, that would furnish ample explanation for all that so agitated my mind and stirred my spirit.

Our sister passed away from earth-life on the 13th day of February, 1899. She had become the mother of twelve children, six of whom, three sons and three daughters, preceded her to the life beyond. We have with us this morning three, two sons and one daughter. One son still remains in Alliston, I believe, and two are in Toronto, Canada. Upon the lives of these, whatever subsequent events may be, an impression has been made, from which, if they were disposed to have it so, they never can free themselves.

The life of mother and the character she maintained under conditions that they, better than any others who now live know, were very trying at times, and severe at critical periods, stands out before them in evidence of the fact that there is something more than human associated with the gospel that she had embraced, and that there were some sacred lines along which were communicated to her life under those trying ordeals, a divine energy that made her not only equal, but superior to the conditions that confronted her and made her stand out before them in a special manner as a monument of divine grace. Before these children the double revelation has appeared—the unswerving loyalty of mother to truth and the clear attestation also of the interest that the Lord God has in the institution that she had accepted as his church and which, by the grace of God, had been sanctified as a channel through which the streams of divine energy were constantly communicated to her, so that passing through distressing conditions, some of which those who were acquainted with her in this life know nothing of except as she may have made reference to them, she was enabled to abide until the end, and then quietly speed away to the rest for which she for years had been hoping.

Now, I turn, under conditions attending the occasion, to the passages of Scripture to which I directed your attention. The one is in the form of a question and that question follows a series of strange announcements made by the apostle; announcements of a character to make the skeptic stop and think seriously; announcements of a character to inspire, and to renew already inspired hope within the believer's mind, and to make him catch up the question as it falls from the pen of the inspired writer and chant it as a psalm of praise, an anthem of honor to God, "O DEATH, WHERE IS THY STING? O GRAVE, WHERE IS THY VICTORY?" as I think and as they think of the character to which I am referring this morning; for life and its perplexities were sanctified in such a way by the grace of God as to make of them Ebenezer stones upon which her knees rested a thousand times, while with outstretched arms she offered supplication to God, and fresh from the celestial throne received in return such streams as made her soul rich in heavenly experience.

If we turn our thoughts to the exit from this life of a soul so blessed and sanctified, we have no longer any occasion to use this portion of the language of my text in the form of a question that expresses fear or anxiety or dubiety, but to ring it out as I stated as an anthem of praise, an expression of triumph, as a challenge to the grave and a challenge to death to bring out their greater arguments and tell us where are to be found their signs of victory or their evidence of sting.

The argument is taken from all the mooted darkness of the shadows of the tomb; the terror is removed from the thoughts that cluster and associate themselves around the idea of death. Instead of a form withered and blasted by the touch of time and the influences of decay; instead of fixing our minds upon the object that is engaging our thoughts and seeing the shrinking form, we see a brilliant spirit, a spirit looming up brightly before us. As the vision of the mortal recedes, that spirit grows brighter and freer from the restrictions that have hampered it, and merging forth from those conditions, we behold it as it looks upon the body that it has left, and the environments from which it has been freed at last, and with a smile divinely sweet upon its features, it gazes and asks that question, "O death, where is thy sting?" Lay the mortal body away into the quietude of the sepulchre, but talk not of victory, except for the ascending spirit. Triumphant in the atmosphere of the divine that has been prepared for those whose lives being consecrated to the service of God, have taken advantage of all that is associated therewith, and permitted themselves to be raised by the God-leverage from earth conditions into the association of the blessed—let the real being—the spirit talk of victory. Let the grave be silent.

The other part of my text is simply an isolated portion of a sentence, "The hope set before us;" and right at this juncture the mind turns to consider what there is embodied in the thought of the hope set before the righteous. You will remember where the revelator went, when he wanted to talk in regard to something that was to be blessed in a peculiar sense. He leaves the avenues that are lighted up with earth's luminaries; he leaves the spheres of the song and the dance, the music and merriment and the festive chamber and all of the spheres of carnal pleasure in this world, and passing over to that place that men, outside of the gospel, have called darkness and gloom and referring to those who have taken advantage of the privileges divinely extended to them, he declares, "Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord, from henceforth; yea, saith the Spirit, for they rest from their labors and their works do follow them." There he locates the blessed; and I believe the inspired penman had in view what the Apostle Paul had before him when he used the language, "the hope set before us," and there clustered around his thought of the dead that had died in the Lord, all that is comprehended in that idea. In his vision, the sweep of which had been given by divine inspiration, he makes the circuit of the eternal realm or of the dwelling place of the great God, embracing within its area all the fullness of peace and comfort, the gladness and the satisfaction that the infinite mind could make possible for those who would prepare themselves by His means for it. After traversing this elysian he brings all the possibilities of that celestial provision, within the scope of his intended utterance, then strikes off that portion of the sentence, "The hope set before us." "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord from henceforth." Why? They have emerged from the conditions mortal; they have simply been transferred from an estate that was hampered by continual restrictions, and have soared away to find the atmosphere prepared of God, where the fruition of that "hope" shall be found, and where men shall be as satisfied with the conditions that confront them, if they have been faithful to the trust confided; as God Almighty is in His own sphere; as Jesus Christ is in His, where the mysteries of ten thousand unspeakable and inextinguishable conditions of this life will melt away under the light of a single revelation of results, and where the clouds that had gathered and the torturesome distress that had mingled therewith, making life almost insufferable at times, and causing the soul to wonder why the Almighty God, in His wisdom, could allow such conditions, shall be forgotten, except as parts of a holy discipline. By a single word that shall fall from the lips of God himself shall be dissipated all the impenetrable mists as haze before the sun of the morning.

"The hope set before us." If I were anxious, or the duty were assigned to me, to select some who, in my judgment, might be named as having prepared themselves for the enjoyment of the fruition of the hope referred, I could willingly and cheerfully, without any hesitation, point out, as one, the sister who is the subject of our thought this morning. I knew of her when it meant something to stand, when the war waged; I knew of her under the burdens of anxiety with reference to her family; I knew of her when, in the integrity of her spirit, she gave a fuller range to God and his purposes than to herself; when she threw open her heart and brain and spirit, and said: "Lord, I am not equal to the occasion, step in and occupy in my life and form my character as is pleasing to thee." I witnessed something of her development and feel warranted this morning in making reference to her as I have done. I could cheerfully and willingly, with all the candor of my spirit, make selection of this sister as one in whom was evidenced the divinity of the gospel, the mercy of God, and as one who had, by following Christ, prepared herself cheerfully, trustingly for the enjoyment of that which is comprehended in "the hope set before us," and speak of her in the language of the other inspired writer, "Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord."

You know that when Paul stood before the ruler he was charged with a good many offenses, nearly all of which he denied, yet rallying after entering a general denial, he makes the single exception and says, "After the way they call heresy, so worship I the God of my fathers, believing all things which are written in the law and the prophets: and have hope toward God, which they themselves also allow, that there shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and unjust. And herein do I exercise myself, to have always a conscience void of offense toward God, and toward men." [Acts 24: 14, 15]. So the apostle makes reference to the resurrection of the dead as having comprehended in it the "hope" of all Israel. His mind, evidently under the touch of inspiration that he then felt, had darted away back through the years and he had noted the descent of the Spirit upon Job, and, putting his hand to his ears to catch the utterance, he heard the words: "Oh that my words were now written! Oh that they were printed in a book! that they were graven with an iron pen and lead in the rock forever! for I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth: and though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God: whom I shall see for myself, and my eyes shall behold, and not another." [Job 19: 23-28]. He saw that inspirational grace moving down through the years and fall upon the Psalmist, inditing upon his pen the language, "God shall redeem my soul from the power of the grave, for he will receive me."

He noted it as it fell upon Isaiah and moved his hand to write, "Thy dead men shall live, together with my dead body shall they arise. Awake and sing, ye that dwell in dust: for thy dew is as the dew of herbs, and the earth shall cast out the dead." [Isa. 26: 19].

He saw it fall upon the brain of Hosea and witnessed the result of its descent as the words were inscribed: "I will ransom them from the power of the grave; I will redeem them from death: O death, I will be thy plagues; O grave, I will be thy destruction." [Hosea 13: 14].

He noted it as it rested upon the heart of a Daniel, and raising him from the conditions that burdened him, inspired him to put on record those wondrous words, "And many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to everlasting life, and some to shame and everlasting contempt." [Dan. 12: 2]. He notes it as it moved along through the ages, first upon one and then upon another of those whom God would make ministers in the testimony of the divinity of the great gospel message committed to the trust of men. He found one after another of them rising and almost vying with each other in inscribing upon imperishable tablets for history's sake, the testimony, that hope was not furnished as a something by which to awaken joy in the heart of some of the ancient ones alone, but was, as the Book of Mormon distinctly affirms, intended for the race of man. According to that book, God does nothing save it be for the benefit of all men. He has no favorites in the world, and that which He provides as a means is capable of serving its purpose, beginning with the first who fell under the influence of its touch, and extending until the last son of Adam who shall stand upon the earth, shall be enraptured by its inspiring excellence, and saved by the energy or potency that is connected with it.

It was "the hope set before" all, and looking unto Jesus Christ as the embodiment in letter and in spirit as a focus in practice and theory of the divine intention, he could hear, as you and I may, if our ears are attuned to things divine this morning, the words: "I am the resurrection and the life. He that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live; and he that liveth and believeth in me shall never die."

Ah, if we think and think connectedly and steadily but for a short season we are warranted in believing that the vain imaginations of the past when death appeared as a monster came merely as the suggestion of an enemy rather than a friend, when we saw dear ones decaying and passing away as to this mortal life, and we questioned the wisdom of God; I say, that these bitter feelings are swept away and we feel like calling upon all that is within us to engage in the anthem of praise to Him who has ordained that this life will be very short at best, so that henceforth, as we accept of the divine provisions and develop under them, we can make seemingly short our career here and hasten over to the better estate that the Infinite mind has made possible for men.

But you ask me, Outside of the Bible, what do you know about things being better beyond than here? I will tell you how I know. I look about me in the world to-day, I see in the interlacing of every leaf, on the delicate tracing of an oyster shell that no human skill can imitate, in the human eye with all its possibilities, and the drum of the ear with all its susceptibility; I look upon the human things about me that are out of the range and skill of man to reproduce, and as I canvass this vast territory before us and see myself as but a drop in the ocean of actual, natural and physical fact, I see the impress of a divine hand. I see the revelation of a Divine comprehension. I see at least a something that is superior to the human and it agrees because of its grandeur, its beauty, its unexcelled greatness, that no enemy to mankind ever ordained those conditions; it is man's best friend who did it, because in so far as man will adapt himself regularly to environments, they become things of beauty and a joy forever to him, and it is only the abuse of those things that invites distress. And if I can but feel that to bless my three score years and ten in this life there has been such infinite wisdom employed, with such interest as to create all these conditions in and for man and adapt them to the very brightest and and broadest expansion of his intellectual power so that he can be almost glorified under these conditions I must confess a purpose in it all; and as I think of this, I ask, what can be that purpose? If man climbs the ladder that is thus provided until he gets as high as these possibilities of earth will permit, he must find a stepping place somewhere at the top of the ladder where he can launch abroad and above, and it cannot be a God who when he has shown so much interest here will lose that interest in the life beyond. No; with the increase of human capacity and power as he steps from the highest round of the ladder here on earth to the lowest round of the ladder beyond, men will merge into better conditions and the increase will continue, and he needs no Bible to demonstrate it. All the indications are that this life is but the vestibule and that there is a sphere beyond better than this where the utility of present growth will be demonstrated. It is a fact that the impress of God is on everything that is natural in the world around us and as we reason and study and hope, the more we do so, the more we actually enter into the expectation of an estate beyond, where perfected conditions obtain.

I take a grain of corn plucked from the ear, full, plump and fresh. It is a marvel. I lay it here on the shelf or away in a cave like some of this Jaredite corn that has for some two thousand years been stored away in a cave where the moisture did not reach it. By and by it is exhumed and it does not look like it did in the beginning; it is shrivelled up and dry. It is not plump and rounded out. No, but put it in the ground and await results. The Jaredite corn hidden away for over a thousand years is re-producing of its kind, things of beauty and fresh and pleasant to the eye throughout different parts of the states to-day. I think of the wrinkled faces; I think of those whose hairs were whitening, of those who are feeling the touch of time and are under the influence of mortal decay, and as I think I cannot satisfy myself that the great God who formed these beautiful beings with their masterly and inimitable qualities intended that they should simply become food for insects and for worms. No,

I look as the wrinkles groove the face, as the expression of care is traced upon the brow and I see the hands as they hang wearily down and the steps falter and the form is tottering. I think of that furrowed and weary form as encasing a something that God is particularly interested in; and I think of that form at last going down, inflexible and shrivelled until it dröps into its resting place in the grave; but instinctively I also think of the newer form of life; I think of the beautiful arrangement in the way of development that lies beyond, and my spirit, when I contemplate this, is carried away from the atmosphere of gloom that enshrouded the thought of death and of the grave in years past. I say to the people, Reserve your tears for those that are alive. When I am dead, put a smile on your face. Weep for me if at all while I live. It is uncertainty while I live. I do not know where a week from today will find me; I do not know how far the effort at integrity that has characterized the few years of the past will remain with me; but when the conflict is over and when my form, though wrinkled and bearing evidence of care, is lying before you then look upon my casket with a smile upon your face and think of me as having figured for something else than the grave and as having passed on to my inheritance; and unless all creation is without design or ultimate, unless my hope in the gospel is vain, unless God is isolated from the gospel I have embraced; think of me under the light of the "hope set before us;" think of me under the testimony of the wise men who wrote, "Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord." Turn then to those I may leave behind and weep for them if you have tears to shed.

It is our loss of companionship; it is not a thought of fear or doubt with regard to the spirit that is gone, that brings the tear to the eyes of Sr. Drury and Brn. Cyrus and Thomas today. It is the thought of separation for the time being; it is what we are deprived of. We think of one gone on before and as our thoughts turn towards her, there comes back from the realm of Paradise a satisfying response. It is like a holy shower from the God-land and it moistens the atmosphere around us; it bathes our faces; it softens our features; it soothes the brain; it mellows our hearts, and by its influence hope is nourished and we feel that we are in an atmosphere that is celestial for the while it abides with us.

Now this may not in a special sense run in the way of a funeral sermon. It may be outside of the regular lines, but when I get into contemplation upon the theme of the "hope set before us" and I am called upon to speak with reference to those of whose experiences I have knowledge, every thought or reference thereto is like a thought of joy, and I gather strength and courage therefrom. I feel just as I have stated, like breaking forth in harmony with the inspired man's words and demanding, "Oh death, where is thy sting? Oh grave, where is thy victory?" You know he says, "The sting of death is sin and the strength of sin is law;" but if sin is rooted out and Christ takes the place thereof and righteous desires are planted and ripened, then the sting is removed. Death has no significance except the significance that the doorway from my outer yard into my parlor has on a stormy day—the transition into a better condition, opening unto pleasanter realizations. It is the taking off of these outer garments that press and fret and chafe and worry and weary and hamper and harass the soul. It uncages the spirit and allows it in the very atmosphere of God to take flight and move to the height of the possibilities for which it has prepared itself. Oh, that I may die the death of the righteous and my last end may be like His; and that when the call shall come for me to hasten hence, I may be in as good condition as was Sr. Jane Mooney to lay down this mortal coil and rise to conditions divinely blissful.

May the Lord bless those who are chief mourners. Temptation, trial, doubt and darkness await them—some of them in particular. Strong natures, fixed habits, operate as barriers against the influx of divine influence and power; but turn to mother's character, let memory bring up the incidents of her life when under the weights that were upon her through years that you know of, and as you saw her rise from the midst of these conditions to where she could praise God with a freedom that was a marvel to your eyes in those days, there read your possibilities and allow no influence or power or temptation or doubt or fear to for a single moment weaken your confidence in God or make you underestimate his power, or in any sense minimize your love for the truth she set before you. In so far as she represented the character of Jesus Christ whom she sought to pattern after, follow you in her steps so that at last when the wrinkles and the pain and the casket and the grave are forgotten you may rise to those conditions unto which she has hastened and, striking mother's hand again, may never need to say good-by nor ever think of the necessity of shedding a tear. God bless her memory. Peace to her ashes. May we make of life's struggle as grand a success as did she and find infinite glory as our reward and satisfying portion at last. Amen.

GETTING DESPERATE.

The challenge issued by Bro. I. N. White in the defense he has been forced to make against the attacks of some of the ministers of the Christian church, or Disciples, or Church of Christ, whatever may be the correct denominational name of the followers of Alexander Campbell, has created quite a commotion, and Elder Clark Braden has seemingly made widespread efforts to get an official endorsement such as required by Bro. White. In a number of debates held with that people, when Bro.

White successfully met some of the positions advanced by his opponent, members of the Christian church have declared that they did not believe nor accept the position taken by their representative; and Bro. White has decided that when he next meets a representative of that church that he shall present the same kind of an endorsement he is willing to furnish for himself such as was published in the Ensign for May 10, 1900, page 8. The conditions named do not seem very hard and should not be very difficult for a man recognized as a fit representative of the faith held by the church of which these men are members; simply to obtain the endorsement of the chief editor of two of the chief papers published in the interests of that church, and recognized to be such by its members, that Mr. Braden is sound in the faith as they hold it, and a representative minister among them, and that he is a Christian gentleman to his opponent in debate. This endorsement also to be signed by the pastor and clerk of the church where debate is to be held, is about all there is to it. Instead of meeting these simple requirements, state boards and others have been asked for endorsements, and on such endorsements as they have given, Bro. White is asked by his opponents to meet Clark Braden. Rev. Isaac Beckelhymer, of Murphysboro, Illinois, wrote him in a very insolent manner, demanding that he should meet Elder Braden on the endorsements they had secured, and declared they had made arrangements to place Elder Braden in Independence, Missouri, and keep him there until he had turned "Mormonism" "inside out and outside in, upside down and downside up," etc; all this we presume independent of any endorsement. The following is Bro. White's reply; neither Bro. White nor his brethren are a bit scared over this demonstration. If the promise materializes it will work nothing but good to the cause represented by the Saints. This is assuredly the Lord's work and the puny efforts of all such opposers will only make their own weakness apparent. As Jude says they are merely "foaming out their own shame."

"INDEPENDENCE, MO., June 6.
"REV. ISAAC BECKELHYMER:
"SIR.—Yours of the 1st received and noted. Rev. McClure called on me May 25th, at a time when I had not the time to fully examine claimed endorsements. He positively refused to leave them with me for examination; but agreed to furnish me 'certified copies' in two or three days. Not an endorsement nor a copy has he placed in my hands to the time of this writing. I challenge you to do it, sir, in fulfillment of my challenge to Braden. If Braden is what you claim for him, pray, why do you have to go from Dan to Beersheba and inveigle this and that board for an endorsement when my challenge has made it so easy to obtain simply by writing to the editors of two of your church journals? Let Braden come to time like a man, and furnish an endorsement from these two editors, stating (1) That he is an accredited representative of their church, (2) That he is sound in the faith as they hold and teach it, (3) That he is a Christian gentleman to an opponent. Three or four lines of endorsement from these editors, covering the points asked for, is all I require of Braden.

"If he is so much admired by the Campbellite church, why is Braden and his like dodging around Robin Hood's barn hunting for endorsements? I challenge and dare him to lay before me (such as my repeated challenge demands) an endorsement from the two chief editors of the two journals named. (1) That Braden is an accredited representative of their church. (2) That he is sound in the faith as they hold and teach it. (3) That he is a Christian gentleman to an opponent. Will he do it? or will he continue to play the coward by inveigling boards, etc., for secondhand endorsements, on purpose to evade my repeated challenge.

"I laid my challenge at Braden's feet on the evening of November 12, 1899, at the close of the Alma debate. This challenge was repeated in circular form December 27th, and sent broadcast and met Braden's cowardly circular that he put out right after the Alma debate, wherein he claimed 'White had backed out' and had refused to meet him in debate at Independence." Here, sir, is seven months since I laid my challenge at Braden's feet, and not an endorsement has he furnished me. Now, after waiting nearly seven months, I am promising 'certified copies' of something!! Pray, sir, where are even those 'somethings'?

"You say, 'That no preventing providence, we shall within a few weeks, put Braden into Independence, and keep him there until he turns Mormonism inside out,' etc. You will perceive, sir, by examining the first part of my challenge, that Braden has had that opportunity offered him ever since early in 1895. You will also perceive, sir, that Campbellism, at the same time, comes in for its share of turning 'inside out.' Don't forget that, will you?"

"Braden claims to have had fifteen years of experience at turning 'Mormonism inside out.' If his success is to be measured by the number of Mormons he has converted to Campbellism, they will be found as scarce as hen's teeth. Will you or Braden please name even one he has so converted. Give name, time and place, please. Braden's dirty efforts to kill the faith of the Saints has been as destitute of success, as would be the puny efforts of a monkey to demolish the wall of Gibraltar with a penny tack hammer.

"Yours for honest work,
"I. N. WHITE."

FILTHINESS.

Text: Eph. 4: 5. Neither Filthiness.

1. The Epistle to the Ephesians is a very noted and a very wonderful portion of God's Holy Word. After giving it lately a very close and prayerful reading, this thought came into my mind. If many of our able ministers were shut up to this one brief epistle for foundations for their discourses for an entire year, they would have no trouble whatever, about those foundations. I am entirely confident that I could prepare 200 or more sermons myself upon the texts and thoughts in this brief portion of the New Testament. Of course, men of real learning and ability could do much more, and better.

2. The words I have chosen as a text suggest some very important matters to my mind. These, I repeat, are not matters of a light or trifling character, but such as are of very great and grave import.

3. The context is also very fine. "Be ye therefore followers of God as dear children; and walk in love, as Christ also hath loved us, and hath given Himself for us. But fornication and all uncleanness or covetousness, let it not be once named among you, as becometh saints. Neither filthiness, nor foolish talking, nor jesting, which are not convenient; but rather giving of thanks. For ye know that no unclean person, nor covetous man, who is an idolater, hath any inheritance in the kingdom of Christ and of God."

4. All filthiness is an utter abomination in the sight of God. He will not tolerate it in his presence nor among his children. Filthiness in one's person, filthiness of body, is an intolerable disgrace to any one who is a professing Christian. Many persons who have to toil in various ways and avocations cannot avoid having their outer garments soiled, but this has nothing to do with filthiness of body.

5. All ministers and their families, especially, should be models of neatness and cleanliness. The Rev. William G. Caples, a master spirit and a noble man, once preached a sermon on Saturday at 11 o'clock, at one of his quarterly meetings in order to get the stationed preacher to get out of and keep out of his soiled linen.

6. The beds with only one sheet, or only some old blankets and quilts that some circuit preachers have to sleep on, and wrap themselves in, are enough to sicken the body and the soul of any man whose mind and heart are clean. The torture these things inflict is just simply beyond expression. Bishop Asbury exclaimed: "O, for a clean board to sleep on!"

But these sermon outlines are only intended to be suggestive.

7. Ill-prepared or filthy food is also a curse to soul and body. Some corn-bread and bacon and an egg is food good enough for a king if it is perfectly nice, and perfectly prepared. Filthy food is nauseating and horrible. A great many cooks never learn what water and fire are for. And they never learn how to prepare the simplest food properly.

8. Now, then, if filthiness in body, and clothing, and bedding, and cooking, is so absolutely abhorrent and disgusting, what must the case be where there is filthiness in heart, mind, spirit, thought, and expression? The truth is this: A pure heart and mind and a clean body and life are vitally essential to Christian manhood and womanhood.

"Having therefore these promises, dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God."—2 Cor. 7: 1.—St. Louis Christian Advocate, May 2, 1900.

DROPSY TREATED FREE.

$3.75 WORTH OF NEW TREATMENT WILL BE SENT FREE TO ANY OF OUR READERS BY THE WELL KNOWN CHICAGO SCIENTIST, DR. FRANKLIN MILES, M. D., LL. B.

Dropsy is a terrible disease in its last stages. At first it is apparently more harmless, a little puffing of the eyelids or hands or a slight swelling of the feet, ankles or abdomen. Yet no death is more fearful. The unfortunate patient slowly drowns in the water of dropsy, which Dr. Miles' specialty is disease of the heart, liver, kidneys, nerves and dropsy. To introduce this new Dropsy Treatment he will give away $10,000 worth. Hundreds of testimonials of the most remarkable cures will be sent on request. One gentleman was cured after having been cured by ten Grand Rapids physicians; a lady after six able Chicago doctors had pronounced her case hopeless.

Mr. H. A. Groce, of 404 Mountain St., Elgin, Ill., aged 72, was thought to be incurable from dropsy, which reached to his lungs and caused smothering spells, coughs, shortness of breath. He reports: "Dropsy all gone; better every way." Mr. James Pinkerton, editor of the Russville Sun, Ind., writes: "Mrs. P. was given up by the physician. She owes her life to Dr. Miles' skill. She now performs her household duties at 65 years of age." Alex. Ethier, Calumet, Mich., states: "I suffered seriously for years from dropsy, rheumatism and heart disease. After taking Personal Treatment I gained 60 pounds and now always feel well." Mrs. M. B. Morelan, of Rogers, Columbus Co., Ohio, says: "Dr. Miles saved my life by curing me of that awful disease, dropsy and heart trouble. I suffered terribly." Miss Sophia Snowberg of No. 237 21st Ave., New York, certifies that "Three days after commencing to take Treatment for dropsy it was nearly all gone, after two allopathic and two homeopathic physicians had failed." Mr. A. P. Colburn of Blessing, Iowa: "Dr. Miles' Treatment has performed a miracle for Mrs. C. after her leg burst from dropsy."

Dr. Miles' Treatment is much superior to any others and to obtain the best result it is prepared for each patient. Every afflicted person should send for this marvelous Treatment. $3.75 per bottle. Free on request. Address Dr. Miles, M. D., 201-209 State St., Chicago. Please mention this paper.

An Old Saw that is Senseless.

In olden times when a person died it was customary to toll the church bell a certain number of times to indicate whether it was a man, woman or child. For a woman it was tolled three times and for a man thrice three times. The stroke of a bell was called a "toller," and hence it was nine tellers for a man; or, as folks said in those days, "Nine tellers mark a man." This saying, which was continued long after the tolling custom was abolished, finally became converted into the present saying, "Nine tailors make a man," which is devoid of both sense and reason.—June Ladies' Home Journal.

"Strong Drink Not Good."

Alcohol is not a food for an athlete, and if not for an athlete then not for any one. It hardens the tissues of the body, and that is not desirable; besides, it hardens the liver at the same time. When the question arises between a man and alcohol, the safe side—for the alcohol—is the outside. Mechanically, it may have its place, but its use is not to be commended, either as a beverage or a food.—June Ladies' Home Journal.

THERE were only five large cities in America in 1800. Philadelphia, with 66,000, was the largest, the seat of government and the center of wealth and culture. New York was next with 60,000; Baltimore was third with 26,500; Boston fourth with 25,000; and Charleston, South Carolina, fifth with 19,000 people.—May Ladies' Home Journal.

PASTORALS.

To the Saints of Colorado, Eastern Wyoming and New Mexico, Greeting: By the concurrent action of Bro. Joseph Luff and the president of the church I have been given the active oversight of the field comprised in the above named territory.

Bro. C. R. Duncan and J. F. Curtis will have charge of the gospel tent work, assisted a part of the time by Bro. A. B. Hanson and others as we may be able to arrange.

Bro. M. R. Scott, Jr., will look after the work in western Colorado and New Mexico.

Eastern Wyoming will receive attention from me a little later. I would like to correspond with the Saints scattered throughout the mission to ascertain the prospect for openings in different places.

Dear brethren and sisters, we need your hearty co-operation. Sustain us by your confidence, your faith and your prayers, and I believe a good work will be done in the Colorado mission this year.

the prayers of the Saints for wisdom to direct the work, and physical strength to endure. Trusting we may, by wise and upright conduct, merit the esteem and confidence of the Saints among whom we may be called to labor, and above all that we may live so as to be worthy of the blessings and favor of our heavenly Father, I am

Your brother and co-worker, JOHN B. ROUSH, Wray, Colorado.

YUMA, Col., May 19.

To the Dear Saints of Spring River District, Greeting:—Having been appointed by Bro. I. N. White, as missionary in charge over this district, I desire the co-operation of all the Saints of the district, that this year may be one of activity in all departments of the work which God has intrusted to our care.

Those wanting preaching let us know. My permanent address is Lebeck, Missouri.

I left home May 4th, preached in seven different places, held one decade of eight sessions with Elder P. W. Shick, of Christian church; R. W. Davis was our moderator who rendered me valuable assistance.

While at Walker I baptized two. All the missionaries are at work. We are holding forth at Echo, Indian Territory. I will labor in the territory and in Kansas for a few months.

Yours in the conflict for truth, F. C. KECK.

ECHO, I. T., May 23.

Canadian Saints Take Notice.

We have made arrangements for reduced fares to St. Thomas conference with the Grand Trunk, Canadian Pacific, Michigan Central, Lake Erie and Detroit River railways.

Delegates must purchase first class, full fare one way tickets to St. Thomas, and obtain certificate to that effect on standard certificate form (form 98). Ticket agents are supplied with standard certificates and are instructed to issue them on application.

If three hundred have certificates you go home free; if fifty you will return at one-third of the one way first class fare; if less than fifty, at two-thirds of the one way first class fare.

Can We Have a Tent?

Editor Ensign:—May I use your valuable columns to state condition of affairs in British Columbia? Some ten months ago your writer started in at missionary work in this province where never before the gospel trumpet had been blown.

be reckoned amongst the poor. Street preaching is out of the question; it rains about every other day; am safe in saying that all the dry days in the year do not total much more than three months. One cannot go to the country and obtain a free school very handsly because country schools are scarce since there is so little farming carried on; ranching on a large scale and mining are the prominent occupations.

Brothers and sisters, can I have your assistance in this matter? If so, please contribute and send the finance to me at Chilliwack, British Columbia.

I want to see the work progress, and, unless present difficulties pass away, it will be impossible, judging from appearances, to further and extend the cause. Have baptized some thirty-two since my advent, but we are too weak to undertake this work alone.

They turn me out o' schills and kirks, And hells o' every name, Till oot o' cash and down in heart. I turn my fisteps home.

Noo where can I get place tae preach, I kenna where tae gang; The preacher ha'e sic awfu' po'er Tae mak the folk dae wrang.

Had I a tent tae preach within Owned by nae Gentile crew, I'd sing my sang, like nightingale, And about the gospel true.

So come along wi' your baubees, And syne a ten' we'll hae; And syle o' preachers and a' cranks, The gospel will get a' way.

Hurry up the baubees (pennies, U. S.), everything counts. In holy bonds, DANIEL MACGREGOR. CHILLIWACK, B. C., May 25.

NOTICES.

Oklahoma Saints:—At our last annual reunion a committee was appointed to consider and report on the advisability of a co-operative boarding house at our reunion this year.

The plan is about as follows: The committee provide a place, hire a cook, provide provisions, etc. At the close of meeting the entire expense is summed up, the cost per meal determined, and those boarding pay their proportion, according to number of meals taken.

Prospects were never more flattering for the work in Oklahoma than this year. Now, let every Saint in Oklahoma arrange to attend our fourth annual reunion, and show their appreciation of all the good things of life by "Praising Him from whom all blessings flow."

DIED.

WARE.—At Richmond, Missouri, May 7, 1900, Sr. Martha A., wife of Elder R. L. Ware. She was born at Butler, Bates county, Missouri, February 4, 1842, and was baptized in 1871 by Joseph Lee. A kind husband and four children mourn their loss. Funeral sermon by Elder J. C. Foss. Text, St. John 11: 25.

WOODWARD.—Josephine N. Woodward, born April 2, 1844, at Stafford, Connecticut; died May 21, 1900, at St. Louis, Missouri. She united with the church in Providence, Rhode Island, and will be remembered by the Providence Saints by the name of "Pond," her maiden name. During the past twelve or fourteen years she has been a sufferer from paralysis, and has been unable to attend church services. Having received convincing evidence of the divinity of our work she remained a believer until the end. Funeral services conducted by J. C. Hitchcock.

NUTT.—At Albia, Missouri, May 20, 1900. Bro. Wm. C. Nutt. Deceased, was born November 16, 1862, baptized in May 1889, by Elder Atwell. He lived a consistent Saint and died in full assurance of a glorious resurrection. He left a devoted wife and five small children to mourn his loss. Funeral services conducted by Elder Z. Decker, sermon by Priest D. N. Tillman, to a large concourse of friends but strangers to the gospel. His works will follow him. It was remarked, "we knew he was a christian, but did not know what church he belonged to."

HENWARD.—At Haverhill, Massachusetts, May 29, 1900, of typhoid pneumonia, Sr. Elmira S. Henward. She was born April 11, 1840, at Addison, Maine. Baptized March 26, 1872, by Elder J. C. Foss. Sr. Elmira was instrumental in bringing the gospel to Haverhill, has always borne her testimony to its truth when occasion presented itself. Three of her daughters are in the church and mourn their mother's departure. Funeral services at the home of her daughter and son-in-law, Bro. and Sr. Frost, 3 Carlton Place, by Elder R. Bullard, assisted by Elder Geo. W. Robley. One by one the Master calls his loved ones home.

MOLYNEUX.—Sr. Sarah Molyneux born November 5, 1824, at Stockport, Cheshire, England, died May 12, 1900, at St. Louis, Missouri. Early in the forties she united with the church in her native land, and later, the descriptive powers of the elders concerning the beauties of Zion, induced her to come to America. In crossing the plains, she shared the same sad and unfortunate fate as did many other honest hearted souls. Her disappointing experience with error did not, however, steel her heart against truth and the Spirit of God, hence, she united with the Reorganized church at St. Louis, Missouri, May 23, 1894, being baptized by Elder Wm. Anderson. For about thirty-six years she served faithfully under this banner, and even now her ever pleasant features will be missed in the congregation of the Saints. Funeral was largely attended by relatives and friends. Perhaps some of her England friends will remember her as Sr. Bradshaw. Services conducted by J. C. Hitchcock.

GRAY Why let all your neighbors and friends think you must be twenty years older than you are? Yet it's impossible to look young with the color of 70 years in the hair. It's sad to see young persons look prematurely old in this way. Sad because it's all unnecessary; for gray hair may always be restored to its natural color by using AYER'S HAIR VIGOR. For over half a century this has been the standard hair preparation. It is an elegant dressing; stops falling of the hair; makes the hair grow; and cleanses the scalp from dandruff. $1.00 a bottle. All druggists. I have been using Ayer's Hair Vigor for over 20 years and I can heartily recommend it to the public as the best hair tonic in existence. J. G. ALDENSON, April 24, 1899. Editor, Tex. If you do not obtain all the benefits you expect from the Vigor, write the Doctor about it. Dr. J. C. AYER, Lowell, Mass.

TRIALS.

Clouds and sunshine, storm and calm, light and darkness, heat and cold make up the sum of the seasons' changes, all of which seem necessary to life and development. Without the clouds there could be no gentle rain to moisten the parched and thirsty vegetation. Without the sunshine there could be no growth in field or orchard. Without the storm the condensations of vapors and miasmas could not be scattered and dispelled to give place to pure air and life-giving elements. All the changing conditions may not be pleasant to endure, and there are some from which we shrink; but these different seasons are ordained by a wise Creator to work for good to His creations, and they are made to bring blessings to all. The earth resting during the winter, warmed by the genial rays of the sun, watered by the springtime showers, takes on the new robe of emerald hue so pleasing to the eye; and the eager cattle feast upon the tender grasses, while as the seasons appear the fruits of field and tree are made to give forth abundantly to bless mankind. So with the experience of those who put on Christ, the natural seasons of time seem to be reproduced in their spiritual life. The new convert, not understanding the warfare before him, may think that because he is a child of the Highest that he will be cared for and shielded from the powers which assail him and seek his overthrow; but he finds as he progresses that he has had a misconception of the intentions of the Lord with regard to the part he is to take in working out his own salvation.

The Father has not designed that His children should have their characters made ready to put on like a garment, but he gives each one the exalted privilege of forming his own character, having mercifully provided for him the pattern so that he should know just how to build, not alone for time, but for eternity; and through the ministry of trial, temptation, and sometimes affliction, the development needed to qualify the individual for the highest condition of life in the world to come, is attained; without such experience he could not be prepared for that blessed estate. It is a severe test which is applied to the gold in its refining; it is heated, it is said, until the operative can see plainly the reflection of his image in the molten liquid, before it is deemed sufficiently pure from dross to be useful. And it is a fact that the individual passing through the furnace of affliction and trial, if rightly exercised thereby, takes on more and more the character and image of the Divine One, as he is brought to realize that only in the promises of the Lord is there enduring happiness and peace, and that to attain it he must do the things pleasing to his heavenly Father, and manifest in his character and life those attributes exemplified in the life of Christ, and so become "like Him."

The impetuous Peter at one time in his early experience would have killed those who sought to harm his Lord; but later learned that the weapons of the warfare that he, with all Saints, was called to wage, were not of a carnal character, but were more mighty and weighty; for whereas the former affected only this present existence, the latter influences not only this life, but the greater life to come; and he learned that trials were a part of the experience of every saint. He, therefore, gives the following exhortation and admonition to the saints:

Beloved, think it not strange concerning the fiery trial which is to try you, as though some strange thing happened unto you.—1 Pet. 4: 12.

It would seem as if some had complained because their peace had been rudely broken and they were made to feel the force of an enraged adversary; and the apostle tells them they should not think this was a strange and unusual thing, but rather infer that this experience was simply the natural result of service to God, and should be as much expected and counted upon as being a part of their gospel life, as the blessings, peace and favor of the Holy Spirit when giving faithful and diligent service in their calling. Note the significance of the apostle's admonition, "Beloved, think it not strange concerning the FIERY trial which is to try you." Not only is there to be the ordinary and trivial trials incident to this life, the every day vexatious, annoying and petty difficulties to be met, but the apostle evidently seeks to impress them with the thought that there is to be something in the experience of every one which is to be in the nature of a cleansing and purifying force, and which is out of the domain of the ordinary; something which will try the very depths of the soul to endure; something that will make every soul experience a part of that which our loving Savior endured in the agony of his last mortal hours, when he felt as if all had left him to suffer and die alone, innocent, pure and holy as he was; when he felt that even His Father, who will He had always done, and to whom He had shown Himself an obedient Son in all things, that even He had left Him; and in the depths of His agony at this thought, that cry burst from His parched and pallid lips which has echoed all along the ages, and today touches the hearts of those who love Him, with the intensity of its expression: "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?"

If the Son of God, the Savior of the world, had to meet that kind of an experience notwithstanding his obedience in all things required, by his Father, should it be thought a strange or unnatural thing that his followers would, at some time in their warfare, have the same experience? It can be safely said that every individual whose experience in the church reaches any considerable length will have sooner or later been made to feel that for some reason their prayers were unavailing; that the Lord would not answer when they called, even though the extremity seemed to be the greatest of their lives and the necessity most urgent and pressing; that God had forgotten his promise to be with them in trouble and that he would never leave or forsake them. But it is equally as certain that he has not forsaken any of his children and when they have patiently abided in the integrity and loyalty of their faith until the Lord's time came, they have seen and been thankful for deliverance. He loves his children and always works for their best good. Why then should not every child of God have as sublime a faith and confidence in the love of the Father as had grand old Job when he, in the fullness of his trust in the wisdom and mercy of God, exclaimed, "Though he slay me, yet will I trust in him."

Do not then fret or faint under trial. Paul says: My son, despire not thou the chastening of the Lord, nor faint when thou art rebuked of him: for whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth. If ye endure chastening, God dealeth with you as with sons; * * * But if ye be without chastisement, whereof all are partakers, then are ye bastards, and not sons.—Heb. 12:5-8.

The Savior taught: Every branch in me that beareth not fruit he taketh away; and every branch that beareth fruit, he purgeth it, that it may bring forth more fruit.—John 15: 2.

Peter writes: That the trial of your faith, being much more precious than of gold that perisheth, though it be tried with fire, might be found unto praise and honour and glory at the appearing of Jesus Christ.—1 Peter 1: 7.

Let every Saint then strive to endure even the fiery trial of their faith with patience and fortitude, in the assurance that it will work out and yield "the peaceable fruit of righteousness unto them, which are exercised thereby." (Heb. 12: 11).

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

BRO. J. F. PATTON, Alexandria, South Dakota, nearly 72 years old, desires the prayers of the Saints that if it is the will of the Lord his health may be restored that he may be useful in the spread of the gospel, he being badly afflicted.

BRO. GEO. C. MARKWICK, 215 State street, Pekin, Illinois, writes of his appreciation of the work the ENSIGN is doing. There are but two other Saints in the place beside himself and they do not get to hear any preaching, consequently the sermons in the ENSIGN are helpful to them. Pekin is in Tazewell county, and perhaps some of the ministry may be able to call on the scattered ones during the year.

ELDER J. W. WIGHT will, for six nights, beginning Monday, June 25th, at Council Bluffs, Iowa, discuss church propositions with Elder Nephi Otteson, who affirms for the church presided over by President Snow. Time will be equally divided and they will have chairman, moderators and rules; something unusual in a discussion with Utah representatives. Elder Otteson will probably know more when he comes out of this effort than he does when he enters it.

BRO. J. P. BIERLEIN, Kiddier, South Dakota, sends the ENSIGN to a friend, an Adventist, and asks us to commence with the issue for May 24th, containing "those excellent articles on the Sabbath," etc. He says:

I just think it is grand, and just such reading as these people should have to consider. There are others here of the same persuasion to whom I intend giving my own ENSIGN for the same object. Bro. I. M. Smith's efforts are of the best, and I value them very highly as they are so easily comprehended and it seems no one can misunderstand him.

SR. E. C. LEHMAN, Cameron, Missouri, greatly desires that any of the traveling ministry going to Central Illinois, would make it a point to visit her parents and two sisters at Weldon, Dewitt county, sixteen miles east of Clinton, the county seat. It is thought some are ready to obey the gospel, although the only knowledge they have has been received through the ENSIGN, tracts, etc. Sr. Lehman says her mother told her two years ago that she was ready to be baptized when opportunity came. Elders should inquire for J. D. Brown, Police Magistrate, and say that Sr. Lehman requested them to call.

REV. DENTON COLLINS, Secor, Illinois, in the Christian Leader for June 12th, has this to say concerning the White-Braden' endorsements:

White is just now pressing Braden for a debate. Braden does not seem able to give satisfactory endorsement to White. White requires the endorsement of the editors of the Christian Standard and Christian Evangelist before he will meet Braden. Cannot these society editors give Braden their endorsement and let him and White proceed with their work? Do they really think White is too strong for Braden? It seems to me an acknowledgement, on our part, that White is too strong for Braden if they do not endorse him, or give their reasons for not doing so, if they have any. The Mormons are making all they can out of this. It is not hurting the Church of Christ, but the societies. There is a standing notice to White, or any other Mormon, to meet your humble servant in debate. This notice is indorsed by the elders and deacons of nine congregations of faithful brethren. We hold ourselves in readiness to meet any of these indorsed men at any time after due notice. If you want some of my argument send for my tract, "The Foundation of Mormonism is revealed."

Bro. White advises that he is still without the certified copies of endorsement promised by Rev. J. D. McClure, May 25th. Among these purported endorsements which Rev. McClure had in his possession when he came to Independence was one written with a typewriter and signed with a rubber stamp, "Christian Leader," but no name or initials were given as authority for the paper or signature, and it was the only one so far as a hasty glance revealed, which complied with the requirements of Bro. White, certifying that Elder Braden was "an accredited representative of their church, sound in the faith as they hold and teach it, and a christian gentleman to an opponent in debate." The absence of any means of identifying the writer or authority by which this endorsement was written, made it, of course, valueless. However, we need not feel anxious about this matter. If Elder Braden and his associates really desire a fair debate, they know perfectly well how it may be had, and Bro. White has submitted very plain terms, easy to be understood; he has himself complied with them and it now remains for his opponents to do likewise.

GENERAL CHURCH NEWS.

INDEPENDENCE.

Sr. H. H. Robinson still continues quite ill. She desires that the Saints will continue to make intercession in her behalf.

Sr. Earl Corthell is improving nicely, and if nothing hinders will soon be out again, which her many friends will be glad to see.

Bro. Arthur H. and Frank W. Mills have again resumed their places in the book and stationery business with their father, Bro. H. R. Mills, but in a somewhat larger capacity than formerly. May they be abundantly successful.

We learn that Sr. Jennie Newton, of Cove, Arkansas, eldest daughter of Bro. and Sr. J. A. Robinson, Sr., is very ill with an attack of partial paralysis. If she can be moved she will be brought here the latter part of the week.

Sr. Fannie Lee left for Denver, Colorado, this (Thursday) morning, for a three months recuperation of her health which has been failing recently. We trust she may be successful and come back renewed and vigorous.

Bro. R. May and W. H. Garrett drove about five miles east of Buckner last Saturday on a call from Bro. M. R. Scott, Jr., for administration, he having been attacked with a hemorrhage while resting at his cousin's, Mr. Edgar Hostetter, while en route to his mission in New Mexico. He was feeling better when the brethren left. A Bro. Boswell, we believe it was, is with Bro. Scott, also assigned to the Colorado mission.

Owing to the small attendance at church last Sunday morning the effort to raise the church debt was postponed until next Sunday morning. Let each one carefully consider the matter and come prepared to give all the assistance possible, that we may present to the Lord and his church a building for worship free from incumbrance. If each does his or her part as they have been prospered, the debt can soon be cleared off.

Sunday was rainy and threatening and the attendance at Sunday School and church was considerably reduced. This was regrettable, especially at the eleven o'clock service when Bro. Joseph Luff preached a stirring and uplifting sermon on the ministry of suffering. We wish every member of the branch could have heard it. The afternoon communion service was good and comforting. At night Bro. Garrett occupied; the rain having ceased the audience was very much larger than at the morning hour.

ST. JOSEPH, MISSOURI.

Elder S. F. Cushman and Priest Walter Smith, lately appointed missionaries to this district, addressed the Saints here Sunday morning and evening. Both sermons were edifying.

Bro. C. F. Guinand held preaching services at Elwood, Kansas, last evening. A school-house was obtained by Bro. G. W. Best for the purpose. The Brighamites have been holding forth over there for some time and Bro.

Guinand will show the differences between the two churches.

Last evening the Religio had an outing at the lake. There were twenty-three in number, making four boat loads. It was an enjoyable time.

We learn that Bro. E. T. Dobson, who has been in Dennison, Iowa, for several months, is quite sick again, not able to return home as yet.

Grandma Jones of Stewartsville, Missouri, (Sr. Wm. Lewis' mother), is very low and though standing on the brink of the dark river, she has no fear. She receives wonderful relief from time to time through administration.

Bro. and Sr. George Leach's house is quarantined. Their little daughter is said to have the smallpox, though the parents are not wholly persuaded.

Sr. Marcus Shaw had a very sick turn last week and is left in a very weak condition.

Sr. Mabel L. Douglas and Mr. John I. Lynch, were united in marriage on Thursday evening, June 14, by Rev. Henry Bullard. These are two very estimable young people and we wish for them peace, happiness and prosperity. G. L. K.

LAMONI, IOWA.

Yesterday, 17th, was children's day here. Several hundred were in attendance at the regular 9:30 service, and at 11 o'clock they assembled in the upper auditorium which was tastefully decorated with flags, flowers, etc., and on an arch over the platform were the words, "Are all the children in?" below which was a gilded star representing the star of Bethlehem and name of the school. Recitations, appropriate songs, birds and organ music, motion exercises and a questioning address by Elder Gunsolley was entertaining and edifying to old and young. Excellent sermons were preached at night by Elder Gunsolley at the Home, on the subject of "Anti-Christ," and by Bishop Kelley at the church. The afternoon social service was profitable to all who attended.

The preaching at the Decatur district conference held at Lucas, Iowa, 9th and 10 inst., was by Elders R. M. Elvin, Joseph Snively and Bishop Wm. Anderson. It was said by those who attended to have been a very good conference.

Two marriages occurred on the 10th inst., one here, by Bro. W. W. Scott, Mr. J. H. Kratzer, of Cainsville, Missouri, to Miss Mabel Coats, of Blythedale, Missouri. The other at Pleasanton, Iowa, by Elder M. M. Turpen, Dr. I. M. Lovett, of Lineville, Iowa, to Miss Maud Bicknell, a daughter of Bro. and Sr. Robert Bicknell, of Pleasanton, Iowa.

The seventy-ninth birthday of Elder Winthrop Blair was celebrated at his home here on the 12th by his relatives who brought presents of remembrance to his comfort.

Apostle W. H. Kelley left for his mission field in Ohio; he baptized two persons in the Home pond before his departure; one was his daughter-in-law, wife of his son Cassius.

Bro. Ed. Stafford and family moved to Texas.

Grandma Bunt, great-grandmother of Bro. Grenawalt, of Lamoni, celebrated her one-hundredth birthday at her home five miles south of here, on the 11th. She has six children living, thirty-four grandchildren, fifty-seven great-grandchildren and four great-grandchildren. Some two hundred and fifty persons attended her centenary festivities, and the old lady performed the feat of baking her own birthday cake, and, with one of her daughters, Grandma Mary A. Grenawalt, aged seventy-two, treated the crowd who enjoyed the occasion hugely.

The semi-monthly prayer and testimony meeting at the Saints' Home, on the night of the 14th; was led by Bro. M. J. Danielson; the good Spirit was present to console and enlighten.

Elder Fred M. Smith, eldest son of President Joseph Smith, besides being a counsellor to Bishop Anderson, is assistant editor of the Saints' Herald and editor of the College City Chronicle.

Elder Harry A. Stebbins has been delivering some Book of Mormon lectures at the Evergreen church of late.

President Joseph Smith started on a missionary tour to Chatham, Ontario, on the 7th, expecting to be absent a month or two.

Some building and improvements going on in the city and country, people generally healthy, weather delightful for summer time, and crops, gardens, orchards, etc., growing and yielding nicely.

CHICAGO, ILLINOIS.

Branch headquarters, 716 W. Van Buren St., Sunday meetings 2:45 and 7:45 p. m.; Lang Mission, 3411 Cottage Grove Ave., 10:45 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.; West Pullman branch, 12024 Union Ave., 10:30 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.; Parkside Mission, 724 Stony Island Ave., 8:00 and 7:30 p. m.; 508 W. 37th St. (colored mission), 10:30 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.

Bro. and Sr. B. F. Durfee, parents of our Sr. Warlick, have been visiting in our city for some days, prior to returning to their California home where they are deprived of the church privileges.

The faithful sisters of the West Pullman branch have purchased a beautiful silver sacrament service for the branch. Are the sisters in advance of the brethren in point of diligence in the work?

Two of our brave, work loving sisters (Pitt and Penney) seeing the necessity of new paper for our hall, started out to draw on the gentle purse strings for a donation, and were happily surprised at the first application, after some explanation and presenting a recommendation from the pastor, to get a donation of sufficient paper to do the work. Bro. S. C. Good and W. F. Sanderson, expert paper hangers, will see to the putting on, and then for a grand rally about the second Sunday of July, which will be the first sacrament day for the west side.

Elder F. M. Pitt preached at branch headquarters at 2:45 yesterday, and Elder S. C. Good at 7:45 same place. Both efforts were well reported on and proved satisfactory. Bro. Francis Earl occupied at the Lang mission in the morning, and for Bro. Graves at night, while the writer was filling his monthly appointment at West Pullman where he held two quite enjoyable services with fair liberty and good attention. We made an effort to attend the Religio, being interested in that movement, but either the Religio failed to materialize, or we failed to get there. Courage, young people, don't falter nor fail though you may have to fight the battle alone. The Religio is a good movement and is doing a grand work in the Book of Mormon study and should be encouraged.

We meet at times some noble examples of true love and devotion; we lately learned of one where a mother and son and daughter, members of the church, fast once a week for the conversion of the father and a son who are not as yet members. A beautiful example of true filial love.

Bro. O. B. Thomas called a few minutes as he passed through the city on Saturday en route to his field of labor, southern Ohio. Success to him and all the brave "ensign" bearers in the field of action.

Now we would love to see some "Jots by the Wayside." With bright hope and a cheerful heart I am yours for victory.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA.

Services at Golden West Hall, 320 Post street, every Sunday. Sunday School 10 a. m., preaching 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.; prayer meeting first Sunday of each month at 12:15 noon. Elder C. A. Parkin presiding elder, residence 3010 16th street.

Bro. and Sr. Jos. F. Burton arrived from Tahiti last Thursday, and were welcome visitors at the Religio Friday evening, where, after the exercises of the evening, we had the pleasure of having him entertain us with accounts of his travels and experiences in the South Sea Islands. They also sang some hymns in the Tahitian language.

Sunday morning Bro. Burton was the speaker, "Christ the Redeemer," being his subject. At 12:15 we had our monthly sacrament meeting. There were two prayers offered, eighteen testimonies given, and five hymns sung. We had a nice, quiet, peaceful meeting.

At 2 p. m. Bro. Burton preached at Oakland, and again in San Francisco at 7:30, continuing his subject of the morning.

Sr. White having been baptized by Elder Chas. A. Parkin, was confirmed by Geo. S. Lincoln and J. H. Anthony.

Monday evening the branch gave a reception to Bro. and Sr. Burton at the residence of Bro. Roy Davis. His spacious parlors were filled to overflowing by Saints and friends, many of the Oakland Saints being among the number. A literary program was offered, after which shells from the Islands were distributed by our returned missionaries. A contribution was then taken up and donated to them. Speeches of thanks and congrat-ulation were also offered. And so the evening passed.

Tuesday night a priesthood meeting was held. Wednesday night the branch held its business meeting.

Our city is somewhat excited about a scare of the bubonic plague in our China town. So far we cannot learn whether there is really cause for alarm, or whether it is only another political scheme to use the city's money and pull political wires. Our board of health is being very strongly censured by many. All is going well as far as known among the Saints.

FIRST KANSAS CITY BRANCH.

Chapel, 2324 Washburn avenue. Take 15th St. line to Prospect Ave., transfer to Prospect, get off at 24th, and walk one block west or to the right hand. Time of meetings: Sunday School at 9:30, preaching at 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m., social service at 12:30 p. m. Prayer meeting, Wednesday evening at 7:30; Religio, Friday evening at 8. Strangers are cordially invited.

Children's day is over and all voted it a grand success from start to finish. All who took part should be congratulated. The music was exceptionally good. The morning sermon by Elder G. H. Hulmes was an excellent one. The social service was spiritual and the evening exercises by the school all that could be desired, and though the evening was very warm and the house crowded, all seemed well pleased.

Our Sunday School had a visit and a short talk from our district superintendent, Sr. Eva Bailey, on Sunday.

Bro. Arthur Allen and Walter Smith have left us for their respective fields of labor.

Our missionary, Bro. J. D. White, has secured a tent for city work. We trust he may meet with results commensurate with his energy.

Notices of services in our branch will hereafter appear in all the daily papers on Saturday of each week, so that visiting friends will be able to find us.

Bro. T. Grabske, of 2380 Holly street, this city, wants to secure a small farm in this vicinity; would trade some Chicago property.

LETTER DEPARTMENT.

MOUND CITY, MISSOURI, June 12.

Editor Ensign.—I send a few lines to report progress in our tent work at Mound City; good turnout as usual. We closed our meeting on the 7th for a few days, as the district conference was to convene at the Madison branch on the 9th and 10th, and we thought best for the ministry to be present. The conference was a very good one in every way; good representation of Saints, splendid meetings and the people out of the church seemed well pleased. Two were baptized and three young men were ordained, two to the eldership, one to the office of deacon. I look for good results as they are splendid young men.

The Saints of this district have decided to hold a reunion this year, the notice of which you will get soon.

C. P. Welsh, D. C. White and the writer did the preaching at conference.

I came back to take up the tent and Bro. R. K. Ross and I will look after the meeting till Bro. White gets back; then I will go to Skidmore, a place north about fifteen miles. Bro. Ross is a live man. Some of his famly were present at the tent meeting nearly every night, coming a distance of eight miles. Bro. Smith of the city and his wife have been very kind to us in looking after our wants. May God bless them.

The outlook is good in this mission this year. I must say Mr. and Mrs. Collins have taken care of us too and they are good people. They are not members of the church, but do all they can to help us with the work.

Your brother in bonds,
J. ARTHUR DAVIS.

June 9.

Editor Ensign:—I came to this place one week ago just in time to find the Seventh Day and Second Day Advents in a broil, and holding a discussion on the Sabbath question; they rushed at me like two mad curs, the standing man the first night I got here, and the under man the second night. The man of the first night was my old opponent (Colless), with whom I held a discussion twenty-three years ago, but I had nothing to fear from him as at that time, though I was but a mere boy, he was easily vanquished and went from the field of battle very much crippled—it was thought he was very tame and acted some frightened—his main points were the sleep of the dead and the resurrection is the birth of the spirit. Not having time to review him that evening, the following evening was devoted to that, but he and his pets with their pet theory, did not materialize—hence, like the cur, bite your pant leg and run. The under man being the one H. J. Davison used up last fall in discussion, got in the second night, and after the meeting was closed we talked for one hour, the congregation listening and laughing at him, as our easy thrusts would so quickly down him. He claimed that Moses was translated and when I told him God said Moses, my servant, is dead, that dead men are not translated, he then said Moses had been resurrected; I said that cannot be for Jesus was the first to arise from the dead, and Jesus had not yet died at the time of the transfiguration. The above is a sample of his ideas advanced.

While I am here for a short time shall hope to do all I can to advance the cause, and defend it when assailed. The Saints living here, seem to be trying to live up to their high calling; those who have been investigating are yet slowly enquiring about the work. A good congregation out on Sunday to hear the angel's message spoken of. Think it was wisdom for me to come to this place just now; it helps to encourage the Saints here and to renew the interest in those who are enquiring. Shall remain here until after the 24th, then go direct to South Rawdon, Hants county, Nova Scotia, to attend the conference to be held there on the 30th. Trust all the Saints who can will attend and make the conference a success. Saints, let's be united and make ourselves and the work an honor to all mankind. Peace be to all within the fold.

Hastily,
S. O. Foss.

OSTERDOCK, Iowa, June 13.

Editor Ensign:—En route for Ohio, my new field, I am hastily visiting the Saints and friends of eastern Iowa, among whom I labored six, and again four years ago, and who are living within an easy reach from my route. I have just been reading in the late Herald the first letter of the conference year from some of the brethren, giving the account of their taking leave of home and endearments there; also the opening of the new year's work by which I also feel inspired to write a few lines to your readers, remembering that at the close of the conference Bro. Garrett arose and said, "Remember the Ensign." Also that many of the Saints where I have labored in the past take this paper who do not have the Herald.

Having determined not to take time or money for a trip home till the year's work is done, it became necessary to remain a little longer preparing home for a year's absence, than I had intended. The urgent request to visit the Saints of Jones and Clayton counties while going east, accompanied with assurance that extra car fare would be provided for, which has been abundantly made good, together with permission from the missionary in charge, made me feel that I was not transcending the bounds of my privilege in so doing.

Having enjoyed rich seasons of heavenly grace and spiritual blessings with the Saints of the Green Valley church on Sundays, May 27th and June 3rd, and splendid visits at their homes in the meantime, I came to Clayton county one week ago today, preaching once at the home of Bro. G. W. Seward in Edgewood. Thence to Elk Creek for three evening meetings in a school-house, where I had labored much with an interested people and some success.

Here, on Friday evening at the close of sermon, a stranger (to me) requested the privilege to ask a question. Without giving particulars, suffice it to say that I very soon discerned that my interrogator, and quickly, opponent, was none other than D. H. Bays, who is now pastor of the Christian church at Greely, Iowa (only a few miles distant), and had come there by the request of an enemy to oppose our efforts. The house was well filled by attentive listeners both to the discourse and following controversy. The subject was continued from the previous evening on the text, "Son, go work today in my vineyard," which not being yet finished, the conclusion was already announced for Saturday evening before Mr. Bays began. He called for evidence on the laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost from the Book of Mormon.

Having sold my marked Book of Mormon just before returning from the west, and wishing to be sure that I told him the testimony, I deferred response till next evening. He said he would be present, and asked permission to reply. This being granted, the house was literally packed on Saturday night. First the sermon, with one of the richest blessings I ever enjoyed in that house; then the controversy, unfinished, preparing the way for an organized discussion, which must be had in response to a declaration by Mr. Bays, twice stated, that he would meet any man in the Reorganization, from Joseph Smith down, on the issues between us. I have written to Bro. J. W. Wight (missionary in charge) about it, asking for prompt action. From here I met the Saints of what is still known as the Osterdock branch, in their regular place of meeting on "Updegraf Ridge," preaching three times on Sunday last; last evening here. Will preach this evening at Colesburg by the request of Bro. Hosler, priest of this branch, living there. Tomorrow on Ohio.

Before closing I wish to say to all the Saints and friends of Colorado and those just over the line in Nebraska and Kansas, in whose labors of love in the gospel work I have joined during three years past, that although I had anticipated a mission to my native state at no distant time, it is with feeling of regret and disappointment that I must so soon sever the acquaintance I have so much enjoyed, while their oft repeated manifestations of brotherly love and kindest regard have endeared them to your humble writer with ties that can never be broken. May God bless and keep them every one to inherit the celestial glory.

Yours in the bonds of the everlasting covenant,
O. B. THOMAS.

RICHMOND, Va., April 10.

To the Dear Saints, Brothers and Sisters in Christ Jesus, Kindly Greeting:—Once again I take a little time to chat with you concerning the things that are nearest and dearest to our hearts, or at least should be, the things of the kingdom. Several kindly responded to my appeal for literature for that lady of the Utah faith, and as my time is so fully occupied I cannot reply to all; but I intend to write to Sr. Abbie L. Webster as soon as I can, for she has written me before and I have never replied, and if she sees this she will know it is not because of a lack of interest or of appreciation that I have not written. However, I do not think the Saints are given to judging each other harshly. I know they will not if their hearts are filled with that "love that thinketh no evil."

I will just give a glimpse of my situation, so that any to whom I owe letters may know it is next to impossible for me to write more than I am doing at present. My four oldest children are working and pay me their board (I mean of those with me; two daughters are in the north, one of whom is married), and I also have two gentlemen boarders, and three small boys beside to do for. So my time is pretty well filled up, as I have no help. And I have had sickness of late; measles visited us; first one was sick, then two, now two more have the measles and one complaining. The older ones who had it first are able to work again. I am sitting with the sick ones in my chamber tonight, and am utilizing the moments "redeeming the time" I trust.

I am glad to hear that two elders will be sent here instead of one as I think there will be more to do this year. I am hoping and praying and working in my weak way to make some little preparation in a few hearts for the reception of the good seed. Not many days go by that I do not have a chance to speak to some one, and generally to a person to whom I have not spoken before, and I trust that some little good may be done by the way of mellowing the soil and preparing the seed-bed in a few hearts.

One lady I mentioned in a former letter, whose home is near Baltimore, told me she was sorry she did not obey the admonition of the Spirit while Bro. Goodrich was here. Her address is as follows: Mrs. C. A. Clark, 212 Gaugh street, Highland Town, Baltimore county, Maryland. So if any elders or Saints are near her I trust they will hunt her up.

That lady of the Utah faith was very ill recently, and her mother came to nurse her. She is a Baptist and an excellent woman. I had many good talks with her, and believe she fully accepts the gospel as it is taught by the Latter Day Saints, which is indeed the same old gospel as taught by the apostles of old. Alas! that so few can see it! She lives among people of the Utah faith and speaks very highly of them as a people; and she said, "When Hester wanted to join me I could not say one word against it as they are good people, and even so much better than I am that I could not say anything against them. Of course they do not believe in polygamy, and Hester said their elders do not teach it any more," but I think she is getting her eyes opened somewhat. I could not help but think that if the gospel, even while weighted down and disguised with the evils of polygamy and false doctrines, can still have the power to work out so much good among those who have accepted it, what grand and glorious results ought to follow the acceptance of the pure, unalloyed gospel, the gospel itself without the heresies and abominations that have been added. Satan could not destroy the gospel, therefore he devised a plan to cover it up and darken it so its pure light could not shine through, but when its light does shine through it is the same light. They have the gospel indeed, but it reminds me of the old time tin lanterns; the light inside might be ever so good, but it was hidden and darkened by its hideous and foul covering, while with us the light is open and unobstructed, with nothing to make any one turn away with loathing and disgust.

And I wonder if sometimes there is not too much resting on our church membership, and living off of past experiences among the Saints. Past blessings will not suffice for present needs. "Give us this day our daily bread." The bread of yesterday will not do for today if the supply was ever so ample.

We are told to examine ourselves whether we be in the faith. But even if we know we are firm in the faith, yet self examination is still required, and it takes keen eyes to detect the spot of blight or the dry rot in ourselves when the outward appearance is fair and flourishing; but it may be there all the same, and if we cannot find it ourselves let us ask the Master to show us if it exists, and then let us submit ourselves into his hands even if he find it necessary to use the pruning knife. You know even the branches that bear fruit are to be purged (cleansed or pruned) that they bring forth more fruit. And oh! how earnestly should we examine ourselves to see if there be any worm at the root, any little vice or sin that will eventually destroy our vitality, or at least, impair our usefulness.

At a prayer meeting of the Apostolic people recently (and I do so much enjoy their prayer meetings; they are what I think the Latter Day Saint prayer meetings should be), I was much impressed with the sayings of a young lady who had given her testimony, and was telling how good God was to give her his Spirit to guide her, and to correct her, too, if she needed it. She said she had a habit, as so many do, of adding some little thing to her statements to make them more emphatic, or to confirm them (such as, "true as I live," "I'll be blest, if it isn't so"), and she said just as sure as she forgot herself and indulged in any such expression, the Spirit would chide her, but oh! so gently, with "Your word is enough."

Let your communications be ye, ye, may, nay, "for whatsoever is more than these cometh of evil." "A saint's words," she adds, "needs no confirming." Oh, dear Saints, we cannot set our standard too high, and if we are ever able to come up to our standard, we can still expect to hear the Master say, "Come up higher," and the blessedness of it is, the higher up we get, the purer the atmosphere, the freer from fogs of doubt, from miasmas and malarials of earthly pleasures, and carnal desires; and instead of chilling shadows, we can bask in the sunlight of God's love, and instead of the burning, scorching breath of the Sirocco of human passions, or the chilling, blighting winds of scorn and pride, our cheeks will be fanned and our brows caressed by the balmy laden breezes that come to us from the sunny heights; breezes laden with the odors of flowers that can only grow in heavenly soil; love, joy, peace, contentment, virtue, truth, are the names of some of them.

"Come up higher!" How the words thrill me every time I see them or hear them spoken. No standing still, a constant climbing upward, if we wish to reach the goal, which is, thank God, higher up than earthly things can conceive of, unaided by the Spirit of God. No standing still, for if we stop our upward climb for a moment, how many forces are ready to drag us downward; and oh! then it is so hard to stop the downward descent, or to recover the lost ground. Let our motto be "Excelsior," and though "Try not the pass," the old man said, "let us pay no heed to his seductions, but rather give heed to the Voice that bids us come up higher, and waving our banner, marked with our talisman, "Excelsior," let us press onward and upward, nor let us ever stop short of the summit—the celestial heights. Oh, may we all attain them.

These thoughts remind me of a little dream I had a few nights ago, which I would not think worth telling were it not for the rapturous, joyous uplift of soul that was mine on awaking. I dreamed I was in a very large building, something like a framed barn, only its dimensions were immense; along each side ran a platform, quite elevated from the ground level, and through the center was not even a floor, but was a dark abyss, over which it seemed the building was erected, and where I was standing were many of my kinspeople and friends, and it was my business to climb up still higher and stretch ropes or cords, like small clothes lines, from one corner to another, and from one beam to another, far up over our heads. And I had got all stretched along the sides and ends, then I thought I had to stretch them across, over this abyss, to the other side. It seemed the ropes were stretched in a sort of net work along the sides and ends, something like the lines of a spider's web, and the only way I could cross was to grasp hold of a rope, swing out as far as I could and grasp another; and then go hand over hand, with my body hanging over the abyss. There were a number of lights of some sort on the platform, where my friends were standing, but it seemed the platform on the other side was in a bright light, but the abyss was awfully dark and deep. My friends, as they saw me prepare to swing out over this dark pit, began to wring their hands and cry out, begging me not to cross that way; but I paid no heed, but catching hold of the slender rope, I swung off the platform out over the abyss, which yawned black and fathomless beneath my feet, then grasping another rope I began crossing over, hand over hand, shouting back to them, "The rope holds!" "Bless the Lord, oh my soul and all that is within me, bless his holy name. Bless the Lord, oh my soul, and forget not all this benefits." And just as I swung in safely on the other platform, I awoke with these words on my lips. I thought while swinging across I could see the white, upturned faces of my friends, and see them wringing their hands, and hear them crying out for my safety. And I believe the dream had a meaning for me. The ropes hold, no matter what stress and strain may be brought to bear on it. The rope woven of God's word, every strand a promise, and every fiber a truth, and it cannot break, for the words are "yea and amen." Yes, the rope holds.

NEBRASKA CITY, Neb., May 15.

Editor Ensign:—Our district conference was held here Sunday and yesterday. It closed at 4 p. m. yesterday. There was not much business transacted either forenoon or afternoon sessions, but what was done, was done quietly. The attendance was very small, all too busy to attend conference business.

Sunday at 11 a. m. Apostle James Caffall preached; at 2:30 p. m. Priest H. W. Belleville preached; at 8 p. m. Elder Chas. H. Porter of the Seventy preached. All was well performed; the weather was warm all Sunday. At 2 p. m. Elder Walter M. Self immersed two in the river. They were confirmed at the close of the evening sermon by Elders J. Caffall and M. H. Forscutt. The Spirit was felt at both the baptism and confirmation service. The candidates were Mrs. John Huffman of this city and Mr. Morris Crissman of Lincoln, Nebraska, daughter and son-in-law of Bro. and Sr. Jesse Ervin of this city. Both were about one age, 25 or 26 years of age. Mr. Crissman's wife belongs to the church; they were married here by Elder Forscutt in the church last July and they are one in the gospel. He is a printer by trade and a very nice appearing young man to look at; uses no tobacco or intoxicants. He came from Lincoln, Nebraska, to be baptized.

The Sunday School held two business sessions Saturday forenoon and afternoon; attendance small. They held a nice entertainment in the church Friday evening; the small girls did well and kept time to the music accurately with their marching and ringing of their bells that each had in their hands, and their innocent singing was pleasant to listen to; they had pretty voices that blended nicely together. The Daughters of Zion held their concert Saturday evening for our benefit in the church. Some of those old daughters were not as well trained as those pretty little girls were to take their part, in public; the children gained the prize in their performances Friday evening.

ZION'S ENSIGN.

MAN'S DOMINION.

Sermon by Elder Herman C. Smith, Delivered at Grand Rapids, Michigan, December, 1899.

[REPORTED BY ARIZONA BREEDEN.]

Permit me to invite your attention to the 26th and 27th verses of the first chapter of Genesis:

And God said, Let us make man in our image, after our likeness: and let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over the cattle, and over all the earth, and over every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth. So God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him; male and female created he them.

It has been truthfully said that the greatest study of mankind is man; and looking back to the beginning of his creation, as this text invites us to do, we have a fair presentation of what God intended that man should be; and tonight we wish to compare this with what man really is, and possibly invite your attention to what his possibilities are, that we may be able to discern what great privileges God has granted to man.

The same thought that is expressed in this language, is expressed also by the Psalmist David, as you will find recorded in the 8th Psalm, only more explicitly and more in detail. He says:

O Lord our Lord, how excellent is thy name in all the earth! who hast set thy glory above the heavens. Out of the mouth of babes and sucklings hast thou ordained strength because of thine enemies, that thou mightest still the enemy and the avenger. When I consider thy heavens, the work of thy fingers, the moon and the stars, which thou hast ordained; What is man, that thou art mindful of him? and the son of man, that thou visitest him? For thou hast made him a little lower than the angels, and hast crowned him with glory and honour. Thou madest him to have dominion over the works of thy hands; thou hast put all things under his feet: all sheep and oxen, yea, and the beasts of the field; the fowl of the air, and the fish of the sea, and whatsoever passeth through the paths of the seas. O Lord our Lord, how excellent is thy name in all the earth!

From these passages of Scripture we understand that God designed in the beginning when he called man into being, that he should be secondary to none but God himself; that he should be ruler over all the creations of God. He has given him dominion, says the Word, over all the creations of his hands. Man was created for such high destiny as this, and if I understand the word dominion, it implies that all beasts of the field, and fowls of the air, and fish of the sea, and the things that pass through the paths of the seas, were subject to the direction of this creature called man; that he had a right to command and they would obey; that he had but to direct the beasts of the field or any of the creatures that God had made, and they were subject to his will. How is it now? Has man retained the dominion that God gave him? Does he stand today as a ruler of the universe under God? Or has he lost that privilege to rule? Let me tell you right now, that if he has lost his privilege and right and power to rule, that he has lost it through transgression of God's laws; that it is an unwritten law of Nature that no creature that God has made is fit to rule who does not himself obey; that whenever man becomes a law breaker himself, he is unfit to govern others. And if he has lost his place among the creatures of God, and no longer exercises dominion over the beasts of the field, and the fowls of the air, and the fish of the sea, then it is because he is unworthy of that place; because being a transgressor of law himself, he has no rightful title to his supremacy as ruler of the universe.

This language gives us to understand that man was commissioned to be a supreme ruler, but you need not be told, you who have given this subject any thought, that man has fallen. Instead of directing the beasts of the field, he is afraid to go where they are. It is with terror that he approaches the jungle where lie the beasts of prey. He knows he cannot command the beasts of the field now and they obey him. Ofttimes he is afraid of the mere reptile that lies in his path. We are afraid today to trust those we love where lingers the poisonous serpent, lest that poisonous serpent exercise its nature and insert a deadly poison in the life blood that will take away the life of his former ruler. So has man fallen in this regard, and to such depth has he gone from his high estate, that he is constantly afraid that he shall be overcome, while the very elements around him seem to conspire against him. He once had more power than is expressed in these words. He could not only control the creations of God, but he could control the very elements themselves, as in some instances he has done; as the prophet did when he prayed that the heavens would retain the rain, and they did. And he asked again and they gave forth rain. At his bidding and his supplication the elements surrounding him were controlled in his favor, and he was absolutely in control of all that God had made. In the 19th Psalm and 13th verse we read something that is very significant in this connection. The Psalmist David there utters a prayer and says:

"Keep back thy servant also from presumptuous sins; let them not have dominion over me: then shall I be upright, and I shall be innocent from the great transgression."

What a pitiable prayer that is! A creature created of God to rule, now asks that some power would intervene in his behalf and keep him back lest presumptuous sins should have dominion over him, and that he, created to be a ruler, should not be ruled by passion which would control him and bring him under transgression of God's laws. It appears to me that this is a confession that he has fallen from his high estate; and instead of being a ruler of the universe under God, he is afraid lest something may come that will control him. And how often we find men today in this condition. I find men everywhere I go, who, in conversation with me, tell me that they cannot control themselves. They say "Habit has fastened itself upon me, and I am subject to my passions. I have tried, I have prayed, I have diligently endeavored to overcome, and have failed. I am subject to my tastes and I have no power to control them." And this is the creature that God created to bear rule, and into whose hand all power was given, to have dominion over every creature that God had made. No wonder that he has lost his power to control, if he cannot control his own passions and his own will. I think it is time that every soul which concedes this to be a fact, should make an effort to break the bands that bind him; to unloose the fetters that have kept him in bondage, and arise in the liberty that God has given him and vouchsafed to him, that he may overcome and be restored to his former supremacy as a ruler among God's creatures. Again the Psalmist says, as you will find recorded in the 119th Psalm and 133d verse: "Order my steps in thy word: and let not any iniquity have dominion over me." "Let not any iniquity have dominion over me." "Let not any iniquity have dominion over me." "Let not any iniquity have dominion over me." "Let not any iniquity have dominion over me." "Let not any iniquity have dominion over me." "Let not any iniquity have dominion over me."

Israel is a favored people of God, and a people with whom God communed. A better people morally and in every other respect perhaps, than any other people living upon the earth, and yet to what depth of degradation did Israel fall! How absolutely powerless they were in the power of sin and corruption? Let one of their prophets tell the story as it appeared to him, and then you cannot but feel that man has lost a great privilege that God had vouchsafed to him in his creation when you read that among the better people—the people that God had raised up; it is sad that these things were true. In the 9th chapter of Jeremiah we read this:

"Oh that I had in the wilderness a lodging place of way-faring men; that I might leave my people, and go from them! for they be all adulterers, an assembly of treacherous men. And they bend their tongues like their bow for lies; but they are not valiant for the truth upon the earth; for they proceed from evil to evil, and they know not me, saith the Lord. Take ye heed every one of his neighbor, and trust ye not in any brother: for every brother will utterly supplant, and every neighbor will walk with slanders. And they will deceive every one his neighbour, and will not speak the truth: they have taught their tongue to speak lies, and weary themselves to commit iniquity. Thine habitation is in the midst of deceit; through deceit they refuse to know me, saith the Lord."

This is an indictment brought against that people by the prophet Jeremiah. And do you say that that is worse than we are now? You know but little, if you say so, in regard to the corruption of the world now; in regard to the debased condition in which man finds himself. The prophet says, trust not any brother for every brother will deal treacherously, and that is true to the extent today that we dare not in business trust our brother. It might be true that he would take no advantage of us, but the business man finds it necessary to have everything secure, and although he may know nothing in regard to the man with whom he is transacting business, that is, adverse to his honesty, yet he must have everything in black and white, and he requires him to make a note and sign his name to it, and if back of that note there is not sufficient property to make the note secure, he requires that some one else who has the backing shall come forward and place his name thereon that there may be no mistake, and that treachery shall not ruin the man who is engaged in business. That's our condition. I do not say that it is not necessary to do business in this way. It is a necessary precaution, but a sad comment, however, that it is necessary, and that we can trust no man his brother; that in business affairs it has become so that we absolutely do not trust, nor dare we trust for fear all we have will be swept from our grasp in a moment of time. But some one says, "If this is the chosen people of God, the people to whom God had trusted his revelation; if this people of whom such things were true had fallen so far from the standard of right, and were subject to iniquity and sin, was not the creation of man a failure? Has not God failed in accomplishing his purposes when he created man for the purpose of ruling over all his creations, and man has proven unworthy of his high calling?" It does appear sometimes to a candid thinker as though there had been a mistake made, but let us pause for a moment and be not hasty in judgment, for the destiny of man is not yet complete. We want to wait until we shall be able to trace the possibilities of man ere we decide that a failure has been made. That man has lost his right; that man has lost his high privileges, is certain; but I believe that God has provided a means whereby he can rise. He has placed within his reach a means that will restore him to his former condition, and elevate him to a higher plane than that which he was created to occupy in the beginning, when he was given dominion over the beasts of the field, and the fowls of the air, and over all God had created.

In the gospel of Jesus Christ is found the means of his redemption; in the plan of salvation as revealed through the Son, man has been given the power to rise and promised that he shall inherit again his possessions upon condition of faithfulness. He has learned a lesson or ought to have learned it; he has had an experience that ought to teach him that it is unsafe to disobey the laws of God. He might well learn that what he lost by disobedience, he can gain by obedience; that as he fell because he was unfaithful, he may rise through faithfulness. God has done more than that. He has not only given us the promise that by obedience to the gospel of Jesus Christ, we may in future time regain our dominion, but to a certain extent he has restored that dominion and has given us the privilege of occupying here a higher plane than we could occupy by nature, if we are faithful to the requirements made at our hands. Let me invite your attention in this connection to what Jesus said and did for his disciples in the dispensation that is past; the dispensation when the Lord appeared in the flesh and chose men to represent him upon the earth. What did he do? We read in the tenth chapter of Matthew as follows:

"And when he had called unto him his twelve disciples, he gave them power against unclean spirits, to cast them out, and to heal all manner of sickness and all manner of disease."

You will note in that, a restoration of the dominion lost by man. Not a complete restoration, but a partial restoration. He had been given power to control the elements and all things for his good. He had commanded the beasts of the field, and the fowls of the air and the fish of the sea; now when Christ began his work among men by calling the twelve apostles and ordaining them to this high and holy calling, he said to them: "I will give you power over unclean spirits to cast them out, and over all manner of diseases." A partial dominion, therefore, is restored. They have a right to control to a certain extent. They are no longer under the power of the evil one. They have been given power under the gospel of Jesus Christ, as Christ's ambassadors to say to the evil spirit, depart and that evil spirit controls them not, but they control it. He had given them power also to say to the diseases that were tormenting the physical man that they should lose their power, and thus dominion was partly restored in these chosen ambassadors, so that in a spiritual and in a physical sense they could control the powers that would do them harm. A grand step towards the place from whence they had fallen. Did you ever notice how nearly the three evangelists, Matthew, Mark, and Luke, agree upon this? I read in the third chapter of Mark, commencing at the 13th verse as follows:

"And he goeth up into a mountain, and he calleth unto him whom he would: and they came unto him. And he ordained twelve, that they should be with him, and that he might send them forth to preach, and to have power to heal sicknesses, and to cast out devils."

Exactly what Matthew said they had power to do. Mark says they had power to heal diseases and cast out devils. They had power to rule, govern and bear dominion given to them to a certain extent. They had power over unclean spirits and to heal diseases; and the evangelist Luke, as you will find recorded, I believe in the 9th chapter of his writings, also says:

"Then he called his twelve disciples together, and gave them power and authority over all devils, and to cure diseases."

There the word authority is also used which means the right to bear dominion. He gave them power and authority over all devils and to cure diseases. These three witnesses agree that God, when he introduced the gospel through his son Jesus Christ, restored the dominion to men in part, in so far that they could control evil spirits and sicknesses, and thus might be protected in their efforts to rise; that the satanic power should not be strong enough to govern, that he should not deter them in their efforts to rise to their high destiny, but that they could control in this way and keep the powers of darkness from destroying them, and sickness from wasting away their physical bodies.

In the tenth chapter of Luke I read that he also gave power to others beside the twelve apostles; that this dominion was restored not only to the twelve, but to seventy. And he chose other seventy we are told, "and sent them two and two before his face, into every city and place, where he himself would come." "And the seventy returned again with joy, saying, Lord, even the devils are subject unto us through thy name." (Luke 10: 1, 17). How glorious was their experience? They had, like the rest of mankind, fallen into that condition that error had power over them; but now they had gone forth and returned with joy, saying, "Lord, even the devils are subject unto us through thy name." We have been able to command and they obey us. Ah! that is a step towards returning to the high position from which man had fallen. Yet when men undertook to exercise that authority without command of God, they found the devils were more powerful than they, as in the case of the seven sons of Sceva, as you will find recorded in the nineteenth chapter of Acts, when they said: "We adjure you by Jesus, whom Paul preacheth" and the devil said, "Jesus I know and Paul I know; but who are ye?" Then they leaped upon the ones who adjured them, and they fled out of the house naked and wounded. The devils had power over men, but God gave to his chosen ambassadors, power over evil spirits, and when they went out they returned with joy, saying, "Lord, even the devil are subject unto us through thy name." But the Master said, "I beheld satan as lightning fall from heaven." (Luke 10: 18). Now mark you:

"Behold, I give unto you power to tread on serpents and scorpions, and over all the power of the enemy: and nothing shall by any means hurt you." (v. 19.)

Ah, how great was that privilege! Did man ever have a greater privilege than that? Was he ever given a greater possibility than this? Yes, sir, greater still. You will remember that it was first a serpent that became an enmity with the seed of woman; that it was the first one to rebel against its natural ruler, man; enmity was established between the seed of the serpent and the seed of the woman, and from that time forth enmity has continued to grow until all the creations of God are at war with each other. There is lurking in every hiding place something to devour the life of another; and even among these higher creatures called men, there is a thirst for blood and a disposition to conquer, over-run and tread into the dust the rights and liberties of others. That spirit of war and contention and destruction is poured out upon those who ought to stand as rulers among men, and govern with equity and justice, all the creatures of God. But he says, notwithstanding, you shall have power. As I said before, the serpent was the first to exercise enmity towards man, but he says to the seventy, "And I will give you power to tread on serpents and on scorpions and over all the power of the enemy, and nothing shall by any means hurt you." Dominion is restored in part, then, to men. But, says the Master, "Notwithstanding, in this rejoice not." That is a minor thing; that is a mere commencement; that is only a beginning of your rights and privileges. Rejoice not that you may tread on serpents and scorpions and over all the power of the enemy, but rather rejoice because your names are written in heaven. Something greater than this awaiting men.

And now let me invite your attention to one thought in this connection, for I know there are honest people throughout the world who are laboring under a delusion. If God has restored dominion in part to that extent that his servants 1800 years ago had power over devils and unclean spirits and diseases, and they could tread on serpents and on scorpions and over all the power of the enemy, if his servants have not that power today what must be the conclusion? The conclusion is that we are further down than they were 1800 years ago; we are farther from our promised destiny. We have lost that temporary or partial power given to the church in the early age. And today if the power as given to the servants of God does not exist with the ministry, if they cannot rebuke and cast out evil spirits, and heal sicknesses and diseases in the name of Jesus Christ, then has the christian retrograded and not advanced; then are we farther from the dominion that God gave us in the creation than we were then, and the gospel of Jesus Christ is proving a failure. Men are going down under its influence instead of up. But if I find, as I firmly believe, that in every age, in every time when God calls men, he endows them with power as in ancient times, that under proper conditions the devils are subject to them in the name of Jesus Christ, then is the gospel of Jesus Christ a success. Then is their hope that through this provision made by the Almighty and revealed through his son Jesus Christ, we may yet rise to the high condition from which man has fallen.

I invite your attention in this connection to a promise made to a disciple of Jesus Christ as found recorded in the nineteenth chapter of Matthew, 27th verse, where Peter had, it seems, become a little discouraged, like all of us do sometimes, and asked the question: "Behold, we have forsaken all, and followed thee; what shall we have therefore?" That was a legitimate question. They had forsaken all from a worldly standpoint. They had lost much. They had not only left their business affairs and had given their time and their talents to the work of this gospel, but they had been hated and rejected by former associates. They were looked upon as the offscouring of the earth. Their association was only among those that were ostracized and spurned in those days, simply because they had espoused the cause of the lowly Nazarene; and it was proper that they should ask the question, "Lord, we have forsaken all and followed thee: what shall we have therefore?" This is a question that every man asks often if he is sacrificing for the work of God. There are times of despondency; there are times when clouds obscure his spiritual horizon, and he can interrogate, what shall we have for what we have sacrificed in this cause? The Master answers the question (v. 28), and says: "Verily I say unto you, That ye which have followed me, in the regeneration, when the Son of Man shall sit on the throne of his glory, ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel." There is dominion promised beyond that which is recorded in our text. In the beginning they were given power to control the beasts of the field and the fowls of the air, and the fish of the sea. Now they are told that if they are faithful they shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel. Faithful men who prove themselves worthy shall be given power to judge among men in time to come, and you know the Apostle Paul said that the "saints shall judge angels." They shall be given power and judgment in time to come. They shall rise higher than they were in the beginning, and dominion shall be given to them, but only when they have proven themselves worthy of it by being pure and holy, and by having proven their faithfulness by obedience to the law of the Eternal One.

Let me give you a passage of Scripture in this connection, a further promise made by the Son of God, as found recorded in Revelation, 2d chapter, where the Lord appeared to John upon the Isle of Patmos, to which he had been banished for the witness of Jesus, and told him to write to the seven churches of Asia; and among other things he told him to write is the following: but before I read it I want to tell you that there are different translations of this passage. I shall give you two now and you can take your choice, but the one idea in each is, that man, if faithful, shall be given dominion and power to rule in the by and by, not only over all the creations of God, but over the nations of the earth. 26th and 27th verses:

"And he that overcometh, and keepeth my works unto the end, to him will I give power over the nations: and he shall rule them with a rod of iron; as the vessels of a potter shall they be broken to shivers: even as I received of my Father."

I will give power over nations to him that overcometh. Mark the only condition. If you can overcome you can claim the promise. If you overcome you have the promise that you shall be given power and that under God you may rule. "And he shall rule them with a rod of iron: as the vessels of a potter shall they be broken to shivers: even as I received of my Father." Now the idea is that the faithful man shall be given power to rule in the by and by. I do not like this translation, however, where it refers to the process by which he will rule. I think it is contrary to the spirit of the gospel of Christ that men shall have power to rule other than by virtue of faithful adherence to laws of righteousness; a follower of the meek and lowly One; one who shall, by meekness and longsuffering and patience, overcome the world and be at peace with God and all men as he is commanded to do; then when he shall receive power over nations, they shall be broken to shivers, by him, even as I have received of my Father. It seems to me that a man who has overcome will have no disposition to break into shivers. I like this translation better:

"And to him who overcometh, and keepeth my commandments unto the end, will I give power over many kingdoms; and he shall rule them with the word of God; and they shall be in his hands as the vessels of clay in the hands of a potter; and he shall govern them by faith, with equity and justice, even as I received of my Father."

I like that. That sounds reasonable to me. That sounds like Christ to me. It sounds like a man who has learned of God. His rule would be with equity and justice. That other spirit, to break in shivers, has got too far down. It has deluged our world in blood. It has brought suffering instead of peace; it has brought lamentation and mourning throughout the world, and it goes on and on, bringing destructions and cruelty and tyranny wherever it is demonstrated by man. Here then was promised that sovereignty and dominion shall be restored to men.

Now, I want to call your attention in this connection to a prophecy made by the prophet Isaiah in regard to the future reign of Christ, and see how nicely and harmoniously it blends with this spirit of the gospel of God's Son, who came with love to the world, and sends his rain upon the just and upon the unjust, and causes his sun to shine upon the evil and upon the good. I will read from the 11th chapter of Isaiah and I want you to mark it well and remember that man and beast are at enmity now because of the fall, and see what the difference will be.

"And there shall come forth a rod out of the stem of Jesse, and a Branch shall grow out of his roots: And the spirit of the Lord shall rest upon him, the spirit of wisdom and understanding, the spirit of counsel and might, the spirit of knowledge, and of the fear of the Lord; and shall make him of quick understanding in the fear of the Lord: and he shall not judge after the sight of his eyes, neither reprove after the hearing of his ears: but with righteousness shall he judge the poor, and reprove with equity for the meek of the earth: and he shall smite the earth with the rod of his mouth, and with the breath of his lips shall he slay the wicked. And righteousness shall be the girdle of his loins, and faithfulness the girdle of his reins. The wolf also shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid; and the calf and the young lion and faling together; and a little child shall lead them. And the cow and the bear shall feed; their young ones shall lie down together: and the lion shall eat straw like the ox. And the sucking child shall play on the hole of the asp, and the weaned child shall put his hand on the cockatrice' den. They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain: for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea."

All these will then be at peace when the former condition of things will be restored and Christ shall reign upon the earth; then the wolf shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid; and the calf, and the young lion, and the faling together, and a little child shall lead them. Then not only will strong, mature men have dominion over the beasts of the field, but these beasts that now are at enmity with each other shall lie down in peace and a little child shall lead them. Dominion will be given to the child as well as the man. Control will be given to us and our children, and the wolf shall dwell with the lamb and the leopard shall lie down with the kid; and the calf and the young lion and the faling together, and a little child shall lead them because of the gentleness of the child, because of the power of the child over the beasts; and because he shall have a right to rule and direct; peace shall come upon the earth, and the beasts of the field, under his dominion, shall no longer be at war and enmity with each other. "And the cow and the bear shall feed: their young ones shall lie down together, and the lion shall eat straw like the ox." There will be no more disposition to live upon prey: These beasts that now live upon the flesh of others, shall eat of the vegetable kingdom. "And the cow and the bear shall feed: their young ones shall lie down together. And the sucking child shall play on the hole of the asp, and the weaned child shall put his hand on the cockatrice' den." We will no longer be afraid for our children to play among the poisonous reptiles that now infest the land, because they will have power to control them, and dominion will be given to men, and the child; the weaned child, shall play upon the hole of the asp without danger, for the asp will be subject to the control of the child. "The sucking child shall put his hand on the cockatrice' den."

There will be a time when the children of men will be recognized as supreme rulers, and that condition of things will be restored which was at the beginning when God created man to have dominion over the beasts of the field, and the fowls of the air, and the fish of the sea, and over whatsoever passeth through the paths of the seas. It is our privilege to rise by obedience, to the heights from whence we have fallen by disobedience. Remember that corruption and crime and evil will sink us lower. Faithfulness and purity and righteousness will cause us to rise until we shall stand in the presence of God and receive the crown that he has laid up for the faithful, when we shall receive the dominion given to us in the beginning, and under God we shall rule; but we are unfit to rule until we shall have learned righteousness, until our souls are redeemed from the dominion of sin, until our whole beings shall be given to good, to virtue, to holiness, to right; and then we shall be worthy to stand at the head of God's creation, the place that God designed us to fill in the beginning. I pray that God, in his infinite mercy, will help us to understand that sin and corruption and transgression will cause us to lose our inheritance, while through the gospel of Jesus Christ we may have partial dominion restored unto us while here, dominion over the evils of this life, and by and by, if we shall overcome, we shall be given power to rule.

Then we can understand the statements of the prophet Daniel when he speaks of the dominion that God shall give to us in the by and by, and also understand the instances of which he gives a record here. You remember the story of the three Hebrew children that were cast into the fiery furnace. They had no power to control the elements surrounding them. The element of fire would destroy their bodies in a very short time for it was seven times hotter than usual; so hot that the persons who placed them in it were slain by the fire as they neared the mouth of the pit, and yet those three Hebrew children were preserved there. How was it done? Why, an angel of God came down from heaven, and when the king looked into the fiery furnace, he saw, not three men, but four walking therein and they had no hurt; and one of them was like unto the form of the Son of God, and they testified afterwards that the angel of God was there. How was this done then? They had lost dominion; the power to control the elements was gone; they were subject to the flames. But one who had kept his first estate, one who had not lost dominion through transgression, who through faithfulness could still bear dominion over the elements that surrounded them, came and entered the fiery furnace with them, and at the rebuke of that angelic personage to whom dominion was given, and which he had retained by faithfulness—at the rebuke of that authority and power vested in the angel the fiery flames were quenched and these men were protected.

Daniel, you remember, was thrown into the lion's den. He, too, had lost dominion. He was powerless in the presence of these beasts of prey, as powerless as you or I would be. He bore dominion no longer. But while in that condition we are told that God's angel came down and in the presence of those beasts he walked with Daniel. They submitted to his command because he had dominion and had not lost it by transgression, and the beasts of the field were docile in his presence and dared not to interfere with the life of the prophet because God protected him. It gives me joy and comfort—while I mourn, while my heart aches for the condition of my fellowmen—it gives me joy and comfort to think that God sent an angel to protect those who were striving to do his will; to think of the deliverance of the three Hebrew children; of Peter when he lay bound with chains in prison, and an angelic personage not having lost his dominion and power to control, could command and the chains would fall off. I believe that God still reigns in heaven today, and that the dominion which was restored to men through the gospel of Jesus Christ anciently, will continue with the servants of God today if they are faithful and keep the commandments of God. That he is just as full of love and mercy as he ever was, and in our distresses if we need it, the angels of God will be around about us to protect us by the power that was retained, and to us will be given partial dominion so we may rise through faithfulness to the condition where devils will have no power over us, and where diseases may be controlled by the power of God and Christ through men. I believe that. If I did not believe that I could not accept the gospel of Jesus Christ as taught in the sacred word. For if men are lower now than they were 1800 years ago with the light of the gospel given to us, then that gospel has failed. I cannot believe that. I believe men will have just as much power if faithful and just as much of divine favor now as they ever did in any age of the world, and the consummation of this will be what Daniel describes here when speaking of a beast which represents the evil power. He says (7:26):

"But the judgment shall sit, and they shall take away his dominion, to consume and to destroy it unto the end. And the kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him. Hitherto is the end of the matter. As for me Daniel, my cogitations much troubled me, and my countenance changed in me: but I kept the matter in my heart."

He saw the time when judgment should sit and dominion would be taken from the evil power and be given to the saints of the Most High God and they would take it and possess it forever. There is then but one hope for man. There is but one thing he can take hold of that will rid him from the fall and place him in a position that God intended he should possess through the gospel of Jesus Christ. It is a means to that end. We have the testimony of those who went out in the name of Jesus Christ and returned, saying: "Even the devils are subject to us in thy name." They were told that these were but minor blessings. Greater blessings were in store for those whose names were written in heaven, and the time would come when the faithful soul who should keep the commandments of God, and thus purify himself and make himself right in the sight of God, when he should bear dominion, and with equity and justice rule over all the creations of God, and all the creatures of God should be subject to man; the wolf shall dwell with the kid, and the cow and the bear shall feed and their young ones shall lie down together, and a little child shall lead them, and "righteousness and peace shall cover the earth as waters cover the sea. Ah, that is what we ought to be striving for, and as honorable and virtuous men and women, ought to strive to rise by the means that God has given us until we have overcome and been made free from the dominion of sin and be worthy to dwell in the paradise of God with all the faithful that have gone before, where we may join in the everlasting chorus, Hosanna! hosanna! hosanna! to God and the Lamb; and may God in his infinite mercy and love help us to prepare for this great consummation, is my prayer.

Never write anything over your own signature of which you might later be ashamed.

Never allow any one to read a letter intended for your eyes alone. It is intrusted to your honor, even if not so explicitly stated.

One does not use the word "house party" in an invitation, but says, "I am asking a few friends, etc."

A letter sent by hand should be left unsealed, unless a servant be the messenger.

Business letters should begin with "Sir," "Dear Sir," or "My dear Sir," or if in the plural, with "Gentlemen," and end with "Yours truly" or "Respectfully yours"—never "Respectfully" alone, omitting the subject of the sentence. Ladies are addressed as "Madam," whether married or unmarried.—Mrs. Burton Kingsland, in the June Ladies' Home Journal.

We are overrun with magnetic healers, so-called, but the trouble is, they do not heal. It is said, "a drowning man will catch at a straw." Lately, two men entered my room and proposed to cure me. I said, all right, gentlemen, on this one condition: "No cure, no pay." For two months they came and manipulated my body from crown to feet. But now I am as I was in the beginning, and they are somewhere else. Humbug, yes; but some people like to be humbugged. I write this to warn others. Never pay until you are healed. Magnetic belts, the electropoise and other treatments are frauds. I have not, nor will I try, Christian Science and the faith cure that costs $3 a week.—Rev. E. L. Armstrong, Corsicana, Texas, in St. Louis Christian Advocate, May 2.

We meet at the table three times a day in most families, and our best opportunity for conversation is found there. To sit at a meal in silence, speaking only about the affairs of the moment, asking and answering questions, but having no genuine table talk, is a mistake.—May Ladies' Home Journal.

CANCER OF THE BREAST CURED.

Grateful Words of Praise from Noble Women.

COZAD, Neb., Oct. 14, 1899.

DR. W. O. BYE, Kansas City, Mo.: DEAR DR.—I wish to state in behalf of all suffering humanity of cancer what wonderful work you did for my mother. About two years ago a lump began to grow under her left breast, which gave her much trouble and great fear. She was treated by our family physician but gradually grew worse, and every one told her that the only cure

"INCURABLE" HEART DISEASE SOON CURED.

BY THE GREAT SPECIALIST IN TREATING WEAK AND DISEASED HEARTS, FRANKLIN MILES, M. D., LITTLE ROCK, WHO WILL SEND $2.50 WORTH OF HIS COMPLETE SPECIAL TREATMENT FREE TO ANY AFFLICTED READER.

To demonstrate the unusual curative powers of his new and complete special treatment for heart disease, short breath, pain in the side, oppression in the chest, irregular pulse, palpitation, smothering spells, puffing of the ankles or dropsy, Dr. Miles will send free to every afflicted person, two dollars and a half worth of his new treatment.

It is the result of twenty-four years of careful study, extensive research, and remarkable experience in treating the various ailments of the heart, nerves and lungs, which so often complicate each case, and which are the results of his complete special treatment in most cases, that he does not hesitate to freely offer all patients a trial free.

Certainly nothing could be more generous—more philanthropic. Few physicians have such confidence in their remedies. And there is no reason why every afflicted person should not avail themselves of this exceedingly liberal offer, as they may never have another such an opportunity. No death comes more sudden than that from heart disease.

Mrs. Frank Smith, of Chicago was cured of heart dropsy after five leading physicians had given her up. A thousand references to, and testimonials from Bishops, Clergymen, Bankers, Farmers, and their wives will be sent free on request. These include some who have been cured after from five to fifteen physicians and professors had pronounced them incurable.

Send at once to Franklin Miles, M. D., corner State and Adams streets, Chicago, for free treatment before it is too late, and please mention name of this paper.

was an operation, but to this she would not consent, she said she would prefer death to an operation. When one day I saw your advertisement in a paper, and something told me I must write to you at once, which I did, and on receiving your answer I hurried homeward with your "Message of Hope." Mother concluded to give you a trial, we sent for home treatment and applied your Balm Oils at once, she began to get better right away; she took home treatment for two months and at the end of that time the cancer became quite painful and Dr. Bye requested that she should come to Kansas City for personal treatment, which she did, and on leaving us we had grave hopes for her recovery and as her many friends bid her "good-by" more than one of them thought it was for the last time. But on arriving in Kansas City Dr. Bye informed her that the cancer would come out in a few days. She remained in Kansas City only two weeks and at the end of that time she came home cured of cancer. It is now entirely healed over, it did not even leave a scar. Mother feels like a new woman: she is sixty-three years old and does all her own housework, which is no small matter as she cooks for five men. She says she cannot say enough for Dr. Bye, and the kind and loving treatment which she received while there will never be forgotten. I shall be willing and delighted to answer any and all letters that I may receive in regard to Dr. Bye's mode of treatment, and before closing this letter I trust that God may ever bless and guide you in curing the poor suffering humanity of this world.

I remain,
MRS. G. W. ARTHURS.

THE PILGRIMS' BELIEF IN REVELATION.

John and Charles Wesley are often quoted by Latter Day Saint elders to show that they believed in the restoration of the gospel with all its blessings and perfection in organization, but I do not remember ever hearing any testimony of that nature from the Pilgrim Fathers.

I herewith present something I recently run across which shows the Pilgrim Fathers not only believed in revelation from God, but enjoyed it themselves.

John Robinson was the pastor to the Pilgrims, and came with them from England to Holland, intending to go with them to America, but it was decided that he go or stay with the majority. The majority remaining in Holland, he stayed there and died in four years. Of him Edward Winslow, one of the Pilgrim Fathers who came to America, said:

"He charged us before God and his blessed angels to follow him no farther than he followed Christ, and if God should reveal anything to us by any other instrument of his to be as ready to receive it as ever we were to receive any truth by his ministry. For he was very confident the Lord had more truth and light to break forth out of his holy word.

"He took occasion to bewail the fate of the reformed churches, who were come to a period of religion and would go no farther than the instrument of their reformation, as, for example, the Lutherans could not be drawn to go beyond what Luther saw; for whatever part of God's word he had revealed to Calvin they had rather die than embrace it, and so, said he, the Calvinists, they stick where he left them, shining lights in their time, yet God had not revealed his whole will to them, and were they now alive they would be as ready to embrace further light as that they had received. * * * But without exhorted us to take heed what we received for truth, and well to examine, compare and weigh it with other scriptures before we receive it."

Concerning John Robinson we learn that an Episcopal critic pronounced him "a man of excellent parts, and the most learned, polished and modest spirit as ever separated from the Church of England."

Edward Winslow was one of the foremost of the Pilgrim Fathers. The exhortation which he relates was in Robinson's faraway address to them on their departure for America. From what he relates it is evident that they not only believed in revelation but received divine instruction, from what he says of the Calvinists, that "were they now alive they would be as ready to embrace further light as that they had received."

It is not generally known that the Pilgrims and Puritans were distinctively separate and opposed to each other, the latter being persecutors of the former. They started out with one purpose, but the Pilgrims separated themselves from the Church of England entirely, but the Puritans held to the church and tried to reform it, or at least worship according to their higher and advanced ideas without severing their connection.

This quotation from Edward Winslow I copied from Self Culture for February, 1896.

Broken Bric-a-Bracs.

Mr. Major, the famous cement man, of New York, explains some very interesting facts about Major's Cement. The multitudes who use this standard article know that it is many hundred per cent better than other cements for which similar claims are made, but a great many do not know why. The simple reason is that Mr. Major uses the best materials ever discovered and other manufacturers do not use them, because they are too expensive and do not allow large profits. Mr. Major tells us that one of the elements of his cement cost $5.75 a gallon, while a large share of the so-called cement and liquid glue upon the market are nothing more than sixteen-cent dust on heavy Major's. Don't accept any off-hand advice from a druggist. If you are at all handy (and you will be likely to find that you are a good deal more so than you imagine) you can repair your rubber boots and family shoes, and any other rubber and leather articles, with Major's Cement. And you will be surprised at how many dollars a year you will thus save. If your druggist cannot supply you, it will be forwarded by mail; either kind. Free of postage.

TIDINGS OF JOY.

BY ALEXANDER McMULLIN.

[Tune, "I am so glad that our Father in heaven..."]

I am so glad that the gospel's been given, Restored once again by an angel from heaven.

The gospel so pure by the Savior was given, A token of love from our Father in heaven.

The church has emerged from the wilderness drear, And offers her blessings to all, far and near.

The voice of the Spirit, though silent so long, Now whispers to Israel and gladdens their song.

The bride of the Lamb is now clothed with the sun, Awaiting the bridegroom, our Savior, to come.

PASTORAL.

To All the Saints and Local Ministers in the St. Louis District in Illinois and the City of St. Louis and Suburbs, Greeting:—Having been detained on account of business, I did not reach my mission field until June 9th.

ARTHUR ALLEN, Sub. Mis. June 13.

To the Saints and friends of the Little Sioux and Gallands Grove districts, Greeting:—Having been placed as sub-missionary of the Little Sioux district, I desire the co-operation of all.

As to the Gallands Grove district, on account of the serious illness of Bro. C. E. Butterworth I retained my position as assistant president of the district.

Will the missionaries and local brethren, of the above named districts, please refer again to the notice of Elder J. W. Wright, in Herald for April 25th, page 284, regarding our reporting; please note it and comply therewith.

the responsibility may be lifted, but till such time, I will do the best I can. In bonds, J. M. BAKER.

DOW CITY, IOWA, JUNE 7.

FAREWELL.

To the Saints of Washington and Oregon, Greeting:—It is with feelings of sadness not unminged with pleasure that I bid you adieu.

It has been thought best to appoint Bro. Chase and the writer to another field, but good men have been appointed to take our places.

I was sick when I left that field; got worse at conference; was unable to attend much of it; was administered to and improved enough to reach home.

I am anxious to meet my own branch, Garden Grove, for another noble band of Saints live there, Saints for whom I have preached and prayed for the last twenty years.

Bro. Chase is in our field of work and it is needless to say is hard at work. I hope to be with him the middle of this month.

There is a great deal of work for the committee to do, even if you all try to make it as light as possible for them. If you leave your order for tent early you will be supplied.

CONFERENCE MINUTES.

The Southern Nebraska district met in conference with Nebraska City branch, May 13 and 14, 1900. J. W. Waldsmith and Jas. Caffall in charge.

J. W. Waldsmith, A. J. Myers, J. B. Gouldsmith, Jas. Thomson and W. M. Self; Priests Jas. Ferguson, H. W. Belleville, E. D. Briggs, R. O. Self, H. A. Higgins, R. Meredith and Deacon Jas. Perrin; giving 1184 miles traveled, 168 sermons preached.

W. M. Self reported the Sunday School work to be gaining. New schools had been organized and good interested workers found to keep the work going.

The committee for reunion for 1900 reported unfavorably, and the following was adopted, Resolved, That we dispense with reunion for 1900.

Resolved, That the president of this district appoint two days meetings when and where his judgment shall approve.

Reports from Hebron, Blue River and Nebraska City branches were received, also Sunday School Association and Religio reports. The missionary in charge and all General Conference appointees were sustained.

Bishop's agent's report, receipts, $300.93; expended, $270.07; balance on hand, $90.88.

Adjoined to meet with Hebron branch in September next.

Convention Minutes.

The Kewanee District Sunday School Association convened at Joplin, Illinois, on June 1st at 10:45 a. m. with prayer service, followed at 2 p. m. with business session.

Mrs. Ed. LAMM, Dist. Sec. 722 N. Walnut St., Kewanee, Ill. June 11.

Eastern Reunion.

The Massachusetts reunion will open August 4, 1900, at Silver Lake, Plymouth, Massachusetts. A more delightful place cannot be found. This is the spot we have been seeking for years.

This will be largely a tenting reunion; the committee will secure a few places for aged Saints and for those in feeble health.

There is a great deal of work for the committee to do, even if you all try to make it as light as possible for them. If you leave your order for tent early you will be supplied.

R. BULLARD, Arlington Heights, Mass. H. D. SIMPSON, Washington St., Malden, Mass. F. P. BUSTLE, 24 Melvin St., Somerville, Mass. June 15.

Two Days Meeting.

Two days meeting will be held at Burlington, Missouri, Saturday, June 20th and July 1st. All the Saints in Johnson county are specially invited to attend and also all others.

R. MAY, Dist. Pres. ALFRED WHITE, Vice-Pres. INDEPENDENCE, Mo., June 14.

NOTICES.

The Central Illinois district, the new district organized by the late General Conference, will convene at Beardstown, Illinois, July 7th and 8th, to fully organize and officer the district, in order to put it in running order.

I. N. WHITE, Minister in charge. HOBBE, Mo., June 16.

The branch at Weir City, Kansas, having erected a church building some four or five years ago which is getting damaged for the want of being finished, as being one of the building committee and one of the soliciting committee I appeal to all whom this notice reaches, to assist us with what finance they can contribute to the cause and help the good work along.

WEIR CITY, Kan., June 15.

The committee of the Northern Missouri reunion, more generally known as the "Maysville reunion" met on the 9th inst. members present, T. T. Hinderks, A. W. Head, Ben Dice and C. P. Faul. The committee decided to move the reunion from Maysville.

C. P. FAUL, Sec. CLARKSDALE, Mo., June 12.

Oklahoma Saints:—At our last annual reunion a committee was appointed to consider and report on the advisability of a co-operative boarding house at our reunion this year. The committee have canvassed the ground, and after reporting, were authorized to arrange for a boarding place where all Saints who attend can get their meals at the actual cost of preparing them.

The plan is about as follows: The committee provide a place, hire a cook, provide provisions, etc. At the close of meeting the entire expense is summed up, the cost per meal determined, and those boarding pay their proportion, according to number of meals taken.

Prospects were never more flattering for the work in Oklahoma than this year. Now, let every Saint in Oklahoma arrange to attend our fourth annual reunion, and show their appreciation of all the good things of life by "Praising Him from whom all blessings flow."

W. S. MACRAE, Summer, O. T. MORRISON, O. T., May 29.

Committee on Histories and Encyclopedias.

The above committee met at the Historian's office, April 23, 1900, and formed a permanent organization by appointing Heman C. Smith chairman and Frederick Madison Smith secretary.

We are trying to systematize our work and will make an effort to correct existing misrepresentations in histories and encyclopedias as soon as possible, and will use every effort in our power to prevent the occurrence of future errors.

HERMAN C. SMITH, Box 329, Lamoni, Iowa. F. M. SHERBY, 5 Montgomery Ave., Somerville, Mass. FREDERICK MADISON SMITH, Box 332, Lamoni, Iowa.

The Annual Reunion.

The general annual reunion of the church will be held at Dow City, Iowa, commencing Friday, September 28, 1900, and continue in session ten days. Further announcements will be made in due time.

A. H. RUDD, Sec. DOW CITY, IOWA, June 5.

DIED.

GREEN.—Near Pionook, Wayne county, Illinois, May 29, 1900, Bro. John J. Green. He was 42 years, 1 month and 20 days old, being born April 9, 1858. Was baptized by Elder Emusley Curtis, March 1, 1895. He leaves a companion, 9 children, and a host of relatives and friends to mourn.

HAIR HELP. So many persons have hair that is stubborn and dull. It won't grow. What's the reason? Hair needs help just as anything else does at times. The roots require feeding. When hair stops growing it loses its luster. It looks dead. AYER'S HAIR VIGOR acts almost instantly on such hair. It awakens new life in the hair bulbs. The effect is astonishing. Your hair grows, becomes thicker, and all dandruff is removed. And the original color of early life is restored to faded or gray hair. This is always the case. $1.00 a bottle. All druggists.

"I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor, and am really astonished at the good it has done in keeping my hair from coming out. It is the best tonic I have tried, and I shall continue to recommend it to my friends." MATTIE HOYT, Burlington, N. C. Sept. 24, 1893. If you do not obtain all the benefits you expect from the use of the Hair Vigor, write the Doctor about it. Dr. J. C. Ayer, Lowell, Mass.

New subscriptions can begin at any time. If possible to avoid it, never send silver as it is liable to wear through the envelope and be lost. Always give the name of the post office to which your paper is sent or we can not find your name on our lists.

When desiring your address changed, give both the old and new address. Papers will be discontinued one month from the time subscriptions expire, unless ordered continued.

In making remittances, money orders are preferable for they are absolutely safe. If you can avoid it, do not send coin or stamps. Canadian stamps are an entire loss, and Canadian currency is only worth about one cent on the dollar to us, for that is all we can get for it at the banks. Letters should be addressed, and orders and drafts made payable to

THE SCORNFUL ABOUND.

The scoffer is in numerous evidence in this age of the world, possibly more so than in some other periods. But he has always been conspicuous when a message authorized by the Lord to be delivered to the human family was being declared. He is one of the most active agents the adversary of souls has at his command; and how zealously and willingly he places himself in the hands of his master; there is no shrinking from the task; no urging is required. He is never the subject of reproof and admonition for failure to do service; he seems to be watching for every opportunity, and glad to embrace it as though it was a meritorious deed.

The chief weapons of the scoffer are derision, contumely and, if need be, misrepresentation. He may make use of the Scripture to oppose the message being delivered, but if he does, he clothes his arguments with ridicule and derision in order to, as he thinks, weaken the other side in the estimation of the hearers, and divert their attention from the truth and importance of the message being presented. But while the careless, indifferent and the weak minded may be influenced and deceived by such procedure, the thoughtful, conscientious mind is disgusted, and the side of the scoffer loses force with him because of its evident unfairness and its lack of sense and good reason.

It would probably astonish and vex some of the ministers who are always so eager to antagonize the positions held by others, to be told that they, in their demeanor, methods and manners, occupy "the seat of the scornful," and are scoffers; as much so as the man who simply uses derision and mockery as his chief weapons; but such is, nevertheless, true. They cannot, it seems, resist the temptation to belittle and make the argument of their opponent seem ridiculous, though that argument may be the words spoken by our Savior or by the Holy Ghost.

Because the Lord Jesus Christ saw fit to sharply rebuke hypocrites, and because the Holy Ghost has occasionally condemned sin, men who have not the pure love of God in their hearts, and who are not inspired by the Holy Spirit, assume the same prerogatives, and justify themselves in using harshness and acting in an ungentlemanly, unchristian and inconsistent manner towards those who oppose them.

It is a safe rule by which to judge, that no man who truly loves God, despises his fellow-man; an excuse may be, and often is given, that it is not the individual which is despised, but the weakness of his arguments. At the same time they fail to recognize that "as a man thinketh so is he," and that his belief, to which he is entitled, and for which he is accountable to no man, but alone to God, is a part of his individual character. He, therefore, has the right to demand that his claims shall be candidly and courteously examined, and that they shall receive respectful consideration if they are at all called in question.

Nothing so quickly arouses the natural antagonism of an individual as to have his honesty, and to him, truthful opinions, harshly and superciliously attacked; and the one who does so, loses, at once, any power he may have for benefiting the other party, however erroneous he may think to be the opinions held by him; hence, he is deprived of the only legitimate and possible creditable excuse for introducing an argument, or in any way interfering with the right of his brother in the opinion which has obtained with him as being sound, logical and truthful.

The Golden Rule is the only one worthy of adoption by those who profess to be the disciples of Christ. He plainly said:

A new commandment I give unto you, That ye love one another; as I have loved you, that ye also love one another. By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another.—John 13: 34, 35.

Under the Mosaic law, or at least the manner in which it was interpreted by the chief teachers of that day, it had been accounted the proper thing to love those who loved you, and to despise your enemies; to revile and persecute those who made themselves obnoxious to you, or if you happened to take a dislike to them either with or without cause. But the gospel law changed all this, and the command of the Highest was, "Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you, and persecute you," and adds, "That ye may be the children of your Father which is in heaven." (Matt. 5: 44, 45).

No man should be despised because he happens to comprehend things differently to even the majority of mankind. The majorities have been wrong more often than right, when it comes to a consideration of spiritual things. The despised Nazarene, hated and persecuted and scoffed at by the majority of the world in His day, proved to be all that He claimed for Himself. The despised and scoffed at Noah proved he was right in his message of warning, and so have other notable servants of God anciently. Why should not history repeat itself in this as in other regards?

We confidently affirm that the despised and martyred Joseph Smith will yet have the truthfulness of his message and claims vindicated. Though all the mighty and "honorable" of the earth scoff; though all the learned doctors of the law and of divinity deride; though the masses of the "common" people reject it now, as all refused to hear the message of Noah, and as so many despised the commandments of the Lord Jesus Christ, so shall those who today reject the angel's message delivered through Joseph Smith and his co-laborers down to the end of this age, the end of the world as it now exists, be made to realize that his claims were truthful and just, and that God the Father and His Son Jesus Christ did send him to restore the everlasting gospel and gave to him and his co-laborers authority to build up His kingdom for the last time prior to the second coming of Christ, scoff at it and deride as they may; but,

Surely he scorneth the scorners: but he giveth grace unto the lowly.—Prov. 3: 34.

Now therefore be ye not mockers, lest your bands be made strong.—Isa. 52: 22.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

EDWARD ANDERSON, Mullan, Idaho, would be pleased to make the acquaintance of any of the Saints who may reside in that region of country. He requests such to address him as above.

BRO. A. C. BARMORE advises that by an agreement between Bro. R. C. Evans and J. H. Lake he has been transferred to Canada, and his mission address will be 8 Waterloo Terrace, Toronto, Ontario. All who wish to correspond with him will be governed accordingly.

SR. NANCY BOYDSTON, Settles Station, Missouri, says she would be glad to have Elder J. M. Terry of Chicago come and preach in their neighborhood. The people all around Buckeye and Farmer school-houses think there is no elder like Bro. Terry.

ELDER I. N. DELONG is now at Portland, Oregon, and is working at the sewer pipe plant. If there are any Saints in or near Portland he would be glad to have them call and see him. He boards at 411 North Eighth street. He desires to know who has charge of that mission. Bro. G. T. Griffiths is missionary in charge of that state.

BRO. T. W. CHATBURN again makes his appearance with his faithful and appreciative "Jobs by the Wayside." If our good Bro. Terry, of Chicago, could always have his wishes so promptly gratified as they are on the occasion of the reappearance of the "Jobs," how happy he and everybody else would be, for his great, warm heart would always be wishing for blessings upon mankind, and his brethren in particular.

BRO. ALFRED WHITE and Wm. Newton continued at Merritt school-house, near Calhoun, Henry county, Missouri, until the 18th, and on 19th Bro. Newton baptized Bro. Harson Houts and wife and Sr. Bramder. They also blessed Bro. and Sr. Houts' three children. They then returned to Henrietta, held some additional meetings, and on the 23d Bro. Newton baptized Bro. Wm. M. Landon. They also blessed his child.

BRO. J. H. LAWN, Mulberry, California, commends Bro. Haw's "Sabbatarian Theories a Delusion," having carefully read it through; he finds that in many places it sparkles with a new light never before, to his knowledge, having been thrown upon that much discussed question, the Jewish or Seventh Day Sabbath. He advises every one to send for a copy, as being helpful. Copies can be obtained at the ENSIGN office, price, paper covers, 15 cents each.

BRO. J. C. FOSS says he was refused the use of a church at Richmond, Missouri, by one of the trustees, upon the plea that he "denied the plan of salvation and power of God as taught in the Bible." It is possible that Bro. Foss may have taught differently to what the trustee interpreted the Bible to teach on those questions, but one of Bro. Foss' main contentions is the necessity for the power of God to be made manifest today, precisely as it is taught in the Bible, and the opposition he encounters usually is on that ground, because men do not now believe that such manifestations should be in the church. Bro. Foss states that arrangements were being made by the citizens to obtain the school-house. He was at Lexington Junction, Missouri, the 26th, and reports having baptized Emma B. Graham the previous Sunday, and that others are "near the kingdom."

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

ELDER J. N. STEPHENSON, Eldorado Springs, Missouri:

The Veve conference just closed was one of the most spiritual I ever attended. Bro. T. R. White and I are now looking for an opening where we may present the gospel.

MR. J. R. HACKER, Big Cabin, Indian Territory:

I would like to have Elders Keck and Smart remember us at Big Cabin. I live three miles east of Cabin Switch. I do not belong to the church but am interested in it.

BRO. ETHAN BARROWS, 528 East 2d South street, Salt Lake City, Utah:

Elder R. Etzenhouser, Elbert Smith and wife and David Anderson and wife, after a pleasant stop over here, departed on the 12th for California, their field of labor, in good spirits, hopeful of doing good.

ELDER J. J. CORNISH, Bay City, Michigan:

Our conference at Bay Port, Michigan, is over. We just had a grand, good time; everything passed off nicely. In our preaching and our testimony meetings we enjoyed much of the Spirit of the Master. The next conference will be held at Flint in October.

SR. J. B. HOLMES, Mondovi, Washington:

We have lived here sixteen months and have not heard a sermon or seen one of like faith since we left Illinois. The Utah elders have been through here preaching, but we could not attend. Would like to have our elders come; if any are passing through we live three miles north of Mondovi. Expect to leave here, however, in three months. Would like to see a letter in the ENSIGN from Bro. James McKleran. We ask the prayers of the Saints.

ELDER H. E. MOLER, Wilmington, Illinois:

As the result of continued and repeated effort on the part of Bro. A. J. Keck and myself, I have the pleasure of reporting that during the past week eleven persons have been baptized and confirmed members of the church, seven of whom are heads of families, and all are respectable people. Others are near the door, and we look for a good work to be done here. We are to continue here for near a week yet, or until time to attend the district conference at Mission.

SR. (Mrs.) MARIA TAYLOR, CEDAR RAPIDS, IOWA:

We live two miles from the post office just on the outskirts of Cedar Rapids. We are in a measure isolated, there being only a few of us—four in all. Would like more preaching if we could have it. My nephew, J. R. Sutton, and Elder Hand held forth here for awhile, and some interested hearers. The people seem to be tired of fables. I send my ENSIGNS to as many as seem to want to read them. I hope the day is not far distant when we will have a branch here. Success to your valuable paper. May God's blessing attend it on its mission of love.

GENERAL CHURCH NEWS.

INDEPENDENCE.

Bro. Ralph G. Smith's new house on West Maple avenue is rapidly looming up.

Sr. Earl Corthell is out of danger and convalescing rapidly. The little boy was quite low the past week but he also is recovering.

Sr. J. A. Robinson Sr., is having a new porch built to her house on West Lexington street, having moved the old one to the side. It will be a very great improvement.

Bro. Geo. Hayward has made a number of improvements in his house, repapering, painting, remodeling, etc., and everything is as neat as can be. Sr. Hayward is a continual foe to dirt and disorder.

Sr. Jessie Orrick underwent a severe surgical operation Saturday of last week, our brethren, Drs. J. W. Mather and A. H. Baldwin, being the operators. Their work was successful and Sr. Orrick is recovering nicely.

Sr. Jennie Newton and children, accompanied by Sr. Newton's mother, Sr. J. A. Robinson, Sr., arrived from Cove, Arkansas, Sunday morning last. She stood the journey excellently and has been slowly but steadily improving ever since, and we hope will soon be as active as ever.

Mrs. Mary Kurtz, daughter of Sr. Waldron, died at her home on Temple street, on Monday last. Her illness was of short duration, but severe. The skill of three physicians and the care of kind relatives were brought to bear, but failed to ward off the death stroke. The funeral service was conducted at the house on Wednesday by Elder Joseph Luff.

Sunday was quite warm but there was a fairly good sized audience at all services. Bro. R. May occupied at the morning hour giving some good instruction. At the close of the service about $125 was collected towards liquidating the church debt. The afternoon service was characterized by splendid testimonies, strengthening and edifying. At night Bro. Joseph Luff preached with fine liberty and power.

The Hawthorne Society, of Independence, are among our most active and successful workers. They make all kinds of fancy needle work, both useful and ornamental, and have cleared since January 1st, this year, $136.24, of which amount $101.70 has been donated toward paying off the indebtedness of the church. Their bazaars and entertainments are always successful in their social, as well as financial features. They are doing a good work and are deserving of the patronage and encouragement given them.

Quite a severe storm visited Independence shortly before eight o'clock Wednesday evening. It raged with considerable violence, amounting almost to a cyclone, for probably half an hour, when it gradually passed away though the rain fell steadily nearly all night. Thursday morning came clear and showed the effects of the visitation in broken limbs, uprooted trees and prostrate telegraph poles. The roofs of the towers on the Saints' church suffered to some extent in the tearing off of some of the board covering; the damage was small, however. We feel thankful the damage to our city was so slight. For a time it seemed as if the storm might carry everything before it.

Sr. H. H. Robinson is still quite ill, and suffers considerably, especially in the hot days and nights which have recently prevailed. She has an occasional good day or night's rest which fortifies her for unfavorable relapses, but on the whole we think she is gaining slightly. Her malady has been pronounced by a council of physicians as a fibroid tumor, for which they cannot successfully treat. They admitted, however, that she had been wonderfully helped from some source, but gave no encouragement for recovery. She should have the faithful prayers of the Saints that the Father may continue to bless her unto final recovery.

Bro. and Sr. W. T. Bozarth arrived safely at Manitou, Colorado, June 25th, after a five weeks trip overland, weary, but in good health. Bro. Bozarth joined Brn. C. R. Duncan and J. F. Curtis in the tent at Colorado Springs, Sunday, the 24th. These brethren intended keeping up the meetings this week, perhaps longer. Sr. Bozarth says they miss the meetings enjoyed while here, and they feel it a trial to be so separated, but are striving to be contented and thankful for present blessings, and trustful for the future. A clipping from The Denver News regarding some archaeological discoveries in New Mexico will be given the ENSIGN readers shortly through the kindness of Sr. Bozarth who is thoughtfully intent upon benefiting those interested in these developments. They intend making their home in Colorado Springs for the present.

The Independence branch is blessed with good, faithful, devoted officials in the important offices of the lesser priesthood, and so far as their secular duties—the sustaining of their families—permit, are active and diligent. Bro. J. W. Layton, a noble, large hearted servant of God, has for a number of consecutive terms, occupied as presiding priest, and before his ordination as priest, was presiding teacher. He is a man of faith, patience, charity and love, whose greatest interest is in seeing the work of the Lord prosper. He has served several terms, and still occupies, as president of the local Religio society, and is loved and respected by all. Bro. Lester Brackenbury, presiding teacher, is considerably handicapped by his duties as clerk in the post office, but is an humble, faithful and devoted servant of the Master, and has the confidence and support of the Saints in his efforts to preserve the integrity of the church. Bro. B. C. Smith, our energetic presiding deacon, has occupied for, we don't know how many years. He is a painstaking, careful official, watching closely the financial interests of the body, and striving to promote the comfort of the worshipers, both of the Saints and the stranger who may come "within the gates" of the Lord's house. Other brethren in all these orders named, priests, teachers and deacons, render good service in their various callings, but are more or less hindered in their work by the demands incident to providing a living. Unity and harmony abound among the active workers, and we are anxious to have every member of the priesthood place themselves in line for active service, that they may be approved and found watching when the Master comes. More laborers are much needed. May the Father call them into work. Bro. George Horton, our worthy janitor, is always at his post, faithful, painstaking and obliging. He always has the house of worship as comfortable as possible for those who attend, and there are numerous meetings—every night in the week being occupied, usually, except Saturday, and some of the afternoons, so that he is kept busy. The Lord bless these faithful brethren, and continue their usefulness and devoted service many years.

LAMONI, IOWA.

Bro. George V. Brown (whose family lives on a farm south of here in Missouri) who has been ailing for some time, died at St. Joseph, Missouri, lately and was brought here for burial Wednesday of last week; Elder Stebbins preached the funeral sermon at the brick church.

Bro. Martin McKim is crippled up with a sprained knee, caused by a runaway accident.

The faculty of Graceland College for fall term is Professor Harkness, president; Professor Gunsolley, principle of the commercial department; Sr. Hatch, professor of languages and English literature; Sr. Audentia Anderson, professor of instrumental music; and Sr. Ruth L. Smith, professor of elocution.

The usual Wednesday night prayer meetings at the church and Mite Society Hall were held last week.

The Religio had an excellent and attractive program last week.

The preaching here yesterday, Sunday 24th, was by Elders Gunsolley and Stead at the Saints' church, and by Samuel Bailey at the Saints' Home. The afternoon prayer and testimony meeting was in charge of Elder J. A. Gunsolley, assisted by Elder James Allen. Good prayers and testimonies were offered.

CHICAGO, ILLINOIS.

Branch headquarters, 716 W. Van Buren St., Sunday meetings 2:45 and 7:45 p. m.; Lang Mission, 311 Cottage Grove Ave., 10:45 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.; West Pullman branch, 12024 Union Ave., 10:30 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.; Parkside Mission, 7124 Stony Island Ave., 3:30 and 7:30 p. m.; 508 W. 37th St. (colored mission), 10:30 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.

Just arrived from our quarterly conference at Mission, Illinois. There was a large representation of the district present, which, with the local Saints and people, made up a congregation of about four hundred and fifty. The business sessions were quite harmonious, there being but few dissenting votes.

Bro. Henry Southwick and Bro. John Midgorden were placed as presidents, with Bro. James F. Keir, of 710 Carroll street, Chicago, Illinois, as secretary, Bro. Johnson being relieved on account of ill health. On Friday the Sunday School and Religio work was presented in a routine way, and at night we were nicely entertained by local talent with some outside help. At a cost of twenty-five hundred and ten dollars the Mission Saints and friends have built a nicely arranged house, 36x60 feet, with incline floor and opera chairs, to be heated by furnace. This house was dedicated to the Lord on Sabbath morning. Bro. T. Hougas, president of the branch, in charge, opening prayer by Bro. Southwick, and the sermon of one hour and four minutes by Bro. H. C. Smith, president of the mission, the dedicatory prayer by the writer. These were interspersed by anthems and song appropriate to the occasion. The new house is elegant, commodious and with good acoustics, affording a pleasant and comfortable church home for worship. The service seemed impressive and satisfactory. Bro. Frank Russell preached on Saturday night, and Brn. F. M. Cooper and H. E. Moler on Sunday at 3 and 8 p. m. respectively, with a prayer service in the morning, constituting the services for the day.

Stella Timmons, of Essex, Illinois, and Jessie B. Smith, of Chicago, were baptized during our late conference, making an addition, as we believe, that will count for good to the cause. We welcome such to our numbers.

Though twenty-six were in attendance at the conference, yet the services in the city were well attended, Bro. P. Pement preaching at the 2:45 hour, and Bro. Wm. Strange at night. Good words for both efforts were heard by the writer on his return, and we were glad. The Sunday School is doing well and increasing in numbers.

J. M. TERRY.

ST. JOSEPH, MISSOURI.

Five children from Aspey mission were baptized in the church font Sunday afternoon by Elder Marcus Shaw. This mission is in charge of Brn. Shaw and Jeffries, and the brethren report good meetings and interest. Bro. Walter Smith, of Kansas City, has preached there several times of late, and his efforts have been much appreciated.

Bro. M. Shaw preached a funeral sermon one week ago, a grandson of Sr. Bartlett, who was drowned in the river.

Services across the river at Elwood, Kansas, have been well attended and there is a growing interest among the people. The brethren feel there are some honest in heart who will receive the gospel. Bro. Swen Swenson will occupy there each night this week.

One hundred and thirty-three were in attendance at Sunday School Sunday, with six teachers, six officers and fifteen pupils absent. A special effort is urged to have 150 present next Sunday.

At the Z. R.-L. S. election of officers on Tuesday night, Bro. John A. Gardner was chosen president; Sr. Ida Pearson, vice president; Arthur Smith, secretary; Pearl Smith, organist; Josephine Isleib, chorister; Blair Dobson, treasurer.

The little daughter of Bro. and Sr. G. J. Whitehead was blessed Sunday afternoon by Bro. Wm. Hawkins, assisted by Bro. R. Archibald, named Bertena Harriet.

Bro. C. E. Guinand has been ill for the past week.

ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI.

Sr. R. B. Trowbridge has returned to the city from an extended visit in Kansas.

Our district conference which met at St. Louis, June 23d and 24th, passed off nicely. Rain and mud both days prevented the good attendance we usually have. Bro. J. C. Hitchcock was the speaker in the morning (Sunday), Bro. Arthur Allen in the evening.

The reunion committee have secured the use of Normandy Grove for the reunion this year. It is said to be the "finest location in the county." In many respects it is much better adapted to our use than Ramona Park, besides we have exclusive use of it during the entire ten days which we could not have of the park.

The St. Louis, Cheltenham and Oak Hill Sunday Schools are to have a joint picnic at Forest Park, July 4th. Preparations of an unusual character are in hand. It is also reported that some of our people from Bellville are to come over.

Saints were in attendance at our conference yesterday from Caseyville, Taylorville, Bellville, Godfrey, Illinois, Oak Hill, Cheltenham and Normandy, Missouri.

Sr. Fred Johnson returned recently from a visit to her old home, Little Sioux, Iowa. She was accompanied by her sister, Sr. Fred Blair, of Lamoni.

Bro. Duncan, brother to C. R. Duncan, was in attendance at the conference yesterday.

Reunion talk is getting numerous, and it is fully expected we will have about double the tents on the ground this year as compared with what we had last year.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA.

Services at Golden West Hall, 320 Post street, every Sunday. Sunday School 10 a. m., preaching 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.; prayer meeting first Sunday of each month at 12:15 noon. Elder C. A. Parkin presiding elder, residence 3019 16th street.

We had preaching here Sunday at 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m. by Elder Chas. Crumley, missionary en route to Oregon. Albert Hays was the speaker at Oakland.

Elder Etzenhouser passed through our city this week, making only a short stay, but seeing a little of our city in that time. He is now at San Jose but will return here soon.

Fred B. Blair is at Sacramento.

Bro. D. A. Anderson and wife were also there Wednesday and are expected here every day.

We had good attendance at the Religio Friday night, at the residence of C. A. Partin, 3864 17th street. The notables present were Bro. and Sr. Jos. F. Burton, Bro. and Sr. Elbert Smith, son of David H. Smith, Bro. Chas. Crumley and nineteen others. The program was good and some of the papers excellent.

As Bro. Balshan has been seriously sick for a long time the Religio has set Sunday, the 24th, apart as a day for fasting and prayer in his behalf. They are also to invite the branch to unite with them. The last Friday evening this month, they are to hold an open meeting; a literary program is to be the chief feature, and non-members are to be special guests.

Our weather is beautiful now. We have had a little rain of late, which has cleared the atmosphere, and now it is clear, sunny and warm. Our heavy fogs have passed away for the present, fresh fruits are in the market, such as peaches, apricots, cherries, strawberries and the ever-present oranges, also vegetables in abundance, such as lettuce, green peas, sugar corn, etc. Flowers are blooming freely everywhere, and our parks are full of song birds, so all nature is gay. All is well with the Saints here now.

LETTER DEPARTMENT.

LOS ANGELES, CAL., June 18.
Editor Ensign:—Will you please announce to the world that we are going to have a reunion in Southern California this summer? This reunion will be held beginning the 10th and lasting over the 17th of August. We have not fully decided on the location, but we are planning to secure Sycamore Grove, which lies within the corporate limits of Los Angeles and is one of the best places in the country. We will be able to make definite announcements as to this in a future communication. It is proposed to institute the "Co-operative Table." The experience of last year will serve us admirably this year. I believe that committees of other reunions should consider this feature, for it is such a saving both in time and means and the sisters are as free as the men to enjoy the services. We fully expect either Bro. Joseph or Alexander to be with us. Bro. Griffiths, Burton, Anderson, Smith, Chatburn, Gibson and others will be present.

Bro. Elbert Smith is at Santa Rosa; will remain there a couple of weeks. Bro. Anderson is expected here this week, likewise the Inimitable Chatburn.

Bro. Harris is better and visited here last week; he is now at Garden Grove. Bro. Holt spent a week at Garden Grove, but expects to start for his field in a few days. Bro. Dana is all ready to start for his field and only awaits specific directions.

So far as I know there is general good feeling all over this district. I know of no breach of good christian decorum.

Last week I visited Downey, calling on the few Saints there. Bro. and Sr. Van Fleet are as active as ever in the work. Preached in Garden Grove Sunday morning and returned to the city in time to attend to baptizing and preaching in the evening. We had previously announced that Bro. Burton would be in the city and, if so, he would occupy the stand; he failed to materialize. Bro. Earl supplied the deficiency in the morning, giving good satisfaction.

I would again suggest that we are in a condition to use thousands of Ensigns in our summer's campaign if the Saints will only supply them. The brethren will need them in the tent work and we can use a quantity in our city canvass. Do not destroy your church papers, but send them to my address below. Do not send Hopes or Autumn Leaves, for we cannot use them. T. W. WILLIAMS.

ST. JOSEPH, MISSOURI, June 14.
Dear Ensign:—I left Kansas June 4th and made a short visit to Holden, Missouri, to see mother and the Saints. Strange how sweet hallowed memories cluster around the place one embraces this work.

I left home the 7th for Stewartsville, Missouri, to attend the conventions and conference of the Far West district. I stopped over night in Kansas City and arrived in Stewartsville the 8th in time to see our wide-awake assistant superintendent of the District Sunday School Association, Sr. Carrie Lewis, conduct the last session of the convention.

At 8 p. m. the 8th our district Religio convention convened with a full house and good interest. The election of officers resulted in placing added responsibilities upon my shoulders in the way of district president. I appreciate the confidence of the Religians and shall labor with all my strength to prove myself worthy of this confidence.

We enjoyed a spiritual feast in the district conference which followed on Saturday and Sunday and met the missionary force of the Far West district, where I expect to labor this conference year with Bro. Swen Swenson.

I came to St. Joseph the 12th by direction of Bro. Foss to look after the interest of the Sunday School and Religio. We hope to do much good along these lines in the district this year. I am enjoying the hospitality of Bro. Wm. Lewis at this writing. Any one wishing to reach me by letter can do so by writing to Holden, Missouri. It will be forwarded to me immediately.

I am as ever your brother in the work,
 WALKER SMITH.

BLACKWELL, Okla., June 21.
Editor Ensign:—I pen my first letter to your columns. The ENSIGN is laden with good news to all Latter Day Saints, and while I have not written I have been a reader, and tried to assist in other ways to get the ENSIGN into the homes of my brethren.

Leaving home and loved ones on May 17th, en route to my new field of labor, I spent a very pleasant day in Independence, Missouri. Among the number I met was Sr. Burton's mother, Grandma Davison, also others of her relatives, with whom the writer spent a very pleasant few hours talk about experiences in those far away isles of the sea. These anxious hearted people, to learn of the safe arrival of Bro. and Sr. Burton to their native land, served as an example to the writer of the anxiety of other mothers and loved ones under like circumstances.

I entered my new field of labor on May 19th, in company with Bro. Macrae, arriving in Perry, where we met Bro. and Sr. Budworth, and on Sunday met with the Saints in Oak Grove branch. Bro. Aylor preached a good discourse to the Saints at 11 a. m. and the writer made an effort at preaching in the evening.

Monday Bro. A. and I began tent meetings at Morrison, continuing about a week, the Saints nobly assisting and caring for the missionaries. Being relieved by Bro. Davis and McFae, of our care for the tent, we went to Pond Creek and held meetings over two Sundays; four were baptized and others very much interested. By card from brethren at Morrison we learned that five were baptized same date as the baptisms at Pond Creek.

Where the scattered Saints live the doctrine we are sent out to preach, men and women are always attracted by the gospel of the meek and lowly Christ.

Interest here in Blackwell isn't very flattering, but the seed must be sown. So many are "lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God," that the attractions of this gay world demand the attention of the masses. The few Saints here who have kindly cared for us, I pray the good Lord to reward them.

Oklahoma is a beautiful country so far as I have seen. The "Free Home Bill," and the enormous crops this year, are giving the country a boom.

A gentleman remarked to me yesterday, that during the dry season here the people were very religious, but since prosperity had come they had forgotten their God. It reminded me of the history of ancient Israel. But I will say that the prospect for the work in some localities is to me, very encouraging. My co-workers are all busily at work, so far as I have heard, and there are many more calls for preaching. The harvest truly is great, but the laborers few.

We expect to move the tent to Pond Creek the first of next week, and some of the brethren will occupy in the Christian church at Nardin, ten miles west of Blackwell.

Having been appointed sub-missionary in charge of both Oklahoma and Indian Territory, I would be glad to hear from the Saints regarding the needs of the work, and desire your co-operation, faith and prayers. My mission address will be, Okarche, care of L. W. Pate.

The brethren of the missionary force in the above named territory will please remember to send in their reports promptly to me, on July 1st, October 1st, January 1st and March 1st.

Your brother and co-worker,
 HUBERT CASE.

NEAR CALHOUN, Henry Co., Mo., June 18.

Editor Ensign:—According to arrangements with the sub-missionary in charge, Bro. May, I joined Bro. Alfred White at Henrietta school-house, Johnson county, Missouri, on Thursday, June 7th, he having preached there three times before I came; I preached on the same evening and continued until the 13th with a very good interest, over fifty present the last night. On the 12th I had the pleasure of adopting two precious souls unto the family and Kingdom of God's dear Son, and on the 14th two more, Sr. Nettie Heard, young Bro. Rowen Oak Landon, Bro. C. M. Starford and Myrtle M. Davis. Bro. A. White preferred that I should do the watering, but the most of the work was done by him. I find him a most congenial companion, and a fearless defender of the faith.

Bro. Alma Houts came with a spring wagon, took us to his home, the same evening we preached in the Merritt school-house in Henry county, and have held meetings every night to the present. We are going to baptize some more tomorrow, please God, as there are some who have given their names. We are having good liberty and good attendance.

Your brother in bonds,
 WM. NEWTON.

MAINTLAND, Mo., June 21.
Editor Ensign:—On the 17th inst. we closed the tent meeting at Mound City; just the amount of good done the great by and by must reveal. No one obeyed, but some few seemed almost persuaded.

We moved our tent to this place on the 19th, and open up with a fair interest; if our crowd was as large on the inside of the tent as it is around the outcrops and at times in the grass and weeds, hiding for fear they will be seen, we would feel like we were doing some good. It makes us feel the day has surely come to which the prophet referred when he wrote: "Behold ye despisers and wonder and perish, for I work a work in you, a work which ye shall in no wise believe, though a man declare it unto you." We take satisfaction in the thought that Jesus said, "This gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come."

It's our duty to preach it, and leave the results in the hands of a merciful Father.

Bro. J. A. Davis put in a few good sermons at a private house in Skidmore; the efforts seem to take well and no doubt in time some will be gathered in there.

Tomorrow (25th) I go to Baroard, Bro. Wm. Woodhead having secured the use of the M. E. church for me one week. Bro. J. A. Davis has gone to Napier to preach at the Banks school-house, and continue for some days if there is an interest. Bro. C. P. Welsh will remain in charge of the tent up to July 2d.

There seems to be a wakening in this district among the local help, all desiring to be out doing what they can for the Master. It is cheering indeed to see those whom the Lord has called wanting to honor their standing before God and the church. Truly "the harvest is great, but the laborers are few." The cry was made by the angel to those in Babylon, "Come out of her my people that ye be not partakers of her sins;" surely that time is now at hand, for the "abomination of desolation" spoken of by Daniel, the prophet, is among the false systems and doctrines of the day.

May the Lord save his people.
 Yours in the faith,
 D. C. WHITE.

HOOD RIVER, Oregon, June 14.

Editor Ensign:—I came from my home at Condon, Oregon, on June 5th at the request of Bro. Thomas Chapman, whose home was in Persia, Iowa, but now he and his young wife have located on a strawberry and fruit farm in this beautiful valley of Hood River. We held three meetings in Bro. Chapman's house, after which I was invited to occupy the Christian Advent church; but it being inconvenient on account of distance we only used it once. Then we got the use of the Christian church. There being a body of Brighamites here, we got some posters printed and advertised to show the difference between us. We went to their place and invited them to be present. Their elder not being at home, we did not have the pleasure of meeting him; we found out afterwards that he arrived that evening, but failed to show himself. One man at the Christian Advent church got up and left when one of his brethren introduced me as speaker. I had an infidel out last night who told me to keep on as we were doing good wherever we went. He said he might have believed our doctrine had he not been raised a strict Methodist.

Well, I desire to say to the conference appointees that as usual in this part I have opened another place for them. So when you are traveling on the railroad, don't forget to stop off at Hood River and inquire for Thos. Chapman. He lives across the road from Mr. Howell's blacksmith shop, about two miles from town; he and his wife will be pleased to meet you and will make you comfortable, and in the late fall and winter this will be an excellent opening. We have made many friends so far. I leave for home tomorrow, the 15th, having preached eight times.

May the good work roll on, is the prayer of,
 Your brother in Christ,
 W. A. GOODWIN.

LOWER LAKE, Cal., June 18.

Editor Ensign:—We have a small branch way up in the mountains. There are but few of us who meet every Sunday; the branch have never all been together at one time from the fact that the members are so scattered that it is impossible for them to get together. But the few who do get together try to live as it becomes Saints. We are all poor, so we have not been able to put up a house to hold meetings in; we hold meetings at private houses, and that makes it bad, for outsiders don't like to go to a private house to meetings. But we are not all tongue tied, the people in these parts know what we teach, and the ministers of the different churches leave us alone, and some of them have closed their doors against us. The Campbellites have let us have their church a few times.

I have been a member some thirty-four years, and have never failed to unfurl the banner of truth. I have had quite a number of hard debates, some with outsiders, some with ministers and infidels. But you know truth will prevail and stand against error and false doctrine; and so long as we are on the side of God and truth we need never fear for the outcome; God will not let his cause suffer so long as we trust in him.

I wish I was able to put the ENSIGN in a hundred families, but I cannot, I am too poor and getting too old, I am in my 71st year.

J. Y. GRAUMLICH.

HARTINGTON, Neb., June 19.

Editor Ensign:—Under direction of Bro. F. A. Smith, our sub-missionary in charge, Bro. Oscar Case and I are running the gospel tent; we have made two new openings of late, one at this place, the other at Coleridge, points where the true gospel had never been preached.

We went to Laurel last Sunday and baptized one, Sr. Liddie Jests, a saint indeed of latter days. Others are near the kingdom at that place. The outlook is good at present, in this north part of the district, and we are hopeful in Zion's cause.

Your co-worker in Christ,
 H. W. BELVILLE.

WALKER, Mo., June 12.

Editor Ensign:—I just came here from the Vv conference and must say it was the best one I ever attended; the Spirit of the Lord was there to cheer the kind Saints. I came here to baptize a man and his wife by the name of Yates, the man has been sick for seven or eight weeks, but through the kindness of the Saints who have rendered him assistance and talked the gospel to them, they made up their minds to obey the gospel. Some of the outsiders said the man would die if he was baptized, but knowing the Lord was the same today as in any age of the world, we went to the water, about a quarter of a mile away; quite a crowd gathered to witness the ordinance, the Spirit of the Lord was there to cheer the Saints, and some of the outsiders now say he looks so much better. May the Lord have the praise.

I spoke here last night to a good crowd, with fair liberty; will preach over Sunday. Bro. A. C. Silvers will join me soon. I find him to be a noble worker; I feel well in the work. Any one in the district who desires preaching write me at 17 Monroe street, Fort Scott, Kansas, or to T. R. White at Lowry City, Missouri.

Yours in gospel bonds,
 LEW QUICK.

PACIFIC GROVE, Cal., June 18.

Editor Ensign:—I think the ENSIGN is doing a good work, and will try to get a few subscribers for you here, as I feel as if every Saint should have it to read.

My husband is away in his mission field, preaching every night to interested audiences and expects to baptize many this coming year.

Bro. Chase and Allen are in San Jose with the tent, this district having purchased a new one for them. I hear they are well liked there, and we hope to have them here this summer before the season is over, so that the crowds of health seekers may have the gospel preached to them also.

We are still keeping up the Sunday School and our Wednesday evening prayer meeting, holding them at the homes of the Saints; but we are looking forward to the time given us "by that sure word of promise," of a branch raised up here, and a house of our own for the worship of "our Father."

Beautiful for situation with its health giving climate, no place more desirable among the many than this, and with our hearts attuned to God's service, we hope to see the results of our labors in the saving of many precious souls. Sr. Peck, of St. Joseph, Missouri, has arrived, adding one more to our number. All are welcome.

In hope of eternal life,
 Your sister,
 FRANCES KEELEB.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

ALICE R. CONSON.

The friend for whom I wrote my "Notes" on Christian Science wrote me that she liked my article very much, only she could not see how I could claim the Book of Mormon was meant in the passages referred to concerning the book that was to come forth any more than M. B. Eddy's book. Also she said while she would always be glad to hear from me or see me, yet she never wanted to hear any more about Mormonism; to which I replied as follows:

"My dear friend.—I am glad you liked the article on Christian Science; now, I just wish to tell you why I think the Book of Mormon is the book spoken of in Revelation rather than Mary B. Eddy's book:

"First. M. B. Eddy's book is not described, nor the manner of its coming forth, in the Bible, while the Book of Mormon is. Read Psalms 85: 1, "Truth shall spring out of the earth; and righteousness shall look down from heaven." M. B. Eddy's book did not "spring out of the earth. Also Isaiah 45: 8, "Drop down, ye heavens, from above, and let the skies pour down righteousness: let the earth open, and let them bring forth salvation, and let righteousness spring up together; I the Lord have created it." Notice, in both verses reference is made to 'righteousness coming down from heaven,' and 'truth springing out of the earth,' and in the latter verse, 'Let righteousness spring up together' with them (truth and salvation). Now, when the heavens opened, and the angel messengers came to earth, and showed where the book was hidden, and also showed the pattern of the church to Joseph, these words concerning righteousness coming down from the skies were beginning to be fulfilled; and when the earth yielded up its treasures of truth, that part was fulfilled; and let them—righteousness from above, and truth from the earth—bring forth salvation, and let righteousness 'spring up together,' on the earth, of course, with them. Truth and righteousness to bring forth salvation and were to spring up, or to grow and flourish together.

"What then truth and righteousness brought forth, was salvation, or the revealing of the perfect plan of salvation.

"Second. The book that was to come forth was predicted by Ezekiel 37: 16-20: 'Moreover, thou son of man, take thee one stick, and write upon it, For Judah, and for the children of Israel his companions: then take another stick, and write upon it, For Joseph, the stick of Ephraim, and for all the house of Israel his companions: and join them one to another into one stick; and they shall become one in thine hand.' And 19th verse says, 'Say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God; Behold, I will take the stick of Joseph, which is in the hand of Ephraim, and the tribes of Israel his fellows, and will put them with him, even with the stick of Judah, and make them one stick, and they shall be one in mine hand.' Now, God says by the Psalmist, Psalms 60: 7: 'Ephraim also is the strength of mine head; Judah is my law giver.' Now we know the Bible came through Judah, and it contains God's laws, so Judah is the law giver. And the law, when written on long rolls of parchment and rolled upon sticks, the rolls were called the 'sticks' of the law; and as the law came through Judah, was properly called the 'stick of Judah.' Now, Judah's stick was to be united with Ephraim's, or Joseph's stick, and if Mary B. Eddy's book is that book, then she must be a descendant of Joseph.

"But who were Joseph's descendants? We find several prophecies which show that Joseph was given a land other than the land of Canaan; a land that was given to the children of Joseph, that is, it was to be given to his (Joseph's) posterity, who would be the descendants of Ephraim and Manasseh, his two sons. Read the blessings promised upon Joseph by Jacob. Genesis 49: 22-26: 'Joseph is a fruitful bough, even a fruitful bough by a well; whose branches run over the wall; the archers have sorely grieved him, and shot at him, and hated him: but his bow abode in strength, and the arms of his hands were made strong by the hands of the mighty God of Jacob; (from thence [that is from Jacob] is the shepherd, the stone of Israel) [that is Christ of course]; even by the God of thy father, who shall help thee; and by the Almighty, who shall bless thee with blessings of heaven above, blessings of the deep that lieth under, blessings of the breasts, and of the womb [that is fruitfulness]: the blessings of thy father have prevailed above the blessings of my progenitors unto the utmost bounds of the everlasting hills: they [these blessings] shall be on the head of Joseph, and on the crown of the head of him that was separate from his brethren.' Now, notice Jacob says: 'The blessings of thy father' (that was himself) 'have prevailed above the blessings of my' (Jacob's) 'progenitors' (Abraham and Isaac) 'to the utmost bounds of the everlasting hills.' Then Joseph's blessing of ownership or inheritance of land was to be greater than that of Israel. And from the place where they then were, to go to the utmost bounds of the everlasting hills, would land them among the everlasting hills of America, just where the Book of Mormon describes them as being. Notice also, they were to remove the wall; what was that wall? Will the Bible tell us? I think it will. There is a prophecy concerning the vine of Sibmah, which means 'captivity' according to my Bible dictionary. Joseph had been a captive, and his posterity might well be called the vine of Sibmah, or captivity. Isaiah says of this vine: 'They wandered through the wilderness: her branches are stretched out, they are gone over the sea.' (Isaiah 16: 8). Also Jeremiah 48: 32, Oh vine of Sibmah, 'thy plants are gone over the sea.'

"Now, turn to Deuteronomy 33: 13-17, where Moses pronounced his prophetic blessings on the tribes of Israel: 'And of Joseph he said, Blessed of the Lord be his land, for the precious things of heaven, for the dew, for the deep that coucheth beneath, and for the precious fruits brought forth by the sun, for the precious things put forth by the moon; and for the chief things of the ancient mountains, and for the precious things of the lasting hills, and for the precious things of the earth and fulness thereof, and for the good will of him that dwelt in the bush: let the blessing come upon the head of Joseph, and upon the top of the head of him that was separated from his brethren.  And they are the ten thousands of Ephraim, and they are the thousands of Manasseh.'

"But, you may ask 'what has this to do with the little book?' Much; as the book was to be the stick of Ephraim, it is necessary to locate Ephraim, and these prophecies and others plainly show that Joseph's descendants, known as Ephraim, were separated from Israel, and were 'gone over the sea,' and that their land was rich in all manner of precious things, those brought forth by the sun, the fruitage, as well as the precious things of the lasting hills, gold, silver, precious stones, and 'chief things of the ancient mountains,' iron, coal, tin, etc.

"Could a prophetic description given in a few words more plainly indicate America? Especially that part of America described in the Book of Mormon as being the place where Joseph's descendants dwelt after going over the sea, and of which it is a history; of their wars and progress in science and civilization, in arts and in religion, too. For it also gives an account of Christ's visiting them and establishing His church after the same pattern, with the same officers, having the same gifts and powers as his church in the old world 1500 years ago; and these are, no doubt, the 'other sheep which are not of this fold' (Israel). Now students of history and scientific explorers are finding out facts every year that prove beyond a doubt that the Indian of North America is of Israelitish descent. I have read much to show this and not written by believers in the Book of Mormon either, but I have not time to dwell upon that point. God is no respecter of persons, and if some of His chosen people were in one part of the world and some in another, what more likely than that He would give his word to both?

"Thirdly, the book was to have certain things said concerning it; that when it came forth people need not be in doubt. Read the 29th chapter of Isaiah, where he speaks (9th verse) of the speech of Ariel being out of the ground, 'low out of the dust,' 'that shall whisper out of the dust,' and those descendants of Joseph were included in 'Ariel,' which was a name applied to Jerusalem and means not merely the city, but the people of the city and country pertaining to it; and how literally did they 'speak out of the ground' when those who escaped from Jerusalem at that time those judgments were fulfilled on Ariel kept a record that was buried for ages to speak as 'out of the dust' to the people of this age.

"Also this book was to be a sealed book which one was to give to one that was learned, 'Saying, Read this, I pray thee,' and the learned man replies, 'I cannot, for it is sealed.' Now this was fulfilled by Professor Anthon when Martin Harris took some of the characters for him to read. He asked to see the plates, but was told they were sealed and he replied, 'I cannot read a sealed book.' Anthon's own testimony, although desiring to prove the book a fraud gotten up by Joseph Smith, corroborates this. Then the book was to be given to one that was not learned and who says, 'I am not learned.' Joseph Smith was not a learned man and yet to him was given the power to translate the sealed book.

"Now, Mary B. Eddy's book did not fulfill any of those predictions; but here is another witness, Jeremiah 15: 16, 'Thy words were found, and I did eat them; and they were unto me the joy and rejoicing of mine heart; for I am called by thy name, O Lord God of hosts.' As I mentioned in a previous article, the Book of Mormon fulfills this, for it was found and it is the joy and rejoicing of the hearts of those who believe it, the same as God's word in the Bible.

"Notice too, that three of the prophets speak of eating this book, which is accepting it, as we speak of feeding on God's word, the Bible. Now M. B. Eddy's book does not claim to be words that were 'found,' neither was it given to a people 'called by thy name, O Lord God of hosts.' So I think there are many good reasons why the Book of Mormon should fulfill the prophecies rather than the book of Mary Baker Eddy.

"Fourthly, also the book predicted was to come forth at a certain time; 'Yet a very little while and Lebanon shall be turned into a fruitful field, and the fruitful field shall be esteemed as a forest.' What could cause this change? Why the returning of the early and latter rains and the heavy dews which had been withheld for so many centuries that the country had become parched and barren. Now the Book of Mormon came forth in 1830 and these changes in climatic conditions did take place in 1852-3 and have continued since and Lebanon is again fruitful. M. B. Eddy's book came too late to fulfill that prediction. Again weighed in the balance of truth and found wanting.

"You say you will always be glad to see me and hear from me the same as from any other friend who should belong to any other church than yours, but you do not care to hear any more about 'Mormonism.' Now, my dear friend, I do not wish to force my views on you, but I wish to say this: Our faith, which the world insists on calling 'Mormonism,' is nothing more nor less than pure New Testament christianity. Utahism or Brighamism is another thing and has no right to be called Mormonism; but 'Mormon' is not the name of our church no more than Ranters was the name of the Methodists—a name given them in derision; and had not B. Young and kindred spirits brought condemnation by their evil teachings and practices the word 'Mormon' today would have been more highly honored than Methodist or Baptist or any other sectarian name, for the church was growing so rapidly it soon would have become popular, and popularity was never intended for Christ's church. It would have been no test of loyalty to Christ and his kingdom to have joined it had it become popular. 'It must needs be that offence cometh, but woe unto him by whom the offence cometh.'

"The word of God must be fulfilled. Read 2 Peter 2, where he so graphically pictures Utah Mormonism; read it carefully, the description fits to a letter. And Peter says, 'Many shall follow their evil works, by reason of whom the way of truth shall be evil spoken of.' 'The way of truth' mind you. What is the way of truth? Is the way that is 'evil spoken of' on the account of the wrong doings of the wicked ones herein described? Are the other churches spoken evil of on their account? No. Are the Catholics? No. The Mohammedans? No. The heathens? No. Are the worldlings? No. Who then are thus evil spoken of on their account. Why, this Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints as reorganized in the same purity and with the same powers, and after the same pattern, and holding the same faith as the original church of Christ of former days.

"But, my friend, 'Who hath ears to hear, let him hear,' said our Savior, and what is more, the Bible—which you all claim to believe—has also told us that the Spirit would teach us all truth—guide us into all truth; then why need one fear to heed Paul's words and 'prove all things' and to use our ears to hear as our Savior said. When we stand before the judgment seat, what will our answer be if we are asked why we did not hear? Will 'I did not care to hear' be a sufficient excuse in the face of our Savior's words, 'He that hath ears, let him hear?' Truth is never afraid of error, for she well knows that finally she will triumph, though 'crushed to earth will rise again.' 'The eternal years of God are her's.'

"I hope you will at least read this carefully and 'take it to the Lord in prayer' and not cast it aside as unworthy of your consideration.

"Sincerely and affectionately your friend,
A. R. C."

A TRYING EXPERIENCE.

Dear Ensign:—Through my inability I have never felt competent to contribute anything of value to your pages, but this beautiful afternoon as I sit bolstered up in my bed, just recovering from a severe sickness of over six months' duration, and as my hands are lying idly upon the coverlids craving something to do, I thought perhaps I might write some of our experiences since coming to Zion, and possibly it might be of some little interest at least to those of my friends and relatives who reside in the far away land of California, who are readers of the ENSIGN.

My thoughts wander back about two years and a half ago, to when myself and husband and three little ones were comfortably situated in a cozy little cottage on the seashore enjoying the semi-tropical climate of California. But for all that has been said in praise of climate and beautiful flowers and scenery and choice fruit of that noted state, we were not satisfied; there was always an unrestful and unsettled feeling, never feeling that it was home. Our hearts and minds wandered Zionward, longing to be situated where our associations could be among the children of God in that land, for it is so much harder to live one's religion when we are compelled to go to the world for amusements and associates; there is a continual drawing away of one's mind from spiritual things. So we (myself and husband) took the case before God with fasting and prayer, telling him our desires; but that we wished to submit our will to his, and that if it was his will for us to go to Zion, that he would make his will known to us by helping us to dispose of what we possessed at a certain price, and if not his will, to bar the way, by which we would know his will. We covenanted to pay one-tenth of price received as tithing, which covenant we kept. We also prayed that if it was his will for us to come, that he would plant a love in our hearts for his land, so that when we came we might be perfectly satisfied and contented with our surroundings. Later you will find if God answered these prayers. God knew that our desire to come was for spiritual gain, though friends and neighbors tried to discourage us by telling us that it was useless, for it would be impossible to sell anything, as times were too hard. But in less than three weeks from time the request was made the last of our possessions were sold at the price set on them, and the will of God was proven; and in one month from said time, we were ready for our journey, trusting to God for what lay before us.

But a few days previous to our journey, it seemed that I had undertaken something almost more than I was able to bear to be separated from parents, brothers and sisters and loved ones, to go so far to a strange land and among strangers; it took all the strength within me to fortify myself for the last moment, but,

God gave me sufficient strength for the occasion, and after the shedding of many tears and the good-bys were said, and after four days of noise, dust and cinders we arrived in Independence, tired and weary of body, but with glad hearts; at last we were in the land of Zion.

All nature seemed to be dressed in her height of loveliness; the trees and lawns, fields and pastures were robed in their beautiful green; the air was fragrant with freshness. All was a treat to us, for when we had left our home in California, at that time of the year, all that was so beautiful in winter was dead, dry and dusty, except that which was kept green by irrigation. Here we found all was kept green and fresh by the irrigation from heaven; and oh, how delightful were those beautiful showers on a summer afternoon, making everything fresh and fragrant, after which the sun would show its face shining forth in its old glory again, making all things look so cheerful and renewed again. Many times we have been made to exclaim with joy as we looked around us, "Oh, how beautiful and grand are the handiworks of God."

We attended church the following Sunday at the stone church, and as our eyes scanned the congregation of about eight hundred we wondered, "Could it be possible that these were all Saints?" After the services were over we felt somewhat lonesome among so many strangers, even though they were Saints, for there was not a familiar face to look upon; but after we made acquaintance with a few, they were very kind in making us acquainted with others, and all seemed anxious to make us feel at home. We found the Saints to be very sociable, and we soon began to feel very much at home among them. We were delighted with the country and the Saints and soon felt quite happy. But the weather was somewhat warmer than we were used to, coming from the seashore, the month being August, and we all became very sick (soon after our arrival) from which we came very near losing our baby boy; but through the gospel ordinance we all received our health again, and felt to thank God that we were where we could receive such relief.

We were again severely tried the following winter through sickness; myself and three little ones fell the victims of the measles, and while we were all sick with this disease my husband became afflicted with Job's trials; he had thirteen large boils and carbuncles in all, and which lasted for three months. Some of the time he was unable to feed himself. I think Job could best tell what his sufferings were; though we sometimes felt that our trials were hard, yet they were always attended with blessings which gave us faith and confidence in our heavenly Father, feeling that we had a friend in him who would never forsake us, but who always came to our rescue in time of trial. The Saints were very kind to us during our afflictions which made us feel to thank God again that he had given us the privilege of being among so many of his noble hearted children.

In less than a year we had the pleasure of greeting my parents and one brother and sister, which made all joy and blessings brighter and trials easier to bear. We were then even more contented and glad that we had come, and there was much pleasure in trying to make our loved ones feel at home, and making them acquainted with those we had learned to love. We were soon enabled to secure us a little home, and there came to us such a contented and happy feeling, so perfectly at home, with no desire ever to go elsewhere, a feeling we had never experienced while in California.

We began to put forth efforts to help what little we could in the church work in the branch, which gave us much joy, for we had a great desire to do something for the Master, even though our ability was small; there has always been pleasure in doing our little.

Though the climate here is not always just what we would most desire, yet there is so much more genuine enjoyment in the glorious church privileges to be had here, and the association of so many noble hearted Saints, that it far outweighs what is lacking in climate; and it is so much easier to climb higher when the influences around us are high and noble. We have struggled in our weakness, to live near to God each day as we promised him we would, though our trials have seemed to come thick and fast. Our baby boy was taken very sick again last September with a serious disease, and our faith was severely tried; it seemed that we would have to give him up, and during these trials, when our hearts were nearly sinking with despair, there seemed to be a voice whisper, "Now, don't you wish you had never come to Zion?" but we have always felt to say from our hearts, No, we knew that it was God's will for us to come, and if he would give us strength to bear these trials, we would try to bear them patiently; and I can truthfully say we have never desired to return, or never have regretted coming.

Through the mercies of our Father and Friend our little son was spared again, for which we gave God our praise and gratitude; but yet there were more trials awaiting us. The second of the following November I was stricken with what the physicians called peripneumonia hemorrhagica, a disease of the veins; the tissue of the veins and arteries break and the blood settles in large spots, some as large as ones hands, next to the skin, resembling a bruise. I began spitting blood and had hemorrhage of the bowels, kidneys and stomach, all the vital parts were bleeding, also hemorrhage of the eyes (the doctor said near the optic nerve), and I was totally blind for six days and my eyes were so painful that I could not bear a single ray of light. I had to have the room kept dark and my eyes bandaged. The doctor gave me medicine to absorb the hemorrhage in the eyes and said that if the blood was not absorbed in twelve hours more I would be blind for life, but unfortunately for the medicine's sake, the stomach would not retain it over ten minutes after it was taken, and the elders were sent for and they were blessed greatly with the Spirit as they anointed and prayed for my eyes; and when the doctor came the following morning he was very much surprised, he said he had expected nothing more than to find the optic nerve paralyzed, but instead found the hemorrhage absorbed, but the thanks we gave to God; but the other hemorrhages continued for two months. My life was despaired of from the loss of blood; there seemed to be no chance for me, and finally death seemed to have laid its cold hand upon me. I became conscious of the fact and felt to resign my will to God's, yet it was with a struggle when I thought of my little ones and those who were so dear to me, whom I should have to leave behind, but through God's help I was able to say, Father, thy will be done. But while friends and loved ones were watching for my last breath, the elders, who had been sent for, were earnestly supplicating the throne of grace for my recovery, and through their earnest prayers I was almost snatched from the grave. Yet it seemed that Satan was not satisfied, I took a relapse with ja grippe and an abscess in my head, but was blessed again, only to be again attacked with hemorrhage and a complication of other diseases, among others a serious complaint which the doctor said nothing but an operation could remove and he wished them to remove me to the hospital that I might be built up preparatory for the operation, and said I could not live long in the condition I was then in, but while this condition was existing there gathered at the house some four or five elders and some eight or ten sisters on a Sunday afternoon. They all came fasting and the Spirit of God came with them, and after many beautiful and soul cheering hymns were sung and prayer was offered by the elders, I was then administered to, through which I received the blessing and the affliction was removed for which the operation was to have been performed; likewise the other afflictions were also removed, and O, the joy that was felt in our household that Sabbath afternoon will not be soon forgotten; it seemed that our joy was full, and many times during those blissful hours did all in the house lift their hearts in praise and gratitude to God for the wonderful blessing, and all retired feeling so happy.

But yet Satan was not content, and while all were peacefully sleeping at three o'clock the following morning I was very suddenly attacked with inflammatory rheumatism in my left elbow and from there it spread to every joint in my body; my joints and limbs became stiff, swollen and inflamed, my arm was stiff to the end of my fingers so that it became impossible to move it, and remained so for nine days, there also broke out upon my body and limbs thirty-eight large blind abscesses; the suffering and pain I endured during those nine days was intense. During this last affliction there was not a drop of medicine taken, for on the Sunday mentioned the promise was made that we would trust God alone; but, dear readers, if ever faith was tried, ours was during those days of extreme suffering. I knew that within ten feet of me was relief, and when the pain was almost unbearable I thought, O, would God condemn me if I resorted to that relief, then I knew that the promise was given to God and I dared not, but oh, how many times during my six months of suffering would death have been sweet; more than once I have longed for it to come to my relief, but through much fasting and prayer God again came to my rescue, and it was told me through the Spirit that Satan had set all his forces together to destroy my life but that God's power was the stronger and to continue to trust him and that I should come out victorious; that although at many times I had thought my God had forsaken me, he had been looking upon me in pity, that he had been near when I thought him far away and that he would abundantly bless me for all I had endured. And now I am realizing that his promises are true; I am now fast improving, and I now see the silver lining of the cloud that was so dark. I have tried to bear my afflictions patiently and my faith and confidence in the love of God is as strong as ever.

Now, I hope that what I have written of our experiences in Zion may not discourage any one but that it might possibly convey the thought of what we are able to endure through the grace of God. I feel confident that Satan has done all in his power to shatter our faith in God and cause us to regret our coming to Zion, but he has not succeeded thus far.

I dearly love this part of Zion and also the many noble hearted Saints that dwell here, and hope that I may prove worthy to dwell in the place he has assigned for his children, and that through His grace, I may be able to be one to help to make it Zion in every deed. Praying that I, with the rest of his children, may be counted with the true and faithful, I remain,

Your sister in Christ,
MRS. HATTIE NEWKIRK.

MY GENERAL CONFERENCE EXPERIENCE.

Thursday morning, April 5, 1900, I left Nebraska City to attend General Conference, April 6th, at Lamoni, Iowa. I arrived safely the same evening at 8:15, and ten minutes later, was sitting in the Saints' church listening to a Sunday School business session which was prolonged till 10:30, in hopes they would have finished up their business, but they had to adjourn till 8 o'clock next morning.

I found the church packed to the doors with Saints, Sunday School delegates from all parts of America and some from Australia, England, Honolulu and Canada. From the reports I heard there the Sunday School work had been spreading in the past two years and had advanced considerably. I noticed that those who were delegates to this convention were young men and women of culture and refinement, showing superior educational talents, and understood what it constituted to be a delegate to represent their different Sunday Schools at this general Sunday School convention. I heard many take their parts in the business in argument and vote.

April 6th at 10 a. m. the General Conference of the church opened for 1900, and all were in their places when the hymn was given out.

This conference was largely attended, the elders had come from Australia, Honolulu, England, Canada, California, and from all other parts in America, to be present, and I heard them all talk and give their experiences of the past two years in their ministerial fields.

The preaching and testimony meetings all through were good. I remained in Lamoni till Saturday, April 21st, 6:30 a. m., when I left for Nebraska City where I arrived at 5 that evening. So I heard preaching and testimony meetings in those two weeks every day. The business meetings were, to me, just ordinary all through. The next General Conference will be held in Independence, Missouri, April 6, 1901, which seemed to please all present, as nearly all voted for Independence.

The weather was changeable at this conference, snow, rain, mud, wind and sunshine; many caught heavy colds and the meetings at times were disturbed by coughing and sneezing which could not be prevented.

I met many Saints there whom I have known since 1874, the first General Conference year that I attended conference, in Council Bluffs, Iowa; they were then the young men and women in this church; now I met some of them with sons and daughters of twenty years of age along to conference, helping in Sunday school and church work, and those members of 1874, bearing their testimonies to this great latter day work, as faithful in 1900 as I heard them in 1874. This made me rejoice to hear them true and steadfast to the true gospel of Jesus Christ, and I felt glad I too could say I was in this work as steadfast as when I joined it, April 21, 1872. Twenty-eight years have wrought changes in this church, yet the gospel plan has not been changed or remodeled to suit any in the church, or to the fastidiousness of a darkened world, but the glorious light of this everlasting gospel shines out as brilliantly today as it did in 1872 to me, and I am thankful to God that I obeyed his gospel in my youth, and that today I can testify of its great power and worth to me, and that I know it is God's work alone.

I heard Apostle G. T. Griffiths lecture from a chart on the priesthood, or the different places the priesthood occupy in the church; I heard Elder R. Etzenhouser lecture on the Book of Mormon, illustrating the hill Cumorah on a chart; I heard Apostle I. N. White lecture twice on the different gospel dispensations, from Adam, in the garden of Eden, down to Joseph the Seer, praying to God for light, when he was visited by the angel of God, and the gospel was restored through him by the angel. This chart, showing the various illustrations, must have been over six yards long, as it was attached to the church wall its full length. Noah's ark was on this chart and angels with wings. I objected to the angels with bird wings on their backs, as angels have no wings, nor are they of the bird creation, but are created as we are, without wings, though their bodies are celestial or pure, and do not come flying in the air as a bird, but come with full speed as we come in a railway train which is called the flyer, or with double speed from an ordinary passenger train in speed. So take those wings off and represent the Lord's angels in correct form, then it will be all right. These lectures were all good and easy to comprehend, and all did their best to enlighten us in the gospel and concerning the Book of Mormon.

I attended Sunday School the two Sundays I was there. In the basement I was a scholar in the Book of Mormon class with Elder A. B. Hansen as teacher, and an efficient teacher he proved to be. He made the lessons interesting by having a chart from which he explained to us concerning the traveling of Nephi, Moroni, Mormon and all the others who were included in the lessons. It was a big class of us small scholars, but we listened to his instructions and got an idea that it was not so easy to be a Sunday School teacher if we had to teach from a chart like it is in a day school, and that we should be acquainted with all the routes the ancient saints traveled. I saw at a glance that I had better be studying geography if I should be able to keep up with the new methods of the day, concerning the holy lands and who dwell there.

Though I have belonged in this city to our Sunday School twenty-eight years, and am today the teacher of the Book of Mormon, we have no chart that I know of concerning the Book of Mormon, therefore, I paid good attention to Elder Hansen's explanation of his chart, and wished we had such a teacher in all our schools to teach and explain as he did to us there. I visited every department of that large school as the superintendent told us to look it over, and I found it as well regulated as any could wish.

I also visited the college and found it nice and in perfect order for its various studies. Hope the Saints will send their children there where they can receive all branches of learning to fit them for any position in life. It is a beautiful, healthy place for a college; it is built on the highest and prettiest ground in Lamoni; 'tis a handsome building too, and has able persons as teachers of the different branches of learning taught there. The Saints ought to patronize their own institution of learning for the educating of their children when they own a college like the beautiful Graceland college, in Lamoni, Iowa, and where tuition is as cheap as can be obtained anywhere else, and the teachers and professors are as proficient in their teachings as can be found. I think it should be well patronized by all.

I also visited the Saints' Home and found it inside like a palace in beauty. All the rooms were well furnished, the inmates all happy, and the place is worthy of the title "The Saints' Home." It is two stories high with a large basement; then it has a high tower overlooking Lamoni for miles. The grounds are level, and trees are set out, so in years to come it will be a beautiful ground; 'tis close to the church, a ten minutes walk. The first time I was there, Wednesday 11th, there was a funeral in the afternoon; a sister had died, so I attended it. Sr. E. L. Kelley led the singing, Elder H. A. Stebbins preached the funeral discourse; the sister received a fine funeral; she was dressed in fine nuns veiling, with beautiful flowers on her breast. The funeral was held in the fine parlor of the Home. Six brethren bore her to the hearse and we followed close by, to the cemetery, where the casket was deposited in mother earth till the resurrection morn. The Saints were her mourners. Her name was Sr. Greenwood, of California, aged 70 years.

I had a nice boarding place across the street from the church, where I received good attention for two weeks. I could not ask for it any closer or for better treatment than I got from Sr. Cave and daughter. I met Elder J. M. Terry and wife, of Chicago. Sr. Terry I had not seen since 1896 when they moved away from here. I was glad to find them as cheerful as possible under their present loss and sorrow over their only son, John M. Terry, who died March 13, 1900. Elder Terry preached here and was superintendent of our Sunday School, so we all know the family well, and sympathize with them in their sorrow.

I honor and esteem all Saints for Christ's sake, therefore, I love their services above all things.

In the gospel of Christ,
ANNA NELSON.

WELTMER LOSES.

The decision of Judge Amos M. Thayer, of the United States circuit court of appeals, at St. Louis, in the application for an injunction restraining J. M. McAnnulty, postmaster at Nevada, Missouri, from returning mail to the senders under a "fraud" order, was received by the clerk of the local United States circuit court yesterday. The decision was a complete victory for the government in every way. The application for an injunction was refused and mail addressed to the school will be returned to the senders.

S. A. Weltmer and J. H. Kelly, who conduct the so-called school of magnetic healing at Nevada, were indicted by the federal grand jury several weeks ago on three counts for using the mails to defraud. The informations charged that they claimed to successfully treat all and every manner of disease through the mails. They also made a specialty of treating persons for poverty. In some instances patients died under their treatment, and the defendants, it is claimed, sent in bills to their heirs for treating them after death.

About the same time that the indictments were returned, the postmaster general issued an order directing the postmaster at Nevada, to stamp all mail addressed to the school with the word "fraudulent" and to return the same to the senders through the dead letter office. The defendants sought to enjoin the postmaster at Nevada from complying with the order on the ground that it included their personal mail as well as that relating to their alleged fraudulent business. They also alleged that the order violated their constitutional rights.

In his opinion, Judge Thayer says, in passing upon these two contentions:

"It is manifest from an inspection of these statutes that congress has in express terms conferred upon the postmaster general the power to prohibit the delivery of any and all mail matter to a person whom that officer, after due investigation, finds to be engaged in conducting through the mails either a lottery or a scheme to obtain money by false and fraudulent pretenses; and it is doubtless true that it intended to confer that power because of the difficulty which would be generally experienced in separating lawful mail matter from that which is unlawful if the postal department was only authorized to withhold and return such letters as relate to the unlawful business in which a party is found to be engaged. The first ground of objection to the order, namely, that it is too comprehensive in its terms, is untenable and must be overruled.

"In support of the second and most important objection to the order of the postmaster general, it is urged, in substance, that the right of a citizen to make use of such facilities as the postoffice department at any time affords for the transportation of mail matter, is properly within the meaning of that word as used in the fifth amendment to the federal constitution; that the acts of congress aforesaid under which the postmaster general derived his authority to issue the order in controversy devolve upon that officer the power to hear evidence and to determine in the light thereof whether a person is engaged in a scheme to defraud; that, as the result of such adjudication, a citizen may be deprived of his property by a proceeding before an executive officer, which is essentially of a judicial character; and that such power cannot be devolved upon an executive officer consistently with our theory of government. In other words, the second objection to the order of the post-

"INCURABLE" HEART DISEASE SOON CURED.

BY THE GREAT SPECIALIST IN TREATING WEAK AND DISEASED HEARTS, FRANKLIN MILES, M. D., LL. B., WHO WILL SEND $2.50 WORTH OF HIS COMPLETE SPECIAL TREATMENT FREE TO ANY AFFLICTED READER.

To demonstrate the unusual curative powers of his new and complete special treatment for heart disease, short breath, pain in the side, oppression in the chest, irregular pulse, palpitation, smothering spells, puffing of the ankles or dropsy, Dr. Miles will send free, to every afflicted person, two dollars and a half worth of his new treatment.

It is the result of twenty-four years of careful study, extensive research, and valuable experience in treating the various ailments of the heart, stomach and nerves, which so often complicate each case. So astonishing are the results of his complete special treatment in most cases, that he does not hesitate to freely offer all patients a trial.

Certainly nothing could be more generous—more philanthropic. Few physicians have such confidence in their remedies. And there is no reason why every afflicted person should not avail themselves of this exceedingly liberal offer, as they may never have another such opportunity. No death comes more sudden than that from heart disease.

Mrs. Frank Smith, of Chicago, was cured of heart dropsy after five leading physicians had given her up. A thousand references to, and testimonials from Bishops, Clergymen, Bankers, Farmers, and their wives will be sent free on request. These include many who have been cured after from five to fifteen physicians and professors had pronounced them incurable.

Send at once to Franklin Miles, M. D., corner State and Adams streets, Chicago, for free treatment before it is too late, and please mention name of this paper.

master general necessarily involves the proposition that the statute under which he acted is in violation of the federal constitution, and for that reason, void.

"It is hardly necessary to observe that if the right to use the mails is a statutory privilege and not properly within the meaning of the fifth amendment to the federal constitution, then no fault can be found with the statute now under consideration, because it devolves upon the postmaster general the duty of ascertaining by satisfactory evidence if one is using the mails to defraud, and makes his right to use the mails dependent upon that finding."

Harkless O'Grady & Cryslor, of Kansas City, assisted by Attorneys F. N. Judson and David Overmyer, appeared for Weltmer and Kelly, and the government was represented by United States Attorneys William Warner and Edward A. Rozier. —Kansas City Journal, June 15.

CURED OF CANCER.

ONE OF MICHIGAN'S MOST PROMINENT CITIZENS, AT THE AGE OF 74, CURED OF CANCER, PROFOUNDLY INCURABLE BY SEVERAL PHYSICIANS, CURED BY DR. WM. O. BYE.

Caledonia, Mich.,

Aug. 19, 1899.

DR. W. O. BYE:

Dear Sir:—I can report my cancer as entirely healed up and shows but a very slight scar, which is more than I expected, considering the very large cavity after the cancer came out. I had shown it, previously to using your treatment, to our local physicians and they all pronounced it incurable, except one who thought perhaps the knife would help, but advised not to meddle with it, but your cure has done the job, and that without any pain, and I am sure I am very grateful.

Very truly,

J. B. PROCTOR.

This case was cured with home treatment. A free book is sent telling what they say of the treatment. Address DR. BYE, Drawer N, Kansas City, Missouri. (If not afflicted cut this out and send to some suffering one.)

JOTS BY THE WAYSIDE.

BY T. W. CHATBURN

Dear Ensign.—After a very pleasant visit through northern Missouri, viewing the old landscape o'er, treading again her virgin soil, grasping the hand of loving Saints, with whom our tears and joys have mingled in by gone days, was a real treat indeed that ye missionary seldom meets. At the Stewartsville conference we met our townsmen, Brn. I. N. White and J. C. Foss, who kindly permitted me to occupy on Sunday evening to a crowded house. The conference, under the guiding hand of I. N., was a grand success, and many say the grandest conference in the history of the district. May the good Lord continue his blessings with these brethren to the w. of Zion.

We visited F. J. Chatburn in Grundy county, found him in good spirits and striving to keep the fires burning in the North-east district, from which he had returned to receive us at his humble domicile. Bro. and Sr. Nutt are still living with him, looking well and bearing their advanced years nicely, the only trying ordeal being that Sr. Nutt is still an invalid, only able to sit in a chair. At her request we asked the Father to comfort her and her companion in the twilight of their lives.

On Friday last we arrived here in the Queen city of the plains—Denver—and since coming our eyes have been almost glued on the snow capped peaks of the Rockies that stand so fascinating on her western border. At the request of the Saints I went up on the street to hear the Brig-hamites. Six of the noble elders, with smooth faces and sleek tongues, were holding forth to about one hundred listeners, not a word, however, about Brighamism, and I never let such fine opportunities pass without trying to tell the other side of the story. It may be a little mischievous in me, but it does amuse me to see the awful consternation of the boys in about ten minutes after we open up. As soon as the "amen" was spoken I stepped into the ring, and modestly asked the indulgence of the crowd, inviting the elders to remain and reply; for nearly two hours we had a running fire, they trying to answer my arguments, to the amusement of the thrice doubled crowd. One of them seemed to want to be pugilistic, but the police gently reminded the elder that a "cop" was watching him; the enthusiasm of the crowd was indeed un-corked, and the elders "trekked" off with an understanding that we renew the contest tonight.

RHEUMATISM.

A BLOOD DISEASE AND CURED BY B. B. B.

BOTTLE FREE TO SUFFERERS. Rheumatism is as much a blood disease as cancer, ulcer or scrofula, and to cure to stay cured, it should be treated as such; hence Botanic Blood Balm (B. B. B.) should be used. It neutralizes the specific poison that causes rheumatism, expels it from the system, and permanently cures after everything else fails. George W. Leonard, of Atlanta, writes under date of July 2, 1899, that he was cured of Rheumatism ten years ago by B. B. B.; that before that he suffered most excruciating pains in bones and limbs. His hands would puff up and swell, his knee caps would get so stiff he could hardly bend them, and he could hardly walk without the aid of a crutch. He tried doctors and medicines, but none reached the root of the trouble, which was in the blood. Sometimes he thought he had found a cure, but alas, his symptoms would come back again until he was cured ten years ago by the use of eight large bottles of B. B. B., and he has been perfectly well ever since. John M. Davis, of Tyler, Texas, had been subject to attacks of inflammatory rheumatism since ten years of age, yet he was permanently cured, with no trace of the disease left, by eight large bottles of B. B. B. To further convince you that B. B. B. cures the most obstinate case, we will send a sample bottle free, so you may test the remedy at our expense. Can anything be fairer?

You will find large bottles for sale by all druggists for $1.00, or six bottles (full treatment), $5.00. For free trial bottle enclose five cents, which pays exact cost of postage (the medicine is free), and address BLOOD BALM CO., 86 Mitchell St., Atlanta, Ga., and bottle and medical book will be sent, all charges prepaid. Describe your trouble, and we will include free medical advice.

Broken Bric-a-Bracs.

Mr. Major, the famous cement, of N. C. Fork, is the very interesting fact that it is a very interesting fact. The multitudes who use this standard article know that it is many hundred per cent better than any other cement for which similar claims are made, but they do not know why. The simple reason is that Mr. Major uses the best materials ever discovered and other manufacturers do not use them, because they are too expensive and do not allow large profits. Mr. Major tells us that one of the elements of his cement costs $75 a ton, and another costs $25 a gallon, while a larger share of the so-called cements and liquid glue upon the market are nothing more than sixteen-cent glue, dissolved in water, with other chemicals, and in some cases, altered slightly in color and odor by the addition of cheap and useless materials. Major's Cement retails at fifteen cents and twenty-five cents a bottle, and when a dealer tries to sell a substitute you can depend upon it that his only object is to make larger profits. The profit on Major's Cement is as much as any dealer ought to make on any cement. And this is doubly true in view of the fact that each dealer gets his share of the benefit of Mr. Major's advertising, which now amounts to over $25,000 a month throughout the country. Establish in your mind. Insist on having Major's. Don't accept any off-hand advice from a druggist. If you are at all handy and you will be liked and that you are a good deal more so than you imagine, you can repair your rubber boots and family shoes, and any other rubber and leather articles, with Major's Rubber Cement and Major's Leather Cement. And you will be surprised at how many dollars a year you will thus save. If your druggist cannot supply you, it will be forwarded by mail; their kind. Free of postage. I CAN save you from 25 to 50 per cent on the following goods: Bicycles, $12.50 to $25.00, new; secondhand, $5.00 to $10.00, sent with privilege to examine before taking. Sewing machines, Banjo and Violins, $2.00 to $5.00, good; secondhand. Sewing Machines, second hand, but in order; Domestic, White, Singer, Wheeler and others, $2.00 to $5.00. Organs, good makes, secondhand, $10.00 to $25.00. Pianos, secondhand, Square $25.00 to $40.00, boxtop. Upright $30.00 to $40.00; New $40.00 to $200.00. I want agents for my celebrated Excelsior Twin Bed Springs. Single sets to Saints at wholesale price. Will answer correspondence with name in enclosed. Can save you money on anything you want. With all orders of $1.00 or more I will give article worth 10 cents, used by everyone; something new, and will last a lifetime. Write me. Wm. C. Appointment of Bishop's Agents.

To the Saints in Nova Scotia:—At the request of Bro. J. W. Dimmock, of Ardoise, Nova Scotia, to be relieved from the duties of bishop's agent for the district of Nova Scotia, and upon the recommendation of Bro. Dimmock and others in Nova Scotia, Bro. Robert Newcomb, of Delhaven, Nova Scotia, has been appointed bishop's agent for said district of Nova Scotia for and in behalf of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

Bro. Newcomb is well known to the Saints in Nova Scotia, and we earnestly hope and trust that they will give him material sympathy and support in the performance of the duties of this office, putting forth in every time of need a helping hand in order that the gospel may be preached in the Province and the worthy poor cared for according to the wisdom manifest in the law of the Lord.

All tithes and offerings of the Saints in the said Province, or district of Nova Scotia, should be sent to Bro. Robert Newcomb, at Delhaven, who will issue a receipt for all offerings of every description so placed in his hands. Remember, the Lord helps those who make an effort to help his cause, and that all who put forth a hand to help move the cause of Zion will be strengthened and blessed in their efforts, and finally receive the reward that belongs to the faithful doer of the word of life.

Ever confident in the full fruition of the promises made in Zion's behalf, I am,

Hopefully in the faith, yours,
E. L. KELLEY,
Presiding Bishop.

DISTRICT OF MONTANA.

The Saints in the Montana district of the Reorganized church will please notice the change in the agency of the district by the death of Elder J. E. Reese of Bozeman, Montana. Bro.

Reese was a worthy and faithful servant of the Master, and answered the call to the other side while striving for the truth here, and we miss him in the financial work as elsewhere; his son, Gomer Reese, of Anaconda, Montana has been appointed bishop's agent in his stead for the Montana district by advice of the Montana Conference, and we trust the Saints will give to the new agent their hearty support. Let each help, now the Master calls for workers, for it is but right to serve the Lord and we will desire the reward of the well-doer by and by. Remember the address of the new agent, Bro. Gomer Reese, and send him some help. Hopefully working for the Master's cause.

General Church Recorder's Notice.

I again call the attention of those whom it may and should concern that from several districts the branch reports have not come into my hands up to this 12th day of June, some of which are long overdue, and I now give a summary of the situation throughout the church:

The thirty-one branches on record as existing in the South Sea, or Society Islands, have not been corrected by reports of gains and losses since 1896, but I hope that progress is being made by the officers there toward perfecting their records, and with the purpose of supplying the general recorder with full details of changes of all kinds.

The church in the Hawaiian Islands was reported up to December 31, 1899, as were also the branches in the Victoria district of Australia. The last reports of the branches in the Sydney district of New South Wales (Australia) brought their records up to March 31, 1899, those made during the past year not having arrived.

Bro. James Baty, clerk of Manchester district, England, sent reports up to December 31, 1898, but those for 1899 have not yet arrived.

The records of London, England, were brought up to March, 1900, and those of Sheffield district to December 31, 1899.

April 2, I received from Bro. Caton and Walton a summary of the Birmingham district, England, but no details of names and of births and baptisms have yet arrived, nor accounts of deaths and other losses during several years past. I am hoping that the brethren are doing faithful work toward soon supplying me with complete corrections.

Eastern Wales' branches have been corrected up to April 30, 1900, which is good, but Western Wales has not been properly reported for a long time.

In America nearly every district was brought up before my annual report was made to General Conference. For some cause September and February reports of Kewanee district did not arrive and have not yet.

The Central California district was to meet April 13, but the branch reports have not yet come to hand. Hope they will soon.

The May conferences appointed were: Alabama, Florida, Pottawattamie, Western Maine, Northern Nebraska, and Southern Nebraska, and the reports have already arrived from Pottawattamie and Northern Nebraska. The others are looked for.

Conferences have been appointed for June in the following districts: Chatham, London (Ont.), Mobile, Northeastern Illinois, Kewanee, Nauvoo, Southeastern Illinois, Decatur, Des Moines, Fremont, Galland's Grove, Little Sioux, Northeastern Kansas, Spring River, Eastern Maine, Eastern, Northern and Southern districts, Michigan, Nodaway, Far West, Clinton, St. Louis, Northeast Missouri, Montana, Southwestern Texas, Northern Wisconsin and Southern Wisconsin, being in all twenty-seven districts holding June sessions. That their officers will be prompt in sending reports forward is expected.

Some conferences adjourned to meet "on call," and the following have either published no notices yet or their dates are unknown, namely: Eastern Colorado, Indiana Southern, Massachusetts, Central Nebraska, Oklahoma, Pittsburg, Philadelphia and Northwestern Texas.

July conferences are to be held by Kentucky and Tennessee, Southern Missouri, Central Texas, and Northeastern Texas and Choctaw.

August conferences are: Pottawattamie, Northwestern Kansas, New York, Ohio, West Virginia.

September conferences appointed: Eastern Iowa, Independence, and Northern California.

October conferences: Central and Southern California districts, and Kirtland, Ohio.

The Nevada conference adjourned to meet in November.

I again urge promptness in copying upon the district records the names and items, and forwarding of the reports to me, according to the provision in the "Rules of Order," sections 173, 174.

Upon the subject of district records my idea is that a complete and perfect record of every branch within its bounds should be kept by each district, for the use and satisfaction of district officers, and also in order that district clerks may see that imperfect reports when presented shall be corrected before being sent to the General Records. Where this is done and district clerks are faithful and zealous, very much aid is given in perfecting the General Records. The district secretaries are upon the ground, so to speak, and can see to details that the General Recorder cannot attend to, or if he tries to do it he may be ignored, or he is too far away to accomplish the work needed to be done among local records. There are repeated contradictions arising in regard to birth dates and places, baptism dates and places, and as to who baptized and confirmed, and as to ordination items, and other facts and details; hence each district needs a live and active district recorder to keep reports and records well in hand; and in this there is a great lack in the church, only a portion of the districts having any record of names and items, at least in an "up-to-date" manner, such as will aid those who need information, district presidents, the General Recorder and others. Respectfully submitted for consideration.

H. A. STEBBINS,
General Church Recorder.
LAMONI, Iowa, June 13.

CONFERENCE MINUTES.

The conference of the Clinton district assembled at Veve chapel, near Eldorado Springs, Missouri, June 9, 1900, district president, Elder A. Lloyd, in chair. The clerk being absent, Sr. A. C. Silvers was chosen secretary pro. tem., with Sr. Vina H. Goff assistant.

Elders reporting: S. C. Andes, A. I. Roberts, T. R. White, P. M. Sharrock, A. A. Goff, H. L. Kinning, W. R. Lowe, C. P. Welsh, Lee Quick, Joseph Sterling, and G. W. Beebe. Priests, A. S. Leeper, A. C. Silvers, John A. Silvers, Joseph N. Stephenson. Teacher, M. M. Leaton.

Branches reported: Rich Hill, 150, loss 3; Wheatland, 53, no change; Taberville, 30, no change; Lowry City, 79, loss 2; Walker, 24, gain 2; Lebanon, 48, gain 4; Veve, 120, loss 4; Eldorado Springs, 181, loss 6; Tebo, 32, loss 6; Nevada, 52, gain 1; no report from Deepwater.

It being reported that a member of the disorganized Butler branch had been sent to the penitentiary on confession of guilt, the president of the district was requested by the conference to correspond with the president of the branch nearest the said member for action.

Letters of removal were granted to Sr. Haley North and Bro. James Stoumbaugh from the disorganized Butler branch to the Rich Hill branch.

Bishop's agent, G. W. Beebe, reported receipts since last conference, $238.96; disbursements, $202.77.

On request of the Wheatland branch, Bro. Jessie W. Paxton was ordained to the office of priest.

next reunion reported that it would meet at Nine Wonders, near Eldorado Springs, on August 3, 1900. Bro. C. Budd was added by the conference to the executive committee as selected at the last reunion.

It was voted that we request Bro. Alexander Smith, patriarch of the church, and his stenographer, to attend our next reunion throughout, and that we pay their expenses from Lamoni here and return.

The election of district officers resulted in the choice of Elder T. R. White, as president, and Sr. Vina H. Goff, as clerk.

Elder W. H. Lowe was granted a new license to replace his former license lost by fire.

A request from the district Sunday School association for one whole day and one hour of each other day at the next reunion for Sunday School work was granted.

Adjourned to meet at Rich Hill in the light of the moon in October.

SIGNS IN EVIDENCE.

At one period in the world's history the Lord moved upon one of His servants to make this prophetic declaration:

Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but He revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets.—Amos 3: 7.

This is a promise in every way consistent with our heavenly Father. It is natural to think that as He has in the past, and all along the history of man, manifested His interest in their welfare, that He would not take any important action in those matters in which the welfare of His children is concerned, without first advising them in ample time to give them opportunity to make whatever preparation might be needed to meet the exigencies of the occasion.

Even an earthly parent who loved his children as it has been abundantly proven God loves those who make the effort to do His will, would not for one moment permit them to be distressed unnecessarily because he failed to provide them with the means of self-protection beforehand. Universal indignation and condemnation would be surely visited upon so unnatural a father. How much more can we not depend upon our heavenly Father to amply supply the information from time to time, by which His children may be delivered from any suffering which is to be visited upon the ungodly? Consider this testimony carefully:

Or what man is there of you, whom if his son ask bread, will give him a stone? Or if he ask a fish, will he give him a serpent? If ye then, being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children, how much more shall your Father which is in heaven give good things to them that ask him?—Matt. 7: 9-11.

But Zion said, The Lord hath forsaken me, and my Lord hath forgotten me. Can a woman forget her sucking child, that she should not have compassion on the son of her womb? yea, they may forget, yet will I not forget thee.—Isa. 49: 14, 15.

Surely in the light of the experience of every Saint, there is no room for doubt, nor for denial that these promises will be fulfilled to the letter; not alone in the ages past, but now, in this present time, and as long as there shall be left a faithful Saint upon the earth, down to the end of time; no limitation of time attaches to these "good gifts" of the Father in heaven; hence the statement of Amos that ["God will do nothing, but [until—Inspired Translation] he revealeth the secret unto his servants the prophets," is as fully applicable now as in any age since its utterance, and no amount of sophistry and fallacious reasoning can alter the plain statements of the Scriptures to that effect.

When the government of the United States was about to be rent with the strife of civil war in 1861-65, the Lord, through the latter day seer, Joseph Smith, gave warning to the nation as early as December 25th, 1832; and not only that, but also declared that by "sword and by bloodshed, the inhabitants of the EARTH shall mourn, and with famine and plague and earthquakes and the thunder of heaven, and the fierce and vivid lightning, also shall the inhabitants of the earth be made to feel the wrath and indignation, and chastening hand of an Almighty God until the consumption decreed hath made a full end of all nations;" or until the Lord Himself shall assume the reigns of government over all the earth, and put an end to all strife and contention.

Is this revelation being fulfilled in our eyes today? Think of the war between the United States and Spain covering a vast distance and fraught with questions of deep importance in the opportunities for the spread of the everlasting gospel. And now comes the contest with China, which from a movement to release the representatives and citizens of various governments in China, appears to be rapidly developing into a bloody war, with probable unpleasant and difficult after-complications between allied powers engaged in the present conflict over division of territory or the effort to prevent division presents a possible breadth of contest that none may foretell what or where the end will be reached, nor what great changes may be made.

The Boer conflict, the mutterings in India, Egypt, Turkey, Italy and many other countries show a spirit of deep unrest, and that there is an undercurrent working, which, like a volcanic fire, may burst forth at any time and cause misery and destruction.

The dreadful famines in India of late years, the Bubonic plague, the fierce and vivid lightnings, tornadoes and cyclones; the tidal waves; the appalling fires, on sea and land, all testify in unmistakable language that the message of the latter day prophet was true and inspired of God; and appeals strongly to the candid, reasoning mind to carefully examine and weigh the evidence regarding the restoration of the everlasting gospel with all its powers and prerogatives through him, by obeying which, a joy and peace unattainable under any other plan, may be realized.

The Savior said:
Take heed that no man deceive you. For many shall come in my name, saying I am Christ, and shall deceive many. And ye shall hear of wars, and rumors of wars: * * * For nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom; and there shall be famines, and pestilences, and earthquakes, in divers places.—Matt. 24: 4-7.

Thus in the mouth of two witnesses the Lord has established his word, that he will reveal the secret to his servants the prophets before taking action where the interests of his people are concerned, and when any are overtaken unawares it is evident they have not been wise in heeding the information imparted; but have been heedless and unconcerned, therefore they suffer with the uninformed.

But this claim for the present fulfillment of this promise of the Lord through Amos, the prophet, makes it necessary that there should be prophets of the Lord in this age, which the majority of christians dispute; but they are certainly inconsistent if such claim of the Scriptures are to be accepted as a safe guide. The language of Amos is plain and unequivocal, and agrees with the Apostle Paul who distinctly states that "God hath set some in the church, first apostles, secondarily prophets, etc. (1 Cor. 12: 28). This, then, is God's plan; it is safe to follow. The signs are here, the end is approaching, "What I say unto one, I say unto all. Watch."

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

STUDENTS of the Book of Mormon (and all Saints should be) should follow carefully Bro. S. W. L. Scott's article, "Chords From the Harp of Ephraim." Much useful information will be gained thereby, and good points noted.

Bro. J. C. HITCHCOCK, 2511 Slattery street, St. Louis, Missouri, always watchful to recognize capabilities for god in others and to speak encouragingly of his brethren, sends us a copy of the St. Louis Republic for June 24th, containing pictures of the Washington University class of 1900, among them being that of Bro. Samuel A. Burgess; and in a letter to the editor of the ENSIGN, Bro. Hitchcock referring to this fact says, "Bro. S. A. Burgess, General Treasurer of the Religion, and son of S. R. Burgess, is No. 12 in the picture, but of the eighteen young men in his class 'Sammy' stood first."

We are glad to note the efficiency of our young brother and the bright prospects for his future. He is said to be a very close reader and persistent in his studies, which together with the blessing of the Spirit will in time to come give him grand capabilities in the work of the Lord in which himself and parents are so deeply interested. They are gifted people anyway.

REV. CLARK BRADEN expressed the ENSIGN office, this week, from Exchange, Illinois, fifty copies of a seven page pamphlet which he has entitled "Christianity vs. Mormonism," and requests us to distribute the same to the "ministry" of our church. We take pleasure in complying with this request as being the very best means to show what Mr. Braden has accomplished in his efforts to get himself "endorsed." The similarity of wording in the endorsements by a number of "State Boards" of the Christian church has the appearance of being dictated by the same party, though the signatures are, of course, all different. But it does seem strange that Mr. Braden would go to all this trouble to get what no one has asked for, and yet so signally fail to obtain the simple endorsements asked for by Bro. I. N. White. It begins to look as if he cannot comply with Bro. White's conditions, with which Bro. White has himself complied, and puts up this document to make it appear that he has fulfilled these demands. He states he has had fifteen debates with prominent representatives of the Mormon church, and yet has the assurance to say our people are afraid to meet him. Thinking people will conclude in the light of this record that there is certainly some good reasons for Bro. White's laying down some specific rules upon which to base an endorsement, especially when he has himself complied with them.

If Elder Braden and his like would try to compute the results they have accomplished in their desperate efforts to oppose the work of the Lord, as represented by the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, the paucity of results for their side should lead them to consider seriously if it is not possible they are doing just what Saul of Tarsus was doing before the Lord Jesus appeared to him while on his way to Damascus.

Elder Braden, we understand, is about seventy years old, and must, in the natural course of life, soon appear before the bar of God to answer for his stewardship, and we fear from the record he is making, and has been making, he will not receive just the recognition there which it is natural to suppose he is anticipating.

Elder Braden's manner of conducting debates, from all accounts, is not such as commends itself to fairminded, candid people, and it is for this cause and for no other that any of our people may have refused to meet him, and not because they fear his prowess, much as he would like to make it so appear.

We should like to comment upon some statements Elder Braden makes in his pamphlet, but space will not permit it here. We may possibly take it up in the future if it seems necessary.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. O. J. CHILDS, 17 Dary street, Titusville, Pennsylvania:

I would like to have some of the elders come this way and stop with us and give us a few sermons. I will try to get them a place to preach. Myself and wife are the only Saints in this region that we know of, and we are hungry for a good, Latter Day Saint sermon.

Bro. C. Ed. Miller, have your district president make a note of this opening. Titusville is a fine little city and there should be good accomplished by a fair effort there.

SR. MYRA MCANINCH, Bachelor, Missouri:

The ENSIGN is a comfort and a joy to me in my loneliness, as there is no church near me and there are no Saints in this country except myself. People here have never heard our faith preached. I thought there was an elder going to preach in a church not far from me; there was a good crowd out to hear, but it was a Brig-hamite, so every one was disappointed. I think if some of our ministers could come here they could do some good; but on account of opposition I am not situated so that I could have them come to my home. I give my ENSIGNS to any who will read them.

ELDER W. E. PEAK, Galien, Michigan:

We had one of the most spiritual and harmonious conferences at Coldwater, Michigan, June 9-11, that I ever attended. Bro. J. H. Lake and Columbus Scott, besides those of the district, were present. Bro. Lake was cheerful, confident of Zion's success and happy. Bro. Columbus was called on to make several short speeches, besides preaching one sermon, and as usual he was equal to the occasion. It does one good to meet such thorough, conscientious Saints as we met at this conference. The missionaries of the district, branch and Sunday School officials, are worthy of commendation. We are feeling well and alive in the work.

GENERAL CHURCH NEWS.

INDEPENDENCE.

Presiding Bishop E. L. Kelley was in the city Sunday and Monday, departing Tuesday morning.

Bro. and Sr. Harry Hatty are to be congratulated over the advent of a pretty little daughter, June 11.

Bro. and Sr. L. P. Caldwell are caring for a young son who took up his abode with them Friday night, June 29th.

Sunday morning at 11 o'clock Bishop E. L. Kelley was the speaker, much to the satisfaction of the Saints. At night Bishop Ellis Short presented some thoughts on the resurrection, receiving good attention throughout. The afternoon service was also profitable.

Bishop Hilliard and his son-in-law, Mr. Miller, from Illinois, arrived Monday evening. It is possible Bro. Hilliard will comply, next Sunday, with the special request of the local Daughters of Zion Society, and preach upon a subject selected by them. Everyone should hear it; let there be a large attendance next Sunday.

Judge G. E. McConley, of Sterling, Colorado, was in the city Tuesday, and called on the ENSIGN for a few moments. He is a delegate to the National Democratic Convention which is holding its sessions since the 4th. Bro. McConley hopes to have the elders with them this summer, and to make an effort to get the work opened up there.

Bro. J. W. Layton, who has been employed at the Nut & Bolt Works, Sheffield, between here and Kansas City, for some time past, has leased the blacksmith shop of Mr. Hangst on East Lexington street, where Bro. A. J. Cox does business, and will hereafter be found at that stand. We are pleased to have Bro. Layton so centrally located.

Those who allowed the storm clouds to keep them at home missed a very interesting session of the Religio last Friday night. In addition to the regular lesson study two good papers were read, one by Bro. C. M. Mills, subject, "Patriotism;" the other by Bro. Howard Daniels, subject, "The Problem of Our Existence." It was also decided to give a musical and literary entertainment in the near future, proceeds to be used in paying the church debt.

While the great Convention Hall in Kansas City, with its fifteen thousand perspiring Democrats, was almost alive with political commotion, and the streets of that city were thronged with pedestrians, ventilating their patriotism by fizz and snap and bang and blaze of explosives, in noisy celebration of the "Glorious Fourth," another event—quiet in its way, but in its importance to the main participants, eclipsing for the time all 16 to 1 or gold standard, or national independence considerations—was transpiring at the pleasant home of Bro. and Sr. Clark of that place. A few immediate friends of the family had assembled to witness the ceremony which made Sr. Clara L. Clark and Mr. Homer B. Curtis life companions under the marriage bond. It was a "jolly happening." Elder Joseph Luff officiated, and the observance of the rite was followed by congratulations and refreshments in royally characteristic style and order. The groom looked proud and happy over his acquisition, as well he might, and Sr. Clara looked the pink of contentment and joy. At 6:20 p. m. they left for their home at Memphis, Missouri, where Mr. Curtis expects soon to open out in the practice of medicine, he being now a student in the closing term of the college at Keokuk, Iowa. Sr. Clara has many acquaintances in and out of the church and all will join us in heartiest congratulations. Mr. Curtis, though a stranger to us, has excellent endorsement in the fact that he is Sr. Clara's choice. May their days be many and full of divinely appointed happiness.

ST. JOSEPH, MISSOURI.

Bro. Walter Smith was the speaker here Sunday morning, and Elder Swen Swenson at night.

Preaching services were held every night last week at Elwood, Kansas; as a result one name was given for baptism. Bro. G. W. Best has worked faithfully to make these meetings a success, and if it be only one precious soul that obeys now, the gospel seed has been planted, and those who heard Elder Swenson we believe will never be able to forget the words of eternal life.

Bro. M. Shaw baptized and confirmed a middle aged man near Avenue City, on Sunday.

Bro. Walter Smith preached at Aspey Mission Sunday evening.

There are some who are sick, but the sickness yields to the marvelous power of God through the administration of the elders.

At the Sunday School last Sunday the following officers were elected: D. J. Kralh, superintendent; Sr. D. H. Blair, assistant superintendent; Harry Clay, secretary; Ruby Jackson, assistant secretary; Martin McKim, treasurer; Alvin Christensen, librarian; Mabel Brooks, assistant librarian; Amy Winning, organist; Viola Blair, chorister.

Two names are given in for baptism at the church next Sunday. G. L. K.

CHICAGO, ILLINOIS.

Branch headquarters, 716 W. Van Buren St., Sunday meetings 2:45 and 7:45 p. m.; Lang Mission, 311 Cottage Grove Ave., 10:45 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.; West Pullman branch, 12024 Union Ave., 10:30 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.; Parkside Mission, 7124 Stony Island Ave., 3:00 and 7:30 p. m.; 568 W. 37th St. (colored mission), 10:30 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.

Our union service passed off very pleasantly. There was in attendance a first cousin to President Joseph Smith, a lady about the same age. She has never met Bro. Joseph nor heard much of the work he has in hand, yesterday being her first attendance at any of our meetings. She expressed herself as very much interested in the meeting, which was a sacrament and testimony service. She is anxious to meet her cousin, and expects to about the 15th of this month, when he will visit our city. She is a cousin on the mother's side. She was accompanied by another cousin by marriage.

R. Sena Nayaka, a native of the Island of Ceylon, India, attended our services yesterday. He had met Brn. R. C. Evans and Pres. Smith at Tilberry, Canada, a few weeks ago. In listening to Bro. Lang upon the street he recognized the gospel sound and so fell in with him. He is bright and intelligent, stating he was converted to our faith. He may be one to carry the glad tidings to his far off home to which he expects to return in the course of time.

We are getting in some excellent work on the streets. Brn. Lang and Pement on Cottage Grove; Brn. Graves and Fuller, on State; Brn. Good, Pitt, Keir, Terry and others on Madison and also Forty-eighth avenue; Brn. Strange and Henley in the region of 63rd and Halstead. Let the good work go on, not forgetting to keep before the people the permanent places of meeting. Don't waste your ENSIGNS, nor send them all to the T. W.'s in California, but divide up with Chicago. Send to E. J. Lang, 3411 Cottage Grove, or the writer.

Bro. H. E. Moler preached at the mission yesterday morning, Brn. Pement and Lang on the street near by at night. Bro. A. J. Keck occupied at church headquarters at the evening hour on "The Kingdom." Bro. F. M. Pitt preaching at 2:45 p. m. Bro. F. J. Mottashed, of London, Canada, rejoiced with the Saints in worship yesterday. He may remain with us for a time.

Bro. J. Midgorden has been in the city for a few days, attending the services yesterday. Bro. John was ordained high priest at our late Conference by Bro. H. C. Smith and the writer; the new office fits well on his shoulders.

Yours ever for victory,
J. M. TERRY.

FIRST KANSAS CITY BRANCH.

Chapel, 2324 Wabash avenue. Take 15th street line to Prospect Ave., transfer to Prospect, get off at 24th, and walk one block west or to the right hand. Time of meetings: Sunday School at 9:30, preaching at 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m., social service at 12:30 p. m. Prayer meeting, Wednesday evening at 7:30; Religio, Friday evening at 8. Strangers are cordially invited.

The rain on Sunday morning caused a small attendance at the services, but those in attendance were interested and profited. Elder F. C. Warnky spoke to the Saints.

At 2:30 p. m. a few gathered at the tent, at 18th and Cherry, and held a Sunday School session. If an interest can be created, regular sessions will be held every Sunday at 4:30 while tent work continues. The attendance at the preaching services at the tent has been very good, and some seem to be interested.

The sisters of the 1st Kansas City branch have organized a Hawthorne Society, with Sr. Geo. Hidy as president.

Sr. J. F. Winn has gone to Macon, Missouri, for a visit with relatives.

At the regular monthly business meeting Bro. and Sr. Warnky and family, and Sr. Burch and daughter, Maggie, were admitted by letter as members.

Tent meetings every evening at 18th and Cherry until further notice.

SECOND KANSAS CITY BRANCH.

Corner Sixteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue. Sunday School 9:30 a. m., preaching 11 a. m., prayer meeting 2:30 p. m., preaching 7:30 p. m.

At a business meeting Monday night, June 25th, the Religio elected the following officers: J. A. Koehler, president; George Edwards, vice president; Amelia Koehler, secretary; Margaret Kienevy, treasurer. This good work is moving along, but more could be done. Who will do it?

The Sunday school elected the following officers last Sunday: Fred Koehler, superintendent; John Grainger, assistant; Amelia Koehler, secretary; Ada Koehler, treasurer; George Edwards, librarian. Efforts are being made to obtain a new library, and there are hopes that a better appreciation of the value of the library will obtain among the scholars. Bro. Edwards is competent to manage this.

At the prayer meeting last Sunday a condition of peace and love prevailed, the Lord speaking words of admonition, instruction and prophecy. The Saints were exhorted to adhere strictly to the Word of Wisdom that they might be free from the plagues and pestilences that are shortly to be poured out upon the earth among the children of men, for the great and terrible day of the Lord is nigh at hand.

Bro. John D. White has been successful in obtaining a tent for gospel work and the voice of warning has been lifted for the past few weeks at corner 18th and Holmes streets. The tent will be down this week until Saturday night on account of the danger from fire works.

The National Democratic Convention is occupying the attention of many, and it may hinder the Lord's work for a time, but He will never let it stop.

Two pure little spirits went to the Master from this branch last month; George C. Koehler, age eleven months, son of Bro. and Sr. Fred Koehler, also Harriett E. Grainger, age seventeen months, daughter of Bro. and Sr. John C. Grainger. Through this means a greater degree of love and unity has been brought about to the glory of God among the Saints of this branch.

JOHN C. GRAINGER.

ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI.

Another rainy Sunday yesterday. Mud, rain and street car strike rendered publicly serving the Lord here a little difficult; yet many of the faithful faced the conditions bravely.

Bro. Bert Dawson, of Kansas City, surprised his parents and friends by suddenly putting in his appearance Saturday evening. We are pleased to see his smiling features in our midst again.

Bro. Allen went to Belleville Friday and spoke there yesterday. Other appointments for the day were: Bro. Barraclough, Caseyville; Bro. Christensen, Oak Hill; Bro. Davis, Cheltenham, evening; Bro. Hitchcock, Cheltenham afternoon, St. Louis night.

Bro. O. O. Randall has returned to St. Louis for a short visit. One would judge from the many "I do wish you would stay with us" expressions heard addressed to him, that he has numerous warm-hearted friends here. He is also a very much alive Latter Day Saint.

Bro. S. A. Burgess, general treasurer of the Religio society, graduated from Washington University recently. To those who know him best it is perhaps useless for us to tell you that out of eighteen men in the class he stood first. Education makes some men wise, some foolish, but we are pleased to say "Sammy" unquestionably belongs to the former class. He don't allow his "worldly wisdom" to warp his religion out of joint either.

The soul harrowing problem of securing new quarters for holding our services here in the city continues to successfully undermine the perfect peace of the faithful. A silver lining has, however, commenced to show a little.

DENVER, COLORADO.

Church, corner of 22d and Arapahoe Sts. Services Sunday—Sunday School at 9:45 a. m.; preaching at 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.; sacrament service the first Sunday in each month at 6 p. m. Prayer meeting Wednesday evening. Zion's Religio-Literary Society Friday evening.

The weather, for a week past, has been very warm, the mercury registering near the one hundred mark several days, but the nights are cool so one can sleep and get the needed rest preparatory to the next day's heat and labor.

Since last writing Bro. Chaburn paid us a visit, and interviewed the Brighamites two evenings on the streets; good attention, whether good was done in any other way or not.

Bro. J. W. Gilbert, who has been working extra in the post office, begins regular work the 2d inst.; his hours from 1 to 10 p. m., will deprive us of his usefulness for the Sunday night service.

Sr. Brennan and family have arrived in the city and are settled at 2416 West Thirty-third avenue.

Srs. Ranie and Sylvester, of Omaha, stopped over Sunday in the city; they are making a tour of the west, their final destination being Portland, Oregon.

Sr. Emma Hamlin is quite poorly, and the doctor says a change of climate is necessary to her recovery; of course he does not take into consideration the promises of God to the faithful.

Sr. Bellrose is spending the summer with relatives near Fanning, Kansas. Bro. David will follow a little later.

The branch deacon is in Colorado Springs to better his fortune financially.

By postal card from Bro. G. T. Griffiths we learn that he will Sunday in Denver the 8th.

At the Sunday School election of officers, Sr. L. A. Schmutz was again elected superintendent, with Sr. Lou Fishburn, assistant.

At the semi-annual business meeting of the branch Monday, the 25th ult., the following officers were elected: E. F. Shupe, president; S. H. Eye and O. A. Westland, priests; Elder J. W. Gilbert to act as teacher, Les Shupe; secretary; and Sr. Blanch Lewis, treasurer.

Last Friday evening the Z. R.-L. S. gave a lawn social at the residence of Bro. J. Schmutz, 1846 Lincoln avenue; the attendance was not as large as it might have been, but a good time was had and a substantial addition to the treasury was made.

The last program rendered by the Z. R.-L. S., the 22d, was one of the best in the history of the society.

Preaching Sunday morning at the church by Elder E. F. Shupe. Elder J. W. Gilbert conducted the service at Lakewood in the afternoon. Sacrament service at 8 o'clock p. m., quite a large attendance and a good degree of the Spirit present. No evening preaching.

Bro. Mansel Williams, a book-binder formerly in the Herald office, is in the city seeking employment.

Sr. Stuart, formerly of California, who has been visiting in Independence, has come to Denver. Bro. Stewart is employed in the Globe Smelter, and they were in attendance at the sacrament meeting Sunday evening.

S.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA.

Services at Golden West Hall, 320 Post street, every Sunday. Sunday School 10 a. m., preaching 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.; prayer meeting first Sunday of each month at 12:15 noon. Elder C. A. Parkin presiding elder, residence 3010 16th street.

Preaching Sunday at 11 by J. F. Burton. His discourse was much enjoyed, and he was greeted by a full house. A number of visitors were present; among them we noticed Wm. O. Clark, an old time elder; also Mrs. Tupper and Etta Cooper, from Santa Rosa; also Bro. Mehrens, recently arrived from Honolulu.

After the sermon Bro. Chas. E. Crumley, missionary to Oregon, was called to the stand and presented with a Bible, Chas. A. Parkin making the presentation speech, to which Bro. Crumley replied with grateful and touching remarks.

At 2 p. m. Bro. Burton preached at Oakland. Bro. Crumley spoke for us in the evening. The attendance at all services was good.

Wedding bells have been ringing in our midst, and Saturday evening Bro. Chas. A. Parkin united in marriage Miss Ettalyn Broback and Roy N. Douglas. A happy band of about fifty persons were the favored guests at the residence of his mother to witness the ceremony. The festivities continued until near midnight.

Our pleasant weather still continues. We have a little fog and wind, but we don't mind that so long as we have warm sunshine most of the day.

All generally well with us.

LETTER DEPARTMENT.

URRICHVILLE, O., June 28.

Editor Ensign—Since leaving Independence, the center of the Zion of God, I have labored in Cleveland, Akron and Blakes Mills, Ohio. At the last two places named have been ably assisted by Bro. H. J. Davison.

Since last Monday we have been trying to obtain a hearing here in a hall, but the people are not in a hurry to enter halls this hot weather; so we concluded, like the great prophet Mohammed, "If the mountain won't come to us, we will go to it," hence, we obtained permission of the mayor to preach on the street, and the Parson and "Daron," as the report has us in the daily, are developing into street preachers. We preach on the street and then invite the people into the hall and then we preach again.

One thing sure, we have quite an audience on the street, but few we have been able to persuade to enter the hall. We continue this week and will know later on, whether we like street preaching or not, as a business.

May peace and love prevail in Zion.

A. H. PARSONS.

MAYSVILLE, MO., June 22.

Dear Ensign—I am a reader of the "Silent Preacher" and having seen nothing from this part of the vineyard I thought I would contribute a few lines. Gospel Hill has a fine little church 28x40, located three and one-half miles east of Maysville, Missouri; it is well finished from top to bottom and not a cent indebtedness on it. It is backed up by as good a country as is in Missouri, and all we lack to make it the most pleasant place to live, is a few more Saints; however, I suppose we should not complain for we are gathering in a few sheaves along the line.

Bro. J. N. York and J. D. Flanders were up from Stewartville June the 17th; we had a fine time, for after preaching we went to the water where four noble souls were baptized by Bro. York and confirmed by Bro. J. D. Flanders. Three of them heads of families; they were Bro. and Sr. Lewis Linn and Mrs. Cora Veerkamp and a daughter of Bro. Linn's, age twelve years; they are fine people and will make good Saints. By the way, I wish to say that Bro. York is coming preacher of the day, and if faithful will be a grand instrument in the hands of the Master in bringing people to see the light of this blessed gospel. I pray the Father to send more laborers like him in the field.

Bro. York and Flanders will hold regular meetings at Gospel Hill for the next three months, and as we expect to organize a branch here before long, I think the work can be revived here again; as to the country it is a fine place, good water, and wood for fuel, good soil and fine people, and I would say to any of the Saints who wish to come to Missouri, this is as good a place as I ever lived; land reasonably cheap, and some can be bought at a bargain. This part of the country is adapted for the raising of all kinds of grain and tame grass, and fruits of all kind do fairly well here; and as it is only about sixty-five miles to Independence, I think we are in the regions round about. I will answer all letters of inquiry about land, and if any of the Saints wish to locate here, I will assist them all I can.

In gospel bonds,

EAOLE GROVE, Ia., June 17.

Editor Ensign—I have held four nights debate with Elders Hawkeswood and Mortenson, of the Utah church, and to say the least I was disappointed in the fight they made; I expected more. They positively would not touch upon their doctrines to make a fight, but the last speech upon the last night Hawkeswood lunched out upon the Adam-God doctrine. This is the only evidence he presented that Adam is God; Adam or Michael is to lead one army and the devil the other, and "then shall be the battle of the great God." So you see Adam is not only a god, but "the great God." Profound, isn't it? Lord Roberts leads the armies of Great Britain, therefore, Lord Roberts is Great Britain.

Their claim was, as usual, that the presidency does not come down from father to son, but that it fell upon the Twelve. But Elder Mortenson did say that if Joseph of Lamoni had presented himself to the church (in Utah) he, no doubt, would have been given the presidency, but he never even presented himself to the church, so how could they receive him or make him president. Well, I had to be so rude as to ask the question why, if Joseph held no right to the presidency, but it devolved upon the presidency of the Twelve, they would have taken the office from the Twelve and given it to Joseph when he was not a member of the quorum of Twelve, to say nothing about its president.

The result of the debate is evidently good, as it pointed out distinct differences between us, and also in brightening the Saints up some in regard to what is in the books.

As far as I have been able to judge since entering this district, the Saints are anxious to assist in moving the work along, and show that they are alive in it. Our conference held with the Richland Creek Saints, passed off very pleasantly, and I believe it was a profitable gathering. I will probably remain in this region the remainder of this month and will probably reach Bro. Kephart's part of the field and assist him some during the coming month.

Permit me to say to the kind Saints and friends of the last four years in Nebraska, that I remember your kindness and trust my labor with you will be blessed to the good of all. My health has been much better this year than for the two years preceding.

By way of pastoral to the Saints and ministry in the Des Moines district, I only say, Let each one do what they can to live, as well as to teach the gospel. Let me hear from you if you desire labor done, and we will do our best to see that your call is answered. My permanent address is Dow City, Iowa. Address your letters there and they will reach me.

In bonds,

D. M. RUDD.

RIVERSIDE, Cal., June 14.

Dear Ensign—Although I am nearly two thousand miles away from your home, yet I find you on the table, where I am stopping with my son and family, full of news from home and the doings there. I hope the increase of your numbers will double until you are found in every nation on the earth.

Riverside is located twelve miles from San Bernardino, my old home, where I united with the Reorganized church when Bro. A. H. Smith and Wm. Anderson first came to California. When I lived at San Bernardino this locality was looked upon as a desert, and it would be now were it not for the water that runs through it in a cemented Sanka about eighteen feet wide. The San Bernardino folks were silly enough to sell lands that they thought were no good, and the Riverside folks sank wells, sapping the water from San Bernardino lands until San Bernardino is nearly dry, and Riverside has made the desert blossom like a rose in very deed.

It is the nicest town I was ever in; fine houses, streets covered with asphalt, all kinds of fruit. My son's team hauled off 450 bushels of oranges and dumped them out on the ground; they were good but would not do to ship. This an every day job, and that is only one team; from three to five teams do that every day. They will be done gathering the last of this month; there are young oranges and blossoms on the trees, also ripe oranges now. I do not like the climate, cold nights and mornings, and hot in the middle of the day, or it has been since I have been here. When I lived at San Bernardino, some forty years ago, it was not so. I was married there forty years ago; I find but few now, and but few old homes, that were there then. I am not as young as I was then. The home folks write me that you had a good time rally day.

I preached in San Bernardino branch once since I came here. Bro. Jones is presiding elder now. Sr. Cross I met here; she is visiting her son. This sister, Lute, my son, and myself are all the members who belong to the church that I know of here. My son and family will visit Independence this summer to see home folks. He has been out here about fourteen years, has a nice home here, and a good business.

May God bless his people and the ENSIGN employees.

Yours for truth,

J. W. BRACKENBURY.

INDEPENDENCE, Mo., June 19.

Editor Ensign—In your issue for 23 inst., is an article from the pen of Sr. Anna Neilson, of Nebraska City, Nebraska. The sister makes serious objections to that part of my large, pictorial dispensation chart, where angels are represented as wearing wings. The sister says: "So take those wings off and represent the Lord's angels in correct form." Did the good sister forget the explanation that the lecturer gave in regard to the angel wearing wings? He said the wings were no part of the angel, they belonged to the apparel, the clothing, equipment, dress, with which the angel was decked, to distinguish him from other personal characters which appear on the chart, such as Moses, Christ, Paul, etc., etc. Both men and women wear hats, being part of their equipment of dress, but the distinguishing features are in the wings attached to the apparel, not to the person themselves. I, too, object to "bird wings" being made a part of the angels; also object to the "bird wings" being made a part of the good lady that wears them. So take those wings off and represent the good women in correct form, then it will be all right. I make this explanation to assist us, to see eye to eye. Many copies have been taken from my chart, and it is liable to be heard from at many points in this wide world, and the foregoing explanation, which our good sister has inadvertently drawn out, will no doubt assist others in making their explanations of why angels are represented as wearing wings by Latter Day Saints.

The sister's article was good and tasty, and no doubt much appreciated all around, though she did fail to catch my point upon angels' wings at the time of my lectures at Lamoni, where I was crowded for time to do justice to the chart.

I. N. WHITE.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., June 27.

Editor Ensign—"Hot" for California, but not to be compared with the eastern humidity. The thermometer has a happy faculty here of scaling the heights, but somehow it does not get excited as with you, but keeps a close mouth generally so that even its intimate friends would not know how "hot" it is unless they took a close survey of its face. The protracted drought is showing its effect. Much of the deciduous trees are barren if not wholly killed; all crops are short. I do not think that any other state could stand the strain that Southern California has been passing through.

I occupied at Garden Grove, June 10th, being called there to preach the funeral of Bro. Carter who was recently burned to death in this city. I returned to the city in time to conduct the Religio, of which I am president, and at 7:30 preached on the "Resurrection" theme.

Bro. D. L. Harris occupied at Garden Grove in the evening. Bro. Harris has been making a round of the branches, and it is a pleasure to the Saints to behold his genial countenance again.

Bro. and Sr. J. F. Burton arrived in the city on Thursday, the 21st, and hid themselves away to the "Green Meadows," to visit their daughter Dora. After a two days' sojourn, Sr. Burton went to "the Grove." Bro. Burton remaining here over Sunday morning, giving a touching recital of his Island experiences, then on to the Grove for the evening service.

I was called to San Bernardino on Friday to preach the funeral sermon of Sr. Ridley, and remained until after the Sunday morning service, preaching there, and returned to the city for the evening. Bro. Harris delivered the evening sermon at San Bernardino. Bro. D. A. Anderson reached the mission June 23d. They are the first to arrive. Bro. Chatburn, we learn, is in a fight with the Brighamites in Denver. Bro. Elbert Smith and wife were helping in the northern district at last accounts.

As evidence that we are not idle in this western metropolis, will say that aside from the Sunday services we have meetings announced in different parts of the city for four evenings this week. Tonight I addressed a body of school teachers on the theme, "Environments: their effects on the lives of men." Thursday night we begin a series of informal meetings for the general information of the entire branch. It is intended to take up general church polity. Bro. Jones and Wixom, of San Bernardino, are filling regular appointment at Cuernavaca, and they report fair success.

T. W. WILLIAMS.

1014 Alpine St.

GURNESEY, Cal., June 22.

Dear Ensign—We have had very little preaching in this part of the Lord's vineyard during the last year, but trust there will be an elder sent this way at no distant day.

We have sacrament meeting in Tulare City the first Sunday in each month, and in the Linder neighborhood the third Sunday in each month.

Last Sunday, as the Saints were gathering at the home of Bro. Kraskie's for sacrament meeting, the sad news came that Sr. Mary A. Twaddle had met with a serious accident. She and her mother (both lived in Tulare City) had started out to Bro. Kraskie's place (about nine miles from Tulare City) to attend sacrament meeting, the horse became frightened as soon as they started, throwing them both out of the cart. Sr. Twaddle lived about four hours after the accident; her mother received some injuries but nothing serious.

Sr. Twaddle was a noble Saint, was willing to make any sacrifice, for the cause she loved, willing to share anything she had with those who were in need. She will be greatly missed by the Saints, but we do not mourn as those without hope, but our hearts are cheered with the thought that if faithful, we shall again meet beyond this vale of tears where sorrow, sickness and death will be no more.

The funeral services were conducted by Elders Joseph and Ebenezer Burton in the Methodist church in Tulare City.

O, does it not stand us in hand to live as Saints, for we know not what a day may bring forth. May we so live that we can have God's Spirit with us to enable us to overcome the evils by which we are surrounded in this world.

Our trials at times seem hard to bear, but when cast down with the cares of this life, let us think of what our Savior has suffered for us, and with renewed courage let us press on.

Oh, that we might, under all circumstances in life, be able to say, "Thy will be done," but how often we murmur and think our lot is hard. Be firm and fixed in my your Lord, I'll bless you if you keep my word, Your trials shall all drop remove, Temptations shall love for me prove.

I have a sister who has been afflicted with spasms for about twenty-five years, she has been a great care to us; we have besought the Lord that he would heal her, but as yet the affliction has not been removed from her, and I do pray the Lord will give us patience to endure all things for his sake, and if it is not his will that she shall be healed, we may be willing to say, "Thy will be done."

Sr. Jennie Page, let us hear from you; may our Father in heaven bless you as my prayer.

Ever praying for the prosperity of this great latter day work, I remain,

Your sister in Christ,

MOELIE A. FLORY.

CHORDS FROM THE HARP OF EPHRAIM.

ELDER S. W. L. SCOTT.

PART II—NO. 1.

As we have before noted, the message of the sealed book, given to the English speaking world in 1830, does not "seek its own glory." In striking harmony with the message and spirit of the Bible, it "speaks that which it has heard of God," whether it suits or non-suits the fastidious taste of the times. Its speech is robed in the "gentleness" of the "wisdom which cometh from above." Like the true teachings of God, which do not conform to the alienated condition of the world's worship, but seeks with spirit familiar to the doctrine of Christ, to entice to do good, and live righteously, in order that the great "bar of God"—the reminder of just judgment—may be "pleasing" when brought to stand before it.

Were the terms of its message in exact accordance with the range and standard of modern literary or classical criticism, we would have some ground for the belief that it "seeks its own glory." Did it conform to the creeds and dogmas of "mystery Babylon's" imposing, or vary in the least to justify the departures from the primitive and divinely constructed system of salvation laid down in the record of Judah, we could entertain doubts of its claims. We are informed in discussion sometimes that it contains some "popular campmeeting expressions used by Sidney Rigdon;" expressions characteristic of an extremely excitable and "sensational religion." But we have never been able to find expressions within it, that were not made alive by the "breath of life," similar to Bible expressions. Moreover, the "current reformation" with which Sidney Rigdon stood identified as a bold and eloquent defender, and in which he received a strict discipline, educated its adherents out of the "sect language," as the following will show:

"The style of speech indicated the change of thought. Sect language gradually gave place to scripture terms and phrases, as more appropriate and correct and authorized by the sanction of the Holy Spirit. Instead of 'relating a christian experience, converts now began to confess their faith in Christ. Church records assumed the scriptural designation of disciples.' The spirit of research was fully set free. It peered into everything to sift out what was erroneous, and to make all things according to the pattern shown by the apostles in the New Testament. Even from the hymns and prayers were eliminated objectionable terms and forms of speech, carrying in them thoughts and petitions unanctioned by the Word of God. The dialect of the Holy Spirit in the language of apostles and prophets, it was urged must be substituted for the corrupt language of the great apostasy which still pollutes the tongue of Christendom. * * * From the language of Jews, the language of Ashdod must be expurgated. Thus many terms that were trite and dear from their familiar association in religious life, were objected to as improper, and rejected as misleading."—Hist. of Disciples in Western Reserve, pp. 54, 55.

With Rigdon's lengthy experience and critical schooling, in a system of religion which "expurgated" sect language, eliminated the "relating of a christian experience," "sifted out what was erroneous," even from hymns and prayers, characterizing the "trite and dear" terms "rendered familiar by association in religious life," as the "language of Ashdod," "objected to as improper, and rejected as misleading," it is very inconsistent, not to say improbable, to charge him with the retrograde work of supplying those "campmeeting expressions," or Campbellite-meeting-objected-to-rejected terms.

But we cite you to a prophecy of the sealed book unsealed—given to the world in English, 1830—of which the foregoing and similar characterizations seem the fulfillment. The prophet Moroni, by inspiration, foresaw the days when the record would be among the people; also the religious condition of heart and mind toward the "marvelous work":

"And I said unto him, Lord, the Gentiles will mock at these things, because of our weakness in writing; for the Lord has made us mighty in word by faith, but thou hast not made us mighty in writing; for thou hast made all this people that they could speak much, because of the Holy Ghost which thou hast given them; and thou hast made us that we could write but little because of the awkwardness of our hands."—Book of Ether, 5: 16.

This purported prophecy given almost 2,200 years B. C., affirms without qualification, that when the gentiles should be confronted with the revelations of the book, they would "mock the things written." Webster defines the word "mock," to deride, to laugh at, to make sport in contempt, or to speak jestingly. In view of this definition, how often is the public called upon to laugh and enjoy the sport made by mockers at the expense of simplicity, when Moroni has a "rent" containing "writing" hung on a "pole" as flag of truce, advancing to the opposing army? How often do opposers fulfill the prophecy when criticising the "writing" of the Book of Mormon! But the Lord informs Moroni, in verse 20, saying, "Fools mock, but they shall mourn; and my grace is sufficient for the meek."

The Bible asserts that a certain class of "scorners delight in scorning, and fools hate knowledge." (Prov. 1: 22). They have "said in their heart there is no God." (Psa. 14: 1). They hate the "knowledge" given by the revelation manifested in the "sealed book" unsealed, for its purpose is to "convince Jew and gentile that Jesus is the Christ, the eternal God, manifesting himself unto all nations."

It is these manifestations of the eternal God which are so obnoxious to this class. It is this class "that makes man an offender for a word;" that lays a snare for the Lord's ministry; that "turns aside the just for a thing of naught." (Isa. 29: 20). And the sad part is, "the scorner is consumed." "Now, therefore, be ye not mockers, lest your bands be made strong; for I have heard from the Lord God of hosts a consumption, even determined upon the whole earth. Give ye ear, and hear my voice; hearken and hear my speech."—Isa. 28: 21, 22. "And my speech and my preaching was not with enticing words of man's wisdom, but in demonstration of the spirit and of power." (1 Cor. 2: 4). From the foregoing we learn that it is a sad goal awaiting those who "mock and scorn" the Lord's doings because they do not conform to the wisdom of the world, nor to the advanced standard of the higher criticism. But the prophetic statement receives ample vindication in the progress of the great work, daily, and the entire "Spaulding Story" regime is urged as proof.

In certain discussions with other church representatives, we have been confronted (yet not abashed) with the soap-bubble theory that Spaulding, Rigdon and Smith concocted the sealed book. That Spaulding, a graduate of Dartmouth college, was author of the historical portions; and Smith and Rigdon of the religious portion. Also detached sentences, phrases and words—all thrown away from connections in which they stand and make sense; lifted away from natural and logical relations, and in conglomerate masses hung up on the wall back of the sacred desk, to prove? the point. Such words and phrases as "somewhat," "the enormity of our number," "it supposeth me," "the more part," "stabbed by a garb of secrecy," and "no affliction save swallowed up in joy."

And yet all of these grammatical blunders—this murdered synthesis—these incorrect literary productions are found in the historic portion of the book. Who wrote the historic portion? Solomon Spaulding, a graduate(?) of Dartmouth? Is it a fact that such illiterate, ignorant words, phrases and sentences of such unusual verbosity, are the production of the classic(?) brain of a graduate of Dartmouth college? Just think of such words and phrases as "the more part," "it supposeth me," etc., originating with the well-moulded, rounded-out mind of a graduate of Dartmouth! Compare these inaccuracies of Spaulding's with the eloquence, wisdom and accomplishments of Nelson Dingley, leader in the House of Representatives, who also graduated from Dartmouth, classed in high rank, as scholar and debater, in 1855.

Dartmouth holds back the "sheepskin" from such a student as would cause his associates to brand his Alma Mater with such "bungling absurdities" and kill the reputation of its faculty,

No, the fact is, the prophecy is true, the things written are mocked by the gentiles.

A great ado is made over the statement of the book, that the language of the Jaredite colony to this continent was not confounded. "And it came to pass that the brother of Jared did cry unto the Lord, and the Lord had compassion upon their friends and their families also, and they were not confounded."—Ether 1: 9 large edition. "There," says the school of opposition, "is a contradiction to the Bible statement which says, 'Therefore is the name of it called Babel; because the Lord did there confound the language of all the earth.'"—Gen. 11: 9.

While the Bible affirms the confusion of the language which the earth used, our opponents try to make it appear that every individual was also confounded. But it is not fair to the dialect of Scripture, to argue from this, that every single man, woman and child had their language individually and indiscriminately confused. The word "confound" is from the Hebrew balal, and signifies to mix, to mingle. So the language of the earth was mixed or mingled. Not a total confusion of individual tongues, but a confusing of the prior clearness with respect to speech.

We are told in the tenth chapter of Genesis that the descendants of Japheth, of Ham, and of Shem were divided "after their families, after their tongues, in their lands after their nations." Is it not very significant to find them described as peopling the earth "after their tongues," and this description given before the one language of all the earth was confused? The statement is made anticipatively for the multiplicity of tongues (plural) existed after the confusion at Babel. Hitherto or before that, the whole earth was of one language and one speech (Gen. 11: 1), and the descendants of Shem, Ham and Japheth being divided "after their tongues" and after their families, argues quite strongly that the confusion of language was systematic and orderly, and that families' tongues were not confused.

The Rev. W. Fraser, LL. D., says on this point, "It would have been inconsistent with the method of divine government, so far as we can judge, to introduce a multitude of dialects, and make each man unintelligible to his companion; and it appears from the record itself that the confusion was orderly or regulated."—"Blending Lights," page 255. Seeing then, that the non-confusion of the Jaredite tongue is so probable, if not possible and certain, where is the ground for such a colossal objection and denial.

Again, we are told that the book is false, for it states that Lehi's company, on leaving Jerusalem came into "the wilderness in the borders which are nearer the Red Sea * * * and pitched his tent by the side of a river of water, and they called the river Laman and it emptied into the Red Sea."—1 Nephi 1: 19, 20-22, and it is alleged no river can be found emptying into the Red Sea from the Jerusalem side. Suppose the river named cannot be found at the present time, does that prove that such a stream of water did not exist six hundred years, B. C., or upwards of twenty-five hundred years ago.

We read of cities existing at that period of the world, in both sacred and profane history, yet they do not now live, save on the gilded page. The terrestrial disturbances of 600 years B. C., and subsequent periods, it is very probable, changed the face of things, and especially in Asia Minor. In the year 464 B. C., there happened the most dreadful earthquake that had ever been known; in several places the country was entirely swallowed up." In the year 373 B. C., "a great shock did fearful damage for Greece during the night; the inhabitants of the Peloponnesus waited for the morning. Dawn showed that the two beautiful cities of Bura and Helice were no more. The sea rolled above. Long after, on calm, clear days, Helice, once an inland town, could be seen at the bottom of the Corinthian Gulf, silent and beautiful in its marble ruins." "By the same shock the lake in Oomi, in Japan, was created."

In 217 B. C., cities in Italy fell and lakes and streams were "tumbled from their beds." "In the year 115 A. D., during the reign of Emperor Trajan, an earthquake threw down mountains, turned rivers from their courses, new streams were created, old ones disappeared" throughout Asia Minor. In the year 1202, "All the cities of the Mediterranean coast were shaken to pieces. The valleys of Lebanon were upheaved and altered throughout their whole extent."

Indeed, in our own country, "during the year 1663, many streams were dried up, and the channels in which some had run were so altered as to be unrecognizable," by the earthquake at that period in New England. (See "Great Disasters in the World's History," page 480." If, then, Asia Minor has been the victim of such extraordinary change in its physical as well as all other features, why may not the wondrous change explain the absence (if it is a fact) of the "river Laman?"

Smith's Bible Dictionary says, "The land about the head of the gulf [of Suez] has risen and that near the Mediterranean become depressed. The head of the gulf has, consequently, retired gradually since the Christian Era." (Peloubet edition, page 556.) May not the same cause which contributed to "retire" the gulf and raise the land, be the explanation as to why the river Laman has retired? Besides this, we must allow some changes to occur by reason of the curse which was to "make your land desolate."—Lev. 26: 39. The book affirms that such a stream of water existed six hundred years B. C. and it devolves upon the school of the opposition to prove that it did not then exist.

Another proof that the sealed book, unsealed, is fraudulent, is the statement that the inhabitants of this continent possessed a monetary system, and coins of specific denominations and value are named, as "a senuim of gold, a seon of gold, a shum of gold and a limnah of gold. A senuim of silver, an annor of silver, an ezrom of silver and an ont of silver" (Alma 8:38, 39), together with comparative value. And yet, with all of the ancient American research, in all the antiquarian findings, diggings, explorations and discoveries, not one piece of money, gold or silver, has been exhumed to attest the truthfulness of the narrative.

Well, if that be true, we want you to notice how the failure to bring up coins attests the truth of the statement with more force and convincing logic than to succeed in finding them. Remember Jesus has said, "This, I have told you, before it came to pass, that when it comes to pass ye may believe." And we call your attention to a prophecy of the sealed book, unsealed, which is strikingly against the disclosure of ancient American money—as money.

In the eighty-fifth year of the Judges of the ancient American Israelitish nation, the people waxed strong in wickedness and pride. They were false at heart; lost their steadfastness; forgot God, who prospered them in silver, gold and all manner of precious things, and who delivered them out of the hands of enemies. They did not desire God to rule and reign over them; they set at nought the counsels of God and were "quick to do all manner of iniquity."

On the other hand the prophet tells them of the goodness and power of God; that at his command even the dust of the earth moveth hither and thither, the hills and mountains quake, "and if he say to the waters of the great deep, Be thou dried up, it is done. And if he say unto this mountain, Be thou raised up, and come over and fall upon that city that it be buried up, behold it is done." "And behold, if a man hide up a treasure in the earth, and the Lord shall say, Let it be accursed, because of the iniquity of him who hath hid it up, behold it shall be accursed; and if the Lord shall say, Be thou accursed that no man shall find thee from this time henceforth and forever, behold no man getteth it henceforth and forever."—Helaman 5:51-54.

The foregoing is a prophecy of Nephi in the 85th year of the Judges. In the 86th year the people still remained in wickedness, and so great were their sins, and so widespread their abominations, that Samuel, a Lamanite prophet, came among them preaching repentance, and predicted a curse upon the land, and a part of the prophecy is an affirmation of Nephi's, before quoted.

Samuel, without qualification, prophesies "that whoso shall hide up treasures in the earth, shall find them again no more because of the great curse of the land, save he be a righteous man, and shall hide it up unto the Lord, for I will, saith the Lord, that they shall hide up their treasures unto me; and cursed be they who hide not up their treasures unto me; for none hideth up their treasures unto me, save if be the righteous; and he that hideth not up his treasures unto me, cursed is he, and also the treasure, and none shall redeem it, because of the curse of the land. And the day shall come that they shall hide up their treasures because they have set their hearts upon riches; and because they have set their hearts upon their riches, I will hide up their treasures when they shall flee before their enemies; because they will not hide them unto me, cursed be they and also their treasures."—Helaman 5:13, 14.

This prophecy discloses the fact that "wickedness shall not deliver those that are given to it" (Ecc. 8:8), and even their "riches," "treasures," "silver and gold," were "cursed," "hid away," and unredeemable henceforth. Hence, when the ability to disembody the "treasures" (riches) of the people on this continent, is foiled, another evidence of the divinity of the record is added to the long roll. For the terms of the prophecy are clear and unambiguous, that because of wickedness and abomination the "land should be cursed," and the "riches" or "treasures" of the people shall never be found.

It is not to be considered marvelous then, if with all the archaeological findings, buried cities, temples, glyphs, statues, ornate instruments, astronomical instruments, coal-slate tablets, gateways with hinges, platforms and porches made of single stone, bronze, copper, tin, lead, gold and silver, etc., there has been no money, "treasure," coins. All "hid" by the Lord, says the book, and "found no more," because of the curse which was pronounced upon the "land," "people," and "treasure."

In the archaeological explorations of Bible lands, coins have been brought to light, of great antiquity, the Egyptian, Assyrian, Roman, the copper coin of Cossyra, and the Tyrian coin. All these have been urged against the skeptic as monumental evidences in favor of the divinity of the Bible. But suppose the Almighty should have pronounced against the finding of their coin, and none had ever been exhumed, would not that fact, coupled with such statement, be urged just as strongly in the faces of the infidels? Yet that is precisely the case with the sealed book unsealed.

"For it shall come to pass in that day [the day in which the book comes forth] that the churches which are built up, and not unto the Lord, when the one shall say unto the other, Behold, I, I am the Lord's; and the other shall say, I, I am the Lord's. And thus shall everyone say, that hath built up churches and not unto the Lord; and they shall contend one with another; and their priests shall contend one with another; and they shall teach with their learning, and deny the Holy Ghost, which giveth utterance."—2 Nephi 12:3, 4, large edition).

This prophecy foretelling the religious condition of professed Christendom, when it should come to the English speaking world, is like all the prophetic terms of the Book of Mormon—clear and unequivocal. The multiplicity of churches existent then and now, are not built up unto the Lord, else they would exist according to the Lord's pattern, be built by commandment of God; would progress by inspiration of the Holy Ghost, to be legitimate and divine. They each say to the other "I am the Lord's," "I am right, you are wrong."

Even the buildings wherein they execute their ceremonial, formal, powerless and spiritless worship, are dedicated "to us and us alone"—clearly not unto the Lord. The spirit of the "golden rule," which found a bottom stone in the foundation of the lowly Redeemer's religion, finds no place in these superstructures built up "not unto the Lord." "Closed doors" is the inscription hitherto, upon the portals of these buildings. Could we enumerate the number of times the popular Babylonian seal has been attached to these sepulchres—the stone of seclusion rolled to the entrance—since the above prophecy was given to the world in 1830, we would perhaps stand astonished.

Even the poor to whom the message of life is especially sent, are overlooked, not recognized, because unable to pay pew rent. If the popular societies were "built up unto the Lord" they would conform to the Lord's way, and he says, "the poor have the gospel preached unto them." (Matt. 11:5). "The priests," leaders and representatives do "teach with their learning," and they do "deny the Holy Ghost which giveth utterance," and which Jesus says "shall teach you all things," "shall take of the things of the father and show them unto you."—John 14:26; 15:26; 16:13, 18.

Present the leaders of these churches with the doctrine of Christ—"the laying on of hands" for the gift of the Holy Ghost—and note how quick they will deny it. Present the spiritual gifts, as laid down by Paul, to be in the church which is "built up unto the Lord" in our day, see how quick they will deny it. Bring to their notice the account of "signs following the believer," or being done in our day, and mark how quick they are to deny it. Preach to them the doctrine of continued and immediate revelation by the Holy Ghost and watch the fulfillment of this prophecy: "For behold, at that day shall he (Satan, devil) rage in the hearts of the children of men, and stir them up to anger against that which is good." (v. 18). For a vindication of this item of prophecy we cite you to the war of opposition waged against the Book of Mormon from the time it was given to the world, and a little while before, until the present.

When the bard of Israel saw "truth spring out of the earth," he exclaims, "The Lord will give that which is good, and our land will yield her increase." (Ps. 85). The Book of Mormon declares, by prophecy, that when "truth shall spring out of the earth," "Satan or the devil, will gain entrance to the hearts of the children of men and stir them up to anger against that which is good." The Book of Mormon, the latter day work, promises "good" to the house of Israel, and also the righteous among the gentiles, and the devil and his emissaries are "stirred up to anger against it."

How did the youthful translator of the book, who was surrounded with the religious sentiments of "The millennium is being ushered in" (when Satan would be no longer at liberty, would be bound by a strong angel), "Morality and religion are flooding the earth," "We will all recline under our own vine and fig tree, mortals and immortals dwelling together, none daring to molest us, or make us afraid." (See Hist. Disciples, Hayden, p. 185): I ask, how did the boy, educated into the teachings of these sentiments, know the devil would wage such a relentless warfare "against that which is good?"

To thus reverse the sentiments of the time and commit himself to a prophecy directly opposed to the teachings of the day, with probabilities against its fulfillment, is a little more than human or boyish sagacity. See the vindication of this item of prophecy down at Hiram, Ohio, in 1831, with the introduction of the restored gospel at that point, Satan was so stirred "up against that which was good" that he took possession of the hearts of a company of religious(?) people who, failing to down the doctrine by argument, was so "angered" they stepped over the limits of constitutional rights and applied some "tar and feathers." Right here in this goodly land of ours where the rights to worship God, discuss doctrine, preach the word, and receive protection, has come down to us sanctified by the blood of revolutionary fathers; even here did the prophecy before us receive vindication.

They preached nothing but "good," as is attested by "History of the Disciples," page 252. "It [Mormonism] then [1831] gave no sign of moral abomination" say they. Oh no, 'twas "good" and the devil raged in their hearts and through them opposed it. Ministers of later date may gloat over the event and parade the good character of the actors therein, but this infringement upon the rights of men, this stab of the noblest sentiments of the great Christian religion, this strike at the consecrated charter of human liberty, has stamped upon the brow of those pious(?) and devotional(?) men what they would do if they could stand invested with prerogatives of law making "unto others as they wish others to do unto them?" "And others will be pacify, and lull them into carnal security, that they will say, All is well in Zion; yea, Zion prospereth, all is well."

Kind reader, when this prophecy is touched by the proper interpretation, it predicts the most popular song to be found on all the sectarian keyboard—that which is preached to the people and voiced to the congregations of the twentieth century in polished tongue and rolling instrumentation—the delusive, the siren song, the phrasing of which is "the world is growing better, growing better every day," or in the prophetic terms, "Zion prospereth; all is well in Zion." The book discerns that this sentiment would be prevalent in the day when its words would be revealed and that old Satan would be the author of such deceptive sentiment.

Comparing this with the lesson found in the stick of Judah—the Bible—we see in inspired words that false prophets have in the misty past seduced the world by flaunting the banner of "peace" when it perched not in any quarter. The Lord says (Ezek. 13:10) of those who "see vanity" and "divine lies," "They have seduced my people, saying, peace; and there was no peace." False prophets or teachers the devil inspires to deceive by educating to the theory that "all is well in Zion," "yea, Zion prospereth." The Bible denominates the principle "seduction" and that is one of the chief wiles of the enemy of all righteousness. The Bible predicts the "right about face"—just the grand opposite of the "world-growing-better theory:

"As it was in the days of Noah, so shall it be in the days of the coming of the Son of man."—Matt. 24:37. "Because iniquity shall abound [be abundant, increase], the love of many shall wax cold."—Matt. 24:12. "Evil seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived."—2 Tim. 3:13. "In the latter days perilous [dangerous] times shall come."—2 Tim. 3:1. "The earth also, is defiled under the inhabitants thereof; * * * therefore is the earth burned up and few men left."—Isa. 24:5, 6. Both the Bible and Book of Mormon condemn the popular delusion that "the world is growing better" or that it will be converted before Jesus comes.

Satan's wiles and craft is further predicted and denounced as involving the usual unscriptural and unphilosophical tenet of "faith alone," "only have faith," "simply believe." There is nothing in all the world calculated to "lull men away into carnal security" with so little burden to conscience as the adoption of this delusive dogma. Salvation and rewards in a future world are based upon "good works," "good deeds" being performed. "I know his commandments are life everlasting."—John 12:50. "And behold, I come quickly and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be." "Blessed are they that do his commandments."—Rev. 22:12, 14.

By doing his commandments comes the transformation of character, the development of nobility of spirit, magnanimity of soul, the putting on of the divine nature, the moulding of disposition and the manifestation of the "new man in Christ Jesus," without which a passport through the "gates" of gold into the beautiful city cannot be obtained.

The arch enemy seeks to have men lose their reward and salvation—going about seeking whom he may devour—by foisting these deceptive teachings upon the world that "he may thus cheat their souls and lead them away carefully down to hell." Satan is very crafty. "And behold, others he flattereth away and telleth them there is no hell; and he saith unto them, I am no devil, for there is none."—par. 10. How strange it seems to read the above prophecy in the sealed book unsealed as to the infidelity of the times when the words come forth and hear as well as see the fulfillment thereof in the decrease of faith in the great world almost every day.

This could not have been the product of Joseph Smith, Sidney Rigdon or Solomon Spaulding, for before the everlasting gospel was recommitted they were enveloped and permeated in and by an atmosphere of fire, flames and demons. They were educated religiously under the "horns," "cloven feet" and two-time fork of creedology in the hands of sectarianism, and were accustomed to smell brimstone in the air and listen to the deafening wails of captive souls in fiery torment after the popular sermons of their day were delivered.

But the angel restored message reversed this sentiment in the convictions of Mr. Smith and S. Rigdon and moulded their lives in the justice of God's dealings. The sagacity of the youthful translator of the Book of Mormon would have led him to incorporate a different reading into that book. If he had been an impostor he would never have jeopardized his future success and glory by predicting such a departure from the only method a majority of churches had, to convert (?) the masses and augment their following. But faithfully translating the records of the primitive inhabitants of America, he gives the English speaking world the prophecy before us, which since its revelation has received ample vindication.

The Universalists say, "there is no hell" and all the punishment men will ever receive is in this life. The Universalists say, "there is no devil." The Christian Scientists say, "there is neither hell nor devil." The Re-incarnationists say, "there is no hell, there is no devil." The Spiritualists say, "there is no hell, there is no devil," and about time certified by St. Paul when Satan comes with "all power, signs and lying wonders, and with all deceivableness in them that perish" (2 Thess.), millions will have adopted the seductive dogma—"there is no devil."

If the denials to the old gentleman's existence now is not sufficient to demonstrate the divinity of the prophecy before us, surely at that time when nations enlist under his fiery banner and pay for the ticket to his Saturnalia after the tedious march with blood, tears and death, Armageddon will furnish a preponderance. For "the kings of the earth" with their armies are to be identified with this negative movement, and the three unclean spirits "have already raised the issue—"there is no devil"—and are far on the way of engulfing the myriads who "receive not the truth."

THEY TALK DEBATE.

Editor Ensign.—Sometime during last April Bro. Matheny, of Bellair, Illinois, wrote me about one, Rev. Brown, of the Christian church, lecturing against the Latter Day Saints at that place, attempting to make quite a stir in regard to the position held by the Saints on Mark 16, and 1 Corinthians 12.

They expressed themselves as wanting to debate our people on some of the differences named. On April 26th, I sent them two propositions which were acknowledged by Mr. Brown as being logical and fair, and properly representing the difference between us. Rev. Brown asked for a week or ten days time in order to write to Rev. J. B. Neal, of Kentucky, to get him to hold the debate, as he did not care to meet me himself. Time asked for was granted, but I urged Rev. Brown to secure Clark Braden if possible as I would rather meet him on account of his ability and notoriety.

I waited three times ten days before I heard from Mr. Brown, and was informed that Rev. T. H. Popplewell had been chosen to meet me, and the propositions would be signed and sent me in a few days. Again I wrote them that Popplewell would do, but I was sorry that they had failed in getting Braden, and urged upon them to try him once more. I told them to make up a purse and offer it to Mr. Braden, and I could guarantee their success, as I believed he would debate any one if there was money enough in it. I put in another long wait, and presently they sent me from Elder Popplewell a new set of propositions, three of which involved our church, and one the Christian church.

I at once wrote them asking if they wanted it to go out to the public that they had gone back on themselves, having now been converted to my side of the issue. If that was true I had no disposition to further crowd the issue upon them for debate; but would drop it if they would say in writing that they were converted to my side of the two propositions which had been agreed upon before.

In answer to this I was informed that Rev. Brown would sign the two propositions for his church, provided I would change the wording of the first one a little. This I readily agreed to and forwarded the same to them yesterday, telling Rev. Brown he was at liberty to secure any of his ministers to do his debating, just so they came endorsed as accredited representatives of their faith. But I still urged upon him to get Mr. Braden if possible.

I understand Braden has gone from Dan to Beersheba in his church to secure endorsements of himself, which will soon be placed before the public in pamphlet form. It will certainly be a pleasure to know that Braden has secured endorsements to the effect that he is an accredited representative of the faith taught by the followers of Alexander Campbell. We will soon learn from this "much endorsed man" just what the Campbellite creed is.

We promise the Campbellite church now, that when Braden is endorsed as "sound in the faith as they hold and teach it," that we propose to put into print the Campbellite creed from manuscript and writing we have in our hands from Braden, their creed maker.

They have attempted to "ride in" on a false hobby by saying, "that they speak where the Bible speaks, and are silent where the Bible is silent." They have completely failed to ride in upon that hobby, when meeting the Latter Day Saints in debate. It is gratifying to the Saints, if to no one else, to learn that there is a shadow of hope of getting Braden saddled up with endorsements from his fraternity that he is an accredited representative, and sound in the faith as the followers of Alexander Campbell hold and teach it, in order to make a creed campaign for the so-called Christian church. We welcome Braden to the list of "creed makers," and hope the Campbellite church may profit by the experience.

I. N. WHITE.
INDEPENDENCE, Mo., June 25.

TOMB OF THE QUEEN OF AMERICA.

Allegheny, Pa., June 7.—The institutions of learning and archaeological societies of Pennsylvania are much interested in the news that an English institute has appointed a committee, consisting of nine delegates, to make a trip to this country for the purpose of deciphering the inscription on the tombs which have been unearthed in western Pennsylvania.

It is now two years or more since these excavations began, and the excitement which they aroused to fever heat has not died down in archaeological societies. What was before a matter of interest has become one of intense curiosity, and instead of solving itself by modern methods of hieroglyphics, the strange writing remains as impenetrable as ever.

It has been ascertained beyond question that three thousand years ago there lived in the country, now known as the western part of Pennsylvania, and the eastern part of Ohio, a beautiful woman who ruled this vast territory as its queen. There is record of her in the ancient mounds, and there are references to her in the archaeological findings of Northwestern New York, yet who she was, what she was, of what race, color, style or description, there is no record other than that to be gathered from her ashes and those of her husband, which were found standing in the urn by her side.

That this queen was tall, and that she was pretty are known. Her skeleton is long and symmetrical, and her fingers taper toward the tips like those of an artist. It is likely that she was talented and loved beauty, for all the details attending the tomb are those of a woman whose taste for the beautiful was well developed.

When the remains of this queen were discovered, all the credit was given Professors Gerredette and Harper; the former of the Carnegie Museum, and the latter, a well known scientist of the state. But, since then, the work of excavation has been carried on by others until traces of the mysterious queen have been found as far north as Buffalo, on Lake Erie, and as far west and further than Cleveland.

The theory is that once upon a time, probably about three thousand years ago, there lived here a queen, not an Indian as we now know the Indians, but a queen of a pre-historic race. This personage owned and ruled the vast tract of country extending from Buffalo to Pittsburg, and from Allegheny about to Sandusky. This gave her a vast square tract of land which could not have been traversed, in the methods of those days, in less than three weeks of travel north and south, and over which the queen probably traveled not more than once a year.

That she divided her time between the north and south of the country is proven by the inscriptions found on the tablets of the north. One, deeply buried and discovered on the shores of Lake Erie, told a story, it is presumed, of triumph, for it is exquisitely decorated with immense leaves, something like the laurels of today. Another in the southwest, just east of Columbus, told a tale of sorrow, for it had inscriptions which in all the tablets of those days spoke of woe.

But by far the most important of all are the excavations which have been made near Pittsburg and which at the time attracted so much attention. The hieroglyphics have never been fully deciphered, nor have the puzzles of their buried state been solved, but the tracery was so important and so positive that it left little room for doubt on the important details.

The story, as now believed, is that the queen who traveled so constantly from north to south, found at last that the country was not suited to her and to her people. As early as three thousand years ago oil began bubbling from the ground and when the people dug for stone they found instead, a curious black substance too brittle to be used for building and too dirty to be handled. It was coal, but little did they know its value.

The queen desiring to find a new and better country, traveled further south and west each time, ever on the search.

On one of these expeditions it is presumed that the queen was taken ill and that she died before she could be taken home. The mound which holds her remains has no traces of her personal possessions or of her clothing, such as they used to bury with

"INCURABLE" HEART DISEASE SOON CURED.

BY THE GREAT SPECIALIST IN TREATING WEAK AND DISEASED HEARTS, FRANKLIN MILES, M. D., LL. B., WHO WILL SEND $2.50 WORTH OF HIS COMPLETE SPECIAL TREATMENT FREE TO ANY AFFLICTED READER.

To demonstrate the unusual curative powers of his new and complete special treatment for heart disease, short breath, pain in the side, oppression in the chest, irregular pulse, palpitation, smothering spells, pulling of the ankles or droopy, Dr. Miles will send free to every afflicted person, two dollars and a half worth of his new treatment.

It is the result of twenty-four years of careful study, extensive research, and remarkable experience in treating the various ailments of the heart, stomach and bowels, which so often complicate each case. So astonishing are the results of his complete special treatment in most cases, that he does not hesitate to freely offer all patients a trial free.

Certainly nothing could be more generous—more philanthropic. Few physicians have such confidence in their remedies. And there is no reason why every afflicted person should not avail themselves of this exceedingly liberal offer, as they may never have another such an opportunity. No death comes more sudden than that from heart disease.

Mrs. Frank Smith, of Chicago, was cured of heart dropsy after five leading physicians had given her up. A thousand references to, and testimonials from Bishops, Clergymen, Bankers, Farmers, and their wives will be sent free on request. These include many who have been cured after from five to fifteen physicians and professors had pronounced them incurable.

Send at once to Franklin Miles, M. D., corner State and Adams streets, Chicago, for free treatment before it is too late, and please mention name of this paper.

the dead, nor are there any of her household implements. No, the queen died unexpectedly, and in a way not in her calculations.

When the scientists broke open the mound and came upon the bones they were touched at the pathetic sight; for, in the arms of the woman was tightly clutched a child, a tender infant not over a few weeks old, and around the child was wrapped a thin sheet of stone, delicate as though a bit of cloth or the skin of an animal had petrified there.

The queen and her baby had been buried together, and at her feet stood an urn, a great handsome thing, probably that of her husband, for none but he could lie so near the queen in death. Around her lay many large skeletons, probably of her braves who died after her and were buried as an ever silent body-guard.

The English societies have read of this remarkable find, and after much thought and delay, have decided to send delegates over to investigate it, hoping to be able to read the tablets which have baffled Americans. It is likely, from the difficulty of deciphering them, that they are planned on the Chinese method of appointing a sign or character for each word. But that has yet to be determined. Meanwhile our ever interesting country receives an added note of interest.—The St. Joseph (Mo.) Weekly Herald, June 21.

Oil Cure For Cancer.

Dr. Bye has discovered a combination of oils that readily cure cancer, catarrh, tumors and malignant skin diseases. He has cured thousands of persons within the last six years, over one hundred of whom were physicians. Readers having friends afflicted should cut this out and send it to them. Book sent free giving particulars and prices of Oils. Address Dr. Bye, Drawer N, Kansas City, Missouri.

Roberts is Fined.

Salt Lake, U., June 24.—In the case of B. H. Roberts, found guilty of unlawful cohabitation, the judgment of the court was that he pay a fine in the sum of $150, or in lieu thereof that he be imprisoned in the county jail for a period of 150 days.

A thirty-days stay was granted in order that the defendant might file a bill of exception.—The Kansas City Journal, June 25th.

The head of the recent Philippine commission, in his report to the President on the status of the islands, recommended that the christian denominations of this country should unite their efforts, and if they sent missionaries to the islands, should see that they were all of the same denomination. "The multiplicity of denominations among the Protestants," said this gentleman, "is a source of perplexity and confusion to the unsophisticated islanders who imagine that Methodists, Presbyterians, Baptists and others are really of different religions." At the time, it was freely predicted that no attention would be paid at all to the gentleman's recommendation, and the actions of several religious bodies in making preparations to be represented in our new insular possessions, have demonstrated how little practicality there was in Mr. Schurman's advice. Only last week a Methodist Conference in Philadelphia adopted a paper which was virtually a call for volunteer missionaries to go to the Philippine Islands. Similar action has been taken by several Methodist bodies and by the authorities of other denominations, and it is safe to predict that within the next three years every large denomination in this country will be represented by missionaries among the islanders.—St. Louis Christian Advocate, May 2, 1900.

Don't Drink Ice-Cold Water.

Ice-cold water is not so good as iced water—that is, water cooled by ice without coming in contact with it. The less of either the better. It is an excellent practice to drink water—an abundance of it—just before retiring, also the first thing in the morning. It is a cleanser of the system, and is a good diuretic.—July Ladies' Home Journal.

A CARD.

To the Saints who do not know me I wish to say, I have been in the real estate business for about fifteen years in Jackson county, Missouri. I am well acquainted with values, know where to locate the brethren better than one who has not had experience. I know all about values; I know a bargain and am in position to advise. And I wish to say there are other Latter Day Saints here who are in the real estate business. Now, if you are not afraid of your brethren, please call and see them when in independence, or write them. I will give you for reference any honorable person with whom I have ever done business, or any business man in Independence, banker or merchant; also Brn. Wm. Crick; Joseph Luff; H. B. Mills; J. W. Luff, Business Manager of the Evening Publishing House; W. H. Garrott, Editor of the ENSIGN; I. N. White of the Twelve; Alfred White, missionary. I do all this to show you that Latter Day Saints can be honorable in real estate business as well as any other business. W. S. LOAN.

Broken Brick-a-Brace.

Mr. Major, the famous cement man of New York, explains some very interesting facts about Major's Cement. The multitudes who use this standard article know that it is many hundred per cent better than other cements for which similar claims are made, but a great many do not know why. The simple reason is that Mr. Major uses the best materials and the best methods of manufacture. He does not use them, because they are too expensive and do not allow large profits. Mr. Major tells us that one of the elements of his cement costs $8.75 a pound, and another costs $2.65 a gallon, while a large share of the so-called cements and liquid glue upon the market are nothing more than sixteen-cent glue dissolved in water or chloride, and in some cases, altered slightly in color and odor by the addition of cheap and useless materials. Major's Cement retails at fifteen cents and twenty-five cents a barrel, and when a dealer tries to sell a substitute you can depend upon it that his only object is to make larger profit. The profit on Major's Cement is as much as any dealer ought to make on any cement. And this is doubly true in view of the fact that each dealer gets the benefit of the benefit of Mr. Major's advertising, which now amounts to over $5,000 a month throughout the country. Established in 1876. Insist on having Major's. Don't accept any off-hand advice from a druggist. If you are at all handy (and you will be likely to find that you are a good deal more so than you imagine) you can repair your rubber boots and leather shoes, and any other rubber and leather articles, with Major's Rubber Cement and Major's Leather Cement. And you will be surprised at how many dollars a year you will thus save. If your druggist cannot supply you, it will be forwarded by mail; either kind. Free of postage.

CONFERENCE MINUTES.

The Northwestern Kansas district conference was held at Scranton, Kansas, June 9th. Phineas Cadwell was chosen president; Bro. M. T. Short, assistant, and James W. Burns, clerk.

Thirty minutes was given for prayer and testimony and the time was well occupied. Ministry reporting: High Priest, Phineas Cadwell. Seventy, M. T. Short. Elders, Samuel Twombly, district president, Wm. Gurwell, A. L. Gurwell, James W. Hudgens, of the missionary force, J. B. Jarvis, Henry Green, Wm. Menzies. Elders, Alexander Cherry, James Baillie, Robert Warnock. Priests, John Cairns, Harry Thomas, Charles Tillinghast.

A paper on "The Benefits of an Organization," by Harry Thomas, and an essay on "Duties of Parents to Children," by Wm. S. Hodson were read. Wm. S. Hodson, the assistant district superintendent, having moved to the Western Kansas district, tendered his resignation and F. J. Pierce was chosen in his place.

The chairman was empowered to appoint a committee to prepare a program for next convention. He appointed Sr. Lillie Munns, of Netawaka, James Baillie, of Scranton, and James W. Burns, of Atchison.

We agreed to meet the day before, at the place of next conference. At 7:30 p. m. the Scranton School gave an entertainment which was both elevating, instructive and interesting.

Adjourned to meet at time and place designated. JAMES W. BURNS, Dist. clerk.

P. S.—The Fanning Sunday School report, and also the treasurer's report were overlooked, we regret.

The following schools reported: Charter Oak, Des Moines Valley, Okatoosa, Incolte, Clear Creek, Des Moines, Head Grove, Grinnell, Perry Hope, Eden, Boonesboro, and What Cheer. Most of the schools show an increase in attendance, and several new schools have been organized since last convention, which is encouraging to those in charge.

The matter of Sunday School libraries was presented by the secretary and a communication read from the general librarian in compliance with which, request a district librarian was elected, Sr. Mattie Hughes being the choice.

Treasurer's report shows amount on hand February 11, $6.80; June 8, $15.95.

The question, "What good, if any, has the district association done your school?" was discussed by Sr. Mattie Hughes, Superintendent H. A. McCoy, Elders C. E. Hand, J. F. McDowell, D. M. Rudd and Geo. Shimel.

Adjourned to meet the day previous and at the same place as the next conference, which, it was decided later, will be during our reunion at Colfax, in September.

BESSY RICHESON, Sec. STATE CENTRE, Ia., June 20.

St. Louis District Reunion. Arrangements have been made for holding our district reunion August 2d to 12th inclusive.

We have secured the use of Normandy Grove, a beautiful place for holding such meetings. Conditions were such as to render it inadvisable to again secure the use of Ramona Park, but so far as we can now see, Normandy Grove is much better adapted in almost every way for our purpose. It is located on the Suburban street car line, about eight miles from the city, two miles from Wellston. Fare from the city this year only 10 cents.

Tents to be furnished for the entire ten days, put up and taken down, 10x12, $1.10; 12x14, $1.50. Those desiring tents will please write Bro. J. E. Dawson, 2510 Garrison Ave. He will arrange for you a tent. Cots and camp chairs same as last year, 25 and 10 cents respectively. Arrangements have also been made to conduct an eating house for the benefit of those coming. The same will be in charge of the reunion committee, 15 cents per meal, seven for $1.00. This for the accommodation of those who do not wish to do their own cooking. Extra tents will be arranged for those who only want to stay one or two evenings, charging so much per day, probably about 15 cents per night or less.

We expect two or three speakers from abroad, and it is to be hoped that every Saint in the district who can possibly arrange to come without too much inconvenience, will be present. If there are difficulties in the way that we could consistently remove, write us. Possibly we can help you out. Please advise about the tent as soon as possible.

Very Respectfully, ARTHUR ALLEN, J. E. DAWSON, J. C. HITCHCOCK. } Com. 2511 Slattery St., St. Louis, Mo. July 2.

Oklaoma Reunion. The fourth annual reunion of the Oklaoma mission will be held in W. D. Frakes' grove, four miles east and two and one-half miles south of Hennessy, Oklahoma, August 3-12.

Present indications are that this will be by far the best and most largely attended of any reunion held in the mission. Arrangements are being made to furnish board to all at cost. Pasture for stock, straw for bedding, etc., will be arranged for.

Hennessy is on Rock Island R. R., sixty miles south of Caldwell, Kansas. Four passenger trains daily to Hennessy, two from north as follows: 11 a. m., 10:30 p. m.; from south, 6 a. m., 4:30 p. m.

Those coming by rail should notify the undersigned at Hennessy. Any information desired, write as below. Some visiting clergymen and Saints are expected.

Notice of Appointment of Bishop's Agent. DISTRICT OF MINNESOTA. The Saints and friends of the Reorganized Church in and for district of Minnesota please take notice that Bro. W. W. McLeod, bishop's agent, has duly resigned his position as agent in said district, and that by recommendation of the district conference Elder Florence D. Omans of Perham, Minn., has been appointed agent in his stead.

Bro. McLeod resigns the agency on account of his age and inability to travel in the district and perform the work necessary in the office. He has been a faithful and competent agent for a number of years. The Bishopric feel that he has done a creditable work and has faithfully cared for the finances of the church which have come into his hands. We extend special thanks to him for his aid to us in this work and also bespeak good word for the new agent, Elder Florence D. Omans. Trusting in the direction of the Lord in this work as in the past, I am, in behalf of the Bishopric,

Very Respectfully, E. L. KELLEY, Presiding Bishop. LAMONI, IOWA, June 20.

Two Days Meeting. There will be a two days meeting held in the Shelton branch, Central Nebraska district, on the 14th and 15th of July. It is expected that some of the general missionary force will be present to assist.

LEVI GAMET, Dist. Pres. WOLBACH, Neb., June 28.

Two days meetings will be held at the following named places, on dates named: Chicago, July 28th and 29th, in charge of J. M. Terry and Henry Southwick. Sandwich, August 4th and 5th, by Henry Southwick, Thos. Hougans and Frank Izatt.

Ladd, August 11th and 12th, by Henry Southwick and John Midgorden.

Misson, September 8th and 9th, by Henry Southwick, Henry Atkins and George Howard.

Cortland, September 29th and 30th, by John Midgorden and F. T. Haynes.

Wilmington, October 13th and 14th, by H. E. Moler and A. J. Keck.

By order of district conference. HENRY SOUTHWICK, J. MIDGORDEN, H. E. MOLER, } Com. SENECA, Ill., June 26.

ERRATA. In the middle of the fourth paragraph, page 7, issue of June 21st, in Bro. Deann's article, "The Pilgrims' Belief in Revelation," read "a misery much to be lamented," instead of a "nursery," etc.

Conference Notices. The Massachusetts district conference will convene August 11, 1900, at Silver Lake, Massachusetts. The above date is the second Saturday of the reunion, so we expect a large gathering, as both sessions of the work can be attended at the same expense.

As I expect to be away from home much of the time between now and the 1st of August, I would ask the branch clerks to kindly assist me by having their statistical reports with me not later than July 15, 1900.

Let as many as possible come to the reunion and remain to the conference. M. C. FISHER, Dist. clerk. 39 HUDSON ST., SOMERVILLE, MASS., July 2.

NOTICES. To the Saints of Northeast Texas and Choctaw district:—As our district conference convenes July 28th, at Manchester, Texas, we hope you all will feel a deep interest in this meeting, and as many attend as possible. We think there will be a good representation of the ministerial force present, so come prepared to stay three or four days if necessary. Bring the spirit of peace with you, and the result of our meeting will be favorable. I shall make a strong effort to be with you.

ELLIS SHORT, Bish. N. E. Texas and Choctaw Dist. KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 29.

The White Eagle branch will have meeting at Eliza, Ill., in the hall on Sunday, July 15th, and basket dinner; services at 10:30 a. m. and 2:30 p. m. and 8 p. m. Hope to see a large crowd, all are invited.

J. W. ADAMS, Dist. Pres. VIOLA, Ill., June 28.

To the ministry and Saints of the Gallands Grove district I wish to say that by the time this notice reaches you reader I will, by the help of God, be able to resume the discharge of my duties so far as correspondence is concerned. I will respond to calls for preaching as health and strength will permit. Any information with reference to the needs of the work and opportunities will be gladly received from Saints or friends. Bro. James M. Baker is still acting as assistant president of the district and will answer any communications addressed to him.

DIED. GRAINGER.—At Kansas City, Missouri, June 28, 1900, of measles and pneumonia fever, Harriet Elizabeth, infant daughter of Bro. and Sr. John C. Grainger, aged 17 months and 2 days. Interment at Union cemetery, June 29th, Bro. Joseph Emmett officiating.

KOEBLER.—At Kansas City, Missouri, June 17, 1900, from effects of measles, George Cleveland, infant son of Bro. and Sr. Fred Koebler, aged 10 months and 17 days. Funeral sermon by Elder Joseph Emmett; interment in Union cemetery, Kansas City, Missouri.

MAIR.—Drowned at Twin Lakes, Wisconsin, in a tub of water, June 1, 1900, Ida Gladys, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dave Mair, aged 1 year, 4 months, and 23 days. She had been absent but a short time when her grandma, Mrs. C. E. Weeks, who had cared for the child ever since its mother's death, missed her and found her dead.

BALD SPOTS With-out help, a bald spot never grows smaller. It keeps spreading, until at last your friends say, "How bald he is getting." Not easy to cure an old baldness, but easy to stop the first thinning, easy to check the first falling out. Used in time, baldness is made impossible with AYER'S HAIR VIGOR. It stops falling, promotes growth, and takes out all dandruff. It always restores color to faded or gray hair, all the dark, rich color of early life. You may depend upon it every time. It brings health to the hair. $1.00 a bottle. All Druggists. "I have used your Hair Vigor and am greatly pleased with it. I have only used one bottle of it, and yet my hair has stopped falling out and has started to grow again nicely." JUSTUS WYER, March 28, 1899. Canons, S. Dak. Write the Doctor. If you do not obtain all the benefits you expect from the use of the Vigor, write the Doctor about it. Address, Dr. J. C. Wyer, Lowell, Mass.

DR. PRICE'S CREAM Baking Powder

Dr. Price's Baking Powder is the true friend of all the people, rich and poor alike. It supplies a pure, wholesome leavening agent, which makes the biscuit and cake of highest healthfulness at medium cost and protects the food from alum, which is the greatest dietary danger of the day.

The foremost baking powder in all the world.

PRICE BAKING POWDER CO., CHICAGO.

NOTE.—Alum baking powders are low priced, as alum costs but two cents a pound; but alum is a corrosive poison and it renders the baking powder dangerous to use in food.

The Massachusetts district conference will convene August 11, 1900, at Silver Lake, Massachusetts. The above date is the second Saturday of the reunion, so we expect a large gathering, as both sessions of the work can be attended at the same expense. As I expect to be away from home much of the time between now and the 1st of August, I would ask the branch clerks to kindly assist me by having their statistical reports with me not later than July 15, 1900. Let as many as possible come to the reunion and remain to the conference. M. C. FISHER, Dist. clerk. 39 HUDSON ST., SOMERVILLE, MASS., July 2. NOTICES. To the Saints of Northeast Texas and Choctaw district:—As our district conference convenes July 28th, at Manchester, Texas, we hope you all will feel a deep interest in this meeting, and as many attend as possible. We think there will be a good representation of the ministerial force present, so come prepared to stay three or four days if necessary. Bring the spirit of peace with you, and the result of our meeting will be favorable. I shall make a strong effort to be with you. ELLIS SHORT, Bish. N. E. Texas and Choctaw Dist. KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 29. The White Eagle branch will have meeting at Eliza, Ill., in the hall on Sunday, July 15th, and basket dinner; services at 10:30 a. m. and 2:30 p. m. and 8 p. m. Hope to see a large crowd, all are invited. J. W. ADAMS, Dist. Pres. VIOLA, Ill., June 28. To the ministry and Saints of the Gallands Grove district I wish to say that by the time this notice reaches you reader I will, by the help of God, be able to resume the discharge of my duties so far as correspondence is concerned. I will respond to calls for preaching as health and strength will permit. Any information with reference to the needs of the work and opportunities will be gladly received from Saints or friends. Bro. James M. Baker is still acting as assistant president of the district and will answer any communications addressed to him. C. E. BUTTERWORTH, Dist. Pres. DOW CITY, IOWA, July 2. DIED. Of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

W. H. GARRETT, EDITOR.

Make all remittances, and address all communications to English Publishing House, Box B, Independence, Jackson County, Missouri.

New subscriptions can begin at any time. It is possible to avoid it, never send silver as it is liable to wear through the envelope and be lost. Always give the name of the post office to which your paper is sent or we can not find your name on our lists.

When desiring your address changed, give both the old and new address. Papers will be discontinued one month from the time subscriptions expire, unless ordered continued.

In making remittances, money orders are preferable for they are absolutely safe. If you can avoid it, do not send coin or stamps. Canadian stamps are an entire loss, and Canadian currency is only worth a minority cent on the dollar, so for that is all we can get for it at the banks.

Letters should be addressed, and orders and drafts made payable to

HOW ARE WE SEEKING?

The majority of those who live in what is held to be civilized nations, have a strong desire to improve their condition from a temporal standpoint. With the greatest number it is a struggle to meet the ordinary demands of life. The lesser number have a competence and some are beyond the point where they need to work, or to have any anxiety concerning how they shall provide for their recurring wants. But it does not seem to make any difference how much of this world's goods a man may possess, there is generally a desire manifest to increase the store, even if some one else has to be deprived and suffer in obtaining it.

It is an exceedingly unwise thing for any one who has acquired a sufficiency of this world's goods to place himself and family beyond the reach of poverty, to continue in the sordid pursuit of worldly wealth for his own selfish interests and aggrandizement. The Savior has said, "Where your treasure is, there will your heart be also" (Matt. 6: 21), and exhorted his hearers that they should lay up treasures in heaven, rather than upon the earth. One of the most mandatory commands of the Lord is, "Thou shalt have no other gods before me," and no one may violate this instruction without incurring a severe penalty; hence the foolishness of placing all one's energies in the acquisition of something which will bring condemnation in the obtaining because of a greater love for that which is perishable than for the Creator of all things.

Without question it is the paramount duty of every one to "seek first to build up the kingdom of God, and to establish his righteousness," for in so doing true riches are secured which shall never perish, and of which no one shall deprive him. Think for a moment of the import of this instruction of the Savior as found in Matthew 6; to build up the kingdom of heaven and establish the righteousness of God means, first of all, to honor and love Him above all things else; it is to love one another and to do unto others as we wish they should do to us under similar circumstances; it is to use every energy, faculty and power of our physical and spiritual being to promote peace, happiness and love among the children of men; it is to subdue every selfish propensity by which our own individual interests are enhanced, to the undoing and hurt of our brother; it is more: it means to cultivate a disposition to make sacrifice if necessary to aid the needy, those who have shown themselves as worthy, earnest and sincere in their deportment and efforts.

Christ the Lord did all of this and much more. Like the poor widow, He gave not only of that which He possessed, but He gave all that, as a man, he possessed, not even refusing to lay down His life to make it possible that through that sacrifice all might come forth in the resurrection; every one, whether they loved or hated Him; whether they believed on Him and followed Him, or whether they opposed His work and did everything in their power to make it a failure; every one, both great and small, will be resurrected. "As in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive." (1 Cor. 15: 22). Though "every man in his own order;" and thus it is shown that as "the disciple is not above his master, nor the servant above his lord," so every one who takes upon them the name of Christ, thereby covenants to also take upon them the character of Christ, and by doing the things which He did, to make themselves like Him.

Now, the question should present itself to every Saint, "How am I seeking to build up the kingdom of God and to establish His righteousness?" Through His servants He has declared, "Be ye clean." How is this command obeyed? There are some so unfortunately wedded to their idols, that notwithstanding God has said, "Tobacco is not for the body, neither for the belly, and is not good for man, but is an herb for bruises and all sick cattle" (D. & C. 86: 1), and again has said later, "Avoid the use of tobacco" (D. & C. 119: 3), yet will they not give up its use; and some men of fine qualifications and talents as workers in the establishment of righteousness, are debarred from service on that account; their weapons of warfare are rusting and cankered; their treasury is being depleted, and they are laying up for themselves a weight of woe in the time to come, simply because they will not comply with that which God has revealed as His will, to crucify their unnatural appetites and sacrifice a useless, filthy habit for the opportunity of being workers with God in building up His kingdom.

Others are placing barriers of different kinds to their progress, allowing themselves to be engrossed in worldly pleasures, some, at least, of which are sinful; not heeding the Lord's admonition, "Come out of her [Babylon], my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues" (Rev. 18: 4). Others are careless and indifferent, not realizing that they are thus preparing themselves for use in the hands of the adversary, the devil, who, the apostle says, "as a roaring lion, walketh about, seeking whom he may devour" (1 Pet. 5: 8), and in a moment of weakness may do some thing which will both disgrace himself and cast reproach on the name and cause of Christ. Some are willing to work actively providing they can have their own way, not being sufficiently humble and unselfish as to be subject to "the powers that be" in the church, and if they are not permitted to follow out their own plans, they do not work as willingly or cheerfully as they should if their eye was "single" to the glory of God. Happily there are but few of this class and they are growing less.

But the effort to "build up the kingdom of God and establish his righteousness" is not confined to spiritual lines alone; that is, to preaching the gospel and administering its ordinances. It should and must be employed in every business transaction by the Saints, whether such dealing is with Saint or sinner. A just weight; an honest, painstaking fulfilling of a contract; doing, in fact, exactly as Jesus would do, and as He would have you do, no matter whether you think it is appreciated or not, or whether you have been yourself treated unjustly. The gospel law does not say render evil for evil, but expressly says, "render good for evil;" and in doing this, no matter in what department of work your service may be assigned, "the kingdom of God" is being built up, and "His righteousness" is being established, at least so far as you are individually concerned, and the church is composed of individuals.

But seek ye first to build up the kingdom of God, and to establish his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you.—Matt. 6: 33, I. T.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

THE many friends of Elder C. E. Butterworth will be glad to learn that he is fast getting well. He was able to attend church twice last Sunday and if no backset comes upon him he will soon have strength to be about his duties.—Daw City (Ia.) Enterprise.

A SISTER asks if our offer to send our Historical Engraving for 25 cents when accompanied by subscription to the ENSIGN one year in advance, is still good. Our offer holds good until further notice, so send in your orders and subscriptions promptly; our small stock is rapidly diminishing.

Mrs. D. E. WILSON, Adel, Cascade county, Montana, who is not yet a member of the church, but is a reader of the ENSIGN and Church History expresses the hope that she may soon be able to meet with the Saints and hear an elder of the reorganized church preach, not having as yet had that privilege. She asks the Saints to pray for her.

BRO. W. A. PEARSON, Saffilo, Arkansas, earnestly requests the Saints to remember him in their prayers that he may be restored to health. A severe attack of typhoid fever two years ago has left him bedfast, and his family have had a hard struggle to obtain the necessities of life. The spirit of humble trust in the mercy of God in which his letter is written, evidences his worthiness. Let your petitions be offered in his behalf.

BRO. S. J. HINKLE has changed his address from Stillwater to Blackwell, Oklahoma Territory, where he should be addressed, until further notice. He desires the Oklahoma Saints to know that the funds in his hands for the support of the Lord's work are quite limited and he desires to urge upon the Saints the necessity of doing their duty in the payment of their tithes that the work may be carried forward to its accomplishment. All should respond promptly to this appeal.

THE editor acknowledges with thanks the courtesy of a complimentary season ticket for himself and lady issued by Mr. Palmer L. Clark, assistant secretary to the entertainments at Lake Contrary, St. Joseph, Missouri, which includes the First Annual Chautauque, from the 14th to the 22d of July, and the Fair, September 3d to 9th. Such lecturers as Hon. Henry Watterson, Rev. Sam Jones, Dr. A. A. Willits, Col. Geo. W. Bain and a number of other celebrities have been engaged for this course. Besides these, S. M. Spedon, who illustrates his talks by drawings; Elias Day, "characterizations, mimicry and stories;" Benj. Chapin, dramatic reciter, and Estella Merryman Clark, dramatic reader, have also been engaged for this occasion. The musical program is varied and of a high order, so that a pleasant as well as profitable time is assured those who may attend.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

ELDER J. J. CORNISH, Coleman, Michigan, July 5:

Everything moves on fairly in Michigan. Our conference at Boyne City, which closed two weeks ago, was among the best we ever had in Michigan. Six baptized.

BRO. JOHN D. TENNEY, Bartlesville, Indian Territory:

There are but two of us in the faith here and we have tried to make others understand the everlasting gospel as we understand it. We are surrounded with Baptists and other denominations, and we talk our faith to them whenever we have an opportunity. We have had no elder to talk to us for four years, would be glad to have one visit us. We are unable to pay his way here but would try and take good care of them while here. Who is our nearest elder, to Bartlesville?

SR. (MRS.) MARY M. POOL, Clear Rapids, Iowa:

I have become a member of the Latter Day Saints' church by reading your paper and reading the Bible; I believe it is the true gospel. Myself and a sister were baptized last November at the same time. There is no branch of the church here; only a few of us, but I know if we are faithful and ready to do our Father's will, he will show us what he wants us to do. I want to do something for Jesus, and oh, I do praise Him for what he has done for me. I have to go through trials and the evil one is doing his best to run me away from the truth, yet I am glad I have something to endure for the Lord. My husband is bitterly opposed to the Latter Day Saint church, and won't let me have any of the elders about, and don't want me to go to the meetings; we must come up through tribulations if we are his followers. Elder Sutton, who was here preaching last winter, baptized my sister and I; some others are interested and I hope some elders will come with a tent; it is hard to get people out to hear preaching in a house. I hope those who are honest in heart will see before it is too late.

SR. ESTHER CRAMER, Oatesville, Indiana:

Our ENSIGNS are handed around from one to another of our neighbors after we have read them, and hope, in connection with the good preaching we have had, that they may become partakers of the gospel. My brother, Alma C. Barmore, has been preaching here for some time; we had a grand meeting last Sunday. Bro. Alma baptized our two youngest sisters at 9 a. m., and had confirmation meeting at 11; there was an attentive congregation present, and our sisters are rejoicing in the truth, and wondering why others do not accept it. We have one brother yet out of the fold, in his behalf. We feel sad over brother Alma's call to Canada so soon after his return from California, but hope some other elder or elders of this district will call on us as I feel there is good to be done here. There are several Saints in this part but they are so scattered that there is no branch organization here. May God speed the time when we will have a branch here. I have two boys and a daughter, and with the help of the Master I intend training them up in the way of truth and righteousness.

GENERAL CHURCH NEWS.

INDEPENDENCE.

Srs. H. H. Robinson and Jessie Orrick are improving nicely. Mrs. D. D. Hicks, of Pittsfield, Illinois, is visiting her daughter, Sr. H. E. Mills, and family.

Bro. D. Hougas and daughter, who have been visiting Bro. and Sr. Wm. Pitt, left for home Tuesday.

Bro. I. M. Smith and daughter, Gertrude, arrived Tuesday evening, and are guests of Bro. and Sr. G. H. Hilliard.

Sr. G. E. Harrington is suffering severely from a complication of ailments. It is hoped she may have a speedy recovery.

Bishop G. H. Hilliard has consented to continue next Sunday morning his subject of last Sunday, "The Duties of Parents to Children." At night Elder I. M. Smith, of the Iowa mission, will be the speaker. There should be a large attendance at these services.

Lack of space crowded out a number of items last week, among them being the account of the celebration of the first anniversary of the marriage of Bro. and Sr. J. A. Robinson, Jr., at the family home, July 5th. A large number of invited guests were present, and a very enjoyable time was had.

Bro. Milton Bohall, of Nogales, Arizona, came on an important mission to Independence last week, and left for home on Monday, brimful of happiness over his success. Sr. Margaret Bailey, daughter of Bro. and Sr. Milton Bailey, changed her name to Bohall meanwhile, and departed with him. The transformation occurred on Sunday evening in the presence of about fifty invited guests, at the home of the bride's parents. Bro. Ralph Joseph Luff spoke the magic words, and what with smiles, osculations, congratulations, presentations and alimention, a truly royal time was enjoyed.

Sunday last over four hundred were in attendance at the Sunday School. At 11 o'clock Bishop G. H. Hilliard addressed an audience which comfortably filled the Saints' church, on "The Duties of Parents to Children," as previously especially requested by the local "Daughters of Zion Society." It was a good effort but the time was too limited for the scope of the subject and our brother will continue it next Sunday morning. A good testimony meeting was enjoyed in the afternoon, and at night Bro. W. O. Clark, of Drytown, California, lectured on Temperance. He has spent some fifty years in lecturing for the temperance cause, having traveled extensively over the old countries including Palestine, Egypt and other Bible lands. He is eighty-three years old, and was baptized in 1835, by Morris Phelps, in Illinois, but has never identified himself with any of the different organizations since the dispersion and apostasy. He also lectured Monday night on his travels in Palestine before the "Young Men's Educational Society," his effort being much appreciated by all present.

LAMONI, IOWA.

Elder Stebbins filled his regular appointment at Davis City, 1st inst.

Bro. F. A. Cochran and J. P. Anderson spoke at Ellston, Iowa, same date.

Elders Weld and Clapp have been holding a series of meetings at Allendale, Missouri, recently.

Apostle J. W. Wight returned home on account of the serious illness of his wife last week. She is improving.

Bro. D. F. Lambert, editor of Patriot, went to Kansas City, Missouri, last week, he being a delegate to the convention there.

Sr. Lydia Campbell, age 52, wife of Elder Duncan Campbell, died at Pleasanton on the 3d.

Elder Thomas France, age 67, died here same day, the funeral sermon was preached at his home on the 4th, by Elder H. A. Stebbins.

President A. H. Smith has returned from his missionary tour.

The nation's holiday was duly celebrated in this vicinity, at Davis City and Evergreen.

By letter to Bishop Kelley, President Joseph Smith is expected home shortly.

Professor Harkness addressed the school institute at Decatur City, Iowa, lately, in behalf of Graceland College.

At the last regular business meeting of the branch, held on the 8d inst., the following members were granted letters of removal, David O. Harder, D. Worden and family, M. E. Williams and family, Sr. Emma Oriley and her children, Alice M., Della, Frank H., and Emma, also Bro. J. A. Gillen, about ten in all.

The Religio reported one hundred and thirty-six members and the finances in good condition.

At the Saints' Home last night, 8th, Elders Jas. Allen and L. Gaultier entertained and instructed the inmates in the principles of the gospel of peace, as taught by the Master and his servants.

A very edifying discourse was delivered at 11 a. m. at the Saints' church yesterday, by Apostle H. C. Smith (Doctrine and Covenants 85: 8), wherein the way of righteous living was clearly elucidated, and the duties of Saints and officials plainly expounded. The spirit of peace, love and union has been enjoyed at the social meetings here of late, which is evidence of progress in the right direction. President and Patriarch A. H. Smith was announced to be the speaker at the church last night.

A LAMONIAN.

JULY 9.

ST. JOSEPH, MISSOURI.

Elder J. Arthur Davis visited our city yesterday and was the speaker at morning and evening services.

Our Religians report an excellent prayer meeting on Tuesday evening.

Three young people from South Park were baptized yesterday by Elder G. J. Whitehead. Bro. G. W. Best and D. J. Krahl met with the city council of Elwood, Kansas, Saturday night, and secured the use of the City Hall for Sunday evening services.

After nearly nine years of service as superintendent of Zion's Star Sunday School, of this city, Bro. D. J. Krahl yesterday offered his resignation, change of location thus necessitating.

Bro. G. J. Whitehead was chosen superintendent of the Sunday School, and Sr. Pearl Smith assistant organist.

Bro. D. H. Blair has accepted a position with Frankel, Frank & Co., of Kansas City. He will be greatly missed in the Sunday School.

Bro. C. E. Guinand was in attendance at the prayer meeting yesterday. Bro. Guinand has been quiet the past few weeks, but we are pleased to note the prayer of faith has prevailed.

G. L. K.

Mr. Editor and Dear Readers:—Owing to circumstances taking us from the city I will be unable to further act as correspondent for St. Joseph. For the many kind words of appreciation I have received I thank you one and all, and now as we turn our faces Lamoni-ward, we bid you adieu.

Branch headquarters, 716 W. Van Buren St. Sunday meetings 2:45 and 7:45 p. m. at Zion Mission, 3411 Cottage Grove, 10:45 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.; West Pullman branch, 12024 Union Ave., 10:30 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.; Park-side Mission, 7124 Stony Island Ave., 3:00 and 7:30 p. m.; 508 W. 37th St. (colored mission), 10:30 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.

There being two picnics held by Saints on the Fourth, one at Washington and one at Lincoln parks, vishing neither to be partial nor neutral, we attended both. We found a happy, loving band at both places, enjoying the beautiful parks and the association. We dined with those at Washington where was spread a "table" about forty feet long which was laden with good things even after about sixty had partaken. At Lincoln park such athletes as Alma and Clare and Fred and Walter and James and Simon and William and others gave evidence of their suppleness and life by various means, resulting in much amusement and sore joints, the sisters also participating and sharing in the results.

The new paper and paint, together with the new white curtains, give our hall at 716 Van Buren street, a very neat and tasty appearance, and the services yesterday partook largely of that nature. The Sunday School was good, Bro. Fred giving the candle illustrated lesson which was interesting and instructive. The preaching and sacrament service was attended by a good spirit, Bro. Strange and Good being in charge of the latter. The attendance was fair.

Bro. E. J. Lang has invented and made a folding stand for a torch for light, etc. It will be a decided advantage, and it is easier to address and hold a crowd from a slight elevation. We are sorry to lose Elder P. Pement from our active and efficient working force. He contemplates returning to his Missouri home on the 16th. We hope this will be a long step toward entering the field of constant gospel labor, for which he is fitted and to which he is called. We love Philemon for his earnest integrity for the latter day work, and feel loth to part with him.

We are very hopeful that President Joseph Smith will be with us next Sunday. If here and able he will occupy at Lang mission in the morning, at which place former announcement will be made.

Bro. Charles Blakeley and wife, of Plano, were visiting in the city last week and enjoyed the picnic with the Saints.

Sr. Stella Burwell, the Religio president at West Pullman, is visiting in Zion. She may catch the "gathering fever" as some others have upon visiting there. This fever won't hurt any one if the "system" is in proper condition.

We were informed that a daughter of the president of the Utah church was in attendance at our afternoon service yesterday. Unfortunately we did not meet her. We hope the impressions upon her mind were good.

The street work continues. Bro. Lang and Pement held the people at 39th and Cottage Grove last night. Bro. F. M. Pitt preached on Saturday night on the west side of city. Bro. Henley's stentorian voice will soon be heard in defense of the work.

Bro. F. M. Cooper occupied at West Pullman yesterday in his usual able way.

FIRST KANSAS CITY BRANCH

Chapel, 2324 Wabash avenue. Take 15th street line to Prospect Ave., transfer to Prospect, get off at 24th, and walk one block west or to the right hand. Time of meetings: Sunday School at 9:30, preaching at 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m., social service at 12:30 p. m., prayer meeting, Wednesday evening at 7:30; Religio, Friday evening at 8. Strangers are cordially invited.

At 11 o'clock Sunday morning Bro. Robt. Winning, of St. Joseph, Missouri, delivered an excellent sermon. He is in the city on business, and like all other active Saints is always ready to work in the cause of the Master.

The tent, which was taken down during the Democratic convention, is again located at 18th and Cherry. At 4:30 on Sunday the Sunday School was about three times as large as at the previous sessions and interest good. Bro. Fred Koehler was chosen assistant superintendent.

At 8 p. m. Elder M. B. Williams discoursed to a good sized audience.

Bro. Walter Smith, of the Far West district, spent Independence day with Kansas City friends, and Bro. Bertram Dawson visited home folks at St. Louis.

Bro. D. H. Blair, formerly of St. Joseph, Missouri, has taken a position with Frankel-Franks, of this city, and was a visitor at one service on Sunday.

SECOND KANSAS CITY BRANCH.

Corner Sixteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue. Sunday School 9:30 a. m., preaching 11 a. m., prayer meeting 2:30 p. m., preaching 7:30 p. m.

The souls of the Saints were made to rejoice because of the abundant outpouring of the Holy Spirit last Sunday. Bro. and Sr. Weedmark, of Lamoni, were present.

On Monday evening, July 29d, at the above named hall, the local Religio society will entertain all who will attend, with refreshments and other things. Children 10 cents, adults 15 cents. Everybody welcome.

There is a movement started to have a union Sunday School picnic soon, for the Chelsea Park, Armstrong and First and Second Kansas City branches. The children and members of the four branches will have an opportunity to become better acquainted, besides it is good for the health.

Work on the basement of our chapel is progressing. The branch may be able to invite all to assemble with them in their own quarters by Christmas.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA.

Services at Golden West Hall, 320 Post street, every Sunday. Sunday School 10 a. m., preaching 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.; prayer meeting first Sunday of each month at 12:15 noon. Elder C. A. Parkin presiding elder, residence 3010 16th street.

Our Sunday morning sermon was delivered by Chas. E. Crumley, and in the evening we had the pleasure of hearing from Fred B. Blair. At one o'clock a number of the Saints attended a meeting at the "Holmes mission," to hear Mr. Holmes preach on "Prophecs," it being his reply to remarks of J. H. Anthony. Those who heard the reply say he did us no harm by his effort.

There was a good attendance at the Wednesday evening prayer meeting, Bro. Blair and Etzenhouser being among the number. The Sisters' Prayer Union also held its session with good attendance Thursday afternoon.

Eldert Smith and wife are visiting relatives at Ukiah. T. W. Chaburn, the "Jots" man, spent a few days in our city, but has now gone to Los Angeles. Chas. E. Crumley has gone to Oregon, his field of labor. D. A. Anderson is expected in the city any time but has not shown up yet.

LETTER DEPARTMENT.

ORCHARDVILLE, Ill., June 29.

Editor Ensign—I came into this, my field of labor, according to conference appointment, May the 12th. On the way I tarried a week at St. Louis, spent the time there profitably to myself, and I trust in some degree to the work. The kindness of some of the brethren and sisters who cared for "ye missionary," is gratefully remembered. I had the privilege of seeing the magnificently large Forest Park, Westmorlands aggregation of wealth in platinal residences, the street car strike, etc. I could not sympathize with the violence of the laborer on the one hand, more than I could the greed of capital on the other.

Isalah said of the condition that is now developing and will have its climax, "It shall be as with the people, so with the priest: as with the servant, so with his master: as with the maid, so, with her mistress: as with the buyer, so with the seller: as with the lender, so with the borrower," etc. (Isa. 24: 2). All equally guilty, none good who remain in Babylon, no not one. Shall we who are enjoined by a perfect law to "resist not evil," do so by even sympathizing with violence on the part of either labor or capital?

The spirit we are of, says, "And unto him who smiteth thee on the cheek, offer also the other: or in other words it is better to offer the other than to revile again. And him who taketh away thy cloak, forbid not to take thy coat also, for it is better that thou suffer thine enemy to take these things than to contend with him. Verily I say unto you, your heavenly Father who seeth in secret shall bring that wicked one into judgment." (Inspired Translation, Luke 6: 29, 30). Babylon is falling. There is no remedy except in Zion through faith.

On account of the strike, I was not sorry to get away from the scene of it. At Parrish, Illinois, I found Bro. F. M. Slover awaiting me, and we occupied in the Saints' church over Sunday by the aid of the Spirit encouragingly to ourselves and others. From Parrish we went to Tunnel Hill, the home of the Kelleys, W. H., E. L. and T. C., also of Bro. I. M. Smith. Many of the people being away from home strawberry picking, our audiences were light. Turning back northward we held a series of meetings at Springerton, and still northward another short series at Dry Fork church, thence to district conference at Brush Creek, where Bro. John T. Davis met us.

Bro. Slover and myself are now holding meetings according to announcements in the church papers. We are feeling well in the work, and by study, prayer and continued effort, expect to reap as we sow. We are striving to live by "every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God," and expect to declare the "whole counsel of God," in the fear of God, and not of man. I am pleased with this field thus far. It is ample in territory and numbers for several missionaries. Some of the branches lack officers, which is the greatest drawback I have noted. We are hopeful of good in our work this year. Asking the prayers of the Saints.

Your brother,
M. T. GOWELL.

WHALEY, CO., July 3.

Editor Ensign:—A few items from this part of the Lord's vineyard will doubtless be acceptable.

The Saints are doing what they can to maintain the work in a local way. The branch which meets at a school-house about nine miles south of this place, is composed of about twenty resident members. Elder R. D. Bullard is president, and by his and others' valiant efforts the work has been kept up and made to grow.

There is a general cheerfulness here, largely due to the excellent prospect for a large wheat crop. 'Tis a beautiful sight to see the golden grain waving before the July zephyrs, showing the goodness of nature's God in rewarding the sower with the food that sustains physical life. This thought is all the more striking when we see the reports from India's suffering millions.

Since entering my mission field I have been as active as it has been possible to be, considering the busy season of the year. I have held services on each Sunday at Haigler, Nebraska, and Laird and the Seward school-house, Colorado.

Elder Bullard and I visited the "South Divide," on June 17th, near Kirk, Colorado, where Bro. and Sr. Zimmerman kindly opened their house for preaching. We held two services on Sunday and one Monday night. Elder Bullard blessed Bro. and Sr. Crawford's youngest child, and administered to several sick. Good interest was manifest and we felt well repaid for the long drive—fifty miles. We promised to return there again.

On June 29, Bro. Bullard and I took another long trip—this time across the sand hills northeast to the home of Bro. and Sr. Lee Korf. On the way we stopped to call on an investigator of the faith, Mrs. Van Horn, an interested reader of the Ensign. Found her pleased with our work, and it is evident that the Lord's Spirit is working with her. Bro. and Sr. Korf and Bro. and Sr. Chas. Curtis gave out appointment for us at their school-house for 11 a. m., which Bro. Bullard filled. At the evening hour I held forth. There seems to be a number of good, honest people up there. On the way back we left an appointment at Eckley for meetings July 15.

After the harvest Bro. Bullard and I expect to hold nightly meetings, and push the work more in earnest. I find Bro. Bullard a congenial man to labor with; he has a good amount of the Spirit, and at times is greatly blessed in presenting the word. It is by his kindness, as well as that of Bro. A. E. Taber and F. D. Bullard that I am provided with a means of conveyance.

The Eastern Colorado district conference will convene here August 18, when we expect to have the tent, and hope that it can stay in these parts for awhile.

May the Lord bless his people and help them to live consistent lives, and also endow his servants with greater power, is my prayer.

Your co-worker,

ALMA B. HANSON.

ZENA, I. T., July 2.

Dear Ensign:—As there has not been any word from this part for some time, I thought I would let you know we are all striving to sustain this great work. Right away after the General Conference I started out among the full blood Lamapites with an interpreter, who proved to be very useful, being a Lamanite also; we did a good work. One man, by the name of Henry Scroper, a full blood and the best citizen in all this country; as soon as he became interested and began to read the Book of Mormon, the Baptists began to roar and had him arrested for some little frivolous thing that amounts to nothing. I had to have a tilt with one of their Baptist preachers; he did not amount to anything, you could not tell from his talk what he was, a man or animal, for he seemed to have a bark on one end and tales on the other. Such as that don't take well with the people; he speaks here again at the Excelsior school-house next Sunday night, I will be here.

We have a few faithful Saints here whom I baptized two years ago; they have lived lives above reproach and I am thankful for it too, one of them will soon be ordained an elder and buckle on the armor too. I expect to hold over here this week and next.

I attended a good prayer meeting at Bro. J. D. Kelley's in the new branch known as the Lamanite branch, the Spirit of the Lord was present; at night we had an excellent sermon by W. E. Haden. Bro. J. T. Riley spoke at eleven, subject, "Future Destiny of Man."

I did think some of going to Oklahoma but will not go yet for awhile, there is more here than we can do. Bro. Riley and Haden are busy all the time; Bro. Karahoo is also out now. Bro. S. W. Simmons is in Arkansas; he is giving Simmons' "regulator" for sin-sickness with success.

Success to you all boys, battle on and on until the battle is won. My health is improving and I am ready for the fight.

Your brother,
W. H. SMART.

SCRANTON, Kan., June 11.

Editor Ensign:—It affords me great pleasure to again appear before your many readers; I last communicated to your columns early in February. I left to labor in the Northeast Kansas district in May, and was sorry to have to part with Saints and many friends of that so called buffalo grass county in western Kansas. If any of the Saints desire to build up independent homes for themselves, they would do well to write, enclosing stamp to Bro. E. H. Ebert, Bazine, Ness county, Kansas, who will gladly furnish them with all information desirable. I preached twice for the Saints of Topeka, then came on to district conference which convened here the 9th and 10th inst. I want to say that it was by far the best conference I have ever attended in this district. The attendance was very good, the preaching excellent, peace and harmony prevailed throughout, and the social meetings were above par. Seven prayers and thirty-four testimonies were borne on Sunday afternoon, and the Holy Spirit was then to gladden every heart and to melt many to tears, being filled with joy unspakable. I rejoice that the Saints are trying to come up higher, and that the all-wise and everlasting Father is looking with favor upon his people. My we continue to go on in every good word and work. Three little children were baptized and confirmed. Elgi Priest Phineas Cadwell and Elmer M. T. Short, of the seventy, presided and were elected to preside over district the ensuing term.

A good work was done in Sunday School convention preceding conference, particulars of which I will try and write up for Sunday-School department in Saints' Herald. Were it not for fear that this would find its way to the waste basket, I would be tempted to mention names and kind deeds of Saints who live upon the broad prairies of the West.

When will the gathering of the Saints be? Echo answers, when! Dear Saints, may we continue in well-doing. Remember that the reward lies at the end of the race. Then strive with might and main to earn a GREAT reward.

Bro. Hudgens and myself start with the tent right away and hope to continue with it until the season ends.

FRANK J. PIERCE.

CLEBURNE, TEXAS, June 5.

Dear Ensign:—I left home some three weeks ago, stopping in Ft. Worth. Preached a few times to a few faithful Saints and their friends. In the meantime Bro. H. O. Smith, missionary in charge of the Southwestern mission, came and I remained over a few days. Bro. Smith, in this preaching service, being strengthened by his wise counsel and proceeded to this place. After my arrival it was several days before I could leave the house in consequence of continual rain, and when it did hold up I endeavored to ascertain if I could do anything in the line of preaching, but for awhile I did not seem to meet with much encouragement. I met such a bulwark of prejudice that it seemed to me that it would take something like the guns which were brought to bear on Manila to make an impression; but an overruling providence led Bro. and Sr. Riley (who by the way are right good missionaries), to come to my assistance, and being better generals or better acquainted and knowing better where to strike, very soon effected a hearing and a right good one too. In this I see the truth of the old lesson, "Try, try again."

I have mapped out for my work the next two weeks Ft. Worth, Strawn, Buffalo Gap and Guion, thence to the several school-houses in Nolan county where I have formerly done considerable preaching without hearing the question, What shall we do to inherit eternal life? There I awaited the instructions of Bro. T. J. Sheppard, who I have been informed will be my captain this year, that is if I remain in Texas; and by the way I shall not leave the state to get away from him. He most always lets a fellow do about as he pleases when he is out of sight, and agreeable to my experience with him he is a real good companion in travel, for he is always willing to do all the preaching and I am willing to be should, so along this line we have no trouble. Come on, Bro. Sheppard, let us hear from you right soon.

If Bro. I. P. Baggery has not gone south yet, in behalf of Bro. and Sr. Riley I will say they would be rejoiced to have him stop over on his way. They will take pleasure in caring for him and will make an effort to get him a congregation, and for his information will say he can reach San Antonio by no cheaper route from Ft. Worth than to come this way. He can get ticket from Ft. Worth to this place, for 45 cents and from here to San Antonio for $3.80. This information is reliable and may benefit others of the missionaries. David Riley's address is Cleburne, Texas, North Robinson 912. In conclusion will say I trust that Bro. S. W. Simmons' prayer has been answered and that we will for this year have no complainers in the missionary field, but all with one accord labor together in love for Christ, preferring one another, having the one great object in view—that of persuading souls to come to Christ.

Yours in hope,
L. L. WIGHT.

CUMORAH, Mo., June 19.

Editor Ensign:—By perseverance we are winning our way in this part of the world. Less than two years ago I moved from Kansas City to southwest Missouri. While many business engagements have pressed themselves upon me, and misfortune in some instances interfered with my success, the Lord's work has been uppermost in my mind. The gospel in its simplicity and original fullness and grandeur was unknown to this immediate locality till I disclosed its beauty.

The beginning of the blessed story began in the Ragsdale school-house. Large crowds came to hear the new preacher and they all pronounced it the best representation of the gospel message produced in this part of the country. To make out just where a man of so great knowledge, with a St. Paul's boldness and undaunted courage, came from, was the problem that became the topic of the whole country, and as to what class of believers he belonged was more perplexing. Some said that "if he turns out to be a Baptist, he will capture the whole country." They all agreed it was the Bible, its truth, but where to locate the new man was the point.

I preached the gospel of the New Testament for some time to the satisfaction of the people in general until it became necessary to introduce another link in the proof of our mission, and like Paul, "saying none other things than those things which the prophets and Moses did say should come."—Acts 20: 22. Many "went back on me." I, being true to my trust, was compelled to sacrifice worldly popularity by "confessing unto them, that after the way which they call heresy, so worship I the God of my fathers, believing all things which are written in the law and the prophets."—Acts 24: 14. This phase of christian philosophy embraced more truth than was acceptable to many.

When my attention was turned to the conclusive and irrefutable evidences supporting this grand latter day work, its infinitude soared beyond the people's capacity, and I, when catching a glimpse of the situation, felt a quantity that must lie perceptible to all who hear this glad story. Against their will, I believe many have an enduring confirmation of our work being from God. "At my first answer no man stood with me, but all men forsook me, * * * notwithstanding the Lord stood with me and strengthened me, that by me the preaching might be fully known and that the gentiles might hear."—2 Tim. 4: 16, 17.

Persistence is now opening the way. A discussion with the Christians gave me a lasting reputation among that people here. Every service held at that place since has been well attended. The choir and the leaders of the choir have furnished their services each time, and the interest seems unabated. This is nine miles west of Cumorah.

I have preached at Hippy Hope also, which is about nine miles southwest. My visit to the "Careek" is one which secured considerable acquaintance and has made another stopping place for Latter Day Saint elders. At the "Davis" one man said that's the best sermon that was ever preached in this house, and in the afternoon four men called on me where I stopped for dinner, and talked the gospel till dusk.

Last Sunday I went to the Finley where many stories have been circulated about "the Mormons." An old gentleman (a well-to-do farmer) who has taken considerable part in furnishing speculations about the church, as I passed his place going home, ran out and hailed me. "My friend," says he, "that's the truth, and if that is what the people here call Mormonism, I wish this country was full of them. Yes sir, I do." The old man assured me that I have another friend and a place there to stop, but it doesn't end here. I have made speeches for them by request on different occasions, and now have standing invitations which possibly I may not be able to fill. Better still, a business man, from Seymour, came to Cumorah but a few days ago; says he, "We want you at Seymour. I believe we can get the Christian church, my wife is influential there and we want you to come. If they don't permit you to use their pulpit we will chip in and hire you a place." Of course I agreed to go, and expect to make this my next call.

Another from ten miles distant last Sunday was out to hear me and had me take his name and invited me to his neighborhood, remarking that he wanted at least twelve to fifteen sermons.

These murky clouds of prejudice are beginning to break, and I pray that the obscured skies of heaven may yet reveal to this people that this is God's work.

Yours for the onward march of truth,
E. T. ATWELL.

WHEATLAND, Mo., July 1.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:—If the editor will be so kind as to allow me space in the ENSIGN I would like to write a few lines to you in regard to a pamphlet which contains the address of David Whitmer; it was loaned me by an enemy of Mormonism. The book contains many things that tend to worry me. There are, doubtless, many of you who have read this book, and, therefore, do not need to be told what it contains. Were it not for the fact that he was one of the witnesses to the divine origin of the Book of Mormon I would pay no attention to the book. If the author was in error in regard to the Latter Day Saints, will not some one write me personally as to this matter? The owner of the book has written on the inside cover the following:

"TAKE NOTICE.

"David Whitmer, in this pamphlet, one of the prominent, and one of the original Mormons, one of the three witnesses to the plates, and probably the most honest Mormon I have read after, is so very positive, and proves it, that all, both Salt Lake and Reorganized Mormons are wrong, and fearfully wrong as to most of Joe Smith's revelations, the name of the church, apostles, high priests. Be sure to read pp. 62-65 and others. Some fearful and silly heresies, that they are all dead, and so they are, but worse still, Whitmer himself and they are deceived by Satan in believing in the Book of Mormon. See Kidder's History of Mormonism. Again, suppose the case that their church reaches back to the days of Christ, and the apostles (and Christ built his own church to exist 'till he comes), and also suppose that the Mormon's doctrine of grace and salvation of the soul was scriptural? Still they could not possibly be the true church of Christ from the fact that their church is not a pure democracy, all the members equal in power and authority, and a local congregation, but it is a centralized hierarchy; and not only so, but a political and bloody centralized hierarchy, which alone forever bars it from being the church of Christ." See the New Testament on the question, also Dr. Grave's "Landmarks" of Apostolic Churches, chapter 11."

Now, dear brothers and sisters, these expressions, coupled with those of David Whitmer, tend to make me feel bad, and doubts have arisen in my mind as to whether I have taken the right step or not. I hope that when you have read this you will not lay it aside and think some one else can give more information than you can, but write at once and set at ease the mind of a poor, stumbling sinner who is both young in years and in the work, and please pray for me that I may always be upheld and sustained by him who is the author of all that is good and pure.

Hoping to hear from some one on this subject in the near future, I remain,
Your sister in bonds,
MRS. NORA COSTELLO.

CHORDS FROM THE HARP OF EPHRAIM.

As further vindicating the truthfulness of the record we cite you to another item of prophecy foreshadowing the time when it should make its appearance, and also the religious attitude toward the real spirit, form and genius of the uncorrupted worship of God.

"And there shall also be many which shall say, Eat, drink and be merry; nevertheless, fear God, he will justify in committing a little sin: yea, lie a little, take the advantage of one because of his words, dig a pit for thy neighbor; there is no harm in this."—Nephi 12: 8.

Could it have been possible for any man in 1830, unaided by inspiration, to foresee the rapid and radical change of the sects of Christendom along this line? The sealed book unsealed affirms prophetically that when its words should speak as from the dead, obligations to the system of christianity would be esteemed so lightly, the bands of religion so unrestricted and the people so piously infidel that the great God eternal and unchangeable, whose irrefragable word is that he "cannot look upon sin with the least degree of allowance," must tell a falsehood, retract an unchangeable law and justify men in sin.

How the popular teachers do tell the people to "eat, drink and be merry" may be better appreciated when we hear them suggesting, planning and organizing so many church entertainments connected and always preceded by "Supper will be served from 5 to 7 p. m.," "15 cents pays the bill." And what a wide spreading, glittering and gigantic scheme of this kind has been inaugurated since the words have been scattered among the people. "Church fairs," "church festivals," "church sociables," "church suppers" and "church entertainments," speak volumes of the teaching—"eat, drink and be merry"—which the Book of Mormon predicted should be prevalent in the day of its revelation. Rev. Geo. F. Pentecost expressed the conviction that the church he represented "has degenerated into a great, strong, social, fashionable organization." He then says, "If a ship should go to sea with as many rotten timbers as we have spiritually rotten members, it would go to the bottom in twenty-four hours."—Christian Statesman, January 8, 1876.

On the point stated by the book that men would teach the doctrine of "justification of sin," when God says, "The soul that sinneth, it shall die," and popular teachers know God has said it, Dr. Cumming says, "I believe that one-half of the professors of the gospel are nothing better than infidels."—Time of the End, p. 193.

Again as to the sentiment of "eat, drink and be merry" religion which the Book of Mormon prophesied would be a popular religion taught when it comes to the English speaking world: "A dance and entertainment will be given in the school room, Colby Weston on Friday, Nov. 16, 1838. Dancing to commence at 7:30 p. m. A good quadrille band will be in attendance. Refreshments will be furnished. Tickets may be obtained from the Rectory; price 6d each. The proceeds for new church lamps."—Sword and Trowel.

This popular conspiracy against the system of sincere and true worship is assuming such appalling proportions, the unchangeable truths and responsibilities of christianity are considered so fluctuating by a degenerate religion that a wail and denunciation sounds out over the world with no uncertain words as follows:

"Entertainments, concerts, tableaux and such like are playing havoc with the church of God. In the name of religion our children are being trained for the theatre, and under the shadow of the name of Christ young people are introduced to the world."

Another, deprecating the "leaders'" actions in the foreground, says: "High Churchman clergyman on the stage. Preachers acting in a drama with bare feet, painted faces, wigs and theatrical paraphernalia—all at Croyden, England. Name of play—Conversion of England."—Sword and Trowel.

Reader, do the foregoing statements of the religious condition prove the prophecies of the sealed book unsealed true on this point? Surely the combined drifting of "Mystery Babylon" and her numerous progeny presents a monumental attestation that these items of prophecy given to the English speaking world in 1830, that many would teach "eat, drink and be merry" and that God would justify sin, are receiving abundant vindication. The infidel item referred to by the prophecy that "a little lying" would be taught involves the Utah departure. "Yea, lie a little." Hon. P. T. Van Zile, United States District Attorney for Utah, says:

"I have had him [the President of the Utah Church] on the witness stand on two different occasions, and on each occasion he swore—that this man of God(?)—that he could not tell where the [marriage] record could be found." He also says: "A third evil [of the Utah church] is untruthfulness and when necessary, false swearing. It is instilled into the minds of all that they must keep as a secret the relation in which their fathers and mothers and brothers and sisters are living; and if brought into court, it is no crime to swear that they have no knowledge on the subject or that these parties are not living in polygamy." He further adds: "At the last session of the Third District Court in Salt Lake City I heard more perjury to shield polygamists in one day than I ever heard during all the time I lived in the State of Michigan."—Paper read at Detroit, May 21, 1880.

As additional proof that the prophecy is true, we can remind you, reader, that B. Young as a leader of the people, with the subordinates of the Utah hierarchy, taught the membership of their church to "lie a little" in that he and his officers taught that Joseph Smith was the example in polygamy. They fulfilled the prophecy when they taught that Mr. Smith was the author of the polygamist revelation. And that revelation, bearing the impress of B. Young and the product of a "fatty brain," is a notorious fulfillment of the Book of Mormon prophecy that many would teach "yea, lie a little," for that revelation given by B. Young is brim full of the doctrine that "if a man marry a wife, and is sealed according to appointment, and he or she shall commit any sin or transgression of the new and everlasting covenant whosoever, and all manner of blasphemies, and if they commit no murder wherein they shed innocent blood, yet shall they come forth in the first resurrection and enter their exaltation."—Polygamist Revelation, par. 26.

Note, this revelation "justifies sin," just as the prophecy affirms. Those who enter the sacred(?) relations and provisions of that Brighamite revelation are licensed to commit any sin save the shedding of innocent blood—"yea [they can] lie a little."

No wonder Brigham taught, "We are the greatest and smoothest liars in the world, the cunningest and most adroit thieves, and any other shade of character you can mention." "Yea, lie a little." "God will justify." We can commit "any sin, save the shedding of innocent blood."

The prophecy further states they will teach, "And if it be so we are guilty, God will beat us with a few stripes, and at last we shall be saved in the kingdom of God."—2 Nephi 12: 9.

In its fulfillment we can commit any sin save one; "lie a little," "take advantage of men for a word," "dig a pit for our neighbor," and if "we are guilty, God will beat us with a few stripes;" i. e. we will be "delivered over to the buffetings of Satan" (as saith the polygamist revelation), but "at last enter into the kingdom of God;" i. e. we "shall come forth in the first resurrection and enter into our exaltation" (as saith the polygamist revelation). Can we fail to see the prophecies of the sealed book unsealed fulfilled?

These items of prophecy were given to a prophet of God 500 years before Christ, engraved on plates, preserved in the hill Cumorah on the continent of America, translated by another prophet of God and given to the English speaking world A. D. 1830, and it certifies the condition of things religiously in the gentile world as they would exist in the day when brought to the world. Surely the rule given by the Savior will apply at this juncture:

"This I have told you, before it come to pass, that when it is come to pass, ye may believe."

As contrasting with the false and corrupt doctrines which the American Nephite prophet sees will be prevalent when the book is translated, he lays down the teachings which ought to be the standard and rule of conduct:

"The Lord God hath commanded that men should not murder; that they should not lie; that they should not steal; that they should not take the name of the Lord God in vain; that they should not envy; that they should not have malice; that they should not contend one with another; that they should not commit whoredoms; that they should do none of these things: for whoso doeth them shall perish; for none of these iniquities come of the Lord; for he doeth that which is good among the children of men; and he doeth nothing save it be plain unto the children of men; and he inviteth them all to come unto him, and partake of his goodness; and he denieth none that come unto him, black and white, bond and free, male and female; and he remembereth the heathen, and all are alike unto God, both Jew and Gentile."—Chap. 12: 62.

What a beautiful code of precepts did this prophet present to his people. What a beautiful thought, that they have been translated and given of God, to the world through a youthful seer (as youthful as was Nephi who wrote them), in these the latter days. Just think, if the first of these precepts prevailed over the earth, we would look on no scenes of bloodshed or carnage. If the second prevailed, the temple of golden truth would receive the cap stone with shoutings, "Grace, grace unto it." If the third one was carried out, honesty would take form. If the fourth one was a universal rule, reverence and esteem for God would lift the fallen face. If the fifth one were but the standard there would be no covetousness, discontent, nor malevolence. If the sixth precept were an associate principle, beloved and practiced everywhere, we would see nor hear provoked malignity. If the seventh one followed in the train, peace would encircle in her healthful arm, earth's myriads. If the eighth was not slighted, purity, with golden beams, would flash as diamonds; earth, indeed, would be heaven, and with such a good Father, who is not the author nor source of iniquity, as our sovereign director, what would hinder serene and unalloyed joy, taking quiet residence among us? No need of jails, almshouses, penitentiaries, reformatories, houses of correction, or moral lazarettos.

But alas! the prophet Nephi presents us with a picture not so bright, but a latter day photo, sad to look upon and contemplate. For,

"Behold, in the last days, or in the days of the Gentiles; yea, behold all the nations of the Gentiles, and also the Jews, both those who shall come upon this land, and those who shall be upon other lands; yea, even upon all the lands of the earth; behold they will be drunken with iniquity, and all manner of abominations; and when that day shall come, they shall be visited of the Lord of hosts with thunder and with earthquake, and with a great noise, and with storm and with tempest, and with the flame of devouring fire, and all the nations that fight against Zion, and that distress her, shall be as a dream of a night vision."—Chap. 12: 63.

In the last days, or days of the gentiles, is the time when Nephi predicts his words are to come forth. It is also the period when the gentiles' time shall come to the full. It reveals the thought that, consequent upon the rejection of the gospel, when afforded opportunity to share its graces and blessings, the privileges would be taken away from the gentiles, and they left to learn the lesson as did the Jews, by the fierce judgments, and direful calamities, inflicted by the hand of God, whose philanthropy and mercies they have been taught by Satan, to esteem so lightly.

Webster defines "iniquity" as "want of rectitude, an act of injustice or unrighteousness." Wicked is the generic term, iniquity is the stronger, denoting a violation of the rights of others, usually by fraud or circumvention. "Nefarious" is still stronger, implying a breach of the most sacred obligations, but the synonyms of this word given by Webster, are "injustice, unrighteousness, wickedness, sin, crime." And all the nations, gentile and Jew, on this land, and all other lands, are seen by the prophet, to be drunken with all this array of abomination, injustice, unrighteousness, wickedness, sin and crime. Truly a deplorable condition! How true, that the nations "have strayed away from mine ordinances," and "I the Lord, have taken my spirit from the inhabitants of the earth," also "Satan shall have dominion over his own."

How true this prophecy, when we look over the earth and see it as a vast pandemonium. Treachery, intrigue, assassination, hypocrisy, insincerity, priestcraft, lying, subterfuge, double dealing, fawning sycophancy, charlatanism and revenge seem to be playing "pussy wants the corner," not only individually, but nationally—universally. North, south, east and west there seems to be a perpetual shipwreck of principle. The earth seems to be girdled—circumferenced and diametered—with torpedoes, political and theological, ready to ignite into a flashing, seething conflagration.

It is during such a condition of things that another class of evidences should be introduced upon the stage, such evidence as could not be resisted by any nation, for the purpose of calling the universal attention to the fact that God lives, and has arisen to maintain his cause; the evidence furnished by the rolling and muttering thunder; the evidence furnished by the sin-cursed earth when reeling in the unsteady balance of the earthquake; the evidence furnished by subterranean noise, a great noise; the evidence furnished by the storm, as it rolls a deluge of destruction across the plains; the evidence furnished by the cyclone, tempest, as it spins, rises and falls, with death and desolation in its pathway; the evidence furnished by the flame of devouring fire, as the elements roar, and the millionaire fruit of years is licked up into ashes and cinders, by fiery tongues. All of this the Nephite prophet sees by inspiration, shall characterize the age and day when his "speech should whisper out of the dust." Could a more graphic description, and a more truthful detail, have been given, even by a historian located in the time referred to?

It is not quite probable that Joseph Smith or Sidney Rigdon, living in a time when the atmosphere was redolent with the happy doctrine of "the world's growing better," "morality and religion are about to flood the earth," "the world is being rapidly converted to God," and "the millenium is about to be introduced through the joint efforts of the pulpit, press, and missionary societies," should come out and reverse this popular teaching by making up this true prophecy, through their own wisdom or sagacity. All know that when the universal sentiment was, that "the millenium is about to dawn," to thus place themselves in the front of that marching column of sentiment, and reverse it, by asserting the universal drunkenness of the world upon iniquity and abomination, would have been so unnatural, and they would have knowingly invited the indignation of orthodoxy upon themselves, and forestalled their own success.

Is it not a fact that false teachers, impostors, "wolves in sheep's clothing," most generally, if not always, seize hold of some of the popular doctrines of the times, and incorporate them into their systems and thus flaunt an attractive banner to the breeze, in order to get a following? Do they not dress themselves in the garb to which the sheep are used? And if the prophecies of the Book of Mormon point out the exact opposite of the popular trend, and the logic of cold facts clinch the fulfillment, where is the "novel" part of the book coming in? Indeed, it is quite novel to prove such work a novel.

If the sentiment, religiously, in 1880, was that "the millenium is about to be ushered in," that would put away the idea of the regions of the air being torn by hurricanes; or agitated by furious storms, or destructive tempests. The adoption of the peaceful millenium theory in 1880 would stab to death the expectancy of earthquakes bellowing under ground. The acceptance of that millenium sentiment would have blown to the four winds the least, or even the ghost of a fear, that raging epidemics, pestilence or tempests would, in the future, sweep the multiplied thousands down to untimely graves, or that destructive fires would exist anywhere outside the "literal lake of fire and brimstone."

Is it not certain then, that had the Book of Mormon been the outgrowth of minds uninspired, it would have contained doctrines and prophecies in harmony with the leading minds of that day? It would have contained teachings in unison with wrong, and contradictory to the facts of the age subsequently. Yet we find Mr. Smith, whom the world calls an ignorant fanatic, and who, they say, "could learn nothing at school because of stupidity," giving the foregoing prophecy to the world by translation, as one of the sealed book's prophetic statements, and when translated in 1828, was the reverse of popular and common religious ideas, yet fulfilled in detail afterward.

An item of statistics at this juncture will probably not be overlooked. The prophecy foretells the visitation of "earthquakes"—universally—not only upon this land, but all other lands—in the day the book shall "speak out of the ground." As proof that there has been an appalling increase of these dreaded and heart failing disturbances since the Book of Mormon was translated in 1829, we append a statement from the Prophetic Times, of 1868:

"The attention of the world is being forced to the contemplation of very startling phenomena of late, in the shape of earthquakes, etc. Disturbances of the earth and of the course of nature on an unprecedented scale have been the subjects of excited tidings from all quarters of the globe. Editors and scientific men have been led to pronounce upon them as among the most remarkable and extensive of which there is any written record." The London Times, of 1875, says: "Out of the 365 days of 1875, one hundred were marked by terrestrial disturbances, of which authentic record exists. It is estimated that no fewer than twenty thousand people lost their lives during the destruction caused by these earthquakes, while damage to property was enormous."

"Fifteen hundred were killed in Italy by earthquakes in 1835-6. [Only five and six years after the book came forth]. Four thousand people perished in Hayti, 1842. [Only twelve years after the Book of Mormon was translated]. One hundred thousand houses and thirty thousand people destroyed in Japan, 1854. [Twenty-four years after the 'words' came out of the dust]. Ten thousand people perished in Calabria, 1857. Five thousand people destroyed in Ecuador, 1859. Thirty thousand people destroyed in Persia, 1871. Antioch destroyed in 1872. Three thousand people perished in Cashmere, 1885."—"Great Disasters," p. 585.

Mr. Godbey, M. A., the author of the book says: "Scientific men have, within forty years, made efforts to keep a sort of catalogue of shocks, but the frequency of earthquakes have rendered this a profitless task. * * * one might as well count rainfalls."

In the thirteen years between 1872 and 1885, there were 450 earthquakes registered, occurring in the United States alone," says Mr. Godbey, page 556. This would make an average of four earthquakes per year. Is it any wonder that the New York Sun, speaking of those subterranean battles on this and other lands, says, "Such a universal pother in the bowels of the planet was never known before [1879-80] in human experience. Certain it is that a great rebellion has taken place from some cause or other [not known to scientists], and that the earth has been shaken from center to circumference. So far from there being any decrease of vigor in the igneous energies, they are more active than ever. All over the globe, as by general conspiracy and premeditated simultaneous movement, there has been a regular Walpurgis hellabaloo, and fiery dance of destruction and death."

These facts of the times, calling loudly for explanation of the cause (for it is "not known to scientists") of such conflicts within the bosom of "mother earth," in the day (mark it), "in the day" when Nephi's "words" with those of other American Israelitish prophets, teachers and called ministers, should "hiss forth for a standard" to the nations (translated standard) constitute an item in that class of evidence called physical, in favor of the divinity of the record, as irresistible, as the earthquake is irresistible to those swallowed up by it.

No claim is made by us that these quakings and feelings have not occurred in other ages of the world, but the increase, the frequency and the wholesale destructiveness, seem to mark them, not only as signs of the end of the world, but as a class of physical evidence establishing the divinity of the sealed book, and the time when it should be unsealed.

As to "tempests," used by scientists interchangeably with cyclone, it seems useless to tabulate the increase of those death and destruction dealing missiles hurled from the armory of cloudland, and which causes the swept valleys and plains to groan, the silver turbaned ocean to writhe, and the forests to moan, wave and fall.

"Cyclone in 1878 entered the United States at Wilmington, North Carolina, passed over Washington and eastern Pennsylvania, crossed New England. In Philadelphia over seven hundred buildings were totally destroyed, twenty-two vessels were sunk, eight people were killed, hundreds injured, entailing a loss of two millions of dollars."

"Cyclone, 1879, sunk one hundred large vessels and two hundred yachts."

"Cyclone, 1880, destroyed four hundred people along the Carolina coast, destroyed $1,600,000 worth of property."

"Cyclone, 1878, in Nova Scotia destroyed on land and sea six hundred lives, one thousand, two hundred and twenty-three vessels."

"Cyclone, 1887, Island St. Thomas, millions of dollars worth of property, merchandise, vegetation, houses and vessels were destroyed, and thousands of lives lost."

"Cyclone, 1867, at Calcutta, killed ten thousand persons in the city alone, destroyed thirty thousand houses and sunk six hundred ships."

"Cyclone, 1864, same place, over sixty thousand people perished, forty-three thousand in city alone, and one hundred ships sunk."

"Cyclone, 1833, at the mouth of the Hooghly, three hundred villages and fifty thousand people destroyed."

"Cyclone, 1876, in the Backergunge district, and more than one hundred thousand people perished."

"Cyclone, 1885, in the Philippine Islands, destroyed ten thousand people and millions of dollars worth of property."

"Cyclone, 1888, starting off Jupiter Point, Florida, crossing the Gulf of Mexico and striking Louisiana, the damage in that state alone was $500,000."

"Cyclone, 1890, at Louisville, Kentucky, described by an observer as 'balloon shaped, twisting an attenuated tail to the earth. It emitted a constant fusillade of lightning, and seemed to be composed of a lurid, snake-like mass of electric currents, whose light would sometimes be extinguished for a few moments, making an almost intolerable darkness. It was accompanied by a fearful roar, like that of a thousand trains crossing the big bridge.' This cyclone killed about one hundred and twenty people, and the damage to property $2,000,000." It was during this cyclone that a block of iron casting, weighing over one hundred and fifty pounds, was blown into the second story of the Chesapeake, Ohio & Southern railway building, near the Union depot. Nobody knows where it came from, and the nearest building from which it could have come, is nearly one hundred yards away.

Reader, it is usually said, "statistics are dry stuff," but the foregoing seem to be quite watery, and they are copied from the "World's Great Disasters," a work of great painstaking collation. The few here presented, serve to show with what accuracy inspiration can furnish evidence of its divinity thousands of years in advance. Can it appear credible that a boy twenty-four years of age, without education or opportunity, brought up in the back woods of York state, branded by the great world as extremely ignorant, could send down to generations of following years, a chain of prophecy so unequivocal, so improbable when compared with the accepted teaching of his day, so minutely fulfilled, and that fulfillment in thunder tones and physical form. I say, can it be possible that he simply guessed it? Such a thing might do to "tell to the marines."

It cannot be attributed to Sidney Rigdon, for he was a Disciple, and was sitting as spiritual advisor and counsellor in the conclaves of that society, when this prophecy came to the English speaking world. It cannot be attributed to Spaulding, for he was a deeply dyed Presbyterian, and the prophecy is out of joint with the doctrine of "predestination," too universal—the dire calamities comprehended in the fulfillment of this prophetic statement, are too indiscriminate to harmonize with Mr. Spaulding's "election" proclivities. And in the investigation of the doctrinal portion of the book, which, by the way, constitutes a major portion of the book, and is closely interlaced with the historical matter from start to finish, there cannot be found the peculiar doctrines of Presbyterianism represented by Spaulding.

But, according to the reasoning of a certain class, the book cannot be true by any allowable process of demonstration. If it is in harmony with the Bible in doctrine, teaching and ministry, why it is stolen from the Bible; if it differs any in phraseology, but contains the same thought in substance as the Bible, it is plagiarized; if it contains some words not as old as the ancient original, yet representing ideas as old as the "foundations of the world," why it originated in the brain of Solomon Spaulding, or of Joseph Smith. It is untrue from any standpoint.

Their position reminds us of the perplexity Lorenzo Dow was plunged into when considering the tenet of "predestination."

You shall and you shalt,
You will and you won't,
You can and you can't,
You'll be damned if you do,
You'll be damned if you don't.

You are gone, turn you at any angle. So the Book of Mormon is a fraud any way it is fixed.

Well, the revelation of that book comprehends a department of the "lifting up of the Lord's hand in the latter days"—"the hour of God's judgment, and Isaiah, taking in that period, by a sweep of inspirational power, declares, "Lord, when thy hand is lifted up, they [the people] will not see." But, evidently considering the playful evidences of the "storm's" sway, the "thunder's" low crash from the tempest's home, the electric arrows from the lightning's quiver, the sullen, rumbling "noise" singing its requiem of death in the earthquakes, and the desolating "flame of devouring fire," he immediately adds: "They shall see and be ashamed. * * * Yea, the fire of thine enemies shall devour them."—Isa. 25: 11.

The prophet is identifying the work and time of the latter day gathering and salvation of his people (Israel), and his testimony is a unit with the sealed book unsealed.

As we have seen, the prophetic burden of both the Bible and the sealed book unsealed, is weighty with the restoration of Israel to "fatherland," and to Zion, the establishment of the physical kingdom among them. Upon this department we cite the reader to a prophecy recorded by Nephi 1: 79, 80:

"Therefore, I write unto you Gentiles, and, also unto you, house of Israel, when the work shall commence, that ye shall be about to prepare to return to the land of your inheritance; yea, behold, I write unto all the ends of the earth; yea, unto you, twelve tribes of Israel, who shall be judged according to your works, by the twelve whom Jesus chose to be his disciples in the land of Jerusalem. And I write also unto the remnant of this people who also shall be judged by the twelve whom Jesus chose in this land, and they shall be judged by the other twelve whom Jesus chose in the land of Jerusalem." The prophet says, "And these things do the Spirit manifest unto me; therefore, I write unto you all."—V. 81.

Hence, we invite you to a consideration of this prophecy. It is harmonious with the Bible in foreshadowing the gathering of that people and their future governmental condition. It involves the revelation of Ephraim's identity, inasmuch as he ceased being an organized people, and was lost, as to his identity, among the amalgamated gentiles. It is an historical fact that "when the latter day work commenced" when the history of God's pleasure and displeasure with the Israelites who inhabited this continent, was taken, by heavenly instruction, from the earth, a wonderful preparation was in progress, not only among the "house of Israel," but for them, on the part of gentiles, to facilitate their colonization on the "land of their inheritance" which has resulted in the gathering of "three times as many as returned from Babylonian captivity, before Christ, to the land of Palestine.

Tell me, did Joseph Smith, carelessly and incidentally, make this as a guess, then set to work and influence the gentile governments to lift proscriptive disabilities from the seed of Abraham, and actually exercise power over kings and queens till they became the Jew's "nursing fathers and mothers?" Surely, such a procedure would deliver such a charge as "ignorance" or "stupidity" over to the tomb.

The children of Ephraim are a part of the "twelve tribes" to be "judged" according to the prophecy cited. That they were to be "outcasts," possessing neither domain nor recognized national existence, is clear from the prophetic word of Isaiah. The seventh chapter and eighth verse predicts that they "shall be broken," that they be not a people "within three score and five years"—65 years. The reason assigned is that "Ephraim is confederate with Syria," (verse 2) and had "taken evil counsel against Judah," "to vex," conspiring and "setting a king in Judah," inaugurating a rebellion.

Both Judah and Ephraim were consigned to the same condition, for the prophetic word by Jeremiah is, "I will cast you [Judah] out of my sight, as I have cast out all your brethren, even the whole seed of Ephraim."—Jer. 7: 15.

The subject of their subsequent captivity and anonymous condition is water-lined into very nearly the entire prophecy of Hosea—"Ephraim is smitten, their root is dried up [impossible to trace his lineage only by divine revelation], they shall bear no fruit, my God shall cast them away because they did not hearken unto him and they shall be wanderers among the nations."—Hos. 9:16, 17. Ephraim is traceable in the Bible from his day down to the captivity of the ten tribes, 721 years B. C. He was in the Egyptian bondage until their redemption under Moses, and at that time his seed constituted one-twelfth part of the nation, until the revolt of the ten tribes under Jereboam, from which time until their captivity by the king of Assyria, his seed constituted about one-tenth part of the nation, and when swallowed up in the captivity, Bible history drops the chain of his existence with their "wandering" condition "among the nations."

The prophecies picture his attitude, while playing the role of prodigal—"their glory taken away." Hosea 9: 11. "They are to be separated, one from another," and thus destroyed as a nation. Verse 12. He has "mixed himself among the people." He "is a cake not turned"—not well baked, so when taken up falls to pieces. Hosea 7: 8. "He is a silly dove without heart"—his attachments broken and left to wander everywhere, and not seek a place with any particular people. But is this the final condition of that people?

Is this the ultimate fading of the fair flower on the leaves of which such great and glorious promises and prophecies are written? Will the prophetic declarations as to "filling the world with fruit," and "pushing the people together from the ends of the earth," wreck upon the boulders gentile desolation? No, for "Behold the days come saith the Lord, that I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel and with the house of Judah." "And I will direct their work in truth, and I will make an everlasting covenant with them, and their seed shall be known among the Gentiles, and their offspring among the people."—Jer. 31: 31, and Isa. 61: 8, 9.

What work is it that God will "direct through Ephraim? Why, the work to inaugurate and "push to the ends of the earth" the work of salvation among the people. Hence, with the "two sticks" united as with the "power"—"horns of an unicorn," will they push the people together. So it is seen that inspiration of ancient and modern times are very harmonious. Good old Rachel—Ephraim's grandmother—was assured that her "children would return from the land of the enemy," and come again to their own border." (Jer. 31: 15).

"Gracious," says an orthodox preacher, "wasn't that prophecy correctly applied to the slaughter of the innocents throughout Bethlehem and coasts thereof, under the murderous edict of Herod, who contemplated the destruction of the babe, Jesus?" Hardly, for when it is remembered that those children were not Rachel's, but were of the tribe of Judah—of the house of David, through whose line and lineage Christ was to descend—then the mind reverts to Joseph and Benjamin, the only sons of Jacob by his legal wife—the fair Rachel—and the favorite one of the twelve patriarchs, called the "beloved" and "blessed of the Lord." (Deut. 33: 12, 17).

"Bethlehem and coasts" within which the edict of Herod was executed with rigor, was Judah's inheritance, hence, Bethlehem was the city of David. (Luke 2; John 7: 42). No, the vision recorded by Jeremiah discloses the condition of Rachel's children in the future as being so lamentable and their calamity so dire, that she, sorrowing mother, refused comfort. But they are to "return from the land of the enemy." They were to "come again to their own border." Could this occur and they destroyed in death?

CRAWFISHING!

Not to forestall my report and letter of the Moberly debate of November, 1899, but to exhibit the shiftiness and crawfish character of the representatives of Utahism, herewith I submit the following:

PROPOSITIONS.

First, Is the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints with Joseph Smith, son of Joseph Smith the prophet, as its president, the legal successor of the church organized by Joseph Smith the prophet and his co-workers, April 6, 1830?

Second, Is the church in Utah, known as the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints (commonly called Mormons), of which Brigham Young, John Taylor, Wilford Woodruff were presidents, and of which Lorenzo Snow is now president, the legal and true successor of the church organized by Joseph Smith the prophet and his co-workers, April 6, 1830?

The above were the propositions debated at Moberly, Missouri, last November, the undersigned standing for the Reorganization, and Elders T. H. Chambers and Jacob N. Larsen for Utahism. At the close of the debate and before yielding the floor, I read and handed to Elder T. H. Chambers the following CHALLENGE.

To Elders T. H. Chambers and Jacob N. Larsen: I herewith invite and challenge you or either of you to repeat this debate at Higbee and Bevier.

Respectfully,

ROBT. M. ELVIN.

MOBERLY, MO., Nov. 11, '99.

The reason for offering this invitation for further discussion, was that these men kept boasting of what they could do; that Brigham Young was a true prophet of God, that polygamy was a true and divine doctrine, and Elder Larsen waxed bold and prophesied the speedy destruction of the Reorganization. The Saints of both Higbee and Bevier were willing and anxious to have the debate at their respective places.

On the evening of November 11, Elders Chambers and Larsen inquired if I wanted an immediate reply, or would I grant them a little time, and if they might furnish some other man. I answered and told them reasonable time was granted, and that I was willing to meet any representative man of their church.

Time, that never waits for any man, kept gliding swiftly by, and thinking that, perhaps, in the exceeding rush of their ministerial work, this small affair had escaped their mind, I wrote:

BEVIER, MO., Feb. 6, 1900.
ELDER JACOB N. LARSEN,
1006 McGEE ST.,
Kansas City, Mo.

I see by Kansas City Journal that you are holding conference in that city, and by way of a reminder to "stir up your pure minds by way of remembrance(?)" that up to date no answer to challenge made and planted in your hands, November 11, 1899, I am still for truth and against all error.

On the watchtower,
ROBT. M. ELVIN.

The foregoing had the effect to wake up the Rip Van Winkle of three months, with the following waship reply:

617 East 8th St.,
KANSAS CITY, MO., Feb. 14, '00.
MR. ROBERT ELVIN,
Bevier, Missouri.

In answer to yours of the 6th inst., will inform you that as to your challenge I have not forgot. But will inform you that I will be out in your country some time next summer, or as soon as the weather is suitable for traveling. Then if you wish the debate you can have it. I do not know, however, that any date has been named for me to meet you; furthermore, I want you to understand that I don't want to get out of your way or to miss the challenge, but as to the time of meeting you I reserve the right to name it. I must say that I admire the Christian spirit(?) that you exhibit in writing me. I am still for the spreading of truth, and for the exposing of the counterfeit.

JACOB N. LARSEN.

Mr. Larsen is, perhaps, twenty-five years my junior; nevertheless, I loitered not in the lap of ease in a large city, but accepting the situation, daily tried to preach the word of salvation.

On receipt of his letter I at once wrote:

POLLOCK, MO., Feb. 26, '00.
JACOB N. LARSEN,
Kansas City, Mo.

Yours of 14th before me. Had you kept the promise made me, November 11, 1899, there would have existed no necessity of my putting you in remembrance to answer my challenge. As to your meeting me in discussion some time next summer, I confess and deny not that your Waterloo at Moberly has greatly weakened confidence that you will ever again attempt another debate with the elders of the Reorganization.

I pity those who in the fog of apostasy, deception and falsehood, are upholding a church that has departed from the "old paths" of truth and righteousness.

From a watchman on the walls of true Zion,

ROBT. M. ELVIN.

The foregoing failed to elicit any response, so I again wrote.

INDEPENDENCE, MO.,
March 20, 1900.

JACOB N. LARSEN,
Kansas City, Mo.

No reply to mine of 26th ult., has yet been received.

Having learned of your lustily crowing over the easy(?) victory obtained over Elvin at Moberly, during our debate last November, and as I am still of the opinion that you are in the meshes of a vile apostasy, and that you are constantly misrepresenting the Reorganization on every occasion that you refer to our work, I, therefore, renew my challenge of November 11, 1899, and will herewith extend

WILL SEND $2.50 FREE

TO EACH READER. FRANKLIN MILES, M. D., LL. B., THE WEALTHY CHICAGO SPECIALIST, WILL SEND $2.50 WORTH OF HIS NEW INDIVIDUAL TREATMENT FREE.

That Dr. Miles is one of the most successful and reliable of physicians is proven by hundreds of testimonials from well known people. One patient cured after failure of eleven Grand Rapids physicians, two after having been given up by six or seven Chicago physicians, another after nine of the leading doctors in New York City, Philadelphia and Chicago failed. Thousands of testimonials sent on request.

The late Prof. J. S. Jewell, M. D., editor of the Journal of Nervous and Mental Diseases, published at Chicago, advised Dr. Miles to "by all means publish your surprising results." Prof. J. P. Ross, M. D., President of Rush Medical College, wrote in 1874: "Dr. Miles has taken two courses of my private instruction in diseases of the heart and lungs." N. G. Parker, Ex-Treasurer of South Carolina, says: "I believe Dr. Miles to be an attentive and skillful physician in a field which requires the best qualities of head and heart." Col. A. M. Tucker, late General Manager of N. Y. L. E. & W. system of railroads, says: "Dr. Miles' success as a physician has been phenomenal." Col. E. B. Spleman of the 9th Regulars, U. S. A., San Diego, Cal., says: "Your special treatment has certainly worked wonders when all else failed. I had employed the best medical talent and had spent $2,000." Hundreds of other endorsements from prominent personages could be given would space permit.

When an experienced and wealthy physician offers to prescribe free $40,000 worth of Treatment for diseases of the heart, nerves, stomach, or dropsy of the lungs, you will realize that he has great faith in his skill, and when hundreds of prominent men and women freely testify to his unusual skill and superiority of his New Individual Treatment, his liberality is certainly worthy of serious consideration.

The Doctor's new system of treatment is thoroughly sound and immensely superior to the ordinary methods.

As all afflicted readers may have $2.50 worth of treatment especially prepared for each case, FREE, with printed directions, we advise them to send for a Copyrighted Examination Chart at once. Address The Dr. Miles Medical Association, 201 to 209 State Street, Chicago.

the same to your immediate field, namely, Kansas City, and Independence, Missouri, subject to the local authorities of our church. Let there be no more crawfishing; to the mark like a man.

For truth,

ROBT. M. ELVIN.

And still the representative of Utahism was dumb and silent, and as a rebuke to the evil spirit, I wrote again, as follows:

LAMONI, IA., April 24.
JACOB N. LARSEN,
Kansas City, Mo.

As no reply to mine of the 20th ult. has been received, I adopt this method to put you in mind of the proposition made to you and Chambers last November. I herewith renew the said challenge, as also that contained in mine of the 20th ult., and will make this additional proposition: If you are unwilling, either yourself or by some other representative of your cause, to meet me in oral debate, I will meet you or any representative man of your church, upon any or all points of difference existing between the dominant church of Utah and the Reorganization in a written discussion.

As I have before written you, I am fully convinced that you and the church of your choice are in deep darkness and without divine spiritual light, and I am willing to aid those groping for the wall, that they may arise and stand with their feet upon the rock of salvation. Shall I hear from you?

For gospel truth,

ROBT. M. ELVIN.

The above must have contained a little of the dynamite of truth to arouse the representative of the bird that fouled its own nest, for here is a gushing one, but the bate is not catchy.

617 E. 8th St.
KANSAS CITY, Mo., May 5.
ROBT. M. ELVIN,
Lamoni, Iowa:

In answer to yours of the 24th ult., inasmuch as you seem to be very much in doubt as to the truthfulness of your position as in evidence by your desire for discussion, will say that I am willing and ready at any time to allow you to become acquainted with our position by meeting you in a friendly discussion at Independence, Missouri, provided you will occupy one night and allow me to occupy the next night, and so on until you have become satisfied. The standard of evidence to be the standard church works, i. e., Bible, Book of Mormon, Doctrine and Covenants and Pearl of Great Price. For truth and the aiding others in finding truth.

JACOB N. LARSEN.

Surely Jacob is a smooth man, and, as of old, desireth the blessing of the first born, but the kid skin mask will not work as of yore. So I wrote as follows:

LAMONI, Ia., May 9, 1900.
JACOB N. LARSEN,
Kansas City, Mo.:

I almost feel myself elated that I have been so successful, after so much faithful labor in putting you in mind of your verbal promise made November 11, 1899, at Moberly, Missouri, to meet me or furnish a man to meet me in a public debate at Bevier and Higbee, Missouri, of drawing you out of that official shell—do not debate with the Josephite elders. And that you condescend to offer a subterfuge for the original proposition.

Say! why all this hesitancy upon your part?
Please, why do you seek to dodge the true issue of our contention?

Why all this crawling? Has all your boasting of that great victory (?) at Moberly been but empty wind?

Why do you deceive yourself that I am not fully satisfied with my church and its position upon the issues that we differ upon?

Ah, sir! you are fully aware that I am both amply prepared and abundantly able to represent and to defend the ground occupied by the Reorganized Church, as also to expose the errors and false dogmas of the Utah church.

From past experience I could not expect to become acquainted with either doctrine or practice of your church—other than your proficiency in deception—as demonstrated in your crafty manipulation of that typewritten copy of President Smith's letter, or your quotation from H. O. Smith's tract, number 18, p. 15.

No, sir! I can learn more of Utahism and her errors of both doctrine and practice from the publications of that people, than you will ever be able to communicate to your fellowmen, unless you abandon error and accept the truth.

I do not admit the "Pearl of Great Price" to be a standard text book of the church, neither your book of Doctrine and Covenants published in 1876, as well as the later editions; I would, therefore, ask that the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants of 1845, be the standard of evidence in our debate, all other books or papers to stand upon their merits.

I do not like the night about plan of 'discussion, but prefer equal time, and Hedge's rules for our government. And also, that all books or papers introduced by either party as evidence, shall be subject to the use of his opponent if he so desire.

Will you have present at debate "Journal of Discourses," Vol. 4? I desire to hear from you again before giving my final answer.

Now a word in closing: you are the head of the Mormon church in the state of Missouri, and in a number of things beloved in, and taught by your church, you are at variance—at enmity—with the Reorganization, and as the Doctrine and Covenants instructs us: "Now, behold, this is wisdom; whose readeth let him understand and receive also; for unto him that receiveth it shall be given more abundantly, even power; wherefore, confound your enemies; call upon them to meet you, both in public and in private; and inasmuch as ye are faithful, their shame shall be made manifest. Wherefore let them bring forth their strong reasons against the Lord."—Doctrine and Covenants 71:2.

Having full faith and confidence in the foregoing, and believing your church to be an enemy to the truth as we hold and teach certain questions, I desire to fulfill the command of God. Will you abide his advice and counsel? I await your reply. For the truth,

ROBT. M. ELVIN.

Have studied Utah Mormonism closely during the past year, and feel fully satisfied that the leaders at least are aware of the situation, and nearly all the ministers they send out are young men, who are full of faith and zeal for their cause, but who are without experience or knowledge of the history of Latter Day Saintism, and this is so noticeable that the people make inquiry, "Where are the 'gray beards' of that church?" As a rule their ministers are youthful, fairly well educated, dress quite respectably, and withal, rather good looking, but they are only smart in the art of palming off upon the people a spiritualist gospel, a corruption of the angel restored message; it is to be hoped that many of that organization are honest in their religion. I have lost all hope in Larsen fulfilling his pledge to meet me in debate, and therefore submit this correspondence with a wish that it may accomplish some good.

Respectfully,
ROBT. M. ELVIN.

A Thing Worth Knowing.

No need of cutting off a woman's breast or a man's cheek or nose in a vain attempt to cure cancer. No use of applying burning plasters to the flesh and torturing those already weak from suffering. Soothing, balsam, aromatic oils give safe, speedy and certain cure. The most horrible forms of cancer of the face, breast, womb, mouth, stomach, lungs, tumors, ugly ulcers, fistula, catarrh; terrible skin diseases, etc., are all successfully treated by the application of various forms of simple oils. Send for book mailed free, giving particulars and prices of oils. Address Dr. Bye, Drawer 1111, Kansas City, Missouri. (Cut this out and send to some suffering one).

FREE BLOOD CURE.

AN OFFER PROVING FAITH TO SUFFERERS.

Ulcers, cancers, eating sores, painful swellings, effects of blood poison, persistent eruptions, that refuse to heal under ordinary treatment, are quickly cured by B. B. B. (Botanic Blood Balm), made especially to cure all terrible, obstinate, deep-seated blood and skin troubles. Is your blood thin? Are you pale? All run down? Have you eczema? Pimples? Blotches and bumps? Skin or scalp humors? Boils? Eruptions? Skin itches and swollen? Aching bones? Rheumatism? Serofula? Catarrh? To cure all these blood troubles take B. B. B. (Botanic Blood Balm), because it drains from the blood and entire system all the poisons and humors which cause all of these troubles, and the cause being removed, a permanent cure follows. All the sores heal and new, rich blood is made.

Everyone says that B. B. B. is the most wonderful blood purifier of the age; and no wonder, for it has cured the most deep-seated, obstinate cases (even the most deadly cancer) after doctors and patent medicines had failed. Thoroughly tested for thirty years and never known to fail. Our faith is so great in B. B. B., that we will send to any sufferer a trial bottle free, so that they may test the medicine at our expense. Large bottles for sale at the drug store for $1.00; or six large bottles (full treatment) $5.00. For free trial bottle enclose five cents which pays exact cost of postage (the medicine is free), and address Blood Balm Co., 86 Mitchell St., Atlanta, Georgia, and bottle and medical book will be sent, all charges prepaid. Describe your trouble, and we will include free personal medical advice. Write today.

$1.00 Saved Is $1.00 Earned.
I will save you from 25 to 100 per cent on most anything you want. Bicycles, new, $12.25. If you can buy as good a wheel outside of Chicago for less than $20 I will make you a present of one. Write to me for prices on anything you want, and enclose stamp and I will surprise you on prices. Spend 5 cents, it may save you $10 to $25. Address,
WM. C. CUMMINGS,
Room 10, 491 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

BELGIAN HARES.

If you want to establish yourself in a profitable business or desire to improve your stock, it will pay you to write me. I can furnish you common stock from $3.00 up, and pedigree or imported (English) stock from $15.00 up to $150.00. There is nothing at present that will bring better returns for the money invested. A doe will raise four to six families a year of from five to twelve kids. You can keep them in almost any place, three feet square is large enough for a family of five, and an ordinary barn or coal shed will hold fifty. Write me about what you want and I will quote you a price. They can be shipped anywhere by express with safety.

Broken Brics-u-Bracs.
Mr. Major, the famous cement man of New York, explains some very interesting facts about Major's Cement. The multitudes who use this standard article know that it is a many hundred per cent better than other cements for which similar claims are made, but a great many do not know why. The simple reason is that Mr. Major uses the best materials ever discovered and other manufacturers do not use them, because they are too expensive and do not allow large profits. Mr. Major tells us that one of the elements of his cement costs $3.75 a pound, and another costs $4.50 a gallon, while a large share of the so-called cements and liquid glue upon the market are nothing more than sixteen-cent glue, dissolved in water or citric acid, and in some cases, altered slightly in color and odor by the addition of cheap and useless materials.
Major's Cement retails at fifteen cents and twenty-five cents a bottle, and when a dealer tries to sell a substitute you can depend upon it that his only object is to make larger profit.
The cement on Major's Cement is as much as any dealer ought to make on any cement. And this is doubly true in view of the fact that each dealer gets his share of the benefit of Mr. Major's advertising, which now amounts to over $5,000 a month throughout the country. Established in 1876.
Insist on having Major's. Don't accept any of his substitutes. Major's Cement is so likely to find that you are a good deal more so than you imagine you can repair your rubber boots and family shoes, and any other rubber and leather articles, with Major's Rubber Cement and Major's Leather Cement.
And you will be surprised at how many dollars a year you will thus save.
If your druggist cannot supply you, it will be forwarded by mail; either kind. Free of postage.

The evening was spent in entertainment by local school, which was not only pleasurable, but instructive. Association adjourned to meet at Beaverton, October 5, 1900.

C. B. JOYCE, Sec.

Boundary Line of Districts, Etc.

It is necessary to have on record a description or statement of the boundaries of every district, for the use of the presidency and other church officials.

District presidents and secretaries are therefore requested to forward statements of the boundaries of their respective districts. They are also requested to give lists of names of branches in their districts.

If boundaries have not been closely defined, or not specified at all, kindly so report, and as promptly as possible. If your district contemplates action on boundary lines, please report its present status, also its further action when taken. It is necessary to complete the record as soon as possible.

District officials are requested to be prompt that unnecessary correspondence be avoided.

Please do not omit list of names of branches in your district.

R. S. SALLYARDS, Church Sec. LAMONI, IOWA, June 29. 2 t.

Absent Members.

Absent members of the Columbus, Kansas, branch take notice that unless you, Joseph Van, Wm. Vandiver, Jessie Hess, nee Ponder, Wm. J. Rooker, James Mallon, Christian Ghou, Nancy Ghou, Sarah Ellis, nee Lewellyn, and Louisa Short, report and make your place of residence known to the officers of Columbus branch, your names will be placed on the church records for scattered members.

W. S. TAYLOR, Pres. SALLIE RANDALL, Clerk. SHERWIN JUNCT., Kans., July 5. California Mission.

Bro. C. Rich being unable to reach the field until late in the summer, Bro. E. P. Schmidt will labor in connection with Bro. R. Etzenhouser in the tent work until further notice. Bro. D. L. Allen will be associated with Bro. E. E. Keeler in Central California district.

I left home on the 21st ult., stopping at Lewiston and Canton, Illinois, visiting relatives, having a fine time Sunday in Canton, the place where I was baptized. Stopped also in Knoxville, Illinois, then at Bevier, Missouri, to visit my mother—who is now eighty-two years old—and two sisters, thence to Brookfield to see my brother, preached at all these places, having excellent attention, good interest and liberty. Will stop in Denver next Sunday, Salt Lake City during the week, and Sacramento to the following Sunday, the 15th, and expect to be in Los Angeles the 22d.

G. T. GRIFFITHS. INDEPENDENCE, Mo., July 6. Reunion Notices.

The Nodaway district will hold a reunion at Barnard, Missouri, August 13d to 13th. The grounds are nicely located about one-eighth of a mile from town. Plenty of water, hay, wood, straw; pasture for horses at about 6 cents a head per day. Bishop E. L. Kelley and a number of able speakers will be present.

Those wanting to rent tents, price will be as follows: 9x12, $1.25; 12x14, $1.75; freight added. Send orders for tents at once to Ed S. Fannon, Beaverton, Mo. The Deacatur and Far West districts are invited to join in and let us have a good time. For further information write Ed S. Fannon, Beaverton, Mo.

WM. WOODHEAD, Barnard, Mo. D. C. WHITE, Lamoni, Iowa. July 7.

The Annual Reunion of the Spring River district will convene August 10th and continue until the 20th. The committee has located it in Cherokee county, Kansas, 14 miles east of Halliwell and 14 miles west of Sherwin Junction. There will be free pasture for the stock, for all that comes.

We are expecting President Joseph Smith and other prominent speakers to be there.

Good, new tents can be had for $1.25 apiece, 10x12. Those wanting tents must write J. M. Richards, Box 416, Pittsburg, Kan., not later than July 20th. He must know by that date.

J. M. RICHARDS, L. H. MCCALL, Com. W. S. TAYLOR. Pittsburg, Kas., July 2.

The Clinton, Missouri, district reunion will convene at Nine Wonders, one mile and a half southwest of Eldorado Springs, Cedar county, Missouri, on Friday, August 3d, and continue ten days, or until August 12, 1900. The Saints and friends of all the surrounding country are earnestly invited to attend and help make the reunion a spiritual feast indeed. We have the use of the amphitheater building, the grounds will be prepared and springs and wells cleaned, so good water will be plenty.

Bro. A. H. Smith, the patriarch of the church, and his stenographer have been invited and are expected to be present. Bro. I. N. White also is expected. Bro. J. A. Gunsolley is expected to assist in the Sunday School and Religio work, and other good, faithful workers will be present to give good instruction. The Sunday School will hold one hour each day, from 8 to 9 a. m., and Friday, the 10th, will be given to Sunday School work. It is hoped the Sunday School workers will rally and make this a blessed day. As wishing tents should write John H. Moore, Veve, Missouri, at once, what size, etc.

The rent of tents will be 50 cents apiece for the entire ten days. Hay and corn will be furnished at reasonable prices, so also will wood and straw for just the cost of hauling; bread and meat supplies can be had from Eldorado Springs. So come all who can and let's have a rejoicing time.

G. W. BEEBE, A. J. COLEWILE, JOHN H. HANDBACHE, Com. M. LOYD, C. A. RUDD. July 5.

Southwestern Iowa Reunion.

The Fremont and Pottawattamie districts reunion will commence August 24, 1900, in the grove of Bro. Frank K. Green, three miles south of Tabor. We hope to be amply provided with some of the leading and most popular ministers of the church, and trust that the Saints of both districts will make a strong effort to attend.

Dear Saints, let us all turn out once more in mass, and make this one of the most profitable meetings ever held in this section of country.

Further announcements will be made by the committee as soon as practicable, with regard to tents and other conveniences necessary for the comfort of all who may wish to attend.

HENRY KEMP, Sub-missionary in Charge. By order of chairman of committee. July 10.

Conference Notices.

The Philadelphia district conference will convene at Baldwin, Maryland, August 25th and 26th. Your presence is needed to help encourage the work in this part of the district. GEO. W. ROULEY, Dist. Pres. E. B. HULL, Dist. Sec. 1245 Harold St., Philadelphia, Pa. July 8.

The West Virginia district conference will convene with Mount Union branch, Goose Creek, Ritchie county, West Virginia, on Saturday before the fourth Sunday in August, at 10:30 o'clock. All are invited. Come on morning and evening trains to Cornwallis station on Baltimore & Ohio Railroad the day before conference convenes, where you will be met by the brethren with teams. Hope the missionary in charge will take notice and put in an appearance. G. H. GOBBEY, Dist. Pres. Two Days Meeting.

STUNTED Does your hair split at the end? Can you pull out a handful by running your fingers through it? Does it seem dry and lifeless? Give your hair a chance. Feed it. The roots are not dead; they are weak because they are starved—that's all. The best hair food is—AYER'S HAIR VIGOR. If you don't want your hair to die use Ayer's Hair Vigor once a day. It makes the hair grow, stops falling, and cures dandruff. It always restores color to gray or faded hair; it never fails. $1.00 a bottle. All druggists. One bottle of Ayer's Hair Vigor stopped my hair from falling out, and started it to grow again nicely. J. DAVIS WATTS, March 23, 1899, Canton, Vt., Dak. Ayer's Hair Vigor completely cured me from dandruff, with which I was greatly afflicted. The growth of my hair since its use has been something wonderful. LENA G. GREENE, April 13, 1890, New York, N.Y. If you do not obtain all the benefits you expect from the Hair Vigor, write the Doctor about it. DR. J. C. AYER & CO., Lowell, Mass.

There will be two day meetings held at the following places in the Eastern Michigan district: Cash, Sanilac county, July 28th and 29th; Grant, Huron county, August 4th and 5th; Shabbona, Sanilac county, August 11th and 12th; Deanville, Lapeer county, August 18th and 19th; Riley Centre, St. Clair county, August 25th and 26th; Minden City, Sanilac county, September 1st and 2d. Missionaries and local officers are cordially invited to attend to help make these meetings a success.

A. BARR, Pres. Applegate, Mich., July 3. Committee on Histories and Encyclopedias.

The above committee met at the Historian's office, April 23, 1900, and formed a permanent organization by appointing Heman C. Smith chairman and Frederick Madison Smith secretary.

We are trying to systematize our work and will make an effort to correct existing misrepresentations in histories and encyclopedias as soon as possible, and will use every effort in our power to prevent the occurrence of future errors. We will, however, need the active co-operation of all who are interested in this work; and hence we earnestly solicit the aid of Saints and friends. We shall be glad to have information of any works mentioning the latter day work issued or prospective, especially the latter; and where practicable send us copies of books. Any information addressed to either of the committee will receive prompt attention. Copies of the books should be sent to the secretary.

MARRIED. SAVAGE-HEDRICKS.—Near Watsonville, Santa Cruz county, California, at the home of the bride's parents (Bro. Joseph and Sr. Sarah J. Hedricks), June 22, 1900, Mr. Gomer J. Savage and Sr. Eva L. Hedricks, Elder J. H. Lawn officiating.

DIED. TWADDLE.—Sr. Mary A. Twaddle, eldest daughter of Elder T. R. Hawkins, of Nevada, was born in Farmington, Utah, May 11, 1858; was baptized at Dayton, Nevada, May 8, 1871, by Elder A. B. Johns, died at Tulare, California, June 17, 1900, from injuries received by the running away of a horse; she only lived a few hours after the accident. She was an earnest worker in the latter day cause to the full extent of her abilities. Funeral services in charge of Elder E. S. Burton, funeral discourse by Elder J. F. Burton.

CHRISTENSEN.—Near Rolfe, Iowa, June 20, 1900, Bro. James Christensen. Just previous to his death he left the house to assist a neighbor to put his team in his barn out of a storm. After securing the team they were standing looking out the door at the storm when a bolt of lightning struck the barn and ran down the studding by which Bro. Christensen was standing, and ended his life. He was born in Denmark, December 27, 1848; was baptized into the Reorganized Church of Christ August 12, 1897, by Elder C. E. Butlerworth, and was ordained a priest January 8, 1899, by Elder C. J. Hunt. An aged companion mourns her loss. Funeral June 23d, sermon by Elder Edmund Ford.

REJECTING CHRIST.

To carefully examine and weigh matters presented for our consideration, especially where grave issues are at stake, is both a privilege and a duty in every one. Particularly is this true with regard to that which concerns our welfare and happiness in the life to come. Mankind, far above all the other creatures, has been endowed with the faculty of reasoning, and the capability of judging under proper conditions between that which is right and that which is wrong. And by reason of these powers he must necessarily be held responsible for his conduct in life, answering to God for the use he makes of such powers.

For any one to determine to become "a law unto himself" is to assume a prerogative which has never been delegated to him. He came into life through the operation of a fixed law, and he departs out of it by another certain law; and however much man may boast of power and ability, he is all his life subject to laws, the violation of which results in distress, and, if continued, final disaster. No man is absolutely his own master, notwithstanding many would like to think they are. He can only use his thinking faculties just so far; he can only move to a certain prescribed limit. He is circumscribed and bounded by environments on every hand, all of which should emphasize the fact to every thoughtful mind that God rules, and should be revered, loved and obeyed for the excellence of the wisdom which He possesses, as manifest in all His creations; for the greatness of His love for man in providing for his sustenance in this life, and for the gift of eternal life to all who, by subscribing to the conditions, shall fit and prepare themselves for its realities; and for the glory and power of which He is the highest type—absolutely perfect.

The Lord Jesus came into the world as the representative of the only Supreme power and authority; back of His teachings and His work reposed infinite and unlimited force to sustain Him in the work He was sent to perform. They who defied and rejected the Christ, defied the powers of heaven which He was representing, and while the consequences of the impiety and wickedness of these foolish and blinded individuals were not always visited upon them in the sight of men, reason and the Word of God assure us they could not escape, but all had in time to answer for their sins.

In the affairs of this life if one is summoned before the courts of the land, no one, high or low, can defy the authority there represented and escape the penalty for their contempt. Necessarily there must be a severe punishment visited upon those who despise authority, else there could be no order, no protection for either life, liberty, or property. So it is that behind the mandates of Almighty God must there be penalties, and power to enforce them, else sin would control every inhabitant of the earth, and humanity would go downward toward the level of the brute.

Now, if our Savior represented all the power of His Father as claimed, those whom He sent out as representatives after His resurrection must have been clothed with the same power and authority which He possessed, to teach and have their works acknowledged of God; after He had risen, He came to His disciples, and in commissioning them, said:

"All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth. Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world.—Matt. 28: 18-20.

Then said Jesus to them again, Peace be unto you: as my Father hath sent me, even so send I you. And when he had said this, he breathed on them, and saith unto them, Receive ye the Holy Ghost: whose soever sins ye remit, they are remitted unto them; and whose soever sins ye retain, they are retained.—John 20: 21-23.

This certainly sustains the thought that when the Savior finished the work He was commissioned of the Father to perform, he delegated His power and authority to His chosen representatives, and it then became just as binding upon all men to hearken unto the instructions of these representatives, precisely as though the Savior himself personally spoke the words, for He was behind His chosen ones to sustain their work so long as they observed to teach the people to obey "all things," whatsoever He had commanded them; and in rejecting these representatives when they so taught in purview of their commission, the individual rejected not these men alone, but the Christ who sent them. Is this not logically and Scripturally true? If it be so acknowledged will it not be further admitted that all the penalties attaching to the personal rejection of the Savior and His words, will be visited upon those who despise and reject the teachings of those whom He sent to minister for Him? It must be so, for if one proposition is true, the other is equally so.

Bible students will hardly be prepared to assume the position that all authority to represent Christ upon the earth ceased with the termination of the work of these chosen apostles of Christ, or of those whom they ordained to carry on the work. Such a claim would make the further preaching of the word—the gospel of Christ—ineffectual and unavailing to any; if there were none having authority from Him to perform the rites or ordinances of the gospel now, all the faith and good works an individual might manifest would not serve to make him an heir of eternal life; if there were none to administer the ordinances which God has decreed as the means of induction into His kingdom, man's faith would be in vain, for the Savior taught:

Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born of water, and of the Spirit, he shall in no wise enter into the kingdom of God.—John 3: 5.

There will be no questioning of the statement that the work of the bestowal of the Holy Spirit must be performed by our heavenly Father; and it must be equally plain to every reasoning mind that the administration by which one is born of the water, is a work which must be performed by a man, one chosen and authorized of God to act for him, that such work may have the seal of His approval. When the angel appeared to Cornelius (Acts 10), while he could testify to the acceptance of Cornelius' alms and prayers, and tell him what he must do, it was not his privilege to go further; but he commanded Cornelius to send for one of the Lord's representatives—Simon Peter—giving him explicit directions where to find him, and added, "he shall tell thee what thou oughtest to do," and if Cornelius had neglected to send for and hear Peter, he would have been rejected and under condemnation.

When the Lord Jesus stopped Saul on his way to Damascus to persecute the Saints, he commanded him to "Arise, and go into the city, and it shall be told thee what thou must do" (Acts 9: 6), and then gave one of His chosen representatives, Ananias, instructions to go and deliver His message to Saul and baptize him (v. 18). It must be clear then that in order that the ordinances of God's house be properly administered, there must be men appointed of Him to so officiate lest they act presumptuously, and incur His displeasure.

Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name? and in thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name have done many wonderful works? And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you: depart from me, ye that work iniquity.—Matt. 7: 22, 23.

It will not do to claim that it is because they prophesy or cast out devils, or do wonderful works in His name, that they are condemned, for that would condemn all the early apostles and Saints; but it plainly refers to men who act without authority, causing disappointment and loss to those to whom they administer because they have acted presumptuously.

If then, the Lord has authorized men and delegated them as His representatives, and these men are today acting in purview of their holy calling in preaching the gospel, teaching the truth and administering in gospel ordinances, will not the rejection of these administrations be the rejection of the Lord just as unmistakably as though the Lord Himself was the administrator? Who can logically deny that such is the fact? And if one of these servants of Christ today in the discharge of the duties of his holy office calls at a house—whether it be of a member of the church of Christ, or where none make a profession of faith in Him—and there presents the gospel, or teaches the inmates their duties toward God and His church, if they refuse to hearken and do the things he teaches, according to the Scriptures, whom are they rejecting? Is it not the Son of God, and will condemnation not rest upon them for their disobedience? Would not Cornelius have been condemned for rejecting Peter's teachings? Would not Saul if he had refused to obey the instructions of Ananias? Will not you, if you despise those whom God sends to-day, and disregard their teachings and admonitions?

For he whom God hath sent speaketh the words of God.—John 3: 34.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

BRO. T. W. CHATBURN'S mission address is Santa Ana, California until further noted.

BRO. J. C. FOSS and S. F. CUSHMAN were at Fox, Missouri, over Sunday, expect to go to Kingstou, Missouri, Monday.

BRO. J. L. GOODRICH expected to reach Richmond, Virginia, by the 16th and his address will be 3829 4th street, Fulton, Richmond, Virginia. He learns there are a number of Saints scattered through the state, of whom he had not previously known, and very much desires that all such will send him their address. He feels hopeful for the future of the work in New Hope, from which point he wrote on the 12th, though the way seemed somewhat impeded for the present.

ANOTHER faithful soldier of the cross has finished his course, having kept the faith, and has gone to his rest among the tried and the true. Bro. Stephen Butler, of Kingfisher, Oklahoma Territory, departed this life July 6th, aged about 68 years. Bro. Butler loved the Lord's work and freely spent his means in disseminating it through tracts and other church publications. He was careful in his life that no reproach should be cast upon the church through any wrong act of his, and we believe his integrity and honesty was recognized even by those who most persistently opposed the faith he espoused. May the sweet consolation of God's Spirit comfort the bereaved ones, and lead them along the paths of peace which our brother sought to follow, that in the eternity to come the companionship so rudely severed by death may be renewed and perpetuated.

SR. A. R. CORSON, 3829 4th street, Fulton, Richmond, Virginia, would like to receive back numbers of the ENSIGN containing her "Notes and Comments." She has use for them in lending to interested parties. She thinks a calm reading of an argument is sometimes more effective than personal conversation. Those of the Saints who may have these copies to spare, will confer a favor upon Sr. Corson, a gifted and indefatigable worker in the Lord's cause, by sending them to her at the above address. Sr. Corson's articles show a remarkably rapid progress in her comprehension of the foundation upon which this work is based and her arguments are clear and pointed. She is not hiding her light "under a bushel" either, and if she continues in her diligence and faithfulness will, under God, accomplish much good. Her poems are of a high order also, and the ENSIGN is pleased to receive her contributions.

ELDER G. H. GRAVES, Chicago, Illinois:

We are preaching to hundreds of people every night in the week; the work here is onward in Chicago, and the Latter Day Saints are on the move. I baptized a very fine lady Wednesday afternoon, July 11th. I feel happy in the faith. Pray for us, dear Saints.

AT HALF PRICE!

We can still furnish our Historical Engraving at 25 cents, on the following conditions:

To those who remit their subscription to the ENSIGN one year in advance we will send a copy of our Historical Engraving for 25 cents; that is, for $1.25 we will send the ENSIGN for one year and a copy of the engraving. This picture sells at 50 cents each and is the same which we formerly sold at 75 cents.

This offer applies to either renewals or new subscriptions. If, however, any one secures a subscription from another party, they, as well as the subscriber, will be entitled to the picture at 25 cents each, but in order to secure it at this price the order must be accompanied by the amount to pay ENSIGN subscription one year in advance, and 25 cents for each copy of the engraving; otherwise the regular price of 50 cents will be required to obtain it.

We send with every picture a key which explains it throughout. Address all orders to

GENERAL CHURCH NEWS.

INDEPENDENCE.

Sr. H. H. Robinson is improving nicely.

Sr. Earl Corthell is convalescing rapidly.

Bro. Henry Kemp left for his field Saturday last, and Bro. I. M. Smith on Tuesday morning.

Frank Criley, Jr., has been quite ill with pleurisy and threatened pneumonia, but is now improving nicely.

Bro. Geo. Green has returned to his old trade and will now be found at Helf & Noble's barber shop, south side square.

Bro. Joseph Luff is preparing to go to Colorado shortly, to take up his mission work for a time. His health is still unsatisfactory.

Sr. J. A. Robinson, Sr., has been quite ill with lung trouble, and is also otherwise painfully afflicted. She is some better of the former, but the latter is quite painful.

Sr. G. E. Harrington, who has been ailing for some time, received some encouraging promises in administration last Sunday. We hope she may have a speedy return to health.

After a few days severe illness from bowel complaint, the sweet little baby boy of Bro. and Sr. Earl Corthell returned to the realms of the blessed, Wednesday afternoon. Everything known to those in attendance was done to restore his health, but nothing availed to that end. The funeral took place from the home this (Thursday) morning at 11 o'clock, Bishop G. H. Hilliard officiating.

The "Gleaners," the recently organized society of the young ladies of the church, will give a social on the lawn of Bro. and Sr. M. T. Short, next Thursday evening, July 26th. There will probably be a large attendance to encourage these young people in a laudable work. Refreshments will be served, and a general good time will be enjoyed consistent with the objects of this organization. The proceeds will be devoted to church and society needs.

Sunday morning at 11 o'clock Bishop G. H. Hilliard continued his subject of the previous Sunday, "The duties of parents to their children," giving much good instruction. At 8 p. m. Elder I. M. Smith discoursed upon the necessity of believing ALL the gospel. A prominent physician of the city not a member of the church, noticing Sr. Belle James reporting the sermon, came to the ENSIGN office Monday morning and stated if that sermon was published he wanted it. The afternoon communion service was excellent.

This year has been one of marked trial and affliction to the Saints of this place. There seems to have been a culmination of long standing physical disorders and a number of very serious cases have developed. But while severe suffering has been endured and physicians have said—in some cases a council of them—that recovery was not to be expected under the conditions shown, not one of these sisters has been taken. The Lord has manifested his power as promised in the early part of the year that our "sick should be healed." There have been cases in which the faith of the Saints has been severely tested, but the kind Father has fulfilled his promises, in which we rejoice and are glad.

ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI.

Last week's report was either delayed or mis-sent. [Too late.—Ed.]

Bro. Arthur Allen went to Caseyville, Saturday, remaining over Sunday. Bro. Geo. Baraclough occupied the hour at Oak Hill, while Bro. T. J. Elliott addressed the audience at Cheltenham, evening service.

At last the vexed question of church property is decided, and upon Tuesday of last week the transaction was concluded which gives us possession of the Glasgow Avenue church. Now, all of us must get to work and endeavor to pay off the debt.

At our business meeting of last Thursday, the Religion passed a motion to pay one-half of the amount promised towards the annulling of the debt on the "new" church; accordingly $50.00 will be handed to the committee upon demand.

Sunday, the 8th, Bro. Allen occupied the rostrum, preaching from the 15th chapter of St. John; Bro. Christenson addressed the Saints yesterday at 11 o'clock, Bro. Hitchcock speaking in the evening.

A number of strangers were present at the service yesterday morning; among them a young brother from Canada, who is going to locate here, we understand.

Next Sunday, the 22d, the last services will be held in the Elliott Avenue chapel; upon the 20th, it is suggested that Sunday School teachers will avail themselves of the opportunity of receiving their classes at their homes. Of course this is optional, but rather than have the children miss several Sabbaths it is contemplated. The two Sundays following we shall be at the reunion, and after that services can be held at the Glasgow Avenue church.

Prayer Union this week at residence of Sr. Cook, 2529 Slatery street.

LAMONI, IOWA.

Elder Salyards, wife, and son Joseph, made a brief visit to Burlington, Iowa.

Bro. James Dorsey, an invalid at the Home, died on the 11th inst. funeral sermon by Elder John Smith.

Bro. Bert Bergenson was married to Sr. May Bradfield on the 7th, by Elder Asa Cochran, at Leon.

A little son of a Sr. Case, who lives here, was baptized on the 8th, by Elder Gunsolley, in the Home pond.

Sr. John Smith made a visit to New Bedford, Massachusetts, and returned.

Bro. J. P. Anderson taught at the Center school-house, Sunday 8th. Bishop Anderson preached at Pleasanton same date, and Elder Stebbins continued his Book of Mormon lectures at the Evergreen church, and thus the restored gospel of latter days is being sounded in the regions round about this region of Zion's blessed land.

The usual good attendance at Sunday School at 9:30 a. m.; at 11 an excellent discourse by Apostle Lambert on the Master's words, "His gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations: and then shall the end come." (Matt. 24: 14). Elder Salyards was to speak at the church at night. At the Home Elders Carlisle and Gault were the speakers. Apostle Wight at the Evergreen church.

LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA.

Bro. D. L. Harris passed through the city last Saturday en route for his mission field, Oregon; he expected to spend a few days with the Tulare Saints. Bro. Harris has a host of friends in southern California, the reason for this is that he is a friend to them. A friendly man is never friendless.

Bro. Holt is at Garden Grove looking after his business affairs there. Bro. Burton is resting up and visiting among relatives near Santa Ana.

Yesterday Bro. T. W. Chatburn preached three times at Garden Grove and came to the city this a. m. to make final arrangements for tent work. He and Bro. Anderson will commence services at Orange on the evening of the 18th.

Bro. R. R. Dana, D. A. Anderson and wife and Elbert Smith and wife worshipped with the Los Angeles Saints yesterday. Bro. Elbert delivered a practical and carefully arranged discourse in the morning. He is a close thinker and impresses one as being thoroughly in earnest. We occupied in the evening, subject, "A divine horiscope of nations."

Bro. R. R. Dana starts for Ogden Tuesday; he will stop and visit at some intervening points.

Announcements are out for the wedding of two of our foremost church workers. Bro. Will Badham is to be congratulated, and Sr. Herminia Adam is not to be commiserated.

One present gratifying feature of our church work is the presence of Saints at the church services who have been cold and indifferent for years. A number of Saints who have not attended services since we came west, have been induced to renew their diligence and we are encouraged. "X."

DENVER, COLORADO.

Church, corner of 22d and Arapahoe Sts. Services Sunday—Sunday School at 9:45 a. m.; preaching at 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.; sacrament service the first Sunday in each month at 6 p. m. Prayer meeting Wednesday evening. Zion's Religio-Literary Society Friday evening.

Very warm; we had a hard rain the night of the Fourth, but all traces of it are gone owing to the extreme heat.

Bro. G. T. Griffiths and daughter arrived Saturday night, the 7th inst., with the delegates from the Kansas City Convention. Bro. Smith, colaborer of Bro. Griffith, arrived Sunday morning. Bro. G. preached three sermons for us, two on "Priesthood," which were very interesting. They left Tuesday morning for the far west.

Bro. J. B. Roush has been called to Iowa, on account of sickness of his father.

Bro. Alma Hansen is doing effective work in a ministerial way in eastern Arapahoe county.

Bro. M. R. Scott and J. J. Boswell, of Indiana, arrived in the city, Friday, the 13th, and will depart for the south part of the state in a few days. They go to Antonito to combat the efforts of the Utah elders who are making quite an effort there.

Sunday services at the church preaching by Elder M. R. Scott. A shower of rain came up in the evening which made the attendance light, but those who did attend were well repaid for the effort.

We visited Bro. Joseph Graham at the hospital on Wednesday. There is but little hope of his recovery; his right side is entirely paralyzed, also his vocal organs, and as his hearing is very bad it is difficult to converse with him at all, but he manifested pleasure at seeing us as best he could. His appetite is good and he is looking well, but is confined to the bed. Let the Saints remember him in their prayers.

One of the saddest deaths we have had to attend was that of Sr. Bettie Stannard, who died Friday, the 13th. She was seemingly in the best of health till the 3d inst., when she seemed to have a premonition of something of a serious character, and on the 5th her mind gave way to that degree that she had to be confined in the hospital and died Friday. She was baptized and confirmed by the writer, who also blessed her two little ones the Sunday before her sad affliction came. She has two sisters in the church. She leaves a babe about four months old. When first taken sick she told her husband when the end would come, and it was so to the hour.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA.

Services at Golden West Hall, 320 Post street, every Sunday. Sunday School 10 a. m., preaching 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.; prayer meeting first Sunday of each month at 12:15 noon. Elder C. C. Parkin presiding elder, residence 3010 16th street.

We had preaching Sunday morning by Charles A. Parkin, and at 7:45 p. m., by John A. Saxe. Both sermons were good and well received.

Friday evening was prayer meeting night at the Religio. The attendance was good, and the evening well spent.

Elders Fred B. Blair and R. Etzenhouser have gone to Eureka, Humboldt county, on mission-ary work.

Bro. Allen and Chase spent a few days, including the Fourth, here in our city, but have again returned to the Central district, their field of labor. They are now with the tent at Mountain View.

Elbert Smith and wife have gone to Los Angeles.

There was a very pleasant gathering of Saints and friends at the residence of Sr. Douglas last Saturday evening. The occasion was a surprise party given to Bro. Roy Douglas and wife. The evening was pleasantly spent with music, singing, recitations, etc., followed by ice cream, cakes and lemonade.

The Sisters' prayer Union held its regular session Thursday afternoon.

CHICAGO, ILLINOIS.

Branch headquarters, 716 W. Van Buren St., Sunday meetings 2:45 and 7:45 p. m.; Lang Mission, 3411 Cottage Grove Ave., 10:45 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.; West Pullman branch, 12024 Union Ave., 10:45 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.; Parkside Mission, 7124 Stony Island Ave., 3:00 and 7:30 p. m.; 508 W. 37th St. (colored mission), 10:30 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.

We were disappointed yesterday in not seeing President Smith with us, but our disappointment was dissipated this morning by receiving word from him that he would be in our city soon to remain over next Sunday, the 22d. He authorizes us to announce three sermons, only two for Sunday, so we arrange Lang Mission on Friday night, the 20th; West Pullman Sunday morning, 11 a. m.; headquarters, 716 Van Buren street, Sunday night, 7:45 p. m. We bespeak for him a hearty welcome.

Mrs. Patten and Mrs. J. Hale, cousins to Bro. Joseph Smith, were in attendance at our afternoon service yesterday, and seemed to enjoy the sociability of the Saints to them.

There were five or six of the Utah elders at our service yesterday, and enjoyed the discourse which was in defense of the calling and work of Joseph the martyr. They were evidently attracted by the prospect of seeing and hearing Joseph, the son of the martyr.

Bro. S. C. Good occupied at headquarters last night, in the absence of the elder. His theme was the Christ, and he spoke well.

By invitation we preached at Bro. Graves' mission last evening, assisting in the confirmation of Sr. Clara B. Joseph, whom he had baptized on Wednesday last. No doubt she will make a substantial help in the cause, being intelligent and unemotional.

Birdie V. O. Searls and Wm. Forest Searls, grandchildren of Sr. Culver, were blessed at our meeting yesterday afternoon. Types of innocency, the little ones are received. Elders Good, Pitt and Terry officiated.

Mr. C. W. Rice, grandson of Hon. Cyrus Walker, who, with Stephen A. Douglas, visited Nauvoo, May 2, 1841, and who, as a lawyer, defended Joseph Smith in some of the trials in which he was arraigned under false charges, attended our services at Lang mission yesterday morning to see the son of the man to whom his grandfather was a friend. Mr. Rice lives in the city.

Bro. Wm. Strange and S. Everson have been doing street work at 63d and Wentworth, where there is quite an interest. We held forth at 48th avenue on Saturday night, with good interest and opposition, distributing 324 pages of literature including 18 ENSIGNS, of which we have received 96 numbers in answer to request. Send more.

Our monthly priesthood meeting convenes Monday night, July 30th; there will be two papers read and discussed; "Should Parliamentary Rules Be Observed?" and "Conduct and Duty of the Priesthood in Prayer and Testimony Meetings." The first forty minutes will be devoted to hearing reports and experiences in street work. Let all come prepared to discuss intelligently the question presented.

At a late election Sr. Mamie Pitt was elected president of the Religio, with Sr. Della Braidwood vice president, and Sr. Maud Keir secretary. We hope the good work of the Religio will go on.

For union and advancement,
J. M. TERRY.

LETTER DEPARTMENT.

HYDESVILLE, Cal., July 9.

Editor Ensign:—Bro. Etzenhouser and the writer, on July 2d, took passage on the steamer Orizaba for Eureka, which will explain our present whereabouts. We expect to remain in this country until about reunion time.

Our reunion meets at Bushrod Park, Oakland, on the last day of August, to continue ten days. Arrangements have been made for free water and lights, and tents 8x10 can be rented for $1.50, 10x12 for $2.00, for the time of the reunion. We will have plenty of good straw so that you need only to bring a tick and your bedding. We are expecting to run a co-operative eating tent where meals will be furnished at cost to all campers. We confidently expect that one of the first presidency will be present. We hope that all of the Saints who can will come and bring the Spirit of the Master with them.

While the reunion this year is under the care of the northern district, yet we trust that the Saints of the central district will meet with us and enjoy a season of refreshing from the Lord. Address all inquiries to Elder R. Ferris, 630 Chestnut street, Oakland, California, he being secretary of the committee.

Since coming to my field, the middle of May, my time has been occupied in going over the district and trying to get an understanding of its needs. Have visited a good many scattered Saints, many of whom I found strong in the faith, though not having church privileges. Looking forward we see great demands for labor and feel the force of the words, "there must be no sleeping soldiers in the army of the Lord." The true soldier of Christ will be so busy that he won't find time to be idle.

We started meetings at Cuddeback last Friday night, and hope that results for good may follow, but it is too early to attempt a forecast. We expect to open up as many places in this country as time will permit.

We have some Saints in this country that are the "simon pure article," and it has rejoiced our hearts to meet them. At Eureka we were entertained at the home of Bro. and Sr. Kinsey and were repaid for the discomfort incident to the sea trip by the generous bestowal of the Spirit both when in conversation and in administration to Sr. Kinsey.

We are now at the home of Bro. S. B. Robinson, about three miles from Hydesville. It is pleasant, indeed, to have ones lost cast in such pleasant places. Bro. Etzenhouser has developed into quite a blackberry hunter.

We have raised over three hundred dollars towards the college debt in this district and believe that double that amount will be raised by reunion time. I do not look at this matter from a college standpoint, but from the standpoint that the church is in debt, and is my love of this latter day work sufficient to prompt me to put my hand into my pocket and help pay this debt?

May God inspire the hearts of the Saints to help remove this as well as all other obstacles to the onward march of this marvelous work and a wonder. Any of the Saints of this district who desire to be among the thousand to pay twenty-five dollars to cancel the college debt, can write me and I will put their names in the Northern California list. God will abundantly bless you for the sacrifice.

Your brother in Christ,
FRED B. BLAIR.

RICHMOND, Utah, July 7.

Editor Ensign:—One month ago today I bid adieu to the fair land of Zion and her denizens, and started for the valleys of the Rocky mountains, over the Union Pacific railway, conditions at home having made it impracticable to leave sooner, though we felt anxious to reach our destination and get started to work. We were obliged, however, to lay over at Denver some five hours, so we hunted up my nephew, Alfred Clow, son of Wm. Clow, of your city, with whom we took dinner, and spent the hours very pleasantly.

We resumed our journey at 5 p. m., and reached Ogden the next day about noon. As we could not get a train to Logan, our destination, until next morning, I decided to go and stay over night at Bro. and Sr. Chase's; got there just in time to assist them in consuming the noon day meal; don't know whether they appreciated my assistance or not, but it was given with the best of feelings; we always feel like we are at home there; they have plenty of room, and, better than all, they always give you plenty of welcome.

Next morning, which was Sunday, June 10th, we arrived at Logan; Bro. S. D. Condit, who lives there at present, was at the train to meet us. He had secured the use of the Presbyterian church (their minister being away on a vacation), and had me billed to speak. We had a nice sized crowd; the minister's wife played the organ and helped us sing. We spoke with good liberty and had good attention. When we got through the minister's wife complimented the effort, and said no one could find fault with that for it was all Bible doctrine.

The next two days were spent in making seats and putting up the tent.

We got started with our meetings Tuesday evening, and have been pounding away every night since, with the exception of two; we missed one night moving to this place, and the night of July 4th. Logan is quite a nice town of about six to eight thousand inhabitants, mostly Mormons. One of their big temples is located there, and the people are very much set in their religious views. The first four nights we preached on gospel subjects, but very few came out. The next Sunday we went to their tabernacle meeting, and just before they closed, I sent a notice of our meetings, also the subject for that night, to the stand, and asked them to please read it. They passed it from one to the other on the stand, then one of them got up and said they had been handed a notice to read, but they did not read notices only for their own organization, and closed the meeting. Their elders in the East are always telling how liberal the people in Utah are, but that is a sample of my experience here the last three years.

They have four or five ward meeting houses there, besides the tabernacle, and Bro. Condit asked the different bishops if they would let us use their house a night or two, and he was only refused that many times. We preached there seventeen times, had a slim turnout most of the time; only a few nights, when on "Succession," had a fair crowd. We gave them "straight goods a yard wide," and gave opportunity each evening for questions or reply; but for some reason or other they did not feel to reply. Perhaps it was their lenient(?) dispositions or their great desire to treat strangers with courtesy(?); at any rate they took their medicine like little men, and while some of them made a few faces, yet they never said a word.

From Logan we came to this place, Richmond, Utah. This is a town of about fourteen hundred inhabitants, about all Mormons, as far as I have seen some eight or ten years since any of our elders have preached here. The first Sunday we were here I went to the Mormon testimony meeting, and asked if I might speak a few minutes; they consented. I bore my testimony to the truthfulness of the latter day work, and related some of the blessings of God which I had enjoyed from my boyhood days until the present time, in the Reorganized church. Called their attention to the fact that there was a difference between us, and asked how could we settle that difference and be united. Not by calling each other hard names, but by taking the law of God and reasoning together. I felt good in my talk and they seemed to think it was all right.

The next night we had a good crowd at our tent; the bishop and several leading men of the town were there. I spoke on the subject, "Is Joseph Smith the Legal Successor of his Father?" I don't think I ever enjoyed better liberty; evidence upon evidence was furnished to show that the Reorganization was built on a solid foundation and fortified on all sides by the revelations of God. We gave privilege for questions. I noticed several glance over toward the bishop as much as to say, "Can't you say a word in defense of our position?" but not a word from any one. I told them we would be pleased to have one of their men present their side, then the people could judge for themselves. After meeting I asked the bishop if he knew of anything in the law of God to indicate that the president of the twelve should become president of the church. He answered frankly that he knew nothing in the written word to that effect. It must be in Brigham's law or "keys that the written word never spoke of, nor never would."

On the 4th of July we attended their church, where we heard a very nice program rendered, but the most peculiar feature was at the close; the bishop announced there would be a grand ball tonight in the church. I guess I was a little like they are towards us, rather curious to see how they performed, but did not care to be seen at such a gathering. Our tent is right across the street from the church, so I thought I could "kill two birds with one stone;" I could watch the tent and proceedings in the church at the same time. On the stoop, or entrance to the church, were a number of young men smoking, walking the cake walk, and dancing different step dances; on the inside the seats were all piled in one corner, music was playing, and the young ladies, nearly all dressed in white, some with white slippers, each had her partner of the opposite sex, they dressed in black, and from what I could see they were only hitting the high places on the floor. You may wonder how I could stand across the street, look through the window and see the ladies' slippers; well, I saw those as they were going to church.

Next, I went down the street about a half block, and although nearly every one here are Mormons, there I saw a saloon with open door, men drinking, smoking, playing pool, and I never heard worse or more swearing in my life in the same length of time.

As I view conditions here, and see the many things carried on in the places that are supposed to be set apart for holy purposes, and think of the statement of our divine Master in the temple, that his Father's house should be a house of prayer, I am inclined to believe that we, as Saints of God, should show the world a good example along those lines, and use the house of God for the purpose for which it was built. I am not opposed to suppers or ice cream socials, but don't believe the church is the proper place to hold them.

My desire and prayer to God is that we may all do well our part, and that our lives may prove our love to him; that we may reach that condition, as a church, that God can use us as instruments to bring about the consummation of his great work.

I am still in the conflict for truth and right.

R. J. PARKER.

COVE, Arkansas, July 13.

Editor Ensign:—We have just been listening to the word preached as taught by man, and as it is taught by those having authority from God. One Rev. Mr. Parker, who has been preaching at our lumber mill for the past week, gave me reason to call some of his statements in question, whereupon he asked me to take the stand and prove that his statements were wrong; but not feeling able in myself to do the matter justice, had I had the authority, I told him that I would meet his statements, and prove them by the Bible to be contrary to the law of God. He said, "All right, bring on your man," stating that he would preach the next night on the "Spirits in Prison." I told him I would have a man to present our side of the subject for the consideration of the people.

Well, I was as good as my word, for before sunset we had Bro. J. Cole Moxon out here, and we are so glad he came, for we surely heard the subjects, "Soul Sleeping," "Spirits in Prison," and the "Resurrection of the Dead," handled in such a way that those who heard, even the Rev. gentleman himself, will never forget it. Bro. Moxon followed his hour's talk—which was a labored effort on the "Spirits in Prison," attempting to prove that the soul of man is unconscious after death and the resurrection—and presented the truth to the people in such plainness, that it did my soul good. Bro. Moxon presented to the people the pure corn in the ear, as the Rev. gentleman told him to "tear the shucks off of it now," and he surely did, for when he had showed where the dead are to hear the gospel, and where they will cry out with a loud voice, "How long O Lord, holy and true, dost thou not judge and avenge our blood on them that dwell on the earth," and many other similar passages, the people could plainly see that, according to the light of the gospel, those who have departed this life, either to the prison world or to the realms of light, remain in a very highly conscious state.

The Rev. gentleman tried hard to prove that there had been one resurrection and that there is to be but one more, but when Bro. Moxon showed how utterly impossible it is to prove that the resurrection mentioned in the 4th and 5th verses of Revelation 20, could be the resurrection that took place when Christ was raised from the dead, he began to get very uneasy; but when the opportunity was given him, we noticed that he did not try to prove that point any more.

After Bro. Moxon had finished his remarks, he stated to the audience that on Sunday evening he would speak to them on the subject of prophets, past, present and future, at which the gentleman said that he would be right here to answer it, and asked Bro. Moxon how that would suit him? Bro. Moxon said that such as that would suit him every day of the week.

One thing was accomplished by this friendly exchange of thought, and that is, many heard the gospel message who would not come out to hear it at any other time. We are glad we have such men as Bro. Moxon, who can put plain facts and gospel truths before the people, so that they can see the difference between truth and error. May God prosper his work, and bless those who are so ably defending it before the world, is my prayer.

Your brother in Christ,
ELLIS FORD.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Iowa, July 9.

Brother Editor:—Since our last letter much of interest has transpired in this part of the country.

Bro. D. R. Chambers and I concluded our meeting in Neola and vicinity; results two baptisms and the gospel story told to many who had never heard it before.

The last Sunday in June was a red letter day for Crescent City. Bro. Chambers had been preaching in the region round about, and as a result sixteen went down into the waters of baptism. A large concourse of people witnessed the rite, after which all repaired to the chapel and witnessed the confirmation, which occupied an hour, and it was a time long to be remembered.

The candidates, with one exception, were adults and heads of families, and represented some of the best and most influential people in the country. This makes eighteen that have been added since conference. Thus the good work goes on, as a result of faithful work.

A number of the priesthood were at the meeting and greatly helped Bro. Chambers in his labors.

The great debate is now a matter of history. I am sorry Bro. Wight did not have a foe more worthy of his steel. Otteson is no debater, and Bro. Wight was compelled to cross over on his ground and assume an affirmative negative before he had any ground for discussion. He spent the first speech contending for those principles in which all were agreed. He seemed determined to keep Wight out of disputed territory as long as he could. But Wight forced the issue, and finally drove him from cover. All our people know Bro. Wight's line of argument, all know what they were, a grand defense of the teaching of the prophet, seer and revelator. I actually felt sorry for Otteson, a weak man with a weak cause.

I am not sure, however, that any of the Salt Lake faction could have done any better than Otteson did. His attempt to bolster up polygamy by trying to make the Seer Joseph its author, by introducing witnesses who had heretofore perjured themselves, hurt his cause more than anything else, when Bro. Wight turned the searchlight on their characters.

I think a good deal grew out of the discussion, for these men have been contending to the world that there was no difference between the two organizations. But when driven in a corner during debate, he said that from the very fact that the Reorganized church discarded plural marriage and baptism for the dead, therefore they could not be the successor church. As to the matter of building temples, he contended the Lord gave a standing order to build temples, therefore they needed no command to build.

It did not take a very shrewd mind to discover that he believed in polygamy, although he made no defense of it as a doctrine.

CHORDS FROM THE HARP OF EPHRAIM.

ELDER S. W. L. SCOTT.

PART II—NO. 1.—CONCLUDED.

Once in awhile we hear it alleged that the red men of the forest—the copper colored tribes—the American Indians, are the Ephraimites; but the question comes up—and to ask it seems to be the answer—Have they been absent from their own border, or have they been in an enemies' land? Isn't just the reverse of this true? Hasn't the enemy had possession of the Indian's border? They have been crowded back, but not beyond the borders. The Indian is within his border.

Rachel's vision contrasts with the prophetic period called the "restitution" when the "out-cast," "wandering" condition of her children would give place to one of "pushing the people together from the ends of the earth," when they would be the depository of God's truth, and the conservator of his glory. "For lo, I will command and I will sift the house of Israel among all nations, like corn is sifted in a sieve; yet shall not the least grain fall upon the earth."—Amos 9: 9.

In this prophetic utterance, inspiration touches the keys of Ephraim's restoration and identification. In the unfolding and increasing grandeur of Ephraim's "return," and his position in the world's great history, Jeremiah says the Lord invites universal attention and consideration:

"Hear the word of the Lord, O ye nations, and declare it in the isles afar off, and say, He that scattered Israel will gather him and keep him as a shepherd doth his flock. * * * For I am a father to Israel and Ephraim is my firstborn. * * * Therefore they shall come and sing in the height of Zion and flow together to the goodness of the Lord; * * * and their soul shall be as a watered garden; and they shall not sorrow any more at all."—Jer. 31: 10.

Beautiful and comforting is the promise of the Lord herein revealed. No more will they linger in the "outer darkness" of captivity so revolting and bitter. No longer shaken in the sieve of disfranchisement as unworthy of citizenship, or the sieve of ostracism as unworthy of social standing or esteem; the sieve of "civil disability" as unworthy the rights of property—ownership, or education. Sad and solemn the march into and through captivity. The Broken Harp murmurs the plaintive allegro of sorrow and shame:

"I have surely heard Ephraim bemoaning himself thus: Thou hast chastised me and I was chastised as a bullock [one of the "firstlings of Joseph's flock"] unaccustomed to the yoke; turn thou me and I shall be turned; for thou art the Lord my God * * * I will surely have mercy upon him, saith the Lord."—Jer. 31: 12, 18, 20.

This latter clause indicates that the discords will melt away; the curtain hoists, the divine baton taps, and one great and grand symphony rolls out over the nations that "Ephraim is my firstborn." "I will make Ephraim to ride, Judah shall plow, and Jacob shall break his clods."—Hosea 10: 11. "They shall walk after the Lord, when he shall roar, then the children [Rachel's] shall tremble from the west."—Hosea 11: 10.

The word "roar," according to analysis, means to "cry out," to "speak," "to be disquieted." By reference to Joel 3: 16, we learn that the Lord is to "roar"—speak—"out of Zion," and "utter his voice from Jerusalem, and then he will be "the strength of the children of Israel." Ephraim being the Lord's firstborn in a restored gospel sense, will constitute the Lord's chief organ or instrument through which he "roars" or speaks. Ephraim will be the "strength" of the Almighty, fulfilling the prophecy of the tuneful bard of Israel—"Ephraim also is the strength of mine head."—Psa. 108: 8. Also, "Before Ephraim, Benjamin and Manasseh stir up thy strength, and come and save us." (Psa. 80: 2.)

Hence the idea of Joseph's "horns" receives emphasis—"they shall push the people together from the ends of the earth," which will be by the restoration of the priesthood authority committed by the Lord speaking "out of Zion." For be it remembered that the inheritance or patrimony pertaining to the office of priesthood was obtained by Jacob, conferred upon his son Joseph, to be transmitted to the two boys—Ephraim and Manasseh—which, together with the priesthood, descended by lineal right. Rachel's firstborn—Joseph—was endorsed of high heaven as the priest of the family. He possessed both prophetic and seeric gifts. By means of the same, he became the savior of the entire family when famine blighted Egypt and adjacent lands.

This "gathering from the ends of the earth" was not accomplished through Judah 1800 years ago, but is to be consummated through the tribe of Joseph—Ephraim and Manasseh. Paul referred to it in the future from his day, and denominated it "the dispensation of the fullness of times." (Eph. 1: 10). Moreover, "fullness of times" signifies ripeness of historical preparation on one hand, and Paul's day was too early for that.

"Tis true the prophetic word gave Judah a pre-eminence with the other tribes while they were in the land of Palestine, because "the scepter shall not depart from Judah until Shiloh come," Judah was, therefore, chief ruler. "But the birthright was Joseph's. Judah's crown was broken when Jesus came in their midst, and they refused to be gathered. The scepter was shaken like the "reed in the wind," and lost. The kingdom was also taken from them, and given to a nation who would honor it and bring forth the fruits. (Matt. 21: 43). This nation to whom the kingdom would go, after Judah had rejected the overtures of Jesus Christ, was evidently constituted of the "other sheep" which would "hear his voice"—a branch of the house of Israel.

To only such was Jesus sent. "Whose branches run over the wall," was a promise of patriarchal blessing as to Joseph's fruitfulness, 1689 years B. C. The "multitude of nations" into which Ephraim was to grow after he "ran over the wall," and "in the midst of the earth," was blessed with special gifts from heaven as Moses prophesied, "even the precious things of heaven," and for a period of 300 years after Jesus had visited and conferred the kingdom upon them by personal ministrations, they produced "the fruits" of that kingdom. And now, in the latter days, the history of the building up of his kingdom among them, has been lifted "out of the earth," and placed beside the history of the establishment of the same kingdom in Palestine; and, upon examination, the rule employed on both continents is the same. No change. Jesus claimed "commandment" and "authority" from God, for what he did, on both hemispheres. The calling and ordination of twelve apostles, on the "land of their inheritance" was provided for by the same law which contained provisions for them on the eastern continent, or Judah's inheritance, and commandment and authority was claimed for the work they performed.

The kingdom of God, composed of inspired classes of officers, its laws, authorities and blessings were divinely intended to exalt, purify and educate to that ennobling condition of spiritual power and light that our heavenly Father could place confidence in our integrity and ability to do business for him on the other side. And the item in the prophecy cited from the Book of Mormon, as to the order of judgment, is in strict accord with the Savior's instructions to the twelve apostles in Palestine: "Ye who have followed me, in the regeneration [resurrection, I. T., renovation, Camp. Trans], when the Son of man shall sit on the throne of his glory, ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel."—Matt. 19: 28.

When will the Son of man be seated upon the throne of his glory? Answer, "When the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory."—Matt. 25: 31.

It is quite amusing to note the strained efforts of some devoted people, especially the blustering reformation under Campbell, Scott and Stone, in making application of Matt. 19: 28 to the ever memorable Pentecost. According to their application, the Son of man was crowned king, the throne of David received him as kingly occupant, and the brethren associated with him on twelve thrones, began reigning and judging the twelve tribes of Israel, all on Pentecost day. This theory contradicts the testimony of both Jesus Christ and ecclesiastical and profane history. Jesus says he will take the "throne of his glory" when he comes, when the heavens shall burst asunder and reveal him, accompanied with angels bright, and when he does take the throne, "before him shall be gathered ALL NATIONS." When he is thus invested with the power of throne and kingly glory, then the apostles should be associated with him in the judgment of Israel.

Again, both the Bible and authentic history unite to present the stubborn fact, that "twelve tribes" were not in, nor anywhere around Jerusalem on Pentecost day, for them to judge from the apostolic thrones. Nine and one-half tribes having been led away in the Assyrian invasion 721 B. C., the Bible affirms, "there was none left but the tribe of Judah only."—2 Kings 17: 18. After the Babylonian captivity, when Cyrus had conquered the "head of gold," he issued a proclamation and "put it in writing" which gave the Jews—the tribe of Judah and some few of the tribe of Benjamin—permission to return to Jerusalem. They availed themselves of the clemency of the head of the silver kingdom—Medo-Persian—and under Zerubbable returned to the city. Were there when Jesus came; hence, "he came to his own, but his own received him not."—John 1: 11. Who were his own? Answer: "For it is evident that our Lord sprang from Judah."—Heb. 7: 14. Jesus is called "the lion of the tribe of Judah."—Rev. 5: 5.

The application then, of Jesus' declaration by the disciples is wrong, is a misapplication, for when the Savior occupies the throne, the kingdom in its physical form will be inaugurated in Israel. The question, "Lord, wilt thou, at this time, restore the kingdom to Israel?" will then receive answer in definite form as certified by the Apostle Peter, Acts 3: 27. "The heavens must receive [retain] Jesus until the restitution of all things spoken by the mouth of all the holy prophets since the world began." Then he will step his feet upon Mount Olivet and it shall rend in twain. Then will he find the congregated tribes of Israel. "They shall look on me whom they have pierced" followed by faith, mourning, repentance and baptism in the "fountain opened for sin in the house of David." Then will "judges as at the first, and counsellors as at the beginning" (Isa. 1: 26), be divinely installed to equitably administer judgment to the twelve tribes of Israel.

"But," says the objector, "how will the judgment apply especially to the twelve tribes of literal Israel, when they are mixed up, confused and amalgamated with the gentiles?" Ah, although, blended with other nationalities, yet do they maintain a distinct existence—are "preserved." The prophet Isaiah declares of the latter day gathering and salvation of Israel: "It is a light thing that thou shouldst be my servant to raise up the tribes of Jacob, and to restore the preserved of Israel."—Isa. 49: 6.

It may be noted that it is the fate of all governments of human support, to have their rise and fall; but Moses' prophecy of the utter dispersion of Israel among all the people of the earth, did not comprehend destruction, but a species of perpetual preservation; particularly is this miraculous, because no other people can exist under every climatic change or condition. It is historically established that the Danes invaded, conquered, and remained in England, yet the traces of their origin soon began to disappear. The Normans and Saxons did the same with like results. The American people have sprung from many peoples, and an amalgamation of all these nationalities is general in this nation. The English of India, and the Dutch of Java became sickly in the second generation, and would cease to be if it were not for fresh importations of vigorous healthy young people, while the Israelite is peculiarly a true cosmopolitan, ubiquitous everywhere, from the coral strands of India to the frozen shores of Greenland.

The Hebrew journal says: "The low, crowded and filthy district of Rome in which the Israelite dwells with impunity, could hardly be inhabited by another people."

You will observe that they ARE "the preserved" and the abrasions of the world, which have been terrible to them, have not changed their nationality. We will close the evidence on Israel's distinct existence by a quotation from the Duke of Argyll:

"The preservation of the Jews as a distinct people during so many centuries of complete dispersion, is a fact standing nearly, if not absolutely, alone in the history of the world. It is at variance with all other experience of the laws which govern the amalgamation with each other of different families of the human race. It is not surprising, therefore, that the preservation of the Jews, partly from the relation in which it stands to the apparent fulfillment of prophecy, and partly from the extraordinary nature of the fact itself, is tacitly assumed by many persons to come strictly within the category of miraculous events. An extraordinary resisting power has been given to the Jewish people against those dissolving and disintegrating forces which have caused the disappearance of every other race placed under similar conditions. They have been torn from home and country, and removed, not in a body, but in scattered fragments over the world. Yet they are as distinct from every other people now as they were in the days of Solomon. Nevertheless this resisting power, wonderful though it be, is the result of special laws overruling those in ordinary operation. It has been affected by the use of means. Those means have been superhuman, they have been beyond human contrivance and arrangement. In their concatenation and arrangement they seem to indicate the purpose of a living will, seeking and affecting the fulfillment of its design.—Reign of Law, p. 20.

To the foregoing we will add a flash light of inspiration from the Bible.

"Thus saith the Lord, which giveth the sun for a light by day, and the ordinances of the moon and of the stars, for a light by night, which divideth the sea, when the waves thereof roar; the Lord of Hosts is his name: If those ordinances depart from before me, saith the Lord, then the seed of Israel also shall cease from being a nation before me forever."—Jer. 31:35, 36.

Thus we perceive that the distinct national existence of Israel is measured by the duration of sun, moon and stars. No persecution, "civil disabilities," nor humiliation have ever broken the threads of national warp and woof.

But if Ephraim is "mixed among the people" and are unidentified, how shall he be known? Isaiah says, "God will make an everlasting covenant with them; and their seed shall be known among the gentiles, and their offspring among the people."—Isa. 61:8, 9. This covenant made with them involves revelation, and truly the Lord will sustain his attribute and record of unchangeability, and make them known as he did in days of old, when doubts were entertained as to genealogy and lineage—"raise up a servant" to "restore the preserved of Israel" authorized to bear "the Urim and Thummim."—Ezra. 2: 63.

When Jesus revealed the new and everlasting covenant to the inhabitants of America, soon after his ministry at Jerusalem—the covenant promised to Israel (Jer. 31:31-34)—he commanded them to write it, the covenant, as containing the fulness of the gospel, "the great things of the law," and it was incorporated as a part of their history. Being disloyal to the provisions of the same, they fell from their exalted station and apostatized, and their last prophet, Moroni by name, was instructed to deposit the word, the letter of that everlasting covenant, in the hill, called by Jaredites, Ramah, and by Nephites, Cumorah. This word was to come forth in due time of the Lord, by way of gentile. Ezekiel testifies that it was to be put into the hand of Ephraim, not as his own history, but as the record of Joseph to be united with the record of Judah—the Bible—which he had during his ramblings among the gentiles, and he, having conformed to the gentile customs, drank into their spirit and bowed to their corrupted forms of worship which "denies the power of godliness;" "the great things of the law," when presented to him, "were accounted as a strange thing."—Hosea 8:12. But immediately following the union of the two records, was to be the gathering and union of all the children of Israel into one nationality and one kingdom subject to "one king."—Ezek. 37: 21, 22.

By reference to Jer. 33:26, we learn that the prerogatives of kingship and judgship are in the line of Israel; indeed, "David shall never want a man to set upon the throne of the house of Israel."—Jer. 33:17. Why, the Israelites constitute such a chief or principal factor in the eternal well-being of the entire world, that Paul says (Rom. 11-11, 12), "through their fall salvation is come unto the gentiles," and "riches to the world," and their casting away the reconciliation of the world, and their receiving be "life from the dead."—v. 15.

That the seed of Jacob and David are to be rulers in the physical kingdom of Israel, is asserted in the following prophecy:

"Thus saith the Lord, If my covenant be not with day and night, and if I have not appointed the ordinances of heaven and earth; then will I cast away the seed of Jacob and David my servants, so that I will not take any of his seed to be rulers over the seed of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob: for I will cause their captivity to return, and have mercy on them."—Jer. 33:26.

In chapter 30, verses 20 and 21, he further elucidates, "Their children shall be as aforesaid, and their congregation [church, kingdom] shall be established before me, * * * and their nobles shall be of themselves, and their governors from the midst of them."

In happy congeniality and conformity to the idea of the Palestinian apostles—which were of Judah—judging the twelve American Nephite ministers—who were of Joseph—we cite you to Zechariah 12: 7: "The Lord also shall save the tents of Judah first." Why save Judah first? "That the glory of the house of David, and the glory of the inhabitants of Jerusalem do not magnify themselves against Judah." Jesus Christ, "the Lion of the tribe of Judah," once the Lamb of Calvary, will occupy the kingly throne, pre eminently as "King of kings, and Lord of Lords," and his dominion extend from "the rivers to the ends of the earth." The whole earth is included in the "grant," the title of which is embodied in the covenant made with Abraham (Gen. 22: 15, 18), "and thy seed shall possess the gate of his enemies; and in thy seed shall be the nations of the earth be blessed."

Clearly, if he possesses the gate of his enemies, the citidels of the world will belong to him. He will be the emperor of the world. He and his seed will occupy central positions from which blessings shall radiate to all the nations of the world. Hence Paul, in his exposition of the same prophecy, says: "For the promise that he should be heir of the world, was not to Abraham or to his seed through the law, but through the righteousness of faith." (Rom. 4: 13). Thus Abraham, Christ, and all who are Christ's will be the joint-possessors of the world, when heirship shall be superseded by possession. Christ's throne, and his occupancy of it, is pre-decreed, "I have made a covenant with my chosen, I have sworn unto David my servant, thy seed will I establish forever, and build up thy throne to all generations." (Psa. 89: 4). The angel promised his mother before he was born, "The Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David, and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever."—Luke 1: 32, 33.

We have noticed in Matthew 25, that he takes this throne, "when he comes with all the holy angels" in a trinal glory—a threefold glory—the glory of the Father, the glory of all the holy angels, and His own glory. Surely sufficiently brilliant and intense, that not only the wicked desire rocks, hills and mountains to veil that glory from sight, but even the heavens and the earth "flee away" (Rev. 6: 16; 16: 20), the islands move, the seas are perturbed, and the earth is touched by the restitutory power of God. Joy to the world, the Lord will come, Let earth receive her King.

But the apostles are to occupy thrones also:

"And I appoint unto you a kingdom, as my Father hath appointed unto me, that ye may eat and drink at my table in my kingdom, and sit on thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel."—Luke 22: 29, 30.

These thrones of judgment, and the equitable administrations they imply, are to be located at Jerusalem. The throne of David occupied by "the King of kings," will be, Proof:

"At that time they shall call Jerusalem the throne of the Lord; and all the nations shall be gathered unto it, to the name of the Lord, to Jerusalem; neither shall they walk any more after the imagination of their evil heart."—Jer. 3: 14.

"And the Lord shall be king over all the earth; in that day shall there be one Lord, and his name one."—Zech. 14: 9.

The thrones of the Judean apostles will also be located there, for the Psalmist referring to this time, declares:

"I was glad when they said unto me, Let us go into the house of the Lord. Our feet shall stand within thy gates, O Jerusalem. Jerusalem is builded as a city that is compact together. Whither the tribes go up, the tribes of the Lord, unto the testimony of Israel, to give thanks unto the name of the Lord. For there are set thrones of judgment, the thrones of the house of David."—Psa. 122: 1-6.

That those who occupy these set thrones will judge the house of Israel, including the "twelve ministers" of the seed of Joseph, even the whole house of Israel, we cite you to the Saviour's language once more, "Ye shall also sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel." But if the dominion of Jesus Christ extends from sea to sea, "from the rivers to the ends of the earth," there must exist another queen city, another metropolis within the fair domain, and also, we must ascertain where the record of title may be found, which Christ received, of such dominion. For if he has no valid title, how can "the kingdom and dominion, and greatness of the kingdom under the whole heavens, be given to the Saints of the Most High?" For he has promised that "he who overcomes and keeps my work unto the end, to him will I give power [authority] over the nations." (Rev. 2: 26). And Paul's point of "joint-heirship," should be legally settled. Well, God, the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, says:

"I will declare the decree, * * * Ask of me, and I shall give thee the heathen for thine inheritance and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession."—Psa. 2: 7-9.

Then, "when the kingdoms of this world become the kingdom of our Lord and his Christ," there will be more than one city as capitol, hence we read:

"Then the moon shall be confounded, and the sun ashamed when the Lord of hosts shall reign in Mount Zion, and in Jerusalem, and before his ancients gloriously."—Isa. 24: 23. (See B. of M., p. 409, par. 47.)

And again: "O Zion, that bringest good tidings, get thee up into the high mountain; O Jerusalem; that bringest good tidings, lift up thy voice with strength; lift it up, be not afraid; say unto the cities of Judah, Behold your God!"—Isa. 40: 9.

"Zion," that bears good tidings, the gospel law of judgment, is the people representing the kingdom of God on the western continent, "the high mountain," the model form of government and constitutional liberty under which the divine law of the kingdom can expand. "Jerusalem," that bears good tidings, doubtless, the people representing the kingdom of God on the Eastern Continent at the time "the cities of Judah," will be saluted with the gospel of the kingdom, which is "a witness of the end of the world, and the soon-coming King.

"When the Lord shall reign in Mount Zion [city], and in Jerusalem [city], and before his ancients gloriously." "And the redeemer shall come to Zion, and unto them that turn from transgression in Jacob."—Isa. 69: 20.

"And I will make her that halted, a remnant, and her that was cast far off, a strong nation. And the Lord shall reign over them in Mount Zion from henceforth, even forever."—Micah 4: 7.

Lest some should get the idea that the Zion here referred to, as the Lord's throne and headquarters, is the palace royal of the universe in heaven, we quote: "And the Lord shall be king over all the earth. In that day shall there be one Lord and his name one."—Zech. 14: 9.

When the Redeemer comes to Zion, he will inhabit there, he will dwell there. Proof: "For the Lord hath chosen Zion; he hath desired it for his habitation. This is my rest forever: here will I dwell for I have desired it."—Psa. 132: 13-16.

The strongest assurance is given that at the time of Jacob's trouble, Mount Zion and Jerusalem will afford deliverance. "So shall ye know that I am the Lord dwelling in Zion, my holy mountain: then shall Jerusalem be holy." (Joel 2: 32; 3: 17). At this time the nations are gathered in "the valley of decision," the Lord is pleading for his heritage, Israel, and "he shall roar out of Zion." The Lord shall roar, not out of heaven, but out of Zion.

This remarkable prediction connects the actual presence of the Lord in Zion with the time when Israel's enemies are overthrown; when "the Lord will be the hope of his people, and the strength of the children of Israel." (v. 16). This glorious victory over the allied army of nations, and the deliverance of Israel from gentile mischief, will surely restore the inspiration of song, and praise to the "broken harp." They will chant the thanksgiving anthem at that time, of:

"O Lord, I will praise thee: though thou wast angry with me, thine anger is turned away, and thou comfortedst me. Behold God is my salvation, I will trust and not be afraid: for the Lord Jehovah is my strength, and my song; he also is become my salvation. * * * Sing unto the Lord for he hath done excellent things: this is known in all the earth. Cry out and shout, thou inhabitant of Zion: for great is the holy one of Israel in the midst of thee."—Isa. 12: 1-6.

David, the post-prophet, and King of Israel, finds his prophetic muse brightened by the contemplation of Christ's reign in Zion, and after the sacrifice of sleep to his eyes, and rest to his eyelids, finds, by revelation, a habitation for the mighty God of Jacob "in the fields of the wood," and calls the Lord's resting place Zion, where he "will dwell forever." He then announces, "We will go into his tabernacles, we will worship at his footstool."—Psa. 132: 3-7.

By this we learn that "Zion" is the "footstool" of the Lord, and by reference to Isaiah 60: 13 we learn that the place for the Lord's feet is a city—"The glory of Lebanon shall come unto thee, the fir tree, the pine tree, and the box tree together, to beautify the place of my sanctuary; and I will make the place of my feet glorious." "They shall call thee, the city of the Lord, the Zion of the holy one of Israel." (Isa. 60: 13: 14). The "tabernacles" into which the Lord's people will repair for worship are in this beautiful "city of the Lord," for Ezekiel 37: 27 declares, "my tabernacle also shall be with them [Israel]; yea, I will be their God and they shall be my people."

Again the prophet bard strikes the tuneful lyre and in throbbing torrents of inspired song and instrumentation celebrates "the dwelling of Christ in the mansions of Zion in the latter days:

"Thine eyes shall see the king in his beauty." Where will "the king be seen in his beauty?" And he immediately adds, "They shall behold the land that is very far off." Far off from where Isaiah dwelt and prophesied—that is "far off" from Jerusalem.

"The land shadowing with wings beyond the rivers of Ethiopia"—America is the land that the shafts of prophetic inspiration in the Bible and Book of Mormon have crowned with glory and is "very far-off," and upon that land in the latter days "a present shall be brought to the Lord" who at that time is dwelling in a city named ZION. This "present" is a people who have been "scattered and peeled;" it will be a "nation terrible from their beginning," one "trodden under foot" (see Isa. 18). This "present" will be a nation which has come up through great tribulation; one which has bitterly realized the iron weight of captivity, having passed along the tedious and tollsome march of slavery and exile with moaning, sighs and tears, but as a "present to the Lord" they shall come with prophets who have heard the Lord's voice; the rocks shall be smitten and ice melt away at their presence; "they shall come and fall down and be crowned by the servants of the Lord in Zion." Then will "solemnity" rest upon Zion to that extent it will be called "Zion, the city of our solemnities." (Isa. 33: 20).

In harmony with the Bible presentation of Jerusalem on the eastern continent and a new Jerusalem on the western, we quote from the record of Joseph, whose descendants were given this western land for an inheritance:

"Behold, Ether saw the days of Christ, and he spake concerning a New Jerusalem upon this land; and he spake also concerning the house of Israel, and the Jerusalem from which Lehi should come; after it should be destroyed, it should be built up again a holy city unto the Lord; wherefore it could not be a New Jerusalem, for it had been in time of old, but it should be built up again, and become a holy city of the Lord: and it should be built unto the house of Israel; and that a New Jerusalem should be built up upon this land, unto the remnant of the seed of Joseph, for which things there has been a type: wherefore the remnant of the house of Joseph shall be built upon this land; and it shall be a land of their inheritance; and they shall build up a holy city unto the Lord, like unto the Jerusalem of old; and they shall no more be confounded until the end come, when the earth shall pass away."—Ether 6: 3, 4, 6.

Reader, how is it there is such harmony between the two records? These soul-cheering and sublime subjects have been under a rock vault so far as human wisdom is concerned for a period of almost two thousand years. And even admitting these passages to have been taken from the Bible (which we do not admit), yet it would require inspiration to properly locate time and place with attendant circumstances which the combined wisdom, scholarship and deeply searching criticism of the religious world have utterly failed to do, up to date, except upon the basis of the Book of Mormon light itself. Think ye that Mr. Spalding wrote this? Where is the "novel" part of this Bible doctrine coming in? The Presbyterians represented by Mr. Spalding do not incorporate a hint of the foregoing into their creed. They do not stow away the ghost of a shadow of the "one hope" into their ecclesiastical baggage. "The law is to go forth from Zion, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem." (Micah 4: 2). And the "word" and the "law" will constitute the standard of judgment "among many people" and of "rebuke" to strong nations "far off." Zion will be the dread of kings who will gaze, wonder, fear and pass on. Her inhabitants will be the "nation terrible hitherto" because "God is known in her palaces" for a refuge. Her children will walk about the city to observe her magnificent apartments, her splendid specimens of architecture. They will admire her palaces—"mark well her bulwarks"—"that they may inform the generation following" (Psa. 48). Information will go out; "the law" is to go forth to the next generation.

David, doubtless, smote the same string when he exclaimed: "O send out thy light and thy truth: let them lead me; let them bring me unto thy holy hill, and to thy tabernacles." (Psa. 43: 3). The command will be, "Say among the heathen that the Lord reigneth * * * he shall judge the people with his truth." (Psalms 96: 10, 13). "Then the heavens shall rejoice, the earth will be glad, the field will be joyful, and all the trees of the wood rejoice, and the multitude of the isles shall be made glad," and the cause of it is, "the Lord reigneth." Why, even the hills will leap. "Why leap ye, ye high hills; this is the hill which God desireth to dwell in; yea, the Lord will dwell in it forever." (Psa. 68: 16). "It is there that the Lord will command the blessing, even life forever more."

It is now seen that at least two cities will exist when Jesus reigns—"Zion and Jerusalem." Zion's children will consist of the Lord's "firstborn" in the restoration of the gospel, and "judgment" will proceed from their city. David, according to the Inspired Translation of the Bible, says:

"Oh, that Zion were come, the salvation of Israel; for out of Zion shall they be judged, when God bringeth back the captivity of his people, Jacob shall rejoice and Israel shall be glad." (Psa. 14: 7).

"In those days, and at that time, saith the Lord, the children of Israel shall come, they and the children of Judah together, going and weeping; they shall go, and seek the Lord their God. They shall ask the way to Zion with their faces thitherward saying, Come, and let us join ourselves to the Lord in a perpetual covenant that shall not be forgotten.

"And the redeemed of the Lord shall come to Zion with songs of everlasting joy, and sorrow and sighing will flee away."

In Zion and Jerusalem Joseph and Judah find their rest. And Jesus shall reign over them, And peace extend from east to west.

AUSTRALIA'S ENSIGN.

In 1899 a small mission paper was started in Australia, run mainly by advertisements. By this means our work was brought prominently before many people, who, up to that time, had been in utter ignorance of it. Though small, the influence of the paper was decidedly good; but after sailing along splendidly for eight months it has been shipwrecked—stranded on advertisement sandbank. But "Nil Desperandum" is the motto of Australians. We have our hearts set upon launching a larger craft, but we want to have a propelling power sufficiently strong to keep it clear of that dangerous shoal—advertisement. The only power by which it could be propelled, of which we have any knowledge at present, is that which would come from five hundred subscribers; at seventy-five cents each per year. Now, we Australians (Saints) are not numerous enough to furnish the necessary driving power. We believe that the "stranded Ensign" was propelled by "one hundred and thirty subscriber power" only. No wonder that she went aground! If we could get about five hundred of the American Saints to help us with "one subscriber power" each, we could publish a sheet about the size of ZION'S ENSIGN, each month, and for each subscriber we could distribute one copy free to outsiders.

Three good things would be accomplished by the American Saints can only see their way clear to favor us in this matter: First, we would be able to point to a respectable sheet free of advertisements; second, those who subscribed would be brought more in touch with the work in Australia; third, besides having a copy for themselves, each subscriber would be putting a copy of a paper, filled with our doctrine, into the hands of some one whom we cannot at present reach in that way. Remember, Saints, we have only three missionaries here, in an area of 3,000,000 square miles. A real, live paper would take the place of one or two others, and would be invaluable in getting our work more prominently before the people. We say to those who can, "Do help us." The price is only sixty cents for the paper, and fifteen for mailing. We would like to make a start with this work early in the coming year, 1901, so if, on reading this, you make up your mind to help us, do not delay, but send us your name and address, now. Do not send any money; simply your name and address, written plainly, and when we have the required number of subscribers we will notify you through the ENSIGN to send along the cash. We do not wish money sent just now, for the reason that if the required number of subscribers are not forthcoming we could not publish the paper, and to send back the money would cause needless expense. We trust that we shall have a hearty response from those who are able to help us. Write now, and address your communications to Elder Walter J. Haworth, Martin Dale, Walsend, New South Wales, Australia.

An Admonition.

Notwithstanding we live in a world of extremes, excess, excitement, sin and confusion, yet it behooves us as Saints of the Most High regardless of failures of the past and vicissitudes of the present, to struggle onward and upward in our efforts to learn to understand, believe and comprehend God and his law that we may more and more, as day follows day, be inclined to keep the same and abstain and refrain from every evil and injurious way that we may please God, shame or discourage the devil so that at the end of the struggle we may, with the redeemed of all ages, rejoice when sin, suffering and death shall have ceased to be.

A MITE.

For the World-wide Diffusion of Sunshine.

Mrs. Cynthia Westover Alden is the latest addition to the editorial staff of The Ladies Home Journal. She will apply her energies to a department that will be called "Sunshine," which is to be published in the interest of an organization already having a membership of eleven thousand. "The International Sunshine Society," as it is called, aims to put sunshine and good cheer into the lives of all. It has neither creed nor rules; its membership fee is a single act of kindness, and dues are paid in the same currency. Mrs. Alden is founder and President-General of the society, and it is her purpose to extend its well-doing to every section of our country—in fact, throughout the whole world, for its vast field is international. Light, air and sunlight are important factors in keeping the family and the house in a healthy condition. Nothing could be worse than the habit some people have of keeping the house in darkness from early morning until night. The house should be flooded with light and air for several hours each day.

CANCER OF THE BREAST CURED.

Grateful Words of Praise From Noble Women.

COZAD, Neb., Oct. 14, 1899.

DR. W. O. BYE,

Kansas City, Mo.

Dear Dr:—I wish to state in behalf of all suffering humanity of cancer of what wonderful work you did for my mother. About two years ago a lump began to grow under her left breast, which gave her much trouble and great fear. She was treated by our family physician but gradually grew worse, and everyone told her that the only cure was an operation, but to this she would not consent; she said she would prefer death to an operation. When one day I saw your advertisement in a paper, and something told me I must write to you at once, which I did, and on receiving your answer I hurried homeward with your "Message of Hope." Mother concluded to give you a trial,

WILL SEND $2.50 FREE

TO EACH READER. FRANKLIN MILES, M. D., LL. B., THE WEALTHY CHICAGO SPECIALIST, WILL SEND $2.50 WORTH OF HIS NEW INDIVIDUAL TREATMENT FREE.

That Dr. Miles is one of the most successful and reliable of physicians is proven by hundreds of testimonials from well known people. One patient cured after failure of eleven Grand Rapids physicians. Another Chicago physician, another after nine of the leading doctors in New York City, Philadelphia and Chicago failed. Thousands of testimonials sent on request.

The late Prof. J. S. Jewell, M. D., editor of the Journal of Nervous and Mental Diseases, published at Chicago, advised Dr. Miles to "by all means publish your surprising results." Prof. J. P. Ross, M. D., President of Rush Medical College, wrote in 1874: "Dr. Miles has given me two courses of my private instruction in diseases of the heart and lungs." Col. N. G. Parker, Ex-Treasurer of South Carolina, says: "I believe Dr. Miles to be an attentive and skillful physician in a field which requires the best qualities of head and heart." Col. A. J. Tucker, late General Manager of N. Y. Central & W. system of railroads, says: "Dr. Miles' success as a physician has been phenomenal." Col. E. B. Spilman of the 9th Regulars, U. S. A., San Diego, Cal., says: "Your special treatment has certainly worked wonders when all else failed. I had one of the best medical talent and had spent $2,000." Hundreds of other endorsements could be given would space permit.

When an experienced and wealthy physician offers to prescribe free heart-cure for each case, regardless of full directions, we would advise them to send for a Copyrighted Examination Chart at once. Address The Dr. Miles Medical Association, 201 to 209 State Street, Chicago.

The Doctor's new system of treatment is thoroughly scientific and immensely superior to the ordinary methods.

As all afflicted readers may have $2.50 worth of treatment especially heart-cure, at each case, send them full directions, we would advise them to send for a Copyrighted Examination Chart at once. Address The Dr. Miles Medical Association, 201 to 209 State Street, Chicago.

we sent for home treatment and applied your Balm Oils at once, she began to get better right away; she took home treatment for two months, and at the end of that time the cancer became quite painful and Dr. Bye requested that she should come to Kansas City for personal treatment, which she did, and on leaving us we had grave hopes for her recovery, and as her many friends bid her "good-bye" more than one of them thought it was for the last time. But on arriving in Kansas City, Dr. Bye informed her that the cancer would come out in a few days. She remained in Kansas City only two weeks, and at the end of that time she came home cured of cancer. It is now entirely healed over, it did not even leave a scar. Mother feels like a new woman; she is 63 years old and does all her own housework, which is no small matter as she cooks for five men. She says she cannot say enough for Dr. Bye, and the kind and loving treatment which she received while there will never be forgotten. I shall be willing and delighted to answer any and all letters that I may receive in regard to Dr. Bye's mode of treatment, and before closing this letter I trust God may ever bless and guide you in curing the poor, suffering humanity of this world.

I remain,

MRS. G. W. ARTHURS.

I Love Thy Holy Temple, Lord.

ALICE R. COHSON.

I love thy holy temple, Lord, As pictured in thy precious word, How fair its courts appear; May not the table here be found, But goodly graces do abound, And truths divinely clear. Toward heaven points each shining spire, Its altars burn with holy fire; Its fountain cleansing brings; Here Christ his humble servants meet, Who lay their trophies at his feet, And crown him King of kings. Within its shades all discords cease, Here dwelleth Purity and Peace, Pulses with joy the air; Here sweet Humility is found, And Charity dwells around. Her incense rich and rare. Here may each weary soul find rest, And grievous burdens that oppress, May here the burden be laid down, Glad songs instead of sighs be given; Instead of fears, sweet hopes of heaven, And joys that do abide. Here bruised hearts find healing balm, And strife-worn souls a soothing calm, The wanderer finds a home. Life's waters pure, and bread of heav'n Shall to each needy soul be given, And all who will may come. For wide its portals ope for all, For rich and poor, for great and small, Of high or low estate, Yet through a straight and narrow way. Must each one pass; and blessed are they Who enter through the gate. For here must selfishness and pride, And folly, all be laid aside, And every cherished sin, Spotless and pure then, in his sight, And robed in linen clean and white, Christ bids you 'enter in.' Oh! who the blessed lot be mine, A pillar in these courts to shine Polished and pure and bright; A 'living stone' as saith the Word, Built in the temple of our Lord, Who is his glorious light. Then welcome e'en the hammer's beat, The chisel-stroke, the furnace heat, If these my needs demand To mould and shape me till I fill The niche appointed by his will, Complete in Christ to stand. 3829 4th St., FULTON, RICHMOND, Va., May 7, 1900.

It will be a good lesson for any lover of the truth to take down the New Testament some day, and run through it and see how many passages there are that would make as good, or better sense, if you leave out the italicized words. The Bible has been awfully butchered. It has been cut to pieces, added to, and taken from. Yet it is quick and powerful. God help us to understand it.—W. E. Presnell, In The Gospel Missionary, May 23.

There is a sensible article in the July Delineator that will be read with pleasure by troubled mothers. It relates to Amusements for Sick Children. It is the first of a series of articles along that line by Lina Beard, the famous sister of the famous cartoonist and author, Dan Beard. Miss Beard's volume, "The American Girl's Handy Book," has made her known in thousands of American homes. In each issue of the Delineator there are more colored plates, more novelties in styles, more articles of value and of interest to women than in any other publication devoted to fashions and home affairs, no matter what the price may be.

FOR TRADE.

What have you to offer for a three room cottage with porch, well, stable, and 1 1/2 acres of land at Lamoni. Give full description in first letter. This will only appear in this issue of the ENSIGN. D. F. NICHOLSON, LAMONI, Iowa.

CANCER.

A BLOOD DISEASE AND CURABLE.

Editor of Zion's Ensign.—Twenty or twenty-five years ago, old Dr. Gilliam, the distinguished specialist of Atlanta, demonstrated that Cancer, in any form, was due to a malignant, deadly poison in the blood, and by using B. B. B. (Botanic Blood Balm) this poison was gradually drained from the system, then the sores healed, and a real permanent cure was made. Up to the present time B. B. B. has cured hundreds of cases where the knife, doctors and patent medicines failed to cure. Here is one case. Mrs. E. Story, of Fredonia, Alabama, writes under date of October 15, 1898:

"Lately an eating Cancer broke out in my head and ears, and ate all the small bones out of my mouth, and I could scarcely eat and talk. I could eat a little strained soup, that was all. I tried nine doctors, but none could cure me, my case was pronounced hopeless, so I tried B. B. B., and was cured. The disease made me most deaf. B. B. B. helped my hearing. Respectfully, "Mrs. E. Story."

We will send any reader of Zion's Ensign a sample bottle of B. B. B. free of charge, and prepaid, so they may test the medicine and know for themselves that B. B. B. is the remedy for cancer, eating sores, ulcers, persistent eruptions, and all malignant blood troubles. It is remarkable how quickly it heals every sore, improves the digestion, and gives a clear, healthy appearance to the skin. B. B. B. is for sale in large bottles by druggists at $1.00 or six bottles (full treatment) $5.00. Complete instructions go with each bottle. For trial bottle and other information enclose five cents which pays exact cost of postage (medicine is free) and address Blood Balm Co., 86 Mitchell St., Atlanta, Georgia. Describe your trouble, and personal medical advice will be given.

FOR SALE.

A 40 acre farm with three room house and outbuildings; a nice little orchard, good pasture. Land under cultivation. Good well water. Will sell cheap for cash. Address, GEORGE COLLIER, Stewartville, Mo. 28-4t

A CARD.

To the Saints who do not know me I wish to say, I have been in the real estate business for about fifteen years in Jackson county, Missouri. I am well acquainted with values, know where to locate the brethren better than one who has not had experience. I know all about values; I know a bargain and am in position to advise. And I wish to say there are other Latter Day Saints here who are in the real estate business. Now, if you are not afraid of your brethren, please call and see them when in Independence, or write them. I will give you for reference any honorable person with whom I have ever done business, or any business man in Independence, banker or merchant; also Brn. Wm. Crick; Joseph Luft; H. R. Mills; J. W. Luft, Business Manager of the ENSIGN Publishing House; W. H. Garrett, Editor of the ENSIGN; I. N. White of the Twelve; Alfred White, missionary. I do all this to show you that Latter Day Saints can be honorable in real estate business as well as any other business. W. S. LOAN.

Broken Brics-a-Bracs.

Mr. Major, the famous cement man, of New York, explains some very interesting facts about Major's Cement. The multitudes who use this standard article do not know that it is many hundred per cent better than other cements for which similar claims are made, but a great many do not know why. The simple reason is that Mr. Major uses the best materials ever discovered and other manufacturers do not use them, because they are too expensive and do not allow large profits. Mr. Major tells us that one of the elements of his cement costs $3.75 a pound, and another costs $2.75 a gallon, while a large share of the so-called cements which are upon the market are nothing more than sixteen-cent glue, dissolved in water or citric acid, and in some cases, altered slightly in color and color by the addition of cheap and useless materials. Major's Cement retails at fifteen cents and twenty-five cents a bottle, and when a dealer takes to sell a substitute you can depend upon it that his only object is to make larger profit. The profit on Major's Cement is as much as any dealer ought to wish on any cement. And this is doubly true in view of the fact that each dealer gets his share of the benefit of Mr. Major's advertising, which now amounts to over $50,000 a month throughout the country. Established in 1876. Insist on having Major's. Don't accept any off-hand advice from a druggist. If you are at all handy (and you will be likely to find that you are a good deal more so than you imagine) you can repair your rubber boots and family shoes, and any other articles, by using the best articles, with Major's Rubber Cement and Major's Leather Cement. And you will be surprised at how many dollars a year you will thus save. If your druggist cannot supply you, it will be forwarded by mail; either kind. Free of postage.

A SPIRITUAL FEAST

Is anticipated by those who are making preparations for the Independence, Missouri, district reunion, to be held at Washington Park, from August 24th to September 3, 1900.

Beautiful grounds, shade, pavilion, abundance of water, and very reasonable rates for provisions for both man and beast. Four miles from Independence, and right on the electric line running from Kansas City to Independence, and a magnificent place for camping, with every desired convenience within easy reach. Tents of most any size can be secured if the committee is notified in time, at very reasonable rates—from $2.00 to $3.00 per tent.

Some of the most able ministers of the church will be present to instruct and edify, and there is no reason to doubt that an unusual time of refreshing will be enjoyed.

No pains will be spared by the committee in seeking to promote the comfort and gospel entertainment of all who attend.

It is believed that all the Saints within a large radius should feel a special interest in the annual reunions that are held in the Independence district, and especially those that are held so near to Independence and Kansas City, where, if a special effort is put forth by the Saints, thousands of people can be attracted to these meetings; so let the adjoining districts, and the members scattered throughout Missouri and Kansas, and elsewhere, keep their minds on the date and make arrangements to attend and participate in, and it is hoped it will prove one of the most enriching spiritual seasons ever enjoyed at such gatherings.

Your little or big sacrifices to come may find ample remuneration in blessed recuperation of spirit and body. Do not allow trifles to keep you away. Come with consecrated minds and uplifted, expectant hearts, and you will surely be nourished and made glad.

There will be an abundance of room for those desiring to come in wagons and camp.

For any further particulars that may be desired, address Bishop R. May, Independence, Missouri.

MARY M. GREEN, Sec. pro tem.

Boundary Line of Districts, Etc.

It is necessary to have on record a description or statement of the boundaries of every district, for the use of the presidency and other church officials.

District presidents and secretaries are therefore requested to forward statements of the boundaries of their respective districts. They are also requested to give lists of names of branches in their districts.

If boundaries have not been closely defined, or not specified at all, kindly so report, and as promptly as possible. If your district contemplates action on boundary lines, please report its present status, also its further action when taken. It is necessary to complete the record as soon as possible.

District officials are requested to be prompt that unnecessary correspondence be avoided.

Please do not omit list of names of branches in your district.

Appointment of Bishop's Agent.

CENTRAL ILLINOIS DISTRICT.

To the Saints and Friends of Central Illinois District:—Upon the organization of the new district known as the Central Illinois district by members of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and the further recommendation of the appointment of Elder J. D. Stead as bishop's agent for said district, all parties interested will please take notice of the appointment of Bro. Stead as agent of the Bishopric of the Reorganized church in and for the same. By such appointment he is authorized to receive and receipt for church funds contributed by members and friends, and also pay out the same in accordance with the rules and regulations of the church governing in said matter.

Trusting that all will be interested and give support to this part of the work in the new district, as every other part of the work, I am, in behalf of the Bishopric,

Very respectfully,
E. L. KELLEY,
Presiding Bishop.

Reunion Notices.

The reunion of Northwest Kansas district will be held on Sr. Malinda Sloan's farm, seven miles southeast of Minneapolis, Ottawa county, to commence August 9th and last until the 19th. There will be a boarding tent where meals can be had at cost, not to exceed ten cents a meal. Missionaries provided for free. All that can do so come prepared to keep themselves, as those having meals in charge wish to attend all services. Plenty of wood and straw furnished free. Stores have been procured for use of campers, pasture convenient. Special effort will be made for comfort of all attending. As location is more central of district, we hope for good attendance.

There will be speakers from abroad beside our own missionary force. One of the officers of the General Sunday School Association will be present to instruct in Sunday School and Religion of special interest to the young people. Any coming by train notify Mr. Orestas Resch, Minneapolis. Will meet any train, day or night.

NOTICES.

The committee on program for Sunday School work at the Independence district reunion to be held at Washington Park, beg leave to report that the Sunday School will hold daily sessions during the reunion; first meeting will be held Saturday, August 25th. Character of the work will be announced later. The committee request those who expect to attend to communicate immediately with the secretary what questions they wish discussed. Come with suggestions, note book and pencils, and let us accomplish the greatest good for the greatest number.

EVA M. BAILEY, Sec. INDEPENDENCE, Mo., July 16.

I wish to inform the Saints who expect to attend the Oklahoma reunion that there can be no tents to rent, but you can buy first-class second hand tents as follows, plus the freight from Kansas City: 9x12, 3 foot wall, 8 ounces $5.50, 10 ounces $6.50; 12x14, 34 foot wall, 8 ounces, $7.50; 10 ounces, $8.75, poles, stakes and ropes included. Write and send money to,

W. S. MACRAE, FOND DUCK, Okla., July 13.

Having been requested by Zion's Religio-Literary Society to take action in the distribution of church literature, I make special and urgent request that the elders in their travels who find a place to do good by means of any of the church papers or tracts, notify me and from the material at my command I shall endeavor to supply the want.

Also that those either acting as individuals or as a district, having such matter at their disposal, or who can get it by a little effort, will notify me and give me the privilege of having it forwarded to the ones in need of it.

Please don't overlook this, but let the Sunday Schools, local or in districts, or individuals, make an effort with the Religio in behalf of a greater dissemination of "What we believe." Here is something for each one to do. If there is no one in your locality appointed to attend to this, choose some one person to whom all may report, and let our action be prompt and to the point.

"BE PITIFUL."

One of the tests of character which the Apostle Paul applies to determine an individual's worth as a child of God, is his ability to exercise the grace of charity; and as showing the importance which he, as an apostle of Jesus Christ, placed upon it, he wrote:

Though I speak with the tongues of men and of angels, and have not charity, I am become as sounding brass, or a tinkling cymbal. And though I have the gift of prophecy, and understand all mysteries, and all knowledge; and though I have all faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have not charity, I am nothing.—1 Cor. 13: 1, 2.

On another occasion he testifies (1 Tim. 1: 15) that the mission of the Lord Jesus was to save sinners; that He came into this world for that express purpose. In harmony with this instruction we have the Savior's own answer when called to account by the Pharisees for eating with publicans and sinners:

They that be whole need not a physician, but they that are sick. But go ye and learn what that meaneth, I will have mercy and not sacrifice: for I am not come to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance.—Matt. 9: 12, 13.

When the Samaritans refused to receive the Savior and His brethren on one occasion when he would have lodged there, because He seemed to them to be on His way to Jerusalem, and the Apostles James and John in their anger at the indignity offered the Lord, asked permission to call down fire from heaven to consume the unappreciative Samaritans, they were doubtless surprised that the Savior should not only refuse the suggestion, but that He would rebuke them for entertaining the thought of such a thing; and in concluding His rebuke, impressing the fact upon them that His mission was to save, He said:

For the Son of Man is not come to destroy men's lives, but to save them. And they went into another village.—Luke 9: 56.

This is, pre-eminently, the mission of every servant whom the Lord sends to represent Him upon the earth; and these servants should not permit angry or revengeful desires to influence them when they are opposed in their work, but count it a joy that they are accounted worthy to suffer with Him for the sake of saving, though it be but a few souls, or even but one soul, precious in the sight of God. True, it is a trial, when one, out of a pure motive, is seeking to benefit another, to be met only with rebuffs, and be misjudged in motive and purpose; but as the individual thus seeking another's good knows his motives to be pure, he can afford to move steadily onward with the assurance that in time he will be vindicated and his good work recognized.

It seems to be one of the most difficult graces to exercise by the generality of mankind, to extend charity and kindly recognition of right purposes to others; to believe that when an individual takes a different view or action to that which we think proper, he has any but an ulterior or improper end in view. But it is apparently one of the easiest things imaginable to pass a hasty judgment and condemnation upon others. Of all the people in the world this should not be possible among Saints. They have been in the past and are still made the subjects of harsh, and what they know to be, false, bigoted and unmerited judgment on the part of those who will not take the pains to investigate the faith and teachings of the Saints, and it would seem as if this experience should be valuable to Saints in enabling them to avoid making the same error, and that what they rightfully think others should do in their case, they should be careful to extend to others.

We rightfully and consistently claim that all that is necessary for a justification of the position which we, as followers of the Christ, occupy, is a fair, honest and candid investigation in the light of the Scriptures. But wherein do we differ from others, and how much less are we justified, when, without giving a brother or sister an opportunity to represent their own case, we set up our judgment from our own-sided, and probably distorted, view—distorted because of our inability to correctly judge motive—and from that basis we perhaps, unjustly condemn another; wherein shall our condemnation differ from that passed upon those who misjudge, condemn and persecute us for preaching the pure gospel of Jesus Christ, and insisting that all of its ordinances, gifts and blessings are available now, in our day, for the humble, fervent, obedient follower of Christ who accepts the gospel under the authority of his own appointing?

In Doctrine and Covenants 84: 2, the Savior declares: "My disciples, in days of old, sought occasion against one another, and forgave not one another in their hearts, and for this evil they were afflicted and sorely chastened." And in section 122: 1 we read: "My servants have been harsh one with another." This admonition should come with great force to every member of the church, and all should endeavor to profit by it, because it is contrary to the will of God that his people should be so influenced. Should a brother or sister fall into error, it seldom benefits them to deal harshly. If there is ever a time in the experience of the children of God, when helpful and kindly charity is needful, it is when one of their number does something which others think is inconsistent or unbecoming. While occasionally there may be an instance where sharp disciplinary action is the only thing apparently capable of meeting the necessity, in the majority of cases, a sympathetic, kindly, brotherly charity extended, will appeal more sensibly and effectively in saving the erring, than all the courts and trials that could be convened.

Too often the fact is overlooked that the gospel is intended as a saving force for the benefit of those within, as much as it is offered to those without the fold. That is, the greatest interest is displayed in preaching to the unconverted, and kindly efforts, and even sacrifices are made to induce others to see the beauties and benefits accruing in accepting the gospel of Christ; but in how many instances do the children of the Master exemplify the Spirit of their Father in making kindly effort and sacrifice for the sake of saving those already in the fold, but who through weakness, are in danger of falling away and losing all they had gained in obeying the gospel? The words of the inspired apostle of Christ seems to be peculiarly applicable in this case:

Brethren if any of you do err from the truth, and one convert him; let him know that he which converteth the sinner from the error of his way shall save a soul from death, and shall hide a multitude of sins.—James 5: 19, 20.

If any man see his brother sin a sin which is not unto death, he shall ask, and he shall give him life for them that sin not unto death. There is a sin unto death: I do not say that he shall pray for it. All unrighteousness is sin; and there is a sin not unto death.—1 John 5: 16, 17.

Let every one then, seek to be patient, kindly affectioned, having fervent charity. If all will control a disposition to be impatient with others weaknesses, in fact be as lenient with others failings as one is with his own, and pray more earnestly and persistently for others as well as ones self, there will gradually develop a spirit of patience and forbearance one towards another, which will not only be beneficial to the person exercising it, but helpful to others and most pleasing to our heavenly Father. Let us seek for closer unity and continually bear in mind that:

Unless ye are one ye are not mine.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

BRO. C. R. DUNCAN is now located at 429½ East Willamette St., Colorado Springs, Colorado.

BRO. M. H. BOND's permanent address is 103 Chapin avenue, Providence, Rhode Island, where those desiring to communicate with him should address their letters.

ELDER J. F. MINTUN and J. M. Baker are holding tent meetings, corner West 7th and Perry streets, Sioux City, Iowa. Any of the ENSIGN readers who would like to visit them or write them relative to any one in that city upon whom they would desire these brethren to call, are invited to do so at once. They hope to be able to open up the work in that city as it has never been before.

A NEW binding of that popular work, "From Palmyra to Independence," has just been finished, and we are now able to offer it to those who desire it at SIXTY-FIVE cents per copy. The cover of this addition is heavy paper, with a very neat design on the face. Just think of it! Sixty-five cents for so valuable a work as this. At this price we should have a large number of orders and every member of the church who does not already possess a copy of this excellent work should now avail himself of this opportunity. The cloth edition is still one dollar each. Send in your orders promptly for the book in either binding. But be sure to have a copy in your house. You need it.

In preparing articles for publication especial care should be exercised in referring to the Scripture, to turn to the passages intended to be used and copy them just as they are there printed, capitals and every punctuation included. Some who send us articles are very careless in this regard, and the editor has to do the work in going over and correcting every passage quoted. It will not take the writers any more time to do this than it does those in the ENSIGN office who have it to do, and this work should be done by the writer of the article. No matter how intimate any one may think themselves with the scriptures used, the punctuations are very important; and even if able to quote every word correctly, the punctuations are not memorized, and it is important that they should be correctly used. Please bear this in mind, especially in writing for publication. It should also be the rule in private correspondence. The arguments used will be of much greater force than if the scriptural passages quoted are misquoted and garbled. It may be thought that it is of little importance to quote correctly so the sense of the passage is given, and the example of the apostles of Christ may be referred to in this respect; but they had not the Scriptures so handy as we have today, and were, for that reason, justified in quoting from memory; but where any one has the Word so conveniently arranged and easy of access as we have it today, it should be used with scrupulous and painstaking accuracy.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. W. R. ODELL, Wayne, West Virginia:

The work is onward here; I am endeavoring to open some new places in this county. Considerable opposition from the ministry of other churches is manifest, but the truth will finally prevail.

ELDER H. E. MOLER, Pecatonica, Illinois:

Bro. A. J. Keck and myself are at this point engaged in tent work, and are having fair interest. We will continue as long as the prospect is encouraging. The rains have hindered us some.

SR. ELLEN DICKERSON, North Bend, Nebraska:

I am one of the isolated ones, twenty miles away from church, and so hampered with work that I cannot get to church very often. I wish there was some of our people nearer that the children could go to Sunday School.

ELDER J. F. MCDOWELL, Wheeling, West Virginia:

Pitched district tent here on the 10th inst.; began meetings on 11th, having quite good attendance and close attention. Bro. V. M. Goodrich of Ohio arrived on 17th to assist. The Saints are helping in music and in other practical ways. Think we shall go to Belleaire, Ohio, from here.

ELDER E. J. LANG, 3411 Cottage Grove avenue, Chicago, Illinois:

I wish, through the ENSIGN, to thank the many Saints for sending me, through the mails, so many ENSIGNS for distribution in our street work; they are doing good and I could use 10000 this summer if I had them. Am on the street almost every night, the Spirit of the Master is with us and we feel to go on in the good work; our gospel story and an ENSIGN might be the means of gaining a soul, and to God we will give all the glory and praise; so come along with your ENSIGNS.

Fast Day For Religians.

The prayerful consideration of all the Religio members is invited to the following proposition:

The Lord has graciously answered our prayers and fasting a number of times in the past, in behalf of our convention work, and in some of the locals in behalf of our sick. This should inspire us with faith to come to him in every time of need, especially when the need is of that character that it is impossible for us to supply it of ourselves.

One of our active workers, both as regards local and district work, is very sorely afflicted, and unless he shall receive material help from the Lord, and that soon, his days of usefulness in the church are about numbered. Bro. E. E. Johnson, of Chicago, is rapidly declining, and it is desired that we should all unite our faith and prayers in his behalf, that the Lord may see fit to prolong his days, and spare him to the work which is in such need of efficient helpers.

The day of the first meeting in August is hereby set apart as a day of fasting and prayer in behalf of Bro. Johnson. Let the following order be observed so far as practicable. Abstain from morning and midday meals, so far as wisdom will admit, and then all local societies meet at accustomed time and place, for a season of prayer. In case of this arrangement not being considered wisest, locals can make such arrangements as will be most convenient to them, observing this order as nearly as practicable. Let Home Class members join in this also, praying at the stated hour, if not convenient to assemble. In the meantime, let us as members, and as societies, remember him in our prayers.

GENERAL CHURCH NEWS.

INDEPENDENCE.

Bro. Luff expects to leave for Colorado tomorrow (Friday) morning, going, probably, via Missouri Pacific Ry., to Colorado Springs for Sunday.

Give the "Gleaners" a chance tonight (Thursday). Attend their social on Bro. and Sr. M. T. Short's lawn, and help them make a success of this their first effort.

Bro. Jos. Luff baptized Miss Minnie M. Engle in Shultz's pond, Wednesday afternoon. She was confirmed at the evening prayer service by Brn. Joseph Luff and E. May.

Bro. J. W. Brackenbury, since his return from California, has re-opened his office and can now be found next door to the News office, McCoy building, on West Lexington street, nearly opposite the ticket office of the electric line.

Bro. and Sr. Lute Brackenbury and children, of Riverside, California, are visiting Independence relatives and friends. He is a son of Bro. J. W. Brackenbury. They will probably remain until September unless called home earlier.

Did you read the notice of the Independence reunion to be held at Washington Park, August 24 to September 3, published in last week's ENSIGN? Make all your calculations now and get ready to attend all the services, and enjoy a good, social time in the "woods."

Rev. Dr. Alexander Proctor, who for forty years has been identified with the Christian church in this city as its pastor, passed peacefully away Tuesday morning about half past nine o'clock. He was a liberal minded scholarly man, and while opposing shams, was of a kindly disposition, and had greatly endeared himself by his unassuming, loving administrations and christian graces during his long life in this and other communities. The history of the Christian church of Missouri is practically a history of this good man, and he has done much to uplift humanity and make men better. Last April he celebrated his 75th birthday in his church here by preaching a forceful sermon, though failing health had compelled him to resign the active duties of pastor some two years ago. As a mark of the esteem in which he was held here, the mayor of the city issued a proclamation requesting all the business houses to close during the funeral services today (Thursday), commencing at 2:30 p. m., which request was cheerfully honored. The services, in charge of Rev. Lin Cave, the present pastor, Rev. E. A. Higgason, and Rev. J. H. Garrison, of St. Louis, were very impressive. The church was crowded to its utmost capacity, all the ministers of the city attending in a body. Not in many years has the death of any of its citizens so stirred the city as that of Dr. Proctor. An aged wife, one son, and three married daughters are the immediate relatives who remain to cherish his memory.

Bro. Joseph Luff occupied at the Saints' church with good profit to the hearers last Sunday morning. At night Bro. R. M. Elvin discoursed, and though the evening was extremely warm he held the interest of his audience throughout. The afternoon service was instructive and uplifting; two mental picture manifestations were given, one to Bro. Luff, that of a workman upon whom others were pressing tools for doing work in which he was engaged; these tools were rejected as unfitted for that particular work, but as it was urged upon him to try them he did so with the result that one flew to pieces as if made of glass; another was turned as if the material was too soft; another was blunted, etc., and as the workman handed back these tools he remarked, "I told you how it would be, but you needed a lesson; those tools were well fitted for the work for which they were designed, but now it will require a great deal more work to fit them to do that work than it would had they not been put to work for which they were not fitted. Let them be used on the work for which they are designed, and after it is accomplished, bring them back and we will pass them through the fire and temper them for higher work. The application was, that some are fitted by the Lord for doing special work for which he prepares them. If they are unwisely urged by others to do work for which they have not been qualified, injury results both to themselves and the work, but if they occupy rightly where they are called, be it in ever so humble a sphere, when they have finished their work in that capacity, acting wisely and well, they will be capacitated for higher work by the Lord, and can then work successfully in the higher sphere. This is about the substance of the picture. The other was to Sr. Gould, of men going to work. Some performed their work with cheerful diligence, and receiving their reward returned with gladness and contentment. Others neglected their work, were not diligent; this class returned with murmurings and complainings; others were slothful, sleeping their time away; they returned discouraged and depressed. The interpretation was that those who were active and diligent in doing their part in the meetings were rewarded, having peace and joy in the consciousness of having done their duty, being blessed with the Holy Spirit; the careless and neglectful would feel dissatisfied and complain that they were not profited in the meetings; the slothful, indifferent would feel sorrowful when trials came, that they had not strength to endure, etc. Many good testimonies were also given. It was an excellent experience.

LAMONI, IOWA.

Miss T. Venn was married to Bro. F. W. White, by Elder F. M. Smith, on the 15th inst.

An excellent prayer and testimony meeting was held at the Mite Society hall Wednesday night, 18th, Elder Carlisle presiding.

The Religio had a very good program for Friday night, 20th. The following officers for the ensuing six months were elected: Brn. W. J. Mather, president; Chas. Brackenbury, vice president; Wilbur Paul, librarian; Srs. Jessie Cave, secretary; Susie Mader, organist; and Alta Mather, chorister.

Mr. Ben Vinn was married to Mrs. M. E. Vinn, at Tuskeego, Iowa, by Elder Wellington, July 15th.

Sr. Ella Whitehead gave her Sunday School class a pleasant social at her home on Tuesday evening, 17th, serving frozen cream and delicious cake for refreshment.

Patriarch A. H. Smith has his office now in the house formerly occupied by Bro. Frank Criley and family, where he administers patriarchal blessings to those who call.

Elder Joseph Clapp has been preaching at Lucas, Iowa, recently.

Bro. A. P. Anderson organized a Religio at the Home on the evening of the 17th, composed of twelve members.

Sunday 22d, Elder Stebbins filled his regular four weeks appointment at Greenville, Iowa. At the brick church Apostle Wight was the chosen speaker at 11 a. m., on the question, "What Will Become of Those Who Never Heard the Gospel." At night Bishop G. H. Hilliard, of Independence, Missouri, assisted by Elder E. L. Kelley, presiding bishop, delivered a very edifying discourse on practical righteousness, and the needed preparation to the redemption of Zion and her converts; his leading texts being 1 Cor. 3: 9-15; and a portion of the 64th section of the Doctrine and Covenants—Lamoni edition, paragraphs 7 and 8.

CHICAGO, ILLINOIS.

Branch headquarters, 716 W. Van Buren St., Sunday meetings 2:45 and 7:45 p. m.; Lang Mission, 3411 Cottage Grove Ave., 10:30 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.; West Pullman branch, 12024 Union Ave., 10:30 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.; Parkside Mission, 7124 Stony Island Ave., 3:00 and 7:30 p. m.; 508 W. 37th St. (colored mission), 10:30 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.

Yesterday was a blessed day for the work in Chicago. By the kindly and wise service of President Smith a general uplifting and advancement was experienced. His plain, kindly, affirmative method, free from any substance of vituperation, make him the more like the Master whom he represents. At Lang mission he was listened to by a goodly audience on Friday night. At West Pullman he was greeted Sunday morning by an appreciative audience, among whom were many of his Plauo neighbors of the past, also a hearty welcome and good spirit. At 716 Van Buren the room was filled. His theme was the faith of his father, and the work as he found it; making a strong plea for the word as written and received by the church, as against any innovations. He read as a text or preface the Articles of Faith as published by Joseph Smith in 1842, and as now used by the church in Utah. Why can't our Utah friends see the force of our position? Bro. Joseph starts today homeward. His health is quite good.

We were pleased to meet Bro. and Sr. W. T. Barnes, of Elgin, Illinois, who came to the city to "go to church." They took in three meetings and one or two Sunday Schools, returning on the late train last night. We hope to see Bro. and Sr. Barnes often.

At our meeting last night was Mrs. Green, who was the wife of Frederick Smith, second son of the martyr. She has lived in the city for some years but never discovered till last night.

At our morning service at Lang mission was Sr. Sarah G. Steele, the daughter of Duty Griffiths at whose house the first or second conference of the church was held. Sr. G., though eighty-four years old has a vivid recollection of hearing Joseph relate his experiences in the angel visitations, obtaining the plates, etc. She was present at the dedication of the Kirtland temple, and speaks of it as a glorious time. She was baptized in 1831.

Dr. Hansen, of Lamoni, was in attendance at last nights service, also Dr. Bertha Greer, of the same city. They are sojourning a short time in the city to absorb a little more anatomical and physiological lore.

Our worthy Bro. E. E. Johnson is still confined to his bed. He is receiving tender care and administration, but rallies very slowly. May the divine hand intervene and heal us our prayer, and of the Saints.

Don't forget our two days meeting appointed for Saturday and Sunday next. Appointments as follows: preaching Saturday, 8 p. m.; Sunday at 2:45 and 7:45 p. m. Special Sunday School exhibits at 1:30 p. m. and Religio at 6 p. m. Bro. Southwick, district president, is expected to be present and have charge. The usual appointments at the mission, 3411 Cottage Grove, at 11 a. m. and 7:45 p. m.

An effort is being made to organize a Sunday School at the Graves mission. There is certainly enough chaotic material there if it can be "organized." Try it and see.

ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI.

Last Thursday evening Brn. A. Allen and Geo. Barraclough were called away to administer to a sister of Bro. Barraclough. She was much improved after the ordinance.

Bro. O. O. Randall is also upon the sick list; Bro. Hitchcock was called to him Thursday evening. Bro. Gordon Smith's daughter is also ill; Bro. Allen administered to her Sunday afternoon.

We are expecting Bro. I. N. White in the very near future.

Many people are talking reunion; we are expecting a larger crowd of campers than last year, and many are looking forward to the opening day, Friday, August 3d.

Bro. Tom Elliott presided at the last Sunday School session held in our little chapel: announcement that all scholars would receive credit for the three ensuing Sundays, as that plan seemed to be the most practical. Some of the teachers have made arrangements to receive their classes at their homes next Sabbath morning.

Bro. F. S. Church, resident of Lamoni, and in the city on business, Sundayed with the Saints; he came early enough to enjoy the Sunday School, and gave a brief address.

Brn. Billinsky and Elliott presided at the social meeting yesterday evening, 6 o'clock. A great many present, and nearly all testimonies tinged with sadness at leaving the endeared chapel. Two or three of the testimonies were remarkable for their fine expressions. An infant, child of Sr. Whitney, was blessed under the hands of Brn. Allen and J. G. Smith at this service.

Bro. Barraclough was speaker morning hour at the chapel; Bro. Allen occupied the evening session.

Elder J. C. Hitchcock went to Cheltenham for the evening service; good attendance and interest.

For the two coming Thursdays the Religio will meet at the home of Bro. Hitchcock, 2511 Slattery street.

DENVER, COLORADO.

Church, corner of 23d and Arapahoe Sts. Services Sunday: Sunday School at 9:45 a. m.; preaching at 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.; sacrament service the first Sunday in each month at 6 p. m. Prayer meeting Wednesday evening. Zion's Religio-Literary Society Friday evening.

The weather has been a little cooler for a few days.

Bro. W. T. Bozarth and wife, Bro. Will Mills and wife, and the two Srs. Williamson, of Independence, arrived this week, and have gone rusticating in the mountains.

After our last week's items were sent, we learned that Messrs Scott and Boswell, instead of going to Antinito for a day, bought tickets for Indiana, on Monday, the 16th. The reason for the change is unknown to the writer.

Bro. Alma Chatburn is so far recovered from the effects of his accident to again be at work.

Bro. Henry Hamlin has secured a position in one of the leading laundries of Salt Lake, and the family left Monday to join him.

Bro. J. W. Gilbert's hours in the post-office on Sunday, have been changed, so he can attend all the services at the church; good.

The church collection Sunday morning was devoted to the sufferers from famine in India.

Bro. J. W. Gilbert was the speaker at the church in the morning, subject, "Love of God Toward Men, and Parents' Love Toward Their children."

The evening preaching was by the writer, from the text, "Who then can be saved."

Bro. Nicoll and wife, of Ft. Worth, Texas, are in the city, and were in attendance Sunday evening at the church

LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA.

Bro. E. L. Holt delivered a very practical and logical discourse yesterday morning, his text being, "Close up the Ranks." Some wholesome advice was given; it was well received. He has so far recovered that he expects to start for his mission field—Central California—next Thursday.

Bro. Chatburn and Anderson are holding forth in the tent at Orange. Bro. Griffiths is expected here next Sunday, the 22d.

A very pretty church wedding last Thursday evening, Sr. Hermia Adam and Bro. Will Badham being the happy participants. They have a host of friends and are highly respected among all classes of people. The head of the firm for which Sr. Hermia has worked for over four years, stated to me, that there was no better girl in the city of Los Angeles.

Bro. Elbert Smith and wife have gone to San Bernardino for a couple of weeks.

Last Thursday the Sunday School held a picnic at East Lake park. We had an excellent time. Every one was delighted. Such gatherings serve to bring our people closer together. We treated all of the children to a boat ride.

What a change has come over the newspapers of this city in the past two years. When I came to Los Angeles they would not insert anything unless we paid for it at the regular advertising rates. Of late, the Herald has published several articles; the Express condescended to send a reporter around for an interview last week. They also have published several of our articles. We may not be baptizing such a great number, but we are forcing recognition where it will count in the years to come.

Our reunion will be held August 10th to 19th inclusive. We invite every Saint in Southern and Central California to come and enjoy the same.

LETTER DEPARTMENT.

SOMERVILLE, Mass., July 18.

Editor Ensign:—Hot! well, I guess so; comfort nowhere unless in an ice-house. The "cool summer prophet had better take in his sign, for I have no recollection of anything like it in this New England country. Very dry also, vegetation parched and dried up in the country everywhere, entailing loss to farmers, gardeners and consumers. But the ice man laughs, and the soda fountain and the ice-cream proprietors gather in the wealth as necessity or imagination forces sweating humanity into patronage of something—anything—that promises—whether it fulfills or not—relief, and the seductive ice in a vast and multitudinous "mixed" throng, goes down the throat, into the stomach, and out at the pores, "taking the starch" out of folks and of things generally at a rate fearful to contemplate.

"Wars and rumors of war" are the actualities of the day and hour, and to the fortunate who are gospel warned and are living near enough to the eternal source of truth to rightly interpret these "signs of the times," there is the sign of the approach of that "day of redemption" of God's eternal promise to the faithful follower of his Son. A day of terror and of mourning to the careless, the godless, and particularly to those who have "forsaken the covenant" in these last days, and have turned again into the world, and have been overcome with the fleshy lusts that "war against the soul's best interest;" but a day of rejoicing for those whose fear toward God is the constant monitor of their lives.

Church matters are moving slowly, with tendencies in right direction. Compared as with the past, much improvement surely; many are learning by the things already suffered, and a taste for right and orderly things being developed in many of our young people especially. The old idea, so commonly and so disastrously entertained or propagated in the past, that the less a person was hampered by worldly learning, experience with people in this world, or with devils that imitate a priestly service masked behind human forms, the more susceptible were they to spiritual influences, and as a consequence their opinion and counsel and influence to be preferred to the teachings which harmonize with law and order of the church.

Quite a number of accessions to the church in this district during past spring and this summer. The Religio in Providence has taken new life and promises helpful influences to the church. Fall River is doing well considering the obstacles to be met and overcome, and we hope for a unity on practical lines that will allow faster progress in development of the possibilities which the Lord has placed within our reach all over the district. Bro. Bullard is the right man in the right place, and the general church appointments are in unison as regards the needs of the district, and the practical administration of affairs that will meet the approval of God and bring lasting peace to his people.

Having been placed in charge of branches both at Providence and Fall River, a little more time and attention locally, I suppose, may be reasonably expected. Providence, however, is not without a good man at the head, with some good helpers, and we hope to have more ere long to aid in the work of attempt at getting into better shape and meeting present exigencies. At our request Bro. Geo. Smith is still with us as an associate in pastoral work, and his record is a commendable one. We are not at all anxious for office or "honors" whose recognition or "praises of men," without recognition from Him whose rewards alone are worth the sacrifice; being fearful of the fate of so many in the past who sought for "vain glory" these cheap rewards for the time only, that feed our vanity for a day and leave us stranded, without God or heavenly recognition of our course and action, and the eternal fruitage of striving to build in opposition to God's counsel and law.

If we can be helpful in assisting struggling ones to restore order and vindicate the law, and "make it honorable" in the sight of orderly disposed Saints and in the eyes of the world, remove stumbling blocks to progress, and live in the spirit of peace and greater prosperity, according to our strength we may undertake, but would be glad to exchange all honors or credits liable to come to us from this service through earthly sources, for rest and release from care or responsibility that inevitably faces a conscientious priest who seeks to remove barriers of long standing, or rise to the faithful performance of duty that challenges opposition from quarters where support should, under the law, find its best guarantee and trust and heartiest cooperation.

M. H. BOND.

TAYLORVILLE, Ill., July 19.

Editor Ensign:—Bro. J. A. Robinson will be glad to know that the gospel seed that he sowed at Beardstown, Illinois, only a few years ago while on a business trip to that city, has grown till it has produced quite a respectable sized branch. The tact and energy of some of these good brethren and sisters is commendable since it has produced a nice respectable house of worship 28x40, with a 10 foot vestibule and a 6x10 alcove for pulpit, underneath of which is a finely cemented font. The house is furnished with nice seats, lamps, carpets, etc. The ground on which the church is situated cost $317.00. The total cost was $1432.27.

I had the pleasure of meeting the members of the newly organized district (Central Illinois) in the house on 7th and 8th Inst. in the capacity of a quarterly conference. There being no developed material residing in the district to hold the office of president, Elder J. D. Stead, their missionary, was unanimously elected to that place. He was also recommended to Bishop E. L. Kelley for an appointment as bishop's agent for the district, and has since been so appointed. Will all the Saints in that district take cognizance of this fact and remember the word of the Lord in regard to their tithing and free-will offerings? Brethren and sisters, you are a new district, now please start in right by keeping the whole law of God and you will be blessed of Him both in a spiritual and a temporal way. "Prove me now herewith, Oath the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it." Who can hear these words and doubt God's ability to fulfill them?

The conference closed at noon on the 8th to meet again at Taylorville, October 27th and 28th. The Beardstown branch had extensively advertised dedicatory services to be held at 2:30 and I had the privilege of conducting the services to a jammed house of attentive listeners. At conclusion of this service meetings were announced for me to continue during the week, which I filled, having good attendance throughout the entire services.

On Saturday night after preaching I dedicated their new font by baptizing in it Albert E. Abbott, a respectable young man; Henry F. Reynolds, a promising lad, and Leab Alice Shoemaker, the lovely 8 year old daughter of Bro. and Sr. Shoemaker. After preaching a few nights I announced a course of free lectures from my large pictorial chart which increased the congregation and seemed to take with the people who claimed it was an intellectual treat to them. The lectures had a daily advertising in two daily papers of the town, a sample of which is here appended from the Evening News:

FREE LECTURES.

Elder I. White of Independence, Mo., is still giving free lectures at the Latter Day Saints' church on Monroe and Thirteenth streets. His subjects are very interesting. Friday night his subject was "What relation have the 500 churches of today to the church Christ and his apostles organized 1800 year ago?" Lectures tonight and Sunday night. Subject, "Where among the 149 American churches will we find the 'marvelous work' and 'sealed book' predicted in Isaiah 29: 11, 12, 14." Baptism will be attended to in the font after conclusion of tonight's services.

On Sunday night, my closing effort, I thought to give a reminiscence of the latter day work. I occupied about one hour, but the people were unwilling to go without me giving a synopsis of my chart work. This I did, holding the people one-half hour later, which not only gave satisfaction to many that had been in attendance for the first time, but to those too who had heard me in the entire course of lectures. I closed asking God to bless the efforts I had made though made in weakness.

Bro. and Sr. Shoemaker made me a fine welcome home; although I had many other kind invitations from the other Saints and friends, which I would have been glad to have accepted had I not been overrun with writing, etc. May God bless them all for their remembering care of his servant.

The Taylorville Saints had arranged for meeting in a large front yard that faced on a prominent street. This was fitted up in good order, and I have held three services to date; congregation growing every night. I may remain here a week or ten days and then go to St. Louis.

In gospel bonds,

I. N. WHITE.

PRESTON, Idaho, July 17.

Editor Ensign:—Please find enclosed one dollar to be applied as follows: one Doctrine and Covenants 65 cents, and one Heman Smith True Successor, 35 cents; I believe you will have these books at that price; send them to I. H. Nash, Franklin, Idaho.

I have broken my record, having preached the last two nights in the Mormon church, at Franklin, to a large crowd of attentive listeners. We got the church for one night, and I spoke till ten o'clock, told them I was about half through with my subject, and asked them if they did not think it would be better to let me have the house the next evening? The bishop said it would be alright, so I spoke last night till after ten, gave liberty for questions and was asked several, which I answered and they all seemed satisfied. After meeting a young man came up and ordered those books.

I don't think any of our elders have ever preached there before. I spoke both evenings on succession, gave them the law and our positions, on most of the differences between us; did not attack their position very hard, only showed Joseph could not teach the revelation on polygamy and the former revelations and be consistent. I believe it will put some of the young folks to thinking.

We moved our tent yesterday to this place, fourteen miles, set it up, then I went back to Richmond, and then to Franklin, seven miles, preached there, and Bro. Condit preached in the tent here, so we are not losing any time. No members here, and there has never been any of our elders here to preach that we can learn of. We have to sleep in the tent and rustle for something to eat. Am feeling well and hope this will find you in the same condition.

Godby, R. J. PARKER.

NECK CITY, Missouri, July 11.

Editor Ensign:—At present I am holding forth in the "Sunny Side" school-house to small audiences. Yesterday I hung up my chart on the street as a means of advertising. It brought out quite a number and I am endeavoring to preach on the "Attainment of Christ and the final destiny of man."

The other day while going from house to house inviting people out to meeting and talking to whoever I could when opportunity was afforded, I met with an old gentleman and the conversation run about as follows.

After the usual greeting I apprised him of the fact that there would be preaching every night this week.

"What denomination?"

"By the Reorganized Latter Day Saints. Try and come to hear what we have to say."

"I wouldn't go five steps to hear them. They are nothing but latter day devils. They believe old Joe Smith was a God and a prophet and I can prove from histories (which I have in the house) that he was a mean scamp."

"Did you ever hear the Latter Day Saints preach?"

"No sir! and I never want to."

"Solomon said, 'He that answereth a matter before he hearth it, it is folly and shame unto him.'"

"That's all right; you can't prove from the Bible that Joe Smith was a prophet."

"I can do that very thing. Will you put down your scytle long enough to get your Bible. I can prove from your own Bible that Joseph Smith was a prophet and that you are blinded with tradition and prejudice. Good day." (No reply being given.)

So the world moves on. I am still in the faith. May the Lord prosper his work.

In gospel bonds,

A. M. BAKER.

JONESPORT, Me., June 29.

Editor Ensign:—I feel very thankful to our heavenly Father for calling me into this work, and I am trying to throw all the gospel light on others that I can. Although my business keeps me more or less from the field of duty, yet with all the time I have to spare I mean to put my shoulder to the wheel with all the strength that I have.

The conference at this place was a success with very large attendance, fine preaching and lovely singing; it had the Spirit's power present and was the means of bringing souls to Christ. After the conference U. W. Greene led three into the waters of baptism, all of my family connection, for which I feel to thank the good Master; he also baptized one in an adjoining town. I feel very thankful for the help of Bro. U. W. Greene and W. W. Blanchard; may God's blessings go with them.

I think there are many more near the kingdom in this place. Some are having a conflict with Satan trying to overcome their evil surroundings. Satan is a hard Master in this place, it being the place where Bro. Greene had to make an arrest some two years or more ago with one of Satan's best men. Brethren, do not forget that we need you here as often as any place in Maine. Pray for us in this place, dear Saints, that this work may grow and all the honest hearted be brought into the fold.

I also ask special prayers for my wife's mother, a sister in the faith, as she is dangerously sick; Saints, one and all, when you read this, make a special prayer to our Father in heaven for her recovery.

Trusting that the work may grow in this place, I remain,
Your brother in gospel bonds,
ALONZO M. BEAL.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

ALICE R. CORSON.

"I thought we were the True Believers," said a lady of the Utah faith, whom I met at the house of Mrs. T. (the lady of that faith of whom I have written before).

I had been attending the services of the "True Believers," as they style themselves, and on telling their name the lady made the above remark. I replied that I supposed all church members think the same thing of themselves, but one thing was certain, they could not all be right. Whereupon two Utah elders, who were present, entered into the conversation.

I will not attempt to quote all they said, nor my replies, as I realize how nearly impossible it would be to quote such a conversation exactly, even immediately after; but it would be much more difficult to do so after some time has elapsed. Therefore I will not claim that I am giving what they said in their exact words, neither that all I say in this was used in my argument with them at the time. Much of it was, and a good bit I have found out from careful searching of the books since.

I also know how ready these elders are, and so are all I have met, so far, to cry, "Misquotation, Misrepresentation."

As to their arguments, they said there was no command against plural marriage in the Bible; that God sanctioned it, and blessed those who practiced it; that it was a righteous principle; that David was a man after God's own heart, etc. They also claimed that in reality it was a necessary principle, as according to the census, there were always more women than men, and said that in some places there were seven times as many women as men. Those seem to be the strong points of their argument.

One of them asked me what I thought of the prophecy concerning the time when "seven women will take hold of one man," etc. I replied I thought the Utah people must be fulfilling that. "Then you must give us credit for doing some good," said one of them, "we are fulfilling Scripture anyway, and you know the Scriptures must be fulfilled."

"Yes," I replied, "the Scriptures must be fulfilled, and our Savior said offences must needs come, but woe unto him by whom the offence cometh." He laughed heartily, so did the hearers. They were very gentlemanly, and seemed true and sincere, and were it not for one or two things they said, I could think they were really honest in their defense of polygamy.

They argued that God sanctioned plural wives, in that He sent Hagar back; but they do not notice that God says (or the angel of the Lord), Genesis 16: 9, "Return to thy mistress, and submit thyself under her hand."

Not likely to be a very light or gentle hand in Sarah's mood.

But herein we see the justice of God; Sarah had sinned in enticing her husband to take her maid and in doubting God's promise; Abraham had sinned in complying with Sarah's request, and Hagar had sinned too, but was also sinned against, therefore it was justice that Sarah should care for her, and that she should be punished with a daily sight of her, and the constant reminder of her own folly. Justice that Abraham should be compelled to give her support, and justice that Hagar should bear whatever of hardship there might be under Sarah's hand, since she had sinned against Sarah.

But there is not one word about her going back to Abraham. And we find after Isaac was born, Sarah wanted Abraham to cast out the bond woman and her son, and the "thing grieved Abraham because of his son, but God said, "Let it not be grievous in thy sight because of the lad, and because of thy bondwoman [notice bondwoman, not wife]. In all that Sarah hath said unto thee, hearken unto her voice, for in Isaac shall thy seed be called."—Gen. 21: 9-12.

Now was the time, if God was going to sanction polygamy, and give Hagar equal honors and rights with Sarah, but no, she is cast out as a usurper; she is called the bondwoman always, not once called wife, that I can find in all the Scriptures, and there is no account that Abraham knew Hagar as wife after she returned to Sarah. Not much upholding plural wifery in this.

If it can be proved that God sanctioned Abraham's part in the matter, it proves this word false where he says he is no respecter of persons, that whosoever fears God and works righteousness is accepted of him. If plural marriage is a righteous principal, is it only righteous for the man, and unrighteous for the woman. Abraham blessed and Hagar condemned? How absurd, but she and Ishmael are not counted as legal wife and heir of Abraham at all.

These elders had evidently been educated in the defense of this abominable doctrine, and were therefore better equipped with arguments (such as they were) for it, than I was against it. And though I cannot say I gained a victory over them, yet I know they did not over me, and I do not think they strengthened the cause with their hearers; neither can I boast of weakening it as much as I desired, but I hope I gave them all something to think of for a while, and hope the little debate may set them thinking. I did not exhaust my little stock of argument, but I think they used about all of theirs, as they brought in all I ever heard of their church using.

As to a commandment against plural wifery, I claimed the command, "Thou shalt not commit adultery," covered it. They claimed it did not. I asked them to define adultery, and they said it was "having criminal intercourse with another man's wife." "Now give us yours." "It is sexual intercourse with any other than the legal husband or wife." They did not agree with me; but their definition gives a man almost unbridled liberty, no restriction except that his companion be not the wife of another man, and would give no condemnation to a single woman or a widow at all. What do you think of that? after reading in the Book of Mormon "for the Lord God delighteth in the chastity of women." Those who are well versed in legal lore can see which one gave a correct definition.

Now, if the tables were turned, and God is no respecter of persons remember, would they be so ready to exclaim, "It is a righteous principle!" And how weak an argument, that since God gives no direct command (as they claim) against polygamy, therefore he sanctioned it. Does God give a direct command against slavery, gambling, forgery, prenatal infanticide, and many other sins of the present day? And because He has not, shall we dare say he sanctions them?

But we do find direct commands against it in Book of Mormon and in the Doctrine and Covenants, which I will notice after a while.

But to continue with the thought in my mind; God plainly taught the one wife for one man system when he gave but one wife to Adam, one to Noah, and one to each of his three sons.

If ever there was a time when plurality of wives seemed to be excusable, or necessary, surely it would have been in the beginning of the world's history, and again in the beginning of its repopulation after the deluge. The mind of God is taught plainly enough here, to be only for one wife to one man, for any one who does not wish to excuse their own wrong indulgence, or bolster up a false and corrupt system of faith to which they have become attached from association, or because taught to believe it the right way.

Moses permitted the writing of divorcement, but "from the beginning it was not so," but was permitted because of the hardness of their hearts. The same may be said of polygamy. "From the beginning it was not so," but one wife to one man, and "they twain shall be one flesh," which is repeated three times in the Bible, and once it is "they two shall be one flesh," which is again repeated in Doctrine and Covenants, and reads the same in both Utah editions as it does in ours.

"Whoso forbiddeth to marry is not ordained of God, for marriage is ordained of God unto man; wherefore it is lawful that he should have one wife, and they twain"—mark you—"they twain shall be one flesh," and all this that the earth might answer the end of its creation."

Now, in Doctrine and Covenants again I find these words:

"Thou shalt love thy wife [not wives] with all thy heart, and shall cleave unto her, and none else, and he that looketh upon a woman to lust after her shall deny the faith, and shall not have the Spirit."

How like the Savior's words: "He that looketh on a woman to lust after her hath committed adultery with her already in his heart." Not much agreement with this and the elder's definition of adultery: he that looketh on a woman, and it is not restricted to "another man's wife" either.

And in our edition of Doctrine and Covenants, also in the Utah edition, published in 1854, we find this in the section on marriage; Sec. 111: 4, our edition:

"We declare that we believe that one man should have one wife, and one woman but one husband, except in case of death when either is at liberty to marry again."

Also read Book of Mormon, Jacob 2: 6:

"David and Solomon truly had many wives and concubines, which thing was abominable before me saith the Lord. * * * Wherefore I, the Lord God, will not suffer that this people shall do like unto them of old. * * * Hearken to the word of the Lord. For there shall not any man among you have save it be one wife; and concubines he shall have none, for I, the Lord God delighteth in the chastity of women."

And in Mosiah 7: 1, I find this: "And he had many wives and concubines, and did cause his people to commit sin, and do that which was abominable before the Lord."

Ether 4: 5: "Riplakish did not do that which was right in the sight of the Lord, for he had many wives and concubines."

Read Jacob 1: 4, and Mosiah 1: 6; 7; 5, 8, and Jacob 2: 9. Here, in speaking of the Lamanites, he says: "They have not forgotten the commandment of the Lord, which was given unto our fathers, that they should have, save it were one wife, and concubines they should have none. And there should not be woredoms committed among them."

Now, if following or believing the Book of Mormon makes a man a mormon, the Utah people have forfeited the right to the name. And to be a true "Mormon" there need be no cause for reproach. But because of these, the deceivers and wicked ones spoken of in 2 Peter 2, the way of truth, or pure, uncorrupted "Mormonism," which is restored christianity, "is evil spoken of." They make a great point on God's choosing David, and calling him a man after his own heart. So he was at the time of his choosing. I find these words were said of him in his youth, before he got entangled in the evil practice. According to Bible chronology these words were uttered in the year 1093 B. C., and it seems the first act of folly he committed was to shed the blood of the Philistines in order to win Michal, the king Saul's daughter, about thirty years after. Ambition to be the king's son-in-law caused him to do that for which he was not allowed to build the house of the Lord, for he says in 1 Chronicles 2d verse:

"Hear me, my brethren, I had in my heart to build a house of rest for the ark of the covenant of the Lord, etc.

Third verse: "But God said unto me: "Thou shalt not build a house for my name, because thou hast been a man of war, and hast shed blood."

No longer a man after God's own heart, and after he did this thing, by which he forfeited the right to build the Lord's house, and was no longer a "man after God's own heart," then it was that he began to commit sin in other ways, and his progress seems rapid in that direction.

No account of his having more than one wife until after he had ceased to be a man after God's own heart, that I can find.

Solomon was allowed to build the temple, not because he was perfect, but because God told David that "Solomon, thy son he shall build the house." And God's word must needs be fulfilled; and if Solomon sinned, some other punishment must be meted out.

And again, although a man after God's own heart when God chose him, yet not after he had broken God's plain commands, which he did in taking a number of wives, for there is a direct commandment of God concerning whomsoever the Israelites should choose for a king. You will find it in Deuteronomy 17: 14-17. Here God laid down rules, or gave commandments, for the guidance of their king, should they ever choose one. One of which is "Neither shall he multiply wives unto himself, that his heart turn not away." Was God afraid that following a righteous principle would turn the king's heart away?

Now, this command is not modified at all as is the command concerning silver and gold: "Neither shall he greatly multiply unto himself silver and gold," but it is, Neither shall he multiply wives unto himself. No multiplication, or addition, either, allowed here. For the very beginning of multiplication is, "two times one is two," and the adding of one wife to another is the multiplying one by two. One and one are two, two times one are two. Therefore, a man taking one wife when he already has one, multiplies wives; no getting around that. "And God said neither shall he multiply wives. How logical(?) that he is still a man after God's own heart, after breaking God's plain command.

Isn't this profound logic? A righteous God giving a righteous principle, then forbidding the king to practice it, lest his heart be turned away, then when the king broke this command to bless him for it. According to such reasoning one would be just as likely to be blessed for breaking God's commands as for keeping them.

It is equally as consistent as their claim that "it is a righteous principle but we don't teach and practice it now, for we are told to obey the laws of the land, etc." Now, in the Scriptures we are told to be subject to the powers that be, be subject to the higher powers, etc., and in Doctrine and Covenants are told that "if we keep the law of the Lord we need not to break the laws of the land," because, as the Bible says, the powers that be are ordained of God. Yet they claim that they cannot teach and practice this "righteous principle because contrary to the laws of the land. Strange inconsistency; a righteous God commanding the people to obey the laws of the land, then giving them a "righteous principle" that they cannot obey without breaking the laws of the land which he has commanded them to obey, then after finding out that the laws of the land will not allow them to practice this "righteous principle," to command them to obtain from practicing and teaching it any longer. Worse than child's play, it reminds me of what I heard two boys say once, concerning their father, who would give contradictory orders, then find fault if the thing he happened to want done wasn't done. "It is no use trying to please pa anyway, he don't know himself what he does want, might as well do as we please."

Look at 1 Kings 10th and 11th chapters, in the last part of the tenth chapter we find Solomon's wisdom, and wealth, and glory, and greatness recorded, and the first verse of the eleventh chapter, which should join right on to the preceding, says, "But Solomon loved many strange women," etc. Notice the word "but," if it had been and the meaning would have been different and would have been to point to that as additional proof of Solomon's greatness. But, no, it is "but," and that "but" is put there by the wisdom of inspiration, and separates that fact from the facts stated before. But, is a separate conjunction, it joins together to be sure, but yet separates, showing the differences; a "differentiating conjunction" it may be called. Notice: Mr. Blank is a good man, honest, truthful, kind hearted, but he will get drunk. Mrs. So-and-so, is a wealthy, handsome, fashionable lady, but she is not refined; and you see how but always separates the things it joins by proving their difference or unfitness to be "joined together."

"And his wives turned away his heart," not from sin to righteousness, that thought is not once suggested, but from righteousness to sin and folly, strange effect of a "righteous principle." "And his heart was not perfect with the Lord his God, as was the heart of David his father."

Let us look at that text in the light of reason, common sense, morality and modern English grammar. A "not perfect" thing; what may be said of it? Why, it is imperfect of course. Very well then, a not perfect heart is an imperfect heart. "And his heart was not perfect [or it was imperfect], as was the heart of David, his father." I have not wrested the scripture at all, the prefix "im" means not, and to read it, "His heart was imperfect," is to give it identically the same meaning it now has. "As was the heart of David, his father." As, means like, or similar to; of the same kind with, says Webster. And his heart was as, or like, or similar to, or the same kind with, the heart of David, his father.

In Solomon's prayer at the dedication of the temple, 1 Kings 8, we find this: "Let your heart, therefore, be perfect with the Lord our God, to walk in his statutes and to keep his commandments as at this day."

This shows that Solomon knew that to be perfect he must "keep his commandments," so when in after years he broke the one concerning the multiplying of wives, his heart was no longer perfect, but was as or like the heart of David, his father. The meaning is plain to all who are not blinded by false teachings, or worse yet, by the desire to prove that almost unrestricted liberty was God's will for man.

Now hear what the Prophet Nehemiah says concerning Solomon, after recounting what he had seen of abuses in the house of God, concerning illegal marriages.

"Did not Solomon, king of Israel, sin by these things?" Yet among many nations was there no king like him, beloved of his God, and God made him king over all Israel: Nevertheless even him did outlandish woman cause to sin. Shall we then hearken unto you to do all this great evil, to transgress against our God in marrying strange wives?"—Neh 13:26, 27.

Alas that there should be in latter day Israel, those for whom Nehemiah's prayer in twentieth verse is appropriate. "Remember them, Oh my God, because they have defiled the priesthood, and the covenant of the priesthood; and of the Levites."

Now read the tenth chapter of Ezra, in 2d verse Shechaniah, son of Jehiel, says unto Ezra:

We have trespassed against our God and have taken strange wives, yet now there is hope in Israel concerning this thing. Now therefore, let us make a covenant with our God to put away all the strange wives, and such as are born of them, according to the counsel of my Lord, and of those that trembled at the commandment of our God. And let it be done according to the law.

What law but God's law that would only recognize the one wife, as in the case of Abraham, as Hagar was never called his wife. 17th, 18th and 19th verses are as follows:

"And they made an end with all the men that had taken strange wives by the first day of the first month. And among the sons of the priests there were found that had taken strange wives. And they gave their hands that they would put away their wives; and being guilty they offered a ram of the flock for their trespass."

"And being guilty," guilty of what? Of obeying a righteous principle? Well, well, better not be so strict in obeying righteous principles if this is the result. Now when Ezra exhorted them to confess unto the Lord he says, "and do his pleasure and separate yourselves from the people of the land, and from the strange wives."

Now what was his pleasure? It was that "man should have one wife and they twain should be one flesh," as even Solomon showed plainly that he knew was the right way, though he, himself, had departed from it. In Proverbs 5:1 he says: "My son, attend unto my wisdom and bow thine ear to my understanding;" then goes on to give him instructions according to his wisdom and his understanding thus: "Let thy fountain be blessed and rejoice with the wife of thy youth [not wives]. Let her be as the loving hind and the pleasant roe; let her breasts satisfy thee at all times, and be thou ravished always with her love." Not much here to encourage his son to follow his footsteps in the matter of having many wives. Yes, the wise Solomon advised his son contrary to what he practiced himself; would he have done so had he seen in polygamy a righteous principle?

But the objection is made by these Utah elders that it was not the plurality of wives, but the marrying women of strange nations, that constituted the trespass. But Joseph's wife was an Egyptian, and he was not condemned for that, but rich blessings were promised to him and his posterity. To be sure marrying among the idolatrous nations was forbidden, but if they had been contented with the one wife for one man system, their would have been no need to marry ^{outside} their own nation, especially if the Utah elders argument is true that there is always a large majority of women—that the census reports would always show this.—Will some one who has access to the census reports of the United States and of different countries please report.

That the word "strange" does not apply merely to women of other nations I think is evident. "They twain shall be one flesh," and the addition of a third is to create a monstrosity. Further additions but add to the monstrosity. There can be only legal righteous union between the twain, and to add another is an abomination in the sight of God and all right minded people. You who advocate that it was only because the women were of strange nations, just turn the tables. Let your wives take other husbands and even if of your own nation or kindred, you would think it a "strange" proceeding. Would the fact that he was of your own nation or kindred make the proceeding any the less strange?

Again, since God is no respecter of persons, why should Joseph be allowed to keep his wife of a strange nation and all others be commanded to put their wives away? That was not it. In taking more wives than one they had broken God's law as taught by precept and by example in giving one wife to Adam and in preserving one wife apiece to Noah and each of his three sons.

Now, Malachi speaking of the "wife of thy youth, against whom thou hast dealt treacherously," says, "and did he not make one? and yet had He the residue of the Spirit. And wherefore one? That he might seek a godly seed. Therefore take heed to thy spirit, and let none deal treacherously against the wife of his youth."

But one more strong point in the chain of evidence in favor of Joseph's teaching, one wife for one man, is the fact that in the Inspired Translation it is more plainly evident that God condemns plurality of wives; even more evident than in the King James version.

I give in parallel columns a few verses of each translation:

KING JAMES. 1 Kings 11:1-4: It came to pass when Solomon was old that his wives turned away his heart after other gods, and his heart was not perfect with the Lord his God, as was the heart of David, his father. 6th verse: And Solomon did evil in the sight of the Lord, and went not fully after the Lord, as did David his father. A part of verse 33: And have not walked in my ways, to do that which was right in my eyes, and to keep my statutes and my judgments, as David his father did. 38th verse: And it shall be, if thou wilt hearken unto all that I command thee, and wilt walk in my way, and do that is right in my sight, to keep my statutes, as David my servant did, in the day that I blessed him: I will be with thee, and build thee a sure house, as I built for David, and I will give Israel unto thee. 1 Kings 14:8: And rent the kingdom away from the house of David, and gave it to thee; and yet thou hast not been as my servant David, who kept my commandments, and who followed me with all his heart, to do that only which was right in mine eyes. 1 Kings 15:11: And Asa did that which was right in the eyes of the Lord, as he commanded David his father. 1 Kings 3:14: And if thou wilt walk in my ways, to keep my statutes and my commandments, then I will lengthen thy days.	INSPIRED TRANSLATION. For it came to pass when Solomon was old, that his wives turned away his heart after other gods, and his heart was not perfect with the Lord his God, and it became as the heart of David his father. And Solomon did evil in the sight of the Lord, as did David his father, and went not fully after the Lord. And have not walked in my ways, to do that which is right in mine eyes, and my statutes and my judgments; and his heart is become as David his father, and he repenteth not as did David his father, that I may forgive him. And it shall be, if thou wilt hearken unto all that I command thee, and wilt walk in my way, and do that is right in my sight, to keep my statutes, as David my servant did, in the day that I blessed him: I will be with thee and build thee a sure house, as I built for David, and give Israel unto thee. And rent the kingdom away from the house of David, and gave it to thee, because he kept not my commandments. ---	---

And Solomon did evil in the sight of the Lord, as did David his father, and went not fully after the Lord.

And have not walked in my ways, to do that which is right in mine eyes, and my statutes and my judgments; and his heart is become as David his father, and he repenteth not as did David his father, that I may forgive him.

And it shall be, if thou wilt hearken unto all that I command thee, and wilt walk in my way, and do that is right in my sight, to keep my statutes, as David my servant did, in the day that I blessed him: I will be with thee and build thee a sure house, as I built for David, and give Israel unto thee.

And rent the kingdom away from the house of David, and gave it to thee, because he kept not my commandments. But thou hast not been as my servant David, when he followed me with all his heart, only to do right in mine eyes.

And Asa did that which was right in the eyes of the Lord, as he commanded David his father.

And if thou wilt walk in my ways, to keep my statutes and my commandments, then I will lengthen thy days, and thou shalt not walk in unrighteousness, as did thy father David.

Now the above quoted translation is sufficient to prove to any candid mind that whether Joseph Smith was a true prophet or not, whether he was purposely deceiving the people or was indeed God's servant sent by him to bring the church again out of the wilderness, he certainly was the author and promulgator of the base doctrine of polygamy. If he had been preaching and teaching that doctrine or even had been believing it, he certainly would not have translated every verse in such a way as to make it condemn the thing he was believing; teaching or practicing. So whether Joseph's translation was inspired or was just his doctoring over of the Scriptures to suit his own ideas, as many claim, yet he must forever by this same translation stand acquitted of having any part in fastening the abominable doctrine of polygamy on the church.

But I fully believe he was led by the Spirit to make this translation, and as no weapon formed against Zion shall prosper and the arch enemy is again trying to overthrow the church of Christ, yet he is again outwitted and his weapon turned against himself; and the hand of God has been in the protection of his word and the preserving of the manuscript in a safe place to come out in due time among his own people.

I do not wonder the Utah people do not accept the Inspired Translation. It would be turning the sword of the Spirit against themselves or against their false system. If they would accept it and let it cut them off and away from that foul and fungous excrescence that has deformed their church beyond all recognition, there would be hope for them yet. May it yet so be.

"To the Law and to the Testimony."

I see in your paper an account of Prof. S. A. Weltmer to the effect that the government had made a case against him for fraudulent use of the United States mail.

As I have had some experience with him and as my father was a doctor, and I have read a great many books and journals on hypnotism, mesmerism, etc., some of them written by the medical profession, usually called suggestive therapeutics, the thought came to me that I ought to give my experience. They usually define hypnotism in ordinary cases of cure the submission of the soul of the patient to the will of the operator; and define mesmerism as an analogous operation plus a psychical sympathy transferring a vital magnetism. They teach that a man must be of pure blood, and kind heart, and sound mind, and that he should believe in God and in man as a son of God; that his desire must be to relieve human suffering and confer happiness, and he must believe in the possibility of miracles of healing in the sense that miracles are only the direct action of mind or spirit on matter. They give Scripture reference, but do not believe in the gospel in its fullness. Jesus taught a doctrine when he said to Nicodemus (John 3:3):

"Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God;" 5th verse, "Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born of the water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God."

Nicodemus had said, "We know that thou art a teacher come from God: for no man can do these miracles that thou doest, except God be with him." No one had power of God to perform miracles only those who obeyed Jesus' commands; neither did they have the gifts and blessings of the church.

In Acts 2, when the disciples were filled with the Holy Ghost, they began to speak with tongues as the Spirit gave them utterance. The people were amazed and in doubt. But Peter and the rest of the apostles told them the disciples were not drunken as they supposed, but "this is that which was spoken by the prophet Joel: And it shall come to pass in the last days, saith God, I will pour out of my Spirit upon all flesh: and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, and your young men shall see visions, and your old men shall dream dreams: and on my servants and on my handmaidens I will pour out in those days of my Spirit; and they shall prophesy," etc. (37th verse). "Now when they had heard this, they were pricked in their heart, and said unto Peter and to the rest of the apostles, Men, and brethren, what shall we do? Then Peter said unto them, Repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost. For the promise is unto you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call."

Read Acts 8: 9-24 inclusive, where Simon the sorcerer believed and was baptized: "And when Simon saw that through laying on of the apostles' hands the Holy Ghost was given, he offered them money, saying, Give me also this power, that on whomsoever I lay hands, he may receive the Holy Ghost. But Peter said unto him, Thy money perish with thee, because thou hast thought that the gift of God may be purchased with money. Thou hast neither part nor lot in this matter: for thy heart is not right in the sight of God."

Jesus said to his disciples after he had risen (Mark 16: 15-19), "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned. And these signs shall follow them that believe; In my name shall they cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues; they shall take up serpents; and if they drink any deadly thing, it shall not hurt them; they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover." Read Acts 19, where many believed, came and confessed. Many of them also which used curious arts brought their books together and burned them before all men—perhaps the same curious arts that are practiced now by Satan. Matthew 7: 21-23, "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven. Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name? and in thy name cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works? And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you: depart from me ye that work iniquity."

When Satan is, trying to deceive, and there are false prophets, we know there are true prophets. How careful we all ought to be, that we are not deceived; and as I came so near being deceived myself by it, and was only delivered by the power of God, I feel it a duty I owe to God and mankind to give my experience to warn others. I feel my inability to deal with this subject as I would like to, but I will trust in God to guide me, and I want to feel that I have done what little I could. I feel certain now we are living in the latter days, and that these Sciences are the unclean spirits spoken of in Revelation 16: 13, 14: "And I saw three unclean spirits like frogs come out of the mouth of the dragon, and out of the mouth of the beast, and out of the mouth of the false prophet. For they are the spirits of devils, working miracles, which go forth unto the kings of the earth and of the whole world, to gather them to the battle of that great day of God Almighty."

Welmter teaches that all power is in the mind; that the mind and soul are one, and that will, that sex, is God, and that God's laws are natural laws; and that the law will act if it is complied with, whether we understand it or not. I believe God's laws are natural laws, and that Satan works through natural law, perhaps animal magnetism, the same with which he deceived our first parents.

The world, the flesh and the devil are at enmity against God, we should crucify the flesh and live unto the Spirit. Paul says, Galatians 5: 24, 25: "And they that are Christ's have crucified the flesh with the affections and lusts. If we live in the Spirit, let us also walk in the Spirit." Satan can, no doubt, do wonderful things, and if it were possible would deceive the very elect. He has come down upon the earth having great wrath, for he knows his time is short; he is going about as a roaring lion, seeking whom he may devour.

The thought came to me of the time our Savior was tempted of Satan, Luke 4: 5, 6: "And the devil, taking him up into an high mountain, showed unto him all the kingdoms of the world in a moment of time. And the devil said unto him, All this power will I give thee, and the glory of them: for that is delivered unto me; and to whomsoever I will I give it. If thou therefore wilt worship me, all shall be thine." Now, it seems plain to me that if the devil could not have given it to him, it would not have been any temptation to him. For Jesus surely knew; but that would have destroyed the great plan of redemption, or what he came to do.

I think the devil could do much for those today who would worship him, or trust in the arm of flesh. But what shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world, and lose his own soul. I want to be charitable. No doubt many are deceived; Satan flatters them away, but it has a tendency to cause them to forget God, and lose confidence in his word.

Welmter teaches that Moses was taught at Metropolis where he was educated, and Jesus Christ by the Essenian priests at Jerusalem. He says this occult science designated by the ancient priests under the name of Regeneration is that which at the present day is known as Animal magnetism, a science that for more than three thousand years was the peculiar possession of the priesthood, and that the titles of "Regenerating fire," "Living fire," and "Magic" were given to it by them, and the invitation into this divine science was participated in but by a small number of the elect. If that were true, the Bible would be of no use to us, we would have to admit that Jesus was a deceiver and baptism was only a means to an end, as suggestion is to the Hypnotist. But no, no, the Bible is true and in its truths rest our only hope of eternal life.

Some of them say they teach the principles upon which all the successful work is done in divine healing; but if they believed the Bible they could not teach that, for Jesus says all things are given him of the Father, and Paul says he was not taught of man but by the Revelation of Jesus Christ. Read 2 Thessalonians 2: 9-13: "Even him, whose coming is after the working of Satan with all power and signs and lying wonders, and with all deceivableness of unrighteousness in them that perish: because they received not the love of the truth, that they might be saved. And for this cause God shall send them strong delusion in that they should believe a lie: that they all might be damned who believe not the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness," etc.

I have spent some time and money in the investigation of those sciences, therefore I feel many golden moments have been spent in vain; if others, as well as myself, are not benefited thereby. Although it is very humiliating to me to tell of some of my experiences, yet I care more for my duty to God, and my vow to him, than I do the opinions of man; and I might save others from being deceived. I have been a member of the M. E. church since I was 11 years old. I always loved to read the Bible, and believed it as I read it, but I knew they did not teach it in the churches. I heard miracles and the gifts of the church had ceased. I grieved and wondered why the gifts and blessings were not in the church now as it was in Jesus day. I have had visions and dreams verified, and prayers answered, consequently, when I heard of those great powers of healing that the churches did not have, I thought there must be something wrong, and what was more natural than that I should try to become enlightened on the subject. I read

Prof. Weltmer's journals, he talks very nice, gives scripture references, and testimonials of those who were healed by absent, as well as present treatment, I wrote to several whose names were in the paper and received reply that it was all right, they were healed, some of them from what seemed their deathbed. I had had poor health for some time, so I concluded I would try the absent treatment.

When I received the instructions, I was disappointed; he said "The kingdom of God is in you" and for me to place myself in his hands, make myself passive to him at a certain hour, morning and evening, and his thought would pass through my temple, step up the kingdom, put the executive officer to work, which is the will; his thought would pass through my temple and clean out the house, sweep and garnish it, and leave me free from the maladies which distressed me; he said if I knew how I could throw off my load of care, worry and pain as I can throw off any other load that is pressing me down, the relief would be just the same; but he did not tell me to pray to God, nor say "In Jesus name."

I did not like the tone of the instructions, but I thought it might be I did not understand it, and as I had paid my money, I would try it. But I prayed to God all the time, and read my Bible, and I said, "O, Lord, although thou slay me, yet will I trust in thee." I could not give up my God. I said, "O, Lord, if thou wilt take me unto thy kingdom I will work for thee." No one but God knows the agony of both mind and body I passed through, but the Lord sent an angel to comfort me. I had a vision, the angel took me by the hand and told me not to fear, that I was almost ready to enter into the kingdom, and God wanted me, and that the kingdom of God was built up of infinitesimal parts, built up little by little, and some things I could not comprehend after I roused up. I wrote to the professor telling him of my vision and that I had had visions before, dreams verified, etc., but he never gave me any consolation in reply, only told me to follow instructions; so I wrote to one of the ladies who was healed, telling of my vision, hoping I would receive some consolation, but she gave me none, could not account for it, so I lost faith in it and almost gave up in despair. I thought we could go to Jesus without money and without price. "And there would be false Christs and false prophets that would deceive the very elect if possible." He once told me to just determine, I would be well, but I was not willing to accept it that way, I trusted in Jesus.

Not long after that I told my husband and children if I did not get better soon I would not live long, but I did not want to die before I was baptized, I felt better after I made up my mind to be baptized, but did not know of any church I could feel at home in; but I trusted in God to guide me. That was on Satur-

WILL SEND $2.50 FREE

TO EACH READER. FRANKLIN MILES, M. D., LL. B., THE WEALTHY CHICAGO SPECIALIST, WILL SEND $2.50 WORTH OF HIS NEW INDIVIDUAL TREATMENT FREE.

That Dr. Miles is one of the most successful and reliable of physicians is proven by hundreds of testimonials from well known people. One patient cured after failure of eleven Grand Bani's was given up by eleven Chicago physicians, another after nine of the leading doctors in New York City, Philadelphia and Chicago failed. Thousands of testimonials sent on request.

The late Prof. J. S. Jewell, M. D., editor of the Journal of Nervous and Mental Diseases, published at Chicago, advised Dr. Miles to "by all means publish your surprising results." Prof. J. P. Ross, M. D., President of Rush Medical College, wrote in 1874: "Dr. Miles' course of two courses of my private instruction cured me of the heart and lungs." Col. N. C. Parker, Ex-Treasurer of South Carolina, says: "I believe Dr. Miles to be an attentive and skillful physician in a field which requires the best qualities of head and heart." Col. A. M. Tucker, late General Manager of the L. & W. system of railways, says: "Dr. Miles' success as a physician has been phenomenal." Col. E. B. Spileman of the 9th Regulars, U. S. A., San Diego, Cal., says: "Your special treatment has certainly worked wonders when all else failed. I had employed the best medical talent and had spent $2,000." Hundreds of other endorsements could be given would space permit.

When an experienced and wealthy physician offers to prescribe free $250 worth of treatment for diseases of the heart, nerves, stomach, or dropsy, it is conclusive evidence that he has great faith in his skill. And when hundreds of prominent men and women freely testify to his unusual skill and superiority of his New Individual Treatment, his liberality is certainly worthy of serious consideration.

The Doctor's new system of treatment is thoroughly scientific and immensely superior to the ordinary methods.

As all afflicted readers may have $2.50 worth of treatment especially prescribed for each case, FREE, with proper directions, we would advise them to send for a Copyrighted Examination Chart at once. Address The Dr. Miles Medical Association, 201 to 209 State Street, Chicago.

day: on Sunday Elder J. D. Stead, of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, preached at our schoolhouse, and every night for almost a week. In a few nights I was able to go out to preaching, and when I heard the gospel in its fullness, I felt the Lord had answered my prayer. We invited him home with us, and he explained the Scriptures to us, and also the difference between the Reorganized or true church, and the apostate or Utah church. On the next Sunday I was baptized and have never regretted it, although I have been persecuted. The truth of Jesus' statement found in John 7:16, 17 has been verified in my case. "Jesus answered them and said, My doctrine is not mine but his that sent me. If any man will do his will he shall know of the doctrine whether it be of God or whether I speak of myself." I was baptized the 18th of June, 1899.

Here is the test to tell the false from the true. Isaiah 8: 19, 20. "And when they shall say unto you, Seek unto them that have familiar spirits, and unto wizards that peep, and that mutter: should not a people seek unto their God for the living to the dead? To the law and to the testimony: if they speak not according to the word, it is because there is no light in them." I am now a child of the kingdom and I do not know how to keep my vow unless by telling what little I know. All the signs foretell the coming of our Lord.

Saints of God, arise, gird on the whole armor of God and go forth to battle, for the enemy of all righteousness is fully equipped for the fray, getting ready for the battle of the great day of God Almighty.

My husband has obeyed the gospel. I have three children, I desire to live to raise them and see them brought into the kingdom.

JOTS BY THE WAYSIDE.

BY T. W. CHATBURN

Dear Ensign:—With your permission and assistance we will now try to catch up to the "Jot" man.

We found our son Almon in Denver, who had been badly hurt, improving very nicely, his eye and arm nearly normal, a broken hand was still painful and healing slowly.

According to appointment we again met the Brighamites on the street; we waited patiently until the close of the sermon, which was a continuation of the previous night, which treated upon pre-existence of spirits.

We admitted the argument as purely Brighamism, hence the necessity of the introduction of polygamy to furnish the bodies for the multiplied millions.

We left Denver, going north to Cheyenne and on to Ogden, then crossing the great desert to Reno, Nevada, and on to Sacramento. A second trip across the continent loses much of its beauty and picturesqueness.

It is worthy of note to say the Union Pacific railroad company are expending an immense amount of money on their road bed, hundreds of miles of new road grade is being built, straightening curves and lessening the grades, cutting tunnels, etc.

I was informed by one of the contractors that it would take three years to complete the work, and the company wanted ten thousand men this year to complete the grades. No man who wants to work is permitted to pass the camps; employment agencies in Kansas City, Omaha, Denver and cities on the coast are sending all the men they can find; hundreds of men are taking advantage of a free ride to the coast at the company's expense.

A short visit at Sacramento, also Oakland and the big city, we are reminded by the rocket's glare and bunting galore, that McKinley and Roosevelt are the candidates of the great Republican Convention at Philadelphia, and from the enthusiasm manifested in California it would seem they will do candidate Bryan and his mate to mummified conditions next November.

We dare not enthuse, so "trekked" our way to Los Angeles where we took in the Fourth, watching bulletins from Kansas City, amid throngs of people, the rattle of cannons and more bunting than we ever saw, Bryan and Stevenson at the mast head on every hand, and were wild with enthusiasm, and now we modestly say, the riders are up and the fight is on. Selah!

My address until further notice will be Santa Ana, California.

Has the endorsement of the highest medical authority in the world. It would seem strange indeed if persons afflicted with cancers and tumors, after knowing the facts, would resort to the dreaded knife and burning plaster, which have heretofore been attended with such fatal results.

Reunion Notices.

The Des Moines district will hold their annual reunion at Colfax, Iowa, August 31st, ten days, twenty-three miles northwest of the city of Des Moines on the Rock Island railroad. It is a beautiful location, good shade, water, and every needed accommodation, good camping ground. A cordial invitation is extended to one and all to come and join in with us and enjoy a good, spiritual refreshment from the Master, for such we expect. All parties desiring tents or other camping articles will please send in their orders to George Johnson, Youngerman Block, Des Moines, Iowa. Please get your order in early. The price of tents for the entire ten days is about as follows: cheaper than was at first announced in Herald: 10x12 wall tents, $1.00; 12x14 wall tents, $1.35; 14x16 wall tents, $1.70; 14x16 compartments, $3.00; 14x21 compartments, $4.00. All other camping articles at reasonable rates; feed for horses, hay, corn, etc., will be on the ground at very reasonable rates, and arrangements will be made for good board and low rates, buildings will be used for assembly meetings and also eating rooms, and not tents. Trains out of Des Moines are as follows: 9:35 p. m., 4:45 p. m., 12:10 a. m., 12:48 p. m., 7 a. m.

DES MOINES, Ia., July 19.

Saints in St. Louis district will please not forget the dates of our reunion, August 3d to 12th inclusive. Tents will be up so all can move into them on the afternoon of the 2d. The location, Normandy Grove, is located both on the Suburban Street car line and the Wabash R. R. The Wabash station is about one-fourth of a mile from the grounds. Good shade and fine location for grounds. Indications at present are that our attendance will be much larger than last year.

Tents entire time, 12x14, $1.50; 10x

12, $1.10. This includes putting them up and taking them down. Straw free. Those desiring tents please communicate with Bro. J. E. Dawson, 2510 Garrison Ave., St. Louis, Mo. Cots 25 cents, camp chairs 10 cents. An eating house will be conducted on the grounds by the committee. Meals 15 cents, seven for $1.00. This for the accommodation of those who do not wish to do their own cooking and for those who can attend but one or two days. Extra tents will be arranged also for sleeping, charging a small sum for the use of the tent for the night. Every possible effort will be put forth on the part of the committee to make your stay pleasant and profitable.

Good speakers will be present and it is hoped that every one of our people in the district who can possibly do so will be present. Let us hear from you if you think you can come, perhaps we can help you out some. If you cannot decide about coming until almost time, come anyway. We will make provision for you after you arrive. Would prefer to hear earlier, however.

Southern California Reunion.

The annual reunion of southern California will convene in Sycamore Grove, one of the best natural groves in the state, and situated within the incorporated limits of the city of Los Angeles, and about three miles from the post-office. All facilities for a ten day's sojourn outdoors are here afforded. Plenty of water, unexcelled shade and a pavillion for general service, with ample room for as many campers as may desire to come. Past experience has revealed the fact that the first day is invariably consumed in getting ready, so we have announced the meetings proper to commence on Saturday, August 11, 1900, and to continue over Sunday, the 19th.

The following brethren of the general missionary force will be in attendance, Missionary in Charge G. T. Griffiths, Associates, J. F. Burton, T. W. Chatburn, D. A. Anderson, Elbert Smith and Wm. Gibson. These will be assisted by members of the local force, viz.: Albert Carmichael, A. E. Jones, C. W. Earl, George Wixon, and others.

Best of all we are able to announce that one and possibly two of the presidency will be in attendance. We fully expect Bro. Joseph and Alexander.

Here is afforded an opportunity which may not come soon again to the Saints of the Pacific coast. I trust that all of the Saints will appreciate this, and as many as can possibly do so, will attend this reunion. We hope to make this one of the largest attended reunions ever held in California. You, by a co-operative effort and a complete trust in God, can make it the very best.

Forego something which is not of so much vital interest as the development of your spiritual nature, and come and unite with many others of your brethren and sisters in singing praises to your God. The signs of the times indicate a great upheaval among the nations of the earth. Let us be wise and have our lamps trimmed and burning.

Tents can be secured at the following rates: 10x12, $1.95; 12x12, $2.30; 12x14, $2.60; 7x9, $1.40; 10x14, $2.20. This includes putting up and taking down. You will have nothing to do but to move in and move out. Provisions will be delivered on the grounds.

Grocery, milk, meat and vegetable wagons will visit the grounds daily. There will be an abundance of city water in easy access. The grounds are lighted with electricity.

Parties should in no instance fail to secure from the agent where they purchase a ticket, a certificate to the effect that they have paid full fare one way. If fifty parties are in attendance it will entitle the holder of each certificate to return at one-third fare. Please remember this; It was the failure to secure said certificates which lost to us the rebate at our district conference.

Those desiring to participate in the "Community Table" should notify the undersigned to that effect at their earliest convenience. Some of the objectional features which necessarily we could not avoid last year, because of lack of experience, will be entirely eliminated this time.

Come, brethren and sisters, one and all, and make this one of the grandest reunions ever held in the state. Remember the date, August 10th to 19th, inclusive. Get certificates on whatever line of railroad you come. Please notify us by postal if you intend to attend, and when you will arrive. We shall endeavor to make arrangements with the Santa Fe Railroad company to stop near the grounds and deposit passengers. Those coming to the city will take the Pasadena car and get off at Sycamore Grove.

On behalf of the committee, T. W. WILLIAMS, 1014 Alpine St., Los Angeles, Cal. July 15.

The Teachers' Quarterly Now Ready.

At the last General Convention steps were taken toward a teachers' quarterly, and the editor of the Quarterly was authorized to prepare it. The Association takes pleasure in announcing that this Quarterly is in course of preparation and will be published with the next quarter, beginning with October. It will contain all the lessons of the three grades now in use, with such other matter as will be helpful and suggestive to teachers, both in the preparation of the lessons and in teaching them. The editor has spared no pains to make them of use to the teachers. Teachers having this quarterly will not need any of the others, for the text of the other grades appears in this just as it is in the others. Of course this will not take the place of the teachers' meetings, it is such teachers as cannot attend teachers' meetings, and to such schools as do not find it convenient to hold such meetings, it will go a long way to supply this lack. Although this quarterly contains much more than even the present senior grade, the price is within the reach of all, being but slightly in advance of the Senior. The price is ten cents per quarter, or thirty-five cents per year. Every teacher of any grade ought to have this quarterly, and it is hoped that teachers will avail themselves of this opportunity to make their work more effective, as well as more easy, and send their orders promptly.

Conference Notices.

The Oklahoma district conference will convene Tuesday, 10 a. m., August 7, 1900, at the place of reunion, four miles east and two miles south of Hennessy, Oklahoma.

Branch presidents will please observe to send reports from their branch. Also those of the priesthood are requested to send written report of all labors done. We are hopeful of a good reunion and conference and trust the Saints in Oklahoma will make special effort to attend. The work is onward; let us each do our part that much good may come to the cause of Zion.

R. M. MALONEY, Dist. Pres. July 19.

The conference of the eastern Colorado district will convene at Wray, Colorado, August 18, 1900, at 10 o'clock a. m. It is desired that all branches in the district will send statistical reports to this conference; please do not neglect this, let us know your strength numerically and spiritually; are you hot, cold or lukewarm? Let the ministry report in writing so as to expedite business. Of course we shall expect you there in person also. Send reports to A. E. Tabor, Wray, Colorado.

Convention Notices.

Northwest Kansas district Sunday School Association will convene Friday, August 17, at reunion grounds near Minneapolis, Kansas. The Sunday School children will give an entertainment at night. General Superintendent T. A. Hougas will be present during a part of reunion, and the afternoon of August 13th, 14th, 15th and 16th will be devoted to Sunday School and Institute work.

We hope that every Sunday School worker in the district will make a special effort to be present, and if you are not a worker you ought to be, so come any way. We wish that those who can only attend part of the time would arrange to be there Convention Day and for as much of Institute work as possible. Bring your Bibles, Quarterlies and Winned Songs. Come prepared to help and to receive help, and we shall have a profitable time.

BUTLER.—At his home near Kingfisher, Oklahoma, July 6, 1900, of heart failure, Elder Stephen Butler. He was born in 1832, accepted the angel's message under the preaching of his brother-in-law, Elder Zack Martin, in 1865, and was ordained an elder in 1867. He moved to Oklahoma soon after the opening and has been an important factor in the growth of the work in the Territory. Funeral sermon by Elder W. S. Macrae.

STANNARD.—At Denver, Colorado, July 13, 1900, of brain fever, Sr. Betty Stannard, wife of Albert Stannard, aged 26 years, 6 months and 21 days. She was baptized by the writer May 7, 1890, and was a firm believer in the latter day gospel. She leaves a husband and two small children, beside father, sisters and others to mourn her loss. She seemed to have a premonition a few days before she was taken sick of the near approach of the end; she had her children blessed July 1st of this year, and on the 4th sent for the writer to come and see her as she felt there was something going to happen, and she wanted to know my opinion in regard to the matter; when I left her she seemed more cheerful, but the next day her mind gave way, and it was necessary to confine her in the hospital. She never regained consciousness and died the above date; interment at Brighton, funeral in charge of the writer.

STARVED Slow growth of hair comes from lack of hair food. The hair has no life. It is starved. It keeps coming out, gets thinner and thinner, bald spots appear, then actual baldness. The only good hair food you can buy is— AYER'S HAIR VIGOR. It feeds the roots, stops starvation, and the hair grows thick and long. It cures dandruff also. Keep a bottle of it on your dressing table. It always restores color to faded or gray hair. Mind, we say "always."

A GREAT PRIVILEGE.

One of the most gracious, satisfactory and cheering assurances given to the followers of Christ is the promise that they shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life: consider it carefully:

Then spake Jesus again unto them, saying, I am the light of the world: he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life.—John 8: 12.

Then Jesus said unto them, Yet a little while is the light with you. Walk while ye have the light, lest darkness come upon you: for he that walketh in darkness knoweth not whither he goeth. I am come a light into the world, that whosoever believeth on me should not abide in darkness.—John 12: 35, 46.

As our Savior came to the earth to carry out the plans and designs of his Father, and did surely manifest in His life that He was the light of the world, it is a logical conclusion, as certain and sure as that good fruit will follow the planting of good seed in good ground, when supplied with proper heat and moisture, that every individual who follows Christ, can neither walk in, nor abide in darkness; its an impossibility. On the other hand, the conclusion is just as inevitable that all who do not follow Christ as the light of the world, must abide in darkness, which necessitates an entire separation from the presence of God; for "God is light, and in him is no darkness at all" (1 John 1: 5). Consequently, those who are in darkness, have, so long as they remain under that influence, no place where God and Christ are.

Follow Christ! Where will an individual be found professing faith in the Son of God, who is not firmly convinced in his heart that he is following the Lord Jesus in his religious belief? And yet that belief, in part at least, may never have been even suggested by our Lord as His doctrine. Take for instance the doctrine of the baptism of infants, which is so universally accepted as a doctrine of some of the churches, but for which there is not the slightest warrant in the Scriptures; men are by no means following Christ in the teaching and practicing of that tenet. The same may be said of the doctrine of infant damnation, so much believed in a century or two ago, but happily now rejected by most people. The "mourners' bench," "six months probation," "sprinkling in lieu of immersion, for baptism;" good, God fearing people accept all of these, and yet it is not because of either the example or teaching of Christ. What then is the legitimate conclusion regarding them? Jesus said, "I am the light of the world: he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness," and if we teach and believe doctrines as cardinal parts of our faith which our Lord did not teach, practice nor authorize, we are not following Him, and there can be only one verdict. We must be in darkness.

Many good, earnest people are affiliating with churches which in their organization bear not the slightest resemblance to the church organized by our Lord, and yet they all earnestly affirm such organizations to be Christ's church. How they manage to dispose of the logic of facts when they make a fair comparison between the apostolic church and what is termed the "orthodox" organizations of today, is a mystery. They must blindly close the eyes of their reason and affirm, "It is so," without regard to the testimony of the Scriptures. But there is a good explanation of the matter, after all, for "it is written" by the prophet:

For, behold, the darkness shall cover the earth, and gross darkness the people.—Isa. 60: 2.

For this peoples heart is waxed gross, and their ears are dull of hearing, and their eyes they have closed.—Matt. 13: 15.

This latter quotation from Isaiah 6: 9, 10, was used by the Savior, and again by the Apostle Paul in his sermon to the Jews at Rome as sketched in the last chapter of the Acts, and it is just as applicable today; for though the Light has manifested Himself in the flesh, taught the doctrine of the kingdom, and Himself practiced it, yet will they not follow Him, therefore, must abide, continue, in darkness. There will be a great many surprised and sorrowful professing christians when the veil of darkness which now envelops them is removed; when they pass over to the judgment seat, or from mortality into the immortal world, and their comprehension is enlarged, their understanding cleared, and they see the facts as they are.

But it is not all to follow Christ in His doctrine, and in the pattern of the polity of the church He established. We may not neglect these important truths and duties and be justified, but there are other very important ways in which all must follow Him as "the light of life." Every individual who embraces the gospel of Christ should sense in the very depth of their souls that they are making a covenant, not with man, but with God; and that, however much they might be able to dissemble and deceive the most astute among men, it is utterly impossible to deceive God and the angels. The Scriptures indicate forcibly how the Lord despises the hypocrite, and what a terrible fate, judgment, awaits such; and yet, notwithstanding the woe pronounced against them, there are too many hypocrites in the Church of Christ today. Not among those who honestly strive to do right but fail in various ways, but those who know they are acting contrary to the Scriptures, and comfort themselves in the thought that they are cunning enough to keep their duplicity from the officers of the church; they deceive themselves, however, and sooner or later, their transgressions will be brought to light if they continue.

But even supposing they are able to hide their sins from the officers of the church, what must they think of the discernment of the Lord? It is not possible to cover up wrong doing so that He will not know of it! And if the officers of the church are so much to be feared that these evil doers will hide their works in darkness to avoid answering to the church tribunal, how vastly much more should they fear God and His Judgment which they can never escape. What transgressors expect to gain by holding on to their membership in the church, and continuing in sin, is another mystery. They cannot escape the penalty for breaking the law; and the reward of the liar and hypocrite in eternity, if they do happen to do so here for a time; and these facts ought to press themselves in upon their inner consciousness with such force as to lead to true, sincere repentance and right doing.

Follow Christ! the Light of life, in fervent devotion to the principles of life revealed through the gospel. Love God supremely, your fellowman next. Seek for a pure life, one of loving ministry to others, one that is filled with fervent charity and humility; in a word, follow Christ, and the life which will thus result will not only benefit others and save the soul alive, but will glorify God the Christ, and the church.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

BRO. F. R. TUBBS, clerk of the London, England branch, has removed from his former place of abode, 12 Paragon Road, South Hackney, and now resides at 31 Chatham Place, Hackney, London, England, where all correspondence on matters relating to the branch, or otherwise, should now be addressed.

SOME of our brethren have somehow got hold of the idea that when sending articles to be printed, if they will only mark the outside of the envelope or wrapper "Printer's Copy" or something to that effect, the postage will not cost so much. This is a great mistake for which the ENSIGN has to pay. One such communication from a foreign mail this week, cost us eight cents, double rates being demanded because the postage was not prepaid. Please remember that full letter rates are charged on all written matter, even though the envelope containing it is left unsealed.

BRO. JAMES M. BAGGERLY has a five column article in the Evening Telegram, of Superior, Wisconsin, for July 28th, in which he clearly sets forth the distinction between the Reorganized church and the Utah church. The article is interesting and instructive, and we trust will accomplish much good. The press is favoring the elder-ship in permitting them to get these differences before so many readers, and it is a privilege which is and always should be appreciated. Much prejudice will be removed through these efforts and many will be prepared to listen to the preached word who otherwise would not take the trouble to go to hear the elders.

BRO. ALONZO HARKAWAY PARSONS, Francis James Ebeling and Richard Baldwin have been doing gospel work in the city of Meadville, Pennsylvania, having secured the use of the Court House there. Friday, July 27th, at 8 p. m., Bro. Parsons lectured on the question, "Is Man in the Image of the Christian God." At the same hour Saturday evening Bro. Ebeling presented the theme, "Hell is Not the Final Abode of the Wicked," and on Sunday at 8 p. m. Bro. Baldwin took up the subject of "Infidelity and its Cure." The Tribune-Republican (daily) gives a half column report of Bro. Parson's effort in a very creditable manner. Meadville is a very conservative city, and our brethren need not feel disappointed if their efforts do not at first meet with the success they merit. It is necessary to sow the seed, but the Lord only can give the increase. The reporter stated that the audience attending Bro. Parson's lecture "was not large but the lecture was both logical and interesting."

THE Autobiography of Elder Joseph Luff, of the apostle's quorum, is a book full of interest from beginning to end. Bro. Luff is so widely and so favorably known in and out of the church in his years of service in gospel work, that the mere mention of a work of this kind being offered should create a desire to possess it. Two fine sermons are included in its pages and the price is so reasonable that every Saint's home should have this book in their library. It's a splendid thing for the Sunday School library also. 75 cents cloth, postage prepaid.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. SIMON SHEARER, Hannibal, Missouri:

Bro. J. A. Tanner, of Bevier, made us a ten days visit, and preached the word in its purity and with much assurance. We did not have large audiences, but those who did attend were interested; it may take years to reveal the amount of good done, but we know the good seed sown will bring forth fruit. The Saints here feel encouraged. The Holy Spirit was present in every meeting and we have truly been blessed, so come again Bro. Tanner.

BRO. E. J. HYATT, New Harmony, Indiana:

We seldom get to hear an elder more than about once a year. Elder George Jenkins was with us last February and preached five times with good liberty; did much good and made many friends for the cause. I greatly enjoy reading the letter department. I find many, like myself, have to undergo many things hard to bear; but be of good cheer, dear Saints, the crowning day is coming by and by. The Saints here are alive and striving to do the Master's will. There are only six of us but we have many friends outside the church, and some of them are willing to obey the gospel when opportunity is afforded.

BRO. R. S. COOP, Garfield, Oregon:

There have been two Utah elders in this region claiming that Joseph Smith was a polygamist, and that they could prove it, but they failed to produce the proof. They said they were coming back. I was baptized by A. H. Parsons in the S. Solomon branch, Kansas, but moved away where there were no Saints and joined the Congregationalists, but have since seen my mistake. I have not heard a sermon for about twelve years; all I get is through the ENSIGN, and I would not be without it for double its price. I wish an elder would come this way; there are some honest and interested people here. I tried to explain the difference between our church and the Utah church to some of my neighbors last Sunday, and to show them that the Utah people did not get their doctrine from the Book of Mormon. My home is open for an elder at any time, and will help what I can. Am a poor man, working by day, principally, to make a living.

GENERAL CHURCH NEWS.

INDEPENDENCE.

Bro. G. H. Hulmes will preach at the Saints' church next Sunday evening. The pastor will occupy at the morning hour.

Edith Ruth, infant daughter of Mr. Nathan and Sr. Minnie Luff Carmann, was blessed at the Wednesday evening service, Bishop G. H. Hilliard and R. May officiating.

Mr. and Sr. C. P. Fann are the proud possessors of a little son who recently took up his abode with them and claimed their protection. Sr. Fann was formerly Anna Bradford.

Bro. J. A. Gunsolley, president of the Lamoni, Iowa, branch, worshipped with the Saints here Wednesday evening. He is en route to the Clinton, Missouri, reunion, we believe.

The services at the Saints' church last Sunday were well attended. Bro. Alfred White occupied at the morning hour, and Bro. R. M. Elvin in the evening. The weather was clear and pleasant.

Bishop G. H. Hilliard returned from Lamoni and St. Joseph, Sunday night, and will go to Rich Hill, Missouri, Friday. He is anticipating an eastern or western trip, but as yet is undecided which way he will be called.

Tomorrow, Friday, will be observed by many here as a day of fasting and prayer for the recovery of Bro. Elmer E. Johnson, of Chicago, Illinois, a faithful Religio worker, who is in declining health. We are glad to see the sympathy manifested for Bro. Johnson and that the request of the general officers of the Religio, published in last week's ENSIGN, is being honored. Earnest prayers in Bro. Johnson's behalf were offered at the meeting last Sunday afternoon and on Wednesday evening.

Bro. and Sr. Joseph Mather are rejoicing in the advent of a fine little daughter Friday of last week. Sr. Mather is a daughter of Bro. I. N. W. Cooper of Lamoni, Iowa. Bro. Mather's services, we are glad to note, seem to be appreciated here and he seems to be having a very encouraging recognition in his profession as a physician; he uses both homocopathy and osteopathy in his practice. He has this week bought the office furniture recently brought here by Bro. Baldwin, who has moved to Kansas City. Bro. Mather therefore occupies the office so long had by Dr. Twyman on South Liberty street, near Chrisman-Sawyer Bank.

Bro. W. N. Robinson was ordained second counsellor to Bishop R. May, in the Saints' church at St. Joseph, Missouri, last Sunday morning, as will be noticed in the St. Joseph items. A number from Independence, Missouri, Kansas City, Kansas, and Lamoni, Iowa, were present on that occasion. One feature worthy of note was the fact that, for the first time in the history of the Reorganization, two complete quorums of bishops were present at one time and in one place: Presiding Bishop, E. L.

Kelley, of Lamoni, his counsellors, G. H. Hilliard, of Independence, and E. A. Blakeslee, of Galien, Michigan; Bishop R. May, of Independence. W. H. Pease, of Kansas City, Kansas, and W. N. Robinson, of Independence. The services were impressive and spiritual.

LAMONI, IOWA.

Elder F. E. Cochran expounded the gospel law at Surprise school-house, in this district, on Sunday, 22d inst., Elder Weld at Runnels, Iowa, and Apostle Lambert and Elder Ray at Davis City.

Elder H. A. Stebbins preached the funeral sermon of Sr. Caroline Jarvis at Burlington, Iowa, 21st, she died at Boston, Massachusetts, on the 18th, age 77.

On the night of the 25th, at the home of Elder Elvin, Mr. Leonard Dickey was married to Sr. Clara Hilliard, by her father, Bishop G. H. Hilliard.

The business manager of the Herald office, Elder John Smith, has bought the property formerly owned by Bro. P. Sillsbee, and expects to occupy the same next month.

Sr. Mary Barnes arrived from Council Bluffs, Iowa, last week, to dwell at the Saints' Home here, she is 86 years of age and was baptized by Elder Oliver Cowdry in 1832. Srs. Seeley and Ethel Smith have been on the sick list there of late. Other additions to the Home of late are, Sr. Hirst, aged 84, and Sr. C. Herrick, both of Keokuk, Iowa.

Good prayer and testimony meetings were held at the Saints' church and at the Saints' Home on Wednesday and Thursday nights last week. Bishop Hilliard, who presided at the Home, gave some excellent instructions to the inmates.

Sunday, 29th, the morning hour was occupied by the presiding priest, teacher and deacon, Brn. M. J. Danielson, A. K. Anderson and Dan Anderson, who gave very good admonitions and wise counsel in the channel of their duties according to the revelations to the church. At night Elder Joseph Clapp discoursed acceptably at the chapel, his text was, "There is a way which seemeth right unto a man; but the end thereof are the ways of death."—Prov. 14:12. Apostle J. W. Wight was the speaker at the Home last night.

A LAMONIAN.

July 30.

ST. JOSEPH, MISSOURI.

Sunday had the appearance of conference to the St. Joseph Saints, so many being present from abroad. We had with us Brn. Joseph and Alexander Smith and E. L. Kelley of Lamoni; E. A. Blakeslee of Michigan; G. H. Hilliard, W. N. Robinson and R. May, W. H. Pease, Srs. J. A. Robinson, W. N. Robinson and Belle James of Independence. Bishop E. L. Kelley, assisted by Bro. Blakeslee, occupied the morning hour, and Bro. Joseph Smith spoke at evening service, assisted by Bro. A. H. Smith. The sermons were timely and much appreciated by large audiences. At the morning service Bro. W. N. Robinson was ordained as counsellor to Bishop

May, and Bro. Robert Winning was ordained a high priest. The service was very impressive, the Spirit being present to cheer and to bless.

A new opening has been made for the work at Elwood, Kansas, Bro. Best having it in charge.

At teachers' meeting Thursday evening Sr. D. H. Blair resigned as assistant superintendent in our Sabbath School. Sr. Blair will leave this week for Kansas City, where Bro. Blair is in business. Sr. Blair has been an earnest, efficient worker in Sunday School for the past eight years and will be greatly missed. Superintendent of Kansas City Sunday School—take notice.

At the last meeting of the Sisters' Mite Society Sr. Best was elected president and Sr. Brooks secretary and treasurer. This band of sisters are to be commended, having earned $25 as a society in the past six months.

Sr. Ida Pearson, another of our Sunday School teachers, has located in Kansas City. The tendency seems to be to get closer to Zion. B. & B. July 31.

CHICAGO, ILLINOIS.

Branch headquarters, 716 W. Van Buren St. Sunday meetings 2:45 and 7:45 p. m.; Lang Mission, 3411 Cottage Grove Ave., 10:45 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.; West Pullman branch, 12024 Union Ave., 10:30 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.; Parkside Mission, 7124 Stony Island Ave., 3:00 and 7:30 p. m.; 505 W. 37th St. (colored mission), 10:30 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.

Bro. H. Southwick sojourns in the city a few days, and preached at 2:45 yesterday at 716 Van Buren, and went to West Pullman to occupy at night. He goes to Sandwich from here on Thursday next. Bro. Southwick is the president of our district and is anxious to see the work move.

On next Sunday we pass another mile post. Let us rally to and make this Union service the best one yet. Let us come together in prayer and humility, determined to make the meeting a success. 3411 Cottage Grove the place, and 3 o'clock the time; sacrament will be administered as usual.

The last week was spent in vigil with a sick wife, but thanks to the good Father, she is much better and attended church yesterday evening.

Our Religio was very interesting yesterday, in charge of Sr. Della Braidwood, Bro. Jas. F. Keir having charge of Book of Mormon study, responses by quotation from Doctrine and Covenants, a neat little paper by Sr. Penry, made up an interesting program. We feel that others should share the benefits of these meetings.

Brn. Ammon White, Arthur L. Murphy and Wm. Pitt took advantage of cheap rates and came up to the great city of sights, arriving Saturday and returning last evening—taking in a service at the church. They were accompanied on their return by Srs. Mamie Pitt, Ada Cudsworth and Julia Braidwood, who will visit a few days in Zion's fair borders. We bid them be happy and don't forget to return.

The three Saints' Sunday

Schools of the city have combined in an entertainment to be given at Bro. Graves' mission, 508 37th street, on Saturday night, August 4th, and on the following day a Sunday School will be organized there by Bro. R. N. Burwell, the district superintendent, and Bro. F. M. Pitt, one of the general assistant superintendents.

Telegram just now received from Bro. L. W. Kahler, of Wilmington, calls us thence tomorrow, to attend funeral. Particulars later on.

Bro. and Sr. Pope spent two pleasant weeks in Michigan, visiting relatives and friends whom they had not seen for fourteen years. They return refreshed in body.

Bro. G. H. Henley, during his vacation from factory work, thinks to spend the time in gospel work, and will try to attend some of the two day meetings advertised, also will do work in the city as opportunity may offer.

With face Zionward, Yours,
J. M. TERRY.

395 Ogden Ave., July 30.

FIRST KANSAS CITY BRANCH

Chapel, 2324 Wabash avenue. Take 16th street line to Prospect Ave., transfer to Prospect, get off at 24th and walk one block west or to the right hand. Time of meetings: Sunday School at 9:30, preaching at 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m., social service at 12:30 p. m. Prayer meeting, Wednesday evening at 7:30; Religio, Friday evening at 8. Strangers are cordially invited.

The tent meetings have reduced attendance at our regular services, but now that it has been moved to the west side at 17th and Holly streets we hope attendance will again improve.

On last Saturday the four Sunday Schools of the consolidated cities held a union picnic at Budd Park, and so far as we have heard it was well attended and all voted it a grand success. There were also quite a few over from Independence.

Sr. Eunice Winn is sick with typhoid fever, but is some better than she has been.

Sr. T. J. Franklin, who has been visiting Sr. L. H. Ashbaugh, has returned to her home at Independence. Age is beginning to tell on her faculties.

Sr. Ada Cudsworth nee Pitt, and Sr. Mamie Pitt nee Clark, of Chicago, have been visiting relatives here this week.

Bro. Arthur Gillen has been elected president of the Literary and we trust a new impetus will be given to the work.

Sr. Ida Pearson, formerly of St. Joseph, has taken a position with Brn. Robinson & Co. as book-keeper.

R. E. PORTER.

July 31.

DENVER, COLORADO.

Church, corner of 22d and Arapahoe Sts. Services Sunday:—Sunday School at 9:45 a. m.; preaching at 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.; sacrament service the first Sunday in each month at 6 p. m. Prayer meeting Wednesday evening, Zion's Religio-Literary Society Friday evening.

The weather is all that could be desired for this time of year.

Elder Joseph Luff arrived Saturday and was the speaker at the church at the morning service; he came unawares so was not advertised. I suppose had he been advertised there would have been a larger congregation present. If the Saints would attend all the meetings they would not miss any of the good things. Saints miss many good things on account of absence. I think there are many who do not realize the good there is in the Z. K. L. S. because they never attend. Come out Saints and find out what we are doing and help us do it.

Bro. Luff was again the speaker at the evening service. The congregation both morning and evening was composed mostly of Saints, and the instruction was timely and we think will result in good. Our earnest prayer is that Bro. Luff's health may be improved to that extent that he may be able to perform the labor that is necessary to be done in this mission.

By letter from the brethren who have the tent work in charge, we learn that unless the Saints come to the rescue in a financial way the tent work must stop. What do you think of it, Saints, shall we let the work of saving souls cease on account of a few cents? Surely not; come up to the rescue; come quick with your quarters, halves and dollars, let it not be said that the Colorado Saints could not support a tent for one season. Let us hear from you and send your contributions to E. F. Shupe, 3633 Clayton street, Denver, Colorado.

Bro. W. T. Bozarth and wife have changed their minds and have located at Rocky Ford, Colorado.

The Sunday School will give a social Thursday night, at the church; ice cream and cake will be served.

Friday will be observed as a fast day by the Religio for Bro. E. E. Johnson, of Chicago. S.

July 30.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA.

Services at Golden West Hall, 920 Post street, every Sunday. Sunday School 10 a. m., preaching 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.; prayer meeting first Sunday of each month at 12:15 noon. Elder C. A. Parkin presiding elder, residence 3010 16th street.

There was a good attendance at the Religio Friday evening, thirty-four being present, nineteen of whom were members. Among them was D. L. Harris, missionary, en route to Oregon; Fred Lawn, from Santa Cruz; Bro. Joehn, from Sacramento, and three daughters of Elder Putney. The occasion was the election of officers, with the following result: Sr. M. E. Saxe, president; Lizzie Parkin, vice president; Chas. A. Parkin, treasurer; Chas. Wyatt, pianist; May Cross, chorister; Lizzie Parkin, librarian; John Lawn, corresponding secretary; Brn. Wyatt and Lawn editors of the "Electric Spark," the Religio paper; Sr. Davis, secretary.

Our branch met with a sad loss last week in the death of Bro. Ether Knight. He went to bed in the evening in perfect health as far as known. No sound was heard from him during the night although one of his daughters slept in the same room; but on calling him in the morning he was found dead. We can scarce imagine their horror and surprise. Sr. Knight was not home as she is visiting relatives in Lowell, Massachusetts. He was an old time Saint, being sixty-six years of age. His father was one of the early elders of the church. The funeral was held at his home, 507 Height street. Chas. A. Parkin preached the sermon. Six Saints acted as pall bearers. Many beautiful flower pieces were presented, one of them being from the San Francisco branch of the church. We fully sympathize with the grief-stricken family.

D. L. Harris has gone to Oregon, his field of labor.

There is quite a marked improvement in the attendance at all our meetings of late. The Saints seem to be putting forth better efforts, and consequently enjoy more of the Spirit.

LETTER DEPARTMENT.

Gospel Tent.

EXCELSIOR, Wis., July 19.

Editor Ensign:—Bro. and Sr. E. M. Wildermuth and the writer have moved our tent from five miles above Excelsior, on Knaps Creek, to one mile and a half below Excelsior, near the home of Bro. John Anderson, where we have repaired our cloth tabernacle and announced ourselves as ready to explain what we believe and why we believe as we do. The last place on Knaps Creek, where we held forth four weeks, we were kindly cared for and had a good hearing. Much prejudice was removed and friends were made to the work.

We will always remember the kindness of Sr. Jane Beebe who, with her husband who is not a member of the church, did all in their power to make us comfortable while we were there; others of the Saints and friends did nobly in looking after our wants. May the Lord reward all of them in our prayer.

We feel that we love this grand latter day work, and glad to be engaged in ministerial work. Our present address for some time to come will be Excelsior, Richland county, Wisconsin, should any want to correspond with us. A two days' meeting for all who desire to attend will be held here in our tent the 4th and 5th of August. Elders W. A. McDowell and W. P. Robinson will be in attendance. Let all come who can.

ELDER E. L. SAWLEY.

ANN, Mo., July 19.

Editor Ensign:—I am at present holding meeting out in the yard of Bro. Cook. I commenced at the home of Bro. Stepp, but the crowd soon increased, the house would not hold them. I moved to the home of Bro. and Sr. Cook, thinking to hold in their house, but the crowds got too large for it the first night, so I took seats out of doors, and I stretched my charts up on the side of the house. I find my new charts to be a splendid help in presenting the simple gospel plan to the people.

This is the place where Bro. I. N. spiked the Campbellite gun, Rev. Hill, state Evangelist, about five years ago. We have three families here at present, but the prospects are now very good for an increase if those interested are bold enough to follow their convictions.

We had a very fine conference at Ava; the Saints there have done well to so far complete their church as to be able to hold conference in it. They will make an extra effort to finish this fall. I continued meeting there until Friday night, assisted ably by Bro. Roach and Bro. Gray. I let those two brethren to take care of the interest and I moved on to this point.

I wish to call the Saints' attention to the bishop's agent's account for the last six months collected in tithes only $35.75. I also notice one of your missionary's shoes so badly worn that he was walking on the bare ground. Is it possible the Saints are so poor down here that three or four could not club together and buy a pair of shoes. When a young man is to leave home and friends to preach the gospel without a purse or scrip, do you think it is no trial for him when the Saints will allow him to go until his shoes and clothes are so shabby he is ashamed to let anyone see him on the streets?

Remember the word of the Lord, Doctrine and Covenants 83:16: "Who-so receiveth you receiveth me, and the same will feed you, and clothe you, and give you money, and he who feeds you, or clothes you, or gives you money, shall in no wise lose his reward, and he that doeth not these things is not my disciple: by this ye may know my disciples." If this is God's text of a true disciple it will be well for the Saints to examine themselves and see who is in the faith.

We have four missionaries, let us hear from the Saints who need preaching, we wish to make a record this year that will count for good.

I go from here to Grove Springs, thence to Springfield, to see about starting the tent again.

Yours for victory,
HENRY SPARLING.

BEAVER, Mo., July 16.

Editor Ensign:—Inclosed you will find a few subscriptions for the paper preacher which is gradually winning its way into the homes of the Saints and the honest in heart throughout the broad universe where its weekly visits are greatly appreciated; its clean and clear cut reading matter and letters from all parts of the globe are very interesting, and for my part I do not see how any one interested in their own salvation, and who wish to keep pace with this grand and glorious latter day work, can afford to do without the ENSIGN and all other church publications, yet at the same time make smokestacks and tobacco presses of themselves, as well as coffee and tea vats. Is it possible that God in making man made a mistake in forgetting to erect a chimney to convey the smoke. Oh, no, but men have sought out new inventions, and by a slow but sure process are cutting the tender threads of life and committing suicide daily.

But this is not all; I believe that thousands of natural born tobacco, coffee, tea and strong drink users are brought into this world yearly. Oh, how sad the thought that we as parents will, to some extent, be held responsible for allowing a curse to rest upon our posterity, even to the third and fourth generation. If this be true, charity upon our part should be exercised in behalf of those who are natural born slaves to any one or more filthy habits, as they are truly to be pitied. How oft have we not heard the remark, "Oh I have tried to quit and overcome this or that habit, but I cannot do it." In one sense this may be true; but in the gospel sense it is untrue, for by a godly walk and conversation, fasting, and by the prayer of faith, God will help us to overcome, strengthening our will powers, or removing the appetite and hankering desire for the cursed thing that God has so plainly spoken against.

Dear Saints, think candidly over this matter, especially you who hold the priesthood, for the word of the Lord is to us, "Be ye clean that bear the vessels of the Lord." Ofttimes in bearing our testimony we say that we love the Lord and this latter day work, but how far does that love extend? Surely it ought to reach out in all directions far enough to make us Christ-like in all things. Zion is the pure in heart, and how can we be pure in heart, and at the same time ignore God's law and counsel? The redemption of Zion draweth nigh, and the faces of the Saints are being turned toward the center places and regions round about. During the last two months quite a number of the Saints have moved into these regions and are well pleased, and still they are coming.

At our business meeting on the 4th inst. we resolved to build a church at this place. The writer and Bro. J. E. Swegart were appointed as a building committee, with power to appoint a third man, solicitors, etc., and as most of us are poor in this world's goods, the undertaking and sacrifice will be of no small import. We are located in or about the center of the South Missouri district, and our aim shall be to put up as large and respectable a church as the incoming means will permit. We herewith extend an invitation to all the Saints and friends to the work to give us a helping hand. Small favors will be thankfully received, and large ones in proportion. The church will be built with a free pulpit and an open Bible to all denominations when not in use by the Saints. Money may be sent to the writer or J. E. Swegart, Beaver, Douglas county, Missouri, who will keep an accurate account of all means received, and give due credit. As Beaver, Missouri, is not a money order office, orders may be drawn on Granada, Missouri, but sent to our home address.

The work in this district is onward with Elder D. W. Thomas in command; the missionary force are all in the field, crops are fine, and all nature smiles, and if the wheels of progress are allowed to roll onward without hindrance we are assured of success.

Ever watchful for the welfare of Zion I remain strong in the faith once delivered to the Saints.

J. C. CHRISTENSEN.

CLARKSDALE, Mo., July 29.

Editor Ensign:—Enclosed find a large bill announcing our coming Northern Missouri reunion. The committee are hard at work to make this, the eighth annual reunion, a success.

The reunion will be held in Stewartsville, Missouri, August 31st to September 11th, in Bro. Ben J. Dice's Grove, just one-fourth mile southeast of the city limits.

We have the promise of several of our leading elders to be with us, besides our own missionary force; these latter, I am pleased to state, are men who, where the Saints have had an opportunity of getting acquainted with them, speak in the highest terms, and are thankful to the General Conference and Bureau of Twelve for sending these men into this district.

In former years our annual gatherings were held in Maysville, but this year the committee has changed the location to Stewartsville; by the change many new faces will be seen from the surrounding country, attending the reunion.

In order to make the reunion a success we invite Saints from the surrounding districts to come and enjoy the spiritual blessing that we are anticipating.

Stewartsville is the city where the General Conference was held in 1884, the city is situated 21 miles east of St. Joseph, 15 miles west of Cameron, Missouri, on the Hannibal & St. Joseph Railroad. We have been granted reduced rates on this railroad for certain dates, but we have asked, and are expecting, reduced rates for the whole meeting. This will be advertised later in the church papers.

We are promised a reduction in the price of rent of tents, hence can give the benefit of this reduction to the Saints coming. The rent of tents will be as follows: 9x12 feet, for the whole meeting, $1.45; 12x14 feet, $1.65; straw free. Please send in your order now, to the undersigned secretary of the committee. Board on the grounds 15 cents a meal for regular boarders, 20 cents for transient.

ELAM STATION, Texas.

Editor Ensign:—On the 7th and 8th of this month I had the pleasure of meeting with the Saints of Central Texas district, in their conference held at Cook's Point. The conference moved off smoothly and pleasantly. Met while there Bro. E. W. Nunley, S. R. Hay, J. W. Bryan and E. L. Henson, of the missionary force, also our worthy missionary in charge, H. O. Smith. At the close of the conference Bro. E. L. Henson left us for San Antonio where he will meet Bro. I. P. Buggerly and labor with him in that section. Bro. Bryan to points south and east, Bro. Nunley and Hay to points north and west in the vicinity of Waco. Bro. Wright Moore and Renfro, who did not attend the conference, are busy at work for the Master. Bro. Wright in Nolan and Taylor counties, Bro. Renfro in Falls county and Bro. A. J. Moore in Jack and Young counties.

Bro. H. O. Smith and I were invited to make an effort in the Master's cause at the Saints' church near Hearne, in the Texas Central branch; began one meeting Saturday evening, the 14th, and continued till the following Thursday. Several names were given in for baptism at the close of the meeting; leaving Bro. Hay to attend to the baptizing the next day, we hastened on our way to fill appointments sent on before, near Dallas, Texas. Bro. Smith will remain with me here till the 25th, when he will pass on to points north, and to meet with the northeast Texas and Choctaw district conference which will convene on the 28th of this present month, with the Manchester branch, Red River county, Texas.

My association with Bro. Smith for three weeks has been to me both pleasant and edifying. I expect to remain in this section for some time, where we are meeting with interested congregations and kind friends to supply us with all that is needful to enable us to reach the people.

Hoping and praying for the development of truth in the hearts and minds of the people,

I am yours in bonds,
T. J. SHEPPARD.

WATONGA, O. T., July 25.

Editor Ensign:—This finds Bro. Hubert Case and I out in western Oklahoma, about seventy-five miles west of Kingfisher; we have been out here nearly a month. We erected an arbor near Guy postoffice, held forth nearly three weeks with fine interest. Bro. Case and writer did all the preaching except one sermon each from Bro. Maloney, Durfey and Rhoads. We baptized eleven at this place, and left others saying, "We believe you have the truth." We left the Saints rejoicing and branch in better condition spiritually than since it was organized. Bro. Case and I have baptized fifteen so far this year, and have been encouraged all along the line. But there has been some hardships mixed in as well.

This is a good country and I think better chance for poor people to get a start than in older country where they have to rent. Homesteads are about all taken, but with a little money you can buy a relinquishment, or there is lots of Indian land to lease, and they have the best land, and were allowed to take their allotments before the land was open for white settlement. You can lease one hundred and sixty acres for three to five years at thirty to fifty dollars per year.

We have a good many Saints scattered through this country now, I like to see our people among the Lamanites, it is going to convert lots of them to the gospel in time. They appreciate good treatment.

Yours truly,

W. M. AXLON.

MOUND CITY, Mo., July 20.

Editor Ensign:—The elders of our district are doing some good work and we think the angel's message is finding favor with the people; several are ready for the new birth of the water, but some hindrances in the way, some we think on account of the way their folks conduct themselves who already belong to the church, by being so neglectful of duty, but we look for an ingathering soon. We expect to move our district tent to Skidmore tomorrow; would have gone today but hindered on account of rain; we also intended commencing a series of meetings at the Christian church, some five or six miles north west of Mound City last night. Bro. Welch and D. C. Whitte would have been there to break the bread of life to the people, but nothing preventing will meet the people there tonight and will continue for awhile; one of these brethren will remain, while the other will go with the tent with Bro.

Arthua Davis, who is holding meetings at Skidmore till tent arrives.

We look for a good work this year, we are glad to have three good workers in our district this year; we have had some good workers in the past years, but only one and two at a time; the good seed has been sown in a few places but there is much territory that has not been worked by the missionaries as yet. The old ground has been worked over each year but still there are lots near by who have not heard the message.

We were at a Christian prayer meeting the other night and the leader read of Jesus healing the blind man and commented on it, then said the Scripture said that there was none so blind as they that would see. I don't know of that scripture.

Yours for truth,
R. K. ROSS.

PORTLAND, Ore., July 22.

Dear Ensign:—I have been a reader of your pages from the first issue, and take such a delight in reading the instructive and enlightening sermons from the elders in the field, and it makes one rejoice to know that the gospel is being preached to the inhabitants of the earth for a witness that the end is nigh at hand.

I and my son Sid, came to this part in June to work in the sewer pipe plant, so did not see the ENSIGN for about six weeks. I got hungry for the papers so my better half sent me four Heralds and four ENSIGNS; oh, what a feast I have had today reading the sermons and letters.

Portland is a city of one hundred thousand or more, and I have not seen the face of a Saint since I have been here, do not know whether there are any here or not; if there is any in the city or neighborhood I would be glad to see them. I am boarding at 41 North 18th street. If there are any missionaries in this country would be glad to have them call and see me, or let me know their whereabouts. This is an awful wicked place, I desire the prayers of the Saints that I may not fall by the wayside. Ever praying for the redemption of Zion.

Your brother in bonds,
I. N. DELONO.

PARIS, Tenn., July 22.

Editor Ensign:—With my brother I attended the conference of the Tennessee and Kentucky district, which was held at High Hill, Kentucky, July 14th and 15th, and only those who are deprived of church privileges can realize how I enjoyed meeting with Saints. Quite a little crowd of Saints and friends met Saturday for business, all passed off pleasantly, and all present seemed to enjoy themselves splendidly. Bro. C. L. Snow gave his hearers a rousing sermon Saturday night, and Bro. T. C. Kelley entertained them Sunday at 11 a. m. All who have heard him know what that means.

One sister to be baptized at three p. m., but the day being very warm and twenty-six miles of rough, hilly roads to traverse ere we slept, we bade adieu to Saints and friends at 1:20 p. m., and with five other visiting Saints, wended our way homeward, reaching here after 11 that night, all tired out and sleepy, but glad we had been to High Hill. While there we were comfortably cared for at the home of Bro. Warren. Nearly all were strangers except some visiting Saints. We got acquainted with some, however, and hope to meet them again.

We are living here in Paris, a city of 4100 inhabitants, and there are no Saints at all here except four of my mother's family. One man here has read quite a lot of the Heralds and ENSIGNS, he has also read the Book of Mormon and is very well posted; he is very anxious to hear Bro. T. C. Kelley preach and would be pleased to talk with him; my brother took him the ENSIGN containing Bro. T. C. Kelley's article on "What Jesus Would do," and I guess he thinks Bro. Kelley is a "good un."

Looking forward to the time when we may gather in the "regions round about," and enjoy the society of those of like faith, and asking an interest in the prayers of Saints, that I may be worthy to gather there. I remain
A sister in the faith,

ZION'S ENSIGN.

SOME MIS-STATEMENTS CORRECTED.

Editor Zion's Ensign.—In the Firm Foundation, a Disciple paper published at Austin, Texas, No. for June 12, 1900, pages 362-3, is a very defective report of my debate held at Oklaunion, Texas, with Elder Chism, and signed by J. A. King, which needs some corrections. And as the article is agitating the minds of some of our brethren in Texas. I will correct some of the false impressions set forth in said report, and hope the ENSIGN will do us the favor of publishing.

The first statement I notice is, "On Saturday, 10 a. m., Mr. Scott led in his affirmation for four successive days. This was a hand to hand fight, war with the sword to the hilt. No effort being made by either party to raise a false issue, no time for this."

As to Elder Chism's intentions or motives in the premises I have nothing to say. But when we state that Mr. Chism based his negatives to our affirmative almost entirely on the statements from the work of John Hyde, printed in 1857, and another book written by an unknown author, purporting to be a compilation of detective stories, all may judge as to whether or not false issues were raised. Elder C. had plenty of time to devote to this work, while ignoring the most of the time, our defense from the Biblical and reasonable standpoint.

John Hyde once joined the Brighamite church during their early days in Utah. They sent him on a mission, and, he says, took his wife from him because he differed with their authorities on some doctrinal points, never permitting him to see her again. He left them, and never having known anything of the faith, save as corrupted by the Brighamites of Utah, he condemned indiscriminately, as a whole, the work from start to finish. He also manifests dishonesty in that he perverts and garbles the Book of Mormon and the Doctrine and Covenants, endeavoring to make them appear to teach that which they do not teach. And this he does repeatedly, as all who read him and compare can easily verify. And this we showed to be the case during the debate.

Elder Chism represented John Hyde as giving affidavits of Solomon Spalding's old neighbors, when giving their partial, pretended statements to the identity of the Spalding story, with, or as being, the basis of the Book of Mormon, as Hyde gives them from Howe's work, and which I showed to be false, as there is not the name of a single justice, judge or notary or commissioner signed by himself so certifying. I offered to go before a committee to be appointed by the audience on this point, but our offer was not accepted.

As to his other book used, referred to, detective stories, if stories are true (the author's name was not given), make the detective a party to the crimes he relates to have been done for not bringing the criminals to justice at the time, instead of keeping the stories secret till after their death. But Elder Chism did not use this book after this was suggested.

Elder Chism argued that the organic structure of the church as founded by God, and the spiritual gifts as developed therein, as set forth in 1 Corinthians chapter 12, and Ephesians 4, was changed, and the change bound in heaven and on earth, by virtue of the "keys of the kingdom," held and exercised by Paul, and tried to prove it by statements in 1 Corinthians, chapter 13. Now, that idea might go current in Rome, where they think to change laws and divine institutions, but not among independent thinkers and Bible readers.

What Paul really does teach in the thirteenth chapter of 1 Corinthians is, that church as organized of God with its officers, apostles, prophets and pastors, and others named—and the gifts of the Holy Ghost were ordained of God to bring all who become his people by obedience to the gospel, to a state of divine perfection, and that these divine means or agencies, so ordained to bring God's people to this condition or state of perfection (Eph. 4: 12, 13; 1 Cor. 13: 10-12), were and are designed of God to continue till that perfect state is attained. And when the end designed by them has been attained, the means ordained to bring about the end will be unnecessary, and consequently will "be done away." And this will all be fulfilled without the plan, as originally instituted of God, being changed an iota. Human ideas of religion change, but God's gospel being with the church, founded on eternal principles (see Mal. 3: 6; Heb. 5: 12; 6: 1, 2), cannot change. Therefore, whatever was in God's way of thinking, essential to the salvation and perfection of his people in Paul's day, is yet essential to that end, and will be till all his people attain thereto.

The idea that "that which is perfect" which had not yet come when Paul wrote (1 Cor. 13: 12, 13), was the law, gospel, or "perfect law" implies that the law of God was not then perfect, which further implies that the gospel as Jesus preached it, and as Paul was then preaching it, was not yet perfect! and is both absurd and consequently untrue.

James, who lived then, says: "Whoso looketh into the perfect law of liberty," which was then untrue, if this Campbellite idea and interpretation of Paul's language is correct, that Saints at that time were still waiting and looking for a "perfect law" to yet come! The gospel law was then, perfect, and much more perfectly understood by Paul and many of the Saints, than by the popularly learned today.

In using Historian Bancroft's History of Utah in the debate, while quoting him Elder Chism read what Bancroft quotes from other authors who wrote against the Saints, and they most generally say what is not true, and urged these latter to be right, rather than Bancroft. And yet of the books used by Bancroft (and he gives six pages of Book's titles), he says: "Most of these are written in a sensational style, and for the purpose of deriving profit by pandering to a vitiated public taste, and are wholly unreliable as to facts." No more correct statement could have been uttered, but it was mainly these unreliable statements, devoid of "facts" that Elder Chism relied on to overturn our faith. But this is not a strange course for the elder to pursue, for it is usually that the "unreliable as to facts" is accepted as against the Latter Day Saints.

Elder Scott, never to his knowledge, by word or deed pretended to be "one of the few ablest men in all their ranks," of the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints, as Mr. King asserts, but on the contrary hold to the idea in his own heart that he is one of the lesser lights among the ministry of said church.

Elder Chism had to do something to rouse the ebbing courage of his brethren, or of himself during the debate, so at one time he very pompously challenged(?) us to go to Vernon, the county seat and repeat the debate. Neither Bro. H. O. Smith, the missionary in charge, and who was then acting moderator for our side, nor myself, refused to meet Bro. Chism again under proper circumstances, or when conditions relating to our ministerial labor favored it. And, besides these considerations, the evening debate ended some of the brethren of the "Church of Christ," among them one of their ministers at Vernon, said to Bro. Amend and wife, that they did not desire further debating at the time.

The next statement I notice reads: "And a fight by the Latter Day Saints, that they refused to go to the town of Vernon and repeat, though very earnestly solicited to do so by all, at the request of the elders of the Church of Christ at Vernon. The elders even raised and had present on the last day of the debate, $50.00 cash to give Mr. Scott to go to Vernon and repeat the debate there, Mr. Scott having said to Bro. Chism, when Bro. Chism pressed him to go to Vernon with him and repeat the debate, "If you will insure me $50.00 I will go." But when it came to the test, Mr. Scott said he was only jesting. So Mormonism is ready for its funeral here in these parts, and had as well prepare for the funeral or emigrate."

This statement is remarkable for its unreliability. Our people desired to go to Vernon at first, to hold the debate and our opponents utterly refused to go, or have it held there. I believe this is known to Mr. King, as well as to Elder Chism. It is known by a number both at Vernon and at Oklaunion, Texas.

I wish the brethren of the Church of Christ—Campbellites—had let some of the people know at the time, that "$50.00 cash," had been raised and, was ready to be handed me to go to Vernon and "repeat" the debate. If Bro.

H. O. Smith knew anything of such arrangement, he never informed me of it. Bro. Chism or Bro. King never at any time breathed of such an idea to me, nor did any other person, never; neither before, at or since the debate; so let no one be disturbed, by word, spirit or letter, touching this statement. Money is not a consideration with us when truth—the faith—is involved. It is usually the other man that is concerned about the money, and as a rule does not prosecute the debate without it. See?

And to state frankly our own individual thoughts, and holding no one living responsible therefore, I have wondered if there was not fifty dollars or one hundred dollars urging opponents to debate, or even rendering them anxious to even repeat debates. I do not so assert but wonder if, etc. And a query of this kind may have arisen in our mind at Oklaunion, and had it been mentioned to me, I think I would have seen the point, think you not?

"I heard Bro. Chism tell him (Bro. Scott) that if he would go with him to Vernon, and try his hand again, that if honest he would baptize him at the end of the debate at Vernon."

I do not think he could have done so, for he never showed by the Bible or reason that he has any authority to baptize anybody into Christ. The only way he claimed to have received authority at all to do religious work, was by referring to the words of Paul to Timothy. (2 Tim. 2: 1, 2). But the trouble in this particular case is, Timothy is not on earth now to "commit" these same words to him; and if these words of Paul had been committed to Elder Chism he does not fulfill the mission, for he does not teach that Paul's doctrine applies in this age, much of it. Elder Chism denied being called by revelation of today, through the medium of either angels, revelators, prophets or the Holy Ghost. Does not believe in or teach the doctrine of Christ on the subject of divine ministerial authority, as being applicable in our times. As, see Exodus, chapter 3, where and how Moses was called and authorized of God. Was not called of God as John the Baptist was. See Luke 3: 3. Was not called as Timothy was (see 1 Tim. 1: 18 and 2 Tim. 1: 6) by the voice of prophecy, Christ's doctrine on this great foundational subject of the kingdom is set forth in Luke 10: 2, "Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he would send forth laborers into his harvest." Elder Chism's doctrine forbids God doing this work in this way, now; that if we should so pray, as here directed by our Savior, he would not answer our prayer.

Mr. Chism used the usual infidel mode of attacking character—personal character, when unable to meet the arguments in defense of the work, based on the prophecies of the Bible relating to the latter day restoration, the teachings of the Book of Mormon, and Joseph Smith's revelations; and all our opposers have Satan's patent on the volume of his opposition to the latter day work, so we need not repeat them here.

According to the Firm Foundation account of the debate, there were many attending the debate who "felt and realized in pity and compassion" my "utter and helpless defeat," when presenting defense of the prophetic calling of Joseph the martyr.

This expression is surely made for effect. It would be difficult to reverse the order of facts as they have occurred in the world during the last forty years, to defeat our claims. The restoration of the gospel in 1830, A. D., through the ministry of the holy angel (Rev. 14: 6, 7; Zech. 2: 1-6; Matt. 24: 14; Isa. 40: 9, 10), the bringing to light and translation of the sealed book (Isa. 29: 11-18; Ps. 85: 11), containing the gospel as possessed by the forefathers of the American Indians, and so wonderfully backed up by the scientific evidences of American antiquities of recent discovery; and the agitation of society, religious and political, in fulfillment of its prophecies, since its coming forth, and as seen in the revision of the creeds and the outlating of many of the items of their doctrines.

As also the restoration of the former and latter rains to the land of Palestine and the renewal of its fertility, as predicted in the book, and all since A. D. 1846. Also the beginning of the regathering to their land of the ancient covenant people, children of Abraham, and the rebuilding by them of their beloved city, Jerusalem. All of which events were to follow the revelation and reading (translation) of the sealed book.

Now the expectation of the latter day Saints along these lines are being fulfilled so wonderfully as to astonish even them, and our hope is wonderfully confirmed. And as we note the irresistible agitations in the religious world, weakening, disintegrating and dividing them, their increasing uncertainty, their increasing confusion, all of which presages so certainly their inevitable downfall, we feel confident that the day hastens greatly when the holy angel will declare, "Babylon is fallen, is fallen," (Rev. 14: 8; 18: 1-4), and we feel constrained to believe that another voice has been proclaimed from on high, "Come out of her my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and receive not of her plagues," * * * "Therefore shall her plagues come in one day, death, mourning and famine."—Rev. 18: 4-8.

Let the good work go on. The prophetic claims of Joseph Smith are being confirmed, as our brethren of the Church of Christ, will see in their due time.

Many now claim to be able to see in the unusual signs of the times, the coming world's crisis, and the downfall of nations; but as yet they seem to be unable to see the restoration and proclamation of the gospel law, that is to prepare the people involved in this mighty overthrow, for their judgment that follows.

G. SCOTT.

A. TIMELY EXHORTATION.

SERMON BY PRIEST JACOB.

TEXT:—Awake, awake, put on thy strength, O Zion; put on thy beautiful garments, O Jerusalem, the holy city; for henceforth there shall no more come into thee, the uncircumcised and the unclean.

Shake thyself from the dust; arise, sit down, O Jerusalem; loose thyself from the bands of thy neck, O captive daughter of Zion.

The minister spoke as follows:

And now, my beloved brethren, I have read these things that ye might know concerning the covenants of the Lord; that he has covenanted with all the house of Israel; that he has spoken unto the Jews by the mouth of his holy prophets, even from the beginning down, from generation to generation, until the time comes that they shall be restored to the true church and fold of God; when they shall be gathered home to the lands of their inheritance, and shall be established in all their lands of promise.

Behold, my beloved brethren, I speak unto you these things that ye may rejoice, and lift up your heads forever, because of the blessings which the Lord God shall bestow upon your children.

For I know that ye have searched much, many of you, to know of things to come; wherefore I know that ye know that our flesh must waste away and die; nevertheless, in our bodies we shall see God.

Yea, I know that ye know, that in the body he shall shew himself unto those at Jerusalem, from whence we came; for it is expedient that it should be among them; for it behooveth the great Creator that he suffereth himself to become subject unto man in the flesh, and die for all men, that all men might become subject unto him.

For as death hath passed upon all men, to fulfill the merciful plan of the great Creator, there must needs be a power of resurrection, and the resurrection must needs come unto man by reason of the fall; and the fall came by reason of transgression; and because man became fallen, they were cut off from the presence of the Lord; wherefore, it must needs be an infinite atonement, save it should be an infinite atonement, this corruption could not put on incorruption.

Wherefore, the first judgment which came upon man, must needs have remained to an endless damnation. And if so, this flesh must have laid down to rot and to crumble to its mother earth, to rise no more.

O the wisdom of God! his mercy and grace! For behold, if the flesh should rise no more, our spirits must become subject to that angel who fell from before the presence of the eternal God, and became the devil, to rise no more.

And our spirits must have become like unto him, and we become devils; angels to a devil, to be shut out from the presence of our God, and to remain with the father of lies, in misery, like unto himself, yea, to that being who beguiled our first parents; who transformeth himself nigh unto an angel of light, and stirreth up the children of men unto secret combinations of murder, and all manner of secret works of darkness.

O how great the goodness of our God, who prepareth a way for our escape from the grasp of this awful monster; yea, that monster; death and hell, which I call the death of the body, and also the death of the spirit.

And because of the way of deliverance of our God, the Holy One of Israel, this death, of which I have spoken, which is the temporal, shall deliver up its dead: which death is the grave.

And this death of which I have spoken, which is the spiritual death, shall deliver up its captive spirits, and the grave must deliver up its captive bodies, and the bodies and the spirits of men will be restored one to the other, and it is by the power of the resurrection of the Holy One of Israel.

O how great the plan of our God! For on the other hand, the paradise of God must deliver up the spirits of the righteous, and the grave deliver up the body of the righteous; and the spirit and the body is restored to itself again, and all men become incorruptible and immortal, and they are living souls, having a perfect knowledge like unto us, in the flesh; save it be that our knowledge shall be perfect: wherefore we shall have a perfect knowledge of our guilt, and our uncleanness, and our nakedness; and the righteous shall have a perfect knowledge of their enjoyment, and their righteousness, being clothed with purity, yea, even with the robe of righteousness.

And it shall come to pass, that when all men shall have passed from this first death unto life, inasmuch as they have become immortal, they must appear before the judgment seat of the Holy One of Israel; and then cometh the judgment; and then must they be judged according to the holy judgment of God.

And assuredly, as the Lord liveth, for the Lord God hath spoken it, and it is his eternal word, which cannot pass away, that they who are righteous, shall be righteous still, and they who are filthy, shall be filthy still; wherefore, they who are filthy, are the devil and his angels, and they shall go away into everlasting fire, prepared for them; and their torment is as a lake of fire and brimstone, whose flames ascendeth up forever and ever, and has no end.

O the greatness and the justice of our God! For he executeth all his words, and they have gone forth out of his mouth, and his law must be fulfilled.

But, behold, the righteous, the saints of the Holy One of Israel; they who have believed in the Holy One of Israel; they who have endured the crosses of the world, and despised the shame of it; they shall inherit the kingdom of God, which was prepared for them from the foundation of the world; and their joy shall be full forever.

O the greatness of the mercy of our God, the Holy One of Israel! For he delivereth his saints from that awful monster the devil, and death, and hell, and that lake of fire and brimstone, which is endless torment.

O how great the holiness of our God! For he knoweth all things, and there is not anything save he knows it.

And he cometh into the world that he may save all men, if they will hearken unto his voice; for behold, he suffereth the pains of all men; yea, the pains of every living creature, both men, women and children, who belong to the family of Adam.

And he suffereth this, that the resurrection might pass upon all men, that all might stand before him, at the great and judgment day.

And he commandeth all men that they must repent, and be baptized in his name, having perfect faith in the Holy One of Israel, or they cannot be saved in the kingdom of God.

And if they will not repent and believe in his name, and be baptized in his name, and endure to the end, they must be damned; for the Lord God, the Holy One of Israel, hath spoken it; wherefore he has given a law; and where there is no law given, there is no punishment; and where there is no punishment, there is no condemnation; and where there is no condemnation, the mercies of the Holy One of Israel have claim upon them, because of the atonement; for they are delivered by the power of him; for the atonement satisfieth the demands of his justice upon all those who have not the law given to them, that they are delivered from that awful monster, death and hell, and the devil, and the lake of fire and brimstone, which is endless torment; and they are restored to that God who gave them breath, which is the Holy One of Israel.

But woe unto him that has the law given; yea, that has all the commandments of God, like unto us, and that transgresseth them, and that wasteth the days of his probation; for awful is his state!

O that cunning plan of the evil one! O the vainness and the frailties, and the foolishness of men! When they are learned, they think they are wise, and they hearken not unto the counsel of God, for they set it aside, supposing they know of themselves; wherefore, their wisdom is foolishness, and it profiteth them not. And they shall perish.

But to be learned is good, if they hearken unto the counsel of God.

But woe unto the rich, who are rich as to the things of the world.

For because they are rich, they despise the poor, and they persecute the meek, and their hearts are upon their treasures; wherefore their treasure is their God.

And behold, their treasure shall perish with them also.

And woe unto the deaf, that will not hear: for they shall perish.

Woe unto the blind, that will not see: for they shall perish also.

Woe unto the uncircumcised of heart: for a knowledge of their iniquities shall smite them at the last day.

Woe unto the liar: for he shall be thrust down to hell.

Woe unto the murderer, who deliberately killeth: for he shall die.

Woe unto them who shall commit whoredoms: for they shall be thrust down to hell.

Yea, woe unto those that worship idols: for the devil of all devils delighteth in them.

And, in fine, woe unto all those who die in their sins: for they shall return to God, and behold his face, and remain in their sins.

O, my beloved brethren, remember the awfulness in transgressing against that Holy God, and also the awfulness of yielding to the enticings of that cunning one.

Remember, to be carnally minded, is death, and to be spiritually minded, is life eternal.

O, my beloved brethren, give ear to my words.

Remember the greatness of the Holy One of Israel.

Do not say that I have spoken hard things against you; for if ye do, ye will revile against the truth: for I have spoken the words of your Maker.

I know that the words of truth are hard against all uncleanness; but the righteous fear them not; for they love the truth, and are not shaken.

O then, my beloved brethren, come unto the Lord, the Holy One.

Remember that his paths are righteous.

Behold, the way for man is narrow, but it lieth in a straight course before him, and the keeper of the gate is the Holy One of Israel; and he employeth no servant there; and there is none other way, save it be by the gate, for he cannot be deceived; for the Lord God is his name.

And whoso knocketh, to him will he open; and the wise, and the learned, and they that are rich, who are puffed up because of their learning, and their wisdom, and their riches; yea, they are they, whom he despiseth; and save they shall cast these things away, and consider themselves fools before God, and come down in the depths of humility he will not open unto them.

But the things of the wise and the prudent, shall be hid from them forever; yea, that happiness which is prepared for the Saints.

O, my beloved brethren, remember my words: Behold, I take off my garments and I shake them before you: I pray the God of my salvation that he view me, with his all-searching eye; wherefore, ye shall know at the last day, when all men shall be judged of their works, that the God of Israel did witness that I shook your iniquities from my soul, and that I stand with brightness before Him, and am rid of your blood.

O, my beloved brethren, turn away from your sins; shake off the chains of him that would bind you fast; come unto that God who is the rock of your salvation.

Prepare your souls for that glorious day, when justice shall be administered unto the righteous; even the day of judgment, that ye may not shrink with awful fear; that ye may not remember your awful guilt in perfectness, and be constrained to exclaim, Holy, holy are thy judgments, O Lord God Almighty.

But I know my guilt; I transgressed thy law, and my transgressions are mine; and the devil had obtained me, that I am a prey to his awful misery.

But behold, my brethren, is it expedient that I should awake you to an awful reality of these things?

Would I harrow up your souls if your minds were pure?

Would I be plain unto you according to the plainness of the truth, if ye were freed from sin?

Behold, if ye were holy, I would speak unto you of holiness; but as ye are not holy, and ye look upon me as a teacher, it must needs be expedient that I teach you the consequence of sin.

Behold, my soul abhorreth sin, and my heart delighteth in righteousness; and I will praise the holy name of my God.

Come, my brethren, every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters; and he that hath no money, come buy and eat; yea, come buy wine and milk without money and without price.

Wherefore, do not spend money for that which is of no worth, nor your labor for that which cannot satisfy.

Hearken diligently unto me, remember the words which I have spoken; and come unto the Holy One of Israel, and feast upon that which perisheth not, neither can be corrupted, and let your soul delight in fatness.

Behold, my beloved brethren, remember the words of your God, pray unto him continually by day, and give thanks unto his holy name by night.

Let your hearts rejoice, and behold how great the covenants of the Lord, and how great his condescensions unto the children of men, and because of his greatness, and his grace and mercy, he has promised unto us that our seed shall not utterly be destroyed, according to the flesh, but that he would preserve them; and in future generations, they shall become a righteous branch unto the house of Israel.

And now, my brethren, I would speak unto you more; but on the morrow I will declare unto you the remainder of my words. Amen.

Dear Editor:—I was reading the foregoing as a morning lesson, and was deeply impressed with the sound doctrine and the logic of this Nephite preacher, and that his sermon was quite fitting for our own times, so felt moved to transcribe it for your valuable and interesting paper.

JOTS BY THE WAYSIDE.

BY T. W. CHATHURN

Dear Ensign.—The glorious fourth was ushered in with more than its usual gusto, enthusiasm ran high and Independence day in the year of grace 1900 will long be remembered; the eagle screamed on every hand, young America let himself loose, the stars and stripes seemed to be more in evidence than usual and men sang and shouted more loudly, "The army and navy forever." Its the day of days in the grand inspiring history of the American Republic.

While viewing the crowds we sit in reverie, our mind becoming enthused with the exercises of our natal day, we thought there were many reasons why we should celebrate. In spite of all complaints, cavillings, calamity walls of pessimists and other birds of evil omen, the people of the United States were never freer, never happier, never more prosperous, never more patriotic, never more fully conscious of their freedom, their greatness, their prosperity, and in the enjoyment of the blessings of God, than they are today I feel that I am a bigger man today, spiritually and politically, than ever before in life. Our "Uncle Sam" has stepped to the front, taking a hand in the destiny of nations, becoming a world power in the arena of history making events. Spiritually our mind broadens and the angel's message shines out with greater brilliancy and grandeur evidencing to me more and more that the angel did come, and the boy seer built better than he knew; for the grand message needs no patching to fit this momentous age. Sail on then thou ship of state, and under the Almighty's guiding hand the gospel spreading o'er land and sea. May we go on and on to still greater triumphs in the deliverance of the oppressed, the uplifting of the sovereign dignity of God and man, and the ultimate regeneration of all the human family. "That thy kingdom may come, thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven."

Dear ENSIGN, do not think me enthused beyond measure; indulge me a moment more till I say to the young men, especially those of the church, Never was there a better time to be a young man, never a better time to prepare for the new era of righteousness and progression which is coming in like a whirlwind with the dawn of the new century, and in all the fields that are opening, in Zion's field are the greatest possibilities. The lawyer's field, enchanting as it is, is litigious in its nature, and one must move in the groove of the sin of his client. The politician is merely a thread caught in warp and woof of his party, to be clipped and cut to suit the pattern. But the servant of God, the elder of Israel on the walls of Zion, prayerfully studying the law of God is the greatest stimulant the world has ever known—eternal truths—the greatest themes that life can hold—God, Christ, conscience, reason, sin, salvation, character and immortal destiny. Zion's weal and her glory are the grandest fields for you, young men. The Sunday School, Zion's Religion, the pulpit will prepare you to put your stamp, not into wood that will rot, not into iron that will rust, not into colors that will fade away, but into minds and hearts and souls that are immortal and thus making the church a "real college" in which ignorance may be banished, a real hospital for hurt and bruised hearts, a real armory in which to obtain weapons to open the springs of life to the weary pilgrims and famishing souls on life's great desert. "Choose ye this day whom you will serve."

The Horse in Ancient America.

Additional evidence of the existence of the horse in ancient America is coming to light, proving the statement of the Book of Mormon true, in spite of the denials of its evidences. The following from The Western (Nebraska) Wave, for July 20, 1900, will be read with interest:

MECCA FOR PALEONTOLOGISTS.

"Carson City, Nev., possesses a more than ordinary interest for the paleontologist. The western declivity of the Sierra Nevadas has thus far proved a valuable field for their research. At the grounds of the state prison, one and a half miles from Carson, may be found foot-prints and fossil remains of both men and animals which inhabited the earth many thousands of years ago. The prison was constructed on a limestone hill with a view to utilizing the convict labor in quarrying stone for commercial purposes. In doing this, the stone has been removed for an area of one and three-quarters acres to a depth of from fifteen to thirty-two feet. No attention was paid for a time to the discoveries, but in 1882 Warden Garrad made a report to the Geological museum at Washington, which at once sent men to make further research. They uncovered more tracks and were able to give the world their views. The prints are made in what seems to have at one time been the shore of a lake, but is now solid limestone. There are six series of the human prints. The average length of stride is two feet six inches. The foot was incased in a sandal of a length of eighteen and one-half inches and a breadth of eight inches at the ball and six inches at the heel of the foot. Besides the human footprints are those of the mammoth, twenty-one inches in diameter; horse, not unlike the horse of the present day; immense birds, some with three and some with four toes, and deer, together with various bones and teeth of the animals named."

Missouri's Public Lands.

Jefferson City, July 19.—On June 30, 1897, the area of government lands in Missouri was 498,264 acres. On June 30, 1899, the area of these lands had been reduced to 445,749 acres. The reports made to the state labor commissioner by the registers of the United States land offices at Boonville, Ironton and Springfield of the acreage yet available for entry on June 30, 1900, show a total of 387,948 acres, a reduction of 107,801 acres during the last year. These lands are subject to homestead or can be purchased at $1.25 an acre, and at the present rate of entry will be all taken up within the next five years.

The following table shows the acreage and distribution by counties, the decrease and increase of acreage during the last fiscal year, the increase being caused mainly by homesteaders failing to prove up their claims, in which case the lands revert to the government and are again subject to entry:

Table with 5 columns: County, Acreage June 30, 1899, Acreage June 30, 1900, Decrease, Increase. Lists counties from Barry to Wright with corresponding acreage and change values.

Net decrease during year ending June 30, 1900 107,801 increase. —The Kansas City (Mo.) Star, July 19, 1900.

Lightning is Getting Worse.

In view of the presence of the cyclonic period of the year, when thunder storms are of almost daily occurrence, a report prepared by Prof. Henry, of the United States weather bureau, on the subject will be read with peculiar interest. It is unpleasant at the outset to note that the number of deaths from lightning stroke is increasing. For the year 1899 it was the largest on record. During the twelve months 562 persons were killed. In addition 820 received shocks more or less severe, from which they ultimately recovered. Some of these recovery cases presented peculiar features. In several instances the clothing of the person struck was set on fire and their bodies were badly burned, yet they ultimately experienced complete recovery. In some of the fatal cases there was no outward injury visible, while in others, discoloration of the skin was observable all over the body.

Some valuable hints are given in the report regarding the precautions that should be taken to avoid danger while a thunder-storm is in progress. Many housewives are partial to wire clotheslines, and insist in having them strung across their backyards, imperiling any building to which the wires may be attached. One dozen persons were killed last year in the act of stripping such clotheslines. Several fires were started through wire clotheslines being stretched between trees in the yard and the house. It is never wise to take shelter under a tree during a thunderstorm. About 11 per cent of all deaths that occurred last year were caused in that way. People in the house during a storm should keep away from the chimney, and should not sit between open doors or by open windows. Riders should dismount from their horses and stand as far from them as possible during the storm.

The greatest number of deaths from lightning in 1899 in any state of the Union was fifty-six. These occurred in Pennsylvania. Illinois was second in the list of fatalities, forty-one having been stricken here. Pennsylvania also was first in the number of injuries, 124 having happened in that state. New York was a close second in that respect, with a total of 103. Illinois had more people killed than injured. It also had the greatest increase in the number of fatal cases as compared with the previous year; though there was material increase in Pennsylvania, Ohio, North Carolina, Minnesota and Michigan. The states in which the greatest decreases were Texas, New York and Alabama. No certain theory can be advanced to account for the increase or decrease of such cases. It is questionable if the laws that govern lightning will ever be discovered. Investigation in this direction is considerably handicapped by the general reluctance to fool too much with the lightning buzz-saw.—The Kansas City (Mo.) Star, July 12, 1900, from Chicago Evening Post.

The Value of Toads and Bats.

As a result of experiments with toads and bats, it has been demonstrated that a house, or even a community, can be rid of various troublesome insects, including flies and mosquitoes. These experiments were made by Professor Clinton F. Hodge, of Clark University, Worcester, Massachusetts. Professor Hodge's first experiment was with the toad. "I constructed a small pen in my garden," he said, "and in it, in a pan of water, installed a male and female toad. To attract food for them, I placed within the enclosure bits of meat and bone. The results were as satisfactory as they were unexpected. The toads spent most of the time sitting within reaching distance of the bait, and killing the flies attracted by it. I watched one toad snap up eighty-six house flies in less than ten minutes. "One day I gathered a quantity of rose bugs in a tin box and began to feed the bugs to a toad. At first I did not count, but finding his appetite so good I started to count. When I had counted over eighty bugs and the toad showed no signs of wishing to conclude his meal, I picked him him up. Previous to my beginning to count he had taken anywhere from ten to twenty bugs. I found the toad equally greedy for rose beetles, canker worms, ants, caterpillars, moths, June bugs, weevils, snails and many other insects. So, too, in a house, a room may be cleared of cockroaches by leaving a toad in it over night.

"A single toad may destroy over 2,000 worms during the months of May, June and July, and one of these harmless creatures may well do a gardener service to the amount of $19.88 each season, and yet he can raise $20,000 worth of toads at an expense of not more than twenty cents.

Farmers in England buy them, paying as high as $24 per 100, for use in their flower beds and gardens. For household purposes a small number of toads could be given homes in an aquarian. At night the toads could be let loose to kill bugs, while in the day they could kill flies. I have built a sort of cage or wire screen, a foot wide and two feet long, the top of which is kept open. It is only necessary to put in two or three toads, provide them with shelters, a dish of water in one corner, and then keep it supplied with bits of raw meat and any other refuse matter calculated to attract flies."

In speaking of the bat, Professor Hodge said: "We have no animal more interesting and probably none more valuable, and certainly none less understood and more abused than the bat. They are easily tamed, absolutely harmless when gently handled, and make pets as funny as tiny monkeys. As destroyers of many of our most pestiferous night-flying insects, like mosquitoes, the bat is almost our sole dependence, and, as he is known to hunt insects afoot as well as on the wing, he is also of some value for larvae that do not fly.

"My attention was turned to the bat through the codlin moth, the insect to blame for most worm-eaten apples. In an orchard near my home I found nine of the grubs of this insect in a minute. Chancing to go into another orchard, hardly a mile away, I found only four of the grubs in an hour's search. There is an old barn near by, in which live a colony of between seventy-five and one hundred bats. The owner informed me that his apples were always free from worms."—Boston Evening Transcript from Our Dumb Animals for July.

TO MAKE CORN PONE, put one pint of meal into a bowl; pour over sufficient boiling water just to moisten it; it must not be wet. Cover, and when cool add a tablespoonful of shortening, melted, and two eggs lightly beaten. Add a pint of thick, sour milk to which you have added a teaspoonful of soda dissolved in two tablespoonfuls of water and mix thoroughly. Turn into a shallow pan and bake in a moderately quick oven for half an hour. —July Ladies' Home Journal.

City in a Building.

Sante Fe, July 24.—Doctor George L. Cole and Fay C. Cole, of Los Angeles, California; Professor R. W. Bullock, of Greeley, Colorado, and the Reverend G. S. Maddon, of Bland, who arrived here today, reported that in the excavating of a number of large stone ruins situated in Pajarito Canon, between Bland and Espanola, they made startling discoveries. The building discovered was 560x450 feet, entirely of stone, carefully dressed. It was two or three stories high originally, but now only walls six to ten feet remain standing. The upper story evidently was open to the sky, and upon this the dwellers in the building probably spent both night and day.

In one of the rooms an old furnace for smelting was found, near which was a large iron bar, deeply encrusted with rust. There were found also pieces of rich copper ore, some gold ornaments and a piece of beautiful torquos.

Twenty-five pieces of pottery of great beauty and brilliancy were in the room. They were heavy, fully one-quarter of an inch thick and decorated inside and outside with unique designs, one of which was the picture of a three-frame building with smokestack and smoke curling out of it. Each communal building had a different set of designs for its pottery. Several baskets in the room were more beautiful than those woven by the Navajos today, but they crumbled to dust when touched. Iron knives, stone battle axes and polished stone reflectors were found.

In the building are 1,200 to 1,500 rooms, only one of which, however, was excavated.—The Republic, St. Louis, Mo., July 26.

PASTORAL.

To the Officers of Branches and to All the Saints of the Northern Michigan District, Greeting:—You will notice in the minutes of the conference which convened at Boyne City, June 23d and 24th, that your humble servant was chosen to preside over the district, assisted by Bro. R. W. Hugel. I can truly say that I feel our responsibility has been increased; we, therefore, do earnestly solicit your co-operation, as well as your faith and prayers, in our behalf, that we may, by the grace of God assisting us, be enabled to acquit ourselves as true servants of Christ, and we do humbly pray the good Lord to bestow upon us the spirit of wisdom, faith, patience and discernment, that by these necessary qualifications we may preside with equity and justice.

There is a work for us all to do, and I trust we may arise in the strength of Israel's God, and work while the day lasts, "as we are admonished by our blessed Master;" for he has said that when we have done all that is in our power to do, we have but done our reasonable duty. Can we expect the promised blessings unless we place ourselves in a proper condition to receive? Can we expect the Master will use us as instruments in his hands, unless we place ourselves in a proper attitude? Nay, verily, unless we are hungering and thirsting after righteousness, unless we offer our bodies as living sacrifices to him, unless we keep his commandments we cannot hope to receive anything from the Lord.

I trust that the officers in each branch will labor in love together for the building up of the great work which is intrusted to our care. On page 96 of Doctrine and Covenants the duties of the various officers are plainly given. Let us each strive to labor in the calling whereunto we have been called, honoring each other in their office and calling. By so doing we thus honor God and his law. We, as his servants, are admonished to see that his law is kept.

I have visited Prescott and Whittimore branches since conference, and I am in hopes to visit all, or nearly all, of the branches in the eastern side of the district before the fall conference. It was an understanding between Bro. Hugel and myself that he would visit as many branches as he possibly could over on the west side, and I was to do likewise on the east side. I should like very much to visit every branch in the district, but I am satisfied I will not have time to do so in the short space of time between now and the fall conference.

I attended a two days meeting at Prescott, July 3d and 4th, it was indeed a very pleasant and profitable time to all present. Bro. Lake was in attendance and gave us some timely counsel and instruction. I would suggest that if two day meetings are desired in various parts of the district, that you notify me at once, that is if you desire us to appoint them.

Well, dear brothers and sisters; let us "watch and fight and pray, the battle ne'er give o'er" until Zion is redeemed and our Savior comes to reign.

I would be pleased to hear occasionally from the officers of branches, and I assure you I will be glad to assist you in all that is right as best I can.

Your brother and co-worker in the gospel of Christ,

J. A. GRANT.

Reunion Notices.

The annual reunion of the South-eastern Illinois district will be held in Brush Creek branch at the Saints' chapel in our large district tent, beginning Thursday, September 6th, and continuing to 13th inclusive.

The place selected is beautifully located with wood and water on the grounds. In addition to our splendid missionary and local forces we expect Bro. I. N. White to be with us. There will be free furnished at reasonable cost, pasture free. So come one and all, and help make this one of the very best camp meetings we have ever had in this district.

There will be a restaurant run by one of the brethren where board by the week or meal can be had at the very lowest rates. Any one wishing tents can write to I. A. Morris, Zenith, Illinois.

FRANK BENSING, } Com.
ZENITH, Ill., July 25.

Convention Notices.

The Northern California district Sunday School association convention will convene during the district reunion at Oakland, California, August 31, 1900. Two days have been allotted for our convention, and a very appropriate program has been prepared. Methods, ways and means for the good of the Sunday School will be considered. A pleasant and profitable time can be assured to all who attend, so be sure and be present.

Papers upon the following subjects will be read and discussed: "How to Create an Interest in the Sunday School;" "Duties of Parents to the Sunday School Work;" "Our Sunday

DR. PRIGES' CREAM Baking Powder

In Use the most Economical

Greater in leavening strength, a spoonful raises more dough, or goes further.

Working uniformly and perfectly, it makes the bread and cake always light and beautiful, and there is never a waste of good flour, sugar, butter and eggs.

With finer food and a saving of money comes the saving of the health of the family, and that is the greatest economy of all.

PRICE BAKING POWDER CO., CHICAGO.

Note.—Many mixtures, made in imitation of baking powders, are upon the market. They are sold cheap, but are dear at any price, because they contain alum, a corrosive poison.

MARRIED.

WALLING-SUTHERLAND.—At Custer, South Dakota, June 24, 1900, Bro. W. H. Walling and Miss Fannie Sutherland, daughter of Bro. and Sr. W. R. Sutherland, the pastor of Congregational Church officiating.

DIED.

CUMMINGS.—At Rosendale, Missouri, July 20, 1900, the infant son of Bro. and Sr. Wm. C. Cummings, aged 1 year and 9 months.

KENNEDY.—David W. Kennedy, of Logan, Iowa; he was born April 11, 1838, and died May 24, 1900; he leaves a wife and three sons and two daughters besides numerous other relatives to mourn his loss. He was a member of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints for a number of years, and died in that faith. Funeral service from the Latter Day Saints' chapel at Logan, sermon by Elder F. A. Smith.

WHITEAKER.—Caroline H. Marquart was born at Springfield, Ohio, October 22, 1821. She was married to Samuel H. Whiteaker August 16, 1841, in Indiana. In 1855 they moved to Wisconsin, where they lived 21 years; then in 1876 moved to Iowa, and lived one year a half; thence returned again to Wisconsin. She was baptized into the L. D. S. church May 29, 1870, at Osceo, Wisconsin, by Carl W. Lange. At this time she was upon a bed of affliction of many months duration, was carried to the water but walked forth from the water healed. Afterwards moved to Plano, Illinois, where they have lived until her death, which occurred July 13, 1900, at the age of 75 years, 9 months and 21 days.

She leaves an aged husband and 11 children, she being the first to break the circle. She also leaves 60 grandchildren and 16 great grand children. ELDER HENRY SOUTHWICK.

Independence district Sunday School convention will be held at Armstrong, Kansas, September 7th, at 2 p. m. We desire a good representation, and written reports of officers and superintendents. An interesting program will be furnished for the evening, consisting of instructive papers and good music. All are invited to attend. Workers come well prepared with pencil and tablet to help and be helped in the good work.

Mrs. ABBIE A. HORTON, Sec. INDEPENDENCE, Mo., July 31.

Two Days Meeting.

The two day meeting that was advertised at Deenville, Lapeer county, Michigan, for the 11th and 12th of August, is cancelled. Instead thereof it will be held at Five Lakes, Lapeer county, on the same date.

And another two day meeting will be held at Huron City, Huron county, on the 8th and 9th of September.

J. A. GRANT, Pres. APPELGATE, Mich., July 27.

There will be a two days meeting at Bellaire, Antrim county, Michigan, commencing Friday evening, August 25th and 26th and continuing over Sunday. Bro. I. W. Hugel in charge, assisted by others of the ministry who can make it convenient to attend.

J. A. GRANT, Pres. 913 North Walnut St., West Bay City, Mich. BELLAIRE, Mich., July 24.

HEALTHY HAIR

A man with a thin head of hair is a marked man. But the big bald spot is not the kind of a mark most men like.

Too many men in their twenties are bald. This is absurd and all unnecessary. Healthy hair shows man's strength. To build up the hair from the roots, to prevent and to cure baldness, use—

AYER'S Hair Vigor

It always restores color to faded or gray hair. Notice that word, "always." And it cures dandruff.

31.00 a bottle. All druggists.

"My business calls me out among strangers a great deal. I would actually feel ashamed every time I would take off my hat, my hair was so thin and the bald spots showed so plainly. I began the use of your Hair Vigor less than three months ago. Today I find I have as fine a head of hair as I ever had. I tell everybody what I used, and they say 'it must be a wonderful remedy.'" Geo. Vear, Chicago, Ill. Dec. 14, 1898.

We have a book on The Hair and Scalp which we do not obtain all the benefits you expect from the use of the Vigor, write the Doctor about it. Address: Dr. J. C. AYER, Lowell, Mass.

THE LORD IS COMING.

For nearly eighteen centuries God-fearing men and women have been looking for the coming of the Lord and seeking to make such preparation for that event as their education in divine things led them to believe was needful. The early Saints seemed to think that it was possible that He would come again in their day, and the ministry exhorted the Saints to keep themselves in readiness for His appearing. Peter advised:

But the end of all things is at hand: be ye therefore sober and watch unto prayer.—1 Pet. 4: 7.

It is evident that some, in the days of the apostles, thought it was imminent, and expected every day to see Him come, for the Apostle Paul endeavors to set their minds at ease on that matter by showing them that certain events must transpire before the Savior would "come the second time without sin unto salvation." He says:

Now we beseech you, brethren, by the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, and by our gathering together unto him, that ye be not soon shaken in mind, or be troubled, neither by spirit, nor by word [false revelation], nor by letter as from us, as that the day of Christ is at hand. Let no man deceive you by any means: for that day shall not come, except there come a falling away first, and that man of sin be revealed, the son of perdition; who opposeth and exalteth himself above all that is called God, or that is worshipped; so that he as God, sitteth in the temple of God, shewing himself that he is God.—2 Thess. 2: 1-4.

There were also other events which had been predicted to occur before the coming of the Lord, which are described in Daniel 2 and Matthew 24. After the "falling away" there was to be a "restoration;" there were to be "wars" and other commotions; Palestine was to be restored to its fertility; the Jews were to gather to and possess Jerusalem. These, with other signs preceding His coming, have been and are rapidly being fulfilled, so that we are now able to say truthfully, "the end of all things is at hand." The coming of the Lord is "nigh at hand." Consequently there should be a diligent and earnest preparation being made by every one who expects with joy to meet Him.

The lesson taught by the Savior in the parable of the ten virgins illustrates the necessity of being ready, so that when the marriage supper is announced, we may not be among the number who will be excluded because they have failed to be ready; and the parable of the marriage supper for the king's son (Matt. 22: 1-14), emphasizes the necessity of being properly apparelled when we appear at the feast. "What preparation am I making for this important privilege?" is a question that seriously concerns every son and daughter of Adam.

It will be remembered that in some of the cities of the United States, it was announced a while ago that Admiral Dewey was to make them a visit; great preparations were made to receive and entertain the distinguished guest in a manner befitting his dignity and valor. The people were in a fever of excitement and expectation until the great day on which he was to appear among them, arrived; and when it came, the city and its citizens put on their gayest attire, and turned out en masse to do the great man honor. Everyone worked hard and diligently to complete the preparation for the reception, even to the minutest detail, and all felt interested in making that event an epoch in their history. The Savior on one occasion rebuked the indifference and negligence of the Jews, in referring to the journey of the Queen of Sheba, to listen to the wisdom of Solomon. But while the "Lord of life and glory" was in their midst, yet would they not hearken to that which was for their own blessing, but rejected the Messiah. And it is so today. The people make every preparation to honor a great man of this world, but neglect to prepare to receive the King of Glory. How are we, as individuals, treating the same message, and using the opportunities which that people rejected? Are we striving to make ourselves ready? If not, why not? The day of the Lord is at hand.

The announcement has been made for nearly three-quarters of a century that the most distinguished character which ever graced this earth is coming to take up His abode here for a thousand years with those who will give to Him a reception becoming His rank and power. He will furnish all the glory of the occasion, and those who prepare themselves to receive Him will be the recipients of the highest favors and blessings from His presence. Jesus Christ to whom was given all power in heaven and on earth, has signified His intention of returning again to the earth, and for a thousand years, dwelling with His Saints; those who have made themselves worthy of His presence, becoming "like Him" because they have followed Him here; have developed characters, of which He is the illustrious example; having kept His sayings, His commandments.

"Behold the Bridegroom cometh, go ye out to meet him," indicates a completeness of preparation which leaves no room for concern as to having left undone that which conduces to that condition. Not that every one, or even that any one shall be absolutely perfect when the bridegroom comes. We believe that will not fully be realized until we are under the direct tuition of the Savior during the millennium, when Satan shall be bound, and all the environments shall tend to assist in living a life perfect in its harmony with the will of God; but when that perfection is attained, we will then be ready to meet God the eternal Father, and Paul says, "Jesus will then become subject to Him that God may be all in all." (1 Cor. 15: 28).

It is evident that very many of the signs of the Savior's coming have been fulfilled and others are developing rapidly. The midnight cry has gone forth in the renewing of the gospel under divine appointment, and the ministry of Christ's church have been warning the people since 1830 to make themselves ready for the Bridegroom's coming; they are still making the proclamation and will continue to do so until "as suddenly as a flash of lightning in a clear sky" every eye shall behold Him coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory, "in flaming fire," taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ." (2 Thess. 1: 8). The restoration of the fertility of Palestine is a remarkable fact. Wars and rumors of wars, fire, pestilence, famines, etc., are in evidence to an appalling extent, and we are admonished that the coming of the Lord is very much nearer than men dream of. But as in the days of Noah they were eating and drinking (feasting), marrying, etc., right up to the time the flood gates were opened upon them, heedless of the warning of God's appointed messenger, so, in spite of the warnings of His servants today, men and women will go heedlessly on the downward road until the very day of the Lord—the end of the world—dawns and the ascending heavens shall reveal the rightful King.

Therefore be ye also ready; for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of man cometh.—Matt. 24: 44.

"ARE WE BLIND ALSO?"

The New York Weekly Witness says: "Many Christians rewrite the Bible to suit themselves; or, rather, they read their own fancies into it; and imagine that they are studying how to adapt its teaching to their own ideas. And the people who do this are not conscious of irrelevance toward God and toward His truth simply because they are fully impressed with the idea that they are honestly seeking the truth. So they are, no doubt, after a fashion; but they are seeking to evolve truth out of their own inner consciousness instead of trying to open their hearts and minds to the truth of God—the truth which is eternally true and superior to all human thinking; which is, in fact, the basis of all true thinking."—The Ram's Horn, Chicago, August 4.

Both the Witness and the Ram's Horn and their thousands of readers will doubtless admire the sentiment expressed in the above paragraph as being correct in principle and expression; but how many of them are willing to make a practical application of it in their own experiences? How many of them would be willing to embrace the gospel in all its ordinances just as the Bible, the New Testament, teaches it? And how many would be willing to endorse and accept the church organization of the New Testament?

They would have to believe, repent, be baptized by immersion for remission of sins, have the hands of the ministry laid upon their heads for the gift of the Holy Ghost; would speak in tongues, interpret, prophesy, etc., all under the influence of the Holy Ghost.

They would have to receive living apostles, prophets, sevens, pastors, teachers, etc., just as the New Testament teaches were in the Church of Jesus Christ. But all this is by these same orthodoxy (?) declared to be the rankest kind of heresy, and all who believe in such are despised as fools and fanatics; all of which but serves to emphasize the fact that those who see, are yet more insensible to the plainest kind of facts than they realize or are willing to acknowledge.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

We have recently received two letters from young children for publication in the ENSIGN, which we are not able to use. We have no space for a children's department, and if we should publish one letter we would give offense to others whose letters we could not use. We have therefore made it a rule not to admit these letters to our columns. We have a number of good letters from adults which we are holding for opportunity to give our readers, and we trust our little friends will consider that we are trying to do that which we judge to be for the best interests of God's work and not be offended. Zion's Hope is the children's paper, and it may be that if our young brothers and sisters will send their letters to Sr. Walker at Lamoni, Iowa, she may be able to find room for them.

We are receiving orders for Bro. A. Haws' little book, "Sabatarian Theories a Delusion," a review of the arguments of the Seventh Day advocates. It is a useful little work, and we have heard only words of commendation for it. We can fill all orders, 15 cents each.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Sr. (Mrs.) M. A. BARTMESS, La Grande, Oregon:

The Lord still blesses me and keeps me through many trials in my isolated condition, as I find none of our faith in this city. May God soon send his servants here to proclaim the gospel, in my earnest prayer. Pray for me that I may be healed.

Bro. JAMES M. BAGGERLY, Duluth, Minnesota:

Arrived in the twin cities of Superior and Duluth, Tuesday, July 10th. Bro. C. E. Mead, who is in business here, is the only Latter Day Saint in the two cities. We have secured Union Hall, in Hammond block, where I spoke last summer. Will speak again tomorrow evening (July 22d). I am favorably impressed with the people here, and feel that many will accept the gospel. We are busy all the time, advertising by use of hand-bills, tracts, and the daily press. Will labor here for some time.

Bro. J. R. MCKINNEY, Winthrop, Arkansas:

I am wonderfully blessed here. Though the preachers are all the time telling something about the "Mormons," it is all for the best; the Mormon can stand the test, error cannot stand investigation. I have been living in this place over a year and people have begun to read for themselves. I give my papers out and loan my books to a good many to read. Bro. J. D. Erwin and J. W. Jackson come in once in a while and preach. I hold out the gospel light to this people the best I can; once in a while one comes into the fold. My prayer is that the time is near when there will be members enough to organize a branch here. Pray for us.

Sr. (Mrs.) MARGARET THOMPSON, Wheeler, Mercer county, Pennsylvania:

I love the ENSIGN, having received its visits for five years; it is always welcome with its noble sermons and loving letters and we are not left without knowledge or comfort. I greatly admire some of my brethren and sisters in their noble efforts to bring the truth before the people. Surely God has given us a noble one in the person of Sr. A. R. Carson. God has surely blessed her with a good understanding of His word. May she still press forward to help the weaker ones, with an eye single to the glory of our God. There are many others also. God bless each one and may we all be found working in unity together. I ask an interest in the prayers of the Saints that I may be strengthened in body and spirit.

GENERAL CHURCH NEWS.

INDEPENDENCE.

Bishop Ellis Short returned from Texas Sunday afternoon, and reported an excellent time at the recent reunion.

Bro. E. H. Garrett, son of Bro. and Sr. W. H. Garrett, arrived with his wife and little daughter, from Cleveland, Ohio, Monday evening. It is possible they may decide to locate here.

Bro. and Sr. H. H. Robinson have moved into their new home next to Bro. Bartholomew's. They have disposed of their old home to Mr. Haldeman, brother-in-law of Bro. John McMullin.

Bro. J. C. Foss was called home on Monday on account of sickness in family. He found them feeling better after being administered to. His address hereafter will be Independence, Missouri.

Little Chester Hawley, son of Bro. and Sr. Gid Hawley, of this city, was baptized Wednesday evening, by Bro. J. W. Layton, and confirmed at the evening prayer meeting, same day, by Brn. R. May and C. G. Gould.

Bro. John Inman and family left for the Pacific coast Tuesday, in hopes of building up his health. He has had heart trouble ever since his attack of pneumonia a year or so ago, and has been gradually failing. We hope the change may bring to him complete restoration.

Bro. Wilson S. Loar has bought out the grocery stores of his son, B. C. Loar, and of Bridges Brothers, on the West side of the square, and has moved his son's stock to the Bridges Brothers' stand. Bro. B. C. Loar will "run" the store, and Bro. W. S. Loar will still attend to his real estate business.

Bishop G. H. Hilliard departed last Saturday for Rich Hill, Missouri, for service Sunday. From there he went to St. Louis, where he purposed spending a few days in the reunion at that point, thence to the Massachusetts reunion. On his return in the fall he expects to make a trip to Texas, and after that perhaps to California during the winter. Bro. Hilliard is a very active and efficient worker in the vineyard.

The regular business meeting of the branch was held Monday evening, President W. H. Garrett in charge, J. W. Luff, secretary. Treasurer reported total receipts $84.00, expended $17.75, balance $16.25. On motion the branch agreed to suspend all meetings in the church during the holding of the reunion at Washington Park, August 24th to September 3d. Some other matters were considered and adjournment was taken.

The Daughters of Zion held their regular monthly meeting on 19th of July, nineteen being present. A lively discussion on topics pertaining to child-training, also informal short talks on kindergarten work and the reading of the report of the "Gleaners" society committee, together with the usual opening and closing exercises, minutes, roll-call, singing, etc., took up the time which seemed very short, on account of the interest manifested. It is hoped that the sisters will not forget the date of the next meeting, the 15th inst. Some very interesting features of the work will be presented. The sisters are all cordially invited to attend these meetings.

Sunday was rather warm but a fair sized audience was present at all the services at the Saints' church. Bro. J. W. Adams, of Illinois, being a visitor, was prevailed upon to occupy at the morning service, which he did very acceptably. At night Bro. G. H. Hulmes was the speaker, giving some good thoughts upon the important events transpiring in the history of the nations. The afternoon communion service was a very profitable and enjoyable one.

LAMONI, IOWA.

Pleasant breezes but dry and dusty.

Bro. T. L. Rider, who had been ill for several weeks, died 30th ult., funeral sermon preached on 31st by Elder Stebbins.

Two children were baptized last week, Flossie Hudson and Winnie Stafford, by Elder Stebbins. The first mentioned was confirmed at the meeting held in the Mite Society hall, by Elder Stebbins assisted by Apostle Wight.

Srs. Wight, Fleet and Brackenbury, who have been ill, are reported on the mend. Brn. T. Stewart, at west end, and I. N. W. Cooper are yet prostrate, the first some better.

Apostle Lambert held forth at the Evergreen church on Sunday, 29th ult., and yesterday, Sunday, 5th inst., President Joseph Smith at the Saints' church in the morning, and Apostle H. C. Smith at night. At the Saints' Home Elder Frank Cochran; Elders Wm. Anderson and F. M. Weld at Evergreen. The monthly sacrament at the afternoon service at the chapel. Forwent prayers were offered for Brn. Thos. Stewart and Cooper, of Lamoni, Johnson, of Chicago, and others. Soul cheering testimonies, splendid admonitions and exhortation, interesting and instructive experiences and songs by the Spirit, afforded a spiritual feast enjoyed by all.

The young people's Religio society held a fast and prayer service on Friday night, 3d inst., in behalf of Bro. Elmer E. Johnson, of Chicago.

A LAMONIAN.

August 6.

ST. JOSEPH, MISSOURI.

We were misinformed regarding the new mission in Kansas; it is in charge of Bro. Guinand, instead of Bro. Best, as stated.

Bishop E. L. Kelley was in our city, Saturday, on his way to the reunion at Barnard, Missouri.

Sr. W. A. Blair was elected assistant superintendent of our Sabbath School at the last session.

Sr. Eldredge has returned from Kansas City where she has been visiting for some time.

Bro. G. W. Blair, of Lamoni, stopped a few hours with us on his way to the reunion at Barnard, where he will look after Herald office interests.

A new Religio society has been organized at Aspey mission, with a membership of twenty-five. Much interest is manifested. So the work spreads.

A son of Bro. John Burlington had the misfortune to have his arm broken last week, but we hear is doing nicely at present.

Unless we get rain soon crops will be damaged to a great extent. For two weeks past it has been very hot and dusty, and gardens and fields are suffering.

A good interest in the work continues at the Aspey mission, under the care of Bro. M. Shaw. Preaching every Friday and Sunday evening. Through plain teaching and administering to the sick, several of late have been led to investigate and learn of the work.

The Sisters' Aid Society gave an ice cream social Monday evening, which was an entire success. A fine musical and literary program was rendered, and a very pleasant evening was spent.

CHICAGO, ILLINOIS.

Branch headquarters, 716 W. Van Buren St.; Sunday meetings 2:45 and 7:45 p. m.; Lang Mission, 3411 Cottage Grove Ave., 10:45 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.; West Pullman branch, 745 119th St., 10:30 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.; 608 W. 37th St. (colored mission), 10:30 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.

The telegram calling us to Wilmington meant the sudden passing away of Sr. Barbara Lee Bell, who, at the ripe age of seventy-one years, four months and twenty-one days, passed on to her well earned reward during the still watches of Sunday night. What all the tenderness that loving human hands could bestow, she was returned to mother earth in the beautiful country cemetery, July 31st; her spirit having returned to God who gave it, to await the sound of that trumpet that will possess the magic power to raise the dead. Funeral services were largely attended in solemn memory of the departed loved one. Sr. Bell is the mother of our esteemed Sr. L. W. Kahler and Bro. Wm. D. Bell, of Wilmington, Illinois. Five children mourn the loss of a mother. Sermon by the writer from Rom. 2:11 with Luke 2:10.

Our union service yesterday was attended by an excellent spirit, the Lord speaking in words of admonition and counsel, giving precious promises concerning the work in our great city, that it would move as never before. Let us take courage and press on for the work is the Lord's and he will care for it. Man may falter and his purposes fail, but with God there is neither faltering nor change. Let us stand in harmony with God and his servants and the body of his church.

While at Wilmington we were impressed with the need for pastors. We met and formed a hasty acquaintance with Sr. Campbell, Bro. and Sr. Robson, Sr. Schiffman, Bro. and Sr. Allott and daughter, Sr. Manger and daughter and Bro. George Young who have lately embraced the angel's message and are rejoicing in the work, but need the tender care of a wise shepherd. They are making an effort to either purchase or build a church, which we think commendable, and hope for them abundant success. We find an element of young Saints there who are anxious for the Religio work. Be patient Saints, the great Shepherd will supply your wants by and by.

We have received for distribution 435 copies of ENSIGNS, 29 Heralds, 90 Hopes, for which we are grateful. Bro. E. J. Lang has also received a goodly number. We can use ENSIGNS of any date; don't send other papers as they will not answer our purpose. If you want to save the elder time, please fold them right side out before sending. Among the names we find on the papers we note, Anna Borden, A. H. Adams, T. W. Curtis, Mrs. S. M. Rogers, Emma Cace, J. E. Nicoll, P. Batton, Lillie Spurgin, Wm. Quick, L. L. Jones, E. G. Hall, Abbie Horton, S. Simmons Sr. Burgess, Turner Sparks, L. W. Kahler, A. E. Hopkins and P. M. Martin. Thanks; keep on.

Yes, Bro. Adams, we know much of the workers of staunch old Kewanee district, but with Chicago workers in hand we will measure tape lines with any, as to self, denying, willing workers, old and young. Our childhood and early manhood were spent in the Kewanee district, where also we learned to preach the gospel, and where we found the wife of our youth who is yet standing nobly at our side in the missionary work. Some would be astonished if I should tell you where she is and what she, with others, is doing for the cause. The wife thought is not specially for Bro. Russell.

SECOND KANSAS CITY BRANCH.

Corner Sixteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue. Sunday School 9:30 a. m., preaching 11 a. m., prayer meeting 2:30 p. m., preaching 7:30 p. m.

Since the district tent has come within our branch, we have abandoned the use of our hall, and are holding our branch meetings, as far as practicable, in the tent, to save expenses, hoping to have our new church basement ready to occupy before winter.

Interest at the tent is fine. Meetings are held as follows: Sunday: Branch Sunday School, 9:30 a. m.; Religio, 11 a. m.; mission Sunday School, 4:30 p. m.; preaching, 8 p. m.; also preaching every night during the week. The tent is located on the north side of 17th street, between Holly and Jarboe streets. Sunday evening our presiding pastor, Elder Jos. Emmett, occupied the hour with splendid liberty, and we have since heard many favorable comments by outsiders. Last night (Monday) Bro. Adams, of the Illinois mission, while passing through our city, stopped off and warmed our hearts with a splendid sermon on the "Signs of the Times." We also heard some splendid comments on his efforts among those not of the faith as well as the brethren.

Last Sunday afternoon the Religio, not having been able to meet on Friday evening because of tent meetings, met in their regular monthly prayer meeting with the branch, at the home of Bro. and Sr. Emmett. It was a sacrament meeting and it was indeed an enjoyable one, the Lord meeting with us by the "signs following" in the gift of tongues and interpretation.

The Religio social and entertainment given in the hall July 23d was a decided success, although the weather was very unfavorable. The social part was all that could be desired and the financial part very gratifying. $17.00 of clear profit was realized, although the admission was only 15 cents for adults, and 10 cents for children. The proceeds will be given to the new church building.

The Prayer Union will meet with Sr. Fred Koehler Thursday afternoon. The sisters are having beautiful seasons of rejoicing in their meetings.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the branch is also doing some effective work in a financial way. They meet at the home of Sr. Emmett every Monday afternoon. A. C. K.

August 7.

The Autobiography of Elder Joseph Luff, of the apostle's quorum, is a book full of interest from beginning to end. Bro. Luff is so widely and so favorably known in and out of the church in his years of service in gospel work, that the mere mention of a work of this kind being offered should create a desire to possess it. Two fine sermons are included in its pages and the price is so reasonable that every Saint's home should have this book in their library. It's a splendid thing for the Sunday School library also. 75 cents cloth, postage prepaid.

LETTER DEPARTMENT.

POPULAR BLUFFS, Mo., July 23.
Editor Ensign:—That the Saints and friends may know what the lone missionaries in southeast Missouri are doing, I write you a few lines. On the 24th of May we began the first series of meetings we held in our mission. The attendance was fair, order was good and we were invited to stop with members of the Christian (Campbellite) church and those of the Holiness. One Christian said he saw no reason why we could not unite with them we preached so much like them. The Holiness also seemed to think we preached much like them. Of course we tried to explain this in this way: that is, that they both had some truth, and that the church of Christ contained or believed the whole truth.

We next preached in Butler county where a missionary Baptist preacher came out to hear and declared we preached the Bible, but that it was Baptist doctrine. I did not believe it to be Baptist doctrine. I wish the people would study the Bible so that when they hear the truth they will not say we are of this sect or that, and are preaching the same as the Saints.

It rained so much here the people got badly behind with their crops, some getting no crop at all planted, and others not planting till July. Of course this rainy season caused the crowds at church to be small. When we got to Stoddard county we found the people expecting us. A Christian minister hearing that we were coming informed Bro. Hill that we could use their church to preach in, so we occupied in the Christian church for some eight days, and were treated well by some of the members of that church, but some bad boys came out and disturbed the meeting by being extremely noisy, and were indicted by the Christians, causing eight in number to be fined. There was no suit, as the boys went to the Justice of the Peace submitted their case and paid off their fines which amounted to $8.00 each if we were properly informed. Friends to those disturbing the meeting tried hard to get the one who reported the boys to believe that the laws of the land would not protect us, stating that we were not representatives of a recognized religious body, but, although he was a young man he was not to be deceived by these statements.

We are not angry at the disturbers of public worship, but for the sake of those who disturb, and that public tranquility may be maintained we like to see the law enforced. We are having but little trouble getting places to preach, but at most places we preach we make new openings, hence are among strangers much of the time. There is much sickness here as it is a malarious district, but by the blessing of God our health has been fair much of the time. At present I am somewhat afflicted, but hope to be better soon.

Bro. Beebe, my co-laborer, is quite congenial, and is, therefore a great help to me in the ministry. It is not good for ministers to be unequally yoked together. We all have faults that others can see that it is hard for us to see unless some one points them out to us; hence, the necessity of the instruction, "go two and two." What are you Saints doing in the South Missouri district? I saw a stirring letter from E. T. Atwell that did me good, but I want to hear from the missionaries and others. Brethren and sisters, remember us lone missionaries in this field that our work may be pleasing to God and the church.

Our address is Acorn Ridge, Missouri.

Editor Ensign—It being some time since your cheering pages have brought any news from this part of the vineyard, we hope a few words of information may be acceptable.

Some ten months ago the writer, in company with Bro. C. H. Burr (who has now been my traveling companion the last three summers, during which time we have shared experiences of both a cheering and a discouraging nature; but through all we have been one, and can truly say, God has rewarded us for our feeble efforts, which we have made to be worthy of our calling, by giving us the Spirit, whereby we have been enabled to accomplish some little good), left our homes for the northern part of this state to attend the district conference held at Twin Lakes, June 8th and 10th. It being my first trip to the pine regions, the new scenery was very attractive to me, perhaps more so because it brought to my memory happy experiences from days of youth spent among the pine woods in my native country; but as the physical surroundings do not make Saints, nor hinder the transformation from the world into the kingdom of light, I found there, as at other places, those in whose bosom the Lord's campfire was burning, producing the force, whereby to run the spiritual man, which must be kept active in order to accomplish the needed development, and also to burn out the dross which so closely adheres to the natural man.

We had a good, spiritual conference; the Spirit of the Lord was manifested both by giving us that peaceful, calm influence that brings one's mind forward to that rest prepared for the faithful, and by revealing his mind concerning us through the gift of tongues and prophecy.

About ten buggy and wagon loads from Porcupine, Ono and Lost Creek had come a distance of seventy-five miles to attend the conference, thus manifesting their desire to improve the opportunity of receiving spiritual strength so necessary to fight the battles of life; and if I may judge from appearance, I must say that all left the conference with a feeling of satisfaction, and conscious of the fact that a kind, loving Father had recognized their efforts and spoken to them words of encouragement.

After a few weeks' labor in that part I took leave of dear Saints, thankful in my heart for their kindness and breathing to Him whose ears are open to our silent throbbings, a petition that they might receive sufficient strength to endure the severe trials that will meet every child of God before they lay their armor down and can receive the "Welcome home."

On the morning of the 4th of July I arrived in Durand, and after waiting some time for an opportunity of conveyance to Porcupine, taking in the oration and a few other parts of the celebration, I finally got a ride part way, and leaving part of my baggage, the remaining miles were covered by my own faithful team. In Porcupine I found the Saints busily engaged in the ice cream and lemonade business, which is a flourishing one on that day, affording an opportunity for my missionaries to enjoy some of the good things of life.

The following Saturday evening we commenced a grove meeting at Ono, holding forth over two Sundays; the attendance was not very large, but the Spirit was present and some good was accomplished. Although the times are very busy, owing to the harvest time, we have occupied every evening in trying to tell the story of love: some are willing to listen, while the masses are occupied by the things of this world.

The work here is onward to victory; the Saints are striving to come up higher, and if their faith is firm in Him who has all power, there is awaiting them grand realizations in the future. The young Saints are doing very well here and more are coming into the ranks. Be faithful, young Saints, keep your bodies and minds pure and unspotted from the world, and God will make you powerful instruments for good. Remember, God is with us!

I feel hopeful in the work, and am determined to press onward till the victory is won.

Ever praying for the onward march of Zion's army, I am, in bonds,
Your brother,

P. MUCOUS.

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLO., JULY 23.

Editor Ensign—Perhaps the Saints in this mission are anxious to know what has become of the tent.

Bro. J. B. Roush being appointed by Bro. Joseph Luff submissionary in charge, appointed Bro. C. R. Duncan and myself in charge of the tent for the season. On the 5th of June we erected the tent in Denver and continued there until the 15th. The interest was not what it should have been. There were quite a number of the Saints who did not attend, while there were some who did all in their power to make the meetings a success. Bro. J. W. Gilbert took charge of the singing, rendering acceptable service in that line.

We moved from Denver on the 16th, and erected the tent in Colorado Springs on the 17th. We continued at this place about four weeks, and succeeded in removing a great amount of prejudice. Several are believing. We were assisted by Elders W. T. Bozarth and Emsley Curtis. The Utah elders have canvassed this place going from house to house. The people, as a rule, are disgusted with them, and they think that all Latter Day Saints are from Utah.

The last night we held meeting in the Springs our attendance was fair and the attention was splendid. The Spirit was present in power, and from the expressions from outsiders at the close, I think our efforts have not been in vain. From here we went to Roswell, the first station north of Colorado Springs, and commenced meetings. Our attendance at this place has been good with the exception of one evening. Last night was the banner night for the tent. The largest crowd greeted us that we have had since we started the tent. The attention was good. Several were in attendance from the Springs, some of whom became interested while we were there. Some expressed themselves as being well pleased with our teachings. What the result will be remains to be seen. We are preaching, distributing tracts, watching, and sleeping under four quilts at night. How is that for July?

Our finance is getting very low. We will have to receive assistance soon or close the tent, as it costs money to operate a tent and buy something to eat. The people are not all Missourians here, if they were we might fare a little better. Let us hear from you Saints, especially those of the Colorado mission. Send in your mite and help to get the gospel before the people.

Yours in the one faith,
J. F. CURTIS.

GALENA, KS., AUGUST 3.

Dear Ensign—I have an experience to relate which may be of some interest to your many readers. In reading Paul's missionary experience we learn that he employed peculiar means at times to get the gospel before the people. Well, we have been doing the same things.

Bro. David Love and myself have been preaching at a private house out in the edge of Galena. The few who came were interested and one lady and gentleman are convinced and almost persuaded to be Saints. But we were not satisfied to confine this "angel's message" to this secluded part of this great city; therefore we agreed upon the following plan:

Neither of us were acquainted in the main part of the town, so we decided to have a little theological tilt on the street (this may seem risky, but it worked all right in this case). As we came towards town, we separated and went different roads, with the understanding that Bro. Love should commence preaching on the street, right in front of the post-office, and that I should fall in with the rest of the crowd, and at the close ask questions when the privilege was granted. When I came on the scene of action Bro. Love was preaching an excellent sermon to a large and interested audience. Bro. Love is a good street preacher.

At the conclusion of his sermon he looked all around the crowd and said, "Now, if any one in this audience has any questions to ask, we now give opportunity." I said, "I would like to ask a question, Will you please give us a revelation?" Bro. Love answered that it was not within his power to give revelations, that the secret things of God belong to the Father of Lights. "Well," I said, "if you have no objections, I would like to make a short speech. Bro. Love replied that he had no objections, but would take the privilege of refuting anything that I might say which was not in harmony with truth.

By this time the crowd became curious, and the business men came from their houses of business to hear and see what was going on. I made a short speech of about ten minutes, declaring that I knew all about "Mormonism and could show up its cloven foot." The people gave splendid attention. In concluding my remarks I challenged Bro. Love to meet me in public discussion on the subjects of water baptism, laying on of hands, the "golden bible" and Joseph Smith.

Bro. Love replied to my little speech in which he declared I made statements without proof, and that the "proof of the pudding was the eating of it." I said, "Can you meet me on the street at half past six to-night?" "Yes, sir," he said, "come on the street this evening and we will eat the pudding."

After we had agreed to this I left Bro. Love and came on back to Bro. Powell's. But the crowd kept gathering and Bro. Love went on preaching. When he had concluded one man asked the question, "Will you perform a miracle?" "Raise the dead." "Give me a sign." Bro. Love said, "I will satisfy your sign seeking propensities if you will just acknowledge one truth." "Well, what is that?" "Just acknowledge that you belong to a wicked and adulterous generation." The man became enraged and struck his fist against his hand and said, "I will give you to understand that I am a decent man."

Bro. Love said, "I didn't say you wasn't, but the Bible says he who seeks for a sign belong to a wicked and adulterous generation." At this point an old gentleman, who believed the way Bro. Love had been preaching, stepped to the front and gave this sign seeker some splendid advice; many also became involved in argument, and after supplying the thirsty, eager crowd with papers (*Ensigns and Herald*s), Bro. Love returned to Bro. Powell's.

At night we had another interesting event. At the appointed hour the crowd began to gather and Bro. Love made his affirmative argument on "Water Baptism." While he was speaking, a gentleman finely dressed (I think he was a minister), came and sat down by my side, to give me a few pointers to use in my rebuttal. I thought if he only knew that I was one of those despised "Mormons" he would not be sitting by my side. However, I thanked him for the instructions. Well, when it came my turn to speak, I finally drifted off on Joseph Smith and the Book of Mormon, as I wanted these things explained to the people, and when Bro. Love was making his second speech, in the presence of that vast crowd, I walked away, and the Campbellites spoke to Bro. Love and said, "Your man is whipped, he is going home." "Yes," Bro. Love replied, "that is the way with all these fellows, they can't stand the truth."

But I had to go back to our appointment. Bro. Love still preached about half an hour longer. Before leaving the street Sy Harvey, the great Quaker debater, challenged Bro. Love for a discussion on the subject of "Water Baptism," to take place on the street tonight. Thus the effort resulted in some good we believe, and expect to see hundreds on the street tonight.

WHEELING, W. VA., AUG. 3.

Editor Ensign—On the 10th of July the district tent was pitched in Wheeling for the first time, and Bro. J. F. McDowell commenced preaching in it on the 11th. Bro. V. M. Goodrich arrived on the 17th and they kept up the services each evening until the 29th, when tent was moved to Bellaire, Ohio, where it is at present. The preaching was good and instructive to all who heard. What the results will be remains for the future to unfold; but of one thing we feel sure, that if no baptisms result from the meetings, some have a better understanding of our faith than before. The seed having been sown by the servants of God we trust him for the harvest. The outlook is encouraging for good to be done at Bellaire with the tent. Bro. Ullom and True are assisting these meetings and caring for tent, etc.

On last Tuesday two strangers appeared in our midst who proved to be Elders Fifield and Lindsay of Idaho, sent out by the Utah Church or Brighamites. They came asking for the use of our chapel in which to hold a series of meetings, which we granted them stipulating with them that no impression or statement was to go out from them that they were the same as we; and also that if they preach the differences between them and us, that it will be replied to before the same audience. So they went to work distributing their tracts from house to house and selling their books wherever they could. A small audience greeted them last evening for their first effort. In the opening they stated to the people that they had no connection with the Reorganized Church, that there was as much difference between the two as between day and night. And while admitting that they once practiced polygamy, said that no plural marriages had been performed since 1890 and that they no longer teach it. They also said that the Reorganized Church never had anything to do with polygamy. Then followed a short sermon on faith, to which we could find no fault, but I was disappointed at the weakness of the speakers in presenting the subject.

As they decline to publicly discuss the differences between their church and the Reorganized (in fact, say they are counseled not to hold public debates with any one), I fall to see how they can hope to accomplish any good for their cause in preaching here only what we agree on. They seem very earnest and manifest a zeal worthy of a better cause. In conversation with the writer they affirmed their belief in polygamy as a righteous principle when it was taught and practiced, but said that as soon as it was made plain to them that it was against the law (in 1890) that Wilford Woodruff, then president of the church, issued a manifesto forbidding the further teaching or practicing it (so far only as relates to new marriages).

Surely the way of the transgressor is hard. If the claim made by the followers of Brigham Young were true that God revealed this "righteous principle" it certainly would reflect upon the wisdom of God in giving a command that he knew his people could not keep because of the law against it, and at the same time give the revelation to keep the law of the land. "For whosoever keepeth the law of God hath no need to break the law of the land." How glad I am that truth has nothing to fear from a comparison with error, and the cause we represent nothing to fear from the closest scrutiny of investigation.

Time, remorseless and unrelenting, continues its onward march, shattering our most fondly cherished hopes of earth life. Then it is that the hope the gospel affords is most appreciated; when the light of eternity can be seen through the mists and clouds that hang over the horizon.

On the 18th of July death again visited our home taking from our presence our only son, Ralph Willard, aged 5 months and 12 days. Bro. McDowell conducted the funeral services and clearly set forth the hope remaining unto those who in the wisdom of God are called to pass through these scenes of sorrow. How comforting the words of Christ who, when speaking of the little ones, said, "Of such is the kingdom of heaven."

With great desire for the success of the cause of Zion and with strong hopes for the ultimate triumph of right,

Your brother in the faith,
O. J. TARY.

NEW LONDON, IA., JULY 23.

Editor Ensign—Bro. Dan Tripp and the writer closed a very interesting meeting here last night. Notwithstanding we had the tent out about two and one-half miles from town, right among the farmers, and they all busy from early till late, cutting and threshing, we had a splendid hearing, and last night there was a crowd out. But we have been here over three Sundays and think best to move, so tomorrow Bro. L. Willie will haul the tent to Mt. Pleasant, where Bro. Tripp will open the siege on Tuesday night. I will start on the 6 a. m. train for Amber, Jones county, to tie the coonball knot for Sr. Carrie Hiinds and Mr. Eugene Frankfort, of Fairmont, Minnesota; they will be married on the 26th. Then on my return trip I expect to baptize Sr. Ella Cator's daughter at Marion; then back to help Bro. Tripp with the tent. Marion, Iowa, July 23.—The wedding is over a nice time was had. Mr. Frankfort and his estimable wife, Sr. Carrie, will make their home near Fairmont, Martin county, Minnesota, after September, and Sr. Carrie, like her mother and Uncle Jack Brady, also her grandfather, James Brady, before her have done, will make her home a home and resting place for God's servants. Take notice, Bro. I. N. Roberts, but them up, and baptize Mr. Frankfort; he is a fine young man.

Last evening I baptized Sr. Helen Cator; she is a granddaughter of old Elder Powers. Elder L. E. Hills assisted me at the baptism and confirmation, after which I preached to a few of Sr. Cator's and Sr. Hills' friends, and the few Saints who were present. So now I will wind my way back to Mt. Pleasant to aid Bro. Tripp; he is a faithful boy, zealous and congenial to be with, and he is careful and keeps near the shore, and don't advance any speculative theories.

May the Father bless every effort put forth for the salvation of man.

THE MORE EXCELLENT WAY.

BY ELDER T. C. KELLEY.

CHAPTER I.

I am the way, the truth, and the life.—Jesus. (John 14:6).

But covet earnestly the best gifts: and yet shew I unto you a more excellent way.—Paul. (1 Cor. 12: 31).

To find the more excellent way and walk therein, is to have the greatest blessing possible of attainment by man, for the reason that it leads to everlasting life.

"Strait is the gate, and narrow is the way, which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it."—Matt. 7: 14

If the people whose hearts are "falling them for fear," and whose minds are filled with "perplexity," could but realize, that in the more, or as we may say, the most excellent way, there is a remedy for every ill, a healing balm for every wound, a solace for every grief, a comfort for every sorrow, and, above all, life—everlasting life—in the world to come, how infinitely better might their condition be. But alas, how few are able to do so!

"Wide is the gate, and broad is the way, that leadeth unto destruction, and many there be which go in thereat."—Matt. 7: 13.

The voice of the "Good Shepherd" is heard and heeded by few indeed. The disturbed condition of the religious world, the many conflicting theories that are being zealously advocated by a multitude of would-be teachers; the low standard of morality and spirituality, and the lack of faith and confidence in God and in Christ, in the more popular churches; the direct attacks upon the teaching of Jesus as set forth in the New Testament, by avowed infidels, agnostics, et al., all add to the difficulties of the honest in heart, in their search for, and their efforts to walk in, the "more excellent way." The straightness of this way makes it still more difficult for those who are accustomed to walk in crooked paths, to follow therein. The people seem to be wholly engrossed in a mad, blind pursuit of earthly pleasures; and these are so unsatisfactory, so utterly incapable of bringing happiness to the perplexed and troubled soul, that there is absolutely "no peace for the wicked," as saith the prophet. That which he thought would give pleasure, gives pain instead. The rose, that with anxious longings he seeks to pluck, and from which he fondly hopes to breathe the fragrance of contentment and joy, is instantly blighted, leaving nothing in his eager hand but the hidden thorn. The exquisite pleasures for which his soul constantly longs are illusive and evasive, always in some distant place or in the vague and uncertain "tomorrow." Like the fabled sack of gold at the end of the rainbow, they cannot quite be obtained—always a little farther on. And why?

"Because my people hath forgotten me, they have burned incense to vanity, and they have caused them to stumble in their ways from the ancient paths, to walk in paths, in a way not cast up."—Jer. 18: 15.

It is only in "the way," the "straight way," the "more excellent," yea, the most excellent way, that the true happiness for which weary, troubled souls are constantly longing, can be found. Hence, the prophet says:

"Thus saith the Lord, Stand ye in the ways, and see, and ask for the old paths, where is the good way, and walk therein, and ye shall find rest for your souls."—Jer. 6: 16.

Glorious promise! "Rest for your souls." How the heart of the wayworn pilgrim rejoices in the very thought! Rest, sweet rest! "They shall rest from their labors and their works do follow them." It falls upon the head of the weary soul like the dews of heaven upon the drooping flower. What would one not give for a full and comprehensive knowledge of this "good way," so that he might walk therein? What a blessing to the human family, if all would heed the command to "ask for the old paths, where is the good way, and walk therein," until in every land, among all people, there should be heard the glad refrain, "Peace on earth, good will to men."

It is very important to know something about the way, so that we may be able to so walk that we shall never be found in the broad way; and it shall be our purpose to place the two ways—the straight and narrow, and the broad way—before you in such a clear and logical manner that none of you need make a mistake. To this end may the Lord bless with his Holy Spirit, the Comforter, all those who read, as well as the writer, that all may be mutually benefited in our search for light and knowledge concerning this most momentous question, "The more excellent way."

It will not be disputed, I think, that such terms as "the way," "the good way," "the way of life," "the more excellent way," are synonymous in meaning with the gospel of Christ; howbeit, the latter term, as used in the text at the head of this article, has a primary meaning of a more specific nature, which we shall probably notice at some length later on.

The author of the book of Romans says:

"I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Greek. For therein is the righteousness of God revealed from faith to faith: as it is written, the just shall live by faith."—Rom. 1: 16, 17.

In the testimony of St. Mark we read:

"Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned."—Mark 16: 15, 16.

This testimony clearly sets forth the fact that the gospel is that by which or through which God proposes to exercise his power to save those who believe it, unless, for some reason, they should believe in vain; for elsewhere we read:

"Moreover, brethren, I declare unto you the gospel which I preached unto you, and which ye have received, and wherein ye stand; by which also ye are saved, if ye keep in memory what I preached unto you, unless ye have believed in vain."—1 Cor. 15: 1, 2.

Nothing can be clearer than the fact that the gospel of Christ is the means by which salvation, or the privilege of entering into the rest "that remains for the people of God," is to be secured. Hence, Paul says: "For we which have believed do enter into rest." (Heb. 4: 3).

As before seen, the Lord, through the prophet Jeremiah, promises rest on condition, "Stand in the ways and see, ask for the old paths, where is the good way, and walk therein." And as Paul with his Hebrew brethren had entered into rest, it follows that, somewhere along the line, they had stood in the ways, they had asked for the old paths, they had found them, had "walked therein," and in so doing had found "rest to their souls"—entered "into rest"—all because they had believed the gospel plan of salvation as taught by Jesus the Christ. This certainly was an excellent, if not "a more excellent way" to be saved. They had, no doubt, heard the voice of the Good Shepherd, saying:

"Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest."

To them this promise had been verified, because they had walked in "the way"—had believed the gospel of Christ, and had not "believed in vain."

In this way they were made free, not only from the law of Moses, but also from sin. On this point Paul says:

"The law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death."—Rom. 8: 2.

Jesus says:

"If the Son therefore shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed."—John 8: 36.

Again:

"Where is boasting then? It is excluded. By what law of works? Nay: but by the law of faith."—Rom. 3: 27.

Thus it is seen that salvation, entrance into "rest," "freedom from sin and death," was obtained by obedience to the gospel of Christ, or the "law of the spirit of life," or the law of faith, taught by Jesus and the apostles of old; and the question, What is the nature or character of this law? here suggests itself.

David answers thus:

"The law of the Lord is perfect converting the soul."—Ps. 19: 7.

And James, thus:

"Whoso looketh into the perfect law of liberty, and continueth therein, he being not a forgetful hearer, but a doer of the work, this man shall be blessed in his deed."—James 1: 25.

And Solomon:

"Every word of God is pure."—Prov. 80: 5.

It cannot be doubted that this "perfect law, referred to by both David and James, and the "pure" word of God referred to by Solomon, is that which the apostles were sent to all the world to teach, and which the people were required to accept, with promise of salvation for so doing; or to reject at the peril of damnation; for David says it converts the soul, and it is certainly converted souls, not unconverted ones, that are saved. Hence, Peter says:

"Repent ye therefore, and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out, when the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord."—Acts 3: 19.

Assuming (and it is a fair assumption) that Peter understood as well as David—just as did David—God's method of converting the soul; in other words, assuming that Peter agrees with David that it is the "law of the Lord" that converts the soul, and Peter's meaning in the above quotation is clear. He simply means that those men to whom he addressed himself, were to put themselves in touch with the law of God, and by its operations be "converted," so that "times of refreshing may come from the presence of the Lord."

He enjoins them (first) to repent, and (second) to be converted. This shows that being converted was something which they could do as well as to repent; or, putting it in another form, they could do something that would bring about the operations of the "perfect law of liberty," "the law of faith," "the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus," upon their souls, and thus be converted, and they would be saved; their sins be blotted out; and times of refreshing would come from the presence of the Lord; and in this way they would find "rest to their souls"—be freed from sin and its consequences.

"For the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death," saith Paul. (Rom. 8: 2).

And again:

"But now being made free from sin, and become servants to God, ye have your fruit unto holiness, and the end everlasting life."—Rom. 6: 22.

Whatever he may have meant by the words, "law of sin and death," whether he was referring to the law of Moses in an exclusive sense, or to everything that produces evil, or in any way causes sin, there can be no doubt that by the words, "Law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus," he meant that particular moral and spiritual code, that distinctively peculiar system of faith known as the gospel, which Jesus taught while on earth, and authorized others to teach in all the world, among all nations, with promise that, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved," and with solemn warning that, "He that believeth [it] not shall be damned." (See Mark 16: 15, 16.)

Peter, as one of the chosen representatives of Jesus, and one who enjoyed to a great degree the Spirit of his Master, evidently understood this matter just as did Paul, as the following will show:

"(Seeing ye have purified your souls [been converted], in obeying the truth through the Spirit unto unfeigned love of the brethren, see that ye love one another with a pure heart fervently: being born again [converted], not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God, which liveth and abideth forever. * * * But the word of the Lord endureth forever. And this is the word which by the gospel is preached unto you."—1 Peter 1: 22-25.

Surely, if it was the word of the Lord "which by the gospel is preached unto you," by which those to whom Peter wrote were "born again" (and without which they could not see the kingdom of God, John 3: 3), and if by the "law of the Lord" which is perfect, David's soul was converted; and Paul's was made free from sin and its consequences by the "law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus," then all these terms must mean the same thing; and if this is granted, then there is no escape from the conclusion, that by each and all of them is meant the gospel of Christ, the law of faith; for, saith Peter, "This is the word which by the GOSPEL is preached unto you." He was one of those, too, who were told to go into all the world and "preach the gospel to every creature;" and Paul wrote, "I declare unto you the gospel which I preached unto you * * * and by which ye are saved." (1 Cor. 15: 1).

Thus is clearly shown the fact that the means used by the Almighty in the conversion of the soul of the sinner is the law of the Lord, or word of God, styled by the apostle to the gentiles, "the law of faith." Any professed conversion of any soul by any other means, would, to put it in as mild a form as possible, place the one making such profession on very doubtful ground; and when it is remembered that there is no profit to be derived by gaining even the whole world at the expense of one's soul (Mark 8: 36), the seriousness of occupying a doubtful position forcibly presents itself.

This life is so short that though one had the world at his command, with power to enjoy to the fullest extent all that it affords, he could not in all this be recompensed for the loss of his soul. If he has not been "born again," if his soul has not been "converted," if he has not been made free from sin and death, if it should be said to him: "Thou fool, this night shall thy soul be required of thee" (Luke 12: 20); if it is said to him, "Depart from me, ye workers of iniquity;" if, Dives like, he dies, is buried, and lifts up his eyes in torment, if he shall say, "The summer is ended the harvest is past and my soul is not saved" (Jer. 8: 20); methinks the anguish of such a soul for one hour would cause to pass out of remembrance all the pleasures, real or imaginary, that the world had given him in life.

How important then to be right in the matter of the soul's conversion. How necessary to use the God-appointed, heaven-ordained means by which the proper conversion, the complete salvation of the soul, can be obtained. Not only should we be willing to accept God's plan in preference to any other, but we should be willing to accept a full, free and complete operation of his perfect law with us; so that our conversion shall be also full and complete, and that we may have ministered unto us, abundantly, an entrance into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ; and that we may be among those who shall be presented "without spot or wrinkle or any such thing." (See 2 Peter 1: 11; Eph. 5: 27).

Men have "sought out many inventions" in spiritual as well as temporal things; and it is not surprising to a logical reasoner to find that all man-made plans and human inventions for the salvation of the race are in some respects at least in direct opposition to the plan of salvation as revealed from heaven by him who said: "I am the way;" and it is certain that any way opposed to, or different from that, is not the "more excellent way." Any way or plan which differs from the gospel as revealed in the Scriptures, cannot be "more excellent" than the plan there revealed. To contend that some other is more excellent, is to contend that Jesus was not infallible and that the Bible is not to be relied upon in such matters. Who, except an avowed infidel, would make such a contention? Who indeed?

Do not be startled, kind friend, whoever you may be, when I tell you that many, who not only are not avowed infidels, but who are professors of religion, and some of them professed ministers of the gospel, do, though unwittingly, virtually make just such a contention. This will appear as we proceed.

The fact that there are many human plans and only one divine one, increases the difficulty of many who are asking in all earnestness for the old paths, and who really desire to be saved. Not that the divine plan is not plain and easy of comprehension, provided one is in such condition of mind as to be receptive of the influence of the Spirit of God, but because of the conflicting theories, to the consideration of which their minds are invited.

Since the days when it was thought by Luther, Calvin, Knox, and others to be necessary to reform the Catholic church; and when, by the Wesleys, reformation was thought to be necessary in the Episcopal church, the work of laying out plans and organizing churches has gone steadily on, each new way claiming to be the "good old way," and its votaries have been loud and constant in giving invitation to all the people to walk with them, promising them rest on condition of accepting the invitation; some have gone so far as to employ physical force in order to establish their faith when moral suasion failed.

This, it seems to me, is not the "more excellent way." The Savior says:

"My kingdom is not of this world: if my kingdom were of this world, then would my servants fight, that I should not be delivered to the Jews: but now is my kingdom not from hence."—John 18: 36.

"The kingdom of heaven is not meat and drink, but righteousness and peace and joy in the Holy Ghost," saith Paul.

"He that believeth and is baptized," not he who is forced to accept in a formal way, what he does not really believe, "shall be saved." Nor would it better the condition of any man or people if they were forced to accept any religious theory of human origin, or suffered themselves to be led to accept it by the sophistry or ingenuity of self-appointed teachers, or by considerations of popularity, rather than to accept "the way" as set forth in the life-work and teachings of Jesus the Lord. By such a course their condition might be made worse, but not better. "I am the way," is the language of Jesus. And again he saith, "He that climbeth up some other way, the same is a thief and a robber." (John 10: 1). Robber of what? Not of goods of this world, but it would be an attempted robbery of the right of Jesus to be "the way;" in other words, the right to say what is the way, to the exclusion of all others, men or angels.

On this point Paul bears testimony as follows:

"But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel [way] unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed. As we said before, so say I now again, If any man preach any other gospel [way] unto you than that [gospel or way] ye have received, let him be accursed."—Gal. 1: 8, 9.

And why be accursed? Because he would be seeking to climb up some other way, and would influence others to do the same; and all such would, as we have seen, become "thieves and robbers." It belongs, I repeat, to Jesus alone, under the direction of the Spirit of God, his Father, to say along what lines, and through what places, pleasant or unpleasant, shall be the way of life; not even the apostles were permitted to make any changes or preach otherwise than directed of the Lord.

"I have given them the words which thou gavest me; and they have received them."—John 17: 8.

Again:

"As thou [the Father] hast sent me [the Son] into the world, even so have I also sent them [the apostles] into the world."—(18th verse).

Query: How did the Father send Jesus into the world?

Answer: "For I have not spoken of myself; but the Father which sent me, he gave me a commandment, what I should say, and what I should speak. And I know that his commandment is life everlasting: whatsoever I speak therefore, even as the Father said unto me, so I speak."—John 12: 49, 50.

If then Christ was sent with a commandment in his mouth what he was to "say and what he should speak," and if the apostles were sent as he was sent, they too were sent with a commandment in their mouth, what they were to say, and what they should speak. And having been thus commanded to teach the words Christ had received of his Father and gave to them, of course, they themselves, nor others, not even angels, were authorized to teach otherwise.

Further:

"I [God] will raise them up a Prophet from among their brethren, like unto thee [Moses], and will put my words in his mouth; and he shall speak unto them all that I shall command him. And it shall come to pass, that whosoever will not hearken unto my words which he shall speak in my name, I will require it of him."—Deut. 18: 18, 19.

Thus we see that when God sends a prophet with a message to the people, the people are under obligation to hear and give proper heed to the message brought. This is true of any prophet of any age of the world; but with respect to Jesus, the Lord, it is pre-eminently so.

Peter, in an eloquent appeal to the people who came together, and stood in wonder and amazement at the sight of a man whom they had long known to be a cripple and a supplicant of alms from the people at the "gate of the temple which is called Beautiful," but who, at the commandment of Peter to "rise up and walk," was soon seen by them in the temple, "walking and praising God," made application of the foregoing prophecy to Jesus in this wise: "And he shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you: whom the heaven must receive until the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began. For Moses truly said unto the fathers, A prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you of your brethren, like unto me; him shall ye hear in all things whatsoever he shall say unto you. And it shall come to pass, that every soul, which will not hearken to that prophet, shall be destroyed from among the people. Yea, and all the prophets from Samuel and those that follow after, as many as have spoken, have likewise foretold of these days."—Acts 3: 20-24.

The latter quotation, if anything, is stronger than the first in its condemnation of those who fail to hear the words of the prophet, who was, according to this prediction of Moses, to be raised up. Of anyone who refuses to hearken to his words, Moses says: "I [God] will require it;" whereas Peter says that every such soul "shall be destroyed from among the people," and in another place the same apostle says:

"Neither is there salvation in any other [than Jesus]: for there is none other name [than Jesus] under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved."—Acts 4: 12.

And again, the Savior himself is on record, thus:

"He that rejecteth me, and receiveth not my words, hath one that judgeth him: the word that I have spoken, the same shall judge him in the last day."—John 12: 48.

What, kind reader, do you think will be the character of such a judgment, of such a one as has rejected him, in the last day? If you hesitate, let me give you an idea from some of the words that Jesus has spoken, and by which you and I, and all the race of man shall be judged:

"Not everyone that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven. Many will say unto me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name? and in thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works? And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you: depart from me, ye that work iniquity." (Matt. 7: 21-23). "Whosoever heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them, I will liken him unto a wise man, which built his house upon a rock * * * and it fell not. And everyone that heareth these sayings of mine and doeth them not, shall be likened unto a foolish man, which built his house upon the sand: * * * and it fell: and great was the fall of it."—v. 24-27.

In the foregoing verses I have emphasized the words "doeth" and "doeth not," to invite particular attention to them. "Whosoever doeth these sayings" of Jesus was to be accounted wise, and everyone that did not do them was to be likened unto a foolish man. Let us remember that "these sayings," all the "sayings," "words" of Jesus are what we shall be judged by in the last day, and in that judgment we will be found guilty, or not guilty; we will be adjudged wise or foolish.

The difference in the condition of the wise and foolish is strikingly and forcefully set forth in the parable of the ten virgins, as found in the 25th chapter of Matthew:

"And the foolish said unto the wise, Give us of your oil; for our lamps are gone out. But the wise answered, saying, Not so; lest there be not enough for us and you: but go ye rather to them that sell, and buy for yourselves. And while they [the foolish] went to buy, the bridegroom came; and they that were ready [the wise] went in with him to the marriage: and the door was shut. Afterward came also the other virgins, saying, Lord, Lord, open to us. But he answered and said, Verily, I say unto you, I know you not." (v. 8-12). I quote again: "Many [who have not done the will of God and are, therefore, of the class represented by the foolish virgins, or the man who built his house upon the sand] will say unto me [Christ, the bridegroom] in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name? and in thy name cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works? Then will I [in passing judgment upon them according to their works, Rev. 20: 12, and by "the word which I have spoken"] profess unto them I never knew you: depart from me, ye that work iniquity."—Matt. 7: 22, 23.

In the parable of the talents the difference in the conditions of these two classes, the wise and the foolish, the doers of the sayings of Jesus and those who do them not, is set forth thus:

"His Lord said unto him [the one who was wise enough to improve on his talents], Well done, thou good and faithful servant: thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things: enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."—Matt. 25: 21.

And:

"His Lord answered and said unto him [the unwise, unprofitable servant], Thou wicked and slothful servant, thou knewest that I reap where I sowed not, and gathered where I have not strawed: thou oughtest therefore to have put my money to the exchangers, and then at my coming I should have received mine own with usury. Take therefore the talent from him, * * * and cast ye the unprofitable servant into outer darkness: there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth."—vs. 26, 27, 28, 30.

I have been thus particular to present the character and results of the judgment that will be passed in the last day upon all mankind, that the importance of doing the "sayings" of Jesus, and thus proving ourselves wise, may be seen, and the results of a failure so to do, may be fully understood. The importance of being right in matters of religion, cannot be overestimated.

To forsake the Lord and walk in "paths not cast up" by him, may be more pleasant, apparently so, at least, than to walk in the old paths, the "straight way," the "more excellent way;" but such a course leads one into the midst of dangers, very great indeed, yea, to certain destruction in the end. "Broad is the way" of this world, and it leads to destruction, and many are gaily walking down this broad way, heedless of the dangers that beset them on every hand. Worldly pleasures engross the minds and efforts to obtain them, engage the talents of this immense throng, and the gay and giddy world looms up with satisfaction and smiles her approbation. "Mystery Babylon"—false and corrupt religion of every kind and color, looks on the scene as if enchanted, and eagerly asks: "May I walk with you along this great, broad way?" And the world answers, "Yes, we shall be only too glad to have you." Soon all are engulfed in the busy whirl of pursuits of such things as do not satisfy, even if obtained. Such may be likened unto thoughtless children, catching butterflies for their beauty, and then carelessly, or wilfully and wickedly, crushing them, and watching them die in their hands.

Into the mouths of this class Jeremiah put these words: "The harvest is past, the summer is ended, and we are not saved." (Jer. 8: 20). And John these: "And said to the mountains and rocks, Fall on us, and hide us from the face of him that sitteth on the throne, and from the wrath of the Lamb."—Rev. 6: 16.

Such will be the end of those who do not "ask for the old paths and walk therein;" who will not accept "The way, the truth, and the life" of the world, but who prefer the broad way of destruction instead. On the other hand those who walk in the "more excellent way," even though it be a "straight and narrow" one, will "Sing a new song," saying, "Thou art worthy to take the book, and to open the seals thereof: for thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood, out of every kindred, and tongue, and people and nation." (Rev. 6: 9). And again: "Alleluia, salvation, and glory, and honour, and power, unto the Lord our God: * * * Let us be glad and rejoice; and give honour to him: for the marriage of the Lamb is come, and his wife hath made herself ready." (Rev. 19: 1, 7).

The reader is advised to read the whole of the 18th chapter and to the close of the 9th verse of the 19th chapter of Revelation, where will be found a vivid picture of the difference in the conditions of those who are "converted," "saved," "born again," "made free from sin and death," "entered into rest," "found rest to their souls," "built their house [spiritual house or life work] upon a rock," "took oil in their vessels with their lamps," and withal made themselves "ready," and those to whom it shall be said: "Depart from me ye workers of iniquity, I never knew you," and who shall say: "The summer is ended, the harvest is past, and we are not saved."

It is believed that when the reader has looked upon this picture until his conception is somewhat correct, his mind will be made up as to which condition is more preferable and in which he would wish to be, and we trust he will be fully resolved to follow in the way that leads to the condition of rest—eternal life.

Any soul that realizes to any degree what it is to be saved and what it is to be lost, very naturally and with great earnestness asks, "What shall I do to be saved," "where shall I find the way that leads to life?" "Where is the old path that I may walk therein and find rest to my weary, troubled soul?"

Gently as the zephyrs of a calm summer evening; yea, softly as the gentle cadences of angel songs the answer falls upon waiting, listening ears. It comes from the lips of Him who spake as never man spake. Listen, O anxious one, whoever you may be: "Hear and your soul shall live." (Isa. 55: 3). Are you listening? Are you willing to hear? Then you shall hear as from the lips of the Son of God himself, "I am the way," "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest."

"But," says the anxious one, "how shall I go to him? In what sense can I walk in him as 'the way'?" The answer to this question has seemed, and really has been, a very difficult one to many. I shall try to put up the guide boards along at such places as will enable any one to keep his bearings as he walks along the way. You could not walk in a meadow or in a wood until you are in the meadow or wood, then may you walk therein and enjoy the beauties of each, or either, but not before. But if you stay on the outside, none of the inside pleasures of the meadow or wood can come to you. And this fact, self-evident and clear as it must be to all, is no more true than the fact that only those who are in Christ can walk in him as the way.

"Therefore if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature: old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new." (2 Cor. 5: 17).

Just as the weary traveler, foot-sore and with parched lips, leaves the dusty highway and turns into the flowery woods where winged songsters warble forth their sweetest strains, and where roses, rich with perfume and beautiful colors, bloom forth to please the eye and heart, and where fountains of cool, sparkling water burst forth to give life to everything towards which they flow; and sits himself down on a grassy plot beneath the thick, spreading branches of some friendly tree well laden with luscious fruit, may find rest to his body; so may the weary, sin-sick soul by leaving the highways of sin, the broad way that leads to death, and getting into Christ—the Christ life—find rest, yea, sweet rest in him; for saith he, "I will give you rest." And it is all free. "Whoever will, let him come." Precious invitation! Reader, can you afford to slight it?

Many are ready, nay, anxious to come and quench the thirsting of their souls at the fountain of living water and satisfy their heart hunger by eating of the "bread from heaven" (John 6: 32); but how to find the fountain, how to obtain the bread, how to get into the conditions of the Christ-life, is the puzzling question. It must be answered, and I beg of the reader not to lose sight of the importance of having the right answer. Remember that you can find rest to your soul in no other than "the good way."

We have seen the necessity of being in Christ; but as the mountain side against which we talk sends back the echo of our own words, so many souls, if asked to walk in Christ as the way, send back the cry, "How can we get in him that we may walk in 'the good way'?"

"Know ye not that so many of us as were baptized into his death?"—Rom. 6: 4.

"For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ."—Gal. 3: 27.

From the above passages it is easy to see that persons are baptized into Christ; and it is also clear that if a man who has been "baptized into Christ has put on Christ," then he who has been baptized into Christ is in Christ and is, therefore, "a new creature." The converse is equally true: "For as many of you as have not been baptized into Jesus Christ have not 'put on Christ';" consequently not in Christ, therefore not "a new creature"—not converted, not in "the more excellent way" to be saved.

America is More Ancient Than Asia.

Captain Cecil Deane, who accompanied the Coburn exploring party into New Mexico, in search of a sandstone house which would authenticate human habitation at a much earlier period than ever before discovered, has returned to Denver. Mr. Deane did not find the sandstone house in its bed of lava, but returned with much less faith in the truthfulness of his fellow man than he had before.

Mr. Deane remained in New Mexico after Dr. Coburn and Professor Cutler returned, for the purpose of running down the men and the stories that were afloat. It was an exciting chase, because if the house was found it meant a great deal to the party as discoverers and also glory for the state of Colorado.

With this to spur him on Captain Deane undertook the task most cheerfully, added to which was the rumor that a Smithsonian party was also on the track and the race was between him and several men backed by the money of that great institution.

First of all an old Mexican had to be hunted out who was tending his flock of sheep on one of the altitudes down there, and he refused to come to a lower one to give the information. He was said to have seen the very house they were in search of, having been shown it by Frank Crane, one of the members of the Moorman surveying party several years ago. After a delay of two or three days, Captain Deane went up on the green hill tops thirty miles away and saw the dreamy gentleman of the South among his herds only to find out that it was a mistake, he hadn't seen the house, only some one else who had. Then came another chase, and still another, with the supposed Smithsonians in the same hot path of discovery. But all was naught. Each time that the location seemed about to be revealed, it was some other man who knew it until it fell back on Moorman himself—and Mr. Moorman is dead.

But Captain Deane's expedition did not begin and end in will-o'-the-wisp stories. He discovered some evidences which show that men lived in the region before the flow of lava, and he turned in to Dr. Coburn the following interesting report of it, which will also be of value to the scientific world:

"Together with an assistant I have carefully examined about five square miles of the lava field in which the ruin is reported to be located, but without success. The evidence is conclusive that where hearsay locates the ruin a large lake existed, and its bed is now almost wholly covered with a lava overflow to a depth of over 100 feet. From data procured at the surveyor general's office at Santa Fe I retraced a portion of the surveys made by Pradt and Moorman in 1882, and found the ruin they officially note and plat to consist of four small rooms, but it is a few hundred feet east of the border of the lava deposit, and its walls are partially made of lava blocks, hence built subsequent to the overflow. I have traced to their source the reports we heard while there relating to the existence of the ruin in the lava beds and find they are not authentic. I have, however, found evidence which apparently establishes the fact that man lived in that region prior to the eruption of lava. At a point about one mile northeast of the extensive ruins on Montezuma, which you examined, I found a group of small cliff houses built under a high and overhanging rock—the exposed base of which is about 150 feet in vertical elevations above the level of the old and now narrow belt of lake bed which extends for several miles north and south of this point.

"In order to fully understand what follows, it will be necessary to keep in view this elevation. This cliff embraces seven attached rooms, three of which I examined. The remaining rooms are filled with great masses of rock which have fallen from the natural roof, and which have crushed their sandstone walls. Two of the rooms from which I removed the debris are similar to those usually found, having a floor of plastered clay, and evidence of human occupation. The remaining room is the central one of the group, is of irregular size, but having an average width and length of seven and eight feet, as shown by the attached plan of the several rooms. In making my excavations of this room I first removed two feet of sand and material gathered by mountain rats. At that depth instead of finding a clay floor, similar to those in the adjoining rooms, I encountered a deposit of small flake of sandstone, six inches in thickness, burned to a bright red color, and so friable that it can be crushed in the hand. This had evidently fallen from the overhanging rock, and has been subjected to an intense heat. Beneath this I found a quantity of corn, covering a clay and rock floor, to a depth of from three or four to twelve inches. The corn was in the ear, is as black as jet, and the room was evidently used as a granary. Many of the ears are quite two inches in diameter, have twelve rows of kernels, and their size would prove that these ancient people cultivated a variety larger than now raised by the several tribes of Pueblo Indians. I secured about two bushels nearly free from sand, which I brought to Denver. This granary room bears north 61 degrees, 50 seconds west, 786 feet from the southeast corner of section 13, township 8 north, range 10 west, New Mexico meridian.

"The corn has been calcined by heat, but not brought in contact with fire, for my most careful search failed to find a particle of ashes or charcoal in it, or in its covering of burned sand rock. Imbedded in the corn I found two stone hammers, and three broken stone axes. They are made of green stone and hornblende, a variety of rock not found in places within 100 miles of that locality.

"The total absence of tools made from lava rock attracted my attention, and I made a careful examination of other ruins, which occur at frequent intervals for about six miles toward the southeast till the head of the valley is reached at the present placita of Cebolilita. In no instance did I find implements or fragments of lava among these ruins when 150 or more feet above the old lake bed, but below that level, down to its margin, and even on its surface are ruins where lava is found that was shaped for cutting tools, hammers, metates or grinding stones, and even used in the walls of their habitations. Because of the many sharp edges caused by air bubbles the porous lava is used for metates by the present Pueblo Indians, as they were used by an older race, but among the ruins of a still older people they are not found, instead slabs of stone were brought from distant regions.

"What caused this line of demarcation to be so distinct? The effects of heat thrown off from flowing lava may be observed at a point about one mile west of Grant station on the Santa Fe and Pacific railroad. There Prof. Cutler and myself recently examined its action on the exposed sand rock of a butte which rises island-like in the lava bed. There the heat has converted the sandstone into quartzite, although not in contact with the lava. The area of this isolated lava flow is less than 2,000 acres; that west and south of the cliff house in which I found the corn exceeds 400,000 acres as shown by official surveys.

"From the evidence I believe the margin of this great fresh water lake was inhabited at a period of time, vastly remote, by a numerous agricultural race, that during the Tertiary period, an eruption of lava coming from fissures in the earth's crust blotted out the lake, covered nearly all its area with a deposit to a depth of more than 100 feet, accompanied with heat and noxious gases that destroyed all animate and inanimate life. At a much later period another race, having the same general characteristics as the former, dwelt on the margin and now uncovered portions of the old lake bed, using the lava for tools and in part for the construction of their dwellings—a material which was not present when the older race necessarily used other kind of rock to supply the implements required in their domestic life.

"During the recent visit yourself and others made to that locality we found much that proves the presence of man in that region at a time anterior to that which scientists claim he appeared in Europe and Asia. The slabs of burned clay which we found near La Boca station, Colorado, having on their under side the impressions of roof logs and tropical foliage, the broken pottery and stone tools found buried beneath, the lava adhering to the upper surface of the once clay roof, over all the distinct evidence of local glacial deposit, proves his presence there prior to the glacial epoch. The twenty-six foot shaft sunk beneath the foundations of the great Pueblo Bonita ruins in Chaco canon, in which each foot reveals his presence when the Tertiary soil was being deposited, tells that he then lived. The stone walls, the top of which are twelve feet in like deposits below the face of other ruins at Raton springs, offered like proof. The calcined ears of corn embedded in lava from Canon Du Chilly speak emphatically of his presence there at a period prior to the overflow of lava, which period it is asserted by those who have made examinations under the direction of the national government, occurred during the Tertiary era.—Denver Daily News, June 24, 1900.

Honey an Excellent Food.

Scientific men say that honey is a much more healthful sweet than sugar, and has many valuable properties. It is nutritive, and when used freely with bread makes an excellent food for children. It is laxative and may be used advantageously in place of medicine by persons of sedentary lives. Being also the daintiest and most delicious of sweets—an extract of blossoms—it is hardly possible to eat it to an injurious extent. It needs no digestion, as sugar does, and even acts as a digestive aid.—The Cass News, July 20.

For a Welsh rarebit, grate one pound of soft American cheese. Put this into a saucepan with half a teaspoonful of salt, a dash of pepper, a teaspoonful of Worcestershire sauce, two whole eggs beaten until light, with two tablespoonfuls of milk. Stir until the cheese is melted. Pour over slices of hot buttered toast and serve immediately.—July Ladies' Home Journal.

In the August number of The Delinctor Dr. Murray handles very thoroughly a subject of great interest to mothers. The sudden attacks of croup with their very distressing symptoms, and the alarming dangers of diphtheria are treated with professional thoroughness, but in such a way that unprofessional people can understand and act upon the advice at the outset of an attack. Of similar aid and help to mothers in the same number is Miss Lina Beard's very clever article on Pastimes for Convalescent Children. Parents who are thinking seriously at this time of the future of their growing daughters will find in the August number of The Delinctor an article of great assistance by Miss Halstead on "Preparatory Schools."

BOTTLE SENT FREE.

Any ZION'S ENSIGN reader whose blood is becoming thin or impure, or who already suffers from blood or skin humors, such as sores, ulcers, pimples, unsightly eruptions, fluttering heart, scrofula, swollen glands and aching joints, aching back, itching skin, falling hair, bone pains and shifting aches, cancer, eating sores, eczema, boils, scald head, rheumatism, catarrh, can be permanently cured by using B. B. B. (Botanic Blood Balm), thoroughly tested for 30 years. People who need more blood or who want rich, pure blood, people whose skin is pale or who suffer from any form of impure blood, should at once send their name and address to Blood Balm Co., 86 Mitchell St., Atlanta, Ga., enclosing five cents (stamps or coin), to cover exact cost of postage (the medicine is absolutely free), and they will forward, prepaid by mail, a sufficient free trial bottle of B. B. B. to fully prove its remarkable action in healing every evidence of impure blood. The Medical Investigator says that B. B. B. is the most wonderful blood purifier made, as it cures after all else fails; the finest remedy made for spring humors. ZION'S ENSIGN readers who suffer are advised to try B. B. B. Large bottles for sale by druggists, $1 per bottle, or 6 large bottles (full treatment), $5. Complete directions for home treatment, go with each large bottle. If you don't want to buy a large bottle of the druggist before knowing more about B. B. B., then write for a free trial bottle. It will convince the most skeptical. B. B. B. is perfectly safe to use by old and young. B. B. B., while healing humors in the blood, improves the appetite, stimulates the liver and makes the weak strong by giving new, red blood. So write today, enclosing five cents to cover exact cost of postage, addressing Blood Balm Co., 86 Mitchell St., Atlanta, Ga., and the medicine will be sent day order is received. Describe trouble and free medical advice given.

The Old Men and Women Do Bless Him.

Thousands of people come or send every year to Dr. BYE for his Balm Oil to cure them of cancer and other malignant diseases. Out of this number a great many very old people whose ages range from seventy to one hundred years, on account of distance and infirmities of age, send for the home treatment. A free book is sent, telling what they say of the treatment. Address Dr. BYE, Drawer 1111, Kansas City, Mo. (If not afflicted, cut this out and send to some suffering one).

NOTICE OF FINAL SETTLEMENT.

Notice is hereby given to all creditors and others interested in the estate of Harriet A. Atwood, deceased, that Andrew Atwood, executor of said estate, intend to make final settlement thereof at the next term of the Probate Court of Jackson County, State of Missouri, to be held at Independence, on the 10th day of September, 1900.

STATE SAVINGS BANK OF LAMONI,
Incorporated under the laws of the State of Iowa, July 1, 1898.

Offers depositors a safe bank for their savings, and solicits the correspondence and deposits of all EXETER readers, and will pay four per cent interest per annum on year deposits. Send money by Bank Draft, Express or Post Office Order, or Registered Letter, or your private check, or a draft bank in the United States or Canada, and direct your letter to W. A. Hopkins, Cashier of the State Savings Bank of Iowa, Lamoni, Iowa. Upon receipt of a certificate of deposit a check will be issued and sent on return mail to the sender. This bank has facilities for handling a very large business by keeping surplus funds invested in safe and available securities and has already received deposits from sixteen different states. All letters containing inquiries or business will be promptly answered.

Broken Bric-a-Bracs.

Mr. Major, the famous cement man of New York, explains some very interesting facts about Major's Cement.
The multitudes who use this standard article know that it is fifty hundred per cent better than other cements for which similar claims are made, but a great many do not know why. The simple reason is that Mr. Major uses the best materials ever discovered and other manufacturers do not use them. Therefore, they too expensive and do not allow large profits. Mr. Major tells us that one of the elements of his cement costs $3.75 a pound, and another costs $5.00 a pound, and a gallon of one of the so-called cements and liquid glue upon the market are nothing more than sixteen-cent glue, dissolved in water or citric acid, so that they are very cheap, but they are colored and odor by the addition of cheap and useless materials.
Major's Cement retails at fifteen cents and twenty-five cents a bottle, and when a dealer tries to sell a substitute you can depend upon it that his only object is to make larger profit.
The profit on Major's Cement is as much as any dealer ought to make on any cement. And this is doubly true in view of the fact that each dealer gets his share of the benefits of Mr. Major's advertising, which now amounts to over $5,000 a month throughout the country. Established in 1876.
Insist on having Major's. Don't accept any off-hand advice from a druggist.
If you are at all handy (and you will be likely to find that you are a good deal more so than you imagine) you can repair your rubber boots and family shoes, and any other rubber and leather articles with Major's Rubber Cement and Major's Leather Cement.
And you will be surprised at how many dealers do not carry it.
If your druggist cannot supply you, it will be forwarded by mail; either kind. Free of postage.

Reunion Notices.

The reunion of the Northern California district will convene at Bushrod Park, Oakland, on August 31st. The location is a beautiful one and can be reached by either the Telegraph avenue or Shattuck avenue electric cars.

Coated

Look at your tongue. Is it coated?

Then you have a bad taste in your mouth every morning. Your appetite is poor, and food distresses you. You have frequent headaches and are often dizzy. Your stomach is weak and your bowels are always constipated.

There's an old and reliable cure:

Don't take a cathartic dose and then stop. Better take a laxative dose each night, just enough to cause one good free movement of the day following.

You feel better the very next day. Your appetite returns, your headaches pass away, your tongue clears up, your liver acts well, and your bowels no longer give you trouble.

Price, 25 cents. All druggists.

"I have taken Ayer's Pills for 35 years, and I consider them the best medicine. One pill does me more good than half a box of any other kind I have ever tried."

of cost. The committee can furnish tents for camping for $1.50 and $2.00 for the time of the reunion. We expect to have a co-operative eating establishment where meals can be had at a minimum cost. Two days will be devoted to district conference work, and one day to Sunday School work. There will be several of the general missionary force present including the missionary in charge, Apostle Gomer T. Griffiths. We hope to have one of the First Presidency with us also.

The Saints of the Central California and all other districts are most cordially invited to come. Those desiring to rent tents please write Elder E. Ferris, 630 Chestnut street, Oakland, the secretary of the reunion committee.

Now, Saints, let us make the reunion the subject of our prayers, and then come together in the Spirit of the Master, and we will have a season of refreshing from the presence of the Lord.

By order of committee, F. B. BLAIR, Pres. R. FERRIS, Sec.

July 27.

The annual campmeeting of the Latter Day Saints of the Pottawatomie and Fremont Districts will be held in the neighborhood known as Dawsonburg, three miles south of Tabor, commencing August 24th to September 3d inclusive. JUDGING THE FRUIT.

The Savior, according to Matthew 7: 16, laid down a very clear and just rule by which to judge the teachings of those who presented themselves as His representatives. "Ye shall know them by their fruit," it would seem, ought to be accepted by every individual of reason and honor; but, unfortunately—more for the one judging than for the one judged—this righteous evidence is often disregarded as being inadequate to meet the requirements when the fruit manifested is distasteful to the opposer; and passion, prejudice and misrepresentation are often used in order to make the fruit appear bad when the opposite is the truth, thus making a false issue.

When the ministry of the church of Jesus Christ—known as the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints—raise the standard of the Master and present the angel's message as delivered through the prophet, Joseph Smith, a very lively opposition is almost at once encountered, as though some fearfully demoralizing influence, damaging to the welfare of the community, had appeared; but when they regain their composure sufficiently to enable those who are thus unduly exercised to calmly investigate the teachings of these ministers, if they are willing to accept the Bible as the rule of evidence, they will have to acknowledge that it is good doctrine, being identically the same that Jesus and the apostles proclaimed; especially when it is remembered that Jesus said:

For I have not spoken of myself; but the Father which sent me, he gave me a commandment, what I should say, and what I should speak. And I know that his commandment is life everlasting: whatsoever I speak therefore, even as the Father said unto me, so I speak.—John 12: 49, 50.

In the light of this statement it is a very easy matter to ascertain if a preacher is inculcating that which is sound and wholesome doctrine, or whether his teaching is such as to cause those who accept it to become unworthy of the respect and confidence of their fellows. For instance, the ministers of the Reorganized church insist upon baptism in water by immersion for the remission of sins, as absolutely necessary to an admission into the kingdom of God, and in order to recognition as "heirs of God and joint heirs with Christ" (Rom. 8: 7). Is this sound doctrine? Many who have been traditioned to believe that baptism is not necessary in order to be saved, will assuredly say no. But what saith the Scriptures? Jesus said plainly:

A good tree cannot bring forth evil fruit, neither can a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit.—Matt. 7: 18.

Now, if Jesus and His apostles did not teach this idea of baptism, then these ministers of the Reorganized church are not producing good fruit; but, on the other hand, if the Savior did so teach, then they are truly manifesting that they are teaching in harmony with the Savior; and, therefore, are producing sound fruit—good fruit. There is but one way to decide it—appeal to the Scriptures. All Bible readers recognize the fact that John the Baptist was especially sent to straighten out the crooked paths the people had been making, and that he required all who accepted his mission to be baptized by immersion for the remission of sins. They will also recognize the fact that he was divinely called to this particular work, and hence we have one good witness whose evidence is indisputable, that the elders of the Reorganized church are, in this instance at least, bringing forth "good fruit."

Peter, the apostle, in Acts 2: 38, demands that those who desired salvation should be baptized for the remission of sins; and we have witness number two. Jesus himself declared that "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." (John 3: 5). Paul, in Romans 6: 4, 5, says: "We are buried with him [Christ] by baptism into death;" and that "if we have been planted together in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection," all of which should be accepted as evidence of the Lord's mind in this matter, and establishes the fact that, being in harmony with the teachings of Christ and his brethren in the ministry, the fruit produced by the elders of the Reorganized church is good, and is therefore worthy of adoption, as insuring eternal life and acceptance with God, to all who are as faithful in other demands of the gospel law as in obeying this requirement.

The same procedure with all other doctrines taught by this ministry should be scrupulously adhered to, and if they are found to be teaching anything now, as essential to eternal life, which Jesus and his servants of old did not also teach, it will be good evidence that in that respect they are not producing the right kind of fruit; and no objections could consistently be offered to this manner of investigating the doctrines taught, because it is the only way by which a true and correct result is possible of attainment. It is equally apparent to every candid, honest, fairminded man, that it is justly due these ministers that just such comparison be made; and it is also justly due to every one individually, that for their own soul's salvation, they candidly and kindly examine the teachings of everyone who present themselves as ambassadors of Christ.

To charge any one with believing and teaching that which they have never accepted or taught, and from that basis examine and try to refute, is unkind, unjust and foolish, a waste of time and energy. Neither is it fair to assert on the statement of some other person, supposedly friendly or otherwise, that certain things are believed by certain individuals, and from that standpoint to assail their positions; that also is a folly and a shame; it is an unreliable and uncertain procedure; it may or may not be true, with the probabilities largely in favor of the latter. The proper way, and the ONLY correct way, is to let the individual tell his own belief, represent his or her own position either from conversation or writings; then if it is thought that the doctrines advocated are unscriptural and unscriptural an appeal to the Scriptures will arbitrate the differences by showing the character of the fruit of the gospel tree in the early ages, and making a fair comparison with that advocated by your opponent. This surely should appeal to the reason and justice of every fair minded man as being the only correct, logical and christian manner of testing any man's teaching.

Slanders, falsehoods, fables, innuendoes, are all the weapons of the adversary of souls; why should any intelligent being be so unwise and unjust as to make use of them, especially in so important a matter as the presentation of the doctrine of Christ; that which is binding upon all men to obey? The other plan is the more sure and certain of correctly measuring the truth or falsity of any man's teaching, and should be adopted by all who love justice and expect it to be measured to themselves.

Again, why should any one be angry when another presents the teachings of Christ and the apostles on the points necessary for salvation, even though it is in direct opposition to what one has been taught to believe and adopt as his faith; one may be mistaken; others have been; those too, who were just as honest, just as earnest as any of our opponents, but they were mistaken. Why not others? A fair comparison of the doctrines taught with what the Scriptures teach will decide the matter, and the one who presents his views so differently to what one had previously been taught may prove to be a friend and benefactor instead of an enemy. At any rate his motives are to do good, therefore receive him kindly, but put his teachings to a searching comparison with the fruits (doctrines) of the original tree and thus judge whether you will be justified in accepting or rejecting them.

It is always safe to follow Jesus and the apostles, as they are revealed to us in the Scriptures; remember always, "By their fruits ye shall know them."

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

HAVE you completed your arrangements for the camp at the Independence reunion, Washington Park, on the electric line? Remember it begins the 24th, one week from tomorrow (Friday). This is intended to be a mission reunion, not simply a district or local affair, and there should be a large attendance from all over its limits especially. Everyone should be interested in its success to the extent that they will work for, and do all they can in its interest, as being representative of this very important mission. For speakers this year, President Joseph Smith, Presiding Bishop E. L. Kelley, I. N. White and Heman C. Smith of the apostles, Columbus Scott and F. C. Keck of the seventy, E. A. Blakeslee of the bishopric, as well as the local force, and probably others of the general ministry contemplate being present. Send your orders for tents at once, to Bro. R. May, Independence, Missouri, so there may be no delay or disappointment. Keep in memory that it requires some time to get everything ready, and you should render all the assistance you can by getting your order in right away. Tents will be put up and taken down without your having to be troubled with it; all you need do is to signify what kind of a tent you want, where you want it located and pay for its use, and move your effects in and out when ready. The reception and locating committee is Bro. Alfred and John D. White, and F. C. Warnky, Bro. Dell White assistant. Come everybody.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

ELDER J. W. WALDSMITH, Nebraska City, Nebraska:

Elder Forscutt and myself were at Brownville, Nebraska, last Saturday and Sunday, held some very interesting meetings there; had a fair turnout, and good attention.

BRO. F. C. KECK writes thus cheerfully from Hennessy, Oklahoma Territory, August 12th:

We are having a spiritual time at the Oklahoma reunion. Eight were baptized today; health of camp fine. The co-operative table is a decided success. Meals cost about 60 cents per meal. Bro. R. W. Davis, W. S. Macrae and R. M. Maloney have done a fine work here. Bro. H. O. Smith, Hubert Case, Hougas and W. H. Smart are with us. Bro. Macrae and I leave tonight to attend the Spring River district reunion. All are happy.

SR. (MRS.) AUSTA V. TILLMAN, requesting a change in her address from Webb City, Missouri, to Springfield, Missouri, (no street or number being given), says:

We left many faithful Saints at Webb, who are competent to keep the good work going. We find in coming here that Bro. Sparling and family are not asleep and that they have kept the Saints alive, well watered and fed spiritually. If they could only return the compliment to Bro. S. we would probably see more results. However, the members are all good, faithful Saints, and are climbing up.

BRO. WM. C. CUMMINGS, 491 West Madison street, Chicago, Illinois:

I arrived in Chicago about the 1st of April and soon found church missions and have been trying to live my religion, giving one-tenth of my wages, though small, to church work. There is a fine and an intelligent lot of Saints here, and I believe all are trying to adorn their calling. Chicago has some very beautiful parks, and notwithstanding the strikes that have been going on in building trades, the people are mostly employed. Here is a big field for church work, but people are slow to take hold of this latter day work; they would rather listen to fables and music or go after the pleasures of the world. May God prosper Zion is my desire.

BRO. C. H. ARMS, Hanging Dog, Cherokee county, North Carolina:

I have been in this country nearly three years and have not heard a sermon; if an elder should pass through here I would like to have him stop, and will do all I can for him and help him to get a place to preach. It does me good to read every week the encouraging letters from the Saints, especially from Bro. I. N. White. I would like if such an elder would come here. A few Brightmited elders have passed through this country, but I have never met one of them yet. It is a hard matter to get the people to understand the difference between the Latter Day Saints and the Brightmites. I hope the time is not far distant when some elder will come this way.

GENERAL CHURCH NEWS.

INDEPENDENCE.

THE REUNION. Next week Friday. The weather will be "good."

Select your location early, so that everybody will get the "best" place.

The Herald tent will be on the ground, and the ENSIGN will also be ready to receive your subscriptions and orders. Hunt them up the first thing, get your receipt and have that matter "off your mind."

Bro. G. E. Harrington arrived home from Ellwood City, Pennsylvania, Friday morning last, on a short visit. Sr. Harrington is improving slowly.

Harry Alma, infant son of Bro. John A. and Sr. Keo Robinson, Jr., was blessed at the afternoon service last Sunday, Bro. J. A. Robinson, Sr., grandfather of the babe, and Bishop Ellis Short officiating.

Sunday was very warm but a goodly number were in attendance at the services at the stone church. Bro. W. H. Garrett occupied at 11 o'clock and Bro. H. E. Robinson at 8 p. m. The afternoon service was very good.

Bro. Omer Lytle was overcome with the heat while working with Bro. Duncan Wednesday afternoon. He was taken home and the elders sent for; he was quite ill. Bro. Lytle is a diligent and faithful worker, and we hope his illness will be of short duration.

Sr. M. Walker, of Lamoni, Iowa, is visiting in Independence in the interests of the Daughters of Zion. She is now being entertained by Bro. and Sr. R. G. Smith, and later will be the guest of Srs. M. E. and Alice Hulmes. Sr. Walker is well known and beloved throughout the church in the good work she has done and is doing in the various auxiliaries, Sunday School, Prayer Union and Daughters of Zion; and as editor of Zion's Hope and formerly the Autumn Leaves. She will have a cordial welcome in our midst.

Some of the young folks gave Bro. Frank James, son of Bro. and Sr. Thomas James, a surprise party, Tuesday evening, on the eve of his departure for Bozeman, Montana, where, we understand, he has received a very advantageous offer from a former employer. The party was a success, and was quite enjoyable. Frank is a genial and courteous young man, possessing good business qualities, and we feel sure will make a success in his new position, in which, with his many friends, we join in bespeaking for him.

LAMONI, IOWA.

Nice showers in this region of late.

Elder H. A. Stebbins ministered at Davis City Sunday, 5th, and departed to Kansas on the 8th to attend a reunion.

Brn. G. W. Blair and E. L. Kelley, presiding bishop, went to the Barnard, Missouri, reunion.

Sr. Adelaide Hanson, wife of Bro. A. B. Hanson, missionary, is reported as having fallen from her wheel at Denver, Colorado, and broken one of her arms.

The Daughters of Zion and Religio societies held their regular meetings at the brick church last week.

An excellent prayer and testimony meeting was held at the Saints' Home Thursday night, 9th inst., led by Elder John Walstrom.

Elder J. H. Hansen, M. D., returned from his medical mission at Chicago, Illinois, and departed to New Mexico to explore, locate and practice his profession.

Some here are making preparations to attend the Washington Park reunion, near Independence, Missouri, August 24th to September 3d.

Brn. D. Krahl, W. Shakespear, D. Keown, and A. M. Newberry held services at Andover, Missouri, on Sunday, 5th.

Yesterday, Sunday 12th, 11 a. m., Saints' chapel, sermon was by Elder John Smith; it was a very instructive discourse on the parable in Matthew 18th, about forgiveness. The afternoon social service was in charge of Elder R. S. Salyards; a vision and spiritual dream were related, and good evidences of the work expressed. At night Elder Fred Hansen was the speaker.

Branch headquarters, 716 W. Van Buren St. Sunday meetings 2:45 and 7:45 p. m.; Lang Mission, 3411 Cottage Grove Ave., 10:45 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.; West Pullman branch, 748 119th St., 10:30 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.; 508 W. 37th St. (colored mission), 10:30 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.

Sr. J. E. Gartside, wife of Dr. Gartside, of Kingston, Missouri, is enjoying a protracted visit in our city with Saints and relatives. She is accompanied by her captivating daughter, Gail, of six summers.

We received one of the advertising bills of the North Missouri reunion, commencing 31st inst. We read it o'er and o'er and recognized some familiar phrases in it, reminding us of days past. There was a rising up of a desire to share in the joys and bliss that will surely be there. We entertain a lingering hope in that direction. We were pleased to see the familiar names of C. P. Paul, T. T. Hinderks, A. W. Head and B. Dice as still standing pillars to the movement. Success, brethren.

In our last we used the name of Bro. Adams for Bro. Russell in the last item. It was in reply to Bro. Russell's letter in Herald. They are so closely connected in gospel work that we got them mixed slightly. Success to old Kewanee district and her many workers.

Our services yesterday were excellent in spirit and well attended. We were in almost constant meeting during the afternoon. Sabbath School from 1:30 to 2:40; preaching 2:45 to 3:30; sacrament and social from 3:30 to 5:45, with preaching at 7:45 by Bro. J. F. Keir. The spirit of the Master was present largely.

Brn. Charles Culvor, Clare A. Sherman and Wm. H. Deam were ordained yesterday at our afternoon service. The latter to the office of priest, the others to the office of deacon. A vision was seen during the ordinations in which the three were represented by three marble pillars. A goodly number testified to the wisdom of the call, and satisfaction prevailed. So may these dear brethren be pillars indeed.

Bro. E. E. Johnson, our beloved deacon, was blessed with a comfortable week, notwithstanding the hot weather, but yesterday was reported not quite so well. For him we sincerely thank the many who have taken such a deep interest in his welfare.

We spoke last night at the Lang mission to a goodly number of interested listeners. We were followed, by invitation, by R. Sena Nayaka, from Ceylon, a very intelligent young man, who explained something of the Buddhism of that country, which was quite interesting. He is greatly infatuated with our doctrine and people.

Bro. E. J. Lang has prepared a unique chart illustrating the gospel principles and leading virtues. He used it with good effect on the street corner last night.

A new Sunday School has been started at the Graves mission, with Bro. Wm. Wainwright as superintendent. He is supported by some of our "willing workers." Success to the effort.

A surprise was perpetrated on Bro. E. A. Penney Saturday night, it being the thirty-first anniversary of his advent into the world. It was a happy gathering, with rich cream and cake.

J. M. TERRY.

395 Ogden Ave., Aug 13.

ST. JOSEPH, MISSOURI.

Last Wednesday evening, prior to our regular service, two were baptized in the church font. They were Bro. and Sr. Andrew Rauff, and were baptized by Bro. Garlich.

At our last business session Bro. Taddicken was elected presiding priest, to fill the vacancy created by the removal of Bro. D. J. Krahl to Lamoni.

Bro. D. H. Blair, of Kansas City, had business in our city Tuesday. He and Sr. Blair find their new home very pleasant, and report the Saints of Kansas City very friendly and agreeable.

At the A-pey mission last Friday evening the Saints present ed Bro. M. Shaw with a Teachers' Bible, in appreciation of his services there. The occasion was Bro. Shaw's sixty-fifth birthday.

Bro. Wm. Lewis went to Beaver, Missouri, Saturday, to attend the funeral of his brother-in-law, who was recently injured in the mines at that place.

William and Clara, children of Bro. and Sr. John M. Dempsey, were baptized Sunday afternoon, and baby Edna was blessed at the prayer service.

Bro. Russell Archibald, of Tyler, Texas, who is visiting his parents here, occupied the pulpit Sunday morning. His discourse was logical, hopeful and full of encouragement for the Saints.

A copious rain fell last night and was appreciated by all.

Notwithstanding the intense heat our Sunday School attendance was 126 last Sunday. We are still striving for that 150 mark, Bro. Krahl.

August 14.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA. Services at Golden West Hall, 320 East Street, every Sunday. Sunday School 10 a. m., preaching 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.; prayer meeting first Sunday of each month at 12:15 noon. Elder C. A. Parkin presiding elder, residence 3010 16th street.

At our branch prayer meeting, July 18th, the parlors of Bro. and Sr. Saxe were filled to overflowing. Apostle G. T. Griffiths was in attendance and had charge of the meeting. The time was pleasantly and profitably spent. One of the most interesting events was the ordination of Charles A. Parkin to the office of high priest, by G. T. Griffiths and Geo. S. Lincoln.

Sunday, the 22d, at 11 a. m. Bro. Griffiths was the speaker. Our little hall was packed with interested listeners, all of whom were well pleased with the service. At 7:30 your correspondent had the pleasure of occupying the pulpit. Bro. Griffiths spoke at Oakland in the afternoon and evening. One young lady was baptized and confirmed in the morning by Elders Griffiths and Lincoln.

July 27th Elder Wm. Hart was buried at Oakland. The funeral services were conducted at the house by C. A. Parkin, and at the grave by J. B. Price. Elder Hart has been defending the work for many years; he was president of the San Francisco branch something like thirty years ago, and has always been ready to speak in defense of the cause.

Sunday, 29th, we had preaching at 11 a. m. by C. A. Parkin, and at 7:30 p. m. by H. L. Holt, who is on his way to Oregon, his field of labor. Another young lady was baptized and confirmed today.

Bro. Griffiths and daughter are now at Los Angeles but will return here again soon.

Elder A. M. Chase is with the tent in the central district.

Elders Blair and Chatburn are in Humboldt county.

All goes well with us; we still claim that the San Francisco branch is the best officered and in the best spiritual condition of any on the coast. Brace up, brothers and sisters, excel us if you can. "Contend earnestly for the faith."

GEO. S. LINCOLN.

Aug. 6.

ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI.

Our reunion is over and the general expression is that it was successful. Brn. I. N. White, M. M. Turpen and A. Allen were the principal speakers. The crowds of outsiders were not as large as last year, but there was a better feeling of peace and quietness; the prayer meeting kept growing in interest, and many are the expressions as to the individual good done. We are to have a reunion next year.

Bro. R. B. Trowbridge and wife have gone to Parsons, Kansas, they will probably remain some time as Bro. Richard's health is not what it should be. He is followed by the good wishes for his restoration to sound health.

Bro. Howard Molyneaux has accepted a position with a St. Joseph house, and departs from the city Monday evening. He knows that his many friends wish him well in temporal, as well as in the better part, or spiritual matters.

Bro. Wallace Robinson rendered us valuable assistance in Sunday School work Saturday. He remained over until Sunday after the first session. The talk to the scholars was complimented by many, and all of us were pleased to have him with us.

Bro. I. N. White shook the dust of the city off his feet Friday night, bound for another reunion, thus keeping busy. Bro. Turpen leaves St. Louis upon Tuesday, for home.

At the close of Sunday night's session, Miss Ada Evans was baptized by Bro. T. J. Elliott. Although our reunion was held in a Catholic neighborhood, we found at least four or five who were surprised at our meetings, and one gentleman said of his wife, "She promised to be home at ten o'clock, but it was after twelve, so you know she must like you people." All of us are more or less aweary, but glad that we had such a good reunion.

LETTER DEPARTMENT.

PAULSON, Wis., June 7.

Editor Ensign:—Perhaps a word from A. L. W. would not be amiss. After conference I made for Crawford county, Wisconsin, did some preaching then went home to look after my own affairs, preparing for the summer's campaign in the great work. On account of the president of Valley Junction branch leaving, I was obliged to stop there awhile. I had some good meetings there, baptized one. We think there will be more unite with the branch before a great while if the proper work is done.

On Friday last I received a telegram to come to Chetek to preach a funeral sermon, so I am in this country preaching every night. I am alone, and not alone, the Lord is with me.

We are having some good meetings at Twin Lakes, some are near the kingdom. I will remain here until after our district conference, which will be next Saturday and Sunday, then I may go to other fields of labor. I never felt better in the work and have been blessed with the Holy Spirit since conference more than usual; thank God for his blessings. Dear brethren, let us move to the front this year so a good work may be done; spread the work everywhere.

In bonds,

A. L. WHITEAKER.

MAYSVILLE, Missouri, Aug. 8.

Dear Ensign:—If you will be so kind as to allow me space in the silent preacher's columns I will try and tell the dear Saints more about Zion's land. I have received forty letters of inquiry from Saints in different parts of the world who read my letter in the ENSIGN of July 5th, and as some seem to want a more definite description of this part, I will try and give it to all as I see it.

I was born within five miles of where I now live, some fifty-one years ago, May 29th last, and I believe I know whereof I speak. Now, dear Saints, I am no land agent; only a poor old farmer, so it is of no interest to me to make a mis-statement to get you in trouble, and if I do I want some of the elders who have been in these parts and who have preached in the Gospel IIII church to call me down, for there are many of those elders who know and have spoken in our church: such men as Bro. E. L. Kelley, T. W. Chabrun, Alfred White, J. M. Terry, M. T. Short and many others who can bear witness.

Maysville is the county seat of De Kalb county and has a population of about 1,500; is a railroad station on the Rock Island, 33 miles east of St. Joseph and about 65 miles north of Kansas City, so we have direct railroad to markets including Chicago. This country is mostly prairie land with timber sufficient to make fence and fuel. In some localities there is rock for building purposes. The soil is of a dark sandy loam and very fertile; it is adapted to all kinds of grain such as wheat, rye, oats, corn, cane, potatoes, and in fact will grow anything that is planted. Fruit does fairly well here, although peaches are not so sure a crop as apples.

Water is plenty and that is good; we have many springs, and wells range from 20 to 60 feet owing to location. It is claimed to be one of the best countries for stock. One can sell anything they raise as there are men who feed cattle and hogs each year, which also takes all the corn that is for sale.

As to church privileges I think we have six Latter Day Saint churches in this county; we have good schools and good people. Crops at the present are fair; oats are good, hay is good, wheat not much sown last fall, but it is fair; corn will be fair if it rains soon, a little too dry just now.

I would say to the Saints who think of moving here to come and look before you move, as we cannot all see alike; still I think this is the time to buy land here, as it is campaign year and always some one scared and wants to sell out. Land rates from $25.00 to $50.00 per acre owing to location and improvements.

Ever praying for God's children and for the redemption of Zion's land, In gospel bonds,

T. L. FLANDERS.

WILLIAMS DALE, N. S., July 20.

Dear Ensign:—We cannot tell you how much we prize you, and how eagerly we scan your pages after walking sometimes for quite a long distance to the home of some dear friend or Saint that values you so much as to have you make them your weekly calls. Am sorry to say, that notwithstanding your inestimable value, not more than one-half of the Saints in my travels are willing to welcome you to their homes by sending to your office an invitation accompanied with the small sum of one dollar—yet in many places among the would-be Saints several news papers are taken, some of which they admire outworth reading; and yet in many cases their only excuse is they can hardly spare the dollar to pay for the paper. This excuse may answer, the Lord knows. I have noticed that such people almost always advance very slowly if indeed they advance at all. With this negligence and with corresponding neglect in other religious duties, I question what the harvest will be.

Too often, through jealousy, the spirit of contention arises with such persons as have not availed themselves of opportunities to advance and keep pace with the demands of the church.

The Saints are so scattered here, and so limited in organization, the work is almost at a standstill, and it looks like it will take all summer to get it started again, as it is hard to teach those who are not teachable. Nominally speaking, the Nova Scotians are a good people, and they are very kind and friendly, but not unlike the true American, when seeking for the filthy lure they lose sight of that which is of more value than gold that glitters for a while, but grows dim with use. All are seemingly satisfied with a nomadic when the pastor will do all the work, and frequently in social service some are taken with a fit of tetanus (lock jaw), thus making the social meetings uninviting to Saint and sinner. I notice this spirit prevails in many other places besides Nova Scotia—one reason for this evidently is the Saints do not take time to pray and read, to post themselves, and thus remove the fear that is sure to come with such lack—when called upon to speak. Saints can and should take time to pray and study God's word; without this one is hardly ever in peace.

To keep God's commandments evidences our love for him—to do whatsoever he has commanded us makes us his friends; to know and keep his law will help to make us fit subjects for the celestial abode; to neglect this duty through avarice, jealousy, or in any other way, or for any other cause, will cause us to meet with a sad failure.

I love this cause and its subjects, and realize it's a great sacrifice for some to be followers of Christ, from a worldly view, and with others it is hard to light down self.

May all be provided with grace to conquer is my prayer.

Hopefully,

S. O. FOSS.

VOLINA, Ala., Aug. 7.

Dear Ensign:—I feel that I must write you a few lines to let the dear sisters know that I am now away from the hospital. I returned home last Saturday, and as all may imagine, I felt delighted over this; but a few days after reaching home was caused to feel somewhat sad by reading a letter written to papa by the leading doctor of "Tuscaloosa Hospital," which read this way:

"Your daughter's health has been rapidly declining for the past two months, and recent examinations have shown that she has consumption. She is steadily losing her strength and though she is up and about, I do not believe that she will live many months longer." Of course this caused papa to feel anxious for my return home, and I felt delighted over the same. Our home is now on a farm, ten miles from Evergreen, and my address is Volina, Alabama.

We have quite a number of near neighbors, and some seemed delighted to take some sermons home to read, which were cut from the Ensign. I left Miss Carrie Portis still a Saint convert at the hospital, and she seemed to feel so delighted to hear me read letters written by dear Saints.

Well, it's useless to write more at present, unless interesting news was more plentiful. Wish I resided near Saints so as to be administered to often by elders. Please remember me in your prayers, dear Saints, and help me to plead with our heavenly Father to give me more faith, patience and charity, and strength to overcome my many evil, wicked ways, so as to be ready when my time comes to pass away.

I trust you all will spend many happy hours in future.

Most lovingly,

JENNIE PAGE.

CARBERRY, Manitoba, July 23.

Ensign Readers:—Being appointed to labor, and if possible, establish our work in Manitoba, I write to ask the Saints of Canada and elsewhere who know of Saints living in this province or neighboring districts, to please send me the full name and address. Since coming here I have by inquiry through the mails learned the whereabouts of over fifteen Saints, scattered for the most part. What I wonder at is that they move away from Ontario and other places and remain so quiet and need hunting up. This mistake can be obviated if Saints intending moving out into some new part, would communicate that fact to the president of the mission who, let me say as a reminder, has charge of the CANADAS; I emphasize the last word, for some think only of Ontario. Our missionary in charge is a pusher and wishes this gospel of the kingdom sounded from one end of Canada to the other.

I left home and loved ones Monday, 16th inst., reaching here Friday last. Same day I secured the best hall in town for what we have a mind to give. Bro. and Sr. Jordan, with whom I am domiciled, think the proprietor has forgotten himself, but if he has, Amen to it. May he never be himself till the people of Carberry become tired of our errand. Yesterday afternoon and evening were our first services.

About fifteen of a congregation in afternoon and fully one hundred at night. Am announced for tonight and tomorrow night. Carberry is a town of 1500 inhabitants. May the Lord give me the honest, for his name's sake.

FREDERICK GREGORY.

CONDON, Ore., July 24.

Dear Saints:—I have just been reading in the church history of the trying times in Missouri sixty-seven years ago, and will write some of the thoughts that come to my mind. I picture to myself the poor Saints fleeing from their homes in the cold and dreary nights of November (how my heart aches to think of them) from a prejudiced and angry mob—a mob composed of professed Christians too—and the Lord permitted it to come upon them because of the transgressions of some. Then I read how patiently the faithful suffered and rejoiced that they were worthy to suffer affliction for the cause of Christ, and think of the crown awaiting them. I ask myself the question, had I been there what would I have done? Would I have been numbered with those who murmured, or with those who meekly submitted to the chastenings of a just God? Then I think of faithful Abraham, how his faith never wavered even when he was commanded to offer up his only son. Oh! had we more faith what blessings we would receive. But we, when we offer up the least petition, we doubt in our hearts whether God will grant it, we wish he would, but we hardly think he will. Then we complain because our prayers are not answered.

Then my thoughts go to those poor, deluded Saints crossing the plains to Utah. How they suffered! Had they used their own heads and studied what was written, they need not to have been deceived; but they were like so many people of today, believe whatever their preacher tells them, or what their church paper says, without investigation. When their preacher tells them we are the same as the Utah church, and that "Joe Smith" was a mean man, they swallow it right down, but they will surely suffer for it just as well as those poor Saints. We were created with brains and should use them. God will hold us accountable for their use.

When the Lord said, "Zion shall not be moved," he did not mean it should go to Utah; and when he said in the Book of Mormon, "There shall no man among you have save it be one wife and concubines he shall have none," he didn't mean you can have as many wives as you can get. Nor did he mean when he said, through his Apostle Paul, that apostles and prophets, etc., were for the perfection of the saints and would remain until we all came in the unity of the faith (Eph 4:1-15), that when they died there would no one take their places; no more than he meant that when the elders died we should do without them. God never contradicts himself, although ministers may try to make him do so, but they only make infidels.

When I think of the prejudice that exists in people today, in this community and in our own families, against the Reorganization because of the Utah church, it makes me feel sad indeed. If they would use their own heads instead of letting some other side think for them, and read both sides of the question, they would not feel so toward us. When they hear that we believe in prophets they throw up their hands and say, Oh! and gasp for breath, and that is all they want with us. And then when they hear that we believe in Joseph Smith, then it is, "Mormons, Mormons, how many wives has he got?" or "How many wives has that woman's husband?" Foolish, foolish creatures. I feel satisfied that if any one with sound sense (maybe that is too strong) would give the doctrine we teach a good, thorough investigation, laying aside all hatred and prejudice, they could not help saying it is the best doctrine they ever heard. How could it be otherwise? It is not our doctrine but Jesus Christ's, or rather, God's.

Yet I can hardly blame them for their prejudice when I think of the lives of some who claim to be Saints, yet why stumble over that? That is the way the infidel does. Look at the lives of some of the old Saints, Peter led, cursed and swore, and even Paul and Barnabas had a quarrel and the contention was so sharp that they would travel together no longer. There is none good. ("Why callest thou me good, there is none good but one, that is God."—Jesus.) We must all stand on our own merits.

I have read Sr. Nora Costello's letter in the Ensign and would like to say that David Whitmer's Address was handed to me sometime ago, and to say that it troubled me will not express my feelings. I could not accept his position neither could I answer his argument, I have just been waiting for light. If the revelations have been changed it is wrong, for "man shall not add too or take from the word of God." Any one having the Book of Commandments printed between 1830 and 1834, is willing to part with it, please let me hear from you stating what you will take for it, and I will be very thankful to you.

I wish some of the elders would answer the book; in my opinion it can do us more injury than Fanny Stenhouse's book or any book that I have read. The friend that gave me the book seemed to be an honest man and willing to accept truth, but he believed that David Whitmer was honest and believed his statements. With the prayer that I may be an honor to the cause and not a disgrace, and that all Saints may strive to come up higher, and so hasten the redemption of Zion began so long ago, I am,

Your sister in the faith,

FLORENCE I. D. PROBST.

NEWPORT NEWS, Va., Aug. 2.

Dear Ensign:—I reached Richmond on the 16th ult., as arranged, and remained there two weeks nearly; but on account of the extreme hot weather, and some other hindrances, we were unable to have meetings except on Sunday at four o'clock, when only a few were out to hear. Most of the work here must be accomplished by personal visits, and we find this place to be especially prepared for this species of gospel work.

We expect soon to try to open up the work in Goochland county, where we have been invited to come, and where the Utah people have become disaffected with many things in that church. We visited one lady recently, accompanied by Sr. Corson, of Fulton, who, with her husband and sister, have returned from Utah, disgusted with their teachings and practices and have returned to believe the story of the "angel's message" and the latter day work, but cannot accept longer the dogmas of Utah. She called on me to bless her babe which I did. I expect to domicile with her brother in Goochland county, and her friends there, and show them the "latter day apostasy" and the "true succession" if I can. I also believe there are quite a number of the members of the so-called apostolic church who will see the truth and obey it, when a little more light clears away from the moral horizon. I sometimes think their pastor is doing all he can to prepare them for this step, and it remains for us to let them know where the "kingdom of God" is, since they realize they are "out of Babylon" as they say (they came out of the Babylon church), but we are telling them they are now "in the wilderness." I herewith send you a poem which seems to me to have been given by inspiration to Sr. Corson, to present to Mr. J. W. Daugherty, pastor, which I have named:

"A Voice of Invitation."

O brother, why stand ye thus waiting? The way to your view is made plain; You have the clear call of the shepherd, You have heard it again and again; And the Spirit to you hath borne witness, 'Tis the voice of the Shepherd you hear. Why delay since he's yearning to fold you Secure from the dangers you fear? The walls of confusion are crumbling, There's no safety in Babylon more, The Shepherd his fold has made ready, And the porter will open the door, There is darkness and strife all around you, Within there is peace, light and rest.

Make haste while the Shepherd is calling. Enter into the fold and be blest.

Already the storm clouds are gathering. And fierce, threatening thunders resound; O where is your refuge, my brother, Why Babylon is falling around. For she cannot long stand the fierce tempest, When the storm of God's wrath shall descend; Even now her foundations are weakening. And lightning fall all things portend. Think not to erect you a shelter, Though faultless and fair it may seem; If built not on eternal foundation, It will vanish and fade like a dream. If it bears not the marks on the lintel, The destroyer will not pass it o'er; But one fold has the Shepherd made ready, And Jesus himself is the door.

And the Shepherd is sending his servants, Here and there they are gathering in His sheep from the dark and the danger. To cleanse them and save them from sin; And the message has reached you, my brother, O, haste to respond to the call; Seek shelter and peace in the sheep-er's fold. 'Er the walls of old Babylon fall. And the "wilderness" too hath its dangers. For the wolf and the serpent are there, But secure in the fold of the Shepherd, No wolf and no serpent we fear; And the Shepherd himself will attend us.

Feed us from his bountiful store, And guide us to heavenly pastures, Where the life-stream flows free evermore. O brother, why will you not hearken, 'Tis the voice of the Shepherd you hear; You have learned from a stranger to tell it. So gentle its tones, yet so clear. There are no mistaking its accents. By one who has once caught the tone. List, brother, again he is calling, And in love he is luring you on.

'After hearing Mr. D. preach a sermon on the 'Ideal Church at Antioch,' where he pictured out the church as it should be according to his view, and his idea being a very clear one, only a few foggs bedimmed it here and there. Our sister went home and wrote the above lines. This, with other thoughts and expressions of Mr. Dougherty, some of which I have jotted and sent to the Ensign, has led me to believe that he is preparing his people for the "marvelous work and a wonder."

I came to Newport News on the 29th, and find the few Saints here still in the faith. We will hold a few meetings at the homes of Mrs. Topping and Taylor, and then expect to return to Richmond, and continue work in that vicinity. I have been consoled by the news that my oldest son and his wife have been baptized since I came from home; just half of my children are now in the church. I hope the others may come soon. I am also glad to hear that over sixteen years of labor and expectancy the clouds of prejudice are being lifted around my home, and the school-house which was closed against us, has been opened, a Sunday School organized, and God again worshipped. I appointed a day for the organization of a Sunday School before leaving home, and am glad to hear of its success. I desire to say here that not a member of this branch at the time of its organization, charter members I might say, have brought any reproach upon the fair name of Latter Day Saint, but have endeavored to let their light shine, so that where we were once despised, rejected, persecuted and misrepresented, we are now receiving favor in the eyes of the people, at least in a degree.

The outlook is better in this field (Virginia) than ever before, but we need a tent for effective service, but the Saints here are not able to purchase and so I have not said anything about it. I have presented the "college proposition" to the Saints here, and will see some encouragement at least. I have $15.00 on my list, and the promise of a little more. There are only thirty-six members enrolled in this district and we shall try to give a larger amount per capita than any other district or branch in the church. Lamont not excepted. I think we did this two years ago. Could not the college offer a free scholarship to the district doing this? Let us hear. Praying for the welfare of Zion, I remain,

Yours in bonds,

J. L. GOODMOUR.

THE MORE EXCELLENT WAY.

BY ELDER T. C. KELLEY.

CHAPTER II.

In the closing paragraphs of chapter I, we showed the necessity of getting into Christ, for we cannot walk in him unless we are in him; and if we are not in him we are not in the more excellent way; for he is "the way, the truth and the life." It was also shown that Paul taught the Romans, and also the Galatians, that they "were baptized into Christ." The writer believes that it is yet a good way, a more excellent way to get into Christ. He does not believe, however, that baptism in water alone, or that Spirit baptism alone fills up the full measure of the way, but that both are necessary, together with other gospel principles, as will appear as we proceed.

But before presenting other Scriptural evidences on this line, I will here give a simple illustration, which, notwithstanding its crudeness, will, I think, aid the honest investigator in his search for the way of life, and in understanding what it is to be in Christ.

Ardent Youthful is in love. No one would for a moment believe that he has only heard a pleasing story of the existence of some sweet Rose Mary, somewhere in the world, though he has not seen her, nor had any communication with her, nor is he sure she is alive, or ever was; but still he hopes she lives, and that some day he will be permitted to bask in her smiles, and that she will then reciprocate his love. If he is in love it is because he has some knowledge of the sweet Rose Mary who is the object of his love; and with his faith in her qualities that render her lovable in his sight, he will unite such works of honor as will satisfy all the laws of his goddess.

Thus he is in the conditions of the new environments, new life, new service, entailed by the magic word "love," and in such new life, conditions of service to his fair goddess will he patiently continue, being careful not to offend her by violation of, or rebellion against any of her laws that must shape the life of the man she weds. He no longer lives for himself nor in himself alone, but has moved out of the old condition and into the new; is, in fact, a "new creature," and occupies, relatively, a new position.

Again:

We frequently hear statements such as: "Mr. Jones or Mr. Davis is in politics." Every one understands what is meant by such statements. They know that Mr. Jones or Mr. Davis believe in, and are working with reasonable persistency to carry out the political doctrines of the party to which he belongs and has pledged himself. No one would think Mr. Jones was a democrat because he said he believed, though he was not quite sure—did not really know—there was such a thing in existence as the Democratic party. If he was really in politics, he would, no doubt, have a perfect knowledge of the existence of his party, and at least a partial understanding of its doctrines; and he would be expected to vote and otherwise work for its success. If he did not, he might say he was a Democrat ever so loud, and ever so many times, but no one would ever believe it.

Yet, strange as it may seem, when it comes to religion, when it comes to finding "the way" of which we are now in search, many arrive, or rather, jump at conclusions equally as erroneous, and say that believing in Christ as the Savior (though such believer is not sure he exists, nor has he done anything in the service of, or obedience to him; in other words, has done nothing to carry out or make successful the spiritual economy of Christ, as applicable to himself and to the world; in short, has not made a single move in the direction of doing the "sayings" of Jesus, or of obeying his gospel, save the bare profession of faith in him as the Savior of the world) will make a man a christian, or place him in Christ. Why is it that we cannot use as much wisdom in passing judgment in things spiritual or religious as in things carnal or earthly?

To be in politics means to be engaged in the interest of whatever form of political economy one chooses to adopt, and this engagement means the employment of both mind and body, or faith and works, in the interest of such political economy or doctrine. In like manner, to be in Christ means to be engaged in the interest of his "sayings," his "doctrine," his "gospel," his spiritual economy, or "law of faith," which, as we have seen, is perfect and converts the soul. And this engagement must be with all the heart, mind, soul and body. Putting it in another form, it must include an intelligent service of both soul and body, or a union of faith and works.

"For ye are bought with a price: therefore glorify God in your body, and in your spirit which are God's."—1 Cor. 6: 20.

As a man cannot be in politics by simply believing in the existence of his party, or some great party leader, and not working and voting with his party; and as a man cannot be in love by simply believing in the existence of some fair one of whom he knows nothing, and for whom he does nothing to please and satisfy, even so no man can be in Christ who has gone no further than to believe in his existence as his Savior, or the Savior of the world, without doing something to satisfy the demands of his law. Merely saying, Lord, Lord, will not satisfy the demands nor answer the requirements.

"Ye must be born again," or from "above," saith the Savior. But how can it be done, "how can a man be born when he is old?" is the ever important question.

To be in Christ means to be in the Christ life, in the conditions of life produced by walking in his footsteps, by hearing and doing his sayings. It means to live in the environments that obtain in the highest and best sphere of spirituality; that in which Jesus Christ moved, and the ethics of which he presented to the world in the "more excellent way." It means to be raised from the low standard of earth-life to walk in the spirituality of the higher life in Christ Jesus. It means that "old things," old conditions of the lower walks of earth-life, of sinfulness and rebellion against God and his law have passed away, and "all things"—environments, conditions, laws governing us—have been changed, "have been made new." In a word it means being delivered from the "power of darkness, and translated into the kingdom of God's dear son." (Col. 1: 13).

"For we are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them."—Eph. 2: 10.

"Created in Christ Jesus!" Such an one is in Christ, in the conditions of the Christ life, having heard and having done the sayings of Jesus. Such an one has asked for "the old paths, where is the good way," has walked therein, has found rest to his soul, has been "converted," has been "born again." And still the question comes, "How can a man be born when he is old?" And inspiration is ready with the answer: "Born again * * by the word of God, * * and this is the word, which, by the gospel, is preached unto you."

This word evidently includes all that is comprehended in the announcement of Jesus:

"My doctrine is not mine but his that sent me."—John 7: 16.

And also this:

"He that abideth in the doctrine of Christ, he hath both the Father and the Son."—2 John 9.

And again:

"And they continued steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship, and in breaking of bread, and in prayers."—Acts 2: 42.

I presume that no one will dispute the proposition that Christ's doctrine and the apostles' doctrine were one and the same thing. Whatever then, is on record, authoritatively, as having been taught by the Savior and by the apostles, must be regarded as Christ's doctrine, the apostles' doctrine, the gospel which Jesus himself taught, and sent his apostles out to preach to all the world. And those who believed and were baptized were saved, "born again," born into the Christ life, and all this because they heard, believed, and obeyed the "word, which by the gospel was preached unto them," for thus saith Paul:

"Ye have obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine which was delivered you. Being then made free from sin, ye became the servants of righteousness."—Rom. 6: 17, 18.

And Peter:

"Ye have purified your souls in obeying the truth."—1 Peter 1: 22.

Reader, is not this the good way, "the more excellent way?" Will any other way lead you to the same happy condition of purification of soul? Nay, verily, "He that climbth up some other way the same is a thief and a robber."

But what had those servants of righteousness believed and obeyed? What were the principles of faith and doctrine accepted by them? And what the word preached unto them and by which they were born again? And an apostolic dignitary stands ready to answer thus:

"Therefore leaving the principles of the doctrine of Christ, let us go on to perfection; not laying again the foundation of repentance from dead works, and of faith toward God, of the doctrine of baptisms, and of laying on of hands, and of resurrection of the dead, and of eternal judgment."—Heb. 6: 1-4.

Here we have a clear and succinct statement of what Paul or Barnabas, or whoever this writer was, calls "the principles of the doctrine of Christ;" and in the previous chapters he refers to them as the "first principles of the oracles of God," and it is clear that belief in and obedience to these "principles" of faith or doctrine, was what "purified," "converted," "saved" the souls of those who were born again by the word which was preached unto them. And this being true, it follows that this heaven-ordained plan was for them, and is for us, the more, yea, the most excellent way to be saved.

This is objected to, however, by some, and the claim is made that the principles referred to were parts of the Jewish economy under the law, and that the "hand writing of ordinances" was blotted out by Christ; and nothing is now necessary save only to have faith, and that it, alone, will purify, convert, save the soul. To the writer, this does not seem to be the "more excellent way." The principle reason for such objection is to make it appear, if possible, that baptism in water for the remission of sins, and the laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost are not essential, the one to forgiveness of sins and the other to the reception of the Holy Spirit. Many conscientiously believe that they have received and will receive a fullness of blessing and glory, who have observed neither. They think they have found an easier if not a more excellent way. No good, in their judgment, can come to them by an observance of the ordinance of baptism or of the beautiful rite of the laying on of hands. "By faith only sins are forgiven; by faith only we are born again, converted," say they; and, as some of old have said: "What profit is it that we have kept his ordinance?" (Mat. 3: 14). "How can baptism save? What is the use in the laying on of hands? What profit is there in either?" But if the "principles" referred to in the passage from Hebrews, are applicable to the Jewish order alone and not to the christian, then the people should not be urged to have faith or repent; for these are two of the principles mentioned, and if this passage is applicable to the Jewish form of worship only, and not to the christian, then no christian is under obligation to believe or to repent. Who would take such a position as that? The Savior says: "Repent ye therefore, and believe the gospel;" and Peter says, "The Lord is willing that all should come to repentance." If Jesus Christ who announces himself to be "the way," "wills," nay, commands that men should repent, is it not getting out of "the way" to say it is not in the christian; but belongs exclusively to the Mosaic order. I think so.

"But," continues the objector, "this was faith and repentance toward God, and that was required by the law of Moses; but in the gospel we are required to have 'repentance toward God and faith in our Lord Jesus Christ,'" and the above words of Paul are cited as proof. Let us read the statement with its connections. Paul had invited the elders of Ephesus to visit him, and when they came, among other things he said to them:

"I kept back nothing that was profitable unto you, but have shewed you, and have taught you publicly, and from house to house, testifying both to the Jews, and also to the Greeks, repentance toward God, and faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ."—Acts 20: 20, 21.

This is the scriptural knife with its razor edge, with which so much hairsplitting is done in a vain attempt to prepare material from which to construct another way than that "cast up" by the Lord. Just how any people can have faith towards God from a christian standpoint of view, and not have faith in Christ, or vice versa, on which ever side of his earthly career they live, I confess I am not able to see. Let it be remembered that Paul, in both instances, was addressing those who professed faith in Christ, and it is reasonable to assume that to both Hebrews and Ephesians he preached the same things, the same word, the same gospel, and when he talked to the Hebrews in one place, of "faith toward God" and to Jews (Hebrews) and Greeks, in another place, of "faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ," evidently he was talking of one and the same thing. He certainly was not double minded nor double tongued. If so, he was not in a very excellent way just then. "The double minded man is unstable in all his ways," saith James, our Lord's brother.

Further: if this contention be allowed, then the doctrine of the resurrection and eternal judgment can not be regarded as part of the teaching of Christ. That he and his apostles taught both, is too well known by Bible readers to need any proof here; and if those who make the objection we are considering, in order to have it appear that the observance of the ordinances of baptism in water for the remission of sins, and the laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost, are unnecessary in our day, do not wish to give up the blessings which come by faith and repentance, and if they do not wish to lose the hope of the resurrection of the dead, and if they are not ready to give up the doctrine of eternal judgment, then they must withdraw this objection; for, if the objection is valid, and does away with baptism and the laying on of hands, it is equally valid in doing away with faith, repentance, resurrection and eternal judgment. Why not?

This argument, then, proves too much, and, as the old adage goes, proves nothing, only that those who make it do not know the more excellent way.

It will not take long to find out whether the principles of doctrine as referred to by Paul in the 6th chapter of Hebrews, belonged alone to the Mosaic dispensation, or whether they belonged also to the gospel as taught by Christ. If it can be shown that each of these principles of faith or doctrine were taught by him, the question will be settled in the minds of all except those referred to in chapter 1, who, unwittingly or otherwise, make the claim that the way of life as revealed in the gospel, as set forth in the New Testament, is not so excellent as some of the ways invented by men.

Did he teach faith as a part of the gospel law by which souls were made free from sin?

"Ye believe in God, believe also in me."—John 14:1.

"For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life."—John 3:16.

"Repent ye, and believe the gospel."—Mark 1:15.

Did he teach repentance?

"Except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish."—Luke 13:3.

"Thus it is written, and thus it behoves Christ to suffer, and to rise from the dead the third day: and that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations, etc."—Luke 24:46, 47.

"I came not to call the righteousness but sinners to repentance."

Did he teach the baptism of water as being efficacious in the salvation of sinners?

"He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved."—Mark 16:16.

"Baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost."—Matt. 28:19.

"Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God."—John 3:5.

Did he teach the resurrection of the dead—all the dead?

"And as touching the dead, that they rise: have ye not read in the book of Moses, how in the bush God spake unto him, saying, I am the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob, etc.?"—Mark 12:26.

"I am the resurrection, and the life: he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live."—John 11:25.

"Marvel not at this: for the hour is coming, in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation."—John 5:28, 29.

Did Jesus teach the doctrine of "eternal judgment?"

"He that rejecteth me, and receiveth not my words, hath one that judgeth him: the word that I have spoken, the same shall judge him in the last day."—John 12:48.

"When the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory: and before him shall be gathered all nations; and he shall separate them one from another, as a shepherd divideth his sheep from the goats," etc., etc.—Matt. 25:31, 32.

"As therefore the tares are gathered and burned in the fire; so shall it be in the end of this world. The Son of man shall send forth his angels, and they shall gather out of his kingdom all things that offend, and them which do iniquity; and shall cast them into a furnace of fire: there shall be wailing and gnashing of teeth. Then shall the righteous shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father. Who hath ears to hear, let him hear."—Matt. 13:40-43.

We are informed in the Scriptures that "in the mouth of two or three witnesses every word shall be established," and I have given three testimonies or evidences, from the "sayings" of Jesus while on earth which show that he did teach five of the six principles of doctrine referred to by Paul, years before the book of Hebrews was written. Then, reader, is it not an "established" fact that these five tenets of faith constituted just so much of the gospel plan of salvation, or "law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus," and are therefore "principles of the doctrine of Christ?" Yes, most assuredly.

Is it not an "established" fact that these five "principles of doctrine" constitute just so much of the law of the Lord, which is perfect and converts the soul? If you say "no," then I answer that Jesus spent a great deal of time in teaching what was not his doctrine, nor yet his Father's. Could he do that and yet be "the faithful and true witness?" (Rev. 1:5).

If, as is claimed, faith is the only condition of salvation, or the only prerequisite essential to salvation, or in other words, if faith is the only point of doctrine that it is necessary for the sinner to accept in order to be saved, or to be converted, then when Jesus had established that one point of doctrine, he had taught all of the "law of the Lord," which is "perfect." To deny that proposition is to deny that faith only is sufficient to "convert" or save the soul. All those, then, who believe in the doctrine of salvation by faith only are bound by the logic of the above proposition.

Now, remember that it is the "law of the Lord" that converts the soul, and if faith in Christ is the only thing the sinner is required to have or do in order to be converted, saved, then when Christ had taught the principle of faith, he had taught all that was necessary to convert and save the soul, hence he had taught all the law of the Lord. It follows, then, that repentance baptism, resurrection and eternal judgment are not included in "the law of the Lord," or "perfect law of liberty," or "law of the Spirit of life;" for if they were they would convert, bless, or make the soul free from sin and death. (See Ps. 19: 7; Jas. 1:25; Rom. 8:2).

It further follows that repentance, baptism, resurrection and eternal judgment are not the principles of the doctrine of Christ, nor yet of his Father. Why, then, should he teach them? If they are not his doctrine, then whose are they? He found fault with the Pharisees for "teaching for doctrine the commandments of men." (Mark 7: 9). Did he do the same thing? No, a thousand times no.

"My doctrine is not mine but his that sent me."—John 7:16.

"For I have not spoken of myself: but the Father which sent me, he gave me a commandment, what I should say, and what I should speak."—John 12:49.

Who, that believes these statements of Jesus, can believe he spent more time in teaching and explaining things that were not essential to salvation, than he did in teaching the one and only thing needful to convert and save the soul? Yet this is exactly what he did, if faith only, as is commonly taught, is that which converts or saves, to the exclusion of all other principles of doctrine as taught by Christ.

"But," says one, "you can find no three statements of Jesus in which is taught the laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost; you cannot, therefore, prove it to be one of the principles of his doctrine; why did you pass over it without notice? Was it not because you knew there was nothing in all the sayings of Jesus in favor of the laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost?"

Now, kind reader, I will be perfectly frank with you; I freely confess that I know of no statement in the New Testament accredited to Jesus while he was on earth, directly touching the laying on of hands for the reception of the Holy Ghost. Will you argue because of this fact, that it is not one of the principles of his doctrine? If so, then if there were such statements of his on record directly teaching it, it would certainly prove it to be one of the principles of his doctrine, wouldn't it?

"O yes," continues the objector, "it would prove it, but you can find no place where he mentions it, therefore you cannot prove it."

Well, I have found where he taught repentance, baptism, resurrection, eternal judgment, and if your logic is good that proves that each of these is a principle of the doctrine of Christ. You must accept that proposition or reject your own logic. Which will you do?

Again: If a direct statement of Jesus Christ on the point of laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost, would prove it to be a principle of his doctrine, then the same kind of a statement on any other point would also prove it to be his doctrine too. Listen.

"And these signs shall follow them that believe: * * * they shall lay hands on the sick and they shall recover."—Mark 16: 17, 18.

Are my objecting friends willing to stand by the logic of their own position? If so they must accept the laying on of hands for the healing of the sick, and if they can do that they should not object to it for the gift of the Holy Ghost, and if they cannot, then, with them, a plain statement of Jesus is not regarded as proof; hence they are not willing to walk in the light of his teachings; they do not have confidence in him as being "the way," or as teaching "the more excellent way" to be saved.

I will here leave this point, however, for the present, and introduce another line of argument to show that Jesus did teach the doctrine of baptism for the remission of sins and also the laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost.

As before stated, the apostles went to preach the gospel of Christ as he instructed and commanded them. Christ sent them, as he was sent. He was sent with "a commandment what he should say and what he should speak." In addressing his Father in prayer he says:

"I have given unto them [the apostles—disciples] the words which thou gavest me and they have received them."—John 17: 8.

Long before this God had promised:

"I will raise up unto them a Prophet like unto thee, and will put my words in his mouth; and he shall speak all the words that I shall command him."—Deut. 18: 18.

If God put his words into the mouth of Jesus and he again gave them to his apostles, "and they went forth and preached everywhere" in such an acceptable manner that the "Lord worked with them confirming the word with signs following," then who can be so obtuse as not to be able to see that they were teaching as he had commanded them? Or in other words, Who can fail to see that they taught the people just as he taught them?

If then we can find that they taught baptism for the remission of sin and the laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost, who could ask for stronger proof that they were just so much of "the more excellent way" as taught by Christ himself?

As we have seen, those who were converted and added to the church on the day of Pentecost, "continued steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine." Their doctrine was Christ's doctrine, for he had sent them to "preach the gospel to every creature," "to teach [it—the gospel, to] all nations," and these apostles to whom this commission was given stood there, and Matthias also stood with them in the place that had been made vacant by the fall of Judas, and Peter as mouth-piece or spokesman for the whole; in answer to the inquiry, "What shall we do," said: "Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost."—Acts 2: 38.

This settles the question as to baptism being a part of the "apostles' doctrine." And when we consider that these men were filled with the Holy Ghost at the time the above statement was made and that they were acting under the authority of a high and holy calling and ordination to the apostolic office (and their ordinations all but one under the spotless hands of the Son of God himself) we cannot doubt that they were fully qualified to point out with certainty "the more excellent way."

Notice, too, that a promise was made that those who would repent and be baptized should, in some way, receive the gift of the Holy Ghost. The reception on the part of the repentant, baptized believer, of the Holy Ghost was included in the apostles' doctrine, and as such was evidently a part of "the more excellent way." In the 8th chapter of Acts we read:

"Then Philip went down to the city of Samaria, and preached Christ unto them. And the people with one accord gave heed unto those things which Philip spake, hearing and seeing the miracles which he did."—vs. 5, 6.

What did Philip preach? He preached Christ. What or who was Christ? He himself answers: "I am the way." Philip, then, preached "the way" in preaching Christ, or, in other words, he preached the way that Christ preached, that the apostles preached, for we must not forget that they all preached the same thing and that they all taught and walked in the old paths, and in so doing found rest to their souls.

We have seen that Peter on the day of Pentecost enjoined baptism as a part of the more excellent way to receive remission of sins and the gift of the Holy Ghost. Did Philip preach that same way? Let us see.

"But when they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized, both men and women."—v. 12.

Query: Why should they be baptized when they believed the preaching of the things concerning the kingdom of God?

Answer: Because, "Verily, I say unto you, Except a man be born [baptized] of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God."—John 3: 5.

Thus had Jesus taught; thus had Philip believed; thus he taught, the Samaritans as he preached Christ—the way—to them; and it is no wonder they were baptized after having been taught that they could not enter into the kingdom without it. Do any of my readers doubt that they were so taught? If so, then they doubt the statement that Philip preached "the things of the kingdom" or else they doubt that Jesus ever said what he is reported to have said to Nicodemus in John 3:5, or what is probably still worse, they doubt the truthfulness of what he did say.

Query again: Why were these Samaritans baptized when they believed the things concerning the name of Jesus Christ.

Listen! "Go ye therefore and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son [Jesus Christ], and of the Holy Ghost."—Matt. 28:19.

In preaching to them the things concerning the name of Jesus Christ Philip had told them of this command to the ministry of Jesus to baptize in his name; hence they were baptized when they believed it. Who would have done otherwise then? Who could do otherwise now? Who indeed?

He who announced himself to be "the way" had commanded his apostles to baptize the nations in his name; and this was tantamount to a command to the nations to be baptized; and this command was doubtless based upon the principle that they could not enter into the kingdom of God without it; and these Samaritans, comprehending this fact, evidently regarded it as a more excellent way to enter the kingdom of God, hence they were baptized, both men and women, and had great joy; and I ask again, Who except those who do not believe "the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ" can ever do otherwise?

In the same chapter we find the account of the baptism by this same Philip of "A man of Ethiopia, an eunuch of great authority under Candace queen of the Ethiopians." He had been up to Jerusalem to worship and was returning to his home in his chariot and was reading from the book of "Esaiah the prophet" when Philip saw him, and at the command of the Spirit went up close to the chariot and finally upon invitation of the eunuch took a seat with him in the chariot and "opened his mouth, and began at the same scripture [that the eunuch had been reading] and preached unto him Jesus." (verse 35). Preached what? Preached Jesus—the way—"the good way"—"the more excellent way." Evidently he preached to this man just as he had preached to the residents of Samaria—preached "the things concerning the kingdom of God"—how that it is impossible for a man to enter into it except he is baptized of water and of the Spirit; and how that the Savior had said salvation should come to those who believed and were baptized in his name; and hence it is no wonder that he, recognizing the importance of walking in "the way" which was preached to him, and understanding that Jesus whom Philip had just been preaching to him, had taught that entrance into the kingdom of God on the part of any man depended upon whether he was "born of water and of the Spirit" should be anxious to be baptized.

"And as they went on their way, they came unto a certain water; and the eunuch said, See, here is water; what doth hinder me to be baptized?" (verse 36).

Why did he ask this question? Because Philip preached it to him as one of the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ; or, if he did not, then the eunuch did not believe the things of the kingdom, and if he did not believe them then he was not a proper subject for baptism; for "he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." Philip could not do better than to preach the way to be saved; so this must have been "the more excellent way," and we to him who "climbeth up some other way."

[CONCLUDED NEXT WEEK.]

Preaching and Preachers.

A minister of the gospel ought to be punctual in all the services under his care and charge. His meeting and greeting should be frank, full and free, but timely, dignified and orderly. A good beginning on time secures confidence. A proper procedure guarantees admiration and praise. To close in season, on the top round of an ascending climax, is a cap sheaf, or a crowning blessing. Personalities seldom, if ever, should be indulged in, either to censure, or eulogize, and damaging comparisons, and sarcastic criticisms, and adverse arraignments of creeds are alike intolerable. The work in hand is affirmative, progressive, uncompromising, irrefutable, and invulnerable. Courtesy, patience, sobriety, constancy, urbanity, faith, hope and charity must attend the banner bearer, as he breaks up the fallow ground, casts abroad the seed, cultivates the field, reaps down and gathers in the golden grain. Petulance, pride, popularity, priestly jealousies, pelf, pomp and power, and all such things ought not to influence or sway a man of God.

A flaming pulpit orator, in the active discharge of his duty, will lose sight of self, his companion, and family, and urge fidelity to God, loyalty to Christ, and integrity to the influences and demands of the Spirit. Noble human examples, experiences, and triumphs are praiseworthy as object lessons, but the wisdom, grace, goodness, love and power of the Lord Jehovah is incomparably grand. An honest inspired heart, with a well-informed mind, bearing a message of light and truth, before an appreciative audience, can tenderly warn the unruly, comfort the feeble, and exhort all to render intelligent service and honorable obedience. The ministerial mind should be a treasury, open volume, and light house of knowledge. With a free distribution of his mental acquisitions and belongings, come growth and development. The more he dispenses abroad the greater his mental horizon; whereas the best native and acquired ability that lays dormant will wane and perish in ignominious obscurity. The ocean's depths are robbed of their glittering pearls, the pick ax and the spade discover the diamond, and endeavor holds aloft the torch of life.

While the good Lord has ever spoken to us through the motions of the heavenly bodies, the diurnal and annual revolutions of the earth; the seed time and harvest; the animal, vegetable and mineral departments of nature; electricity, steam, fire, water, air, magnetism, affinity, repulsion, ether and the action of the five senses; he has decreed to save man through the efficacy and power of a heavenly called, lawfully ordained, divinely inspired, legitimately qualified gospel ministry, as set forth in the Holy Scriptures. To run without tidings; to speak without lief; to minister in the absence of authority; and to execute church rule and government where there is no warrant for such work is all vain indeed! Blind guides, hireling hypocrites, fanatical bigots, presumptuous pretenders, the devil, his angels, and ministers have well nigh clogged the wheels of progress, and choked the avenues of justice. Spiritual quacks, popular frauds, and scheming charlatans manipulate the clamorous to their own financial ease and profit. When their craft, from which they obtain their wealth, is called in question, all hell is full of rage, and the minions of darkness tighten their bans and darken the world. Those who teach and practice to deceive, and for their personal aggrandizement are loth to abandon their errors, and relax their grasp on their votaries from whom they obtain both sympathy and support.

The love of money to obtain prestige, ease, wealth, notoriety and power hath invaded the sacerdotal order, and permeated the zones and nations of the world. Aaron's golden calf hath long disappeared, but the precious metal is in great demand still. Of a certainty the ministry, as well as the laity, should be provident, frugal, industrious, and practice decent economy. To dress in keeping with his calling; to receive a fair compensation for his time and talents, and to see his family have the common comforts and necessities of life is the imperative duty of all that go forth bearing the ark of life and salvation. The deep anxiety, responsible care and intense longings of the traveling eldership cannot be described with tongue or pen. To behold the swelling tumult, and the great avalanche, and the tempestuous uproar of sin, without power to stay, avert or turn the rushing torrent, saddens, sickens and discourages the heart. Were it not that God is at the helm, and Christ Jesus is our sympathizing Savior, and the Holy Spirit is the Comforter and guide, the burden would be unbearable. The forests look dead, and the fields brown and sear in midwinter; but the spring-time resurrects sleeping woods and gray hillsides. A shaft of light from the quiver of the Almighty lifts the gloom and dispels all fears and doubts.

To behold and reflect upon mortal man is akin to the noxious "Blue Peril" weed of Kansas; but to cast our care on the Lord, and commit our all to his loving trust, is like this state emblem, even the sunflower, that harbinger the rising dawn, and bids adieu to the dying day ere the night falls soft over the wide prairies and broad fields of the pulseless land. Thou God seest me said poor Hagar of old. He that calleth to the plow will give soil to the share. The vine dressers will receive of the rich fruitage. The kine turn not the milk in vain; nor yet the bee store the hive without a well defined purpose. The fisherman would not operate in river, lake or sea if the finny tribes were not known. A shy pickerel, pike or salmon may be difficult to take. A coveted prize, precious jewel, good trade, professional skill, or a polished education come not usually by chance; nor yet will ministerial endowment happen to the indolent, careless and unconcerned. Honest integrity, untiring humility; hopeful activity; a fair amount of self-esteem; a vigilant, well balanced mind, with a heart brim full and flowing over with light and truth, yea, even doctrine and duty, are some of the necessary qualifications of a first class gospel orator.

When a servant of the Most High is armed and equipped with inspirational eloquence, it would be sacrilegious blasphemy to call in question or quibble at the facts of the gospel. His terse and cogent reasoning, set out and sent forth in the power, and light of God, exonerates the obedient, and condemns the wicked. The word is ever as a two edged sword, to either save up to life, or remit down to death. It is an antidote to Satanic poison, a panacea for woe, and the leprosy of sin, and the great emancipator for an enfeebled, enslaved world. To magnify the name of the Lord, and to tell of his wondrous works, his precious doctrine must be heralded from zone to zone, and from pole to pole as fast as opportunity offers. O, that our Father would raise up, equip and send forth more laborers armed with his eternal might, to declare his inexorable law of right. If the effectual doors were but open, or even ajar, the asperities of the minister's career would be softened. They have to deal with things largely as they find them, but pray for, and trust in better times ahead. Varying conditions obtain, but it is morally sure that he cannot force himself on a community.

The old, rotten Utah heresies with their lying, lustful missionary satellites, are intensifying the prejudice at a fearful rate in all these parts. The nominal churches are about all closed against us, and the school-houses are following suit. When meetings are announced prejudice and an ignorant indifference runs so very high that but few venture out except the Saints. Empty seats or a few mischievous young people are poor objects to encourage and inspire the speaker.

After the heated term and the busy season is past we look for better attendance. The presidential campaign will militate against the spread of gospel work awhile. Political quibblers and advocates of these secret societies retard the cause of truth. Extremists and ardent adorers in Babylon chime in, while untoward environments abound, and the spirit of war to extermination is ripe in the earth; rapine and fraud, under the title of business, is honored and protected, and morality is away down and spirituality is hardly at half mast; it behooves the church and ministry to exert every faculty, to improve every opportunity to counteract these evil influences, to rescue the perishing and to maintain and vindicate the cause of truth and righteousness.

The watchman from the tower must not be a sleeping sentinel, but sound the warning cry at the approach of the enemy, lest the fair fields and the growing grain would be overrun with tares, and ruin, want and desolation ensue. A broken cistern cannot hold water: an empty purse is a poor showing at a grocer store; an uncultured mind is not the wellspring of wisdom.

A public speaker must be a private thinker. When thoughts are well in hand and properly arranged, methods and manners of delivery will take care of themselves, as also stress, tone, emphasis and gestures whenever and wherever there are occasions to call them into action. The beauty, versatility and power of language, the strength of verbs and the adornment of adjectives will aid, strengthen and equip the speaker for this task. Repetition of words, phrases or sentences are irksome and tasteless, and to strive to copy after or imitate some clergyman or divine is a farce. Comparisons and timely illustrations are legal tender, and ever at par when done in wisdom; honesty and sincerity are important factors.

The speaker should avoid the trivial, all burlesque and the commonplace, and explore in advance. From the caverns of the ocean, amid the isles of the sea, by the gurgling springs and flowing streams, among the flowery plains and plaintive woods, on the evergreen mountains and up to the topmost crags, along the milky way and up to the throne of God the wrestler in divine things can go with an imaginative mind and a stately tread.

When a preacher can move the hearer with the motion of his body, the wave of the hand, and the elegance of speech to alternately laugh and weep, there is rich, powerful variety at hand. A prolude of explanation and apology is worse than wasted, for the hearer is bored, disgusted and tired ere the address proper has fairly begun. As the sculptor sees the statue in the unchiseled stone, and the artist beholds on the plain canvas the beautiful picture, so should the orator bring to view from his vivid mind the temple of argument.

The path of duty is a living way, the highway of political freedom; and religion is a grand boulevard, and the thoroughfare of holiness is the royal road, all of which are open to the march of the good gospel and his associate disciples. Rollin, the erudite French historian, allowed that the power of eloquence was irresistible. Roman orators, Greek philosophers and Oriental savants have swayed largely the destiny of the world; while the young Occidental, in the land of the free, are being heard in the forum, at the bar, in the field, on the stump; great truths of eloquent statesmen have given life, symmetry and beauty to our beloved nation.

This child of freedom hath shaken off the black man's shackles, gone abroad among the islands of the high seas, and is peeping over into China. The preacher, with eagle eye and vigilant watch, avails himself with knowledge of current events, as the Lord breaks down governmental barriers to throw down and demolish if necessary.

May these effectually be thrown wide open so that peoples afar can come to the light and glory of fair Zion, through the power and authority of God's ministers, and be saved up to everlasting life and a fullness of glory for evermore, is the prayer of,

M. T. SHORT.

By Way of Exhortation.

Surely we are living in the time of the end. All nations are at war. The Jews are gathering home. Satan and his hosts, knowing their time to be short, are doing all they can to deceive, lead astray, overcome and destroy.

Let us, as children of the light and Zion's converts, keep ever on our guard, earnestly, prayerfully and trustingly traveling, and battle onward, always ready, willing and obedient, that when the crash of kingdoms, empires and nations occurs, and the inhabitants of Zion only are at peace, that we may be among the favored ones, and joyously welcome the Master's return.

Cancer of the Breast Cured.

Lucerne, Weld Co., Col. Oct. 8th, 1899.

DR. W. O. BYE,

Kansas City, Mo.

Dear Dr.—Please allow me to thank you for what you and your medicine have done for me. I had a very bad cancer in my left breast; had almost given up all hope of being cured, but I am very thankful for your oils for they have cured my breast; the cancer is all out and it is healed nicely. I will gladly recommend your oils to any one suffering as I did. You may use my name and statement if you like, and I will gladly answer all questions about your treatment that any one wishes to ask.

Yours truly,

MRS. W. A. SOUTHARD.

FREE BLOOD CURE.

AN OFFER PROVING FAITH TO SUFFERERS.

Ulcers, cancers, eating sores, painful swellings, effects of blood poison, persistent eruptions, that refuse to heal under ordinary treatment, are quickly cured by B. B. B. (Botanic Blood Balm), made especially to cure all terrible, obstinate, deep-seated blood and skin troubles. Is your blood thin? Are you pale? All run down? Have you eczema? Pimples? Blisters and bumps? Skin or scalp humors? Boils? Eruptions? Skin itches and swollen? Aching bones? Rheumatism? Scrofula? Catarrh? To cure all these blood troubles take B. B. B. (Botanic Blood Balm), because it drains from the blood and entire system all the poisons and humors which cause all of these troubles, and the cause being removed, a permanent cure follows. All the sores heal and new, rich blood is made.

Everyone says that B. B. B. is the most wonderful blood purifier of the age; and no wonder, for it has cured the most deep-seated, obstinate cases (even the most deadly cancer) after doctors and patent medicines had failed. Thoroughly tested for thirty years and never known to fail. Our faith is so great in B. B. B., that we will send to any sufferer a trial bottle free, so that they may test the medicine at our expense. Large bottles for sale at the drug store for $1.00, or six large bottles (full treatment) $5.00. For free trial bottle enclose five cents which pays exact cost of postage (the medicine is free), and address Blood Balm Co., 86 Mitchell St., Atlanta, Georgia, and bottle and medical book will be sent, all charges prepaid. Describe your trouble, and we will include free personal medical advice. Write today.

We still have some copies of the duet, "Evelina Lost," words by Bro. J. Cole Moxon, music by Prof. Leit, price 25 cents, postage paid; better order copies for yourself and friends. It is a souvenir of the little gospel boat and contains a good view of it in the San Francisco harbor.

Broken Brick-Bracs.

Mr. Major, the famous cement man, of New York, explains some very interesting facts about Major's Cement. The multitudes who use this standard article know that it is many hundred per cent better than other cements for which similar claims are made, but a great many do not know why. The simple reason is that Mr. Major uses the best materials ever discovered and other manufacturers do not use them, because they are too expensive and do not allow large profits. Mr. Major tells us that one of the elements of his cement costs $7.25 a pound, and another costs $3.65 a gallon, while a large share of the so-called cements and liquid glue upon the market are nothing more than sixteen-cent glue, dissolved in water or citric acid, and in some cases, altered slightly in color and odor by the addition of cheap and useless materials.

Major's Cement retails at fifteen cents and twenty-five cents a bottle, and when a dealer tries to sell a substitute you can depend upon it that his only object is to make larger profit. The profit on Major's Cement is as much as any dealer ought to make on any cement. And this is clearly true in view of the fact that each dealer gets his share of the benefit of Mr. Major's advertising, which now amounts to over $5,000 a month throughout the country. Established in 1870. Insist on having Major's. Don't accept any off-hand advice from a druggist. If you are at all handy (and you will be likely to find that you are a good deal more so than you imagine) you can repair your rubber boots and family shoes, and any other rubber and leather articles, with Major's Rubber Cement and Major's Leather Cement. And you will be surprised at how many dollars a year you will thus save. If your druggist can't supply you, it will be forwarded by mail; either kind. Free of postage.

JOTS BY THE WAYSIDE.

BY T. W. CHATBURN.

Dear Ensign:—The glorious Fourth has passed leaving its usual casualties, aside from many severe burns and bruises. One young man of 24, while in the bicycle race, collided with the street car, breaking his neck, dying without a word to his weeping wife and child.

The drouth is again on; in southern California many of the dry land ranchers will be compelled to abandon the farm, turning their faces eastward towards the Zionland.

Only for the oil fields which are so rapidly developing now in southern California, money matters would be very tight indeed. Three years of drouth has disposed of all the surplus, and the farmers have nothing to sell.

There is a constant increase in the demand for this oil where manufacturing is carried on; it is cheaper than coal for steam purposes. Twenty-three miles of pipe line would mean 121,000 feet of pipe—2000 feet to the carload, it would take fifty or sixty cars to haul the entire amount needed.

We have our tent pitched at "Orange," where we are holding forth every night to an interested audience. Bro. D. A. Anderson and young wife are with me. D. A. is developing nicely as a speaker, and is a "host" on the singing line. Sr. Anderson is doing her share bravely, operating the organ deftly indeed, and blending her voice with her liege lord, making the singing service a huge success. She will return home in the latter part of August, to again take the school room. D. A. will then be a missionary, instead of a young married man.

CONFERENCE MINUTES.

Northeast Texas and Choctaw district conference held at Manchester, Red River county, Texas, July 28, 1900. Previous to the assembling of Saints the brethren prepared an arbor under which to hold meetings. Saints began to arrive two days previous (28th), and on Friday at 11 a. m. preaching services were begun by Elder D. D. Babcock, of Cove, Arkansas, preaching the introductory discourse. Shortly after noon Bro. Ellis Short, of Independence, Missouri, H. O. Smith, missionary in charge, Earl O. Smith, district president, J. Cole Moxon, district secretary, and Sr. Bailey, of Lamoni, Iowa, arrived on the grounds. Evening preaching by missionary in charge, subject, "Duties of Saints," which was in line of the subject presented in the forenoon discourse.

Saturday 28th, twenty teams on ground. Some few teams camped a short distance out. All came prepared to camp and care for themselves and to extend comfort to others who might not be otherwise cared for.

At 10 a. m. conference called to order by the president, E. A. Bailey. Ministerial reports: H. O. Smith, missionary in charge; High Priest, Ellis Short, also Bishop; J. D. Irwin, of the Seventy. Elders: E. A. Irwin, Peter Adams, D. D. Babcock, J. Cole Moxon and A. Z. Rudd. Four priests, three teachers also reported.

Request presented to conference from the Manchester branch of the church that Bro. P. B. Bussell be ordained an elder. Request received, and by vote was granted. Moved that when this conference adjourns, its next convening be at Cove, Polk county, Arkansas, on December 1st next, at 10 a. m.

After a short intermission audience was again called to order, and Bishop Short addressed the Saints on the subject of "Tithing or the Temporal Law," and gave good instructions, showing the necessity of giving strict heed to the requirements of this law in order that the gospel may be more widely disseminated.

The sermon in the evening was by Elder J. D. Erwin, in his characteristic way. "The Law of the Lord is Perfect Converting the Soul," illustrated on his chart. Good audience in attendance.

Sunday, 29th, met at 9:30 a. m., communion and social services in charge of H. O. Smith and Bishop Short. A very profitable meeting was enjoyed. At 11 a. m. preaching by H. O. Smith. Text, 2 Corinthians 13: 5-6, "Examine yourselves, whether ye be in the faith; prove your own selves," etc. At the close opportunity was given to any wishing to be baptized to make it manifest by rising. About five arose.

At three o'clock social service was held. After a few remarks by E. A. Erwin the meeting was given to the Saints. An hour or more was taken up in prayer and testimony; many comforting and encouraging words expressed, after which Bro. P. B. Bussell was ordained to the office of an elder as per previous arrangement, Bro. H. O. Smith being spokesman. Five children blessed.

Congregation met for the evening service. After the usual opening exercises the missionary in charge gave a most excellent discourse, using all three of the Books to illustrate his subject, thereby disabusing the minds of many of his hearers of false ideas that had been and are still heaped upon the Saints. Closed by singing, "Guide us O thou great Jehovah." Benediction by Bro. Babcock. July 30th, 9 a. m., met on the banks of Pine Creek, as per announcement on previous evening, and after usual opening services and remarks by Elder J. D. Erwin, explanatory of the principle of baptism, seven precious souls were baptized by Elder E. A. Erwin. The audience then returned to the arbor for confirmation services; the missionary in charge gave some excellent instructions and advice in confirming members in the church. Confirmation attended to by Elders Short, J. D. Erwin and Smith in the order as named. Remarks by the bishop regarding his duties.

At the evening service the sermon was by Elder J. Cole Moxon. The preaching was excellent throughout, and we feel assured much good was done. Visitors in attendance departed with a much better understanding of the church and the Saints than when they came. A number of the Saints took their departure homeward Monday, and by Tuesday evening but few remained. It was stated that over five hundred were in attendance on Sunday. No disturbance of any kind. All passed off with perfect tranquility. But little sickness in camp.

Thanks are extended to our Disciple friends for the use of their church seats by which we seated the arbor, and for use of the church house for sleeping apartments, and shelter during the rain, it being in close proximity to the arbor.

Yours for spread of truth, D. D. BABCOCK.

ALUM BAKING POWDERS.

Congress Acting to Suppress Their Sale.

The report of the Senate Committee on Manufactures upon the subject of food adulterations and food frauds has created a sensation in Congress and awakened great interest throughout the country.

If there could be published a list of the names of all articles of food found by the Committee to be adulterated or made from poisonous ingredients, it would be of inestimable value to the public.

The recommendation of the Committee, that the sale of alum baking powders be prohibited by law, will make of special interest the following list of names of baking powders containing alum sold in this vicinity:

- K. C. Contains Alum. Manf. by Jacques Mfg. Co., Chicago.
- LIBERTY BELL. Contains Alum. Manf. by Geo. A. Kennard Grocer Co., St. Joseph.
- CALUMET. Contains Alum. Manf. by Calumet Baking Powder Co., Chicago.
- PERFECT. Contains Alum. Manf. by Perfect Baking Powder Co., St. Louis.
- JACK FROST. Contains Alum. Manf. by Bain & Chapman Mfg. Co., St. Louis.
- BON BON. Contains Alum.

It is unfortunate that many manufacturers of alum baking powders, even some in the above list, falsely state that their powders do not contain alum. It is only right that consumers should have correct information as to the character of every article of food offered to them.

Conference Notices.

The semi-annual conference of the New York district will convene with the Broad River Saints, at Broad River, Connecticut, September 1, 2, 1900. All members of the priesthood are requested to be present, and also to report as provided for by our last conference. It is desired that all attend who can; bring the Spirit of the Master with you, that we may have a time of rejoicing and refreshing from the Lord.

ALBERT E. STONE, Pres. SAMUEL GUYFORY, Sec.

The conference for the Southern Nebraska district will convene with the Hebron branch, some four or five miles south or southeast of the town of Hebron, Sunday and Monday, September the 8th and 10th. Presidents and secretaries of branches will please take notice and have their reports ready, also a full report of the ministry is desired and expected. Members will come prepared to act in the matter of the proposed change in the boundary line of the district, on the north. Come and act intelligently.

J. W. WALDSMITH, Pres. of Dist. NEBRASKA CITY, Neb., Aug. 9.

The Independence, Missouri, district conference will convene at Armstrong, Kansas, September 8, 9, 10, 1900, at 10 a. m. sharp. Officers for the ensuing term are to be elected and many other matters of importance are to be considered and a good representation from every branch in the district is earnestly desired.

Would like to have branch clerks to mail their statistical reports and credentials so as to reach me at least two days before the convening of conference. Would also like to have all members holding the priesthood mail their reports to me at least three days before conference, so that I will have time to arrange my work systematically, and by so doing avoid all unnecessary delays and confusion during our conference session.

In bonds, D. ROBERT WINN, Sec. 2448 Chesnut Ave., Kansas City, Mo. August 6.

Convention Notices.

The Des Moines district Sunday Schools have arranged to meet in convention August 31st, the first day of the district reunion, at Colfax, Iowa. Let those who are interested in this part of the Master's work be on the grounds Thursday evening preceding the convention.

A great deal of special work has been planned along Sunday School lines to be accomplished during the reunion. Let each one discharge his personal responsibility, and our schools will receive such impetus as was never before known in the district.

Among the questions to be discussed are: "Is the Sunday School work as important to the church as the preaching of the word?" "The pupil's part in the Sunday School?" "Would a good library increase the interest and attendance of the Sunday School?" "Is it right to hold festivals, suppers and sociables to raise money for Sunday School purposes?"

There will be a literary and musical entertainment Friday evening, August 31st. Let each one come prepared to assist, and if possible notify the secretary in advance as to what part you will take so that the program may be partly arranged.

The superintendents of schools will please see that the secretary fills out properly in every particular the blank report sent them and returns it to the secretary several days prior to the convention.

H. A. MCCOY, Supt. Perry, Iowa. BESSY RICHESON, Sec. State Center, Ia. STATE CENTRE, Ia., Aug. 6.

The Sunday School convention of the New York district will convene at Broad River, Connecticut, September 3, 1900, at 10 a. m. All those interested in this department of the work will please favor us with their presence, and come prepared to talk upon matters pertaining to the growth and development of this work as we feel that our heavenly Father has as great a desire that this work should prosper as any other branch of church work. Come and let us reason together.

A. E. STONE, Supt., VIOLET E. SQUIRE, Asst. Supt.

DIED. TANNEBILL.—At Kansas City, Missouri, July 12, 1900, Lavina Tannehill, infant daughter of Bro. Clark and Sr. Anna Tannehill, aged 2 months; born May 17th and blessed by Elders Joseph Emmett and M. B. Williams. Interment at Blairstown, Missouri.

THIN

Lots of people have thin hair. Perhaps their parents had thin hair; perhaps their children have thin hair. But this does not make it necessary for them to have thin hair.

HAIR

One thing you may rely upon—

AYER'S Hair Vigor

makes the hair healthy and vigorous; makes it grow thick and long. It cures dandruff also. It always restores color to gray hair,—all the dark, rich color of early life. There is no longer need of your looking old before your time.

$1.00 a bottle. All druggists.

"As a remedy for restoring color to the hair I believe Ayer's Hair Vigor has no equal. I have always given it perfect satisfaction in every way."

Mrs. A. M. STRONG, Aug. 18, 1898. Hammondsport, N.Y.

Write the Doctor.

"He will send you a book on the Hair and Scalp free, and request if you do not obtain the benefits you expected from the use of the Vigor to write about it."

HEALINGS.

It is astonishing how many methods for healing the sick have sprung into existence since the tidings were first heralded abroad through the prophet, Joseph Smith, in 1830, that the gospel with all its ancient privileges and prerogatives was again restored to earth; and that through obedience to its laws and ordinances all men might now be partakers of those blessings which the Saints anciently enjoyed. Among those gospel gifts manifested and bestowed upon God's children who were thus obedient, was the heaven-ordained authority to lay hands upon the sick for their recovery.

From all classes, almost—particularly from religious circles—persistent opposition to the correctness of this tenet has continued until the present; but notwithstanding these evidences of disapproval, the ambassadors of Christ have moved forward in harmony with the gospel plan, and the sick have been, and still are being, healed under this divine provision of the heavenly Father which was made a part of His gospel plan and one of its ordinances.

The continued preaching of this doctrine and the marvels of results so often obtained, set many individuals to thinking, until they have come to recognize that the Scriptures justify those who accept them as a rule of action, in the exercise of the belief that God will heal the sick if they have faith to take Him at His word. But thousands who now accept the doctrine of divine healing of the sick would not humble themselves to obey the gospel under divine appointment as restored through God's servant in 1830, but have gone about to obtain results in some other way, just as they have in seeking salvation, until, today we have Christian Scientists, Faith Healers, Holiness people, Magnetic Healers, Suggestive Therapeutics, etc., all more or less claiming to work under recognition of the Almighty. It is of this class of "workers" that we desire to offer some thoughts.

There is no doubt that these individuals draw whatever of divine authority they think necessary to their success, from the words of the Savior and His apostles, though they will not honor God in obeying the gospel as it has been revealed. It is apparent from the Scriptures that this same class existed and operated right in the days of the Savior and His apostles; for on one occasion the disciples came to Jesus with this report:

Master, we saw one casting out devils in thy name, and he followeth not us; and we forbade him, because he followeth not us. But Jesus said, Forbid him not: for there is no man which shall do a miracle in my name, that can speak evil of me. For he that is not against us is on our part. For whosoever shall give you a cup of water to drink in my name, because ye belong to Christ, verily I say unto you, he shall not lose his reward.—Mark 9: 38-41.

While this individual was not even a member of the church of the Savior and His apostles, yet from the results that seemed to be manifest, he must have been laboring with a pure purpose and a good principle—the desire to benefit others—for the apostles said, "We saw one casting out devils in thy name," so that he must surely have relieved those who were possessed of evil spirits. It did not, in this instance, detract from the merit of the result that it was done through one who followed not the Master; for it will be recognized that after all it was God who gave the blessing; no individual possesses in himself the power to effectively command the evil ones, hence, the good accomplished was not of man, but of God.

Because one may be permitted to manifest power in performing good works does not in any sense make him the sole possessor or owner of that power or its benefits. He simply makes use of that which already exists; he has not invented it, nor is it peculiar to him alone, for hundreds have probably used it before and may use it after he is forgotten among men, or, at least, is only a memory. All good is from God, and if He chooses to permit, at times, some who are not identified with His church, to make use of this good for the benefits of others, who shall say him nay? It is a foregone conclusion that whosoever is permitted to work a miracle in the name of Christ, doing it with a pure purpose, will never be found antagonizing that part of the gospel economy. Paul once wrote:

Some indeed preach Christ even of envy and strife; and some also of good will. What then? Notwithstanding, every way, whether in pretense or in truth, CHRIST IS PREACHED, and I therein do rejoice, yea and will rejoice.—Phil. 1: 15, 18.

Nothing narrow about Paul's views; Christ was preached and men's duty to Him was made plain; if they did not obey the true gospel condemnation would follow, for every individual is responsible for the truth and the light received, no matter from what source it may come to him; originally it came from God, it still belongs to Him, and all will have to give a good account of the use made of it. Alma, one of the high priests of Book of Mormon times, thus wrote:

I say unto you, that whatsoever is good, cometh from God, and whatsoever is evil cometh from the devil; therefore, if a man bringeth forth good works, he hearkeneth unto the voice of the good shepherd; and he doth follow him; but whosoever bringeth forth evil works, the same becometh a child of the devil; for he hearkeneth unto his voice, and doth follow him.—Alma 3: 55, (Large Ed.)

Mormon, many years after, gives the same testimony:

For behold, a bitter fountain cannot bring forth good water; neither can a good fountain bring forth bitter water; wherefore a man being the servant of the devil, cannot follow Christ; and if he follow Christ, he cannot be a servant of the devil. Wherefore, all things which are good, cometh of God; and that which is evil, cometh of the devil. For the devil is an enemy unto God, and fighteth against him continually; and in witteth and enwitteth to slay and to do that which is evil continually.—Mormon 7: 8, 9, (Large Ed.)

The most skillful physician or surgeon living is only proficient because he has used the intelligence given him in acquiring the use of the truths which existed thousands of years before he knew anything from a human standpoint; hence, the only honor attaching to his possession of those qualities so essential to his success is that which is due to honest, intelligent and hard work in correctly applying the knowledge and understanding in his profession which he has secured. The glory belongs to God as the author of the blessings of life, and the remedies which may be used to sustain it. No one, however, envies or feels jealous of the good which a successful and efficient practitioner accomplishes; but notwithstanding he does good, he is not a competent authority in spiritual matters, except as he may himself be a follower of Christ. And it is just so of Christian Scientists, Magnetic Healers, etc., etc., while they possibly may do good in one direction they are not the exclusive owners of that good; they have nothing pertaining to the welfare of mankind, which the gospel of Jesus Christ as restored to earth in these latter days does not now—today—offer to those who obey it; not one blessing; but they may have very many things which are absolutely injurious to the spiritual interests of the individual; notably where they deny the efficacy or necessity of obedience to the commandments of the Lord, such as baptism in water for the remission of sins, laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost, necessity for prayer and a righteous life, love to God and man, etc.

The Saints should be broad enough to recognize the good in all phases of life; but that in no wise commits them to the necessity of accepting the follies and vagaries and errors that may be practiced in connection with the good manifest. It is well to bear in mind that all benefits to be derived from any method outside of the gospel plan and authority, relate solely to relieving the physical man, and are temporal in their nature; hence, it is not wise to submit one's intelligence and sympathy to the faulty theories advanced simply because they may have power, either through the name of Jesus Christ or otherwise, to heal the body. The gospel is perfectly formed to meet every requirement of man physically and spiritually, and those Saints who put their trust in other than the gospel ordinances, the means which have been ordained and provided of God for the blessing of His children, are placing their faith more in the instrumentality of men, than in the power of God.

Obeys the gospel, live humbly, in righteousness and faithfulness, and everything that is needful for peace and salvation, not only possible of attainment by other means, but those which are not possible of realization in any other way, will be secured.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

BRO. GEO. H. HILLIARD, of the bishopric, reports the Saints' reunion in Massachusetts a success. Along with other encouraging work at the reunion, subscription of $310 for college, part of which was from outside the church membership. The eastern Saints are far away from the place where our college is located and the best of schools and colleges at their doors as it were, and yet they readily lend a helping hand to the educational work of the church. This is in keeping with the progressive and wide awake spirit of the New Englander. We expected as much. Bro. Hilliard has appointments ahead as follows: Sunday, August 19th, Boston; 26th, Dixfield, Maine; September 1st and 2d, conference at Lamone, western Maine; September 8th and 9th, Indian River, Maine, eastern district conference; Stonington, Deer Isle, Maine, September 16th. After September 16th he will return to Massachusetts and Rhode Island, visiting Providence, Fall River and other points as per future arrangements.

ELDER F. M. SLOVER, an active, energetic and faithful missionary, has an "open letter to Elder Isaac Hill" in another column of this issue, which we give our readers at Bro. Slover's request. We are, however, not partial to this manner of controversy for the reason that it reaches but a very small number of the readers of the opposition paper, and occupies space that might be used to better advantage in promulgating the doctrines of Christ. There may be occasional times where it is necessary for the integrity of some local interests of the work that some notice be taken of unfair attacks, and where this kind of a reply is the only means of placing one's self upon record; and this is evidently an instance of this character, but the less we have of it, we think, the better. We might easily give a great part of our space each issue in replying to slanders and unfair articles which are constantly being published by the enemies of this work, but it would not be profitable in the sense of preaching the gospel; particularly as the great majority of readers of the periodicals publishing such articles would never see or hear of these answers. We therefore use our space to better purpose we think, and the results are justifying the correctness of this view.

This will therefore explain why we fail to make editorial notice of such articles sent us from time to time.

We gave our readers last week a pathetic and touching letter from Sr. Jennie Page, formerly of Evergreen, Alabama, lately from Tuscaloosa Hospital, in which it seems, so far as human and medical skill can see and avail, she has but a short time this side the veil. Sr. Page has been remarkably patient, uncomplaining, bright and cheerful under the severe experiences to which her malady has subjected her, and has been, it seems, untiring, as opportunity and strength permitted, in her efforts to brighten the lives of other unfortunate and afflicted ones, as well as those enjoying the priceless boon of health; explaining to them the principles of her faith, the gospel of Jesus Christ, reading from her papers, loaning them, and in every legitimate manner at her command, endeavoring to truly win them to Christ. She has been blessed in this work though denied the gift of health, and has brightened the burdened life of a number of the afflicted. We may not be permitted to know this side of the day when all things shall be revealed, why restoration to health is not permitted this dear sister, whose life in the church has been so fruitful in good works, but it will be made apparent some time that our heavenly Father acted justly and wisely. But of her it may be truly said, "She hath done what she could," and long after her life work is completed and she is enjoying the bliss of the paradise of God, and the associations of the good, the noble and pure there, the work that she hath wrought will testify of her devotion to God and the principles of His truth, and in the day of final accounts, some will rise up to call her blessed. The time is short, very short, when our blessed Lord will come triumphantly with all his saints, and in the brightness of his glorious presence shall the Saints again enjoy the beauties of the grand earth-mother, resplendent in all that makes man blessed; when sickness, pain and distress will be unknown to the faithful. May we all, as we feel assured our sister will, be prepared to share in this glorious condition.

STOCK LIMITED.

Those who wish to secure a copy of our Historical Engraving should send in their orders at once as we have only a few copies left. While they last we will let them go at the special price of 25 cents, on the following conditions:

To those who remit their subscription to the ENSIGN one year in advance we will send a copy of our Historical Engraving for 25 cents; that is, for $1.25 we will send the ENSIGN for one year and a copy of the engraving. This picture sells at 50 cents each and is the same which we formerly sold at 75 cents.

This offer applies to either renewals or new subscriptions. If, however, any one secures a subscription from another party, they, as well as the subscriber, will be entitled to the picture at 25 cents each, but in order to secure it at this price the order must be accompanied by the amount to pay ENSIGN subscription one year in advance, and 25 cents for each copy of the engraving; otherwise the regular price of 50 cents will be required to obtain it. The size of this Engraving is 20x28 inches, and it contains photos of the members of the Quorum of Twelve; the standing High Council; the seven presidents of Seventies; seven brethren representing the different priesthoods in the church; the martyrs, Joseph and Hyrum Smith; the present president and patriarch of the church; the Bishopric; the three witnesses to the Book of Mormon; the church recorder, secretary and librarian; the Saint's Home; GraceLand College; the Nauvoo and Kirtland temples; the Hill Cumorah; the Temple Lot; the Saints' church at Independence and the church at Lamoni, etc.; in all, sixty-eight pictures artistically grouped in one. If you want one, send your order at once; if you delay you may not be able to obtain it at any price.

We send with every picture a key which explains it throughout. Address all orders to ENSIGN PUBLISHING HOUSE, Independence, Mo.

INDEPENDENCE.

Sr. A. H. Parsons and daughter returned home Tuesday evening.

Sr. Vida Elvin, of the Herald office force, is visiting Sr. J. W. Luff, her sister, and family, during the reunion.

No services in the church next Sunday, or Sunday following. Everybody go to the reunion at Washington Park.

Bro. and Sr. F. M. Pitt and two children are "vacationing" in Independence, and will join in the services of the reunion.

Bro. and Sr. W. H. Mills arrived home from Colorado, Wednesday afternoon, looking brown and feeling well after their outing experiences.

Srs. Fannie and Tessie Williamson, who have been recuperating in Colorado, returned home last week somewhat benefited. Colorado seems to be a favorite with those who feel the need of a change of air and scenery.

Bishop Gay and his counselors, Brn. Pease and W. N. Robinson, were in council all last Sunday afternoon. The bishop reports a profitable session. It was the first meeting of the bishopric of the Independence district.

Bro. J. C. Foss preached Sunday morning at Chelsea Park, Kansas, and attended the social meeting. In the evening he preached at Armstrong, enjoying good liberty at both places. Next Sunday he expects to be at St. Joseph.

Branch business meeting in the church Monday, September 2d. Every member of the branch who can make it possible to attend should be present; delegates will have to be elected to district conference with Armstrong branch, Kansas City, Kansas, September 8th and 9th. Keep this in mind.

Sr. Lucy Hamilton is quite ill with stomach trouble, and an operation was to have been performed Wednesday morning. She has been more or less afflicted with this malady all her life, but it has grown worse until during last week she was unable to leave her bed, and could not partake of nourishment except to a very limited extent. We hope she may have a speedy recovery.

Sunday was clear and warm, but the services were fairly well attended, notwithstanding the elevation of the temperature. Bro. W. H. Garrett was the speaker in the morning, and Bro. R. M. Elvin preached a good sermon at the evening hour. A number of prominent residents of the city were present at the latter service. There was an excellent spirit at the 2:30 p. m. communion service, and all present were edified and cheered.

Bro. J. A. Robinson, Sr., occasionally gets to spend a Sunday with family and friends here, but he has, with many others, a very busy life in gospel as well as secular lines. It would be a difficult matter to tell how many have heard the gospel message through Bro. John A., or how far the circling of the waves have reached which have been started by his efforts. There seems to be nothing which gives him keener delight than to talk the gospel to any who will listen.

Conveyances will be at the church next Sunday morning at 8:30 to take those of the Sunday School children who wish to go that way to the exercises at the park at 9:30. The schools of the Kansas Citys will also join in the service and a very interesting session will be the result. Get there on time, children. Be sure to be at the church not later than half past eight Sunday morning if you wish to go in the conveyance there. Competent parties will be in charge to take care of the children.

Bro. Frank Criley, formerly business manager of Herald Publishing House, is now engaged in the business of pictorial advertising and sign work with Brn. G. H. Hulmes and Victor Kress, in Kansas City, he being business manager, and they are all meeting with deserved success. Bro. Frank takes hold as if born to the business and is well pleased with his new line of work. Bro. B. F. Hulmes, of Kirtland, an expert sign writer, is also with them, and is doing some fine work, adding his share to the success of the firm, as is also Bro. Kern in the artist department of which Bro. Kress is chief. The firm's work is highly complimented and admired by every one.

CHICAGO, ILLINOIS.

Branch headquarters, 716 W. Van Buren St. Sunday meetings 2:45 and 7:45 p. m.; Day Mission, 3411 Cottage Grove Ave., 10:45 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.; West Pullman branch, 748 119th St., 10:30 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.; 508 W. 37th St. (Colored mission), 10:30 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.

Our indefatigable Bro. F. M. Pitt, with Sadie and Willie and our pet Ada, start at two o'clock today for Independence, Missouri, to attend the reunion and rusticate for a few days in Zion. We wish them a safe journey and sure return.

Bro. R. N. Burwell will spend his well earned vacation at Five Lakes, Michigan, whence his family has preceded him. R. N. is one of our standbys.

Bro. G. H. Henley has returned from a short missionary tour in the district, reporting hot weather and successful meetings. He will soon be out again at work. His appointment may become permanent.

Bro. C. E. Hubacher and wife Minna are the guests of the elder and wife at this writing. They come from the faithful, sacrificing ones of the band of Saints at St. Joseph, Missouri, and bring gladness and good cheer into our household. They will return tonight to their Missouri home.

Cards are out announcing the wedding of our esteemed young sister, Grace May Williams to Mr. W. Arthur Webster, an estimable young man; the wedding to occur at her home, 89 Bryan Place, Chicago, August 25, 1900, 7:30 p. m.

Sr. Braidwood and Sr. Mamie Pitt have both returned from their visit to Kansas City. While they speak well of Zion, yet they are delighted to return to loved ones at home.

Bro. John C. Hitchcock was in our city and attended the services at headquarters, giving the Religio a good talk and the Saints a good sermon. Come again Bro. John, we will try to be at home next time.

Brn. E. J. Lang and Francis Earl occupied at the mission yesterday morning and evening. Bro. Earl and Bro. Hitchcock at 716 Van Buren street.

In the last year this branch alone has paid in $345.76 tithing, beside keeping up local rents and other expense to the amount of about four hundred dollars. We find twenty-eight different names on our tithing book. There is beside this a vast amount of local gospel work done in street preaching, in the Sunday School and Religio works. Certainly such sacrifices and efforts will bring a rich reward if we hold out to the end, and that is the determination of the Saints.

Bro. E. E. Johnson is resting quite easy, though very weak. General health of Saints good.

Your brother,

J. M. TERRY.

395 Ogden Ave., Aug. 20.

ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI.

Many of us are pining for the cool weather enjoyed at the reunion; weather is intensely hot, and we wish for a heavy rain.

In our last we neglected to mention that Bro. Geo. Hilliard was one of the speakers at the reunion; he treated us to several rousing sermons and made friends for himself with outsiders who were camping with us.

Bro. Allen said yesterday that it was his opinion it would be necessary to do some night work in order to get the new church ready for occupancy Sunday, September 2d. Efforts are being made to have it all in good shape for that date.

There's a promise of wedding bells in the near future. Guess?

The Religio, Thursday night, was well attended; escaping from the heated house to the front steps, some time was spent in social converse.

J. C. Hitchcock went to Chicago Friday evening on business; he expected to visit with the Saints there on Sunday.

Bro. Arthur Allen was the speaker afternoon and evening, at Cheltenham, Sunday. A good sized audience greeted him at the evening service.

Mite Society meeting Monday of this week, at the home of Sr. Burgess.

Mrs. Crawford and family have removed from this place to Collinsville, Illinois, joining Mr. Crawford who has secured lucrative employment there. Many of the young people regret Miss Crawford's departure, while our own little son grieved bitterly over the loss of his little playmate, Pearl. Bro. Charley Pent's family removed some little time since to Lamoni, Iowa.

August 21.

We still have some copies of the duet, "Evanelia Lost," words by Bro. J. Cole Moxon, music by Prof. Leib, price 25 cents, postage paid; better order copies for yourself and friends. It is a souvenir of the little gospel boat and contains a good view of it in the San Francisco harbor.

LETTER DEPARTMENT.

WILLIAMS BAY, Wis., Aug. 15.

Dear Ensign:—We greatly appreciate your weekly visits along with the Autumn Leaves and Herald. In the ENSIGN we find so many inspired articles, letters, essays, and sermons which are spiritual food indeed; encouraging and soul satisfying.

We are, with the Master's help, striving to magnify our office and calling. And so immediately after our June conference, as president of the district, in company with Bro. W. P. Rublison, assistant president, we concluded to take a tour through the district, and at once set about it. We called on the Saints at Lyons, stopping over Sunday, holding two meetings; we found the Saints alive to the work, and also remembered our needs. From there we went to Janesville and got the district tent ready to ship to Bro. Sawley at Soldiers' Grove. While there we stopped at Bro. O. N. Dutton's who always has an eye single to the latter day work. And as we were about ready to start on our journey Bro. D. said, "Brethren, I see you need a horse and buggy to travel with so as to be able to reach the homes of the Saints in many parts of the district, and so there is old Jack in the barn, you're welcome to use him this summer."

We at once arranged to put Jack into the missionary work; and so in a short time we were on our way. Calling at Lima we found the Saints striving to do the Master's will; and then on to Wilder where we found a little band of Saints with our bishop's agent, C. C. Hoague, at the head, each one trying to hold on to the rod of iron; a good spirit was present. From there we went to the Oregon branch: the Saints are so scattered here that it is hard to get together for meetings, but held one meeting and all seemed blessed. Our next point was Madison; held a few meetings there. The most of the Saints there are faithful, but sorry to say that some are not; we are sorry to learn that some will give their time and money for that which destroys life and is degrading to man; we hope for the better.

We next called at the home of Sr. Loveland, at Bellville; she is an aunt to Bro. H. A. Stebbins. Although we found her an invalid and in bed yet she was pleased to see us, and at her request we administered to her, asking the good Master to bless her in her old age and affliction. She is a faithful Saint, so is also her daughter who cares for her. At Argyle we called on Bro. and Sr. Gregory, who are alive in the work, though miles from other Saints. They take and read the church papers, and wherever we found the Saints doing that we found them keeping pace with the work.

From there we went to Yellowstone, where we found a few families of Saints. Some are doing well in the work, others lack energy and push; as we could not get a place in which to hold meetings, we visited them and encouraged them what we could. Next we called on the Saints at Adamsville, and held some meetings. A good time was enjoyed, and the Saints were kind, as also the friends.

We were invited to attend a picnic gathering of the 4th of July, and were also requested to give them a talk which we did, telling them of the day and its object; we will long remember their kindness to us; they gave us needful assistance to help us on our way.

The next day found us on our way calling at the home of Bro. Anderson, at Livingston, who also made us feel at home. May God bless such noble Saints. We called at the home of Bro. John Blackburn, at Lancaster. Here the elders are always made welcome which many can truly say. Soon we were on our way to the Buckridge branch where we found the president (Bro. Henry Dubon) and the few Saints ready to care for us and ready for some meetings. We stopped with them a few days, and we hope good was done. We hope some will strive to be more faithful.

tered, but we held forth over Sunday to quite a good turnout, and called at the homes of many; a good spirit was enjoyed, but we are sorry to see that some are not living as they should so as to be a light in the hands of the Master for the good of his work. That faithful Bro. James Edgington saw that "old Jack" needed his shoes reset so it was not long until Jack was in the shop; the Lord will bless such brethren for their deeds of kindness. There are others, we regret to know, who seem to live for self and self alone. Calling at Bro. Blackburn's again, we found that Mrs. Blackburn and Myrtle had our washing done, and we were soon on our way. We called on Bro. Dodge and family and stopped over night with them and found them firm in the work. Bro. Dodge saw that Jack was in need of a net so that the flies would not annoy both horse and driver, so Bro. Dodge saw that Jack had a new net. On we went, putting up that night at Bro. John Anderson's; here, to our surprise, found Bro. Sawley and E. M. Wildermuth and his faithful wife with the district tent. The writer was invited to speak that night, and did so with good interest. We believe that Bro. S. and W. and Sr. Jane make a good tent force, and we hope they will be blessed this season.

We called on the Saints of the Wheatville branch, stopping over two Sundays; held what meetings we could, and visited the Saints; held one business meeting; some officers were elected, and some corrections were made in the manner of administering the sacrament. I hope the error may not occur again. It is always wise for the brethren to stand by the law of God; it is the only safe way in all things; we will long remember the Saints of that part of the district, and also the many friends.

We next called on Bro. Carl W. Lange; no doubt, many of the brethren and sisters will remember him; he labored so long and faithfully in the work in an early day, traveling many miles on foot to tell the gospel story, but now confined to his bed, and has been for over one year. Still he loves to talk of the work, and is alive in it, and only waiting to be called home. We next called at Willow Creek, where we found some of the old Saints; among the rest was old Sr. Wildermuth, almost ninety years of age, and came into the work in an early day. She is as firm as the rocks, and she too is only waiting the call, "Come home."

Stopping on our way at Sr. Lee's, and then on to North Freedom, we found that Bro. Hackett had arranged for some meetings. We held forth over Sunday; not many out to hear, but the good Spirit was present, and may God bless the brother and family. The next day we called at Madison, speaking to a few that evening; the weather was very hot.

Then we turned our faces homeward, arriving August 8th; the writer did not find his family very well, two boys being sick, but today they are better, for which we give God the praise.

We had traveled almost six hundred miles through sunshine and rain. Have felt blessed in the work and hope good was done. I have found in Bro. Robinson a faithful laborer, one willing to do all he can to assist others to see the light, and he has made many friends; we hope he may continue faithful.

The work is onward in some places, and in others the work moves slowly because the Saints are slow to hearken to the word of the Lord. May the time come when the Saints will be more faithful. But we will try to labor on for the upbuilding of this great latter day work.

In bonds,
W. A. McDOWELL.

FAIRFIELD, Neb., Aug. 12.

Editor Ensign:—I started from home on the 6th of July for Wilber, Nebraska, to hold two days meetings; stopped off at Brownville, preached to the Saints and organized a Sunday School. In care of Sr. Moore; started for Wilber next day and found the Saints alive and working; their church looks fine, having painted and papered it throughout; they are going to make other improvements; met with them Saturday and Sunday and the good Spirit was present to comfort and instruct.

Went to Dale, visited the Saints, found them in the faith and busy with harvest; all spoke cheerfully of the work. I next went to Western to hold over Sunday, found Bro. Wm. Broilair contending for the faith once delivered to the Saints, and with the assistance of the family, held five preaching services; good was done and the word from outsiders was, "Come again and visit me." My next stop was Hebron; found all well and cheerful over the good rains that had come on 15th, which they needed very much; preached three times to Saints and others.

Bro. Porter and I opened up the services for a two days' meeting at Fairfield next, the brethren from Shelton were there; we had a good attendance and the Spirit was with us for our good; we were comforted and cheered.

We are having heavy rains in western Nebraska, and all the farmers feel good as the corn will make quite a crop. Bro. and Sr. Jarrad are talking of moving to Independence, Missouri, this fall, as they have sold out in Nebraska. We don't like to lose them in this district, we will feel the loss, as they are good Saints and worthy of the good will and confidence of all Saints, and will help the cause of Christ wherever they go; wish we had more such. Love to all Saints.

In gospel bonds,
W. M. SELF.

WILKESVILLE, O., Aug. 11.

Editor Ensign:—After tarrying a week with the Saints of Creola, enjoying with them the exercises of Children's day, we accompanied Bro. S. J. Jeffers that evening to his home, some fifteen miles in the direction of the Vales Mills branch, of which he is presiding officer. Remaining till Saturday we went to Alice to be with Bro. A. B. Kirkendall, president of the Creola branch, in a contemplated controversy with one Rev. Lee, of the Methodist Protestant church, which had been agreed upon partly through Bro. D. J. Lambert, of Alice. The controversy was not arranged in the customary form of discussion, but in the manner of reply to each preceding dissertation. Bro. Kirkendall leading out on the church in harmony with the New Testament pattern, his opponent being unwilling to debate the questions of the two churches in the more usual manner. When the time came for the work to begin Rev. Lee was (as we learned it) informed by his congregation that if he went on with this controversy he did it at the risk of his "job," and, as he was "under contract," the discussion "went by default" for his sake.

Sunday afternoon Bro. Kirkendall presented to a full house of attentive listeners, in a most effective manner, the outline of the kingdom of God, not once referring to his expected opponent nor his church, after explaining to the congregation why the debate was "declared off." At evening the Saints (preachers and a number of members present, some from Creola) all attended Rev. Lee's meeting, only to sit there and be ridiculed and slandered without any opportunity for defense, and that too, after one of the leading actors in the opposition to the debate had promised that no such attack would be allowed. Suffice it to say that Bro. A. B. acquitted himself in his defense before a full house the following evening.

The writer remained, preaching only once in the same place because of very few being out. We repaired to a school-house, a mile and a half or more distant, where a good audience had greeted us on Saturday night and Sunday morning. Remaining a week had a fair hearing, to which we returned two weeks later for three services, in the meantime holding a short series some four miles easterly from Radcliff. The attendance here was gratifying and the interest encouraging.

After returning the second time from Alice we held a series of eight-teen meetings in a house not previously occupied by the Saints, yet at no great distance from the Vales Mills branch, resulting in: the baptism of four, all of whom have long been acquainted with the latter day work. One lady, having resolved to be baptized without further delay, on the way to the Monday night meeting, with two little children, one in her arms, sat it down on the ground while she looked out the place for her own baptism, not knowing that any others were contemplating baptism. Coming on to meeting, change of apparel ready, made request before service desiring to go to the water directly from the meeting. Opportunity being given at the close for any who wished to follow Christ to manifest it by rising, she led the way, when three others quickly followed the example. Nearly all the congregation went with us to the water where, by the cheerful moonlight, these precious souls entered the fold of Jesus. Confirmation followed the next evening, and the following day the blessing of this sister's two children.

Closing the work at that place on Wednesday evening for the present, with promise to return after a short series at the place at which we write, work was begun here the next evening with fair audience and good attention. The writer is comfortably domiciled with Bro. and Sr. Arlington, who were in servitude before the rebellion, and are now rejoicing in their emancipation and knowledge of the restored gospel.

Yours in the work,
O. B. THOMAS.

VIOLA, Wis., Aug. 11.

Editor Zion's Ensign:—Will you publish these lines in regard to Sr. Catharine H. Whiteaker's baptism and restoration to health, I being the one who baptized her, as her restoration to health is one of the most remarkable cases on record. Through Bro. C. Hovey's letter in the Saints' Herald I took the notion to go to Osseo, which I accomplished under considerable difficulties and obstacles, depending, as usual, on "stank points" and perseverance.

The "Mormon" elders' arrival was duly circulated, and many were the interviews with the curious ones; speaking on the gifts of healing, two females were anxious to be sick for the fun of the laying on of hands; they took sick, one died in the course of a week; no interdiction against that honorable name then.

I was requested to visit Mrs. Whiteaker, laid up for eighteen months with tumors in her womb, given up by the best medical talents as incurable. I called upon her and found her in a very pitiable condition, emaciated to a skeleton, unable to get out of bed and suffering great agonies continually.

The prayers of different denominations meeting with her, produced no effects whatever; while the preachers informed her that the gospel gifts were all done away and no more needed; she wished it was otherwise. I told her plainly the demand of the gospel upon her, and the promise of the same to her, even to the complete restoration of her health; and although a great pressure was exerted upon her by her religious friends, she concluded to be immersed in ice cold water (which they said would surely kill her), trusting in the God of her salvation.

Two men, John Spaulding and Chas. Oliver, carried her on an armchair to the water, bringing her into the water, and after immersing they took her to the chair, after which I baptized those two men; then they took up the chair to take her to the house but she bade them to put down the chair, got up and then walked to the house, which was a great surprise indeed.

At the evening meeting she had to get up and walk, she was completely restored to a new body and eyesight. It created a great excitement in that whole section of country, and various were the opinions. The church people attributed the same to the devil, while the skeptics and infidels said it was of divine Providence; it was published in a Templeman paper.

Her husband (a U. B.) stood yet undecided, requiring a special testimony for himself, and praying for the same. He dreamt that he was in a large building full of people; the door opened and a small but fierce looking tiger entered, when in the wildest commotion and terror the people rushed out of the building, and a voice spoke, that as nothing could prevail against the tiger, so nothing could prevail against the latter day work. This dream was repeated, only the second tiger was a larger one but not as fierce looking as the first, and he heard the same voice and words as before. The next morning when telling the dream he said, the first tiger is you, but who is the second tiger?

The Adventists had sent for their preacher, a large man, to butt against me; but Mr. Whiteaker concluded that he could not be the second tiger as the first one got the advantage over him, and at the arrival of Bro. White he was willing to be baptized as he was the second tiger, and he was baptized.

Sr. Whiteaker and Bro. John Spaulding went to see her daughters near Menominee, and through her testimony and the preaching of Bro. Spaulding twenty-two were baptized. A couple of years thereafter I rode over (on shank's ponies) to see them, but the branch was broken up (by selecting an Adventist their president, the doctrines got mixed up and the sheep scattered).

The impression made at Crawford among the Whiteakers is greatly due to Sr. Catharine and Elder Wm. Savage.

I am now seventy-six years and six months old, confined to my bed these last eighteen months with Bright's disease, so-called. For forty-six years I have been known and called a Mormon, but I have never objected to it as long as I endorse the Book of Mormon.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Aug. 12.

Editor Ensign:—It is with a sad heart that I write of the death of Grandma Webster, who died in Toledo, Ohio, June 28th, while on her way from Springfield, Missouri, to Saginaw, Michigan, to visit her son and other relations. I have been very closely associated with this dear sister for fifteen years, having belonged to the same church (Methodist) for a number of years. We were both converted to this latter day gospel, and baptized at the same time under the ministrations of Bro. John Davis, of Washington, July 5, 1896, uniting with the Orting branch. I have often heard her affirm that it was the happiest day of all her life. Everyone knew her as "grandma," for she was a friend to everybody. Her purse, as well as her heart and home, was ever open to the missionaries of the church, and they will miss her kind face and hearty welcome. She ever bore her testimony of the truth of this work, believing it to be of God; and it was her sole desire that she might live faithful and be worthy of the salvation promised to the faithful. She had passed her eightieth milestone; and during the years since she accepted this gospel she has seemed to enter into a new sphere that filled a long-felt want in her soul. She had made her home for a number of years with her daughter, Sr. Wells, who has cared for her mother as tenderly as a mother would for her child. To you, my dear sister, I wish to extend my sincerest sympathy. Your sorrow is my sorrow, for we will miss the companionship of this beloved mother in Israel; but let us not sorrow as those who have no hope, for if we are faithful to the end we can meet dear grandma again. Your sister in hope of life eternal.

SARAH J. LINDSEY.

LADD, Ill., Aug. 13.

Editor Ensign:—We are alive and having our portion of the Spirit here in our little branch. At a special meeting last Friday evening it was our intention to take up a little work for the church, but the Spirit seemed to direct otherwise, so we had a prayer meeting instead. Bro. Southwick and Henley were with us. Bro. Henley made a few remarks and then spoke in tongues and interpretation to one of our brethren who had been given up by our medical men, but who has been spared us, telling how the prayers had been heard in his behalf, and he had been healed. Bro. Southwick spoke with good advice to all; at his conclusion the Spirit again rested upon Bro. Henley, and words of admonition and exhortation were given to some of the Saints.

Bro. Southwick said in his remarks that he felt that this would be a meeting never to be forgotten, and I think we are all of the same opinion, for there has never been such a display of the Spirit in this place before. I wish our absent members had been here to enjoy such a good time with us.

On Saturday evening Bro. Henley addressed the friends in the church; Sunday morning we had our council meeting, and had an interesting time. Bro. Southwick addressed the friends at the church after this; then in the afternoon social meeting, also sacrament; one child was blessed by Bro. Henley. In the evening Bro. Henley spoke to a good audience on the words, "What shall we do," and he knows just how to do when it comes to a talk of this kind.

Asking an interest in the prayers of the Saints.

LEON SNOW.

MONEGAW SPRINGS, Mo., Aug. 19.

Dear Ensign:—I attended the reunion at Barnard, Nodaway county, Missouri, where I met with many of the Saints of that district and enjoyed a real spiritual feast. Our hearts were made glad by the Lord speaking to us in prophecy and giving us encouraging words, and strengthening our faith in him. We had a good reunion and an enjoyable time.

After the close of the reunion, I left for the Clinton district, where I had been appointed by Bro. I. N. White, missionary in charge, for the remaining part of the conference year; arriving in Clinton district I found the Saints awaiting my arrival and anxious for preaching, so I enter upon my labor with a determined effort to push the work as it never has been before. Pray for success.

In bonds,

GROVE SPRINGS, Mo., Aug. 18.

Editor Ensign:—Still hot and dry, the people are still wishing and hoping for rain instead of doing what the standard says, "ask and ye shall receive."

The Saints are doing well at this place spiritually, but not so well financially. Elder Sparling, of Springfield, Missouri, held a weeks meeting the latter part of July with quite an interest; many are near the kingdom.

Preparations are being made for the organization of a branch here at this place, to be known as the Grove Springs branch. We have Sunday School every Sunday at three o'clock, prayer meeting every Thursday evening, with good attendance at both.

Yours for the truth,
L. D. LINDER.

TEKAMAH, Neb., Aug. 14.

Editor Ensign:—I saw in the Ensign of July 19, in Chatham, Ontario, district Sunday School convention minutes the names of Hackett and Corless. By request of my mother I write to know who they are, as I would be pleased to find any relative in the church if it is a way back. My grandmother was a daughter of Isaac Corless by his first wife; he married his second wife, Miss Annie Hackett, in Haverhill, New Hampshire, about 1853 or 1854.

Hoping to hear from some of them soon, I am

Your sister in the one faith,
Mrs. Wm. REYNOLDS.

AVA, Mo., Aug. 14.

Dear Saints:—We have our church so we can have services in it, but are not doing anything on it now; waiting for cooler weather. I have some money on hand for its completion. We have a nice little Sunday School organized and have preaching twice a month. Bro. Taylor preaches every first and third Sunday in each month. We have a prayer meeting each week and hold it every Thursday night. We were glad to see a letter in the Ensign from Bro. Spurlock, and to hear that he is getting along well. I remain

Your sister in the faith,
Miss ROSA MORRIS.

ZION'S ENSIGN.

Entered at the Post Office at Independence, Mo., as Second Class Matter.

THE MORE EXCELLENT WAY.

BY ELDER T. C. KELLEY.

CHAPTER III.

The object of this writing is to show that the more excellent way to be saved is by the gospel of Christ in its fullness and perfection, and not to raise any one principle or part of that gospel to a higher importance than another. And though, so far, I have said much more on the two principles of baptism and laying on of hands than upon other points, faith, repentance, etc., it is not to make it appear that they are more important or more essential to salvation, but because fewer people see that they are of equal importance in making up "the more excellent way."

I do not wish to weaken the faith of any, nor do I desire to discourage any one in a genuine repentance, for these are so much of the way as "cast up" by the Lord, and cannot be dispensed with by those who would walk therein. But no more can baptism in water, and the laying on of hands, resurrection, eternal judgment, or any other part of the teachings of Christ be dispensed with by any one who would follow the Lord "whithersoever he goeth." (Matt. 8: 19). I trust this fact will be made plain to all in what has been, and is yet to be, presented, so that every one who has any desire to walk in the "good way" may do so, and in so doing find rest to their souls.

Returning again to the Samaritans we read:

"Now when the apostles which were at Jerusalem heard that Samaria had received the word of God, they sent unto them Peter and John: who, when they were come down, prayed for them, that they might receive the Holy Ghost: (for as yet he was fallen upon none of them: only they were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus). Then laid they their hands on them, and they received the Holy Ghost."—Acts 8: 14-17.

We have already seen how this same Peter, with this same John, and ten other men, all clothed with apostolic authority, stood up, and, under the inspiration of the Spirit of God, promised the people who were anxiously inquiring what to do, that they should receive the gift of the Holy Ghost on condition: "Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins." (Acts 2: 38).

The people at Jerusalem on the day of Pentecost, or some of them at least, gladly received the word and were baptized. We are not told how they received the Spirit, nor are we told that they did receive it; but it stands to reason that they would not have "continued steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine" if they had not. It is evident too, that these apostles taught and practiced alike at Jerusalem and Samaria, as well as all other places, and hence the doctrine called "the apostles' doctrine," and in which the Pentecostians are said to have "steadfastly continued," included the laying on of hands, with prayer for the gift of the Holy Ghost; and while there is no mention made of the laying on of hands at Jerusalem on Pentecost day, I think it is more excellent to believe they did, than to believe they were double minded, and preached and practiced one way at Jerusalem and another way at Samaria.

Why should the "apostles which were at Jerusalem" send Peter and John to the Samaritans when they heard that they had "received the word of God?"

Answer: Evidently because, "This is the word which by the gospel was preached unto them." It was a part of the apostles' doctrine. It was at Samaria, at any rate; why not at every other place? The "word of God" through his Son, was that a man cannot enter into the kingdom of God except through the birth of the water and of the Spirit. Philip, Peter and John all preached the word of God, or the things concerning the kingdom of God, which the Samaritans believed and received, and this preaching on the part of these ministers, and especially of Philip, and the belief and acceptance of what was preached on the part of the people at Samaria, led to their baptism and also to their confirmation by the laying on of hands. I presume that no one will dispute that fact.

If, then, the baptism and confirmation of these Samaritan converts resulted from the preaching of the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ, it is certain that baptism in water for the remission of sins, as also the laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost, was included in the apostles' doctrine, and if it was included in theirs it was in Christ's, and if it was included in His, it was in God's, for Jesus says, "My doctrine is not mine but his that sent me," and it is no wonder the converts at Jerusalem continued steadfastly in that doctrine.

It was Peter who said at Jerusalem, "Ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost." It was Peter who was sent (with John) by the rest of the apostles at Jerusalem, to Samaria, that those whom Philip had baptized might receive the Holy Ghost. In both cases he was carrying out the commission he had received from Jesus Christ, to "preach the gospel to every creature" (Mark 16: 15), to "teach all nations baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you." (Matt. 28: 19, 20).

Does the reader believe that Peter taught to observe more or less than Jesus commanded? If so, then you can have no faith in his ministrations, for it was upon condition that he and his brethren should teach the observance of such things as he commanded, that Jesus made the promise, "Lo! I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." And Mark bears testimony to the acceptability of their teaching thus:

"And they went forth, and preached everywhere, the Lord working with them, and confirming the word with signs following."—Mark 16: 20.

This is proof of the strongest character, that the apostles preached as instructed and commanded by Jesus, unless we can believe the Lord worked with them and confirmed something which he had not commanded. Who would take the responsibility to charge the Lord with such work. Notice, too, that "they went forth and preached everywhere," in such manner that the Lord was pleased to confirm to those who received the word the truthfulness of the message the apostles bore to the world. Jerusalem and Samaria were included in what was contemplated in the "everywhere" where they preached and where the Lord worked with them; hence, at Jerusalem, and at Samaria, as also at other places—"everywhere"—they were evidently teaching the people to observe unto what, and all of what Jesus had commanded. The Holy Ghost, too, which he had promised, came, as he told them it would, and by it "signs and great miracles" (Acts 8: 13, margin) were done in confirmation of the word preached. This fact, of itself, is proof sufficient to show that the Spirit that Jesus promised was received; and a part of its office work was:

"He shall teach you all things, and bring up things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you."—John 14: 26.

If, then, Peter and John (with others) were filled with the Holy Ghost on the day of Pentecost, and if these men, together with Philip, were filled with it at Samaria—and evidently they were, or they could not have imparted it through their prayers and ministrations—and if the Holy Ghost performed its office work, as previously announced by Christ, then whatever they said or did under the inspiration of the Holy Ghost, was what Jesus himself had said to them, and told them to teach others—"all nations"—to observe; for the Spirit was to bring to their remembrance what he had said to them.

Therefore, when they preached the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, it was because they remembered that he had said these things unto them. When Peter said, "Repent every one of you and be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ," it was because he remembered that Jesus had said the same to him (and others); and when he added "for the remission of sins," it was because he remembered that Jesus had said, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." And again: "Except a man be born [baptized] of water and of the Spirit he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." He remembered that his Lord had taught him that it was a saving ordinance, for elsewhere he says:

"The like figure whereunto even baptism doth also now save us (not the putting away of the filth of the flesh, but the answer of a good conscience toward God) by the resurrection of Jesus Christ."—1 Pet. 3: 21.

When Peter and John went to Samaria and laid their hands upon those whom Philip had baptized, they did it because, under the inspiration of the Spirit of truth, they remembered that among the principles of the doctrine of Christ was to be found the laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost. They must have remembered it as one of the "all things" Jesus had said they should teach the people to observe.

We must either believe this, or else we must believe that these men did that which they were not commanded to do, but that they did it upon their own authority; and that they acted, not under the direction of the Holy Ghost, which would cause them to remember "whatsoever" Jesus had said, but under the influence of a spirit that caused them to forget that they were sent out to represent Christ—the way—and not to set up their own ideas (Jewish or otherwise) instead, thus trying to "climb up some other way."

I cannot believe they would do that; and if any of my readers do, let them read the defense that Peter and John make for themselves, as if against this imputation:

"For we cannot but speak the things which we have seen and heard."—Acts 4: 20.

"Seen and heard!" From whom? From Jesus Christ, of course. How, then, can any one doubt that when they were teaching and practicing baptism and the laying on of hands, they were teaching and practicing as Jesus had instructed, nay, had commanded?

"And it shall come to pass, that whosoever will not hearken unto my words which he [Christ] shall speak in my name, I will require it of him."—Deut. 18: 19.

Again: "Him shall ye hear in all things whatsoever he shall say unto you, and * * * every soul which will not hear that prophet, shall be destroyed from among the people."—Acts 3: 22, 23.

To the apostles Jesus said on one occasion:

"He that heareth you heareth me."—Luke 10: 16.

And again: "Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that receiveth whomsoever I send receiveth me; and he that receiveth me receiveth him that sent me."—John 13: 20.

Now in the light of these statements, who can for a moment doubt, that any one who receives (obeys) the testimony of Jesus and of the apostles with reference to baptism for the remission of sins, or the laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost, or any other matter, will receive reward for so doing? On the other hand, those who do not receive, hear (obey) the same testimony "shall be destroyed from among the people."

Wherefore, dear reader,

"See that ye refuse not him that speaketh [whether by his own mouth or by the mouth of his servants]. For if they escaped not who refused him that spake on earth [Moses], much more shall not we escape, if we turn away from him that speaketh from heaven [Christ]."—Heb. 12: 25; see also Heb. 2: 2, 3.

In the foregoing statements and others that might be given, two very important points are set forth clearly.

1. Baptism and the laying on of hands are both included in the principles of the doctrine taught by Christ and his apostles; that is, the words of teaching on these subjects and others, as quoted, were put into the mouth of Jesus by his Father, and he, in turn had given them to his apostles; and they had received them, and taught them to others, not as their own, but as the doctrine of Christ.

2. "Every soul" who hears his words on these as on all other subjects, is required to receive them, or to refuse to do so under penalty of being "destroyed from among the people."

The reader is now invited to carefully consider what is set forth in the following verses of Scripture.

"And a certain Jew named Apollos, born at Alexandria, an eloquent man, and mighty in the scriptures, came to Ephesus. This man was instructed in the way of the Lord; and being fervent in the spirit, he spake and taught diligently the things of the Lord, knowing only the baptism of John. And he began to speak boldly in the synagogue: whom when Aquila and Priscilla had heard, they took him unto them, and expounded unto him the way of God more perfectly."—Acts 18: 24-26.

The above quotation represents Apollos as, (1) an eloquent man, (2) mighty in the scriptures, (3) instructed in the way of the Lord, (4) fervent in spirit; (5) teaching diligently the things of the Lord; and those are certainly very praiseworthy qualifications in a minister; but it also represents him as "knowing only the baptism of John" or baptism in water as practiced by John.

In Mark 1: 4, 5 we read:

"John did baptize in the wilderness, and preach the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins. And there went out unto him all the land of Judea, and they of Jerusalem, and were all baptized of him in the river of Jordan, confessing their sins." (See also Matt. 13: 1, 5, 6).

Three important points are set forth in the foregoing: 1. In John's message was the doctrine of repentance and baptism. 2. He baptized those who came to him, giving evidence of their repentance. 3. Both repentance and baptism were "for the remission of sins."

Now, Apollos knew all this; but it seems he did not know the baptism of the Holy Ghost through the laying on of hands; but at the same time he was "instructed in the way of the Lord" so far as he had gone. Moreover; "he spake and taught diligently the things of the Lord."

Now, if Apollos knew only the baptism of John, and at the same time was "instructed in the way of the Lord," how can we escape the conclusion that the baptism of John was the way of the Lord? And if it is the way of the Lord, is there "a more excellent way?" I think not.

Again: If Apollos knew only the baptism of John, or baptism in water, preceded by repentance, based upon proper faith in the Messiah, and all for the remission of sins, as we have seen John taught—if he knew only these things, and yet "taught diligently the things of the Lord," how shall we escape the conclusion that baptism is one of the "things" which the Lord requires of the penitent believer "for the remission of sins."

But up to this time Apollos had not learned all the way of the Lord, and so Aquila and Priscilla took him into their house and gave him a more perfect understanding of "the way of God;" "expounded unto him the way of God more perfectly," says the record.

In the way of God, then, there was something besides baptism in water, or "the baptism of John;" something besides repentance, something besides abstract faith; something without which "the way of the Lord" as taught by Apollos was not complete.

The following will explain more fully the way of God.

"And it came to pass that while Apollos was at Corinth, Paul having passed through the upper coasts came to Ephesus: and finding certain disciples, he said unto them, Have ye received the Holy Ghost since ye believed? And they said unto him, We have not so much as heard whether there be any Holy Ghost. And he said unto them, Unto what then were ye baptized? And they said, Unto John's baptism. Then said Paul, John verily baptized with the baptism of repentance, saying unto the people, that they should believe on him which should come after him, that is, on Christ Jesus. When they heard this, they were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus. And when Paul had laid his hands upon them, the Holy Ghost came on them; and they spake with tongues, and prophesied."—Acts 19: 1-6.

Perhaps these people had been baptized by Apollos before Aquila and Priscilla had taught him the way of God more perfectly, while he yet knew only the baptism of John. Perhaps they had been baptized by some one who didn't know even as much as Apollos; at any rate, they had not received the Holy Ghost, nor had they, according to their own statement, heard there was such a thing; they had, however, heard of John's baptism in water, and had received it, or thought they had at least; but Paul's reasoning seems to have convinced them that there was some mistake. He says: "John verily baptized with the baptism of repentance, saying unto the people, that they should believe on him [Christ] that should come after him," and baptize them "with the Holy Ghost." (See also Mark 1:8). That is to say, John baptized such as brought "forth fruits meet for repentance," and did it "for the remission of sins," and told the people that Christ would baptize them with the Holy Ghost, and I believe he told them that the Holy Ghost should be given through the laying on of hands.

But there is no reference made in any of the statements attributed to John, in the New Testament, that even mentions the laying on of hands, says one. Well, what of it? If that proves that he did not understand and teach the laying on of hands, then the fact that no mention is made by him of the resurrection or of eternal judgment, proves that he did not understand and teach them. Again, there is no place in the New Testament where mention is made of any assertion by John, that faith is necessary to salvation. At least the writer knows of none. Shall I say because of this, that John did not believe that faith is necessary to salvation? Surely not.

But whether John did or did not teach the laying on of hands, Paul evidently did; and when the disciples, whom he found at Ephesus, received additional light from his instructions, and were baptized, he laid his hands on them, and, as a result, the Holy Ghost came upon them, thus showing that God approved what was done and said.

Why were they so ready to receive the laying on of hands, if Paul had not taught them in regard to it? Evidently Paul was as able to "expound the way of God" perfectly, as was Aquila and Priscilla, and it seems they were able to instruct one who was "mighty in the Scriptures" and "fervent in the Spirit," and who was already "instructed in the way of the Lord," but not perfectly, because he knew only the baptism of John; and Paul was able to instruct those who had, as they thought, received the baptism of John, and didn't know any more, having never heard of the Holy Ghost, through the laying on of hands, or otherwise.

Presuming, and I think no one will say that it is not a fair presumption, that Paul taught those disciples at Ephesus, "the way of God more perfectly," just as Aquila and Priscilla taught it to Apollos, and who can doubt that "the way of God" as more perfectly taught, has in it the laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost? And, if that is God's way, who can doubt that it is the more excellent way to receive the Holy Ghost?

"But," continues the objector, "you forget that Cornelius and his household all received the Holy Ghost without baptism or the laying on of hands." No, reader, I do not forget it. I remember to have read it time and time again, and I have not only not forgotten it, but I hope I never shall.

"But what are you going to do with him then?" Nothing at all. He has passed over to the other side, and entered into his reward and I could not do anything with him if I would. But if I could meet a man just like Cornelius was, I should be much pleased to take him into the church in the same way Peter did Cornelius and his household, and that is more than any objector with whom I have ever talked, would agree to do.

Let it be remembered that the Apostle Peter who ministered for Cornelius and his house, was the same Peter who, about seven or eight years before, had stood up with his fellow apostles, and told that vast concourse of people at Jerusalem to "repent and be baptized," and promised them that they should "receive the gift of the Holy Ghost." Do you think the gospel order has changed during these years? Certainly not. Has Peter found out he was wrong on Pentecost day and changed his faith and ministrations? I think not. Well, what is the trouble; there seems to be a change somewhere, for in the one case the Holy Ghost was promised on condition that the people repent and be baptized, and in the other the Holy Ghost is received before baptism is even mentioned.

Cornelius was a gentile, and did not have the privilege of hearing and obeying the gospel as yet, and hence, as one who had no law, was doing, as best he could, "the things contained in the law," and showing "the works of the law written in his heart." (See Rom. 2: 14, 15). Of him the record says:

"A devout man, and one that feared God with all his house, and gave much alms to the people and prayed to God always. He saw in a vision evidently about the ninth hour of the day an angel of God coming in to him, and saying unto him, Cornelius. And when he looked on him, he was afraid, and said, What is it, Lord? And he said unto him, Thy prayers and thine alms are come up for a memorial before God. And now send men to Joppa, and call for one Simon, whose surname is Peter: he lodgeth with one Simon, a tanner, whose house is by the seaside: he shall tell thee what thou oughtest to do."—Acts 10: 2-6.

Cornelius sent for Peter as directed, and Peter, having his prejudice against the gentiles removed by a vision, and the voice of the Spirit, went as requested, and took six of his brethren with him; and after making apology for entering in the house of a gentile, said: "I ask therefore for what intent ye have sent for me." (v. 29).

The next three verses tell in Cornelius' own words how he was directed to send for Peter, and the 33d verse says:

"Immediately therefore I sent to thee; and thou hast well done that thou art come. Now therefore are we all here present before God, to hear all things that are commanded thee of God."

Verses 34 to 43 tell, in Peter's own words, of his perception that God is no respecter of persons, of "how God anointed Jesus of Nazareth with the Holy Ghost and with power;" of his crucifixion, of his resurrection, of his being shown openly to chosen witnesses, of his ordination "to be the judge of quick and dead," and of the fact that:

"To him give all the prophets witness, that through his name, whosoever believeth in him shall receive remission of sins. While Peter yet spake these words, the Holy Ghost fell on all them which heard the word. And they of the circumcision which believed were astonished, as many as came with Peter, because that on the Gentiles also he poured out the gift of the Holy Ghost. For they heard them speak with tongues, and magnify God. Then answered Peter, Can any man forbid water that these should not be baptized, which have received the Holy Ghost as well as we? And he commanded them to be baptized in the name of the Lord. Then prayed they him to tarry certain days."—Verses 44-48.

I have been thus particular in presenting this matter to show, (1) that there is nothing in the case, when considered in all its bearings, to justify any one in using it as against baptism or the laying on of hands; and (2) to show that, as has been said before, not one who offers this objection, is willing to stand by the logic of the facts in the case.

Cornelius was a devout, praying, God-fearing man; not an ordinary sinner. So devout, and so humble had he become, that he received a visit from an angel, who gave him instruction as to what he should do to be saved, as witness the following: "Send men to Joppa and call for Simon whose surname is Peter; who shall tell thee words whereby thou and all thy house shall be saved."—Acts 11: 13, 14.

Wonderful privilege was Peter's to tell these precious souls what to do to be saved. Wonderful responsibility is his. He must not fail. The consequences are too awful. The happiness of immortal souls depends upon his faithfulness. They are "ready to hear all things which are commanded him of God." Surely he will be faithful and tell them just what, and only what, he has been "commanded of God." The only command that Peter gave them so far as the record states, is that in the 48th verse: "And he commanded them to be baptized."

"Ah! but the words by which they were to be saved are found in verse 43, where it says 'whosoever believeth on him shall receive remission of sins,'" says one.

But do you know that these were all of his words to which they were required to give heed? I have no objection to the words in verse 43; I rejoice in the thought contained therein. But I also believe the words in verse 48. I believe that they, together with those in verse 43, and all others that Peter spake unto Cornelius on that occasion, were the "words whereby thou and all thy house shall be saved," and as such were necessary to the salvation of that household; as the words spoken on the day of Pentecost by this same apostle, and sanctioned by his brethren of the same high and holy calling, and also by the Holy Ghost with which they were filled, were necessary to the salvation of the three thousand who gladly received the word on that day.

"But was not Cornelius already saved?" do you ask?

Let the angel that appeared to and talked with him answer.

"Heshall tell thee words whereby thou and all thy house SHALL BE saved."

If he were already saved, then what need for Peter to be sent for, to tell him words whereby he might be saved? Echo answers "what need?" and no man can give a better answer.

But what words of Peter, on that occasion, were clothed with the power to save? Not those in verse 43 alone, nor those in verse 48 alone, nor yet in both of them. The key is found in verse 44.

"While Peter yet spake these words, the Holy Ghost came on all them which heard the word."

What word?

"And this is the word which by the gospel is preached unto you."—1 Peter 1: 25.

Harmonious word! always the same.

Again: "I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to everyone that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Greek."—Rom. 1: 16.

Now, if the gospel is the power of God unto salvation and Peter was to tell Cornelius words whereby he should be saved, then he was to tell him the story of the gospel. From that logical conclusion there is no escape. That story, as we have seen, is not complete until "all things whatsoever he saith unto you" has been told. Until Cornelius and his friends had heard and observed "all things" that Jesus had commanded Peter and the rest of the apostles to teach, they had not heard and obeyed the word which by the gospel Peter preached unto them and which was the power of God unto their salvation.

A part of the gospel as taught by Christ was baptism in water for the remission of sins, as we have already seen, hence Peter "commanded them to be baptized." So even in the case of Cornelius this ordinance was a part of the more excellent way to be saved. IT IS SO IN EVERY CASE.

But how many professed Christians of today will accept this case as a proper rule by which sinners are to be converted and received into the church? Not one who uses it as an argument against baptism or the laying on of hands have I ever seen who would, as a minister, receive such a one as Cornelius into his church or as a lay member would be willing to have him received.

In the fall of 1896 I met and conversed with a Rev. Mr. — in the state of Florida. During the conversation the question of baptism came up and at about the usual place the regulation question, "What will you do with Cornelius?" was asked by him.

I replied: "I will take all the men you can find like Cornelius into the church just like Peter took him in, but you wouldn't do it."

"Do you think not?" he asked, as if in surprise.

After assuring him that I meant what I said, I asked:

"Now if I should send men to you and tell you that I had seen an angel, and that the angel had told me to send for you and that you would tell me words whereby I should be saved, would you come and receive me into the church as Peter did him?"

"No sir," said he, "I don't believe in any such foolishness as that."

I think these were his exact words. He was a man with a collegiate education and was well equipped so far as that part is concerned, for preaching; and yet, everything connected with Cornelius' history as set forth in the 10th chapter of Acts, except the fact that he received the Holy Ghost before baptism, and "whosoever believeth in him shall receive remission of sins," is by him brushed to one side as is trash before the broom of the housewife and bluntly called "foolishness." I do not think that is the more excellent way.

But who could do any better while walking "in a way not cast up" by the Lord and prefers to walk in "a way that seemeth right unto a man" even though "the end thereof are the ways of death." (Prov. 14:12).

No such man as Cornelius could secure a membership in any of the popular churches of today in the same way and with the same experience that he did then. His claim that he had been visited by an angel would be enough to cause his rejection by any minister; and any church who would reject baptism or laying on of hands because Cornelius received the Holy Ghost before he had received either of these ordinances; and every minister and every layman, and every church that refuses to believe in the efficacy of baptism and the necessity of laying on of hands, would prefer charges against any of their brethren and cast them out as heretics, if they should "magnify God" by speaking in tongues as did Cornelius and his company.

At the same time they claim to be converted just as Cornelius was and to the same faith in every particular, and seek to fortify themselves in such claim by the experience of Cornelius and his friends. They profess to believe that this little company of disciples were saved because of their faith in God and in Christ the Lord. They also believe they will themselves be saved by their faith in God and Christ. They believe that some day they will be permitted to enter into the presence of God and there meet Cornelius and join with him in singing praises to God and the Lamb; and yet his faith and experience was so much different from their own, that if he could appear among them today as he appeared in that little company in his own house in Cæsarea years ago, they would cast him out of their company and at once pronounce him a heretic. Can this be "the more excellent way."

The record does not inform us as to whether they received the laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost or not, nor does it state as a fact that they were baptized. But I think it very reasonable to believe that they received both.

Why should they after they had received the Holy Spirit, do you ask? The answer is easy enough. Baptism is not only for, or in order to, remission of sins, but it is also for the retaining of remission or forgiveness of sins once pardoned.

Even if we admit (a thing which cannot be proved) that all the sins of each individual in this company or of any of them were remitted, blotted out, and that before baptism, is it not reasonable to believe that those same sins or others, and perhaps both, would have come back on them if they had refused to heed Peter's command to them to be baptized? and especially so as he was to tell them what was commanded him of God? So the necessity of baptism is clearly seen even in this case.

And, though they received the Holy Ghost before the laying on of hands, yet as Peter had practiced this rite at Samaria and as it is one of the principles of the doctrine of Christ, if they had refused to accept it they doubtless would have lost the precious gift that God had graciously bestowed on them for a special purpose, as any one who will read the history of the case with honest purpose can see; and hence we see that even in their case the rite of laying on of hands was necessary, as otherwise how could they have retained what they had received, viz., the gift of the Holy Ghost.

I think it is a more excellent way to accept the doctrine of Christ as a whole than to accept only such parts as may suit our own notions; and hence I still believe in baptism and the laying on of hands, notwithstanding what is written concerning the reception of the Holy Ghost by Cornelius and his friends; for, as we have seen, there is nothing in it to prove that either ordinance is not necessary or essential to the purpose for which God ordained it; the one "for the remission of sins," the other "for the gift of the Holy Ghost."

To believe that Peter taught one way at one time and place, and another and different way at another time and place, is to believe that he was not inspired with the Holy Ghost; not "endued with power from on high;" but that he was double minded, double tongued and "unstable in all his ways." I cannot do that, and hence I believe that at Cæsarea, at Jerusalem, at Samaria, "everywhere" he preached and practiced alike and that God approved his labors. And as he taught baptism in connection with remission of sins and the reception of the Holy Ghost at Jerusalem (Acts 2:38); and as he practiced laying on of hands with prayer for the gift of the Spirit at Samaria (Acts 8:17); and as he commanded baptism at Cæsarea (Acts 10:48) it is easy for the unprejudiced to see that in all these places he was teaching the principles of "the more excellent way."

[CONCLUDED.]

SUCCESSORSHIP IN CHURCH PRES-IDENCY.

Testimony of Martin Harris' Niece, Mrs. Sophia K. Cook.

July 31, 1900, the writer called upon Mrs. Cook and obtained the following written statement from her, with the understanding that it was for publication, viz:

Provo, Utah, July 31, 1900.

With no other motive than that the truth may be known by all men to whom this affirmation may come, I, Mrs. Sophia K. Cook, do hereby affirm that I was born near Pontiac, Michigan, July 28, 1828. I was baptized into the church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints in Missouri in my childhood.

I am now a member of the church of Latter Day Saints whose headquarters are located at Salt Lake City, though I do not endorse polygamy. I was present at a meeting held in a bowery in Nauvoo, Illinois, the date of which to the best of my recollection, was the spring or summer of 1843 or 1844. I was sitting west from the speaker's stand only a few feet.

At this meeting I heard Joseph Smith, president of the church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, say, in substance:

"I have often been asked who would succeed me as prophet to the church. He is here in the stand." He then turned and led his son, Joseph, before the audience and said: "My son, Joseph, will be your next prophet."

Approximately, I shall say there were several hundred people present at this meeting.

[Signed] SOPHIA K. COOK.

I arrived at Provo, Utah, May 26th. The effect of my short missionary experience in this state has been to make me think more of the state, and of the people and of the work here, than I did at the first. I like the country. "The valleys of the mountains are beautifully situated, rendered productive by irrigation, and the pure, mountain air is refreshing.

With rare exceptions, the Mormon people have treated us with kindness, and even with hospitality. This is partly due to the kind reception our people in other states have accorded to their missionaries. I think the intermingling of their elders with ours and with our people in the east, and the privilege they enjoy of using our houses of worship, is proving of benefit to the Mormon people. The two religious bodies, Josephites and Brighamites, are getting better acquainted and are not so fearful each of the other.

We have had a generous hearing here in tent work, far more so than in other states where I have labored. While immediate results are not so apparent, hundreds have heard our impregnable positions and we can safely trust for results finally, to Him who has said, "My word shall not return to me void."

They seem to have no representatives capable of defending their positions even fairly well. They have not attempted to do so longer than for one night, as yet. I would as leave meet them in discussion, as "D. Collins, of Secor, Illinois." They come about as near as he, in proving that Joseph Smith originated polygamy.

For one night Prof. Nelson, of the Brigham Young Academy, attempted to defend the doctrine of "Blood Atonement." His defense was weak, not worth repeating. Also Elder S. D. Cummings discussed the question of "Church Rejection," one evening at Heber. He scarcely appealed to the books at all, but rather to the prosperity of the Mormon people, as proof they were not rejected.

Have been pleasantly and profitably associated with Bro. D. W. Wight, P. Anderson and S. D. Condit in the work. The Lord has sustained us, the gifts of the gospel have been occasionally manifested. Why should we falter?

Until permitted to compare our principles with those of Utah Mormonism, I did not so fully realize their unassailable character. Let us have faith in God, in his methods and in his counsel, and follow these to a legitimate and happy consummation.

At Heber, where there are but three Josephites, the writer and Bro. S. D. Condit found pleasant home for two weeks with Mr. and Mrs. Giles, and with Dr. and Mrs. J. W. Aird. Dr. Aird is a son, and Sr. Giles a daughter of Bro. Wm. Aird, now deceased. Prof. Henry Aird, another son, is principal of the city schools and superintendent of public instruction of Wasatch county. He is a gentleman whom it is a pleasure to know. Neither he nor the doctor are connected with the church.

I esteem it a privilege, an inestimable privilege, to represent this latter day work. Nor would I hesitate, if God commanded, to go to the ends of the earth "without purse or scrip," to represent so noble a cause. I would rather "without purse or scrip" than to go with a salary, because I would prefer to have the Lord with me than to have a few paltry dollars with me.

Unhesitatingly for truth,
W. S. PENDER.

An Admonition.

Dear Ensign:—Nearly ever since your first publication, my heart has been comforted by the inspiration voiced by many of the members of our great family; and hours of solitude have been cheered by your holy influence; and, feeling that honesty and purity were dominant traits in our family, I felt in my heart proud that I was a member of it.

But, oh! like the once beautiful home in Eden, it has to be disgraced by the intrusion of the same arch enemy, bringing discord and sorrow to every true Saint, for when one member goes astray the cause is reproached. O, what a fate awaits the truce breakers, the person of unclean heart and lips! As Saints, our acts and words are criticized by the outside world, and it is right they should be; for if our hearts are right before God, our acts will stand uncondemned before him, and we need not fear what public opinion may say of us; but if our hearts are not right, we have reason to fear and tremble, for God will have none but a pure church; and if even the branch that bears fruit has need of pruning, what will be the condition of that, which is not worth pruning? God's word tells us they shall be cast into the fire. Satan is busy, his maneuvering skillfully planned, and they who are not on the watchtower cannot claim protection from his grasp. Then let us, as Saints, honor the cause we love by coming up higher, that the light that is within us may be made manifest. Nothing but loyalty to God and his cause will ever win the prize in the great day of accounts. Jesus said, "He that loveth the world more than me is not worthy of me."

CANCER OF THE BREAST CURED.

Grateful Words of Praise From Noble Women.

Cozad, Neb., Oct. 14, 1899.

Dr. W. O. BYE,
Kansas City, Mo.

Dear Dr.:—I wish to state in behalf of all suffering humanity of cancer what wonderful work you did for my mother. About two years ago a lump began to grow under her left breast, which gave her much trouble and great fear. She was treated by our family physician but gradually grew worse, and everyone told her that the only cure was an operation, but to this she would not consent, she said she would prefer death to an operation. When one day I saw your advertisement in a paper, and something told me I must write to you at once, which I did and on receiving your answer I hurried homeward with your "Message of Hope." Mother concluded to give you a trial; we sent for home treatment and applied your Balm Oils at once, she began to get better right away; she took home treatment for two months and at the end of that time the cancer became quite painful and Dr. Bye requested that she should come to Kansas City for personal treatment, which she did, and on leaving us we had grave hopes for her recovery, and as her many friends bid her "good-by" more than one of them thought it was for the last time. But on arriving in Kansas City Dr. Bye informed her that the cancer would come out in a few days. She remained in Kansas City only two weeks and at the end of that time she came home cured of cancer. It is now entirely healed over, it did not even leave a scar. Mother feels like a new woman; she is 68 years old and does all her own housework, which is no small matter as she cooks for five men. She says she cannot say enough for Dr. Bye, and the kind and loving treatment which she received while there will never be forgotten. I shall be willing and delighted to answer any and all letters that I may receive in regard to Dr. Bye's mode of treatment, and before closing this letter I trust that God may ever bless and guide you in curing the poor, suffering humanity of this world.

I remain,

Mrs. G. W. ARTHURS.

A Phenomenal Year for Finance.

The total foreign commerce of the United States during the fiscal year 1900, exceeds by 16 1/2 per cent that of any preceding year; being 320 million dollars greater than that of 1899, the heaviest one on record preceding the one which has just ended.

Imports are also heavy, especially in the class designated as "articles in a crude condition which enter into the various processes of domestic industry."

The most notable features of the year's commerce are: 1st, The increase in imports of manufacturers' materials not produced at home; 2d, The increase in exports of manufactured articles; and 3d, The fact that the foreign commerce for the first time in the fiscal year record crossed the two billion dollar line.

ONE who has tried it says: Throw a bit of alum about the size of a marble into a small bowl of water, wet the hands and face and any exposed parts lightly with it. Not a mosquito will approach you. They will hum about a little and disappear.

23.06 per cent; in 1895, 25.64 per cent; in 1896, 24.57 per cent; in 1897, 26.00 per cent; in 1898, 32.16 per cent; in 1899, 31.82 per cent; and in 1900, 35.75 per cent.

CANCER.

A BLOOD DISEASE AND CURABLE.

Editor of Zion's Ensign:—Twenty or twenty-five years ago, old Dr. Gillam, the distinguished specialist of Atlanta, demonstrated that Cancer, in any form, was due to a malignant, deadly poison in the Blood, and by using B. B. B. (Botanic Blood Balm) this poison was gradually drained from the system, then the sores healed, and a real permanent cure was made.

"Lately an eating Cancer broke out in my head and ears, and ate all the small bones out of my mouth, and I could scarcely eat and talk. I could eat a little strained soup, that was all. I tried nine doctors, but none could cure me, my case was pronounced hopeless, so I tried B. B. B., and was cured. The disease made me most deaf. B. B. B. helped my hearing."

We will send any reader of Zion's Ensign a sample bottle of B. B. B. free of charge, and prepaid, so they may test the medicine and know for themselves that B. B. B. is the remedy for cancer, eating sores, ulcers, persistent eruptions, and all malignant blood troubles.

Notice is hereby given to all creditors and others interested in the estate of Harvey A. Wood, deceased, that I, Andrew Atwood, executor of said estate, intend to make final settlement thereof at the next term of the Probate Court of Jackson County, State of Missouri, to be held at Independence, on the 10th day of September, 1900.

Broken Brick-Bracs.

Mr. Major, the famous cement man, of New York, explains some very interesting facts about Major's Cement. The multitude who use this standard article know that it is many hundred per cent better than other cements for which similar claims are made, but a great many do not know why. The simple reason is that Mr. Major uses the best material ever discovered and other manufacturers do not use them, because they are too expensive and do not allow large profits.

Major's Cement retails at fifteen cents and twenty-five cents a bottle, and when a dealer tries to sell a substitute you can depend upon it that his only object is to make larger profit. The profit on Major's Cement is as much as any dealer ought to make on any cement, and this is doubly true in view of the fact that each dealer gets his share of the benefit of Mr. Major's advertising, which now amounts to over $5,000 a month, throughout the country.

And you will be surprised at how many dollars a year you will thus save. If your drugstore or supply you, it will be forwarded by mail; either kind. Free of postage.

To the Saints who do not know me I wish to say, I have been in the real estate business for about fifteen years in Jackson County, Missouri. I am well acquainted with values, know where to locate the brethren better than one who has not had experience. I know all about values; I know a bargain and am in position to advise. And I wish to say there are no Latter Day Saints here who are in the real estate business. Now, if you are not afraid of your brethren, please call and see them when in Independence, or write them. I will give you for reference any honorable person with whom I have done business, banker or merchant; also Bro. Wm. Crick; Joseph Luff; H. R. Mills; J. W. Luff, Business Manager of the ENSIGN Publishing House; W. H. Garrett, Editor of the ENSIGN; N. White of the Twelve; Alfred White, missionary. I do all this to show you that Latter Day Saints can be honorable in real estate business as well as any other business. W. S. LOAR.

JOTS BY THE WAYSIDE.

BY T. W. CHATURN.

Tent meetings are quite encouraging at "Orange," this is the third week of the series; interest increasing, prejudice giving way and the preachers at their wits end to keep their flocks from attending. Prayer meetings are in order in all the churches every night, yet we have a very respectable, intelligent audience.

Bro. D. A. Anderson and wife have gone to the Catalina Islands for a short visit. Bro. Burton and "Sr. Emma" are recuperating, visiting their children and numerous friends. Bro. B's. "native tongue" is as glib as if it was greased; so long as the church needs a missionary in the "Pamudas" Joseph is the right man in the right place.

Bro. Carmichael, the bishop's agent, has his eye on the finance and is ever on the alert for the weal of Zion. T. W. Williams is the "cyclone" of Southern California. You might as well try to stop the Santa Ana winds from sweeping down the canyon, or the blessed sun from shining in California as to keep T. W. still.

The serious condition of this country at the present time is the drouth, for three years it has been on, money is very scarce indeed; in fact, none but those who work for corporations have any; wages very low and plenty of idle men.

Expectancy is almost at fever heat in an anticipation of Bro. Joseph and Alexander Smith visiting us in the near future; it will almost be a shame if they disappoint us.

We have been rustling a hammer and chisel the past few days, putting new flues in Bro. Pankey's "pony boiler." Flowing wells have ceased to flow and pump plants are in order to water parched earth.

SANTA ANA, AUG. 2.

An Open Letter to Elder Isaac Hill, of Exchange, Illinois.

ELDER ISAAC HILL,

Dear Sir:—I have just received a copy of the Leader for August 7th, containing a communication from Elder Clark Braden; I send you a letter from Elder White which appeared in the ENSIGN for July the 5th, 1900, also a letter from the Saints' Herald for July 25th.

I have also received Elder Braden's pamphlet of endorsements, and it seems that Mr. Braden has been very hard pressed, as he has gone back as far as the year 1855 in order to meet the late demand of I. N. White. There is no doubt in the mind of Elder White and myself but that Mr. Braden, in his former years, was considered sound in the faith as held and taught by the Campbellite church; but that is not the question, my dear sir, as to what Braden was in his early ministry; but, the question is: How does Braden stand now in the estimation of the editors of the Christian Evangelist and Standard.

It has been eight months since I. N. White published his demand in circular form, requesting those editors to endorse Braden as being "sound in the faith as they hold and teach it," and now, after so long a time, Mr. Braden puts out a great long list of endorsements, and tries to prop himself up by what state boards, colleges, churches, and preachers have had to say about him in former years, and not an endorsement from the editors of the Standard and Evangelist that he is "sound in the faith as they hold and teach it."

Has Mr. Braden met the late demand of I. N. White? No, he knows he has not; and notwithstanding there has been a great deal of bragging concerning him in former years, according to his late pamphlet, inasmuch that he has come to be a great braggart himself, and yet with all his bragging and begging he has failed to secure the endorsement required. Poor Bro. Braden, while you are in a great struggle yet I wish you every good thing and that you may obey the truth and be saved.

Yours for the right,

F. M. SLOVER.

P. S.—I also send you a copy of Elder White's endorsements which were given him by the editors of Saints' Herald and ZION'S ENSIGN, January 17, 1900. You will notice that both of those editors have endorsed Elder White as being sound in the faith as preached and practiced by the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints; and as Elder White has demanded that Elder Braden be as fully and completely endorsed by both the editors of the Standard and Evangelist, and as Mr. Braden has lately issued a great big windy tract of endorsements over the signature of Clark Braden, I therefore challenge you and Elder Clark Braden, and the whole Campbellite fraternity to show in that pamphlet of endorsements, the page and the line, where the present editors of the Christian Evangelist and Standard have said that Elder Braden is "sound in the faith as preached and practiced by the Christian or Campbellite church." Now, gentlemen, until you come forward with the plain English, I call upon you to cease that long, howling cry of coward, coward, and that I. N. White dare not meet Mr. Braden in debate. If I do not hear from you soon I will consider that you have become converted to my side of the question. Address Orchardville, Illinois.

Stewartsville Reunion.

Once more we call the attention of the Saints to the above reunion, as a number of Saints have overlooked the notice in the church papers. The meeting will commence on the morning of August 31st and continue to September 11th, one-fourth mile southeast of Stewartville, Missouri, in Bro. Ben Dice's grove. Tents can be rented 9x12 feet, 3 1/2 foot walls, $1.45; 12x14 feet, 3 1/2 foot walls, $1.65. Plenty of straw free, plenty of pasture for teams cheap. You can live as cheap here as at your home, so come, bring your families.

Bro. T. A. Hougas will be here during the meeting to conduct the Sunday School work, and we have the promise of several leading elders to be with us. Do not forget to bring your quarterlies, Autumn Leaves, Bibles and song books. The committee is hard at work to make this meeting a success as far as their labors are concerned. So come, bring the Spirit of the Master with you and we will have a spiritual meeting throughout.

CONFERENCE MINUTES.

Conference of the South Missouri district convened at the Saints' chapel five miles east of Ava, July 7th, and was fairly well attended by Saints from various parts of the district.

The following officers were chosen: D. W. Thomas, district president; S. N. Gray, Jr., district clerk; Charles E. Gray, district treasurer. A decision was made changing the name of the Bruer branch to that of Johns Mills. A committee was appointed consisting of Brn. H. Sparling, R. T. Walters and D. W. Thomas to arrange for the reunion to be held during the next district conference which will be at Springfield, Missouri, commencing October 5th.

DIED.

WEBSTER.—At Toledo, Ohio, June 28, 1900, Mrs. Mary E. Webster, aged 59 years, 3 months, 12 days. Mother Webster was born in eastern New York March 16, 1820. She united with the Methodist Church when quite young. She first heard the restored gospel about four years ago and obeyed it, being baptized by Elder John Davis at Orbing, Pierce county, Washington, and confirmed under the hands of Elders John Davis, J. C. Clapp and N. C. Enge.

YANCEY.—At the home of her daughter, Annie Millgate, Sacramento, California, May 12, 1900, Sr. Mary R. Yancey. She was thrice married, all her companions being members of the church, and preceded her to the spirit world. She was the mother of ten children, seven of whom survive her. She was baptized in New York by Benjamin Winchester, in 1835, and was well acquainted with Joseph Smith the martyr and others of the leading men of the church. She was a noble hearted woman and a faithful Latter Day Saint till the time of her death. Funeral sermon by Elder George Daley.

GRIM.—Another spirit has entered into the rest prepared for the righteous. Sr. Winifred Grim, after a lingering illness of several months, passed away at the home of her parents in Canton, Illinois, on the 7th of August, 1900. She was born near the same place, August 14, 1878. On the 4th day of September, 1899, she entered into covenant with God, being baptized by Elder F. A. Russell and confirmed by Elder J. S. Patterson. The same night she bore a beautiful testimony regarding the truth, and from that day until she was called away her faith ever grew stronger. Many are the blessings she received, confirming her hope even to the end. Her kindly acts and ministrations, her highly developed sense of right, and the pure motives which had ever guided her, all beamed with exceeding brilliance when touched, as they were, by the Spirit of her Maker, and bear witness that her page of life, though short, was well written. Funeral Friday, August 10, conducted by Elder J. S. Patterson, assisted by Elder F. A. Russell. Text Rev. 14:13. R.

SINCERITY.

The evidence of sincerity in an individual is manifested in his actions. Long ago it was said—and the correctness of the estimate so given is indicated in our own day—that "Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh" (Matt. 12: 34), and as a man "thinketh in his heart so is he" (Prov. 23: 7). True, hypocrisy or deceit may be, and is, practiced; an individual, to gain certain selfish ends, may pretend to be that which he is not; may manifest a friendliness he does not feel, in order to gain confidence by which to work injury; but eventually his actions will bespeak what have really been the sentiments of his heart and mind, and thus reveal his true character.

But an upright man, a man of integrity and honesty of purpose, will always show in his actions the sincerity of his professions; and such a character is a true, friendly man, whether he speaks in commendation of our good qualities, or condemns the weak places in our characters.

When an individual is truly sincere in his service to God he will indicate the strength of it by heeding the requirements of the heavenly Father though such obedience should for a time cause him to forfeit the esteem of his fellows. This has often, in the experience of those who have heard the voice of the Good Shepherd calling them to follow Him, been the test by which their integrity has been tried. Some have been unequal to the sacrifice and have "gone back;" but many, very many, have been true to their convictions, and have endured "as seeing him who is invisible;" and the strength of their purpose has been demonstrated in their ability to "stand fast in the liberty" wherewith they have been called.

Many individuals think they love the Lord, and seem, in a certain sense, to be zealous in doing what they have been educated to understand was beneficial to the interests of His service; but it is a singular fact that when some of this class have been invited to do what the Lord plainly commands as a means of becoming identified with His body, the true church of Jesus Christ, they have angrily and unreasonably refused. Do they love God? or do they love to have their own way rather than have the Lord's way sustained and honored? The members of the council of the Pharisees which plotted to have the Savior put to death, doubtless thought they loved God, but what Bible believer today who accepts the divinity of the Lord, will agree with that conclusion?

If, then, a disposition to crucify one sent as a servant of God, was an evidence of the insincerity of the devotion offered the Most High, by those thus acting, is not the same disposition manifested in opposing those sent of God today, who teach identically the same doctrines and church polity inculcated by the Savior and his apostles, equally a manifestation of the insincerity and unreliability of the profession of love and devotion to God which they make? Where is there any difference? The mere fact that one act transpired long ages ago, and the other before our own eyes, cannot logically change the case.

The truth has never asked more at the hands of men than that they should lay aside all prejudice, and calmly, sincerely, and earnestly investigate what it offers for their benefit and uplifting. It offers to demonstrate itself to all who will honestly and humbly apply the test which it submits; but how few there are who show a willingness to do this. Jesus said:

My doctrine is not mine, but his that sent me. If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself.—John 7: 16, 17.

Can a more sincere and fair proposition be submitted? There is no distinction to be shown. Any one, who in integrity of purpose to do that which is required of him by the Lord, may be a participant in the divine recognition thus promised and foretold. But therein comes the test of his sincerity; to submit himself freely and entirely to the will of heaven, seems to be, for very many, a very hard, even well nigh impossible, task. Notwithstanding the example so plainly set by the Savior, and his command to follow him; in face of the fact that he commanded his disciples to teach all men to be baptized; and regardless of the declaration of Peter under the inspiration of the Holy Ghost on the day of Pentecost, but few, comparatively, are willing to sincerely accept baptism for the remission of sins at the hands of the servants of Christ today, in view of which, the test laid down by the Savior is valueless to them, and the promised knowledge of the truth unattainable to their understanding; it is utterly impossible to demonstrate to them that the gospel is true because they will not comply with the conditions essential to such demonstration. Are such men or women really sincere in their devotion to God?

It is a fact to which thousands willingly testify that God does now, in this day and age of the world, demonstrate the truth of His promise, and give satisfactory knowledge to every man and woman who obeys His commands. Age, rank or condition of life acts as no barrier; every one who honestly, humbly and sincerely does the will of God in obeying His gospel—the plan of salvation—is made cognizant of the existence of God and the faithfulness of his promises because of the personal experience and knowledge of the truth received; and no quantity of argument or of unfavorable comment has any weight as against that personal, direct knowledge of the truth of the gospel and the fact that they have done the will of God in obeying its principles.

God is a searcher of hearts. He knows the purpose and intents of the heart; He is never deceived and it is vain to dissemble before Him. Let all seek sincerely "to worship Him in spirit and in truth," for Jesus said, "He seeketh such to worship Him."

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

ELDER ALBERT HAWS' address is now 205 1/2 Polk street, San Francisco, California.

It was a little singular that the editors of both the Saints' Herald and the ENSIGN were moved to take up the same subject for leading editorial in last week's issues, that of "Healings." We were struck with the coincidence when we received our copy of the Herald Thursday morning of last week, and as is our custom, turned to read the leading article.

The subject is an important one because of the deceptive and misleading influences exerted upon the unwary through following a system or philosophy whose chief or principal tenet is the healing of the ills of the flesh, leaving the spiritual needs for secondary consideration or giving it no attention whatever. Better to suffer all our lives from physical infirmities than to risk our eternal happiness by following any scheme or plan outside the gospel of Jesus Christ, no matter how "cunningly devised."

BRO. W. D. CUSTEAD, of Waco, Texas, has invented and is now building an air ship, consisting of "a buoyant, canoe shaped body * * * having a central cabin space, and a given number of wings operating on each upper side. The principle is based upon a combination of the bird wing, balloon, aeroplane and boat. The ascending, propelling and steering is governed entirely by the speed and angle of the wings. Equilibrium is governed by a moveable aeroplane, mounted at each corner of the ship * * * and also by increasing or decreasing the angle of each or any wing on down stroke, the speed of the wing and the angle of both wings and aeroplanes are under direct control of the operator * * * The down stroke of each wing is very abrupt while at any angle and the up or return stroke gradual and always at an inclined angle, the wings are concave and flexible downward, air tight on down and open on up stroke. The main hull framing is of very light steel tubing firmly braced, motive power is in ox-hydrogen rotary explosive engine, weighing five pounds per horse power including fuel supply. The hull is pointed at each end, and for a small capacity machine is thirty-seven and one-half feet long over all, and five feet wide at center. Wings eight feet long, five feet wide and oval shaped."

The above is extracted from a circular issued by Bro. Custead who is a son-in-law of Bro. I. N. White. We will watch with interest the success of Bro. Custead's invention.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. ORESTAS RESCH, Minneapolis, Kansas:

Our reunion here is over. Meetings were good; Saints blessed and went home feeling to rejoice in the work.

ELDER D. C. WHITE, Rea, Missouri:

I came here the 16th and began tent meetings. Big audience from the first. Excitement running high. We pitched the tent within one rod of the M. E. church. Meeting was held in it Saturday and Sunday, but the tent got the crowd. The battle is waxing warm and I feel there is nothing to fear. The Lord is with us. People are coming from three to four miles to hear. We have the "thinking" people out and the preaching is complimented from all sides. Shall continue the conflict another week. I am doing all the speaking and find it hard to do. Look for help soon.

BRO. FRED B. BLAIR, 3010 16th St., San Francisco, California, was at Waddington, California, August 13th, and thus reports:

Yesterday we held a basket meeting near Ferndale, and had a grand, good time. There were about 100 present and between the sermons at 11 and 2, we sampled the contents of the baskets. The dinner was all that the most exacting could desire. Before the morning service we repaired to the waters of Eel river and buried Mrs. Lillie and Daisy Robinson beneath the liquid waves to arise and walk in newness of life. These young women have shown true integrity in taking their stand for the Master, and if faithful, will be instrumental in bringing others to Christ. Our work in this country is not done yet, and we hope ere we depart to see others obey the angel's message.

SR. CLARA J. YOUNG, Madison, Maine:

We are striving to get people to read what we can and we now seem to find them more ready to learn about our work than formerly. February 1st last, we commenced holding meetings and Sunday School every Sunday, that is, when the weather will permit us. We agreed February 11th to take up a penny collection for the purpose of paying for Quarterlies, etc. We have paid out ninety-five cents for Quarterlies and have one dollar and six cents left. One of my neighbors, a Baptist, who recently moved here, never knew of our work until I told her of it, came into our little meeting one Sunday and the next Monday she asked for a Quarterly so that she might study with us. We are living on Water street near Madison Woolen Mills, and if any of the elders happen to come this way we will be glad to see them.

BRO. JOHN D. TENBY, Oohelata, Indian Territory:

There are but few Saints here and we are scattered, Bro. Mason Davenport and wife, Bro. Andrew Reed and myself. We live about nine miles south of Bartlesville on the Skiatook wagon road. Bro. Reed and myself have belonged to the church about four years, and have not heard a sermon from one of our elders since Bro. A. C. Hart administered the ordinance of baptism about that time, but we are still firm in the faith. We hope the ENSIGN may long wave out a warning to ungodly men, and still go on in the good work. O, how I would like to hear a sermon from one of our elders in this place. My wife is very much interested and I believe if an elder was here she would unite with the church; others are also interested, and if there are any of our elders living anywhere near Bartlesville I should like to hear from them.

BRO. S. EVISON, 7239 Vienna street, Chicago, Illinois, in sending for a copy of the Inspired Translation of the Bible, says:

This book is for a young man not yet a member of the church, a Campbellite. He is honest and looking his way to perfection. His interest is the result of our street work, and things look favorable for him to be with us soon. He spent several hours at my house last Sunday, asking questions, which I tried to answer, perhaps not so clearly as others could have done, but I hope, to his satisfaction. May the Lord help him to see clearly that he may act wisely. We still have the people from the Salt Land to contend against in our city. I, with other brethren, meet them often, and we try to put the truth before the people so that they may know for a fact that there is a great apostasy in these days and that the elders from Utah belong thereto. Elders Strange and Earle are doing the preaching chiefly. I assist as best I can; if only to hold the light, I feel that I am of some service and not idle; to see the work progress is my great desire.

GENERAL CHURCH NEWS.

INDEPENDENCE.

Quite a number of the Independence Saints are camping at Washington Park.

All evening meetings in the church will begin hereafter at 7:30 p. m. Keep it in memory and be on time.

Bro. A. H. Parsons arrived home from his field, called here by the unsatisfactory condition of Sr. Parsons' health.

Reunion closes Monday morning. There have, as yet, been no baptisms, but a good many have heard the doctrines of the church who will have a better understanding hereafter.

Bro. and Sr. Clark and daughters Mario and Clara, formerly of Chicago, more recently of Kansas City, have become residents of our city, and now occupy one of Bro. M. T. Short's houses. We welcome them.

Bro. and Sr. Edwin H. Garrett are happy in the possession of a nine and a half pound (by the scales) son, who arrived Friday night of last week. Our good brother, Dr. Joseph Mather, was chief of the reception committee.

A young artist has begun taking lessons at the home of Bro. and Sr. Victor Kress, on north Delaware street, and they are quite pleased with the progress he is making. His arrival was celebrated a week ago last Friday.

Three or four tidy, industrious girls who know how to do housework, and who are desirous of coming to Independence to live, can find good homes at fair wages, in families of the Saints, by inquiring of the editor of the ENSIGN.

Bro. and Sr. Luther Brackenbury's son, Byron, has been very low with an attack of typhoid fever the past two weeks. He is receiving the very best of attention, an excellent trained nurse being in attendance all the time. He has been repeatedly administered to and is doing as well as could be expected.

Presiding Bishop E. L. Kelley, president of the Board of Publication, made a brief call at the ENSIGN office, Wednesday morning, accompanied by his daughter Laura and Sr. Estella Bartholomew. Bro. Kelley and daughters returned home this Thursday morning. Bro. Kelley, having some matters requiring his presence.

The regular branch business meeting will be held in the church next Monday evening at 7:30. This will be an important meeting as delegates are to be elected to the district conference, the following Saturday. The report of the branch for the next six months will also be presented. Let there be a full attendance.

Bro. Harrington is busy packing his household goods and shipping them to Elwood City, Pennsylvania. Himself and family are preparing to depart tomorrow, Friday evening. We shall miss them, but are consoled in the thought that they will return here in due time. They are useful people in the Lord's work and will do good wherever they may be.

A refreshing rain came Thursday night of last week which brought a considerably lower temperature for a time. Friday was clear and the reunion started out in good shape, the first service being held at 8 p. m. with Bro. Columbus Scott, of Lamoni, Iowa, as speaker. About sixty tents were on the ground, and everybody appeared happy. Saturday another rain made things rather cool and damp, but Sunday was a fine, warm day, and there was a large attendance at all the services. Monday another hard rain came, but the balance of the week has been clear and warm. The sermons preached have been excellent, and the prayer services have been glorious. Bro. E. L. Kelley, Columbus Scott, F. C. Keck, Henry Sparling, M. T. Short, R. M. Elvin and Swen Swensen have so far been the preachers. President Joseph Smith arrived Wednesday evening, and preached this (Thursday) morning. One notable feature of this reunion is the very fair and impartial representation it is having in the Kansas City papers, the Times and Journal especially doing commendable work. There should be a far larger camp next year.

LAMONI, IOWA.

We had hardly expected to appear so soon again in the columns of the ENSIGN, but by request of the editor we have consented to assume once more the duties of correspondent.

Since coming to Lamoni as a family we have felt a measure of peace and contentment that was unexpected. We have made many pleasant acquaintances and found true and devoted Saints to the cause of Christ.

Quite a number of Saints are leaving for various reunions. Those who departed last week were Pres. Joseph Smith for Tabor, Iowa, thence to Independence; J. W. Wight, Tabor; Bishop E. L. Kelley and daughters Laura and Jeanette, Columbus Scott, Bro. and Sr. John Smith and Sr. Vida Elvin, all for Independence. Bishop Kelley will also attend the Stewartsville reunion, which opens on the 31st.

Bro. I. McCord, wife and son Archie were in the city a few days last week. They were en route overland to Missouri where they expect to purchase land. Bro. McCord advises us he will furnish a student for Graceland College the coming year.

Elder J. M. Stubbard left for his mission field, Gullands Grove district, on the 15th inst. He reports five baptized since last Sunday week at Harlan, Iowa.

Elder Fred A. Smith made a short stay in Lamoni last week. He preached a most excellent sermon Sunday evening, 19th inst., and departed the following Tuesday.

Dr. Bertha A. Greer returned from Chicago last Thursday. Sr. Greer's mother, Sr. Anderson of Kansas City, is visiting her.

Elder N. C. Enge from Washington, lately appointed missionary to Norway, arrived in Lamoni yesterday afternoon. He expects to be accompanied by Bro. M. P. Hanson of Plymouth, Mass.

They purpose sailing from Boston on September 8th.

On the 22d inst. the Sunday School held their annual picnic in the church grove. Though the weather was threatening in the morning a goodly number came and enjoyed the program at 11 o'clock, which consisted of recitations by the children, a vocal duet by Charlie and Alice Chase; vocal solo, Miss Clara Dudley; and speeches by Brn. G. W. Blair and D. J. Krahl. Lunch was spread at 12 m. and we have reason to believe was enjoyed greatly by all participants. Innocent games prepared for the children and social converse among the older ones brought to a close a most happy day.

The Sunday School and Religio district convention will be held at the Evergreen church, six miles from Lamoni, August 31st, September 1st and 2d. An excellent program has been announced.

The attendance at Sunday School yesterday was 371. Apostle Heman C. Smith was the speaker at 11 o'clock hour, and Elder R. S. Salyards occupied in the evening. The afternoon prayer service was well attended. Preaching service was held at Greenville church at 4 p. m. by Bro. D. J. Krahl, assisted by Bro. Newbury. Apostle J. R. Lambert preached at the Home Sunday evening. Elder Frank E. Cochran held services at the Surprise school house.

Apostle W. H. Kelley returned from his Missionfield Saturday morning.

Two baptisms occurred at the Home on Saturday evening, Sr. Savage and daughter Grace. GRACELAND COLLEGE opens September 10th.

CHICAGO, ILLINOIS.

Branch headquarters, 716 W. Van Buren St. Sunday meetings 2:45 and 7:45 p. m.; Lang Mission, 3411 Cottage Grove Ave., 10:45 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.; West Pullman branch, 748 119th St., 10:30 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.; 508 W. 37th St. (colored mission), 10:30 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.

We are grateful for the hearty responses of the Saints in sending ENSIGNS. We have received 606 at a postal expense to the senders of $1.98. As the season is waning we think we have enough for this year, so you may address to others who may still want them. Bro. E. J. Lang thinks he has received over a thousand.

The announced wedding of Sr. Gracie M. Williams and Mr. W. A. Webster occurred, and was very elaborate. Mr. R. B. Webster and Miss Florence Midgley were best man and bridesmaid. Sixty guests partook of a sumptuous supper. Independence, Moline, and Bowling Green were represented. The presents were fine and in part as follows [space too limited]. Prof. S. H. Rhys, with vocal talent and musical skill, added much to the enjoyment of the happy occasion. The happy couple, amid showers of rice, started at 11:30 for Kansas City, to be absent about a week, taking in the reunion. Returning, will reside in our city.

We were pleased to look upon the smiling face of Bro. John Burlington, of St. Joseph, Missouri, last evening at our services. He reports many changes in church circles in St. Joseph.

The incoming throngs will add over half a million to our already populous city. The G. A. R. encampment is the exciting occasion.

We were pleased to greet our veteran soldier, Bro. Joseph L. Terry, and wife, also our sister, Esther A. Smith, and husband, today at our home, to take in the city for a few days.

Bro. N. L. Cummins, of Michigan, Bro. F. B. Bailey and wife, Sr. Striley, Bro. Edward W. Voelpel and Sr. Voelpel, of Clinton, Iowa, and a sister from Nebraska, were among the devotees at church yesterday.

Now for another spiritual, rousing union service at the Lang mission, 3411 Cottage Grove avenue, commencing at three o'clock. Come everybody, and let us rejoice together.

J. M. TERRY.

305 Ogden Ave., Aug. 27.

ST. JOSEPH, MISSOURI.

Bro. Howard Molineaux, of St. Louis, has accepted a position with a wholesale house here, and is a regular attendant at our Sunday School and church services. We gladly welcome the young brother.

Bro. J. C. Foss occupied the pulpit at the brick church Sunday morning, and Bro. Guinand in the evening. Bro. Foss preached at the Aspey mission, and Bro. M. Shaw at Elwood Sunday evening. Several of the local brethren fill appointments in different parts of the city each Sunday.

Our Sunday School has an outing at Lake Contrary on Thursday. Special street cars have been engaged, and all are going for a good time.

Sr. E. J. Blair and Bro. and Sr. John Smith, of Lamoni, passed through the city en route to the Washington Park reunion, and took dinner with friends and relations Saturday.

Bro. Robt. Winning is in New York city, on business.

DENVER, COLORADO.

Church, corner of 22d and Arapahoe Sts. Services Sunday:—Sunday School at 9:45 a. m.; preaching at 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.; sacrament service the first Sunday in each month at 6 p. m. Prayer meeting Wednesday evening. Zion's Religio-Literary Society Friday evening.

The weather is cooler with but little moisture.

Our conference at Wray, Colorado, was a decided success.

Bro. Joseph Luff and E. F. Shupe returned from conference Monday.

Bro. Hansen came up from Wray, Thursday. Sr. Hansen fell from her wheel a short time ago and broke her arm, but at this writing is getting along nicely, and with her sister, Mrs. Shinnick, will leave in a few days for Detroit, Michigan.

We cannot give the names of all that attended the conference, but there were lots of them. If you want to have a good time with the Saints, go to Wray.

The Doayer Sunday School will picnic at Golden, Labor Day.

Bro. Joseph Schmutz is lying very low at St. Luke's hospital, with little hope of recovery.

A fair attendance at the church Sunday morning to hear Bro. Luff; the sermon was very instructive and we hope good was done. In the evening Bro. A. B. Hansen was the speaker.

LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA.

Our ten days' meeting was a success in every way. We had with us of the general ministry the patriarch, Alexander Hale Smith, Apostle Gomer T. Griffiths; of the seventy, J. F. Burton and T. W. Chatburn; High Priest A. Carmichael; elders, D. A. Anderson, C. W. Earl and Thomas Brown. Quite a number of the lesser priesthood. The Saints were encouraged and many outsiders reached; much prejudice was removed and the columns of the city dailies were at our disposal. We took advantage of this as we had time. What a change is noticeable in this direction in the past two years. The grounds were delightful; a large pavilion, well lighted; a piano; large dining room and kitchen with about seven large bed rooms; plenty of dishes and nearly everything necessary for the entire camp. The whole grounds were well lighted and watered all for the small sum of $25.00. We could have accommodated five times as many people.

Bro. Chatburn only remained a couple of days and then returned to his excellent opening at Orange. Brn. Burton and A. H. Smith left, one on Wednesday and the other on Friday, in order to attend the two days' meeting at San Bernardino. Bro. Griffiths and his daughter, Lulu, left on Sunday night for the north.

There will be a two days' meeting at Garden Grove the coming Saturday and Sunday, with Brn. Smith, Burton, Anderson and Chatburn in attendance.

Now a word as to co-operation in the culinary department. I am in no ways discouraged therewith, but am forced to conclusion that it will never be a success until each one does his part. I would advise all those in other districts who contemplate attempting a community table that they hire all of the work done and then each one pay his quota. When the Saints do all of the work, the very thing for which co-operation is instituted is not realized. Most of the sisters go to a reunion to get a rest from the drudgery of housework. If the cooking is done by hired help then in most places you will find no trouble in securing enough waiters who will serve the table for their board. I am assured that success will be realized in this way.

If this is not feasible the next best way is to have some brother run a boarding tent and make a very low price for meals. At our meetings we taxed the Saints ten cents per meal; we will come out some ahead at this price. We hired a cook and the brethren and sisters took turns at waiting. When it is considered how much higher living is in California than in your country, I do not see why the meals could not be served as low as six or seven cents there. I am satisfied where the meals are all served together and the work done by hired help that the sisters especially will get the best results from reunions.

Please tell Bro. Lincoln that we are willing for him to "claim" that San Francisco is the best branch north of the Tehichipac, but we demand proof when he comes south. Down here we claim everything and grant nothing. — Come down and visit us.

There are some indications of an early fall here. If we do not have rain this winter I do not know what will become of the people. Were it not for the irrigation and our transportation facilities we would be in a similar condition to that of India.

A Mrs. Griffiths came all the way from Oregon to attend our reunion, and she is now a sister.

Mr. Haxton, who has been acquainted with the church for six years in Wisconsin, will be baptized this week.

Please express our thanks to the dear Saints in different parts of the country who have assisted us in our church building. Will send a list of names soon.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA.

Services at Golden West Hall, 320 Post street, every Sunday. Sunday School 10 a. m., preaching 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.; prayer meeting first Sunday of each month at 12:15 noon. Elder C. A. Parkin presiding elder, residence 3010 16th street.

Sunday, August 5th, we had preaching at 11 a. m. by H. L. Holt, missionary en route to Oregon. In the evening John A. Saxe was the speaker. At 12:15 we assembled for sacrament and prayer meeting. There was good attendance, our hall being well filled. Many prayers were offered and testimony given; a good and peaceful spirit prevailed throughout.

August 1st, Chas. A. Parkin was called to Napa, to officiate at the funeral of Harriet Emma Lea, daughter of Elder J. H. Parr, nineteen years old. The services were held at the undertaker's parlors at 2 p. m.

It was prayer meeting night at the Religio on Friday evening. Fred Lawn, of Santa Cruz, was asked to preside, and he did so quite nobly. The evening was pleasantly and profitably spent.

Brn. D. A. Anderson and Schmidt are at Lorin, Alameda county, with the tent, doing good work.

Our Sunday School holds its sessions every Sunday morning, and is doing well under the supervision of Sr. Ella Lytle.

On the 12th D. A. Anderson was our speaker, and delivered a very excellent discourse, with which all were well pleased. In the evening your correspondent had the pleasure of addressing the Saints and friends on the subject of "Beware of false prophets." He enjoyed fine liberty in defending the cause.

There was a good attendance at our branch prayer meeting Wednesday evening, and quite an interest was shown in what was said and done, nearly all taking part in the meeting.

Again we had a full house at the Religio and a very pleasant evening was spent. Friday is always welcome among our young people, as they enjoy the literary exercises of the evening and also the present historical lessons in the Book of Mormon.

LETTER DEPARTMENT.

SKIDMORE, MISSOURI, July 22. Editor Ensign—On the 3d inst. I made a short visit home, found four of my family with the whooping cough, two of them quite dangerous, but before I left they were some better. The worry and care to which my wife had to be exposed in caring for them and the losing of sleep brought on a chill and suffered much for a few days. Having arrangements made for preaching I had to return to my field of labor. Trusting that our heavenly Father will care for our dear ones at home.

On Saturday the 14th I preached at Sweet Home branch, also spoke Sunday at 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. I found a little band of good, warm hearted Saints there. I promised them to return soon, at which time I expect to take the gospel tent to Ravenwood and hold a protracted effort for two weeks or more.

On Monday the 16th I met Bro. C. P. Welsh near Badison; he had been to Guilford and preached for the Saints over Sunday. We took "Fannie," the gospel horse, and went to R. K. Ross's, a 27 mile trip, there met J. Arthur Davis. Arrangements were made to begin services at the Christian church located eight miles west and south of Bro. Ross'. Bro. C. P. will be in charge, expecting to continue ten days or more. I opened up with the first sermon on the night of the 20th.

Yesterday the 21st we hoisted the gospel tent in the yard of Bro. E. C. Wildermuth. This is about one-half mile out of town northeast. The "Free Methodists" are holding tent meetings on the west edge of the town. So those who want Free Methodist doctrine can be accommodated, and those who want the gospel of the Son of God—we are here to tell it to them. We expect to continue here for a week or more, and then the tent will go to Barnard for the Nodaway district reunion beginning August 3d to 13th. The outlook is very bright for this reunion to be one among the best, and the invitation is extended to the editor of the Ensign and all other good people to come to the "Barnard Reunion."

Your brother in the gospel,
D. C. WINTZ.

HUNT, Arkansas, Aug. 10.

Dear Brothers and Sisters—It has been several months since I have heard a word from any of you, as I am one of the isolated ones and have not been taking the church publications, which I so much miss, but as I was writing to have the Ensign renewed I thought probably I could say something that would benefit others.

We have had no preaching here by our elders in four years until in July Bro. J. W. Jackson came in with his charts and preached a few times here in the grove, the trustees not allowing him to enter the school-house. Congregations were small, but consisted of the best people of the neighborhood and many are believing. He made everything so plain by the charts that all who heard him say it is surely the doctrine of the Bible and desire him to come again. He baptized a man and his wife living on the mountain seven miles from here.

Bro. Jackson has improved in the last four years. I do not know that I ever heard any one of older experience do better.

My only son came to see me after an absence of six years; said he had not seen a Saint in that time. That son joined the church when twelve years old, is now thirty, has not been associated with Saints but little since he became a member, yet he is firm in the faith. Some say the children have no need being in the church;

why not? That boy was healed by the power of God when ten years old; saw others healed; so he had that testimony that cannot be taken away from him. Saints pray for him and I that we may prove faithful and be found worthy when the Savior comes, and that the way may be opened here for our elders to show the beauties of the gospel to this people.

This is a lonely life away from the one family, so much to discourage, yet my faith has never failed me yet. I am always found defending the cause, contending for that faith that was delivered to the Saints, loaning my old papers, reading to those that cannot read and there are many in this land with locks white with age that cannot read. Pray for me.

CALLIE HICKS.

FULTON, RICHMOND, Va., Aug 16.

Editor Ensign—I feel like chatting with the dear Saints, brothers and sisters in Christ Jesus, a few minutes this morning, and those of you who have no companionship in the faith, know how one yearns for someone to speak to once in awhile; I feel thankful for the Ensign and other church papers as a means of interchange of thoughts, hopes and words of encouragement.

I went up to the country, and stayed over Sunday with Bro. and Sr. Willie and Ocean Topham; found them firm in the faith, and rejoicing in the truth. And as Willie said, we had a testimony meeting all day long Sunday. An aunt of theirs, a young lady from New Jersey, was there; she had stopped with me for a week, and I went with her. I had many good talks with her and tried to sow some of the gospel seed in her heart; I think the soil is good, warm and mellow, and hope it may bring forth much fruit in the future. She said after reading the epitome of our faith, and a few tracts and papers I sent her, she felt better about Willie and Ocean joining us; she could not see any thing contrary to God's word, and although her pastor told her there was not much difference in our faith and the "Mormons" of Utah, yet she said she had faith enough in their good sense and sound judgment to feel sure they would put out if they found this church did teach polygamy. A far more christian course than so many over-righteous ones follow of berating and vilifying and abusing those who accept this faith.

Charity that thinketh no evil and hopeth all things, that rejoiceth not in evil but rejoiceth in the truth is quite rare in the orthodox churches of today, and is very refreshing when found.

I said to their brother Eddie, who is not a member of any church, "Well, Eddie, how is it? Does Willie's and Ocean's change of faith make any worse people of them?" "No, indeed, it is religion all right," he replied. He said he had not read the Bible much, but he had read it enough to see we taught the truth. I hope he may soon see the necessity of obeying, and not wait till he has to learn obedience through suffering, as many do; but, oh, I am so thankful for a gospel of hope for those who are careless and indifferent. The Lord wants them to come, and if wooing words of the gospel, the Father's love words, won't win them to obedience, then he will apply the lash of chastisement, as do our fathers in the flesh, and for the same reason that a good father does, to correct and make better, not out of a feeling of revenge and spite. I do thank God for a clearer understanding of his nature.

A lady of the Baptist church of which Willie was a member, said to him, "I am sorry you ever joined the Latter Day Saints." "Why," said Willie. "Oh, we have no one to lead in prayer at Sunday School," to which he replied he would go and open Sunday School for them if they wished him to, but they don't seem to desire him to do so. A poor showing for a church with as large a resident membership as that, and two deacons in it. But they are the deacons of whom I wrote that the pastor said while ordaining them, "I do not lay on hands because we believe anything is imparted by that act, as we do out believe there is, it is only a sign of their setting apart to the office of a deacon."

However, I must say in justice that one at least of the deacons. Dr. B., is a praying man, and no doubt would be ready to lead in prayer if he could always be there, but what ails the rest of the members? If nothing is imparted to their officers by the ordinance of laying on of hands, what can the membership have who hold only to a part of the form of godliness?

The pastor of the church met Bro. Goodrich last winter, and so misrepresented their conversation, making out that he perfectly whipped Bro. Goodrich, and completely shut him up; that Bro. G. got angry, etc., while all the witnesses say it was right the other way. Some of us remarked at the time that something would happen to him to cause his true character to be shown up. Well, he became implicated in some way in a murder trial that took place in that county, and made statements contradictory to the truth, and his members and one deacon, if not both, knew it, and the church was about asking him to resign, but he forestalled them, and resigned without as much as a word of explanation. Now his reputation is all gone, torn to shreds, and he was the man who would have gotten some one to help run Bro. G. away had he not left when he did.

I wish some good, wide awake, spiritual elder could be sent here to assist Bro. G. when he comes back. Now, is there not one of the right sort laying around idle somewhere that wants to do something for the Master's cause here? If there is one who feels to make His cause first, I will be glad at any time to welcome him, and entertain him as best I can. I think my letter is long enough for this time, and not wishing to crowd out more interesting matter I will close. May the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with us all, and may we all be found ready and waiting "when he cometh."

CAYPOLA, Cal., Aug. 12.

Editor Ensign—I am glad to report that I am once more at work; it seemed for a while that I was not going to take up the line of march again, thanks to God and the prayers of the Saints.

I left home some three weeks ago, and I must not omit to tell of a pleasant surprise that was given me the last night I was at home; it was something that often occurs in Los Angeles though. On the above mentioned evening a knock was heard at the front door, on opening it several of the Saints presented themselves, who were soon followed by others, until a large part of the branch were assembled in the sitting-room; after greeting and a few moments' pleasant conversation, Bro. T. W. Williams arose, and in behalf of the branch, stated that the object of the gathering was to present me with a purse that the Saints had made up of $22.00, which he handed me as a gift from the Los Angeles branch. I felt, and still do, very thankful to them for so liberal a gift. I did not feel, as I told them, that I had any claim on them for anything of the kind, as I had not been laboring among them of late; but such causes one to go out into the world with warmer feelings and a stouter heart; it does me, and I think I am no exception in this case.

Well, I found Brn. Chase and Allen holding forth at this place in our new gospel tent. The interest is not very good but is increasing some. These seaside resorts are poor places in which to preach this gospel, and don't purpose to have it even given to them.

I stopped at San Francisco and Oakland a few days, it seemed good to meet old friends again and make some new ones; the work in San Francisco seems to be in a good condition; at Oakland I had the very great pleasure of meeting Bro. and Sr. Jasper Wixom, of San Bernardino, so well and favorably known in southern California; it was a surprise indeed to meet them so far from home. I was invited to go sight seeing with them, so went and took in the beauties and wonders of "Golden Gate Park." We gazed upon things both new and old, on the bed on which Napoleon slept, and the chair in which he sat while he swayed the scepter of power; on people who had lived in times of the Pharaoh; on the lordly bison of the western plains, calling to mind the wondrous tales of the past when he roamed the broad plains of the West, almost monarch of all he surveyed; and on old brulu of California fame; I was quite tired when we concluded to stop seeing, and so were those who piloted me around.

August 15th, Santa Cruz.—Moved here four days ago; set up our tents and hung out our shingle, stating that we were here to do business on the old Jerusalem plan, but one came to see what the plan was, I suppose she came for that, but she did not remain long enough to find out; it looked a little disheartening; Bro. Chase felt, well I will not attempt to tell, 'cause he might not like it. I did not feel real good over the outlook; one thing we both did feel like, and that was praying, which we did, and both were impressed that it was our duty to go on the street and tell the story.

Now, Mit and I have never had any great relish for that kind of work, have always supposed, kind of took it for granted, that street preaching was not our forte, we have had quite varied experiences, but none along that line, nor have we desired any. But the instructions of the Spirit must be heeded, so about 8 p. m. two fellows might have been seen marching down to the center of town, one carrying an organ, the other a stool. "How did they look?" "Quite brave; but I am not going to tell how we felt; it was our first effort of the kind; the sisters said Mit did look real gritty; well perhaps he looked that way. We opened up with four small boys and a dog or two, I think, as an audience, and for once Mit wanted me to help him slog, and that was a new experience, so you see it was all new; well we sang and the audience listened, and, better still, it grew until it became quite good in size, which encouraged us, as did the presence of some of the Saints who came along and joined in the singing; after singing awhile we did a little preaching and invited them to the tent, and quite a number came, so matters began to look a little more cheerful. But I am not much in love with street preaching, as it is hard enough. I think the gunties have about all the gospel they want.

We will remain here until time to attend the reunion at Oakland. Saints desiring tent work done will please write us at San Jose, California.

Editor Ensign—As I have never written to the Ensign yet, I feel desirous of writing a few lines of testimony to the Saints and readers of your most interesting paper. It is about a year since I first obeyed the true gospel of Jesus Christ, being baptized and confirmed by Elder B. St. John. I thank God for the blessings I do enjoy in this latter day gospel; I feel, dear Saints and readers, that I have a great reason to thank God for his goodness and mercy to me as I had been ailing for about three years or more, and some of my friends and neighbors and the doctor thought I would never see better days as I was in a rather dangerous condition; but I improved in health a little and got a little stronger till last spring again I was quite poorly, scarcely able to do any of my work; and there not being an elder here I was preparing to go and see the doctor, but as it was but just a little after noon the day before, Elder John Shields came along unexpectedly, and the thought of going to the doctor banished from me. Shortly after Bro. Shields' arrival I was administered to, and I can truly say I feel better now than I have for a number of months. I feel, dear Saints, that I have received a great blessing from God, and I feel that I am going to receive a greater blessing if I strive to do His will, and the earnest prayer of my heart is for the world that there is a blessed reality in living the religion of Jesus Christ.

I ask the prayers of all the Saints that I may never leave nor forsake my dear Master who has done so much for me, but that I may prove faithful unto the end.

COMMENTS ON SWEDENBORG.

LAMONI, Ia., July 21, '00.

Editor Ensign.

Dear Brother:—The following letter was written to a friend in acknowledgment of a book received from him entitled, "Heaven and Hell," by Emanuel Swedenborg. By request of some of my friends here, I send it for publication, provided, of course, that you consider it worthy of a place in your columns.

G. L. JONES.

Dear Friend:—I have received the book you sent me, entitled "Heaven and Hell," by Emanuel Swedenborg. I have examined the same carefully and thought, fully, and, though I find some good and valuable thoughts therein, I find others which I cannot approve, and which I hardly think you, yourself, accept.

Of course, it cannot be expected that I can give a thorough review of so large a work within the limits of a letter, but I will notice a few of his more prominent ideas such as appear to form the framework of the structure he has erected.

In the first place, he takes away the entire meaning of the Bible by his peculiar methods of spiritualizing. Notice, for instance, this description of the second coming of Christ, given in the introduction to his work. He says:

"By the coming of the Lord in the clouds of heaven, with power and glory, is meant, His presence in the Word, and revelation; by clouds is signified the sense of the letter of the Word; and by glory, the internal sense of the Word."

But what said the angels at the time of Christ's ascension?

"This same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." (Acts 1: 11).

How did Jesus go into heaven? With a real body of flesh and bones (see Luke 24: 39), through real clouds, into a real heaven.

What says Paul on the same subject?

"For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first: Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord." (1 Thes 4: 16, 17).

Shall we be caught up together in the letter of the Word, to meet an intangible something that knows not time, space or material?

Again, what saith Zechariah on the same subject?

"And one shall say unto him, What are these wounds in thy hands? Then he shall answer, Those with which I was wounded in the house of my friends."—Zech. 13: 6.

If Christ is to come only in the letter and spirit of his word, how can any one see his hands and the wounds therein? It would be impossible. All these passages and all others relating to his second coming imply a real, tangible body of flesh and bones; the same body, in fact, with which he ascended into heaven after his crucifixion.

Again, Mr. S. says (p. 114, par. 208):

"As soon as an angel of the third heaven looks down into a society of the second, and speaks with any one there, his third degree is closed; which being closed, he is deprived of his wisdom, for his wisdom resides in the third degree, and he has none in the second and first. These are the things which are understood by the words of our Lord in Matthew: 'He that is on the housetop, let him not go down to take what is in his house; and he who is in the field, let him not return back to take his garment.'" (Matt. 24: 17, 18)."

If, however, we read the whole chapter, we shall see that Christ had just been predicting the destruction of the temple, and his disciples were greatly surprised and were feeling considerably exercised over it, and they were now asking further information in regard to it. He then gives them this warning:

"When ye therefore shall see the abomination of desolation spoken of by Daniel the prophet stand in the holy place, (whose readeth, let him understand:) Then let them which be in Judæa flee into the mountains: Let him which is on the housetop not come down to take anything out of his house: Neither let him which is in the field return back to take his clothes."—Matt. 24: 15-18.

Where was the holy place? It was the temple. According to Luke's account of the same interview, Jesus says, "When ye shall see Jerusalem compassed with armies, know that the desolation thereof is nigh. Then let them which are in Judæa flee to the mountains; and let them which are in the midst of it depart out; and let not them that are in the countries enter thereinto." (Luke 21: 20, 21).

These sayings of our Lord, taken together, clearly foreshow that Jerusalem would be besieged by armies; that it would be captured and desolated; that at some time during the siege there would be an opportunity for the Lord's disciples to escape; that the opportunity would occur just about the time that the besieging armies should gain a foothold in the temple; that the opportunity for escape would be very brief, and that the escape would have to be made in great haste, or, as we would say, on the spur of the moment.

Now, history informs us that the siege took place exactly as the Savior predicted, and that when the besieging armies had gained a foothold in the temple, Cestius, the Roman general, for some unknown reason, withdrew his armies from the city, for a short time, and that our Lord's disciples, remembering his words of warning, and understanding them literally, improved the opportunity thus afforded and made their escape. They made it at the only time that it was possible. It could not have been done either sooner or later, as the way would not then have been open.

Now, in the light of these historical facts, I ask, which interpretation of our Savior's words should be accepted as correct, the literal or the spiritual? If the disciples had understood them spiritually (according to Mr. S's interpretation), they would have remained in the city and shared the sad fate of those who knew nothing of this warning. How fortunate for them that they had not learned the new interpretation!

In order to give a more full and explicit understanding of Mr. S's ideas of the written word and of his disposition to spiritualize away its entire meaning, changing its statements into something entirely different from the thought expressed by the plain language of the Scriptures, I will here quote a few passages from his "Apocalypse Revealed," to which he has referred so frequently. Take, for instance, the first chapter of Revelation. He says:

"John to the seven churches," signifies to all who are in the christian world, where the Word is, and by it the Lord is known, and who draw near to the church: "Which are in Asia," signifies to those who from the Word are in the light of the truth." "And every eye shall see him," signifies that all will acknowledge him, who, through affection, are in the understanding of divine truth: "And they who pierced Him," signifies that they also will see, who are in falsities in the church."

"Twas in the Island called Patmos," signifies a state and place where he could be enlightened."

"And I turned to see the voice that was speaking with me," signifies the inversion of the state of those who are in good of life as to the perception of truth in the Word, when they turn themselves to the Lord."

"Clothed with a garment down to the feet," signifies the preceding divine which is the divine truth."

"And his eyes as a flame of fire," signifies the divine wisdom of the divine love: "And his feet like unto fine brass, as if glowing in a furnace," signifies the divine good natural: "And his voice as the voice of many waters," signifies the divine truth natural."

Chapter II. "Unto the angel of the church in Ephesus write," signifies to those and concerning those who primarily regard truths of doctrine and not goods of life."

"And unto the angel of the church in Smyrna write," signifies to those and concerning those who are in goods of life, but in falsities as to doctrine."

"And unto the angel of the church in Pergamos write," signifies to those and concerning those who place the all of the church in good works, and not anything in truths of doctrine."

"And unto the angel of the church in Thyatira write," signifies to those and concerning those who are in the faith from charity, and thence in good works; and also to those and concerning those who are in faith separated from charity, and thence in evil works."

In commenting on the statement, "And he sent and signified it by his angel unto his servant John" (Rev. 1: 1), Mr. S. says:

"By the Lord's twelve apostles were meant all within the church who are in truths from good and in the abstract sense; all things of the church; and by Peter, all who are in faith, abstractly faith itself; by James, they who are in charity and abstractly charity itself; and by John, they who are in good of life from charity and its faith, and abstractly good itself of life therefrom. That these things were meant by John, James, and Peter in the word of the evangelists, may be seen in the small work on the 'New Jerusalem and its Heavenly Doctrine,' published in London in 1758."

I might quote numerous other passages, but the foregoing will give a fair idea of the entire work.

Now, Jesus says that except a man receive the kingdom of heaven (that is, the teachings whereby he may attain that kingdom) as a little child, he can in no wise enter therein. And again, we are told in the Scriptures that the way of holiness is so plain that the wayfaring man, though he be a fool, need not err therein. But what little child or what wayfaring man of mediocre attainments (or of high attainments either, for that matter) would ever understand those passages as Mr. S. interprets them? Let us take a few passages of Scripture and for the names of Peter, James and John substitute Mr. S's definition of those words and see what kind of sense they make.

"And Jesus, walking by the sea of Galilee, saw two brethren, Faith and Andrew his brother, casting a net into the sea: for they were fishers."

"And going from thence, he saw other two brethren, Charity, the son of Zebedee, and Good of life from Charity and its Faith, in a ship with Zebedee their father, mending their nets: and he called them."

"And Faith having a sword drew it, and smote the high priest's servant and cut off his right ear."

"And as Faith was beneath in the palace, there cometh one of the maids of the high priest: And when she saw Faith warming himself, she looked upon him and said, 'And thou also wast with Jesus of Nazareth.' But Faith began to curse and swear, saying, 'I know not this man of whom ye speak.'"

As to the seven churches and the Isle of Patmos, they had an actual and tangible existence and their location can be found in any classical atlas; and Peter, James and John were real persons (not myths, qualities or principles) and John's banishment to the Isle of Patmos was a historical fact.

Now, what mortal, taking the Bible for his guide to eternal life, would ever be able in this probationary state and its environments to interpret its language correctly, if its real meaning is according to Mr. S's interpretation?

But if the Bible does not mean what it says, or if its language is so obscure that a man must ascend into heaven (as Mr. S. claims to have done) and there be instructed by the angels, before he can penetrate its meaning, of what value or benefit, as a guide, can it be to us? If it does not mean what it says, but something far different, how can it properly be called a revelation?

But Mr. S., at the very beginning of his book, "Heaven and Hell", makes a statement as a fundamental principle of his doctrine, which, if it were true, would render our acceptance of the Bible as our guide a very serious and even a perilous matter for us all. I will quote his own words:

"Those who come from the church out of the world, with whom there is an idea of three Divines, cannot be admitted into heaven, since their thought wander: from one to another; and it is not lawful there to think three and say one. * * * Those, therefore, who, in the world have distinguished the Divine into three, and received a separate idea concerning each, and have not made that idea one, and concentrated it in the Lord, cannot be received: for there is given in heaven a communication of all thoughts; on which account, if one should come thither who thinks three and says one, he would be immediately discovered and rejected."—p. 10, par. 2.

Now every chapter in the New Testament which speaks of Christ or of the Holy Ghost, either states directly, or clearly implies, that they are to be distinguished from the Father and from each other. Let us examine a few passages.

"And lo a voice from heaven saying, 'This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased.'" (Matt. 3: 17). He did not say, "This is my beloved self in whom I am well pleased."

"My Father is greater than I" (John 14: 28), not, "I am greater than myself."

"I came down from heaven, not to do mine own will, but the will of him that sent me."—John 6: 38.

"For the Father judgeth no man, but hath committed all judgment unto the Son."—John 5: 30.

"I can of mine own self do nothing: as I hear, I judge: and my judgment is just; because I seek not mine own will, but the will of my Father which hath sent me."—John 5: 30.

"I came forth from the Father and am come into the world: again, I leave the world and go to the Father."—John 16: 28.

"Father, if thou be willing, remove this cup from me: nevertheless, not my will, but thine, be done."—Luke 22: 42.

"My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?"—Matt. 27: 46; Mark 15: 34.

"And when Jesus had cried with a loud voice, he said, Father, into thy hands I commend my Spirit."—Luke 23: 46.

"Behold, I see the heavens opened and the Son of Man standing on the right hand of God."—Acts 7: 56.

I might quote numerous other passages to the same effect, but the foregoing, I think, are amply sufficient to prove that Jesus and his Father were not the same individual person. If they were, all these passages would be false, trifling, ridiculous and wholly inconsistent with the character of Christ.

The strongest passage that can be found to support Mr. S's position is this, "I and my Father are one." (John 10: 30). But the language of that statement is no stronger than that referring to the marriage covenant, viz, "And they twain shall be one flesh. Wherefore they are no more twain, but one flesh." (Matt. 19: 5, 6). Those are Christ's own words.

Now, will any one claim that at marriage the two parties lose their individuality, so that one of them can eat, drink and breathe for both, and so that even death will be impossible to either one apart from the other, seeing that they are both one and the same individual person?

Jesus and his Father are indeed one, but in what respect? They are one in love, one in goodness, one in perfection, one in thought, will and purpose. Jesus himself makes that point clear in his prayer for his disciples, when he says, "Holy Father, keep through thine own name those whom thou hast given me, that they may be one as we are." (John 17: 11). "And the glory which thou gavest me I have given them; that they may be one, even as we are one." v. 22.

Now, did Christ mean that his disciples were all to lose their individuality and become merged into one and the same person? Certainly not.

Mr. S. tries to sustain his position by quoting John 10: 38: "That ye may know, and believe, that the Father is in me and I in him." But this also is clearly explained in Jesus' own prayer, when he prays, "That they all may be one; as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us." "I in them, and thou in me, that they may be made perfect in one."—John 17: 21, 23.

Has the Holy Ghost also an individuality? Let us see.

"And Jesus, when he was baptized, went up straightway out of the water: and lo the heavens were opened unto him, and he saw the Spirit of God descending like a dove, and lighting upon him: And lo a voice from heaven saying, This is my beloved Son; in whom I am well pleased."—Matt. 3: 16, 17.

Now that Holy Spirit could not have been the Father, for he was speaking from heaven after the Spirit had descended to the earth. Neither could the Spirit have been Jesus himself, for the Spirit was seen descending like a dove and lighting upon Jesus.

And again:

"And I will pray the Father and he shall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you forever; Even the Spirit of truth; whom the world cannot receive, because it seeth him not, neither knoweth him." John 14: 16, 17.

Another Comforter than whom? Than Jesus himself. It is, therefore, evident that Jesus and the Comforter could not have been the same person.

"But the Comforter, which is the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in my name, he shall teach you all things and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you."—John 14: 26.

"But when the Comforter is come, whom I will send unto you from the Father, even the Spirit of truth which proceedeth from the Father, he shall testify of me."—John 15: 26.

"It is expedient for you that I go away: for if I go not away, the Comforter will not come unto you; but if I depart, I will send him unto you. * * * Howbeit when he, the Spirit of truth, is come, he will guide you into all truth: for he shall not speak of himself; but whatsoever he shall hear, that shall he speak; and he will show you things to come."—John 16: 7, 13.

Thus we see that the Comforter, or Holy Ghost, was not the Father himself, but was to be sent from the Father by the Son. Neither was he to speak of himself, but was to speak those things which he should hear from the Father, even as Jesus had done.

Now, if the words of Jesus are to be taken at their true value (and we certainly have no other rule by which to interpret them), we are forced to the conclusion that there are three Divines—Mr. S. to the contrary, notwithstanding—and that it is just as allowable to think of them separately and to conceive a distinct idea of each one, as to think of the several members of a human family separately.

Now, is it conceivable that an all-wise and infinitely just and loving Father would give to us (his children) a book for our guide to eternal life, telling us that it contains a revelation of himself and of his will concerning us, that we must live in strict accordance with the instructions therein contained, and then judge and condemn us to everlasting torment because we took him at his word, and believed that when he gave us instructions, he meant just what he said? Impossible! Such a course would be in direct contradiction to the character of the Almighty.

I believe in three heavens, but not exactly in the sense that Mr. S. does. There is the highest, or celestial (and by highest I mean highest in glory), which Paul compares to the glory of the sun (1 Cor. 15: 40, 41); the second, or terrestrial, compared by Paul to the glory of the moon; and the lowest, compared to the glory of the stars. All these heavens I believe to be real places, substantial entities, conformable to the laws of time and space, and that we shall dwell in them and not they in us. The Lord in heaven measures the time of the world, appointing the times for great and important events, and the duration must be the same throughout the universe, whether measured by the same standard or by some other. And since we are to have material bodies in the resurrection—for our bodies are to be fashioned like unto Christ's glorious body (Phil. 3: 21), which is a material body composed of flesh and bones (Luke 24: 39)—we shall require space to dwell in and a substantial ground to walk upon, unless we would prefer to float around in empty space through the everlasting ages.

I believe there will be degrees of goodness and varieties of disposition in the next life, and that we may choose certain ones as our special associates because they seem more congenial to our natures than some others do, just as we have our special friendships here. But I cannot agree with Mr. S., that we cannot associate with, or even see and recognize any who differ from us in the least degree in disposition or in the amount of their goodness. Such a heaven would be too clannish for God's people. Moreover, there would be too much sameness in it. I believe there will be variety over there. I also believe that our minds and memories will be so improved and quickened that we shall remember our experiences here, better, even than we do now; that we shall remember the friends whom we loved while here, and shall wish to see them again. If we and our friends shall be so fortunate as to reach that happy place, I believe we shall see and recognize one another, and rejoice in the meeting. Abraham, Lazarus and the rich man all saw and recognized one another, although they probably differed somewhat in their natures and their several degrees of goodness.

I can agree with Mr. S. that love to God and to one another constitutes the chief happiness of heaven, for that is the doctrine that Christ taught. Moreover, everyone who has a heart so constituted that it can love with a pure and unselfish affection, knows the truth of this from his own experience. If everyone loved God with all his heart and his neighbor as himself, this earth itself would be a heaven; and for that reason, caste and clannishness would be out of place in heaven. They would be out of their element there.

I believe with Mr. S. that angels, and God also, have the human form; for when they have visited the earth, they have been taken for men, as was the case when they appeared to Abraham and to Lot. (See Gen. 18 and 19). Paul says, "Be not forgetful to entertain strangers: for thereby some have entertained angels unawares." (Heb. 13: 2). John says (Rev. 22: 8, 9), "I fell down to worship before the feet of the angel which showed me these things. Then saith he unto me, See thou do it not: for I am thy fellow servant,
