THE NEW YEAR.

Yesterday now is a part of forever, Bound up in a sheaf which God holds tight, With glad days and sad days and bad days which never Shall visit us more with their bloom and their blight. Their fullness of sunshine or sorrowing night.

Let them go, since we cannot retrieve them-Cannot undo and cannot atone; God, in his mercy, receive, forgive them; Only the new days are our own-Today is ours, and today alone.

Every day is a fresh beginning; Listen, my soul, to the glad refrain;
And, in spite of old sorrow and old sinning,
And puzzles forecasted and possible pain, Take heart with the day and begin again, -Susan Coolidge.

THOUGHTS ON THE NEW YEAR.

Like all things earthly what was twelve months ago the new year has become old and passed away, but what treasures, what secrets, have been gathered into its record, some of which will not be given up until the year's generation stands before God This record contains not only the in judgment. acts of individual men as such, but there are in the world almost numberless organizations, business, social, fraternal, religious, and civil, and these too have made their records of deeds which have been either for or against the world's true progress. Upon the record made these bodies are proving their availability or non-availability, as instruments in the hands of God in fulfilling his purposes.

The passing of the old year carries the world into a new cycle of time, bringing new opportunities, and in many instances returning the "bread cast upon the waters" in former years. In the material realm the year will (we trust) produce the autumnal harvests of its springtime sowing, but it will also bring forth the fruits of previous years' plantings; so in the moral and spiritual realm, the year may bring to us some of the returns of actions performed within its span, though the harvests of other years' plantings may also be ours, while still others will await their time of ripening for years yet to come.

How important it is that we carefully judge ourselves and determine the nature of each policy we have adopted, of each habit we have formed, of our alliances and associations, and consider what will be the narvest of these things. In the fields we sow good seed and look forward with joyful anticipation to the harvest to follow, knowing that whether it be thirty, sixty, or a hundred fold, it will be a harvest of good; so in the higher things of life shall we not sow "good seed," and look forward with joy and peace to the good which is sure to follow?

In determining our course we need an infallible guide. To follow the impulses of our own natures will be disastrous, for in them are mingled both good and evil; to follow the impulses and leadings of other men is no better for their natures are like ours. There is but one perfect leader, and it is he of whom God said: "Behold, I have given him for a leader and commander to the people," even his Son Jesus Christ, whose nature was divine, and who had no sin. Him we may follow with perfect safety, and if we see under his direction the harvest cannot be otherwise than good and perfect.

he world celebrates the birthday of the Son of God though in some degree the honor given him upon this day is formal and from motives similar to those which actuated the scribes and Pharisees to guild the tombs of the prophets. We would that in all men the service of praise to God for the gift of his Son might spring from hearts filled with true devotion such as can be had only by those who recognize the leadership of Christ by faithfully following him. Celebration based upon this motive would continue throughout the year as spontaneously and continuously as water flows from a foun-

Loyalty to a leader or a commander is shown not so much by acclamations of praise as by strict obedience to and enforcement of all his commands, and Christ being a perfect leader is worthy of such obedience throughout the year. In some measure the year will be what we make it. True, events unlooked for will occur bringing either joy or sorrow, but the effect of these upon our lives will be determined mainly by the condition in which they find us, and our power to turn them all to our good, The Apostle Paul emphasized this thought when he "We know that all things work together for good to them that love God."

The world has made progress in the year just past. The forces for good have gained advantage in some points over those of evil and the conflict is The church also has made progress still on. notwithstanding a more active and systematic opposition which it has had to meet. Shall we as individuals keep apace with progress and be prepared for every change which will come? In support of ancient prophecies the signs of the times point unerringly to great changes and momentuous events which are to follow in rapid succession until God's work shall be consumated in the coming of his Son to reign upon the earth, to the breaking down of false systems and evil practices and the establishment of his kingdom of righteousness. May the year more sully prepare us for the reception of these things.

A MODEL CITY.

A plan has been suggested, according to recent press reports, for the building of a model city somewhere in the world, the Netherlands, the eastern part of the United States and other places being mentioned as possible places for the location of such a city. We gather from the reports that the city would be built with a view to utility, beauty, and healthfulness, etc.

The question is raised in our mind as to what would be the character of those tkings and of persons who might be selected to become parts of a model city, for certainly beautiful avenues and homes, and healthful factories and workshops, with other things which go to make the material city, would not alone make it a model one. True the tenent house, the slums, the health destroying workshop and factory, the fire-trap buildings, and such would be left out, and in the place of the things which at the present time endangers life and limb there would be safety appliances which would reduce danger to a minimum.

But what about the dangers to the moral and spiritual part of man. Would the saloon, though clean, airy, and fitted in splendor, be permitted to have place in that model city, to supply that which lead men to physical and spiritual ruin? Would there be the usual loafing places for men to learn the arts of crookedness and crime? Would some of the beautiful mansions be used for the selling of virtue? If so it would be no model city.

A model city cannot be made from material things alone. To be ideal it must have ideal or model people for its inhabitants, and in the establishment of it there must be a selection of persons whose character and conduct would be in keeping with the material standards. So long as dishonest men, criminals, and men engaged in debasing lines of business have place in a city it could not be a model one.

In preparing for the establishment of a model city the first work must be in the preparation of its people. The qualities which it will be necessary for them to possess are intelligence based upon proper education, and righteousness in conformity with the divine law. A city to be ideal should be without criminal courts and jails; it would need no police except for directing traffic and similar purposes; no massive vaults except for fire protection; no detective force. Poverty and its attendant wrechedness cannot be there. Hatred and strife must be kept out otherwise the city would not be ideal.

This is not the first suggestion for an ideal city in modern times. About eighty years ago Joseph Smith declared the Lord had directed him to seek the establishment of such a city, but the instructions given for the work provided that the preparation should begin with the people in a reformation of character. A place was designated and a few persons gathered to form a beginning. The laws which were to govern these people individually and collectively had been given for the purpose as the Lord That ye might escape the power of the enemy and be gathered unto me a righteous people, without spot and blameles,"-a high ideal indeed.

That the work of preparation must begin with people is further shown by the following: 'And righteousness and truth will I cause to sweep the earth as with a flood, to gather out my own e'. t from the four quarters of the earth unto a place which I shall prepare; a holy city... and it shall be called Zion." "And it shall be called Zion." New Jerusalem, a land of peace, a city of refuge, a place of safety for the saints of the most high God; and the glory of the Lord shall be there, and the terror of the Lord also shall be there, insomuch that the wicked will not come unto it. . . . it shall come to pass that the righteous shall be gathered out from among all nations, and shall come to Zion."

While failure marked the early effort of those called to build up this city, such failure cannot be attributed to the weakness of the plans nor the principles governing, but to the individuals who omitted to conform their lives thereto. It was said to them: "Zion cannot be built up unless it is by the principles of the law of the celestial kingdom . . . and my people must needs be chastened until they learn obedience." There can be no ideal conditions unless they first exist in the lives of the people, and when they are found there they will readily follow in material environment.

The Lord's purpose has not been changed, and the saints still look forward to the beginning of an idealcity, which shall have as its first characteristic, a righteous people; a people from whom selfishness and greed have been removed so that a practical system of equality can be established and maintained and poverty be eliminated; a people who have such a love for their fellow man that they will execute the Golden Rule to do unto others as they would have others do unto them.

Is it too utopian? . With only man's wisdom and effort it may be, but with God as its author and director it is quite practicable.

THE POSTMAN.

He truges along through the snow and the sleet, With a pack that is heavy to bear; The slush of the roadway has hampered his feet And the whiteness has powdered his hair.

But he stands by the gate with a smile on his face.

And his whistle is cheery and gay; Oh, people who live in a far away place Thank God for the postman today!

He carries a message that comes from the beart Of a bov who has gone from his home.

And sometimes a letter to make the tears start

From a soul that is sad and alone. The news of a world that is far from our sight Is stored in his magical pack,

And he mingles the sorrow with words of delight, For he carries a world on his back. Through city and country, through byway and street He comes to the home great and small;

And we wait for his coming; he brings such a treat.

A message of cheer to us all.

And so in this season of harvest and joy, When the crops have been stored safe away, We raise to the heavens our humblest prayer, "Thand God for the postman today!"

INDEPENDENCE ITEMS.

The entertainment at the stone church on Christia was enjoyed by a large gathering of saints and friends. About venty children took part in the service of song in praise of the King bore in humble Bethlehem.

Christmas day was one of cheer and good will everywhere, seemingly at least; many finding joy in remembering where, seeming, at least, many having joy in receiving. What a world or joy man would have could the "Chritmas Spirit" prevail the year round! President Joseph Smith and family celebrated the day with his son-in-law and daughter, Bro, and Sr. B. M. Auderson, and family, and in the afternoon called upon Bro, and Sr. 'T. W. Chatburn. He expressed himself as having had the happiest Christmas of any since coming to Independence.

An informal reception was held at the bome of their son in law and daughter, Bro. and Sr. Royal Brocaw, in the afternoon, when many friends called to offer congratulations. In the evening a more formal gathering as-sembled numbering 84, and with song and cheerful conversa-tion and other features of entertainment added to the joy and tion and other features of entertainment added to the joy and delight of the occasion. Some useful presents were received among which was one of $102.50 mostly in gold, which was the collective gift of the many friends. Bro. Chathurn feelingly responded to the presentation speech of Bishop Bullard. Five of their children, and thirty grandchildren were present, two sons, Frank of Bandon, Oregon, and Alma of Shawnee, Oklahoma, being unable to be present but sent congratulations. Bro. Chatburn has been in the service of the church for many years and has been a valiant worker.

Quite a number of the missionaries have been able to spend the holiday season at home with their lamilies after an absence for some of them of about seven months. The faithful missionary is certainly entitled to such visits, as also are the families. Some are already hastening back to their fields to continue the gospel work.

Choir work has been taking a step forward of late through the efforts of the general chorister. Bro. A. N. Hoxie Ir., who arrived with Bro. John Zummerman Jr., on Saturday from Philadelphia. The Independence choir had special rehearsals Saturday and Monday evenings, and the associated choirs of Independence and Kansas City on Sunday afternoon and Tuesday evenings. Some hard work is being done in preparation of the general conference music, and in addition to the autherns the "Holy City" a cantata, is under preparation for a special concert during general is under preparation for a special concert during general conference. No matter what we do or do not do, the judgments of God will find for the facts in the case, and we need not fear to trust ourselves in his hands. Apostle J. F. Curtis was the speaker at 7:30 p. m., real-ing Isaiah 53, text, "Who hath believed our report." The 2:30 prayer service was well attended, and a general good feeling was felt throughout the meeting. The local ministry were brought to the front nearly every service.

On Monday night was held an election of officers of the 1Sunday school, with the following resurt: A. K. Dillee, supernendent; J. T. Curtis, assistant superintendent; S. H. Fields, second assistant: Savdie Bailey. secretary: Geo. Gould.

KNOBNOSTER, MO.

Sunday Dec. 28 was opening day of our new church, our pastor R. E. Burgess in charge. Elder J. W. Rushton offered the opening prayer. Elder Hale W. Smith had charge of the song service, with Sr. Ida Hansen as organist.

After the opening services Mrs. Earl Ross played a wedding, nrech and Elder (W. S. Macrae spike a few words that changed Sr. Fern Beebe's name to Mrs. J. R. Lloyd: we are sorry to lose Sr. Fern. Sr. M. Ross favored us with a solo.

Bishop E. L. Kelley gave the opening address to a well filled house of attentive listeners, The day was one that will long be remembered by the Knobnoster saints. Almost the entire membership was present.

The weather has been very trying still there are very few that are sick. Sr. A. Taylor and small daughter, and two of Bro. B. Andes children were not able to attend the services.

Bro. B. Aluces united were one one of the state of the state of the whope to soon have them with us again.

Elder O. H. Miller and R. E. Bozarth are usiting ther parents. Quite a number of members from a short distance came home for the holidays, and opening day.

KANSAS CITY, MO., SECOND CHURCH.
The coming of Christmas found the Sunday school prepared with an excellent program and presents to entertain the members and their friends. Many rejoiced and were made happy, and none were sad that we know of. Those in charge worked hard and must have felt repaid for their efforts when all who were given parts on the program responded and did their part well.

Quite a number of the missionaries have visited us and some have cheered and encouraged us by their presence and sermons. We are holding services regularly and always have more than a quorum. We have some members who are spiritually dead and no noubt every branch in the church could tell the same story.

Bro. Thomas Newton is trying to establish the church in the Isle of Pines and with others has organized a Sunday school at McKiniey and has been permitted to preach several sormons. If there is any other member of the church in or near KcKinley be would like to meet them. Bro. Charles Chaney was ordained a teacher last month and is an earnest sermous. active worker in his office.

Bro. E. W. Lloyd and Sr. Margaret Robertson will continue to look after the interests of the Sunday school for the next six months while Bro. Chaney and Sr. Tyra Lloyd will try to guide the Religio onward and upward. Sr. Sarah Faler who has been very sick was able to meet with us yesterday being restored to health in answer to prayer.

Some new nembers have been added while some have moved to other branches. God has been very kind to us in the past year and as a branch we hope to continue to live wore reprect lives and he more worthy of the great blessings.

The annual business meeting was held Wednesday evening Dec. 17 with a fine attendance.

Election of officers for the ensuing year resulted in the choice of V. M. Goodrich, president; William Schade, presiding priest; W. B. Haskins, presiding teacher; Niles Paulson, presiding deacon; R. T. Cooper, choraster; Olive Lytle; son, presiding deactor, it. T. Cooper, contribute, York Lyne, organist; Albert H. Knowlton, member library board; Raymond T. Knowlton, branch clerk; Albert H. Knowlton, book agent; R. T. Cooper, correspondent. Good spirit and harmony characterized the entire election which speaks well for the continued and effective work of the officers of the branch.

Arrangements have been made for opening a new mission service at the home of Bro. and Sr. Ordway in Altadena, services to be held afternoons beginning the first Sunday in the new year, in charge of Elder Fred Adam in connection with the mission at Hermosa Beach.

Interest at the Long Beach mission continues good, a Religio local was recently organized there with twenty charter members.

A Religio is in prospect at Pomona soon as the home as has grown to the proportions of a local under the care of Bro. Peter Kanfman as a result also of the meetings held there this summer by Brn. Roy F. Siye and W. A. Brooner. Christmas entertainment will be held at the church Tuesday evening Dec. 23rd.

Sinday, December 28th, being the regular semi-annual election of officers for our Sunday school the following officers were elected:—F. R. Gist superintendent, C. R. Smith assistant superintendent, Lucile Entire secretary, P. I. Rogers treasurer! Josephine Golf librarion, Ida Hodson chorister, Marcia Para placeis. Mamie Rapp pinanist.

Our Sunday school put on quite au interesting program as a Christmas entertainment, being the product of our own local talent with possibly the exception of one individual, featured chiefly by the Christmas tree and treat, to the bilari-ous delight of the little ones.

At this the close of another year, finds the brauch in all apparent prosperity, spiritually as well as temporally; the saints, with a greater determination than ever to press onward in the ways of truth.

The past has bad its lesson, the present its sorrows perhaps, yet the future holds forth its hopes. May God's work go on in this branch of his moral vineyard as well as else-where, that his will may be done and mankind be eventually free, to the extent that Zion may be redeemed, is our prayer, Correspondent.

OMAHA, NEBRASKA.

Our last items should have stated that Elder Charles Derry, that old and tried soldier who has fought life's battles so bravely and well, preached the first sermon in the Council Bluffs' new church. May we all strive to be as willing to sacrifice and walk in the footsleps of the Master.

Apostle J. A. Gillen again favored us with some excellent sermons Friday evening and twice on Sunday, the 21st, How far beneath our privileges we are living in comparison with the ideals portrayed, Tuesday evening, the Cantata, "The Holy One of Israel" rendered by the choir and Sunday school under the direction of Elder Paul N. Craig and his able assistants, was very much enjoyed by a crowded house. Will the time ever come when our saints, not the children, will be as auxious to attend a prayer meeting, or normal class for instance, as a high class related in the contraction of the entertainment?

The city celebrated Christmas Eve with a gigantic tree of feet high in the court house yard beautifully illuminated, while in the court house different bands and church choirs rendered a program. Our choir sang "Unfold Ve Portals," ich elicitated praise from the hearers, when they were informed that it was not a "Mormon" choir.

Prayer meeting Wednesday evening, postponed to Thursday as generate of the Cheistene feeting in the court of the court day on account of the Christmas festivities, in charge of Brn. C. C. Coffeen and W. E. Stoft. Over thirty in attendance and a very spiritual meeting.

Birdseve, Ind., Nov. 26.

Dear Ensign:—The debate between H. E. Moler and E. G. Dennysof the Church of Christ so called is a matter of history. Bro. Moler and I went to Louisville from the conference at Indianopolis, Ind., and were busy there holding meetings, and Bro. Moler received a letter on the 14th from Elder Stillings of the Christian Church telling him that E. G. Denny would be at Birdseye to enter into a debate with him on the 18th, so Bro. Moler saw that he was aiming to slip in and make the people believe that Moler would not meet him. The facts in tre case are that he Denny had never got in touch with Moler; had no propositions signed up for debate, but had attached Bro. Moler's name to a typewritten copy of ow the people to propositions and brought it with him to st propositions and brought it with him to show the people to make them think that Moler had signed but failed to show up.

Bro. Moler and I were on the battlefield on the 17th and met Mr. Denny the 18th at Oak Hill schoolhouse and there at 9:30 a. m. the propositions were signed up and the debate began at 10 o'clock and lor four days we saw Denny flourdering around trying to prove something bad against Joseph Smith He tried to prove by Bancroit that Joseph Smith had ten wives, but his efforts went down in failure.

He denied the doctrine of Christ in Heb. 6:1,2, and said the way southing had the wives the Mosele.

that was nothing but the types and shadows of the Mosaic covenant and therefore was done away. Here Bro. Moler turned on him and showed that with faith, repentance, and turned on him and showed that with fath, repentance, and bastisin taken a way fron I him he would have almost nothing left. Bro. Moler put up a chart like a wheel, the spokes representing the officers in the church and the hub representing Christ. So Denny said he would tear that wheel all to pieces so he said away goes every spoke out of his wheel and away goeste hub. Bro. Moler turned it on him good when he dispensed with Christ too.

e are holding forth in the homes of the people with good interest, and our opponents see their defeat and are a sick lot of people. I don't think they will pay out their money soon again to get such a licking. Bro. H. E. is an able detender of the faith. I was his moderator and did all I could to help him. I had to keep time also as we had no chairman. Bro. Thos. Stillings was Denny's moderator. The saints here are happy over the results.

I am as ever your brother in bonds,

Editor Ensign:-I had a splendid meeting at St. Joseph, Editor Ensign:—I had a splendid meeting at St. Joseph, First Branch, a week ago last Sunday and Monday. Also a fine meeting over last Sunday and Stewartsville, Mo. But the weather and roads get so bad that I could not continue for the present. I have more than a dozen calls for preaching now, and I am sorry I cannot be at more than one place at a time. Please say to all who have written to me in Missouri and Iowa asking me to come and preach for them, that I will be with them just as soon as I can make the rounds and get there. I am in my seventy-second year, but am feeling just fine and am at work almost continually.

I hope to be in the field most of the time this winter if my health continues as it is now. My six months' work in the west last summer was good for me. I found a number of good saints out among the Rocky Mountains. God bless them for their kindness to me everywhere that I went. We had a splendid reunion at Wray, Colorado, with a good prospect to have another one somewhere in that vicinity next fall. What about the "Signs of the times?" What about the "Signs of the times?" What about the "Signs on the lakes" a short time ago? It makes one ask himself, "Where are we at now?" May well so live that God's sheltering hand may be over us while the scourges I remain your brother in the comflict,

PYATT, Ark., Dec. 1

Dear Ensign:—As I have contributed nothing to your readers for some time I will try to let them know I am not out of the faith but have been surely tried this conference year as never before. I have had to contend with things that I have never had to meet before, but through prayer and that I have never and to meet cucie, but unough reays; hargond advice from different ones I have been made to believe it is best for the work and me too to still remain in the mis sionary field notwithstanding I was templed to leave the field. I soon felt after reaching home I must not let Satan overcome me that way because I had met with different temptations; I felt led to read my patriarchal blessing, given temptations; I tell tell to read in partitational measuring, given under the hands of Bro. Alexander Smith. The Lord showed me he was his servant and had been called to that work. So after reading my blessing I discovered one thing had been fulfied this year which was that Satan would seek to throw stumbling stones in my way to hinder me in my work for the Master, and he would seek to do so when I was the least reacting it. So, they way he hear the trief of the works. the least expecting it. So this year has been the trial of my

After reaching home this fall I was led to counsel with Bro. E. L. Kelley as to quitting missionary work for the rest of the year. His advice was for me to go to Arkansas and labor under the one in charge of that part of the field as the Lord might direct me. So soon after this the Lord showed me there was a work for me to do in Arkansas, so I came to this place two weeks ago and began meeting at once, and the interest has increased all the time. Last night the house was well filled and fine interest. Some seemed to be very near the kingdom, so at the close of my effort one lady, a promi-nent, merchant's wife, came and asked for baptism. She was a member of the M. E. Church, and is said to be one of the best women in Pyatt. Another woman came to me and said she had been shown the church she was a member of was not the true church or Christ, and if she did not join the Latter Day Saint Church she would not be saved. So you see the Lord is moving upon the minds of men and women to accept the gastel.

During my short stay last spring and summer in Mobile, Alabama, I was blessed with power in preaching the truth, and the Lord, was with me in my labors there, baptized I4 while there. Many others almost ready for baptism when I was called to leave that place.

Mobile was a new ifield almost, there has been but Mobile was a new ifield almost, there has been but little preaching done there. I made many warm Iriends. When I left the saints were having Sunday school and prayer-meeting every Sunday. Bro. Chute and bis noble family live at Prichard, a suburb of Mobile, and is doing all be can to advance the work; also Bro. Dave Tillman and his family are among the best classs of people in the city, and they are ready at all times to assist in the work. Then there is Sr. Enma Day and her brothers and sisters who are just as nice records as yet can find any place, and they are ready to Sr. Emma Day and her brothers and sisters who are just as nice people as you can find any place, and they are ready to help build up the work. Sr. R. Tillman and Sr. Alfred Tillman are all good eaints. Sr. Interkin and her husband also live there. When the captain is not on duty on his boat he is ready to assist in the great latter day work; then comes the Potters and their lamities, all good workers in the church. Bro. and Sr. Nix at Whistler, Ala., are also fine people I baptized there. They will make their mark for good it they will hold out faithful. Bro. Frank Scarciff and tamily also live in Mobile. He is stone in the faith and dur't torget to will hold out taithtul. Bro. Frank Scarcilif and tamily also live in Mobile. He is stong in the fasth and don't torget to take his place in the meeting there. May the Lork ever bless them for their strong stand against evil. It is useless to say the saints in Mobile are strong in the taith of this latter day work, for if they were not the most of them would have gone back on the faith before now, for it seems Statan has tried himself at Mobile this year, but thanks be to Him who has held up allup by his divine power. Not one of the saints there that I know of has weakened in the faith, notwith standing they have been tried.

I know it is the custom of some to only give the briefs.

I know it is the custom of some to only give the bright side of life, but I think it is best to give the facts as they are. It is all right to taste the bitter sometimes so we can enjoy the I may have made some mistakes this year, but if I have they have been made ignorantly and God has forgiven them, knowing athat I am a man who tries to do the right them, knowing that I am a man who tries to do the right thing all the time, and in the greatest trials that I have met this year God has shown me I was holding on to the rod of iron, which is his word. The warning was given me in my bleesing that when Satan sought to throw stumbling stones in my wat, I was not to use hasty speech, but in my conin my way, I was tention for the right to contend in meekness. How far I have heeded this instruction 1 do not know, but if I have failed in anything it has been in using hasty words for that is my besetting sin.

There was quite a crowd present at the baptizing yesterday, and last night much interest was manifested at the ng. Cannot say just when I will close here. Bro. J. T. Davis opened the work here about five years ago, baptizing Bro. and Sr. Foster three years ago. They have lived true saints, and it has had its effect on the people here, at d now their number is increased. We hope they will rejoice the more, II find a nice class of people here in this part of Arkansas. I have seen as never before the need of the saints to post themselves in the Bible. Book of Mornou and Book of Covenants and stick to what is written in them. or Covenants and suce to what is written in them. Those revelations received by saints and dreams and visions may be all right, and of course some of them are of God, but they are not binding on us as a law, hence the need of governing ourselves according to what is written in the standard books.

ourselves accorded to what is with the in the standard books, not the church payers and tracis gotten up by individuals.

Another thing is, in our teaching to observe the instruct principles of my gospel which are in the Bible and the Book of Mormon," leave off line spun theories, and as Joseph put it—the horns and hoofs. We are to reach a unity of the faith by progression, or true evolution. The Spirit of God and the standard books are all we need to bring about such conditions.

I am still hopeful and ask the prayers of God's may still hold on to the rod of iron, which is God's STOCKHOLM, Sweden, Dec. 10. Editor Ensign:—As the year is nearing its end, I will write a few lines to our good missionary paper, which we are glad to receive every week, and we don't wait long to scan its pages. I love to hear of the progress of the work in many places, and I only wish we could tell of the progress in this part, as much as we desire to see, but it is moving slowly along and we have not lost hope in its final triumph, but there is a great indifference among the people concerning the religion of Jesus Christ, pleasure is the main topic of the day.

But we are trying to keep our own, and at the same time sowing the good send to others who are willing to stop and liaten. Am glad we have a few faithful saints that are slauding us nobly by. But it is a struggle for the few to hold on insten. Am gran we have a rew fathful saints that are standing us nobly by. But it is a struggle lor the few to hold on to the truth, nothing but their love for God is able to keep them steadfast, because all around they see their neighbors in their fine churches, with good music and large choirs, and to the ear many times, good preaching.

We here want to express our thanks for the help received through Bro. H. N. Hausen, from the collection taken up at the Western Lows and Restern Nebracks Requirement through Bro. H. N. Hausen, from the collection taken up at the Western lowa and Eastern Nebraska Reunion, as we re-ceived from the same twenty-five dollars to help in printing books and tracts in this country. We certainly appreciate such help, because we are always in need of help. Also wish to convey my thanks to individuals who have sent some help, may the Lord abundantly bless all.

am glad to hear of the desire, "from different parts, to have the church debt paid. I think no Latter Day Saint should rest before it is canceled, it will be a blessing to all

Wish to extend my best "New Year's Greeting" to all the readers of the Ensien, and its staff of workers, may the good missionary paper continue its blessed work among the nations, to the light of all honest seckers for truth

Editor Ensign:—While the old year is swiftly passing out and the new year is drawing near I desire to express sincere thanks to the great Giver by pen through your excellent paper freighted with good news for his hand to protect, lead and direct, in my efforts in his service and most in the control of the control o paper freighted with good news for his hand to protect, lead and direct, in my efforts in his service and work in the ministry in the field actively engaged in the greatest work known upon earth. The Spirit in its comforting influence has been richly fell in power causing the writer to feel meek, humble prayerful, patient and a strong desire to continue submissive to the divine will. While there may be some little trials be fore the church and its faithful representatives to meet here and there yet they are bound to give way and vanish before the onward march of the kingdom like the chaff of the summer threshine floors. Spoken of by Daquel the prophet who the onward march of the kingdom like the chair of the sum-mer threshing floors, spoken of by Daolei the prophet who declares in chapter 2:35. And the wind carried them (chaff) away, that no place was found for them, Jesus said, "Who-soever heareth these sayings of mine and doeth them I will liken bim unto a wise man which built his house upon a rock." And we are told that the rain and the floods came and the And we are told that the islan and the mouse came and the winds blew and beat upon that house and it fell not, and the reason was because it was founded upon a rock. So also it is with the one who heareth and deeth the sayings of Jesus Christ. "He that endureth to the end the same shall be Christ. 'saved,' While there will be comething to endure such as the floods and storms of opposition yet the promise holds good to him that endureth all the way, for saith Jesus that if ye are built upon my rock which is my gospel the gates of hell cannot prevail.

We are told in the word of God, "For it must needs be, that there is an opposition in all things." 2 Nephi 1:81. Without an opposition to meet there would be no battle to fight and as a consequence no victory to be won, but we find the people who do the will of God have an opposition to meet and of times the opposition is greatest within themselves. and oftimes the opposition is greatest within themselves. Therefore there is a continuous warfare and he that overcom eth and gaineth the victory over all opposing forces in this religious conflict will be given power over many kiugdoms and he shall rule them with the word of God or he shall govern them by faith with equity and justice. Jesus says, "Break not my commandments for to save your lives." Also "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross and follow me. And now for a man to take up his cross, is to deny him self all ungoddiness, and every worldly lust and keep up commandments." Institut Trans. worldly lust, and keep my commandments." Matt. 16:26, Inspired Trans

If faithful and true in the line of service we can profit by the little trials of lite as well as by the peace and joy along the way for it takes the clouds as well as the sunshine to dovelop into full fruition the golden grain. "The fire shall try every man's work of whatsort it is." Paul; and Jesus says, "For it must needs be that offenses come, but wos to that man by whom the offense cometh." If it must needs be that man by whom the onedse cometh. It it must needs be that offenses come, we should hever murner or complain because of them, for Jesus says, "Blessed are ye when men shall revile you, and persecute you and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely, for my sake, for ye shall have great joy, and be exceeding glad; for great shall be your reward in beaven.

Bro. I. M. Smith in preaching to the saints often puts great stress upon the following words; "Rejoice and be exceeding glad, for great shall be your reward in heaven." I ceeding gran, as a second and grant grant stand by that. We can face the world with a clear conscience and testify that we know our system of faith is pure from start to finish and if any one will do God's will he shall know

o know that the Holy Ghost works in the churches We know that the riory chost works in the churchysa described in 1 Cor. 12, and Acts 2:16 IB. Therefore we have something that is grand to offer to those who will come and walk with us in the na.row way. We feel strengthened and thankful by reason of our rich experience in Spiritual matters and can truly testify with Paul that the "natural man re-ceiveth not the things of the Spirit of God; for they are fool-ishness unto him: neuther can be know them, because they are spiritually discerzed;" and we can also say with Jesus. "Except a man be horn again by can truly testify with Paul that the "natural r Except a man be born again he cannot see the kingdom of Gort.

The world is perishing in the dark and is needing to be born of water and of the Spirit in order to see the light that is shining in the Church of Christ restored by divine author-We express our thanks for all this and for the testsmony that has come to us direct from heaven by the Holy Ghost.

We are trying to do our part to spread the glad idings of the kingdom of God in our mission field and we have some excellent helpers both of the traveling ministry as well as the local force. We have no time to stop and grumble or complain because the work is not prospering and blooming everywhere just as we would like to see it neither do we com-plain at God because he has not yet bound the devil, although he has power to do it, but he suffereth him to work and will allow him to work for sometime yet, so our complaining will not cause God to bind the devil any sooner.

Man does not always see as God sees. The infidel said once that if he had been God he would not have sent his well beloved son to suffer and to die, but he would have just killed the devil and been done with it. But God has said; "My thoughts are not your thoughts, for as the heavens are higher than the earth so are my ways higher than your ways and my thoughts than your thoughts."

We are thankful that our work is prospering in some parts of the field and that many of the saints are moving right on in the taith striving as good soldiers of the cross to be. sorthy to wear the crown of life when the battle is over. Bro. Aylor has lately taken a tour with the writer doing much good, and has been a means of comfort and strength to the saints and work. At Flomaton Ala., we ordatued Bro. J. L. Mize an elder, who if faithful and studious will prove to be a minister for good to the people in this vicinity.

After Bro. Aylor left me I attended conference of the Alabama distict Nov. 8th and 9th at Owassa and was blessed in presenting the word. Here I ordained Bro. E. C. Shelley to the office of elder after ordination was recommended by the branch and conference. If this young brother will con-tinue to be studious, prayerful and faithful in the line of duty he will be effectual for good to the church as a minister. The harvest truly it great and the laborers are few, and I am thankful to see worthy men come to the front and move out in the work of the ministry for Christ equipped to carry the angel message to the world in darkness and sin.

I have been laboring here in a new place with indications for good while sowing the good seed. As the old year closes and God has been with me to lead and direct in the great field of active service for which the render a full heart of sincere thanks. I now close with an earnest prayer for all the readers of the Ensign and for all the people of God in every land that they may be greatly blessed and prospered in the suffering and sorrow will never come.

As ever in the bonds of love,

NORTH BEND, Coos Co., Oregon Editor Ensign:-I just came from what is called the Christian Church and oh how different their sermons are from Saints know why. How beautiful are the thoughts when we know we are of God's kingdom. We don't hear any preaching only when some of the elders are going through. Brn. Sheeby and Crumlry were here one night. Bro. Sheeby preached to a few of us such as could be gathered at short notice. We all enjoyed it; some are auxious to hear more.

The Lord has blessed us while here. My wile and little girl and darlin; baby had the smallpox and are all well now, My wife and little and don't feel any the worse. I ask the prayers of the saints as a weak prother.

IDENTIFYING THE TRUE CHURCH.

BY ELDER HALE W. SMITH.

We are confronted with many problems for solution in the day and age in which we live, as well, as other people in other ages of the history of mankind. Of all problems confronting the world today, the one problem religion, is by far the greatest.

There may be many reasons why religion is so hard to be understood: First, There are so many denominations representing so many different theological schools; Second, All churches claim their interpretation of the Scripture is true and all other interpretations being contrary, therefore, false.

Shailer Matthews, Dean of the Chicago University, is reported to have said before the recent World's Peace Conference held at Saint Louis, Mo., speaking with reference to the merging of all protestant denominations into one universal church, It will be impossible now, because all churches would insist upon their peculiar characteristic doctrines being placed in the proposed universal creed. When the universal creed was formulated according to the desires of all denominations that universal creed would include the entire New Testament and when placed before the temporary universal church for adoption, the convention would never agree because all church denominations at present do not accept the whole of the entire New Testament.

Walter Rauschenbusch in his book, Christianity and the Social Crisis, page 45 says: 'We see in the Bible what we have been taught to see there. We drop out great sets of facts from our field of We read other things into the Bible which vision. are not there," see and hear, the more are we The more we convinced that his statement is true. We find in this church it is more or less true in localities where illiteracy is prevalent. We also find it true in localities where our people read but little and depend almost entirely on the preacher or elder for food for thought religiously. Hence the absolute necessity that our ministers should be correctly informed in order not to give their auditors wrong interpretations in such localities.

Bear in mind there are but four political parties in the United States thereby making it easy to make up one's mind as with which party he wishes to affiliate. But when one wishes to investigate religion he discovers there are one hundred and sixty-four separate Protestant denominations claiming to be the church of Christ, hence, making it more difficult to decide which one to choose as the one in which membership shall be placed. Each denomination insists that it is right and all the rest are wrong.

The greatest difficulty in studying Religion as far as deciding where the church of Christ is to be found is like the study of socialism. We lack a Concrete scientific definition of the same.

One has said, "Religion is our attitude towards God;" another is quoted as, "True religion is our relation to God;" still another authority says, "Religion is our conscious attitude toward our God." Prof. Leighton expresses his belief of religion thus:
"Religion is our attitude towards God expressed by our conscious attitude towards our neighbor.

We find it equally difficult to decide which denomination represents the church of Christ judging by the various definitions given by various theological leaders. Eramus contends, "The church is the congregation of all men throughout the whole world who agree in the faith of the gospel." (The Church in Modern Society, page 23, by William Jewett Tucker).

Dr. Lyman Abbott gives us his view thus: "The church is a tree, rooted and grounded in Christ, a body, Christ the head; a household, Christ the Father; a kingdom, Christ the King." (Evolution of Christianity, page 172). Walter Rauschenbusch says, the church, "the kingdom of God, is the true human society," (Christianity and the Social Crisis page 71). Rev. J. O. Ashenhurst says. church is the organized exponent of the kingdom of God in the world," (The Day of the Country Church, page 146).

P. Marion Simmons in a recent work, (What Must the Charch do to be Saved) said "We must have the Spirit of Jesus in the church for that is the important thing after all, and if a cure for our present evils are to be had it will consist in the complete recovery of the idea of the kingdom of God and a church of the New Testament, SPIRIT and Type.

Prof. Leighton tells us, "The gospel of Jesus is way of conduct," (Jesus Christ and the Civilization of Today, page 5).

Henry F. Cope in a work called "Efficiency in the Sunday school, pages 6,7," expresses himself The test of the efficiency of a Sunday school is in the product it produces. The ultimate test is whether in this specific agency of religiously educated people have learned to live in the terms of the great teacher, to take life as tee sublime chance to love and serve, whether people have been moved to make the new world of which they learned, whether the community is really more heavenly, a place where it is easier for all to go right and harder for any to go wrong.

It ought not to be such a great problem to solve as to where the church is and whether it is in close relationship with God or whether the church is an organization with which God has nothing to do.

All theologians will recognize the Bible as the end of controversy. So we turn the pages of divine scripture to ascertain the land-marks to guide our investigating mind into the right road to that organization wherein dwells God by his Spirit.

As Jesus gives us the test by which we may judge the character of men professing to be teachers of God: "By their fruits ye shall know them," (Matt. 7:20), so we may apply the same test to the character of every church professing to be the church of Jesus Christ. The church as an organism will manifest its efficiency or deficiency by the fruit it bears.

Herbert Spencer says, "Life is the relation of organism with environment," and as "True religion is our conscious attitude with God" we wish to ascertain whether any of the 146 denominations will be bearing, not only one fruit but all the fruits of the manifestation of the Spirit of Christ. One psychological principle will be well to apply here, namely: It is impossible to give out impressions without first receiving them. So the church as an organism will be unable to manifest life before it has first received of the life-giving and life-sustain-

We are informed Jesus said he would build his church and we have every reason to believe he did so. All Bible students recognize the absolute necesity that the church be thoroughly filled with the life-giving and life-sustaining element, the Spirit of

The Apostle Paul writing to the Roman saints, chapter 1, verse 20 says: "For the invisible things of him from the creation of the world are clearly seen, being understood by the things that are made, even his eternal power and Godhead, so they are without excuse." We may infer from this statewithout excuse." We may infer from this state-ment that that the church may be understood by comparing it with other organisms which Ged has created. It seems that many theologians have overlooked seaching for the church which as an organic body shows forth the highest manifestation

We know a walnut tree, or a corn stalk, or a cotton plant by comparison with other plant life; we know a lion from a mouse and an eagle from a So it is equally true we may know the true church by a close comparison with other denominations claiming to be the church.

We know a live tree from a dead tree by its appearance, or by its manifestations. So we may also determine whether the church is alive or dead. How? By applying the test given by our Lord Jesus Christ. "By their fruits ye shall know them."

The Apostle Paul clearly indicates what the manifestations of life in the body of Christ, the church, are. He tells us of nine in all. concerning spiritual gifts brethren I would not have you ignorant. . . . Now there are diversities of gifts, but the same Spirit, and there are differences of administrations but the same Lord. And there are diversities of operations, but it is the same God which worketh all in all. But the manifestation of the Spirit is given to every man to profit withal. For to one is given by the Spirit, the Word of Wisdom: to another the word of knowledge by the same Spirit; to another faith by the same Spirit; to another the gifts of healing by the same Spirit; to another the working of miracles; to another prophecy; to another discerning of spirits; to another divers kinds of tongues; to another the interpretation of tongues."

The sap flows through the tree. In one part it manifests life by the production of a leaf, in another part a twig, in another the blossoms, after which the fruit will appear.

Francis G. Peabody in his wonderful book, "Jesus Christ and the Social Question," on pages 356 and 357 speaks of the object of the church, "It is a power house where there is generated a supply of spiritual energy sufficient to move the world with wisdom, courage and peace. Let this power fail and a church stands in the midst of modern life without adequate reason for existence, a Sunday club, an etertainment bureau, a survival of the days when religion was real. A living church communicates power."

The tree is known by its fruit and so "every tree therefore that bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down and cast into the fire." The church that is not generating a supply of spiritual energy sufficient to clearly manifest all the nine manifestations of life is either dead or dying and soon will be only fit to be cast into the fire. If it is a "living church it will clearly manifest all nine of the gifts of the Spirit.

John M. Gillette in his constructive Rural Sociology, page 219 says: "The church must not forget to carry on its primary function of teaching fundamental religion." Therefore we must not forget the nine fundamental evidences of the true living church.

John R. Mott writes in his widely known book, "The future leadership of the church," page 3: The church is a divine institution, founded by Christ and the apostles. It should be the most powerful, and beneficient agency for promoting the cause of morality and religion. It has ever been and yet is an ameliorating force that makes life progressive." The true church in order to teach the fundamental religion and to manifest all the .ne evidences of life must be founded by Christ himself.

We affirm the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ is the church organized by direct command of God, through Christ in which the life-giving element and life-sustaining element, the Christ is to be found. It is this church in which we find the nine manifesnations of spiritual life because it was "founded by Christ." We maintain this is the church that teaches the entire New Testument and the relation is so close to God that he communicates with his church constantly, giving the church that life-sustaining element which manifests itself in these different ways. We hold this church is the household of God in which we all become heirs of God and joint heirs with Jesus Christ. All we ask is like Jesus when he answered doubting Thomas when he was in doubts whether it was Jesus, -come and examine and compare and indge for yourself.

RATIONAL RELIGION. BY ELDER J. A. KOEHLER.

"Then said Jesus to those Jews which believed on him. If we continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the the truth, and the truth shall make you free."-Jn. 8:31,32.

While attending a lecture at a university in this place recently, I heard the professor say that religion was a matter of faith pure and simple: that it was dogmatic; that in religion men could not know anything; that religion (all religion) was largely a matter of superstition, or imagination.

It is true that religion is a matter of faith in the beginning, but what is a matter of faith today need not necessarily remain a matter of faith. A great deal of what is knowledge today was faith on yesterday. Are we not asked almost daily to take many things for granted in order that we may acquire knowledge? Religion asks men to believe its doctrines, but, like other sciences, it does not ask men to continue to accept its claims without argument and proof. Proper religious faith is a condition for knowledge.

Religion lays down its formulas like any other science and requirs no more than other sciences when it requires a conscientous and persistent attendance upon its formulas. No science promises results to the careless practitioner. ion says "If ye continue in my word" ye shall know the truth; but under the contradictory and obscure definitions of the word, we can hardly expect uniform results; and further so long as the interpretations are in doubt we ought not be surprised if we got no results at all.

As in any science, the first thing necessary is to determine acurately the formula: in this case the word," then proceed with our experiment. sert that in religson we may not "know" because under my interpretation of the "word" I cannot get results is the height of dogmatism. Evidently the authoritative interpretation of any formula in any science is that under which the promised results do follow. So long as there is one people whose attendance upon the formulas of true religion secure to them the promised results—"knowledge"—the claims of religion are vindicated, and all who fail to get the promised results must in reason attribute that failure to either a misinterpretation or a misapplication of the formula.

RELIGION DESCRIBES ITS PHENOMENA

in much the same way as other sciences; and let it be remembered that this is the right of religion. By reference to Mark 16:15-20 as well as to I Cor. 12:4-11, and many other places, we may assertain what the resulting phenomena of the religion of Christ are. Any science would soon fall into disrepute if we were unable or failed to properly interpret and apply its formulas, and therefore failed to get results. Religon has fallen into disrepute, and is charged with being dogmatic and irrational, because under the supposedly authoritative in-terpretations of the "word" the phenomena have not developed. After a formula in the different sciences has once been demonstrated, any subsequent failure to produce results is at once charged to a failure to meet the original conditions. In religion, instead of questioning the interpretations of supposedly scientific theologians, their interpretations have been dogmatically asserted to be authoritative; and since under these (evident) misstatements of the requirements of religion we have not been able to get the promised results, the idea that the "signs shall follow the believer" has been abandoned, and religion is charged with being simply a matter of faith or dogma, and entirely unrationalistic. And this "charge" may not be far from the truth if the popular conception of "continuing in the word" is correct.

RELIGION IS NOT DOGMATIC

for the reason that is does not ask you and I to accept its claims without argument or proof, but contrarywise it declares that if we continue in its requirements we "shall know the truth." Let us see: Jn. 7:17. "If any man will do his [God's] will, he shall know of the doctrine [or formula]." This seems to be broad enough to include us. But if that is not enough let us read the promise held out in Mark 16:14-20, which we find extends to "all the world" as well as to "every creature". That surely includes us.

But religion is at an extreme disadvantage: almost universally these conditions are asserted to be no longer necessary or applicable, and the results are asserted to be impossible: thus religion is condemned without a hearing.

Let us look at our text-book on religion (the Bible,) and note how the people who meet the requirements of the Christian religion realized the things promised in a very uniform manner. Assuming that the Bible account is genuine we have the following incidents in evidence that the Christian doctrine works: Acts 19:.6, 8:12-18; 2:14; 9:17,18, and many others that you may see by continuing the search. In Matt. 8:5-15 we have as complete a demonstration of the healing power connected with the gospel as we ever had that medicine aids in the curing of disease.

But we must not assume, we should require proof. Religion does not ask you to be satisfied with the historical account of these occurences; that would be manifestly unfair to you. religion does ask is that you shall observe the same requirements as the ancients, and promises that you shall have similar experiences; in which case its claims are well established. It seems to me that no man who wants to know the facts about religion can afford to pass this challenge of the Christ by. 'If any man will do his will, he shall know of the In. 7:17. We are also assured by Peter doctrine." that the blessings of the gespel in primitive times 'you [the Jews] and to your children, and are for to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call," Acts 2:37,38. The slogan of the Christian religion is "Prove all things." "Ex amine yourselves whether ye be in the faith" and hold fast only to the things (religious) that prove to be good. The trouble is religion has been confused with tradition and superstition. Our reverence for the customs of our fathers leaves us unwilling to abandon the positions of the dominant creeds; and since we have been unwilling to abandon a position that does not give results we have been compelled (virtually) to abandon the idea that religion carries its own evidences of its truthfulness.

Religious phenomena is rare and uncertain then chiefly because its formulas are not scrupulously observed. To evpect religion to yield its phenomena before we conform to its requirements is more than we ask of any other science. There is still another reason why many have no knowledge of religious phenomena. Religion yields personal returns upon personal investments. Instead of making a personal test men stand off a long way and try to judge the experiences of others from their view point: this is quite impossible. My experiments in phychology give me returns; that is all it can possibly do. Similarly my activities in religion give me results; no other person may reap the fruits of my religious activities. Two persons acting in a similar way may compare results and judge whether each is experiencing the same effects as the other, but he who fails to act that way can never know whether what the other testifies to is true or not; at least not by any of the known scientific tests. My actions and my words are the only index by which another may judge my mental operations: and even then he cannot realize what kind of a sensation I have under a given experience unless he has had a similar experience. Under such conditions the best I can do is to testify to the personal returns I receive from a given adjustment.

There are some who claim to have met the requirements of religion, but that religion has not yielded the promised returns. Well my mind adverts at once to the well known fact that many claim to meet the requirements of nature and that nature refuses to yield returns. There are certain modes of living that are evidently healthful and scientific, and still there are millions who do not seem to be able to make the connection between health and proper conduct. It is therefore true that the ones who do make the connection are mistaken; that the hygienic ways of living are not hygienic?

How many failures have there been in attempts (for example) to combine oxygen and hydrogen to form water? Does failure on the part of any man or number of men disturb the faith of chemists who are more successful in their tests? Churning cream to produce butter is a common occurence: we don't expect butter to "come" until we have carried our churning to the point of rupturing the fat globules in the cream. Occasionally we fail entirely, in which case a rational person becomes aware of failure to meet the requirements in the churning process. But in religion I suppose we will have to blame the formula and excuse ourselves Because of the simplicity and the frequency of the operation we get quite uniform results in butter prodution; and yet when you purchase you are made aware, sometimes to your discomfiture, that there are many grades of results even in butter production. Now then, I think I am safe in saying that if people were careless in their churning habits as they are in religion, churning would be as such of a conundrum to them as is religion.

But yet there is still another difficulty that makes us think that religion is a myth, and that is we cannot explain the secret hidden beneath the processes, and we cannot see any sense in doing something that does not yield its secrets. Well, then we act foolishly when we spend our good money for food and waste our time preparing and eating it, for who can tell the secret hidden beneath the process by which the elements contained in the food are distributed throughout the body to build finger nails in one place, hair in another, skin in another, and so on? Can you? Then why don't you stop I think we will decide after a while that after all that is the rational man who is satisfied with results, and that is a rational religion which gives results. If we must know the secrets hidden beneaththe processes before we can say we know things it will probably be a long time before the aggregateof knowledge piles up very high.

Again we say results are what count. And just as long as there is a people who get results in religion, religion will have a p ace among the rational sciences.

The Christian religion is not rationalistic if by that we mean that its doctrines are the product of human experience and thought. It is rational however in the sense that its claims are consistent with the experiences of those who conscienciously and persistently follow its formulas. Religious knowledge is personal: it is the fruits of "continuance in the word of Christ." The cloud of witnesses make this fact as defensible as any. Those who deny its virtues simply give evidence of their incompetency as witnesses, and of their failure to meet the conditions. "If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples, and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."

I have seldom known any one who deserted truth in trifles that could be trusted in matters of importance.—Paley.

THE REDEEMER OF THE WORLD.

BY ELDER ELBERT A. SMITH.

(FROM SAN BERNARDINO CAL.. DAILY SUR.)

(The author of this article is a representative of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and is the editor of a young people's monthly published at Lamoni, Iowa, the "Autumn Leaves." Formerly he was a resident of this city. He contributed this article to this special number, the Christmas edition.)

The balmy air of Southern California never thrilled to sweeter music than that which attended the advent of our Lord. This was no choir of paid singers, these were the angels from on high. And while they waited for that great event to occur which marked the meridian of time, they condensed the wisdom and poetry and love of the ages into a Christmas carol, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men."

They did well to link these two sentiments together, because we can never have peace on earth until we have good will toward men, individual, community, and race hatren must be wiped out. Nations cannot dwell in peace while they nurse jealousy and hatred for each other, neither can individuals. Peace will come when all men accept Jesus and abide by his gospel.

The religious world has long maintained a mistaken attitude toward Christ. They have imagined that they could get close to him while ignoring parts of his gospel law. They have taken the statement that Paul made, "I am determined to know nothing but Christ, and him crucified," to mean: "I amdetermined to knownothing but Christ, and nothing about him save that he was crucified." Whereas Paul clearly meant more than this, "I am determined to know all about Christ and his teachings, including the great fact that he was crucified for you and for me."

No man can limit himself as some have done and get any meaning out of the death of Christ. The fact that men have died is not important to us, but the thing they died for—that counts. The death of Christ has meaning only as we learn what he died for. His death was the seal of his testimony. His testimony had been borne both in word and in deed so that man seeing and hearing him saw and heard the word of Gcd made manifest in the flesh,

To see and know Christ and him crucified does not prohibit us from teaching, and if need be, practicing everything he has revealed in his word, all that he said and did from the time of his baptism until the time when the clouds of glory received him. We feel just as free to tell the people that they must be baptized even as Jesus was as we are to tell them that they must believe as he believed. Both were a part of his testimony, sealed by his blood.

GET CLOSE TO CHRIST.

But while some make the mistake of ignoring doctrine and ordinances, others should not make the opposite mistake and set too great store on certain forms and ceremonies, and not at the same time get close to Christ himself. We must realize Christ as a personal friend. To us he should stand head and shoulders above the best and dearest friend we have on earth.

Jesus suffered for you, and did for you more than any other friend can do. He fought your fight in the Garden of Gethsemane.

Do you think that he was less brave than other men who have faced death unmoved simply because he shrank from it and suffered.

It was not death alone that he faced. But then every enemy that you have in the realms of hell came against him and fought with him for your soul. The Prince of the power of this world came that he might find something in him. Darkness settled over him and he was put to the rack and torture. The devil searched him in every nerve and fiber that he might find something of his own there, that he might claim at least a partial dominion over the Savior. He felt forsaken even of God. But upon the cross he did not flinch, he died with forgiveness on his lips and in his heart.

Jesus is the friend not only of individuals, but of classes. The rich young man came to him, and although he was exceedingly rich, and for that very reason would have been hated by many, yet we are told that Jesus beholding him, loved him. Jesus had use for him as a man, and had a great mission for him to perform with his wealth. He was prepared to unfold to him the ministry of material things, no less important than the ministry of spiritual things. He was prepared to teach him the great fact that all wealth is a stewardship to be consecrated to the service of humanity.

At the same time blind Bartimeus, coming to him, was received with equal grace and favor, and though a poor man received the friendship of Jesus. Would that the great class which he represents, the poor, the laborers, might come even as he came to the Master of men and be healed of their blind-ness. Not until they accept the great invitation. "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden," can this class enter into its inheritance.

The peace that the angels sang about and the good will that they mentioned can not be until Jesus is accepted as their friend.

Today he is with all individuals who are willing to abide by his law and keep his commandments. And while we celebrate his first advent into the world, we must not forget that the time of his second personal advent, which was predicted by the angels at the time of his ascension into heaven, draws rapidly near. And in a day when men think not he shall come in the clouds of glory with 10,000 of his angels to reign on earth over the pure and the good who have been gathered out of all ages.

He is our great friend for whose personal coming we wait and watch.

"I've found a friend in Jesus, he's everything to me, He's the fairest of ten thousand to my soul The Lily of the Valley, in him alone I see
All I need to cleanse and make me fully whole.
In sorrow he's my comfort, in trouble he's my stay; He tells me every care on him to roll: He's the Lily of the Valley. the Bright and Morning Star, He's the fairest of ten thousand to my soul.

"CHEER UP, SONNY."

Aunt Mary said in her cheering way,
"The world wasn't made in a day—a day;
And the blue sky, where the white clouds flit.
Why, the Lord was six days painting it: So cease your worry,

And do not fret: Just cheer up, sonny, You'll get there yet."

Aunt Mary said in her cheering way, The Lord sends that which is best each day: you'd grow a man both good and true, A lesson in patience is good for you: So cease your worry,

And do not fret: ust cheer up sonny, You'll get there yet."

Full oft to me in the days of youth Aunt Mary repeated the same old truth; And I dreamed brave deeds as I heard her "The world wasn't made in a day—a day:

So cease your worry, And do not fret: Just cheer up, sonny, You'll get there yet."

The dreams of youth are not realized, I haven't gained yet some things I prized: But I've learned in a measure the lesson of trust, And not to endure just because I must:

That God is my Father,
And he loves me;
And some day his wisdom I'll plainly see.

THE AGE OF SURGICAL MARVELS.

The Clinic congress at Chicago seems the climax of modern surgery and is surely a triumph of which the medical world everywhere may be justly proud. Before a thousand experts in surgical technique there have been during the past week performed operations which for their marvelous daring match the age of miracles in almost every particular save raising the dead.

To adduce a few instances. At the clinics here conducted portions of the intestines have been removed. A piece of bone has been taken from the leg of a patient and used to mend a diseased spine. Split arm bones that would not knit have been pinned together by silver nails and screws. The entire lung of a dog has been removed and replaced as a hint of what may be the future treatment of The calloused skin of the eyes of tuberculosis. a child thus blinded from birth has been pierced. By brain operations upon prisoners the savants demonstrated the surgical cure for criminals. Spectators have watched the effects of radium mineral upon malignant growths such as tumor and cancer. And patients under a new anesthotic method have actually watched an operation performed upon themselves. In short, the whole clinical exhibit at this congress has been one startling feat of professional practice following close upon the heels of another.

Angeneration ago many of these operations which have come into actual and assured practice would have been deemed chimerical and impossible of achievement. Thanks to the assiduous study and persistent experiment of medical enthusiasts, surgical science has reached a level where none dare dogmatize upon hits limits. It has next to the laboratory made a new era exalting medical lore and research among the mightiest excellencies of a Sufferers whose desperate plight was once judged hopeless have the greatest reason to rejoice over the victories, of surgical research and experiment.-Philadelphia Press.

THE ROUND TABLE.

A family of five, consisting of father, mother, and three children were designated by patriarchal blessing as belonging to five separate tribes of Israel. What explanation can be

This question was received some time ago, and before answering we sought to determine whether the premises upon which it is based were correct. After some difficulty we located the family referred to and appealed to the presiding patriarch for information relative to the lineage of the five menbers and also submitted the question to him. Under date of November 29th Patriarch F. A. Smith wrote us from Lamoni, from whose letter we extract the following:

'Unon careful examination we find that we have the blessings of four of the family recorded here in the office, and in the blessing of —the father it is said he is of the seed of Abraham and no mention is made of any special tribe whatever. Now in this case he might be of Ephriam, Manessa, or Judah. or any other tribe . . . In his wife's blessing there is no mention made whatever of her lineage. the blessing of the son C-, it is specifically stated that his lineage is in Ephraim. In the case of M- it is stated that she would inherit with her companion. Now this is as far as any definite statement is made . . . so the question is misleading and is not true; consequently I think it unnecessary for me to go into lengthy details or arguments to try to explain something that does not exist. That there may be lineage in more than one tribe through which individuals [of a family] may inherit I believe to be true, which any one can readily see who will look at the matter for a few moments, for in the apportionment of rights according to relationship and legal heirship they might inherit in several different tribes through virtue of direct lineage through the fathers and mothers. You discover that in this family of five, four of whose blessings we have copies, that there is only one who has been assigned to any special tribe."

Where it speaks of disciples in the New Testament, does it mean just the twelve apostles or all the followers of Christ?

The word "disciple" signifies a believer or follower, and was frequently applied to all of the followers of Christ as in Acts 6:1, 2; John 4:1; 9:27, 28; though it was often especially applied to the twelve as in Matt. 10:1; 11:1: 26:26; etc. The Jews said they were disciples of Moses, John 9:28, and others were disciples of John, Matt. 9:14. The text usually shows what disciples are meant when the word is used.

Where will the nations come from whom Satan will go forth to deceive and bring up against the camp of saints at the close of the millenium as mentioned in Rev. 20:8?

It seems that at the beginning of the millenium some people will be left on the earth in mortality, and from these will develop the nations referred to. See Isa. 24:6, 13.

I have been told that there will be wicked upon the earth during the thousand years reign. If so please explain the following: Rev. 20:5; Matt. 5:5; Ps. 37:22, 34.

Isa. 65:20 seems to indicate that there will be some sinners on earth at that time. The passages referred to in the question do not conflict with this view as Rev. 20:5 relates to the wicked dead who will not be raised until the close of the millenium. The righteous being raised and having an inheritance upon the earth will fulfill Mait, 5:5. The warning in Ps. 37:22, 34 as to the wicked being cut off will have been fulfilled in regard to the dead, and Isa. 65:20 implies that it will be fulfilled in regard to the living who become sinners at that time. Isa, 4:3-6 shows that it will be from Zion and Jerusalem that all the wicked will be removed and none but the righteous left.

Is hell a place, and if so are there any references in the Bible indicating where it is?

Hell is a condition and also a place, for a condition cannot exist except in some place. Any being who is altogether out of correspondence with God is in that condition and his place is to him hell. The name is used more specifically however to denote the place of assemblage of those who by extreme wickedness are unable to have access to God, and where none but this class exist it would be dark indeed. Any place where such characters are gathered together whether temporarily or permanently might be indicated by this name. From Ezek. 32 some suppose that such a place is located in the heart of the earth, but so little is revealed upon this point that it is a mooted question.

HILO, Hawaii, Nov. 21.

Dear Ensign: - Desiring that the readers of the Ensign

Dear Emission:—Desiring that the readers of the Emission might know on the onward progress of the gospiel, among the Hawaijan people, is the object of this lotter.

We are at present in Hilo, a city of about five thousand inhabitants, on the island of Hawaii. This is the largest island in the group, and is about two hundred miles from Honelbul. Honolulu.

The principal industry is sugar, which is carried on quite extensively; there being more than six hundred square miles of sugar cane on this island. Hawaiian malogany is also a profitable industry here. Last Jan. a fre destroyed one of the large sawmills, with several hundred thousand feet of this valuable lumber. The company lost almost one-half million dollars, but they have rebuilt the mill and again on the way to prosperity.

This is our second visit to this city. We came here in November of last year and tried to get to preach in some of the small churches that were not being used all the time but we were denied the privilege to use any of them.

Then we made some charts, and tried street work for a few nights, but the showers of rain were too frequent for that kind of work. The winter time is the rainy season and it rains most all the time, for about three months. We then tried cottage meetings and were more successful. We visited from branes the same of the same transport of the same of the from house to house until we found someone that was willing to let us preach in their house, and then we would invite their neighbors to come to the services. Our congregations were small, but they were attentive and interested. In this way we got our message before many of the most influential Ha waiians in the city.

We spent one week going through the Puna District, It rained most of the time. Our first stop was at Pahoa. We held meeting at the home of a promising young Hawaiian, and as we had no song books, he rendered an appropriate selection on his graphophone. Bro. McCouley then spoke for about an hour, after which we answered questions for some time. We left him some literature to read. He invited some time. We left time some interature to read. He invited us to visit him again whenever we were in Pahoa. We stopped night with a young Korean, who made us welcome, and provided us with a lunch to eat on the way to the next village. We finished visiting the natives at Pahoa, and started for Kalapana about noon. It was twelve miles through the forest and the weather was showery. We visited the families along the way. We ate our lanch of bread seasoned with berries that grew in abundance in the woods. We kept our bodies dry with our Japanese umbrellas, but our feets and limbs got quite wet before we arrived at Kalapana. It was almost dark but we soon found a place to stop for the night, with a native family. The breadfruit poi and salmon tasted good to the weary missionaries.

The Hawaiian people are very hospitable, and will always give you a share of the best they have in the house. They will sleep on the hard floor and insist that you take the bed in the house. We have had this to occur in our , The next two days, we visited and explained the gospel to all who would listen to us. We followed the paths from one house to another through the Guava bushes that were wet from the showers of rain, that continued all the time we were there. It was like going out into the highways the byways, calling in the lame the halt and the blind the wedding feast.

And as it is written in Jeremiah 16:16. "Rehold I will send for many fishers, saith the Lord, and they shall fish them; and after will I send many bunters, and they shall bunt them from every mountain and from every hill, and out of the holes of the rocks."

Returning at night wet nearly to our waists by wading through the damp underbrush, we found a place to stay with the school teacher. With tears of thankfulness to our the school teacher. With tears of thankfulness to one heavenly Father we sat down to eat our evening meal of poi, potatoes, rice and meat. Oh how we did relish that dinner. We had fasted since morning, except for some guavas which we ate that grew along the paths. It was the first English meal we had eaten for several days.

In the morning after breakfast we had prayer with them, In the morning after breakfast we had prayer with them, and also administered to their baby, who was troubled with the earache. God's Spiril was present and all felt it. We then thanked them for their kindness to us, and they asked us to come and see them again. We then started on our return trip to Hilo. The sun was shining and as we walked along that new road made of volcano cinders leveled off, ready for the finishing coat, we almost wore out the soles of our shoes. Our shoes we damp and soft from the day before, our shoes. Our shoes we damp and soft from the day before, so that the rocks cut them like a knife. At the next village Bro. McConley had to buy a new pair of shoes. You might wonder why we did not walk on the soil. There was no soil to walk on. The whole country was one mass of volcano cinders and the road has been leveled down so that people could travel on it.

At Kapoho we held a meeting in the court house, and Bro. McConley preached using the native tongue. From this place we took the train to Hilo, where we arrived about 8 a. m. We repaired at once to our boarding house and told the waiter we thought we needed about ten dollars worth of ham and eggs.

We were soon called to Honolulu to look after the work there during the absence of Bro, Waller. Most of the summer we have been doing tent work and in this way have kept our message before the people. We baptized a number of nice people while in Honolulu. We are now following up the work we began here last year, and we expect to make another trip through the Puna District soon.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR CORRESPONDENTS.

F. C. Keck, Wimer, Okla.—I have baptized five adults since coming here, four of them heads of families, which makes fitteen since I left Independence. I closed our meeting last night the house packed with interested hearers. Some outsiders bid us good bye with tears in their eyes. I am enjoying the greatest liberty in my preaching that we have. To God be the glory. I am feeling the best kind, and standing the preaching so much better than I expected. In the conflict for life.

HOW ONE SORELY TRIED COMFORTED ANOTHER.

To have much sickness, to have accident, to have death; to have one of the little brood of six sadly afflicted for an indefinite period of time, to have widowhood and more sickness; and finanicial and home responsibilities all heaped on one in a few months, (comparatively), ah-how some do suffert

Some would give up in despair! This one, outwardly has a stout heart for the sake of loved ones 'who have enough to bear." And the childrenthe children must be glad to come home, they must not have to endure more than they must, of the burden. The keeness of it will come soon enough.

So, many profit by her words of cheer, her deeds of kindness; the neighborhood children flock to this home for her stories her aid and information in various lines. And her "salvation" in trial has been to keep interested in things and people and to keep abreast of the times. It would simply mean more of trouble to others and sometimes to self, to yield to extreme feelings of a heart near bursting with grief and anxiety—so she reasons.

And there are the evidences of God's watch care over this household-which increases the physical, mental and spiritual strength of one so handicapped in the face of those hopes and aims; talents- as yet undeveloped or untrained in her

In response to a letter which this mother sent one of her kin, also enduring a succession of trials and heartaches, she received words of comfort and food for thought, which may not come amiss for other tried hearts to look upon.

You ask 'What is there to live for?' cases as these, 1 suppose-Roaming around in the Art Institute a day or two ago (I often go there at noons as it has a soothing effect on my nerves), I drifted into the hall containing the statuary, bas reliefs, inscriptions, and other relics of accient Egypt.

Among others was a shaft commemorating the life and deeds of one Shalmanezer II, who appeared upon this stage, some hundreds of years before Christ: and I recollected a volume I have at home. giving translation of inscription's beaten in the rock at the command and for the glory of this same mighty King; telling of his battles and conquests; of the hundreds he slew; of the riches he gained, and his captives. He had something to live for —and he lived. He had nothing to die for-but he died.

And all this happened hundreds-yes, thousands, of years ago. Shalmanezer and his boastings are but a memory here, but somewhere he is a living factor and his record of selfishness and lust and bloodshed can afford him no pleasure.

I doubt not he would be glad if he could exchange he victorious life for the fearsome existence of one of those he tormented.

We start out in life with ideals and high ambitions and when one by one, as we add years we find that this hope will never attain fruition, and that this ideal is not to be attained by us and that this ambition is impossible of attainment by we are saddened and pity ourselves, and wonder why we were born.

The fact is—we are born, and we willingly accept and go out of our way to meet, conditions that carry with them responsibilies sufficient to try the stoutest hearts-each of us cognizant, to a degree, of the breakers ahead, but each of us hoping that he, through some favor of Providence, may escape serious reverses and enjoy the comforts and blessings only.

You and I have probably lived half our lives. have had some trials, yours have been much greater and harder to bear, Much suffering here must make a future life under other conditions, much sweeter than if everything moved here to meet our wishes; and you have the satisfaction of knowing that the battles you have fought were more difficult than those waged by Shalmanezer (and others before and since); and that the result is not a crime to be accounted for, but an actual taste of life's bitter :up which can only work to your advantage-We can feel assured of this-that we were not placed here to have a 'good time' ".

CORRECTION.

In last week's issue, the account headed 'Tag Day" was not written as a sub heading to the editorial, and should not have been included in the editorial, as we find it printed.

Also,—in next to the last paragraph of the editorial, the word "com-ort," should read "confront" making it read, corrected,-

'The poor may in truth be rich, for what is poverty endured here (when endowed with the riches of heaven) compared to the poverty of soul which marks the rich in the round of narrow lives and which confronts them in the world to come."

WE HAVE OXFORD BIBLES, TOO.

Yes, we have the celebrated Oxford Bibles, none better in the world. That is saying a good deal, but it can be backed up. These Bibles are published by the American branch of the Oxford University Press.

We have lately put in the Oxfords in addition to our line of Bagster and Cambridge Bibles, which are also of the highest class of Bibles. Send for list. These make nice Christmas presents.

THE BODY OF CHRIST.

Those who in former times accepted the claims of Jesus Christ as the Messiah were gathered into an organic union which was referred to as the church, the body of Christ, the kingdom of heaven, etc. The individuals thus gathered were called saints, disciples, believers, the brotherhood, etc. What were the elements which brought this brotherhood together and which held them together in the body of Christ?

That Jesus Christ was the real author of the inknown as the church none will deny. hence if his work by which his church was established be examined it may readily be found what those elements were. Besides he is represented as the head of the body, the church, so that the same principles which characterize the one must characterize the other, and what is found in the head must of necessity be found in the body.

A COMMON TRUTH.

The principles which Christ advocated and often spoke of as the word, the truth, were the basis of belief for all those who became his followers. Those who did not accept those principles or any part of them, did not follow him, nor could they be united with a perfect union with those who did accept them. Thus the truth was the first element by which these people were brought together. It brought them to see alike, to think alike, to have similar desires, hopes, and aspirations; it was the first essential element in forming a true Christian brotherhood.

COMMON ORDINANCES.

Principle was not the only thing which brought and held these people together, for the Scriptures show that upon their profession of faith in the word men were initiated into the brotherhood of Christ by the ordinance of baptism in water. John the Baptist in preparing the way performed this ordinance for the se only who accepted the principles he taught and were willing to live in obedience to them, while those who did not accept them and were unwilling to live them were refused. Jesus himself did not hesitate to observe it, and insisted upon fulfilling the law by which he became an example to all others.

The urgency of this ordinance is set forth in many places in the Scriptures. Jesus evidently refers to it in speaking to Nicodemus: "Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." When the Jews who were convicted dom of God. When the Jensenhold of sin by the preaching on Pentecost cried out in their despair, "Men and brethren, what shall we do?" the inspired apostle commanded: "Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins," The absolute necessity and importance of this ordinance are here shown.

Other ordinances of universal application were also taught and practiced in the church, such as the laying on of hands for conferring the gift of the Holy Ghost, and the Lord's Supper; the necessity of which cannot be questioned without reflecting upon the wisdom and integrity of Christ, the Holy Ghost, and the inspired ministry, by whom they were instituted, observed and approved. These ordinances also constituted one of the elements in the body of Christ by which its members were brought into and maintained in unity.

COMMON AUTHORITY.

Recognition and acknowledgement of Jesus as the Messiah carried with them an acknowledgement of his authority as being the authorized representative of God, and upon the basis of this authority the members of the church were what they were. It was the element of authority that gave to Christ's words their power of life, and which made the ordinances effectual, and without it words have no force and ordinances become but dead forms.

Jesus affirms his authority when he said: "The Father hath sent me." "He that sent me is with me: the Father hath not left me alone; for I do always those things that please him." The Father "hath given him authority to execute judgment "He taught them as one having authority." This authority was shown more clearly in the results which followed for those who became subject to it through obedience to the principles and ordinances, received of the Holy Spirit by which they were assured of a forgiveness of sins and of their acceptance with God, receiving also other gifts and blessings which often healed them of physical infirmities and strengthened them in the battles of

This element of authority was extended to those whom Christ chose as his ministry. "As my Father hatn sen: me, even so send I you." Those who accepted and applied the principles and ordinances to their lives under the ministration of the apostles and elders received the same results as came from Christ's personal ministration, thus showing that the authority of Christ remained with the church and was one of the elements within the body which bound the members together.

A COMMON RIGHTEOUSNESS

Observance of the principles and ordinances taught by Christ and his ministry under the authority of God brought a cleansing from sin and an acceptance with God, and to maintain this new and exalted relationship it was necessary to continue to live in accordance with those principles. "It ye continue in my word, then are Iesus said: ye my disciples indeed." He further taught that men are sanctified and perfected through obedience to the truth, and without such obedience they could not be a harmonious part of the "one body." "Abide in me. and I in you. As the branch cannot bear fruit of itself, except it abide in the vine; no more can ye, except ye abide in me." branch in me that beareth not fruit he taketh

Only by continuing in the word, fulfilling every requirement, can the member of Christ's body be at unity with the Head, and railing in this he is subject to removal the same as the dead parts of any organic body. This point is so self evident that it is not necessary to continue with further evidence. Righteousness, which results from obedience to the principles and ordinances belonging to the kingdom of God, is then an element essential to the existence, and perpetuation of the body of Christ as well as its members.

DISINTEGRATION.

Jesus came to bring life, spiritual life, to the world. The principles, ordinances, authority, with the resultant righteousness, operating in and through the organic body, constituted the means by which that life was attained and preserved, and hence the rejection of any one of the essential elements would deny man the power to receive this life. If those who by acceptance of and obedience to these things had attained life in Christ, should afterward neglect or reject them, death would ensue as certainly as to the branch that did not "abide in the vine."

Before the apostles had finished their work men began to slight the principles which they had previously espoused, and in subsequent times much of the truth was rejected by the protessed followers of Christ so that many dissentions and schisms resulted. The ordinances, where not rejected altogether, have been so changed in form and purpose that they have become vitiated and unacknowledged of God. With the rejection of these things, the "righteonsness of God," which is revealed in the gospel, does not exist, and men have established their own standards according to the degree of truth which they retained.

It is not strange that under such conditions the authority of God should have been withdrawn, and that Christ no longer sent men into the world as the Father had sent him-with authority to minister in the things of the gospel, until in these latter times he saw fit to re-establish his work. Under these conditions men have urged their own opinions, and having found followers, multitudes of organizations have sprung up each purporting to be the body of Christ, but all failing to bring the same results which were experienced by the members of Christ's body in ancient times.

The present divided state, of Christianity, as it is called, tells the story of unfaithfulness and disloyalty to the institution established by Christ. Dissolution has done its work, and for centuries the church (?) has been without Christ and without Whosoever transgresseth, and abideth God for: not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God." Upon their own initiative and authority men have launched movements bearing Christ's name, and have not thought to ask him for the privilege, neither awaited his counsel.

RESTORATION.

Through what is called "The Restoration," the Lord has in recent times re-established his church, and set anew before men the ancient principles, restored the authority and ordinances, and is again calling men to come up to the righteousness of the gospel and receive of the same life as those of ancient times with all its attendant gifts and blessings. The same promises are made, and the same possibilities are offered by which men's acceptance with God and their salvation are assured.

What more could be required? What more could God do in order to leave men without excuse? The opportunity of coming into association with Christ through his body is given to every man, and every one who improves this opportunity may know the correctness of his course.

Elders who have been accustomed to stop with Bro. T. S. Martin, at Eufaula, Okla., will note that he has removed to Independence, Missouri.

PRACTICAL HYGIENE.

Of the 4000 new graves made daily in the United States Of the 4000 new graves made daily in the United States nearly 2000 of them are dug because people are either ignorant or careless of the principles of hygiene and sanitary science. The 700,000 lives mouthly destroyed by infectious diseases and the million ther cases of sickness from contagious maladies, with their attendant suffering, are largely sacrifices on the altar of ignorance—The Shield.

Do you wish to be great? Then begin by being little. Do you desire to construct a vast and lofty fabric? Think first about the foundations of humility. The higher your structure is to be, the deeper must be its foundation. Modest humility is beauty's crown.

How much better it is to see men live exactly than to hear them argue with subtlety!

Announcement was made by President Harrington that plaus bad been made for the special meetings at the church to begin on January 18th, the speakers to be Patriarch F. A.

to begin on January 18th, the speakers to be Patriaten P. A. Smith and Anostle J. W. Rushton.

The Christmas offering of the Independence Sunday school amounts to $580.50, and the Superintendent Bro. Krahl assures us it will reach $600 before the fund closes.

The speakers Sunday were Elder O. R. Miller in the morning and Elder Joseph Arber in the evening. The sacramental service in the afternoon was unusually large, and was in charge of the presidency with Brn. A. H. Parsons, Wm. Aylor, and others.

Bro. Jeptha Scott aged 78 died on Monday at the sani-tarium where he was doing light work. He was born in Nova Scotia and was a sailor, and made the trip with Bro. and Sr. Burton and Bro. and Sr. Hubert Case and others to the South Sea Islands on the Evanelia. He came to Independence a little over a year ag a.

Christmar, with its usual burry and bustle, its air of surpressed excite-cent and mystery, its prevailing joyousness and good fellowship, has come and gone once more. So far as we could observe it was a happy season everywhere. This city was very generous to the poor and many hundred dollars were spent in providing comfort and cheer for the needy, and gladdening the hearts of the destitute little ones.

On Christinas eve the Sunday school gave its usual entertainment in the anditorium of the church, and we can say the music committee certainly did themselves "proud," The program was mainly a musical one, and was rendered by some of the best musical talent in the city. The orchestra was composed of Professors W. C. Maupin, Charles Welty. Hugh McNutt and Fred Davis, accompanied by Miss Mary Kinaniana, on the piano, Miss Francis White gave a beautiful vocal number, and little Juanita Nixoo charmed the auditory with the programment of the control of the cont cance with a sweet little song. An instrumental piece, was played on two pianos by Misses Mary Kinanman, Minnie Scott, Elmis Dobson and Edna Christiansen. Bro. W. W. Scott, made a short appropriate talk, and Superintendent Harry Tilden in a few well chosen remarks presented our dear pastor Bro. B. J. Scott with a comfortably filled purse. the gift of the congregation.

At the close of the program, an artistic old mill on the platform, which had been concealed by curtains was uncovered and began grinding out Christinas boxes at a high rate of speed. A number of little Rubes stepped out of the mill and with baskets laden with the 'igrist'' served the audi once not missing one. Seldom have we had a more delightful evening, and the committees were deserving all the praise

Sunday the 28th Bro. Herbert Salisbury of Ferris, Ill., spoke in the morning. His talk was very interesting, and instructive as be gave us many facts concerning the antecedents of many of the pioneers of the church.

In the evening our pastor preached a fine sermon, also occupied both morning and evening on the fourth. were not privileged to hear these sermons but understand from others that they were good.

Last Sunday the regular sacrament service occurred and a spiritual meeting followed. We have been having good prayermeetings for some time both Sunday and midweek.

On Wednesday the thirty-first, the superintendent and teachers of the primary and junior departments of the Sunday school entertained the pupils at the home of Sr. Cochran.

The little folks enjoyed themselves to all appearances.

On New Years day, it became our sad duty to attend the funeral of Earl Shool a young orphan brother, nearly fitten years old. The services were held at the church, in charge of Bro. Roy Fifer, our pastor delivering a comforting talk and a loving exhortation to the two brothers who are all that remain of the family. The little boy was well cared for by a kind family with whom he has lived since his mother's death, and who seemed to care a great deal for him.

On Friday evening the second the Religio held its semi annual election of offi ers. resulting as follows: Roy R. Fifer, president; Paul Pugsley, vice president; M. S. Ross, secretary; Belle Burlington, treasurer; Russell McKee home de partment superintendent. The hour being late it was decided to defer the remainder of the election to the following friday. All the officers elected so far were the former incumbents, which goes to show that their services were most satisfactory.

The new seats for the choir have been received and we presume will soon be in position.

Bro. W. W. Scott and wife have been having a family union, their two daughters, Srs. Leona Salis ary and Ardeta Gifford coming with their families the one from Illinois, and the other from Iowa, to spend the holidays. Bro. and Sr. salisbury returned home last Friday.

Bro. Herbert D. Ennis who has been in the sunny south for nearly a year, returned with his son Hollis on Christmas day. He thinks the south is not just the place for him, but we are beginning to feel like any place where the sun shines

The morning of December 28 we were made sad by the retiring of our highly esteemed Sunday school superintend-ent, Bro. H. C. Burgess. He expressed his appreciation of the support he had received and regrets to separate from us the support he had received and regrets to separate from us but he feels it is best for the future of himself and wife to locate on their farm near Lamoni. We pray the choicest of blessings to attend them. Our pastor, Bro. T. J. Elhott, then took charge and after fitting remarks regarding Bro. Harold's work, presented our newly elected superintendent, Bro. Robt. Lloyd, admonishing the school to give him the support that is due. Bro. Lloyd then made remarks expressing his hopes and desires in the Sunday school work with which he is entrusted. which he is entrusted.

The morning sermon was delivered by Bro. H. C. Burgess, and being his farewell sermon it was very impressive.

Many thoughts were gathered of an edifying nature, among which were: Why have we come, what is our mission? When storm comes see what lesson there is in it. Lay a sure foundation

Bro. S. A. Burgess having come home for the holidays was pressed into service the evening of December 28. His effort was reported as being exceptionally fine.

We have had three baptisms since last report, and the little babe of Sr. Kneusman and husband was ble Bro. T. J. Elliott.

Our pastor, Bro. T. J. Elliott, and wife are rejoicing in the arrival of a dear little girl which came to bless their home Dec. 18th, as are also Bro. and Sr. Gomer Evans who welcomed their little girl Dec. 23d. All are doing well.

January 4th being the first sacrament of the veer a goodly attendance assembled to worship in song, prayer and testimony. A soul reviving season was enjoyed. By request of the pastor all families, that could do so were seated together. The evening discourse was delivered by Bro. T. J. Elliott his subject being Resolutions kept, and broken.

The St. Louis choir is to render the beautiful cantata "Daniel," Sunday, January 18th, in Lanadowne, Illinois. It is well worth every one's effort to hear it.

Our Jubilee or fiftieth annuversury celebration is to take place February 4th, and will last fifteen days. A most spiritual and reviving time is anticipated. The old year passed out taking with it a severe storm period that has been upon us for some days, in which much damage was done, in some regards the worst storm on record. The new year comes in serene with a gentle breeze and thin floating clouds. We extend to all a hearty wish for a happy and prosperous New Year.

The young people of the San Francisco Branch have in-

DUKE, Ohio, Nov. 11. Editor Ensign:—As I have not seen anything in your valuable columns for a long time will write a few lines. We are having our first winter weather here in Southern Ohio, Snow fell all day Sunday and almost all night and is badly Elder N. L. Booker came here with the teut in September and stayed three weeks. None were added to the church but we feel sure that the good seed sown did not all fall on stony ground but will eventually spring forth and bear much fruit. We are still trying in our weakness to serve our Master as best we can. It seems that we receive many ble that we are scarcely worthy of.

We saw the power of God wondrously manifested re-cently in the partial healing of a three months' old baby, We with several neighbors and friends were gathered around the bedside of the baby which was to all appearaces dying, Old gray-haired mothers said the baby would not live until the physician, who had been hastily summoned, could arrive. They even said the little finger nails were turning blue. I Incy even said the little inger nails were turning blue. I took the little sufferer in my arms trying to do what I could to soothe it in its last moments. Oh how my heart ached for the babe, its little frame racked with pain. I offered up a silent prayer in behalf of the little sufferer and the Great Physician heard and answered. The child then slept peacefully for a few minutes, awoke and opened its eyes and looker around intelligantly. Great was the surprise of those looker around intelligently. Great was the surprise of those around, some saying it was better others thought it was dying. As the minutes passed into hours and it was still better, first As the minutes passed into hours and it was still better, hirst one kind of medicine and then another was given credit for the change, but none gave credit where it was due. When the physician arrived he pronounced the child much better than when he saw it a few days of re, although they told him it was apparently dying when he was called. We offered no opinion as to what caused the change for the knowledge we possessed seemed too sacred to offer to the world, for we know they would not believe it. knew they would not believe it.

We are happy in knowing that we are one of God's chil iren and that he does answer our unworthy prayers. Pray for me, dear saints, that I may continue to grow in the faith that I may be worthy of any blessing God may see fit faith that I may be worthy of any blessing God may see fit to bestow upon his servant is the request of your sister in the state superior court of appeais.

Dear Ensign:—it will be remembered by many of our readers that a certain erring and unfortunate brother in Michigan brought suit some time ago in the Oklahoma courts mengan prought suit some time ago in the Oklahoma courts against the writer for publishing the church court decisions and leading facts concerning said brother's expulsion from church fellowship. It may also be recalled to mind that the lower court rendered a decision in our misled brother's favor at that time, and that the case was immediately appealed to the state superior court of appeals.

We now write to inform those interested, that the superior court at Oklahoma City has just handed down its decision, and has rewrested the findings of the lower court. So if it still be insisted upon that a man is a criminal who has perpetrated the heinous crime of telling the trath and telling it plainly, it now becomes necessary for the prosecution to take up the remanded order for a new trial, and proceed (in the interest of the moral welfare of our country) to see to it that these who fearlessly tell the truth shall be adequately punished; for there are critical occasious when special inter-ests do not demand an over production of that edged article,

And now in view of the fact that it is but human to ere, and with a heart of charity toward our Michigan brother, we will here say that it might have been a wiser course upon our part to have left some of the 'truths concerning our brother's mis-steps unsaid; and if these lines should come under his eye, we vish to convey in words of soberness, calling upon our Lord to witness, there is in the heart of this writer no hatred nor any thoughts akin to malice toward him whom we have regarded in this matter as persecutor, rather than presenter. And now in view of the fact that it is but human to err,

May the Lord deal kindly with him and forgive us if in our zeal to defend the cause we love we have been indiscreet or have been instrumental in wronging another in any way is

PORT HURON, Mich., Dec. 18.

PORT HUROR, Mich., Dec. 18.

Dear Ensign:—It has been a long time since I have at templed to write anything for your pages, and having had a few weeks' rest from labor, and taking advantage thereof I made a flying trip through the Eastern and Central Michigan Districts, and have through it presents well as the contract of the property of the proper Districts, and have thought it proper to write you some of my observations which may prove of general interest to your many readers

In the different places where I have visited I have found the saints in general very much alive to the work, and in no place more so than in the beautiful city of Port Huron. Here the work was started a long number of years ago, and a branch was organized; but notwithstanding under a hard a branch was organized; but notwithstanding under a hard struggle a church-house was purchased, the time came when many of those as first organized either moved elsewhere or were cut down by death, and the work here began to decline, confusion and distrust rapidly following and gain ing the ascendency which finally resulted in the old campfires burning but dimly. But within the last three years, through the efforts of the district officers and the selection of this place for the holding of our reunions, etc., a change has taken place. The old spirit of love and Christian fellowship has been revived, and union and concerted action are in the lead, and the Spirit of God thrills the heart of the worship her as they weet in their devotional exercises, and gladness per as they meet in their devotional exercises, and gladness is pictured on the countenances of all.

I believe there are only about 129 members enrolled on the Port Huten Branch record, and all of them are working people; yet in their zeal and earnestness for the advancement of the work in the city they have set themselves the task of building a more commodious place of worship—a place more centrally located—that the weary traveler and the earnest searchers for truth—the outsiders—might be attracted thereto and obtain rest and the gospel find its way in the enlightenment of the bonest in heart. They have therefore sold the old church building, and are erecting a new one at a cost of five thousand dollars, a building of which the extreme length and width is 57x34 leet; having a basement for Religio and Sunday school work, etc., and an upper auditorium for gen

As above referred to, the saints here are poor in this world's goods, but rich in faith; and they are making grea sacrifice in their struggle to complete their place of worship; scarifice in their struggle to complete their place of worship; and notwithstanding they now contemplate having, their church opening about the 11th of January, yet they are lacking in funds to complete and dedicate their church building to God; and i: any one who may read these lines can find in their beart to help them to the extent of their ability and generosity, whether it be much or little, they would be contributing to a worthy cause, and their aid would be greatly appreciated by the Port Huron saints. Elder Otto Fetting having moved here last April, at dhaving the general charge and oversight of the work of the church building here will gladly receipt for all moneys sent him for the purpose of helping in the completion of this noble enterprise. His address is 1031 Gillet St., Port Huron, Mich.

I also recently visited the saints in Whittemore, and found them cornestly engaged, Elder Summerfield having the work well in hand there. I found Elder O. J. Hawn bammering away in Bay. City with prospects of baptizing some in the near luture, and the further prospect of a theological tossie with the Rev. Simms at no very distant day.

tussle with the Rev. Simms at no very distant day.

Glad to find conditions so favorable where I have been.

I expect to be with the saints in St. Clair next Sunday, then n to Detroit for the holidays, thence back to my work after

Would love to say to all my friends throughout the church, I am still in the conflict, and the hope of the gospel was never more bright, nor its message more cheering to my soul than it is now; and no matter what the adversities may be which may come into my life, my faith in this great latter day work will ever remain unshaken; and while here on earth I stay, wherever opportunity affords me the privilege, I am always glad to testify that I know this is God's work, and that he will direct its course until every creature which is in heaven, and on the earth, and under the earth, and such as are in the sea, and all that are in them shall in triumphal strains joyfully exclaim. "Blessing, and honor, and glory, and power, be unto bim that sitted upon the throne, and unto the Lamb forever and ever," Amen!

Very truly and sincerely yours.

Editor Ensign:—Many have written to us concerning the Lamanites and the work among them. We think it is progressing very well. We can get them about as fact as we are able to care for them. There are two Indian elders at work among them. We have been too busy to give much time to the work among them for the present year, as there are so many demands on us for work at various places in the mission-that we cannot even do, justice to the many calls for work at warfows places in the mission-that we cannot even do, justice to the many calls for work among the white people. We had about 300 Indians at the exercises Chrimmas time, and the tree was beautiful, so many had sont deeventions and such nice presents; the Indians also put on many presents, Brn. Head and others being some of that fruit, That altar has never been deserted, and that first brauch is still in working order under the leadership of Bro. H. K. Row-land, who has been its president for about fifteen years. The writer preached one week lately at this place and find the good Spirit there to encourage and bless. Also another meeting at Reeding a few miles from there where we preached two weeks and baptized four. That is a good place, for an angathering. We have a good live Sunday school there, and ingathering. We have many good friends.

The writer was the speaker for the evening, and although weather conditions were still unfavorable a goodly number were in attendance. The building is a commodious and substantial one, being about thirty eight by fifty-six feet, and is the result of a well and earnestly directed effort upon the part of a few saints, chiefly Bros. Dow CITY, Iowa, Dec. 17. Editor Ensign:—I feel impressed to write a few lines for your most excellent paper, trusting that the few lines I may write may be interesting to your readers. The more care fully and coroughly our work is examined in the light of the Spirit from the standpoint of the sacred books of the church, the more impregnable it seems to be; and I am glad this is true. The writer had a good many experiences during the last fiftytwo years which confirms this belief, even though at times we meet with things that try our faith, and for a nomeht make conditions exceedingly unpleasant. However these things are like a raging storm which in its fierceness seems to shake the very foundations of nature itself, but in a short However these time it passes by and the sun in its splendor, reveals the glory of God and the weakness of man,

Sr. Shirley was anxious to be baptized, and it they made the morning train the ordinance must be administered that evening, and it was growing dark. However, by request of Sr. Kinney, the writer and a number of the saints went out the same hour of the night, like one of old, and the ordinance of haptism was duly solemnized, when under the direction of the branch president, J. While at this place the writer preached twenty-eight discourses to good sized audiwriter preached twenty-eight discourses to good sized addi-discress, some times the hou-e was well filled, though a few services, owing to the weather and bad condition of the roads were not so well attended. Those attending my services were in the main members of the Christian Church, though I was informed that there were a few Presbyteriaus, and some non-members, but they all gave me a kind, attentive, and respective hearing, and some expressed themselves as enjoy ing my services very much

W. W. Barnes O. L. Swick, and William Myers, all of whom are local elders of the Christian Church, were very kind to me, permitting me to preach in their church house Sundays after the close of their Sacrament service, in the Sundays after the close of their Sacrament service, in the forenoon, and after their League meeting in the evening, when their pastor was not present, so that I preached seven discourses in the Christian Church, and twenty-one in the school bouse, which is next door to the church. If there was any offence given during these meetings the writer was not aware of it, though he saw a little uneasiness manifest at times on the part of some. The writer tried to the best of his ability to correctly, and as fully as possible represent the dectrine of the Representace Church such as the time would admit doctrine of the Reorganized Church as the time would adust.

The thought in the writer's mind may be stated as tollows:
It is not so much what is said, but the way in which it is said that gives offence, and causes hard feelings.

At this point the writer preached the usual subjects from faith to eternal judgment, including the angel's message, or the restoration of the cospel, including the restoration of the Spirit, the priesthood with the gifts and blessings of the Spirit, the necessity for re-commitment of the gospel commission, and the prophetic mission of Joseph Smith. In mission, and the prophetic mission of Joseph Smith. In making our points on these subjects last mentioned, we based them on this line of argument: God spoke to Adam and others in the first dispensation by his own voice, by the voice of angels, and by the voice of the Spirit. In the second dispensation God spake to Noah by his own voice, by the voice of angels, and the voice of the Spirit. That in the third dis-pensation God spake to Abraham, Isaac, and acob and others by his own voice, the voice of angels, and the voice of the spirit. That is the fourth dispensation God spake to Moses and many others by his own voice, the voice of angels, and the voice of the Spirit. That in the fifth dispensation God spake to Christ and others with his own voice, the voice of angels, and the voice of the Spirit. That after the c.uci-fixion and resurrection of Christ Jesus be appeared to the woman, to the Twelve to above live hundred brethren at once, and then to San and after that to John on the Island of Patinos. That it was but reasonable to believe that in the opening up of the sixth dispensation, which is "The dispensation of the follows of times," God would again speak to Man with his own voice, with the voice of his Son, with the voice of angels and the voice of the Spirit, which was true in the visions of Joseph Smith, and the revelations given to the church and the world to him.

I have written these thoughts thinking they might be new and interesting to some of the members of the church who have belonged with us but a few years, but older members and ministers will, without doubt, understand these things as well if not better than the writer.

The 12th instant received a telegram from home asking me to return owing to the illness of Sr. Butterworth. She is better at this writing, though yet far from being well.

Bro. William Keill and family were very kind to me, and made their home a pleasant stopping place, and kindly brought me with team and wagnot to Broken Bow, a distance of fifteen miles, that I might catch the first train for home.

Kindly yours, Charles E. Butterworth,

SERMONS AND ARTICLES

HAS THE ANGEL FLOWN?

We are apt at times to accept statements, when fostered by representative men, as fervently and tenaciously as we would a "Thus saith the Lord;" believing that he who speaks has undeniable authority, and a knowledge of things as they are and shall be

It is this lack of analysis that places us at times in a critical position, when expostulating before the informed; for an error though propounded by a prophet, is empty and damaging to the cause when confronted by truth and an array of facts.

We have been led to believe that the angel spoken of in Revelation 14:6, has already come with the entire message as is there recorded; but has he? If so, where is the record to be found telling of such a message having been received by any people up to the present time?

It seems to me, the first knowledge to acquire concerning this subject is, what does it really say as to the period that the cry shall have its consumation? Let us read and see:-

"And I looked, and lo, a Lamb [Jesus Christ] stood on the mount Sion, and with him an hundred forty and four thousand, having his Father's name written in their foreheads."

Who are these who shall come with Jesus Christ when he stands upon mount Sion or Zion?

Doctrine and Covenants 108:10, last part: "And the graves of the saints shall be opened, and they shall come forth and stand on the right hand of the Lamb, when he shall stand upon Mount Zion, and upon the holy city, the New Jerusalem, and they shall sing the song of the Lamb day and night forever and ever."

It is the saints who shall be thus privileged as we read:-"And I heard a voice from heaven, as the voice of many waters, and as the voice of a great thunder; and I heard the voice of harpers harping with their harps; and they sang as it were a new song before the throne, and before the four beasts, and the elders; and no man could learn that song but the hundred and forty and four thousand, which were redeemed from the earth. These are they which were not defiled with women; for they are virgins. These are they which follow the Lamb from among men, being the first fruits unto God and to the Lamb. And in their mouth was found no guile; for they are without fault before the throne of God."

Note carefully here, that we have the ushering in of the millennial reign. Christ has come with his saints, and he stands upon Mount Zion. After this has taken place, then John records:

'And I saw another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people, saying with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to him: for the hour of his judgment is come; and worship him that made heaven, and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of water."

Now in analyzing this message, we discover several things; viz. There is to be a distinct period when this angel shall make his advent. That period is after the Lamb shall stand upon Mount Zion. He has to have a peculiar message which he shall utter with a loud voice. Why a loud voice? His atterance is not to be confined to one man. but to all nations, the significance of which is to prepare them to hear the messengers of Jesus Christ when they shall present the message of truth to them, and also to break down the thraldom which priestcraft has erected as a barrier to the word of God.

There is a peculiar day or period, in the which Jesus Christ purposes to make his gospel plain and convincing to the nations, and he has ordained that this special time shall be ushered in by the proclamation of an angelic being, who shall shout the tidings in a supernatural way, that their attention may be elicited, and that there be no mistaking his authority. We read of this period somewhat more plainly in the Doctrine and Covenants 87:3,4, latter part of verse three:-

As also through your administration the keys of the school of the prophets, which I have comperfected in their ministry for the salvation of Zion, and of the nations of Israel, and of the Gen-tiles, as many as will believe, that through your administration, they may received the word, an through their administration, the word may go forth unto the ends of the earth, unto the Gentiles first, and then, behold, and lo, they shall turn unto the lews; and then cometh the day when the arm of the Lord shall be revealed in power in convincing the nations, the heathen nations, the house of Joseph, of the gospel of their salvation. For it shall come to pass in that day, that every man shall hear the fullness of the gospel in his own tongue, and in his own language, through those who are ordained unto this power, by the administration of the Comforter, shed forth upon them, for the revelation of Jesus Christ."

You will notice here, that it is to be a special day subsequent to the day that this revelation was given; in the which, the arm of the Lord shall be revealed in power in convincing the nations, the heathen nations, of the gospel of their salvation. And note further, that this day spoken of is subsequent to the teaching of the Gentiles and the Jews.

We are perfectly aware, that what gospel is being taught now, is being taught to the Gentiles: the Jews have not yet been approached with the message, hence, this great day spoken of, is not yet When is this day that the heathen nations shall hear the gospel? It is a definite time according to the language cited. Has the Lord made special provision for the heathen nations under a special dispensation? If so, when?

Doctrine and Covenants 45:9.10 seems to me to let light in upon our mental vision and sets forth the day of enlightenment of the heathen in no uncertain terms. We read:

"And then shall the lews look apon me and say. [This is when Christ shall come at his second advent] What are these wounds in thy hands, and in thy feet? Then shall they know that I am the Lord; for I will say unto them, These are the wounds with which I was wounded in the house of my friends. I am he who was lifted up. I am Jesus that was crucified. I am the Son of God. And then shall they weep because of their iniquities; then shall they lament because they persecuted their King. And then shall the heathen nations be redeemed, and they that knew no law shall have part in the first resurrection; and it shall be tolerable for them; and Satan shall be bound that he shall have no place in the hearts of the children of men.'

It is very plainly stated here when the day spoken of shall be ushered in, it is the millennial day, Did the angel which came to Joseph Smith proclaim any such language as cited from Revelation fourteen? I have utterly failed to find any such message as is there recorded, in any of the records purporting to be the history of the angel message. The only statement which even hints at such a message, is that recorded in Doctrine and Covenants 108:7, which reads:-

"And now verily saith the Lord. That these things might be known among you, O inhabitants of the earth, I have sent forth mine angel, flying through the mid-t of heaven, having the everlasting gospel, who hath appeared unto some, [not to every one as we will see the full message implies] and hath committed it unto man, who shall [future again] appear unto many that dwell on the earth, and this gospel shall [at some time in the future] be preached unto every nation, and kindred, and tongre, and people, [its ultimate ending] and the servants of God shall go forth, saying, with a loud voice; Fear God and give glory to him, for the HOUR OF HIS JUDGMENT IS COME, and worship him that made heaven, and earth, and sea, and the fountains of water."

The only evidence I get from this passage is, that both the angel and the servants will proclaim the same message, but the space of time seems to be different, and the magnitude of the utterance made by the afigel is vastly multiplied, the servant's message being proclaimed now, with a loud voice, but the angel's specific cry is reserved for the fu-

We read that the angel told Joseph, that if he was faithful the Lord would use him to establish his gospel in the world. He also told him that in the Book of Mormon the fullness of the gospel was contained. That Jerusalem should be again inhabited as towns without walls. That the gospel should never more be taken from the earth. it should be preached to all nations in every land, But we fail to find any record referring to the fulfillment of Revelation fourteen.

Again, reading from Doctrine and Covenants 43:5. he refers to this certain day to come in very emphatic language:---

"Hearken ye, for, behold, the great day of the Lord is nigh at hand. For the day cometh that the Lord shall utter his voice out of heaven; the heavens shall shake and the earth shall tremble, and the trump of God shall sound both long and loud, and shall say to the sleeping nations: saints arise and live. Ye sinners stay and sleep until I shall call again; wherefore gird up your loins, lest ye be found among the wicked. Lift up your voices and spare not. Call upon the nations to repent, both old and young, both bond and free; saying, Prepare yourseles for the great day of the Lord, [future to this time] for if I, who am a man, do lift up my voice and call upon you to repent and ye hate me, what will ye say when the day cometh when the thunders shall utter their voices from the ends of the earth, speaking to the ears of all that live, saying: Repent, and prepare for the great day of the Lord; yea, and again, when the lightnings shall streak forth from the east unto the west, and shall utter forth their voices unto all that live, and make the ears of all tingle, that hear, saying these words: Repent ye, for the great day of the Lord is come."

I do not purpose in this article to prove that this great day, is the millennial day of judgment; I shall take that subject up under the title: "The day of judgment." All that I propose to establish here is the fact, that the angel cry as recorded in Revelation fourteen has not come yet, but that it is to come in the morning of the millennium.

I would not take the ground that this particufor angel has not come already with the gospel, I verily believe it to be the angel who came to Joseph Smith and committed the sacred message into his hands; who restored the gospel to the earth. I believe that it is the specific work of this particular angel, and he will come again to finish his task, and make the proclamation as John has recorded.

To further substantiate my contention we will read the last revelation given concerning this particular angel and his mission work as recorded in D. and C. 85. Firstly we will establish the period of his advent, then we will analyze his message.

Paragraph 25, gives us to understand that certain testimony shall be given; searching into the context, we discover, that this testimony in the preaching of the ministry in the latter days, after the restoration of the gospel, following which, on the disobedient cometh wrath and indignation upon the people.

'For after your testimony cometh the testimony of earthquakes, and thunderings, and lightnings, and tempests, and the waves of the sea heaving themselves beyond their bounds," etc.

Following this incident, other angels are to fly through the midst of heaven as heralds to announce the coming of the Bridegroom. To my mind these signs which are now to take place are the very ones Jesus gave voice to by his Spirit through Peter on the day of Pentecost as is recorded in Acts 2:19, 'And I will shew wonders in heaven above, and signs in the earth beneath; blood, and fire, and vapor of smoke."

Returning to D. and C. 85:26. One of these signs is made manifest openly to all people. We read ---

"And immediately there shall appear a great sign in heaven, and all people shall see it together."

I have speculated on this sign; its magnitude is incomprehensible; I have thought that it might be printed in flaming words across the face of the heavens, and the angels sounding their trumps rivet the attention of the nations upon the great sign. For it seems to me this will have to be convincing in the absolute, for it will be the destroying of the religous beliefs of more than half the inhabitants of the world.

I cannot believe it is the angel that will constitute the great sign. I think it is something far superior to that, and that the angel is the herald to proclaim it. The great church is destroyed, her fetters have been broken from the people, the thraldom is dissolved away. The way is being prepared for John's angel message.

The scene again changes: When the host of the inhabitants behold their deception, they are amazed, astounded, stricken dumb, and the twenty-seventh verse records their plight thus:-

'And there shall be silence in heaven for the space of half an hour, [A cessation of signs for sufficient time fot them to let the truth of the situation perculate through their minds. Then the opening scenes of the Millenium are opened up.] And immediately aftershall the curtain of heaven be unfolded, as a scroll is unfolded after it is rolled up, and the face of the Lord shall be unveiled; and the saints that are upon the earth, who are alive, shall be quickened, and be caught up to meet him. And they who have slept in their graves, shall come forth; for their graves shall be opened and they also shall be caught up to meet him in the midst of the pillar of heaven; they are Christ's, the first fruits; they who shall descend with him first and they who are on the earth and in their graves, who are first caught up to meet him, and all this by the voice of the sounding of the trump of the angel of God.

You will note here that the saints are caught up to meet the Lord, they are to act as an escort for him to earth. They are Christ's, the first fruits, the only ones who shall be permitted to meet the Lord when he descends from the courts of glory. These are the ones Paul had reference to when writing to the Corinthians, Chapter 15, verse 23, of the resurrection. 'But every man in his own order; Christ the firstfruits [including those who follow Christ] afterwards they that are Christ's at his coming.'

This gives us to understand that there are some who will not be Christ's until after he comes. Section 85:28, makes this more comprehensible, it says, "And after this, [The catching up of the saints] the redemption of those who are Christ's at his coming; [The same people Paul had reference to] who have received their part in that prison which is prepared for them, that they might receive the gospel and be judged according to men in the flesh."

This class seems to have been resurrected during the time Christ is with the saints in the air, they come forth, are resurrected. D. and C. 76:6, gives us to understand who these people are, and enumerates many others who will be resurrected at the same time.

"Behold, these are they who died without law; and also they who are the spirits of men kept in prison, whom the Son visited, and preached the gospel unto them, that they might be judged according to men in the flesh, who received not the testimony of Jesus in the flesh, but afterwards received it."

And Peter goes still further and tells us distinctly who they were. 1 Peter 3:18,19. I. T.

"For Christ also once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust, being put to ceath in the flesh, but quickened by the spirit, that he might bring us to God. For which cause also [to bring them to God] he went and preached unto the spirits in prison. Some [not all] of whom were disobedient in the days of Noah, while the longsuffering of God waited, while the ark was preparing, wherein few, that is, eight souls were saved by water."

You will note here, that his preaching was not to those only who lived in the days of Noah, but all the inhabitants from the creation, from Adam down to his day, and among those who heard his preaching were those who had been disobedient in the days of Noah.

As these people are classified und r the terrestrial world, we assume the position that the whole terrestrial world will be resurrected when Christ comes. And as that includes those who died without law, D. and C, 45,10, states:—"And then shall the heathen nations be redeemed, and they that knew no law shall have part in the first resurrection." Hence the heathen nations will be there

Referring to Zechariah 14:16. After the last great battle which shall take place at Jerusalem After Christ comes, there will be remnants of the nations left, and this decree is sent out: "And it shall come to pass, that every one that is left of all the nations which came against Jerusalem shall even go up from year to year to worship the King the Lord of hosts, and to keep the feast of tabernacles."

D. and C. 85:26, told us of the destruction of the beast, the great and abominable church. Revelation 19:20, gives us a little more light on the subject.

ject:—
"And the beast was taken, and with him the false prophet that wrought miracles before him, with which he deceived them that had received the mark of the beast, and them that worshipped his image. These both [the beast and false prophet] were cast alive into a lake of fire burning with brimstone."

Note here the deceived were spared, (that is, saved from destruction) while the deceivers were destroyed.

Ezekiel 37 portrays the whole house of Israel who will be resurrected. We now have a mighty concourse of people who will be on the earth who have not joi received the gospel of Jesus Christ, nay, have never known of it; they are a heterogeneous mixture of all nations. God wills to save them, they know not God or his gospel, so the same angel who has been commissioned with the transmission of the gospel, undertakes to open the way for the evangelization of these souls. The great day of the Lord is come, the hour of God's judg-All things are in readiness, and then comes the proclamation as recorded in Revelation fourteen; and reiterated strongly in D. and C. 85:-'And another trump shall sound, which is the fifth trump, which is the fifth angel who commiteth the everlasting gospel, [the same angel] flying through the midst of heaven, [when he came before he came to Joseph Smith quietly, and secretly, not openly, note the difference] unto all nations, kindreds, tongues, and people; and this shall be the sound of his trump, saying to all people [not to Joseph Smith alone] both in heaven and in earth, and that are under the earth; for every ear shall hear it, and every knee shall bow, and every tongue shall confess, while they hear the sound of the trump, saying, fear God, and give glory to him who sitteth upon the throne, for ever and ever; for the hour of his judgment is come."

Has the world ever heard such a message? Not Did Joseph Smith ever claim that any angel ever made such a declaration? Not Has the time ever been ripe for such a cry yet? Not It will have no effect until after the power of the beast is broken, and priestcraft has been destroyed. So God has reserved this message for a time when his creatures will be liberated from the chains of darkness, and will be in a receptive condition for his most precious gospel message. So he has instituted a Millenium, the great day of the Lord, separate and distinct from the "isms" of mankind, and purposes to give man another chance for redemption.

"And I saw another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth. . . . Saying with a loud voice [why loud? because he is announcing something directly to the children of men], Fear God, and give glory to him; for the hour of his judgment is come."

THE TWO WAYS.

BY ELDER J. A. BRONSON.

"Enter ye in at the straight gate; for wide is the gate and broad is the way that leadeth to destruction and many there be that go in thereat. Because straight is the gate and narrow is the way which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it." Matt. 7:13,14.

There are two powers at work in the world, a power for good to help us walk in the "narrow way which leadeth unto life," and an evil power to persuade us to walk with the "many" in the "broad way, that leadeth to destruction."

The one great question that ought to be continually before each one of us is, which power is having the greater influence in our daily life. The influence which we yield obedience to will eventually determine which glory we will be able to survive in at the great judgment day.

The two ways might rightly be called two principles, viz., the principle of conversion to a higher type, and the principle of reversion to a lower type. Then we would ask ourselves, which type are we developing in our lives. the higher type which we understand to be Christ Jesus, or the lower type which is he who has always been the enemy of Christ? A very serious question indeed, for the Master has said no man can serve two Masters."

As we kneel in our family altar we are either serving one Master or the other, living up to one principle or the other, and what is true in that case is also true in every thing we do in life, whether it be at the family altar or some dram shop, whether it be at the prayer meeting or at the moving picture show, whether we are at the lodge room or at some one's home trying to tell them the gospel story: it matters not where we are or what we are doing, we are serving a master, but which one? We necessarily are serving one or the other, for Jesus said "he that is not with me is against me."

Is Jesus then the author of the things I love or is the other power? Which author am I serving when I kneel with my family at home in prayer, the one that said "watch and pray" "pray always?" then to be fair which master am I serving when I frequent a saloon, the one that said "strong drinks are not for the body?" Who is the author of the prayermeeting where we sing praises to God, where we kneel in humble reverence to God, and where we testify of his goodness to us? Is it Satan? Emphatically NO. Then who is the author of the "movies" where we see pictures of men kill ing one another like brutes, where we see stealing, murder, drunkness, gambling, and some other things that aught to make the very boldest blush with shame and embarassment for beingat a place where such vice is suggested? I ask who is the master of all this, Jesus the pure and good? Emphatically NO.

Can it be possible that when I join the lodge and become a full pledged "brother" that I am serving the Master who said, "Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers" or may it not just be possible that I am "robbing God" when I pay my little "surplus" (of course it must be surplus or I would not be handing it over to some lodge or insurance Co.) into some "old line" instead of turning it into "the store house" of God? Oh how "broad" is the oue way, and how "narrow" the other.

It has been said that "there are three possibilities of life offered to every living organism, balance, evolution and degeneration." In my mind there are but two in the christian world, viz., evolution and degeneration. I am serving one master or the other and when I am serving Jesus I am developing into a better man, when I am serving Satan I am losing ground. It may be true that for a time I may seem to live what is termed the "balance" neither doing anything especially good, nor any thing especially bad, but itsoon becomes monotonous and if I am watched closely I will soon be found to be in a higher state of mind or a lower one.

Why is it that there are so many living the decenerate life, walking in the broad way, and so few in the narrow way? In the first place it takes a continued effort on our part to walk up the "narrow way," while we need but neglect ourselves and do nothing to go down the "broad way."

A man standing on a high tower may have strength to hold on that he will not fall and die, but it is necessary for him to exercise that strength while on the other hand all he need do to fail and die is to neglect to keep his balance and then another power will drag him down, -down to death. A man need not be a drunkard, a gambler, or a man that partakes of the forbidden pleasures to walk in the "broad way to destruction." "How shall we escape if we neglect" the Apostle argues. Jesus said regarding the progress of his children, to those who had increased the talents given them: "Well done, good and faithful servant: Thou hast been faithful over a few things. I will make thee ruler over many things: enter thou into the joy of thy Lord," but to him who had tried to live the balance life, not trying to enlarge the talent given him, he said O wicked and slothful servant, thou knewest that I reap where I sowed not, and gathered where I have not scattered. . . . I will take, therefore, the talent from you, and give it to him who hath ten talents." Matt. 25:23,25,28. (I.T.)

There is a universal law in the world, known as the principle of reversion of typ-, for instance we have a beautiful flower garden, and through years of study and patient labor we have trained each bed of flowers to be the best of their kind. Now to destroy that garden of flowers, to make them worse we need not bother to go at it with a hoe or sow the seed of foul weeds, just neglect it and that natural law will be sure to do the work, and before long instead of the tame flowers we will have a garden of wild flowers and weeds. If we neglect the garden then the one result will be weeds and ruin, if we neglect our, bodies we will become filthy and they will decay: if we neglect our minds we will become simple and ignorant, it is a proven fact that solitary confinement has the power to undo sound minds, and if we neglect our souls how can we escape spiritual degeneracy and death.

Jesus gave us the key note to the principle of convertion to a higher type when he said "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavily laden, and I will give you rest." We must realize thoroughly that this is not an accidental but a methodical world. Each effect requires some kind of cause. The effect that we desire is to become like Christ. Jesus gave us the cause when he said 'learn of me," learn of the things that he would have us to do, learn to live as he would have us to live.

The Lord said that if we would "do his will," we would know, hence knowledge comes by doing, so when Jesus said "learn of me," he did not mean to sit down and simply believe in him but he did mean to "take my yoke upon you," be a "laborer" "let your light shine," and finally every man will be judged "according to his works."

Holiness is happiness; the more you have of the former, the more you will undoubtedly enjoy of the latter.

THE ROUND TABLE.

See Matthew 24:23-26 of the Inspired Version. If this applies to our day who are the talse Christs? Who are the elect according to the covenant? There have been false prophets and it seems also that there should be false Christs since they are both mentioned together.

Christ had been speaking of the destruction of Jerusalem and the judgments upon the Jews, and verse 22 says, "And again, after the tribulation of those days which shall come upon Jerusalem, if any man shall say unto you, Lo! here is Christ, or there; believe him not. For in those days, there shall also arise false Christs," etc., which shows that the days" referred to were subsequent to the destruction of Jerusalem. Wars and rumors of wars were to follow but he says, "But the end is not yet," showing that that time would not be the time of the end. Though we have not the data at hand we understand that a number of men arose among the Jews making claims as to the Messiaship. In later times men have made claims of being the Christ, such as "Potter Christ," and Schweinfurst. The latter times are more directly described from verse 27 to the end of chapter.

The "elect" sometimes refers in a general way to all Israel as in Isaiah 45:4, but more often in a restricted sense to those who are accepted of God because of having made covenant with him. See Titus 1:1; Rom. 8:33. This latter application seems to be the one in Matt. 24:28,29.

How do you account for elders and high priests from Moses to Christ since according to Doctrine and Covenants 83:4 thé Holy priesthood, (high priesthood), was taken away with Moses?

This point has been difficult of explanation, though in Moses' time there were many elders and high priests, and it must be apparent that their authority remained with them rather than ceasing with the death of Moses. The continuation of high priests and elders for some time at least, if not to Christ, shows that some of the authority of the high priesthood remained on earth, which may leave us to infer that the statement, "Therefore, he took Moses out of their midst and the holy priesthood also," refers to the highest order of the priesthood, or the Presiding quorum or authority. D. C. 83:5, also says that the office of elder and bishop are appendages to the high priesthood, and it is not improbable that these with local high priests remained.

What passages in the Bible refer to the building up of Zion in this land in the last days?

Deut. 33:17 referring to the final gathering of Israel in the last days says of the posterity of Joseph: "He shall push the people together to the ends of the earth," showing that there will be at least two gathering places. A careful reading of Joseph's blessing of which this statement is a part, (See verses 13-17), clearly shows that Joseph and his posterity were promised a special land distinct from that given to the other tribes in Palestine, and Gen. 49:22-26 states that his branches would "run over the wall," (the bounds of their home land), and that his blessing was greater than others in that it was to extend "unto the utmost bound of the everlasting hills. The Book of Mormon teaches that the Lord gave the land of America to Joseph's posterity and they possessed it for many generations, their remnants being still here.

In the light of this, the many references in the Bible to Zion and Jerusalem, (both of which will be Zion), favor the idea of two gathering places. [erusalem is for the gathering of the Jews, but Isa. 49:22, says, "Behold, I will lift up mine hand to the Gentiles, and will set my standard to the people," letc., showing that God's work in the last day will be begun among the Gentile nations, followed by the gathering. Chapther 5:26 says, "He shall lift up an ensign to the nations from far, and will hiss [speak in warning] unto them from the end of the carth." Isa, 18 speaks also of the ensign being lifted up, and the trumpet being blown to all the inhabitants of the earth, and that "afore the harvest," or the end of the world, all of which is connected with the "Land shadowing with wings," or America. Read Micah 4; Joel 3:16; Jer. 23:3.

PROFESSOR RECITED BADLY.

One day a college professor, going to his class, came across one of his students who had just fallen down. Asking across one of his students who had just fallen down. Asking him how he fell, the student replied, "Notwithstanding," Telling the anecdote a short time later the professor said: "I met Mr. Junior the other day, and he made a very bright remark. Ho hot act falle a second and the said as the said and the said and the said and the said as the said and the said as mark. He had just fallen down, you know; and, when I as him how it happened, he said, 'Nevertheless.' "-Budget.

Dear Ensign:—It has been some time since I remembered you with a letter. By this writing I repent of my neglect and promise to do better hereafter.

and promise to do better hereafter.

Sr. Barmore and I arrived in this district, my field of labor, in the latter part of July. First of all we attended the Derby reunion where we met old friends and made new ones We continued to labor in that part of the field until Sept. 22nd. On that date we went from there to a point near Birdseye. We were taken part way by Bro. Weaver Glenn. Bro. Williard Sigler, one of the Birdseye saints, an old friend and school mate of mine, met us and took us the rest of the way. On this latter, next of the inverse or of the brosses. way. On this latter part of the journey one of the horses took sick with the result that we spent the whole night on the road. We stopped with a German family named Hardwick. In the mean time we had sent for Bro. William Kendall's

Bro. Kendall is my brother in law. were haptized into the church twenty-six years ago yesterday We arrived at his place at 5 a. m., on the morning Sept. 23, and were soon enjoying a pleasant visit with him and my sister whom I had not seen for eleven years. At this point, too we received a lot of mail from Australia and elsewhere, and had a pleasant time reading letters punctuated with oral remarks about "ye olden times."

We remained about a month in the vicinity of Birdseye. Preached at four school houses, one church, and one private house. Here is where I spent my school days and lived as a boy on the farm. Since I left many changes have taken. place. The country has, in the main, improved but many of the alterations are pamful to me. Most of the old people are dead and quite a number of the young ones have, like my, self moved away. The old houses, barns, and orchards have sen inoven away. The our noises, name, and occarros nave been replaced by new ones and most of the farms have changed owners. Nearly all the woodland has been cleared, and of course the hickory tress, and the hazlenut and pawpaw patches, and most of the other wild nut, and berries have been destroyed. "Change and decay in all around I

Since I was there last the church has made some advace ment. Brn. H. E. Moler, J. B. Halb, E. O. Byrne, and Fred Moser have labored there, and several have been bap-tized. The work there was neglected for several years. Bro. Byrne was the first to arouse a new interest. Some of those bytne was the first to arouse a new interest. Some of those baptized were friendly to the saints years ago while others appeared to be farther away. It was, I assure you, encouraging to me to find so many of our old neighbors and my old school mates members of the church. Our advancement

Several months ago Rev, G. T. Stalbings of the Christian Church made a public attact on its at the Oak Hill school bouse. Bro, Moler replied later on. Still later Sunday Oct. 12th, Rev. S. made another attack. The saints were expecting this onslaught hence they sent for me. I was not far away so I easily responded. He spoke both at 11 a. m. and 7 p. m. for an bour and 1 replied for about the same length of time. The controversy passed off pleasantly. In length of time. In a controversy passed on preasanty. In the mean time Bro. Moler was negotiating for a regular debate. Finally, Nov. 18th to 22nd, it came. Bro. Moler and Rev. E. G. Denny were the disputants. Bro. Moler and the saints were perfectly satisfied with the outcome, I hear the Christian Church was disappointed in its man. Rev. Denny saints were perfectly satisfied with the outcome, I near the Christian Church was disappointed in its man. Rev. Denny has met us before, having debated with L. F. Paniels, George Jenkins, and S. W. L. Scott, but the verdict is, "he is the weakest man who ever came against the work."

From Birdseys we went to Oakland City, Indiana, where I spent my fortieth birthday, Nov. 4th, with my sister, Mrs. Leona Burke. Both my sister and brother in law are saints. They gave me a birthday dinner, and invited their neighbors and friends to come. A large company responded. I also preached while there. Occupied for a week in a school I also preached while there. Occupied for a week in a school house near by. From there we went to Indianapolis where we attended the conference of Nov. 8tu and 9th. Here we met Bro, and 5r. Pitt and Brn. Moler, Metcalf, Halb and Nolan of the traveling workers. Just after conference Bro, and St. Pitt, and wife and I visited the Davissisters of James town, tormerly of Derby, Indiana Misses Rose and Pauline are milliners and Miss Edith is a dentist. They are 'making good' and highly respected by the citizens. This visit recalled 'the days o' auld lang syne,' since I have known them from their childhood. from their childhood

Our next point was Wirt Indiana. Bro. and Sr. Pitt are still with us. still with us. Bro. Pitt and I spoke here alternately for ten days. Then wife and I went down to Derby where I worked on the new church and preached three weeks. During this time I officiated at the Juneral service of Bro. Simpson C.

time to included at the fullerial service or Bro, Simpson C. Gruver. Brc, and Sr. Pitt came on to Louisville and later to Denby also. They have just closed a week of sermons, visits and patriarchal blessings at the latter place

The four of us are now abroad the Tarascon plowing our way up the Obio River to Louisvill. Bro, and Sr. Pitt are going direct to Joliet, Illinois, for Christmas. Sr. Bar more and I will remain over Sunday at Louisville and then Oakland City to enjoy the festive season with the sister béfore mentioned.

I attended the conference at Clear Lake the 1st and 2nd of November and truly had a good spiritual feast as well as a fine visit with the saints. While at conference my oldest brother was baptized and since coming home, Bro. C. F. Ellis and Bro. Wm. Dowker came to our home and my mother and a younger brother were baptized. No one knows, excepting my heavenly Father, the great joy it gave me to have some of our family come into the fold of Christ. If I could have my father in the church I would be very happy, Dear saints, remember us in your prayers that if possible

Dear saints, remember us in your prayers that if possible we may have some good results from the meetings Brn. Dowker and Ellis are holding in a school house. Bast wishes to all the saints and the Ensign.

THE NEW YEAR IS HERE.

At our New Year Eve prayer meeting, the general opinion seemed to be in favor of the making of resolutions to help and strengthen us for life during a new year. The very fact that we have learned of, or discovered our weaknesses, and that this knowledge has been recieved gladly (and necessarily with humility) into an honest heart, -is a battle

But the war must needs go on, "even unto perfection.'

The desire to overcome now floods the soul and the heart cries out in anguish of hope, repentance, remorse-and sometimes loneliness and fear. see and realize as we have never done before.

And the desire proves father to the effort, strengthened by the resolution that we must do better; we WILL overcome. We feel we know how we ought to live, and if we are guided by the leadings and judgments of our conscience,make advancement.

When in the midst of our strength of purpose and determination, comes the first failure or mistake! This is discouraging. But they tell us mistakes are stepping stones to perfection; provided we do not succumb to the inevitable. We are not perfect-but we shall be-perfected.

So we stay on our feet and battle on, remembering our resolution, that "we will overcome;" and we make it anew each year, with renewed confidence in God, for has he not heard and helped us in the year past? Else we would not still be true to our desires; and with renewed confidence in ourselves, because he has owned us and recognized our feeble efforts.

The New Year's resolution is a good thing. Why drift along, the slave and plaything of our unmanaged desires and along, the slave and plaything of our unmanaged desires and of our accidental circumstances? Why not be our own master and live one year like an intelligent human being?

Examine your habits. Lop off the bad ones. Free yourself from any ways you have fallen into that make you lazy, unhealthy, miserable and disagreeable to other people.

Determine this year to be master of self; that you will sent the proper of the prop control your thoughts, regulate your passions, and guide your own deeds; that you will not let events lead you by the

A GOOD RESOLUTION.

"Is marriage a failure?"

Marriage is a partnership, the most perfectly planned and ordained, and will not fail, if conducted on business principles, from the start. Equal interest in the financial workings of the firm is an absolute necessity, which includes the profits that should result from a systematic course of action.

And the resolution -the cure all? A system of bookkeeping. .

It is not a pleasant or interesting task to one who has never made the attempt, and he is likely to fail in accuracy of accounts, therefore, for a time. But in order to keep the firm on a firm footing accuracy is necessary, the itemizing of all the expenditures and the receipts as well.

One may have separate accounts for clothing, groceries, incidentals, household—and balance these at the end of each month, entering amounts "Household Ledger." in the

There are too many testimonies to the efficacy of this plan, for it to be ignored, for one reason or another.

One is not so likely to be thoughtless or extravagant in the use of his earnings if this account faces him at the month's end.

One is more likely to have something to put in the bank (for a bank account is pretty sure to help one to a degree of content and security); the account here is sure to come and increase, as the plan fastens its results upon the life partners—and Co. And the results upon the "Co."—morally and financially are no small item.

One is sure to have cause to ponder and reflect as he views the accounts of uncontrolled appetite or desires in any of many lines.

The partners will be called upon to look upon various phases of life and management, and to notice ways and means of buying and the cost of living. They will enjoy much in common which they would otherwise have missed. They will not want to buy what they cannot pay for; they cannot escape training themselves to plan the proper use of money—that most necessary "evil."

AN UNCONSCIOUS SPECIALIST. BERTHA BURNHAM BARTLETT.

"I always wanted to do something-to be something," confessed a woman whose gray hair bore evidence to the fact contessed a woman whose gray hair oore evience to the race that years had not been wanting wherein much might have been accomplished, "I used to think that I'd like to write or paint—something that would keep me remembered when I was gone, I suppose that hvmn of Dr. Bonar's, 'Only remembered by what I have done,' was responsible for that," she added, looking wistfully at her visitor, a singer of no mean ability.

The other smiled sympathetically.

'You have not been idle all these years?' she queried gently.

"Not idle!" The older woman's eyes rested upon her toil hardened hands. "No. I am sure no one could ever call me that. But the work was so commonplace, and as for being remembered by that, why, it is bard for me to recall what I have done, except that I've done what every wife and mother has to do. There was always so much to do and so little time. I have the time now—the children are all away -but I am too old to accomplish anything in a nominome—out a fail too out to accomplish anything in a new field. Ol if I only could, how I would work to make myself known as a specialist in some line of work. You will think me a very foolish old woman," she concluded apolo-

It was not often that dear Grand:na Barbour thus gave t was not often that dear crandina shroot thus gave way to her feelings. However, the fault was partly that of the day, which was particularly gloomy. Realizing this, her triend felt it her duty to brighten mat-ters with a gleam of the sunshine of encouragement. "Your children," she said somewhat irrelevantly, "have "Your children," sue said somewhat irrelevanty, have they ever shown an aptitude for anything special or are they —forgive me!—also common-place?", Graudma Barbour cole red.

"Oh!" she said earnestly. "Indeed they are not com-mon-place in any sense of the world. There's Harold, he's "Oh!" she said earnestly. "Indeed they are not common-place in any sense of the world. There's Harold, he's a professor in college, and Jack is a lawyer. Grace-well, poor Grace is just a housekeeper like myself, but she is a splendid one with children as good as mine were—and as mischievous. Her husband seems to think there never was such a woman as she is, and I don't know as I wonder, though perhaps I ought not to say so. And then there is Kenneth; he's a farmer, but a good one, and one whose opinions neth; he's a latmer, but a good one, and one whose opinious are consulted in town affairs. Joe's work is a good deal after the same sort as Kenneth's, only he is employed by the state and is head forester. Percy is an architect. I don't mind admitting I was worried about him one spell, for he didn't seem to take to books, but after awhile he got bold of an idea and worked up, going to night school after he began to work for his own living, and now be gets his twelve hundred "And not one of them has what you might really call a

"And not one or them has what you might really call a bad habit. I never did believe in letting children roam the streets, and I think that is where most bad habits are picked up, don't you? My, though! how I did have to plan to cir cunwent those boys when they got to be fifteen and sixteen years old and wanted to go out o' nights. I used to lay awake thinking up schemes to leep them contented at home."

The visitor smiled.
"I should call you a specialist." she declared, her eyes on the proud, amazed old face opposite, "a genuine specialjst; with trophies of a high order to show, and by which to he remembered. Six splendid men and women doing their work in the world in a manuer to win the respect of all who know them, and each one owing his success in life to your special care and guidance and teaching and example. How small achievements like mine seem in comparison!

And as her visitor said good bye Grandma Barbour murmured softly:

"To think that she calls me a 'sprcialist!' But oh! if somebody had given me the same encouragement during those days when I needed it so much! How I wish I could write a piece, now, that would tell every tired, discouraged mother what that blessed woman just told me! Anyhow, if I can't write I'm just going to tell it to every mother I know, for it is the deal of the latter. for it is the dear Lord's truth, and will surely help the poor discouraged mothers to feel that their work is m tant than any other work in this whole wide world. I'm only surprised to think that I never realized it myself.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR CORRESPONDENTS.

William Newton, Exeter, England .- My change of lowithin dewicel, Easter, Editation—in State of the city where I can have greater influence among the people. We are having lots of rain—raining most every day. I have preached every Sunday since I came back from U. S. but very few strangers attend our meetings. I am doing the best I can and am not discouraged.

Jennie Nelson, Joplin, Mo. I have been going through some very severe trials for nearly two years, but the dear Lord has been my stay and comfort. I am so thankful for the truth and the blessed promises. May God bless those who will listen to the truth. Some follow the ways of the world and the fashions which are displeasing to the Lord Let us all strive to be like Christ.

Mrs. Eva Thompson, Heim, Miss.-I feel so lonely and I ask the dear saints to pray forme, my health is so bad, and I get very much discouraged at times. There are no saints here that I know of, but I live in hopes that some day I may live where I can go to church and enjoy some more good preaching.

Mrs. Menzo Dieterman, Marion, Mich. the church six years last August. I like the Ensign very much, being somewhat isolated. I am trying to live a saintly life, and love to be with the saints and worship God. I have nine children but none are in the church. Pray for them. My prayers are always for God's people.

Mrs. Jessie Bailey, Blanchard, Iowa.—I want to find out there are any saints in or near Blanchard as we have lately come here from Minnesota. I live first house south of the blacksmith shop and would be glad for any saints who can to come and see me.

Mrs, R. E. Wright, Bourbon, Mo.-When Bro. H. Spar Mrs. R. E. Wright, Bourbon, Mo.—When Bro. H. Spar-ling came here to preach six years ago I was tos prejudicad to go to hear him, though my husband heard and liked him. Then five years ago Bro. Paxton came and my husband per-suaded me to go, so we believed and were baptized. We have never regretted the step taken but rejoice that we were able to bear the gospel in its finless. Our boy was an invalid until he was about eighteen mouths old and nobody thought he could live, but when Bro. Paxton came in June 1911 we had him administered to and the "Prayer of faith" aved him and the Lord raised him up. Now he is strong and healths and has hed an emptone of the disease since. healthy and has had no symptoms of the disease since.

AN ANCIENT PERUVIAN CITY.

High up in the Andes Mountains in the heart of of Peru and sixty-five miles north from Cuzco, the Pernyian Expedition, exploring under the auspices of Yale University and the National Geographic Society discovered a city of wonderful interest to scientists and the public at large. The first discovery was made in 1911 by Prof. Hiram Bingham the leader of the expedition, and the work of exploration and clearing the ruins was taken up in the summer of 1912. A popular report accompanied with 244 fine illustrations dealing mainly with this city which is called Machu Picchu was published in The National Geographic Magazine for April 1913, from which we make the following quotations.

In the loop of the Urubamba River the mountain rises precipitously to the height of 4,000 feet at its highest point, above the river, and upon a ridge of this mountain 2,000 feet high was built the city now brought to light for the first, time since the discovery of America by Columbus. It is accessible only from one side, and that up steep precipices up which paths had to be cut. Toward the top the explorers found a wall extending across the ridge from precipice to precipice through which they passed by a narrow doorway, only to meet a little later another wall of similar proportions surrounded upon the outside with a dry moat, making a double defense for the city in addition to its natural impregnability. This inner wall was 15 to 20 feet high and contained stones some of which weighed many tons.

The whole city was covered with vegetation, and invisible until reached, but months of work in clearing revealed the wonderful works of a past civilization which built them and had residence here over two thousand years ago. There was "a maze of ancient walls, the ruins of buildings made of blocks of granite, some of which were beatifully fitted together in the most refined style of Inca architecture." The stone part of houses and other structures showing excellent workmanship remain almost intact, while the roofs and other parts which had evidently been of wood had long since disappeared through decay.

The city "contains about two hundred edifices built of white granite, and including palaces, temples, shrines, baths, fountains and many stair-ways." "On top of the sacred hill is a curiously carved stone called an Intihuatana stone," or sun dial. Terraces were built with walls averaging eight feet high, on many slopes where produce was raised, and springs upon the mountain side accessible only by steps leading down from the top, had been enclosed in stone fountains in which the water could be conserved. 'Machn Picchn is not only more extensive than any previously discovered Inca city outside of Cuzco, but it is in a remarkably good state of preservation, and its architecture has not become confused with Spanish efforts to build churches and villas." "The workmen of Machu Piccha not only had skill: but originality and ingenuity. tery is var. d in form and attractive in its ornamentation. They understood how to plan great architectural and engineering works and to carry them to a satisfactory conclusion."

A CITY OF REFUGE. The whole scheme of the city in its location, its protecting walls, its watch tower, its signal station upon the point of the mountain, and in almost every detail of its construction, indicates that it was built as a place of safe retreat where its inhabitants might live in comparative safety while surrounded with dangerous enemies. Professor Bingham says:

"Machu Picchu is essentially a city of refuge. It is perched on a mountain top in the most inaccessible section of the Urubamba River. So far as I know, there is no part of the Andes that has been better defended by nature. A stupendous canon, where the principal rock is granite and where the precipices are frequently over 1,000 feet sheer, presents difficulties of attack and facilities of delease second to none. Here on a narrow ridge, flanked on all sides by precipitous or nearly precipitous slopes: a highly civilized people—artistic, inventive, and capable of sustaining endeavor-at some time in the remote past built themselves a city of refuge." On the north side, on the narrow ridge connecting the city with Huayna Picchu, [the mountain peak] strong defensive terraces have been strategically placed so as to render nil the danger of an attack on this side. Difficult to reach at best, the city's defenses were still further strengthened by construction of high steep walls wherever the precipices did not seem absolutely impassible."

AN ANCIENT TRADITION.

The early Spaniards in Peru learned tradition of an ancient city called Tampu Tocco from which it is said three brothers started out to found Cuzco and the Inca nation. Thinking Macchu Picchu might be this city, Professor Bingham gives the tradition as follows:

Thousands of years ago there lived in the highlands of Peru a megalitic folk [stone builders] who developed a remarkable civilization, and who left as architectural records, such cyclopean structures as the fortresses of Sacsahuaman and Ollantavtambo. These people were attacked by barbarian hordes coming from the south-possibly from the Argentine pampas. They were defeated, and fled into one of the most inacessible Andine canons. Here in a region strongly defended by nature, they established themselves; here their descendents lived for several centuries. The chief place was called Tampu Tocco. Eventually regaining their military strength and becoming crowded in this mountainous valley, they left Tampu Tocco, and, under the leadership of three brothers, went out of three windows (or caves) and started for Cuzco.

The migration was slow and deliberate. eventually reached Cuzco, and there established the Inca Kingdom, which through several centuries spread by conquest over the entire plateau, and even as far south Chile and as far north as Equa-

OF INTEREST TO LATTER DAY SAINTS.

The account of this remarkable city as related in the magazine mentioned, of which the above is but a brief report, is of special interest to Latter Day Saints in that it undoubtedly adds further evidence to the correctness of the historical account which the Book of Mormon purports to give of that particular region now within the limits of Peru, and of the people who inhabited that mountainous country.

The story the Book of Mormon gave to the world in 1830 was a strange one which found little credence with the public, but since that day discovery after discovery has been made of ruined cities, and other archeological remains in Mexico, Central America, and South America, all of which have tended to prove its correctness in general and in many of the details. Thus far the believers of the book have found nothing in the archeological discoveries in America to raise doubts in their minds regarding its truthfulness, but on the other hand their faith has been many times confirmed by these discoveries and that of Machu Picchu is no exception to the rule.

The committee on American Archeology appointed by the general conference of the Reorganized Church of 1894 to outline and prepare a map of Book of Mormon history after thorough research of the record presented a report tracing the journeyings of the several colonies of which the book This report shows the settlement of a colony upon the western coast of South America (Argentina) shortly subsequent to 600 B. C. This was a colony of Jews who had come from Jerusalem and after forming a settlement which grew in size, eventually became divided into two distinct peoples, one known as Nephites after their leader Nephi, and who was a righteous man, and the other Lamanites after Laman a wicked man, each people following the character of their leaders, and the latter becoming cursed of God with a darkened skin because of their extreme wickedness. For a thousand years the two races remained, with one period of exception, bitter enemies.

Enmity with resultant war caused the Nephites to leave and they journeyed northward days," and formed a settlement where they felt safe from the encroachments of those they had left behind. This settlement of safe retreat seems to have been made at or near Cuzco as the committee indicates. Here they grew into a nation and built up a great civilization, but in later generations the Lamanite people which had also become great a nation of savages reached their borders, followed by numerous wars in which the latter sought the overthrow of the former.

The Book of Mormon writers state that the Ne-"were scattered much upon the face of the phites land," that is from Nephi, and that the Lamanites who were far more numerous "came many times against us, the Nephites, to battle," and "we withstood the Lamanites, and swept them away, out of our lands, and began to fortify our cities." we multiplied exceedingly, and spread upon the face of the land, and became exceeding rich in gold, and in silver, and in precious things, and in fine workmanship of wood, in buildings, and in machinery, and also in iron, and copper, and brass, and steel, making all manner of tools of every kind to till the ground, and weapons of war; yea, the sharp pointed arrow, and the quiver, and the dart, and the javelin, and all preparations for war."- Jarom 1.

From such passages as these we get a small insight into the conditions surrounding the people which the Book of Mormon points out as occupying the very country covered by the Yale exploration, and where Machu Picchu was discovered. It must not be understood that this last was the only ancient city found in this region, for other cities were found by the Spaniards including Cuzco which was then inhabited, and other fragmentary ruins were recently discovered by the Yale expedition.

During the long continued wars between the Nephites and Lamanites in this region numerous dissentions from the Nephites occurred; the dissenters going over to the Lamanites, and when ultimately the righteous part found it necessary to migrate northward again and leave their land, a large part of their number remained and became assimilated by the Lamanites. This brought to the Lamanite people a considerable portion of higher civilization, and it is not improbable that from these sprang the Inca Nation which still occupied the country when the Spaniards came. The tradition already quoted contains many points of similarity with the Book of Mormon story but space will not permit noting them here.

Latter Day Saints are not dependent upon this class of evidence in order to prove the truthfulness and divinity of the Book of Mormon, but when such evidence appears corroborating other evidences which they already have received, it is, to say the least, gratifying, and the saints are confirmed in the belief that God is caring for his own work by multiplying evidences which meet the demands of all classes, leaving all men without excuse.

No soul is desolate as long as there is a human being for whom it can feel trust and reverence.

You may be quite sure that if little light comes from a Christian character, little light comes into it. We must have the glory sink into us before it can be reflected from us. 2

Carefully purify your conscience from daily faults; suffer no sin to dwell in your heart; small as it may seem, it obscures the light of grace, weighs down the soul, and hinders that constant communion with I caus Christ which it should be your pleasure to cultivate.—Fenelon.

INDEPENDENCE ITEMS.

Beautifully clear days of late in contrast with the weather of December have brought cheer to all. Daudelions were still blooming on the south side of some of the buildings the first of this week through the severe cold of Monday will probably click their growth.

At the stone church Elder William Aylor of the apostle-ship addressed the saints, the sermon being accompanied with the Spirit of light and peace by which the message was carried to the minds and hearts of the hearers. The Spirit of God is such a factor in the work of the ministry which, in its absence, cannot be compensated for by any or all other attainments. A little said under its influence and direction will do more toward changing men's lives than volumes will do more toward changing men's lives than volumes uttered without its help.

f All the meetings Sunday were of excellent character. The Sunday school had an attendance of 274. Bro. Geo. Jenkins was the speaker at 11 o'clock, reading the 15th Psalm, "Lord who shall abide in thy tabernacle, who shall dwell in thy holy hill?" etc., from which the speaker drew words of encouragment for his hearers.

The 2:30 prayer service was very well attended, and many took a willing part, more particularly in testimony. 7:30 p. m. Bro. John Dowker was the speaker, attention being called to the saying of the Master that those who follow him must be willing to torsake all, or they are not worthy.

The Religio at the last meeting elected the follo cers for the ensuing year: Clarence Martin. president; Alfred Curlis, vice president: Ethel Martin, secretary; Ira.Curlis, treasurer; Geo. Towsley, librarian; Jessie Willis, chorister Robert Miller, organist. A good attendance was reported.

NORTHEASTERN ILLINOIS.

NORTHEASTERN ILLINOIS.

The work eeems to be in most respects upward and onward in this district. However in every department of church work we can from time to time see great room for improvement. This to the writer's mind is not a source of discouragement but rather one that causes thought, which if properly directed will lead to growth and improvement. For example: At the close of the Southern Wisconsin reunion held at Madison Wis. in Aug. 1911, by kindly invitation of the Northeastern District and advice of those in charge, it was decided to meet in joint reunion at Belvidere Illinois, in Aug. 1912. The joint committee did all they knew how, but was decided to mee in joint reunion at nervicer timos, in Aug. 1912. The joint committee did all they knew how, but still the gathering was not as large as that formerly held by the Northeastern Ill., Dist, meeting at Plano a more central point for that district; to say nothin g of the Wisconsin reunion, which had met at Madison.

However being the first year it was determined to hold another at the same place and time with bopes that more would come from both districts. But still the attendance in 1913 lacked considerable of being as large as the Northeastern Ill, reunion had been.

ern III, reunion had been.

So after two very pleasant vears of association together and for no other reason only the general good of both districts the joint reunion was discontinued. The Wisconsin delegation voting to hold their reunion at Madison Wis. the last of Aug. 1914. The Northeastern III., delegation met and last of Aug. 1914. The Northeastern III., delegation met and provided for a reunion the last of Aug. 1914, the location being left to the committee subject to the approval of the next district conference. We believe this to be a step in the right direction and that the two reunions will have nearly if not quite twice as many saints present as the joint reunion of 1913. Madison is a fine l'eation for Southern Wisconsin and good grounds are at the disposal of the committee on the south side of Lake Monona, being a part of the old assembly grounds; but now owned by the city of Madison including an andit rium and dining hall, all free gratis.

We hope that there will be equally as good a location

'ound for the Northeastern Ill., reunion.

In 1907 at Madison reunion the following was given In 1907 at Madison reunion the following through J. W. Wight then missionary in charge. Verily, saith the Spirit unto you my people. . . You must needs receive blessings and warnings. . . I have been with needs receive blessings and wathings. . . . Thave beam upon you. . . You should have been upone himble and faithful, and you should learn to love others as yourselves. . . You remember that I told you a year ago that it was pleasing unto me that my pepple should meet together from year to year. But all have not been sufficiently faithful. So remember and begin to prepare for the next reunion and I will bless you and the sacrifices required of people to thus attend will be as nothing, and greater blessings will be yours to enjoy." etc.

This year through Bro. Daniel Macgregor a prophecy of the same nature was given at the joint reunion at Belvi-

And while it may be an outing to all, it us guard well our ways and re-member that to worship Gol is the first object and thus receive those greater blessings which God has in store for his

As one who has now served over 12 years on such committee work and now chosen on the committee of both districts for 1914 I assure you I speak the mind of both committees when I say we want to do all we can to make these gatherings a success. To this end let us pray and work. At present the writer is trying to hold a series of neetings here at Rockford where we have a good live Sunday school which is proving a blessing to the saints and friends here. We find however that being so near X mas it is rather hard to hold the minds of the people on the gospel and really wonder if Xmas had not become a rather abnormal condition. Individually I am of the opinion that a normal condition could be obtained by a separation of Christ from a relic of the great apostasy and later carried into the reformation by the reformers,—Saint Nicholas (Santa Claus.)

We find this personage much in advance of Christ in the We had this personage much in advance of Christ in the minds of the people at this season of the year. We believe that saints of the restored gospel should see this point and not allow any relies of the great apostasy to continue with us. But let us do as the wise men did on that first Christmas morn when fivey brought presents to Christ. Not to each other. And if we must or wish to remember each other why not do it in a thoughtful way, as our birthdays come around.

Hopefully trusting, highly respected by the saints, and those not of the faith.

From Springerton I went to the Dryfork Brauch, December 1sl; the church is located north of Jeffersonville five miles in the country. All of the branches that I visited in this district, except Springerton, are from three to twelve miles from railroad, which makes it unpleasant to get to in wet weather, such as we had nearly all of the time I was in the district. Our aged brother, Henry Walker, is president of this branch. He was not able to attend any of the seven preaching services. I visited him at his home; he requested me to say that he is still in the faith, and I must add, in the spirit of the work, he was baptized May 28, 1859. I made my home with Bro. and Sr. Flesharty, who kindly conveyed my home with Bro. and Sr. Fleeharty, who kindly conveyed me back and forth to church, and accompanied me in visiting my none water for a said of the church, and accompanied me in visiting several of the saints. This is thehome of Father John Smith and his son, William. The latter was in poor health; he is acting briest of the branch, and the saints are very auxious acting briest of the branch, and the saints are very anxious for his recovery. Earnest prayers offered in his behalt: for the sake of the branch, as well as for himself and wife, I hope they will be answered. Father Smith's autobiography would be interesting; I trust he will write it. The grand-children of Bro. F. P. Green, with their families are in the work, and I am pleased to have met them.

Bro. J. D. Shaw of the Brown church mission, which is eight miles west and north of Dryfork Branch and ten miles south of Brush Creek, came for me Sunday December 71-; so after noon we faced the cold northwest wind, held three meetings at their church; there are about twenty members within five miles of the church; most of themown their farms, and in my judgment it would be advisable to organize a and in my judgment it would be advisable to organize a branch; they own the church building; there is material on the ground that can care for the work if empowered to do so the ground that can calc in the saints. I understand that by ordination and choice of the saints. I understand that the district president Bro. R. H. Henson is contemplating taking the matter up with missionary in charge, Bro. J. W. asing the matter up with missionary in charge, Bro. J. W. tushton. The attendance and interest was very good, and regretted that I had to leave, but the appointment was out Rushton. I regretted that I had to leave, but the appointment was out at the Poplar Creek Branch, which is about eight miles west and north. Bro, Henson conveyed me to his home, where I met his wife and six good looking sons and daughter, a happy industrious family. I hope to hear of the boys coming into the church: I preached five times in the church, owned by the church: I preaened new times in the cutter, owned that branch; had a fair sized audience. This was the last place I visited in the district. I was unable to visit the Bell Alies Branch. Bro. R. H. Henson is president of Peplar Creek Branch and district. It is said, "A prophet is not without honor tave in his own land." Bro. Henson is an exception, for he is respected in the community by those within and with ut the fold.

The Southeast Illinois District has furnised some faithful ministers, who have done much good in that district, and elsewhere, and are spoken highly of and would meet with a eleculere, and are spoken bigbly of and would meet with a warm reception by saints and many of the friends. Some, however, have passed on to the other shore. I present some of the nan es: G. H. Hilliard, F. P. Green, J. R. Hensen, docated, I seas A. Morris, Henry Walker, M. G. Brown, T. C. Kelley, F. M. Sh. ver, I. M. Smith, W. M. Smith, J. A. Stade. O. R. Miller, L. Moore, H. O. Pritchett; all of the above first heard the gospel in S. E. Illinois and became able, active men. There are others not known to the church at large that are laboring locally, with credit.

The district will again hold its reunion; time and place to be need known later. A pressing and cordial invitation is be made known later. A pressing and cordial invitation is extended to Central Illinois and St. Louis Districts to join in with them. This is by advice of the missionary in charge Bro. Rushton, which I believe is a wise move, and the three districts can, if they will, unite to have large reunion and the expenses will not be much for the three districts. I am sure bat the saints of the S. E. Ill. will do their part to make all welcome, and feel at home, so let all make arrangements to Bro. S.IS. Smith has been quite active preaching some able sermons in the district. Brn. Moore and Dexter had good interest near Brown Church; had the tent for a few good interest near brown Content, and the tent of a rew weeks; timany express a desire to have them return. Bro. Field's labor's were commendable. Many were disappointed when he was not returned to this district. The same is true of H. O. Pritchett, Henry Sparling and others.

I wish to thank the saints one and all for their hospitality and wish all a prosperous New Year.

Respectfully, your brother,

BURLINGTON, Iowa, Dec., 1913.

Editor Ensign:—Last April "Authority" appointed me abor in the Nauvoo District, Burlington, (Iowa) objective.
Immediately, Sr. Miller and I came to Burlington, and later concluded to arrange to go to house keeping—the first time since our marriage more than three years ago. We are now nicely and happily located about four block from our later concluded to arrange to go to house keeping—the first time since our marriage more than three years ago. We are now nicely and happily located about four block from our little church. The work is moving along very nicely here at the present time. I have, during the fall months, Jone some preaching away form Burlington. While there is no doubt plenty to keep a minister busy right here, yet, the laborers are few in this district as well as others. Calls have come for help. I have responded to as many as I thought I cannot be responded to as many as I thought I could under the circumstances.

ZION'S ENSIGN

Bro. Charles Harpe began a meeting in a school house r Mount Pleasant, Iowa, but was soon called home to his mother's bedside, she being very ill at the time. Bro. Joebnk was sent for to carry the meetings on, and successfully did so for a week when it became necessary for him to leave. Bro. and Sr. Gillespie then sent for me. I responded and spoke each evening for about one week and closed with a full house and we hope some interest.

Having a standing invitation from the Rock Creek Branch, near Adrian, Illinois, to come and hold some meetings, I did do, remaining about two weeks. The weather was fine and everything in order for a good beginning. The attendance was good. God was with us. And that is enough tendance was good. Gol was with us. And that is enough to prove we had good meetings. I was told that we enjoyed the best attendance and interest had there since about seventeen or eighteen years ago. Two were baptized. Others, we think, are near the kingdom. I am indeed thankful to our heavenly Father for the blessing of the Holy Spirit, and to saints and friends for their support and kindness while at the above mentioned places.

A little more than three weeks ago I received a phone message from Bro. Joseph Reed asking me to come over to "Macedonia" (Montrose) and help. (Bro. Charles Harpe had been holding the fort there about three weeks, speaking to good crowds right along). I responded to the call and spoke three evenings. Two evenings I spoke to a large, attentive audience on "The Prophetic Mission of Joseph Smith." I enjoyed the best of liberty. I also enjoyed the association and hospitality of both saints and friends there. A little more than three weeks ago I received a phone Leturned from Montrose Saturday, November 8, and I returned from Montrose Saturday, November 3, and occupied the Burlington pulpit Sunday, the 9th. Tuesday, 11th, I left for New London, Iowa, where meetings had previously been announced and advertised to begin that evening in the opera bouse. Closed there Sunday night, November 23d. Taking into consideration the opposition in the form of moving picture shows, box suppers and religious "Babylon," the attendance at our services was good. We enjoyed a reasonably good regular attendance and three evenings the opera house was about filled. It was almost filled Sunday evenings, notwithstanding, all the other churches in town were running full blast. I am told that we had more in atwere tunning that hast. I am told and we had note in ac-tendance than all of them combined. During the second week I gave a lecture on the latter day apostasy, or as we announced it, "Mormonism Exposed," but rightly named, "Brighamism!" We had almost a full house that evening; more adults than at any time before. Some leading business men of the town and prominent church workers. They gave the best of attention and by the help of our heavenly Father I telt better satisfied with the effort of the hour than ever before. That is, it seemed to be the thing needed at that time and everything coupled up so easily. God be praised.

There are but few saints, in or near New London, therefore, the lack of music worked against the better success of fore, the lack of music worked against the better success of the meetings. Some of the young folks came down from Burlington three evenings in autos and rendered us much appreciated help in the song service. Eller Lawrence Wiley, a resident of New London, produced the opera house, paying two dollars and fifty cents an evening for the use of it. He willingly spent several dollars in putting out advertising matter in the form of large posters, hand bills and window cards, also some slides for the picture machine, announcing special subjects. (So, we got some good out of the picture show). Bro. Willey will no doubt receive some help from show). Bro. Willey will no doubt receive some help from the few saints scattered about there but he was the booster and back bone of the business. Yes, business! For I think that a proclamation of the gospel should be our first "busi-

I might state here that while I was away from Burlington, Brn. Joehnk, Harpe, Morgan and George P. Lambert occupied the pulpit there on different Sundays. Brn. Harpe and Morgan also held a series of meetings for about ten days while I was away. Glad to have all the above named brethren as co-workers. A change about once in awhile I think is good for all concerned,—especially for the patient

Amid the rejoicing I have not been without affiiction. Amid the rejoicing I have not been without afficition. For about three or four months i have been suffering at times intense pain in my knees, especially when I attempt to walk. I first thought it was rheumatism. Recently a personal friend of mine and one of the best physicians and surgeons of the city has examined my knees and informs me that the cartilage is loose and that nothing in the way of treatment will do any good. That an operation is necessary. I have hoped to be able to drag through till time for conference and then not the sanitarium, but if the keen grow.

ference and then go to the sanitarium, but if they keep growing worse as they have of late I fear I shall have to do ing worse as they something before.

I have been administered to once. But knowing that James says—"If afflicted, pray," I have requested the prayers of the branch and I have sought the Lord continually begging for cure, but no relief comes. But I must have health or help if I attend to the work here as it should be attended to. There is much visiting to be done among the saints and much that should be followed up among non-members. May God give me strength to do it. Or better still, may I be able to say from the heart, "My God: Thy will be done."

I want to thank the dear saunts and friends both in and out of Burlington among whom I have labored for their kindness toward une. As a body of people, we know it at our past record is made, the present alone is in our grasp, the future is practically unknown, but, "All things work together for good to those who love the Lord." May God help us to be onward in the march!

Editor Ensign:—In our lonely hours we find comfort in reading the Ensign and learn of the great work that is going on in different parts of God's vineyard. We should never on in unretent parts of God's vineyard. We should never cease praying for those that leave home and loved ones to go to the Lord's work. Dear Saints, I do pray for those that are taking in worldly pleasures. I am templed on every hand. This place is full of amusements but I turn my back on them all for I want to live so I can join those loved ones who have gone on before. I may fail but, dear sisters, if we hold on to the rod of iron the good Lord will help us. I wish note on to the roa or tron the good Lord will help us. I wish I could say something to cheer some poor soul. I have no one to talk to. My husband is not a saint, but he says but little for or against them. The dear Sr. Garrett has passed away, so there are no saints here now. My health is poor and I ask you to remember me in your prayers.

COYOTE, Mont., Dec. 18.

Dear Ensign:—Likely there are many saints in Montana as well other parts of the world who would likely be glad to know that a few of like precious faith are existing in this part of the universe. While we are comparatively isolated we are trying to hold out faithful. There are only three families that come together on each Lord's day to worship, while there are others that have become tired and unconcerned or indifferent as to the Lord's work. We meet on while there are others that have become fired and mecon-cerned or indifferent as to the Lord's work. We meet on each Lord's day at 3 p. m. and our coming together is not in vain, for our meetings are attended with a degree of the Spirit. Bro. and Sr. Waterman are having a struggle, as they are getting old and are trying to hold down their home. they are getting old and are trying to hold down their home-stead, and her health is very poor. It may be that she will not survive the winter as the cold weather does not agree with her health. Brethren, they need your prayers. The weather has been ideal for this country and this time of year. Crops were good here but low in prices; health is generally good.

SOME ACKNOWLEDGMENTS OF TRUTH.

BY ELDER H. A. STEBBINS.

In answer to a question by one of its readers a certain religious paper makes a very plain acknowledgment of God's willingness and purpose to bless those who now believe in him in the same manner that he blessed the people in days of old. In writing to the question department an inquirer refers to the commonly accepted idea among modern Christians that "healing by prayer was a special privilege given to the early church," but he adds, "Surely the prayer of faith and understanding is as potent today as it was nineteen hundred years ago." The editor answers as follows, saying:

"The whole question is one of faith. God's power is not shortened; and that he is ever ready to hear and answer the prayer of faith is as true today as it was in apostolic times. . . If the great body of professing Christians measured up to the right standard of faith in God then all the churches would acknowledge and enjoy the gift."

Now, bearing in mind the past almost universal unbelief among Christians as to the continuance of God's promises, and remembering the former ridicule that was put upon the Latter Day Saints everywhere for believing and teaching these promises, considering these facts the above plain acknowledgment by leading ministers is rather remarkable. In going through some old copies that were given me I find the above expression of faith in the issue for March 13, 1912, and it seems worthy of being noted.

However, it is becoming apparent that the Spirit of God is working more and more upon the hearts and minds of men and women who are thus becoming searchers after truth. By God's power the light is dawning upon honest souls, and they "ask for the old paths" (Jeremiah 16:16), doubtless some of them desiring to "walk therein" whenever some guide who is divinely led shall make the "way of the Lord plain." And by the light now going abroad it seems that many honest seekers are unconsciously being made ready for the time prophesied of by Jeremiah (16:19) where he declares that in the days of Israel's restoration to their inheritance the Gentiles will learn the truth and will say, "Surely our fathers inherited lies, vanity, and things wherein there was no profit." They will then see that so much in their creeds, their theories and their ideas have indeed been but the "work of men's hands," and not inspired nor authorized of God. Their fathers received these things by inheritance from many pious, noble minded, and Godfearing reformers. And such had great zeal and devotion' and they endured dreadful persecution for their faith and their hope in religious liberty. And under great adversities they did the best they could with their human understanding and guided chiefly by their sincere desire for truth, by their sense of justice, and their love for the right, so far as they could in those dark times, understand divine truth and God's will. But the greater truths were not made clear to them, the time for better things not having arrived. Therefore they and their successors were "blind guides" as to the more important spiritual truths and to the fullness of the gospel which could bring the greater salvation to the darkened world. The reformation was not a restoration, not a restoring of the complete gospel, but was a reforming of what their fathers obtained from former ages.

But now, as we are approaching "the times of restitution," it is apparent that God's Spirit is moving upon the hearts of honest men and women; and that, in the providence of God, many such people will prepare themselves and their children (largely without realizing it) for the time to come when they shall be included among those who will accept the greater things, as foretold in the Scriptures. I quote as follows from the prophets:

"And many people shall go and say, Come ye, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths."—Isa. 2.3

"And many nations shall come and say, Come, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, and to the house of the God of Jacob, and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths."—Micah 4:2.

"Many people and strong@nations shall come to

"Many people and stronggnations shall come to seek the Lord of nosts in Jerusalem, and to pray before the Lord."—Zechariah 8:22.

See also Psalins 22:27; Isa. 56:6; Zechariah 2:11.
According to these scriptures it must be that great numbers of those whom we dominate as the "honest in heart" will have so been influenced previously by the Spirit of truth that they will readily receive the gospel covenant when the right time comes, especially at the time the Lord speaks of in Isaiah 25:7, saying that he will destroy "the covering cast over all people, and the veil that is spread over all nations." In 2 Cor. 3:14-16 Paul refers to that time as coming. In that day the darkness will be past, and the light of God will come to all people according to their willingness to accept it, and many will obey the gospel and become God's special people: Then will Psalms 52:2 be fulfilled, saying, "Out of Zion, the perfection of beauty, God hath shined."

Not that all people, or even a majority, will do all of God's will, but that will be the period when Christ's word will be fulfilled where he said that the "gospel of the kingdom" shall be preached "for a witness to all nations" and all who will accept the offer may become the Lord's people, by repentance and baptism. The world will then have the opportunity it never before had. Then will the deceptions of Satan and of inen cease, and the Lord will "sweep away the refuge of lies," as he has promised. In Isaiah 56:6 he speaks of those who will "join themselves to the Lord," and of those who will "take hold of the covenant," which clearly shows obedience. But perhaps the greater portion of the gentiles and their rulers will simply acknowledge the Lord and his government and dominion, as said in Psalms:

"The kings of Tarshish and of the isles shall bring presents, the kings of Sheba and Seba shall offer gifts. Yea, all kings shall fall down before him; all nations shall serve him."—Psalms 72:10,11.

Doubtless this service of the Prince of Peace will be a delightsome task after the past and present oppressions and cruel bondage, and the hardships of poverty; after wicked men and nations have ruled so harshly, so unjustly, so unrighteously.

In the same issue of the paper referred to it appears that the editors have had access to the Inspired Version of the Scriptures, and to have accepted its rendering of the Lord's Prayer. For in reply to a question as to why people should ask God not to lead them into temptation, the reply is given as follows; "The better translation is, Suffer us not to be led into temptation," and the editors add, "We are directly told that God tempteth no man." As our version of the Scriptures is the enly one with exactly those words, therefore it seems that those editors must either have a copy at hand or else have learned from some tract or book of the great improvement in the reading of that prayer. Alexander Campbell's New Testament has the same idea in his text but not in those words, nor does any other translation contain those words, which are so clear and truthful.

There is found excellent teaching upon the resurrection, namely thatit is or will "be an actual corporeal" rising from the dead, and that the righteous will rise as a "separate company" from those not in Christ. Also the Savior will come personally, and there will take place his matriage to the faithful church, followed by Christ and his people reigning over all nations. Also they teach that tithing is the Lord's law of finances, and that the word saint simply means a devout person on earth, and is not a term used solely for the sanctified dead, those canonized after their death as worthy of worship. About baptism they state that "it is probable

About baptism they state that "it is probable that immersion was generally practiced by the early Christians," and they admit the type of death and burial to sin, but destroy their own good words by adding, "God looks on the heart and the purpose more than at the form of cermonial." Thus they shut their own and others' eyes to the great truth that only by immersion can any believer enter into the form of death by which the "old man," the sinful man, is put away and in which the rising from the watery grave represents the "new man" rising to "walk in newness of life:" also the hope of the first resurrection when Christ's followers will rise to eternal life with immortal bodies.

In another place it is said. "As soon as you be-

In another place it is said, "As soon as you believe you are forgiven." This would destroy the meaning in Acts 2:38.

Concerning why it was needful for Christ our Lord to give his life in order that man might live, and how Christ's death really effects the present and eternalsalvation of men, they cannot tell, only that it is so, and everybody must believe it even if they do not understand it. How thankful the saints should be that the Lord has made these great things so plain and easy to be understood that they are like the A.B. C, of our first readers, notwithstending we do not comprehend why Satan had such power and why he does yet, or why Christ's victory over him and over death cannot take place until the "fulness of times" comes in. And we know but little, even as the A, B, C, compared with the great volumes of eternal truth which will be opened by and by, to those who are ready to enter upon their study.

Ah, who will be ready for that time? Who will have advanced in this life so as to begin well along when they shall enter upon those scenes where better and greater things will be presented?

NATIVITY OF THE MESSIAH.

BY RALPH E. MOTEJL.

"The life of Jesus has become the center of religious controversies which agitated our age. The importance of this fact is great, With the person of Jesus Christianity stands or falls,"—Tischendorf. The mode in which the different evangelists deal with the history of the incarnation and birth of our Lord offers a perfect illustration of their independence and special characteristics.

Matthew and Luke combine to reveal as much of the great facts as help us to comprehend the mode in which it was welcomed by those by whom God was pleased to work its accomplishments."—Westcott.

"Fear not to take unto thee Mary thy wife, for that which is conceived in her is of the Holy Ghost. And she shall bring forth a Son, and thou shalt call his name Jesus."—Angel of the Lord. "The word was God." "And the word was made flesh and dwelt among us, and we beheld his glory, as of the Only Begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth."—John. "When the fulness of time came, God sent forth his Son, born of a woman."—Paul.

The gospel by Matthew was first written in the Hebrew language for the advantage of the Hebrew people. His main object seemed to be to prove from citations from prophecy, that Jesus of Nazareth fulfilled all Messianic prediction of the Scriptures. He traces the geneology of the Lord from Abraham the progenitor of the Jewish nation down through the Davidic Kings holding that he was the King of kings, and King "of the kingdom of heaven." Matthew also affirms that "Jesus was born in Bethlehem of Judea, in the days of Herod the king," in fulfillment of prophecy. (Matt. 2:1). He further mentions a number of circumstances which group around the birth of Jesus such as the appearance of the star, the visit of the wise men, and the order of King Herod commanding all the male children to be slain.

Luke being a Greek wrote his gospel in that language to interest the Greek speaking Gentiles, relating that Gabriel had been sent from heaven by God "to a virgin betrothed to a man named Joseph of the house of David, and the virgin's name was Mary." (Luke 1:26,27). He notes the circumstances that led up to the birth of Jesus such as the Roman census under the direction of Quirinius, which required each household to repair to its own tribal territory to be registered. This accounts for the presence of Joseph and Mary in Bethlehem, Judea, the village where they were to register. Luke dwells to a larger extent on the physical points pertaining to the case than the other evangelists, noting such incidents as the fulfillment of Mary's days, the bringing forth of her firstborn, wrapping the child in swaddling clothes, and "that they laid him in the manger because there was no room for him in the inn." These conditions were These conditions were no doubt due to the fact that the city was overcrowded with people coming to register for the census.

Luke is also careful to mention that these things happened "in the days of Herod the king of Judea." (Luke 1:5). The fact that Luke was writing for the gentiles explains why he does not dwell especially on the Messiah, which argument was intended more for the Jews, his genealogy of Jesus commences with Adam the father of the whole race, designating Jesus the Redeemer of all mankind.

Mark bearing a Roman name and having traveled quite extensively in that empire wrote his gospel there for the benefit of those people at their request. He does not mention the genealogy or birth of Jesus, probably because that theme would not have interested the Romans or would not have been appreciated by them. He opens his writings by allusions to John the Baptist, and his witness of Christ's ministry, whose coming and presence John proclaimed—Mark 1:2-11.

The Apostle John seems to have written his gospel for the instruction of the church, supplying what had been omitted by the other writers and adding details where he traversed the same ground, yet preserving a unity of purpose. He opens his writing with the Godhead of Jesus as the Word, and devotes only one sentence to the circumstances surrounding his birth; "And the Word became flesh and dwelt among us, and we beheld his glory."—

Although the gospels were written under different coaditions and for different peoples of every age and country, yet they all kept the common end in view, that !'These thing are written that ye may know that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God, and that believing, ye may have life in his name.—John 20:31.

We will now quote from the adversaries of the Christian religion to prove the statements contained in the gospels on the nativity of Christ.

"Since God is great and difficult to see, he put his own Spirit into his body that resembles ours and sent it down to us, that we might be enabled to hear him and become acquainted with him."—Celsus.

"The framers of the genealogies from feeling of pride made Jesus to be descended from the first man, and from the kings of the Jews. The carpenter's wife could not have been ignorant of the fact, had she been of such iflustrious descent."—Celsus.

In reference to the nativity of Jesus, Emperor Julian at a later date (A. D. 361) furnishes us with a point between "the faith once saints" and that which has held permanent place in Christian thought for centuries. He says:

"Jesus whom you celebrate was one of Ceasar's subjects. If you dispute it, I will prove it. For yourselves allow that he was enrolled with his father and mother in the time of Quirinius. But after he was born, what good did he do to his relations? For it is said that they would not believe on him.' "But Jesus having persuaded a few among you, and those the worst of men, has now been celebrated about three hundred years, having done nothing in his lifetime worthy of remembrance," etc., etc. For neither is he of Judah and how should he be so when, according to good Christians he was not born of Joseph, but of the Holy Ghost? When you reckon up the genealogy of Joseph you carry it up to Judah; but you have been able to contrive this dexterously; for Matthew and Luke have been shown to differ with one another about the geneal-"Let this be said of God though it was not; for she was not a virgin. However, grant that this also is said of him: does he (i. e. the prophet) say that God should be born of a virgin? But you are continually calling Mary, Mother of God.'

Rabbinical testimony in regard to the birth and incarnation of Jesus is the following:
The Talmud says, "After the two thousand years

The Talmud says, "After the two thousand years of the law, according to the decree, the Messiah ought to have come." "The right time for the Messiah's advent is passed and he is now believed to have been born." The appointed times are long since passed." "For the Messiah is born; his name is Menachem (Comforter)." Messiah was born at the royal residence of Bethlehem of Juhah."

be Jesus of Nazareth was born in the year three thousand of creation, under the Emperor Augustus, From this time begin the years of the Nazarine.

"The Redeemer whom I will raise up among you shall not have a father, according to Zechariah." "The birth of the Messiah alone shall be without defect (i. e. sinless)." "None shall know his father before he tells it."

Toledoth Jesho concedes: That Jesus was born of royal lineage, and of the tribe of Judah; that he was the offspring of Joseph and Mary; that he claimed to have been born of a virgin; that his birth took place in Bethlehem of Judea, under the political ruler named in the gospels. Such is the testimony of adversaries regarding the birth of Jesus Christ.

Celsus was a leader in the literary world of those who were hostile to Christianity, and held up to ridicule the faith of the Christians. The authority of Julian, the Roman Emperor, demands attention as it is based on the archives of the government. The Rabbis, authors of the Jewish Talmud, were the greatest teachers of the Jewish church. The Rabbinical writer of Toledoth Jesho, based their work on the Talmud.

We will next introduce a corroboration from Ignatius of Antioch: "Jesus Christ, who, after the flesh, was of David's race, who was the Son of God." "He was truly of the race of David according to the flesh, but Son of God by the divine will and power, truly born of a virgin." Tertulian (one of the defenders of the faith) of Carthage, Africa, wrote: "For it behooves him to proceed from the tribe of Judah, and from Bethlehem."

"The testimony of the Apostle Paul represents the teaching of Christiau religion in regard to the point under discussion as follows: "The gospel of God . . . concerning his Son Jesus Christ our Lord who was made of the seed of David according to the flesh, and declared to be the Son of God with power, according to the spirit of holiness." (Romans 1:1.4). "Whose are the fathers, and of whom as concerning the flesh Christ came who is over all, God blessed forever, Amen." (Rom. 9:5). "But when the fulness of the time was come, God sent forth his Son, made of a woman, made under the law. (Gal. 4:4). "God was in Christ reconciling the world unto himself."—2 Cor. 5:19.

JESUS AND THE MESSAGE HE BROUGHT.

BY GEORGE H. WIXOM.

When angels o'er the plains of Judea sang the glad song, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men, for unto you is born this day in the city of David, a Savior, which is Christ the Lord," they heralded the advent into the world of a being whose life and teachings were ever afterwards to have a marked influence on the ethical development of humanity. The Prince of Peace had come. Let us analize his teachings as revealed in words and actions, and if possible, find a new meaning in them.

His life-work stands out before us as a beautiful picture from whatever angle we view it. It was one of service to others. He constantly taught the eradication of egoism, the institutisn of altruism. He taught and lived the love of God through service to man.

Hence love is the foundation of Christ, s creed. The world had known love before, but jesus gave a new definition to it. His love was as boundless as the sea; its limits were so far flung that not even an enemy could go beyond it. Other teachers sought to regulate the lives of their followers by rules and formulas of men, but Christ sought first to purify the heart by the application of the gospel; then let love direct the footsteps. As a result in spite of technical creed and mystifying dogma, and the multiplied subdivisions of what purports to be the unified body of Christ, the Carpenter of Nazareth remains as always, the peerless leader of all ages.

I love to speak of him as a carpenter and the son of that pure and virtuous Hebrew working girl. He seems more real to me. And in this capacity he seems nearer to most of us. Not that I mean to detract in the remotest way from his divinity. God forbid that I should think of such a thing. The very fact that he became one of us in order that he might be able to help us makes him a Savior to us—a God incarnate—a man encompassed by divinity. Hence, our above conception of Christ does not lessen his divinity. It enhances his divinity. He was made like unto men in order that men, looking u pon him could realize the possibilities resident within themselves.

Jesus' mission was to emancipate the race, to break the shackles from off the feet of the downtrodden and oppressed, to preach deliverance to the captives, to heal the broken-hearted, and, by means of the gospel message to educate mankind to live on a higher plane. This mission is well expressed in his own words. He once said; "Go and show John again these things which ye do hear and see; and blind receive their sight, and the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed, and the deaf hear, the dead are raised up, and the poor have the gospel preached to them."

HIS MISSION TO THE POOR.

Naturally, his mission was one primarily to the poor. Their need was most pressing; their suffering appealed to his great heart. As a great teacher who realized their true need, his first thought was to preach the gospel for their consideration and acceptance. He said: "Blessed are the poor in spirit; for theirs is the kingdom of heaven." Again, "Comeunto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you andlearn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart; and ye shall find rest unto your souls." Hence he sought to develop within the poor that spiritual character and knowledge and wisdom that they might see when their inheritance came to them,

Yet, Jesus had use for the wealthy who would accept him. On one occasion a rich man came to Jesus, and it is said, "Jesus beholding him, loved him." Jesus had use for both the man and his wealth. It was not wealth that Jesus condemned, but the cruel and unjust methods of procuring the same, and the corrupt uses made of the same when secured. To the rich Pharisees he said: "Woe unto you, for ye devour widows' houses." And again he said that they bound heavy burdens grevious to be borne, and laid them on men's shoulders; but they themselves would not move them with one of their fingers, Still again, James, as spokesman for Jesus, said: "Go to now, ye rich men, weep and howl for your miseries that shall come upon you. Your riches are corrupted, and your garments are moth-eaten. Your gold and silver is cankered; and the rust of them shall be a witness against you, and shall eat your flesh as it were fire. Ye have heaped treasure together for the last days. Behold the hire of the laborers who have reaped down your fields which is of you kept back by fraud, crieth: and the cries of them which have reaped are entered into the ears of the Lord of Sabaoth. And ye have lived in pleasure on the earth, and been wanton: ye have nourished your hearts as in a day of slaughter, ye have condemned and killed the just; and he doth not resist you."

No worse arraingment of the rich and powerful who are corrupt in heart and deed could be imagined.

AN IMPARTIAL ATTITUDE.

We see, therefore, that Jesus assumed an impartial attitude toward all classes. He condemned the ungodly rich and ungodly poor alike. He commends both rich and poor alike when they do right.

In presenting his message to the world, we, like our great teacher, make our first work, the preaching of the gospel to the poor. But we do not discriminate against the rich. True, we may not be able to reach a great number of rich men, but we may be able to reach many young men of just as great potentiality, whose hearts are yet unspoiled. One such man would God rather have than all the wealth of a dead Morgan or Astor.

This gospel demands first repentance, then obedience to the laws which it lays down. Until this is done, we dare not sound the dawn of justice and righteousness which will come through the plan of government which he has given us, for this plan can be carried out only by those who accept and abide by the laws embraced by his gospel. Iesus' plan was to do away with the age of teeth and claw" and give in its place an era of heart and brain, Jesus taught that men should realize the rebound of human effort, saying, "As ye would that men should do to you so even shall ye do to them." "As ye would that Human experience bears out this great teaching. It is not theory: it is a fact. "As a man sows, so shall he reap," is true in the nature of things and the world is coming to govern itself accordingly.

Have we prepared ourselves for the coming of this new era? Have his teachings revealed in his life and gospel found expression within us? Does his cry, "Love thy neighbor as thyself," find an echo in our hearts? Then let us, as followers of Christ, resolve at this Christmas time to do our part. Let us unite to help and protect those victims who are suffering under the unjust and relentless hand of greed. Let justice be done. Then charity as the world defies it, will not be needed.

"Friends, shall we yield him, in costly devotion," Myrth from the forest, and gold from the mine?
Vainly we offer each ample ablation,
Thinking with gold we his favor secure,
Richer by far is the hear!'s adoration, Dearer to God are the prayers of the poor."
——San Bernardino Daily Sun.

FUGITIVE HUSBAND LAW.

The news dispatches the other day announced the indictment by the federal grand jury in Washingtonof a score of fugitive husbands who had lightly thrown off the "yoke" of obligation and responsibility they assumed when they entered into the marriage contract. Steps were faken to bring back for trial all these flitting benedicts, one of whom was located in far-off Hawaii. The law which authorized this action is in admirable contrast to the view placed upon the Mann white slave act by those who contend that interstate immorality is a mere "escapade" when the feature of commercialization does not enter into it.

From the broad viewpoint of sound public policy it is decidedly advisable to punish both forms of immorality—the desertion of a family by a husband who throws upon the shoulders of the wife the burden of support of herself and children, and the man who takes a woman from one state to another for immoral purposes, with or without the feature of commercialization. The law that takes this wise and wide view of the situation is worthy of extention. It ought to be adopted by every state in the Union, to the end that no state should become the refuge of any man who evades the clemental duties of citizenship-among which must surely be placed the obligation of being a good father and a good husband. The man who breaks a contract and thereby defrauds another out of money or property can be seized in one state and taken back to the state in which the crime was committed. But the greater crime of violating the solemn contract of marriage, the moral law and all the duties of a husband, father, and good citizen, is not regarded as so serious in the eyes of the law as it now exists.

A fugitive husband law commends itself to the sense of justice of all right-thinking citizens. laws have found their way upon the statute books of many states, and they have been found to work real wonders in changing the views of elusive hus-When the latter could shuffle off their responsibilities and seek new pastures with immunity, leaving their families to the charity of the community or the help of relatives, the matter did not appear to be particularly important. It was hardly an "escapade." But when the prison doors opened to receive such husbands, they and other prospective fugitives took a second look at the situation. The fugitive husband is a coward at heart, morally and physically, and there is nothing the coward fears more than punishment. The law is appearing more and more frequently in the character of the woman's defender, and there is no good citizen who can deny that that is the character in which it should appear. - Kansas City Journal.

THE ROUND TABLE.

In John 1:1-14, if the "Word" means Christ please explain in what sense this could be.

The Inspired Version renders this passage dif-cently making it somewhat plainer. "In the beferently making it somewhat plainer. ginning was the gospel preached through the Son. And the gospel was the word, and the word was with the Son, and the Son was with God, and the Son was of God. The same was in the beginning with God. . . He was born not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God. And the same word was made flesh, and dwelt among us, and we beheld his glory, the glory as of the Only Begotten of the Father, full of Grace and truth."-- John 1:1,2,13,14.

Paul speaks (Heb. 12:2) of Christ being the "Author and Finisher of our faith," agreeing with John that the gospel was in and of the Son in the beginning. The gospel being instituted and made operative by Jesus Christ makes the application of the title "The Word," to him appropriate.

Who were the wise men who came from the East to visit Christ, and from what land did they come?

Dr. Smith in his Bible Dictionary refers to the magi of Persia and Media in the Old Testament times. They are mentioned twice in the Old Testament, once in Jer. 39:3, where the word is translated "Rab-mag," meaning chief of the magi, and again in Dan. 1:20 where it is translated "magicians," These men seemed to have been the priests of the religion of the eastern countries, though by the time of Christ the name had a wider signification including the idea of divination, etc. The whole class of the magi included men of high standing and learning, with, no doubt, excellent character, and also inferior grades down to the greatest imposters. The three wise men, or magi, who came to Jesus, are usually considered as represent-ing the higher type of their class. It is not definitely known from what country they came, various places having been held as their home, viz., Mesopotamia, Persia, Parthia, and even as far as India.

Matt. 12:40 says, "For as Jonas was three days and three nights in the whale's helly; so shall the Son of man be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth." If Jesus was crucified and buried on Friday and arose on Sunday how do we recoucile these events with this statement?

It seems to have been a common practice among the Jews in conversation to speak of any part of a day or year as if it were a whole one. This appears in John 2:20 where the Jews said they were forty and six years in building the temple, while the history shows the time was 45 years and a few months. Jesus occupying the tomb a part of three days would be ordinarily spoken of by the Jewish writers "three days."

The lesson in Senior Quarterly for Sep. 7th speaks of Christ ascending to heaven before he visited the people on the American continent. If he did has he not made his second appearance on earth?

The scriptures leaves us to infer that lesus ascended to his Father after his resurrection, though during the forty days he made many appearances to his disciples in Palestine, as well as to his dis-ciples in America. His final departure to his Father was made from his apostles at Bethany, and it was then that the two angels said: "This same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." So that while Christ has appeared to some since, as to Paul and John in vision he is yet to come in the heavens where all will behold him in his power and glory. This final coming is the one usually referred to as the "Second coming."

Why are branches of the church called by that name ce in the Bible and Book of Mormon they are called "Branches" is a modern term popularly applied to the local congregations of the church, though they are frequently spoken of as "churches." We know of no place in the Bible or Book of Mormon where the word branches is used, though it is used in the Doctrine and Covenants. See 72:4 where both terms are used, and other places.

SYKESTON, N. Dak., Dec. 15.

Dear Ensign:—We look forward every week to greet you as a welcome visitor. We are among the isolated saints and belong to the Fargo Branch which is about 125 miles away. Saints are badly scattered in North Dakota, but we have four noble missionaries who are doing all they can for the Master's cause: Brn. J. C. Page, 'Thomas Leitch and J. E. Wildermuth have labored here the last year, Wife and I were priviledged to attend the reunion at Fargo last June, and met many of the saints of North Dakota and Min

June, and met many of the saints of North Dakota and Min nesola, it was a least to the hungry souls.

I was ordained a priest at the district conference and have tried in my weak way to tell the gospel story; am super-intendent of a union Sunday school. On my first effort to preach to them most of them left the school house, others tried to confuse me by their misconduct, but the last two times I had good hearing, with good attention. We have some people here who are not prejudiced but do not understand the plan of salvation, Our district conference meets at Minot, January 10th and 11th, and if nothing prevents I expect to meet with the saints there. I ask the saints to pray for me and my family that we may be faithful to the end.

Bigslow, Mo., Dec. 19

Dear Ensign:—We are still holding forth at this place, four miles northwest of Fortescue, to a full house—some nights there is not standing room, and one of the fine things about it is, the people are there early, never later than seven o'clock and many nights the house is full and running over by 6:30. I baptized four here today and I think there will be some more baptized in a day or so, but if not, there will be some hore in the near future if some of the brethren will come in here. Bro. R. K. Ross of Mound City came down last night and gave me good assistance in song and prayer, hesides helping in the confirmation. This is one among many things that this good brother is good in. When I was at Maitland he would drive the seven miles almost every night to help me. And it is help too. He is going to stay with me tonight, and Sunday night his son Roscoe is coming down to help. about it is, the people are there early, never later than seven down to help.

One of the persons baptized today is a fine young man, a school teacher; the others were two fine ladies and one little girl. We had a fine confirmation meeting and the good Spirit was felt by many, and some of them said they belived this to be the truth. It tope the elders will call on these good people. Bro. Ross said he would as often as he could, and he will be their pastor for a time as his branch is the nearest one to them.

If the work is looked after here I feel that it will be built Bro. Silvers and Shavers did a good work at this place a few years ago.

Yours in gospel bonds J. W. A. Bailey.

THE BOY WHO ARGUES.

Have you one of these?

Have I?-yes! And I haven't succeeded yet in managing him, so far as my getting the best of his

"His art!" you say. Well, yes, at least I hope eventually that his decided inclination to prove his rights and to be so sure that he is right-may prove an art, tempered to the proper control, by wise parents in his training while babe, child, youth, under the shelter of home.

But what can one do in six or seven short years toward correcting a habit born in him; for he could argue before he talked. One can only keep steadily at his problem, making mistakes through inexperience, ignorance, temper, or other causes.

It is a trait in the son, for which it is hard to punish him: because he does not intend to do wrong, but goes after his argument because he enjoys itfor one reason or another.

And here is the point where we must take notice order to outline our course properly. No one should know or understand our children better than we do. They are problems and need constant study into their ever changing whims and fancies,

Parents should easily tell whether the boy argues from an honest standpoint of an outlet to his ideas as worked out in his own brain and through observation; or of wilfulness, or of braggadocio, and an undue love for the exhibition of his own small voice.

This point settled in one's mind. -comes another which must be quickly decided, to avoid present trouble and a bad effect on the boy's opinion of us parents, and on his future course, as he argues his way onward.

The point is-decide whether or not it is best to "take up the matter" with him. This according to "his state of mind." He cannot argue alone. And when "the same old thing" comes up, he will lose interest when ignored, he knows is is the same old thing.

Sometimes we busy mothers cannot, just at the critical moment, stop and reason and explain our version of some opinion or plan suddenly advanced by the young heir-unless we see it is necessary, to keep a wrong principle from gaining a start with him. Wisdom must guide us here, in the use of time We can often let him do his work in his own way or please-himself in carrying out his own ideas, where the outcome will mean only good experience to him, with his mother's permission, and advice as to her way, sounding in his ears.

In fact it is better to let him do things occasionally in his own way, rather that have a "wordy which is the result of lack of patience or of quick thought on parent's part. A hasty or unnecessary demand or bit of sarcasm will provoke a child; when he has not meant to add to the strain of circumstances holding sway in the kitchen or elsewhere, by arriving at an inopportune moment.

We mothers know just how tired and "nervous" we are-and we know just what arbitrary words of ours are likely to do for the argumentative son, by way of replies and retorts. We know that before children reach their teens they are apt to not catch our meaning very often, when we think we have been very plain. This is more likely, if there s a display of temper on either side. Often I have received this council and it is good, "Be sure he hears you, and then that he understands you.'

Oh, it all takes time in any case. If we decide to let him "argue," we must summon our patience and tact, and take "time" to do a good job, to make clear our side. The argument may be turned to a mere discussion and a good time in majority of cases; or may result in his doing his chores to please another after all, all according to what the powers that be, have decided—during the course of events perfectly "human events."

If the boy has been allowed to do his own way —by silent consent or otherwise, we must take the consequences, and that means "time," nine times out of ten. And thereby hangs a tale too long to tell here.

Children must learn to-obey; but parents must not be exacting in their demands. Do not confound the contrary boy, or the "why?" boy, with the boy who argues. The "sulky, the disobedient, or the impudent boy," realizes he is wrong and that prompt punishment is reasonable. But, be too hard on the boy who argues-and these traits, and others will develop for our future consideration!

There is a fertile field in the case of the boy who will argue-for the acquiring of the nagging habit in the mother, (more deplorable than the other). Let us not take our boys up on all the little arguments they would have, and often start unconsciously, for "in nine cases out of ten" the arguing habit that is ignored, will soon be outgrown, as the egotism of boyhood is lost in the wider interests of school and business life.

After a long and beautiful life, when she was sitting in sunshine, calm and sweet, at eighty-seven years of age, the mother of Frances Willard, said to one who asked what she would have done differently as a mother if she had her life to live over again, "I should blame less and praise more."

In self-examination, take no account of yourself by your thoughts and resolutions in the days of religion and solem-nity, examine how it is with you in the days of ordinary conversation and the circumstances of secular employment

DES MONES, 10WA, Jan. 9.

Dear Brethren;—I am preparing the blanks for reporting to the quorum and am not sure of the present address of Birch Whiting, James M. Smith and Jacob Halb. If any others have changed their address during the year and have not sent me a card to that effect, I wish their latest address by the 15th of February.

by the 15th of February.

The officers of the quorum have arranged a very interesting program for the sessions of the quorum in the spring of 1914. The subjects will be published later. Several of the brethren to whom subjects have heen assigned have not replied. Should I not receive a reply soon I will again write, so that if the former letter was not received this will inform them of the duty assigned. I trust for a favorable reply in each case,

Respectfully,
j. F. Mintun Sec. of First Seventy.

COMMUNICATION FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE QUORUM OF TWELVE.

I hereby give notice that per is-solution adopted by the Quorum of the Twelve at their last sitting, the quorum will meet in the "Order of Enoch building," per courtesy of the board of the Order, Independence, Mo., March 18, 1914, at ten o'clock in the morning. Whoever may have business requiring the consideration and action of the Quorum will please forward the same to J. W. Rushton, 701 N. Cottage St., Independence, Mo. (Let all communications be in INK and not written with pencil either lead or indelible).

In view of the responsibility resting upon these brethren In view of the responsibility resting upon these brethren and the importance of the business they are expected to transact in the interests of the Church, such as appointing missionaries in all the world, and many other items of equal interest in the cause of the Master, we feel desirous of soliciting the prayers and sympathy of all the church members, that our Father will bestow upon us his divine power to qualify these ministers for the peculiar dety and arduous work that have been committed to them by God and the Church. Church.

It has been impressed upon my mind, and very forcibly for some months, that the hastening time is upon us as a church, and by reason of the many demands made upon us for preachers in all parts of the world, the suggestion has been made to me that the appointing-authorities should call been made to me that the appointing authorities should call for volunteers from among the young men of the Church, having authority to preach as priests and elders. At the same time it was propounded to me, "Why cannot many of these young men who have gained valuable experience in the several branches of the auxiliary work volunteer their services to the Church for a period of two or three years, in the active mission fields before they assume the responsibility of family life."

active mission helds before they assume the responsibility of family life."

When we consider that young men in the world in many countries give several years in the "army service;" it seems to be an ideal within our reach to arouse the enthusiasm of young men to show their love for God and the good of humanity to consecrate two or three years of their life in the effort to save souls and seek to establish the kingdom of God.

Not only would such service be acceptable to God and of immeasurable benefit to the Church, but such experience would be of great service to the men themselves in widening their sympathies, giving them a most unique opportunity to understand life and human nature by direct contact and at the same time very helpfully assist such men in finding their place in Church service and develop good men as missionaries and also executive and pastoral ministers.

We recommend a consideration of this matter to our young men and pray that God will arouse in them a great desire to respond to the Church's need and this call for the statement of the Savior, viz:—"The harvest is great and the laborers are few," was never truer than it is today.

Among the most desirable qualifications for such ministerial service as contemplated are the following:

First. To have a passion for souls and the serving of God,

Second. An upright life.
Third. Humility and a disposition to learn.
Fourth. The cultivation of spirituality by constant

While we do not specialize on education we nevertheless recommend that all who can take advantage of every opportunity to educate themselves, not only in the grammer schools and the high schools, but by a careful and systematic course of reading at home.

Those who are willing to respond to this call are invited to apply to the secretary, J. W. Rushton, for an application blank, which after filling in return not later than March 31st to his address

Praying that the coming conference will be the best ever held, that the spirit of peace and good will may predominate in all things that God's will can be fulfilled in all things.

I am your brother and co-laborer,

Gomer T. Griffiths, Pres. of the Quorum of Twelve. Per J. W. R.

IMMORTALITY ESTABLISHED THROUGH SCIENCE.

The possibility of proving the doctrine of the immortality of man through science may be quite a new thought to most people, but this is what John O. Yeiser has attempted to do in a book recently published, entitlet, homortality Established Visited Through Science. (Published National, Magazine Association, 419 Bee Building, Omaha, Nebraska, $1,00 post-

M1. Yeiser while not affirming the correctness of the position of the scientists on evolution assumes such position to be mainly correct, and upon that assumption reasons that since it is held that development of life into the higher forms since it is need that development of the into despinger forms came as the result of desire, or yearning after higher things, so the present desire of man for a higher and continued life points out the possibilities of its attainment. The development of the various organs of sense which once were, non-existent or dormant in the lower forms of life may indicate, that man possesses other undeveloped or dormant powers which man possesses other undeveloped or dormant/powers which will come into use through divelopment, perhaps under different conditions than those which now exist.

Assuming that the soul has attained its present standing through evolution, it is argued that the processes of evolution are still in operation leading onward to an advanced life even after death. He says: "Can the scientist deny the assertion that man has already evolved a purely mental or spiritual existence which will continue after the disintegration of the body?"

The argument brings out many good and interesting

The argument brings out many good, and interesting points though the lack of certainty in proving the claims of immortality from this viewpoint is admitted, but as the author asserts, 'Fray are reasonable enough to be awarth thinking over."

OKLAHOMA INDIANS.

Little by little the lands once held by the native Indians have, since the time of the first settlements along the Atlantic coast, been taken from them, and the various tribes have been removed from one part of the land to another, the last general assembling place for them being in what is now the State of Oklahoma. In this region are what are called the Five Civilized Tribes, being the Creeks, Choctaws, Chicasaws, Cherokees, Seminoles.

Conditions of injustice and oppression which have followed them for generations at the hands of the white men, seem to be continued at the present time, according to various reports, and while the government has been as a father to them in many ways, yet the fatherly watchcare has not been sufficiently close to save them from devouring wolves in the form of white men who have sought and are seeking in the spirit of aggrandizement the Indians' property, and who through sharp methods have succeeded in impoverishing many of them.

Mr. Warren K. Moorehead, Member of the United States Board of Indian Commissioners, has issued a little pamphlet entitled "Our National problem," in which he describes the sad condition of many of the Indians of Oklahoma following the activities of grafters and sharpers among them. Various methods are used by these men in separating the inexperienced and confiding Indians from their lands and money of which the following are noted as described by Mr. Moorehead.

One way adopted by many is in securing their appointment as guardians over minor and incompetent Indians who have considerable possessions, and then by corrupt methods turn these possessions into their own hands. Some deposit Indian funds in banks belonging to themselves and then bring about the failure of the banks, leaving the Indians nearly if not quite penniless. Expense accounts are usually podded to the extreme limit. One ward owning e80 acres of land and $10,000 cash was placed by his guardian in an orphan asylum for paupous where he died. The guardian was appointed administrator and as guardian reported the estate as $2,884.30 and a $5,000 loan on first mort-

In settling this estate as administrator 25 per cent was charged in fees. One guardian sold to his own daughter fifteen acres of land belonging to his ward for $750, and the next day repurchased it for his ward for $8,000 making himself richer by $7,250 at the expense of his ward. Guardians owning stores purchase at their own stores for their wards running up enormous accounts.

With men whose leading business is to act as guardians of Indian wards—as many as they can secure appointment over, these methods result in bringing immense wealth to the guardians to the impoverishment of the Indians.

Similar methods of extortion are used under appointment as administrators, one of such cases mentioned by Mr. Moorehead being an estate which was sold for $1200 entitling the two heirs to $600 each less the expenses. But the expenses amounted to $800, and $50 was charged against the heirs as having been advanced to them, leaving but $175

Others in return for proffered loans secure the signatures of uneducated Indians to a supposed note or mortgage, or perhaps a lease which eventually proves to be a deed to their property. are but few of the many fradulent methods used. In some parts of the state seven out of eight Indians had been fleeced out of their possessions, and it is said their condition is deplorable.

Commissioner Moorehead in suggesting remedies for these evils says: "Probably we cannot recover what was lost, but we should certainly conserve what remains. . . . One solution of the problem would be the organization of a trust company composed of honorable men with branches in various parts of Oklahoma authorized to act as trustee, guardian or administrator of these Indian estates.

To continue the present course means pauperism." They [the Indians] have little faith in their guardians or administrators and local courts, and they look to our Congress to protect them since it is impossible for them to secure help elsewhere. I never dreamed that the famous Five Civilized Tribes, once so prosperous, had sunk into such poverty and distress, until I beheld with my own eyes what our removal of restrictions has brought about. Our public men should realize that unless we afford the protection to which these poor people are clearly entitled by every law of both God and man, we will plunge the remnants of the famous Five Civilized Tribes into the depths of despair."

Among the remedial suggestions made are noted briefly the following:

The homesteads of restricted Indians among the five tribes should be restricted from alienation for not less than twenty-five years, and leases made only with the approval of the department.

The remaining lands now held in common should be kept intact until provisions can be made therefrom for Indians who are now homeless.

Title to personal property such as live stock and machinery purchased for restricted Indians by the United States should be retained by the department so that such restricted Indians might not be able to sell or mortgage improvidently and thereby lose it.

The jurisdiction of probate courts should be so changed as to safeguard the property of minor and incompetent Indians.

Since the public lands of the United States are about gone no other reservations can be made for the Indians of our country, and the lands now given them are of necessity' the last that they can receive. The government should by all means take every measure possible and necessary to protect these Indians in their possessions for they as a whole are not yet educated in the ways of civilization, and are subject to the wiley schemes of avaricious and dishonorable white men. The public conscience should be awakened and the influence of all good citizens should be used in securing to these oppressed people their rights.

Many of these Indians taking advantage of the opportunities of education have developed into strong, noble and capable characters, the equal in respect of the best white men, and no doubt the Indian people as a whole possess the qualities which if developed would make them the equals of the white people. During the period of development they should by all means be protected and assisted. The government has afforded some protection and many grafters have been prosecuted and others are now under indictment, but the safeguards cannot be too strict.

THE SPIRIT OF SACRIFICE.

The Protestant world is making diligent efforts to advance the cause of Christianity, and under the slogan ' 'Men and millions" large sums are being donated for the extension of the work through foreign missions. Mr. R. A. Long, millionaire lumberman of Kansas City, has pledged one million dollars to the missionary organization of the Disciples of Christ on conditions that the whole church will raise five millions more. Three years' time is given in which to raise this amount.

This gift came as a result of an organized and systematized effort upon the part of the foreign missionary society of the Disciples Church, and the missionary societies of other churches are making imilar efforts in the raising of funds. Colleges are being endowed, and men and women are being educated and trained for the work of foreign missions, and to such efforts is due the spread of Christianity in every heathen land.

If these who have been blessed with a portion of the gospel light are willing to do so much, what should not the saints of God do who have received the fullness of the gospel? Is it that we fail to see our opportunities, and fail to discern the importance and vastness of the work, or the extent of our responsibilities? If so, why? Is it that we are not fully converted, and though called to a fullness of the truth have failed to receive it?

The gospel is "to every nation, kindred, tongue, and people," and must be preached "in all the world for a witness," and we have already been told that this is the hastening time—the day in which the Lord will "cut his work short in rightousness." If we are to do the Lord's work we must needs awaken to the magnitude and extent of the gospel work, and in this "day of sacrifice, and a day for the tithing of my people," make such sacrifice as the necessities of the work demand, and thus fulfill the law. Without this the work cannot make the present progress that it should make.

A PROPHETIC CONFERENCE.

At the Moody Bible Institute, Chicago, will be held an International Prophetic Conference Feb. 24-27, 1914. "The occasion will be used for students of prophecy to give prominence to neglected truths; to employ the true principles of Scripture interpretation; to warn against present day apostasy; to awaken slumbering Christians; to present the most majestic of all motives for world-wide evangelism; to call attention to the doctrine of 'last things' as a bulwark against the skepticism of modern theology; and to bring into closer fellowship all those who 'love his appearing.'"

Some of the speakrs are Rev. Robert McWatty Russell, D. D., LL. D., Rev. C. I. Scofield, D. D.; Dr. R. A. Torry; Rev. W. A. Sunday; and Mr, Charles G. Trumbull, Editor of the Sunday School Times. Among the subjects to be considered will be why I am a Premillenialist, the Doctrine of the Last Things, The Jews, the Present Day Apostasy, the signs of the Times, etc.

Prophetic revelation has ever been a matter of interest to Bible believers, though some have dwelt so much upon this feature of the divine scriptures as to leave in the background other and more important parts. In this day of rapid and unprecedent changes when ancient prophecy is receiving remarkable fulfillment, it should not be strange that the Spirit of prophecy should again be manifest to give immediate testimony to the coming of the Lord and the wonderful events associated therewith, in the same manner that prophecy indicated to various ones the coming birth of Christ in Bethlehem in fullfilment of other prophecies which had been given long years before.

It we did but know how little some enjoy of the great things that they possess, there would not be much envy in the world.

If mothers and fathers of this mortal clay will willingly give their sons for the redemption of one country of this earth how much greater then the need of the redemption of all mankind? Why then the wonder when the love of country is so great that sons are sacrificed for its safety that God would sacrifice his Son for the safety and redemption of the world?

Apropos of the marine disturbances which have been so widely noted in the press lately and attributed to causes within the earth, an occurrence was noted at the baptisms at Long Beach last Sunday which evidenced a power that did not come from "within" the earth, and exerted a comforting influence on the little body of saints gathered at the ocean's edge. Although not perceived at the time by the actual participants in the ordinance it is vouched for by the pastor, Bro. V. M. Goodrich, and others whose testimony is not to be impeached, that as the elder and candidate approached the line of "breakers," seeking the proper depth for immersion, the breakers cased entirely, so that only beautiful smooth, gentle undulations were on the bosom of the deep until the bap tism was accomplished when the breakers resumed and the resultant waves followed the parties to the shore. The phenomenon was mentioned by the brethren, and more particular notice was taken when the second candidate (a little girl not quite eight years of age) was led out, and it is recorded in the pastor's diary that their hearts were thrilled to the point of exclamation, at the love of God when the very same action of the waves was witnessed, as a witness that God is the same of old, and his good pleasure at the obedience of the children of men.

The ocean never did look so beautifully peaceful and the pure clear sheen of the water purling up on the sands did seem like the entrance to a new and celestial world. To God be the thanks and praise.

Sunday dawned clear and bright, with Old Sol smiling grandly, which is a welcome experience as we have had only fog and gloom for several weeks.

We are glad to say however that such unwelcome conditions have been prevailing only in the elements and has had no part in the hearts, minds and spirits of the saints.

A very good attendance was enjoyed in preaching and Sunday school sessions, and we were given a very peaceful sermon in the morning by our able brrother F. F. Wipper on the "Signs of the Times." Original charts by Bro. Frank were submitted showing unquestionable, unmistakable evidence that it is time to "prepare the way of the Lord and make ready for the Bridegroom."

The past week witnessed the usual semi-annual business meetings and elections which were carried on in grand harmony and no radical changes were needed.

We were given a good, wholesome, "action-inspiring" talk by our missionary, Bro. David Dowker, Sunday morning. Bro. David has not been with us in this capacity fer some time and all, as usual, enjoyed his effort.

At the evening preaching service Bro. John R. Grice of Flint, Mich., presented a splendid discourse on the gospel which came "in power and the Holy Ghost, and in much assurance."

We are glad to record a kind demonstration of God's mercy and power in behalf of the baby of Bro. and Sr. P. G. Fairbanks. The little one was very low, doctors having practically given up hope, but through administration and caracest supplication he has been restored.

We are cagerly looking forward to, and preparing for the conference which convenes here January 24th and 25th.

Arrangements are being completed to care for and make comfortable a great number of visitors, and we hope all that can possibly do so will take advantage of this opportunity to try our hospitality.

Editor Ensign:—I have not sent much to the Ensign since I came here, but notwithstanding I have been as busy since I came here, but notwithstanding I have been as busy as any man could, no idle moments have gone by me at any time, yet we caunot see very much for our labors. However, a few have been baptized and others are about ready. This is a large city and it takes much labor and money to reach many people, and without money and an untiring effort and men (elders), a man might as well be at the north pole; I believe that there is no place in this world where a man can go along a whole life time unobserved as in London it he har nothing of interest to present to the people, or without business. However,

I am in London about one half of my time; I have charge of the London Branch, and also the London District; besides my bishopric work which is no small work authough besides my bishoptic work which is no small work attituding the mission is small in membership, but they are scattered. I have found some very good and kind saints in England and Wales; as for Scotland, while it is the best country, we have but few or none there. I have not been in Scotland for a year and a half, and only twice since I came, and very short trips at that. I hope the time will soon come when the gospel will reach not only Scotland but avery part of the

There never was a time when the cry has been so loud for the gospel or a gospel of power as at the present, the press and pupits cry aloud for it. But when we try to present it to them, if they don't know who we are it is all right, sent it to them, if they don't know who we are it is all right, but as soon as they find out who we are they will throw the jowels in the mud. I often wonder what we are going to do under the present conditions; we are poor and have no way of protecting ourselves when the venomous religious bigot throw all kinds of falsehoods in the winds and scatters them in the streets against us, and it is almost impossible to watch everything in a city like this. There are hundreds of papers printed here daily, religious, and otherwise, I do not pretend to watch very many of them, yet I see some that like to give us a dig once in a while. I find it does us good to visit some of them once in a while, and also get in touch with the relieof them once in a while, and also get in touch with the religious tract societies.

London is a large place; just think of putting thirty Kansas Cities side by side, then they would not be as large as London; we could find room in London for every minister as London; we could find room in London for every minister the church has in the missionary field and otherwise, and then have room for as many more, and then some. Nearly every leading religious movement in the world, Pagan and Christian, is represented here, and of all we are the smallest, but the best and the greatest, because we have the greatest number to convert, therefore the greatest work of any of them. Just think of one lone missionary and then only putting in a greatly act of his time in a city of seven millions. ting in a small part of his time in a city of seven millions and a quarter; what can be expected? I must confess that I am not equal to a small part of the whole; yes, it would take an Moses, or an Elijah, or a Jonah, or all three of them, to be equal to the conditions that exist here, not that I believe that they are the worst people in the world, but there are so many of them and the place is so large. I am fully convinced that notwithst anding the many bindrances that London is the best place in this mission to make the most effective nawith the lease expense. More later.

shop in a small town but there is lots of work comes in soop in a small town but there is lots of work comes in, but he is new and has to build up a trade here but I trust the Lord is able to provide for us and more and we will be able to pay our debts and help to pay the church debt and help in many ways. That is our desire and earnest prayer and I have faith in God that he will help each one of us if we put our whole trust in him.

Pray for us that we may live in such a way that God can Fray for us that we may nee in suon a way roat con can bless us and that we may be the means of doing much good and helping others who are poor and needy and the ministry with their families who are trying to tell the glad tidings to others, may we also be able to help them. We have been made to feel and know that the time was short and the great millenial day is near at hand, and that we must strive harder and be more diligent in prayer.

We are sure the Lord was pleased with our efforts and was with us, guiding and hading us, but we all have sacrifices to make.

We have been greatly blessed with the Spirit in our branch in dreams, visions, and prophecy and have been promised great blessings if faithful. Satan tried to get in arr. plit us asunder but I trust it is all past and that if we all live as we should the adversary will have no chance to all live as we should the adversary will have no chance to come in among us.

I was baptized three years ago last October by Bro. Evert Reser at the Lowell Branch while staying with my sister and her busband (Mr. and Mrs. Dan Lewis.) I have never for one moment regretted the step taken, but rejoice to know I have had the opportunity to be a Latter Day Saint. I have been here in Colorado over two years and I was married since I came here, but am waiting anxiously for the time to gather with all the saints in Zion.

1 often think of the kindness of the Joplin saints to us on our way out here as we spent a short time with them. May we all pray for each other and for the redemption of Zion is the earnest desire of

Dear Ensign:- While renewing my subscription will ask admittance to your valuable columns as I enjoy reading the letters of others, maybe this will interest some. I dearly love the work of the Lord. It is a great pleasure to me and family to read of it and to talk about it and we are trying in weak way to serve him though we come short many

The reunion held here in October was grand, we had some fine preaching by a number of the missionaries, also had some fine prayermeetings. The music was good. We were greatly blessed with the good Spirit a goodly part of time.

The Sunday school and Religio work is progressing nicely for all of these privileges we feel thankful. We feel thankful that we have had such worthy brethren as Elders F. M. Slover, I. M. Snith and Swen Swenson and C. J. Clark to Slover, I. M. Smith and Swen Swenson and C. J. Clark to help in the work here and instruct the saints, for truly they need instruction and encouragment to press onward in this glorious work. True Latter Day Saints are a very busy people, and there is always something to do. So let us keep the camp fire blazing until the summons home be heard.

We feel it is a grand privilege to read the good sermons delivered in distant lands; to think we can sit in our homes and read the sermons from the best elders and get the good instructions and enjoy ine good Sprint while reading as well. We have so many things to be thankful tor. We desire the prayers of the saints that we may hold out faithful to the end, always letting our light shine so that others may see our good works, and that our heavenly Father may be glorified.

Will close lest I weary you, wishing the good Ensign and its many readers a happy and prosperous new year. Love to all the saints.

Your sister in the work we love so well. Laura Jernigan.

12; So. 7th St., Lexington, Mo., Jan. 2. Dear Ensign:—I thought I would write a few lines to let the saints know how we are getting along. On Dec. 26 there were three who went down into the waters of baptism. One was an old brother 73 years old and his son which had the promise of being called to the priest rood. Another was a sister that the Lord had healed when the doctors had given sister that the Lord was good to her and raised her up. The Spirit of the Lord is with us. He has brought some that had got off into bypaths, into the straight path, and they have repented and are blessed. The Lord is blessing his children. Some of the brethren are going over to Valley Camp and preaching. They are having good interest. Bro. Dishman the president of the branch and J. H. Howard seem to have been led over there.

May God bless the saints more and more is my prayer. Your brother in Christ.

Fred Howell.

Earnestness is the devotion of all the faculties.

SIGNS WHICH PREFIGURE THE COMING OF CHRIST,

BY ELDER W. A. SINCLAIR, M. D.

We will choose for a basis of our remarks this morning, a text found in Matthew 24:3. "And what shall be the sign of thy coming?"

This seems to have been a very important question in the days when Christ was here, and one which the disciples were anxious to have some definite knowledge upon; and so they came to him privately seeking the information that would quiet their own minds, and probably put them in a position to intelligently instruct others concerning this wonderful event.

You will notice that the question had to do with some future event subsequent to that which had taken place in Jerusalem, when Jesus came as an infant under natural, though extraordinary circumstances; these signs spoken of were yet to come.

St. Paul when speaking on this subject as is recorded in Acts 2:19,20, says of God: "And I will shew wonders in heaven above, and signs in the earth beneath; blood, and fire, and vapor of smeke; the sun shall be turned into darkness, and the moon into blood; before that great and notable day of the Lord come."

I do not think for a moment that Paul meant literally that the sun would be turned into darkness; and the moon into blood; but I do believe that these two great orbs would have that appearance; these and other signs in the heaven and earth, were all to be precursors or forerunners of the wonderful advent of the Christ. They were to precede his day. Just what some of these signs were to be we will try to discover as we proceed.

Daniel 12:4, opens the vision of our understanding somewhat as to the condition of the people in the latter days, their state of intelligence, and spirit of unrest: 'But thou, O Daniel, shut up the words, and seal the book, even to the time of the end; many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased.'

It is needless to state that we are living in the age of the most superior enlightenment that this world has ever known, and it is absolutely unnecessary for anyone to enumerate the wonderful inventions and superabundance of evidence of man's advancement along temporal or physical lines, this is apparent on every hand; there is one notable statement however, in this quotation which I think means considerable in this line of evidence. "Many shall run to and fro." This may picture an unrest among the inhabitants, as we have sometimes heard it explained, but after a closer analysis of the subject, I believe it points more particularly to the means of transportation, and the ease by, or through which people can hastily go to and fro. and this is made more apparent when coupled with the statement found in Nahum 2:3,4:

"The shield of his mighty men is made red, the valiant men are in scarlet; the chariots shall be with flaming torches in the day of HIS PREPARATION, and the fir trees shall be terribly shaken. The chariots shall rage in the streets, they shall jostle one against another in the broad ways; they shall seem like torches, they shall run like the lightnings."

This is no doubt a reference to the means of transportation that will supervene just prior to the coming of Christ, it is but a sign of his advent. Is it fulfilled in our day?

Again we read in Isaiah 29:17, after certain things should transpire relative to some book that should come forth: "Is it not yet a little while, and Lebanon shall be turned into a fruitful field, and the fruitful field shall be esteemed as a forest."

Lebanon, which is the land of Palestine, was barren for a great many years, and according to this prophecy it was to again bloom in the richness of its productiveness, previous to the coming of Christ. This we find has been literally fulfilled Palestine is now producing all that can be cared for by the inhabitants who occupy her domain, who apply themselves to the labor of cultivating the soil. These thirgs are the present day evidences of the near approach of the Son of God.

Jesus when conversing with his disciples on that memorable occasion on the mount, warned them still further, are is recorded in Matthew 24:24: "For there shall arise fulse Christs, and false prophets, and sholl shew great signs and wonders; insomuch that, if it were possible they shall deceive the very elect."

I believe this verse means a great deal more than we are inclined to attribute to it. These false Christs and false prophets are not to come unsupported, but on the contrary, they are to counterfeit, or originate some of the very evidences which Christ said should mark the date of his coming. Will these signs be genuine? I think so! Just as the signs displayed by the magicians in Egypt, with serpents, blood, and frogs were genuine, if possible they are to deceive the very elect. They will undoubtedly be genuine in every particular, allowing the deceivers every possibility of deception.

Peter gives us to understand that these things are not to be the advent of a single day, but the subtle, incidious workings of master minds. He says, 2 Peter 2:1-3: "But there were false prophets also among the people, even as there shall be false teachers among you, who privily shall bring in damnable heresies, even denying the Lord that bought them, and bring upon themselves swift destruction. And many shall follow their pernicious ways; by reason of whom the way of truth shall be evil spoken of. And through covetousness shall they with feigned words make merchandise of you; whose judgment now of a long time lingereth not, and their damnation slumbereth not."

You will notice the peculiar trend of this prophecy of Peter, for it is a prophecy, and one which has had its complete fulfillment in our day. Pay close attention to our analysis of this prophecy and see if it does not fit to a nicety.

In the first place we notice the trend of these false teachers, they are privily to bring in damnable heresies, even denying the Lord that bought them. These teachers must of necessity have been at one time nembers of the church of Christ, they were bought, the efficacy of the atonement had reached them, and after this, they became false teachers, seeking self aggrandizement, catering in a private way to the lusts of the flesh, satisfying the cravings of a diseased mind, reprobate under ministerial garb. Have we such an instance? Let us see.

The :burch was set up in all of its spotless purity in the early days of its organization, it was like the net cast into the sea, it brought in both good and bad, and for a time even the bad were softened and subdued under the spiritual endowment; but like Lucifer, love of position carried them beyond the love of their Maker, and they connived to set themselves up as dictators, and under this role they even denied the Lord who bought them, and became sons of perdition.

Brigham Young was once a member of the church of Christ, the evidence shows that he privi-ly brought in damnable heresies into the faction which followed him, he turned them from the truth unto fables, and from the law of God to the worship of the devil. The following is taken from the Journal of Discourses, Vol. 1, page 51. "I have given you a few leading items upon this subject, but a great deal more remains to be told. Now, remember from this time forth, and forever, that Jesus Christ was not begotten by the Holy Ghost."

Here we see is a complete denial of the Lord who bought him, the making of the Christ a common man yea, worse, for under this insinuation he would be the illegitimate offspring of an unvirtuous woman. Continuing Peter's prophecy: "And many shall follow their pernicious [very mischievous, hurtful, ruinous, destructive, noxious] ways; by REASON of whom the WAY OF TRUTH SHALL BE EVIL SPOKEN OF." Many shall follow, not all, and the way of truth, which they once proclaimed, the institution to which they once belonged shall be evil spoken of. Not necessarily that they are now members of the way of truth, that could not be, they departed from the way of truth, but their departure which is undifferentiated in its outward analysis by the world, causes the way of truth, their first or former church relationship to be evil spoken of.

Jeremiah also takes up the same theme, and possibly his prophecy is regarding the same individual, wherein he states: Jeremiah 17:5.6. "Thus saith the Lord; Cursed be the MAN that trusteth in man, [ADAM AS GOD] and maketh flesh his arm, and whose HEART DEPARTETH from the Lord. For he shall be like the heath in the desert, and shall not see when good cometh; but shall inbabit the parched places in the wilderness in a SALT LAND not inhabited."

Who fills this so completely as the man who said, 'Adam is our God, and the only god with whom we have to de." Who denied the immaculate conception, and makes the Christ nothing more than a common man, holding God himself up to ridicule? We said such was a son of perdition, Peter says: "Their damnation slumbereth not." But this was to be one of the signs of the near approach of the coming of Christ.

Paul in writing to the Thessalonian saints, second book, second chapter, from the eighth to the twellth verses, has this to say concerning the time of Christ's second advent. "And then shall that Wicked be revealed, whom the Lord shall consume with the spirit of his mouth, and shall destroy with the brightness of his coming: even him, whose coming is after the working of Satan with all power and signs and lying wonders, and with deceivable-ness of unrighteousness in them that perish; because they receive not the love of the truth, that they might be saved. And for this cause God shall send them strong delusion, that they should believe a lie; that they all might be damned who believe not the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness."

This is following out the same line of thought, that deception will be in the world because, people will not seek righteousness, but will be led about by the wiles of unholy teachers. They will not do as Jesus and Paul and Peter admonished them to do: "Take heed that no man deceive you." They will depend to a certain extent upon the supernatural exhibitions portrayed by their spiritual advisers, and it is here, that God will send them, or allow strong delugion to supersede intelligence and reason.

It is under this caption that we read in Revela-tion 13:11-16; "And Lybeheld another beast coming up out of the earth; and he had two horns like a ab, and he spake as a dragon. And he exerciseth all the power of the first beast before him, and causeth the earth and them which dwell therein to worship the first beast, whose deadly wound was healed. And he doeth great wonders, so that he maketh fire come down from heaven on the earth in the sight of men. And deceiveth them that dwell on the earth by the means of those miracles which he had power to do in the sight of the beast; saying to them that dwell on the earth, that they should made an image to the beast, which had the wound of a sword, and did live. And he had power to give life unto the image of the beast, that the image of the beast should both speak, and cause that as many as would not worship the image of the beast should be killed. And he causeth all. both small and great, rich and poor, free and bond. to receive a mark in their right hand, or in their

This as can be plainly seen, puts a discount on miraculous exhibitions, for the beast which is a great organization, will have power to such an extent, that he can make it appear that he can call down fire from the very heavens; he can cause inanimate things to live and command, While these are extraordinary issues, Paul in 2 Timothy 3:1-7 gives us to understand that other insidious evils much more damageable to us as individuals will be rampant in the latter days. "This know also, that in the last days PERILOUS times shall come. men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobendient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection, trucebreakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good, traitors, heady, highminded, lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God: having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof; from such turn away. For of this sort are they which creep into houses, and lead captive silly women laden with sins, led away with divers lusts, ever learning, and never able to come to the knowledge of the truth."

Paul calls such characteristics PERILOUS TIMES in the sense that they are without God, and ripening for destruction which will come to all the disobedient.

We hear many teachers of the people solemnly declaring that the world is getting better, and that the millennium is now upon us. But Paul says in his letter to Timothy, second letter, third chapter, thirteenth verse: "But evil men and seducers shall wax worse, and worse, deceiving, and being deceived."

Another great sign which was to prefigure the coming of the Master is recorded in Zechariah 2:2-4. "Then said I, Whither goest thou? And he said unto me, To measure Jerusálem, to see what is the breadth thereof, and what is the length thereof. And, behold, the angel that talked with me went forth, and another angel went out to meet him, and said unto him, Run, speak to this young man, saying, Jerusalem shall be inhabited as towns without walls for the multitude of men and cattle therein."

In this case we would have a young man receiving information concerning the rehabitation of Jerusalem, previous to their occupancy, and the towns were to be built without walls. The youngman's information must come from an angel. Has that sign come to pass?

Again in Zachariah 8.4,5 we read: "Thus saith the Lord of hosts; There shall yet old men and old women dwell in the streets of Jerusalem, and every man with his staff in his hand for very age. And the streets of the city shall be full of boys and girls playing in the streets thereof."

Here we find that the angel said Jerusalem should be inhabited, and the Lord verifies the statement by declaring that it would be full of old men and women, and boys and girls; activity and age, as in former days. Has not this been more or less accomplished? This was all to precede the coming of Christ.

Again in Zechariah 14:1.3. After the city has been inhabited as we have just pictured, and peace and tranquility seemingly predominating, we read of a second calamity which is to overtake this ancient city. 'Behold, the day of the Lord cometh, and thy spoil shall be divided in the midst of thee. For I will gather all nations against Jerusalem to battle; and the city shall be taken, and the houses rifled, and the, women ravished, and half of the city shall go forth into captivity, and the residue of the people shall not be cut off from the city. Then shall the Lord go forth, and fight against those nations, as when he fought in the day of battle.

This great war has to precede the coming of Christ, and it is at its termination that Jesus will come. This is the one great event which stands out clearly defined as the precursor of his advent.

Taking up another line of thought; previous to the last great battle at Jerusalem, we read of certain things relative to the dangers on the waters. In Doctrine and Covenants 61:3. "Behold, I, the Lord, in the beginning blessed the waters, but in the last days by the mouth of my servant John, I cursed the waters; wherefore, the days will come that no flesh shall be safe upon the waters, and it shall be said in days to come, that none is able to go up to the land of Zion, upon the waters, but he that is upright in heart."

And again in Doctrine and Covenants 61,1.

"Behold, there are many dangers upon the waters and more especially hereafter, for I the Lord have decreed, in mine anger, many destructions upon the waters; yea, and especially upon these waters; nevertheless, all flesh is in mine hand, and he that is faithful among you, shall not perish by the waters."

As a sign of the latter days these things were to become apparent. Has the water been troubled? Have disasters occurred to prove the wisdom of the statements as read? Is there safety on the waters at the present day?

Again we read in Doctrine and Covenants 108:7 of another important sign of Christ's coming. "And now verily saith the Lord, That these things might be known among you, O inhabitants of the earth, I have sent forth mine angel, flying through the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel, who hath appeared unto some, and hath committed it unto man, who shall appear unto many that dwell on the earth; and this gospel shall be preached unto every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and

This angel seems to be the one in whose custody the everlasting gospel has been given, and when a dispensation appears favorable to its teachings, he transmits or confers the authority to some individuals to exercise its laws. There is one significant statement connected with this message which we wish to notice in passing, that is the thought, that although he has committed his message to man, he still retains the same message to reveal to other men at a later time.

We now come to one of the most important signs of the times, so far as we as a church are concerned, for it is specific and definite in its language, and sets a time wherein there is no room for controversy.

Doctrine and Covenants 83:1. "The word of the Lord concerning his church, established in the last days for the restoration of his people, as he has spoken by the mouth of his prophets, and for the gathering of his saints to stand upon Mount Zion, which shall be the city New Jerusalem; which city shall be built, BEGINNING at the Temple Lot, which is appointed by the finger of the Lord, in the western boundaries of the State of Missouri and dedicated by the hand of Joseph Smith, Jr., and others, with whom the Lord was well pleased."

This city of Zion is to be built beginning at the Temple Lot. Under this statement we look for a city of refuge for the saints to be built, and can hope for its accomplishment when we see the temple being erected on the Temple Lot; and not until then; for that is to be the beginning of the city of

Has that been accomplished yet? No! And as Christ will not come until such a place is built, it is still future to our time.

Again, we read of another event which must prefigure the coming of Christ. Jeremiah 16:14,15. "Therefore, behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that it shall no more be said, The Lord liveth, that brought up the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt; but the Lord liveth that brought up the children of Israel from the land of the North, and from all lands whither he had driven them; and I will bring them again into their land that I gave unto their fathers."

Where are the children of Israel? Does any one know definitely where they are located? Let us read another passage to connect with this one, and probably it will give us something for meditation.

Doctrine and Covenants 108:6, "And they who are in the north countries shall come in remembrance before the Lord, and their prophets shall hear his voice, and shall no longer stay themselves, and they shall smite the rocks, and the ice shall flow down at their presence. And an highway shall be cast up in the midst of the great deep. Their enemies shall become a prey unto them, and in the barren deserts there shall come forth pools of living waters; and the parched ground shall no longer be a thirsty land, And they shall bring forth their rich treasures unto the children of Ephraim my servants."

Now while this does not state definitely where the children of Israel are, it gives a few leading thoughts on the subject. We find there are prophets among them, and these are true prophets who are in communication with the Lord. Are there any factions of Israelites on earth that we know of who have prophets? Are there any churches other than our own that believe in present day prophets? I don't know of any, Where are they then?

Let us look to our text again; They are beyond the ice and rocks, somewhere in the north countries. More than that, they are beyond the border land of the arctic coasts which are known to man, they are beyond the great deep necessitating the Lord interceding in their behalf, and casting up a hignway for them to travel through the great waters. Have they come into our zone of communication yet? No! Then this is still another accomplishment that must precede the coming of

The world at the present time is more or less, with the accent on the more, dominated by the beast power. The mark of the beast is very apparent, and almost every successful business enterprize, must cater to, and associate with this beast power. Daniel 7:26 tells of something that is going to happen to this power. But the judgment shall sit, and they shall take away his dominion, to consume and to destroy it unto the end." And Revelation 19:20, "And the beast was taken, and with him the false prophet that wrought miracles before him, with which he deceived them that had received the mark of the beast, and them that worshipped his image. These both were cast alive into a lake of fire burning with brimstone."

And Doctrine and Covenants 85:26, "And immediately there shall appear a great sign in heaven, and all people shall see it together, And another angel shall sound his trump, saying, That great church, the mother of abominations, that made all nations drink of the wine of wrath of her fornication, that persecuteth the saints of God, that shed their blood: she who sitteth upon many waters, and upon the islands of the sea; behold, she is the tares of the earth, she is bound in bundles, her bands are made strong, no man can loose them; therefore she is ready to be burned."

This points out very strongly who the beast is and what shall become of her, which destruction is to take place just immediately before Christ shall appear. So that now we have two great events that take place synchronous with the coming of Christ. The last great battle at Jerusalem and the destruction of the beast power; which events do not take place until all the other signs have appeared, and angels have hearalded the tidings to mankind.

Then the saints will be caught up, and Jesus will come and take the reigns of government, and the millenial reign of evangelization will have begun. Shall we be participants in it? If we would, let us give heed to the admonition, to be up and doing, that when the Lord shall come he will find us watching. Let us remember our text. "And what shall be the sign of thy coming."

HAVE FAITH IN GOD.

"Be still and know that I am God." A quiet heart is a treasure more precious than rubies, a desirable thing amid the world of outward commotion, is to discover the secret of inward peace, to have a heart that can rest quiet from all fear of eyil.

"Be still and know that I am God." This injunction to "be still," is not a command to fold ones arms and rest always, if it was then it would suit some people splendidly, they who like the resting part of life, and don't mind who takes the working part. But there is no real peace of concience, to any whose duty is neglected, who excuse themselves from their share in the difficult conflict of life; most assuredly not to the one who has had a testimony of Jesus, who can say "I know this is the gospel of the kingdom. I have heard the voice of Inspiration, therefore I do know whereof I speak and can testify to what I have seen." To such as have felt the quickening touch of divine power, duty is not a task, but brings peace and satisfaction.

There is comfort to that soul, who when crushed with life's perplexities, when the storms of life beat wildly, and the troubled waters roar and dash against his feeble bark, and is fearful for the ark of God, goes to the Creator and Father of all the earth in whose bands hangs the destiny of men, and earnestly pleads for faith and courage to endure, and to be able to stand before the enemy who comes before him like a roaring lion. Fierce and wild the battle sometimes rages, especially when the messengers whom God has sent to bear this 'a'ter day message to the world, dares to lift the gospel standard high and raise his voice in defense of the same principles that Christ our great Commander and Law Giver taught.

When his appointed ministry, like the apostles of old, cry repentance and baptism for the remission of sins, "Ye must be born of water and of the Spirit;" when they teach that this gospel of the kingdom must be preached for a witness before the end comes, when they preach that they must contend for the faith which was once delivered to the saints, the cry is soon raised "They are the Latter Day Saints, hoot them down, do away with them." The clergy are often the leading ones to cry out against the truths of heaven, and they little realize they are fulfilling Scripture, and like the unbelievers in former days, are rejecting the counsel of God against themselves, lest the people might hear and obey. How fittingly do these words apply to such, "In vain do ye call me Lord, Lord, and do not the things that I say,"

With all this clamor and opposition, many who set out as children of the kingdom, become depressed and discouraged because their efforts are often so fruitless, and results so disappointing. It is then they have to go to their God for courage and faith, and then the consoling word of comfort comes, as a ray of living light, "Be still and know that I am ...Do(') God. Fret not thyself because of evil doers, not worry but be faithful to your trust, and leave the rest with me." Faith in God is the great watch word. He that believeth, has a firm grip on the promises of God, knowing the rock upon which he stands is safe and sure, with such there is no need of disquietude, or forebodings. The worst calamity to a child of God is loss of faith.

A depressed saint can never win striking victories, the officers of ancient Israel in time of battle said, what man is there that is fearful and faint hearted, let him return to his home, lest his brothers heart melt as his heart." The great need of God's children is a revival of faith. Think-what great things have been accomplished by faith. With faith in his possession there is no need for despondency, for the battle is not his but God's, and if he be for us who is there that can prevail against us. Though storms may howl and clouds may gather, God will temper the winds and waves for the good of his children watching and controlling all things for the bringing about of his purposes. Oh the blessedness of quiet confidence! what a comfort to the sad heart in the midst of sorrow. and grief oppressed. How different, when the sun of prosperity is shining, when the home circle is complete, and health is good and the pocket well lined, it is easy then to be calm and to believe that God doeth all things well. But when the bread winner, or the child of many hopes is stricken down, when disease undermines the health, when the hard knocks of misfortune come to the home, and make it almost impossible to keep even with the world, when sorrows hurry to us one after another as they came to Job, then is the test of our faith. Can we say as did Job: "Shall we receive good at the hands of God and not evil?"

It is in such a situation as this, that faith finds its greatest opportunity and produces the choicest fruit, we cannot estimate how much we owe to the painful things of life, life is not complete without the shadows as well as the sunshine and as the rain causes the fruit of earth to spring forth, so tears oftime bring forth the peaceable fruits of righteous-

When we look around and see the sin and degradation among God's creation, we remember that Jesus wept over the wickedness and unbelief of those he came to save, when they would not receive him, as also his servants had cause to mourn today when they consider the value of a human soul, and the message they bear is scoffed at, and treated as a light thing. But alas, the cup of their iniquity will ere long be full, their opportunities lost, the summer will be past, the harvest ended, and their souls not saved. So let us work whild it is yet day, before the night cometh when no one can work. With a prayer for the redemption of Zion and her children.

"Mama, mama; I want a penny please. Please mama! Blanks have a snap-grab up to their store and I want a really gold watch. Charles got one. And oh, hurry mama—I—"

'But son; I haven't one bit of money in my pocket book, not even one penny. Any way, you ask papa. He'll be here in a minute."

(An hour later; father gone to his work.)

'Oh mama, I wish—I could have a pennee-ee!"

"Well did you ask papa about one?"

"Yes, 'n he said to come and ask yoo oo!" "And you knew about me without asking, didn't you, brother?"

His smile was wan and hopeless: but it was there, and she knew that the storm had passed

But-

(Next day noon; just returned from school,)

"Oh, mama, I've just got to have a penny. Up to Blank's all the boys are getting the ni-icest things. And I want a whistle. All the boys 've got 'em."
"Who are all the boys?"

"Oh, Charles and Ralph 'n-'n-"

"Well son, I have no penny as you know. I know you haven't spent one for a long time, but I think it would be nicer to save it anyway. ever save any for the Children's Home?" Did vou

"No, but I pay my tithing and my Christmas offering-don't I?"

Yes, but you spend quite a few pennies too."
"Oh, but I want a whistle so bad!" he wailed as he washed for dinner. (An hour later; father gone to his work again.)

'Oh, mamal papa gave me a pennyl Good—ee.' And the whistle soon was his.

She felt that she wished the other mothers would not be so lenient in allowing their children to spend their pennies so freely; tempting little ones less fortunate; and whose parents daily try to train their sympathies and instruct them in the teachings of the church, about temporal affairs, and who long for them to be unselfish.

(The third day morning.)

Mr.——stage in for a few minutes. The mother is, "Say John; what do you do when your boy asks, asks for pennies? How do you get him to save them?"

"Me—oh, he's too near the little store over in our end, to save pennies." (This in fun and the rest in disgust, and all in sarcasm; for John's son does not spend all his pennies by any means.)

"And besides," continued he, "how can we constantly refuse him when all the neighborhood youngsters and his little playmates especially, have pennies to spend ever -ee day! Yes, sir!"

"Well we are having the same experience with our boy and his playmates. I have such a hard time sometimes, for son is strenuous and loves to try everything. I don't know what I'd do if he were not also reasonable; he often gives up easily."

Left to herself she bemoaned the ever increasing little penny fads; and longed for the time to come, when the mothers of the church should be united in their purpose concerning the penny craze which attacks all children; and also the matter of the child's allowance; remembering those who are struggling financially to make the best of ten or eleven dollars a week, or who have a little more money than this perhaps, but more family to go with it.

A child taught in its infancy and youth to have proper regard for pennies and for the unfortunate in body and spirit, will prove to be one of the wise virgins ready to meet the Master when he comes, an honor to the church,

It is not wise to hand out a fat Christmas offering for your penniless child, at the appointed time; and to see that he has a fat bank account from which comes his tithing regularly. It is right to not neglect teaching these principles to our babies, but what of

THE SPIRIT OF SACRIFICE.

Concerning the thought we will quote from a letter just received, which will no doubt be of service to many of us, because of its suggestions.

'I am writing you with the thought that you may be able to use my story as a help to mothers in teaching our children of the church along lines of sacrifice rather than self indulgence. I hope you will not feel that I am bragging of what my children have done.

Our three oldest children have had an allowance of ten cents per week for several years; the youngest child, five years, one cent a week, and the one next it, five cents a week.

From this, they who belong to the church pay tithing and all send Christmas offering. This last year the girls raised some chickens, and the next youngest, some ducks, which increased their earnings somewhat.

Some time before Christmas, the thirteen year old said to me, "Mama, I have been trying to think of something I wanted that I could do without, and I would send it for Christmas offering, too."

So I said. I had been thinking about what I could do, too. I thought the matter over and the thought came to me to do without our usual Christmas candy and nuts. So I asked her if she wanted to do that and told her if she wanted to, I would also. She was quite pleased with the idea and we told the rest. and they were anxious to do as we were doing. They hung up their stockings as usual because they said it would seem more like Christmas, (knowing there would be no oranges, candy or nuts.) Each one received just one little remembrance in his stocking. I read over a letter the thirteen year old had written a little friend and read these words, "We had a most joyful Christmas!"

We calculated about what our treat would have cost, and sent the amount to the bishop along with the rest. I told them they did not have to do without; if any of them would rather have candy and nuts, I would get it for them, but they all rejoiced in the thought that they were helping.

They are personally acquainted with Bro, Gomer Griffiths, and have followed the articles about him and Bro. Miller very closely in the Ensign, and the next youngest said one day, "Maybe Bro. Griffiths will get some of our money.

Ever praying for the welfare of Zion, I am your sister."

FROM KIRTLAND DISTRICT.

By letter from Sr. W. C. George, one of our field vorkers, we learn of a special effort in behalf of the Children's Home which the Kirtland W. A. S. S. is making. The effort is in the form of souvenir stamps, over an inch in size, each way. At the top of these, is printed plainly, "Children's home," at the bottom, "Woman's Auxiliary," on the sides, Kirtland District and "Souvenir Stamp," as well as the price each, the number ten. On the body of the stamp is pictured a kneeling child.

A sample of their printed announcements accompanied the letter, from which we quote the following statements:

Put them on your correspondence.

2. Put them on your gifts.

3. Put them on your favorite books.

Every time you use one, you show your interest in protecting and caring for the children. Every ten stamps sold means a dollar directly applied to an urgent need. Every stamp you send out will carry a message for this work.

Get more from Sr. W. C. George, Kirtland, O. Don't use them on address side of letters or packages."

Sr. George says in her letter:
"We are sending some stamps to each local for them to sell: also anyone who wants, can sell whether in a local or not. We hope to get the dimes in this way, that would not be given otherwise. Bro. Earnest Webbe of Cleveland, Ohio, has done the work of these stamps; to him is the credit for the

The work of the Auxiliary is still moving, in some places quite slowly, yet we are not discouraged. This work which is required of the women of this latter day gospel is destined to do a greater work than we can understand now. Many of the mothers and daughters are awakening to the necessity of this work. I know that the Lork is pleased with this part of his work, because he has blessed me in my labors for it."

These reports are encouraging. Many-even the children are laboring for the Children's Home. We are promised news of some of these for the near future.

BOOK REVIEW.

The study of sociology in America cannot be complete without including a study of the subject of immigration in its effects upon the social status. The student will find of ineffects upon the social status. The student will find of invaluable aid in his study of this subject a recent book entitled: "The Innuigration Problem," by Jeremiah W. Jeuks, Ph. D., LL. D., and W. Jett Lauk. (Funk and Wagnalls, New York. 551 pages, Octavo Cloth. Price $1.75, Net. By Mail $1.90. Third edition, revised and enlarged.)

This work contains the gist of the matter collected by the United States Immigration Commission, including forty-two volumes, with which comission the authors were associated.

and covers every phase of the subject from a discussion of the conditions in the countries from which the immigrants come to the absorption of the alien into the American social lite in the second generation. The discussion follows the immigrant the second generation. The discussion follows the immigrant into every part of the country where he goes, and into his industrial, social, and home life, as well as into his religious, and educational life, and his effect upon the various communities and the nation at large. The advantages and the disadvantages of the influx of foreigners into the country are pointed out, and a series of remeissearce suggested for apparent evils while yet leaving the reader free to form his own combusions.

A number of appendices are included showing the recent A number of appendices are included showing the recent congressional action, with many statistics arranged in tables for convenient reference. A pocket in the back cover also contains a large colored chart showing at a glance the num-ber of immigrants of the various nationalities annually dur-ing the past ninety three years.

WELL DOING.

A.man from barefoot boy has grown, So rich rewards from kindness sho Bring blessings in the times of need, For every helping, kindly deed And good things done in days gone past, Like chickens, all come home at last.

Aye, good things, also works of ill Come back our efforts oft to kill. The seed we sow is the fruit we reap, So let us constant virgil keep, That we may do the Master's work Be ever ready, never shirk; So when the race of life is run, We bear the verdict, " 'Tis well done -Wylder H. Walters.

WORKERS TOGETHER WITH GOD.

Men's greatest achievements in the material realm have been accomplished not by the bare arm of flesh, but by the intelligent use of the natural agencies which he has brought under control. The multiplied and wonderful mechanical appliances operated by the forces drawn from the natural elements such as oil and coal, or from the winds and waters, do far more and effectual work under the direction of man's intelligent hand than mere physical strength could do alone.

The more highly developed and complicated the instruments of man's aceievements, the more perfect and extensive do those achievements become. Modern railroads, in places cut through mountains of stone, in others carried over great valleys and rivers by great bridges, with the powerful locomotives and steel cars which "run like the lightnings," could never have been built had not man brought to his help the forces of nature-fire, water, steam, electricity, etc., with all the mechanical instruments of his own invention. So with all the wonderful developments of the age.

Should it be thought strange that God in fulfil!ing his purposes in the world should follow the same principle that man has found so effectual in his work, and use the forces and instruments which were appropriately adapted to their accomplishment? In his work among mankind God has seen fit to use in the accomplishment of his highest purposes men who were found to be suitable instruments. Jesus Christ, as his Only Begotten Son. was sent as his representative, and through him God operated to reveal himself, his character and purpose, to the world, and to set in operation other forces by which his purpose might be achieved.

In bringing about the great result of destroying "the works of the devil," and bringing mankind to "eternal life." God has chosen to work through his Son, as well as other individuals among men, cooperating with them. As men select the means most available and best adapted for their purposes in carrying out their work, so God chooses from among the available individuals those best suited to the particular work that he has to do. But while some are called to bear the leading responsibility in his work, the Lord has said that "All are called according to the gifts of God unto them; and to the intent that all may labor together, let him that laboreth in the ministry and him that toileth in the affairs of the rose of business and of work labor together with God for the accomplishment of the work entrusted to all." Thus all may assist in the work of God.

Man's availability and capacity for service for God is in proportion to his ability to understand God, and his consonance with the divine character. Christ was the Father's most perfect instrument because the unity between them was complete,— "the Father in me, and I in him." By obedience men partake of the divine nature and God works in them, as Paul wrote to the saints at Philippi: "For it is God which worketh in you both to will and to do of his own good pleasure," and as Jesus said:
"If a man love me he will keep my words: and my Father will love him, and we will come unto him, and we will make our abode with him." For the Lord to work in a man to will and to do of his own good pleasure, the man must be willing and in condition to co-operate with God.

From these thoughts it may be concluded that if God is not destroying sin today more than to a very limited extent, it is because men are not willing or capable of co-operating with him in his work. Who would doubt that it is God's will that the sin of drunkenness should be removed from among men? yet none would require the Lord to come in vengeance and destroy that which he has given man power of himself to put away. In this he worketh through men, and the men who in honor and wisdom engage in the work of suppression of this sin, and other similar evils, are co-operating with God in destroying the works of the devil.

The Lord would abolish poverty, but it would be inconsistent to expect the Lord to miraculously provide for the poor, for were he to do so they would soon be again in need, and those of avaricious tendencies would be enriched thereby. But he has already provided abundantly for the needs of all, and were his law covering social and economic needs carried out by man, there would be no poor, and no fear of poverty. Go | can consistently work no faster in the elimination of poverty than man is willing to co-operate with him in its accomplishment.

So it is in all the work of God among men. Men are his instruments, and the more perfect instruments the more perfect will be the work, and the more perfect instruments there are the sooner will the work be accomplished. So the great work of God is largely dependent upon men. The most skillful workman cannot do the best work with poor tools, and his first purpose would be to put the tools in proper condition for the work. So God cannot accomplish his highest purposes among men so long as those whom he calls to his work are inferior instruments in his hands, and his first purpose will be to bring his instruments to the proper strndard of efficiency.

God desires that all men should know him, but those who are the first to receive that knowledge must be dispensers of it to the world. would help the widows, and orphans, and the helpless, but others more blessed are his proper instruments in doing it; he would raise up the sick and afflicted, but he needs the skilled physician and nurse and others to co-operate with him in that work-not that he is unable of himself to heal the sick, but his healing power operates according to faith and other conditions in men and ofttimes this faith is lacking.

In every department of life God works through men for the uplifting of all men, and the man who takes of the things of God's creation whether of knowledge or of material possessions, and reserves them for selfish purposes alone, is failing to co-operate with God and is losing life's most valuable opportunities. The appeals of selfishness are so strong, and necessities of the unfortunate brotherhood so dimly seen, that humanity the world over is suffering for the very things which others have in their power to give. When a great disaster occurs and large numbers are left destitute, the terror of it breaks through men's hardened natures and touches their sympathies, and they give liberally of their means to help the distressed, but too often the destitute widow and orphans in the next street made so by long sickness and death in the family cry in vain for relief.

The man whose soul is in attune with God, will, when he sees his brother in distress, be touched with the divine love and pity, he feels the impulse of the merciful God moving upon him to relieve that distress,-God working in him to will and to do his good pleasure, and he works together with God. Such was the Samaritan who gave help to the Jew smitten by robbers, and such is the man who out of a true love for his fellowmen in need imparts of his possessions for their relief; and such also is the man who not having worldly possessions to give, consecrates his life to the uplifting of his fellowmen and the accomplishment of God's purposes,

Those of the church are chosen of God to be his instruments of righteousness and enlightenment to to the world, but to be effectual instruments they must be themselves righteous and full of light. God God must shine in them and through them. Christ sought not his own will, but the will of the Father, so must the children ever seek to fulfill God's will, thus truly co-operating with him in all things.

ON DEBATES.

"Some men seem to think that 'mud-slinging' and buse constitute the main elements of a successful debater, while, in fact, such tactics disgust soberminded people and bring religious discussion into disfavor. A religious discussion, properly conducted, in which a contention between truth and error prevails, is one of the most propitious times to reach the people with the gospel who otherwise would never hear it. Those who oppose any and all religious discussions unwittingly oppose Christ and the apostles. Much of the Master's time was devoted to such discussions with the lews, and the Acts of the Apostles is filled with the same thing. Nothing but a sickly sentimentalism leads one to oppose a gentlemanly, fair, and honest investigation of religious subjects by men who are seeking gospel truth and not personal victory. The writer is fully conscious of the fact that many who engage in such discussions work injury to the cause of Christ, but they are so egotistical and head-strong that kindly and brotherly suggestions are treated with contempt. Such men imagine that they are wiser than all the sages of all the ages, while in truth their self-esteem has blinded their minds to their own ignorance."

This wholesome statement is taken from an article by F. W. Smith, in the Gospel Advocate, (Christian), and it gives us reason to believe that light is at last breaking in upon the minds of some of our Disciple friends. The elders of the Reorganized Church who have had to meet so many of the class of opponents decried against in the above clipping will welcome the attitude which the brother takes upon the subject of debates, and will ever hold themselves ready to enter into a "gentlemanly, fair, and honest investigation of , religious subjects," with "men who are seeking gospel truth and not personal victory."

The Ward County Independent published at Minot, North Dakota, contains a faverable report of the saints' conference held there on January 10th and 11th, with statement of our faith by Bro. I. C. Page.

Without earnestness no man is ever great, or does really He may be the cleverest of men; he may be brilliant, entertaining, popular; but he will want weight. No soul-moving picture was ever painted that had not in it depth of shadow.

HELPING OTHERS.

"Yer heart is niver so full of its own worries that ye can't care a little for thim of other people," said Mrs. Shea over her washtub. "If ye crowd some of your own out, sure 'tan't no great loss. Any way, it ain't empty-handed folks that's hilpin' others, if ye take notice, it's thim with loads of their own." Then she went on washing for her sick neighbor. -Christian Register.

A teacher told a negro pupil to construct a sentence using the words "defeat" and "debasement." After thinking awhile the boy replied; "John went down de steirs. Defeat slipped and he fell inter debasement."—Sacred Heart Review

His rendering of the word was well done, and its application to every day life was urged, not to giving of our goods, but a principle, which was of much more importance than even faith, it heing that which is required in order to secure eternal life.

At the 2:30 prayerservice, a goodly number were present, and the presence of the Spirit was plainly felt, though no outward manifestations, more than a peaceful, gentle feeling. At the 7:30 p. m. hour, Bro. J. T. Curtis was the speaker, although his subject being one that few care to discuss, for allhough his subject being one that lew care to discuss, tor good reasons, yet Bro. Curlis was equal to the occasion, be-ing very hoarse, he launched out as though in earnest, and did well, although a subject that so many are not agreed on, that it requires more argument, and perhaps never can convince, especially those who do not care to be convinced. All were exhorted to observe the law of tithing, and come forward with their moneys, and goods for that matter. It has been argued from almost every conceivable standpoint, and all who attempt it, say I am not yet satisfied, but as soon as I am, will begin. Some are not paying their tithing for different reasons, not satisfied.

In these strenuous times of money making and laying up treasures, how many of us realize to any extent, how much we are in debt to the taithful missionaries, who labor for months in the mission field against difficulties and privations we can never know in the business world and at home, and then are compelled to seek some employment to provide for the scan tracessities of their loved ones?

What an impetus our church would receive if several hundred of our wage earners would deposit from $10.00 to $25.00 with the bishop every month, instead of lending support to worldly institutions. "Where your treasure is, there will work beat he also." will your heart be also.

Editor Ensign:—As a member of the Latter Day Saint's Church I believe it is my duty to bear my testimony to the saints through the Ensign, that it may be of some benefit to

I am a native born Greek; came to this country when I was fifteen years of age and since then I began reading many religious books, until I got hold of the Bible, and having seen so many good promises given to them who kept the com-mandments of God. I desired to walk as near to God as I could. But the more I was trying to live close to God and have some rest in my heart the more my conscience was causing me to know that I was wrong.

But not to make this letter too long, four years went by and the more hopeless I was, about inheriting the kingdom and the more hopoless I was, about innerting the kingdom of God, and to live a better life than that. I desired to return back to the old country which I did. But I found the things different than I thought I would find, and caused me to return back again. This time I did not stay in Massachusetts where I was before, but being persuaded by some of my companions I went to Kansas City with them. About year after my arrival there I happed to get the acquaintance ith a Latter Day Saint by the name Sterling McGraw, who with a Latter Day Saint by the name Sterling McGraw, who also was my co-worker, and as busy as most of the Latter Day Saints are about spreading the gospel, likewise the said brother began to preach to me the truth, and at first I was not paying much attention to bim as I thought I was in the only true church not knowing she was an abomination. Finally I was persuaded to read the Book of Mormon which I did in a few days and the more I was reading it the better I liked it until 1 read it at litrough, and undesstood it divinity. The next book which was given me to read was Doctrine and Covenants of which after I had read from ten to fifteen chapters I understood seagin the nower of God, and to fifteen chapters I understood again the power of God, and little more investigation of the doctrine taught by the Reorganized Church, I found them to be very satisfactory and per-fect in mysight. The same time my mimd was cullightened and understood all about this church, and I lifted up my oge-and glorified my God and my Redeemer for the light given to me, for surely I had been in darkness. The next thing I did I went to be baptaced, as I did by Bro. J. A. Tauner of the Central Branch the 5th of Nov. 1912, thus I have found

Now friends there is no use for me trying to tell you the Now friends there is no use for me trying to tell you the wonderfulness of God and his goodness to me, but some of us may say, what is the use keeping all the commandments of God? Saints do not let us deceive ourselves, but rather try to continue in faith, for the more we are living in this world the scouer our end cemes, and the time for us to stand before the throne of God and give an account for our works. Let us therefore, saints, be humble as our Lord Jesus Christ was, who was brought like a lamb to the slaughter, that power may be given to use to stand before God and praise his name in eternity.

Your brother in gospel bonds, Stillanor Poulopoulos.

CATARACT, Wis., Ian. 5.

Editor Ensign:—This leaves the writer in mission work, in an inland vicinity, in Central Wisconsin, where I have spent the past ten days, including Christmas and New Year's As the holiday season comes on it is quite tempting to to go home and spend the time with wife and children.

However not being able to do so we try to be as cheerful as the circumstances permit and make the best of the opportunities given.

We have a wide field for mission work here in this western Wisconsin District considering the limited number of missionaries. Much more opportunity for labor than can be filled by those laboring.

Bro. A. Whiteaker, one of the Master's earnest workers in this field for many years has been detained at nome most of the past year on account of the serious illness of his wife. We much regret the loss of his work in the mission field, and also the affliction in his home, and hope the Master will meet out such divine favor to him as will give him comfort and strength in these days of trial.

We find many of the saints in this district trying to reach the high plane of righteousness pointed to by the latter day message. But as in other fields some are attracted by the world's alluring influences, and are loitering by the way, making little progress. We often find some earnest ones little progress. making among the scattered saints.

Some time ago I spent a pleasant week at the home of Dr. and Sr. Archie Butler at their home in Lake Nebagamon, and tried to tell the people the gospel story. Bro. and Sr. Butler did all they could to get their neighbors to hear. A few seemed interested in listening and we had a fair attendance. But as io days of old, Paul said, "Alexander the copperantith did him nuch evil." So one at Lake Nebogamon though of another craft, sought to Jo us much evil, but his efforts did not seem to profit him much. Coppermiths and silversmiths who were the makers of the gods in olden times did not like to have the gospel presented, neither do they in these latter times.

Among other places I visited I spent some time at Two Harbors and Knife River on the north shore of Lake Superior in Minnesota, and am always glad to visit the few families of earnest saints living in those towns. Among other evidences of sincere interest in the gospel work the writer was presented with a good cloth overcoat, which at the time of year was much needed and appreciated, as the cold winds of winter were just beginning to blow. As a reward for their kindness I hope and kind Master will afford them protection from the cold winds of sorrow and adversity in the time of their need. I also spent some time in the cities of Ashland and Chetek, and trust that some good was done.. The few saints at Ashland did all they could to get their neighbors and ac-quaintances to attend our services, of whom some did attend. I tried to tell the gospel story in as simple and effective a way I true to tell the gospel story in as simple and effective a way as possible, and hope the good seed of gospel truth sown may in due time grow, and in the day of the Lord's reaping prove to be a few sheaves added to his harvest.

At Chetek I held a few services and attended other meetings, and was cared for kindly while there. The saints there are naking a good effort along the line of Auxiliary work which is delay need.

Bro. B. C. Flint joined me in mission work for about ten days just before Christmas, near Black River Falls. The time was spent pleasantly, and the experience of having a companion in missionary work was a little out of the ordinary with me. as in most of the years of my labor I have traveled alone. However to have someone to assist in the traveled alone. However to have someone to assist in the services and bear the burden of work, was appreciated by me, and I trust was also by Bro. Flint. He is a pleasant young man and if faithful in his mission work will accomplish much good. There are two places very dear to Bro. B's heart, heaven and home. However we all must admit they are both very interesting places.

The few families of saints living a few miles north of Black River Falls are very fine young families of saints, and if they continue as now, will be among the Master's own when he comes. At this place I am having good attendance and interest. Baptized a young man and wife a few days ago. The few saints here are conducting a Sunday school which seems to be doing fairly well. Bro. R. Now lest my letter becomes tedious I will close. Sincerely wishing all the Enstan readers a happy now year.

Slander is a poison which extinguishes charity, both in the slanderer and in the persons who listen to it.

Mr. Vernor, Ill., Dec. 29.

Dear Ensign:—As I was sending a new subscription, for books, I will put in a few words to our valuable paper. We are not permitted to attend our church services as we would like but we try to keep our lamps burning. Some are interested in the gospol as we tell it to them, they seem to think it is something new. Have tried in the past to get a place for our ministers to preach in but could only get a place for one or two nights, then they would have some excuse and close the doors. We now have the promise of a hall in which we may, bold a few weeks' meeting; if some of the elders would write us we could arrange for a time and probably some good could be done. The population here is about 12,000. Surely there would be some who would know their Master's voice and follow him. We thought after the confence to be held at Springerton, Illinois, in January, some of the ministry would come here. Hope we won't be disappointed in our plans.

WILMORE, Kans., Dec. 14.

Dear Ensign:—I am sending you some subscriptions for non members and a renewal of my own, which will be due the first of the year. I am taking this method so a few may read the good sermons and letters, from over the world.

The letters are interesting from Bro. Griffiths. But, say, brothers and sisters if we only had Bro. Griffiths with us, or if he was home here in America I believe he could do lots more good. Some will say well we are told to go and preach to every kind of people on earth. So we are, but let us have elders at home to all the vacant places, not all of course, but meet of them once a year anyway.

Our field elder is J. Arthur Davis and he is doing lots of good and going all he can. But he couldn't fill all of his field if he tried, that is if he spent a week or more in a place or town. It has been three years since we have heard an elder or even seen one of ours. There are something like 20 or 30 towns on our railroad from Witchita west and some are towns on our raintout truth witching west and some are towns with rich people in them that have never heard our good gospel as our elders preach it. The Utah people have been here and most of the towns west, but not ours. And it isn't because the elders havn't car fare; that keeps them away either. Then again why not pay all of our izithful elders and families their portion of living, some are behind is their elders are fare that the portion of living, some are behind is their elders.

elders and families their portion of living, some are behind in their allowances. Now the way to avoid such things is for one and all to heed the admonition and pay their tithing.

I love this grand latter day work, that is the work of others, for romember we might as well live in China, for we are isolated from doing anything only paying our tithes and other church debts. But I am only too glad to do what I can to help the cause along and wish I could do more. So come on, ye good and faithful, and pay your tithes and help the church debt what ever you can, and other church work. Well dear beloved old Ensigh have I taxed you to the limit? If so just put me in the waste basket and oblige.

some time since we have had any preaching by our elders.

The Baptists, Christians, and Holiness people have been hold ing protracted meetings here this winter,

My brother Oliver W. Johnson asked me to ank the saints to pray for him, that if it is the will of our heavenly Father to pray for aim, toat it it is the wint of our naweary range in the hat he may regain his health and strength. He was eighteen years old Oct. 19th. On April 23, 1913, he was brought home from Kirkeville, Mo., where he was attending school, with rheumatic fever. It seems to have settled in his heart, leaving him almost an invalid. I take this means of asking the saints one and all to kindly pray in his behalf.

a few well chosen words and an original poem read by the writer. A very earnest and tuching reply was made by the pastor, which brought tears to the eyes of all.

Bro. John has been a faithful worker, and by the number which gathered at his home. New Year's eve, shows plainly we know when we have a good president, and we don't change simply to have a new man in office. The saints are well satisfied and we hope and pray our good, kind old brother will be able-to serve us yet many years longer.

We are pleased to note that Bro. and Sr. Woodruff of Denver, Col., Bro. and Sr. Bradford, Poplar Creek, Ill., also a Bro. Henson and others are arranging to move here in the a Bro. Henson and others are arranging to move here in the spring. I Prospects appear very favorable here for building in spring. The large Frisco Railway shops are the principal dependent for laborers. The saints in my own field who are expecting meto give them a call will hear from me. I am billed for Sorento commencing the 10th. I may give Alton an other call as I left some very near the kingdom at that place, and thank the Lord, I found a noble band struggling hard to keen the camp five blazing. keep the camp fire blazing.

The saints here are looking forward with some degree of pleasure to the visit of our missionary in charge Bro. John Rushton. There is the rumor of two debates, one is with the Non-Progreesive Campbellites, they are thinking of Arkansas Black, or Blue, or John Giddens, let them bring the whole there. It would be more interesting, glad something is coming to awaken up things a little. Best wishes to all and a happy presparous new year

Dear Ensign:—It has been some time since I have written anything for your columns, but as all the saints here have had a hand in the ounting of seven saloons from our city. I seel that it is good news for the saints in general, and that as the awatening time draws near, God is taking a hand in proparing this part of the vineyard for the future abode of the faithful.

The work is progressing in this city slowly, but surely and we hope to hold on until God sees fit to search out the honest in heart. We realize that he has sheep in this place. We hope to live honorable, upright, saintly lives, so that those who are investigating for the truth, may see our good work and be anxious to open the door for him who is stand-work and de anxious to open the door for him who is standard at the door and knocking.

One thing we have missed so far this winter, is the annual visit of our worthy brother, Elder J. S. Roth, but we are still looking for him, and hope that he may yet pay us a visit, soon.

I desire, through your columns, to extend to any saints who may be thinking of changing their location, an invi-tation to move in or near our town, as we have now banished the saloons from our midst, and have a very business like town, surrounded by the very best farmers and good soil, that will produce most any kind of crop planted. We are anxious to welcome more saints, that we can build up our branch. Bro. E. L. Henson, and John Ely have been with us and did some preaching, and this with what little I have done is the whole of the winter's work.

We have Sunday school and Religio every Sunday and prayermeeting every Wednesday evening at the different homes. At our last election of officers for the Sunday school Editor Ensign:—I see only a few lines of obituary regarding the demise of Elder J. W. Morean. I looked for some editorial concerning his life work.

He had been a missionary for about twenty years, a number of years in the 1st Quorum of Seventy, being superannuated in 1907, since laboring in Colorado, Texas and closing his career in Arizona. We are not in possession of data, or much of the facts concerning his life work, never having met him but once hedrog he came to Arizona about data, or much of the tacts concerning his life work, never having met him but once before he came to Arizona about July 1st. Though poorly in health he entered actively into church work with the workers here, given to located a claim of 320 acres and moved upon it about Oct. 1st and put up a neat little house getting comfortably located when his illness. grew so severe that he was brought to the residence of Bro. James Farley in Bisbee about Nov. 1st; where he was kindly cared for and nursed by the family, and Bro. Mannering and others until the end came, Dec. 5.

He died firm in the taith bearing a remarkable and strong testimony to the divinity of the work, the Sunday previous to his death.

I spent last Saturday night with one of his ranch neighbors who had become interested in the gospel by association with Bro. Morgan and Bro. and Sr. Mannering, and I enclose fifty cents to pay for the Existon for them for one year. With a happy New Year to saints.

We remain in the faith.

BELVIDERE, Ill., Dec. 13. Editor Ensign:—It is with joy and gladness we receive Saints' Headt and Ensign, filled with the soul inspiring testimonies of the brothers and sisters, and we rejoice in the good that is being done throughout the world by the preaching of the angel's message on earth so that the honest in heart may be found. Dear Ensign:—I am a constant reader of your valuable per, and it has been some time since I contributed to your ges. Thought a few lines from this locality might be of interest to some one.

We are not free from difficulties in trying to discharge our duties here in the work of the Lord, as well as elsewhere, our duties here in the work of the Lovin, as well as elsewhere, but we can report some progress in some lines in particular. By a united effort we succeeded in re-plastering and shingling our church, which was badly needed.

The Sunday school and Ladies Aid are doing a splendid work, and by a more combined effort by all the forces available in our branch, great good could be done. We have a number of talented young people bere, and it is our daily prayer that they may become useful men and women in the defense of the cause. The Lord bas seen fit to remove from our ranks one of our faithful leaders among the young, in the death of Sr. Mabel Holsworth. Our branch and the the death of Sr. Mabel Holsworth. Our branch and the Spring River District has sustained a great loss, and while we must say "Thy will be done," we also pray that God will supply the vacancy thus occurred. Sr. Mabel's years of faithful work in Sunday school had made of her a proficient and humble worker in the Master's cause. Her sickness and death was a marvel to all around her. She talked of her approaching death as though she was going on visit. Also her interest in the gospel was evinced by her calling the young people to het bedside and advising them to live so God could make them useful. She planned all her funeral in detail, who should preach, sing, pray, selected the songs, etc. Everything was nicely carried out as she had planned. While the dear mother, brothers and sisters mourn her departure for the present, they know if they but live right they shall meet her again, where parting will be no more. Surely it can be said of this sister, "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints."

I take delight in the Auxiliary work and enjoy the oppor-

I take delight in the Auxiliary work and enjoy the opportune and needful truths brought out in the leaflet lessons, and I feel keenly the necessity of mothers impressing upon their children the importance of right living and shunning the evils of the world, and believe the only way it can be done is through a united effort on the part of all mothers and by the assistance of the Master. We can do more than we asmetlines think we can.

and by the assistance of the Master. We can do more than we sometimes think we can.

We have had considerable encouragement with our young ladies in organizing them along auxiliary lines. The thing most needed by all is faith in God and his institutions.

In July I went to visit my sister and family near Baden, the programment with my bashed I Arthur Design.

In July I went to visit my sister and family near Baden, Oklahoma, in company with my husband, J. Arthur Davis. As none of our preaching had ever been done there, arrangements were made to hold a meeting. Many friends were made to the cause. Two noble souls were baptized, Broand Sr. Clark, and if they live faithful they will do good, and if time would have permitted us to have stayed longer, much good could have been done. From there we went to Wichita, Kansas, and assisted in a tent meeting. The saints all sustained the tent work splendidly, and as a result of the effort made there this summer, quite a number have been baptized. I enjoyed my trip and the association with the saints and friends greatly.

One thing was very noticeable, the zeal manifested by saints and triends greatly.

One thing was very noticeable, the zeal manifested by the scattered saints, and the power in preaching the gospel by the brethren on the firing line. It the same zeal and by the brethren on the fring line. It the same seal and power was in our branch, a wonderful work could be done.

I request the prayers of those that read these humble lines that I may be able to do my part in life so the gospel may be preached to the honest in heart.

Dear Ensign:—We wish to contribute a few items concerning the latter day work in this part of the vineyard. There seems to be more members here than ever before, honce the work is being firmly and we trust permanently planted, being ably conducted by Eld. Ed Lucas and his faithful corps af officers. Both the Sunday school and Religio are given splendid attention by young, earnest workers, whose talents and usefulness bid fair to leave an impress lor good through the coming years. I truly rejoice at the success of our young men and maidens in their righteous and Godly efforts to carry on the cause of truth amidst the turmoil and cares of life, never growing weary, nor fainting by the way.

We closed an interesting series of meetings at the church, Elder J. C. Foss returning home to Independence today, Elder J. C. Foss returning home to Independence today. We remember starting out in missionary work with him years ago in Kansas, and we rejoice to know that he has not lost any of his old time vigor and vim in presenting the precious gospel that he loves so well. God bless him, and may his days of usefulness with us be greatly multiplied to the joy, comfort and blessing of many in Israel. We succeeded in getting a number of outsiders out to hear the word in spite of the cold weather, and an interest awakened in some which we helieve will be permanent. which we believe will be permanent.

which we believe will be permanent.

At this Sunflower State Capital, as well as elsewhere, the Christmas activities ran high for awhile both in church and the home life of the people. One novel feature that we witnessed on the principal street of the city was a goose race with boys and girls under ten years of age; the distance being fifty yards, and each applicant being required to purchase a pair of shees from the advertising store. Well, the well-trained goose won the race.

Lately we have met here a number of Pentecostal families, with whom it seems to be a foregone conclusion that in.

Lately we have met here a number of Pentecostal families, with whom it seems to be a foregone conclusion that in order to receive the baptism of the Holy Ghost today each person is expected to speak in unknown tongues. Such a delusion, and such a cunningly devised fable the devil is able to manufacture purely in order to deceive. The Bible plainly states there are are many spirits gone out abroad to deceive, and the same precious book teaches that none are entitled to the sarious gifts of the Holy Spirit who are outside the kingdom of God. These very Pentecostal people boast that they have no use for a church organization nowadays, neither do they believe in keeping any sort of record of their own membership. # SERMONS AND ARTICLES

OUR PREPARATION FOR ZION.

Sermon of Elder George Harrington, delivered at Independence, Mo., Nov. 2, 1913. Reported by Mrs. A. Morgan.

I am going to read a portion of Section 129 in the Doctrine and Covenants.

To the church: After constant meditation and prayer, both before and after coming to conference and during the sessious, o far as the peculiar conditions obtaining in our sittings had permitted, I was in the Spirit during the nights of the 15th at d 16th of the mouth and the day passing between at such times during the calm that occasionally ensued and the quict of the night when the burden of my care forbade sleep. My dreams also have been enlightening, and encouraging.

Then follows instruction relative to the officers, after which this information is given to the body.

The attention of the church is called to the consideration of the revelation, given in answer to earnest supplication with regard to temporal things. The word has been already given in agreement with revelations long since delivered to the church, that the temporalities of the church were to be under the charge and care of the hishopric, men holding the office of bishop under a presiding head acting for the church in the ingathering, caring for, and disbursing the contributions gathered from the saints of moneys and properties under the terms of tithing, surplus, free-will offerings, and consecrations. The word which has been given at a late period should not have been so soon forgotten and disregarded by the church or any of its members. (I am God; I change not;) has been known to the church and the eldership since the coming of the angel with the message of restoration.

Under it the church has sought the Lord and received from time to time that which was deemed sufficient for the time to govern the church and its ministers, both of the spiritual and The church has been the temporal divisions of the work. The church has been directed to accede to the rendition of the bish pric with respect to the temporal law; and until such heed is paid to the word which has been given, and which is in accordance with other revelations given to the church, which had been before given, the church cannot receive and enjoy the blessings which have been looked for when Zion should be fully redeemed. Therefore, hearken once again unto the voice of inspiration, in warning and instruction, and conform to that which is given and receive what is awaiting the upright and the pure in heart.

The Spirit saith further unto the church: The Lord is well pleased with the advancement which has been made in approaching unity during the conference year; and though there may have been differences of opinion, these differences have been held in unity of purpose and desire for the good of my people, and will result in helping to bring to pass a unity of understanding. So be ye encouraged and press on to the consumation Jesigned of God for his people—unity, bonor, sanctification, and glory. Amen.

I felt to impose upon myself the task of talking to you this morning, thinking that there was a desire upon the part of the Divine One that I should occupy. I realize that this is likely to arouse expectations that may not be realized, but I feel I must perform the duty that seems clear to me, and I trust that I may have the blessing of the Divine One, as our brother has prayed, and that I might likewise have your prayers in that direction, that by reason of the mutual appeal to God there may be brought to your attention the things that will please him.

What was uppermost in my mind, and which impressed me above all other things was the subject of "Zicn," her attainments, and I wish so call your attention to a view of the revelations that have been given concerning this place. Hence, I will read.

Hearken. O ye elders of my church saith the Lord your God. who have assembled yourselevs together, according to my commandments, in this land which is the land of Missouri, which is the land which. I have appointed and conscrated for the gathering of the saints: wherefore this is the land of promise, and the place for the city of Zion. And thus saith the Lord your God, If you will receive wisdom, here is wisdom. Behold, the place which is now called Independence, is the center place, and the spot for the temple is lying westward upon a lot which is not far from the courthouse: wherefore it is wisdom that the land should be purchased by the saints.

This is found in section 57, paragraph 1. I will call your attention to one or two other statements given by inspiration. One is found in section 98, paragraph 4:

And they that have been scattered shall be gathered; and all they who have mourned shall be comforted; and all they who have given their lives for my name shall be conwned. Therefore, let your hearts be comforted concerning Zion, for all flesh is in mine hands; be still, and know that I am God, Zion shall not be moved out of her place, notwithstanding her children are scattered, they that remain and are pure in heart shall return and come to their inheritances; they and their children with songs of everlasting joy: to build up the waste places of Ziou.

Also section 94, paragraph 5.

And now babels, if Zion do these things, she shall prosper and soread herself and become very glorious, very great, and very terrible; and the nations of the earth shall honor her, and shall say. Surely Zion is the city of our God: and surely Zion caunot fail, neither be moved out of her place, for God is there, and the hand of the Lord is there, and he hath sworn by the power of his might to her salvation, and her high tower; therefore verily thus 'saith the Lord, Let Zion rejoice, for this is. Zion, THE PUBE IS HEART; therefore let Zion rejoice, while all the wicked shall mourn; for behold, and lo, vengeance cometh speedily upon the ungodly, as the whirthwind, and who shall escape it.

Thus far we have ascertained this thought, that Missouri was consecrated for the gathering of the saints. That it was the land of promise; the place for the establishing of Zion. Independence the center place and the spot for the location of the temple. The object for which Zion was brought into existence is one with which we must be concerned, and we understand it to be a gathering of the saints; for the building of the ideal city, Zion, or the New Jerusalem; to develop the highest degree of intelligence and spirituality to show to the world, the effect produced by the gospel of Jesus Christ upon a community of the people, pure in heart, seeking to do God's will. What might we say with reference to results? We read to you a revelation this morning that was given to us recently through our beloved president and prophet of the church, the concluding language of which is, unity, honor, sanctification and glory,'

Here we have found what is aimed at. Here we have that which will when brought to pass, be the result of all that has been given of God that was to contribute to bring to pass this wondrous city and condition which should be a reflection of the power and inteligence of God upon a community that were willing to listen to his voice. We have this, "Blessed are they whose feet shall stand upon the Mount of Zion with an eye single to my glory; who have obeyed my gospel, for they shall receive for their reward the good things of the earth and it shall bring forth of its strength and they shall also be crowned with blessings from above; yea, and with commandments not a few and with revelations in their time, if they are faithful and diligent before me." This we find in section 59, paragraph 1.

After giving further instruction, additional promises are given as follows:

Verily I say, that inasmuch as ye do this the fullness of the earth is yours; the beasts of the fields, and the fouls of the air, and that which climbeth upon the trees, and walketh upon the earth; yea, and the berb, and the good things which cometh of the earth, whether lor food or for raiment, or for bouses, or for barns, or for orchards, or for gardens, or for vineyards; yea, all things which cometh of the earth, in the season thereof, are made for the benefit and the use of man, bott to please the eye, and to gladden the heart; yea, for food and for raiment, for taste and for smell, to strengthen the body, and to enliven the soul.

With these thoughts before us, we have some kind of an idea of the purposes of God in gathering his people together. There have been questions asked as to why there was a necessity of a gathering of the people of God. Why can not we make a development as complete and as full without being associated together.

Sometimes we have heard the remark (by way "When we were back in our little of criticism): branches, we had much more of the Spirit then than we have in the large gathering,-we seem to have our liberties curtailed, and we become disinterested, and as a result we fail to get the blessing that we otherwise would have received when we were with those who were few in numbers." But here we are, gathered together in a large body; and I heard a remark a short time ago from one of our teachers in a prayer meeting that impressed my mind. It has lingered with me, and I believe has been fruitful of good thought. Speaking of those who were dissatisfied with the conditions here he remarked that we have come to learn how to live together as a community. We are here to learn how we can, in large numbers, get along, and I thought it was a splendid idea for us to think about. We can, perhaps, get along with ourselves (individually) very easily. We may get along very well with some one else besides ourselves, but when we have to deal with a hundred, when we have to deal with two hundred, fifteen hundred or three thousand, have to be mixed among them, and have to adapt ourselves and stand all the peculiar conditions that come as a result of this association, we have something to think about, something to do which is no ordinary task. To be able to fit into the place where we belong and do our work and contribute an influence such as we should to the end that there may come glory, honor, sanctifica-tion and unity as we have had it expressed to us; which we are told is the task before us, we meet a condition here with responsibilities not imposed on us under other conditions.

I have said it, I may be wrong in it, but I believe it just the same, that the greatest work that God has in process of accomplishment is the work of the development of Zion. He sent the angel to the world in the latter day with the message of the gospel, and incorporated within that message was the idea of centralization, or bringing to pass a condition where there might be given to the numbers gathered together the influences of divinity that will reveal the possibility of God with a great number of people consecrated to perform his righteous will, which is to be done, as we understand it. So we say that the miracle of healing, the miracle of an individual speaking in an unknown tongue, that the miracle of turning water into wine, or bringing to pass a supply of bread, or anything else that might be sought after is nothing compared with this great and wondrous accomplishment, the true unfoldment or the evolution of the souls of men,

We have to learn to know how to live in community life. We should understand gospel influences and be capable of an adaptation, upon our part, to all the conditions in which we are placed in a manner that there should be a revelation to God, and to each other that we are upon the land of Zion, with a pure heart, having an eye single to the glory of God. If we have such a thought, if we have such a purpose, then there is reason to believe that this wondrous work which the Almighty has intended shall be consumated.

One of the revelations that have been given to us these latter days says: "The Lord requireth the heart and a willing mind." Is that being had? Has the Lord secured that? Has he so influenced us, have we become so effected by the reading, by the studying, by the perusing of his law that we have given ourselves up to God? That we have given him our hearts, and that when his instructions come to us, when his advice is given unto us there is a ready response, and we are ready to move forward?

Well, you say, "That requires confidence. That requires the expression of faith in those whom God hath selected, for from their lips comes the words of counsel and the words of inspiration." Again you say, "We have to know whether or not these men are as they should be, for we are not always prepared to receive that which cometh from men, and by rea-on of that," and then making—II was going to say a very careful examination of the conduct of such officers,—there is ascertained some point of weakness in them, and we say, "If a man who holds a responsible position for the purpose of guiding the people of God, has such a weakness, we cannot trust him, and consequently withdraw our trust, our confidence, in him whom God hath appointed, and by reason of that we feel we cannot work with them."

If we assume this attitude their voice to us is dead, so far as affecting our lives. We are not willing to heed their counsel. Our minds are not willing. We are not susceptible to the guidance of those whom God hath placed in responsible positions for our good, and hence, when we hear bishop calling for us to help the church, when he, under the direction of inspiration is asking the people to come to the help of Almighty God in his great and wondrous work; immediately there is set up an examination of the conduct of the man, and it stands as a barrier to the affectiveness of his work because we fail to have the fullest confidence, and refuse to yield because we are not always sure as to what he is going to do with what he gets from us. Have you confidence in God? Have you confidence in the divine Being? He has said, I want a certain process to be carried out. I am asking you to help raise the debt that is upon the church. I want you to be free. You have the power; you have the means; you can do what I want you to do if you choose to, and there need not be any failure in accomplishing what I have in my mind. But are you willing?

In the times past the very condition that seems to be apparent, to an extent, now, existed with the church. They withheld their substance and the Lord expressed himself in complaint against them because he said they withheld that which, if they would impart, was sufficient to redeem Zion. O, we understand there are two considerations to be taken in regard to this question of Zion. There is a Zion, a location, and there is a condition. The Almighty intends that there is to be a gathering of his people. Hence, the necessity for a location. Then, after the gathering of the people there is a necessity for a perfection of the souls of those who are gathered, and that is Zion in very deed—the pure in heart, as we have read to you this morning,

Now the work with us as saints is this: God has proposed that he will give us the opportunity of giving a revelation of the effect of the performance of his will, of the power of the gospel upon the souls of mankind, and hence give forth to the world that which will cause them to fear to come up against Zion because she is terrible; because she is good; not because she has guns and ammunition or anything of that kind—that which the world would use to annihilate those who would come up against them, but that his people have been so affected by divine power that there will be a revelation of goodness and righteous strength that the wicked man will fear to come up against; because God is with us and his glory dwells in our midst.

I have been surprised sometimes in the past when our opponents have said that we were among the most honorable people that there were in the city of Independence; yet when it comes to the question of trusting us with the governmental affairs of the city, they seemed to have a fear lest we may do something detrimental to their interests; but if we are to be animated-here is the thought -if we are to be animated by that holy and righteous principle of doing unto others as we would that others should do unto us, no good man need fear anything that we will do, for we will do right, and good men will always be benefitted as a result of the actions of good men. They could not condemn us for our actions, for our actions will be in harmony with the divine mind, and we will give forth evidences of a pure heart. "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God." Zion, the pure in heart. Zion, the place of power. Zion, the place of intelligence. Zion, the place of refuge. Zion, the city of our God with its glorious association of souls controlled of God. What can give a better expression of intelligence: a better expression of beauty; a better expression of the powers that could be his for the gathering and utilization of all things temporal?

Nothing could equal the intelligence of a people pledged to God for God is pledged to a people who are pledged to him, and consequently, as a result of their consecration to God they will be capable of administering in governmental affairs; in the raising of the products of the soil; in the construction af anything that is necessary and useful; capable of giving expression to the finest of feelings; the best of thoughts, profoundly wise, thoughtful of others needs; sympathetic and generous; and where such is accomplished there cannot help but be brought forth to the world's gaze the effect of divine teaching upon the conscrated soul.

I plead for confidence. In me? Shall I do that? Shall I ask men to believe me? Shall I ask men to believe our Stake Bishop? Shall I ask them to believe our Presiding Bishop? Shall I ask them to believe our Apostles? The Physician to the church, or our Prophet and President? Would there be anything wrong in it if I did so? I would like to know how the affairs of the kingdom of God would be managed where each individual would have the privilege of designating its officers, and making arrangements that would accomplish God's desires.

You can readily see that it would be an impossibility: For if the order of God is to be executed acceptably he should and must speak and direct his work, and you making a discovery of the divine mind, should be in agreement therewith, and by reason of that agreement, acknowledge and support those who have been selected by him. Need we have any lear, of these men, having the law in our hands, with the privilege of a full and free examination of the same, thereby ascertaining whether or not these men are doing as the law requires, and by which if they do wrong or fail in their work can be judged thereby? With all this in your possesion there need not be any danger of a serious character hurtful to the church, and for these reasons there ought not to be withheld a proper support from those men until there should be just cause in law for such withholding. You must listen to the leader, and be guided thereby, otherwise discord and disruption is sure to follow. He who is going to get the benefit of associate effort must recognize in some individual or individuals the right of direction, and if we acknowledge there is that right somewhere, which we should, especially so when the Almighty has designated individuals for the responsible places it seems to me we can win our way into the heart of God, and feel the divine powers working with our souls that will cause us to make the effort that will contribute toward this wondrous accomplishthe deviapment of the Zion of our God.

I think the one aim of our God is that every good influence that effects us will have its effect upon the body also. That we, in our association one with the other, shall effect one another in a favorable manner, so that the greatest result in development-in everything that goes to make glorified beings shall be had, because our environment is conducive to that end. Then our thoughts and desires should be for what? For ourselves, for personal gratification of selfish desires, for our own glorification regardless of others? Ah, no. Our thoughts should be, what can we do for somebody What is it that God requires that I possess, that I can express, that I can give that will touch somebody's soul and make them feel better and happier. "Well," you say, "sometimes we see things, and hear of things, that are discouring to us, that make us disinclined to do as we would otherwise, things that indicate an undesirable and unsatisfactory condition in Zion." Yes, sometimes the people are in conditions where if they are not aroused and arrested in their course, having yielded to the weakness of the flesh and the directions of evil influences. If there was not some abrupt calling of their attention to the condition they were in, the dangers would be greater than before. Hence the necessity for the expression of the truth relative to the condition existing with the soul, and teaching the soul, a realization of its true situation by reason of which it may avoid going in the wrong direction and start in the pathway of righteousness.

We know that with those gathered here, with those we may expect to come in the future, there will have gathered such a variety of minds that there will no doubt be a great many questions as to the right of this, as to the right of that, about that which will produce the best results, as to what will produce the most unfavorable results. We can necessarily look for the expression of the opinions of the people in variety. As we increase in numbers we necessarily will have that to consider, but there must be a controlling mind somewhere. There must be a mind that is capacitated for a comprehension of the entire conditions existing with a view to an adaptation of the matter necessary so that the body shall not be injured, no matter what is projected upon it. No matter what the claims may be of inspiration, of intelligence. It makes no difference. There must of necessity be somebody somewhere that will be touched with the divine light that will discern the influences approaching, and save the body from destruction or misguidance or ignorance and disruption. Somebody must be believed, and who will you select? That's the question. Let the Almighty put the question to you and say to you, My children, you select. I quit the job of selecting, of directing you. I leave that with you now.

How many of you would have the presumption to say, I know the individuals who will best conserve the work of God, and if the Lord will let me choose them I know they will be first class: they will go ahead; there will be no mistakes, no jars. Everything will run smoothiy. The whole thing will work together harmoniously. If that be your conception I wish to plead with you, to leave this thought with you, that the Almighty has expressed his best wisdom is his selection of his representatives and has looked upon the children of men for thousands of years and made his choice and when he has accordingly failed, according to your view, do you yet propose to make a success in directing his work? Think of it. But God is going to teach us patience. He is going to give us opportunities for endurance.

The quality of the soul will never be known until it is put into the hardest and most trying of situations. We have had the One who stands before us as One glorified in intelligence and spiritual power to give to us an evidence of what he was capable himself of accomplishing, the patience that he was capable of manifesting, and there was no excusing him from the trying ordeals of life. He went through them. He went through them without murmuring, but nevertheless they were as trying as they possibly could be, so much so that he sweat as it were drops of blood. What was he thinking about? What were the thoughts, moving his great soul? I cannot say. I may guess or speculate, but to my mind there must have been within him feelings that were ponderous, and the agony, I rather believe, was because of the weakness of humanity.

You remember that one of the revelations given to us in latter days speaks of Enoch pleading before God to knew My God should weep. Yes, he saw the great God weeping. Weeping! over the race of beings he had created. Planning for their good, creating them with a glorious destiny ahead of them and giving them every facility for the reaching of that glorious destiny. Yet they were constantly throwing down his efforts of love. They were refusing to listen to his pleadings and were ignoring his precepts, and leaving his work undone. Throwing themselves out of the pale of the influence of his great soul to do them good. No wonder there should be weeping, and sorrowing on the part of the divine One. Jesus wept, we are told. He sorrowed, and God wants us to be touched with this kind of feeling; touched with these sympathies that are keen, that will evidence our feelings of love for suffering humanity. That will lead us where we would not go naturally. That would take us and cause us to perform the duties of life in deeds of kindness. Where the tear would drop in gratefulness for our services; where the youthful heart would express itself with joy because of kindly consideration given to its faults or problems.

Ah, you remember, our beloved brother Paul said. We should suffer with those who suffer. Yes. If one member suffered, what? What is it he said? if one member suffered,—ALL THE MEMBERS SUFFER WITH IT. How do they do that? How do they do Let the pleadings of the saints go before God for the sick, the poor, the helpless, and wanderers. When the calls are for the necessities of life and the parties have been deprived of it, what will it mean to us? Their suffering for the necessities of We suffer with them, how? Think of it. I wish to call your attention to the fact that God has provided a way by which we can relieve those who are in suffering; those who are needing the necessities of life. Those whose physical tortures are because thay have not the food or the clothing needed. It is by personal effort, also indirectly. nasmuch as ye do it unto one of the least of these. (my disciples), ye have done in unto me." Christ working in the soul. Christ influencing our hearts for others. Christ making us feel that our brother is our equal. That if he does right, if he tries to do the best he can, -if he cannot do as well as we can do (we may have been favored beyond him because of circumstances or because of an increase of intelligence, which we did not make,) he is our brother and our equal.

Don't forget that some of us fortunately, are able to gather money and the properties of this world, -not because of any great amount of knowledge but rather circumstances has favored us, or that the Almighty has given us an additional amount of intelligence along a particular line, and we have prided ourselves on the ability that we have done this or that of ourselves alone, and that it is ours. We say, "It is mine to do as I please with." and do you purpose to please to do as God pleases that you shall do. Or do you propose to please as you propose to do? Are you consecrated to God? Are there calls being made? Have you the ability to make the sacrifice? Are you doing it? "Where one member suffers all the members suffer with it." Sometimes. Sometimes, or is it all the time? Suppose somebody should be terribly injured physically and we should witness them in their broken state, we would look upon them in sympathy and perhaps the tears would start from our eyes because they were suffering physical torture. would, in a sense, then, be suffering. We would be sympathizing but that's not sufficient. What is it we can do to alleviate the sufferings existing there? There comes in the responsibility.

I heard of an instance where a lady over in Russia who had gone to a theatre with her coachman, and there listened to a play on the inside which revealed the fact of one occupying the position she did, with a coachman to drive her around, as having gone on a pleasure trip, while her coachman was freezing to death, and the picture was placed so effectively before her mind's eye that she wept, yes, and on the outside of the theatre her own coachman was freezing to death. Wonderful humanity. Our tears fall, but sometimes our actions are so far removed from consistency that we allow death to come when we could have saved it and kept life in the individual.

Zion, the pure in heart; the children of God; filled with divine light; always merciful; refusing to lend assistance to the discrediting of honorable men and honorable women who are struggling to do the best they know how in the furthering of God's work. I have seen them, although it hasn't been told me, but I have sensed the terrible trial that it seems to me some men have been resting under. They have been struggling for years with the best powers of their mind, consecrated wholly and solely to God and his work, having qualifications which if they wished to use for personal ends they might glorify themselves in the financial world, but they have submerged these feelings and have consecrated themselves to God, and have put themselves in a way to enable them! to accomplish the purposes of God, and they, as I have witnessed them in mental picture, bowed down their body with grief and sadness because of the failure of the accomplishment of the noblest purpose of their hearts.

Yes, but when Zion is glorified, when she is sanctified, when she is honored, when there is unity, then these thoughts will not trouble the mind. No. There will be no trouble of this kind. There will be a love which will express itself in a unity and in a crediting the individual with trying to do the right thing. Of course some say iniquity should be thrown out of the church. Yes, but hardly that way. We have to We have to labor very patiently, very carefully with the sinner. We must give him consideration and assistance because we didn't call, or God didn't call the righteous into his church and kingdom. He called the sinners. Those who are steeped in iniquity, and he has called many to help those sinners become cleansed and purified souls. That's the work of the church. Not that we have got to draw the best of society to us, the greatest singers, the greatest musicians, the greatest artists, the cream of the world. We must throw out our arms in love and mercy for the whole of the creation which God has made, that we might, by the influence of the Spirit working with us, teach the ignorant, touch the wounded soul and make it stronger, and make men feel that God loves them just as much as any other soul he has created, regardless of the fact that they have gone astray. Men are called into office to take the responsibility of drawing them back again. As the Shepherd left the ninety and nine and went after the one, so the Master said, is the intent of the divine being.

We hope that we shall be influenced by these divine impulses which are going to bring to pass this great condition; this revelation of the purpose of God in giving to the world an illustration of the power of the gospel work upon a united body. Yes, that's what we need. That takes time. There is no doubt but that there has been advancement. The Lord has credited us with making some advancement up to the present time, but this advancement must go on. I am not insensible to the fact that I am possessed of weaknessess myself that will have to be eliminated before perfection shall take place in my soul, and shall I condemn the work of my brethren and sisters because of their weaknesses, when I realize in myself weaknesses that will necessitate a great work upon the part of the divine One to help me to remove. May we therefore study, and pray; may we work, giving unfalteringly our time and power to the end that God will have the privilege of showing to the world the fact that in Zion is the opportunity to hear, and to see a people such as He desires, that he is willing and will invite the world to come to lear 1 from her. because they have been enabled to study out the best way to do most everything. While we know at the present time we are going out and gathering information from the world, which is our privilege, for it has been said, "For the Spirit shall guide you into all truth" being possessed with this Spirit we have a descerning power that enables us to discover things of value everywhere, consequently we are at liberty to gather information from the world. But it is not to be that way all the time. Otherwise, Zion would not be the best product of heaven. We are to rise and shine and put on the beautiful garments of righteousness and intelligence.

Now I wish to state a few words to the auxiliary societies that I have invited to be present this morning, and it is likely that a good many of their members are here. You perhaps feel that you are animated with the same desires that we have who are carrying the greater responsibilities of looking after the interests of the church work here, and you may think to make your special work a success you can let go (that is a mild way to put it) let go of your interests in the general services of the church. I wish to state to you that is a mistake; and if you are auxiliary, or aim at helping, you will come to the assistance of the body in its general services, and while we know that you are doing a great deal of good in your efforts to lead the minds of those who are under your care into the greater and higher church activities, you should not feel that your work is done when you have simply taught a little, or done some other work along this line, but encourage the youth to come to the other services, the regular services of the church, and to have a reverence for the house of worship.

The Lord has messages to deliver and they are to be delivered to the lambs as well as to the sheep, and you should recognize the necessity of the lambs coming in touch with the influences of God in the services of the church, and therefore we say, and we think advisedly, influence your children in your classes to come with you to the general services of the church because there is where the Almighty is supposed to move, and you and they will be the beneficiaries as a result of your visiting this place, and if you are to be affected, if you are to contribute to bring to pass the glorious state of being God designs in Zion you will not only teach but as far as you are able, you will be among those who shall lead the children to where the pastures are green for their soul's growth and development.

I hope we shall feel the importance of the mission that we have. The great responsibility that is upon us that we shall learn how to live together for happiness and sympathize with each other and perform the services intended of God, that God may shower upon us the blessings of direction such as he has promised. Let us have an unfaltering faith, and increase of knowledge, backed up by the Spirit's power that will guide us into the avenues of righteous activities in the way that will reflect upon God great honor and glory, and upon ourselves also honor, and give us the gratification which is born of the performance of a service that we feel conscious is designed and proposed of God for us to perform.

THE MOVING PICTURE.

The moving picture in all its vividness and with all its sensational situations and plots and alluring effects on people, has a much greater attraction and is more lasting in its effects, than is reading matter of the same character. "The pictures posses a reality and vividness that printed words can never possess." This is the rule; put there are exceptions thereto. It applies to scenery, to much light and sensational material, and to events where details are not recorded, anyway, or where it is possible to reproduce the detail.

LES MISERABLES.

Recently (and for the second time only in life) we attended a moving picture "show"-advertized as interpreting Victor Hugo's Les Miserables; a masterpiece for character delineation and for the masssing together of words, words, words-which rooted deep in one's mind and heart, conditions and experiences in France at the time of the Revolution; the depths of hope, despair, love, misery, fear, sadness, cruelty, happiness, remorse-to all of which no pictures could truly do justice. More than that, its characters and events were absolutely misrepresented in important parts, and the plots re-arranged, although it would have seemed as easy to have pictured them truthfully.

We were just about through reading the book, and the temptation was great to see it carried out under as nearly life like conditions as possible. Besides, Kansas City had held the same play there three weeks and people were "raving" to have it stay longer; declaring it to be the greatest thing yet, in moving pictures. So we went. We sat two and a half hours in pent up disappointment and disgust. As a result, we know this much for good and always, that a good book cannot be improved or done justice by moving pictures, because the words are not there. The details of language are necessary to the proper appreciation of years work an author has spent on his work,-heart and soul in it, for the good of the public, Every spark breathing of romance (which in truth accupies but a small portion of the book) was enlarged upon, till we could hardly recognize it, and to the point of making the actors ridiculous, and common; where as the real situation is one almost of agony and is extraordinary.

We feel safe in saying that those who pronounced the display to be "grand," and "perfectly wonderful," and who declare that we of an opposite stand are lacking in powers of comprehension and appreciation, have either never read the book, or have lived years since skipping through it.

There were a few beautiful scenes; there were touching ones (exaggerated), there were thrilling ones, and unnatural, there was death, crime (given overdue prominence) (and crowds of wide eyed children about us were watching on.) Much and more, of the thrill and excitement of the book were there. But the skillful word pictures of the strivings of conscience; of the good in the hearts of men; of the wrong, of their inmost thoughts and desires which only the printed word could express, were not there; the best of this or any other good book cannot be put into moving pictures.

An onlooker who knew nothing of the contents of Les Miserables would have no more conception of the beauty of the work or of the real trend of events, than our six year old son who, as he undressed for bed one evening, was listening—while his father read aloud from it. Later, while saying his prayers, he burst into tears and couldn't tell why. We instinctively realized that he had listened, and we had been unwise. After he had been quieted and asleep, he woke several times in crying spells, and couldn't tell the cause. Our suspicions were soon confirmed when each of several nights after, ne would ask us questions about the book and then, "Don't read any more of it out loud. I don't like He has had his first and last experience of the kind we hope.

If the mere hearing will affect an ordinary child so, what will constant feeding on thrilling and passignate scenes do for anyone in time?

SHALL WE "DRAW THE LINE?"

The moving picture is one of the greatest please attractions of the times. "A child's pleasures ure attractions of the times. "A child's please have a lasting effect upon its character," mind is itself a film, most sensative, upon which is stamped every most minute expression.

The scenes of crime of various kinds, -drunkenness, revelry, unrefinement and oftimes immorality, in moving picture "shows" have caused no small percentage of wickedness among the young. Watch your newspapers! And the judges of various courts will add their word. Judge McCune of Kansas City exclaimed in disgust as he censured the moving picture show, while addressing a gathering of young people, "I should like to meet the men who form the board of censor."

There is a great means for education in the moving picture. But so long as we cannot allow our children to attend them without their looking upon the sights, which are injurious to older minds and senses; and which will age children in their knowledge of what should be kept entirely out of their thoughts, making them forward instead of childish and innocent; since we cannot draw the line and the boards of censor seldom do it succesfully-then we had best keep them from our chil-

We ourselves have not the power or the opportunity to right the wrong in this matter. Almost always, the "shows" consist of a variety of reels. The one you may have taken the children to see especially, may be very fine and educational, but before or after you see it, comes one which you would give a good deal to have kept from a child's notice. It is harmful and much more attractive to the young mind. (How some of us do hope and pray that the parents will see nearer alike on the question soon, so that our little folks will not be tempted and tried, and cry out, "Oh,-papa, mama, do let me go; the others get to and I never do have any fun!")

When the moving picture is introduced into the schools as an educational feature, then we need not fear them. At present they take our young people out late at night, which should not be, no matter how good the "show." While in school at all, late hours should be regularly avoided, and questionable pleasures.

And always (although membership in a church making the claims which we do), as promoters and would be partakers of temporal laws and their promised blessings, we should put forth every effort to become united in the training ourselves and our children to a proper use of time and money.

TENDENCIES OF THE TIMES.

With one accord we all agree that we do hurry our work, we do cram our studies, we do cry out-we have not time to spend on or with our children the way we would like. (This and more.) have not money because of the increase in prices of food, fuel and clothing, to give to the church, and yet when it comes to pleasures, the tendency is to cram them in also, a nickel here, a dime or a dollar there-thoughtlessly, selfishly; and we so become lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God, and forget to love our neighbor as ourselves.

The tendency among the young is to appear just a few years older. At nine and ten years, the girl does up her hair; at thirteen and fourteen years, she goes alone with her boy friends here and there,

Wherever there is a poor mother who tries to keep her fourteen year old, a child for a while longer, who loves the shining hair braid and childish dress and manners; who loves to let her girl run to and from school if she wants to, and doesn't curb every little innocent remark, in order to keep the child's mind unhampered by overgrown thoughts of dress, boys, style, and of pleasures always away from home -wherever this mother is-we find scores of others arrayed against her, who are led by the tendency of the times to allow the girls to spend their time and money foolishly, and to dress like grown women.

And the mother who has better judgment and the one who is too poor in this world's goods anyway-knows not which way to turn, for apparently they are all against her principles. She don't mind that however. She herself can stand it, but her child-her child must suffer. The boy is plagued, soured, conscious because he cannot have spending money to use as the others do. The girl is simply

One hears, "Oh, if we ask Jane to our things, no one'll have a good time. She isn't like the rest of us; and nobody likes her. She acts and dresses so different and none of the boys like her either. Its her mother's fault!" This actually happened and the girl is left out. And it is the fault of the other mothers.

It may also be your girl who went to a church affair with you, (but who leaves you to come home alone) and skips off with a friend to the "movies" up town. As she meets the passing neighbor she exclaims, "Oh, hello; is that you? Say don't tell on me please!" And this is true too.

And we cannot blame just a mother here and there; it is the fault of the combined neglect of mothers or parents who support or cause the increasing tendency of the times for exciting, thrilling pleasures; which the "good old times" bring no

COMMUNICATION FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE QUORUM OF TWELVE.

I hereby give notice that per resolution adopted by the Quorum of the Twelve at their last sitting, the quorum will meet in the "Order of Enoch building," per courtesy of the board of the Order. Independence, Mo., March 18, 1914, at board of the Order. Independence, shot, inducts 16, 174, at ten o'clock in the morning.

Whoever may have business requiring the consideration and action of the Quorum will please forward the same to J. W. Rushton, 701 N. Cottage St., Independence, Mo. (Let all communications be in INK and not written with pencil all communications be in INK and not written with pencil either lead or indelible).

In view of the responsibility resting upon these brethren and the importance of the business they are expected to transact in the interests of the Church, such as appointing missionaries in all the world, and many other items of equal interest in the cause of the Master, we feel deginous of soliciting the prayers and sympathy of all the church members, that our Father will bestow upon us his divine power to qualify these ministers for the peculiar duty and arduous work that have been committed to them by God and the Church.

SUGGESTIONS.

It has been impressed upon my mind, and very forcibly for some months, that the hastening time is upon us as a church, and by reason of the many demands made upon us for preachers in all parts of the world, the suggestion has for preachers in all parts of the world, the suggestion has been made to me that the appointing authorities should call for volunteers from among the young men of the Church, having authority to preach as priests and elders. At the same time it was propounded to me, "Why cannot many "5 these young men who have gained valuable experience in the several branches of the auxiliary work volunteer their services to the Church for a period of two or three years, in the active mission fields before they assume the responsibility of family, life." family life."

family, life."

When we consider that young men in the world in many countries give several years in the "army service;" it seems to be an ideal within our reach to arouse the enthusiasm of young men to show their love for God and the good of humanity to consecrate two or three years of their life in the effort to save souls and seek to establish the kingdom of God. Not only would such service be acceptable to God; and of immeasurable benefit to the Clurch, but such experience would be of great service to the men themselves in widening their sympathies, giving them a most unique opportunity to understand life and human nature by direct contact; and at the same time very helpfully assist such men in finding their place in Church service and develop good men as missionar ies and also executive and pastoral ministers.

hes and also executive and pastoral ministers.

We recommend a consideration of this matter to our young men and pray that God will arouse in them a great do sire to respond to the Church's need and this call for the statement of the Savior, viz:—"The harvest is great and the laborers are few," was never truor than it is today.

Among the most desirable qualifications for such ministerial service as contemplated are the following:

First. To have a passion for souls and the serving of Second. An upright life.

Second. An uprigot me.
Third. Humility and a disposition to learn.
Fourth. The cultivation of spirituality by constant

While we do not specialize on education we nevertheless recommend that all who can take advantage of every opportunity to educate themselves, not only in the grammer schools and the high schools, but by a careful and systematic course of reading at home.

Those who are willing to respond to this call are invited to apply to the secretary, J. W. Rushton, for an application blank, which after filling in return not later than March 31st to his address.

to his address.

Praying that the coming conference will be the best ever held, that the spirit of peace and good will may predominate in all things that God's will can be fulfilled in all things.

I am your brother and co-laborer,

Gomer T. Griffiths,

Pres. of the Quorum of Twelve,

GREAT BOOKS.

I am thoroughly in sympathy with the thought of reading great books. All such thought of reading great books. All such books contain the views the authors felt towards life and men and their destiny. Such treatises, from large minds, show what relation great ideas bear to those who read their swallimited experience into the rich and abounding lives of the world's leaders who tell of the higher things of the mind. Each great work is the philosophy of a human soul. The object in reading such a production is for the purpose of getting a complete picture, into one's mind of how civilization has been an unfoldment in time and space, and that it can be thought of as a reality. The that it can be thought of as a reality. The light trashy reading in which the vast majorit is a chronic and frivolous kind of mental indigestion that temporarily stimulates feelings and benumbs the reasoning faculties. Spasmodic short cuts are the order of the day, and untried experiments the panacea for all human betterment. To cultivate deeper reverance for the best that had been preserved in printed formthrough all the ages, and to keep in touch with the best lines of thought in modernlife, should be the objects held in highest esteem.

To read a book properly is a matter of scientific work, and during the last three or four years soveral distinguished authors have written on the subject, and how it ought to be done. Their advice in the main is good. Some peasons read a book slowly, ponder over each essential thoughts, well that when the volume is put aside its contents have been assimilated and form a part of the reader's mental equipment. Others read rapidly and master the printed pages easily. How one reads is a question of quick mind action and ready response to verbal stimulus.

THE GREATEST LOSS.

Upon the white sea sand There sat a pilgrim band, Telling the losses that their lives had known; While evening wanted away From breezy cliff and bay,
And the strong tides went out with weary mean.

Some talked of vanished gold, Some of proud honors told,
Some spoke of friends who were their friends no more; And one of a green grave, Far away beyond the wave While he sits here so lonely on the shore.

But when their tales were done. There spoke among them one, A stranger, seeming from all sorrow tree: "Sad losses ye have met, But mine are sadder yet, For the believing heart has gone from me."

"Then alas!" those pilgrims said, "Then, however it came to thee, Thine, brother, is life's last and sorest loss! For the believing heart has gone from thee. Ah! the believing heart has gone from thee."-Sel.

IN SPIRIT AND IN TRUTH.

The worship of God by man has assumed an almost infinite number of forms and manifests various degree of truth and sincerity. The rude ceremonies of the darkened savage have some elements of truth associated with much error, and are performed in all sincerity, while under the higher civilization the degrees of truth is greatly increased. It is quite evident however that error has found place in all forms of worship even under the teachings of Christianity, and that high standard of worship of God expressed by Christ when he said that "They that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth," has been attained by but few.

It should be clearly apparent that any service for God, or worship of him which is not according to truth, or which is not rendered in full sincerity of purpose, could not be accepted of him. Of those who worshipped according to the commandments of men, (and those commandments must have aimed at semething good or they would not have been followed by any intelligent people,) Jesus said:
"In vain do ye worship me." The doing of these things which meet only the standards of worship designed by men cannot bring the results which can be attained by doing the things which are clearly known to have been given of God.

The doing of the things commanded by Christ is repeatedly required in the Scriptures, and upon this basis only are the promises of God to man made, and man has no claim upon God, and has no legal or consistent right to call upon God or make demands of him without an effort or desire to do the things required. On thi spoint Solomon says: "He that turneth away his ear from hearing the low, even his prayer shall be abomination."— Proverbs 28:9.

To serve God diligently in some points of the law while disregarding others will not bring a man to full acceptance with Gcd and hence the necessity of observing the whole law of God. Creeds and forms of worship which have multiplied with the years until their names are legion tell that the "unity of the faith" given by Christ has in some measure been lost sight of, that the truth has been mixed with error, and that in many instances at least the commandments of men have substituted the commandments of Christ. It is therefore apparent that much of the worship of God today is after the teachings of men as distinguished from the teachings of Christ, and if a man would serve God "in spirit and in truth," he must find that system of faith and practice established by the Lord and which is free from the errors of men.

With the finding of a perfect system of worship the individual still has occasion for care in order that his obedience to the requirements of that system may be complete. The best system of government in the world would be quite ineffectual were its executive officers and its citizens to ignore the enforcement of its provisions and to refuse obedience to its laws, and so to him who disregards the essential things of the gospel of Christ; that gospel becomes ineffectual. This is true whether the individual occupies upon the outside of the church, or by obedience to certain parts of the gospel has become a member of the church.

SINCERITY.

It has been often said that if a man is sincere in his religious service that he will obtain the reward of salvation whether that service has been in accordance with the law or not, but under such teaching as that the man who bows down to his idols will be just as certain of salvation as many professing Christians. Sincerity coupled with justifiable ignorance may require mercy, but sincerity with unjustifiable or willful ignorance will not bring a realization of the promises of God. Sincerity is absolutely essential to the acceptable worship of God, and when associated with an intelligent obedience to the truth the results divinely promised will be realized.

The things of God are not placed within the reach of man for him to experiment with. A rigid observance of the letter of the lew for the sole pur pose of determining its truth would bring failure of results. In developing the science of psychology scientists have sought to bring within the range of experimentation the psychic forces which exist apart from human consciousness, and while there are intelligences which have submitted to such ex-perimental examinations, the first evidence of the scientists having come in contact with the Spirit of God are vet to be shown.

Several years ago it was proposed, if we remember correctly by one who had little faith in the efficacy of prayer, that Christian people unite upon asking God for some certain thing in order to determine whether there was any virtue in prayer. All Christendom might have united in perpetual prayer with such a purpose and the heavens would have remained unmoved regarding the thing plead for. Such a motive would involve the asking of a sign, which Christ in his ministry ever refused to give though frequently asked by those around him. Nothing short of a true sincerity of purpose will meet the divine requirement.

Paul says that "God hath called us with an holy calling, not according to our works, but according to his own purpose." (2 Timothy 1:9). Man may not substitute his own works for those required in the gospel of Christ, nor is any man justified in teaching his own views or those of any other man in the place of the things taught in the Scriptures. And furthermore, even the teaching of the scriptural truth with insincerity, or without the proper motive is not warranted by the law of Christ. Paul in commenting upon this thought says: "For Christ sent me not to baptize, but to preach the gospel; not with wisdom of words, lest the cross of Christ should be made of none effect." 1 Corinthians 1: 17), showing that even the gospel would be made of none effect if its preaching was dependent upon man's wisdom alone.

With an eye single to the glory of God is the motive which the Lord gave for every man in his worship and service to God, and any attempt to use the things of God for experimental purposes, for furthering personal ambitions, for building up of human institutions, and for satisfying vanity and pride' or courting favor of the world, will be without divine approval and without divine reward. Much of Christian work which is of itself good is made ineffectual because of the absence of the true motive, though no doubt many of those who perform such work are so blinded by their own ambitions that they are deceiving themselves. that worship him, must worship him in spirit and

NO DEFINITION OF LIFE.

Man's wisdom and learning are incapable of furnishing a definition of life. The attempts of the wisest and most learned to furnish such a definition only serve to exhibit the futility of the attempt.

Herbert Spenser, who had made the most ambitious attempt of modern times to explain the visible universe, gives this as the result of his efforts to define life: "Life is the continuous adjustment of internal relations to external relations."

This definition manifestly stands as much in need of explanation as that which it purports to explain. But it will serve at learst to remind us that the wisdom of men is foolishness with God.

The ignorance of scientific men on this subject is frankly confessed by Alfred Russell Wallace, who in one of his latest books, "Man's Place in the Universe," says' "Most people give scientific men credit for much greater knowledge than they possess in these matters." And again: "As to the "As to the deeper problems of life, and growth, and reproduction, though our physiologists have learned an infinite amount of curious and instructive facts, they can give us no intelligible explanation of them."-Philip Mauro in The Fundamentals.

EX-SENATOR SHELBY M. CULLOM.

The following statement by Govenor Dunne of Illinois relative to Ex-Senator Shelby M. Cullom following his death on January 28th is a worthy though brief tribute to his honorable life. Living in a period when scandal has followed so many men in public life either with or without cause upon the part of men concerned, it is refreshing indeed to find one whose garments are free from even the smell of the fire. Senator Cullom was a friend of Lincoln's and shared the simple honesty of that great man, and served the public for the public's good. The honesty of his life and the integrity of his purpose should be the example of every man.
"In the death of Senator Cullom the citizenship of the state of Illinois has suffered a signal loss. The best proof of his honesty is that for half a century he went through the flery ordeal of holding public office without ever being accused of enriching himself in public life and died comparatively Poor.

"The grafter and the corruptionist never dared approach this honest son of Illinois, or, if he did, never succeeded in interesting him in any of his nefarious schemes. In what was known for many years as the "house of plutocrats" he remained poor and invu nerable to temptation a consistent and shining exemplar of honesty in official life.'

The basement of the church was filled almost to its capacity with those who came to renew their covenant in the holy sacrament, at the evening prayer service. Preceding the preaching service one dear little babe was blessed, Brn. Winning and Archibald officiating.

Our young brethren, Blair Dobson, David Wilke and Roy Fifer have been doing duty at Wyatt Park Mission lately.

The choir sang a beautiful anthem from the new book Sunday. They are working on others faithfully.

Seldom have the sympathics of the saints in this city been called forth as they have been in the recent bereavement of our Bro. and Sr. Best whose son George passed from earth-life so suddenly, having been apparently dangerously ill but three days. The death of our young brother was in itself a crusing and unexpected bloom properly the serious and near fatal linears of their only daughter, at whose bedeide the mother was when summoned home to find her boy so sick. Only two days was she permitted to minister to him, when the Father said, "It is enough," and released the tree spirit. Meningitis of the brain was the dread malady that so soon did its deadly work. We know that in the last days of his life, in his anguish and suffering, there was going on within the brother that preparation for the great change which knowing the divine love of our heavenly Father bids us feel that all is well.

The funeral was held at the home in charge of Bro. H. D. Ennis, Bro. Scott speaking the beautiful comforting words that are so much needed at such a time. Beautiful and profuse were the tokens of sympathy, in the floral offerings that were spread upon the last resting place of all that was mortal of "George." May the loving Father comfort those who mourn, and tenderly bind up the broken last of the faithful mother, is our prayer. Bro. and Sr. Albert Frey had the distressing misortune to lose their home and all its contents by fire. The family were away from home at the time, and do not know how the fire originated, but it is supposed it was caused by an over heated stove.

This will be the time when nobody works but father, son or brother, as they have taken upon themselves the task of presenting the program and preparing and serving the lunch. Mothers, wives and sisters are on the "qui vive" with curiosity and expectancy.

KANSAS CITY, MO., SECOND BRANCH.

Interest among the members of this branch seems to be on the increase which is truly gratifying. The Religio will hold its meeting at 2:30 on Studay afternoon instead of Friday night. This change was made on account of the cold weather and we have found the change to be a good one as we have a larger attendance and better programs. Other locals are invited to come and help us and furnish the program whenever it is convenient for them to do so. For the coming six months Brn. W. S. Brown P. J. Raw, J. Fisher and Chas. Chaney will endeavor to feed the flock and gather in the sheep who have strayed away.

Sr. E. W. Lloyd is very sick and been bedfast for several weeks, she has received many blessings in answer to prayer and desires the saints to again remember her as she desires to live for her family and the church.

The interest in the Sunday school is increasing also and the regular branch services are enjoyed by quite a large number of saints and frequently by many who are not of ur faith. Unity, peace and harmony prevail at the present time for which we are thankful and hope the good influence will continue to grow and spread farsher and farther until many more will rejoice with us.

**Editor Ensign:**—The Bootman and Chism debate is now history. On the 16th of Dec., J. D. Erwin of the L. D. S. and J. W. Chism of the Non-Progressive wing of the Lie Disciples were scheduled to discusseburch propositions at Clayton Okla. Knowing that Bro. Erwin was not authorized to officiate or perform any ministerial work I hastened to the scene of batte. The Friece train being about two hours late I arrived just in time to hear Elder Chism making his closing speech of the first session of our church proposition.

I introduced myself and informed them I was there in the interest of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. The next morning I met Mr. Chism, told him that if the debate continued he and I would have to do the work. He replied that they all look alike to me. So the night of the 17th 1 took the laboring oar, being in the affirmative. I truly felt like I was the the David and he the Goliath, for I had heard much of this man. But I knew he did not represent the kingdom of God, furthermore I knew that Campbellism could not be twisted into the religion of Jesus Christ.

Mr. Chism denied Campbell and claimed that his church was the same church that was established by Jesus Christ 1900 years ago. But we had the evidence at hand to prove that Chism's position was wrong, and all the people but about eight or ten were able to see it. Mr. Chism's first speech on his proposition was turned into a song which is generally sung by all the defenders of that church, and the song was, Pentecost, Pontecost, Pentecost, the had but a few friends left when the discussion closed. A sign was erected on the outside of the house which contained these words, "Campbellite hides ten cents apiece."

Dear Ensign:—When I first came into the church, the gospel, and especially the books were all new to me, and I asked many questions for I wanted to learn all I could. I wanted to obey everything that the Lord required of his people, and not do anything that is not pleasing to the Lord, so I asked some sisters what the Lord meant by "let all your garments be plain," they did not know nor seemingly care to know, for when I suggested that we all unite and take it to the Lord in prayer, one of them replicied, "Perhaps the Lord would want us to dress plainer that we would want to." Does that excuse us? Is it immaterial whether or not we respect the revelations the Lord has given us?

would want us these planted at the theory of the textuse us? Is it immaterial whether or not we respect the revelations the Lord has given us?

It reminds me of one of my neighbors in the east, he did not go to church because he was afraid if he heard what the Lord required of him and then didn't do it he will comit is in. Welli I took it to the Lord in prayer by mysell. I had a dream (at the time skirt and basque were the style), and in my dream I came to church and all the sisters that were there were dressed in plain skirt and basque without any ornaments or trimmings, different colors but not extreme colors. Did the Lord in that dream show what he meant by plain garments? Saya one, the beautifying work of your own hands—why you can have all the ornaments and trimmings you want it you gut them on yourself.

My dear sisters did you ever stop to think that in those days sewing mechanes had never been heard of, and all the heautilying was have by band elitching; they hem-stoked men's collars and cuffs, and home, collars, etc., on women's garmente that weney run ever the sewing machine and do the work in one hour that it took them a whole day. They also did some hem stitching. That revelation was given in 1831 while the first sewing machine was invented by Eliza Howe in 1846.

I also find that Paul said, I speak the truth and lie not,

HAMILTON, Mo., Jan. 20, Dear Ensign.—It has been a long time since I troubled your pages. We belong to the Oakland Brauch, of the Far West District. I think we have had some of the best meet-West District. I think we have had some of the occument-ings this winter I ever attended, both preaching and prayer-meetings. We had a time of rejoining at our convention the meetings. We had a time of rejoicing at our convention the 17th and 18th at Stewartsville. A prayermeeting was held each day, the Lord spoke, and all rejoiced. Through the other meetings we received much good instruction to carry back into our branches and schools.

We moved here two years ago next March, from Noda-w ay District, and are delighted with this country. We live three and one half miles from Hamilton, and four and one three and one half miles from Hamilton, and four and one half from Kingston, the county seat of Caldwell, Co., on the Burlington R. R., 70 miles northesst of Kansas City, and 50 miles east of St. Joseph. We are in a good live brauch of fifty-five members. Kingston has a brauch and a large church house, and land is good. We are six miles east of old Far West, and the foundation wall still stands, which was laid for the temple there in the thirties.

Dear Ensign:—May I again have space in your very valuable pages that I may bear testimony to this most precious and glorious faith and work of our dear Lord? It may prove a help to others for which it is my hope and desire.

In the year 1910 I was so poorly, I was a nervous wreck almost, but received promise of the Lord, that I would be almost, but received promise of the Lord, that I would be bealed, and strengthened physically, spiritually and mentally if I were faithful, but I felt so badly. I could not set my mind on the promises entirely. My mind was filled with doubts and fears, and I grieved so much because I doubted God and his goodness, and couldn't exercise more faith, and I know God heiped me and took care of me. Then our sweet baby came to us, December, 7, 1911, after which I grew so weak I was hardly able to walk across the floor at times, and was unable to teach my little ones what was right or sing or anything.

was unable to teach my more once anothing.

But Sr. Walter M. Self was such a cheering friend as she wrote me such beautiful comforting letters and they were such a help to me. I was so short of breath it seemed I would surely lose it, but Bro. Self came through our town and under his hands I was told to be of good cheer that the Lord was holding me in the hollow of his hands that overy, thing was working for my good, and that inasmuch as I was faithful, strength would be given me to take care of my children. In a few days my cough left me, but was still so weak I did kot know whether I sught to try to work or not, but in a later administration I was told that I would grow stronger if I were faithful, and my life would be preserved.

I felt so happy, and I tried to be faithful and do my duty in my little home as a mother and wife and I grew so strong and well, so I could care and do for them and I was so happy trusting in the dear Lord. It I failed in my efforts it was not the will of the spirit, it was the weakness of the Then came the death of our little sunbeam, Elmo. I am not able to say how much we missour darling. It was a sad, sad blow to us, as he was so strong and well and plump, so full of life and fun.

I may not know why death should come To take the dear one from our home; But the mine eyes with tears be dim, The Lord knows why, I'll trust in him.

I may not know why I am led So often in the paths 1 dread; But trusting him, I'll press my way, The Lord knows why, I will obey.

Since the death of our baby Elmo, as I wrote you betore I have been quite poorly again, but have found some relief and encouragement in administration, and I am trying to be cheerful and happy, as I feel I have much to hope for.

I have taken up the home department work for my children, and the Woman's Auxiliary for Social Service. dren, and the Woman's Auxiliary for Social Service. I ask an interest in your many prayers that I may soon be blessed and be strong enough to take up my duties in my homeagain, and that if it is God's will that I may me healed of all my afflictions and weaknesses. I love to labor for the cause of my Master, and I hunger and thrist in my efforts to please him and do good to all.

I think an'elder could do a good work here if one would come. He could' preach in our house, and then Bro. Willie Width water our to come and hold meetings in their school.

Dear Ensign:—It is once more that I am permitted to write a few lines for the dear old paper which brings so many precious truths from the word of God. Dear saints, this church grows brighter and brighter to me as the days go by. I am thankful that I was shown by the Lord to join this church that Joseph Smith organized. I was shown also that t was the church of God, because God set in his church aposites, prophets, pastors; teachers, deacons, elders, seventies, etc., therefore we are founded upon the solid rock held

Editor Ensign:—We have been here a few days, on our way back from Eros, Louisiana, and have been sharing the hospitality of the saints. The saints have a good church building here and the meetings held have been seasoned with the Spirit of the Lord and especially the prayer meeting Sunday afternoon. The saints are taking on new courage since Brn. Aylor and Riley visited them a few weeks ago, at which time Bro Aylor baptized nine. We were also permitted to add four more to the number since coming here. I trust that the branch may revive and that the latter day glory teu to and four more to the number since coming here. I trust that the branch may revive and that the latter day glory may shine out in the lives of the saints. Bro. E. Yoemans has rendered appreciable assistance in the neetings. May the Lord bless his efforts wherever put forth.

We go from here to Bigtork, Ark., where we shall try to feed those who have a desire to eat from the table spread by the angel over eighty years ago. Calls are numerous from various parts of the field to "come over and help us." Would that we had more laborers. If there be any saints or friends who are in need of preaching and can care for us while we preach let us hear from you.

Yours in the gospel,

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Dec. 8.

Editor Ensign:—As we have not seen anything in the silent preacher from the queen city of the Ozarks lately we wish to let the world know that we are still in the regions round about Zion. We are here in the best city and the best country on earth, right on top of the Ozark mountains in the land of the big red apple and Alberta peaches, strawberries and cream.

So far we have had no winter, the city is covered with a carpet of green grass. Stock cattle and horses are living on the pastures yet, without any other feed. We sometimes wonder why Moroni with his precious burden did not stop here and hide it up instead of going on to the land of many waters, but we believe he was directed by one who does all are going to win the nature.

As our custom has been for years on Thanksgiving night we had a rousing praise and thanksgiving service, with a goodly number of non-members out to worship with us, one Methodist minister and wife who met with us in like meeting for four years and they decided the last was the best of all, they both took an active part in the services and went away decided the last was the best of all, they both took an active part in the services and went away decided.

both took an active part in the services and went away declaring it was good to meet with the saints.

While we all hail good reason to feel thankful for the many blessings of the past year, yet we had one thing to make us all feel sad and that was the leaving of one of our young essters who was one of our best workers in every department of the church work. While our hearts were sad by her feaving us we feel that others were made glad, not hers only but the young brother's that came and took her away the evening before Thanksgiving. They came to the home of the writer armed with the necessary legal papers and demanded they twain should be made one without further delay, so Sr. Cora Richardson became the bride of Bro. Thurlo Huntsman, going with him to his home on the southern slope Huntsman, going with bim to his home on the southern slope of the Ozark mountains.

We were glad to have our district president Bro. J. F. We were glad to have our district president Bro. J. F. Cunnings am stop over with us one day and night last week. He was only passing through, and found that we were up in line and had on the breast plate of righteousness and the shield of faith, with the sword of the Spirit which is the word of God. So he went on his way rejoicing to other fields. He is a very busy man and is engaged in a great work, He reports the South Missouri District in better shape than for wears and the missingaries are all having success.

He reports the South Missouri District in better shape than for years, and the missionaries are all having success. I have calls enough myself to keep two men busy and can't fill them, having charge of the branch work here, then having to work at my trade for a living, my hands are ited. I have consented to go forty miles from home next Saturday to preach a few sermons where there is an isolated family of saints, out it is quite a sacrifice for me to do so.

Dear saints, my testimony is this work is true, and that Ged and his bolly noveled are have fair family the great parks are have fair family the great fair.

God and his holy angels are back of it and it cannot fail. We are living in the latter half of the eleventh hour and no time to lose. May the Giver of all good guide us is my prayer.

Hopefully yours, I. W. Onintey.

KINGS AND PRIESTS.

BY ELDER W. A. SINCLAIR, M. D.

Rev. 1:5.6. 'And from Jesus Christ, who is the faithful witness, and the first begotten of the dead, and the prince of the kings of the earth, unto him that loved us, and washed us from our sins in his own blood, and hath made us kings and priests unto God and his Father; to him be glory and dominion forever and ever. Amen."

There are two or three facts in this text which are very suggestive and worthy of our most careful thought. The first one is that Jesus the Christ is to be the prince or chief of the kings of the earth. Secondly, we who are faithful are to be kings and priests, and thirdly, it is through the suffering of the Christ that the possibility of our future greatness is brought about.

That the saints will be the rulers of earth's people is certainly a fact as we will very plainly demonstrate later on. That the Christ will be the great King and Ruler, is very clearly portrayed in Revelation 11:15. "And the seventh angel sounded; and there were great voices in heaven, saying:—The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of his Christ: and he shall reign forever and ever."

That he will be the supreme King over the kingdoms of this world, is stated in the song of praise as is recorded in Revelation 15:3. "And they sang the song of Moses the servant of God, and the song of the Lamb, saying; Great and marvelous are thy works, Lord God Almighty; just and true are thy ways, thou King of saints."

I cannot determine from holy writ that the saints will be possessors of territorial estates, their dominion and possessions seem to be somewhat after the character of the Levitical inheritances, while the nations will be the toilers in the daily requirements of land and workshop.

Deut. 18:1,2. "The priests the Levites, and all the taibe of Levi, shall have no part nor inheritance with Israel, they shall eat the offerings of the Lord made by fire, and his inheritance. Therefore shall they, have no inheritance among their brethren, the Lord is their inheritance, . . . as he hath said unto them.

There were no kings from this tribe, but their duties and responsibilities were greater than the king men of other tribes. However, they were given possessions known as cities of refuge; fortytwo in all.

Relative to the saints, we discover, according to our text that they were to be kings and priests, a specific division, some kings ruling over greater possessions than others, the amount of honor being determined by merit.

Daniel gives us to understand that it is the saints who shall possess the kingdom, but we shall learn later that although they do possess these kingdoms in a kingly sense, that they themselves are citizens of an altogether different kingdom. (Daniel 7:27). "And the kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose [God's] kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, aad 'all dominions shall serve and obey him"

From this rendering we would suppose that the kingdoms and dominions spoken of as "under the whole heaven," were but transitory, not eternal, but of a limited duration; hence, the suffix, "whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him."

Just how long these fractional kingdoms will exist is uncertain, but their duration is into the great eternity after the general judgment, as we will see later. All will not be equal in their ruling capacity; at least when the meritorious monarchs are placed in power there is certain distinctions as we read:—

"He said therefore, A certain nobleman went into a far country to receive for himself a kingdom, and to return. And he called his ten servants, and delivered them ten pounds, and said unto them, occupy till I come.

"But his citizens hated him, and sent a message after him, saying, we will not have this man to reign over us. And it came to pass, that when he was returned, having received the kingdom, then he commanded these servants to be called unto him, to whom he had given the money, that he might know how much every man had gained by trading.

"Then came the first, saying, Lord, thy pound hath gained ten pounds. And he said unto him, Well done, thou good servant; because thou hast been faithful in a very little, have thou authority over ten cities.

"And the second came, saying; Lord, thy pound hath gained five pounds, and he said likewise to him, Be thou also over five cities.

"And another came, saying, Lord, behold, here is thy pound, which I have kept laid up in a napkin; for I feared thee, because thou art an austere man; thou takest up that thou layedst not down, and reapest that thou didst not sow. And he said unto him, Out of thine own mouth will I judge thee, thou wicked servant. Thou knewest that I was an austere man, taking up that I laid not down, and reaping that I did not sow; wherefore then gavest not thou my money into the bank, that at my coming I might have required mine own with usury? and he said unto them that stood by, Take from him the pound, and give it to him that hath ten pounds."—Luke 19:12-24.

This suggests at least two thoughts. We are all placed in a position to improve whatever talents or qualifications we have, and a non-development of them, disqualifies us for occupancy in, or ruling over the possessions of our Lord. And to those who do use their qualifications to advantage will be given governing power proportionate to their capacity, the better qualified having the greater responsibility, hence, the greater glory.

We are to be kings and priests. It is very difficult to determine when the king period will be inaugurated, whether it precedes and passes into the great eternity, or whether it is a part of the great eternity only, however, we have a definite statement concerning the priests, who they are, and when they occupy, therefore we will leave the king problem for a while and follow this other line. Rev. 20.6, states:—"Blessed and holy is he that

Rev. 20-6, states:—"Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection; on such the second death hath no power, but they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with him a thousand years."

'And again, we bear record for we saw and heard, and this is the testimony of the gospel of Christ, concerning them who come forth in the resurrection of the just. They are they who received the testimony of Jesus, and believed on his name, and were baptized after the manner of his burial, being buried in the water in his name, and this according to the commandment which he has given, that by keeping the commandments, they might be washed and cleansed from all their sins, and receive the Holy Spirit by the laying on of the hands of him who is ordained and sealed unto this power, and who overcome by faith, and are sealed by the Holy Spirit of promise, which the Father sheds forth upon all those who are just and true; they are they who are the church of the Firstborn; they are they into whose hands the Father has given all things; they are they who are priests and kings, who have received of his fullness and of his glory, and are priests of the Most High after the order of Melchisedec, which was after the order of Enoch, which was after the order of the only begotten Son; wherefore, as it is written, they are gods, even the sons of God; wherefore, all things are theirs, whether life or death, or things present, or things to come, all are theirs, and they are Christ's, and Christ is God's, and they shall overcome all things; wherefore let no man glory in man, but rather let him glory in God, who shall subdue all enemies under his feet; these shail dwell in the presence of God and his Christ forever and ever; these are they whom he shall bring with him, when he shall come in the clouds of heaven, to reign on the earth over his people; these are they who shall have part in the first resurrection; these are they who shall come forth in the resurrection of the just; these are they who are come unto Mount Zion, and unto the city of the living God, the heavenly place. the holiest of all; these are they who have come to an in numerable company of angels; to the general assembly and the church of Enoch, and of the Firstborn; these are they whose names are written in heaven, where God and Christ are the judge of all; these are they who are just men made perfect through Jesus the mediator of the new covenant, who wrought out this perfect atonement, through the shedding of his own blood; these are they whose bodies are celestial, whose glory is that of the sun, even the glory of God the highest of all, whose glory the sun of the firmament is written of as being typical."-Doctrine and Covenants 76:5.

These are the ones who shall be priests of God and his Christ, and he makes them equal, not that they are equal, but through some process under which they shall pass they become equal. When? is beyond our knowledge, but we presume it will be by adherence to the laws of perfectness.

This is not the only class of individuals who shall be permitted to come forth in the first resurrection, for we read Doctrine and Covenants 45:10. "And then shall the heathen nations be redeemed, and they that knew no law shall have part in the first resurrection." We also read in Doctrine and Covenants 76:6, concerning certain classes who shall come forth in the terrestrial glory:

"And again, we saw the terrestrial world, and behold, and lo; these are they who are of the terrestrial, whose glory differs from that of the church of the Firstborn, who have received the fullness of the Father, even as that of the moon differs from the sun of the firmament. Behold, these are they who died without law, and also they who are the spirits of men kept in prison, whom the Son visited and preached the gospel unto them, that they might be judged according to men in the flesh, who received not the testimony of Jesus in the flesh, but afterwards received it; these are they who are the honorable men of the earth, who are blinded by the craftiness of men; these are they who receive of his glory, but not of his fullness; these are they who receive of the presence of the Son, but not of the fullness of the Father; wherefore they are bodies terrestrial, and not bodies celestial, and differ in glory as the moon differs from the sun; these are they who are not valiant in the testimony of Jesus; wherefore they obtain not the crown over e kingdom of our God."

Again we read in Matt. 25:1-12. "Then shall the kingdom of heaven be likened unto ten virgins, which took their lamps, and went forth to meet the bridegroom, and five of them were wise and five were toolish. They that were foolish took their lamps, and took no oil with them, but the wise took oil in their vessels with their lamps. While the bridegroom tarried, they all slumbered and slept, and at midnight there was a cry made, Behold, the bridegroom cometh, go ye out to meet him.

Then all those virgins arose, and trimmed their lamps, and the foolish said unto the wise, Give us of your oil, for our lamps are gone out, but the wise answered, saying, Not so; lest there be not enough for us and you; but go ye rather to them that sell, and buy for yourselves. And while they went to buy, the bridegroom came; and they that were ready went in with him to the marriage; and the door was shut.

Afterwards came also the other virgins, saying, Lord, Lord, open to us. But he answered and said, Verily I say unto you, I know you not:"

We notice here that they all arose, and all remained awakened (resurrected) but the foolish virgins had not been valiant in the testimony of Jesus, they had been partially redeemed through adherence to some of the laws of the perfect code, hence, they were permitted to come forth from their slumber, they recognized their insufficiency; the lack of oil, (spiritual light). The Inspired Translation says: "Ye know me not." 1 Corinthians, 12:3. Wherefore I give you to understand, that no man ean say that Jesus is the Lord, but by Holy Ghost. They knew him not, they were without oil, (the spirit of discernment, the Holy Ghost) therefore, they must stay without, as the heathen, and those who knew no law.

Again we read in Zechariah 14:16, after the great battle which shall take place at Jerusalem, after the Christ comes, that some of the very nations which fought against Jerusalem will be left, and this edict is sent out by the authority of Jesus Christ who is now the Lord of lords, and King of kines.

"And it shall come to pass, that every one that is left of all the nations which came against Jerusalem shall even go up from year to year to worship the King the Lord of hosts, and to keep the feast of tabernacles."

Establishing this fact, that there will be a multitude to occupy the time of the saints (priests) in teaching them the principles of righteousness, and preparing them for their graduation or exaltation,

I glean from Doctrine and Covenants, 85:27, that the righteous will be resurrected first and together with the faithful who are alive will be caught up to meet the Lord in the air. And then according to the twenty-eighth paragraph those who received the gospel of Christ in the prison house will be redeemed, not necessarily that they will be caught up to meet Jesus, but resurrected to have part in the thousand years reign.

The millennium has been ushered in, and the saints are now the teachers of the nations, the terrestrial kingdom, and probably the telestial kingdom also, though I know of no specific statement authorizing this thought; but the terrestrial most assuredly will be taught of the saints.

There may be kings appointed from the ranks of the saints at this time who will execute the laws of Christ the King of kings. Of that I am not certain, but if not, they will be appointed later.

The purpose of the millennial reign is not so much for the teaching and perfecting of the saints (to my way of thinking) as it is for the instruction and redemption of the nations outside of Zion.

It appears very clear to me that the terrestrial will slowly merge into the celestial, though ages may be occupied in their transition.

We read in Doctrine and Covenants, 76:6, latter part, speaking of the terrestrial world:—"These are they who received of the presence of the Son, but not of the fullness of the Father." This suggests the probability of their near proximity to the Son, but of an inferior standard to that occupied by those, whom the Father hath received into his bosom, those of the immediate household.

I have never read of these individuals being forever prohibited from the presence of God. Only as they remain terrestrial in their qualifications, and these, it seems to me, will be reduced to a minimum, after the full power of spiritual persuasion has been brought to bear upon them; for we read concerning them in Doctrine and Covenants, 85:28: "And after this another angel shall sound, which is the second trump; and then cometh the redemption of those who are Christ's at his coming; who have received their part in that prison which is prepared for them that they might receive the gospel, and be judged according to men in the flesh."

You will notice these are not caught up to meet Christ in the air as those who are designated as saints, but they are redeemed, brought up from the prison house, and occupy with the redeemed during the millennial reign, but in a less exalted position than the saints of God. Their redemption cometh when? after the saints are caught up, during the millennium.

Nor does their existence on the earth cease at the general judgment, for we read in Revelations, 21:24, some peculiar language intimating two classes of individuals who will be within the light of the Holy City:—"And the nations of them which are saved shall walk in the light of it, and the kings of the earth do bring their glory and honor into it."

Who are the nations that are saved? Doctrine and Covenants, 45:10: "And then shall the heathen nations be redeemed, and they that knew no law shall have part in the first resurrection." And as we read in D. and C. 85:28 those nations who occupied the prison house will be redeemed, but not sanctified: It is reasonable to suppose that they will continue along in somewhat the same relationship to the sanctified as they have been occupying for the thousand years reign, and as we have had the terrestrial along side of the celestial, a less conspicuous position for the terrestrial would be retrogression instead of progression which all the scriptures point to as the work of the hereafter, hence, they will be able to walk in the light of the holy city; but they cannot enter in, untill such time as they shall be sanctified.

Again the supposition is voiced in the following language:—Revelations, 21:27: "And there shall in no wise enter into it anything that defileth, neither whatsoever worketh abomination, or maketh a lie." Does not this presuppose that there are those characteristics manifested on the outside? That there are some people of a different standard on the outside? If it does not, who or what does it mean?

Again in further substantiation of this theory, we read Revelations, 22:2: "In the midst of the street of it, and on either side of the river, was there the tree of life, which bare twelve manner of fruits, and yielded her fruit every month; and the leaves of the tree were for the healing of the nations."

What nations or people are there beside the saints, or who are the nations that will be there who will not be entitled to the fruit of the tree, and must be satisfied with the leaves?

It is not the saints of God, the Church of the Firstborn; for they are to be kings and priests, and it distinctly states that "The kings of the earth do bring their glory and bonor into it." Revelations, 21:24; and again in the twenty-seventh verse it shows that none shall go into the holy city, "but they which are written in the Lamb's book of life." And in Reveiations, 22:2, the twelve manner of fruits, produced every month must be for those who occupy the holy city, the saints of God.

The nations who are saved, but restricted in their privileges cannot be the saints of God for he (God) makes them (the saints) equal in might, in power, and in dominion. And in Revelations, 22:14, it makes the specifications distinctly clear:—"Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they might have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city." Who keeps God's commandments? only his saints, they who are his saints indeed, lively stones, the temples of God, the elect.

Summing up our remarks, we discover that the saints of God will be kings and priests, to rule over, and teach the nations. That there will be at least two kingdoms exhibited during the millenial reign, and a strong supposition that the terrestrial glory will still remain on the redeemed earth. That they will be permitted to walk in the light of the holy city. That the terrestrial will feed on the leaves of the tree of life, but the saints will have access to the fruit of the tree. The terrestrial will be outside of the holy city, but the saints will be permitted to go in and out. Let us live so that we may be rulers and teachers, and not have to be prisoners and subordinates.

THE CRUCIFIXION OF CHRIST AND THE ATONEMENT.

The following comment is based upon four questions which have been propounded to the writer as

- What place, if any, does the crucifixion of Christ have in the atonement?
- 2. Would the words of Christ when given place and expression in the lives of the people bring about their redemption, or would those words become effectual only upon the condition that he be crucified?
- 3. Was it the Father's wish or will, or plan that Christ should be crucified?
- 4. Upon whom rests the responsibility for his death?

I am quite sensible of my inability to impress my own conclusions as sufficient answer thereto, upon those whose range of research into intellectual or even moral fields of inquiry as judged by conventional or even ordinary processes of reasoning, or standard of evidence might require.

In reply to the first question, I have this to say, that that which we have been taught to revere as coming from God through the Holy Ghost and as referred to by Peter; 2 Peter I:21, was an authoritative and dependable statement, I have in the past, and do still believe. Note also, 1 Peter, 1:18.20, also 4:1, and in connection with which in this last statement I wish to say that I am supposing that it is the mind of Christ upon this subject which we wish to have discussed and that neither, a superficial or a purely materialistic argument based upon the letter of the word alone will furnish ground for safe conclusion.

First it seems worthy of thought that the Jewish scripture which gives account of the ceremonial law and sacrifice endorsed by Jehovah as an expediency or a means to a great end, should be considered. Educational processes leading up to great conclusions are often had by circumlocutous routes; to reach the promised land is still a roundabout, and in the light of history, a journey of needless suffering, save for lack of superior motive and direction and the "school master" that ultimately brings "us to Christ" cannot as yet be discharged it would very plainly appear.

Attention is called to Luke 24:44-46, also 22:20; Matt. 4:4; Matt. 39; and also in this connection, 1 John, 1:7; Rev. 12:11 and 7:14; Rev. 5:9; Rev. 1:5; Heb. 10:1-10 and Heb. 9:22 26 and in the Book of Mormon, Helaman 2; Mosiah 1; Alma 19; Moroni 10, in the last exhortation; D. C. 76:5 and Apostle James 1:21. In conclusion as to references in the "word" and of which I may inquire; are these references safe to build upon as reflecting the mind of Jehovah and of Christ, his Son? See D. C. 17:23. I have heard in opposition that human sentiment and reason opposes as contradictory as to neccesity or justice. We are told we are "saved by his life" etc.

One brother admitted to us the necessity of Christ's death in order to be able to demonstrate a physical resurrection; but that he might have died of small-pox and fulfilled his mission just the same.

The time may have been in my experience that my insistence that everything that could not get past my powers of reasoning; was to be rejected as unsafe; but I am frank to say that I think my reasoning processes have somewhat improved, though I may not be able to make it appear to others.

Sin1 "transgression of law" by mortals in this mundane sphere is the most tremendous problem that confronts humanity today. The higher up a man gets in life's experiences the more tremende ously does he become impressed with the fact that he is an ignorant, or willful sinner, and my experience is that through an educational process not furnished by earthly or carnal teachers that that fine sensitiveness to the damage that sin can inflict upon a mortal soil cannot be stated in any language known to mortals, and the very clumsiness and inadequacy of statement through the limitations of human speech have been one of the potential barriers to reception of adequate interpretation of the principle of a judgment which is eternal and final, as well as just and merciful.

But under the light of experience such as Alma and David and Paul,—and shall I say myself,—we may learn what HELL really is like and of the true nature of its suffering and penalties.

As a young skeptic, I was reared in the idea that natures law was inexorable, and furnished no ground for hope of escape from its penaltics for its refraction, and I still so believe. Mercy has no name or standing in her courts. The "soul that sinneth" dies, that's the primeval edict and curse, but why did God start things that way, if there was not something in his mind to follow?

To bring about a higher and finer sense and order of life, "the light that lighteneth every man that cometh into the world," was introduced, and as Alma has it, "to bring to pass the powers of series," the plan as illustrated in the offering consented to by God as a practical illustration of an additional and superhuman quality of mercy and the vicarious accomplishment of his great mission.

Before the gospel processes had commenced their operations upon my mind and heart, I held no allegiance toward any God or gods. A measurable fear of parental authority, or of man made law might and did have restraint without doubt, but a sinner in the gospel sense I was not conscious of being. The development of that fine sense of living began and proceeded until I found myself face to face with a fact that I was, or had become a double, -like the Siamese twins. A hunger for righteousness and truth had seized me and the old life with some of those features that seemed quite tame before, now became unspeakably nause-ating and hateful. This then I recognized and still hold was a divine process, but like Paul. I still found my new self chained to the "old man," the carnal, ignorant, sinful soul. In other words memory is an integral part of ourselves-without it man ceases to be an intelligent entity in fact. The sins of ignorance afflict, and torment; heredity and environment effect him just the same but, "who did sin? this man or his parents," the carnal, the natural man says, "both you and your parents, there is no remedy for the past." But Christ appears and his gospel through faith and obedience furnishes a cure. Thus and in this sense, "He bore our sins on a tree."

"They shall no more say the fathers have eaten sour grapes and the children's teeth are on edge," for premeditated sins man must still die: but for the other kind the Creator of all has introduced a higher law. "The law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus," which Paul has said, frees us from "the law of sin and death."

Of course, I may say that we are still handicapped in the process of successful expression of an ideal life, through ignorance or willful violation of the laws of our physical, moral, and spiritual being, and we have to learn from our latter day physiologists in "physical culture," etc, the comparatively new lesson of "gloifying God in our body," as well as "our spirits, which are his," and which Jesus Christ sought to introduce in the early organization of his church in our day, through "a word of wisdom," as yet so little heeded by, perhaps a majority of the people that could, or should have been benefitted by its observations in their lives. It is impossible for grossly, imperfectly; mentally constituted beings to appropriate and realize a perfect law or rule of conduct in life, hence "Zion the perfection of beauty" seems still very largely to many of us, "an irridescent dream." Still I think we are crawling along some.

In conclusion another thought as to the "rationale" of atonement may be referred to in a brief word. The doctrine of substitution for another's fault has its forcible illustration to my mind, in the following out, if only in a partial fragmentary or incomplete exposition in human history, by the following had in this direction of our "Leader and Commander" by the thousands whose impulses and lives have been quickened by his notable example, into exhibitions of love or through charity to which simple or bare justice may be a total stranger. For example, you and I have given, have we not, to beggars and unfortunates through their own ignorance and perversity, a helping hand; an absolutely altruistic service-mercy-giving without hope of recompense. Eliminate these qualities from our future history and where will this old world be "AT."

We have a few elevated, progressive minds already in the church who place their interest, for example, in the study of Shakespeare and other authorities in preference to the Bible or books of the church, but if you will read in Shakespeare's "Merchants of Venice," Act 4, Scene 1, the speech of Portia to Shylock, you will understand what I

This much in a fragmentary way in regard to questions one, two, and three. In answer to question four, I would say that the responsibility for the crucifixion of Christ is seen in the history of the Jews as a nation, in her continuous scenes of tribu-lation and persecution. "We have no King but lation and persecution. Caesar," and his successors in human government have bathed their swords in the nation's blood and the end is not as yet, but, near perhaps, and their case, however is not without remedy, for God's mercy endureth forever."

Read in this connection Acts 3:17-21. When this new covenant spoken of by Jeremiah 31st chapter, a covenant which we as a people have received in our day, is delivered to the Jew, not many years hence, the day of their deliverance and for giveness will come to them.

I might add, that if our position is to be denied in teaching, it should also be ignored in "practice."

In par. 7. Sec. 17 D. C., the necessity for baptism is affirmed by commandment. The mode we need not diocuss, but I would say that under the rule of simply human logic, there is no more warrant for water baptism of any kind, than there is for the theory of life or blood atonement. Belief in both, with meare predictaed upon spiritual teaching, and evidence as well as human reason, and for me to administer as minister for Christ the sacrificial emblem contained in the cup, while repudiating its clearly expressed intent, savors at least of hypocisy-if not of sacrilegious service.-D. C. 17:23.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR CORRESPONDENTS.

G. P. Hill, Bristow, Iowa.—I am sending 50 cents to re-new my subscription. Am not a member but have taken the Enston two years and like it very much. Why don't some of the elders ever come through her? I don't think any have ever been in this part of the country.

Agnes Butler, R. 2, Bath, Ill .- Please renew my sub scription to Zion's Ensign one year. I am a non-member but love to read the sermons and letters, and receive much benefit from its pages.

James C. Page, Logan, N. D.-I have been at home for two months on account of the sickness of my wife, but am back in the field again and find much more than I can do; wish I had ten elders to assist here this winter I wish tha Ensign much success. I still enjoy reading its pages and like to get subscribers for it.

Ralph Stanley, Gladstone, Ill .- I never had the privilege of attending church much, and am always glad to hear from the brethren in different places, and ask the prayers of all that I may overcome my weaknesses and live as well as I know the truth.

Mrs. Olive Hubbard, Olathe, Col.-I do so much enjoy reading all the good letters from the saints, as it seems like reading an the good retrest room the same, as it seems like being in a prayermeeting and hearing testimonies; We live so far away from the branch that we can't get to the Wednesday evening prayermeetings. Ohl how I miss them and feel the need of them in order to gain the spiritual strength to come up higher and kerp my covenant. We were recently called to mourn the loss of our branch priest, Bro. B. H. Blower. He was so faithful, we miss him so much. One of blower He was a lamin, we miss min so much. One on his children, Florence, is crippled with infantine paralysis and is unable to run or play like other children. I request the saints to pray for her as she desires to be healed and has great faith in God.

Anna E. Culbertson, Springview, Neb.-We welcome the Ensure with its good news of the restored gospel. I hope I may be able to so live that I may overcome all evil and be among the redeemed when Jesus comes.

Anna Hollandsworth, Claremore, Okla.-We are Anna Hollandsworth, Claremore, Okla.—We are num-bered among the isolated ones and the Enstoin is all the preacher we have. We came here about four weeks ago and have not heard of any Latter Day Santshere. If any of the elders come this way I should be glad for them to give us a call; it may be the cause of getting the good work started

Mrs. Florance Masterson, R. 1. Hume, Mo.—We have moved back to one old home near Metz, Mo. from Bronson, Kansas. There we only a few saints here, our family and our daughter o family being all. Another dear sister, Sr. Rosa McDowell was taken from us by death the 8th of December. We are apxious to do all we can to advance the Lord's work, but we are poor in this world's goods and cannot do much in a financial way, but are always glad to share our home with any of the elders that come this way and do all we can to get them a place to preach in. We think some are interested and would obey if they could hear more

J. W., Whiteaker, Bell Conter, Wis.—Wite and I are isolated from church privileges, being seven miles from church, and are old—69 and 67, so we like to read the letters and sermons, and love to hear from the saints. Our hearts are in this work. We ask the prayers of the saints.

Haunah E. Davis, Evening Shade, Ark.—I am away from church privileges though I hope I shall not always be. I ask the saints to pray for me. May the Lord bless all.

Josie Helms, Sweet Lake, La,-I enjoyed the Thanks giving address of our worthy president, also Sr. Rosa Pitt's to get out to enjoy fresh air and sunshine, and now as Christmas is nearing I am here sorrowing because I can't send an offering for Christ's sake. I ask an interest in your prayers that if it please the dear Lord that I may yet be blessed with health again. My family also needs your prayers.

Mrs. J. R. Richardson, Arch. Okia.—My husband had a stroke of paralysis in April and hasn't been able to walk good since, and we desire the prayers of all of God's people that he may be healed. Our little son and I are our only dependence to make our living and I am not very well. We are strong in the faith and am glad to say I belong to the true church. I want to live up to the gospel law.

J. Mark Mink, Norwood, Mo .-- Bro. J. W. DuBose to my hum: three miles south of Norwood on the 1st of Dec. and held meetings at my house lasting one week with good interest, and we think some good was done, but owing to bad weather had to discontinue his meetings. I believe that with more preaching more good can be done here for some are very near the kingdom.

John Shifflett, Alma, Ark .-- Bro. Gwyer and family and 1 came down from the Lowell Branch to gain health, and try to make a living. I have served twelve years in the Lord's vineyard and am not discouraged but worn out, and am compelled to stop on account of throat trouble. I am a volun-teer soldier and know that I have to lay my armor by on account of old age. I was born in 1844 in north Missouri and if I can live till next September I will draw a state pension of $100 a year. I can make it alright then. My clothes are scarce and any help will be thankfully received. Missionaries passing through may find a stopping place and a school house to preach in. Am six miles east of VanBuren, two west of Alma on the Iron Mountain R. R. Route 4, Catherine Aldridge, Springfield, S. Dak,-As I can sit up today I will renew my subscription. I have been unable to attend to it, and I cannot do without the good paper. God bless it and all the workers is my prayer. I am 73 years old and very feeble, and ask an interest in the prayers of all God's children.

Martha Ellis, Bungay, Ill .-- We love your weekly visits. I take the Ensian and my daughter takes the Herald, and Autumn Leaves, and we feel like we couldn't get along without them. Dear Saints: I am one that wants to serve my Master for I know this work is true. I have had my prayers answered time after time, and the Lord has made things known to me many times. I need your prayers.

J. L. Rust, Gladstone, Ill.—I am isolated and alone like David in the fight with Goliath. The small stone of God's David in the igns with Commin. The similar stone of odd a truth and the favor of God's grace is all one needs to upset error. I feel to thank the Lord for his graciousness toward me for health and strength. I am 25 w 75 and built a large house and barn this fall walking two miles morning and evening.

Elizabeth Jeffries, Alpin. W. Va.-The letters and sermons are food for the hungry soul. I see the church, or our family, as I call it, is in debt. As one of the family I want to help what I can, though I am poor and old, not able to work much, but am willing to sacrifice and help lift the

Mrs. Matson, Chetopa, Kas.-I rejoice as I read so many grand letters from saints of different parts of the world. I am striving daily to shun the pleasures of the world and cling close to the rod of iron. Pray for our family, especially my comparion who has lost his interest in the work. May God belp him to see the light. My prayers are for the young.
Our home is open any time to take care of the elders, and if any pass through be sure and stop and see us. We live just east of the M. K. & T. depotand run a grocery and restaurant. We can have prayermeeting if no other meeting. I believe there are some here that will accept in the near future. I have been talking and giving out literature. Best regards to the Fontanelle and Nevada saints, and I yearn after those good meetings.

Mrs. Mary Dunshee, Bendon, Mich .- Bro, F. S. Brack enbury is here-holding a few meetings. The crowds are small but there is good attention. How I wish we could get the people out that the house might be full.

James W. Farrow, Independence, Mo. when eight years old and am strong in the true gospel. I have been blessed in sickness and were it not for the hand of the Lord I would not now be in this world. We ought to let our light shine and try to bring others to the light of the gospel of Christ.

Sr. J. E. Bogie, Highe, Mo .- My little boy attended the Sr. J. E. Bogie, Higge, and,—my mue by microsimal L. D. S. Sunday school, and a dear old sister next door to the church came to me with a few Enstens that were to me like meat to a starved man. She took great pains to tell me the old, old story which was sweet to me. I could scarcely wait from one visit to another. Then I saw in a dream the man who, was to baptize me, though I had never known him. I was baptized May 24th, 1919, and many times I have hear blessed. Pray for me. been blessed. Pray for me.

HARRISON, Ohio, Jan. 10.

Harrison, Ohio, Jan. 10.

Dear Ensign:—I feel like I ought to write a few lines to the dear old Ension as I am all alone tonight, the rest all being gone to Cincianati. I have been reading the "Two Story Book" and feel like I must write. There are no sairts anywhere in this country or Cincinnati that I know of. Every block in Cincinnati has a mission and I have been redressed out of them while talling children to sair the kies. ordered out of them while telling folks how to enter the kingdom. I sent and got several kinds of tracts and gave to them whom I thought were honest, but they would not read them and called me Mormon.

I do ask the saints to pray for me as I know the prayers be dear saints can help me. I know the work is true and I will do all mankind can do to get back into the kingdom of God. I will make every effort I can, and ask the saints who w me to help me.

Well, I think I found one family in Cincinnati who will obey the gospel when they have the opportunity. They read the tracts and want more, and said that was what they be-lieved. Pray for me. I am still in the one faith.

Bditor Ensign:—Will you allow me a little space in your valuable paper. It is a help to me when I read the articles and letters. Sometimes when I am all alone reading of the good things and trying to study the gospel I am made to feel so happy, and again when I think of us having no meetings hardly and my white region. and my children going to other churches and not having the gospel taught to them only what I teach them, I am very sad.

gospai taught to them only wind I teach them, I am very sad.
I think we sainte here ought to wake up to our duty more.
I was appointed on the tract committee to distribute to the committee to distribute the case of the committee to the committee to the committee to the committee the committee of the committee o might bless me both spiritually and physically if it be his will and that I might live to raise my children and be of some use in his work. I am very weak.

I want to say I feel thankful to the Lord for what he has done for me in the past, up to the present, and I want to live worthy of his blessings in the future.

THE PARENT-TEACHER MOVEMENT IN KANSAS CITY.

On Monday, January 26th, Kansas City members of this association met in the boardroom of the public library building. They specially discussed the moving picture situation, since "the first mention of them (the moving picture) brought so many speakers to their feet, not all could be heard. It was an unexpected evidence of the mothers' recognition of the influence the films exert on the lives of their children. All agreed that only through an aroused public sentiment, could the parents and teachers obtain the changes they desired in the moving picture programs."

'Members of the parent-teachers association propose to create a public demand for shows that will not be detrimental to children." Managers are to be interviewed and protests filed until all the film shows agree to arrange programs especially adapted for children for certain evenings of the

This plan has already been tried at times, "but the managers have difficulty in obtaining suitable subjects and the attendance has not always com-pensated for the trouble." And herein lies food for thought.

While these efforts of the Kansas City mothers in behalf of the mental, moral, and physical welfare of their children, are commendable, and are a step in the right direction,—still these parents and teachers will be pledged to "make the entertainments a success," and in order to do this, they will have to spend more time and money along this ne of entertainment, compared to what will be spent for other pleasures just as healthful for mind and more so for the body. Children and young people will have to be out at night when they should not be away from home, as a rule. The plan will likely have to be carried to an extreme in order to hold the managers of these plays to their contracts to furnish child, or childish productions twice a week. However time will tell.

Meanwhile we shall hope for some systematic, educational course, of moving pictures, to be displayed in schools, or elsewhere than the theatre,and for which we may reserve some of our spare time and nickles to be spent occasionally and within reason. The parent-teacher associations can bring about this course of action as soon, if not sooner than any other body. Its influence in towns The parent-teacher associations can and cities will soon be unmeasured. But the parents must co-operate; and associate with the teachers.

We have made our quotations from an article in the Kansas City Times for January 27th. The closing paragraphs are as follows:

The members at the conference also discussed methods of disseminating sex-hygiene instruction and a committee will be appointed by the chairman of the conference to arrange for a lecture at some hall in the center of the city where parents may be advised in the handling of this topic. Mothers To Choose Schoolmen.

Mrs. A. L. Yingling of the Columbian School, Independence, told the members the Parent-Teachers associations in Independence were selecting men they deemed desirable as members of the future boards of education and intended to work for these candidates, believing it a movement in the interests of the schools.

"We will try to get active, wide-awake, educational workers on the board this spring,"she said. "We are not suffragettes, but we think we have some influence with some of the voters and we intend to use it in the best interests."

THE DANGER OF SELFISHNESS.

It was Spurgeon who said "We carry our worst enemies within us," and perhaps the worst of all such enemies is selfishness. It is the first trait of evil which manifests itself in the child, and the most difficult that parents have to deal with. Its manifestations are varied and cover a multitude of other evils which work according to opportunity and environment. Some of its characteris-tics are covetousness, indolence, worldliness, vanity, lust, gluttony, drunkenness, extrava-gance, disregard of the rights or comforts of others, and many more. Paul expressed its absolute evil when he said: "The love of money is the root of all evil," and were we to trace the extent of all the evils which have their upspringing in selfishness, its real character would become ap-

Touching one phase of this evil, Carist said: "Take heed and beware of covetousness: for a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth," and Paul says that they who are possessed of it shall not inherit the kingdom of heaven. Peter speaks of covetousness as being one of the causes of the apostasy of the ancient church, and in describing the condition of apostate Christianity Paul says among other things that men "shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, * * * inconti-nent, * * * heady, highminded, lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God; having a form of Godliness, but denying the power thereof," all of which are but manifestations of the selfish spirit.

The man in business who permits selfishness to rule in his nature will always seek the best of a bargain even though it causes another to suffer loss. He will demand the highest price for his merchandise which the necessities of his customers and their ability to pay will permit notwithstanding his covetousness causes poverty and suffering. He is liable to exaggerate the good points and minimize or hide the bad points of what he has to dispose of and thus by deception increase his profits at the expense of the unsuspecting; or he will adulterate various articles causing unconscious financial loss to others, and perhaps broken health.

In social life the selfish man will seek the best places of honor, ease, or comfort, while others equally worthy and having greater need are left with inferior advantages or are deprived alto-gether. In political and official life every advan-tage will be aken over an opponent to defeat him and advance self. And so in all the walks of life, when the spirit of selfishness is permitted to dominate, the individual will be found following a a course which works ill to his fellow men, and seeming good to himself.

But what are the gains of wealth, of office, of power, or passing pleasure, secured through selfishness, compared with the honor, integrity, and benevolence of character lost in their acqusition? Under this evil a man becomes in his own consciousness the center of all things. So far as in his power all things must work for his own interests and for his gratification, and whatever or whoever stands in his way must, regardless of their interests or rights, be brought to help him in the attainment of his purposes. It "destroys all tender sympathies, and is fatal not only to the welfare but to the happiness of him who cherishes it."

Selfishness tends to crush out every good qua!ity of character; it will cause a man to "make merchandise of" his fellows as stated by Peter: it makes him his own god and he not only worships at the alter of self but sacrifices the welfare of others to his own idolatry. It is a wall which hides from him the good of life, he sees little of good in others, and they are desired only as they answer his own ends. He becomes a pessimist. He may have pleasure in gratification, but to joy he is a stranger. Faith, hope, and charity die out from his life, and the future is dark.

The Lord used no idle terms when he said: "Take heed," "Beware," and the Scriptures warn men against this evil in various forms. But more than this, there are set forth the qualities of righteousness, and the promise of divine help, by which its presence may be removed from the hearts of men. The acquirement of love, benevolence, virtue, temperance, brotherly kindness, and charity, as taught by the apostle will subdue selfishness. The application of the "Golden Rule," which Christ says is based upon the law and the prophets: "Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them," would eliminate it from the world.

As one of the causes and conditions of the apostasy, the restoration of the gospel cannot be made effectual among men until this evil is subdued and the higher qualities of universal love and benevolence are developed and applied in all the affairs of life. The failure to apply these gospel principles, the Lord states, was one of the causes of the failure to redeem Zion in former years.

There is a necessity for each man to judge his own impulses and actions, and work to strengthen the good and subdue the evil. To bring the "will of the flesh" into subjection to the divine law will require self-sacrifice, but every such sacrifice made will lift him to a higher plane where real joy abounds and is perpetual. As Tennyson writes:

"I hold, in truth, with him who sings
That men may rise on stepping-stones
To one clear harp in divers tones,
Of their dead selves to higher things."
When a man has overcome self he has overcome the world, and the greatest promises God has made ere his; he "shall inherit all things; and I will be his God, and he shall be my son."—Rev.

A STEP FORWARD.

The installation of a new Intertype machine by the Ensign puts the office in line with the progress of the age, and equips it for better service. Progress is the order of the day in every line of industry and work, and each step forward creates new demands requiring that further progress be made. Like an army, society as a whole must keep step in the march onward if its aims are to be attained without friction and confusion and delay. For this reason it is desired that our correspondents and writers furnish the best copy that they can, writing clearly and distinctly, upon good paper, and leaving reasonable space between lines, writing only upon one side of the paper. Imperfect copy often causes mistakes which not only takes the time of the operators but takes the time of valuable machinery in correcting, all of which causes unnecessary expense. Any co-operation which may be given in this way will be appreciated, and will make the work of the publishing house more effectual.

THE DRINK EVIL.

While the country is awakening to the evil effects of the liquor traffic and taking measures in many places to suppress it, the evil is still of sufficient extent to demand the attention and effort of all good people. Of the one hundred and fourteen counties in Missouri, ninety-one are "dry," but the twenty-three "wet" counties still have a demoralizing effect upon a large part of the state. Could the indifferent citizens see the extent of the crime which is traceable to drinking he would undoubtedly use his influence toward suppressing the evil.

Statistics for Missouri are not at hand, but last October, according to the "Kansas City Star," Eugene N. Foss, then governor of Massachusetts, said: "Last year two-thirds of all our commitments to jails, houses of correction and state penal institutions were for drunkenness and for default of fines imposed for drunkenness. These numbered 18,564. While only two-thirds of the commitments were directly for drunkenness, nevertheless out of our entire number of commitments, in 95 per cent of the cases the prisoner is reported to be of intemperate habits.'

Considering the squalid poverty and suffering of thousands of women and children, and a multiplicity of other evils which never reach to the courts, it appears that the above figures represent but a small part of the harvest of evil resulting from the liquor business. Many railroads and other corporations, knowing the danger to property and life through accidents resulting from drunkenness will no longer employ men who drink, even moderately.

Recently the Philadelphia Quartz Company of Chester, Pa., offered to increase the pay of employees 10 per cent who were total abstainers from drink. Thus the distinction is being made between the drinker and non-drinker. There is much being said now-a-days of higher efficiency, and the times demand it, and the men of business have awakened to the fact that efficiency cannot be had where intoxicating liquors are used even in moderate degree. They are demanding that the one thing which makes for inefficiency be put away. When the nation at large awakens to the fact that drink is the greatest obstacle to efficiency in citizenship, and the greatest hindrance to the progress of the age, then public sentiment will be sufficiently strong against the evil tosweep it from the face of the land.

INDIANS IN THE UNITED STATES.

On June 30, 1913, there were a total of 330,603 Indians in the United States including the freedmen and those of mixed blood. During the fiscal year ending June 30, 1913, the government spent on account of the Indians $17,996,065.88. amount $4,015,720.00 were for schools. The government supports 111 boarding schools and 223 day schools, in addition to which there are 57 mission schools supported by religious bodies.

ON PERSECUTION.

Do you pretend that a man can go before the public and misrepresent the Christian religion, slander the character of its great men, misrepresent his opponent, misquote and interlope the Scriptures without putting his own character for veracity and sincerity on trial before the common sense of an honest public? True, a solid argument is not in itself strengthened or weakened by the good or bad character of him who makes it, but when he has recourse to calumny, vilification, misrepresentation, to foul and false libels against God and man, people will believe he does so for want of argument and they are right.—Rev. L. A. Lambert, in Tactics of Infidels.

To be useful as a Christian, a man must keep himself free from all malign feelings, from all bitterness of re-sentment. Even righteous indignation must not drag Lov-from her tiltone. Over all the soul's passions Love must preside in serene majesty. The Christian worker must sentment. Even righteous indignation must not drag Love-from her throne. Over all the soull's passions Love must preside in screne majesty. The Christian worker must learn (and the sooner the better) if he has not alreedy learned, that there is something better for a Christian than to plan revenge, and nurse resentment, and call down five from heaven, even on those who show themselves base and unworthy.—Prof. Ballard.

The Sunday morning service was devoted to the interests of the young, an address being given by Elder D. J. Krahl, followed by Elder W. O. Hands who spoke of the boy scout movement and its work. The first speaker emphasized the necessity of service in behalf of others, and the second the necessity and means of preparation such service.

The usual morning and afternoon prayer services were held, and at 4:15 the united choirs held their monthly rehearsal. Elder Joseph Luff was the evening speaker and gave excellent instruction to the saints and non-

Saints or friends in Independence or outside, having unused musical instruments in their homes, have a golden opportunity of helping worthy boys and girls secure a musical education by donating their instruments to the Sunday school which in turn will place them in the hands of worthy and willing pupils. A number have been helped in this way and others would gladly take up the work if opportunity afforded. Those in charge of the music of the school have arranged to furnish free lessons to such pupils thus helping along those who would not otherwise have an opportunity. The afternoon prayer meeting was very well attended, and was enjoyed by those present, as manifested by the prompt action of the saints taking part. At 7:30 p. m. Bro. A. H. Parsons was the speaker, urging the saints to be diligent in all things, especially in the service of the Master, for to be slothful and unprofitable would merit condemnation, and for one to be condemned means merit condemnation, and for one to be condemned means disaster. In all things give diligence so that the appro-bation of the Son of God at his appearance shall be man-ifested, for to have his approval of our doings while we are permitted to remain here is worth all else. So be diligent in all things.

Monday evening was the regular priesthood meeting and quite a goodly number were present and took an active part. The subject for consideration was "Prayer." T. Curtis gave quite a lengthy analysis of the subject followed by general discussion. subject followed by general discussion. A vote was taken in favor of continuing the same subject at the next

Some time ago our branch appointed a finance committee of three, Brn. P. I. Rogers, Robert Beadnall and the writer, to circulate a subscription paper to raise money to pay off our church debt. Bro. "Life is real, life is earnest! And the grave is not its goal. Dust thou art to dust returneth Was not spoken of the soul."

How many are supplying this wonderful engine, the body, with the proper fuel, in order to make the best progress in life? Judging from the enormous amount of meats, rich pastries, unnameable puddings and salads consumed, it is not strange that this delicate and intricate piece of mechanism is often clorged, over-loaded, sidetracked and laid up for repairs. Do we, as the small boy said when feasting on sweet meats, "live to eat" or "eat to live" in the higher sense of the word?

in presenting the gospel to us during the last six weeks or more; among them two of our young brethren who were lately ordained to the office of priest,—Brn. Roy Drown and Amasa Shimel.

KANSAS CITY, FOURTH BRANCH.

Sunday, February 1st, our branch closed a two weeks' meeting which was very satisfactory to all, Bro. George Jenkins being the speaker with good liberty to fair audiences, there being more outsiders present than ever before in the history of our little branch. All expressed themselves as being well pleased with the sermons. Bro. John Zahnd occupied one evening with good liberty. We feel that our branch is in a prosperous condition. Spaully, there seems to be an awakening, those taking Spiritof the work that had seldom been heard in our meetings,

At our last election of Sunday school officers the fol-lowing were elected: Sr. A. V. Armstrong superintend-ent, Elmer St. John assistant superintendent, Anna Sevent, Emer os. John assistant supermendent, Anna severin secretary, F. O. Branham treasurer, C. W. Brown library committeeman, W. L. Vail chorister, Sr. F. O. Branham organist. Sr. Bertha Vail was appointed superintendent of the cradle roll. There have been a number of our scholars detained at home lately on account of sickness.

Our Religio is prospering again under the management of our newly elected officers, which are as follows: C. L. Munro president, F. O. Branham vice president, Bertha Vail secretary, George Johnson treasurer, Sr. Barron home class superintendent, Louisa Vail library commit-teeman, W. L. Vail chorister, Sr. F. O. Branham organist.

Sunday, February 8th, our Stake Sunday school super-intendent, Bro. Corthell, was with us, occupying the morning hour on Sunday school work, which was very instructive.

The evening hour was occupied by Bro. J. C. Severin, taking his text from the 24th chapter of Matthew. He spoke to the edification of all present.

As you go out over the broad expanse of earth with As you go out over the broad expanse of earth with your message of love and peace—the angel message—we felt we would like to let your many readers know that we are happy in the gospel here. Under the missionary efforts of Bro. S. M. Reiste a new zeal for the work has sprung up, and there is added life to the work. Already signs of growth in the new converts to the faith are noted. Since our talented brother came and worked, eleven have been carried into the waters of baptism, ten by him and one by our branch president.

He expects to go from here to Santa Rosa; but more baptisms may occur here yet before he goes. There is an ingathering caused by we think a simple preaching of the gospel principles in power and humility by himself and others with the missionary spirit.

Those here of late helping to promote righteousness were Brn. H. J. Davison, J. M. Terry and Apostle F. M. Sheehv.

CORRESPONDENCE

Houston, Texas, Jan. 27.

Editor Ensign:—My last message to you was in July; since then the new year has dawned and many changes made in the affairs of life. I am glad to report a contin-uation of good health and determination to abide in the faith.

By letter I learn of the death of my friend and co-laborer in the gospel work, Bro. J. M. Crawford of Cliburne, Texas. He died December 24th from cancer. Bro. Craw-Texas. He died December 24th from cancer. Bro. Crawford held the office of priest and was very devoted to the latter day work. Though poor in this world's goods he was rich in the faith and lived a faithful, consistent life. The missionaries of Texas and Oklahoma will remember Bro. Crawford and his cheerful willingness with "Old John," and the buggy to carry them to places of gospel labor. This was his joy and delight. The gospel of Christ was the comfort of his life. He was patient during his last days of affliction and died in strong hope of a "better resurrection." "hetter resurrection."

I also notice the account of the death of Bro. Jeptha

Scott, our friend, neighbor and co-laborer for years in Oklahoma. There was another of earth's humble pilgrims —poor in this world's goods but rich in faith and true devotion to the Lord. While we chronicle the dark picture of death which has taken these two faithful ones, yet we feel a spark of joy and comfort in recording the fact that they continued faithful to their God under conditions that were many times severe and hard to endure; which leaves to us the cheering testimony of their loyalty to the truth, and should serve as an encouragement to us all to be faithful in our efforts.

The words of our Master applies to our day, as well as to other days: "Because iniquity shall abound, the love of many shall wax cold, but he that shall endure unto the end the same shall be saved." The love of these unto the end the same shall be saved." The love of these brethren did not wax cold, though they were severely tried. It is not so difficult to worship God and conform to the gospel law under favorable conditions, but it requires some effort and courage, some powers of endurance to continue joyous and happy, faithful and true, zealous and active in conforming to Christian duties when everything seems to go wrong. The person who is not willing or able to cheerfully abide the crucible of the fire of life's testing process, should not complain if deprived of basking in the sunlight glory of the New Jerusalem. Recently I have performed some gospel labor.. Have Recently I have performed some gospel moor. Any visited Hartburg twice and aroused some interest. Bro. Will Millner and wife and Ellis Ford and family are faithfully earing for the interest of our cause at Hartburg. They are good saints. I also visited the few saints at Port Arthur; gave them what encouragement I could in the gospel service. Last Sunday I was welcomed to Houston. Occupied the pulpit morning and evening to my own encouragement and satisfaction of those present. I am being kindly cared for at the home of Bro. Albert Banta, formerly of Lamoni. He lives at 315 W. 13th Ave., Houston Heights. Sr. Banta's brother, L. H. Pitkin makes his home with them. It was my pleasure to confirm Bro. Pitkin a member of the church several years ago at Lamoni. He is a fine young man. Like many other Lamoni. He is a fine young man. Like many other saints they have been isolated from church privileges and would be benefited by gospel influences.

In closing I send love and best wishes to the "Ensign" for joyous success; that your message to Israel may be uplifting, encouraging and spiritual, that great good may accomplished the coming year. oming year. In gospel bonds, R. M. Maloney.

Welland, Ont., Jan. 12.

Dear Ensign:—I have so much enjoyed the letters in the Ensign since obeying the gospel some fifteen months ago, and thought that others would like to hear something of the good work going on in Welland. I don't think any ago, and thought that others would like to near someuning of the good work going on in Welland. I don't think any thing has ever been written about our little band of saints here, so I will endeavor to tell you something about them and how the work was started here.

I have been informed that some work was done here a few years ago, but for some reason it died out. The good work was started again, through the efforts of our late Bro. T.J. Robbins a little over a year ago, of whose sudden death I will speak later. Bro. Robbins came to Welland the last I will speak later. Bro. Robbins came to Welland the last of May,1912, and at once began hunting for saints. He found one, Sr. Maginnis. He then met and became acquainted with me, and presented the gospel to me. After thorough investigation I obeyed, being baptized and confirmed by Elder F. C. Mesle, November 17, 1912. When Bro. Robbins began talking to me about the gospel I wondered where I had heard it before, and one evening it came to me that thirteen years before this Sr. Dellas Perry had told me about it. I heard two sermons. Soon after Sr. Perry and I were separated and I had not become ter Sr. Perry and I were separated and I had not become sufficiently interested to follow it up. I did not meet with another saint until I met Bro. Robbins, so it seems the Lord used Sr. Perry to sow the good seed and Bro. Robbins to water it. They were both present at my baptism.

water it. They were both present at my baptism.

My blessing tells me I had enjoyed a measure of the Spirit and had been sustained through various trials, temptations, and afflictions, because of the obedience of that Spirit. My blessing also tells me that if faithful i shall forget the sorrows of the past because of the glorious anticipations of the future, and that my testimony shall be "I know I shall have part with Christ in the first resurrec-tion." Since getting my blessing I have met with the deepest affliction of my life, one which at times has almost deepest affliction of my life, one which at times has almost overwhelmed me, but, praise God, by divine aid I have been able to hold on to the rod of iron. When my sorrow came upon me I said, "Only for this blessed gospel I could not bear it." I would not or could not go back where I was before obeying—in the Baptist Church—not for any consideration.

After my baptism I opened my home for the elders to come at any time to hold meetings. For some time the meetings were all held there, but as we advanced other homes were found more central and Bro. and Sr. Saylor gave their home for services. The first sermon was preached by Elder F. C. Mesle at my home December 17, 1912. By this time we had found three more saints. El-der Alma Booker visited us to administer to Sr. Maginnis who had been given up by the doctors because of heart trouble, but she was healed at once and has been well ever since, attending the meetings. Our next visit was from Bro. J. Thompson who had held two meetings. His ser mons were helpful and we were sorry to part with him.

mons were neighble that we were sort, where the month in June we had our first searament service. Some time before this we heard of Bro. and Sr. Baldwin and family of four, all in the church; thus adding six more saints to our circle. We rejoiced for they are all good singers, and our circle. We rejoiced for they are all good singers, and Bro. Baldwin presides at the organ. In the early part of June Bro. and Sr. Saylor with their family of little ones moved here from Fonthill. We were glad to welcome them, and they proved to be good workers. Their little daughter was one of the eight precious souls whom Bro. Place has led into the waters of baptism; several have been administered to with good results, and zeveral children blessed. In June Elder Place organized a Sunday school and Religio. We are very much encouraged by the work being done by both of these bodies.

We have been somewhat bandicapped for a regular place to hold or a praching destrice, but the Lord has we neve over somewhat nandicapped for a regular place to hold or preaching zervice, but the Lord has been mindful of us, so that we have never lacked for a place, and now we are so thankful to have a fine hall wish for. Elder Place comes to us every Sunday. We hold our prayer service at the different homes Sunday evening and we do enjoy the sweet influence of the Spirit.

I must not forget the good time we had when Bro. A. I must not lorget the good time we had when Bro. A. Leverton was with us for two weeks in August. We had three services during the week and two on Sunday. We regretted we did not have a public building for him to hold forth. We all got our blessings and if faithful our people here are to be heard from in the future.

It seems the adversary is on our track, for as soon as we get a place and outsiders begin to come in we have to move on, but we now trust to get the best of him and occupy our present hall for a long time, or until we become strong enough to build. We are looking forward to being organized in the near future.

In the death of our Bro. T. J. Robbins we lost a faith ful worker, one who was always ready to do anything to advance the cause. Bro. Robbins was called home on Nov. 2nd, in Winnipeg, where he had gone for a few weeks on important business. After reaching Winnipeg it became necessary for him to undergo a very critical operation of the jawbone. A special prayer meeting was called and he was administered to by Elder Ward Christy, who was with him a great deal of the time during his illness. Bro. Robbins recovered so far as to be able to leave the hospital and expected to return to Welland in a very short time, but alas! severe hemorrhage set in and the Lord merci fully relieved him. It was said of him by the peope who were with him during the last days of his life that "He left a living testimony behind." May it bear fruit. We feel here that Bro. Robbins was used of the Lord to start the work here and then called up higher, and may we as a monument of his memory and in gratitude to our Lord for his life amongst us, continue to build up the work. Bro. Robbins was born in Simcoe County in 1864. He spent the most of his early life in Toronto. He was baptized Oct. 8, 1905, by Elder D. Macgregor and confirmed by Elders D. Macgregor and D. Smith, in Stratford. He was of a cheerful disposition and that together with his kind and generous nature won for him many warm friends, who were saddened at the news of his sudden death. He was laid to rest in Winnipeg by kind saints on Nov. 6th. The sermon was preached by Elder Ward Christy, assisted by Bro. R. C. Russell, one of the twelve.

The most of us here are only babes as yet and need much nourishing.

Papeete, Tahiti, Jan. 9, 1914. ..Dear Ensign:—It has been several months since the readers of the Ensign have heard from me, and as many things have transpired in this mission since the last mistangs have transpired in this mission since the last mission conference which have brought both tears of sorrow and rejoicing to us, we desire to write a few lines.

The saints here were greatly shocked and wept when the news reached Tahiti concerning the death of our beloved Bro. Lake. He was greatly respected by the natives, and has labored diligently to advance the interests of the retreat greatly area. of the restored gospel among the natives, and his untring efforts which lasted to the end have accomplished great good. In his death the mission has suffered great loss.

We are pleased to inform the saints in America that prospects are looking brighter at present than they have at any time since the writer came to this mission. We cannot express the great pleasure we enjoyed in meeting and laboring with Brn. Pitt, Griffiths and Miller in this mission. The work has been greatly assisted through the efforts put forth by these brethren. Through their patient efforts the pupu people have returned into the church by rebaptism. These are the people who were cut off from the church in the time of Bro. Burton. Bro. Griffiths' eight weeks' visit in our midst he baptized twenty-eight of these people into the church. He also with Bro. Miller baptized others into the church. Since Bro. Griffiths' departure for Australia, I carried an epistle written by him to the pupu people throughout the Puamotuan Islands and in my six weeks' trip there I baptized thirty more of the pupu people, also thirty-two others, some of these were formerly Mormons, Protestants others, some of these were also twelve others baptized on this trip by native missionaries, making seventy-four in all. The writer has been privileged to baptize eighty since the April conference. There has been over two hun-dred baptized in this mission during the past year.

The Lord has greatly assisted me in my work especially in clearing up the pupu trouble, and the mission seems to be moving forward with rapid strides since the short visit of the apostle. Many things too numerous to mentranspired in our short trip throughout the upper tion transpired in our short trip throughout the apper islands which is evidence to us that God works in myste-rious ways his wonders to perform, and although the boat we traveled upon was in charge of an unbeliever we were greatly favored by him, who was really a stranger to me He held his schooner over from Saturday evening until ay evening in one island, even though their work finished and flag for departure had been raised; and at another time he changed his course upon request and headed for a different island from the one he had headed for and took me to said island so that I could spend Suny there, at which time twenty-eight were baptized. I was landed in the midst of a great marriage cerem wherein one of our native brethren married ten couples The saints all arose as I entered and sang a song of wel-come to which the writer responded, stating that had it not been for the Lord's blessing I would have been in an other island at that time. From this place I sailed to three other small islands upon a small sail boat which carries only about six or seven ton of freight and was but about twenty-five feet long. The Lord blessed us with fair winds until our work was finished. We feel thankful to the Lord for his assistance in closing up the pupu trouble which had so long been pending, which wound, we believe, has been thoroughly healed by the power of God. The natives are singing songs of rejoicing, and praising the Lord for the great blessings which have followed the visit of the aposite, and they are looking forward to the coming mission conference with the thought that it will be one of the largest conferences for several

We are also pleased to inform the saints that there are several new church buildings under construction, three at present, and five in contemplation, which is a manifestation of the present activity among the various branches. Bro. H. W. Savage and wife have safely returned to Tahiti after a long sojourn upon the island of Hercheretue, they look well and apparently have fared well considering the many unpleasant experiences they met with. Sr. Alberta Lake will leave for America during the month of February. The natives would be pleased if she would remain. She leaves with the good will of the island saints. land saints.

We are pleased to say that we are well and enjoy greatly the refreshing ocean breezes. We are alway We are always in sound two-thirds of a mile out from the beach which is but a few steps from the missionary house. Its roar sounds as though we were under an elevated railway in an Ameri-

n city. We rejoice in the work of the Lord day by day and trust that our labors may not prove fruitless, but that when nourished by the Spirit of the Lord will bring forth fruit in due season.

I am as ever, your brother and Christ's servant, J. Charles Mav.

Salt Lake City, Utah.

We are here by reason of the We are here by reason of the powers that be, and as strength is given us we try to utilize it in rendering service to humanity.

One good King Benjamin taught that when we were in the service of our fellows we were serving God, and we are of the opinion that this truth is too frequently over-looked by mankind. In Salt Lake City our work is of a peculiar nature i. e. we have a difficult problem to solve in, "how can we reach the people?" It is true that question confronts us in our work elsewhere, but especially is it noticeable in this part. Long established traditions and provides have caused the people generally speaking to have a dread for anything that bears the stamp of "Reorganized Church" or it out here. "Josephite" as they generally term

It is a similar question of the one asked so long ago: "Can any good come out of Nazareth?"

As we labor in this part, and come in contact with the people we are more and more convinced that there is nothing more needed in our work here than the pure love of Christ. If we ever win the people of the West for Christ it must be done through the spirit of love, meek-Christ it must be done through the spirit of love, meekness, gentleness, and brotherly kindness. It can never be done through force, debatings, and argument. It is true however that one must be made the possessor of a goodly degree of the divine Spirit in order to remain sweet under all conditions but this must be done if we are able to read correctly the hand writing on the wall. We are hopeful because we have learned that God is good, and if we will but trust in him and work as did the Master nothing but success can crown our efforts. We are honeful that our membership here will awake

We are hopeful that our membership here will awake privileges and possibilities and thereby sist materially in the upward and onward movement of our work here.

We extend greeting and all good wishes to the Ensign and her staff trusting the New Year that is before us will be of profit to all.

Respectfully, J. E. Vanderwood.

Lucedale, Miss.

Dear Ensign:—After so long a time I thought and do believe as I am so aroused concerning this work that I would write to the many readers. As I behold the good that is being done for Christ in this great work, I can see the great and marvelous work rallying on, but I can hardly ever hear of a colored elder. Are there any besides Elder P. W. Booker?

I am asking a world-wide question. Someone please answer me. It is high time that we colored people were answer me. It is night time that we colored people were coming together as a race, to do something more for God than what we have been doing. Did you not know that God is our Father too, and has no respect of persons? It seems that we are so wide apart that we never will do anything, but God can bring us together if we ask him. The Lord says, "Seek and ye shall find." Why not? Should we not ask for what we need? If there is any race on the top side of God's earth that needs help, it is the poor colored people. It may be that some of them don't know that God will answer prayer in our day. Let us ask God for what we need, that is, an understanding, us ask God for what we need, that is, an understanding, for he giveth to every one liberally and upbraideth not. I feel sometimes like we are cast off and forgotten until the Spirit revives my soul, and tells me, if he is for us no one can be against us. But when I read the many thoughts on the colored man, I am almost perauaded to believe that we are still forgotten. Some ones of the different races say that the negro has no soul, but God has not made man in his image and failed to put a soul in him, and it seems, strange as it is, that the negro as he is called is differenthised in some states and has no voice. called, is disfranchised in some states, and has no voice

THE KINGDOM OF GOD AND HOW TO ENTER IN.

A Real Organization.

Reader let me ask your nationality. Is it British, American, French, or what? There is something better than all these,—it is to be a citizen of the kingdom of God. Now don't turn away with the idea that we are going to talk about some imaginative, suppositious institution, existing only in the feeling of the heart. We mean by the kingdom of God an actual, tangible organization, just as real as any earthly kingdom.

An erroneous idea popularly entertained is that the kingdom of God is a kind of elastic ethereal influence, existing nowhere in particular and yet everywhere in general. They who hold thus, think to support their delusion by an apreal to the following passage: "The kingdom of God is within you;" A very casual reading of the context. however, reveals the fact that our Lord was addressing a crowd of proud Jews who were living in daily anticipation of the setting up of the throne of David, with his seed reigning thereon forever and over all. Questioned by the people as to when the kingdom should appear, Jesus informed them that it was even then in their midst, within the borders of Jewish dominion. This is borne out in the marginal reading where it says, "or among you." It will not do to argue that, "within you," should be narrowed down to the limited compass of the heart, else that would be charging these Jewish Pharisees with the possession of a celestial treasure which their life and conduct did not merit nor disclose.

The answer of our Lord greatly astonished his interrogators who had been traditioned to expect the advent of an imperious institution heralded by fire and flame, sword and scepter. The church of Christ appeared otherwise, for, "the kingdom of God cometh not with observation, neither shall they say, Lo here! or, lo there."—Luke 17:20,21. It did not announce its coming with a display of dignity, nor yet was it attended by a retinue of tinsled army of self-righteous nobles.

This is evident from the lowly manner in which Christ, the King, made his way to earth. His work was commenced with "The kingdom of heaven is at hand."

That the church of Christ consisted of an organization is evident from the following:

"I will build my church."—Matt16:18.
"Ye are the temple of God."—1 Cor. 3:9.

'In whom all the building fitly framed together, groweth unto an holy temple in the Lord: in whom ye also are builded together."—Ephesians 9,21,22

"Him [Christ] to be the head over all things to the church, which is his body."—Eph. 1:22,23.
"Now ye are the body of Christ and members in particular."—I Cor. 12:27.

"From whom the whole body fitly joined together and compacted."—Eph. 4:16.

The church of Christ, has a King, Christ Jesus the Lord. It has officers, the duly appointed ministry of Christ. "And he gave some apostles; and some prophets, and some evangelists, and some pastors and teachers." Other officers mentioned are deacons, elders, priests, bishops, and seventies. It is not intended that the foregoing list represents their relative importance, for as a matter of fact all are equally essential. "And again the eye cannot say unto the hand I have no need of thee, nor again the head to the feet, I have no need of you."—I Cor. 12:21.

It has a law. "The perfect of liberty."—James 1:25. "The law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul."—Ps. 19:7.

Means of Entrance.

Lastly it has a means of entrance, the ordinance of baptism, for "Except a man be born of water and the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God."—John 3:5. Our Lord explained this in addressing Nicodemus, a ruler of the Jews. Briefly stated, the ordinance of baptism is the way of entering into the church. It was accounted of such importance that of them who were in baptized it was said, "They rejected the coincil of God against themselves, being not baptized." and of those who received it, they "justified God being baptized with the baptism of John,"—Luke 7:29,30.

The following references go to prove that baptism was believed and obeyed by Lydia, Cornelius and their households:—Acts 8:12; 19:6; 16:15; 18:18; 10:47. All the land of Judea and they of Jerusalem were "all baptized." And the jailer, seeing the serious importance of this solemn rite, was baptized at the hour of midnight. Peter preached it, Paul proclaimed it, and John urged it, for he heard him who had said, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved."

1 Peter 3:21, says, "The like figure whereunto even baptism doth also now save us." In Acts 2: 38, Peter said: "Repent and be baptized everyone of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of your sins." In Acts 22:16, Ananias says, "And now why tarriest thou? arise and be baptized and wash away thy sins."

It is not presumed that baptism of itself and by itself imparts these spiritual benefits. The person receiving it must be in proper condition. He must look unto Christ exercising faith in him, "for there is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved." "And without faith it is impossible to please him." And this is not all. True and abiding faith will be followed by repentance, for "Except ye repent ye shall all likewise perish."—Acts 4: 12; Heb. 11:6; Luke 13:3. Thus prepared the candidate is acceptable unto baptism of repentance for the remission of sins," (Mark 1:4) and will be buried with him by baptism into death." Romans 6:4.

See also Mark 1:5; John 3:23; Acts 8:38,39; Matt. 3:16; Romans 6:4-6; Col. 2:12.

From the foregoing references the following facts are submitted: First, that the Bible baptism requires water. Second, that it takes much water. Third, that it necessitates a going down into the water. Fourth, the candidate must be buried in the water. Fifth, that succeeding the burial he is raised again. Sixth, that there is a coming up out of the water.

Now take the scriptural measuring rod and apply it to the several ceremonies assuming to be baptism, and we may readily detect the counterfeit. Apply it, for instance, to sprinkling. How does it measure up? First, Does it take water? Yes. Second, Does it take much water? No. Third, Does the candidate go down into the water? No. Fourth, 'Is he buried? No. Fifth, Is he raised again? No. Right in one point and wrong in four. It is true that it does take water to sprinkle, who will accept such a clumsy counterfeit? Immersion only is inscribed between the covers of the Bible, ineraseable irrefutable.

The Bible teaches that the time "will come when they will not endure sound doctrine, but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears, and they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables."—2 Timothy 3:3,4. The language of the law affirms that there is but "one Lord, one faith, and one baptism."—Eph. 4:5. I think the Scriptures, unlike modern ministers, never change, therefore I will not accept sprinkling, dipping or pouring as a baptism, nor any church that will stand for such a counterfeit baptism.

The Laying On of Hands.

Fourth comes the laying on of hands—succeding the ordinance of baptism. We meet with the ordinance of the laying on of the hands, a part of the great plan of inducting us into the kingdom of God. Whether we consider the creation of man, the story of the flood, the crossing of the Jordan, the birth of our Savior, the healing of the blind, the raising of the dead, or the revelations of St. John, they are all the same-shrouded in mystery. Yet who will refuse to believe? But they tell us that the days of miracles are past. Ah! far from it. They have scarcely begun. What about the days when the sun shall be turned into darkness, and the moon into blood? When the heaven shall depart like a scroll and every mountain and island shall be moved out of its place? We read of the resurrection of the dead when all that are in their graves shall hear his voice and come forth. This is a miracle surely and justly comparable with the mighty deeds of the past. Read Isaiah i1:6—9;40:4, 5. The Scriptures must be fulfilled, and then shall be brought to pass the redemption of the earth when "the meek shall inherit the earth and shall delight themselves in the abundance of peace' Psalms 37:11---34

From Genesis to Revelation, a period of four thousand years, we may trace the imprints of miracles upon a yielding humanity. Willing to receive and willing to believe. Why should he changes this policy of ages? Has he found a better way? If so the former was imporfect and scarcely reflective of a perfect God whose ways are only wise. He changes not. This is evidenced in the unrepealable laws of a physical world, and manifested in the increasing revolutions of the planets, and ever down the ages we hear the divine declaration "I am the Lord, I change not."—Mal. 3:6.

The laying on of hands occupying a distinctive place in the church is not alltogether to be rated as miraculous but as an ordinary ordinance, and as everlasting as any other ceremony—the Lord's supper for instancé. Of the sacrament surely none will say because of the unseen, unsolvable conveyance of "life," as promised by the Lord, that therefore it ought not to be perpetuated. Not we retain it with all its mystery. Why then wage war upon the laying on of hands? Why accept the one and not the other? Did not the same Lord establish both?

The laying on of hands was observed for four different uses. First, the ordination of the ministry. Second, the blessing of children. Third, the giving of the Holy Ghost. Fourth, and for the healing of the sick. It will be observed that nearly all the churches use the laying on of hands for one use, viz., for the ordination of the ministry, therefore they have accepted to the extent of one-quarter. Further than this they have refused to follow. Why? If good for one, is it not good for the other? Does it require more of the heavenly power to bless a babe than it does to ordain a priest? Or have our deposits in the bank of heaven run so low that we are only permitted to draw a little? If so, why should this little be expended only on the priests? Why not help the sick and the suffering? Why not share with the babes? "Of a truth I preceive that God is no respector of persons." The following are references on the laying on of hands. Mark 10: 16; Acts 8:17; 19:6; 2 Tim. 1:6; 1 Tim. 4:14; Acts 9:17; Mark 16:18; Luke 4:40; Acts 5:12; 28:8; James 5:14-15.

The Bible teaches that God is the same yesterday, today, and forever and is no respector of persons. Then his word is the same yesterday, today and forever and changes not, and is not for one person any more than another, Jew or Gentile. In Hebrews 6:1, 2, we find the doctrine of Christ briefly stated as taught all through the new testament. God's word is always the same and never changes.

WILL JESUS COME AGAIN? BY ELDER EDWARD RANNIE.

In the consideration of the above question the writer has no thought of trying to set a date for the coming of the Savior or the end of the world. Others have tried it and only advertised their ignorance and folly.

Among many of the Christians near the time of 1000 A. D. they believed he would come and reign among them. They were disappointed. In 1844 many believed he would come during that year, sorrow and disappointment were their reward, and many from that date to the present have set the time, and like their predecessors, their interpretation of prophecy has proved erroneous. It is an example of egotism to try to be wiser than the angels, and Jesus has said that "No man, no, not the angels of heaven" would know the day or the hour when he cometh.

It shall be my effort to show from the three books, the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants, three very important events that must occur before he shall come to reign over his people. They will be so marvelous and wonderful that unless we are spiritually blind, as were the Jews, at his first coming, we cannot fail to see them. Ignorance of the Scriptures will be a potent factor in leading men into error. Jesus said, "And whoso treasureth up my word, shall not be deceived. (Matt. 24:39, I. T). If we know what must happen, and know it has not happened, we need not waste our time trying to fix the year in which he will come.

"Before the great day of the Lord shall come, Jacob shall flourish in the wilderness; and the Lamanites shall blossom as the rose. Zion shall flourish upon the hills, and rejoice upon the mountains, and shall be assembled together unto the place which I have appointed."—D. C. 49:5.

Jacob is another name for Israel, the latter name may be used to indicate one or more of the tribes or it may mean all the tribes. To "flourish" is to grow, develop, to have a healthy growth. There are great promises made concerning the tribes of Israel. Just at the time when their nation was being destroyed by the king of Babylon, the prophet Ezekiel (Ezek. 37:21) B. C. 587, said, "I will take the children of Israel from among the heathen, whither they be gone, and will gather them on every side," and bring them into their own land.

At the close of Solomon's reign, B. C. 975, the kingdom was divided and the kingdom of Israel and of Judah existed contemporaneously until B. C. 721 when Israel was carried captive by the king of Assyria, (2 Kings 17:23) and then Judah passed through her trouble which resulted in her final overthrow and the destruction of Jerusalem B. C. 587. Both nations were now gone but the Lord promised to restore them and he spoke through the prophet Ezekiel (37:22) and said, "I will make them one nation in the land upon the mountains of Israel; and one king shall be king to them all: and they shall no more be two nations, neither shall they be divided into two kingdoms any more at all.'

When Jesus visited the Nephites on this continent he spoke to them concerning the restoration of Israel.

And it shall come to pass that the time cometh, when the fulness of my gospel shall be preached unto them, and they shall believe in me, that I am Jesus Christ. the Son of God, and shall pray unto the Father in my name. Then shall their watchmen lift up their voice; and with the voice together shall they sing; for they shall see eye to eye. Then will the Father gather them together again and give unto them Jerusalem for the land of their inheritance."-Book of Mormon 3 Nephi 9:69,70,71, Authorized Version.

Paul seemed to have the restoration of Israel in view when he wrote to the saints in Rome and told them that "blindness in part had happened to Israel until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in," Rom. 11:25, and also that their Deliverer would come out of Zion and turn them from ungodliness. Rom. 11;26. Through the restoration of the gospel in the latter days Israel will be brought to a knowledge of Christ and his gospel. In the preface to the Book of Mormon we are informed that part of its special work was to convince the Jew Jesus is the Christ." The Lord has provided a way to reach the Jew, which is a part of Israel, in these latter days with the gospel. It was to go to the Gentiles first "and then, behold and lo, they shall turn unto the Jews; and then cometh the day when the arm of the Lord shall be revealed in power in convincing the nations, the heathen nations, the house of Joseph, of the gospel of their salvation."-D. C. 87:3.

When the missionaries are directed by the Lord. through the church, to carry the gospel to the fews as above provided it can well be said that the deliverer has come out of Zion, because it is the gospel that will deliver them from spiritual bondage and darkness that they have been in for many cen-"And as many as shall believe on Christ, turies. shall also become a delightsome people." 2 Nephi 12:86. And in the 85th verse it is stated that when they "begin to believe in Christ; and they shall begin to gather in upon the face of the land."

When all referred to is in process of achievement it will be a great work. It will attract public attention, and when it is accomplished it can be said truthfully that Jacob does "flourish in the wilderness." The work of preparation for that wonderful event is now going on among the nations; the Jews, and by the church.

The Lord made a promise concerning the Lamanites, through Jacob, that because they were faithful to their marriage vows and did not go into the abomination of polygamy and concubinage as did their brethren the Nephites, that they would not be destroyed but that some day "they shall become a blessed people." - Jacob 2:56.

One of the special purposes of the Book of Mormon is to restore the Indians to a knowledge of Jesus Christ and of the gospel that was had among them when they were a righteous people and the prophet Nephi places a promise on record concerning them that makes their future a very important part for them in connection with the restored gos pel,

"And at that day shall the remnant of our seed know that they are of the house of Israel, and that they are the covenant people of the Lord: And then shall they know and come to the knowledge of their forgisthers, and also to the knowledge of the gospel of their Redeemer, which was ministered unto their fathers by him; Wherefore, they shall come to the knowledge of their Redeemer, and the very points of his doctrine, that they may know how to come unto him and be saved.

And then at that day, will they not rejoice and give praise unto their everlasting God, their rock and their salvation? Yea, at that day, will they not receive the strength and nourishment from the true vine? Yea, will they not come unto the true fold of God? Behold, I say unto you, yea, they shall be remembered again among the house of Israel,"-1 Nephi 4:17-23.

When a people that has been in darkness as the Indians have, and shall believe on Christ, come "a knowledge of the very points of his docof God" they surely will be a "delightsome people" and shall blossom as the rose." The work of preparation has been going on among this people for many years and the realization of the promise made to them will become more apparent every day, that "Zion shall flourish upon the hills."

The true Zion is the pure in heart, and it will be a place where love rules supreme and righteousness controls men's lives. It will be a place where service is the badge of honor, and men will love God and their fellowmen more than the pleasures of the world; where all men will be brothers, and where love will be expressed in deeds of kindness and not in words of maudlin sympathy.

It will ultimately be inhabited by the truest, purest and noblest of men and women: it will be a mecca for pilgrims who are seeking a place where love reigns in the hearts of men. It will be a place for happy childhood and where they are held in higher esteem than is common in the world today.

It will be a place for the conservation of human life, money and time. It will be a place where our wives and daughters will get their ideas of dress from God's word and not from women of the lower world. It will be a place where men will not pollute the air with cigarettes and stain the sidewalk with liquid of nicotine, or gain their ideas of business and industry in the billiard hall.

Men who are idlers, and street loafers will be ashamed to appear in public. The man who is too lazy to work will be ashamed to meet honest men face to face. It will be a place where the Sabbath day is a sacred one:it will neither be the extreme of the Puritan nor the loosenes of the worldly minded Christians, nor will it be polluted by the sinful pleasures of the world. It will be a day of joy and gladness in the service of God.

It will be a place of wealth, for the many, not the few, good business and beautiful homes. Equality will exist then. It is only like a nightmare now, like a hungry man dreaming of eating, and wakes up hungry. Selfishness and covetousness have blinded our eyes and calloused our hearts so that the cries of the poor and needy do not touch us. There will be no poor then, no hovels or unsanitary homes, because men will love their neighbors as themselves.

When these three events occur we may know that the time for the coming of the Savior is nigh at hand even at the door.

Independence, Mo., Jan. 22, 1914.

TESTIMONY THE FOUNDATION OF FAITH.

In no age of the world has God required of the people faith in him without first giving them testimony upon which to base that faith. However they may first have to believe in their fellowmen, accept his testimony as a foundation for their taith, which is only just to do in religion as in other things of Practically all the knowledge we have obtained came from our belief in the testimony of others-principally through books.

In the days of the apostles the world did not have to base their faith upon the credulous foundation ("just believe") but the foundation of their faith was the testimony of the apostles. The apostles testified they knew Jesus was the Christ and the gospel the power of God unto salvation, and those who became the apostles' followers based their belief upon the apostles' testimony with that of the prophets as contained in the scriptures conforming their lives to the requirements of the gospel, (which was a demonstration to their faith in the apostles' testimony) and they received a knowledge by revelation, (which is the promise to all) which placed them in the same position as the apostles, i. e., made them creatures of hope.

Nowhere in the Scriptures do we find the state-"just believe" today and tomorrow and so on and by putting our energies back of that belief we will by a metaphysical process produce a faith that will be absolute and certain. No, that kind of faith will always be dead. It is built upon the sand: its foundation is not a rock, (fact). Such a belief is nothing more than a psychological hallucination, and places God below man in intellect, in giving man only imagination for the foundation of his

That this is not an overdrawn picture and a popular idea in the Christian world. I quote from, "The young man and the world," by Senator Albert J. Beveridge in the essay, "The young man and the pulpit."

"Faith is infectious," James Whitcomb Riley, whose sweetness of character and upliftedness of soul equal his genius, gave me the best receipe for faith in God, Christ and Immortality I have ever heard: "Just believe," he said, "don't argue about it, don't question it, simply say 'I believe.' Next day you will find yourself believing a little less feebly, and finally your faith will be absolute, certain, and established."

That a faith developed in such a way is dangerour. We quote again from the same writer and same book but from the essay, "The young lawyer."

Speaking whether it be the best for a lawyer to take a case if he did not believe his client was in the right. He states the ideas of those who think it would, in this language, "They will cite you to instances where they have entered into the conduct of a case with much doubt in their hearts as to the rightfulness of their client's position; but that the doubt became an affirmative certainly before they were half through with it they knew their client was right.

"The answer to this is that any man can work himself into an enthusiastic belief in almost anything if he goes upon the theory that the thing is true, and gives all his energy and ability to proving its truthfulness to others and to himself."

I am thankful we do not have to work ourselves into an enthusiastic belief in God today any more than the Apostle Paul when he "saw the light, and heard the voice." But men today have the same testimony as men of yore. That "Jesus is Christ." And "whoever will do the will of the Father shall know of the doctrine.'

How many will believe their testimony, and put it to a test?

JUST FOR TODAY.

The great wise master builder and shepherd of his tender flock took special pains to impress upon the minds of his weak and erring children that the heavy and unbearable burdens that send so many to an untimely grave might be made lighter, or entirely avoided, if they would only take his yoke upon them and learn of him. He said "take no thought for the morrow, for the morrow shall take thought for the things of itself; sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof."

And yet, how many there are who while away their time in worrying and brooding over the misfortunes and errors of the past, and the opportunities that slipped away unimproved, or musing and dreaming of mansions and coming fortunes. where untold of felicity is in store but never comes in view. How unwise it all is! "for we spend our lives as a tale that is told," and the close of each day will determine our record for-ever. The day is gone, the "actions are weighed," and the account is made up and recorded in the book of remembrance, to be faced at the final judgment.

It is useless to worry over the past; of kind and loving words that might have been spoken to cheer and gladden the broken hearted; of acts that might have been done to lighten the burdens that were grevious to be borne, or flowers that might have been strewn in the pathway of "the forlorn and shipwrecked brother," to cheer his drooping spirit, for "of all sad words by tongue or pen, the saddest of all, it might have been." "From the cradle to the grave" man swings in the balance of God's own make. He was made upright in the beginning and placed on the scales, with the measuring rod at his side, so that at any moment of his earthly pilgrimage it might be said, "thou are weighed in the balances" and your measurement is taken.

Our thoughts and actions may alter the account of tomorrow, but the actions of yesterday are fixed, and we should "think not upon the shadows, for sorrow's days are few, the sun is shining somewhere, oh, pledge thy heart anew," and with fixed determination, arise and pursue the narrow path that leads to the better land.

Why take no thought for tomorrow? Because it is not ours, and we know not what shall be upon tomorrow. The Holy Ghost says, today, if ye will hear his voice, harden not your heart, and it is today that we must live and labor to sow the seed that will determine the sheaves to be gathered in at the great harvest. "Now is the accepted time, now is the day of salvation," and as Longfellow said, "trust no future how ere pleasant, let the dead past bury its dead, act, act in the living present, heart within and God o'er head."

The fields are white unto the harvest, and the laborers are few, and should any neglect to thrust in his sickle and reap while the day lasts, his loss will be great in the day of accounts. Then let us work and watch and pray that we may find the grace we need, "just for today."

THE ROUND TABLE.

Who were the Samaritans? Who were their ancestors? and were they connected with the Jews any time?

Samaria was included in the territory belonging to the ten tribes or the kingdom of Israel. site of the city of Samaria was chosen by Omri King of Israel as the capital of the kingdom, the city growing to be of considerable importance and of great strength, In B. C. 721 the city was taken by Shalmaneser king of Assyria after a seige of three years, which brought the kingdom to an end, the tribes being taken captive into Assyria. (2 Kings 18:9-12.) Subsequently Esar-haddon king of Assyria, (who also ruled over Babylon) brought settlers from Babylon and other distant places and put them in Samaria to occupy the desolate land. Through fear of wild beasts by which many were destroyed, and attributing the cause of their distress to not knowing the god of the land, they sent to the king for one of the Israelite priests to be sent to teach them the ways of the God of the land. The priest was sent with the result that the religion of the new Samaritans was a strange mixture of Babylonian idolatry and Israelite worship, these nations feared the Lord, and served their graven images." (2 Kings 17:41.) When the Jews returned from Babylon to rebuild Jeruealem and the temple, these Samaritans sought to participate and to share in the benefits, but the Jews fused to accept them upon which they became bitter enemies and sought every means through the reigns of two kings to hinder and prevent the Jews in their work. (Ezra 4). The enmity thus engendered has been perpetuated until the present time. It thus appears that the Samaritans were gentiles having a perverted form of Jewish worship.

What is the difference, it any, between the Utah edition of the Book of Mormon and the Lamoni edition put out by the Reorganized Church? Also what is the difference between the two editions of the book of Doctrine and Cove

As to the text of the Book of Mormon published under the authority of the Utah Church and that of the same book published under the authority of the Reorganized Church we know of no differences except in punctuation marks. We have not compared the entire work but such differences as we have observed are not material. The Utah book contains a system of references which the Lamoni edition does not have.

The book of Doctrine and Covenants of the Utah Church and that of the Reorganized Church are vastly different. The latter, or Lamoni edition, contains the revelations accepted by a general assembly of the church in 1835 with subsequent revelations and documents adopted by the church from time to time to the present. The Utah book has had incorporated into it a multitude of statements by Joseph Smith, some historical and some incidentally prophetic, and even private letters and quotations from private letters which were never designed for the church at large and never adopted by the church during the lifetime of Joseph Smith. In addition to these, a document setting forth the law of the church upon marriage adopted in 1835 and published in the Doctrine and Covenants of that year, and in subsequent editions till after the life time of Joseph Smith, and in all the editions published by the Reorganized Church, is omitted from the Utah book and a purported revelation advocating polygamy inserted in its place. The genuineness of this document has ever been denied by the Reorganized Church.

Let us not understatus the dignity of human nature. Man, although fallen, still retains some traces of his pri-meval glory and excellence—broken columns of a celestial temple, magnificent, even in its ruins.—John McC. Holmes.

THE JUVENILE COURT IN KANSAS CITY.

Not long ago we heard Judge Porterfield, judge of the juvenile court in Kansas City for six years past speak for an hour. Be was laughingly introduced to his audience by a townsman, as "a reformed politician, if such a thing were possible.

From a few notes taken, we hope to interest our readers, although we had hoped he would dwell more upon his experiences with children, to gain us more of an idea of the varied scope of this work. However we found much of profit in his remarks.

COURTS.

From the formation of governments, courts were made to settle. There are ten divisions of the circuit court, all grinding day in and day out, settling disputes and quarrels between men. Operating besides these is only one active in the interests of the child. This one does more lasting good than all the others; and is therefore as valuable. In this one, the unfortunate child is given a chance; in the others, property rights are protected.

ORIGIN.

The first Juvenile Court was established in Chicogo in 1899-July 1st. Missouri has the benefit of the court in six counties; and the present effort is to get it into action all through the state. Invenile Court entitles all to a chance, unfortunates or not.

A REFORM.

To build citizens, we must begin with the child. before the foundation for successful building is undermined by criminal acts. Begin to help the child, not the man. The Juvenile Court is one of the greatest reforms, marking a formative, constructive period thus, -in dealing with the child, in dealing with the parents, and in dealing with the home. It gets at the cause of troubles.

DELINOUENTS

Children under seventeen years come under its jurisdiction. The begging child, the one who suffers from cruelty, who has mean parents or a poor home; the delinquent-one who violates the law in town, city, or village.

Invenile delinquency is the natural outgrowth of juvenile neglect; abnormal conditions bring about abnormal results. This court treats conditions as well as the child. It encourages parents to exercise better control over themselves as well as over the children, and sees to better environments. THE IMPORTANT QUESTION IS-NOT WHAT A CHILD

DOES BUT WHY DOES HE DO IT

Seventy-five per cent of delinquents start with irregularity in attendance at school? The child stays out for some trivial excuse; he plays truant once; he tries it again, then again; it becomes habitual; he is too young to work; he becomes idle, and thus gets into mischief. You can expect any kind of delinquency from him.

ORIGIN OF IUVENILE COURT.

The horrors of putting children in a jail; a school of crime! The state is engaged in the matter of making criminals. Herein lies the origin of the Juvenile Court.

We have a detention home instead of the jail. It is not a prison but a refuge. It is a temporary home until the weekly court day. There is a mat-They are treated as children in good homes.

The circuit court punishes the guilty, but does not get at the removal of the cause. The luvenile Court helps the child and sees what can be done for him.

THE COURT ROOM.

It is a child's court, or a parental court and very informal. The traditional bench is abandoned. The child or person takes his place at the right hand of the judge; sometimes a child sits on his lap. He hears the story and its cause; all about it. There is no swearing in relating of testimony, witnesses are not often used. The idea and language of punishment is avoided. The statutes provide that a child be not punished, but helped. "Punishthat a child be not punished, but helped. ment never made a patriot"—exclaimed the judge.

If drunkenness is the cause, it must cease; if laziness is the cause, the parent or child must work; if filth is the cause, they must "clean up;" if improper surroundings are the cause, they must move.

PROBATION OFFICERS.

It takes incessant work to keep children out of court. They are not brought in until the probation officer's faithful work has failed. The speaker declared these officers to be more valuable than the judge himself. (And he complimented Independence on its splendid probation afficers.)

In 1911 there were 1108 cases came into the juvenile court and 1092 others were looked after by probation officers. In 1912 and 1913 their work was better still. Some of the 1108 were the same child, reappearing-in trouble again.

FOR PARENTS.

If parents properly cared for the children, there would be no need of juvenile courts. Parents do not know where their children are-from the ages welve to sixteen years—after school hours. They can't keep up with their offspring; the pace is toorapid, the parents lose in the race.

Children are not taken away from their parents by this court, unless the labors with the parents fail. It is a singular thing that parents are with this court like they are with school teachers. they are present every Friday to combat every effort of the court in dealing with their children.

The judge here remarked that he would like to relate numerous experiences, but could not this time. He however spoke of a girl of sixteen years. who had been six days absent from school,-her mother blissfully ignorant and unsuspecting. had spent a good deal of the time with a boy friend, taking in the moving picture "shows," and were finally found visiting with two strange women. They had had much beer-when the court officials found them. No further wrong had been done. The boy was sent to the reform school; the girl was taken to her mother, and has since done well.

The remainder of the judge's talk concerned the boys' and girls' hotels in Kansas City and the McCune Home, seven or eight miles out of Independence.-a school and farm for boys. Of this home we will write later.

CHILDREN'S HOME NOTES.

Occassionally we read a letter from some one entering a plea for a more generous giving to the Children's Home, and we are thinking it might be of interest to a great many of you, just how some are responding. Sr. M. writes from Oklahoma: ':I am sending one dollar for my little three year old girl who has saved her pennies for the .hildren who have no papas and mamas." In sending the receipt for this amount we wrote it in Marguerite's name and Sr. M. wrote us again: "When I read your letter name and Sr. M. wrote us again: "When I read your letter to Marquerie her eyes just sparkled and I think it made her want to save more. I'm so glad you thought of writing the receipt in her name. I shall keep her receipts in her bank also. I want her to send some every year."

Another sister writes: "I inclose a check for five dollars

Another sixter writes: "I inclose a check for not dollars at a donation from our little son, (now deceased)."

We have received other like amounts from those whose hearts are heavy because of separation, therefore they can more easily sympathize with those to whom they are sending material comfort.

One sister writes: "I am sending a small order. It is'nt much but most of it was our baby girl's, and as God has taken her I didn't want to use it any other way."

Turee sisters sent thirty dollars each which was earned by themselves.

We hope those who have been doing that helpful though We hope those who have been doing that neptrit dought dedious work of collecting five cents a month will be en-couraged when they read that from one local for October and November comes a check for eight dollars and at an-other time seven dollars; from another local eight at one time. and six at another; from one large local a check for fifty dol-

NOTICE TO THE MINISTRY.

Two of the brethren have consented to deliver courses of lectures, with suggested readings, at the coming general conference. These lectures are for those holding the priesthood only, and will be given each morning at eight o'clock in the basement of the church, the lectures to alternate, the first one being given on Tuesday, April 7. It is requested that all those of the ministry attending conference make special efforts to attend these lectures, as we hope to make this a permanent feature of the conference if the results of the present courses indicate the demand exists for others. The courses offered will be in Homiletics and Comparative Religions, the former being given by Bro. Walter W. Smith, the latter by Bro. S. A. Burgess. Further announcements will be made concerning the courses on the first day nts will be made concerning the courses on the first day of conference.

NOTACES.

Spokane District.—I wish to again speak to the saints of this district, as 'bere is so much required and so little given, in compaction with the abundance that our heavenly Father has bestowed upon his believing children. We have in our district a membership of 400 and there are 200 names on the tithing book. Where are the other 200? We find in Doctrine and Covenants section 106 where the Lord requires all of our surplus property as a consecration, and one-tenth of all our interest annually; this to be a standing law forever; and they who fail to keep this law shall not be found worthy to remain in Zion; given with the promise that he that is tithed shall not be burned. The Lord has left us to be our own judges. He has also promised to open the windows of heaven and pour out blessings upon us. Will you take God at his word? Will you rely upon his promises? Will you keep his commandments? If you will, then let us hear from the two hundred silent ones. It is not too late.

Now, dear saints, we have some calls for help from the poor, and scarcely enough funds to pay the family allowances. What will we do? The Lord's work depends upon his saints to move it. We wish to make an appeal to each saint to give something to the storehouse of the upon his saints to move it. We wish to make an appear to each saint to give something to the storehouse of the Lord. Let us make up our minds to pay one-tenth of our increase to the Lord, so we can reasonably expect his blessings. "But," says one, "I am in the faith." About how much? Enough to give the Lord a little lip service when we want his help in times of trouble and sickness, but our faith weakens when we think of the law of tithing and consecration that the Lord has commanded us to keep? I feel sure he will hold us just as responsible for the performance of this as any other command he has given. I believe we will have to meet it some place, some where, some time, and I think it would be far better for us to meet it here, do our duty, and have the blessings of God to help us along, than to hold on to see how much worldly pleasures we can get of what we can gather together. Real saints must prove themselves and make a reasonable effort to do what the law says. Sometimes we can't just see how things are coming out, so we wait. You may wait too long and let the chance go by like You may wait too long and let the chance go by, like the foolish virgins, and when you want to do it, it will be too late. We wish to thank all who have honored the law of Christ in temporal things, let others live up to the privileges we enjoy. We are waiting patiently to hear from the silent ones. privileges we enjoy. from the silent ones.

AN EXPLANATION.

South Missouri District.—Whereas, some have thought that my recent notice of the change of place of our conthat my recent notes of the change of prace of our conference was not explicit enough, I submit the following reasons, viz.—It was practically understood at our last conference, when Dagonia was chosen as the place of next conference, that the district president would visit that place and find out whether it would be possible to hold a spring conference there, as some doubted if the place could be reached at that season without great inconvenience and delay on account of freshets in the mountain streams. On investigation this appeared to be very apparent, also some of the members were not sure that even they could attend for the same reasons, hence they would prefer a conference at some other time of the year. So upon consultation it was decided to take the second choice and meet at Springfeld, February 28th and

COMMUNICATION FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE OUORUM OF TWELVE.

I hereby give notice that per resolution adopted by the Quorum of the Twelve at their last sitting, the quorum will meet in the "Order of Enoch building," per courtesy of the meet in the "Order of Enoch building," per courtesy of the board of the Order. Independence, Mo., March 18, 1914, at all communications be in the and not written with pencil either lead or indelible). In view of the responsibility resting upon these brethren and the importance of the business they are expected to transact in the lotterests of the Church, such as appointing missionaries in all the world, and many other items of equal-interest in the cause of the Master, we feel desirous of soliciting the prayers and sympathy of all the church members, that our Father will bestow upon us his divine power to qualify these ministers for the peculiar duty and arduous work that have been committed to them by God and the Church.

Doard of the Outer Independence, Mo., Match 16, 1919, at ten o'clock in the morning.

Whoever may have business requiring the consideration and action of the Quorum will please forward the same to J. W. Rushton, 701 N. Cottage St., Independence, Mo. (Let all communications be in INK and not written with pencil cities led en indiliber.)

SUGGESTIONS.

It has been impressed upon my mind, and very forcibly for some months, that the hastening time is upon us as a church, and by reason of the many demands made upon us for preachers in all parts of the world, the suggestion has tor preachers in all parts of the world, the suggestion has been made to me that the appointing authorities should call for volunteers from among the young men of the Church, having authority to preach as priests and elders. At the same time it was propounded to me, "Why cannot many "5 these young men who have gained valuable experience in the several branches of the auxiliary work volunteer their services to the Church for a period of two or three years, in the active mission fields before they assume the responsibility of family life," family life."

When we consider that young men in the world in many countries give several years in the "army service;" it seems to be an ideal within our reach to arouse the eathusiasm of young men to show their love for God and the good of humanity to consecrate two or three years of their life in the effort to save souls and seek to establish the kingdom of God,

Not only would such service be acceptable to God and of immeasurable benefit to the Church, but such experience would be of great service to the men themselves in widening heir aympathies, giving them a most unique opportunity to understand life and human nature by direct contact and at the same time very helpfully assist such men in finding their place in Church service and develop good men as missionaries and also executive and pastoral ministers.

We recommend a consideration of this matter to our young men and pray that God will arouse in them a great desire to respond to the Church's need and this cell for the statement of the Savior, viz:—'The harvest is great and the laborers are few," was never truer than it is today.

Among the most desirable qualifications for such ministerial service as contemplated are the following:

First. To have a passion for souls and the serving of God.

Second. An upright life.
Third. Humility and a disposition to learn.
Fourth. The cultivation of spirituality by constant

While we do not specialize on education we nevertheless recommend that all who can take advantage of every oppor-tunity to educate themselves, not only in the grammer schools tunity to educate themselves, not only in the grammer schools and the high schools, but by a careful and systematic course of reading at home.

Those who are willing to respond to this call are invited to apply to the secretary, J. W. Rushton, for an application blank, which after filling in return not later than March 31st to his address.

Praying that the coming conference will be the best ever held, that the spirit of peace and good will may predominate in all things that God's will can be fulfilled in all things.

I am your brother and co-laborer,

Gomer T. Griffiths,
Pres. of the Quorum of Twelve Per 1. W. R.

DISAPPOINTMENT.

"He performeth the thing that is appointed for me." Job 13:14.

"Thou hast appointed his bounds that he cannot pass." Job 14:5.

"Disappointment—His appointment." Change one letter, then I see That the thwarting of my purpose
Is God's better choice for me. His appointment must bring blessing Though it may come in disguise; For the end from the beginning, Open to his wisdom lies.

"Disappointment-His appointment." Whose? The Lord's, who loves me best, Whose: The Lord's, who loves me fully, Who my faith and love would test; For like loving earthly parent, He rejoices when he knows That his child accepts unquestioned, All that from his wisdom flows.

"Disappointment—His appointment." ""No good thres will be withhold." From denials oft we gather Treasures of his love untold. Well he knows, each broken purpose Leads to fuller, deeper trust, And the end of all his dealings Proves our God is wise and just.

"Disappointment-His appointment." Lord, I take them, then, as much, Like the clay in hands of potter, Yielding wholly to thy touch. All my life's plan is thy moulding, Not one single choice be mine; Let me answer unrepining,

"Father, 'not my will, but thine.'"

WHO IS OUR MASTER?

While the question here propounded must be left to each individual to answer for himself there are some points which may well be considered in doing so. Under a possible self-deception as mentioned by Paul, a man may believe that he is serving God faithfully, and yet in a large measure be serving himself or the world. The possibility of being deceived by others who themselves are mistaken was considered so great by the Lord as to warrant the warning: "Take heed that no man deceive you," and many are led to accept doctrines and forms of worship, and to perform service supposedly for God and his kingdom, through the counsel of other men who themselves are deceived, so that after all much of such service fails to find acceptance with God and goes to build up the work of some other

It is natural that those who have made a profession of Christianity and have united with the churches of their choice, should allow their minds to settle down in serene satisfaction under the thought that they are now serving the one true God. But it may be noted that the many warnings against the danger of deception given in the New Testament were to those who counted themselves the followers of Christ, and the Lord emphasizes the necessity of men making their service for him conform strictly to his own in-structions so that the danger of deception may be removaŭ.

Referring to idolatry the Apostle Paul says "there be gods many and lords many," and though the worship of images has been dispensed with it can hardly be denied that there is abundant opportunity in the world today for idolatry and that much of the labor of men falls short of being done for the "honor and glory of God." A vain worship, which is not acceptable to God, cannot be anything but idolatry. A serving of self, or following the ways of sin is but another form of the same, which prevent those doing these things from having but "one Master."

"No man can serve two masters. . . . Ye can-not serve God and mammon," is the statement of Christ regarding those who seek to serve God while setting their hearts upon worldly treasures. God cannot be satisfied with a half-hearted service, and man should not be, for to serve the things of the world keeps him from God and the enjoyment of the blessings which a full service Christ said to his disof God renders possible. ciples: "One is your Master, even Christ," indicating that no heed should be given to other individuals advocating other claims or doctrines and demanding a service which would conflict with the service due to him.

Accepting Christ as our Master necessitates our becoming his servants, and unless our service is wholly after the requirements made by him we could hardly be called faithful servants. Christ expressed what he expected of his servants when he said: "If any man serve me, let him follow me," and following Christ would bring a complete separation from the things of vanity and sin which holds so many to the world, and requires that the steps which he took in compliance with the law should be taken as examples for others to follow. While repentance from sin and faith in God are taught as essential, the first formal step marking a separation from the world and a new relationship with God is

The New Birth.

This step was taken by Jesus as recorded in the third chapter of Matthew, be being paptized in water followed by the baptism of the Holy Spirit, which step he declared to be essential for every man who would enter into the kingdom of God. Paul speaks of this as the means of entering into a "newness of life," in which "we should not serve sin," but serve God "in newness of spirit."

The separation thus accomplished and the adoption of the new relationship of a servant to the one Master—Christ requires that such re-lationship be maintained faithfully against the allurements of other masters. Any yielding to one will be to an equal extent a withdrawal from the other, and whenever there exists a violation of the law in one point, the service will be incomplete and imperfect, and consequently unacceptable. Each requirement of the gospel law is linked with the others as in a chain, and where one vital part is violated by neglecting it, or by substitution or other change it renders the other parts ineffectual even though there may be a formal obsdience of them.

The man "in Christ Jesus," will have occasion to examine himself from day to day and judge of the extent of his service toward God and Christ, and if he discovers that the subtle influences of the world are drawing upon him for service it is time that he should renew his alignment with the whole law of Christ. If it be self that is demanding his service he will find it necessary to subject self to the will of his Master. If earthly treasures have caused him to lose sight of the divine treasures they should be put in the balance with those of heaven and their relative values weighed carefully and the more precious ones be made the object of future effort.

It has been said that when we are in the service of our fellow men we are in the service of God, and this is true. The toil of hand or brain when done in the interests of humanity is but a part of the service of God from which such labor in no wise detracts. "One is your Master, even Christ; and all ye are brethren," and every necessary service to each other is but doing the Master's work. We need no other master; we need no other doctrine but his; we need no other example; and a faithful obedience to him will bring every result which he has

WONDERS OF THE PULMOTOR.

The efforts of medicine and science toward the saving of human life, with few exceptions, have generally ceased when the bodily functions of the patient ceased. When the lungs ceased to breathe and the heart to beat, surrender was made to the angel of death, but not so now, at least in many cases. The invention of the Pulmotor by a German has made it possible to retain the life of many pa-tients who have "died" by restoring the action of the lungs and heart.

The Pulmotor is a simple apparatus, no larger than a suit case, consisting of a battery, an oxygyn tank, a pressure \quage, an inspirator, an operating bellows, a dashpot bellows, flexible tubing and a face cap. When applied to a patient it sets up artificial breathing which can be maintained indefinitely, one case in Kansas City recently requiring its use eleven hours.

· Its first use was by electrical companies in resuscitating employees or others who had been electrocuted, in which it was so effectual that it n began to be demanded for other cases of various kinds followed by the same success so that many have been actually restored from death. In cases of death now-a-days it will often be necessary to decide whether to call the undertaker or the Pulmotor.

The Kansas City Star relates a number of instances of remarkable recovery due to the Pulmotor which show the variety of the cases in which it can be used. A five year old girl "died" of diphtheria, and the attending physician believing it could be applied in the case with hopes of success sent a call for the Pulmotor. Fifteen minutes later it was in operation sending oxygen air into the lungs in rhythmic order, and in another fifteen minutes the doctor detected the first faint flutter of the heart, and a half hour later the child was sitting up. Today she is well. In-fants born "dead" which have failed to respond to all ordinary means, have answered the call to life of the Pulmotor with lusty cries.

It has been found effectual in cases of collapse during operations or from subsequent effects of operation. One woman who "died" from the shock of an operation was revived, and recovered. Persons asphyxiated by gases, or by drowning, or whose vital functions have been stopped by the electric shock, may usually be revived if the time elapsed is not too long. The Star says: "When death or suspended animation is the result of shock, of gas inhalation, of temporary paralysis from poison or any paralysis producing cause—when there is no disease or injury to the vital organs, the Pulmotor is almost certain to revive animation and to bring the patient back to life."

The Pulmotor is one of the helpful inventions of the age and every town, and hospital, should have one ready for service at all times. Its possibilities for saving human life are great.

THE POWER TO BE CALM.

The mind never puts forth greater power over itself than when, in great trials, it yields up calmly its desires, affections, interests to God. There are seasons when to be still demands im-measurably higher strength than to act. Composure is often the highest result of Think you it demands no power to calm the stormy elements of passion, to moderate the vehemence of desire, to throw off the load of de-jection, to suppress every repining thought, when the dearest hopes are withered, and to turn the wounded spirit from dangerous reveries and wasting grief to the quiet discharge of ordinary duties? Is there no power put forth, when a man, stripped of his property, of the fruits of a life's labors, quells discontent and gloomy fore-bodings, and serenely and patiently returns to the tasks which Providence assigns?—William E. Channirg. Channing.

The doing of the will of God leaves no time for disputing about his plans.

Man has wants deeper than can be supplied by wealth or nature or domestic affections. His great relations are to his God and eternity.—Mark Hopkins.

A CONFERENCE DAILY.

We have decided to issue a conference daily giving a report of the conventions and conference. With our present equipment we are in a position to get out an accurate report promptly. Further particulars will be announced later. Watch for particulars will be announced later.

INDEPENDENCE ITEMS.

The committee on general conference entertainment appointed on the 4th, consisting of W. D. Bullard, Lester Haas, and Dan Shirk, reported on the 11th their recommendations which were adopted by the branch. Upon its recommendation M. H. Siegfried and Eli Etzenhouser were associated with the committee. Board during general conference will be $3.50 per week, lodging $1 per week. Meals will be served at the hall as heretofore; breakfast 10 cents, 15 cents or 20 cents as desired, dinner 20 cents and supper 20 cents. Conference visitors should apply early for lodging assignments, addressing the secretary of the committee, L. A. Haas, Box 115, Independence, Mo.

Rogers. The spaces between the ceiling and the floor above are made available as air passages by connecting them with the windows on either side, openings being made at different points on other side, openings being made at different points of the ceiling and which are covered a few inches below the ceiling with protectors to prevent any draft from falling upon the people's heads. By a proper regulation of the windows connected with these ventilators fresh air can be distributed evenly throughout the room, or a suction created which will draw out the foul air. The

Bro. M. H. Bond has disposed of his home "Sunnyside" on Lexington road, and expects to move into his recently purchased home on North River Boulevard near the new school building by March 15th. Bro. Bond has quite a large assortment of household goods, including rugs, furniture, etc., also horse, harness, carriages, which he proposes to dispose of very cheap. These things can be had for half price if taken at once.

Bishop R. Bullard was the Sunday morning speaker, and Elder M. F. Gowell spoke in the evening. The afternoon prayer service was quite good, the spirit of prophecy being manifested.

Bishop Ellis Short and wife left last Friday for Scam-mon, Kansas, to attend the conference of the Spring River District which convened Saturday. He expects to make a tour of the district before returning.
Our Hedrickite Neighbors.

The dissensions of the members of the "Hedrickite Church, or "Church of Christ," on the "Temple Lot," were discussed at much length in Judge Kimbrough Stone's Court today. The arguments were on a demurrer in the case of James A. Hedrick and others against George P. Frisbey and others.

For a year past trouble has been brewing, owing to differences of belief among the members. divided themselves into two groups around these two leaders. Last summer the differences reached an acute stage. Hedrick is a son of Granville Hedrick, the founder of this sect of Mormonism, and stood firmly on the faith of his father. The Frisbey faction gave a different in-terpretation to what other members of the church consider fundamental of the church faith.

On July 5, an injunction suit was brought by the Hed-rick faction against the Frisbey faction. Hearick declared that a meeting had been called for the afternoon of that day for the purpose of deposing him from the presiding day for the purpose of deposing him from the presiding eldership, or the presidency, in order that the other faction might have exclusive control of the church property and also direct the general policy of the church. He said they would also depose him as a trustee of the church, in which case he would forfeit all of his rights in the councils of the church and all control over the sacred "Temple Lot."

sacred "Temple Lot."

The hearing on the injunction took place on the day it was brought. Judge Stone granted a temporary restraining order, so far as Hedrick's trusteeship in the church property was concerned, but took the position that a civil court had no right to interfere with reference to the presidency or spiritual leadership of the church.

As soon as Judge Stone had announced that decision there was an immediate adjournment of the warring Hedrickites from the court room to their little church on the Temple Lot, and inside of an hour Hedrick had been deposed as presiding elder, and George P. Frisbey, who had formerly been presiding elder, was put in Hed-

Since then the two parties have been gathering evidence and preparing for the legal battle which will take place some time in the final hearing of the case. The defendants retained Colonel John N. Powell, formerly judge of this division of the circuit court, and R. B. Garnett were present this morning for Hedrick. In a lengthy argument to Judge Stone, Judge Powell contended that Hedrick stood for the pure faith of the church as taught by his father, and that the date facility was heartered as any head as that the other faction were heretics and as such had no-legal right to molest Hedrick either in his spiritual leadership or in the holding and management of the church property.

Owing to the delicate dectrinal and legal questions and the property "egats involved, Judge Stone did not render a decision, but took the relater under advisement.—Independence Examiner, February 14th.

INDEPENDENCE SECOND BRANCH.

Sunday school had an attendance of 239, collection $4.70. At 11 o'clock Bishop E. L. Kelley was the speaker, and we were treated to one of his timely discourses, one that attracted attention, for I think no speaker hold the at-tention of their hearers better. The Savior never did attracted attention, for I think no speaker held the attention of their heavers better. The Savior never did ask more of his disciples in the way of administering the law than he was willing to do himself. "Ye call me Master." The master must not be greater than those who are served. The speaker exhorted his hearers to be mindful of these things, they were not to be justified by observing a part of the law, but must keep the whole law, for one portion is of as much importance as any other part of the law, that the temporal law must be observed as well as the spiritual, insisting that they cannot be separated one from the other. To believe the Bible is to do the things it teaches. Let none be satisfied with present the things it teaches. Let none be satisfied with present conditions, but go on and improve, and the time will come when you can say, "I have fought a good fight, and have kept the faith."

kept the faith."

A more perfect analysis and complete rendering of the word "charity" has never been my lot to hear than that given by Bro. J. A. Tanner at the 7:30 p. m. hour. It was taken up thread at a time and followed from beginning to ending. One may give all he has of this world's goods for the support of the needy, and for that matter give his body to be burned, yet if he is not of an even temper, and without guile, or envious, not kind, not willing to suffer long,he is not in possession of charity.

We filled our Windsor appointment on Sunday, having two pleasant services in our little meeting room. In the evening we listened to a sermon by Bro. Reiste in Santa Rosa. We met a genial treatment in both places, attending the Religio in Santa Rosa and Sr. Ada Bell's splendid home class in Windsor where she is doing a good work for her own family and some neighbor children.

We were called by telegram to Ukiah to attend the funeral of Sr. Evalinah Erskine on Wednesday. Last Sunday Bro. V. M. Goodrich and the writer went to San Bernardino for the purpose of visiting Sr. Dahl, recently confined to the hospital there by a nervous and mental strain which proved to be greater than the phy-sical system could sustain; she has made some improvement, but the conditions were so unfavorable, we were made to realize the wisdom of the revelation providing for the building of the Sanitarium, where patients might have the benefit of medical attention and still not be deprived of administration under favorable conditions. Bro. George Wixom accompanied the visit to the hospital and while the attendants were very courteous we were not permitted to have any degree of privacy for prayer or administration but it was recommended that we pray or auministration but it was recommended that we prove at home, or get a permit from the doctor. But the doctor was engaged in an operation and could not be seen, so we simply prayed the best we could under the circumstances, but feel grateful that God has provided a sanitarium for the church.

The morning of mountains and the New London, Iowa, R. 1, Jan .18.

Editor Ensign:—I am an isolated saint and do not have surch privileges very often, but in November Bro. O. R. Miller of Burlington, Iowa, held a two weeks' meeting, and such inspiring sermons he did preach. It made the few isolated saints' hearts burn with love for each other low isolated saints hearts burn with love for each other and the gospel; I hope the outsiders were enlightened on many points of the Scriptures. We had good crowds most of the time. I guess the lecture on Mormonism was an eye-opener to many. Dro. Lawrence Willey worked faithfully and hard for the success of the meetings. Oh! I am so glad I am a Latter Day Saint, for I know now I worship a God that does hear and a my prayers.

The first day of August, 1913, in the evening about sundown, my husband and little daughter and I were returning home when an auto frightened our horse which upset the buggy throwing us out. My husband was unconscious for some time. The doctor said every ligament was torn loose around my head and neck and that I had a little hemorrhage of the brain, that I had to stay in bed and not raise up for nine weeks. That was quite discouraging to me as I had been planning to attend the required of the stay of the control of the prayer of reunion at Montrose, Iowa. The next day the doctor said I was partly paralyzed and there was danger of brain fever. I had such hot burning pains in my head and I realized I was hurt worse than I thought at first. I also w I wouldn't be able to attend the reunion unless the Lord would aid me, and I can testify he did answer my prayers and gave me strength to go to Montrose the 25th prayers and gave me strength to go to Montrose the 25th day of August. Brn. Parks and McDonald administered to me and the Lord healed me. To him be all the honor and glory. I do hope I will so live as to be worthy of his many blessings. The reunion was grand and the campers had a fine spiritual time. I ask the prayers of all the saints that I may ever live faithful and endure to the end and have part in the first resurrection.

Independence, Mo., Jan. 29. Editor Ensign:—The glad tidings that you convey to us as the weeks come and go, are like apples of gold set in pictures of silver; and no one should be without the silent preacher, when such intelligence is brought us each week of the onward march of the Israel of God, and the spread of the gospel't'broughout the world, and the coming of King Jesus to reign with his people on the earth, his millennial reign of a thousand years. Why shouldn't all saints feel to sing, "O happy day, when Jesus washed my sins away," and build up such a character that will stand in their favor in the judgment day, when the harvest is nast, and the supmer is ended? The when the harvest is past, and the summer is ended? The signs of the times indicate the near advent of our Savior to this earth, and are we ready? But yet I feel to sing:

In the world of sin and sorrow, Mid the trials of each day We can draw support from Jesus, Strength to help us on our way.

Chorus Jesus, Jesus ,Blessed Savior, He who's seated up on high, He who came to save poor sinners, Sinners just like you and I.

Hear the angel's proclamation. Peace on earth, good will to man, Hear ye now the pleasing story, It's the message from on high.

It's the angel's invitation, To the world the warning cry, Of the coming of the Savior Here on earth with saints to reign

'Tis the message from our Savior, That will bring us near the throne. And with lovely, precious Jesus, Reign with him forever more.

To my mind we ought to be, and we can be, the happiest people on all the face of the earth. When we look through the prophetical eye and see the beattiful promises from God, why shouldn't we try and cheer up, and be joyful in the warfare. And when the battle is over we can build our house and inhabit it, and plant our vineyards and eat the fruit of them. (Isaiah 65:21.) And we shall be satisfied, and long enjoy the work of our hands. With these excellent promises of our everlasting and eternal home, what manner of reconle ought we to be? But nevhome, what manner of people ought we to be? But nev-ertheless, we look for a new heaven and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness. Then there will be the law of equality ministered out to all the Israel of God. I am yours truly, J. C. Foss.

Dear Ensign:-I am always instructed and comforted Dear Ensign:—I am always instructed and comforted by perusing your pages, noting the many splendid arti-cles, testimonies and letters, which indicate the advance-ment of this marvelous work. I spent the past summer at my son, Arthur Yates' home near Seiling, Oklahoma, coming here just before the holidays. I have been stop-ping must of the time at the home of Bro. and Sr. A. W.

Sanders.
Nearly two weeks ago Sr. Sanders and myself drove to Geary and a dog scared our team and I was throw out onto the wheel injuring my left side quite seriously. I was taken three and a half miles to the home of Bro. Harvey Williams and was helpless. Bro. Powell (also a doctor) came and administered to me; I could help myself much better, and was brought no to Bro. Sanders' the next morning. There was a heavenly influence in Bro. Williams' home as they all knelt to ask the dear Lord to bless and healGrandma Crawley. Then when here loving hands administered to my every want I felt that in the church of Christ among the saints there is in both a temporal and spiritual sense, a balm for every wound. It was the first Sunday in the month and a goodly number gathered for prayer and testimony and to partake of the sacrament. It was truly a time of rejoicing for blessings received, a time of sweet peace, the very gate of heaven to our souls. I have not words to express my gratitude to the dear saints of this household and of all the homes in this place for their kindness and deeds of love and consolation. My prayers are and shall ever be that the riches of cternity may be theirs to enjoy. "Behold they that have eternal life are rich." riches of eternity may be theirs to enjoy. "Behold they that have eternal life are rich."

I want to thank the sames for the interest day interfected in the case of my son, James Yates. I feel to thank them all out of a grateful heart from our beloved President Joseph, to saints in different parts of the land for the prayers that were offered in his behalf. These beautiful lines came to my mind:

Ye fearful saints, fresh courage take, The clouds ye so much dread Are big with mercies, and shall break With blessings on your heads.

the Lord bless his saints and especially richly endow them in the coming general conference.

Your sister in the everlasting covenant, Mrs. H. A. Crawley.

Editor Ensign:-The brethren of Edmonton went to some expense, to get up, and set up, six bulletin boards in six public places in the city; heading the notice there--"The Angel's Message," and marking thereunder, Revelation 14:6.7.

We had no sooner got them up, when here comes the "Ensign," (a paper noted heretofore, for its good sermons, articles, and letters, in fact, a missionary paper of holis, arctices, and received, in account of the first water,) containing an article, emphatically stating that the angel of Revelation 14:6,7, has not come yet. Notwithstanding, church history shows that Moroni came as an angel of God, and brought the plates from which the Book of Mormon was translated, and the Lord says in Doctrine and Covenants, that said Book of Mormon Doctrine and Covenants, that said Book of Mormon "contains the fullness of the gospel."

Besides I think I am safe in saying, that there has been but few elders, holding a series of meetings of ten days duration, who have not referred to said fourteenth of Revelation and took the ground therefrom; that the angel has come, and restored the gospel, in all of its fullness.

But I have never listened to any of said elders, who have taken the ground, that Moroni, has nothing further to do, or that he may not be one of the angels who is yet to come; with an additional message to declare, or that he may declare the same. And I have been one of the elders, who has been of the opinion, that I was called upon to declare the message with a loud voice, as it is said that the elders should do in Doctrine and Covenants 108.

But worst of all; if the brother is correct, then our Book of Covenants has the appendicitis, and has it bad; for does not the appendix to the book, known as Section 108, break out in two places, and say, that the angel has come, that the Lord has sent him with the gospel?

come, that the Lord has sent him with the gospel?

And if not, what gospel have we been preaching all these eighty-three years? Besides, when the angel does come, will he bring another than that which we have been preaching? Now if the book has really got the appendititis, then a council of doctors of divinity should be called at once; for if the article be correct, the appendix should be extracted, or it will be sure to kill the book.

Life, and immortality have been brought to light, through the gospel. Amen, so mote it be.

Evansville, Wis., Jan, 24. Dear Ensign:---As I have never written to your ever welcome paper I wish to drop a few lines to make known how the saints are getting along in Evansville, Wis. I must say that the Lord has not forgotten us yet, we have been enjoying his Spirit in a very marked degree. Bro. B. C. Flint has held a week's meeting at our house and the Spirit was with him in power, which encouraged the saints here very much. There were not many outsiders to our meeting, but those who did come seemed very much interested. One young man told us that he never was interested so much in religion until he heard the Latter Day Saints, and he said if any of our elders were around here next summer that he would like to have them come out to their farm and hold meetings there; he said he liked the preaching of Bro. Flint very much must say that the Lord has not forgotten us yet, we have come out to their tarm and not interdings there; it is said.

We also have a fine Sunday school and Religio here. I am vice president of the Religio, which I think is a very interesting study and I hope the Lord will bless his work and people everywhere, and I know he will if we live up to all his commandments. Now may God bless all who are willing to serve him in deed and in truth.

Your brether in Christ, R. E. Grasshoff.

Independence, Mo., Jan.20. Editor Ensign:—A few words to your readers, whom I greet in the truth. This finds me hopeful if not as helpful in the gospel as I would desire to be; limited by conditions which I will not take time nor space to explain. I cannot travel as a missionary at present, but am doing what I can in and around Independence and Kansas City. This calls to mind the time when I was given up to die of pneumonia at Jonesport, Maine, about twenty years ago. I sent for Bro. J. C. Foss some seventy-five miles away, and when he administered to me he said: "You will get to Kansas City; I saw you there. I don't know whether you will get any further or not, but you will get there." After this I saw myself in a dream at the Union Depot, Kansas City. It was very doubtful for a long time after I took the long, hard journey, for me not fully restored, whether I would take any other journey. However, in time I recovered, and since have had two more severe struggles with pneumonia, and as it seems to me, miraculous recoveries from it. I am not cold proof by any means.

I believe, notwithstanding my limitations, that I am as much interested in the spread of the gospel as I have ever been, and my greatest satisfaction and joy in life is in imparting it under the influence of the Spirit, whether to an audience of one or many, whether to saint or sinner. I like to preach to either, and have just as good times in talking to individuals, sometimes lengthilly, and sometimes in writing sermon letters, as in public work that the church knows all about through reports or work that the church knows all about through reports or otherwise.

I try to be busy sowing the seed; receiving or imparting good. When I cannot do one thing, I do another, and am not as idle as I might seem to some, possibly. and am not as inde as I might seem to some, possibly. Christmas day, a day impossible to use or improve in much active or public missionary effort, I did nevertheless a somewhat hard day's work. I refer to a sermon letter in rhyme, which was a reply to a letter I received.

I have hardly known at times this year, whether I was a missionary in or out of the field, such have been my conditions. I began missionary work and succeeded conditions. I began missionary work and succeeded in getting some into the church before I became officially a missionary; I am still fishing for men, or sowing seed and expect to as long as I have strength, ability and opportunity. I do not consider that my life has been spared for any other purpose, so do not dare to branch out into the field of speculation and money getting. Having put my hand to the plow, it is not my choice to turn back, but labor on as all the conditions may admit, and I sincerely hone they will admit of larger rather than turn back, but labor on as all the conditions may admit, and I sincerely hope they will admit of larger rather than smaller operations in gospel work. Our experiences of trial and detention have their value as well as those of liberation and larger action. "All things are working together for good to those who love good," and the time of preparation and process of refining with a view to use and action is first to be thought of, or quality first, quantity second in God's work. "Let every man take heed how he build thereon."

Now is the accented time for certing ready to do.

Now is the accepted time for getting ready to do things. We are not doing things very fast. We are trying to do things and failing. It has been so comparaing to 0 things and failing. It has been so compara-tively with the whole church history from 1830 until now. There is a great need, as expressed in the revelations, of our getting ready to do things; then will we be able to do them. Let us legitimately obtain the strength, the power to redeem Zion, that Zion may go forth. I the power to redeem Zion, that Zion may go forth. It do not care how hard one may try to do things, or how many may try to do things that they are not ready to do, they cannot do them. "Be ye also ready." I place the stress on getting ready for action all along the line, and as I see it, we are not ready, ministers or members. Let us make the preparation as thorough as possible by general conference time. The quality of our work and life cannot be too good. The quantity may be too large to square with the specifications, when every man's work is tested—"of what sort it is."

He who gathers, or meditates gathering to Zion, should square himself with the law as interpreted by the proper authorities. Those who do not contemplate an immediate move, should also be ready by full compliance with every provision of the law. This ought to be the West Point or the Annapolis; the training school of our army and navy. There ought to be no drones here, or no untrained and undisciplined ones. Such is the demand of the time, the place and the law.

I am striving to meet the demand; to be ready. We I am striving to meet the demand; to be ready. We cannot hasten God's part. He has said, "I will hasten my work in its time." Zeal, diligence and faithfulness in preparation, readiness for action. will admit of motive or spirit power for action. The few will receive it if the many will not; those who call on the Lord in mighty prayer; those who pray without ceasing. Those who don't know what this means are not doing it, evidently. There needs to be a spirit of "I will not let Thee go until thou bless me," with every individual, every day, until that which is needed that day is given. which is needed that day is given.

which is needed that day is given.

We can never live in tomorrow; we can always live in today. Tomorrow knows no salvation; today is the day. "After today, cometh the burning, speaking after the manner of the Lord." How precious, how fraught with possibility is today! Is our attitude right? God's must be. To say, "I will not let myself go until I make myself ready for the blessing. This is the attitude needed. Today is my day. Today is your day, dear brother, dear friend. Tomorrow is nobody's day that fails to improve today. To enjoy tomorrow, enjoy today. The more I respond to today, the more today responds to me, and each succeeding day is better than the last, each new year than the past. We should be dealing with days rather than years; in resolution each day rather than in new resolutions each year.

The gifts of God are in the church, if we live for them we may receive them. If we enjoy the world, or rejoice in the world and what it has to offer, we don't rejoice in the Lord, and have no testimony to bear. In separation from the world, "hating even the garment spotted by the flesh," we have "God with us," a "present help in every time of need." He knows our hearts, as to whether we love him or the world, and what he wants is "the The gifts of God are in the church, if we live for them heart and a willing mind." He can overlook mistakes in a willing mind and pure heart.

May God bless his Israel; may he inspire his servants of every office and calling. All need the power of God in their work, and the "effectual working in the measure of every part," or inspired and united action. We need more inspired, united action, if I judge rightly. We, not I, nor you, can obtain it, if we seek it. No one man is all, no one man is small. None should say to me, "I have no need of thee." I should say to none, "I have no need of thee." General recognition by every part or member of the value, worth and usefulness, of every other part of the value, worth and usefulness, of every other part or member is needed. Great is the value of every office, every quorum, every gift of God to the church. Jealousy is painful; revery gut or God to the church. Jealousy is painful; ruel as the grave. May it have no place in us. Give every office a chance; deny none the right to work; encourage all; assist all; uphold all, and God will bless all with every needed blessing. Withhold from a brother that which is his right and due, wherever present; in branch or district; in territory organized or unorganized and many first and descriptions.

I don't know how it was, or entirely why it was, but in answer to my earnest heart's desire before I knew or in answer to my earnest heart's desire before I knew or heard of this church as being anything, I heard spiritually the words, "I have need of thee," and this has at times somewhat comforted me, when at times I have in the estimation of some, not been needed in their locality. I saw the need differently, but what could I do? It is no act of charity or benevolence when a beggar comes to the door, to recommend him to another house or neighborhood in many or in few words. Are we not all beggars, dependent on God if not on each other to some extent? Who can stand or work alone successfully? Until we learn to work together, not you to do my bidding, or I to do yours, but unitedly to do God's bidding as directed in his law and by his Spirit from time to time, we cannot prosper greatly. we cannot prosper greatly.

We cannot prosper greatly.

May the day of union, of love, of peace of power, be bestened for the sake of scattered Israel, if not the Gentics. They have about filled their measure of pride and iniquity. Let us keep just as far from their ways as Christ's example and teaching will warrant us. I hope Christ's example and teaching will warrant us. I hope to see the church and ministry so organized for the work, ready in that regard to do and accomplish according to the pattern of the revelations, that success will be assured. The revelations make the demand. The need makes the demand. I make the demand, at least upon myself, to be a willing party to all necessary and legitimate preparation. Each can study for himself and know the scope and details of it, and thus be approved of God. I am glad it is for any man to know of the doctrine, otherwise I would be left out, but I don't wish anyone to be left out who is willing to include himself, but rather to left out who is willing to include himself, but rather to recognize that he is a factor of importance, who is a factor at all. My only hope and help is in the gospel and its broad and bountiful provisions I do rely on these, and man as he harmonizes with them, no mo Yours in the gospel,

Dear Ensign:—I would like to ask if there are any saints living in Tomahawk, Wisconsin? If so would be glad if they would drop a card addressed to me and give their name and residence. I will be visiting there soon and think some good might be accomplished if I can find a fow of the faith. a few of the faith.

Dear Ensign:—We are few in number but we are trying to hold our own and sowing the good seed to others who me housest in heart. We have Sunday school and prayer meeting every suutay which we enjoy very much. Jasper O Dutton was the first one to open up the work here. Bro. Fint and K. D. Davis have done a good work here also. We are atlays glad to have the missionaries come this way. Pray for me that I may be faithful to the end.

As ever in gospel bonds,

Culbertson, Mont., Jan.5. Dear Ensign:-We can say the work is onward here. and little by little we believe we as a people are advanc-ing. Eastern Montana is a new field. Now there are two branches organized and perhaps another will be in the near future

In our branch here at Culbertson we number thirtyeight, and we expect more will be baptized the 7th inst. At yesterday's service Bro. Vere Davis was called to office of deacon and Bro. Eli Bronson to the office of teacher. Now our branch has a full quorum of officers, or will have if those in charge see fit to ordain these brethren.

have it those in charge see nt to ordain these breamen. The Lord certainly met with us in our meeting and it was a day of rejoicing indeed.

We hope to have a church in the near future. Our Sunday school has numbered as many as sixty-five and it has seemed almost an intrusion upon those who have so kindly opened their house so long for services. I should say houses, for all who have had homes large enough have opened their doors without complaint. Have had beautiful weather so far this winter. Have had beautiful weather so far this winter. The people here do not seem very anxious to accept the angel's message, but we are hopeful the honest in, heart may be gathered in. The local brethren have tried to warn their neighbors with no great success. In fact little results can be seen. Bro. James C. Page also has labored here both at fireside and in the pulpit, also Bro. W. R. Smith. We hope good may yet be done. With best wishes to the missionary paper, I am,

WHEN SHALL THE NATIONS HEAR THE GOSPEL?

By Elder W. A. Sinclair, M. D. Considering the smallness of the body of worshippers who have been intrusted with the divine commission, to publish the glad news of redeeming grace, this question becomes of intense interest to us.

Many have stated that this all important work must be accomplished prior to the coming of Jesus Christ to reign on the earth over his saints; but is this true?

Such a question demands careful attention, for if it really does mean that all nations shall hear the gospel before the coming of Christ it also means that the ones commissioned have a most stupendous issue confronting them.

But does it really say that this is the case? Let us look into the subject and see, that we are not deceived.

Jesus says: "And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world, for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come."---Matthew 24:14.

And John says: "And I saw another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people, saying with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to him; for the hour of his judgment is come; and worship him who made heaven, and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of water."-Revelation 14:6,7.

Both of these quotations signify that the gospel will be preached to the nations; with that portion we are in perfect harmony, but when shall it reach its full fruition is the question of importance.

The statements seem perfectly plain, and are only misleading to the extent that we look at them with our minds clouded by some preconceived idea.

There is not a word said about this being accomplished previous to the coming of Christ, but, previous to the end, and just before the judgment.

Certainly the work of witnessing is commenced previous to the second advent of the Christ, but it is to continue during the thousand years of Christ's reign, and is essentially fulfilled during

From all appearances it would be an utter impossibility to witness before such nations as are under the domination of papal power, and as for the heathen nations they are reserved for a future campaign.

The time seems hardly opportune for this witnessing this side of the advent of Christ, for when he comes the power of the beast is broken and the minds of the people are freed from the awful power which has held them in servitude.

Let us look into the work that is to be accomplished during the millennium and probably we may discover some solution to the question.

We find that the saints, or the church of God, are to occupy positions as priests of God and Christ, according to Revelation 20:6; and in Doctrine and Covenants 76:7, it says that God makes them equal in power, in might, and in dominion.

A priest is one whose duty is to teach the law of God; the whole celestial glory, during the millennium are designated as priests or teachers, they themselves, "See as they are seen, and know as they are known, and are equal in all things." (D. and C. 76:7). Therefore, they cannot be the teachers of each other, so there must be individuals outside of the celestial for them to teach.

Let us search the Scriptures to see if we cannot discover other people who may be permitted to have part in the first resurrection, or millennium, who are of an inferior intelligence; for if this should be discovered we would have a solution to the present problem.

We find that away back in the ages. God selected a certain family and made promises regarding them, which were to continue down through the ages until the second coming of Christ.

He chose this particular company of individuals and their posterity, to be his own; promising them the earth and the fullness thereof. In process of time he made his advent, and when presented to these, his own people, they refused to accept him.

Still the promises remained; they could not be altered, though the time of their fulfillment was delayed. Nearly two thousand years have passed since their rejection of the Christ, but still the promise remains though they rejected him, and though they still reject him. When will they be fulfilled?

The Jews were scattered all over the earth, but we are told they will return and build their city up, and that Jerusalem shall again be inhabited. "There shall yet old men and old women dwell in the streets of Jerusalem, and every man with his staff in his hand for very age. And the streets of the city shall be full of boys and girls playing in the streets thereof."---Zechariah 8:4,5.

But even though the Lord shows his goodness to them in allowing them to return to their ancient habitations, they still reject the Christ and his gospel. They gather in great numbers, until the city is full and overflowing, and the wealth of the nations are stored up in their possessions; finally a great battle is waged against the Jew, by the other nations, "and the city shall be taken, and the houses rifled, and the women ravished: and half of the city shall go forth into captivity, and the residue of the people shall not be cut off from the city. Then shall the Lord go forth, and fight against those nations, as when he fought in the day of battle. And his feet shall stand in that day upon the mount of Olives, which is before Jerusalem on the east, and the mount of Olives shall cleave in the midst thereof,"-Zech.

The battle is fought and victory gained, then the Jews crowd around to see their Deliverer, and they are amazed at the wounds in his hands and feet; and one shall say unto him. "What are these wounds in thine hands? Then shall he answer, Those with which I was wounded in the house of my friends."-Zech. 13:6.

"In that day there shall be a fountain opened to the house of David and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem for sin and uncleanness."—Zech. 13:1.

This is in the millennium, and it seems to me, that no matter how much we may desire to convert the Jew, our work in that line will be a failure until the prophecy uttered by Zachariah has had its fulfillment, and it also seems to me, that it is at this time that the Book of Mormon will find its real worth, as it states, that its purpose is to "convince the Jew that Jesus is the Christ." It is here, at this time that they accept the Christ, but this is after he has made his advent the second time: they cannot be sanctified by a simple acknowledgement of the Christ, they must learn the laws of the kingdom, therefore, the need of

Let us see further regarding this same event. "And it shall come to pass, that every one that is left of all the nations which came against Jerusalem shall even go up from year to year to worship the King, the Lord of hosts, and to keep the feast of tabernacles. And it shall be, that whose will not come up of all the families of the earth unto Jerusalem to worship the King, the Lord of hosts, even upon them shall be no rain." Zech. 14:16,17.

According to this account there are to be remnants of all the nations during the millennium; these will also need teaching. And again:-

"And then shall the heathen nations be redeemed and they that knew no law shall have part in the first resurrection. (D. and C. 45:10). These will also need instruction in the gospel of Christ: who is going to instruct them?

Now if those who knew no law will have part in the first resurrection, then it is reasonable to presume that all those of the same order will likewise have the same privilege. And so we read in Doctrine and Covenants 76:6, regarding the terrestrial world:-

"Behold, these are they who died without law; (The same class spoken of in section 45;) and also they who are the spirits of men kept in prison, whom the Son visited, and preached the gospel unto them, that they might be judged according to men in the flesh, who received not the testimony of Jesus in the flesh, but afterwards received it; these are they who are the honorable men of the earth, who are blinded by the craftiness of men; these are they who receive of his glory, these are they who are not valiant in the testimony of Jesus."

Now it seems very plain that there will be a great concourse of people on the carth during the thousand years, the last hour of the world's history, the hour of God's judgment, so much so that it will need the entire celestial kingdom as priests (and by the way, that will include women priests as well as men, for sex is lost sight of, so far as special privilege is concerned, resurrection, "there is neither male nor female." distinction) to instruct the nations.

What nations have we got there:—The heathen nations, they who knew no law, the Jews, the terrestrial kingdom, and fragments of all the nations that fought against Jerusalem. The whole house of Israel as represented in the valley of dry bones. And the greatest concourse of all, the children who will be born during the millennium, a mighty multitude.

But even the preaching during the thousand years will not save all those privileged to hear it, for we read that as soon as Satan is loosed from the prison house, he goes forth to these nations which are in the four quarters of the earth, designated as Gog and Magog, to gather them together to battle; the number of whom is as the sand of the sea."—Revelation 20:7.8.

This gives us some idea of what there is outside of the camp of the saints.

"And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations, and then shall the end come."

"And I saw another angel fly in the midst of heaven having the everlasting gospel to preach to them who dwell on the earth, and to every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people, saying with a loud voice, fear God and give glory to him, for the hour of his judgment is come."

The nations have arisen, the priests have taught them, the gleaning is over, the judgment has come, that is the general judgment, the end of the world has been ushered in, and the rewards been given,

The millennium is the great period when the nations will hear the gospel and be saved or condemned thereby.

Think this over.

BAPTISM OF CHILDREN AND OTHER POINTS EXPLAINED.

(A Letter).

Lamoni, Iowa, January, 1914. Dear Brother and Sister M-

Replying to your letter and questions of January 15th I will say that I desire to help you to understand the subjects you inquire about, and I ask the Lord to assist me by his inspiring Spirit in doing so.

First, you speak about the baptism of children at the age of eight years, and you say that your brother and wife think they are too young to understand at that age.

I answer that the Lord does not say that he is ready to receive and accept all children at the age of eight years under present conditions He gives that age as the proper one for those who are, and who have been rightly instructed by their parents as to their moral and spiritual duties, for their own happiness here and hereafter.

Those who are not instructed, who have not been informed, or who are not guided, such are not ready. Such are not as accountable as they would have been had they been properly taught. But their parents are if they have the means of information themselves for their own guidance in the Lord's salvation.

We can all see that a child before he is eight years old, unless he was born in a slum, or of degraded parents and surrounded by vice, knows the difference between the truth and a lie, and the difference between honsty and stealing, and if he or she is the child of moral parents then a normal child at that age knows the difference between clean language and decent conduct and unclean language and vile conduct; also the necessity for being honest in dealing and truthful in speech, and that cheating and lying are very great sins and evils in the world, evils because these things will end in trouble and suffering to themselves and ofttimes to others also sooner or later.

Here then is the basis of moral agency and responsibility, and a boy or girl who has been properly instructed knows at the age of eight years the real facts of righteousness required in life and conduct, the principles of virtue and honor and honesty, unless the parents have sadly failed in their own conduct as to truth-telling and honorable dealing in their associations.

Now when normal, reasonable boys and girls have come to such understanding of their own responsibility as to truth, honesty and decency, they are acceptable before the Lord, and if they so choose, they are prepared for the next step, namely, baptism, and to enter by the door into the kingdom of God, and with such teaching by the parents, there can be no doubt as to their acceptability with him who has stated the age or time when he will accept them under those conditions. But the child is not ready without that instruction; nor should we baptize such. However the Lord has given this word that with the right influence and teaching in the home he will accept children at that age. And of course he is the one to decide that matter.

I remember how a certain girl named Helen grew to comprehend the principles of righteousness and the necessity of obedience to all good laws till at the age of eight she was fully ready for the ordinance of baptism. At that age she understod all that she could and all that the Lord requires before obedience. She had grown into that state by inquiry and study, through her mother's teaching. Her parents did not coax nor drive, nor did they need to do so, but both at home and in the Sunday school she asked and learned, and readily came along in the path the Lord has marked out for all.

I do not know that I am able to say more to make it plain. It seems clear to me that if parents are actively and prayerfully working for their children's future as well as for their present living, they will find the plan of God not hard, nor their children disobedient, not many such at least.

Of course there is not one parent in a thousand but who has a temper to overcome, and nearly all have some things in their natures which needs to be brought into subjection, and thereby we all know that it is not easy to win the battle for ourselves and help our children win theirs. But it is said that Christ himself learned obedience by the things which he suffered, and that he was "made perfect by suffering." How much more necessary then that our imperfections should hive to be trimmed off in order to save ourselves and our children? We need to conquer, and help them to conquer by our instruction and correction.

In the millennium children born will inherit good qualities, because as the time goes on parents will have learned the higher ideals of gentleness, patience, love for their fellow men, self-control, as well as virtue, honesty, and general good behavior, and there will not be the evil inheritance that now exists. Even now we see those who have by birth a higher sense of truth, justice, mercy, kindness, helpfulness, self-sacrifice for others than the majority of us have.

I hope and pray that you will see the Lord's meaning, because it is so good and satisfactory to have an understanding of our heavenly Father's purposes concerning the present and eternal happiness of mankind, including ourselves.

I will now write about the existence of God, giving a few of the chief reasons why we should believe that he lives. First, it seems to me far easier, from the existing proofs, to believe there is a Creator, or that God is, than to believe that there is no God. I believe that the majority of those who say they doubt there is a God do so because of the unhappy condition of so many of mankind on this earth, because of the evils that exist, and the wrongs that are done by human beings to others, and because these evils and wrongs are not corrected immediately, or as soon as we think they ought to be corrected by the personage called God.

Of course there could be written many pages of reasons for, and explanations why, concerning things past and present, so far as they are understood, showing many great things that God has done, and how his manifest purposes are being wrought out for man's eternal happiness in a completeness of life which we cannot have while in mortality. It would take many hours to write what would be needed to make it plain. If I could talk in your home or at your pulpit with your attention, I think I could help you to see some things about God you do not now see, which I cannot well write in the limited time to make any completeness. But I will try and make a few things plainer.

Men have asked that if Satan is the cause of sin and death why does God not kill him so that men will no longer sin or have to die? I reply that there seems to be a time for all things, and the time is coming when the Son of God will indeed destroy Satan, (Hebrews 2:14; 1 John 3:3), but till that time it cannot be. A man may say to us, "That man across the street is a murderer, he killed my brother yesterday, and having been caught has confessed the deed." Would we say, "Well, why do you not kill him as the law says a murderer must die?" No, it would be said "The sheriff has him and he must be tried by due course of law, and he has a right to life until he is tried, convicted and sentenced, and then he must be put to death by the appointed executioner in the way the law prescribes."

So it is with Satan, and he knows as well as can be that his time is coming, but until then he lives. Exactly why and how it is we do not as yet understand. But he was with God and the heavenly host in the beginning, and was a person of dignity and power, but we are informed that there was war in heaven, he rebelled and was cast out. But Christ is to subdue him, and till then Satan has privileges and rights just as men of earth have even if they are wicked.

So sin flourishes till the time is up, and that time is nearer now than ever before. You need not doubt the day is coming when Satan will be overcome and sin and suffering will cease. Then justice, righteousness, truth, mercy, and brotherly love will prevail the world over, for Christ the loving Savior, the just and righteous King is coming to reign, and to perform the right thing for all people. God has said that then "None shall make them afraid." All will be happy.

As for God's existence we well know that every law comes from an intelligent mind or minds. If I come to your town and ask a resident about the laws relating to roads, streets, farms, village property, taxes, etc., and I ask who made these laws, we would not believe the man who would reply: "No one made them," for we know that the town council, or the county board of supervisors, or some other body of intelligent minds created each law by which affairs are directed or regulated.

If we look at a beautiful building or monument, every detail of which manifests design in its plan and erection, we ask, "Who was the architect? Who were the builders?" If one should answer, There was no architect, and no builders, but that it came of itself, we would know that it was not true. Every one realizes that first of all there was a designing skill, a master mind to conceive the project, and architects and builders to prepare details and erect it.

If we look at a watch and see its harmonious working we realize that someone who knew how to construct the parts, and put all in its perfect order, designed and constructed it. It did not "grow" without being born as Topsy thought she had done, nor did the watch come by chance but had its birth in a skillful brain and intelligent mind.

So this earth and the great universe came only by the design of a superior master Mind. The Savior said "My Father worketh hitherto and I work." He was the master Builder, under the guidance of the Father, the great Designer whose laws are more exact and the result more perfect than is the work of the most skillful machine or watch maker.

Learned men can calculate many years ahead and determine when shall occur an eclipse of the sun or moon, and whether it may be seen in America, Europe, Asia, or Africa; also can tell exactly the hour and minute it will begin and when it will pass off. Men go thousands of miles to view it and find the calculations to be exactly fulfilled. But it is not time counted by their watches which will govern their actions, for these need regulating often. No, the event is calculated by the time-piece of God in the heavens which never varies, and never has to be "set" or regulated by some other time-piece. Insignificant man looks through his telescope and sees that the earth circles around the sun in 365 days, 6 hours, 48 minutes, and 48 seconds, the same that it has been doing from the "beginning," and by it wise men can calculate to a minute the time of an eclipse, or when the planet Venus will make a transit across the sun, a score, or a hundred years hence. So certain and perfect are these wonderful creations and the laws that govern them, that we cannot doubt that if an intelligent being made the watch or other intricate machine, and that every law we know of came from intelligent minds, that the divine Creator, the great First Cause, the one who is also called God, made the wonderful universe, the great lights that shine so high, and that he put them in motion to fulfill his wise purposes, even as the mechanism of a watch fulfills the purpose of its designer, only he does it more perfectly; and so it goes on forever. No wonder the Psalmist exclaimed in joy:

"The heavens declare the glory of God; and the firmament showeth his handiwork. Day unto day uttereth speech, and night unto night showeth knowledge."—Psalms 19:1,2.

Yes, the heavens manifest great knowledge, wisdom and power as attributes of God. No law can make itself nor put itself in operation. Each must have had a Creator. So the grand procession of worlds moving in their order with such system and regularity, all in beauty and glory that all manifest creative design and wisdom far beyond human comprehension. God's love for mankind in all this greatness is also apparent. Only Satan, and man's own wickedness and inhumanity prevent the world's complete happiness. But by and by the Almighty will bring a great change and all the earth will blossom under his love and by his glorious power manifested for man's eternal joy.

The Bible is not a fable, not an invention of deceiving men. Its prophecies have been proven true down to the very least detail, even as God's time-piece in the heavens has been proven exact to the minute and second. His words to Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, and other prophets concerning the destruction of Babylon, Nineveh, Tyre, and Egypt, have in our day been proven true, by the discoveries made. Since I was born scientific men have translated ancient languages on monuments and clay tablets, and the reading agrees with Bible history and prophecy, having the names of kings and great men mentioned in the Bible, making plain, too, that the words of the prophets were fulfilled to the letter, until there is no room to doubt that the Bible is sustained as being all it purports to be,-chiefly a history but also containing many things that God has revealed to man.

I have been able to mention only a few reasons why mankind has cause to know that God lives, and that he is the great "Friend of man," ever laboring to do good to his creatures. The proofs are so many that one could write on any one of God's past and present works in creating, perfecting and sustaining, and of how he has had care for all, especially for man who is the crowning work of his creation upon this earth. But I have already written far more than I expected to do when I began. You may be weary of reading so lengthy a reply, but it is only a little part of which might be written in advocacy of God and his work. But I will be thankful if it gives both of you comfort and encouragement to go on in the gospel of Christ, and to teach your children so that you and they may be as happy as possible here, and be prepared for the life to come.

Your last question about marrying outside the church, "Why not do so and bring them in?" That is a good result, but so many times it works the other way, and the one in the church is influenced to carelessness and indifference or entirely goes over to the worldly things. I understand that it was because of this danger that the caution was given in the book. When that was written there was much persecution, and in many instances marriage outside resulted in a denial of the faith. However I am glad that in our day in the time of the Reorganized Church, many noble men and women have been influenced by the faith and the righteous course of their companions who were saints, and have obeyed the gospel. Also many such have been so baptized with the Holy Spirit as to become leaders and helpers in the Lord's work to a marked degree.

Sincerely your brother in Christ, H. A. Stebbins.

THE SCORNER.

The text was taken from Psalms 1, first verse, "Nor sitteth in the seat of the scornful." The preacher said that the man who sits in the scorner's chair is proud, cynical, self-sufficient—the climax and crowning type of evil nature. It is evident that the scale of sins has been upset in modern times. The current decalogue is that we shall not use profane language, indulge in strong drink nor go to many places of amusement. But here in God's word we have a sin different from these and one that is entirely heinous in the sight of God. How does the ordinary man become a scorner? "He becomes a scorner by taking to the well beaten path of judgment—the man who gives himself up to the spirit of censoriousness is on the way to become a scorner." The scorner is the final product of the habit of judging." Such that in man is blind to two things. judging he is exposing himself, disclosing his own mean nature. Then he is blind to the fact that he is developing conceit and hardness and qualifying for the scorner's chair.

"The scorner lives in a narrow, contracted world." "A really broadminded man is always conscious of his own limitations, and so chary of judging others." Strange to say, the snivit of the scorner is engrained in certain religious na-"Orthodoxy was once very scornful of tures. heterodoxy. The tables have been turned in one day, and now liberalism has shown the same habit, the same attitude towards orthodoxy."

There are two disabilities under which the scornful man labors—he never gets the best out of himself, and he never gets the best out of other "Jesus could not despise. He never despised, for to despise is to be unsympathetic and to be unsympathetic is to be un-Christlike." "We talk of 'withering' contempt and the adjective is a true one." Mr. Christie gave us a bold bit of literary criticism when he told us that the greatest book in our generation was Browning's "The Ring and the Book." To support his statement he quoted G. K. Chesterton to the effect that this book is the disclosure of the fact that no man has ever lived upon this earth without possessing a viewpoint. "You never get the best out of any man unless you enter into his point of view. Then why this stream of scorn in our political life?" . . . "The purification of politics can never come save from the Christianization . . . The natural punishment of the scorner is that in the heart there is a growing hardness and in the mind a gradual declension. Love dies out of such a man's life. The scorner's chair if you stay long enough in it becomes a death chair."—H. D. R.

ROUND TABLE.

Please explain Isaiah 38:18, "For the grave cannot praise thee, death cannot celebrate thee: they that go down into the pit cannot hope for thy truth."

The passage is frequently used by those who believe that the soul is unconscious between death and the resurrection to uphold their claims. But it is well to note the authorship of each statement and the conditions under which it was made. The author of this passage was Hezekiah, King of Judah, who was not a prophet of God, nor necessarily inspired. In commenting on this passage Elder J. R. Lambert says: "There is no proof that Hezekiah was ever an authorized teacher for God. There is no proof that he was inspired. Christ and the apostles never endorsed There is no more proof that Hezekiah believed in the unconsciousness of man after death, than there is that he believed that death ends all, and there is no future existence whatever. He simply spake according to his own feelings and his own knowledge, which apparently extended no farther than the death of the body, and the (What is Man, p 168.) Not every stategrave." ment written in the Bible is given of God for there are many statements of men both good and bad, and some even of devils, so that we must of necessity discriminate between that which is given of God through his prophets and apostles and other servants, and that which comes from other sources. The teachings of Christ and his recognized servants show that there is intelligence after death, and hope for the departed. See John 5:25-29;1 Peter 3:18-22; Ezek. 37:11-

What place is it that Christ is going to prepare as stated in John 14:2? In 2 Nephi 6:42 we are told the place for the saints was prepared from the foundation of the world.

place for the sames was programmed to by Christ in The particular place referred to by Christ in John 14:2, does not seem to be made clear, though it is usually understood among the saints that their final inheritance will be upon the glorified earth. We see no contradiction between this scripture and 2 Nephi 6:42 which says they "shall inherit the kingdom of God, which was prepared for them from the foundation of the world." Scriptures speak of the kingdom of God as having present existence, but it will come in its glory to the earth also when the latter is purified.—See Revelation 21.

Who and what were the sons of God mentioned in

The difficulties which this text has presented are cleared away in the different rendering given by the Inspired Version, as follows: "And Noah and his sons hearkened unto the Lord, and gave heed; and they were called the sons of God. And when these men began to multiply upon the face of the earth, and daughters were born unto them, the sons of men saw that their daughters were fair, and they took them wives even as they choose. And the Lord said unto Noah: The daughters of thy sons have sold themselves, for behold mine anger is kindled against the sons of men, for they will not hearken to my voice. And it came to pass that Noah prophesied, and taught the things of God even as it was in the beginning. And the Lord said unto Noah, My Spirit shall not always strive with man. . . . And in those days there were giants on the earth, and they sought Noah to take away his life.'

THE DAY'S BEGINNING.

The morning should be our care-free-est time (not literally speaking, for there is no busier time of the day for the average home and house-But we should realize our cares and keeper.) duties with enough lightness of heart and mind, to enable us to be "cheerful in our warfare, that we may be joyous in our triumph."

Our triumph here mentioned, may relate to the day's end, when we feel we have labored successfully-even though we may not have carried out our plans. And this triumph will be included in that great and triumphal day, when all these other days we struggle through are referred to in the summing up of the testimony of our lives.

The morning should be a pleasant time. are all refreshed as a rule. The air is fine; the children are extra sweet and affectionate. Things seem calculated to urge us to take "a new lease

Early to Rise.

Are we keeping to the old adage. "Early to bed and early to rise;

Makes a man healthy, wealthy and wise?"
It is our own "Word of Wisdom" in other words.

If we are not-here lies the first break in the pleasures of the new day. Hurry here, hurry there; a hurry breakfast instead of the one planned; no time for a comfortable chat before, during, or after, the meal. The children need attention at the same time as does the breakfast; the father eats his hurried bites alone, and goes off with a lonesome feeling. The mother feels lonesome now too, and the realization of all the things that need doing at once wells up within her. She and also the children realize she is not carefree. She is quick with them and they do not understand. They go to school with a hurry kiss or none, and perhaps a scolding for some "play act" which would have been overlooked on a morning when there was time for it.

Such day beginnings may be the fault of one parent or the other: and the condition is wrong. A Proper Beginning.

We well know before retiring, at what hour the day is likely to open before our special selves: and provisions should be made accordingly for these emergencies or regular occurrences (late rising), as the case may be.

The only time to make these provisions is the evening before, and the duty falls to the mother, of course, to see to it, which is alright, if she has no child old enough to help share this responsibility. Such a few minutes are needed to see that the table and room are in order, and the Such a few minutes are needed to see range fire laid (by father or son), and things placed handy to work with in the morning If you have a fireless cooker it will cook your cereal and it hot; shine up some apples or something (if it has to be one of the best dishes, to serve the same old thing in) for a center piece; and remember that this same old thing, if it consists of fruit and cereal and milk and bread and butter; or an egg with toast and "comfort tea" (hot water, sugar, milk,) and something else if you're a "laboring man," is the best thing.

Either the parents have breakfasted together in this case, or there has been time to dress the little early birds, so they can "eat with papa." How they do enjoy this privilege! Everyone is more cheerful; the breakfast was not scorched. the father listens to gay good-byes; each expresses the hope that every thing will go off well for all the others, at school, at work, or play. They all feel this same hope every day of course, but under adverse circumstances, the mind does not always work with the heart; we forget or overlook our intentions for an instant and it is

The children are off to school with the heavy little feelings in their bosoms,-troubled-knowing mother was worried, hurried or anxious looking, and that she never said a word but "good bye" and gave a quick kiss, and forgot to say "dear" or whatever pet term she may 'specially use. And when we know how these things count with old and young (and of one-self most of all!) for the success of the day perhaps largely on pleasant memories of home—we should certainly exert our will power to do what we know to be for the best.

The following experience is that of Della Thompson Lutes, Editor of "American Motherhood."

My little boy came home, from school one day with a long face and troubled heart. "What is the matter?" I cried. "Have you failed in all your lessons?" "Did your teacher scold?" "Are you ill?" All these things I questioned each one tumbling over the other without giving him a chance to reply, after the manner of solicitous mothers.

"Yes!" he wailed. "All of 'em, and its all your fault." I sat down of a sudden for I was dismayed and he fell mon my neck.

I sat down of a sudden for I was dismayed and he fell upon my neck.
"My fault?" I cried. "How?"
"Cause you forgot to say, "Good luck, good lessons, good times, good bye," a daily formula I had not neglected to carry out faithfully until now. I remembered a sudden stress of cares that morning—and my sin of omission. But I assure you I have not neglected it since. I haven't been allowed to, for no matter where I am he seeks me out and demands his kiss and for me to "deliver the "Goods"—which—by the way, we think a pretty good joke.

THE DAY'S ENDING.

The children's hour!

Supper "on time"-five thirty or six by the clock,-so there'll be a children's hour. Then all join hands and hearts to clear away the signs of supper and straighten the room. There'll likely be a tussle or ride on father's back while mother wipes the dishes father forgot, and adds other finishing touches to this part of the day's duties. But let it end here, the rough and tumble part of the "hour," and either dominoes, "tit, tat, toe" on the black board, the sectional map-and always the evening story from something; or an exchange of anecdotes, or may be more story reading or other reading, in place of one of the games.

Simple games will rest the tired child's mind and insure a good night's rest: especially so after he has spent a whole day in school and part of "Perhaps his evening studying for the morrow. the game is a wee bit silly, just be silly for a moment and see how it clears the smoky clouds out of your brain." There are geographical, historical and numerical games which afford much instruction and make the otherwise unattractive lessons interesting and easily fixed in the mind.

While speaking of games, let us remember that when left to themselves children do not always play fair and square. Now is the chance for parents to play with them. "Their aid is essential." The game is a step toward character essential." building. "The purpose to win and the grace building. The purpose to win and the grace to accept defeat pleasantly are both good lessons for use all during one's life;" to be agreeable to a partner in defeat." The boy or girl who sulks in a game shows a lack of good, wholesome home

Whether you are tranquil in mind or not-send the children to bed happy and quieted and contented. By seven thirty or eight o'clock, they will have been disposed of and then for your own quiet "hour" and a Word of Wisdom bed time. Asleep by ten o'clock-sure.

EUGENICS DEPARTMENT. The accompaning list of books was sent by Sr.

Jennie M. Studley, superintendent of the Eugenics department to Sr. D. J. Krahl, for publication. She says in her letter, that "the list is arranged as per date of issue, giving authors where possible," suggesting that no special effort be made to get the first, "for undoubtedly the latter booke are more complete and interesting; and that "as eugenics is comparatively a new subject, it can be best understood and studied in connection with readings, and that an effort be made to get from the Public Library any of these works."

Also, as to a program for this department, the following suggestions are made. "Have a paper by one or two different ones, same to be appointed, limit to one subject and after the paper is read, discuss, asking for remarks by each one. If there are no responses, have the presiding officer call on any of those in attendance."

NOTICES.

To the Saints in N. W.: S. W. and Southern Kansas District, Greeting:—

As a great many of you are aware of the fact I have been superintendent of the home class department of Sunday school work in Northwest Kansas. This is to notify you that Bro. Erwin Trachsel of Goodland, Kas., has been appointed superintendent of the home class department in Northwest Kansas, while I have taken charge of the Southern and Southwest District. The business of on the Southern and Southwest District. The business of the home class department of the Sunday school is to literally bring into the homes of the isolated saints the Sunday school by adopting in their homes the home system of study, and thereby they become just as much a member of our own Sunday school as though they lived in a branch of the church.

The cry of so many of the isolated ones has been, "O, if we only had Sunday school privileges for our children!" Brethren, sisters, the call of God has been to "come up higher," and coupled with this the prompting of the Spirit has been to push out and occupy on ground that has not heretofore been occupied. This is just what the home class is doing. It is willing to help you to teach and educate your children along gospel lines in such a clear and concise manner that they will reach the years of accountability before God with a full knowledge and faith of the blessed restored gospel. Now logically, when we know this and neglect "so great a salvation" God will hold us responsible for our children in that great day of nod us responsible to our funder in any argument on that ince. Finis. Come one, come all, let us get in line and join the home class. Don't put it off but get busy and write the undersigned, and I will be glad to fully explain the matter to you.

Your brother.

CHRIST THE SAVIOR OF THE WORLD. One of the characteristics of Christ's work among men was that of impartiality. His minis-tration of truth, healing, or other blessing was not with-held from rich nor poor, Jew nor Gentile, but all who manifested faith in him and his mission were alike blessed. Since Jesus so faithfully observed the rule of impartiality, (and the gospel advocates the principle), it could hardly be supposed that he would draw the line between those who lived before him, making no provision for their salvation, and those who should come after him, who alone of mankind would have opportunity to be saved.

Yet this line has been drawn by some teachers, and it is urged that those living before Christ's birth and ministry could have had no knowledge of the gospel and consequently died without hope. The following may set forth the position of some:

"The fact that all men were in sin and lived in sin, whose lives were passed before the birth of our Savior is too plainly set forth in the Bible to be controverted."

To hold that men before the coming of Christ could be justified and sanctified and live just as pure and holy as they can since the coming of the Savior is, in one sense, denying Christ; for if that be true, our Lord's incarnation is of no benefit to the world."—The Better Testament, pp. 11,12.

When we read in James 2:21-24 how that Abraham was justified by works which were done through faith which was made perfect, and it was imputed unto him for righteousness, so that he was called the Friend of God; we hold that "The fact [?] that all men were in sin and lived in sin," prior to Christ's coming, is not "plainly set forth in the Bible," but that it was possible for those ancient patriarchs and prophets and others living in their day, to have attained justification through faith.

To hold that Christ's power to save reached only those who came after him is to limit his power to one half of the world, and to make him extremely partial in his distribution of divine blessing. But Jesus said: "All power is given unto me both in heaven and in earth," and still later he said to John "and have the keys of hell These statements are in accord in the New Testament. "I am and of death. with others made in the New Testament. "I am the Light of the world." "He was the true Light, which lighteth every man that cometh into the world," etc., which indicate the universal and impartial attitude of the Son of God.

The revealments of God from Adam to the close of the Old Testament times all pointed to Christ as the Savior of men, and many living in those days held a bright hope in him. The book of Job, (held by many to be the oldest book in the Old Testament)' records his testimony thus: "For I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth: and though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God." (Job 19: Moses prophesied of a prophet who should be raised up, referring to Christ. (Deut. 18:15-19; Acts 3:22). Jesus himself declares that the ancient scriptures testified of him. (See Luke 24:27; John 5:39).

Eusebius, the ancient historian of the time of Constantine, urges that the knowledge of Christ was had prior to his birth. The following quotations from chapter four of his ecclesiastical history are in point:

"Moses, that eminent servant of God, and Abraham before him, the children of the latter, and as many righteous prophets as subsequently appeared, contemplated with the pure eyes of the mind, and both recognized and gave him the worship that was his due as the Son of God."

"Should any one, beginning from Abraham, and going back to the first man, pronounce those who have had the testimony of righteousness, Christians in fact, though not in name, he would not be far from the truth." "They obviously knew the Christ of God, as he appeared to Abraham, communed with Isaac, spoke to Jacob."

Not only was Christ known to the ancients, but the gospel also which is the plan of salvation. Upon this point Eusebius says:

"The first and most ancient religion known, that of those pious men that were connected with Abraham, is the very religion lately announced to all in the doctrines of Christ."

"What, then, should prevent us henceforth from acknowledging that there is one and the same principle of life and conduct, the same course of piety common to us, who have come after Christ, with those pious men who lived in times long before? Whence it is evident that the religion delivered to us in the doctrine of Christ is not a new nor a strange doctrine, but if the truth must be spoken, it is the first and only true religion.'

The teachings of Paul in the third chapter of Galatians, and in the seventh chapter of Hebrews and other places, show that the covenant of faith, or the gospel, existed prior to the establishment of the law of Moses, the latter having been added because the Israelites were found unworthy of the higher law of the gospel. The fact that Israel was without the gospel from Moses to Christ, but lived under an inferior law, does not prove that the gospel was unknown prior to the giving of the law, nor does it prove that the mercies of Christ were unable to reach those under the law.

Christ is spoken of as The Word which was with God in the beginning, the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world, the Author and Finisher of our faith; and if the plan of redemption was determined before the earth was made. as these passages indicate, it was surely within the power of Christ to make provision for all When we read that at the crucifixion of Christ "many of the saints which slept, arose," we can see how the power of his redemption wrought upon those who had died before his coming, and in like manner the resurrection as taught by Christ, and Paul, and others, will bring all men forth, and all will be judged according to their works, including those who have lived before the Lord came to earth in the flesh.

The Lord's wisdom, mercy and power, are in-He could not leave one soul unprovided for, and his great work of redemption, which is yet to be completed, reaches to those who lived before as well as to those who lived after him. The opportunity is given to all to reach full salvation, but personal effort and preparation are necessary, and those who fail to qualify will suf-fer loss. Christ has borne the responsibility and burden of making the way possible, but upon man rests the responsibility of following in that way. There is equal opportunity, but the equality of reward is dependent upon equality of effort.

EMBARRASSMENT FOR CHURCH UNION.

(The following article taken from The Presbyterian presents some of the obstacles to church union which have generally been passed over. It seems that church union is not altogether at our doors yet, and we believe that the further the effort is carried the greater will some of the obstacles appear).

The movement for church uniformity or external church union seems to be frittering itself away in mere conference and words. True, three delegates have been sent to Europe by the Commission on Church Union of the Protestant Episcopal Church, which considers itself now at the head of this movement. These three delegates are to talk and hold conferences with the brethren abroad. There is little promise or advance in this. Then Dr. Peter Ainsley, of the Disciples Church, has projected a magazine, which is to give itself wholly to the advocacy and propagation of organic church union. But here again there is nothing but words, and some of them very flippant words, as, for example, the following:

"A candidate approaches a Presbyterian pastor and says, 'I would like to be baptized.' The postor replies, 'All right, we will attend to it at once.' Then he dips up some water and pours or sprinkles it on his head. Another candidate approaches a baptist minister, saying, 'Brother, I would like to be baptized.' The Baptist says, 'Meet me at the baptistry or pond.' The baptist leads him down into the water and dips his head into it. Both ministers are dippers; one dips the water, the other dips the head. Presbyterians baptize the head only; Baptists do the same, requiring the candidate to dip the rest of the body. Differences are not half so great as many suppose. The things we quarrel about are not essential to the salvation of any, nor to their growth in grace. The whole thing reminds us of the question said to have been debated by some Georgia school-boys, 'Did Zeke Slade's barn burn up or down?"

One who speaks this way may unite with anything, and withdraw again just as easily. Such language as the above is destitute of thought and conviction, and is full of frivolity, which can have little weight with devout believers. But while these ardent advocates are thus chasing words. there are some actions which give but little encouragement to these dreamers. The Bishops of Mombasa and Uganda, in Africa, allowed some of the Nonconformist missionaries to partake of the communion, with the result that the Bishop of Zanzibar has openly charged both of these bishops with heresy, and has gone to England to prosecute his charges in proper manner.

This has resulted in a peril which threatens to divide the English Church in twain. The recent convention of the American Protestant Episcopal Church held in New York, according to the report of some of its own religious journals, was divided into two parties by a clear-cut line, these parties being the Protestant and the Catholic, each striving to checkmate the other, lest it gain too much And as Dr. Ainslie, of the Disciple Church, has assumed such a role of leadership in this movement, by publishing a magazine devoted to church union, it is fair to ask, Is he ready to admit baptism by sprinkling to be as wholly regular and valid as baptism by immersion? If he is ready for this admission, then he has a right to move forward for union; but if he is not ready for this, further action on his part must be in vain, and will be discarded by sincere people. So that both our English and American Episcopal brethren and our Disciple brethren, having failed to take the first simple step toward true Christian union, must hereafter labor under the suspicion that the union they contemplate is no other than absorption, and for this the rest of Christendom is not ready.

After all that is said, is not the first step toward real union to be accomplished in the recognition in full church membership of all who believe the Bible to be God's Word, the only infallible rule of faith and practice, in the Triune God, and in Jesus Christ as God and Savior; this common church membership to be expressed in the free admission from one denomination to another, and the recognition of the ordination of one denomination as valid in another. There can be no true formal church union until both these fundamental elements of fellowship are granted. The Presbyterian and other denominations have long ago taken these two steps. When our Episcopalian and Disciple brethren are ready for themselves to take these first steps, then the way will be open for the next. But until they are ready for such action, sincerity and mutual respect requires them to desist from their present ambitious procedure. Once the position is reached in all the denominations where each is ready to give and receive both members and ministers on letters, what more is neded for real church union. Is monotony of form or methods essential? Does liberty respect difference in circumstances and temperament and historical training? Would not one great organization require such a centralization as would destroy the liberty and arrest the progress of the individual and the body? Does any Protestant truly desire the mechanical and constrained solidarity of the Roman Church? The liberty of the people in civil government has required the liberty involved in the union of States rather than a solid empire? Will not liberty always demand the same in the ecclesiastical body?

INDEPENDENCE ITEMS.

Severe weather prevailed in this part on Sunday which kept many people at their homes who otherwise would have attended the various services. The morning hour was occupied by Mr. J. A, Harsfeld of Kansas City, who gave a very interesting lecture on the "Law of Moses." Mr. Harzfeld is of the Hebrew faith and is well versed in the law as given in the Old Testament and in the interpretations and commentaries of the various rabbi as given in the Talmud, and observed by the orthodox Hebrews.

One explanation by Mr. Harzfeld shows how the Talmud enlarges upon the fundamental statements of the law. He referred to Exodus 23:19, "Thou shalt not seethe a kid in his mother's milk," and spoke of the beautiful sentiment in it—that the mother should not be required to furnish the means for cooking its offspring. But un-der the later interpretation of the rabbi it was held to be just as bad to cook the kid in the milk of any other than the mother, so it was prohibited to cook flesh in milk at all. By a further interpretation of the law it was forbidden to use flesh and milk at the same meal. Then it was held that if it was wrong to use milk with flesh it would also be wrong to use the products of milk with flesh and these were forbidden. Last of all to avoid any possibility of mixing the two classes of foods, separate vessels were to be used for each, i. c. vessels used in cooking meat were never to be used for milk, butter, etc., or vice versa.

We thought "How burdensome must be the law interpreted by the Jewish teachers," since every p since every point was extended in its application to daily life like the one cited above. We also thought of the words of Christ: "They bind heavy burdens and grievous to be borne, and lay them on men's shoulders," (Matt. 23:4). The lecturer brought out many points relating to the ancient law which helped to a better understanding of the Scriptures. The evening speaker was Charles Fry.

Bro. Samuel F. Cushman died on last Friday morning the 20th at the Independence Sanitarium where he ha been for the past several months. He came from his mission field in Maine last fall suffering from organic troubles which appeared to be incurable, and he calmly and hopefully resigned himself to the coming change through which he had assurance of a brighter life. As long as his strength lasted he sought to continue his work of doing good by writing, and even when strength for this failed he dictated to others. He was in his 73d year, having been born at East Boston, Mass., December 13, He loved truth and though a minister of another church when he heard the restored gospel, he gave up his church associations, friends, relatives, home and property —all he had in this world, in order that he might obey. —all he had in this world, in order that he might obey. His life was one of faithfulness and integrity, and he labored for many years in the Lord's vineyard. His remains were sent to Garden City, South Dakota, for burial by the side of his two children.

Attendance at the priesthood meeting Monday evening was light, probably due to the deep snow.

Sunday school had an attendance of 200, collection of $8.14.

Bro. P. A. Sherman was the speaker at eleven o'clock; his subject matter was gathered from Hebrews 2:1. This covered the sin of omission, and of commission, and if sin then a law has been violated. He called attention to the inventions of members who are constantly violating the law, some say concerning the sin of omission, "It is my intention soon to make amends for the past, but fail to improve the opportunity and so it passes. Of the sin of commission, they say, "I intend to avoid doing this again." The speaker exhorted his hearers to diligence, not to have the same report every prayer meeting.

At the 2:30 prayer meeting a very goodly number was esent, the Spirit through Bro. Warnock spoke to Pres. W. The writer was honored with the opportunity of being speaker at the 7:30 hour. His line of thought was on "None but baptized believers are entitled to the gift of speaker at the the Holy Ghost." The Religio held its Sunday service in honor of the "Father of our Country."

It is impossible for your correspondent to find words to express the glorious uplifting, and soul reviving in-fluence we have felt during the past two weeks. We indeed have felt to rejoice for "what our ears have heard and our hearts have felt," while listening to the precious truths so ably and beautifully delivered by Brn. J. W. Rushton and Heman C. Smith.

We feel to thank our heavenly Father more and more for the beautiful gospel of salvation restored again in these last days, and trust we will make every effort to be co-workers with him in advancing the blessed truths it contains for the benefit of mankind. Our meetings opened February 1st and continued each night with the exception of Saturdays until the 15th. Bro. Rushton occupied the first week alone and he with Bro. Smith, church historian, alternated the second week. Each discourse was so full of good, solid truth, we would that they could have been reported in their entirety.

On February 1st Bro. Rushton spoke to the Sunday schol on "Value." He occupied at the eleven o'clock service reading from the 6th of Matthew. The choir sang "Awake my soul," our pastor, Bro. T. J. In the evening he read from 143d Psalm, and 6th chapter of Mica, 8th verse, his subject was "Religion" in general, and Monday ,February 2nd, it was the "Christian Religion." The Christian Religion he said was positive and not negative.

On February 8th our 50th anniversary was celebrated. Bro. Leman C. Smith gave a very interesting outline of the work in St. Louis during the last fifty years, and while we have had some failures we have had many bright spots and have been slowly rising to what has ever required of the faithful.

Sunday the 3th was a stormy day, snowing and very cold. However this did not materially affect the attendance at Sunday school, except in the beginners' department, which was minus one whole class. We also have a new bookcase exactly match our table. We also have a new bookcase for our service books, of the same style of table and chairs. The large library formerly used will be removed to the reading room upstairs. Our primary department is now equipped with four new tables, for use in beginner and primary work. the cleven o'clock preaching hour on the 8th, Bro. John Gardner of Independence was the speaker, and what a nice talk he gave us. He chose the theme for his discourse from Matthew 11:28,29,30, emphasizing his frequent recurrence, to his text by the quotation, "Thu said Jesus." Our hearts are very warm toward "Johnny who grew up to manhood among us, and we rejoice see the progress he is making in God's work.

In the evening our pastor was the speaker, and we were treated to another enjoyable sermon. Bro. Scott is earnest, impressive and convincing and it is a pleasure to listen to him. Bro. The Religio is still flourishing with fine attendance, good interest and excellent programs. On last Friday evening the "Bugle" was read by Elma Dobson, and was a very interesting edition of that famous publication.

On Tuesday evening the 10th, the men of our branch ave a very enjoyable entertainment "all by themselves." To say they did well would be but poorly expressing our appreciation of their efforts. The arrangements were complete and convenient, the service excellent, the menu very satisfactory and the "boys" in their housewives' aprons "too cute for anything." And the program consisting of musical numbers, a hat trimming contest, and a mock trial, was thoroughly enjoyed. In the hat trimming contest D. C. Kinnaman was declared the winner, although this got him into serious trouble, as he was arrested, tried, convicted and sentenced on the charge steading a pin with which to fasten the trimming on the hat that took the prize. We think that for artistic freak-ishness, the hat trimmed by Bro. B. J. Scott should have had the prize. The men certainly deserve credit for giving us an evening of innocent enjoyment, and the ladies were delighted to sit around and have a nice time while the men did the work.

Sunday afternoon the 8th was held the regular session of the Woman's Auxiliary. Sr. B. C. Smith of Independence was with us, and explained in detail the work of that organization. We believe the work is much better that organization. understood than before, and the visit of Sr. Smith we feel will result in good. Patriarch Wm. Lewis will short-

Bro. Herbert D. Ennis has been appointed to a responsible secretaryship, with the Commerce Club, a civic organization of the city.

How about the time spent by our good homekeepers in preparing rich and highly seasoned foods (study what effect they have upon the young) to impair the digestive apparatus of both friend and foe? Who are the strong to conquer desire, and eat only plath, course foods that are of benefit? What a "peculiar people" we would be, if we did only the things that pleased the Father.

The prayer meeting Sunday morning, February 15th, was quite spiritual, and a number of the Omaha saints accepted the invitation of the Council Bluffa' saints to meet with them in social service at three o'clock in the meet with them in social service at three orders in daternoon. On Wednesday evening, February 18th, the usual well attended prayer service was visited by the Spirit of God, and every one felt to a certain extent the presence of the same. We were made to rejoice and felt greatly encouraged by the presence of our worthy president, Bro. H. P. W. Kier; this we believe to be the results of our special prayer service held at his home on Monday, Feb. Our brother has been sorely afflicted and after our united pleadings we feel that much mercy was shown him by our Father who hears and answers prayer. Sunday morning we had the pleasure of having him address us which is the first time since the first of the year, and he imparted much truth to his patient congregation.

The young people's prayer meeting was well attended and a portion of God's Spirit rested upon us. Although the correspondent has been negligent in his duties, the branch as a whole has been very much awake. The writer takes great pleasure in stating that we were afforded the pleasure of admitting into our fold, through the waters of baptism, two young men, Bro. J. Daalder and Bro. A. Bochm, which took place at three o'clock Sunday afternoon by Bro. David E. Dowker. Confirmation by Bro. Dowker and Bro. McGahn followed at the evening session after which we were addressed by Bro. Dowker. A very interesting and enlightening sermon was delivered, and many thoughts expressed that can well and without much effort be put into practice. Believe us always to be alive in the Spirit.

Dear Ensign:—L enjoy reading the letters in your col-Dear Ensign:—Lengy reading the letters in your co-umns very much, it impresses spiritual truth upon the heart and mind. I was talking to an old gentleman a few days ago on the subject of prophets. He said it was all foolery to believe in prophets in this day and that any body who read the Bible would know that St. John the Divine was the last prophet we had any history of. He said there was no need of prophets in this day. I asked him if Christ had no need of prophets why did he set them in his church. He said he didn't. why did he set them in his church. He said he didn't. I referred him to iCorinthians 12:28. The gentleman said Christ only set prophets in the church for that period of time. I asked him who took them out? He said they died out. I said, "possibly so, but why did he let then die out satirely, after placing them in the church as a part of the officers?" He said there was no need of placing more in the church they are not needed now. I said, "Well, you can take your understanding and I will take Christ's word and believe in latter day prophets.

I would gladly answer any instructive letters from the saints. Ever praying for the upbuilding of this wonder-ful work, I remain a sister in the faith,

Editor Ensign:—You will find inclosed copy of a portion of a letter written to me by Bro. J. C. Clapp, dated at Tulare, California, Dec. 16, 1999. I thought perhaps his many friends would like to see it in print. This is what he says:

have been longing for the better land; and dea "I have been noighing for the better land; and each brother and sister, I have had the blessed assurance of the Spirit that it is well, and will be well with me. I was looking over my life in my mind and counting my many mistakes and failures and asking myself the question, 'Can the infinite One overlook all of my blunders?' when God, in his infinite love saw fit to lift the curtain and give a glimpse of the redeemed in glory, and O, dear brother and sister I cannot tell you; I can only stand dumb before the almighty power that showed me what I cannot tell you, but may employ the language of anreamon ten you, but may employ the language of another: "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard; neither hath it entered into the heart of man what God hath prepared for them that love him."

Dear Ensign:—There is a certain subject that I have been seeking information on, ever since I became a Latter Day Saint, and I think there are many other saints who, like myself, would like to have it discussed through the church papers. It is concerning "The gathering,"

In Doctrine and Covenants 108:2 we read: "Wherefore in Doctrine and Covenants 108:2 we read: "Wherefore prepare, perpare ye, O my people; sanctifty yourselves; gather ye together, O ye people of my church, upon the land of Zion, all you that have not been commanded to tarry." Now I would like to ask who it is that has been commanded "to tarry." Is it not the ministers of our commanded to tarry. Is it not the ministers of our church who are to tarry to spread the gospel? Is it the weak saints who are unable to stand alone, who must be fed on spiritual food to keep up their strength? Is it the parents with families, to be rearred in the midst of worldly temptations and influences? Are they to keep their children away from Zion and its sacred influences, in order that the clders who may chance to pass that way, perhaps once in two or three years, may have a place to stop?

I have been told so by some; and still others tell me or "just rest easy, let things take their own course. You will get to Zion when the proper time comes," they say.

In an article I read, "In union there is strength, and when the forces ordained of God to carry out his pur-poses in the building up of his Zion are brought together and are more thoroughly organized, then a greater work can be accomplished." We are told that our own influ-ence for good over our children will be greater than the ence 1or good over our critique will be greater than the will influences of the worldly people around us will be. But ah me, think of how many saints grow weak and worldly when away from all church influences. Then what can be expected of their children? I have never been satisfied on this point; it seems to me that if we gain strength by being together and if God has said for us all to "gather to Zion, except those who have been commanded to tarry," that our preachers should teach it that way; and when we do make the start that God will prepare the way before us. If he wanted us to wait for years, he would not have commanded us to all go "except those who have been commanded to tarry." O, but we must wait until there has been land purchased for homes for the saints and employment found for those who work at trades. Well, but listen! If we sell our farms, out in the world, and enter Zion as provided our farms, out in the world, and enter Zion as provided in our law will that not help to furnish the means to carry on this great work far better than for us to remain in the world and simply pay our tithing? If, where two or three gather together in Christ's name, he has promised to be in their midst and that to bless; then surely the blessing would be greater if they were all gathered together, than if they were scattered far apart. Surely our children would grow up to be better, nobler with the property of the propert saints, than to keep them out in the cruel, wicked world.

sames, man to keep them out in the cruel, wicked world.
Tell us, brethren in Christ, what do you think about this important question? Shall we go gladly, trustingly to Zion as he has commanded, or shall we wait until he drags us there?

Sweet Lake, La., Jan. 20. Editor Ensign:—As it has been some time since I have troubled you for space in your pages that are always crowded with good news from all parts of the globe, I thought you might grant me a little space thinking perhaps that there may be some of the many readers that would like to hear something from this part of the field, or from the Arkansas Traveler.

I left my home in Pittsburg, Kansas, November 14th, I left my home in Pittsburg, Kansas, November 14th, for Lowell, Arkansas, having been called to that place to sit on an elders' court. On my way I stopped over night at Monet, Missouri, with a Mr. L. W. Crawford and wife and mother. Mr. Crawford is the son of old Bro. J. A. Crawford who lived at Wilburton, Okla., for ro. J. A. Crawford who fives as wholeron, Owner, for rears, but died some time back at Fairland while on a fisit to that place.

While at Monet I received $10.00 to apply on the church debt; $2.50 from Mr. L. W. Crawford, $2.50 from Sr. Mary Crawford, $2.50 from Sr. J. A. Crawford and $2.50 from Bro. R. L. Crisp. Mr. L. W. Crawford is not a member of the church but is a firm believer and is always ready to assist the work along in every way he can, except to unite with it, which he ought to do. Hope to see him accept yet before it is too late.

Brn. T. W. Chatburn and George Edwards joined me at Lowell. We attended to the court matters at that place then Bro. Chatburn and I took our departure, leaving Bro. Edwards there to hold a meeting for the people. While at Lowell I received $4.50 to apply on church debt from Bro. D. L. Lewis and family; $1.50 for D. L. Lewis, and $1.50 for Sr. D. L. Lewis, and 50 cents each for Glen, Orlis and Everet Lewis.

My next stop was at Grannis, where I met Bro. Short and wife, and Bro. Aylor there to be with them in the dedication of the church at that place, which took place on Sunday the 30th. A grand sermon was delivered by Bro. Short. I am sure it was enjoyed by all present both on Sunday the 30th. A grand nermon was delivered by Bro. Short. I am sure it was enjoved by all present both in and out of the church. Bro. and Sr. Short then left for Oklahoma, and Bro. Aylor and the writer remained for a week. Bro. Aylor preaching some grand sermons for the strengthening of the saints and the convincing of the people. Bro. Aylor baptized nine while there.

From there we went to Winthrop; Bro. Aylor preaching a few sermons for the little band of saints at that place; then from there we went to Fisher, Arkansas, stopping over night at Texarkana. At Fisher we have a small branch of young but faithful saints. Bro. Aylor preached for them, and while there we ordained Bro. C. D. Schell to the office of elder. Bro. Schell is a fine young man and if faithful to his call will accomplish a contract week in the same of the contract week in the same of t young man and if faithful to his call will accomplish a great work in the church. On the 19th we went to Bald Knob where we have another small branch of faithful saints. We remained there, Bro. Aylor preaching for them, till the 29th, then we parted, Bro. Aylor going home to spend Christmas with home folks, the writer going to Bros, La., where I joined Bro. James M. Smith—the Arkansas Smith. We were together until the 29th when Bro. Smith went to Grannis, Ark., and the writer remained preaching for them and holding a business: meeting of the branch; trying to revive the saints and encourage them to action, as the saints at that place. meeting of the branch; trying to revive the saints and encourage them to action, as the saints at that place, I am sorry to say, are in a very sleepy condition, officers et well as the members, but I hope our efforts among mem will not be fruitless, but may be the cause of arousing the saints that they may take new courage and make a strong effort to press forward in the line of their duty. I left Eros on the 8th of January, arriving at Oak Dale, La., on the 9th. Here we have only two members, Bro. and Sr. M. Youmans, they having only been there a short time. We did not preach any there as there was no place we could get. I visited with Bro. and Sr. You

I visited with Bro. and Sr. You-mans till the 13th, then went to Hartburg, Texas, arriv-ing there on the morning of the 14th; preached a week at that place and baptized two line ladies, one of them a Baptist who had been raised in that faith, her father being a Baptist preacher. I am sure she will make a fine Latter Day Saint. She gave me $2.00 to apply on the church dobt. If the older saints would do as much the church would be out of debt and have some to spare.

I left Hartburg on the 22nd and came to Sweet Lake, began meeting the 23rd and am having only fair audiences of attentive listeners. This is a rice farming country and the people are mostly French and of the Catholic faith, but some of them seem to love the sound of the gospel. There are but very few saints in Louisiana and they are very badly scattered, which makes it very hard for the missionary to reach them, but we are doing all we can to open up the work in this part of the field, and hope we may have he aid of the Master and the co-operation of all the saints in the different parts of

This conference year will soon be at an end, then we don't know where we will be called on to labor the next year, but I hope whoever may labor in Arkansas and Louisiana may be able to accomplish a greater work than has yet been done. .. Editor Ensign:-I beg your indulgence once more for a few words from the slow preacher through Arkansas. Last summer I went to Gentry, Ark., and stopped with Last summer I went to Gentry, Ark., and stopped with Bro. A. L. Miller who lives about six miles out in the country. We succeeded in getting the use of a school house where the gospel was preached for the first time, and with the help of the Lord I succeeded in getting up a big interest. Of course the other fellow was at work too; he had an agent there who about the close of the meeting raised a disturbance. The outsiders took the matter up and had him indicted before the grand jury; to come back and hold another meeting, so opportunity place of making friends for himself he made friends for us; you may be the judge.

After I left there I received several letters asking me to come back and hold another meeting, so opportunity presented itself January 9, at which time I returned and started another meeting, preaching twenty-one sermons, and baptized nine precious souls into the kingdom of and baptized nine precious souls into the kingdom of God. Also organized a Sunday school. We had Elder J. W. Thorpe, who was at Lowell, Ark, to come over the last three days of our meeting to assist us. We left here January 29th, leaving the saints at this place rejoicing in the gospel, and several friends we made while here deeply interested and investigating the work. So the good work still goes ou, and I go to other parts, expecting to return to this place in the near future. May the Lord abundantly bless his people is my prayer.

EXTRACTS FROM AND OBSERVATIONS ON MRS, EDDY'S WORK.

A Limited but Ample Examination. Her "Key to the Scriptures," is her 13th chapter, of it she says: "In the following exegesis, each text is followed by its spiritual interpretation, according to the teachings of Christian

According to Christian Science. Let the Bible and its author take notice.

Some extracts from her philosophy follow.

"Not a blade of grass springs up, not a spray buddeth within the vale, not a leaf unfolds its fair outlines, not a flower starts from its cloistered cell, but mind causes it." p. 27. Though we grant this to be true, it does not displace the matter wherein is this life.

The theory that spirit is distinct from matter, but must pass through it, or into it, to be individualized, would reduce Truth to the dependency of error, and require something to be made manifest through nothing." p. 41. Mrs. Eddy's theory is as easily nothing as matter and more so, which theory she tries to make manifest in words which are scarce matter.

"You can have no power opposed to God in Science, and the senses must give up their false testimony." p. 42. This is her way to deny the existence of sin and sickness.

"We are told that the simple food our forefathers ate, assisted to make them healthy, but that is a mistake." * * * It was the ignorance that is a mistake." of our forefathers concerning the knowledge that today walks to and fro in the earth that made them more hardy than our trained physiologists, more honest than our sleek politicians." p. 51. "The shocking doctrine that man is governed physically all his days, and afterwards killed by the body is too absurd to last another century. With the rest of Mrs. Eddy's assertions and assumptions it may die in that time.

"Because the muscles of the blacksmith's arm are strongly developed it does not follow that exercise did it, or that an arm less used must be fragile. If matter were the cause of action, and muscles without the co-operation of mortal mind, could lift the hammer and smite the nail, it might be thought true that hammering enlarges the muscles. But the trip-hammer is not increased in size by exercise. Why not, since muscles are as material as wood and iron? Because mortal mind is not producing that result in the hammer. Muscles are not self acting. If mortal mind moves them not they are motionless. Hence the fact that mortal mind enlarges and strengthens them through its mandate, through its own supply of power, not because of muscular exercise, but through the blacksmith's belief, comes the strength of his arm." pp. 54,55. Then another blacksmith might sit by and think strength into The arm of hammer service developes his arms. more than the other that labors but not so much. The mind is very probably directed to both alike.

"The Science should be taught by one morally advanced and spiritually endowed, for it is not superficial, nor is it seen from the standpoint of the human senses. Only by the illumination of the spiritual sense, can the light of understanding be thrown upon this Science, that reverses the evidence before the material senses and furnishes the right interprtation of God and man."

e right interprtation of God and man." p. 56.
"Faith cometh by hearing."—Paul. The reversing of the senses and all else is necessary to the acception of Mrs. Eddy's hallucination, which destroys the right interpretation of God and man.

"There are evil beliefs, called evil spirits but they are not Spirit, or they would not be evil."

Since the evil spirits that Christ cast out, were permitted to enter the swine and made such request, they were rather more than "beliefs." Mrs. Eddy to the contrary, nevertheless.

"Soul is greater than body; but if it were in the body, it would be less, and therefore would not be spirit." p. 61.

Gold gems and diamonds are oft enclosed, but they are greater than the means of enclosure, within which they are, and are still gold gems and diamonds. Men often enter hen-houses and pig-pens, though greater and are men and remain Mrs. Eddy's philosophy of "reversing the senses," is very needful to comprehending her "greater" as also her "lesser" and all other qualities.

"The supposed sensations of the body must either be the sensations of mind or of matter. Which are they? Is it not self-evident that mat ter has no sensation; and is it not equally selfevident that matter exists in belief only, and not in the understanding of being?" pp. 63, 64.

The continent now known as America really existed when "belief" was to the contrary and discovery by Columbus changed the belief. Mrs. Eddy's reversing of her senses and those pliant enough for such process cannot rob us of Amer-

Matter occupied by spirit is a source of great worry to Mrs. Eddy and that matter so occupied partakes of sensation. Steel occupied by electricity partakes of the sensation while glass is oblivious. Earth, moisture, proper temperature and light produce conjointly condition of growth of vegetation. Any disagreement of these, defeats in proportion the result.

Spirit in matter is the receiving apparatus of sensation of which both partake.

"If God is within and without all things, what and where is matter, which does not express Spirit?" p. 66.

Matter is just where it was before. Mrs. Eddy's erroneous assumption based on one of the smallest and most doubtful words in the English language, "If."

"We must destroy the belief that life and intelligence are in matter, and plant ourselves upon what is pure and perfect." p. 67.

It is not necessary to destroy what does not exist. Here Mrs. Eddy reverses her reversed senses and the philosophy resultant. Life and intelligence are resident in matter and co-operate as does magnetism and steel and express sensation which both partake of as well as contribute "In the scientific relation of God to man we find that one man's meat is not another's poison, but that what feeds one feeds all; as Jesus showed with the loaves and fishes, when Spirit not matter, was the source of supply." p.67.

Jesus co-operated with God when the first fish were created-likewise from the great reservoir of element matter he created the fish for the hungry multitudes.

Mrs. Eddy should have destroyed her hallucination

"There is no question but that Jesus understood Christian Science, and taught its Divine Principle to his students." p. 81.

There is no doubt but that Jesus understood the principle of all such hallucinations as he taught their fallacy on all occasions. He not only recognized existent matter but made it the basis of most forceful illustrations from the lilies to the mountains as well as fish, trees, sheep, etc.

He never taught that matter alone held life power but he did teach a proper relationship of matter and spirit and results not possible of either alone.

"But the same Spirit which was in 'Christ Jesus' must always accompany the letter of Science, in order to confirm and repeat the ancient demonstrations of prophet and apostle."

What Mrs. Eddy dignifies as Science or Christian Science is so subversive of what Christ taught that his Spirit can in no wise operate with or in it.

An extended account of a dyspeptic woman sufferer and her rescue by Mrs. Eddy's philosophy closes as follows:

"This woman learned that food strengthens nor weakens the body, that mind alone does this." p 97.

Christ had compassion on the hungry multitudes and furnished them food because food would strengthen the body. Had he taught Mrs. Eddy's philosophy or anything like it he would have omitted creating fish and bread there and "Mortal mind forms all conditions of the mortal body and controls the stomach, bones, lungs, heart and blood, as directly as the volition of the will moves the hand," p. 98.

The mind changes neither summer's heat or winter's cold, does not "form all conditions of the Heat and cold are two conditions of the body. Mrs. Eddy should have gone in quest of the North Pole as she would have had no trouble

"The Science of Mind shows conclusively how it is that matter seems to be, but is not." p. 151. The hallucination of Mrs. Eddy supposes matter has vanished with her mystic touch but it is

"Because man is the reflection of his Maker, he is not subject to birth, growth, maturity, de-These illusions are of human origin, not Divine." p. 209.

Christ was horn, matured, "grew in stature and in wisdom," was the reflection of God, yet the illusion occurred to Mrs. Eddy to the con-

"There is but one spiritual existence, even the life of which personal sense can take no cognizance. Spirits are but personal forms of belief." p. 240.

Since according to Mrs. Eddy all must begin with personal sense from which she hopes to extricate them, but which she affirms can take no cognizance of her "one spiritual existence," it must remain out of that blissful realm. Her false assumption that spirits are but personal forms is consistent with her theory.

"The act of describing disease, its symptoms, locality, and fatality, itself makes the disease.

If Mrs. Eddy had added the words, "according to my theory," she would have been quite right. A knot on a log may be described but existed before the description.

"A lady having an internal tumor, and greatly dreading a surgical operation, called on me. conducted her case metaphysically, never touching her, never using a drug or an instrument, and yet the tumor was wholly removed in two days," p. 258.

Since Mrs. Eddy could, so easily imagine all matter is not, so also could this woman imagine a tumor that was not and so none to remove in two days or any other time. Since she did not touch her, she did not do as the Savior commanded, which was: "They shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover." Not till she reached page 400 in her book did Mrs. Edd/ record these words of the Savior and then to present her mother's instruction when a child:

"God is able to raise you up from sickness," and I pondered the meaning of that scripture, I so often quote, "And these signs shall follow them that believe: they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover." p. 400.

If Mrs. Eddy so often quoted this why did it not appear in her book before page 400? Why did she not observe it in her practice, whereas she says she "did not touch" the woman? Moreover, she tells us quite frequently the Bible was the source of her discovery.

"Let us rid ourselves of the belief that man is a separate intelligence from God, and obey this unerring principle of Life and Love." p. 259.

As one physical body is separate from another, so also is one intelligence from another. Christ having a separate intelligence and will from the Father resigned his will to God. "Not my will, but thine be done." Man has agency because of individual separate intelligence and hence must also answer at the judgment. Intelligence is not a vast sea as air or water, but is individualized. Christ, angels, men. "Many men of many minds individualities."

"The supremacy of Spirit was the rock on which Jesus built. His sublime summary points to a solid superstructure of intelligence and love. Neither creed, rite, nor mystery entered into his methods." p. 262.

His "method" and "rite" for the healing of the sick, was, "They shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover," which as before observed, Mrs. Eddy says she so often quotes, but did not practice.

In her tangled maze of hallucinations many reverses of the senses are in evidence and result, in producing much of the senseless, as the follow-"God is perfect. If we admit ing evidences: no other mind than his, we cannot have imperfect minds or bodies, and there can be no sin, sickness, or death. Getting rid of sin through Science, is to divest it of any supposed mind,-never admitting that sin can have intelligence or power, pain You conquer it by denying its or pleasure. verity." p. 275.

At both assuming and denying Mrs. Eddy stands at the head of the class. Mrs. Eddy's feigned loyalty to Scripture is shown up clearly by her misquotations as well as misrepresentation in the following instances:

"Those who saw Him after the resurrection, and beheld the final proof of all Jesus had taught, misconstrued that event. His disciples called him a personal spirit, ghost, or spectre, for they believed his body to be dead. His reply was, Spirit hath no flesh and bones as ye see me р. 285.

Christ's answer was, "A spirit hath not flesh and bones as ye see me have." Dropping "a" Mrs. Eddy makes it conform to her theory and in so doing both misconstrues as well as misquotes and there is no reason to believe it unintentional. Another case of the same kind follows:

"They said, 'He casteth out devils through Beelzebub,,' and is the 'friend of sinners.' The latter accusation was true, but not in their meaning. So too, Jesus was no ascetic. He did not fast as did the Baptist's disciples, yet there never lived a man so far removed from appetites and passions as the Nazarene." p. 288.

Jesus' fast of forty days stands out a sufficient answer to this misrepresentation.

"The man of Sorrows best understood the nothingness of material life and intelligence, and the mighty actuality of all-inclusive Mind. are the cardinal points of Mind-Healing, or Christian Science." p. 288.

This is Mrs. Eddy's substitution for Christ and exists only in Christian Scientists' minds, as the following well demonstrates:

"The Scientist knows there can be no hereditary disease, since matter cannot transmit good or evil intelligence to man, and mind produces no pain in matter." * * *

"Maintain the facts of Science: that mind is God, and therefore cannot be sick; also that what is termed matter cannot be sick; that all caution is Spirit, acting through spiritual law. Then hold your ground with a lawyer's skill, and you will win." pp. 292, 293.

"Remember that all is mind and that there is no matter." p. 297.

But sticks and stones with much else rebuke this "Mind"—nonsense of Mrs. Eddy's hallucina-tion. She proceeds: "Works on metaphysics leave the grand point untouched. They never crown the mental power as the Messiah; nor do they carry the day against physical enemies, as Christian Science proposes to do, even to the extinction of all beliefs in matter, and the insistence upon the fact that matter is nothing beyond an illusion." p. 303.

Had she added "to the dupes of my illusion" she would have been quite right.

"When the first symtoms of disease appear, dispute the testimony of the senses, by Divine Science." p. 308.

Make a dupe of yourself and you are select timber for the factory of Christian? Science?

"We should remember that Life is God, and that God is omnipotent. Not understanding Science, the sick will have little faith in it before they feel its beneficient influence. This shows that faith is not their healer." p. 310.

It shows as repeatedly before that Eddyism is opposite to and in violation of Scripture teaching. Paul says: "Through faith we understand that the worlds were framed by the word of God." then recounts the wondrous achievements of the ancient worthies from Abel down to his own time throughout the eleventh chapter of Hebrews. And to Moses and the prophets Christ certified oft. His disciples he reproved, "O, ye of little faith." His teaching was that all the wonders of God's love were to be received by and through faith.

When Mrs. Eddy frankly says, "This shows that faith is not their healer," she puts her hallucination outside the realm of Bible truth and outside the possible recognition of God and Christ.

After repeatedly denying the reality of the physical body and its ailments she accomplishes a summersault.

"What if the lungs are ulcerated? God is more to man than his lungs; and the less matter we have, the more immortality we possess. Spirit constructs a better body, when it has conquered our fears of matter." p. 318.

So she does admit ulcers, and to offset it, assumes the wasted and reduced lungs are really better and through this improvement by so hateful a thing as ulcers what she characterizes Spirit or Science that is not faith, "constructs a better body."

"There is no mortal mind out of which to make a mortal body, built from the illusions of sickness, sin and death. There is but One Mind, the the unerring and immortal; and this one contains no mortal opinions. Sin, sickness and death are beliefs, misuamed mind. All that is real, good or eternal is included in immortal mind." p. 321.

Wonders of wonders! No mortal mind to do mischief and her "One Mind' does not do it. Where oh where did those "ulcers" come from?

"All that is real, good or eternal is included in Immortal Mind." "What if the lungs are ulcer-They are "real," then, and the "Immortal Mind" furnished them as it "included" such furnishings and from the further fact there is no "Mortal Mind" to do such things.

"Oh what a tangled webb they weave who practice solely to deceive."

"If you believe in inflamed and weak nerves, you are liable to an attack from that source. You will call it Neuralgia, but I call it Illusion." p. 324.

But Mrs. Eddy should have considered again that ulcer story.

"Until the advancing age admits the efficacy and supremacy of Mind, it is better to leave the adjustment of broken bones and dislocations to the fingers of a surgeon, while you confine yourself chiefly to mental reconstruction, and the prevention of inflamation or protracted confinement." p. 328.

Just so, no doubt it will be best, but as in the first place there are no bones and so would hardly be broken. Why trouble at all, just call it an "illusion," and let it pass.

"The life of the body is Mind, The body manifests only what mind admits, whether it be a broken bone, disease or sin." p. 328.

The "broken bones," were to be left to "the adjustment, * * * of a surgeon," and here they bob up after told "the body manifests only what the mind admits," whereas not admitting would both do away with the bones and the break, besides labor for the surgeon.

The lesson on its face is, deny then admit, and admit then deny, and you are a Scientist, Christian? Scientist?

"The truth is, food does not effect the life of man; and this becomes self-evident when we learn that God is our only life. Because sin and sickness are not qualities of Soul, or Life, we have hope in immortality; but it would be foolish * * to stop eating, until we gain more goodness and a clearer comprehension of the living God, that perfect day of understanding, we shall neither eat to live, nor live to eat." p. 332.

Most people do believe food does affect the life of man. If not what a simple remedy for "the high cost of living," now distressing governments as well as individuals.

"You say or think, because you have partaken of salt fish, that you must be thirsty, and you are thirsty accordingly; while the opposite belief would have produced the opposite result." p. 334.

What a bother since it is nonsense to eat at all, expensive too!

"You say a boil is painful; but that is impossible, for matter without mind is not painful. The boil simply manifests your belief in pain, inflamation and swelling; and you call this belief a boil," p. 339.

On a body that never was, there was a boil that was not and produced a painful belief! How painful!

"Man is never sick; for mind is not sick, and matter cannot be." p. 341.

Alas for those "ulcers," "broken bones," and "boils." Mrs. Eddy's "illusions."

"Ossification, or any unusual condition of the bones, is as directly the action of mortal mind as insanity. Bones have only the substance of thought; they are only an appearance to mortal mind." p. 358.

The surgeons, therefore are only to set broken appearances.

"All is mind; there is no matter. Life is real, and death is the delusion." p. 860. Not even borken appearances left, this time.

Brevities on Teaching.

"The teacher must make clear the Science of Healing to students,-that all is mind, and that the Scientist must conform to God's require-Then no hypothesis, as to the existence ments. of another power can interpose a doubt or fear to hinder the demonstration of Christian Science." p. 374.
"A Christian Scientist requires 'Science and Health' for his text book, and so do all his students and patients." p. 375.

Gulp all this down and you are a Scientist of Mrs. Eddy's sort, and no mistake.

"All that possesses being or reality is Mind and there is no such thing as matter." p. 379.

Mrs. Eddy evidently worked the illusion till she

"If sin, sickness and death were understood as nothingness, they would disappear." p. 413.
But those "ulcers," "broken bones," and "boils" would bob up even to Mrs. Eddy.

"Science reveals material man as a dream at all times and as never the real being." p. 423.

"God is Mind, and God is all; hence all is mind. On this statement I stand." p. 424.

Such standing as Mrs. Eddy's hallucination reveals may be illustrated by a cipher with the rim knocked off.

"Question-How can I progress most rapidly in the understanding of Christian Science?"

"Answer-After studying the letter, imbibe the Spirit." p. 427.

And next there comes:

"Key-To The Scriptures."

"In the following exegesis each text is followed by its spiritual interpretation, according to the teachings of Christian Science." p. 431.

It is you see: interpretation according to the teachings of Christian Science.

Any who may read "Science and Healing," will find that the key is faithfully in accord with all the rest.

Where the whale is a part of created things, he is only a "thought," the beasts, birds and fish but "diversified thoughts."

Of foolish and false theories there have been many but none more clearly false and nonsensical than Mrs. Eddy's

"A little nonsense now and then is relished by the jest of men." But it would take a host to relish all of Mrs. Eddy's.

For truth and right on all questions,

Very Respectfully,

R. Etzenhouser.

THE TIME OF THE END.

"But before the arm of the Lord shall fall, an angel shall sound his trump, and the saints that have slept, shall come forth to meet me in the cloud: wherefore if ye have slept in peace, blessed are you, for as you now behold me and know that I am, even so shall ye come unto me and your souls shall live, and your redemption shall be perfected, and the saints shall come forth from the four quarters of the earth."—D. C. 45:7.

The saying as here quoted are the words of the Savior unto his disciples, four in number-'as he sat upon the mount of Olives," two nights before he was crucified; probably 12th day of Nisan, or April 2, A. D. 34. Conversation recorded in Matthew 24; Mark 13; and Luke 21; and the last half of chapter 17.

First, the Lord had been telling the disciples of the awful desolation that should befall the Gentiles at the close of their "times;" and at the completeness of their domination, and that trouble is spoken of as the "Falling of the arm of the Lord."

No one, who would read in Ezekiel 39, and Zechariah 14:2-5, the accounts of the last days, of the battle at Jerusalem, will fail to see that truly the "arm of the Lord" will fall upon those nations who will "think an evil thought" and will go up to battle against the Jews at that time.

The reader will please remember in connection with the above that which he has read relative to the work of God intrusted to the angels prior to the coming of the Savior. That is, that coming spoken of by Zechariah. God always acts in harmony with previous action. 'In all former work he has made man his agent, and through men as agents, his work among men has been accomplished.

Here in this quotation we have the description of a work to be done, and it is to be accomplished before the "glorious appearing of our Lord," and before the time the Gentiles are to go up to Jerusalem, at which time they will be so wonderfully discomfited, and completely destroyed. The resurrection of the righteous dead is the work referred to, to take place before the arm of the Lord is revealed.

We believe God has wisely kept the details of this work as a secret unto himself, or at least has commanded his servants "not to write the But now we are so near the time; the work that is to be done, so important, we are privileged to make mention of it.

There is a space of forty-five years as spoken of by Daniel and that which will happen during this forty-five years we find in the Doctrine and Covenants as follows:

"And there shall be silence in heaven for the space of half an hour and immediately after shall the curtain of heaven be unfolded as a scroll is unfolded after it is rolled up, and the face of the Lord shall be unveiled; * * * and they who have slept in their graves, shall come forth; for their graves shall be opened, * * * and all this by the voice of the sounding of the trump of the angel of God.

"And after this, another angel shall sound, which is the second trump, and then cometh the redemption of those who are Christ's at his coming; who have received their part in that prison which is prepared for them, that they might receive the gospel, and be judged according to men in the flesh."-D. C. 85:27,28.

And there are angels to continue the sounding of trumpets until seven have sounded. This is the interval of time as designated as "The time of the end."

This revelation referred to comes as a prophecy to us of that which will be, and is vevy significant as to a period of time. And the words "and then" signify a chronological order for the sounding of these trumpets as well as to a length of time for the peculiar work for each of these

However we are of the opinion the labor of each angel may overlap the others. To me the "and then" signifies more the time of commencing the work of each, more than the ending of the work of his predecessor. I am compelled to take this position that other scripture revealments may harmonize with this revealment.

The prophecies of the ancient prophets relative to "at the coming of Christ" as well as the revealments through Joseph Smith refer to those things that can and will be accomplished in this period of the sounding of the trumps; and hence the beginning of the sounding is just as much the coming of Christ as the finishing of their sounding will be. But the Scriptures teach us there will be a greater display to the world during the latter part of this period.

The church should look for the coming of Christ with the sounding of these trumps, as he has promised to be in the midst of them at this time; and at the commencing of the seventh thousand years. "And then shall the first angel again sound his trump in the ears of all living, and reveal the secret acts of men, and the mighty works of God in the first thousandth year.

"And then shall the second angel sound his trump, and reveal the secret acts of men, and the thoughts and intents of their hearts, and the mighty works of God in the second thousandth and so on, until the seventh angel shall sound his trump." And when he shall have finished the sounding his trump, "Satan shall be bound, that old serpent, who is called the Devil, and shall not be loosed for the space of a thousand years." These are the first seven years of the one thousand. D. C. 85:34,35.

This as we have been pointing out in the first sounding of the trumps, is the special work of Elijah, before "the great and notable day of the Lord." And in this way be fulfilled the words as quoted at the head of this article. And this which we have pointed out in the second time of sounding, is the sitting of the court that shall determine the deserts of men; and in the further execution of the sentence we correct an error that has prevailed for a long time; namely: That God first punishes the disobedient, and then judges him. This is done by saying the judgment is at the end of all things. In this revealment the judgment is before the execution. Daniel said the wise should understand, so may we come to a knowledge of things as they are.

Editor Ensign:—For the past week or ten days I have been trying to plant the gospel in this town of schools and colleges more permanently. We held a week's meeting in a little chapel on the outskirts of the city on East Broadway. The attendance and interest was fairly good. Some said they never heard such preaching in that church before; and of course we think that way too. We also held two services in Sr. T. C. Kelley's residence. The first night being Sunday night several of her reighbors were in. Attention and interest was good, and some of them promised to come back the following evening and bring some of their neighbors with them. Just why they did not we have not learned.

Including Sr. Keday and her two sons there are seven saints here attogether; and she is expecting to stay another year. Jan of her sons is in the State University, the other in high school. 'Sr. Kedey thinks when Bro. T. C. comes home she will try to press him into holding a

C. comes home she will try to press him into holding a few services. We trust she will be successful.

There ought to be a branch of the church in this city f great schools, so our young people who are attending shool could also attend the services of the church and perhaps prevail on some of their friends to attend with them, and in this way help to spread the gospel farther and wider. A good elder located here with his family would be a help.

Your brother in Christ, D. E. Tucker.

Seneca, Mo., Jan. 28,

Dear Ensign:—I thought I would write a few lines to our pages as I never have before. We are still in the your pages as I never have before. We are still in the faith and striving to let our light so shine that others faith and striving to let our light so shine that others may taste the good fruits of the gospel. We are in an isolated place now having none of the priesthood here. We had Bro. Silvers with us two weeks, and had some good preaching, and some were interested. I see we have lost one of our missionaries out of our district, but I hope it is only for a short time. We are about fifteen in number and we hold our regular meetings. Would be glad to have any one come and visit us. We always have a welcome for a saint. We are most all lately enlisted in the work and ask an interest in the prayers of the saints. I remain your brother in bonds.

O. W. Todd.

Beardstown, Ill., Jan. 31.

Dear Ensign:—I feel persuaded to write a few lines in regards to the results of the Lord's blessing toward Bro. J. W. Paxton and myself with others, who have been putting forth an earnest effort in this part of the Lord's vineyard.

Bro. Paxton and I left Beardstown January 5th, for Snicarte, a little town some twenty miles up the Illinois River from this place, where we opened up a series of meetings in the home of Bro. and Sr. M. T. Curry of that a series of meetings in the home of Bro. and Sr. M. T. Curry of that place, which meeting we carried through three weeks. The Lord was with us, and especially Bro. Paxton who had fine liberty in the presching of the word.

During our sojourn there we were permitted to baptize thirteen souls into the kingdom. Bro. Paxton baptizing nine, among whom were Bro. P. R. Burton and wife, nephew of the late Joseph Burton who gave his all to the Lord's work. Our Baptist brether raged and continued to rage, but we continued to baptize, meeting four times for that purpose. I myself baptized four of the thirteen converts. the thirteen converts.

On Tuesday evening, January 27th. we were "honored" by the visit of a mob, who treated us to a shower of brick-bats and blows on the sides of the house of Bro. Curry, it being an incident that carried us back to the Curry, it being an incident that carried us back to the by-gone day when the Martyr Stephen gave his life for the Lord's work by being stoned to death. It was also a reminder of what the saints suffered, before, and in the days when Joseph and Hyrum sealed their testimony with their blood at Carthage jail in 1844. But best of all, it was another testimony of the truth, another evidence that we are preaching the true gospel, the same that Christ was crucified for, the same that Stephen was stoned for. Glorious truth it never changes. It brings about the same results in this age as in the ages past.

A peculiarity of the affairs was that a part of the brick foundation of the Baptist Church was missing the next morning. One doesn't have to be a Sherlock Holmes brick foundation. One doesn't have to be a Sheriock frommetor add two and two and get the sum of four. (Where did the brick come from?) We feel the end is not yet in Snicarte but that there are many honest-hearted to yet be gathered out. Pray for the success of the work in this part of the field.

Your brother in gospel bonds,

R. L. Fulk.

Millett, Alta., Feb. 6. Editor Ensign:—There being a grand opening in this town for the opening of a county newspaper and job-printing shop, I and another brother are desirous of finding out if there is not a young man amongst the saints who understands the printing trade enough to handle the work shop end of such an enterprise. A small amount of capital would be required. The paper could be used to a great advantage to help the work on here as well as in the district. The church work is very quiet here at present but we are trusting in God for things to brighten up again soon. We would like to hear from any early a date as possible so we can enter into something else if we are unable to start the paper. Yours truly, GLEANINGS FROM OUR CORRESPONDENTS. Mrs. Melissa Jelly, Jeffersonville, Ill.—I don't see how I could get along without the "Ensign" as I love to read its pages. I am seventy years old, and am sick in bed, and ask the prayers of the saints in my behalf.

Robert A. Smith, 219 Haines Ave., Alliance, Ohio There are only two saints here—myself and an aged sister. The nearest branch is at Canton, twenty miles from here, but the interurban lines make it possible to attend quite often. The branch is small but the members are carnest and faithful in the discharge of their duties. The Canton saints will be heard from in the near future. They have a good wide-wayed Sunday school: and Bellicia They have a good, wide-awake Sunday school and Religio.

Lee Powell, Jay, Florida.—The "Ensign is about all the preaching we get as we are not handy to a branch although we have some cottage preaching sometimes by some of the alders or our district president.—Bro. C. J. Clark. I am doing all I can in the home Sunday school work. We have ten or twelve saints in this place.

The Spirit giveth light to every man that cometh into the world.—D. and C.

HELPING TO PREVENT CRIME. From the "Literary Digest" for November, 1912, we quote in part from an article under the above heading,

When we find the good men of "The World" earnestly and fearlessly pleading with people (men with whose hearts the Lord is striving, and through whom he is leading many toward an acceptance of the gospel, when it shall be presented to them), we should rejoice that the Lord is working on the hearts of "those who will." However, another thought should comfort us, as concerns those of our own ranks in the latter day church who are in danger, (Do we not claim the greater light?) and we should be spurred on to lives of example and not precept alone.

I once asked a young missionary how he did it—when he said that the young people almost all danced when he first came to his mission town, and that now they never even thought of doing it, to his knowledge. "How did you go at it to talk them out of it?" said I. "Why! I never mentioned dancing" said he.

Our lights—do they shine? Are we among any class that may be included in this article? Are we among among those who have not the courage of their convictions? Are we living up to and according to —our "greater light?"

to —our "greater light?"

Helping to Prevent Crime.

Agreeing that "crime" is "seizing a personal advantage out of the general good," we might all admit the force of Hamlet's question, "Use every man after his desert, and who shall 'scape whipping?" It behooves every one of us, to "keep himself in profound and intimate loyalty to the recognized standards of righteousmate loyalty to the recognized standards of righteousness." As things go at present, we can't do much toward the prevention of crime when we are so many of us in partnership with the avowed criminal in our contributions to the environment of crime. Some of these acts are not recognized by so black a name. But— * * * * People in every phase of unrighteousness, are colaborers, partners in the common business of snatching a private advantage out of the common good. They are criminals and helping to make criminals. Every act contrary to the common good dividualizes the moral at-criminals and helping to make criminals. Every act contrary to the common good devitalizes the moral atmosphere which all must breathe and by so much lowers the moral vitality of every member of the community. Considering the signs of the times would it not be well for the church forthwith to begin a crusade for personal righteousness; to lay upon the conscience of every man and woman an unsparing demand that in that calling where God has placed them they shall bring every thought where doe has precent ment up shant oring every thought and act to the line and plumb of spiritual rectitude."

[Does your—my—boy play "for keeps?" Editor].

The training of your children is a theme to which even the denizens of the underworld may contribute useful suggestions:

"Startling emphasis has just been laid upon the subject by the last message of that lifelong criminal and gang-leader who was shot upon the streets of New York. I never allow my boy to play marbles for keeps. That was the beginning of my criminal career. I never allow him to be on the street at night. I am training him in athletics.' Is it remarkable that a gambling mania is upon the country from Wall Street to the boys on the curb? The mothers in the parlor, the fathers in the club, the hobos in the saloon, the college boys on the athletic field, the children on the street are all playing for keeps. Here is a tropical climate for crime. When a Zelig (leader of an East-side gang), gus-man, profesa Zelig (leader of an East-side gang), gun-man, profes-sional, criminal, leaves his testimony against respectable society one hardly knows to whom the respectability applies. In such a malarial atmosphere we may expect a madness among the people to get something for nothing.

"The strict, impartial, and swift administration of justice to the criminal has doubtless something, perhaps more than we think, to do with the prevention of crime. The fear of the law probably keeps many a weak con-science in awe. But the conviction is steadily gaining among thoughtful people the world over that the best results in human culture will ever come by working our nature through its highest faculties, aroused to sponta-neous joyful activity, and not by compelling men to walk. in paths of virtue which they would never choose, and in paths of virtue which they would never choose, and to wear a respectable character, as they wear their continstend of shirt-sleeves on the street. The bit and the bridle for the horse, but inspiration for the human soul."

The two following clippings are taken from the editorial columns of the "Kansas City Star." We present them in connection with the article above, as bearing out the thought that we must watch our individual lives more closely, for the good of the community; and that we must work "as a unit" for the "kind of a community we wish." It can be done, and it must be done.

Forces For Good and Forces For Evil. Returning to Chicago from a world lecture tour in the interest of the "Men and Religion Forward Movement," Raymond Robins, the church worker and social worker, said:

"It is strange, but it is true, that the anti-social for have been socialized while the church has kept individual. The saloon has been made social; the body of brewers act as a unit, and they make policies. Vice is socialized. Religion hasn't yet been. The churches are fighting 13-inch guns with bows and arrows. They don't make much in such an unequal contest, naturally. will when their attitude has been changed."

Will when their actitude has been changed."

Mr. Robins is sure that the church is coming to an organized and fairly united fight on wrongdoers and wrong conditions. Certainly, everyone will share his faith that if the forces for good in a community exert half the intelligent effort for good that the organized evil influences exert for evil, the good forces can have the kind of a community they wish

"Citizens Make the City."

The French have a saying that applies to American problems: Les maisons font la ville, mais les citoyens font la cite"—"Houses make the material city, but the real city is made by citizens," to use an awkward trans-lation of the two French words for "city," for which

English has no precise equivalent.

This is merely another way of saying that "we, the people, are responsible for whatever sort of government we have." "We" make the city. If the result isn't good it's our fault.

THE McCUNE HOME FOR BOYS.

(From notes taken during an address by Judge Porterfield, of the Juvenile Court in Kansas City).

This home and farm of one hundred acres, is situated eight miles out from Independence. The boys who are sent there as a result of drunkenness, immorality, extreme poverty; are neg-lected, dependent children, the mildly delinquent, the cigarette fiend, truants, etc.

There are seven cottage homes; twenty boys to each one. Each home has a master and matron. Over the whole is a superintendent, who is principal of the school. This general superintendent must also be a school teacher and a mar-

They have a manual training school: teach agriculture; there are horses, cows, pigs, chickens to care for; the work of the house; "early to bed," etc. In 1910 three hundred and ten boys were sent here from the Juvenile Coart. During the intervening time only eleven of these have committed offenses: these were sent to the reform school.

Such institutions as these have made this age one of citizen building. Men are pausing in their rush for dollars to look after the unfortunates. Children are the seed corn of the nation.

The successes are due to the constructive features especially of these institutions, (the boys and girls' homes, the Juvenile Courts, the Boards of Public Welfare in our cities, etc.), the aiding, encouraging, instructing.

Such homes as this and its schools, educate and equalize children for citizenship. The church has its aims and labors in their behalf too, but remember, the home is the bulwark of a nation.

It is a greater thing to make men than to build mansions; we must build the citizen in order to build the city.

Personally we have visited McCune Home and the site is very fine. The Administration Building is on the highest spot of the hilly country surrounding; the rocked drives-in from the country road is horse shoe shaped; the schools and other buildings on the right hand side. On the left, as the hills slope down in from the drive above, is the children's play ground. This is large and thickly wooded. There are benches, seats, trapeses and various devices for games. There was a spirited ball game going on, while we were there-in an adjacent field; the teachers all in attendance too.

As we looked at the lovely furnished homes, libraries, and rows of clean beds, we were glad that so many boys have this privilege; but they cannot sives stay here; and we wonder what life has in store for them. Some will make good, no doubt. Others-weaker in temperament, lacking the influence of a home of their own and its love, will go astray no doubt.

By letting our lights shine-we may be able to help one of these helpless children-through our own.

THE WORLD'S NEED.

A pamphlet is being profusely distributed containing an article published in the December "North American Review," entitled "Must Protestantism, Adopt Christian Science?" The author is "A Churchman," who is a "priest in the Protestant Episcopal Church," but the article is so strongly an endorsement of Christian Science that it is to be wondered at that he still retains his denominational standing as Churchman."

It is not our purpose to review this article but to notice only one or two features of it. Protestantism is arraigned for its ineffectiveness in meeting the necessities of the world and its lack of the essentials by which it can retain its own members. The author says: "The most conservative apologists of our church admit that somehow, somewhere, something is wrong. * * * The Church querously wonders why so many thousands are leaving it for agnosticism, socialism, and material pleasures when it only has the words of life. To save itself it frantically resorts to every kind of attraction to interest people. It shifts its activities into social, civic, economic, and political reforms, institutes social commissions, urges the federation of national denominations, and proposes very pretty schemes for church unity, and some absurd plans for evangelizing the world." "Our failure to successfully apply Christianity to existing conditions is preventing its functions of regenerating the world."

Christian Science is held out as the one thing which is meeting and will meet the world's need. and for them who have tried it "this religion is identical with the primitive Christianity." stating some of the doctrines of Christian Science "Churchman" says: "These points are enough to show the superiority of Christian Science as a spiritual commentary on the Bible and as a guide into the Truth as it is in Christ Jesus. "Its fruitage proves to be identical with that of primitive Christianity."

The salvation of Protestantism is the adoption of Christian Science according to this article. To quote:."If we study the relation of the church to its work of salvation the need of the adoption of Christian Science becomes imperative." again: "Protestantism is not competent to teach the full gospel unless it includes healing the sick as an evidence of God's presence in the lives of its members, and adopts the Christian Science method as practically identical with the way of Jesus Christ." The relationship of Christian Science to Protestantism is considered "somewhat as the primitive church to the Jewish religion."

That Protestantism falls far short of embodying the whole gospel of Christ and has failed and is failing to meet the real needs of the souls of men we would not deny, but that Christian Science meets those needs, and consists of the doctrine and practice of primitive Christianity we cannot coucede. While it is following a wave of popularity, this is due more to the dearth of the essential elements of Christianity in the various Protestant and Catholic bodies which has left the people spiritually lifeless and ready to accept anything which gives even a promise of satisfying their needs. People are conscious of their lack of spiritual life, and that the power of the gospel is not operative in the churches. The manifestation of the Spirit of God which operated in primitive Christianity is not had in Christianity as it is represented in modern Protestantism, and that which today purports to duplicate the miraculous of New Testament times finds ready acceptance with many without a critical investigation and comparison.

Christian Science in common with every system of faith and practice has many truths and some features which are beautiful, but the doctrine of Jesus Christ is wholly truth and its operation in human life is perfect when man yields himself to it. We are neither Catholic nor Protestant but we do not believe that Christian Science is a helpful substitute for Protestantism in any sense, but that with its rejection of the reality of matter, of sin and Satan, of the fall of man, of sickness and disease, and other things which are clearly acknowledged in the teachings and work of Jesus Christ and those admittedly called and acknowledged of God to be his representatives, it becomes divertive from the gospel of Christ.

The claim that this new theology is "identical with primitive Christianity," opens up the whole system for comparison. What about its introduction to the world? Did all the prophets of old prophesy of it as they did of the Christ and the work he should do? Did God send any heavenly messenger having personality and form to introduce this new doctrine as he did in the introduction of Christianity? Did the Holy Ghost rest upon some individuals declaring the purposes of God and preparing men to participate in his work as it did at the ir voduction of the ancient dispensation? To all of these questions the history of Christian Science answers "No."

A comparison of the doctrine shows a difference so extreme in some points that resemblances cease. Jesus taught faith in a personal God and in himself as the Son of God but the founder of the new theology denies all personality in the godhead. The Christianity of Jesus Christ holds him as the actual Son of God which Christian Science denies. Jesus taught and observed a literal baptism in material water but the only baptism Mrs. Eddy taught was a figurative baptism in truth. Jesus and his disciples taught a physical resurrection of all men of whom Christ was the firstfruits, but Mrs. Eddy denies the reality of matter and the physical resurrection. Jesus established the ordinance of the Lord's supper by blessing bread and wine and giving to his disciples and commanding its perpetuation, but the only communion in Christian Science is held to be with the truth.

In the practice of Christianity by the church and individuals men were divinely commissioned and sent out to preach, baptize, and to perform such works as the Holy Spirit might direct and empower them to do. The obedient received the gift of the Holy Ghost, and gifts of the Holy Ghost such as healing, miracles, prophecy, discerning of spirits, tongues, and interpretation of tongues, etc., but Christian Science discards ministers of every class, recognizes no real endowment of a real divine presence, and acknowledges no manifestations of the Spirit except as may be shown by individuals whose power is in and of themselves because of their knowledge of the "Truth." In Christianity healing the sick was secondary and incidental to the conversion of the soul, but the healing of Mrs. Eddy by Quimby, a charlatan, was the beginning of Christian Science and healing has remained the principal argument for its perpetration.

Upon these and many other points Christian Ssience differs from primitive Christianity, and while Protestantism is far from the pure teachings and practices of the early church the philosophy of Mrs. Eddy dispenses with what truth remains, and offers as a substitute an array of etherealized doctrine so abstract in its nature that it can have no application to material things. Thus it is far from being "identical with primitive Christianity," and cannot save Protestantism from its decline nor bring life to a dying world.

The situation in the religious world as it appears to us is one that needs the voice of Jesus Christ. He alone is able to correct the errors into which the Christian world has fallen since his voice was last heard; he alone is able to establish a renewal of primitive Christianity, and he alone can direct his work through the critical times now prevailing to a perfect consumation. Can it be said that his power to speak to man has been lost? Can it be that with the many Lo heres, and Lo theres, which leave the searcher after truth in uncertainty and confusion, that the need for him to speak has ceased? Or has his interest in the welfare of humanity so waned that he has become indifferent to their needs? these questions we must answer "No."

The prophecies of the scriptures point to a latter day dispensation when God will again speak, and establish his work through his Son Jesus Christ, when there should be a new revelation of the will of God which would make it possible for men to learn the truth and to walk in the right way, when the power of God would be manifested for the salvation of his people and an actual gathering of Israel in preparation for the coming of his Son. That dispensation has begun, the heavens have broken their silence and the voice of Jesus Christ has been heard. The ancient truth is now taught, confirmed and attended by the same Spirit which brings today the same gifts as were had anciently. Men have been authorized of God to minister in the things of the gospel, and God is working to bring about the gathering of his people. The restored gospel is applicable to man in his relation to things of this world as well as the world to come, and offers an assurance of hope, joy, peace that is not to be realized elsewhere.

PRESS NOTICES.

"The Times" of Canisteo, N. Y., gives favorable notices and mention of the work of Elder A. M. Chase, in his special meetings at Greenwood. At one of his services was a Mr. Goff who told of having heard an excellent address from one of our ministers upon the streets of Salt Lake City several years ago. Upon being asked if he remembered the name, he said it was "Chase," and asked the elder if he knew him. The elder replied that he knew him well-that in fact he was the man. The hand-shaking was renewed and a pleasant acquaintance was established between them.

'The Tularosa Tribune," New Mexico, contains a half column article from the pen of Elder W. A. Brooner setting forth the belief of the church. Elder Brooner had just closed a series of metings

Two circular letters have reached our desk issued by Bro. J. E. Vanderwood, pastor at Salt Lake City, and one issued by the Bishop's agent of the Utah District. The letters hold out the gospel ideal and invite the saints to whom they have been sent to come up to that ideal in all things. The circular letter offers some advantages in reaching the saints, especially the isolated ones.

THE CONFERENCE DAILY.

We are planning on getting out the most complete conference daily ever issued, and on getting it out promptly. We shall enlist the services of several good reporters and news gatherers so that many things of interest connected with the social and spiritual life of the conference, in addition to the daily report of the business sessions Il be reported. the same size as the Ensign, and will have a variety of topics and items of general interest. See the notice on last page.

INDEPENDENCE ITEMS.

The fair weather of Sunday brought out good attendances of enthusiastic members at all the services at the church. Rev. J. B. Bollman representing a society for helping the friendless of Kansas City occupied the hour with an account of his work, and appealing for funds with which to carry it on. A collection taken for this work amounted to a few cents less than seventy dollars. Some were unable to gain access to the afternoon sacrament service at the usual place of meeting, but were able to meet with the young people and partake of the sacrament in the upper auditorium. The evening speaker was Elder L. E. Hills who has recently returned from his mission in Montana. He spoke on the efficacy of the blood of Christ in relation to the sacrament of the Lord's supper.

Bro. W. H. Garrett has been confined to his home since Sunday the 22d ult., when he contracted severe cold on the occasion of the severe storm. He is just beginning to be about again.

At the monthly business meeting Monday night considerable routine business was transacted. Thirty-three letters of removal were granted, nearly all of which were for members long since removed from the branch. Fifteen the memora sing since removed from the oranch. Fifteen letters were received most of which were for members who had been here some time. These changes were made possible by the diligent efforts of our branch recorder, Bro. L. H. Haas, in seeking to have the records represent the true status of the membership. His effort should receive the co-operation of all concerned.

The committee on general conference estayts involved the conference of the concerned.

The committee on general conference entertainment will have charge of the dining hall after March 16th, when preparations will begin for meeting the dietary necessities of the hundreds of visitors who will be in attendance at the general conference and conventions.

The funeral of Sr. Lillian Bushweit of Kansas City who recently died at Duluth, Minn., was held at the church Tuesday; burial at Mound Grove. She was the daughter of Bro. George Horton who died last October, and neice of Bro. W. H. Deam. Her age was 50 years.

INDEPENDENCE, SECOND BRANCH.

Sunday school had an attendance of 259, collection 1.80. At the 11 o'clock hour Bro. Joseph Luff spoke $4.80. At the 11 o'clock nour Bio. Joseph Luii spoke along the same line as in his previous talk some time ago, showing that God's work stands forever, and unless ago, snowing that God's work stands forever, and unless man had been tricked by the evil powers it would have remained as at first. One prevalent idea exploded was that of total depravity. He claimed all were born in the image of God and could not be deprayed at birth, as some claim.

The 2:30 p. m. sacrament hour was well attended so vas reported, and a spiritual time was had

The evening hour was occupied by Bro. U. A. Austin, his subject being "Our Relation to the Church, and the Church to the World." Many good and useful points Church to the World." Many good and useful points were brought out and the talk throughout was of interest were brought out and the talk throughout was of interest to his hearers. We were exhorted to be more prompt in discharge of duties as members, not allow some one else to do what we should do. Bro. J. T. Curtis, another "minute man" was called to help Bro. Austin "close," giving a very instructive talk. Bro. J. T. Curtis is always ready to speak for the gospel's sake.

The regular monthly business meeting of the branch was held Monday evening, the report showing a membership of 314. H. W. Goold, J. T. Curtis, A. K. Dillee were recommended to be sent as delegates to general conference. The ordination of Bro. McIntosh to the conterence. Ine orangation of Bro. McIntosh to the office of teacher was done under the hands of Brn. H. W. Goold and J. T. Curtis. The branch voted to turn the church building over to conference authorities during general conference, to be used as they see proper.

There are city ordinances governing the teams passing along the streets which is, they must keep on the streets, but if you will visit all the streets in the south part of the city, you will discover teams go right through the streets, not on them.

SAINT JOSEPH, FIRST BRANCH.

Sunday, Feb. 22nd, was indeed a wild, stormy day. The morning rain changed to sleet accompanied by a high and intensely cold wind which by night had increased to a wild gale. Snow began to fall in the late afternoon and by Monday morning all out o'doors was one vast expanse of glittering white, so pure, so beautiful, but oh, so cold! Though the storm was very severe the attendance at the services was good.

the attendance at the services was good.

Bro. Scott, our pastor, preached the morning sermon, taking for his text Proverbs 4:1. Wisdom was the theme enlarged upon, and we were earnestly exhorted to work and pray for this priceless possession.

In the afternoon, at four o'clock a number of "seekers after knowledge" met at the church and organized a study club. Bro. H. D. Ennis was elected president, Athena Scott secretary. Bro. R. Winning teacher. There study club. Bro. H. D. Ennis was elected president, Athena Scott secretary, Bro. R. Winning teacher. There were twenty-five charter members and the first subject to be taken up will be Psychology.

At the evening prayer service the good Spirit was present, and encouraged and strengthened those present. The preaching hour was occupied in an entertaining manner by Elder J. A. Gunsolley of Lamoni and Grace land College.

On Sunday the 1st, Patriarch Wm. Lewis began a series of meetings which will continue through the He preached both morning and evening to a large con-

On the 27th, the program at the close of the lesson was an enjoyable one. Two of our junior boys, Henry Taddicken and LeRoy Haden read papers pertaining to the life of Washington which were very good. Grace Fifer sang "Abide with me," and Gladys Christiansen and Mildred Nesser contributed an instrumental number.

Sunday school on the first had an attendance of collection $5.57. Our collections have not gone below collection $5.57. Our collections have not gone below $5.00 for some time, and our attendance keeps up well. We have six organized classes which are doing nicely. At close of session we had a song by Athena Scott, and Ruby Jackson told an interesting story which had for its point this quotation, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these my brethren ye have done it

Independence, Mo., Feb. 20. Editor Ensign:—On the 21st day of last month Sister Emma Waterman passed over the borderland to her rest after an illness of about two months duration of a complication of diseases. At the approach of winter every she especially suffered and endured her trials with she especially suitered and endured her trials with hero-ism. I believe heroism was natural to her. When about sixteen years old she was left to support a bedridden mother which she did until her mother died and was buried at Madely, England.

would find her with a band of Christian workers who paid their own expenses to the east part of London to visit the Jews, and with song, prayer and testimony they witnessed that Jesus of Nazareth was the very Christ and the only Savior of man. Our mutual labor brought us together and we were married February 15, 1879. We soon after became acquainted with a man who had been a traveling elder in the church organized by Joseph Smith in 1830. This man taught us the doctrine that we believe today. Your humble servant was appointed missionary, and in two years from that time we had two hundred members.

During this time Sr. Waterman was called to pass through another severe trial. While her husband away at Birmingham our first born son was taken sick and died holding a piece of bread to his mother's mouth.

this last effort and breath showing regard for mother.

The one effort by the said elder to teach polygamy caused a strong division in the church which ended in Bro. and Sr. Waterman and Bro. and Sr. Howlett joining this church in 1882. The secrets of our hearts were this church in 1882. The secrets of our hearts were revealed as it was in the days of old. (1 Cor. 14:25). Sr. Waterman has been a quiet, firm friend of this latter work in testimony which was invariably strong and clear. A capable teacher in the Sunday school, beloved by her scholars and according to her patriarchal blessing her whole life was one of consecration to God. Dear Ensign:—Thought a few lines from me might be of interest to your readers. Have been quite busy since arriving at Sydney on November 12th. There is much to be done in this country to get the gospel before the people. We have a splendid lot of saints in Australia, who are ready to help extend the work of the Lord.
There are two branches in this city, one numbering over 200. Have just returned from New Castle District, embracing the Wallsend, West Wallsend, Hamilton,
Tralba, and Anna Bay branches, visited all but the latter.
Shall soon leave for the Victoria District.

"Sweet by and bye,"

Frains, and Anna Day branches, visited all but the latter. Shall soon leave for the Victoria District. Enjoying a visit with Bishop Lewis and his fine family, also with Bro. J. H. N. Jones, of the missionary force. Bro. Miller is accomplishing a good work, laboring in Sydney for three months. Quite a number have been beautied disease our anymal horse.

Sydney for three months, Qu baptized since our arrival here.

I will have for sale at General Conference, also at my home, 185 W. 11th Ave., Columbus, Ohio, a parliamentary chart which can be used in public, at business meetings, Religio, Sunday school, etc., or for private instruc-tion. Every branch should have one of these and keep it posted in a conspicuous place, so our people will become better versed in parliamentary practice. The chart is printed on cloth, in colors, 20x36, is so simple a child can soon understand. Can readily be carried in a suit case or bag. For very large copies, George F. Weston, R. No 3, box 26, Independence, Mo., will furnish them for $6.00 each. The price of the smaller ones are $1.00 each, postage prepaid.

My headquarters while in Sydney, have been at the ome of Bro. and Sr. Gresty, who have made me feel as their home was mine. Bro. Gresty has quite a reputation in Calagraphy of Company and Designan and has tation in Sydney as a composer and musician, and has a very talented family in musical lines. His wife is one of our faithful workers, and wields a growing influence with young and old.

Hope the coming conference will be guided and blessed with the Spirit of the Master. Your brother in the one faith

Snicarte, Ill., Jan. 30.

Editor Ensign:—This is my second year laboring in the Central Illinois District. Last year I believe, was the most successful year I have ever spent in the missionary field. The fore part of the present year not so sucsionary field. The tore part of the present year now so on-cessful however, owing to some conditions existing not favorable to successful missionary work. I believe how-ever, the work is on the upward move here, having se-cured some new openings which, from all appearance, existing not cured some new openings which, from all appearance, promise fair to good results in the near future.

I am at present in company with Bro. R. L. Fulk, holding forth in the above place, and we certainly have had excellent results. I have spent much hard but pleasant work in this place in the past two years, but the fruits of our labors, as well as the fruits of those who have labored years ago in this part of the vineyard, have begun to be gathered, not without opposition however.

About Christmas time I received a letter from Bro. and Sr. Curry at Snicarte asking me to come at once or as soon as possible as some were ready for baptism. So New Year's morning I left home and loved ones for my mission field, stopping over night in St. Louis with Bro. and Sr. McKevit. I went to Beardstown, preached Sunday night, and on the 5th of January began meetings as Dro. Carette versile head heavy in Bro. Curry's residence. The Baptist people had been holding meetings there for three weeks and after Bro. Fulk and I arrived they thought best to continue another week which they did, but no good results seemed to follow their efforts. But on Sunday the 18th I haptized eight fine people, all adults and mostly heads of families, and some were leading members of the Baptist

This of course was pretty strong and raised the Bap that spirit to a very high pitch against us. So much talk was participated in which only seemed to arones greater interest, so when on Tuesday, 27th, Bro. Fulk led an-other young man and wife into the water and baptized them it seemed to be more than they could stand, and that night some one proceeded to throw brick-bats against the house where we were preaching. We had closed meeting that night but when so much commotion was raised I immediately announced meetings would continue for a couple of nights, the result of which was three more baptisms.

The amusing feature of the stone throwing is this: They evidently saw their spiritual structure was going, hence would not need their church building much longer, so it was afterwards discovered that a part of the bricks used in the throwing contest were taken out of the foundation of the Baptist church building.

Now we have a membership of twenty-two in Snicarte, a Sunday school organized, a good prayer meeting, and been with us in the little branch at Atchison, and of course an energetic crowd that are indeed glad they are Latter Day Saints. So the good work moves on in Central Innois District.

I expect to visit Quiney and New Canton, Illinois. In conclusion will say I am still in the conflict. My faith is increasing, and I am trying to magnify my office and calling as a minister for Christ.

In gospel bonds, J. W. Paxton.

Helsingborg, Furntorpsgatan 63, Sweden

Editor Ensign:-It is not very often that I burden your pages, but I thought for once I would write you a few words relative to the work here, that your many readers may see how the gospel is progressing in this part of the world.

The work, I believe, was first introduced here in the nineties by Bro. John Walstom, but it seemed at that nnectes by 13ro. John Waistom, but it seemed at that time the people here were not ready for the fullness of the gospel. In the year 1904 Bro. John H. Hanson waappointed to this mission, and it seemed then that the people were more ready for the glad message, as twenty or more accepted the gospel through his administration. Since that time the mission has been continued, and several others have been appointed to labor here, namely: Brn. Swen Swenson, Oscar Okerlind, David Lundquist and Oscar Johnson; not forgetting to mention the faithful labors of Apostle Peter Anderson and H. N. Hanson The last two mentioned have had charge of the work in Scandinavia, and have most of the time, when here, labored in Denmark, yet both of them and also Bro.

labored in Demmark, yet both of them and also Bro. Peter Muceus have come over to help us once in awhile. The opposition from the start has been intense as a consequence of Utah people's doings. The authorities have wakened up to the fact that the Swedish people which have immigrated to Utah, with their children, now count 20,000, and it is thought all of this is needed at home. Last year the state appropriated 10,000 krowns, and the year before 8,000 krowns to hinder the raisely weak of the Marchaette. mission work of the Mormons. As a consequence the state church has engaged a man by the name of Aslev, who has resided in Utah for several years, to lecture all over the country, and also write articles for publi-cation. Although this man is telling things about the Mormons in Utah that are true, he grossly misrepresents Joseph Smith and the Book of Mormon, and he will make no distinction between this church and the one in Utah.

The last act of the state church is very slanderous and malicious article in the almanac that goes to every home, which article is read by everybody. The writer has done his utmost seemingly to besmear the characters and done his utmost seemingly to desine the consideration of Joseph Smith and ridicule the Book of Mormon, and for this reason it seems to be necessary make reply to same in tract form, that we can hand to such people as we come in contact with.

I have labored among the people here for about six years, and some have accepted the work in this town years, and some have accepted the work in this town and a couple of other places near by. Several are interested at present and will no doubt unite with us as soon as the weather gets a little warmer. In my labors I have not forgotten the children, and for their instruction have succeeded in keeping a school going the most of the time, and as a consequence have baptized four children of the saints, which are now eleven and twelve years of age, and will soon be men and women. At present I have a very interesting Sunday school with an attendance of from fiften to twenty mostly cuticless.

present I have a very interesting Sunday school with an attendance of from fifteen to twenty, mostly outsiders. It has been in my mind for some time to open up the work in Malmo, a city with 93,000 inhabitants, but lacking means I have not been able. The bishop has furnished us with some means, no doubt all he was able to, but in opening up a new place like that one, it takes considerable to rent a hall, advertise, pay for room and board, which is high too.

In connection with this, I wish to remind our Scandinavian saints and others interested in this mission of the opportunity that is before us. The Lord has said, that we are laborers together with him in saving souls, and that one human soul is worth as much as the whole that we are laborers together with him in saving souls, and that one human soul is worth as much as the whole world, or words to that effect, and the opportunity is open to all to work cut our salvation." We missionaries are doing all we can, offering all our time and means we can spare. Each one may receive for himself a reward, when labored acceptably in this life, and done part of the great work intrusted to all. All cannot preach, but can help with a few cents, dollar, or more for this mission, so that we can be able to open up the work in Malmo, and also make an answer in tract form to that slanderous article I mentioned above. Sr. Harma Lawrence, Bjorneborg, Warml, Sweden, is our bishop's that shanderous article I mentioned above. Sr. Harma wrence, Bjorneborg, Warml, Sweden, is our bishop's ent and will gladly receive all contributions. With love and best wishes to all you readers, I remain your brother in gospel bonds.

Lamoni, Iowa, Feb. 25.
Editor Ensign:—It has not been because I have not appreciated the value of our missionary paper that I have not contributed to its pages, but hecause my mind has been busied with historical matters relating Presidents of Seventy and the Seventy, with the biogra-phies and autobigraphies of the Presidents of Seventy that appear in the columns of the Journal of History, and in my mission work in the Lamoni Stake, that I have not contributed more.

I just closed quite an interesting three weeks' meeting I just closed quite an interesting three weeks' meeting at the Evergreen Branch near this place. While none were baptized, yet many of the saints expressed themselves edified and strengthened for a more successful warfare against the flesh, the world and the devil, and I replaced at the blessings of God bestowed while I ministered there.

For two weeks beginning January 10th I ministered the word at Tingley in a hall secured by the brethren there, who ably assisted me. It is but proper that I should mention Srs. Ethel Anderson and Susie Brown, who took charge of the music and showed themselves true missionaries. I left a few interested. The respect shown me by good attendance, and quiet, respectful attention shows that the saints there have won the good will of their neighbors, which he are it should be a leave. will of their neighbors, which is as it should be. I have good reason to hope for an ingathering soon. It has been arranged to have meetings and Sunday school beginning the first of next month.

Following this I visited Creston, and found a few saints who were truly "hungering and thirsting after righteousness," and in my humble way ministered for three nights and organized a Sunday school. To this three nights and organized a Sunday school. To this place I am expecting to go and minister for a week beginning next Monday.

Besides the places above mentioned I have labored at Centerville, Albia, Hiteman, Avery, Lucas, and near there, where I found a people who were very appreciative of the efforts made, and at a place near Jamison, and at Graceland Branch. At all of these places I found friends whose kindness I remember with gratitude. At no place have I been, but there comes to me a request to return.

Indifference and worldliness effects both members and non-members and wortainess effects both members and non-members. Clubs, orders, parties, theaters, picture shows and modern dances with pride claims the attention of the people, and it is evident that we are living in the "last days" in which the people both within and without the church give evidence that they are "lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God," and this is bringing "perilous times" to the spirituality that should exist. There are but few conversions, and the love of many is waxing cold because of these iniquities that abound, and formality is occupying the place of spirituality with many of those professing to be children of God. More and more is the thought that this is an individual work and that every one must stand before the judgment seat and give an account of himself to God is impressed upon me. When we are to give an account impressed upon me. when we are to give an account of our time, our means, our talents, and have that account measured by the 'first and great commandment, 'Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind,' many will be found wanting.

I am in the faith, but the time for active service with the land of the land, but the land of active service with me is growing short, and I feel at times to cry out with the Apostle John, after it was said to him, "Surely I come quickly," "Even so, come, Lord Jesus." e, Lora .... Hopefully, J. F. Mintun.

I have spent the most of the winter in Southern Indiana, but have now spent one month in the Kentucky and Tennessee District. We find in this part of the field plenty of work for the missionary to do. Bro. P. C. Russell was with us in the two districts for a few weeks. The general regret was that his stay was so short. We visited Swindle school house, and Liberty Hill. At the latter place an elder and priest were ordained.

Last week I attended a debate between Bro. S. E. Dickson and C.M. Greer of the so-called Church of Christ. This was the first debate for either of these men. Discussion continued for five nights, on two church propositions. It was a signal victory for Bro. Dickson. All the audience, which was very large, were manifestly for Bro. Dickson, all save the "Disciples." Mr. Greer was so contentious and unreasonable that at the last the crowd actually hooted, jeered and hissed him. Bro. Dickson stands high in the estimation of the people in that community. This is about two miles south of Mc-

Bro. F. G. Pitt, evangelist, has reached this field and is doing good work.

The next district conference will be held at Foundry Hill, Tenn., on February 28th and March 1st. The gospel seems to be gaining ground in Western Tennessee. H. E. Moler.

Dear Ensign:—My health is so poor I cannot enjoy church privileges and cannot do for the gospel as I wish. I am not able to work and haven't anything of my own with which to pay (ithing, but sometimes I manage to send a free offering.

My husband belongs to the Baptist Church. I ask the prayers of all the saints in my behalf, that if it is not the Lord's will for me to be healed that I may be spared to raise my precious child, for he needs a mother's care.

The Lord is good and I have never asked for a blessing without receiving. He has always been with me, and the Lord 18 good and I have never asked for a blessing without receiving. He has always been with me, and would do more if I just could only live as a saint should live, but our home is divided. Some of you perhaps know how that is. My faith is strong.

Asking again for the prayers of the saints for better health and also for my dear mother, your sister in the faith.

Annice Griffin.

St. Joseph, Mo., Feb. 24.

Editor Ensign:—We are having some very snug win-ter weather here now. I have been here in St. Joseph for some time, held a series of meetings in the Third Branch. I was there over three Sundays, had a very fine interest and splendid attendance when the weather was fit at all for folks to come out. I was told that there was the best attendance of outsiders that has been in that church for a long time. Some are waiting for warmer weather to be baptized. There is considerable sickness among the saints just now.

The writer took a severe cold the last two days at the Editor Ensign:--We are having some very snug win-writer took a severe cold the last two days at the Third Branch, and I have been out of commission ever since, more than a week.

On last Sunday the 22nd, (Washington's birthday) at

On last Sunday the 22nd, (Washington's birthday) at 6 p. m. we had a beautiful wedding at Bro. and Sr. A. A. Richardson's, 4817 Kinghill Ave., when I had the pleasure of repeating the important words which made our noble young brother, Frank H. Stanley, of the Andover Branch, and Sr. Sophie C. Erler, one of the very best young sisters of the Second St. Joseph Branch, one for life. Sr. Sophie will be much missed in the branch here; she will be a great help to the Andover Branch for she is a fine singer, and does fine on the piano, and is a good Sunday school worker all around. Andover saints please take notice and act accordingly. This brieft young Sunday school worker all around. Andover saints please take notice and act accordingly. This bright young couple have a bright future before them; the sincero : sire of all the branch here goes with them; that they may be useful in God's work, as it was shown that they should be if faithful to their duty. They will be at home to their many friends at Andover, Mo., after March 1.

I hope that I shall soon be able to go to work again, for the calls are so many for to come and preach for them, and it is a real burden for me to be idle. I had a call from Elwood, Kansas, to come over there and them, and it is a real burden for me to be idle. I had a call from Elwood, Kansas, to come over there and preach for the colored Baptist people in their church; but my bad cold disqualifies me from doing so now. The Second Branch here wanted me for a while too, also they are waiting for me at Kingston, Mo. The Fourth Kansas City Branch have a call in too, for me to come soon. May God enable me to soon be able to be at work again, is my desire. May God bloss his pagule georyuphore is is my desire. May God bless his people everywhere is my prayer.

In gospel bonds,

GLEANINGS FROM OUR CORRESPONDENTS.

Sr. J. I. Redfield, Atchison, Kas.—Bro. Rushton has been with us in the little branch at Atchison, and of course we have been feasting upon the gospel for a week. Each Sunday our table is set with wholesome fare, with love as a center piece, and the influence of the good Spirit to season every good thing. Please send us another messenger. We are thankful for past favors.

D. R. Jones, Gardenville, Nevada—Here in Nevada are only a few saints and they are scattered. We meet at Carson City as often as we can when health and weather permit. There are some faithful saints here but not so many as in the past, as some have gone to the rest beyond and some have moved away, but the Lord remembers us by his good Spirit and we are encouraged to press on. During the years since Bro. W. W. Blair came here in 1878 when we first heard and obeyed the gospel, the Lord has given us many testimonies of its truth.

Mrs. Lillie M. Seigler, Birdseye, Ind.—A debate has just closed at the Oak Hill School House three miles south of hers between Bro. H. E. Moler and Elder E. G. Denny of the Christians, and there was a large attendance all four days. Elder Denny said elders were not officers but just old men; that A. Campbell did not organize their church, then said that John Wright did. He denied having a discipline, then said they did. The saints were all happy with the success they had. Brn. Moler and Metcall have been preaching at Bro. Jacob Seiglers' house all week. Oh! how we rejoice in Cod's bluerium name that all God's blessings given to us!

Ifyou cannot attend the general conference this year, ext best thing is the conference daily. It costs but twenty-five cents.

JUST RECEIVED.

Sr. Kenty of this city has received word from her sister, Sr. Alberta Lake, enroute from California, and who expected to stop here on her way to Kirtland, that having received word that Bro. John H. Lake of Kirtland is in a critical condition she has decided on continuing her journey directly to Kirtland. We trust Bro. Lake may yet he snared yet be spared.

A MOTTO.

"A man that is clean inside and outside, who neither looks up to the rich nor down to the poor: who can lose without squealing and who can win without bragging; considerate of women, children, and old people; who is too brave to lie, too generous to cheat, and too sensible to loaf; who takes his share of this world's goods and lets other people have theirs."

I have lived to thank God that all my prayers have not been answered.—Jean Ingelow.

THE MELCHISEDEC PRIESTHOOD. How Long Was It On Earth Between Adam And Christ?

By Elder W. A. Sinclair, M. D.

If we take the Inspired Translation for a basis of the early workings of God with man, we must concede that the priesthood was transmitted to man at a very early period.

Reading from Genesis 6:7, we would interpret it to mean that God had given the Melchisedec Priesthood to Adam, for it reads: "Now this same priesthood which was in the beginning, shall be in the end of the world also."

If it was in the beginning, Adam must certainly have had it, and administered it to his posterity. This is certainly a fact, for we read in Doctrine and Covenants 83:2, That Adam ordained Abel, through whose lineage it was conferred to Enoch, and from Enoch to Noah, and from Noah to Melchisedec, and from Melchisedec to Abraham. At this period there is a change of affairs in the direct lineage, the partriarchal period being in the supremacy. But, while this is true regarding the chosen family, we must not forget that Melchisedec himself lived for twenty-eight years after Abraham's death, and though not of the immediate family, would most assuredly have a branch of the church of God in the regions where he resided; and it is hardly probable that the church organization and faith died with him, allowing his people to be disorganized and scattered, especially when he was such a great high priest. It is simply the silence of the historian in recording the different branches of the work; his mind and interests being centered on the chosen family, of which he was a descendant.

Referring again to this chosen line, wherein Abraham received the priesthood from Melchisedec; there is the possibility of a transmission of the same priesthood down the line to Isaac and Jacob, and a probability of Joseph coming under the same authority; but here, the line of priests seems to end, so far as the higher priesthood is concerned.

Now if this was all the provision God had made for a continuation of his gospel and priesthood, sorry indeed would be the failure, and broken trust of a chosen family. But he who knew all things, and the end from the beginning, foresaw the predicament that would eventually overtake this line, and he made provision for that which otherwise might have been lost.

This could only be done by a separate and distinct people, and so choosing the one specially adapted for the honoring of such a divine commission, he established his priesthood with him, and mark you, this was at a time when Abraham was a priest or patriarch in the land of Palestine.

Esaias was the one chosen and ordained by God himself to the holy priesthood. The Doctrine and Covenants tells us that Esaias lived in the time of Abraham and was blessed of him. This blessing, disturbed my mind for some time, but, a closer analysis revealed facts which made it somewhat more clear to my vision.

Esaias lived in the days of Abraham, but possibly he may have been an old man when he met with Abraham; or on the other hand he may have been a young man, either way you wish to take it, it mattereth not, for young or old, he met him, and too, Abraham was a patriarch whose specific duty would be to give blessings, and these blessings were for the priesthood as well as the laitv.

It does not necessarily mean, (because he lived in the days of Abraham) that God could not call and ordain others simply because he was favoring a special line. The Melchisedec priesthood is not necessarily a priesthood of lineage like the Aaronic. It is a priesthood of gift, and can be bestowed how and when God wills to do so; and in this instance he seems to have willed to do so for a wise purpose in himself as we shall see later.

He called and ordained Esaias to the Melchisedec priestheod for two purposes at least, as I see it. Firstly: It seems to me that Esaias was ordained during a time that comparatively little, if any wore being taught in the line of the gospel, except, perhaps, within the borders of Palestine, and possibly a more circumscribed area than that.

Shem or Melchisedec, who seems to have been the king of Salem or Jerusalem, probably remained very close to his kingdom, at least, so far as the history is concerned, it would lead one to think so: and Abraham was with him for a great many years, according to the record which I have before me.

This story is regarding Abraham the 9th from Noal's son Shem. He was born at a time when Nimrod the king of Babel held sway. This king had a dream the import of which made him an enemy to the posterity of Terah; this enmity was of so grave a nature that Terah was compelled to have Abram, his mother and nurse hidden for the first ten years of Abram's life, at which age he was sent to Noah and his son Shem, who at this time was the king of Salem and the Great High Priest of God. This is recorded in the Book of Jasher, which was translated from the original Hebrew, and published in New York, in 1840, by M. M. Noah.

This record tells us that Abram went to Noah and Shem, and he remained with them to learn the instruction of the Lord, and his ways. And Abram was in Noah's house thirty-nine years, and Abram knew the Lord, and he went in the ways of the Lord until the day of his death, as Noah, and his son Shem had taught him."

This gives us a period of practically fifty years that Abram was absent from his people and we read further that after his return, he remained with his people twenty-six years, before God commanded him to get out from his father's kindred to another land. So he would be seventy-five years old before very much is known about him from the scriptural account.

Now, it seems probable to me that Esaias was ordained during this long period of silence, and he preached the word and followed the divine law; hence, when he met Abraham he would recognize the sameness of the gospel message, and probably seeking a patriarchal blessing, Abraham complied with his request.

Secondly: As stated before, the line of priesthood through Abraham died out either in Jacob or Joseph, and a long period of silence in this respect follows.

God proposed to favor his chosen family once more with the holy priesthood, and so he chose a line distinct from them to whom he delegated this authority, but so arranged the destiny of those concerned that there came about a union of the two lines further down in the world's history.

The Doctrine and Covenants tells us that Esaias ordained Gad, and Gad ordained to succeed him, Jeremy, Jeremy ordained Elihu, Elihu ordained Caleb, and Caleb ordained Jethro.

While the gospel was continuing down through this line of faithful priests, the chosen family was brought low in servitude to a foreign heathen nation, and in the years of their servitude they had freely imbibed of its idolatry and superstition. The gospel was lost from their remembrance, and now as the time began to draw near for their deliverance it also became necessary for a Melchisedec priest to exercise the power and Spirit of God to bring about their freedom.

Where were they to get this authority? Not from the Egyptians, they never had it. Melchisedec was now dead, and the patriarchs had long since passed away; they were practically without God or his priesthood; and yet close to the land of their captivity, God had provided and preserved this great priesthood by a line of faithful servants; and when Moses, the learned and accomplished prince of Egypt, fled from Egypt, his footsteps must have been guided designedly to the land of Midian, and to Jethro's house; or else, the Lord through a chain of circumstances caused the Jethro line to locate in that locality, so that naturally in escaping from Egypt, one would come in contact with this people, for here was the key to the deliverance of Israel from bondage.

Moses served forty years with Jethro; Jethro was a Melchisedee priest therefore, he would teach Moses the laws of the greater kingdom. And Moses listened, yea, more, he obeyed the gospel, which Jethro could no more keep from talking to him, than the sun can help shining. That is one of the characteristics of the saints, they cannot help talking of their religion. And as Moses being of the sheepfold, could not withstand the beautiful truths as they were delineated by Jethro. And after forty years of instruction under Jethro, Moses being now an old man eighty years old, he was prepared for the call when it came, and he responded to the command.

Jethro was a wise counselor as is recorded in Exodus 18. And we find that after he counseled Moses and break bread with him, he departed into his own land; and Moses continued with the people of Israel for forty years, at which time a peculiar event happened, wherein the record in the Doctrine and Covenants says in section 83, paragraph 4: "Therefore, he took Moses out of their midst and the holy priesthood also; and the lesser priesthood continued."

Some make the claim that at this event the priesthood was taken from the earth entirely, but this reading does not justify such an interpretation. It only states that the holy priesthood was taken out of their (the children of Israel's) midst; this is the second time for such an occurrence; and not that it was taken from the earth entirely.

We must not forget that Jethro still retained his priesthood when he went back to his own country, and we do not find that his people joined in with Moses and the Israelites, no they were of another nation, they were not in bondage and there was no necessity for them to get up and to become wandering tribes, they had the gospel, and the gospel had made them free. Now the probability is strongly apparent that Jethro all not remain inactive, but the suggestive thought to a thinking mind would be, that he would also, as did his predecessors, ordain his successor, and thus preserve the priesthood for his people, and also for other wise purposes in God.

The priesthood was taken from the camp of Israel, and with it the gospel, and they had to be content with an inferior standard. And yet, we catch glimpses of the gospel truths being known among them. In fact we have some of the prophets teaching gospel ethics of the first magnitude. Where did they learn it? Who was their teacher? Who ordained them to preach the gospel?

I think the same law was operative at their period of existence, as was instituted in the beginning; and that law says: "No man taketh this honor unto himself, but he that is called of God, as was Aaron."—Hebrews 5:4.

Now the problem confronts us: Who did the call come through to them? Where did they receive their ordination? Israel was not in a condition to exercise the gifts of the gospel, how then, could they designate whom the Lord would choose as servants, or prophets? They must have been called by others outside of the recognized camp of Israel

We have a few peculiar statements in holy writ which seems to me to be conclusive proof, and lends strength to my contention. You will note very carefully in reading the texts that these messengers were not in, nor of the camp of Israel, but chosen from some other people, and yet of the same branch; just as Samuel the Lamanite was sent to the Nephites.

In 2 Chronicles 36:14,15: "Moreover all the chief of the priests, and the people, [of Israel] transgressed very much after all the abominations of the heathen; and polluted the house of the Lord which he had hallowed in Jerusalem. And the Lord God of their fathers sent to them by his messengers, rising up betimes, [that is continually and carefully.—Marginal Reading]; and sending; because he had compassion on his people, and on his dwelling place."

Note here that God raised up messengers continually and carefully. Where did he raise them up? Not in Israel, because he sent these messengers to Israel. How different this is from the former prophet Moses. He was of them and among them, and the prophecy concerning him, as recorded in Genesis 50, I. T., clearly pointed to him as being of their seed; and yet, when the time came for his mighty work to commence, he too, must turn from Israel to another line, to receive the ordination and divine commission.

Well, says one, these other men were simply messengers, not prophets. Let us see! We will read the next verse regarding these messengers: "But they mocked the messengers of God, and despised his words, and misused his prophets, until the wrath of the Lord arose against his people, till there was no remedy," or as the marginal reading says, "no healing."

There were both prophets and messengers, and both were sent of God; Israel misused and mocked them; perhaps some of these were of foreign nations, whom the Jews looked upon as the seum of the earth, of whom they would not lower their dignity to listen to, or to learn anything from.

They were prophets, and true prophets of God. Now a singular thing is the places where the different prophets came from, when sont to Israel. They are practically all raised up from some obscure place, and sent to deliver a message to the ruling powers in Israel.

We have only to read a few texts to find that there were prophets who were very slightly if at all acquainted with the Israelites.

In Numbers 22:5, we have mention of the prophet Balaam, who lived at Pethor, away up in the northwestern border of Mesopotamia, by the river of the land of the children of the people of Moab. This was a prophet of God, in communication with God; and while he did not prove true to the trust God had placed in him, nevertheless, he was his prophet; not of Israel, but a prophet just the same.

Again we have mention Ahijah the prophet. a Shilonite of Ephraim. Of Elijah the Tishbite of Naphtali. Elisha of Abelmeholab. Ezekiel in the land of the Chaldeans. Who was there down in the land of the Chaldeans who could teach and ordain such a man as Ezekiel turned out to All these men were raised up and sent to Israel to rebuke them and instruct them in the laws of life and salvation. Nor are we left with the prophets and messengers, as the only ones sent to instruct Israel; but we read of perhaps a higher classification than these; such for instance as of Gad the Seer, and Iddo the Seer, men according to the accepted interpretation who had in their possession the Urim and Thummim.

Added to these we have the wonderful men who were mighty among the people of Israel, such as Haggai, Isaiah, Jeremiah, and Joel, men who taught the gospel principles, and the facts very strongly suggest the schooling of these peoble in gospel truths, outside of the camp of Israel. My own persuasion is that they received their learning from the other, or Jethro branch of the church, and when God wished to choose someone to carry a message to his people, he simply designated the one to deliver the word.

The narrative giving the dealings of God with the Israelitish people it appears to me, is just similar to what will transpire in the closing scenes of the world in relation to them. Prophets will be sent from the church of God on this land to Jerusalem to warn the Jews of their impending doom. And they will simply reiterate, or reenact the works of their fathers of former years; they will kill them, and not suffer their bodies to be buried.

These former prophets having been in touch with the true church of God, came among Israel, and from them David and others, were able to know of the gospel truths, and give voice to them at times as we find it recorded in their acts and writings.

Providing that this state of affairs did exist, as I verily believe it did, we would have the gospel, and of course that means the priesthood coexistant with the Israelitish laws and traditions down to within a very short period of the advent of Christ.

Just how complete was this church, I would not venture to say, but it is very firmly settled in my mind, that at least the Melchisedec priesthood, and those exercising it were among the officers existing in the church, and that would presuppose almost a complete organization. Study this out and you will be surprised to find how many beautiful truths you can find bearing out the contention; Israel was corrupt, but the leaven of the gospel purification was at hand, had they not neglected to embrace the golden opportunities afforded them; but they would not suffer it to be among them; and so it was kept out of their midst.

DID THE MELCHISEDEC PRIESTHOOD CEASE WITH MOSES?

By J. E. Matthews.

"Therefole he took Moses out of their midst, and the holy priesthood also." Read what follows: "And the lesser priesthood continued."—Doctrine and Covenants 83:4.

This language signifies to me that God meant that the Melchisedec order ceased with Moses.

Many suppose because the Bible and Book of Mormon speak of elders and high priests, that they held the Melchisedec priesthood. It will be my endeavor to show that this is not the case. God gave to Adam the high priesthood, and it continued until no doubt Israel went down into Egypt, when we lose sight of it among the Israelites, but it continued with the seed of Abraham through Keturah, his second wife, whom he married after the death of Sarah. (Genesis 21:1). Moses left Egypt. Jethro, priest of Midian conferred the holy priesthood upon him. (D. C. 83: 2). Moses was sent of God to deliver Israel from Egyptian bondage. God said, "Go and gather the elders of Israel together," (Exodus 3:16), and Moses and Aaron went and gathered all the elders of the children of Israel. Did these elders hold priesthood authority? There are no records to prove they did.

The elders signified renoun, because of age. Let us see if the name represented priesthood authority.

"And Joseph went up to bury his father; and with him went up all the servants of Pharaoh, the elders of his house, and all of the elders of the land of Egypt."—Genesis 50:7.

order of the priesthood? Who will dare say "yes?" No, they hald the corrections among the Egyptians as the elders of Israel held, but no Melchisedec order of priesthood. If so, when were they ordained and by whom? "Then Moses called for all the elders of Israel." (Exodus 2:21). "And Moses came and called for the elders of the people," (Exodus 19:7), not God's elders. "And he said unto Moses, Come up unto the Lord, thou, and Aaron, Nadab, and Abihu, and seventy of the elders of Israel and worship ye afar off." (Ex. 24:1). Verse 9: "Then went up Moses and Aaron, Nadab, and Abihu, and seventy of the elders of Israel." 14th verse, "And he said unto the elders, Tarry ye here for us until we come again unto you: and behold, Aaron and Hur are with you: if any man have any matter to do, let them come unto them." It is singular to me how Aaron and sons have precedence, and they, holding no priesthood at this For the account of their ordination read Exodus 28:1.

Now turn back to Exodus 19:22-24. In the 22nd verse, "And let the priests also which come near the Lord," etc.; also 24th verse referring to priests. I glean from this reading that Aaron and his sons were set apart and later ordained as was the president of our own church set apart and ordained later. Now in Exodus 24:14, Aaron not yet ordained and there is no account of Hur ever having been ordained. Still these elders had to seek advice and counsel of those holding no priesthood authority. How Jethro advises Moses to select from the people able men out of Israel, and make them rulers over the people, and they judged the people at all seasons. Now in connection with this read Numbers 11:16,17, where a second seventy elders are mentioned. "And the Lord said unto Moses, gather unto me seventy men of the elders of Israel, whom thou knowest to be elders of the people, [not of God] and officers over them. And I will come down and talk with thee there: and I will take of the spirit which is upon thee, and will put it upon them; and they shall bear the burden of the people with thee, that thou bear it not thyself alone."

Moses did not ordain these elders: but God took the spirit that was upon Moses and put it upon them and they prophesied. Now the 26th verse says two of the men; if it was in our day we would say two of the elders.

"Well," says one, "these elders undoubtedly

"Well," says one, "these elders undoubtedly held the Melchisedec order of the priesthood." Well, we will grant they did. Numbers first chapter says Moses and Aaron numbered all the males from twenty years upward, in the second year after they came out of Egypt, 603,550 not including the levites. Now, what a great army and all of the elders we have been writing about are included. But Numbers 26:63, tells us these all died in the wilderness save Joshua and Caleb, and Moses still lived but the elders were all dead. See Numbers 32:10,13.

Read Numbers 22, where Balak the son of Zippor sent the elders of Moab to Balaam. I wonder did these Maabite elders hold the Mehisedec priesthood? Now all the elders numbered by Moses and Aaron being dead, let us see the second host as numbered by Moses and Eleazer. Now for the term elders among the host last numbered: Deuteronomy 21:20, "And they shall say unto the elders of his city:" Deuteronomy 31:28, "Gather unto me all the elders of your tribes." Elders of the city and tribes does not refer to priesthood authority. See Ruth 4:2,-ten elders of city. Again Deut-"Moses wrote this law, and deeronomy 31:9. livered it unto the priests, the sons of Levi, which bear the ark of the covenant of the Lord, and unto all the elders of Israel." Now who are the first mentioned? The priests; so, of course they must be in authority. Now what does the Apostle Paul say? Let us see if he believed the Melchisedec priesthood continued after Moses. (Heb. 7:11,12;) "If therefore perfection were by the Levitical priesthood for under it the people received the law. What further need was there that another priest should arise after the order of Melchisedec, and not be called after the order of Aaron, for the priesthood being changed, there is made of necessity a change also in the law."

Language could be no plainer. The law was given to the Aaronic priesthood, but the change came with Jesus.

Ezra 6:14, Elders of the Jews; 10:14, elders of the city. Samuel was a priest, yet when he came to a certain place, (1 Samuel 16:4). The elders of the town trembled. Ezekiel was a priest. Ezekiel 8:1, Elders sat before him. Ezekiel 19:1, Elders came to inquire for the man of the Lord. Singular the Melchisedec order of the priesthood, coming to inquire of the Aaronic order for the will of the Lord. Things have surely changed these days, Jeremiah 26: 17, "Then rose up certain of the elders of the land,"—not of the church.

Now as to the term high priests on which many persons get confused. High priest, Mel-chisedec; high priest Aaronic. (Heb. 9:7). But unto the second went the high priest alone once every year, not without blood which he offered for himself, and for the errors of the people." In Exodus 30:10, and Leviticus 21:10, will be found the high priest Paul refers to is Aaron. Was he a high priest after the order of Melchisedec? No, but a high priest after the order of Aaron, and designated as such, (high priest). Eleazer his son who succeeded him, would naturally hold the same office. Exodus 29:30. "And that son that is priest in his stead." Numbers 27:18-20, "And the Lord said to Moses, take thee, Joshua the son of Nun, a man in whom is the spirit, and lay thine hand upon him and set him before Eleazer, the priest. * * * And thou shalt put some of thy honor upon him." Many persons who read this suppose that Moses conferred the Melchisedec priesthood on Joshua, gave him office above Eleazer the priest; but read verse 21, "And he shall stand before Eleazer the priest, who shall ask counsel for him after the judgment of Urim before the Lord." Now if Joshua held the Melchisedec priesthood, why did he have to ask counsel of one holding the lesser priesthood? Exodus 28:30. Aaron had the Urim. Did Moses have to ask counsel of him? No. Why not? Numbers 12:7,8, "With him will I speak mouth to mouth." But, with Joshua, holding the same priesthood as Moses, I require him to ask counsel of Eleazer, although I am no respector of persons. That is how it sounds if Joshua holds the Melchisedec order of priesthood

Joshua 1:1, "Joshua the son of Nun, Moses' minister." The term minister here denotes servant, subordinate, office charged with the direction of affairs of the state. Was Moses deceived by any of the nations? Joshua was. Joshua 9th chapter tells how the Gibeonites deceived him, and the 11th chapter speaks of the elders of the Gibeonites. I wonder, did they hold the Melchisdee priesthood? No, but the same as the Egyptian and Moabites, and Israelites after Moses' death.

In Numbers 34:17, these are the names of the men which shall divide the land unto you Eleazer the priest, and Joshua the son of Nun. Eleazer's name takes precedence over Joshua's. Why? Because he is the highest in priesthood authority. See Joshua 14:1; 17:4.

I have digressed a little, but back to the term high priest. Aaron, Eleazer, Josedech, (Haggai 1:1). Joshua the son of Josedech (Zech. 3:8). Annas and Caiaphas, (Luke 3:2) were high priests. Jesus was tried before Caiaphas.

Now I have shown from the Bible what order of the priesthood the high priests after Moses' time were, which was none other than the Aaronic order, and they continued down into the Pharisee church, and elders from a Biblical standpoint until Christ set up his church were simply officers of the people. If not, what will we do with Acts 24:1, "And after five days we do with Acts 24:1, "And after five days Ananias the high priest, descended with the eldetc. Did they hold the Melchisedec order of priesthood?

Some think because Alma refers to Melchisedec priesthood, and ordained elders, that that priesthood was on this continent before Jesus appeared here.. 2Nephi 4: "I consecrated Joseph and Jacob to be priests and teachers." They were surely of the Aaronic order. Alma says in second chapter that he consecrated priests, teachers and elders. See Alma fourth chapter, priests and elders. Is this the order of today, priests, teachers, and elders? But says one, have you read Alma 9th and 10th chapters where he calls it the Melchisedec order of priesthood? Certainly he does; but read carefully and you will see he is referring entirely to that order from Adam until Melchisedec.

"Oh, yes," says one, "but you see Alma was a high priest." Certainly he was; so was Aaron. But of what order? Aaronic, Christ on this continent, B. of M. authorized edition, page 631, called twelve disciples. Page 635, they were called elders. Page 760, the manner which the disciples, who were called elders of the church, ordained priests and teachers. Notice the order of procedure in the days of Alma, priests teachers, and elders. In our church of today, it is just opposite, elders, priests, teachers.

Now in summing up the whole from the time of Moses I find that he takes precedence of Aaron in all things. Why? Because he was the highest in authority. Aaron had precedence over the elders in the days of Moses, so surely he was next in authority to Moses. Aaron died, he was succeeded by his son Eleazer, as high priest, of the Aaronic order. Moses still at the head. Moses dies. Eleazer now takes precedence because he is the highest in authority, and these high priests ofter the order of Aaron continued down until we find them in the Pharisee church, trying Christ and accusing Paul, holding the highest authority. Egyptian elders, Moabite elders, Gibeonite elders, Israelite elders, elders, elders of cities, land, and tribes. I class them all the same, officers holding no priesthood authority until Christ set up his church. I have given enough citations from the books to show God meant what he said in Doctrine and Covenants 83:4.

THE UTAH DOCTRINE AND COVENANTS.

Columbus, Ohio.

(Editor's note.—In the issue of February 12th, in ound Table department appeared a statement relative to the differences between the editions of the book of Doctrine and Covenants as published by the Utah Church, and by the Reorganized Church, and we are pleased to and by the Reorganized Courter, and we are pleased to note the following comment which defines the difference more fully than space in the Round Table department would allow. We fully endorse the points made by Bro. Curtis, and they might be added to until they would make a volume. No decument is permitted to be placed in the Doctrine and Covenants of the Reorganized Church until it has been endorsed and ordered published by the general conference of the church, but so far we have never learned of any official action by the Utah Church never learned of any official action by the Utah Church authorizing the insertion in their book of the numerous additions, of various items, and (what we hold to be) forged documents. These additions made many year after the death of Joseph Smith were undoubtedly made by the authority of Brigham Young and passively acquiesced in by the body under his powerful domination).

Permit me to offer a statement concerning the difference between the Doctrine and Covenants of the Reorganized Church and the Doctrine and Covenants of the Utah Church. A statement recently appearing in the "Ensign" is as follows: "The Utah book has had incorporated into it a multitude of statements by Joseph Smith, some historical and some incidentally prophetic." the statement had read, "purported statements by Joseph Smith" I would have had no objection to the statement. My reason for objecting to the statement that Joseph Smith was the author of these added statements is that some of thera purporting to be from Joseph Smith are just the opposite of what he taught by revelation.

First, Section 126 Utah Edition purports to be a revelation "through Joseph, the Seer, in the house of Elder Brigham Young, Nauvoo, Illinois, July 9, 1841," which starts out more like a love letter than a revelation: "Dear and well-beloved Brother Brigham," purporting to say to Brigham

"it is no more required at your hand to leave your family as in times past * * I therefore command you to send my word abroad, and take special care of your tanni, being an at henceforth, and forever, Amen." Brigham at this time was president of the Twelve, their the law is as follows: "The special care of your family from this time, twelve traveling counselors are called to be the twelve apostles, or special witnesses of the name of Christ, in all the world;" (Sec. 104:11). Again: The twelve are a traveling, presiding high council, to officiate in the name of the Lord * * * and regulate the affairs of the same, in all nations." (Sec. 104:12). This makes it plain that the twelve was to be a traveling council, instead of staying at home and taking special care of their families. If such a revelation ever was given, it was not heeded by Brigham, as this claims to be given in 1841, and three years later, in 1844, at the death of Joseph Smith, Brigham was on a mission in the east at Peterboro, N. H. (B. H. Roberts Succession, pp. 93,94), instead of being at home taking special care of his family. God is no respector of persons. Brigham's family was no more entitled to special care than any other family of the twelve or any family in the church. It is clear to be seen that the reason why Brigham inserted this section in the Utah Doctrine and Covenants in 1876, thirtytwo years after the death of Joseph Smith, was to try to bolster up his false claims,

Second. Section 131, Utah Edition, was also inserted at the same time (1876) that the section on polygamy was inserted by Brigham as a forerunner to the polygamy document. ports to be the remarks of Joseph the Prophet, at Ramus, Illinois. If Joseph Smith ever made these statements why are we not cited to the document from which they are quoted, instead of the unsupported statement of . Brigham Verses 1 and 2, are as follows: "In the celestial glory there are three heavens or degrees; and in order to obtain the highest, a man must enter in to this Order of the Priesthood: (meaning the new and everlasting covenant of marriage). The first statement that in the celestial glory there are three heavens or degrees, contradicts section 76:7, Lamoni Edition (76:91-96 Utah Edition) where we read of the conditions in the celestial glory as follows: "And thus we saw the glory of the celestial, which excels in all things; where God, even the Father, reigns upon his throne forever and ever, before whose throne all things bow in humble reverence and give him glory forever and ever. They who dwell in his presence are the church of the Firstborn; and they see as they are seen, and know as they are known, having received of his fullness and of his grace; and he makes them equal in power, and in might, and in dominion. And the glory of the celestial is one, even as the glory of the sun is one." This shows that instead of there being three glories or degrees in the celestial, as put in by Brigham, the celestial glory is one, and all that get in there are made equal in power, and in might, and in dominion.

Again, Brigham claimed that in order to get into the third or highest degree of His celestial glory, as he fixed it up, "a man must enter in to this Order of the Priesthood;" and then the following is inserted in parentheses: (meaning the new and everlasting covenant of marriage). This new and everlasting covenant here referred to, is section 132, in Utah Edition, which is the section on polygamy, as is shown by the letter "b" in the foot note. Brigham inserted this section to prepare the way for this polygamy document, but again he is out of harmony with the law of God on marriage, as the law of God in section 42:7, says: "Thou shalt love thy wife with all thy heart, and shall cleave unto her and none else; and he that looketh upon a woman to lust after her, shall deny the faith, and shall not have the Spirit; and if he repents not, he shall be cast out." Later in the same section in paragraph 16, Lamoni Edition, speaking of other things, marriage included, we read: "And he that doth according to these things shall be saved, and he that doeth them not shall be damned, if he continues."

According to this all will be damned who go contrary to this law. Let us contrast this with a statement in the polygamy document, which Brigham had inserted in the Utah Doctrine and Covenants, in 1876, as follows: "For behold! I reveal unto you a new and an everlasting covenant; and if ye abide not that covenant, then are ye damned; for no one can reject this covenant, and be permitted to enter into my glory." The covenant here referred to is clearly shown from the heading of this polygamy document, a part of which is as follows: "Revelation on the part of which is as follows: "Revelation on the Eternity of the Marriage Covenant including Plurality of Wives." So according to this polygamous document introduced by Brigham Young, eight years after the death of Joseph Smith, and inserted in the Utah Doctrine and Covenants thirty-two years after Joseph Smith's death, a man will be damned if he does not go into polygamy. This makes the Utah Doctrine and Covenants contradict itself, as Section 42 shows you will be damned if you do go into polygamy and section 132 shows that you will be damned if you don't.

So we conclude that these statements, the ones we have noticed, that have been inserted into the Utah Edition 32 years after the death of Joseph Smith, are only purported statements, but the responsible person is Brigham Young and not Joseph Smith.

"THE BLINDNESS OF VIRTUE."

Sr. Florence Andes has written us enclosing the story with the above title, written by Cosmo Hamilton, and rewritten by another for the Woman's World. Space does not permit us to publish in full. This subject is one in which we are all interested and which needs constant consideration. Mrs. Andes feels that-"as mothers we need to take the story to heart. She desires to not neglect to teach her daughters the things girls should know concerning what a wonderful thing it is to be a woman; and that they may be prepared to protect not only themselves, but also the young men with whom they may be associated."

In these days when we have the increased and increasing evils in society, all society, to meet and be prepared for, we dare not let our girls (or boys) go forth armed with their innocence alone, to meet these things. They are not safe alone on the street in daylight anymore. need not heap a whole budget of the knowledge of woman and parenthood upon a girl at once; but-keep a child's confidence at all times. Instinct from knowing one's own better than any other person does, will soon be the guide as to whether or not we have a child's confidence. Then, as information seems necessary, give it.

Your child may be a great deal younger than you were or than you desire her to be for such knowledge, but it is often best-safest so, and after you have begun to tell her these truthsthere will be more than ever, need for a confidential companionship. But it will be hard to have if you have not always been confidential.

At a certain little aid society, this subject came up and an embarrassed, angered mother ex-claimed—"When my girls come to me with questions, they get a switching!" (And two of her girls had gone wrong! Such was her ignorance, and their innocence!)

The Story.

A certain village had been stirred by the subject of Eugenics. The Ladies Aid had freely considered it. A preliminary meeting of ladies was held behind closed doors, because it was to be a discussion of the sex problem! This secret act caused dissension. An open meeting was arranged for next, and thus these women educated themselves on this subject before the appointed time when the Rev. Mr. Pemberton came over to talk to their Mothers' Meeting.

The Reverend was plainly soitated and began his remarks waving all preliminaries.

"Ladies," he began, "I propose reading to you this atternoon certain of the more vital entries in my personal journal."

He paused and surveyed his audience. Surveyed it defiantly, I should say, and the thin lines of his compressed lips tightened.

"I shall tell you the story of a foolish father and a "I shall tell you the story of a looisal rather and englectful mother," he went on; "and I shall speak from a text of my own choosing: "The Blindness of Virtue." There was some shifting in the seats and a scraping of the legs of the camp-chairs on the floor of the Sunday

"And I trust that every woman present who is a mother, or anticipates motherhood, or who has the hope of motherhood in her heart, will give heed to what I am oing to say." Again the shuffling chairs gave evidence of the con-Again the shuffling chairs gave evidence of the con-suming curiosity of those who listened. The Rev. Mr. Pemberton to read from a personal journal of personal experiences concerning a foolish father and a neglectful mother! What could have happened?

"I shall begin by telling you the story of little Mary a small begin by telling you the story of fittle Mary Ann," he continued. "Mary Ann is the daughter of a parishioner of mine. She is of the same age as my own daughter and for years they were friends in the village school. But Mary Ann drifted away from both the school and the village. She went to London. Last week she returned, and yesterday I officiated at the funeral services of her baby. It was born dead, the nameless child of a father who shall, so far as we are concerned, be equally nameless."

He paused. There was no shuffling of chairs this time. Half the audience sat with heads bowed, as though in fear of what might follow from so free a start.

"Many of you will call that child of Mary Ann a child of sin. But I tell you it was rather a child of ignorance. Mary Ann did not know the things she should have known because the mother of Mary Ann had not been a good mother to her and had not told her.

"This was the lesson that poor little girl taught me that first afternoon I talked with her, a week ago, and with the memory of it burned into my brain it is the school and the village. She went to London. Last week with the memory of it burned into my brain it is the lesson that, with God's help, I shall try to repeat to you this afternoon. If any there be in this audience who do not wish to hear this story, let her now take her departure and save her feelings, for I shall not spare her."

parture and save ner teeings, for I shall not spare ner.

Again he paused, and again the lips drew a firm, straight line across the mouth. No one stirred.

"When Mary Ann told me her story," he went on,
"I turned to her and said: "Why didn't this man marry you, Mary Ann?"

"'E'd got a wife,' she answered, simply. 'You see,
sir. I was to blame for this 'ore. 'e said.'" sir, I was to blame for this 'ere, 'e said.'"

"'You!' I exclaimed. 'What a coward! You know

"That's it, sir,' she answered. 'Me knowing nothing. If I'd a bin told when I was old enough to understand I should a-sent him awiy, 'e says, double quick, and saved 'im an' me an' the little 'un from this 'ere. The man ain't built for thinkin', Jack says. 'E knows, but he ain't perfect an' wort let 'isself think. 'E says as 'ow if we was taught ter think and knew as much as the man, there'd be very little of this 'ere trouble fer us. It's the mother first, 'e says, who is ter blam., then us!"

The Rev. Pemberton paused, as though to gain courage, and then determinedly went on:

age, and then determinedly went on:

"When Mary Ann left me that afternoon I called my wife to my study. I told her the story of this poor child.
I told her that we had a daughter as sweet and simple and as unprotected as any that lived—and as ignorant, so far as the wonderful meaning of her womanhood was concerned—as the Mary Ann who had learned the lesson of life at such cost. I told her our daughter must be told. And my wife turned upon me, horrified at the thought.
"'My mother never spoke to me,' she said. 'All women that were brought up as I have been brought up have too great a sense of modesty ever to consider the possi-bility of discussing such things as these with young unmarried girls. It is part of our training. It is in-bred in us. We found out the truth for ourselves; our daughters must do the same. Our sense of delicacy is all nst the discussion of such a dreadfully personal er. It isn't done.'"

"And I, ladies, with anger in my voice, turned upon her and fairly shouted: 'It isn't done! It isn't done! It wasn't done by the mother of Mary Ann. Is the innocence of her girl of a less refined order than the innocence of ours? Nearly everything that isn't done ought to be done. It must be and shall be done—and you must do it at once.

must do it at once.'

"She protested, as probably you would protest, but I was brutally firm. "This village is filled with girls that I told her; 'and your daughter is one of them. She may be standing on the verge of the same catastrophe,' and all of them ask for the truth every time they see their mothers—and never get it—because it isn't done. They are taught not to put their fingers in the fire because it will burn them; they are taught not to play with knives and to keep away from water. Let them burn themselves; let them cut their fingers; let them struggle in the stream, but for Gods sake dou't let them struggle in the stream, but for God,s sake don't let them for the went of elementary teaching on the most vital of all questions, run the risk of ruin."

There was applause of a sort. A few ladies clapped their gloved hands enthusiastically; a few others with the timidity that suggests imitation rather than con-

NOTICE TO THE FIRST SEVENTY

Brethren:—The time of our assembling is nearing, and the importance of our work makes it apparently neces-sary that we appoint our first session for 1914 on April 1st, at 7:30 p. m. The first session will be occupied by preliminary work and prayer.

We urge, as per quorum resolution, that as many as possible will be present from the first, that we may have our work prepared at an early date to present to conference.

conference. The important questions referred to the Presidency, Twelve and Seventy; viz, "The formulating of a rule to govern the Seventy in dealing with the ministerial standing of a Seventy, and results of 'releasing,' dropping,' or 'expelling' a Seventy," and "Can one who has been severed from the church for the second offense of adultery re-enter the church by baptism," should be thoroughly canvassed. Besides these questions there is the question, "How to form a quorum decision," with others that now claim our attention and should be decided.

The following program has been arranged, and each subject should have the prayerful consideration of every member of the quorum for our education and the bring-

REST.

The light I cannot see without the shade,
The rose without the thorn I never knew,
The fairest blossoms always soonest fade, All sweetest joys are soonest lost to view.

Upon the tenderest heart the deepest shadows fall, The sweetest harp most easily unstrung, The soul most sensitive to affliction's call Hastens to answer with its saddest song.

But, by the light of God, beyond the tomb I see A day of light whereon no shadows fall; Fields of sweet flowers that forever bloom, Joys that these fickle senses never pall.

O Jesus, my divine Redeemer, thou The hard and thorny road did'st tread alone;
By suffering perfected, help me thus to bow
And always say, "Thy will, not mine, be done."

Then when thy perfect rest I shall obtain;
When in thy likeness pure I shall "be satisfied;" Then shall I know my earthly loss was gain—
That thou wert trying me as gold in fire is tried.

For only dross were these hard tests designed. And shadows, thorns, and sorrows were thy tests, To purge, to purify, and to refine, o purge, to purify, and to renne,
And fit us for the saints' eternal rest.

—M. H. Bond.

FAST DAY ANNOUNCEMENT.

The First Presidency has deemed it wise to announce a general fast to be observed from the evening meal of Saturday, April 4, until the evening meal of Sunday, April 5. Prayer should be offered in this connection for the spiritual direction and benefit of the General Conference that is about to assemble, and for the general welfare of the church in all the world.

Elbert A. Smith, For the First Presidency.

THE DIVINITY OF JESUS.

Modern skepticism is striking at the root of all Christian faith and hope when it denies the two most vital and fundamental doctrines of the Bible, viz., the divine conception of Jesus, and his physical resurrection. Destroy these two and the Bible is reduced to the low level of the work of conspirators and deceivers, for the whole record from the first chapter of Genesis to the last chapter of the Revelations of Saint John point to an actual Son of God who had his identity in Jesus of Nazareth. Destroy these two and Christianity is no better than Confucianism or Mohammedanism, except in such points as its ethical teachings may be superior to those of the others, and the Christian's hope of the future is just as vain as the hope of the aborigines' in the happy hunting grounds.

The human side of Christianity may have its defects, and it may be that the testimony of the human witnesses relating to these two issues is not so absolutely complete as to meet the critical demands of skeptical minds in this day when men are inclined to quibble over details, but the straightforward simplicity of the testimony re-lating to Christ's birth bears evidence of its truthfulness. Had there appeared a strained effort to cover every detail there might have been some ground for distrust. The testimony as it is bears an unbroken harmony with the prophetic testimony of men who had undisputably lived long before the birth of Christ, and who spoke of the coming of a Redeemer clothed with divinity.

The denial of the divine sonship of Jesus is virtually a denial of everything miraculous in human life, and a denial of the operation of the power of God among men. It takes God out of the world and makes man supreme. What folly! The structure of the earth itself, the marvelous arrangement of the heavens, and all nature, show a power and wisdom and goodness that are infinite against which man in his strength appears in atomic insignificance. Shall not the God who created with such miraculous power the heavens and the earth, and gave life to all flesh in the beginning, be able to give life to his own Son in the flesh? Where is the wisdom in man to deny the possibility, or the historical fact, of the immaculate conception because of the miraculous nature of it, when miracles past and present appear on every hand?

But such denial is being made. In many of the theological schools and other institutions of learning which are professedly Christian, this denial is being taught to the younger generation. Not a few leading ministers have openly confessed non-belief in this doctrine, and multitudes of people have followed them in their unbelief. Why is this? Is not the testimony of the Scriptures sufficiently plain and complete to satisfy a reasonable mind? It is the spirit of anti-christ which had already begun its work in the days of the apostles, and which is still working.

That such skepticism and unbelief should gain place in the Protestant churches is to us not strange for the reason that while these churches profess a belief in the Holy Spirit they have denied the miraculous part of its work from the time of their beginning. The power of the Holy Spirit to reveal the things of God as in former times, and its operation in the giving of gifts such as were had in the early church as described by Saint Paul in the twelfth chapter of his first letter to the Corinthians, have been denied, and such denial is the natural step to a further denial of Christ and of God. Had men maintained full faith in the Holy Ghost and retained its power in their midst during the centuries intervening between Pentecost and the present, there would not have developed the tendency to deny the miraculous birth of Christ as many do today, but that Holy Ghost would have brought confirmative evidences which would have removed any doubts which might have arisen because of the antiquity of the original testimony.

When professed followers of Christ deny the essential means by which men may know that Jesus is the Christ, viz., the revealing power of the Holy Ghost, they forfeit all right to the knowledge had by Job when he said: "I know that my Redeemer liveth," and by Paul who said he received his knowledge "by the revelation of Jesus Christ," and by Peter who testified from personal knowledge: "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." Denying the power of the Holy Ghost is the preliminary step to denying Christ, and it takes no prophet to see that the second step is being taken by those bodies which have previously taken the first, and unless that first step is retraced it will inevitably lead to a general denial of the whole gospel.

We hold that the Bible teaching is correct, and through the unchanging purpose of God his power in its relation to man is the same today as in ancient times, that an acceptance of the whole doctrine of Christ and obedience thereto will bring the same manifestations of divine power with its confirming testimony. nite wisdom and fore-knowledge of God are fully able to provide for such emergencies as created by modern skepticism, and in our day further testimony as to the divinity of Jesus has been adduced by the divine hand, enabling believers to meet the opposition successfully. The Book of Mormon gives prophetic and historical testimony on the divine soughly Jesus and thus suffigure the Ribbs which teday is no level die. confirms the Bible which today is so largely discredited, offering a distinct class of witnesses which altogether put the divinity of Jesus bevond a consistent doubt.

The world needs a new vision of God, a deeper conception of his power and of his attitude to wards man, a keener appreciation of his truth and a stricter application of that truth to everyday life. Those who attain these things will find abundant assurance through the Spirit of the truthfulness of this doctrine. "If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of Myself."--John 7:17.

NATIONAL PROHIBITION.

Sentiment for national prohibition seems to be developing in all parts of the land. A prohihibition bill is now in the hands of the house committee on the judiciary in the House of Representatives in Washington which will probably come up at this session with more than an even chance of passing. This bill provides that "the sale , manufacture for sale, importation for sale, exportation for sale, transportation for sale, of all beverages and all foods containing alcohol are forever prohibited in the United States and in all territory under the jurisdiction of the United States."

Not many years ago such a bill would have been made light of but the force of public sentiment has made it a serious matter, and with the steady increase of popular disapproval of the drink evil and its trail of crime it cannot be longer than a few years when there will be a national protest so emphatic as to drive it from the land. We have faith in the majority of the American people and believe that their efforts at true reform and betterment of conditions for the whole people will become effectual.

PRESS NOTICES.

"The Truth" of Jerusalem, Palestine, published on January 23d an excellent statement by Bro. U. W. Greene of the position of the Reorganized Church in contradistinction to that of the Utah Church on various doctrines, followed by the "Open Letter to the Clergy," as sent out by the First Presidency of the Reorganized Church. "The Truth" has been very liberal and seems to be sincerely following its name by hearing from every worthy cause on different subjects. article mentioned will do good and be of help to the brethren in that Jewish mission.

"The Chat" of Brooklyn, N. Y., contains liberal and favorable accounts of the recent conference of the New York and Philadelphia District, clippings of which have reached our desk. The pastor, Bro. E. B. Hull writes that the articles were written by a Baptist minister. Their tone and liberality are such as to indicate that the minister must have caught considerable inspiration in the assembly of the saints. The addresses of the speakers are favorably commented upon, and the rendering by the district choir under the direction of A. N. Hoxie, of the "Holy City," a cantata by Gaul is highly spoken of. Distinction is made between the Reorganized Church and the "Mormon" Church in Utah.

We have been asked if subscribers to the Ensign will receive the conference daily. The daily will be distinct from the regular paper and will require a separate subscription, 25 cents for the whole conference.

A debate between the Rev. James Kennedy, (Baptist), and Elder John Harp of the Reorganized Church at Avery, Texas, is reported in the "Avery News." The first question discussed was, "Resolved that baptism is essential to salvation," which Elder Harp affirmed and Rev. Kennedy denied. The second question involved the subject of repentance after death. The News speaks very highly of the debate which was conducted in a gentlemanly manner by both disputants who "Met as friends and parted as brothers.

faithful servant of his Lord Jesus Christ has gone to his rest.

Bro, Lake was born December 4, 1829, in Yates County. New York, and lived in Canada, Illinois, lowa, Missouri, and Kithland, Ohio. He was married several times, his last wife having preceded him but a few months to the other shore. Of seven children none are left, the last remaining son—Charles H. Lake, having died while upon a mission to the South Sea Islands last summer. He came into the church in 1860 being ordained a deacon the day of his baptism; three years later an elder, and in 1871 a seventy. In 1873 he was called and ordained to the aposticehlp in which office he labored until 1902 when he was released to take up the work of an evangelist.

Most of his long life after coming into the church was spent in the service of God, and his fellow men, and he spent in the service of God, and his tellow men, and he wielded a strong influence for good wherever he went. He knew sorrow and affliction but was patient and courageous in all, never losing faith in God and in the ultimate success of the right. His labors were blessed of the Lord and the Holy Spirit attended him in his work bringing many blessings to those to whom he ministered. bringing many blessings to those to whom he infinitering had an of patience and forbearance, extending mercy to the erring and encouragement to the discouraged, and strength to the weak, congenial in disposition and loved by all. His advanced age has prevented him from traveling during the last few years, but he was always active locally. He leaves the world better by having lived in it, and thousands will retain a warm feeling of respect and love for "Father" John H. Lake

Many saints are rejoicing over the improvement which has come to Bro. F. L. More than a year ago he found it necessary to come home from the mission field for treatment for a defective hip from which he had suffered since childhood, and thirteen months ago a heavy steel brace was placed over his limb with the design of steel brace was placed over his limb with the design of having the hip joint grow rigid, this being the only nat-ural remedy for the trouble. Recently he suffered a general breakdown, and under examination it was thought that he must wear the brace another year. Adams; it was reorganized in 1870 by Josiah Ells; from this time until the year 1902 the saints held services in private houses and halls. Their first church building was erected in a section called. Brownsville in the year 1903; this site was at that time considered a very desirable location. Joan after the completion of the church the Jewish people fell in love with the locality to such an extent that at the present time there are over 100,000 Jews in Brownsville. In the year 1906 the saints sold their church to the Hebrews and sought another locality in which to locate.

A beautiful spot was found on the corner of Park Place and Schnectady Avc., this was in an entirely new section of Brooklyn, which was being rapidly built up, and gave every promise of becoming a very select residence section, insomuch, that many of the saints built for themselves homes near the church. This second church building was opened on October 19, 20, 1907, with a district conference. What a change a few years can make. At the present time the church is surrounded with Catholies, Jews and Italians, thus the work of proselyting in this section has been greatly Kindered.

Notwithstanding the many hardships endured by the saints, they have steadily increased numerically, until at the present time the branch numbers 225 members, and a Sunday school of about 150, hesides a mission Sunday

The closing feature of the conference was Gaul's Oratorio, "The Holy City," sung by a combined district choir of over sixty voices, under the direction of general church chorister, Albert N. over $70. Special features have been inaugurated at the church the past year, one of which is a service for the children, conducted by the pastor every Sunday evening at 6:30. The program includes songs, Bible and nature stories, good habit talks, illustrated with mystical, magical and good habit talks, illustrated with mystical, magical and mechanical devices, also illustrations on paper and the blackboard. By this system you gain the attention of the children, and rivet to their minds the subject through the eye gate as well as the ear gate. This service appeals to the young, they come from near and far to see the "show," as some of the little beginners express themselves. Soon you see signs of development, the talks are beginning to have their effect, new faces are found in the Sunday school, the Religio and the church.

The Religio is also doing good work. The primary work of this society is to teach the youth and older members the books of the church; the children's service might be termed the beginners department,—they are being prepared for higher work in the Sunday school, Religio church.

The priesthood has been reorganized and is working along the lines suggested by the First Presidency. There have been added to the branch about thirty names the past year, seventeen by baptism, of this number twelve were young members of the Sunday school, baptized on February 11th; this shows the good work the Sunday school teachers have been doing: many others. the Sunday school teachers have been doing; many others are investigating and will no doubt follow in the Master's steps in the near future.

How much depends upon the preparation of the saints? Apostle J. A. Gillen gave us some excellent instruction pertaining to the partaking of the emblems. If we would fast and pray, also meditate days before the service, how much richer blessings might be bestowed. Elder R. Etzenhouser's illustrated lectures on Sunday,

KANSAS CITY, MO., CENTRAL CHURCH.
Yesterday was Mothers' and Daughters' Day and instead of the regular service we were given a treat in the nature of papers by Sr. O. L. James on "Mother," Sr. L. R. Wells, "Daughter," and Sr. D. H. Blain, "Benefits of the church to Mother and Daughter." Interspersed was music by the men's choir. The program was a most excellent one in every particular and thoroughly enjoyed by all, there being a large attendance of mothers and daughters, besides the fathers and sons. instant the fathers and sons will have their day, we believe these special days have a tendency for good, in getting the people out that are inclined to be careless. The first Sunday in February was observed by all the churches in Kansas City as Everybody-go-to-Church-Day, and this was the largest sacrament meeting ever held at Central, and everything is moving along fine. The aux-Central, and everything is moving along fine. The auxiliaries also are in excellent condition and most everybody is happy. Of course there are, as there doubtless will be for some time to come, a few kickers, grouches and backbiters, but we are hopeful that they may eventually see the error of their way, and turn therefrom.

Our pastor, Bro. Tanner, is working hard to bring the branch up to a high standard, and if he can but have a little co-operation and assistance, better things will soon he over

Our, statistical report to the stake conference shows our membership to be 392 and steadily increasing each month. This is not so much from baptisms however, as few have been baptized of late, the increase being mostly from people moving in from other places.

Preaching besides that by the pastor, has been by Bishop E. L. Kelley, W. H. Garrett, and Stake Bishop R. Bullard. Bro. Bullard was also with us at sacrament service the first instant, the Spirit manifesting itself through him to Bro. Tanner, giving cheer and comfort, and approval of the work he is trying to do here; also intimating that the work would breaden out at this place and other hands would be raised up to assist.

Sperry, Okla., March 6.

Sperry, Okla., March 6. Dear Ensign:—We are engaged in the greatest meeting of the conference year which the writer has participated in except the summer reunions. We have been baptizing here upon each Sunday, foul or fair weather, for three consecutive weeks, and still they come.

Bro. W. M. Aylor held a splendid meeting here a short time ago, and having to move on to meet the demands upon him at other points left us to carry on the work for a while mager here. Bro. A. J. Hager has been with us here but has now gone ahead to get the meetings started at our next point—Wynons. One young man wno was convorted last night is a very capable person being a stedent of law and is making his way to eminent scholarship with an energy which is admirable. In fact those who have embraced the gospel here are of the best and most noble people of the place. Besides the conversions, some of the discouraged hearts have been greatly revived and blessed by the Lord through the preaching of his word, and some delinquents have re-turned to their neglected duties before the Master.

To those interested in the work at Ripley, from which place we wrote last, we are pleased to report that all of the splendid interest in the meetings there was not fruitless, and as a result we are obliged to pass that way after general conference to baptize others at that point also. Happy in the privilege to serve, and with hearty greeting to all who are of like precious faith with us in all the world.

Editor Ensign:—I send you a few lines to let the saints and friends know that I am still alive and in the faith of the gospel. I closed a successful meeting at Marshall, Mo., a few days ago. Bro. George Thayer lives there and he has a fine family, all in the faith and an honor to the cause of Christ. There is also a young Sister Effic Sellers who is a great help there. Her folks are interested in the gospel also.

I am now holding forth just in the edge of Henry County, about seven miles southeast of Post Oak, in County, about seven miles southeast of Post Oak, in Bro. E. E. Weeks' house. Bro. and Sr. Weeks have a large family of fine children; they have all tried to live the gospel and the result is, they have a host of friends here. So this helps the missionary in telling the angel's message, because the people can see what the gospel will do if applied to their lives. I have arranged to go from here to Sedalia. Brn. James Duffey and W. M. Beckett are readering me wilmble assistance here, and Bro. W. are rendering me valuable assistance here, and Bro. W. J. Weston is going to assist me at Sedalia.

My work has been to make new openings this year in the Independence Stake so I have tried to stay away from the branches, and by so doing I have not been very from the branches, and by so doing I have not been very flush with means to defray expenses, but I am not working for the money, if I was I would not start out in the missionary field, for I can make sixty dollars per month and be with my family. So if I did not know that God had called me to this work, that is where I would be, but I have heard the voice of Jesus saying, "You "If the duty of today, we do with our might,
There's no time for the evil and wrong, So I am trying to obey.

But there's joy in the Lord, in the good, in the right, That will bide with us all our life long."

Editor Ensign:—In reading the many letters and testimonies in the Ensign makes me feel a desire to bear my testimony. I obeyed the gospel July 14, 1912, at Kansas City, Kas. Was baptized by Bro. Ammon White. I have never regretted the step taken. I can truthfully testify to the divinity of this latter day gospel. My desire is to always be true and faithful to the commandments of God. I know that God has answered my prayers and blessed me in times of need. I was raised up by parents that belonged to this church and I always thought they were right in their views of the Scribtures. I never Boyd, Okla., Feb. 26. they were right in their views of the Scriptuges. I never got to attend many L. D. During this time our missionary (old Bro. Baker) came and held a series of meetings for us. I thought his sermons were grand compared to those I had been listening to. Later Brother F. C. Keek came to our house and preached one week at our school house. I began to get interested in the "Angel Message" by this time. I had a desire to become a Christian providing I could decide which was the true church. In the spring of 1912 I decided to visit relatives and friends in Kansas City and my old home at Deepwater, Mo., also relatives and friends at other points.

When I bade my mother good-bye she said, "Perhaps you will have a chance to obey the gospel while you are gone." Well I knew that was one of her greatest desires, gone. Well I knew that was one or net greatest and those words seemed to come to my mind quite often during my journey. I had a desire to join this church if it was really the true one, for I felt as though there could only be one true church, and I didn't wish to make a mistake. During my visit in Kansas City, Kansas, I attended church services at Chelsea Branch with my autended church services at Chelsea Branch with my aunts and uncle. I wanted to join then, for I had the desired opportunity, yet I felt I needed more spiritual encouragement, so I prayed that God would guide and direct me. This he did, for one Sunday evening at prayer service I received the answer to my prayers through prophecy, delivered by Bro. Charlie Wooden, warning and urging me to do my duty, which I did two weeks later.

My little sister, aged twelve years, has obeyed this gospel since I did. She was baptized last August by Bro. Sam Simmons at the close of the Case and Warlick debate at Wauska, Texas. Pray for us both that we will always be faithful

In my study of the different beliefs of the many denominations I have come to the conclusion that while

While not defending all of Mrs. Eddy's teaching, I shall give you my understanding of Spirit and matter. Spirits existed before the creation of the world, or Spirits existed before the creation of the world, or man in the flesh, and continues to exist after the decay of all flesh and matter. If that be true, then matter is not "real" because it has a beginning and an end. Spirit only is real because it has always existed. God created the Word, and with the Word created the world, man and the Word, and with the Word created the World, man and all things in the world. He also gave the power of thought, speech and action. It is thought and speech only which causes the influence and effect of good and evil, either or both. Action is only the result of the influence of thought and speech.

SERMONS AND ARTICLES

GROWING SPIRITUALLY.

("A Baby Sermon") By the late Elder Samuel F. Cushman.

By the late Elder Samuel F. Cusman. (Editor's note.—This article was written by Bro. Cushman while upon his bed calmiy, and with happy anticipation, awaiting his change. Knowing his life work was about done he still thought of growing spirituality, and has since passed over to the other shore where the restraints of feeble mortality no longer hinder, and where he has entered into a more abundant life).

"Wherefore laying aside all malice, and all guile, and hypocrisies and envies, and evil speakings, as new born babes desire the sincere milk of the word, that ye grow thereby."—1 Peter 2: 1, 2.

My object this morning is to chop up meat so fine that the children can digest it. Like the darkey preacher, I want to put the cookies on the lowest shelf. It might not do in ordinary life for some families to have the pan of cookies down there; but in the gospel sense it is a good thing.

My subject is some of the conditions of growth in Christ. The Apostle says, "wherefore laying aside"—five things, malice, and all guile, hypocrisies, envies, and all evil speakings. To make the matter plainer we will define.

Malice is hatred without a cause. It is the kind of feeling the people had toward Christ and his apostles. Hatred when they knew not what they hated him for. It was a kind of rabble hatred. They followed one another as sheep without forethought. It is the kind of hatred that the people have had toward Latter Day Saints. No man can give a good reason for hating the cause we represent.

Guile is deception. When the Savior saw Nathaniel coming toward him he said to those standing by, "Behold an Israelite indeed in whom is no guile;" two of the highest commendations that could be given a human being. An Israelite is a man who has power with God and with man and prevails with God.

Hypocrisies are the profession of excellencies which we do not possess. It is sailing under false colors, trying to give the people to understand that we are much better than we are hypocrites according to latter day teaching, are not to be tolerated in the judgment of God.

Envy is a distressing feeling which we have because another succeeds beyond what we do. Some one has a brighter mind than we have and it distresses us. Others have a larger bank account, more bonds, more stocks, and we are distressed over it. Others have better homes, have better features, are what we call smarter, can outrun us in the race, and this gives us distress. It is different from covetousness. Covetousness would lay hold of everything within its reach, and get by fair or foul means; but envy looks out of the corners of its eyes toward those who prosper more than they do and are distressed thereby.

Evil speaking; all evil speaking. Now the Scriptures speak of evil speaking under different headings, as whisperings, lyings, soft speakings regarding another that we do not want them to hear and have not the courage to say it in their hearing. Backbiting is another term which reminds us of the action of some dogs who havn't the courage to face us, but will run up behind us and nip our heals and show their spite that way. Slander is another form of evil speaking very dangerous and destructive of another's character. Quarreling and contending over projects of your own hands, of your own mind, to many they appear greater than they are. Lying which is false testimony, knowing it to be false, and desiring to deceive others,-Doctrine and Covenants 42:7.

Now these five things are to be laid aside as very detrimental to a religious life, and no one can advance in divine life who harbors these things. They are like canker sores in the mouth, or gangrene in the flesh, they eat out the better nature and threaten to destroy us. They are to be laid aside. That is, have nothing to do with them, and when we have done so we may become as new born tubes who desire the "sincere milk of the word."

There are some characteristics of babyhood that belong to my text; viz., innocence, purity, ability to grow, the need of care, the need of milk, frequent feeding, a vigorous appetite, a good digestion, good assimilation, pure food, no substitute for milk.

Now for an application of the above points concerning babes. We are babes in Christ when we are first baptized. We become new creatures equivalent to saying a new creation. Old things have passed away, behold all things have become Hence we are innocent and pure like a new born babe. We need much care, We must have our milk, gospel milk I should say. We must eat it often. Must have a good appetite. and see that our digestion is right. Not overdo but digest and assimilate the gospel food which we eat, and we must have the pure gospel. There can be no substitute in our reading and studying for the real gospel of Christ. These things we are to desire, the text says, a short command. That is we are to have an appetite for it. Cultivate a relish, a preference. The Psalmist says in the first Psalm: "In his law doth he meditate day and night. He should be like a tree planted by the rivers of water. * * *His leaf also shall not wither and whatsoever he doeth shall pros-

Now the Lord told Joshua that he must "Be strong and of good courage for unto this people shalt thou divide for an inheritance the land which I swear unto their fathers to give them. Only be thou strong and very courageous that thou mayest observe to do according to all the law which Moses my servant commanded thee. Turn not from it to the right hand or to the left, that thou mayest prosper whithersoever thou goest. This book of the law shall not depart out of thy mouth, but thou shall meditate therein day and night, that thou mayest observe to do according to all that is written therein: for then shall thou make thy way prosperous, and then shalt thou have good success. Have not I commanded thee? Be strong and of good courage; be not afraid, neither be thou dismayed: for the Lord thy God is with thee whithersoever thou goest."-Joshua

It is to be the "sincere milk of the word." Sincere comes from the Latin "sine" without; cero, wax, a reference to honey, the pure honey separated from the wax; which means he must have the pure word of God unadulterated. Man's commands will never fill the bill. We must study the word for ourselves, and in most cases have it interpreted by the good Spirit of the Lord.

Now the object is growth; not to stand still. To explain what I mean will refer again to children. As parents we delight to watch the different stages of physical growth in our children; to watch to see their bodies expand and lengthen and round out. To see them creep and walk, and swing and skate and toil and wrestle, measuring themselves, seeing the different sizes of shoes they have to have each time a little larger than before.

My oldest son when in his teens delighted to come in from school and challenge his father to with him. I used to gratify him until the last time I wrestled with him, I threw him five times but with great difficulty, and I saw it was time for me to halt, for he was getting the best of me because of his constant growth into larger physical manhood. All this pleased me, to see him take on the larger proportions, and so with all parents. Nothing pleases them more than to see their children grow. The same is true of the mind. Bright children will smile on their parents within two weeks. Not the kind of colicly smile that we see when they are sleeping, but a real intelligent look into the mother's face, giving her the first intimation that the child has a bright mind. This is a harbinger of good to all concerned. Then later their efforts to talk and dispute. They go into school life and come home with delight to think they can spell cat, or dog, and later larger words. They take their grades one after the other and bring in their reports, and master their arithmetic and algebra, and we delight to see our children rank well in childhood and manhood among their fel-

But if there is no growth in the body and they become dwarfs, how great is the disappointment to the family; and the same is true of the mind. If there is no growth of mind then great distress is seen in parents' countenances, as the result of failure of the child to grow in mind.

The church is a great family. Babes are coming into it all the time. Some eight years old; some ten; some twenty; some sixty and in rare cases eighty years old. Some live, thrive, grow and are useful members of society that they join. Others seem never to grov, or to develop into spiritual manhood or womanhood. They are always dwarfs as you might say, needing to be carried and taught. Needing to be ministered to, always carrying their nursing bottle, so to say.

Now we will suppose three things. First, a family where children never grow. The mother says when her first born comes and he reaches the age of three or four months, "isn't he a darling? Look at his dimples; see his bright eyes; see how round and plump he is. I wish I could always keep him so." Very good, but suppose number two comes and you could always keep him at that same age, and have him always to be the same dimpled darling. Then also No. 3, No. 4, up to No. 10. Delightful, isn't it? Consider this condition of things in the house. The mother's duties; the mother's burdens; how many cradles, how many squares; how many night dresses; how many nursing bottles, how much care. I wonder if she would continue to be of the same opinion if she had ten for a while to care for and minister to.

Suppose a church where all are eating milk; always remain in this childish condition of mind; no growth, they are all at a standstill; no better, no more spiritual; no more useful than when they were born into the kingdom. They never become nursing fathers and mothers in Israel. avever enjoy any of the gifts, always feeble; as one woman in Omaha said of her husband: "He is a good husband and attends to all our family wants, but he is not valiant in the work of the Lord or in the testimony thereof."

Now Satan has every advantage in a church of that kind. The cause of all this is they are not studious, not prayerful, not active, not devout, and are not enjoying the fellowship of the saints, and make no sacrifice to serve God. Always looking out for themselves. We are told in the word of God to seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, but these when once in the church consider that is all there is for them to do, so they are standstillers.

Now we will suppose another kind of church a church not laying again the foundation of repentance from dead works, with faith toward God, the doctrine of baptisms, laying on of hands, resurrection of the dead, but they go on unto perfection. They have tasted of the good word of God and the powers of the world to to come. They have been refreshed by the visitation of the Spirit and they become diligent persons. Diligent in the true sense of the word, meaning activity and love for the work engaged in. Hence they grow. You can watch them from month to month, and they are soon ready for positions of responsibility and for burden bearing. You can ask them to assist, they readily comply. They will be ready in the Sabbath school, in the general prayer meeting, and everywhere will be on the alert for service. Such a church will invariably grow and become a missionary force in the neighborhood.

Our office will be a busy place during general conference and the week preceding. Help us by sending in your subscription for the daily early.

THE JOURNEY OF THE NEPHITE COLO-ONY FROM JERUSALEM. (With reference to the new map.)

The improbability of the Nephites having traveled elsewhere than the course decided on by the committee on archeology is apparent from the location and character of the deserts, the mountain ranges, the rivers, and the fertility in places, of those parts along the Red Sea coast, and in the provinces of Oman and Muscat, corresponding so well to the narrative in the Book of Mormon. All these features are faithfully shown on the new map.

Desert of Arabia.

Opposite Jerusalem, toward the east, extending, as shown on some maps as far north as Damascus, and far to the south of the Gulf of Akabah, extending eastward very nearly to the Persian Gulf, lies the Great Desert of Arabia, where the hot red sands often become heated to 200 degrees, Far., to the depth of several inches; the air also above this becomes extremely hot, and continually rising, causing air currents, resulting in whirling masses of hot air, which, swept by terrible wind tempests, result in the great Simoon sand storm of the deserts.

Stated on the map.

By these sand storms, large caravans are frequently destroyed, and even great armies have been overwhelmed by them, as was the case with Cambyses' army in the great Sahara Desert of Northern Africa, described in Rollins Ancient History.

While on the cases of the desert of Arabia are found the Gazelle and Ostrich, they are also frequented by the panther, hyena, lion, etc., [stated on map]—animals destructive of human life; and hence for the above reasons it is not probable that the Book of Mormon people would have been directed of the Lord to go through this part of the country.

It is true there seems to have been (Smith's Bible Dictionary, article Arabia,) a low partially fertile belt encircling the northern bluff or highlands of Nedjed, from the Gulf of Akabah to the Persian Gulf (shown on map) consisting of mountainous and desert tracts, reneved by considerable districts under cultivation, well peopled, and watered by wells and small streams, so far as explored; but as we can trace the Nephite colony at the first, as far south on the

as the first river of Arabia running into this sea, about fifty miles below the mouth of the Gulf of Akabah, it is not possible that their journey could have been eastward here through this partially fertile strip, for the record clearly says in 1 Nephi 5:6, (Authorized Version 5:15-18), that after crossing the river, following the direction given by their miraculously provided ball or compass, they traveled in "nearly a south, southeast direction, keeping in the most fertile parts of the wilderness, which were in the borders near the Red Sea."

Commentators agree that this strip between the mountains of Hedjaz and the sea shore was very fertile in places. Along the shores were many coral islands, some of the coral being red and white. Turtle also and fish abound along the seashore.

On most any map of Arabia the eastern coast of the Red Sea is shown to run in a south, southeast direction, that is half way between southeast and south. This fact alone is strong proof the truthfulness of the record.

Although the valley of Lemuel is the first camp mentioned, there were no doubt others, and likely several, before reaching this; the distance from Jerusalem being approximately 150 miles. The record says, (1 Nephi 1:13; A. V. 1:30), he came down by the borders near the shore of the Red Sea," and again that "he traveled in the wilderness in the borders which are nearer the Red Sea," and again that "he did travel in the wilderness, etc." Why mention this traveling in the wilderness so many times in the same sentence unless it signifies different periods of traveling with several cosecutive camps between them. Hence it was no doubt from the last previous stop that they traveled three days in the wilderness and pitched their tent in the valley of Lemuel which was near the mouth of the river Laman.—1 Nephi 1:14; (A. V. 1:33).

Some debaters with our people have exultingly claimed that there are no rivers in Arabia runing into the Red Sea. Let those therefore who are interested examine the map given in that popular work, Wm. Smith's Dictionary of the Bible, D. Appleton & Co. edition, published 1876, Article Arabia, page 55. There are three rivers given there within the scope of my map, and one still farther south all running into the Red Sea from Arabia; the first one at the north being located at Hippas as shown on my map, thus serving to locate with certainty the River Laman, with the valley of Lemuel just above it and near its mouth, according to the record.

This also enables us to locate the next camp Shazer, four days journey south, south-east, 1 Nephi 5:6; (A. V. 5:15,18), with quite a degree of certainty. Though for various reasons the distance traveled in different days may vary materially, the direction taken is certain.

This is also true with reference to their next camp where Nephi broke his bow (called Broke Bow on my map, as no name is given for this encampment). The distance traveled is also here given as "many days."

There is however an evidence here of the latitude of broke Bow that it would not be well to overlook. It is the fact that on the best maps of Arabia the eastern Red Sea coast line will be seen to bear considerably toward the east past Yembo (shown on my map) close where we have located Broke Bow.

Now following closely the record (1 Nephi 5: 14; A. V. 5:42) from Broke Bow "we did again take our journey, traveling nearly in the same course as at the beginning."

The coast line above this point being south, south-east, and turning more to the southeast, caused their course to vary, or to be "nearly" the same.

This varying of the coast line, together with the record account, locates Broke Bow with considerable precision, and shows that we are so far about the right direction down the coast of the Red Sea.

Again, where we come to their next camp, Nahom, though the distance is merely given also as "many days," the fact that they "did travel nearly eastward from that time forth," (I Nephi 5:17; A. V. 5:55), enables us to determine the location again with quite a degree of accuracy, as it must be in a vicinity where the geography of the country will favor this material change in their course.

Mountains.

The high table land of Nedjed lying next south of the Great Desert of Arabia, before described, terminates westward in a mountainous bluff (See Map of Arabia in large type edition Teachers Bible, Am. Tract Society, N. Y.,) runnine parallel with the Red Sea shore, from the head of the Gulf of Akabah south, south-eastward until near Mecca where it takes a turn nearly eastward for a long distance, (shown on my map) thus forming a natural passage for our colony, who previous to this time have been traveling according to the record, keeping "in the lorders near the Red Sea," but are now to turn "nearly eastward from that time forth."

Nahom then may safely be placed at about the beginning of this turn of the mountains toward the east, as shown on my map.

This curve of the mountains eastward constitutes the southern edge of the table land of Nedjed. The table land which affords pasturage for the noble Arabian horses, etc., rises gradually from the north to about 2500 feet and finally at this mountainous bluff, along its southern edge, reaches an altitude of 7000 feet above the sea, as shown on this map; while to the south of our little colony rises the lofty mountains of Mecca, 8500 feet.

Through this natural passage in the mountains then, divinely led, now turning nearly eastward traveled the colony, not thinking perhaps that the silence of this wilderness route had before been broken 300 years before by the very great train of the Queen of Sheba, who came from her native country some 600 miles farther south, to visit King Solomon at Jerusalem; nor that on the great mountains of Mecca, would rise some 1200 years later, the great headquarters of Mahometanism.

Mohomet claimed to make the journey from Mecca to Jerusalem in his day, (Buck's Theological Dictionary, article, Mohometanism), this showing as well as the case of the Queen of Sheba, the possibility of such a route of travel by the seashore as we have been following.

Another reason for the Mecca locality being favorable to the place for the Nephites is that in about the same latitude, farther east, lies the northern limits of another great sandy waste—the Great Desert of Rhobael Khali (shown on map) extending toward the south some five or six hundred miles, and reaching half the distance across the whole country east and west.

It is well therefore that their south, southeast course should here change, and the eastward direction be taken, as this would bring them, though traveling, as the record says they did, "for many years"—safely above this great southern desert, between it and the highlands of Nedjed, away to the more fertile provinces of by the seashore.

The International and Chambers Encyclopedias —Articles Arabia, describe these countries as mostly sterile, yet as studded with fertile oases, and richly fertile tracts.

The record says that when they reached the seashore, they called the place "Bountiful because of its much fruit, and also wild honey."—1 Nephi 5:16; (A. V. 5:62).

The encyclopedias referred to, give as the natural modern products of these countries, cotton, silk, coffee, raisins, dates, wheat, also metals such as copper, lead, etc., all of which are stated on my map.

Nephi was here directed into a mountain, and it may be surprising that here, in the highest part of a range of mountains running along the entire coast lands of Muscat, averaging 4000 feet high, stands Gebel Achdar or Great Mountain, 10,000 feet above the sea.

Nephi was also here instructed where to go that he might find ore to make tools with which to build a ship with which to cross the sea. Copper and lead are mentioned above, as among the natural products of those countries. Oman is stated to manufacture cotton, silk and arms.

Thus we have been enabled to trace the Nephite journey in considerable detail from Jerusalem to the Arabian Sea shore where they built a ship and put forth into the ocean, calling the sea Irreantum which meant "many waters."

I have also prepared an explanation of Hazor, and Jazer, upon the very beginning of the Nephite departure from Jerusalem which I have omitted from this article for the sake of brevity.

This sketch is here offered with a hope that it may be of interest to some, and as an explanation of the new map,.

The new detailed map of Arabia, showing Departure of Book of Mormon Colonies from Jerusalem is now furnished by Bro. George F. weston, in harmony with the larger ones before made according to the report of the committee on Archæology, but with greater detail of the Arabian countries. It has been referred to Elder F. M. Sheehy of the committee, with respect to the greater detailed features of the Nephite journey, and meets his personal approval.

Please save this description to accompany the map.

Respectfully, Geo. F. Weston.

THE DIVINE HELPER.

"Behold, I stand at the door and knock: if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him and he with me." These are the words of our Master, we think it is a generous offer. He cannot abide in the fullest sense in our hearts, while impure thoughts are resident. If your hands are stained with deeds of unrighteousness he will turn away, for the Lord of heaven and earth does not dwell in unholy temples.

You have your agency and may close the door and lock it. You may even drive him from the step. You may do all this but if you knew what he would mean to you; you would not hesitate a moment to open the door and bid the Savior come in., If you open wide the door, bid him come in, and permit his life to permeate yours: inspiring your life with the Holy Spirit, filling your life with cheer and comfort, then you will be able to realize what the Savior meant when he said "The kingdom of heaven is like unto leaven." The presence of the Spirit will not be noticable any more than the leaven which is slowly transforming the meal. The silent agent at work within you will do wonders with you, and transform you.

He has said "I am the vine, ye are the branch-This shows our relation to Christ; our dependent condition. Are you able to realize the significance of this statement which is full of love and truth? Of course there are conditions conencted with this. To illustrate:—"Ye are the light of the world." This was spoken to his disciples. Now Judas was not a light, Peter was not a light at times, Thomas was peculiar at times. What did the Savior mean? I believe that the thought he conveyed at that time is correctly rendered in the Book of Mormon: These things are given unto you that you may be the light of the world." He is the vine and we are the branches when we are in the proper relation with him. If we live in this relation we will be the salt of the earth, and as a city on a hill and as a light shining in darkness.

In the town where I reside there is a large clock in the county building; a reliable clock. In the day time it may be seen and is of service, but in the night time we hear it strike but we cannot see it. Why is it invisible? because there is no light there. So it is with many "sunny day Christians." When it is convenient they are active but in days of adversity they are invisible. They are failing in their mission, they are wrapping their talent in a napkin or perhaps burying it. Did you ever see a saint who was ashamed to tell the neighbor about the "glad message?" Did this thought come to your mind? We should follow the example of the woman at the well in Samaria-when we have found Jesus, tell others

In the parable of the talents one of nature's sternest laws are impressed upon our mind. The scientist calls this the "survival of the fittest." The fittest are those who receive and endeavor to use that which they have, and to them it shall be given, their usefulness shall be increased. The soil, the sunshine and the atmosphere are very liberal with their gifts which they bestow upon plant life. But there is no more given than can be worked up into growth of fibers, flower and fruit. As soon as the demand stops the supply On the other hand the more rapid the stops. growth the more abundant the supply. grown the more abundant the supply. Nature is liberal with us if we utilize what she bestows upon us. More liberal is God. He has bestowed the most priceless gift. It was bestowed upon us for a purpose. If we permit this to lie dormant it will be taken from us, even that which we have received.

I know a certain "colored man" who told me that he was a wicked sinner; that he swore and did many wicked things. He said he prayed that the Lord would come down and make him a better man. I told him that the Lord had another mission. He gave us our agency. He will help us to be better but he will not compel us to be better. As soon as we demonstrate a willingness he will labor with us. When a vessel is full no more can be poured in. When our lives are full of impurities thre is no room for good. True repentance will eliminate some of the undesirable qualities, and then the Holy Spirit will become resident within, as you need it, and by its cooperation we will be able to cleanse this earthly tabernacle. We are powerless to do it by our-selves; that is the mission of the Christ, to help us in this respect.

Your life is as the plastic clay in the hand of the potter, hence Jeremiah was led to say, "As clay is in the potter's hand so are ye in my hand." Christ is the master workman, if you permit your life to come in contact with the Divine touch; pliable as the clay is in the hand of the potter your life will reach its complete flores-You will become a beautiful vessel. On the other hand if you resist, when it is in your power to do otherwise, you will become a victim of another workman. He is not so skillful. His work is not a masterpiece. Neither will he embellish your life with glory, as it would be if in the hand of the Divine Potter.

Lyman W. Fike.

Some have inquired: "Will the matter published in the conference daily not be published in the weekly Ensign?" We expect to give as full a report as space will permit in the Ensign and some matters, such as reports, etc., will be published in both, but only a small part of the matter in the daily can be used in the weekly. If you want to get a generous report of the conference send your subscription for the daily.

AN OLD MAN'S REFLECTIONS. To Elder John C. Foss.

I to the ministry was called,
Thirty years ago today,
I then was young and full of hope,
And for success did pray.

As eighteen years of life had passed, With many more to come,
I knew the journey would be long,
Before I reached my home.

I tried my duty to perform, And walk in wisdom's ways,
That I may have his Spirit here,
Through all my earthly days.
Next Sabbath day I tried to preach
Two little sermons there,
And to get through without a break.
I made an earnest prayer.

The help I then received was great, I needed all I got, And hew I finished up at last, I never have forgot.

But 1 fair well and thankful too, And from that day did start To fill the mission of my life, With gladness in my heart.

Now many years have passed away. Since that spring day of youth, And yet my faith is firm and strong, In the triumph of the truth. But while the movements of the Lord Seem very slow indeed, It does not matter who shall reap, If we have sown the seed.

I've wandered far away from home As I have gone to teach, In distance lands nearby the seas, Where I was sent to preach. And as I wander all alone,
Among the good and bad,
I see the sad effects of sin,
And the goodness of our God.

A Letter Home.

"Oh so often when temptation
In so many forms has come,
I have thought of you dear Mellie,
And by that have overcome. And by that have overcome.

Many years have passed before us,
And we now are growing old,
When our work has been accomplished
We shall rest in his great fold.

"Many times when sick or weary, I have longed to be with you, But our work has kept me from you, As we strove God's will to do. Many men have labored with me In this ministry of love, And if we do our duty, dear, We shall reign with him above

"This world is dark and dreary, dear, Without the help of God, Men strive to have success in life, In all the paths they trod.

But none can reach true happiness
As they through life may go, Till they have learned the ways of God, As his dear Son did show.

"And you and I this plan did learn "And you and I this plan did learn
When we were young in years,
And then began to serve our God,
Although we had our fears.
Since then long years have passed away,
And many trials have come,
But God will keep you in his way
Till he shall call you home."

Time is ripe, God's work must move
As it has not before,
And to this labor all are called
As never were before.
So saints and friends, each one and all,
The time has come for work,
Let each gird on his armor bright,
And never duty which And never duty shirk,

"It must needs be ,offenses come" "It must needs be offenses come"
And come they will to all,
"But wee to him by whom they come"
For judgments sure will fall.
Then why will saints seek for revenge,
Or try to hurt a brother,
The only plan of safety is
For each to love the other.

My Prayer. Oh! when the day of death shall come, And we look back at life, May each one know that he's done well, In duty and in strife. or many pleasant times have come, As well as days of strife, And may we learn our lesson While we are here in life. ons well. –W. E. Peak.

"THE BLINDNESS OF VIRTUE." Concluded from last week.

He went on to say that for seventeen years their daughter had been their baby. They had "sheltered and protected her from every unhappiness that lay within their power to save her. piness that lay within their power to save her.
At this time, the father of a young Oxford student was granted a favor by Mr. Pemberton, thusly. His twenty year old student son, came from Oxford to read law with Mr.P. and receive his tutorage. The added income was of course uppermost in Mr. P's mind. The lad was welcomed freely into the home circle. Honorable, engaging, honest, he and their daughter became chums; finally inseparables, but with no apparent thought of "serious affections" existing.

Then the moment came when my little girl realized that she loved this hou.

chums; finally inseparables, but with no apparent thought of "serious affections" existing.

Then the moment came when my little girl realized that she loved this boy.

"It came about, we afterward learned, by his being invited to come up to London and spend the night with an old chum. Effie did not want him to go; not because she grudged him the good time promised, but because she would miss him. They had been so much together that even a day with him away would be lonely.

"He went, however, as he had promised—and the day was 'lonely.' I even felt it myself, being so used to studying with the lad, like old friends, before we went to bed. But with Effie the separation was all but intolerable. Would he come back on the eight-thirty? Did we mind if she waited up for him? Or would he wait for the last train, did we think? And so on until bedtime.

"He did not come, and we thought nothing more of Effie's anxiety than to be rather amused and pleased at its indication of their complete congeniality as play-fellows. I remember having some slight misgivings, as I thought of Mary Ann. But our baby was so different! Surely nothing could harm her. Besides, had her mother not warned her of the dangers that lurked in the path of every young girl? And furthermore, Archie was with a manly chap. I trusted him implicitly.

"Next morning I was up early. My hair brushes, I discovered, were in Archie's room. Half convinced that he was not yet home from London, having been awake at the time he should have arrived had he come down by the last train at midnight, I started for his room. On the threshold I stopped. Every drop of blood in my body seemed suddenly to rush to my face. For through the door I heard the purposely subdued voices of our daughter and that boy discussing the right of Effie to express her love for him by being there.

"My first impulse was the common impulse of an outraged parent. I should dash into that room, drag my daughter away and mete out such a vengeace on the man as my righteous anger, demanded. But, hopi her love, and her demand to know why her lover treated her with such lack of affection at this treated her with such lack of affection at his time. The angry father enters. The daughter is sent to her room. In the scuffle between the two men, and words which ensued, the father learned these facts. That Effie had waited in Archie's room from the hour of the midnight train's arrival, until four in the morning. Later when he did come she went to him, because she couldn't wait longer to greet him.

Some of the young man's exclamations during the interview are as follows:—

the interview are as follows:—

"I wanted to protect her. I don't care what you believe. I am just telling you the truth to show you what I might have done because no one has seen fit to tell Effile that she is a woman.'

"She has been told,' I shouted. 'She has!'

"Oh, no!' he cried. "That's impossible. You may think that she's been told, but she hasn't. Good, God!
do you know what you imply by saying that she has been told—that she was not ignorant, but was tempting me!'

me!'
"'How dare you!' I shouted. But even as we struggled "How dare you!" I shouted. But even as we struggled he found strength and breath to hurl my further shame at me. 'Blame yourself for this!' he cried, in passion. 'Blame your wife. Effic never knew what she was doing. She knew nothing.

Vowing his adoration for the girl and defending his honor and her innocence, the young man exclaimed, "You are to blame; you and your wife!

Good bye."

Mr. Pemberton paused to wipe the tears from his eyes, and I guess we did not know whether it were right to applaud the speaker, or to sympathize with the father. At any rate there was a complete, a deadly silence until he spoke again.

"That, ladies," he said, hesitantly; "that is the story of my shame. Or the story of what my shame might have been. I thank God that he taught me my lesson in time, for by it I have saved my child—and I hope I have helped you to an understanding of the pitiful ignorance in which we all live.
"But whether I have on not I behall one no telling the.

norance in which we all live

"But whether I have or not, I shall go on telling the story of what befell Mary Ann, and what might have befallen my own beloved daughter had the truth not been made clear to me. I have two children now, for my baby has married this lover of hers—a lover whose pardon I was proud to ask, and, oh, so grateful for the privilege. She came to us later that day with her simple story of going to Archie's room, and it was as he said. She didn't know it was awrong; she didn't know—and she was ignorant because her mother had broken her word to me, and had not told her.

"He didn't know I was awake,' Effle said; 'I'd been waiting so long. He tried to send me away. But it was my only chance of seeing him alone. I won't have him avoid me. I love him, and he loves me, and I'm a woman, not a child any longer. Mayn't I think about my life-now?'

"So it came to pass that I asked the mother of Mary Ann to let me invite to the funeral of that baby some of the mothers of our village, that I might talk to them of the mothers of our village, that I might talk to them and tell thein the story I have told you. For the sake of Ged get all the mothers and the future mothers that you know, to tell their children the splendid truth. Implore them never to forget this little grave for which we are all responsible. Show them that if they don't wish their girls to go through with what Mary Ann suffered they must not lie or quibble to spare themselves. While your daughters are still young have them put their arms around you while you tell them what a wonderful thing it is to be a woman. Let innocence remain in your homes by thrusting out ignorance, and keep your children modest by permitting yourselves no false modesty. modesty."

We shook the Rev. Harry Pemberton by the hand as we passed out of the Sunday school room. Some of us shamefacedly, I fear. And I, for one, with my mind full of thoughts. Thoughts and pictures I might say: Thought of the courage of this young crusader in a new faith, and a most amusing picture of the next meeting of the aid society, when the subject of this mothers' meeting is broached. Wouldn't you just love to be there?

(Something more along this line will be added in next week's issue, concerning experiences of our Independence girls).

Dear Sisters:—in a late letter from a very progressive field of woman's work we are glad to read of proposed preparations for reunion work, and I wonder if it might not help some body to read of the Woman's meeting at the reunion in Lamoni last summer.

It was the largest attendance we have ever had at a reunion meeting and every one seemed very much in earnest and sincerely interested. There was the usual order of music and prayer.

The subject of the meeting and its sub-divisions were written on the black-board and numbered. Sr. Stebbins had charge of the meeting and Sr. Anna Salyards introduced the subject of the meeting and told of certain messages that had come to her that had led to the choice of the subjects, or some of them. Then followed the pro-gram as outlined, with the interspersions of some ques-tions and discussions of course, both during the meeting and for some time afterward. The program follows: and for some time afterward.

FORTHCOMING MAGAZINE NUMBER OF THE HERALD.

The Herald editors have in preparation a magazine number of the Saints Herald to be known as the "Preachers' Number," which will probably appear March 25. Some very interesting articles have been secured. The following is a list of the articles that will appear, subject to such changes as it may be necessary to make in con-sideration of space and other matters when the number is made up.

How may a pastor hold the interest of his people and build them up spiritually?

I'd not withhold the kindly deed and thought To cheer my friends upon their lonely way.

If I could know the struggle to do right Of that poor, fallen one so sore beset, Not "shame," but "bravo" would I cry to him; Thou meetest foes whom I have never met.

If I could know the longing, pressing close Beneath derision's sneer at holy things, A friendly hand I'd reach across the gulf And know the thrill that world-wide kinship brings.

THE RESURRECTION OF JESUS.

Last week we noted the tendency of modern skepticism to destroy faith in the two fundamental facts of Christianity, viz., the divine conception of Jesus, and his physical resurrection. Having spoken of the first we wish now to consider the second.

The resurrection of Jesus is closely related to his miraculous birth, and usually men who believe one believe both, while those who deny one deny both. Had Jesus no power over death his claims to being divine would have been unavailing, and his service to humanity could have been no greater than the moral uplift resulting from the influence of his ethical teachings. Only in view of the physical resurrection could man retain faith in the divine Sonship of Jesus, and his power to redeem man from sin and its effects.

The present day tendency, even among supposed Christians, to deny the miraculous part of Christianity, necessitates a denial of the physical resurrection of Jesus, and either a discrediting or making a forced interpretation of the simple statments of the New Testament relative to it. Christian Science holds belief in an "incorporeal" Christ, without body or form but existing only in truth, spirit, and principle. A leading divine holds belief in a dis-embodied Christ, and while admitting belief in his physical resurrection, holds that it was merely for the purpose of showing his disciples that he still lived, and that when this had been accomplished the physical body was discarded. Still another view is stated by Prof. Lucius Hopkins Miller, of the Department Prof. Lucius Hopkins Miner, of the Popular of Biblical Instruction, Princeton University, in the "Biblical World." According to the "Presbyterian," "He declares that we are limited to one or [of] two views of the resurrection of Jesus. It was most likely a vision from state of consciousness in the minds of the disciples, especially of Peter, which was induced by the strong spiritual life imparted to his disciples by Jesus. It was a mere subjective experience, and was passed on in declaration from one individual to another. Or it may have been that there was an objective phenomenon, but if so it was not physical, but spiritual-something of the order of manifestations of modern spiritualists.'

Several years ago Robert Hamilton Cotton, D. D., for forty years a minister of the Episcopal Church, raid or published in the daily press: "For years I have reasoned with myself and I know now, and teach, that the doctrine of the virgin birth and of the resurrection are not true.

* * * The story of the resurrection is beautiful, a beautiful story which has been the inspiration of thousands, and it need never be less an inspiration if it is rightly placed, but it is untrue. It is merely a fairy tale."

These statements represent the attitude of no small part of modern Christians, and show the declining faith in the very foundation of the Christian religion. What is the reason for this unbelief? Are the Bible evidences of the resurrection of Jesus so indefinite, incomplete, or contradictory, that belief has no safe basis? Have the witnesses been proven unreliable, or incompetent? We cannot enter into any lengthy discussion of these questions, but note that the simplicity of statement of the several writers who tell of Christ's resurrection, the agreement of the several accounts, and the agreement with prophecy which had admittedly been given long before, all point to the correctness and reliability of the testimony.

A dis-embodied Christ, that is a discarding of his body after his resurrection, is scarcely to be thought of. Not one word of scripture hints at such a thing. The claims that it might have been only a vision-a mental picture-which the disciples saw when Jesus appeared to them, or that they were victims of some spirit presence representing the body of Jesus, "something after the order of modern spiritualists," are more inconsistent of belief than to accept the resurrection as a fact.

The resurrection of Jesus, (which makes possible the physical resurrection of all men) is one of the essential doctrines of the Christian religion. Destroy this doctrine and the whole scheme of redemption through Christ becomes disjointed and useless. Paul affirmed this when he said: "And if Christ be not risen, then is our preaching vain, and your faith is also vain. * And if Christ be not raised, your faith is vain; ye are yet in your sins. Then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished." (1 Cor. 15). With the doctrine of the physical resurrection stands or falls the whole system of Christianity, and men who cast out from their belief the divine Sonship, and the resurrection of Jesus, whether consciously or unconsciously are destroying the very foundation of all their faith in Christ and his salvation.

The resurrection of Jesus is either a fact or the New Testament is a monstrous fraud. The system of religion advocated by Christ and his inspired servants is wholly true or it is wholly false, and no dividing line can be drawn between that which is supposed to be true and that which is supposed to be false. It is a notable fact that the various ones who seek to deny the resurrection do not agree upon any other explanation of the recorded statements relative to it. one learned divine admitting the resurrection of Jesus but holding that it was temporary, another that it was a vision which the disciples saw, another that it was a spirit which appeared to them, and others that the belief had its origin in a fairy tale, and so on. There is no agreement in these opposing minds, but the admission that part of the record is correct is a virtual admission of the whole, for the "fairy tale" hangs together too closely to admit of accepting part as true and rejecting part as untrue.

After speaking of the witnesses who saw the resurrected Christ, Paul says "And last of all he was seen of me also," so that Paul became a witness of the fact of Christ's resurrection. Many years later he was again seen of John as described in the first chapter of Revelation. These two instances are sufficient to show the possibility of other witnesses than those at Jerusalem in the days following the crucifixion. Christ still reigns and it was within his power to show himself to whomsosever he would both before and subsequently to his ascension, but he works with men only according to their faith, and when men deny his miraculous power it is certain that they will not receive new evidence of these things by revelation. Great things are possible through faith, not excepting the admission of new evidence from the hand of the Lord regarding his divinity and resurrection.

The Book of Mormon Testimony of the Resurrection.

The Lord has wisely and fully provided against the present day developments of infidel criticism, and the popular wave of unbelief which is sweeping the Christian (?) world, by giving a new testimony of his truth in the Book of Mormon. Despised as this book may be by many, it is certain that it cannot be because its teachings are not in accordance with the Bible, or that they are not good. Its testimony of the divinity of Jesus and his resurrection is to the point and convinc-The ancient preface states the book was "written by way of commandment, and also by the Spirit of prophecy and revelation; * * * and also to the convincing of the Jew and Gentile that Jesus is the Christ, the eternal God, manifesting himself unto all nations." In harmony with this declared object it presents Jesus Christ 11 the actual Son of God, and declares historically that during the forty days intervening between the resurrection and the ascention of Jesus, he visited the branch of the Israelite nation then upon the American continent, in fulfillment of the statement in John 10:16, "Other sheep I have, which are not of this fold: them also must I bring, and they shall hear my voice; and there shall be one fold and one shepherd," and showed them his resurrected body, teaching them the gospel as he had taught it to the house of Israel at Jerusalem.

The writings of the various prophets as given in this record, also hold out the doctrine of the resurrection of all men which was made possible through the resurrection of Christ, and the whole testimony upon this point is a thorough confirmation of the testimony of the Bible. This account does not admit of any flimsy interpretation which does violence to the plain meaning of simple words. When the people at his invitation touched the resurrected body of the Lord, and felt of the wounds in his hands and side, when he laid his hands upon them to heal or to bless in other ways, when they saw him kneel and heard him pray, and saw the glory of God rest upon him, and angels round about him, there is no reason for doubting the correctness of their testimony that Jesus still lived in the flesh after his crucifixion at Jerusalem.

To him who seeks God in full faith through obedience to the divine law there will come further evidences of the truthfulness of this doctrine, and the forces now sweeping away the foundation from a half believing world will leave him safe and secure upon the Rock, Jesus Christ.

THE SLANDERER.

"Against slander there is no defense. It starts with a word-with a nod-with a shrug-with a look-with a smile. It is pestilence walking in darkness, spreading contagion far and wide which the most wary traveler cannot avoid; it is the heart-searching dagger of the dark assassin; it is the poisoned arrow whose wounds are incurable; it is the moral sting of the deadly adder, murder its employment, innocence its prey and ruin its sport. The man who breaks into my dwelling or meets me on the public road and robs me of my property does me an injury. He stops me on the way to wealth, strips me of my hard-earned savings, involves me in difficulty, and brings my family to penury and want. But he does me an injury which can be repaired. Industry and economy may again bring me into ease and affluence. The man who, coming at the midnight hour, fires my dwelling does me an injury. He burns my roof, my pillow, my raiment, my very shelter from the storm and tempest. But he does me an injury that can be repaired. The storm may indeed beat upon me, and chilling blasts assail me, but charity will receive me into her dwelling; will give me food to eat and raiment to put on; will timely assist me, raising a new roof over the ashes of the old, and I shall again sit by my fireside and taste the fruits of friendship and of home. But the man who circulates reports concerning my character: who exposes every act of my life which may be represented to my disadvantage; who goes first to this and then to that individual, tells them he is very tender of my reputation, enjoins upon them the strictest secrecy, and then fills their ears with hearsay and rumors, and what is worse, leaves them to dwell upon the hints and suggestions of his own busy imagination—the man who thus "filches from me my good name" does me an injury which neither industry nor charity nor time itself can repair."-Exchange.

At eleven o'clock Patriarch F. A. Smith spoke of the necessity of applying the gospel plan to our lives. He said we should consider well ourselves, the world sees us, the eye of the critic is upon us, we do the work good or evil, and by trying to excuse ourselves we dull our conscience in many ways; one way by excusing ourselves when we do a wrong, or trying to justify our actions by saying "Well, I see Bro. or Sr. So-and-so doing these things or worae." If the act is a violation of the law, then it is sin, and God cannot look upon sin with the least degree of allowance; hence, the name of the act does not change the sin. One fact mentioned by the speaker was, it has cost an average of 31 sermons for each baptism, and the good in each developed is no greater in proportion than the baptisms to sermons preached. He held that baptism is the beginning of eternal life, not at death as some conclude. or evil, and by trying to excuse ourselves we dull at death as some conclude.

The 2:30 prayer service was well attended and enjoyed by those present. Bro. H. O. # HOLDEN, MO.

The stake convention and conference which convened here Friday and Saturday were well attended and good interest was manifestd all the way through. The Sunday school convention was instructive. The visitors seemed senior convention was instructive. The visitors seemed to enjoy themselves as well as we enjoyed their company. New faces, new ideas and so forth are good things to have around. After our visitors left a feeling of loneliness seemed to pervade, but some day there will be no partings.

Among the visitors from Independence we noticed a number of ex-Holden members, Bro. Jenkins, Bro. and Sr. Self, and others we didn't like to lose; but they seem content with their present location and our only solace is that we have acquired a few good Independence saints in their places, Bro. and Sr. H. SAINT JOSEPH, FIRST BRANCH.

The series of sermons delivered by Patriarch Wm.

Lewis, during the week preceding conference, created an interest which was manifested by a good attendance at all meetings. On Friday evening he spoke to the young people, giving counsel and admonition on matters, particularly pertaining to youth. He finished his patriarchal work among us and returned to his home in Cameron on the following Wednesday accompanied by S. Lawis.

Saturday the 7th-the conference held three business sessions, having a large delegation present. After the routine business was done the conference discussed the adoption of a new set of rules. No decision was reached and the matter was laid over till next conference which will conven in Cameron in June.

On Sunday the Sunday school had an attendance of 194, 151 regulars, 43 visitors. The collection was over $9. At the close of the lesson the primary department furnished three short numbers. The morning sermon was by Elder John Davis of Stewartsville.

During the conference we heard one young man say that he had never missed a meeting or been a half minute late at service in the last four years, except when away from home. This was Bro. Elias Hinderks of the German Stewartsville Branch. What a record. Young men it is worthy of imitation.

Dear Ensign:—My heart feels light as I write these lines. The sun is so bright on the late fallen snow. How strikingly God's Spirit brings out the beauty in this world of nature! I did not appreciate deeply enough the great blessings that were mine as well as others to enjoy at Independence. But one cannot fathom the importance of what he has and should take advantage of until he is placed away from saints and into localities where the word saint is looked upon as something to shun and is dreadful.

I have discussed many of the church tracts with out-The more I see of the other churches and of the world my heart and soul take on a renewed vim to work harder for right. Springfield, Mo., Feb. 18.

Springfield, Mo., Feb. 18. Editor Ensign:—Feeling a desire to write I will give some reasons why I am a Latter Day Saint. The first is because the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints has the restored gospel in all of its primitive beauty and glory and is shining on as a great beacon light to fallen man, inviting him to come in and share its effulgence and glory. It is no wonder that grand old Apostle Faul was able to say that he was not ashamed of the gospel of Christ for he had put it to the test and found it to be the power of God unto salvation. When we have our intellect purified by faith by obetience to the gospel we can then readily understand how the righteousness of God is revealed in it.

Another reason is that when we have once been en-

Another reason is that when we have once been en-lightened and have tasted of the heavenly gift and have been made partakers of the Holy Spirit and have tasted been made partakers of the Holy Spirit and have tasted the good word of God and the powers of the world to come, we have no desire to turn back for it is an anchor to the soul, both sure and steadfast, and reaches within the vail. Great and good men looked forward to our day while living under the law of Moses and would have re-joiced to see it as we are seeing it, but they had to be content to look to this day with an eye of faith. The prophets inquired and searched diligently and prophesied of the grace that would come unto us.

Another reason is that the restored gospel carries its own weight. The greater the pressure that is brought to bear against it, the stronger and brighter it grows. What a glorious statement made by the Master of men— "If any man will do his will, he shall know of the do-

What a glorious statement made by the Master of men"If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine," it is patent to every true saint that every promise given by revelation when put to the test carries conviction to the soul. Then why do we linger and halt along the way and wait for something to turn up? Let us move out and do what our hands find to do

Let me say to every saint in the name of Israel's God let us not keep back that which is his, that his store house may be full. I am made to wonder sometimes, do we love this latter day gospel as we say we do in our testimony when we are not doing a thing to help it along?
Some hold the priesthood and won't try to preach a sermon. Some say: "When I get able financially so I can go without help from the church I will spend my time in the work." No you won't, for God don't want that kind of men to represent him; if you are not willing to go as empty as a missionary's pocket-book, and the first little two by four sectarian debater you run up against will take all the starch out of you. One says: "I can't pay lithing now, I am in debt for my home and I must pay." Listen! you had better never have a home than to cheat the Lord to get it.

Another says: "I use my surplus to help the poor in the church and will buy homes and cell to the poor saints on easy terms." Thus he overthrows God's purposes. Still another will say, "I will keep my property and when I get through with it the Lord can have it." The result is he will pass on and leave it in the hands of children that has not been taught to keep the law and it is lost to the Lord. Under the conditions named Zion and the same and the same that the conditions named Zion will be reduced the same and the sa when the the Lord. Once the Controls hamed blow could never be redeemed.

Why should not I rejoice and be glad that I was permitted to live in this the most wonderful age of the world and live in the restored church, and near the time when the Lord is going to gather all things in one, both in heaven and on earth? Now in conclusion I believe Joseph the martyred prophet to be one of the world's greatest prophets having in hand the keys of every dis-pensation and summing them up in one, and his successor to be the greatest man of his time and the only one standing at the head of the church with his counselors by the uthority of God. Realizing these things, why should I not be a Latter Day Saint? Saints, let us be diligent, honest and zealous in our stewardships and hold up the hands of those in charge and all will go well.

R. No. 4, Norwood, N. D., Feb. 10. Dear Ensign:—I must write and tell you that I have been looking for God since I was fourteen years old. When I was about seventeen Jesus appeared to me in vision and I was filled with joy, but I have not been satisfied that all has been right. I have read Mark 16:17,18, many times with gladness and I have asked God for the gifts of healing but I had never heard of any who had gitts of nealing but I had never heard of any who has received this gift now-a-lays. Last summer I heard one of the Latter Day Saints preach and he said that these gifts followed those who obeyed the gospel, which I now know is the only gospel of God, and I am glad I have found it. I must be baptized. I have been reading the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants all winter. Five weeks ago I sprained my ankle and I cannot walk on my foot yet.

Editor Ensign:—The work here was started several years ago, and progressed slowly under very trying circumstances, but am thankful to write that we now have cumstances, but am thankful to write that we now have a flourishing branch under the leadership of Elder Earl D, Rogers. One year ago last fall Elders Bronson and Dutton held some fine meetings in the Deselm school house which r we well attended. A new feeling sprang up and a lot of prejudice was removed. It was at these meetings that I awoke to the fact that I was not letting my light ships, but thous Coal for the my light shine, but thank God for the sermons preached which caused me to see my negligence.

We then rented the Woodman hall in January, 1913, held meetings all through the year, that is preaching services, Sunday school and also a fine Religio were organized. In July Elder J. A. Bronson brought the gospel tent, and held a series of meetings assisted by Elder F. G. Pitt and others, four being baptized at the time and one since. I think much good was accomplished by these meetings and must say that Elder Bronson will be greatly missed by this branch, but what is our loss will be others We are thankful for the blessed privileges gain. We are thankful for the Diesseu privileges conwe enjoy. Can safely say that the work is onward in this

There are two Adventists preaching here. One evening one said: "I defr any one in Pasco to bring one contradiction in the Bible to us, there is not one, no not one." Then he quoted Second Timothy, second chapter, fifteenth verse, regarding to "dividing the word of truth." I, seeing he was from "Missouri" (a term used so much in the West) decided to show him. I gave him Exodus 10:27, and Exodus 8:32, where "God hardened Pharaoh's heart," also where "Pharaoh hardened his own heart." You can imagine how amused I was when he said, "I said there was not one contradiction that I knew of. Here is one as it reads; still we all know the Lord never hardened anyone's heart."

Once while talking to them I said: "You don't believe we are conscious after death?" I read 1 Peter 3:18-21 they said: "That is a parable, Chris: never went to prison to preach." I read it again. "It is a parable sister." I said, "All right, not with me.

Editor Ensign:—We live in Clackamas County, thirty-five miles southeast of Portland, the largest and most thriving city in Oregon. A trolley car line makes the the metropolis only one hour and forty-five minutes from the metropolis only one hour and forty-five minutes from a real live settlement of people in the heart of a tme farming country. This is one of the most beautiful countries of our Father's creation. It ranges from high rolling hills to low level lands all well wooded with the far famed Douglas fir. Clackamas Co. is one of the largest counties in Oregon, and one of the oldest settled ones also. The beautiful and classic Clackamas River flows through this county. It is noted for its lovely rugged scenery. There are already two electric power plants located on this river, one at Cazadero and a much larger one at River Mill, and there is talk now of another plant being built about eight or ten miles up the river from Cazadero in the near future.

We have a very mild climate and have had a lovely winter here this year with only a few frosty mornings and only about one inch of snow, here at Estacada and Currinsville the same. Currinsville was settled in 1847 and many of the old land marks are still in evidence, but are slowly disappearing before the march of progress. are slowly disappearing before the march of progress. berries and all other small fruits grow splendidly here as well as the big red apples.

There are a great many large prune orchards, and prunes are dried and shipped away by the car load. We have some good roads here and hope to have better ones as time rolls on. The country is lined with a fine system of telephone lines, mostly owned by the farmers; we can talk nearly all over the country which extends from the west side of the Williamette River to the summit of the Cascade Mountains, with Oregon City, the country seat, situated on the above named river. True we have lots situated on the above named river. True we have lots of rain, but there is plenty of sunshine to mature the fruits and all kinds of grains. There have been wild flowers in bloom and also roses and pansies in the yard Constantly all this winter.

Last but by no means least we have a fine school located here in our little city, with eight teachers employed, and over two hundred pupils enrolled, with about sixty-seven high school students, coming from all the surrounding country, all the grades are taught up to the twelfth. There are four churches represented here including a small but real live band of Latter Day Saints, with a hall rented in which to meet. Bro. John F. Wiles is our able elder and Sunday school superintendent. He lives at Estacada.

We can see the majestic Mount Hood lifting its pure snow clad peak skyward glistening in the summer sun, or on a bright winter day as well, from a great many points around us. It must be seen to be appreciated. Anyone wishing to locate in Oregon would be wise to investigate this locality before buying elsewhere, as this is a great country with a great future.

A. N. Skinner, Braxton County, W. Va.-It is with joy and gladness we receive the Ensign with the soul inspir-ing testimonies of the brothers and sisters, and we rejoice in the good that is being done throughout the world by In the good that is being done throughout the world by the preaching of the angel's message. I feel glad that I can bear my testimony that I know that this restored gospel is true and a gift from God. We pray that our family and relatives and neighbors may come to a knowledge of the restored gospel that they too may rejoice in the hope of a coming Savior. Pray for us that we may be faithful. be faithful.

Ella S. Thayer, Marshall, Mo .-- It was my glad privilege to attend services at the stone church at inde-pendence recently and it was indeed a treat to my soul to go in the early morning to the house of prayer we found the saints gathered in prayer, and the Spirit was there to bless. Many strong testimonies and earnest prayers were offered, and it seemed indeed a heavenly place. We long for the land of Zion, as mid all our wanderings we are still 74 miles from the center though with-in the stake. We feel renewed in spirit, and have a stronger determination to consecrate our life to the cause of Christ. Then came the great Sunday school gathering and the other services. While the work is progressing at the center, let us buckle on the armor and labor wher-ever our lot is cast.

Mrs. H. E. Rife, Anamoose, N. Dak.-We are only a few saints here, husband and I have been members just a short time as we were baptized last June by Bro. Page. Our only regret is that we did not obey the gospel sconer. We had preaching here for two weeks during January. We ask for the prayers of the saints that we may remain firm in the faith

Thomas W. Price, Vanscoy, Sask.—I am only a new beginner and I find there is much to learn. I am located at a nice sized branch, having come here to learn from association with the saints and by study. As I look back to my childhood days and consider the works I have done both in word and in deed, I find I have served Satan a good deal, but Christ did not leave me. Oh, dear saints, good deal, but Christ did not leave me. Oh, dear saints, how merciful is our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ! How kind and long-suffering! I am 21 years old and have been without father or mother since four or five years old. Was sent to Canada where I roughed it since the age of 14, and fell among the roughs and wicked men of the world from whom I picked up many evil ways. In 1912 I spent $30 to $40 for tobacco. I find that in 1912 and 1913 I spent between $265 and $288 foolishly in following the ways of the world. Had I put this into God's work how many elders would it have helped? How many How many poor children would it have fed? It is my desire to strive for all that is right, to surrender only when knowing I for all that is right, to surrender only when knowing I am wrong, to reason with my brother or sister to find out if I am right or wrong. I ask an interest in your

Mrs. Grace Austin, Montrose, Col.—Yesterday was a day of rejoicing with the saints of California Mesa Branch. In the morning the saints gathered to partake of bread and wine, after which we had Sunday school, followed by church. All the metings were spiritual and instructive. My dear mother is still helpless but is still strong in the faith. Five were baptized into the church a week ago, one being my brother, Ray Koatcap. We are all rejoicing. are all rejoicing.

John Curry, Flora, Oregon.—We had only one elder here in three years. We live forty miles from railroad. If any elder can come let me know and I will meet him at the railroad. We don't even know where our nearest branch is. We know John 16:13, and Mark 16:17,18, and

Mrs. Nancy Thorp, Dodge City, Kas.—I ask if there are any saints besides E. D. and Nancy Thorp, living in Dodge City. If so we would be glad to hear from them as we wish to have a district tent brought here to open up this latter day work here if possible.

J. E. Page, Elreno, Okla.-I am having great success preaching on the streets of Elreno. All are believing but the pride in their hearts keeps them from obeying the truth. However many will come into the church there in the near future if someone could be here to continue the work. I am living with Chief Three Pingers who is 57 years old. A Cheyenne chief, Tall Bird is also who is 57 years old. A Cheyenne chief, rain bird is aired here, Chief Big Horse, Wm. Tall Bird. Some other names are Tall Red Bird, Wooly Dog, Standing with the Wind, and Bear going up the Hill. I desire to be what our Father in heaven desires.

R. K. Ross, Mound City, Mo.—If you can send me a good hand to work on farm, will give a good, trusty hand $30 a month from April 1st till December 1st, or as long as we have steady work.

Elizabeth A. Ellis. God is good and inerciful and will help those who put their trust in him. He has helped me in many ways where I couldn't help myself. I want to work for Jesus in any way he sees fit and let my light shine brighter.

SOME FACTS ABOUT COLLEGES.

Questions That Come Up In Field Work.

It has been said that the chief enemy to the Bible is ignorance of it. Doubts and suspicions are communicated from outside to those who are not acquainted with its teachings. The same may be said of the Book of Mormon. It also applies to some of our church institutions, especially in the educational department.

One of the most common queries put to us and asked in an argumentative accent is, Why can't they make Graceland College pay? It is inferred that it isn't managed right, or that there is not a demand among the saints to guarantee sufficient patronage to make it pay. Some of our readers may have made up their minds upon this phase of college work. Will you please give us your close attention while we try to show the facts concerning college work? We know that you are honest and love the truth, else you would never have accepted this latter day work; and that same love for truth and right is still with you. You will not allow a good institution to suffer because of a misunderstanding on your part, after you know.

Turning to the History of the Church, Vol. 4, page 616, the opening of the year 1889, and we read

About this time a movement was made to build a college at Lamoni, Iowa. The first thought was to organize a joint-stock company for this purpose, with a capital stock of about $50,000 or more. Later E. L. Kelley, at the instance of President Smith, Bishop George A. Blakeslee, and others, prepared articles of association which were published in the Herald for January 12. The Board of Trade of Lamoni, Iowa, had recently taken some action in regard to the matter, and appointed a committee consisting of Joseph Smith, David Dancer, George A. Blakeslee, W. W. Blair, and D. F. Nicholson, to procure the publication of said articles of incorporation, and take steps to procure subscriptions for the erection of a college in Lamoni. The matter was widely advertised and subscription lists were circulated and letters sent by the committee to different parts of the country. But this did not meet with sufficient encouragement and the plan to build the college by a joint-stock of parts at the country as an andoned. (Emphasis ours.)

A Wiser Plan.

A safer and better plan was then undertaken. Action was taken by General Conference, April 11, 1890. A committee proceeded to secure land and materials for the erection of a building. The corner stone of the present building was opened for school work in January, 1897. All this was ordered and accomplished under direction of the church, through General Conference action. The College was from the very first the common property of the whole church; the responsibility of maintaining it rests with the whole church this in this light we wish to write, with a prayer that more of the membership will sense their individual responsibility in this connection.

No doubt there was some disappointment in 1889 at the failure of the first effort to found a college upon a plan of a joint-stock company, but we do not hesitate to say, now, in the light of the knowledge we have concerning the financial success of colleges, that it was a good thing for the would be stock-holders that the project was abandoned. It would have been unwise for individuals to undertake such a good work, and we will endeavor to make this plain to the reader.

Deficit in College Maintenance.

There were in the United States in 1912 five hundred eighty-one institutions known as colleges, universities and technical schools. Every one of them are required to make annual report to the Bureau of Education, Washington, D. C., setting out on blanks furnished for the purpose, in detail, the number and name of departments, number of instructors, number of students, total emrollment, veceipts for the year, board of trustees with their terms of office, amount of property, scholurships, tuition, changes in charter, etc. Graceland is thus reported, and she is on the roll at Washington. From the statistics collated from these reports we gather the following interesting facts, concerning the financial aspect of college work:

Number of instructors, 1912, 28,900. Number of students, 1912, 303,000. Average cost per student, 1912, 3265.00. Average tuition received per student, 4912, 860.00.

The last two items furnish a deficit that calls for some explanation. Why do not these five hundred eighty-one educational institutions pay? Who would care to invest money, from a business standpoint, in a joint-stock company to run a college when the government statistics show that it costs the schools (1912) $265 (average) to put each student through, when the student paid on an average only $60?

There is only one way to classify that kind of work. It does not belong to the realm of profit making business. Colleges should not be founded and financed from that standpoint. How, then, do all these institutions keep running with such a deficit accruing every year? Why are they not closed? Because there are too many people who believe in enlightenment, and who are willing to contribute of their means to make up the deficit. It is the noble philanthropist who has put many of these institutions beyond the point of anxious financial worry by permanent endowments.

Eleven per cent of the colleges are smaller than Graceland. We have some in the church who have purchased scholarships for poor though deserving young men and women to help in securing a higher education at Graceland, and there are others who are keeping up a yearly temporary endowntent. Such are, to the limit of their capacity, as truly philanthropists as the millionaires who have endowed the great universities.

Financing Educational Institutions.

Harvard College was organized in 1836, and has seen its struggles like our own Graceland. It now has a permanent endowment of $26,250,000. Its yearly income is $2,550,000. All state universities receive state aid, and the United States Government gave as much as $5,875,000 to universities in 1912.

Why not raise the price of tuition and avoid all this? Certainly, the price of tuition could be raised to meet the deficit in educating those 303,000 students, but that would mean that only the wealthy could afford a higher education. Are we in favor of that plan?

Let us come to something still more familiar, and right at our doors. Do our public schools "pay?" Financially, no. But they do pay in more enlightened and better citizens. The glory of Americans is their free public school system, and we would even compel parents to school their children in order to banish illiteracy from our land. We would go farther and make our universities free if we could. We do the next best thing, and that is to put the tuition as low as possible.

We spend over four hundred millions annually in order that rich and poor may share alike in obtaining a primary education. Do we growl and say we can't afford it? How is it that we bear the great expense with so little inconvenience? In considering this, we will discover the main point in the financial aspect of our college question.

In the matter of maintenance, our public schools have the civil power behind them. We support them through taxation which is distributed pro rata to every property holder. The burden does not fall upon a few, and the payment is compulsory. There are no lapses; hence the system is a success because there are so many bearing it, and no one feels it.

Graceland Finances.

If our Graceland were maintained by our members upon this principle it would not be a burden to any one. Perhaps you do not believe this. Let us prove it to you.

Since its erection in 1895-97 Graceland College has cost the church the sum of $150,000. You may think this is a crushing sum, and such it is to the individual; but apply the public plan of schools and relate that expense to our sixty-eight thousand members and it amounts to only $2.20 per member. The present debt distributed in that way amounts to about fifty cents per member, which if paid, would bring the cost of our college up to $2.70 per head, to date. What would it cost to keep it going—to meet the yearl, About ten cents per member. Can we deficit? afford it? Again, fifty cents per member per year would meet the deficit; enlarge the dormitories, which are far too small; build a much needed library and gymnasium; give us a good labratory; make our college second to none in efficiency; and then, perhaps, give some of our ministers' boys and girls a chance to secure a higher education, which is at present denied to

But do we want to maintain our college wholly upon the public school plan? The power to levy a tax presupposes the power to collect it. This function belongs only to the state. The church (ours at least) does not want any such power. One volunteer is worth a dozen men forced into service in God's work. The work is supported by free-will contributions. The live member feels himself morally bound to support his church. Perhaps more would have felt that way toward the educational work of the church if the facts underlying the financial side of all college work had been understood. Reader, if that has been your reason for withholding support, we see no reason why we may not hear from you at once. We need you now, as never before.

The Church Plan.

Let us now turn to the church plan, and see whether it would be adequate for the work in hand. We presume that every one who has properly considered the law of tithing will admit that it is more just in its operation upon the church member than the taxation plan under the public school system. There can be no question that if all members would feel themselves morally and spiritually obligated to comply with that plan, as God prospers them, there would be enough in the general treasury to maintain all church institutions. It is estimated that not more than ten per cent of the membership paid tithing in 1912, when the average amount received was $2.88 per capita. (Seventh Day Adtists with about the same membership reached $21.27 per member.)

From this it is clear that a sufficient number have not yet sensed their responsibility; and as a result special calls must be made. Some who love the work are responding over and over again. It is necessary for all such noble ones to exercise patience until such time as a greater proportion of the membership are willing to share the responsibility.

It is passing strange that certain people who would not think of allowing some one else to pay their worldly taxes are calmly allowing other brethren in the church to bear their share of temporal responsibility in furnishing funds to build up the kingdom of God. There is this consolation: Those who do come to the rescue and assist, even beyond their pro rata share, will have it laid up to their credit when the judgment reveals the works of all men. Our admiration is excited by the knowledge that many of these noble supporters do not feel that they have done too much. When they think of what Christ has done for them, they blush to mention what they have done. That is the kind of material God can use to consumate his great purposes in the earth.

A Special Call.

The Presiding Bishop has been unable to furnish from the general fund any help for Graceland this year. Therefore a special call is out now, proposing to cancel the college debt and stop heavy interest. Will you help?

About ten years ago a similar call was made, and the debt was paid off except about $6,000. Since then interest, repairs, necessary permanent improvements, and the addition of the unavoidable deficit (shown above) have increased the indebtedness to over $30,000, which is about fifty cents per capita. Which will you do? Let some one else bear your part of this debt? Or will you contribute your part and then some, to make up for some other member who does nothing—except make a noise with his little hammer? None of the colleges "pay," as shown, except a few business colleges.

And don't forget that in spite of financial trials Graceland is still solvent. The present worth of the College is nearly $80,000. The indebtedness is less than half of that. The net worth today is greater than the gross worth (debt and all) ten years ago when an effort was made to cancel the debt.

A Grand Program.

From a wide personal acquaintance with the brethren of the church, we are sure we are safe in saying that there is wealth enough in the hands of sixty-eight thousand members to accomplish the work of God. We are not too poor to meet our obligations and, it would not be right (with this knowledge) for the Bishop or trustees of our various institutions to shut up any one of them. To recede from any good work we have undertaken is unthinkable. Brethren, there is a grand and noble program in hand; let us speedily carry it on to success in every department.

We can do anything that God wants to do. And as a rule we do what we want to do. When we decide to link up our will with his, there's going to be something doing. Nothing can frustrate his work when we get in a notion to co-operate with him. And who would be so foolish as to work against him? "He that is not for me is against me."

Demand For Graceland.

Is there a demand for a church college? There certainly is. Applications have been coming in for several months for rooms in the dormitories for the school year of 1914-15, and every room will be engaged by June, judging from past years. By next September, others will be begging for places. Good room and board in town, with good, respectable families of the church will be available, but there are some who prefer the dormitories where they can share the constant society and the excellent spirit of the student body. No, we do not have to go out and drum up students for Graceland College.

Again, the buildings are in a good state of repair, and the institution is in fair way to do better work than ever, if this incubus of debt could only be lifted. The books in the office are in perfect shape so that any "leakage" or weakness in management can be detected at any time. Graceland has twenty boosters now to one ten years ago, and its work is gaining loyal friends every year. Why not give it a lift now when needed most?

God grant the day when the church will remove this handicap of financial care from Graceland, so that its trustees and professors can devote their entire energies to making our college not only a greater blessing to the young people of the church, but also a beacon light to the world—a standing rebuke to those who delight to say that our people are an "ignorant set" who prefer an unlettered ministry, who in turn believe they have but to open their mouths and the Lord will fill them.

GOD OR MAMMON, WHICH?

God our heavenly Father holds in store for his people many pleasant and valuable surprises, if we pay due regard to what has been given us through the spirit of revelation--not only that which comes through our accepted Prophet to to the church in general; but what has come to us at our stake and district conferences and reunions, as well as at our local prayer meetings; and through the preaching of the word under the power of the Spirit.

Paul says the manifestations of the Spirit is to profit those who are exercised thereby, and for the blessing and edifying of the children of God, as well as for their instruction. And though coming under the head of diversities of opera-tions, it is the same Spirit working, to all. in all. In this I refer to bona fide, God-given manifestations, such as bring with them the evidences of their truth.

All the manifestations coming from our heavenly Father through his Spirit will be in harmony with his law; it matters not if coming through the weakest vessel, who with trembling limbs and stammering tongue delivers the message given to him, if bringing to those who have the right of discernment, granted through the gift so choice and of priceless worth to God's servants -the witness and evidence of its divinity, it will stand the test of time unborn.

Sentiment has its place among us, and at times we think too large a place and too wide a scope. It certainly has when it over-rules law and spiritual counsel, and clashes with wisdom in carrying out the purposes and law of God.

The buildings erected and dedicated by solemn prayer to God, and the service of his people, should ever remain as sacred as upon the occasion when thus dedicated; and the purpose for which they have been built should never be forgotten.

The house of God is not the place for boisterous ughter or noisy applause. The house of God laughter or noisy applause. is not the place where entertainments of a character calling for the letting loose of the spirit of merriment should be permitted. It is not seemly; it is opposed to every reference the Father has ever made to his house of worship, and the con-dect of his people. "My house shall be called the house of prayer," said the Savior to those who were using it for other purposes. Christ was offended at the conduct and purpose of those who departing from the original counsel of God, relative to the use of the Temple; and he cleansed the house of its offenders.

We have been admonished upon several occasions that the Master was not pleased with the methods employed, and obtaining among us in the use of the houses erected for his worship: for the raising of funds for local expenses and indebtedness. Suppers, socials, ice cream parties. etc., and we might include some of the entertainments which have sailed under other headings. Will the end justify the means in resorting to these questionable methods to raise money?

Are the God-given laws relating to our church finances insufficient and inadequate to meet legitimate demands? Must the Lord relegate his commands to some dark corner while his people use other methods to carry on the work which bears his name?

"O, foolish saints who hath bewitched you. Are ye so foolish having began in the Spirit, are ye now made perfect by the flesh?" Paul had just such foolishness to correct as we find pre-vailing among us now. The same writer addressing the saints at Corinth, (see 1 Cor. 11th chap.) refers to deplorable conditions existing in the church. Feast-making, instead of preserving the sacredness and sanctity of the house of the Lord, turning a solemn service to one of shame, and thus driving the Spirit of God away from them, Paul's instruction to the saints upon this occasion was timely, and should not be lightly considered in the light of what we have at times witnessed, not so much upon the occasion mentioned in his letter, but scenes enacted in the house of God which border on the same conduct.

The wise man said "He that refuseth instruction, despiseth his own soul; but he that heareth reproof getteth understanding." Again, "Apply thine heart unto instruction, and thine ear to the words of knowledge." It is far better to heed what has been given, than to see how far we can trespass upon the mercy and longsuffering of the Father by the exercise of unwarranted license.

"The gladsomeness of youth," is not to be forgotten, but the gladsomeness mentioned by the Master in his revelation to us does not mean such scenes as we upon several occasions have witnessed in, or adjacent to the house of God. Boisterous, loud, and prolonged laughter is condemned by the Lord without even reference to the place; and if not sanctioned by him in any place, at any time, it surely will be condemned by him when carried on in his house by his people.

"Let everything be done decently and in order," wrote the Apostle Paul, and apostles of our day have given advice after the same order. Socials among our young people should be encouraged and provided for, including some not so young, if for no other purpose, to keep matters pertaining to such occasions within the limits of moderation. Wisdom and the fear of the Lord should govern our actions and direct where such seasons of merriment should take place. I do not think wisdom will direct such matters to the house of the Lord.

Sentiment may step in and over-rule our better judgment saying, "O the young people must have a good time sometime, and why not have the church for it?" "It is just a young people's party." Why not? Because the house of God was never dedicated for frivolous merriment.

Money needed for church buildings, repairs, additions, etc., should not be raised that way. There is one system provided by God in his law for meeting the financial demands of the work; this is the law of tithing, free-will offering, and consecration; and there should be no departure from God's law for sentiment's sake, or for any other sake.

"Bring all the tithes into the storehouse," saith the Lord, and the burden placed upon the sisters of baking pies, cakes; and the labor necessary to furnish the amount of ice cream crammed down the throat of saints at such un-godly hours as many of our "socials" are held, will be considered unnecessary for the raising of funds for church purposes, and will be objectionable to the Lord, and the building up of Zion and its redemption.

Let the call "to come up higher," be a strong appeal to our spiritual ideals, and the elevating of the soul to a nearness to God where more of the divine food will be sought, and the source of supply found; and thus co-operate with God in all of our endeavors to further his cause, and leave to the effectual application of his law, the meeting of all legitimate necessities. Find or places than the house of God for socials and other amusements, and when arranged let them be free, and no monetary consideration be attached

SLANG AMONG GIRLS AND BOYS.

Slang does not become either girls or boys. is bad enough in boys but far more revolting among girls. And yet we have the testimony of the principal of a high school that girls and boys of otherwise refined demeanor inadvertantly fall into the use of such language. He even claimed what we could scarcely accept, that slang phrases are well nigh as common among school girls as are wen fight as common among school girls as school boys. He designated some of the phrases as follows: "You bet," "No you don't," "That's a pretty how d' ye do," "Did you ever?" "You don't come it," "Bosh," "Well, I never," "All in your eye," and so on. There is a long list of such words and phrases that should be remanded to the saloon, instead of tolerating them in the school or home. They appear far more objectionable when employed by females than they do when employed by males, for a refined delicacy is expected of the former class, which is not expected of the latter, though it should be. Really coarse expressions appear coarser when they fall from the lips of a girl.

Then, extravagant language usually company with slang. A young lady said of a certain young man, "What a splendid looking young fellow." There is no doubt that some young men are more attractive to certain parties than the aurora borealis; but there is a better way of describing them. "Splendid is a good word to apply to the Northern lights. "What a horrible voice that man has," said a young woman of a preacher to whom she had listened; and 'horrid" hats and dresses, not to mention other things, are common with this class. That some preachers have unpleasant voices is true, and no one will deny that queer things appear under the name of hat and dress, but it is far more appropriate to apply the term "horrible," to the assassination of a president.

Young people are likely to venture beyond slang and border on profanity. Instead of letting their "yea be yea, and nay, nay," and heeding the divine lesson, "Let your speech be always with grace, seasoned with salt," they employ strong expletives, omit the "grace," and season their conversation with pepper instead of salt. In this category must be put such words and phrases as: "Gracious," By "gracious," "I vow," "My goodness," "My soul," "By jingo," and many more that approximate to profanity.

Dr. Peabody said in an address at a female seminary, "There is a great deal of swearing among young people who would shudder at the very thought of being profane. The Jews, who were afraid to use the most sacred names in common speech, were accustomed to swear by the temple, by the altar, and by their own heads; and these oaths were rebuked and forbidden by divine authority.

"I know not why the rebuke and prohibition apply not with full force to the numerous oaths by goodness, faith, patience, and mercy, which we hear from the lips that mean to be neither coarse nor irreverent in the schoolroom, street, and parlor; and a moment's reflection will convince any well-disposed person that in the exclamation, ,'Lor,' the cutting off of a single letter from the consecrated word can hardly save one from the censure and penalty written in the Third Commandment.

"But I say unto you, That every idle word that men shall speak, they shall give account thereof in the day of judgment. For by thy words thou shalt bejustified, and by thy words thou shalt be condemned."—Matthew 12:36,37.

"The spirit of the conference is what the stay-at-homes want. Send us your paper," writes one sister. It will be our effort to supply this want to the best of our ability.

Bro. Henry C. Smith of Summerville, Mass., sends a dozen subscriptions for the conference daily. How many are you going to send?

Dear Ensign:— Will write to tell of the progress of the Bourbon Branch. Bro. Barraclough came up from St. Louis and ordained Bro. Wright to the office of elder and Bro. Fred Whiteside as priest and Bro. Chas. Mitchel as teacher. We now have a corps of live, energetic workers and we have preaching services every Sunday at cleven a. m. and seven p. m., also Sunday school at ten a. m., and prayer meeting on Wednesday night. We have certainly been blessed with a great degree of the Spirit and I sometimes wonder how our Father can do so much for us and be so good to us when we have done so little for him. If we would only stop and count how many sacrifices we have inade for him and then count the blessings we have already received the latter would out Bourbon, Mo. many sacrinces we have made and the latter would out number the former so much we would certainly be surprised. So many of us think when we have been baptized prised. So many of us think when we have need not hands into the fold we are done, we can sit with folded hands and let Jesus do the rest. But hasn't he done enough for us? He more than died for us. He bore the separation of the for us? He more than died for us. He bore the separa-tion of the Holy Spirit; In his agony he cried out, "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" Think of how he suffered so that he sweat as it were drops of blood, and why? Can we think for one moment it was because he feared the pangs of death? I say no, a thousand times no. It was that the Holy Spirit was to ithdrawn from him and he should bear the sins of the whole world.

Let us "go on unto perfection," and not wait for some one else to work out our salvation, for Paul says the righteous shall hardly escape. Bro. F. M. Smith made one statement that has indeed been a great help to me. It was this: "Jesus never asks us to do one thing but what he has done it before us." So we see if it is ever so hard, he knows just how hard it is as he tried the way before us and so he will cive us enough of the Spirit to before us and so he will give us enough of the Spirit to strengthen us for the task. Things that once were hard strengthen us for the task. Things that once were hard to bear and would overcome me for the time are now easy to be borne and I count my trials and temptations all joy and wish I was strong enough to bear more than I really can. I am growing stronger in the faith and knowledge of the gospel and know Jesus Christ and am known of him. Ever praying for the welfare of Zion,

A sister in the faith,

Mrs. R. E. Wright.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR CORRESPONDENTS.

M. L. Shoemaker, Lucerne, Kas.—Although I felt it my duty to do so for years I did not see my way clear to unite with any church until last fall. After becoming thoroughly convinced of this gospel through the preaching of Brn. J.D. Shower and Alvin Knisley, I with three of my associates were baptized December 14 by Bro. Knisley, and about one week later my wife and five others were and about one week later my write and nive others were baptized and shortly after two more making twelve in all. We now have prayer meeting every Thursday night and God does wonderfully bless us. We have a union Sunday school and work together with others, and hope to bring many to the light of the gospel. Others are interested in this work.

Goran M. Shearer, Sr., Walker, Mo .- The Ensign is a great help to me and when I read the many letters from brothers and sisters all over the land I feel that I ought brothers and sisters all over the land I feel that I ought to say something from this part of the Lord's vineyard. When I am all alone reading and trying to study the gospel I am made to feel so happy, and again when I think of having so little preaching it makes me quite sad. I study the Bible every night until eight o'clock and then have prayer and retire. I love this gospel, it is worth more to me than the whole world. I want to help all I am able to, but am poor and old—72 years, but I am trying to keep above all manner of sin, and to please God. I hope to soon be able to pay the remainder of my tithing.

Mrs. J. M. Bozeman, Salco, Ala.—I have had many blessings conferred upon me through prayer and faith. I once had rheumatism so that I had to walk with a stick, but Elder Slover came and administered to me and now I am well. Can he not visit us again? we are anxious to see the elders.

Have had another operation on somewhat better now. Have had another operation on my eyes and my doctor says I shall see well. I still have peace with God and faith in the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ. I believe if the saints will pray for me I shall come out all right.

Wm. Bumgardner, Allendonia, Ohio.—I will try to help the sister answer the matter about prophets. Read Matthew 5:17, and Acts 17:18; 3:22; Ephesians 4:10,11. I haven't been in the Lord's church two years yet but I am ready to give a helping hand. Let us take the Lord's word and not man's. We have no church here, and only three members.

Mrs. M. J. Phipps Spaun, San Antonio, Texas.—On March 4th I will be 82 years old. God has promised me that my days should be lengthened out and that strength should be given according to my needs. # "WHEN WE KNOW NOT THE PRICE TO BE PAID, WE DARE."

When I read this closing sentence in an editorial of the "Woman's World," I thought of several recent occurrences in our own town, where the chief characters concerned were our own girls, I mean church members.

A slip of a seventeen year old, an orphan, came here from a small town "way off." She worked as a servant girl; she was very earnest and prayerful, even as concerned her boy friends. Finally she became engaged to one, who tried to ruin her. They parted.

Through some freak of chance perhaps, others of similar type became her friends. Her name became tainted. She changed her residence meanwhile. She was alone, poor, had shifting employment; the church helped her, but one day she obtained money under a false pretense, that of leaving the state.

Acting on this suspicion, she was followed all one day in Kansas City, by a church representa-tive—of those whose duty it is to protect and see to the welfare of such an one. She was found waiting and watching on one of our corners, as the city bound cars passed her one by one. But she finally took a car, evidently having decided that the "expected one" had gone on; for she was plainly waiting on some one.

When she alighted in Kansas City at the Post Office, a man from our town met her. He took her suit case, and leaving it at a checking stand, they separated for a time. She shopped here and there through a large department store, frequently returning to a certain spot to watch and wait. The store detective assisted in keeping sight of her here. Finally the same man met her at said spot; they lunched together at a restaurant; and toward evening, they arrived near to a rooming house.

Here the man pressed something into her hand, it was money undoubtedly; she went a few doors, and with her suit case entered the house, he going on in another direction.

Our tired and excited "detective" hastened on a few blocks to the Board of Public Welfare Headquarters. Here he told his story; obtained the services of a lively and earnest young woman detective, and back to the rooming house they came. They entered, and an elderly woman met them.

The detective entered the parlor alone, where the tired girl was sitting head back and eyes The detective accosted her familiarly and by her given name, and soon amazed the girl by her knowledge of all facts concerning her case. The girl wept and acknowledged much concerning her present plight, and past experiences.

But when it came to returning to the Welfare Building with her friends, she could hardly be persuaded, but gentle threats won out. Poor child! With the detective, she went up stairs to her room and got her suit case, and the three returned to the Board of Public Welfare, where she endured more questioning.

The questions and replies were given before a "Notary Public;" she acknowledged no wrong on her part but did acknowledge severe temptations, implicating several men friends. Evidence was later obtained which proved that two of these, from personal acknowledgement to church authorities, had deliberately plotted and attempted to ruin the girl.

Well, the result of the day's work was this: the child was sent to her sister in the 'way off little town, on the evening train; the church supplying her fare. She was hatless, we might add, but glad, so glad of the opportunity to get away. Her things were sent her later. Letters of thankfulness were received in a few days from her and she is now happy and contented and welcome in her sister's home.

These men and the one with whom she went to this "resort" (for such it proved to be) were very active with inquiries as to her whereabouts, for some time.

The Young Woman's Department of our Auxiliary with its "on the quiet" and earnest efforts will help to avoid a repetition of such circumstances as this. No doubt this day would have on the beginning of the lonely girl's downfall. And the newly organized Auxiliary Employment Bureau is calculated to help the young avoid the pitfalls of the large and wicked city so near at hand.

A second incident: One of our church business men heard several rough young fellows of the town, as they stood about his store, planning and arranging whereby they would succeed in obtaining the company of one of our real good girls. He immediately sent her mother word by his own mother. Needless to say, they are fright-ened and shocked and will guard and conduct themselves accordingly.

Times are not like they used to be. Girls in their sweetness and innocence are not safe any longer. They can be sweet and innocent still. Yet they must be early and sufficiently taught concerning themselves and then of the "greatest evil" which threatens the young of both sexes continually now.

A third incident: Another of our young girls was waiting in the station here, for a train, bringing a visitor to her home. A man accosted her and in her timidity and inexperience, she had soon answered his questions concerning her home, her father, his business, her school; if she had ever had a beau, or ever gone alone to "the city." When told "no" to this, and that her father always accompanied her to Kansas City, he asked her if she'd not like to go alone to the city occasionally and have a good friend there who would meet her and show her a good time whenever she came!

Frightened, she now left him abruptly, and hurried to the side of an elderly lady sitting across the room, who quickly cautioned her to not let that man talk to her, as she would get into trouble. He had followed her from window to window and here and there as she tried to evade him. Had she been alone in the room, and so near train time (within five minutes at the last) no one knows what might have happened to her. The means of the devil's agents are so subtle, so brutal. Warn your girls!

Let them share from their babyhood—up, the realities of the "family wash, and cooking, and mending, and brooms and dust-cloths, etc. Don't let just one mother do it, or two, but let all meet together, and plan together, and work together, that the temptations which come so strong to the child with the born love of pleasure (as weterm the world's joys) to fight with, and no desire to wash dishes, etc., (and maybe no knack for housekeeping at all), will be offset to a large extent, when she realizes that her girl friends all have these things to do!

Then when their time for leisure does come, the mothers will have time too. Time to entertain the "bunch" at home occasionally (and enjoy it); or to go with their daughters on the many outings which they would otherwise take alone. Mothers now 'days miss much of a girl's companionship because of their false ideas of what is necessary for their pleasure and exercise and cultivation of mind and body. The girls do not realize now, so much as they will do in few years, how much they would enjoy or would have appreciated the mother being one in their pleasure trips, a car ride to the city, or one as a guide on their "club's" weekly vacation "hikes," etc. They do not expect it now, because they have no reason to, perhaps; but their need is the same. They will never resent a mother's presence; but will enjoy it. But begin early!

Mothers ignorantly cheat themselves of "time" to personally supervise and enjoy a blessed "chumship," which is intended to prove a safeguard against much evil.

Temptations will come to all; but remember, "When we know not the price to be paid, we dare."

THE APRIL EXPONENT.

In glancing over the many good things in the Exponent for April, 1914, we notice a fine article from the pen of Elder J. A. Tanner, pastor of Central Church, Kansas City, Mo. It takes up in an able manner the normal work of the auxiliaries, and gives special consideration to the Bible normal in use by the teacher training department, which has been severely criticized by some of the elders. About two years ago, the conventions appointed a com-mittee to get out our own Bible normal. Bro. Tanner not only shows liberality and breadth of thought, but offers helpful suggestions to the writers of the new nor mal book. And he gives them from the stand-point of mal book. And he gives them from the stand-point of a pastor, who is interested in the training and education of the young. We advise you to read this article. You will enjoy it. It is in the Sunday School-Religio De-partment of the Exponent.

A good mild drink as substitute for coffee and tea (coffee especially) can be made by parching barley, rye or wheat, barley or rye preferable, if available hulless barley is best. Grind coarse before parching or parch whole then grind; (sifting out and casting away the very finest inproves it); parch until quite brown or dark but don't char it. Boil it longer than coffee. Use a clean, well glazcd vessel. By adding a little you may reboil it several times before emptying the grounds. A very small piece of butter assists to prevent boiling over. Serve as you would coffee but don't drink it too hot.. "There's a reason." A fruit jar makes a good airtight container for the parched grain. Don't let it loss its aroma. To break off the coffee habit mix in a little coffee until you have acquired a taste for this drink. For parching use a family quired a taste for this drink. "Strengthen me Lord and attune my lay Unto thine angel choir's sweet refrain.
O may I henr it in the night again—
The silent night, snow wrapped, happy, gray,
With assurance of a blessed day Because thine angels have ministered to my pain.

"I feel it yet,—the holy joy, the solemn hush,
The calm deep strength that comes from thee.
My head bows low before thy throne, by faith—
And thoughts too great to speak, through my soul rush;
My heart sings, glad, though pain may crush,
My soul rests calm, all unafraid in thee.

OBSERVATIONS ON THE TREND OF THE TIMES.

In the beginning was the gospel preached through the Son. And the gospel was the Word, and the Word was with the Son, and the Son was with the Son, and the Son was of God. The same was in the beginning with God. All things were made by Him; and without Him was not anything made which was made. In Him was the gospel, and the gospel was the life, and the life was the light of men.

—John 1:1-4, Inspired Version.

In the light of the foregoing it must be assumed that the gospel which was gould with sumed that the gospel which was ordained "in the beginning" when "the Son was with God," was sufficiently perfect and complete in its adaptation to all the necessities of all men. The universal application of the gospel is repeatedly declared in the Scriptures, as also its unchangeability, and there has been no people in any age of the world but who have had the same need of its light and life in all the common affairs Whenever men have not found in the gospel the remedy for every ill, and the guide to perfect ideals of life, it is because they have either failed to make the application of its principles to their lives, or that the gospel which they have applied is an imperfect substitute of the gospel of Jesus Christ.

The Church of Jesus Christ is the organic body through which the gospel operates upon earth, and its function is to make the application of the gospel not only to the individual lives of men but also to the collective life of the world. To do this the church must have a perfect organization, Christ being at the head and having actual and direct power of direction and supervision, giving power and authority to its officers, and confirming their work upon those to whom they minister. It must again be assumed that the plan of organization provided by Christ was fully adequate for all the purposes of the gospel, the perfect gospel operating through a perfect organization for the establishment of perfect conditions.

The importance and preciseness of the work, and the great magnitude of the purpose designed, necessitates an organization clothed with divinity. Any organization will not do. Man's organizations can not fulfill the divine purpose. Even could it have a perfect gospel, an imperfect organization would make it non-effective. organization of the Church of Jesus Christ is delicately adapted to the exacting work designed of God, and man dare not interpose his own wisdom in such a way as to change it in any degree without impairing its efficiency and consequently frustrating the divine plan.

But what of the multitude of churches calling themselves after the name of Christ to-day? Are they working out in the world the transformation designed of God? Is God working through them in the accomplishment of his purposes? If so, why is it that the churches have been losing their hold upon the masses of the people? It is admitted on every hand that the Christian organizations are out of touch with the people, and strenuous efforts have been made of late years to renew confidence by making an appeal upon the basis of sociology and other things which were previously considered no part of the church work. It seems that after several hundred years of trial the churches have been weighed in the balance by the world and are found wanting. Time will yet reveal their standing before God.

As showing one of the causes leading to a lack of confidence and respect for the churches by the common people, the following from a sermon by the Rev. Franklin Spencer Spalding, Bishop of Utah, before the convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church in New York last fall, is in point. He was speaking to an audience of wealthy men who were "living not upon wages, but upon profits or rent or interest," and called attention to the fact that the church was mainly supported by the donations of the rich by money derived from profits, etc., and which the wage earners felt had been drawn from the toil of their hands, causing them to feel that the church was not in sympathy with them. To quote:

I fear that more generous offerings to the Church, as long as the Church is the agent of the rich, will do little toward solving the industrial problem. Sometimes I am almost afraid that larger sums spent on charities and organized religion may still further alienate the workers from the Church. Those greater gifts must come from the profits, the rent, the interest of the rich, and the class-conscious workers hat; the system which produces first and forement interest profits and rent and duces first and foremost interest, profits and rent, and pays wages with what is left.

When the wage scale is worked out, it is worked out on the basis of the bare necessities of life. Now, in cases so rare that they may be neglected, religion is not reckoned as one of life's necessities. Therefore wages do not supas one of life's necessities. Therefore wages do not sup-port religion. If religion is supported it is supported out of profits, not out of wages. It is, therefore, in the judgment of the class-conscious worker, a gift of the rich made possible through plundering the workers. If the Church is endowed it is supported by past plunderings. Therefore, self-respect requires the class-conscious worker to repudiate organized Christianity as a charity which that same self-respect forces him to despise. It has no conection with the justice for which he longs, but which he knows he must strugel for himself. he knows he must struggle for himself.

The attitude of "the church," according to this noted minister, is not a pleasing one, though we are aware that it is not a universal one, but it gives one reason for the alienation of the masses of the people from "organized Christianity," and shows the ineffectiveness of the churches in meeting the needs of the world. The only reason for such a condition is that the gospel of Christ has been perverted both as to the correctness of things taught and as to the application of such of those teachings as were true. In many instances the truth of God has been made the instrument in the accomplishment of human and selfish purposes. Human institutions have substituted the one perfect church of Jesus Christ, and they have built themselves up by the teaching of the truth perverted though it may have been. The development of the times is forcing these things upon the consciousness of these institutions, awakening them to the fact of their inadequacy in meeting the world's need.

Many are looking for a crisis in "Christianity" in the near future, the nature of which is not defined. We too believe that the world is approaching a crisis, and the time of teeting is already begun. Creeds centuries old have been laid upon the shelf as useless because the enlightenment of the times has shown their error and weakness. Churches are also under judgment and are being largely abandoned both by the learned and the unlearned. The contending forces of light and darkness, truth and error, right and wrong, struggling in the world are proving the true character of all things, and truth is made to shine more brightly, making apparent the darkness of error.

The parable of the wheat and tares points to a separation of the good and the bad in the time of harvest-the approaching end of the world-and the signs of the times indicate that that time has come. The parable also shows that the kingdom of God will be extant at that time for "The Son of Man shall send forth his angels, and they shall gather out of his kingdom all things that offend, and them which do iniquity." (Matthew 13:41). Through all the turmoil and confusion of the world the hand of God is working to consummate his purposes in the breaking down of evil and error and exalting righteousness and truth, and while the purifying fires may fiercer grow, the truth will not suffer but will endure all,

God has decreed that righteousness shall increase and cover the earth, and His work of cleansing will be a mighty work. The "Word" of the gospel will be applied to the affairs of men without defect or error, through the divinely organized church, and will be the means of bringing about the ideal and perfect conditions described so beautifully in the Scriptures. Wickedness will be destroyed, "Every plant which my heaven-ly Father hath not planted shall be rooted up," and Christ will reign over the whole earth. Then will the "Word" find its full exemplification in the lives of men, and men will be glorified in truth.

The Ottoman Government has granted a concession to a French Company to build waterworks to supply the city of Jerusalem with water from the springs of Ain-Pharah. The company will install twenty free drinking fountains in the thoroughfares of old and new Jerusalem, for the benefit of man and beast.

This company-Perrier and Co., will also construct five tramways or street car lines within two and a half years, extending as far as Bethlehem. Also to provide electric lights for the city and furnish light to homes and business houses. The concessions cover a period of forty years, at the end of which time the plants and improvements become the property of the municipality.

Bids have been solicited for the construction of a railway between Haifa and Jerusalem, via. The general conference of the church opens at Independence, Mo., April 6th, being preceded by the convention of Zion's Religio-Literary Society April 2, 3, and the convention of the General Sunday school Association April 4, 5. The first issue of the daily will appear April 6th and will contain reports of the conventions. Subsequent issues will give the news of the conference. and observation have taught us that it is unsafe to predict what the conference will be, or what changes it will bring forth in the personel and policy of the church. The most far-reaching changes frequently come the most unexpectedly. The daily will however bring the news fresh to your door and keep you in touch with the movement of the great church in its annual assembly.

It consists of a tract of about three acres, on the east side of which stands the little frame church of the "Hedrickites." The rest of the land is set in grass and shaded with maple trees. Yesterday the officers of the Hedrickite Church, complying with a request of the Women's Civic Club of Independence, agreed to plow up much of the land and plant flower beds. Some more trees will be planted in places where they will add to the beauty of the tract. The "Temple Lot" is on the south side of Electric Street. INDEPENDENCE, SECOND BRANCH. Sunday school had an attendance of 275, collection $6.89.

Since the 15th we have been treated to a feast of gospel sermons. The speakers have been alternately Brn. H. O. Smith and F. A. Smith. They have set forth the true gospel, and instructed the saints in their duties to God. The most of the time up to Sunday evening was taken up in this effort to make plain our duties to God, since which, the efforts have been along the lines of obedience to first principles. Must say the speakers have made a grand uccess in their efforts.

Bro. H. O. Smith told us we should seek happiness that true happiness could be found only in doing right.

On Monday evening Bro. F. A. Smith met one of the largest congregations that has ever been in the south side church. The choir of the First Branch led by Sr. Anderson attended this service, and acceptably rendered two authoms: "The Lord is Exalted," and "The Voice of Jesus." Other singers from the First Branch have asof Jesus." Other singers from the First Branch have as-sisted with solos, duets, etc., at different times. There is also an eight piece orchestra under the leadership of Bro. Losey and Sr. Clara Curtis. The meetings will continue over next Sunday.

Dear Ensign:-I left home last July for Washington Dear Emsign:—I left home last July for Washington C. H., Ohio, near where I was born and where most all of my relatives live. I visited with them some four weeks expounding the gospel both in public and private. I then went to Wellston, Ohio, preached five times and then west of there to Wainright, preached eight or nine times with some interest. From there I went to Hazael, Ohio, where I met Bro. C. E. Bozarth and we labored in that where I met Dro. C. F., Bozarta and we labored in that region of country about two months, preaching, teaching, organizing, and otherwise doing what we saw was in need of being done. I never met a more hospitable people, willing to do all they could. We secured the town hall at Staunton, about five miles from Washington C. H., and held seven nights with good interest and good crowds. and ned seven nights with good interest and good crowds. The M. E. minister came to us one day and said he understood my father was a Mormon. I said to him, "No Sir, Brigham Young once belonged to the Methodist Church. Did that make them Mormons?" and he said, "No." I then said: "So did Brigham Young once belong to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints and left us and started that above the interest in the Normal Latter. and left us and started that abomination in Utah. Now why should we be called Mormons any more than the Methodists?" He treated us very kindly and we preached in his church twice. Let the conference I held forth at Crabtree and near Mc Dermott for six weeks with good success. I was very much blessed in all my labors in that country. In very much blessed in all my labors in that country. In all my labors I sought to please God and not man and felt his livine approval in so doing. Preached seventy-six sermons, assisted in and attended seventy-six other meetings while in Ohio. Since coming home I have preached locally with Bro. John Lovell of Holden, Mo., and Bro. Lee Quick. I have defended this gospel work for forty-two years and over and I feel like at least de-fending it twenty wears longer. fending it twenty years longer.

ars longer.
Your brother in the gospel,

Dear Ensign:—I am still in the faith and am still trying to overcome self. When I look back over my life and think how many blessings we as a family have received it makes my heart rejoice. So many times have I sought God in prayer and he has answered. We have four little boys, the oldest one is just seven years and he says he boys, the oldest one is just seven years and he says he can hardly wait till he is eight. He seems to understand the gospel now. I think if we can raise them to love and obey, and keep the commandments of God we have gained a great thing. I am president of the Religio and am trying to keep it alive. It has been thirteen years since I obeyed the truth. I love to read the letters in the Ensign. I can feel the spirit of those letters.

Bre F. C. Keek were with we about time so and code.

Bro. F. C. Keck was with us a short time ago and spoke under the power of God for over an hour and the time seemed to pass so fast. I am always glad to take care of the servants of God; I would love to have the pleasure of taking care of Bro. James Moler again as we miss him so much. Would be glad to hear from any of the saints who would wish to write to me. May the Lord bless all people that love him is my prayer.

Thomas L. McCormick.

Frederick, Kas., March 9.
Editor Ensign:—It is quite a while since my signature has appeared on your pages. While I do not appear in the press as frequently as in former years, my unslackenergies are applied perhaps more tellingly along other lines.

During the past winter I have revised and grently extended my "Doctrinal References," adding a number of new subjects as well as increasing the number of references and texts to some of the subjects already contained. So that I think it is now just simply a packed bomb and a weapon which prepares the defender of the faith for all comers, and with which, when its acquaintance is fully formed, terrible execution can be done. I gathered texts and subjects from some of the brethren whom I adjudged as both inclined to and increnious in the collection and comas both inclined to and ingenious in the collection and comas both inclined to and ingenious in the collection and com-pilation of texts, extracting the essence and pith and as-sembling them in a maner of arrangement as to enable facile and ready grasp. This is not a day of the talking of tenets—should not be—of the elaboration of non-vital side-issues, to see how long we can talk on nothing—but rather of the application of ourselves to immediate and existing needs right before us. We can dispense with theological rope-walkers. Knisley donates manuscript to the Church this time and "Ensign" will have it out by General Conference if possible. I collected data from papers and books and some from such brethren as J. F. Curtis and in fact, from anyone, Saint or sinner, where I thought they had something worthy,

I am preaching nightly in the Christian Church here, where I ordained a brother to the eldership yesterday,
Bro. T. C. Turpen, the Section foreman of the Prisco, into whose earnest and energetic hands I shall be happy whose earness and energetic mans I shall be supply to resign the work upon leaving here. We are greatly handicapped in Western Kansas in re-gard to getting north and south on account of nearly all the railroads running east and west. If returned to this field I expect to use an automobile henceforth which will come to my rescue against this impediment.

Saints disposed to "gather to Zion" must remember that Kansas is about as much Zion as Missouri. Why? Because Independence "is the center place" (D. & C. 57:1). Can you think of a center without a circumference? Can you think of a center with a circumference all on one side? Had such been the case the Lord would have said Inde-Had such been the case the Lord would have said Independence is on the edge or side. Zion must therefore extend as far west of Independence as it does or will east. And, pertinent to this consideration, permit me to observe that Kansas at the present time holds out some decided advantages over Missouri. Real estate, gas and electricity are much cheaper. In Kansas City, Kas., I believe gas is about 25 cents or 35 cents per 1,000 feet, electricity about 3 cents per kw. And I was told by Bro. John Tucker, an active worker in the Quindaro Branch, who is in a position to be well posted in the real estate question, that you have to go but very little out of Kansas City, westerly, to find land way, way below he common demand on the Missouri side. His address is No. 646 Minnesota avenue, room 3, and I know he would jump at the chance avenue, room 3, and I know he would jump at the chance to inform any inquirers.

Yours for economy and a good General Conference. Alvin Knisley.

Editor Ensign:—This has been a delightful winter in Oklahoma and all the men in the field have been doing good work. The conference year has been a great one for this State. Our work has been bitterly opposed in some good work. The consequences this State. Our work has been bitterly opposed in some places, and this has done us no hurt so far as we have been stated to be a supposed to the projudice. The good places, and this has done us no nurt so far as we have been able to make an effort to remove the prejudice. The good Lord, who sent us to labor has surely been with us. The writer has baptized fifty-two the past year. And the first day of the new conference year, March 1st, I baptized four noble people into the kingdom. We have a good interest at several new places, and if we only had the men terest at several new places, and if we only had the men we surely could reap a good harvest the coming year. Our conference at Eagle City was a good one, the Good Spirit being manifest, directing in the work at that place. Our little new church is a neat meeting place for the little band of noble people we have there, and many are inter-setted whom we hope to soon see come into the church.

We aim to have the reunion at that place in the first half of August, it being a central place for our neeting, and we hope to see a goodly number present.

We are surely sorry to announce the death of Lulu Bearshield, the Indian girl who attended the General Condeath of Lulu bearsment, the indian girl with attended the General Cor-ference a year ago, also the Missouri Valley Reunion. She died at Darlington, Okla., last Thursday; her funeral ser-mon was preached by Philip Cook. And the next day the writer preached the funeral sermon of an Indian baby, John and Inc. Bull's little boy. These are good people and they aim to be baptized in April.

I am sorry to say we have been compelled to neglect the Indian work the past year. I wish we had a good man and wife to locate among them and do mission work teaching them to care for themselves and their children.

Earnestly praying for the success of the work of the ord. Your co-worker, Hubert Case.

Springfield, Mo., March 6. Dear Ensign:-The South Missouri District Conference Dear Ensign:—The South Missouri District Conference is a thing of the past, but the pleasant time enjoyed by all, and the excellent good spirit which prevailed during the sessions, and the inspirational sermons preached by Brother J. W. Rushton, our missionary in charge, was of a very high order, and he surely won a place in the confidence of all who heard him. Considering "eec was no advertising done, his congregation was real good for the four nights he remained, and I am sure if he ever returns to this, the Queen City of the Ozarks, he will receive a royal welcame and no doubt draw a large crowd. J. W. royal welcome and no doubt draw a large crowd. was a little surprised to find a much larger town than he had any idea of finding, and I'm sure he found an earnest band of Saints who tried to make a missionary feel wel-

The business of the conference passed off without a ja and the priesthood meeting held was a source of informa-tion to all. Our jovial Henry Smart, of Joplin, Mo., Presi-dent of the Quorum of Elders, was present and added a number to the list. We were sorry to lose Brother and Sister Lue Gray from our numbers. They moved to Jop-lin. We shall miss them very much. We are sorry also to have to report the sudden death of Brother and Sister Lowic Hurber', four restricted by the Merca Sec. Louis Hughes' four-months old baby. It was a fine healthy looking child and its death was a sad blow to the young parents.

This city is taking on the appearance of activity preparatory to spring work. The old court house and the National Bank Building will give way to sky-scrapers this summer, also the part of the square that was burnt out is now being built and the prospects for work appear good. In bonds,

Editor Ensign:—Your issue for this week is fine, especially your editorial on "The Resurrection of Jesus," Bishop Bullard's article, "God or Mammon, Which?" and the well written article entitly, "Some Facts About Colleges," by Gomer R. Wells. I think I have never seen or heard a better plea for Graceland College, but at least one or two points are not clear, at least to me, and I believe not clear to many others.

By far the larger per cent of the members of the church are too poor to scad their children to Graceland, even if it were self-sustaining. This is not all. A goodly per cent of them cannot, and do not give their children a high school crucation on account of poverty, and the hard strain they are continually under to gain a living.

A small per same are able to send their children to Graceland by some other college, and pay an average of $20.00 ner student on pure flowers by Rev. Wells and $30.00 per student, as per figures by Bro. Wells, and leave a balance of $205.00 to be paid by those who can't give their own children a high school course at home, because of financial disability. Many feel that it is a necessity for all in the family to contribute what they can in the way of help, and so the children go to work, and so nine out of ten, in all probability, will never see and so nine out of ten, in all probability, will nover see Graceland College, and a still smaller number will enter it as students.

Our brother thinks it "passing strange that certain people who would not think of allowing some one else to pay their worldly taxes are calmly allowing other brethren in the church to bear their share of temporal responsi-bility in furnishing funds to build up the kingdom of

Well, that is somewhat strange, but there are other strange things. For instance: a branch has ten men, heads of families, and only one of them is able to send heads of families, and only one of them is able to send his son to college, and he does so. He pays $60 of his son's expenses, and "calmly" allows the nine poor brethren to "bear" the burden of paying $205.00 more, which is necessary to give his son a "higher education," while theirs have hardly a hope of getting a high school course; and in fact many do not get it. Is not this also strange? Is it not unfair? Does any true saint want other people to pay for educating his children in college any more then be wants them to nay his "worldly taxes?" If so. to pay for endang his clinter in conge any more than he wants them to pay his "worldly taxes?" If so, what excuse can he give for it?
"We spend" says Bro. Wells, "over four hundred millions annually in order that rich and poor may share alike lions annually in order that rich and poor may share alike in obtaining a primary education."

Yes, and in addition, according to the figures furnished by the brother, we spent, in 1912, over eighty millions in order that the rich and well to do might share a great deal better than the poor in obtaining a "higher education". Is there no way to remedy this favoritism? Why tion."

Of course, in the universities with large endowments, the extra expense is, or has been, borne by rich people who have endowed them, but with many others including our Graceland, it is not true; But the poor are taxed for the benefit of their neighbors who are better off than themselves. "Are we in favor of that plan?" Nay, verily.

Talk as much as you please about giving the children of the poor classes, equal opportunity with the well-to-do, but as long as hundreds and thousands of saints who cannot possibly send their sons and daughters to college, are continually importuned to help educate those who are in better financial condition than themselves, there will be some who think it is "passing strange."

some who think it is "passing strange."
If this matter could be so changed that as many of the poorer children, proportionately, as others could get the benefits of the college, then the day for which Bro. Wells so devoutly prays would be already dawning, and "the handicap of financial care" would presently be lifted from our college.

We are told that $2.70 per member would pay all expenses of the college, including its present indebtedness, amounting in all to about $180,000. Now suppose we all pay up that have not, (I think I would owe but little) then I know a widow who with her two daughters, who belong to the church, and the girls are about ten and twelve years of age, and there are two smaller children, and this family with a very small income would have to pay $8.10, and the chances are neither one of these children will ever be a student in any college.

I also know a brother who is the president of a bank, (not in Independence or Lamoni), and he also has large areas of farm lands, besides other property, and he would pay $2.70. He has one foster son who may enter Graceland or some other college.

"This amount is not arbitrary." O no; but when a former call was made some years ago, and fifty cents per member was suggestively asked for, I remember one branch in Minnesota that readily responded and most of them gave fifty cents, no more no less. Some families had to make a sacrifice to pay it, but others "calmly" let them do it, and gave no more themselves, though able to do so. Is that equal? We all know it is not. Why resort again to unequal ways? That we should do so is "passing strange" to me.

But there is one point made very clear in Bro. Wells' paper, viz: Graceland College, (and all others without endowment) cannot be run except at continual loss to the chaowment, cannot be run except at continual toss to the church. On this point the church at large was uninformed, when, in the early nineties, they by vote of general conference, decided to build a college. If all could have forescen that it was a perpetual burden they were voting on the whole, for the benefit of a very few, educationally, who knows what the vote might have been? If all had the whole, for the benefit of a very tew, educationally, who knows what the vote might have been? If all had been apprised of the fact that a very small per cent of the church's young people would be educated, by paying $60 per year themselves, and the rest of the church would be asked to make up the deflicit of $205 per year for each student, then these gentle hints that they were wavering in duty to the work of God, might have more effect. But her rank and file did not know, I feel sure. Whether any others did I can't say. But now we know. Until such time as Graceland College receives an endowment we must go down in our pockets and bring up whatever deficit is lacking, or increase our tithes and offerings so the bishop will be able to support the college as he does the Saints' Homes, and other institutions. The only remaining alternative is,—close the college.

Sentiment is against closing. We hate to say "we started to build, but was not able to finish it."

Justice is against running the college at the expense of those who cannot hope to ever have any educational benefit from it in order to benefit less than one per cent benefit from it in order to benefit less than one per cent of our church people, who need help the least. Justice is also against sending out pleas for so much per member, when ability and disposition are so different per member, when ability and disposition are so different among the membership.

Equity forbids the taking of the hard earned offerings of the poor and paying a deficit, large or small caused by the attendance at college of others in more favored circumstances. Its too much like a notice posted in one of the buildings of a very large university of which a young student recently told me; the notice read: "Everybody bring 5 cents to Mr. So-and-so and he will explain."

Let us explain before hand and if the people think the explanation is worth five cents they will pay it without

GLEANINGS FROM OUR CORRESPONDENTS. Mary Griffith, Des Arc, Mo.—I know this is the tru work of the Lord, and I trust in him and he doesn't leav me alone. He has blessed me in everything I do. I am poorly and desire Go.'s blessing and ask the Saints to

Mrs. Lizzie Baker, Flint, Ind .-- We have been so persecuted by a Methodist minister who has just closed a re-vival of three weeks duration and he repeatedly spoke of vival on three weeks duration and he repeatedly spoke of the Mormons and Latter Day Devils. So we feel that we must get in touch with the church and therefore are send-ing our subscriptions for three. Pray for us that we may have on the full armor of God and be able to conquer sin and the evil one.

E. L. Baskett, Bucklin, Kas.—We are among the isolated ones, but we are instructed and edified through your columns. We are trying to get the angel's message before the people. We secured a building on Main Street and fitted it up for preaching, and Brethen J. Arthur Davis and A. C. Martin came and preached for two weeks with very good interest, removing a great deal of prejudice. Those who attended have a better understanding of the work and the saints were edified and built up in the faith. These brethren are careful and conservative and have made friends. We want to get the tent here next summer, and would like to see them returned to this mission. We would like to he where there is a breach going but we E. L. Baskett, Bucklin, Kas .-- We are among the isowould like to be where there is a branch again, but we believe good can be done here by taking care of the elders. There is one other Saint here, Brother Charlie Redfield.

Emma Steckel, Lamoni, Iowa. We have had some splendid practical sermons at the Evergreen Branch by Brother J. F. Mintun, who spoke for two weeks mostly for the edification of the Saints. He certainly did tell us how we should live. I hope to live so that I may be called a child Edward Miller, Escatawpa, Miss.-We are of the Saints of God 'way down South, and we are trying to build up Zion and doing all we can to do the Lord's will. We have a good Sunday School and preaching by some one every Sunday. Brother T. U. Sherman is our president—a good Sunday. Brother I. U. Sherman is our president—a good and faithful man. We have just put away my aged father, who lived to see all of his family but two in the church. He died December 16th. I was called to his bedside Tuesday, a neighbor asked him if he would like an egg nog but he said "No." He said to me, "Son, long years ago I threw my tobacco and whiskey away to keep you children from prothing of the No." from partaking of it, and I will never set a bad example before you children." He was a good father to his family and his home was open to all the missionaries.

Mrs. W. E. Summerfield, Stewartsville, Mo .- I want to write a few lines to your interesting pages to let my friends know that I am still in the faith. It is sixty-two years since I obeyed this blessed gospel and I have never regretted it, but the older I get the better I like it. My path has not always been strewn with flowers, and I have had some very bitter trials to pass through. five sons and one daughter, and also my dear compan-ion, but through it all my dear Savior has been near to comfort and strengthen me. This winter I have been comfort and strengthen me. This winter I have been sorely afflicted with a broken arm, but through administration the Lord has taken away every pain and bringing sweet peace and comfort. I can truly say it is good to ing sweet peace and comfort. I can truly say it is good to be a Saint in latter days. I am very near 8½ years old, so you see I am living on borrowed time. I have my second eyesight and can read the finest print at night, and do feel so grateful for that, and every blessing I enjoy.

Mrs. J. G. Cole, Peoria, Ill. We love to read the news Mrs. J. G. Cole, Peoria, III. We rove to read the news from all parts, it is like getting our weekly letters. It, cheers us. Though we have a small branch here it can't take the place of the Ensign. So wishing the Ensign suc-cess for I know it has been of great benefit and help to many, especially to the scattered Saints.

drew Ruoff, St. Joseph, Mo .- I send you one dollar again that you do not stop coming to our house becauser we like to read the good sermons, letters, and articles. I never regret the step I, with my wife, took fourteen years ago in joining this true church, and I see now in what great darkness we were before. We have received many blessings since we worship the Lord in spirit and in truth. My wife was healed of bleed poisoning sowent. many blessings since we worship the Lord in spirit and in truth. My wife was healed of blood poisoning several years ago through faith and the laying on of hands. At the same time our little boy was sick and the doctor said it was appendicitis and he must go to the hospital, but T thought not. He had not been baptized and I went to Brother Pickering and Brother Roberts to baptize him. When he was confined to his bed I asked him, 3'Carl, have you any more pain?" He said, "No. papa, I am well." The Lord is merciful to his people, and to him be thehonor and glory forever. honor and glory forever.

R. K. Ross, Mound City, Mo.—The work here is making-some progress this conference year under the labors of Brother J. W. A. Bailey mostly, as he has been the main missionary in our district. He is a plain and forceful expounder of the gospel, and he tells it in such a plain way with the use of his chart that the people can see the truthfulness of it. He has baptized eighteen since he has been with us. Brother W. E. Peak is with him now at Maitland, Mo. We hope these brethren will be returned to this mission and that many more will be gathered into the kingdom as there are a number of others believing the message.

SOME REASONS WHY. By Elder Jasper O. Dutton.

Having placed the three standard books of the church, known as the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants, in the hands of new members who liave obeyed the first principles, frequently they have many questions regarding cortain provisions they find in the law and especially along temporal lines. For example:

cially along temporal lines. For example:
Verily thus saith the Lord, in addition to the laws of the church, concerning women and children, those who belong to the church, who have lost their husbands or fathers: Women have claim on their husbands for their maintenance until their husbands are taken: and if they are not found transgressors they shall have fellowship in the church; and if they are not faithful, they shall not have fellowship in the church; are not faithful, they shall not have fellowship in the church; yet they may remain upon their inheritances according to the laws of the land. All children have claim upon their parents for their maintenance until they are of age; and after that, they have claim upon the church; or in other words, upon the Lord's storehouse, if their parents have not wherewith to give them inheritances. And the storehouse shall be kept by the consecrations of the church, that widows and orphans shall be provided for as also the poor, Amen—Doctrine and Covenants 82: 1,2.

Behold, this is what the Lord requires of every man in the storehouse.

Behold, this is what the Lord requires of every man his stewardship, even as I, the Lord, have appointed, or shall hereafter appoint unto any man. And behold, none are exempt from the law who belong to the church of the living God; yea, neither the bishop, neither the agent, who keepeth the Lord's storehouse; neither he who is appointed in a stewardship over temporal things; he who is appointed to administer spiritual things, the same is worthy of his hire, even as those who are appointed to a stewardship, to administer in temporal things. Yea, even more abundantly, which abundance is multiplied unto them through the manifestations of the Spirit; nevertheless, in your temporal things you shall be equal, and this not gradgingly, otherwise the abundance of the manifestations of the Spirit shall be with-hold—D. C. 70:3

The general church is quite exercised at present over the matter of finances and quite an effort is being made throughout the church to liquidate the general church debt. This certainly is in keeping with the instruction of the Lord, and will cause thought which will in turn be a source of education to the church in general. However, if we drop back to our former ways or rut of finances, how long will we be out of debt, unless a greater effort and sacrificing spirit are shown by one and all? The writer hopes there will be a marked improvement.

But the objector may say, "What greater effort or sacrifice could there be made?" Let us reason a little. We read further:

The Spirit saith further unto the church assembled and at large: In order that the temporal afters of the church may be successfully carried on and the accumulated debt of the church in its respective departments where debts have accumulated may be properly met and in due time discharged, the church is instructed both as members and as the body at large, to avoid the unnecessary building of houses of worship or places of entertainment, or otherwise expending the tithes and offerings of the church in that which may not be essential unto the continued onward progress of the general work; and both in private and in public expenditure carry into active exercise the principle of sacrifice and repression of unnecessary wants; and thus permit the accumulation of tithes and offerings in such amounts as may be needful to properly discharge the existing indebtedness of the church as a body, and the Spirit counseleth the church in this regard. –D. C. 130:7.

The Lord here advises that the general church

The Lord here advises that the general church not engage in building unless absolutely necessary, also as members we are instructed to be careful in the expenditure of money. This has caused the writer to think and led me to certain observations and conclusions. We believe that the Lord not only desires that the indebtedness of the church be paid but also that the provisions of Doctrine and Covenants 82:1,2 be carried out, viz: That a "storehouse shall be kept" "that widows and orphan's shall be provided for as also the poor."

From section 70:3 we learn that God will hold us all accountable regarding our "stewardships over temporal things," and the degree of spiritual power is also contingent upon the degree of equality among the members: "Nevertheless in your temporal things you shall be equal, and this not grudgingly, otherwise the abundance of the manifestations of the Spirit shall be withheld."

Again from section 180:7, we learn that the church can do and accomplish more than it has been doing and that by so doing the debt of the general church can be met and "in due time discharged," but in order to do this "the church is instructed both as members, and as a body at large, to avoid the unnecessary building of houses of worship or places of entertainment," "that which may not be essential unto the continued onward progress of the general work, [missionary work to my mind] and both in private and in public expenditure carry into active exercise the principle of sacrifice."

April 16, 1907, the church in general conference assembled adopted resolution number 593, viz:

That we discourage members of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints from holding membership in any society or order which requires the taking of oaths or the entering into covenants or obligations to guard the secrets, purposes, or doings of its organization. But still we find that not all have heeded this

But still we find that not all have heeded this advice, and still hold membership in such orders. Now if every man or woman thus holding membership would repent and turn all the moneys of the church membership thus being expended into the coffers of the church, known in the law as "the storehouse," what a difference it would make in our finances; to say nothing of the oaths, entering into covenants or obligations to guard the secret purposes, etc., which according to the Inspired Translation, Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants are condemned.

Jesus said: "But I say unto you swear not at all; neither by heaven for it is God's throne; nor by the earth; for it is his footstool: neither by Jerusalem; for it is the city of the great King. Neither shalt thou swear by thy head, because thou canst not make one hair white or black." (Matt. 5:34-36). Now it is a fact well known that all secret orders swear by the body as a whole, or by this part or that part of the body, for different obligations and thus are found in direct opposition to Christ Jesus and his gospel.

Again, a certain part of the membership are today paying out thousands of dollars yearly in life insurance and accident policies, while the church, if properly supported, as the law of God requires is the best insurance company on earth, because it is God's way of providing for his saints. But some say: "Well, whenever the church is ready to give my wife $2000 should I be taken by death, I am willing to put my trust there." But, dear brother or sister, the law of God says that the "needs" of his saints shall be supplied, and many times more than this demanded, only represents selfishness. Others say: "Well, when ever the church is ready to make a move along that line I am willing to take the step, but not till then." But, dear brother or sister, you are a part of the church and when you move that much of the church has moved, and the church can only go as far as the members let it.

But the objector still holds: "We must wait a while till we can be in better financial condition." But when, O when, can the Bishop do the real work of the chiurch unless we fall into line and cease putting our trust in the arm of flesh? Answer, never!

Now no one can deny but that one of the first duties of the church as organized in the days of Christ was the care of the poor, widows, and orphans; yet today in many cases the widow's cry for assistance goes unheeded, because the Lord's storehouse is empty. Not a thought but that the Bishopric would gladly do, had they the means at hand. Why not now one and all free ourselves from the yoke not pleasing to God? Paul says:

Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers; for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness? and what communion hath light with darkness and what concord hath Christ with Belia!? or what part hath he that believeth with an infide! and what agreement hath the temple of God with idols? for ye are the temple of the living God; as God hath said, I will dwell in them and walk in them: and I will be their God and they shall be my people. Wherefore, come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord and touch not the unclean thing: and I will receive you, and will be a Pather unto you and ye shall be my sons and daughters saith the Lord almighty.—2 Cor. 6:14-18.

My dear brother or sister, have you stopped to think that when you become a member of any oath bound society you stand pledged many times, in a social as well as a financial way to support men and women who in the sight of God are wicked? Whose ideas of right and wrong are not governed by the teachings of Christ? Who love those that love them and disregard the higher teachings of Christ to "love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you, and persecute you"? And even if they were the very best of people in all cases and in every way, it is not God's way of providing for his people. What is true of oath bound societies is very largely true of all life insurance and accident insurance societies and accident insurance societies.

Now the Lord has said, "Nevertheless, in your temporal things you shall be equal, and this not grudgingly; otherwise the abundance of the manifestations of the spirit shall be withheld."
(D. C. 70:3). If we apply this rule to present practices relating to insurance, we should see to it that not only every widow has the common necessities of life but she should have (?) the means furnished her so she can have her children's lives insured and they in turn have her life insured to protect them. The last part of section 86 reads:

And all saints who remember to keep and do these sayings, walking in obedience to the commandments, shall receive health in their naval, and marrow to their bones, and shall find wisdom and great treasures; and shall run and not be weary, and shall walk and not faint; and I, the Lord, give unto them a promise that the destroying angel shall pass by them, as the children of Israel, and not slay them. Amen.

Do we believe this? At the Southern Wisconsin Reunion held at Madison, August, 1908, the following was given through Apostle J. W. Wight then minister in charge:

Unto minister in charge:

Unto my people now assembled: what more can I say than to you I have said? Time and time again have I warned my people. I have told you of storms and pestilences of famines and trials that are to come upon the earth and have warned my people that they should come out of the world, that they be not partakers of her plagues. Many of you now present will remember that I said unto you in times past that my people came together from time to time and told of their love for me r. esparating forget the statements thus made. Having thus turned aside from the warnings thus given and not having done as commanded many of you have not been protected from the storms and dangers that have come upon the earth. Let my people now be warned and take heed thereto if they would be protected by me. Come unto me in humility of heart and be faithful unto the commandments I have given unto you and I will both bless and protect you etc.

Now the Lord has said, "Nevertheless, in your and accident insurance do you want than these promises? Much less of becoming members of any oath bound societies which the church has advised against.

In second Corinthians 13:5, we read: "Examine yourselves whether ye be in the faith: Prove yourselves. Know ye not your own selves how that Jesus Christ is in you except ye be repro-bates?" We may illustrate the position of the church and orders of men thus: A wide river represents the stream of resources pouring into the church storehouse. The river is made up of many small brooks and rivulets which are the various means of contributing to the church funds, viz: Tithing, offerings, help to the poor and needy, collections, etc. Along the banks of these streams live the people who send the material down these various waterways to supply a large grist mill on the main stream, and from it all necessary demands on the church storehouse are supplied. By and by a race is extended into the river which takes about half of the water to run a knitting factory just built a short distance above the mill. The light machinery of the knitting factory is easily run by half the water but what about the old mill? It can hardly turn its wheels to say nothing of grinding out a grist. The knitting factory represents the secret orders, life insurance, accident insurance, etc., which so depreciate the stream of resources flowing into the storehouse, that the storehouse can not be made to store up as it should and supply the rightful demands made upon it. The only remedy is: the removal of the race and knitting factory so that the stream of income into the church storehouse may be unobstructed and the old mill, ordained of God, be able to perform its work.

It would seem but right and proper that in order to have the confidence of the saints more fully established in the order of God, that a sufficient sum of money be, set aside, for such demands as might be made upon the storehouse in the care of the poor, orphans, and widows. Thus having a real storehouse as provided in the law of God. Malachi 3:10, reads: "Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it." Doctrine and Covenants 51:4, reads: "And again, let the bishop appoint a storehouse unto this church, and let all things both in money and in meat, which is more than is needful for the want of this people, be kept, [something real] in the hands of the bishop."

Now may the saints of God so live as to prove true the saying of Christ: "But wisdom is justified of her children." There are doubtless many more reasons why. Let each one examine and see which you are helping most to run, the church of God or the knitting factory. Evansville, Wis., Feb. 25, 1914.

THE SABBATH.

By Efder W. A. Sinclair, M. D.

Much discussion has been entered into regarding this question, the particular day set apart, and how to observe it. Many have been put to death by reason of a non-observance of it; while others have been flogged and maimed for slight offences there on.

It appears from sacred writ that in the beginning God blessed the seventh day, and sanctified it, and commanded that a due observance of it be recognized by the children of men.

There is very little said about the Sabbath from Adam down to the days of Moses, and we are led to believe that the observance of the Sabbath was different previous to the days of Moses.

In Exodus 31:17 God says: "For in six days the Lord made heaven and earth, and on the seventh day he rested, and was refreshed." Therefore the Lord required that all his creatures should rest one day in seven.

We find very little to establish custom on, during the first two thousand years. There is no doubt that the Sabbaths were kept, for tradition points strongly to it, but we are not informed as to its usual observance.

When the law was given to Moses, the Lord required a very strict observance of the Sabbath, during the generations of the children of Israel.

It is recorded thus: Exodus 31:12-17, "And the Lord spake unto Moses, saying, Speak thou also unto the children of Israel, saying, Verily my Sabbaths ye shall keep; for it is a sign between me and you throughout your generations; that ye may know that I am the Lord that doth sanctify you. Ye shall keep the Sabbath therefore; for it is holy unto you; every one that defileth it shall surely be put to death; for whosoever doeth any work therein, that soul shall be cut off from among his people. Six days may work be done; but in the seventh is the Sabbath of rest, holy to the Lord; whosoever doeth any work in the Sabbath day, he shall surely be put to death. Wherefore the children of Israel shall keep the Sabbath, to observe the Sabbath throughout their generations, for a perpetual covenant. It is a sign between me and the children of Israel forever; for in six days the Lord made heaven and earth, and on the seventh day he rested, and was refreshed."

Notice here that this covenant was between God and the children of Israel, and not between God and the world. It is a special covenant to the children of Israel, and had nothing to do with the world then, or now.

There were other Sabbaths given to Israel, beside the seventh day, the Sabbath was to be kept most scrupuously, no work of any kind could be done thereon; it was so strict that it became a burden; and so the Lord provided another Sabbath for worship, which was to be kept forever, (Leviticus 23:34-39). "Speak unto the children of Israel, saying, The fifteenth day of this seventh month shall be the feast of tabernacles for seven days unto the Lord. On the first day shall be an holy convocation: ye shall do no servile work therein. Seven days ye shall offer an offering made by fire unto the Lord: on the eighth day shall be an holy convocation unto you; and ye shall offer an offering made by fire unto the Lord; it is a solemn assembly; and ye shall do no servile work therein. These are the feasts of the Lord, which ye shall proclaim to be holy convocations, to offer an offering made by fire unto the Lord, a burnt offering, and a meat offering, a sacrifice, and drink offerings, everything upon his day: Beside the Sabbaths of the Lord, and beside your gifts, and beside all your vows, and beside all your freewill offerings, which ye give unto the Lord. Also in the fifteenth day of the seventh month, when ye have gathered in the fruit of the land, ye shall keep a feast unto the Lord seven days: on the first day shall be a sabbath and on the eighth day shall be a sab-

You will notice here that the Lord appointed the first day of the week, the Sunday of Christian worship, as the day of solemn assembly, but this seems to have been forgotten before the days of the Christ, so that when he came to Jerusalem, the seventh, or Sabbath day was the all improtant day, and they guarded it so scrupulously that every offense against it they wished to visit with death.

Shortly after this time however, we have several days, or in fact every day set apart by some nation as a day of worship. For instance, we have Sunday appointed by the Christians, Monday by the Grecians, Tuesday by the Persians, Wednesday by the Assyrians, Thursday by the Egyptians, Friday by the Turks, and Saturday by the Jews.

So that every day was taken and became a day of worship for some people. Even in our own church at one time there arose a controversy over the Sabbath question, and it could not be decided to the satisfaction of all, until the Lord spoke concerning it; which is recorded in Doctrine and Covenants 119:7.

"And the Spirit saith further. Inasmuch as there has been much discussion in the past concerning the Sabbath of the Lord, the church is admonished that until further revelation is received, or the quorums of the church are assembled to decide concerning the law in the church articles and covenants, the saints are to observe the first day of the week commonly called the Lord's day, as a day of rest; as a day of worship, as given in the covenants and commandments. And on this day they should refrain from unnecsary work; nevertheless, nothing should be permitted to go to waste on that day, nor should necessary work be neglected. Be not harsh in judgment but merciful in this, as in all other things. Be not hypocrites not of those who make a man an offender for a word."

Jesus was not so strict in the observance of the Jewish Sabbath as the Jews thought he should be, and for that reason they rejected many of His teachings. He wanted them to learn that the Sabbath was made for man, and not man for the Sabbath; but tradition had so warped their minds that it was impossible for them to see other than that which had been an oppressive burden to them all their lives.

With Israel it was necessary for the Lord to specify a day certain, that they might worship Him, and not only that, but He must place a penalty on the non-observer in order to have them keep the day set, but he never, never once in all the Bible story calls that day the Lord's day. It was not the Lord's day; it was a rest day entirely.

As cited from Leviticus, the first day of the week or month was the Lord's day, a day of worship, and as we shall see, and I cannot think that it just happened so, that it is the day on which all the chief events particular to the church in the days of Christ happened.

Mark 16, 9. "Now when Jesus was risen early the first day of the week, He appeared first to Mary Magdalene, out of whom he had cast seven devils."

Jesus rising the first day of the week, institutes the resurrection of the dead on the first day, or the Lord's day.

Luke 24, 33-36. "And they rose up the same hour, and returned to Jerusalem, and found the eleven gathered together, and them that were with them. Saying, The Lord is risen indeed, and hath appeared to Simon. And they told what things were done in the way, and how He was known of them in breaking of bread. And as they thus spake, Jesus Himself stood in the midst of them, and said unto them, Peace be unto you."

Here again, on the first day, or Lord's day, we have Jesus breaking bread with two of His disciples; we also find that the brethren are gathered together, as was their custom, and Jesus appears to them in their gathering.

John 20, 26. "And after eight days (Sunday) again His disciples were within, and Thomas with them: then came Jesus, the doors being shut, and stood in the midst, and said, Peace be unto you."

This establishes the fact that the custom of the disciples was to meet the first day of the week, the Sunday, or Lord's day. And Jesus meets with them again. Why did He not meet with them during the intervening time? The fact seems obvious to me, Sunday was the day they were in the habit of meeting, and possibly the only time the entire number of them would be together.

Acts 2. The Day of Pentecost fell on Sunday. the first day of the week, the day after the Sabbath. So that we have the first great endowment of the Holy Spirit on the Lord's day.

The saints of Troas were in the habit of meeting on the first day of the week, as we have it recorded in Acts 20, 6-7. "And we sailed away from Philippi after the days of unleavened bread, and came unto them to Troas in five days; where we abode seven days."

And upon the first day of the week, when the disciples came together to break bread, Paul preached unto them, ready to depart on the morrow; and continued his speech until midnight."

In 1 Corinthians 16, 1-2. "Now concerning the collection for the saints, as I have given order to the churches of Galatia, even so do ye. Upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store, as God hath prospered him, that there be no gatherings when I come."

Here again, we find that the general gathering of the saints was upon the first day of the week, and that they should make the gatherings of their money for the poor upon this same day. Why should they elect this day? Simply because they were all together on this day, and it would make the gathering easy.

Revelations 1, 10. "I was in the Spirit on the Lord's day, and heard behind me a great voice, as of a trumpet."

Here we have one of the greatest revelations ever given to man; the picturing of the whole transaction of the dealings of God with man in the probationary and millenial periods, and certain dealings under the post-mortal existence.

This day seems to have been selected by Jesus Christ as the day of worship, previous to His crucifixion, and it is thus that we find the disciples gathered together on the first and eighth days. It was no haphazard affair, but their regular day of gathering.

Whether the order of days has been strictly followed and we have the same day now as our Sunday is beyond the absolute knowledge of man. The supposition is that we have; and yet when we read the statement as recorded in the Doctrine and Covenants, Section one hundred and nineteen, paragraph seven, we are at a loss to determine with exactness whether we are right or not. The intimation there given is that one day should be kept, and as we are keeping Sunday, keep on observing that day, unless revelation shall change the day.

The first day is the Lord's day, and the only difficulty that I can see is that we may not be right in our appointment of the days as they now stand, and the first day may be some other day than that which we now suppose it to be.

A FEW COMPARISONS.

The infidel has found fault with the whole religious world because it has so many translations of the Bible. Men in their own wisdom have made many translations of the inspired word, and being without inspiration have made many mistakes. In other ways also mistakes have entered into the sacred record, mostly by errors in copying in the early centuries, and by the wilful acts of men. For the errors in copying and the changes made by wilful hands the translators are not responsible, as their duty as translators requires them to translate the record as it is.

The Bible as translated and corrected by Joseph Smith by the Spirit of revelation, corrects many of these errors, and a careful examination of the work shows a large degree of inspiration. There should be agreement in the various translations of the Bible the same as in individuals, as Paul says in 1 Corinthians 1:10, "Now I beseech you brethren, in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye all speak the same thing, and that there be no division among you, but that ye be perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment." Only by the Spirit of God can perfect harmony exist, and only by the Spirit which originally inspired the writing of the word, can that word be corrected of all the mistakes which have come in through human weakness and wilfulness.

The office work of the Spirit is to guide into all truth, and under the light of that Spirit error is made apparent, and by its direction may be corrected. In taking upon themselves the work of representing God men have run without tidings and mistakes have been made, and only by a divine call and by divine authority can men represent him and then only by the help of that Spirit which leads to light and unity. Let us note a few passages from three translations.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR CORRESPONDENTS. Mary Bankester, Bayminette, Ala.—Bro. Swen Swensen was with us and preached two excellent sermons to a goodly number of outsiders, as well as Saints. We regret the loss of our dearly beloved brother, Elder W. L. Booker, who died at Robertsdale the 20th inst. He was to preach that night but as he sat down to dinner he fell from the table and died immediately. Dear old "Uncle Billy" as everybody called him, has gone to his rest. I desire the prayers of the Saints that I may hold out faithful.

Nannie Myers, Crowell, Texas, R. 1.—If there are any saints near here will they please call on me. I have never lived where I had the association of the saints, and I would be so glad to meet some.

WINTER-NATURE'S RESTING TIME.

This article is one of several concerning kindergarten methods, which have been written by Sr. C. A. Smith of Independence—a former kindergarten teacher. Mothers will find herein, the foundation for good little nature stories. One of the very best ways through which we can early direct the trend, or the nature and class of reading a child will prefer as it grows, is by the kind of stories you read or tell it. Children naturally love to learn! they love facts. "Is it true?" and similar exclamations we meet unfailingly; and most children are plain-ly disappointed when we cannot guarantee that the story has at least been based on facts and could have happened

As our heavenly Father has provided the night for the rest and renewal of the tired tissues of our bodies; so has he provided winter for nature's rest time.

I wonder how many mothers realize that wonderful possibilities for an interesting, facinating and instructive study, lie in this subject of "Nature's Resting Time." It is interesting for the mother but far more so for the

We want our children to understand and comprehend We want our canaries to understant and comprehent the great principles upon which all nature works, for we want them to be happy, broad-minded and above all things reverent. We do not want them to feel that when it rains, it is simply hindering their play; but that the rain is sent for a purpose. So winter is sent for a purpose. In order to do this successfully we must talk and study the different conditions, when those conditions exist. For the different conditions, when those conditions exist. For instance: children much more readily and forcefully grasp the idea of seed distribution, when they see around them everywhere, seeds that are ripening and being scattered in the various ways provided by nature, than they would if you tried to teach about it in mid-winter, when no seeds were to be found.

In the fall, tell them how the trees send their sap de into the roots to protect themselves from freezing. Also how the scars left by the falling leaves are sealed up as a means of protection; and in winter show them the tiny leaf buds wrapped in so many blankets to keep out the

There are the roots of the trees, before spoken of, the seeds that have been scattered in the fall. spoken of, the seeds that have been scattered in the fall. The eggs and larvae of various kinds that are waiting to hatch into worms and insects. There are the eccoons of worms that are waiting to turn into moths and butterflies. Among these we find the queer little brown jugs made by the tomato worms that feasted in our tomato patches last summer. These will make the beautiful Polythamus Moth.

Then there are the earth worms sleeping in their little holes, some wrapped in leaves which they have pulled down through their hole. Somewhere down under the down through their hole. Somewhere down under the ground also is the Mr. Mole waiting and resting until the frozen earth softens up again. In the bottom of the ponds are the larvae of the dragon flies and the various water bugs, and around the ponds we find the holes made by the frogs as they went into the soft mud to find a resting place for the winter.

As we think upon this subject we can find any number of avenues opening up for study; any one of which affords material for several days talks with the little folks.

Possibly one of the most interesting studies along this line is that of the way in which the wild animals spend their time during the winter. Take the bear for instance; he crawls into an old hollow tree or buries himself in the side of a bank and sleeps all winter.

Then again, a most facinating study is that of the beaver. He lays in a supply of food for the winter, by Inen again, a most racenating study is that of the beaver. He lays in a supply of food for the winter, by carrying young branches of trees and sticking them upright in the wind, in the bottom of the pond, which his colony has caused to be formed by reason of the dam they have made. Then he builds himself a house in the water near the shore. These houses are built upon piles and are two, three and sometimes four stories high, with an arched roof on top. The walls are two and three feet thick and are plastered with mud, which the beaver car-ries on his flat tail. Through each floor is a passage and the top floor is always above the level of the water. Each house has two doors, one on the land side and the other

These are common topics, yet how many children there are who have never had them called to their attention in a systematic way, as all being a part of God's great plan for "Nature's resting time."

CONFERENCE MINUTES.

New York-Philadelphia District.—Annual conference was held in Brooklyn on February 21st, 1914. Officers elected for the ensuing year were: Ephriam Squires President: Walter W. Smith and Benjamin R. McGuire, Squires, Count pre; Herman N. Schwartz, Secretary; John Zimmerr In, Sr., Treasurer; Anna Zimmermann, Member of Libra; Board.

The enrollment of the District January 1st was 1865, showing a net gain of seventy-three for the ten preceding months. This membership includes two Patriarchs, one Bishop, three High Priests, twenty Elders, fourteen Teachers and fifteen Deacons, a total of seventy-five ordained men. During the preceding year a new church building was erected and dedicated in Philadelphia, raising the total of church buildings in the district to five. The value of these buildings, exclusive of furniture and fit-the conference recommended the holding of a reunion and adopted the report blanks issued by the general association

sociation. The business meeting was followed by a number of interesting meetings on Sunday, the 22nd. Special music was beautifully rendered by the district choir under the direction of the general church chorister, Bro. Albert N. Hoxie, Jr., who has accomplished wonderful work in the development of the musical possibilities in this district. The outlook was altogether encouraging and gave promise of greater results in the Lord's work than ever.

Kirtland District.—Conference convened in the Sai Chapel at Cleveland, Ohio, on March 7th and 8th, 1914. -Conference convened in the Saints' C. Russell, minister in charge; F. W. Ebeling and J. W. Topping, of the District Presidency presiding. A. Ahlstrom, Secretary. Announcement was made of the death of our beloved Patriarch John H. Lake, notice of which was immediately wired to Presidents Joseph and Elbert A. Smith by order of the conference. Statistical reports Smith by order of the conference. Statistical reports from twelve branches were read showing a total member ship of the district, including scattered members, of 1018

The report of Acting President J. W. Topping, evidenced The report of Acting President J. W. Topping, evidenced his activity in the district work during the past year, although hampered by his daily work. The Secretary reported having the new district records well under way and requested the assistance of the eldership in instructing the officers of newly organized branches regarding record keeping and reporting. Upon recommendation from the President provision was made for the organization of a new branch in Warren, Ohio. The report of Bishop J. A. Becker showed considerable increase in tithes and offerings collected during the past year. In the special offering for the church debt the district did not make so creditable a showing but the new year already shows bet-ter results in this regard. The tithing card system intro-duced last year worked nicely in some branches and will no doubt prove of considerable help through systematic effort. Elder R. Baldwin was elected President, Eben Miller, Vice President and Martin Ahlstrom Secretary. Provision was made for a fall conference to be held at New Philadelphia, Ohio, July 26th to August 9th. Eight were baptized and six men ordained during 'the conference. Provision was also made for a fall conference to be held at Kirtland, Ohio; the time of this conference to be set by the minister in charge and the President.

by the minister in energe and the Fresident. The following delegates were chosen to represent the district at the coming General Conference: Margaret Mc-Kenzie, R. Baldwin, J. A. Becker, Cecil Neville, S. Brown, Jesse Mac Hardin, G. Leon Burdick, Wm. Brewster, Mary E. George and Jas. C. McConnoughy.

The service on Sunday afternoon lasted for two and one-half hour and was a spiritual feast. Instruction and encouragement, were eigen through prophecies tongues.

SLAVES.

Men, whose boast it is that ye Come of fathers brave and free, If there breathe on earth a slave, Are ve truly free and brave? If ye do not feel the chain When it works a brother's pain, Are ve not base slaves indeed. Slaves unworthy to be freed?

Is true freedom but to break Fetters for our own dear sake, And with leathern hearts forget That we owe mankind a debt? No; true freedom is to share All the chains our brothers wear, And with heart and hand, to be Earnest to make others free.

They are slaves who fear to speak For the fallen and the weak; They are slaves who will not choose Hatred, scotling, and abuse, Rather than in silence shrink From the truth they needs must think; They are slaves who dare not be In the right with two or three.

—James Russell Lowell.

FASTING AND PRAYER.

In view of the appointment of Sunday, April 5th, as a day of fasting and prayer for divine guidance in the coming General Conference and for the welfare of the church in all the world, we offer the following comments.

No wholly acceptable service can be offered to the Lord without thought and care. Thorough sincerity is absolutely essential if our fastings and our prayers are to bring the results desired, and this requires freeing ourselves from the things that divert the mind and heart from God and a concentration of mental and physical power upon the effort to approach him. Where one's energies are divided, being exerted in several directions, he is not likely to succeed with an abundant success in any one, and this thought is emphasized in the scriptural statement that "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God, with all thy heart, with all thy might, mind and strength." Any service which is short of this must in some measure fall short in its results.

When the Lord is to be sought for a special purpose or blessing, it is essential that all the energies of one's soul be exerted in the attainment of it. A half hearted service will not do. for it is like the wavering faith which James says shall not receive anything from the Lord. Fasting is one of the means by which a concentration of effort is made possible. The virtue lies not alone in going without food for a time, but in the laying aside of the daily cares incident to its preparation, and leaving mind and body altogether free to carry out the one important object.

In referring to the service required the Lord urges his children to avoid sin, that they might "offer a sa vifice unto the Lord thy God in righteousness; even that of a broken heart and a contrite spirit. And that thou mayest more fully keep thyself unspotted from the world, thou shalt go to the house of prayer and offer up thy sacraments upon my holy day; for verily this is a day appointed unto you to rest from your labors, and to pay thy devotions unto the Most High.

So important is this work that the Lord says further: "And on this day thou shalt do none other thing, only let thy food be prepared with singleness of heart, that thy fasting may be perfect; or in other words, that thy joy may be full. Verily this is fasting and prayer; or in other words, rejoicing and prayer."-Doctrine and Covenants 59:3.

Fasting is a withdrawal of one's interest from the secondary and inferior things of the world and the flesh, and a concentration of all the energies of mind and body for the attainment of some specific blessing from God. Hungering from food is not fasting, and it is possible for the essential nature of a fast to be observed to a considerable degree without total abstinance from food, as is apparent from the preceding quotation.

Abstaining from food and at the same time indulging in other pleasures which divert the mind and heart from all that is spiritual will accomplish nothing. At a general conference some years ago we sought the company of a brother to dinner one Sabbath day when he informed us that he was "fasting." On inquiry as to where he would go to spend the time until the hour for the afternoon service he indicated a place and said, "I am going to look over the paper," pointing to a bulg-ing Sunday newspaper in an overcoat pocket. We asked which was the more detrimental to a spiritual attitude-filling the mind with the contents of a Sunday newspaper, or partaking of a light meal with singleness of heart? After a few moments reflection he answered: "I will go to dinner with you.'

On another occasion we had gone to a rural place with one of the elders to hold meetings Sunday morning and evening. It was a fast day and the time between meetings was spent with a family whose conversation was upon secular things to the utter exclusion of those things which would result in either intellectual or spiritual gain, the principal topic being the telegraphic reports of a prize fight which had just taken place in one of the western states. In vain did we repeatedly try to turn the conversation into upward channels. Being obliged through inclement weather and other circumstances to remain in the home of our host we felt that our fast had been broken, its holy purpose being frustrated through the enforced mental absorption of things altogether foreign to it. The occasion was not to us one of fasting and prayer, nor rejoicing and prayer,

Our point is this: that unless there is a refraining from the trivial and sinful things of the world, and so far as practicable from the ordinary cares of life, and a concentration of mind and heart upon the effort to approach God, there is no fast in the sense in which the Lord uses the term, even though food may be avoided. Fasting for spiritual blessing involves an avoidance of all things for the time being, which though otherwise legitimate, would hinder one's approach to God, or God's approach to him.

While the physical organs are taxed with the work of digestion and absorption of food, the concentration of mind and heart cannot be complete -all the mind and strength cannot be used in the one great effort to reach God. And further, the work made necessary in the preparation of the food, and consequent upon partaking of it, also takes thought and time, thereby denying those so required to labor the free opportunity of rendering a full and unrestrained service to the Lord.

A true fast covering any period involves keeping from the mind and heart, so far as circumstances will allow, the cares of life and things of incidental and trivial importance, and for the time being placing the physical appetites and enjoyments, and all worldly ambitions, in absolute subservience to the will of the spirit and the attainment of the divine purpose. Is not this possible for one day; if we have even a fair appreciation of the importance of the work of the General Conference, and the value of the church to a dying world, we will not fail to make it possible, and from every part of the land send up earnest, consecrated petitions in behalf of the Lord's work which will not fail in their purpose-

WAS JOSEPH SMITH RIGHT!

In an address delivered before the convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church in New York by the Rev. Franklin Spencer Spalding, Bishop of Utah, and recently published by the Episcopal Church in the minutes of the meeting, is found the following:

Surely there can be no doubt on which side the Church of Jesus Christ ought to stand when the issue is be-tween dollars and men. Shall not the Church set her face against a competitive system of industry which in-evitably involves the exploitation of men, women, and lit-tle children? She must surely stand for a social system the children? She must surely stand for a social system in which production shall be for use and not for profit, in which the worker shall be rewarded on the basis of the service he renders, and in which every child shall have a chance, not as an act of charity, but as a God-given right, to all that makes for a full and joyous and useful life. In a single word, the Church, if she is to be a real power in the Twentieth Conture, must cause to be received. in the Twentieth Century, must cease to be merely the almoner of the rich and become the champion of the poor.

This is to our mind sound doctrine, and represents the wisdom born of experience. It has not been until very recent years, when the need for something of the kind has been made so clearly apparent by the social unrest, that the Protestant churches have considered and taught such principles as these, true and just though they are. These things ought to have been taught always, but Protestantism is just discovering that fact. and finds that to hold its prestige with the world it must become the "champion of the poor," even if need be at the sacrifice of the rich,

If this teaching represents the wisdom of the Twentieth Century, in what light should it be considered when taught nearly a hundred years before by a young man who declared he received his wisdom from God? Yet it is a fact that the identical things here taught by Bishop Spalding were incorporated in the gospel taught by Joseph Smith as early as 1831, and which he sought to put into operation in the social and industrial life of the people but was hindered through wickedness and persecution which resulted in his losing his life. If Protestantism in this most enlightened Twentieth Century declares for a poor man's gospel, one in which there shall be equality of opportunity, in which selfish competition shall cease, in which each man shall work for the good of all rather than for personal gain, and in which proper provision shall be made for needful women and children and the poor; shall it call Joseph Smith an ignoramus, who gave just such a gospel to the world in the century before-as early as 1830?

A little more than a year ago, this same Bishop Spalding published a pamphlet in which he sought to prove false the claims of Joseph Smith divine direction. Little perhaps did the Bishop think that in making his notable address before the convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church that he was bringing forth evidences which supported the claims of Joseph Smith to divinity, for no one will concede-not even his followers-that the young prophet discerned those advanced principles by his own wisdom and without divine aid. This is but one of many instances of the adoption by Protestantism of the teachings of Joseph Smith, who in his day was so far in advance of the world that he suffered persecution and death for the very things which the world is now adopting.

PRESS NOTICES.

"The Haverhill Evening Gazette," and "The Haverhill Herald," of Haverhill, Mass., recently contained articles from Bro. William Anderson, setting forth briefly the history of the early church and the distinction between the Reorganized Church, and the Church in Utah. Bro. Anderson had held a two weeks' meeting there, and the articles were written to correct unfavorable statements appearing in the press, and cheerfully published by the editors.

Bro. William Johnson, president of the Seattle and Brit-Bro. William Jonnson, president of the Seature and Driving Columbia District writes from Seattle correcting an error recently published in many of the daily papers of the country. The reports told of the shooting of an officer by one R. F. Butterworth who was said to be a minister of the Reorganized Church and pastor at Seattle. Bro. Johnson says this man is not an officer in the Reorganized Church but is an irresponsible party. INDEPENDENCE ITEMS.

Through the kindness of very dear friends the way suddenly opened for us to attend the general conference, for we are very, very grateful, it having been seven years since we had such a privilege. We start on the 29th.

This ends another year of labor for the most blesed cause on earth and we can say it has been frought with cause on earth and we can say it has been frought with many blessings, far overweighing the trials. My dear companion though afflicted has stood nobly with me in the work, through whose effort largely I am privileged to attend conference. Feb. 20th I closed a six weeks' meeting at Hazledell and Weston, Ia., where I baptized eleven, three at Hazledell and eight at Weston. Then the 27th I went to Council Bluffs to attend conventions and conference, after which I stayed and continued meetings until March 6, with fair interest.

On the 7th went to Crosent, Iowa, to take Bro. Haden's place as he was called to Carson, to look after the work there, leaving a good interest at Cresent.

Editor Ensign:—The present writing finds me "way down in Tennessee," the land of tobacco and cotton. Corn down in Tennessee," the land of tobacco and cotton. Corn wheat and other grains grow here, but not so bountifully as farther North. Here, in many places the ground is so poor that one corn stalk in a hill is raised, instead of three and four, as in lowa and Illinois.

This country is very different in many ways from what we have been accustomed to. One would hardly believe there would be such a difference in different sections of the same land, as exists here. There is far more difference between conditions here and in the North, than there is between the Northern States and Australia. We almost seem to be in a foreign land, instead of only a few hundred miles from our home. dred miles from our home.

The country we have visited here is generally rough and hilly; soil is poor, and in many places great gullies or washouts are formed by the rains, whole fields being or washouts are formed by the rains, whole lieus being ruined in this way. This is a timber country; no prairie, and there is considerable timber still standing, principally oak, hickory, chestnut, walnut, poplar and ash. Much beautiful timber is being used for fire wood. The people here cling to the old fashioned fire-place, which consumes a lot of wood, and is anything but satisfactory to one accustomed to the modern American heater, for the face is scorched, while the back is chilled with the cold.

A peculiar feature of this country is the number of unpainted buildings, so many of which are all askew, crooked and leaning to one side, many apparently ready to fall down, because the foundations have given way, or posts rotted. The fences are often dilapidated, gates broken off the hinges. The interior of the houses are broken off the hinges. The interior of the houses are seldom plastered; sometimes they are sealed inside with matched sealing, but more often not, but are what we would call shells, with great cracks between the boards in both floors and sides, where the cold and wind find free access to the backs of those roasting their faces in front of the big fire-place. Windows are usually broken, in both dwellings and churches. We have been in few houses which have had no broken windows. Few doors have early leafer or getters, and where locks are used the have any locks or catches, and where locks are used, the knobs are usually broken. In many of the houses, a wooden button is all that is used to keep the door closed, thus neconsisting many an extra step to open the door. House thus necessitating many an extra step to open the door. House furniture is usually very limited, consisting generally of a few chairs, a stand, a bed, or generally two in one room, sewing machine and trunk, and sometimes a dresser; and usually there are some pictures on the wall. The floors usually there are some pictures on the wall. The hours are usually bare, and no books, papers or magazines in sight. Once in a while, we find a family who take either the Herald or Ensign, but many take neither. Instead of the family gathering around the library table of an evening, perusing magazines, books and papers, it is the custom in many homes to gather in front of the fire-place and dream and spit tobacco juice. This is sometimes and dream and spit tobacco juice. This is someti-indulged in by men, women and children, and even women grow to be expert spitters. And some who do not use tobacco, learn to spit. They have little idea how nauseating this habit of spitting is to one not accustomed to it. Right here, the church has done much for the peoto it. Right here, the church has done much for the people in this country. I think I can truthfully say that most of our members have given up the habit, and some are trying to give it up. I have not seen a cup of tea since I have been in the State, and very few of the saints indulge in drinking coffee. There are some few members, including some of the sisters, I am sorry to say, who continue to we the feltby these. tinue to use the filthy tobacco.

It is astonishing that people should subject themselves to such conditions in this age of advanced civilization. Many are deprived of the common necessities of life, to say nothing about luxuries which should be theirs to enjoy. Never before, did the necessity of a gathering place for the saints appeal to me as it has since my trip South. The only salvation for some people here, as I see it, is to move into a better country and I have not hesitated

Dear Ensign:—Last January I was called to this point, or rather, the call came last September and the work was to commence, and did, January 1st, when I came to this city and began an effort, together with the local force, to quicken the spiritual life of the branch. This we to quicken the spiritual life of the branch. This we sought to do by a special effort in the auxiliary services, —Sunday school normal class and teachers' meeting Mon-day nights, Religio Tuesday, choral Wednesday, and mid-week prayer service Wednesday. Then with special ad-vertising and music for the Sunday services we sought to quicken the life all along the line. Also, Friday night and Sunday at 2:30 p. m. with our branch president, Elder F. T. Mesle, and other of the local workers, we held cotmeetings in La Salle.

I did not feel that it would be for the best interests of the work to set aside these auxiliaries, and devote the of the work to set asket these auxiliaries, and devote entire week to preaching, but rather to work with and along all these lines, and to this end, as a portion of the Religio program, gave a short lecture on the subject matter of the Doctrine and Covenants, under the topic of "Our Church Discipline." Also assisted in other ways, as I could in each of these services.

Our work at La Salle was the direct outgrowth of the interest and effort of Bro. Montgomery (one of Niagara's deacons) and family, who live at that point. It looks now, as though the immediate result of their effort will be some "added to the Lord" in that place. I do not feel that in this I was doing spectacular work, but do feel that, with the combined efforts being made here, that an advancement was resulting. However, there but do feel that, with the combined efforts being made here, that an advancement was resulting. However, there was another element at work. One that we had not reckoned upon, and that had a little the start of us in its work, viz, an epidemic of small pox, and while we were at work, it, like the brook, was "going on forever" were at work, it, like the blook, was going on love-and increasing in volume as it did so. Accordingly, fore-seeing a general quarantine of all public places, and not wishing to be told to stop, we closed our church building here January 25th. This quarantine was declared a few days later.

My next point was Lockport, the home of Bro. and Sr.
R. T. Goodman. Here I held a week's series of cottage services, having some interest and leaving some believing reading.

My next point was Greenwood. I found a quarantine in force here, not against men, but dogs. "Rabies" read the posters, and the dogs wore muzzles or were tied. I found a little band of saints greatly in need of a shepand while the intense cold weather and much snow militated against my efforts here, still I felt a blessing, and that some good was accomplished.

At the evening service of my first Sunday here I no-ticed two gentlemen, and at the close of the sermon, shook hands with them. One of them informed me that he had attended an Easter service of ours in Salt Lake City, Utah. When I doubted he said, "Yes I did. I was com-ing from the Tabernacle and one of your men was speaking from an automobile and the Mormons were asking him questions." I said, "Well, perhaps you did." He asked, "Do you know that man?" I answered, "Yes, I am well acquainted with him. In fact I am the man." He said, "His name was Chase, Chase! I Jinks, you are the same man! I've been shouting all around this country what we was reased. We'll shelp, bands oraging and the same man! I've been shouting all around this country about you ever since! We'll shake hands again!" and we did. As Burdett would say "Which all goes to show" that this is not so large a country after all.

From Greenwood we ran up to Ithaca, to renew our acquaintance with our wife and daughter. The latter is in the University of Cornell, at that place. Of course, neither of them hide their gospel light, and the result was that while there, we were invited to deliver a lecture in one of the university halls, before the ". M. C. A. of Cornell, upon "Mormonism." Of course we did so, (March 6th) taking as our subject, "The Ideals of the Latter Day Saints, and their perversion by the Mormons of Utah." Following this we were invited to lecture before a Bible study class at the same place March 8th, and in both these talks, also in private talks growing out of them we feel that much good was done. Friday, the 18th inst, we received word that the quar-antine here had been lifted, so Saturday afternoon found us again on the ground.

Yesterday (Sunday the 15th) we had our first meeting here again, (unrestricted) and are preparing for a "Rally day" the 22d. Bro. Stone was with us yesterday and baptized two from Buffalo. He with quite a number of the Buffalo saints coming here for that purpose. day was had all through.

day was nad an through.

In all of my work here I experience the great pleasure of feeling that I have the co-operation of the local force.
They are able and genial workers, and I am hopeful of good results.

Sincerely and heartily in the cause I am your co-worker,

CURTIS-ELLMORE DEBATE.

This debate was held March 2d to 13th at Sparta, Mich Bro. J. F. Curtis affirmed our church proposition the first six nights; Elder William Ellmore of the Non-progressive wing of the Church of Christ, affirmed their church wing of the Church of Christ, affirmed their church proposition the last six nights.

It was interesting and educational as well. All who are acquainted with Bro. Curtis will rest assured that our side of the question was well looked after. He was wonderfully blessed while setting up the church, showing up the apostasy and restoration of the gospel.

Mr. Ellimore tried hard to show that there was no total apostasy by dwelling on "Let the wheat and tares grow till the harvest," (Matt. 13:30). He made light of the signs following the believer now. He tried to prove that they were intended, merely, to confirm the gospel when first established, then to cease with the death of the apostles. He attempted to show that they gospel was complete without the signs and power; that when the gospel was confirmed at Pentecost, the power ceased, thus be was confirmed at Pentecost, the power ceased, thus be-came separated from the gospel. He quoted, "What God hath put asunder let no man join together." Bro. Curtis nath put asunder let no man join together." Bro. Curtis showed that the gospel and signs were inseparably jo: 1 together, (Mark 16:16,17). He quoted Romans 1:16, "It [the gospel] is the power of God unto salvation," hence, "What God hath joined together let no man put assunder."

Bro. Curtis produced abundant scriptural evidence as proof of a total apostasy. He also read from several Campbellite writers, such as Warlic, Chism, Franklin, and Life of Campbell, all of which agree that there was a total apostasy.

Mr. Ellmore, referring to the "man child" of Revelation All: Elimore, reterring to the "main child" of Revelation 12:5, made sport of the name "authority" that Latter Day Saints gave the "baby." Bro. Curtis took up the Campbellite version, the "Living Oracles," and read the name they gave the "baby." "A masculine son." Said he "Would it not have been too bad if it had been a "feminine son?"

In our estimation, Bro. Curtis made only one failure. He could not get the Campbellite debater to leave Pentecost long enough to affirm the church of which he is a

Mr. Ellmore's hobby was, "No church until Pentecost." Mr. Ellmore's hobby was, "No church until Pentecost." He conceded that the terms "church" and "kingdom" were synonymons. Bro. Curtis showed that the gospel was preached by John the Baptist (Mark 1:1-5), and Jesus said, "The time is fulfilled, and the kingdom of God is at hand, repent ye and believe the gospel," (Mark 1:15). Also Luke 16:16, "The kingdom of God is preached and every man presseth into it."

Bro. Curtis read from Sketches of our Pioneers, page 42; Havider, Flitchey, page 132; Greeften page 34;

Bro. Curtis read from Sketches of our Pioneers, page 43; Hayden's History, page 173; Grafton, page 84; and Limerick, page 3; all of which show that the Church of Christ started in 1827. He repeatedly asked Mr. Ellmore to talk about "that" church, but all to no avail. Bro. Curtis asked him time after time, "If you belong to the Pentecost church, what are you doing in this church organized down here in 1827, by A. Campbell?" All he would say to that was, "I'm not going to heaven nor hell on A. Campbell's (acamel's) back." He started and ended at Pentecost, and then after all the Pentecost story, Bro. Curtis picked un his [Ellmore's) American Standard Bro. Curtis picked up his (Ellmore's) American Standard version of the Bible that he used during the debate and read from Acts 2: 47 and showed him that according to his own Bible he could not prove that there was a church at Pentecost. It reads: "And the Lord added 'unto them,'" not "unto the church," as it reads in King James version, which was to be the standard of evidence in the discussion.

In the discussion.

The saints are stronger in the faith than before. There seemed to be some outside interest. Elders E. N. Burt and Clyde Ellis remained a few days after the debate to hold meetings. We hope to hear of good results soon. Alvin R. Ellis.

New Florence, Mo. March 18. Editor Ensign:—I would like to ask the dear saints through your columns, to pray for my dear father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Bass, who are very poorly, that they may be restored to health again. Pray also for my husband that he may be softened and obey the blessed gospel and be a saint of God, and help me to teach our children the way of eternal life. teach our children the way of eternal life.

What a blessed thing it is to know we have a Father who can and will bless his children that are humble enough to ask him. I think sometimes of how weak and enough to ask him. I think sometimes of now weak and helpless in the faith I am, but when we ask I truly believe God will hear and answer, just the same, for I have been truly blessed. I was afflicted in many different ways in the last year especially, three doctors ordered an operation, but with the help of our Father above I am now relating event der gaining every day.

Note.—Though written in the interest of the Sunday school work, we recommend the following excellent paper as being profitable to all our readers, especially fathers and mothers, and all who in any way share the responsibility of teaching others.—Editor.

The hastening time is upon us. Within the life of our venerable president we have advanced from the tallow dip and the kerosene lamp to a flood of electric light. From the horse and ox-team to railroad trains intersecting the country, to automobiles and æroplanes. Some have climbed the peaks and have caught the rays of light reflected on the brotherhood of man, and behold! labor banded together for the betterment of the conditions for the worker.

Godly men are reaching out to reclaim the waste places of humanity, not always wisely, but they are striving to understand and work out the problems, and they are paying for it with their consecrated lives. Surely the "little stone" is growing in the land. God's people are forgetting creeds and theology in striving to get the Christ principles into the every day life of the people.

Is the church moving as rapidly as the world in these matters? If not she will not be allowed to obstruct the advance.

Are we studying day by day? Are we catching the illumining rays which come to us from his life, "For his life is the light of men." Are we listening for his voice? Do we hear, and are we working this inspiration into the lives of the children of the church during our teaching hour, and also for the other sheep that are not of the fold? What we need is more of Jesus the Christ in our teaching and in our lives. More of the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man.

What of the Christian who drags down and pollutes man or woman? No matter how far down they may have been, are we pushing them further into the mire? Men and women are human and have great capacity for suffering, are we performing the devil's work by bringing sorrow and misery to them?

A man who sat well up under the shelter of a leading pulpit, said, "I think it all right to do in a business way what is demanded of one." One of the things that he was talking about was selling liquor over the bar, if it were a part of the business that you are running. Again, another thought it all right to cater to the desires of a degenerate public, while he personally would not do some things that the public seemed to demand; still he had let the concession, and felt that he was protecting himself in so doing. Pandering to the appetites that debase men and ruin homes, still it was a part of the game. Assisting in destroying manhood, and still a part of a Christian's living? How can these things be, if we are teaching Christ with his commandments,-love to God and man? A Christian is one who shares the purposes of Christ.

In a certain congregation stood one who held the priesthood and whose acknowledged service to the church was to "preach, teach, expound, exhort, and baptize, and administer the sacrament, and visit the house of each member," yet he talked with young men and advised them in a quiet way, about that which would tarnish their manhood and disgrace and dishonor their fatherhood, even if nature did not show that she had been outraged. He was doing what a man of the world might have done, who had no religious scruples and who was striving to set at naught God, and defy his laws.

Let us fit our teaching and preaching to the needs of humanity, not only in the Beginner classes, but in every class up to, and in the adult division as well. What is the use of teaching and laying special stress upon the quotation, "Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers," if all your class are married, even though some have made that mistake and are suffering from it?

In our adult lessons the past month we have had church organization, duties of apostles and their commission, and most of our classes have a very comprehensive understanding of much contained in this. If we find that one half of the time is sufficient for a review of the lesson, we certainly should be glad of the time to bring to their minds something that will be helpful in their everyday living.

In the first commission in Matthew 10 we find they were to preach, "The kingdom of neaven is at hand," and this was to be preached to Israel, so it might be well for our teachers to turn back and listen to the words of the greatest Teacher in the Sermon on the Mount as found in Matthew "And he opened his mouth, and taught them." "Blessed: are the poor in spirit," they that mourn, the meek, they which hunger and thirst after righteousness, the merciful, the pure in heart, the peacemaker, etc. These qualities that the world had overlooked, but priceless in the kingdom; the lowly manger-born attributes, which develop within us during the storms and stress of life.

We must pull down the false standards of life that are all about us and set up the true in the minds of the class.

"For I say unto you, that except your righteousness shall exceed the righteousness of the scribes and Pharises, ye shall in no case enter into the kingdom of heaven;" and these were the religious people of the times with which he compared them. Then follows the great Magna Charta of Christ's kingdom and it searches out the very heart of man. Let us make our lessons live in the mind by fitting them into present needs.

An old lady went to church every Sunday morning, but could never remember the text, and many laughed, and asked, "Why she went." One day she came home and burned her bushel measure. Why? Because the sermon had teeth in it, and I need not tell you that the measure was untrue and she knew it, for actions told that. Now the question is, has your lesson teeth in it? It is not wise for a teacher to try to make an application of a truth, but to so present the matter, that the one taught will make his own application, and the seed will grow in the night when you sleep.

Once more—can we save our pupils from consequences that must follow wrong concepts of a Christian's conduct?

David was a man and truly religious. He bent his head to the words of the Prophet Nathan, and said, "I have sinned against the Lord." But this same David brought forth the people of the captured city beyond Jordan and harrowed them and put them under saws of iron; he also killed a man for his wife, when he had already forgotten the law of the heavenly Father governing home life. In Psalms 16:10 we hear this same man say, "Thou wilt not leave my soul in hell," for he seems to understand there is a hell to which he must go.

Of course we recognize the fact, that his virtues were uncommon in any age, and that his vices were in common with the kings all about him, and we can understand how the failings of our men and women are those in common with the people all about them. That we are doing largely what everyone else is doing, but stop and think, we are praying "Thy kingdom come, thy will be done in earth." We are acknowledged followers of the Man who gave his life to show us right living, right thinking, and the manner of our conduct to every man, woman, and child. Are we teaching that? Or are we living the lives of "whited sepulchers," or has the truth made us free from the corruption of the world?

Are we as Christian teachers rightly dividing the word of truth, or are we simply teaching faith and baptisms and forgetting the weightier matters of the law? Are we taking the folly of the past and laying it side by side with the things that make for man's hurt today, physically, morally, and spiritually?

Do we introduce into our lessons the things that touch the individual life and that of the community—the new life in Christ Jesus—until each and everyone can say, "My Lord and my God," and in the heart is singing: "I have found a Friend, O such a Friend, He's all this world to me. I love his every attribute and will serve him. He will lead and I will follow into my home, the church and the community."

We as teachers must strive to make the study of his life very attractive to the pupils, and we must study it, his teachings, his example, until we see, know, and understand. With the light in us growing brighter day by day, until we shall reflect the divine; "Which is Christ in you, the hope of glory."

Our little training course for the teachers and workers of the Sunday school and Religio is good, and has given a greater concept of the work and the material that we have to work with. We begin to realize our responsibility to those who are being taught by us. Many of the parents are taking the training course for it is a benefit and an inspiration in the work with children.

We have numbers in our church who would like to follow out a well selected reading course along the lines of development in Christian usefulness, and this will surely come in a short time. There is little use in arousing man's emotions and awaking his interests in any work, unless there is some activity calling.

There is much to be done before the resurrection is in evidence, from the fact that Jesus the Christ walks as companion with men here and now, and while this does not appear, are we not as followers putting him to an open shame? Kansas City, Mo.

THE LIFE BEAUTIFUL.

By Elder J. E. Vanderwood.

The most sacred God-given gift to man is the gift of life, man is placed in trust with it and to the fullest extent has its making or unmaking. Man will be held accountable for this trust, and it therefore occurs to the mind of the writer that especial attention should be given to the problem of life. One of the definitions given by Webster to the word life, is: "eternal felicity," and by reason of the use man has given life it falls short of that definition in a great measure; but we are convinced that it is quite possible for humanity to attain unto that condition of "eternal felicity," and we therefore desire to draw the attention of the reader to some of the stepping stones, the simple rudiments by which life may become extraordinary, wholesome, ennobling, and beautiful.

We are what we choose to be, and we will be what we will be. There is no use of trying to dodge the issue, or beg the question. Man is his own maker or unmaker, i. e., he may ascend the heights of virtue and enter the life beautiful, or he may degenerate into the bestial. We are made our own free agents in this matter, and little by little, in small degress, do we shape our destiny. Our life is grown and ripened from the seeds we have sown and its fruitage depends largely upon the cultivation we have given it. It was the wise man who said: "Keep thy heart with all diligence, for out of it are the issues of life." Out of the heart the life issues, and the outward actions of the man reveal that which is within. It was the Christ who said: "Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh." Nearly everyone knows that if I am going to have pansies in my flower garden I must plant pansy seeds, if I am to have violets I must plant violet seeds; if I expect to reap a harvest of corn I must plant corn; and I am quite sure you will all agree with me that my reaping depends largely upon the kind of seed I plant.

Now what shall my life be! Is there any way by which I may determine this matter? I answer, the same law that governs the flowers or the corn, works in the matter of life. If I am to grow "the life beautiful" I must plant seeds that will produce that kind of life. The seeds from which our lives are grown are thoughts, and the nature of our thoughts determine the nature of our floughts determine the nature of our life—character. Thought must always precede action; action is the crystalization of that which is resident in the mind; action repeated becomes habit, and the sum total of our habits determine our character, and hence our life. So it is literally true that, "As he thinketh in his heart so is he." What a man thinks, he is, and as he continues to think, so he remains.

If a man desires to change his life he must change his thoughts, if he would beautify his life he must beautify his thoughts, if he would ennoble his life he must think noble thoughts, if he would ascend the heights of virtue he must fill the mind with virtuous thoughts, if he would purify his life his thoughts must be clean and pure.

We develop into the likeness of the thing we most earnestly and habitually contemplate. If, therefore our minds are filled with bestal thoughts we will descend to the level of the brute, but if the life beautiful be visioned continually by us we will one day grow into the likeness of that life that is contemplated.

The life beautiful is made up of the most beautiful attributes. They are, love, joy, peace, gentleness, kindness, meekness, goodness, virtue, temperance, patience, forgiveness, tolerance, justice, equity, mercy. And if we attain unto the life beautiful our thought forces must of necessity be directed daily to these things. Our faith must be the kind of faith that works by love, and our prayers must be something more than mere petitoning prayers, they must be the earnest expressions of a life consecrated to the service of man and the glory of God.

In its finality the life beautiful is the one that approaches nearest unto the life of the Nazarene, and which reflects his character most perfectly. Man mars his life by yielding to selfish motives and defending self with angry words, but he beautifies his life when he becomes serene and peaceful under fire, and like the Master of men does not resist evil, but overcomes it with good.

The life beautiful consists in the being, not in the profession, it is a reality not a mere theory, it is composed of deeds and not words, in fact it is that love that is so absolutely pure that it seeks nothing for itself, but gives all to make the world better, happier, and purer.

Man attracts to himself that which he is, therefore when he has purified himself the entire universe becomes pure to him, when he becomes virtuous the entire creation bespeaks virtue, like must and does attract like, and until we have learned this law we can never attain unto the life beautiful. As the child learns to read by simple rudiments and continual practice, so do we in like manner have to practice daily the rudiments of excellence if we ever expect to grow and develop into the life beautiful. It does not consist in outward adorning, and the wearing of costly jewels and kingly apparel, but in the inward adorning of a meek and quiet spirit, the putting on of humility and divine love, and like the Master of men, making ourselves of no reputation.

Such a life will literally fulfill and demonstrate that which the angelic chorus chanted at the birth of Jesus: "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will to men." We can only glorify God when we make practical the precept of his Scn, and we can only bring peace to earth by being peaceful, since strife will only engender strife, hatred will only increase hatred, malice will only create malice; but in planting the seeds of peace we are preparing the way for a harvest of peace. We cannot reach the life beautiful in one bound, no more than we can read perfectly at our first attempt; practice is the word, we must practice daily the things that make the life beautiful, and by practice do we day by day attain until at last we shall reach the consummation, we will become pure and ennobling, the glory of God will be revealed in us, and the peace of earth will abide

Let us then beautify the life that is given us, let us make of it all that is possible, let us root out the sin in all its forms and phases, and develop the lovable and beautiful in all the avenues of life, that when we are required to account to the Giver of life for that which has been intrusted unto us we shall have acquired other talents by the using, and thus be able to present it to God complete, ennobling and beautiful which is only our reasonable service.

GOD IS UNCHANGEABLE.

By Leonard G. Hoisington-

Is God consistent with his teachings, or are the teachings of man consistent with God and his teachings?

This is a vital question to God-fearing men and women for around it centers their hope of life in the kingdom of God.

If God is, he is as he was when he created Adam; he is as he was when he met with Moses and conversed with him "face to face;" he is as he was in the time of Samuel, Elijah, in the days of Jesus Christ and the apostles. If not, then he is a changeable God and inconsistent in himself and his teachings. Even if God is changeable he is just as liable to change back again and be the same as he was, as not, isn't he? I think that is the correct way to interpret a changeable person.

If God is changeable then indeed these six hundred different creeds and denominations might be justified. But how long would a business proper organized under so many different methods of conducting business, all conflicting, some with the understanding that once long, long ago there was a head who directed them but has now quit for it isn't necessary any more for his employees to receive directions and advice from him; the enterprise would be able now to conduct itself with a silent head, a person who just watches things progress or retrograde and does not perform the miracles of setting things to rights or of supplying deficiencies?

Now I believe that if you organized a business you would seek to do so on a sure foundation under fixed laws, and regulations which might be revoked if change of conditions made it advisable; if your laws were not observed or if an employee refused to do your will he would be speedily shorn of his right to labor for you and would be cast out. If things were going amiss in a distant city or an employee was worthy of promotion would you not go in person, or send some representative, or a message over long distance telephone, or telegraph in order to effect your purpose?

Wouldn't you rather believe in a God who run his ecclessiastical business likewise, on a firm basis? "Twould be folly to believe in a God who conducts his business on a scale similar to the manner I first described."

I believe that mankind with but few exceptions worship a God like unto the man whose business is conducted haphazardly. Why? Because they say God has ceased to speak to mankind, ceased to perform miracles, ceased to send his angels as his representatives to advise his sons and daughters here on earth.

Can a father expect his children to become as he wishes them to become if he does not speak to them, chastise them, and perform the little miracles of soothing a sad heart, mending a broken toy or creating a new one for indeed are these not miracles to the child because he cannot comprehend them? Rather because he does not understand; for the child soon attains the age when his powers of comprehension and reason expand and become more acute under the loving watchcare of his father.

Is it not, then, because we do not understand the miracles of our heavenly Father that they seem so to us? Surely, under the teaching, the constant watchcare of our Father in heaven we would become capable of understanding and comprehending the mysteries of the kingdom of God. "And when he was alone they that were about him with the twelve asked of him the parable. And he said unto them, Unto you it is given to know the mysteries of the kingdom of God: but unto them that are without, all these things are done in parables."—Mark 4: 10.11.

Do not most of the religious organizations teach that God has ceased performing miracles, that he has closed his mouth and will not speak, and that he no more sends angels to earth to do his bidding?

Men teach and preach that mankind no longer needs the voice of our heavenly Father in our affairs. Man thinks he can get along now very well by himself.

In Genesis 1: 28 the Lord spoke to Adam saying, "Be fruitful, and multiply, and replenish the earth and subdue it." Paul says in Hebrews 6:1, "Let us go on unto perfection." That was about thirty-one years after Christ's death. Man was not perfect then; and when perfection is reached by man he is ready to enter the presence of his Father and partake of his glory.

Man was to "multiply, and replenish the earth and subdue it." If man no longer needs God's voice to guide him, if he no longer needs the ministrations of angels then he must be perfect and he must have fulfilled the desire of God in multiplying, subduing and replenishing the earth. And so God has, now, abdicated the heavenly throne in favor of man.

Now let us consider what the Lord teaches.

In Genesis we find that he created Adam; that he advised with him and worked with him. Here we find man entering upon the work designed by the Creator, namely, that of aiding him or serving him.

Now God's business grew and he must have representatives of his power, agents and superintendents, even as a large corporation has its president, board of directors, superintendents, etc. Do you not recognize these agents, representatives of God in Abraham, Isaac, Moses, Elijah, Samuel, Isaiah, etc.? Would we not recognize Christ as the president and the apostles as the board of directory of the ecclesiastical justiness of God, while God himself is the Proprietor?

Would you believe a good, sensible proprietor of a business would forsake that business? How long would it be before it went to the wall? Likewise how long would God's purpose and work continue to be successful if he should forsake it as people would now have you believe?

Listen: "I am the Lord I change not." (Mal. 3:6). What! he changes not? He isn't directing his work now as of old, according to traditions and modern teaching.

"I said, O my God, take me not away in the midst of my days: thy years are throughout all generations. Of old hast thou laid the foundation of the earth: and the heavens are the work of thy hands. They shall perish but thou shalt endure: yea all of them shall wax old like a garment; as a vesture shalt thou change them, and they shall be changed: but thou art the same, and thy years shall have no end."—Psalms 102:24-27.

The testimony of the Lord's servants is that God remains constant from eternity to eternity; that he changes not; that he spoke to men formerly and that he will continue to do so; that he had his servants, the prophets, formerly and that he will continue to have them.

"And it shall come to pass afterward that I will pour out my Spirit upon all flesh; and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy; your old men shall dream dreams, and your young men shall see visions.—Joel 2:28.

The Lord says he is not changeable but is consistent with his teachings; mankind says he isn't. What are you going to do about it?

A FEW COMPARISONS.

There can be no sucessor to Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy, the discoverer of Christian Science, and the founder of that church. Since her death the church has been managed by a board of directors. The Apostle Paul says that "God hath set some in the church, first apostles." Is there harmony between the two?

Again Paul taught that the women should not be speakers in the church: "Let your women keep silent in the churches: for it is not permitted unto them to speak." (1 Cor. 14:34; 1 Tim. 2:-12). Contrary to this women take the lead in Christian Science and under the title of "Readers," minister the word.

As to the restoration of the gospel, the Bible says: "And I saw another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth," showing that it would be by angel ministration. But Christian Science was "discovered" by Mrs. Eddy, who disclaimed angel ministration.

The Scriptures teach healing through the laying on of hands, anointing with oil, and the prayer of faith to God, an ordinance to be performed by the elders. Christian Science denies the reality of sickness, and works by mental power only. The contrast is apparent.

only. The contrast is apparent.

As the Scriptures say: "Prove all things; hold fast that which is good."

THE SERMON.

The minister had just finished his great sermon; the air still quivered with his burning words, and the people sat erect, disturbed, embarrassed; yet he lingered for a moment in his place.

"Is there one here," he asked, "in whose breast these words strike like a barbed arrow for the truth that is in them?" And he sat down.

"That was hard on John!,, said old James, "but he deserves it, every word."

"A blow from the shoulder for James!" said old John. "Time he got one, too, if it isn't too late."

"I wonder whether either of those two old sinners will take his medicine and be better for it!" said old William. But the little saint hurried home, knelt down by her little bed and cried out in anguish, "My God! my God! have mercy on me and give me for this stone a heart of flesh."—Laura E. Edwards in the Century.

After posting a notice to the effect that workmen frequenting drinking places on their way to or from work would be replaced by non-drinking men, the general superintendent of the American Car and Foundry Company, at Berwick, Pa., reported, according to "The American Issue," that accidents in the plant had been reduced thirty per cent. The company has over 5,000 employees.

ISRAEL AND THE GENTILES.

"Then lifted I up mine eyes an saw, and behold four horns. And I said unto the angel that talked with me, What be these? And he answered me. These are the horns which have scattered Judah, Israel, and Jerusalem."-Zech. 1: 18,19.

What are the four horns? In the book of Daniel they are called four great beasts. (Dan. 7:3-7). These four great beasts are four kings. (Daniel The fourth beast has ten horns which are ten kings. (Daniel 7:24; Rev. 17:3 and 12). This last beast and the little horn that came up after the first ten horns, has eyes like the eyes of a man and a mouth speaking great things. They are the last destruction of the Jews when they reject their king the Christ. (Matt. 24:15; 23: 37: 10:34: Luke 21:24; 2:34).

We notice that Christ tells his disciples that they would see the destruction spoken of by Daniel the prophet; (Matt. 24:15) which was fulfilled seventy years after Christ according to his prophecy. (Luke 21:20-24) Jerusalem was to be trodden down by the Gentiles until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled. The Gentiles are the Roman powers that trod the Jews down, the little horn is the first pope. (Rev. 13:15; 17:1-6). The image and the woman is the Roman church, that together was to tread the Jews down till the time of the Gentiles be fulfilled. (Rom. 11:25). What will happen then? Christ will appear the second time. (Rom. 11:26; 1 Thess. 2:1-8; Dan. 7:22; 7:26,27). When Israel is gathered the second time what will happen to Babylon? Read Rev 18:1-6: Isaiah 52:8-11: Zech. 2:7: Mic. 4:11-13: Isaiah 29:7:13,20).

"A hint to the wise is sufficient" without any further comment. We will notice in the hands. of the Lord there is a cup, the wine is red, it is full of moisture, but the dregs thereof all the wicked of the earth shall ring them out and drink them. (Psalms 75:8). What is this cup in the Lord's hands? It is Babylon. (Jer. 51:7). She is the one to make all the earth drunk. (Jer. 25: 15:26; Rev. 17:1-6). She is to make the whole earth drunk with her false doctrine. (1 Thess. 2:11; Isaiah 29:13; Rev. 17:2).

We notice that the Jews were the first to drink the cup, and also take the sword. (Jer. 25:16-18). Of course, this is a prophecy, the cup was Babylon, the sword was Babylon, or they were the one to use the sword. Christ told the Jews that he had come to send a sword. (Matt. 10:34), and the Jews should fall by the edge of the sword, and Jerusalem was to be trodden down by the Gentiles until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled. (Luke 21:24). Now we have noticed that the Gentiles are called Babylon. When they begin to drink the cup which they have caused all nations to drink of what will happen? This will happen.

"Awake, awake stand up, O Jerusalem, which has drunk at the hands of the Lord the cup of his fury; thou hast drunken the drugs of the cup of trembling, and wrung them out." (Isa. 51:17). Don't forget that this cup and sword is Babylon. Now read the next chapter and see Zion and Jerusalem put on their strength and arise from the We will notice while Babylon has made all nations drunk with her false doctrine, that a book comes forth among drunken nations. (Isa. 29:8-13). They haven't got the gospel but they teach the doctrine and precepts of men, or strong delusions of Babylon. The book is not to be heard till Lebanon or Jerusalem becomes a fruitful field. When the blind Jews will see.

When the stick of Judah becomes one with the stick of Joseph, the Lord is to gather the Jews back to their own land for the second coming of Christ. (Ezek. 27:15-23). Yes, Christ is coming to be King of kings and to execute judgment and justice in the earth. (Jer. 23:5,6; 16:14-16). In his days Judah shall be saved, Israel shall dwell Had you ever noticed that John saw the gospel brought back in the hour of God's judgment to be preached to every nation, kindred, and tongue, and that that gospel was to destroy Babylon that made all nations drunk with her strong

Now will they kill another prophet? Yes, they have already done it as Christ said they would. (Luke 11:49). The Gentiles killed the last one and they are the ones that will fight against Zion. (Micah 4:11; Oba. 16:18; Hab. 2: 16,17; Lam. 4:21). Notice the cup of the Lord's right hand goes to Babylon. Did Esau destroy the saints and drive the church of Christ into the wilderness? . Notice Malachi 1:3-5; compare with Malachi 1:3 Revelation 12; 13:1-8; Psalms The sword of Babylon was made very sharp and bright according to prophecy. (Deut. 32:41; Ezek. 21:9,10). The nations are the Lord's chastising rod to the Jews and Israel, (Isaiah 8:5-8; 10:5; Jer. 4:7), but the remnant that is left of Israel shall again take root and fill the earth with fruit. (Isaiah 27:6; Oba. 1:17,18; Hosea 3:4,5; Micah 5:7,8; Zech. 12; 10:6). The house of Joseph, Ephraim and Manasseh are to push the people together to the ends of the earth with the stick of Joseph in their hands,—a book. (Ezek. 37:19; Isa. 11:12,13; Zech. 10:6.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR CORRESPONDENTS. Mrs. Clarinda R. Jobe, Eckerty, Ind.—I ask prayers for my mother who is weak and feeble, and for my youngest daughter, Mrs. Emma Goad, who has nervous palpitation of the heart, that the Lord may heal them.

Mrs. Chas. E. Smith, Benett, Neb .-- I thank the saints who sent me Ensigns, Heralds, and Autumn Leaves. I have not gotten them all distributed yet but hope to soon, and I sincerely hope that they will do some good. I am much stronger than when I wrote last though still afflicted. but I am trusting in our dear heavenly Father. Pray for me that I may be healed and that the blessing of health and strength may soon be mine. Pray also that my hus-band may come into the fold and labor along with me. He is a good provider and our home is a place of peace, pleasantness and love.

O. L. Lum, Wilburton, Okla.—As president of the Wilburton Branch can say we have some faithful saints here who are willing to do their part in carrying on the Lord's I have noticed in our country it is the poor saints who keep the camp fires blazing. This is God's work and God is in it, and while some things are not just as they ought to be, other things come to us that cause us to re-joice in this great work. My labors the past year have been limited on account of finances. There is lots of room preaching in Wilburton and surrounding school houses.

Annie Gray, Harrisburg, Ark.—I have not written for so long that I feel sometimes that I am in another world, as there are no saints here to talk to, only the dear old silent preacher to read. I am so thankful for the prayers the saints sent up in my behalf for I was near death's door, now I am as well as common and give God the praise.

G. W. Breeze, 316 N. Lancaster St., Dallas, Tex.-I am G. W. Breeze, 316 N. Lancaster St., Dallas, Tex.—I am well but miss the association of the saints. Bro. Ira Wal-dron came here with me from Webb City, Mo., with his father, mother and sister. Bro. Ira and I are working for the same man. If there are any other saints in Dallas we will be glad to have them call on us. I can see the need will be grad to have them call of us. I can see the need of living up to the gospel law more fully as the people are observant. The weather is fine and we enjoy the nice springtime. My membership is with the Johlin Branch; how I long to get back and meet with them. Pray for me.

Arthur Davenport, Soldier's Grove, Wis. The Lord has wonderfully blessed us this last conference year. There have been some added to the church by baptism, and two of our young men, Erwin Lenox and Phillip J. Davenport, have been called to the office of priest, and by the way they are getting into the harness we can't but think they mean business. Bro. Edward Jehnson has been ordained to the office of teacher, and he will be of much help to the work. The writer has been called from the office of priest to that of elder. Dear brothers and sisters, let us try and live more faithful and do something for the work.

W. A. Atwell, Box 41, Houston, Perry Co., Ark .-- Please inform any of the ministry of our willingness to assist them in the opening of the work here, and any of them ex-pecting to come this way please write me in advance. There are no saints here except myself and wife though I think some of my children would embrace the gospel if an elder would call on us.

Earl N. Redfield, Wilmore, Kans.—Brn. J. Arthur Davis Earl N. Redneld, Wilmore, Kans.—Brn. J. Atthur Davis and C. A. Martin were here and held forth a few nights. The pastor who helped us get the church said if we had something better than he, that was what be wanted. Some pretty good interest was stirred up and some are reading history, etc. I ask the saints to pray for us that we may and upward. Ever praying for the uplift of God's Belle Lenon, Wagoner, Okla.—I must write a few lines to the dear old paper which we gladly look for each week filled with many things concerning the angel's message and the restoration of the gospel of Jesus Christ. to my baptism many years ago a sickness was up which the doctor said he could do nothing for. W was baptized I almost felt the disease leaving me, and I was healed immediately. I am a witness to the healing power of God.

Charles J. Smith, 707 Center St., Sioux City, Iowa glad to say the saints of the Sioux City Branch are trying glad to say the saints of the Shoux City Branch are trying to do the work of the Master. There is something to do besides "look" forward to the reward, but we must work and put our shoulder to the wheel and push. We must love and help each other. We are known by our works. May we ever be found doing the will of the Lord.

Mrs. S. W. Barstow, Thayer, Mo .-- I am still in the faith. The sermons, articles, and letters are so strengthening to me and I rejoice many those as the Engige is our only preacher. Have not heard a sermon for over a year, nnot well do without the Ensign. My prayer is that God will make me just such a creature as he would have me to be, and that I may be faithful to the end.

Mrs. A. B. Hawley, Ravenwood, Mo .- As a branch we are trying to live worthy of the name of Latter Day Saint. We have lost some of our worthy members by removal to Ft. Scott and Mapleton, Kas, and now Bro. Alma Hawley has moved to Hamilton, Mo. We regret to lose such worthy members but our loss is others' gain.

Harry Thorne, Belvidere Ill.—I feel this is the work of God and am trying my best to hold fast to the truth. I was baptized by Bro. J. A. Bronson at Argyle about two years ago. Our little branch is slowly growing. A few have obeyed the gospel since the reunion. I obeyed this gospel after coming to this country from England about three years ago, and hope that I may be able to carry this gospel back to my folks so that they may hear it. I like to read the letters in the Ensign from different parts of the country. Desiring an interest in the prayers of the the country. Desiring an interest in the prayers of the saints that I may not fall by the wayside.

Miss Shellie Stevens, Peryear, Tenn.—I have a mother and one sister, but God thought it best to take my dear father nearly nine years ago. My sister is married and the consisted how we all live to contain on a count of has one little boy. We all live together on account of her ill health, as she is not able to do her housework, and dear Saints, will each one help us to pray for her that she may be restored to health once more. I am trying to live faithful every day and there are many temptations to overcome. There are no Latter Day Saints for me to keep company with. We had a good conference here with large crowds and good preaching, Brother and Sister F. G. Pitt being with us.

J. L. Rust, Gladstone, Ill .-- I have been through great trial by sickness and death in my family. In the last two years I have lost my wife and two daughters, and two years. I have now my write and two daugners, and now am left with two little grandehildren. I thought it might be best to put them in a home, and I would rather they be put in a home where they would be taught the principles of the gospel. I have a home here and have thought of selling out and coming to Independence.

Scammon, Kas., March, 1914. Dear Ensign:-The dedication of the Scammon church on the 15th was, to put it mildly, a huge success. If we on the 16th was, to put it mildly, a huge success. If we had consulted the weather man we could not have had a finer day. The church's capacity was strained to the utmost, and Bro. E. L. Kelley partaking of the inspiration good will and cheerful influences of the day, delivered the dedicatory sermon at eleven a. m., also spoke at eight p. m. Both efforts were well received. The deed and keys at the proper time were handed to the Bishop who with appropriate remarks gave them to the president of the branch to be placed with the deacon. The church is surely a monument of the faith. Salthrand were is surely a monument of the faith, fidelity and perseve ance of the saints, the whole structure costing about $2800, with not a dollar of debt against it. We would not forget that the Sisters Aid aided materially in the raising of money from first to last—only for their untiring efforts it could not have been dedicated at this time. Srs. Nellie Brocaw and Myra Brackenbury's assistance with the music was timely and very much appreciated by all.

Seattle, Wash., March 13. Dear readers of the Ensign.—Just a few words from this corner of Uncle Sam's domain. We have passed another mile stone (district conference) in the great North-west. The five branches of the district were re-North-west. The five branches of the district were re-presented. There was a little more debate on some quest-ions of principle than was needful perhaps, but it is a hard perhaps have better been utilized, personally we are per-fectly satisfied. There is one thing certain though. Our Religio and Sunday school conventions were very much below par, and someone must take a greater interest in these conventions or they are going to pass as a joke. We have some splendid talent in this district, the several locals prove this to be true, especially in the Seattle, Centralia and Chehalis locals. I hope that next conference and conventions which will be held in Vancover, B. C., that there will be a concentrated effort to make each session one of education. We have just returned from B. C. and the saints there are already making calculations on a good conference which will be. in August, date given later. Our visit to B. C. at this time was one of deep sorrow because of the death of one of earths noble women, Sr. Jas. (Sarah Ann) Muirhead of Rosedale, B. C., further referred to in obituary. More and more we see the need of saints taking a deeper hold of the latter day work. To some it be left it. Sixt. fearington, the intervent level for it is they fear intervent level. has lost its first facination, that intense love for it has waned until a degree of indifference that is alarming has replaced that beautiful faith that once characterized the saint, making it doubly harder on the faithful ones to successfully hold the fort. What will the father or mother say when confronted with the fact that their children are not numbered with the faithful because the family altar has been torn down or the word of council has been with-

I wish I could reach the ear of every young man in the church, and impress upon them the golden opportunity for usefulness that is at the door of everyone. Can you read the appeal from the watchman (Apostles) of the church the appeal from the watchman (Apostles) of the church without feeling the spirit of response. If you can there is something wrong. The excuses are too numerous to mention, one prominent one being: I expect to make a home for myself and cannot afford the time, or I must have an education. "What will it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his soul." Some day we will want to push the hand of time back, but now is the accepted time. Read Doctrine and Covenants, 77:3, Behold this is the preparation wherewith I prepare you,* * *notwithstanding the tribulation* * *that the church may stand independentabove all other creatures beneath the celestial world. Culbertson, Mont., March 25.

Dear Ensign:—Last Sunday we met for the first time in our new church building and we were thankful indeed that our hippes have been so nearly realized. Bro. J. A. Bronson preached the first sermon which was appreciated we believe by all present. We are very glad to have Bro. Bronson to make his home here as saints and friends both like to here the nearly large transfer and friends both like the large than the presence of the pre like to hear him as well as our other missionary, Bro. J. C.

Our church is not yet finished neither have we the means to finish it and if any of the Montana saints would like to help us we will appreciate all help given, and though this is the first church in Eastern Montana, we hope it will not be the last, and possibly we could help someone in the future. Any one wishing to send means can send to S. M. Andes, Culbertson, Mont.

Hopefully I am, Mrs. C. B. Freeman.

PARENT-TEACHERS ASSOCIATIONS.

PARENT-TEACHERS ASSOCIATIONS.

(This article is furnished by one actively engaged in Parent-Teachers Association work in Independence, and an enthusiastic mother, by the way. Next week one of the teachers of the Columbian School expects to give us his version of the work of this association.—Editor.)

What are they? Do we need them? And many more such questions are asked in this busy, busy life of ours. We think they form one of the greatest links in helping us to understand the different view points of life. Our children; do they need our help in the battle of life? Then the co-operation of the two great forces, home and school cannot help but bring about closer relationship between cannot help but bring about closer relationship between parent and teacher.

This relationship will produce helpfulness to both and thus harmonious results will follow—once the mind appreciates the connection between childhood interest and civilization, Parent-Teachers organizations are inevitable. Those who have closely observed the child, know that the work of the school only supplements the teachings of the home, hence a necessity for organizing a closer con-nection between them.

In these meetings, full, free, and friendly discussions In these meetings, full, free, and friendly discussions establish the relations that ought to exist between parent and teacher. The father and mother are made to see the importance of shaping the destiny of their child. The teacher is broadened, by learning the condition in the home. Thus parent and teacher form a common understanding, each teaching the other some essential truth, that both ought to know. Friction between teacher and pupil is averted; time is saved, complaint or even unkind feelings are avoided. The pupil becomes more receptive, the teacher more patient and intelligent, the parent more sympathetic and appreciative. sympathetic and appreciative.

we have heard much of this kindly and successful judge of the Juvenile Court, through newspapers and otherwise. Surely one who has held this position for six years or more, knows whereof he speaks.—Editor).

Jurist Makes Psychological Analysis of Boyish Tendencies

Before School Association.

Boys will be hope-also they will be men, some day, Judge Porterfield of the juvenile court told the first social meeting of the Parent-Teacher Association of the Kensington school, Friday might. The best way to make a boy into a good citizen is not to take away from him his natural tendencies, but to train him into something useful, the judge said.

There are the Boy Scouts. Nobody could see much for them at irrst, but now students of juvenile questions have come to know that the movement instituted by Colonel Baden-Powell some years ago is the utilization of the "gang spirit."

All boys, the judge said, have an inherent desire to evel in gangs—bunches of from half a dozen kindred travel in gange—bunches of from nair a cozen kindred souls to twenty and more. It was a juvenile gang that threw stones at Elisha as he returned from seeing Elijah off on his heavenward journey, and shouted to him, "Go up, thou old bald head." Nothing but a gang, and a 'aw-less one, were they, and for the reason that there were no Baden-Powells prior to the Boer war, and therefore the Boer war, and therefore travel in gangs—bunches souls to twenty and more, no Boy Scouts.

The Boy Scouts, the judge explained, took over the ooy gangs and taught them that throwing stones and yoiling taunts are first steps toward the penitentiary. Clean young men were employed to put in a dash of discipline. The first thing the boys knew the old gang was organized into troops each plateous the waits of the clean.

The first thing the boys knew the old gang was organized into troops and platoons, the units of which were quickly learning to be useful and chivalrous. The idea of invelessness was superseded by the duty of mounting guard against that very thing, the judge explained.

Judge Porterfield could recall an incident where a man who was reared before the Boy Scout movement, and who probably also had a mother who took his part when he had "tantrums" hurled a rock through the window of a local bank because he was late in appearing at the cashier's window with his pay check and couldn't get it cashed.

"This man reminds me of some parents," the judge said. "I refer to the kind who believe their children when they come home with a yarn that the teacher picks on them in

"I refer to the kind who believe their children when they come home with a yarn that the teacher picks on them in school. I presume there are some trifling teachers as well as there are triflers in all other classes," he said. "I never met but one, but I don't doubt but that they exist. All I have to say is that they are a negligible minority, so when a child of mine reports that his teacher picks on him I start an inquiry to see what is the matter with my boy. I assume there is no teacher so trifling as to pick on a assume there is no teacher so trifling as to pick on a child.

"The Parent-Teacher Association is in my opinion a long-needed innovation. Here are two elements in the raising of children who seldom, or never, meet to exchange views, whereas they are jointly engaged in the most important work they will ever be called upon to perform."

WHAT THEY SAY ABOUT US!

The First Hunger Striker.

A Shakespearian scholar has found "the first hunger striker." Cleopatra says when she is captured:
Sir, I will eat no meath. I'll not drink; I'll not sleep neither; this mortal house I'll ruin.

Do Cæser what he can. No, sir, that I wait pinioned at your master's court.

"A woman always wants the last word, but she doesn't become really dreadful until she wants the last cent."

Her Presents and her Presence.

"Before we were married, Henry," said the young wife reproachfully, "you always gave me the most beautiful Christmas presents. Do you remember?"

"Sure," said Henry cheerfully; "but, my dear, did you ever hear of a fisherman giving bait to a fish after he had caught it?"

-Sarah Ann Davies was born October 28, 1861, Davies.—Sarah Ann Davies was born October 28, 1861, at Troforst, Glemmorganshire, South Wales. Married to Moses Davies Jan. 19, 1879, baptized May 6, 1894 at Ked, In. by Elder James McKiennan. Died near Rockvale Colo., March 4, 1914. Interment in cemetery near Florence, Colo. Funeral services conducted by Elder F. A. Russell. Besides being the mother of eleven children she had so endeared herself to the people in the community that she was everywhere referred to as "Mother Davies" which fact in itself shows the high esteem in which sre was hald was held.

Hand.—Lena Hand was born at Richland Creek, near Tama City, Iowa, in 1890. United with the church while yet a child. At a very early age she was left without the care of a mother, thus life to her was fraught with many hardships. However as she reached young womanhood she launched out with the full determination of preparing for a life of usefulness, by securing a splendid business education. This was put to practical use in Cripple Creek and Colorado Springs, for a time. In the winter of 1912 her health broke down. After a few weeks stay in the Springs she went with sister to Fowler, Colo., where she died March 19 of tuberculosis. Funeral services in charge of F. A. Russell assisted by Rev. Cartwright of the Christian Church were held at the home of her brother William and interment was in the cemetery at Fowler. She was the daughter of Elder C. E. Hand of Holden, Mo.

THE GENERAL CONFERENCE.

Promptly at 10 o'clock on April 6th the gavel fell upon the President's table at the Saints' Church at Independence, Mo., and the hum of murmuring voices hushed instantly. It was the opening of the Sixty-first Annual Conference of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. The Quorums of the Presidency, Twelve, Bishopric, Patriarchs, High Priest, Seventies, and Elders were all in their appointed places, with delegates upon the main floor, and visitors crowding the balconies.

President Frederick Madison Smith occupied the chair, and announced the favorite hynn of his father, the President of the Church: "Redcemer of Israel, Our Only Delight," after singing which Edmund L. Kelley, Presiding Bishop of the Church, offered the following prayer:

Prayer by Bro. E. L. Kelley at Opening Session of Conference.

Our Father who art in heaven, we thank Thee that we are permitted to meet in this building this morning in order to honor Thy name and transact business in Thy work. We come before Thee, Father, as children who are weak, who need to be strengthened by Thy holy and divine weak, who need to be strengthened by Inj not and united Spirit. We pray Thee, in Jesus' holy name, that Thou wilt stretch forth Thy hand in power of love and touch each one with wisdom and understanding, that we may move together in the work that Thou hast called us to engage In, in that harmonious way and that intelligent action that we will be acceptable unto Thee and for the great good of

we will be acceptable unto Thee and for the great good of Thy work here on the earth.

We come, Oh Father, feeling our needs. We ask that Thou wilt grant us strength from Thy hand of life. We pray that Thou wilt remember each one; bless the President; he needs Thy help, and each of the officers that is before Thee this morning. Bless all of these, Thy servants, who have gathered from the various parts of the world, and help them as they are thus sojourning together for a time in order to accomplish the work that is necessary to be done in Thy cause, that they may crow in crose said. is time in order to accomplish the work that is necessary to be done in Thy cause, that they may grow in grace and knowledge before Thee and be strengthened for the battle of life that is before them, and unto Thee shall be all the praise, through Jesus, the Blessed Lord. Amen.

By motion and the voice of the assembly the First Presidency of the Church was chosen to preside, and authorized to make such arrangements as were necessary to complete the organization, together with power to appoint the time, place and character of the sessions. The aged President, Joseph Smith then made some introductory remarks:

Address of President Joseph Smith at Opening of the Conference. Bro. Persident, fellow Officers and Delegates: It is with Bro. Persident, feilow Officers and Delegates: It is with much pleasure and immeasurable gratitude to God that I express myself as privileged once more to stand in the as-sembly of the people of God. Fifty-four years ago this morning, an untried religionist, an unschooled philosopher, but a poor converser in my native tongue, I stood with a little band who had borne a portion of the burden of conlittle band who had borne a porrion or the burden of con-flict with a Prophet, the Patriarch, and their co-associates in the presentation of a new faith among the multitude of faiths discoursed among men. It was branded as a new faith, yet it bore to these men the direct indorsement of God through the principle of direct revelation and acting upon the common sense with which God had endowed them upon the common sense with which God had endowed them and inspired by the quickening influences of the Spirit which had been conferred upon them by virtue of their having been obedient to the declaration of the Gospel of the Son of God, they ventured to present this old and tried faith in the rolds of the multitude of conflicting errors which prevail as religious. They fought not against men, they fought not to advance pet theories of their own, but they felt unite publication to God to offer to Him a reasonable reswite and to advance upon the context and the second of the context and the second of the second o able service and to adopt and preserve, so far as lay in their power, the strong, conservative Spirit of salvation declared unto men. I could not at that time feel the depth, the height, the breadth, the almost awful sublimity of that which was resident in their breasts towards God for that which was resident in their brease towards God for that which had been granted unto them. I shared with them their courage, I shared with them their willingness to bear the obliquity that had been ask upon the people by virtue of that which had come in as a flood and had al-most destroyed the root and branch of that wonderful work begun in 1830.

I had been impressed by what consideration I was qualified to give and by the indwelling of the Spirit which must have accompanied my baptism and my confirmation under the hands of my father and those associated with him, that the principles of God, that the power of upright and honest the principles of God, that the power or upright and honest conduct before God and men must sooner or later bear great fruit. I was prepared, so far as was practicable for me to be, for that which might come in the conflict. Few of that little band remain. At our last assembly here I think there were but nine who were present and sat upon the platform with us. Since then, two at least of those who thus sat with us have passed over to the great majority—Sr. Elizabeth Blair and Edmund C. Briggs—but we have become the sat of the condition of the c my fellow associates in this Gospel economy, have the prin-ciples which were then announced and which I have mentioned, lost their power with God or their attractability to the human mind? I answer confidently, may; but that conservatism which was thus prepared to enter into the conflict has continued unbroken and you may, if you please, attempt to measure the enjoyments that I feel in standing with you after fifty-four years of that conflict to answer to you as I would have answered to them and to God for the propagation of those unperishable principles God for the propagation of those unpershable principles which constitute the power of God unto salvation. I have not now any disposition of mind, I have no feeling within my heart to swerve one item to the right or to the left from the declaration of the principles then made, and it is with the understanding that I meet you this morning and strike glad hands with everyone of you under a renewal of the bond of our associate fellowship in Christ for the continuation of that great warfare against evil and wrong in the world, against error and unbelief in them who have declared a profession of faith in God and in Christ, and a re-measure again and again of those who choose to meet, and disclaim against our presentation of choose to meet and disclaim against our presentation of choose to meet and disclaim against our presentation of those principles and to remember so far as continues to live with us, the obligation we are still under.

May God, in His infinite mercy, grant that the Sipirit of Christ which has from the first watch dover the interests of this Church continue operative, unspent it its force among its devotees and continue to spread more widely among those who are inquiring after the faith.

It pleases me to state that the Spirit of God has been with me from time to time and that under its influence

I feel an added source of comfort and consolation in meet-ing with you again in this fifty-fourth year of my service and with you again it mis intry-routerly year or my service, at its close. How long God may permit me to live, how far He will permit me to retain the possession of my natural faculties, including that dominating power of mind, I know not, and so far as I am concerned, understanding that it lies with Him, I have no feeling to complain, I have no feeling of mistrust, I am willing to subscribe now as I have been hitherto unto that massy confession of belief in God "Though He slay me, yet will I trust Him."

belief in God "Though He slay me, yet will I trust Hin."

I feel the assurance this morning that our session is to be, as to its finality, a good one. As to what may transpire during these sessions, I may have some divinity of mind, but if I can but remember, if we all but can remember, that we are but servants together in a common cause I can feel satisfied, so far as myself is concerned, and justified so far as all these my associate members are concerned, that it will not be in the service of our private interests or that our prejudices shall control us in the discharge of our duties, but that the love and fellowship due from laboring together in a common cause shall still use the same common cause shall still server the common cause shall still server the common cause that the love and fellowship due from laboring together in a common cause shall still server. due from laboring together in a common cause shall still continue to bind us together and that we shall forget that we shall disregard those things that may be presented we shall disregard those things that may be presented from that that would seek to disrupt our work and bring it to naught—so sow dissention, disfellowship and disruption among us from ourselves.

I adjure you, then, in the opening of this session of Conference to consider as a rule safe to obey in principle and in action, to apply those of others, especially those with whom our labor lies, the being as honest of intention, as upright in motive as we ourselves ask to be extended to us and that we may not forget the application of these principles that we can treat each other with common courtesy and kindness; nay, more, that we may stand within the circle of each other's acquaintance as not only willing but absolutely free to conduct ourselves toward each other under that redeeming qualification.

With added thankfulness to God for the liberty of the occasion accorded me to address you at the opening of this occasion accorded me to address you at the opening of this session, I submit our cause to the hands of Him in whose hands rests the destiny of men and of nations.

As the venerable man who has stood at the head of the Church for fifty-four years directing and protecting its growth from the little body struggling for an existence on April 6, 1860, to its present magnitude, related briefly some of his experiences in the work, tears came to the eyes of many-as they realized that the one who had stood so strong as their leader would not be able to continue many years more because of advancing Yet no doubt there were tears of joy in being permitted to see and hear him once more. The audience listened with wrapt attention to his words.

According to the action of the conference of 1913 the reports of the officers and committees were, so far as practicable, printed beforehand, Copies were distributed to the delegates and exofficios.

In accordance with the provisions made for organization the chair announced the following appointments:

Secretaries: R. S. Salyards, M. H. Siegfried and Frank Russell.

Stenographers: Mrs. W. W. Smith, R. Archibald and Sr. Lewis.

Chorister: A. N. Hoxie, assisted by Mrs. B. M. Anderson and Mrs. E. S. McNichols.

Organist: Ralph G. Smith, with power to chose assistants.

Credentials Committee, previously appointed: Heman C. Smith, J. F. Garver and L. G. Holloway; H. C. Smith not being present, R. J. Lambert was chosen in his place.

Ushers: Local deacons, with power to choose sistants.

Postmaster: Lester Haas.

Press Committee: J. F. Garver, Charles Fry and A. M. Chase.

Boy Scouts offered themselves Messengers: for conference business.

The chairman announced a course of lectures for the Melchisedec Priesthood, beginning Tuesday, April 7th, at 8 a. m., by Walter W. Smith, of Philadelphia, on Homiletics, to be followed by a course on Comparative Religions, by S. A. Burgess, of St. Louis.

The printed report of the Credential Committee was adopted, subject to such minor changes as might be necessary.

A question arose as to the admissibility of delsegates elected as alternates, but such were by vote admitted.

The Presidency presented a report of considerable length covering the work of the Quorum for the year. As giving an insight into the work, not only of the Presidency but of the Church at large, it is valuable. It will appear in another column.

A report from Joseph Luff, Physician to the Church, was read.

Independence, Mo., March 1, 1914. To the General Conference:

Enclosed you will find report of year's work in the Sanitarium, as submitted to me by the House Physician. Personally I have done no work in the Sanitarium except to visit patients there on two occasions by special re-

Have, however, been actively engaged in my duties outside, and attended to all cases that have appealed to me and which could be treated in my office or by mail. The side, and attended to all cases that have appeared to me and which could be tracted in my office or by mail. The results, so far as I have been able to judge, have been up to the expectation of the average physician at least. My health has been, on the whole, better than the former year, but not what might be called good.

My paramount desire and ambition is to act in the place and way that will be most pleasing to God and the ap-pointment I leave entirely to Him, only asking that He will give me the assurance with confidence and courage, intelligently knowing that I am in co-operation with Him. In Gospel bonds,

The Library Commission reported its work, from which report we take the following:

Year Ending February 28, 1914.

The general scope of the library work is broadening and looking soon to the beginning at least of a general library building. It is not deemed advisable, however, to push this particular part of the work at the present time on account of the church finances needed in other directions. on account of the church finances needed in other directions; but the time is near at hand at least, when a beginning should be made, so that the general library can be housed in a fireproof building.

The larger branches and most of the smaller ones are well organized; but what is needed most of all now is activity on the part of the local library boards.

The branches, however, need the careful supervision of the District Boards and can not reach the high mark of efficiency they should without this well directed supervision of the District Boards.

of efficiency they should without this went interests super-vision of the District Boards.

The Library Commission, through its Secretary, is now prepared to furnish District Boards material for active campaigns, mapping out and planning the work for them with their individual branches.

The General Library at Lamoni has been under the careful supervision of the General Librarians, Sr. Ruby Baguley and Bro. H. C. Smith.

Taking it all in all, we consider that the Library work: is in healthful and growing condition, and never before since the organization of the Commission has the work looked better and brighter for a splendid and most successful year's work.

A petition from the Eastern Colorado District regarding the division of the district was presented. The chair suggested that inasmuch as other matters regarding boundary lines would likely come up, it would well be referred to a committee composed of J. F. Garver, D. J. Krahl, O. W. Newton, R. S. Salyards and C. I. Carpenter. The body so voted.

A petition from the Minnesota District was read relative to ministerial allowances. It was referred to the Joint Council of the Presidency, Twelve and Bishopric for consideration and report.

A report from the Joint Council of the Presidency, Twelve and Bishopric relating to the method of nominating members of the Board of Trustees of the Sanitarium was read, together with an original document presented to the conference of 1913 but deferred.

The hour of adjournment having arrived, announcements were made, "This God Is the God We Adore" was sung and Elder W. E. Peak dismissed with prayer.

Afternoon Session.

"My Faith Looks Up to Thee" was the opening hymn at 2 o'clock and prayer was offered by J. W. Rushton.

The report of the Joint Council undisposed of at the morning session was then taken up, and after some discussion it was ordered printed and made the special order for 3 p. m. Thursday.

Attention was called to the published reports in the hands of the delegates, and the chairman stated that the report of the Church Secretary, R. S. Salyards, would be received and spread upon the minutes, there being no objection.

In like manner the reports of C. I. Carpenter, Church Recorder; H. C. Smith, Church Historian; The Order of Evangelists, and Board of Trustees of Graceland College were received.

College Trustees

The terms of two members of the College Board of Trustees having expired, viz., Daniel Anderson and Albert Carmichael, there were nominated to succeed the former, G. R. Wells, D. F. Lambert, R. M. Elvin, Daniel Anderson. G. R. Wells was elected, having received 277 votes. Albert Carmichael was elected to succeed himself. .

College Finances.

That part of the report of the College Board of Trustees which referred to the manner of raising finances was taken up, and its adoption moved. The paragraph reads as follows:

We respectfully represent that the finances of the college can only be properly handled in connection with the finances of the whole church, and consideration given to every department. This end may largely be met through an annual budget, and when fully undertaken, the college should be run within the limits laid down by the body, the debt met, reduced, paid off, and when paid, kept paid, and additional expenditure made only with the consent of the body. There should be economy in collection as well as in expenditure. But under existing circumstances, it is an open question if there is any other alternative than for the College Board of Trustees aggressively to push ef-forts for the securing of means.

Considerable discussion followed, when it was moved that the matter be deferred until the budget of expense be submitted. The motion prevailed.

Hymn 216 was sung and prayer offered by E. A. Smith.

The evening speaker was Alma Barmore, assisted by E. F. Robertson.

Tuesday, April 7th.

The second day of the Conference opened more auspiciously than the first, the rainfall of yesterday having ceased though a cold wind blew

The first meeting of the day was at 8 o'clock in the morning, when the elders and some of the priests met in the lower auditorium to hear a lecture on "Homiletics," by Walter W. Smith, of Philadelphia. It was the first of a series, aiming to qualify the ministry more fully in the work of preaching, and probably is the beginning of a movement looking toward the more thorough preparation of the ministry. The meeting was in charge of F. M. and E. A. Smith.

Shortly after 9 the various quorums of the priesthood next in their appointed places for quorum work, transacting business relating to the quorums or considering problems involving the general good. Other delegates and visitors met at the church at 9 o'clock for prayer and testimony service. O. Salisbury, of Des Moines, and D. C. White, of Lamoni, were in charge.

Elder O. R. Miller, of Burlington, Ia., was the speaker at the preaching service at 10:45, being assisted by J. D. Curtis, of Colorado.

The business session opened at 2 o'clock p. m. with Fredrick M. Smith in the chair. President Joseph Smith was again in his place on the plat-

"From Greenland's Icy Mountains" was sung as an opening number, led by Bishop J. A. Becker. Prayer was offered by Apostle F. M. Sheehy.

The minutes of the sessions of yesterday were read and approved.

Reports.

The chair then called attention to a paragraph in the rport of the President of Graceland College which stated the present need of the college for an athletic field, a gymnasium building and a library building.

The report in full was then ordered spread upon the minutes, subject to subsequent action.

Report of the Board of Trustees of the Sanitarium was received and spread upon the minutes, subject to action, as also was the report of the Trustees of the Children's Home. Sr. Lucy L. Resseguie, the member nominated by the Woman's Auxiliary, and whose term expired, was not replaced, as the Auxiliary Society could not nominate until ther business meeting takes place. Heman C. Smith. whose term also expired, was chosen to succeed

The report of the Committee on Book of Mormon Concordance reported and the committee continued.

With reference to the personnel of the Board of Trustees of the Sanitarium, it was reported that James L. Gray had been selected by the Board to succeed B. J. Scott, resigned. A motion to sustain the Board as now constituted was then offered, but a substitute was proposed giving the Presidency, Twelve, Bishopric and Church Physician power to nominate the members of this board and present the names to this Conference. The substitute was lost, but the original motion prevailed.

The report of Church of Christ, Joint Committee was received and spread upon the minutes, the committee being continued.

The report of the Committee on General Conferenc Resolutions was received and included in the minutes.

A motion was offered continuing this committee, but was amended by adding the instruction that "the next edition be brought up to date by the removal of rescinded resolutions and the inclusion of resolutions of this Conference. After discussion the previous question was called for, which resultd in the amendment and the motion as amended prevailing.

By vote Heman C. Smith was added to this committee.

Reports from the Cammitte on Library Building and that on Monument for the Martyr were received and spread upon the minutes, both committees being continued.

The Committee on Revision of Church History reported. Their report was included in the minutes and the committee continued.

The report of the Social Purity Board was received and John F. Garver was re-elected as represntative of the Church on this Board.

The request of the Social Purity Board for an appropriation of fifty dollars was by vote granted.

Reports of Ministers in Charge.

Ministerial reports from the following were received and spread upon the minutes:

Paul M. Hanson, minister in charge of Eastern Mission No. 3; F. M. Sheehy and J. E. Kelley, ministers in charge of Pacific Slope Mission No. 5; W. H. Greenwood, minister in charge of British Isles Mission No. 7; H. N. Hansen, minister in charge of Scandanavia and Germany Mission No. 8; C. A. Butterworth, minister in charge of Australian mission No. 9; Gomer T. Griffiths, minister in charge of Mission No. 9; J. Charles May, minister in charge of South Sea Island Mission No. 10; U. W. Greene, Minister in charge of Mission No. 12, Palestine.

Motor Boat for Society Island Mission-

Apostle Griffiths in his report suggested that if possible the Saints buy a motor boat for use in the South Sea Island Mission as the means of communication between the islands are very inade quate. He stated that it was necessary to spend many days and nights at a time on the deck of boats, exposed to sun and rain. Shortly before the death of Bro. Charles Lake, which took place in the Islands, he was exposed to such conditions during a trip lasting several days. The sentiment of the Conference was aroused in favor of the sacrificing missionaries representing the Church in that far-off mission, and a motion was made and seconded that the matter of the purchase of a motor boat be referred to the Presidency, Twelve and the Presiding Bishopric, they to report at the Conference of 1915.

An amendment was proposed striking out the words "they to report," etc. and inserting the words "with power to act."

Considerable discussion ensued, which resulted in a call for the previous question, which was ordered. Voting resulted in the amendment and motion as amended both prevailing.

Palestine Mission.

Apostle U. W. Greene, in his report had pointed out the imperative need of the Palestine Mission for better facilities with which to carry on the church and school work in Jerusalem. A motion was offered referring his request to the Presiding Bishop with power to act. As a substitute it was moved and seconded that the matter be referred to the Presidency, Twelve and Presiding Bishop with power to act.

An amendment was offered that the words "and Order of Bishops" be added after Presiding Bishop.

The previous question was again called for and the vote ordered, resulting in the adoption of the amendment and the substitute as amended.

No. 98, in the Hymnal, "O Reapers of Life's Harvest," was sung in closing, and adjournment was taken with prayer by Patriarch J. W. Wight.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION.

The Twenty-third Annual Convention of the General Sunday Sshool Association, of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints was opened at Independence, Mo., Saturday April 4th, 8:30 a.m. Daniel Macgregor Superintendent presided. After singing No. 11, led by Mrs. B. M. Anderson prayer was offered by George Robley of Providence, R. I.

The chairman made stirring remarks, pleading for combination of imperialistic and democratic ideals in conducting the work of the convention.

Rogene, ten year old daughter of Bro. and Sr-B. M. Anderson, pleasingly rendered a piano solo.

The chair being authorized to appoint the necessary committees announced the following:

Committee on Resolutions: J. W. Wight, Frank Mesley, David Dowker.

Notification: H. J. Davison, J. F. Rudd. Press Committee. John Garver, Charles Fry, Appropriations: R. Bullard, and the executive officer.

Ushers: W. A. Bushnell, assisted by local Sunday school ushers.

Credentials Committee as published in the program: Edward Rannie, Earl Corthell, Mrs. Eva Holsworth.

Auditing Committee: Oscar Anderson, J. F. Garver, Annie Allen, as published.

The printed report of the Credential Committee was presented and with some corrections was

The report of the General Superintendent was read as follows: Independence, Mo., 1914.

To the General Association of Sunday School, Delegates and Workers

In submitting you a report of condition in general affecting the Sunday School work, as seen from my viewpoint, I am happy to say that nothing spectacular or extra-ordinary has transpired or is transpiring; rather has there been a steady development in every field of service. In-deed it is as our Lord observed, "The kingdom of heaven deed it is as our Lord observed, "The kingdom of heaven cometh not with observation, neither shall they say, Lo here or Lo there." And this prosperity is to be noticed in the progress of the pupil as well as of Teacher; and for how else could it be, seeing the splendid efforts put forth not only by the General Association, but by local officers and teachers everywhere to equip and qualify their Teach-and teachers everywhere to equip and quanty their reaching Departments.

Of one thing I am particularly happy in saying and that is, that there is a growing desire towards a close alliliation with the General Church. We are sensing as never before, that the Church is our Church, its quorums are our quorums and its Prophet is our Prophet. This is as it should be, and cannot but result in a more manifest the contraction of the property of the property of the property of the property of the Shrift. recognition by the Father in an outpouring of his Spirit.

In these times of agitation, an agitation world-wide in its movement there is a tendency upon the part of our leading workers to consolidate and affiliate our interests with the General Church, and it seems to us unnecessary to argue the good that will undoubtedly result from such to argue the good that will undoubtedly result from such affiliation. "United we stand, Divided we fall."

We trust that this work of co-ordination will continue until we as church members will no longer say "We have a school," nor that we as members of the school can say, "We have a church" but rather that each can say of each other in happy harmony, "We are the Church, We are the School."

School."

It will be unnecessary to particularize the grogress of each of our departments. That will be taken up by my associates holding an immediate oversight of their respective departments. It will be observed that our financial burdens have increased, but this is to be expected since the task of graduation and with it more efficient service has necessitated a larger outlay. It simply means as an association we are growing more than ever before to promote the progress of our ever growing institution.

The labors or your general officers are becoming more exacting as the burdens of office increase, and it will not be expected that the expense of carrying on the work will be limited by the allowance of the past. We are but hube expected that the expense of currying on the work in be limited by the allowance of the past. We are but hu-man, and cannot respond beyond the uttermost; after that must summon assistance from other sources. My associ-ates have wrought well and it has been a pleasure to be asacte have wrought well and it has been a pleasure to be as-sociated with them who are so whole-heartedly consecrat-ed to the work. Their labors of mind and body exacting and ever present, are known only to Him who overseen all and to whom they must, and are looking, for that longed for recognition "Well done good and faithful serv-

We are pleased to note the spirit of sacrince growing among the little ones so bountifully displayed in the late magnificant Christmas offering. It is bigger than ever. In trying to forcast the policy of the future we can only speak in general terms and as we see it we believe that measures should be attempted to confine the recreation. that measures should be attempted to comme the recreational energies of our young within the realms of the saintly surveilance. The association rather than restrain the pentup powers of youth should direct it. It is a big problem and well worthy of our consideration.

Commending the General Association of the Sunday School into the hands of Him who hath so graciously remembered his work I subscribe myself

Elder Macgregor here yielded the chair to G. R. Wells, First Vice President, and then moved that a committee of three be appointed to draft suitable resolutions of condolence to Bro. and Sr. Heman C. Smith, Editors of Senior Quarterly, in view of the death of their daughter, Mrs. Walter Badham. The motion passed and the chair subsequenaly announced Mrs. Annie Stuart, of Mondamin, Ia.; Miss Flory Wind, of Council Bluffsh, and J. L. Parker, of Sioux City, as such committee.

Superintendent, was read, showing activity in his

Mrs. M. A. Etzenhouser, Second Assistant Superintendent, also reported activity, having done considerable correspondence, attended executive meetings, done field work at the New Philadelphia, O.; Montrose, Ia., reunions, and at St. Joseph, Cameron and Independence Stake in Missouri.

A statistical report was presented in printed form by the General Secretary, Wallace N. Robinsno. It showed a total membership in the Sunday School Department of the Church of 33,062; schools, 332; gain in membership, 2,160; gain in schools, 25. Foreign countries having schools are New South Wales and Adelaide, Australia; Alberta, Manitoba, Ontario, Saskatchewan, British Columbia, Nova Scotia, in Canada; England, Hawaiian Island, South Sea Islands, Germany and

The value of Home Department canot be estimated in statistics. One district with its 554 home department members means work, but the field is favorable. Independence, Mo., April 3, 1914.
To the General Sunday School Association:
We, your committee appointed to consider the matter of merging the Religio Society and the Sunday School Asso-report: held a brief introductory session jointly with the committee appointed by the Religio Society during the General Conference of 1913, at which time the matter was briefly considered but no conclusions reached, only that the members of the committee would, during the year, the matter consideration and form a report to the convention at a meeting held prior to the Religio Conven-

No further joint sessions were held.

The committee further reports that we do not favor a merging of the two societies at the present time, only as they both shall merge into the General Church by a closer affiliation throughout the presiding and governing councils oc the Church

To accelerate this affiliation we recommend the adoption of the resolution pending before the convention rela-tive to the placing of one of the First Presidency and one of the Twelve on the executive staff of the Association. And we further recommend the adoption of any proper measures that will give to the Quorum of Twelve and the First Presidency in council assembled some say in the appointment of the General Superintendent of the Association. In this way we believe that the foundation for a correct and cohesive merging of Zion and her institutions can best be effected.

An amendment to strike out the words "at the present time" was made, and discussed in connection with the motion to adopt. We note some of the expressions:

G. R. Wells: "I am pleased with this report because it does not aim at a complete merger of the Sunday school and Religio, but to a closer affiliation with the parent body—the Church.

J. W. Wight: "There is something definite in this report. To merge the two bodies under one head is impracticable, as no one head could govern two bodies."

Jasper Dutton: "I believe we are unnecessarily duplicating the work of committees, etc. should have one body under one head.

Francis Ebeling: "The report still squints at merging. If the merger seed is left in it may grow into a bad weed. It is inconsistent to think of merging two bodies. I believe the two societies should ge closer to the individual heads working in closer harmony."

Lyman Fike: "There is nothing like 'Git, go, and gumption.' The Auxiliaries need specialists who are qualified for the different lines of work, but we need to get closer together."

The previous question being ordered, upon vote the amendment was lost and the original motion was unanimously adopted.

By appointment of the chair and ratification of the body Mrs. B. M. Anderson was made chorister, Mr. Charles B. Eaton, assistant chorister, and Mrs. Arthur Hodges, pianist. Also J. F. Mintun and Mrs. O. L. James, assistant secretaries.

By action of a select committee representing the Joint Council of the Presidency and Twelve meeting with the Executive Committee of the Sunday School Association the following report and resolution were presented, and its adoption moved. After some discussion, the previous question being ordered, the matter, with the embodied resolutions, were adopted unanimously.

Independence, Mo., April 4, 1914.
To the Convention of General Sunday School Association,

Assemblea:
At the request of a select committee representing the Joint Council of the Presidency and the Twelve, the Executive of the Sunday School Association met to confer with said committee, April 3, 1914.

The aforesaid select committee stated that the Sunday chool Convention of last year having referred to the residency and the Twelve a resolution regarding the matter of the General Superintendent giving his whole time to the work of that office, it seemed necessary that consusta-tion should first be had with the officers of the association regarding the matter of nominating the incumbent of the office of General Superintendent. After due deliberation upon this matter the following resolution was moved and unanimously adopted:

"Resolved, That we recommend to the Sunday School Association that the power to nominate the General Superintendent be lodged with the Joint Council of the Presithe Association to meet with the Joint Council of the Presidency and Twelve; a committee of three to be appointed by the Association to meet with the Joint Council and confer with the council on such nominations."

This resolution is now respectfully referred to the Convention for your action.

G. R. Wells, Secreate

The convention proceeded to the selection of the committee of three provided in the resolution. Those chosen were D. J. Khahl, W. W. Smith and J. A. Tanner.

An effort was made to nominate for the office of superintendent, when a point of order was raised that the report just adopted placed the power of nomination with the Joint Council, The chair ruled that the body could make selection of names to be presented to the Council, when the decision of the chair was appealed from before the body. First Assistant Superintendent G. R. Wells resigned the chair to Mrs. M. A. Etzenhouser, Second Assistant, during discussion of the appeal. Upon taking the vote the appeal was sustained.

Some privileged remarks were made and the session closed with singing "Earnest Workers for the Master," and prayer.

SATURDAY, APRIL 4th. Afternoon Session.

"Onward Christian Soldiers" was sung with vigor when Superintendent Daniel Macgregor opened the session at 3 p. m. Prayer was offered by Frank Mesley, of Niagara Falls, N. Y.

The convention was highly entertained by two vocal numbers by Master Orville James, son of Mr. and Mrs. O. L. James.

A school of methods had been held from 2 to 3 p. m., the various departments separately. departments were: Superintendent, directed by G. R. Wells and Mrs. M. A. Etzenhouser; Secretaries, directed by W. N. Robinson and E. D. Moore; Librarians, directed by Amos Allen; Seniors, directed by J. F. Rudd and Miss Mabel Knipschild; Intermediate, directed by M. A. Etzenhouser and Miss Emma L. Criley; Juniors, directed by Mrs. J. H. Logeman and Mrs. D. H. Blair; Primary, directed by Mrs. T. J. Sheldon and Miss Anna Zimmerman; Beginners, directed by Mrs. G. T. Griffiths and Mrs. R. D. Etzenhouser; Home Department, directed by Mrs. E. S. McNichols: Normal Department, directed by Mrs. D. H. Blair, A. E. Warr, H. A. Doty and Mrs. R. S. Salyards.

The chairman called for three minute reports from some of the directors in the school of methods, and the following responded: G. R. Wells, J. F. Rudd, W. N. Robinson, Amos Allen, M. A. Etzenhouser, Mrs. J. H. Logeman, Mrs. T. J. Sheldon, Mrs. E. S. McNichols, Mrs. D. H. Blair, Mrs. G. T. Griffiths. Further mention of these reports. will be made elsewhere.

Supt. Macgregor said he thought the practical work of this conference was the most valuable feature of the convention.

Several resolutions were read and referred by the chair to the Resolutions Committee.

RELIGIO CONVENTION.

The eighteenth Annual Convention of Zion's Religio Literary Society met in the lower auditorium of the Stone Church at Independence, Mo., at 9 am Thursday April 2nd. One half hour was devoted to a prayer service which was in charge of Patriarch J. W. Wight and President J. A. Gunsolley. A profitable session was had there being five prayers and eighteen testimonies.

At 9:30 the business session was opened with President J. A. Gunsolley and Vice President T. J. Elliott in charge. After singing number 144 from Zion's Praises and prayer by Elder Alma Barmore, the printed report of the credential committee was presented, the committee being J. F. Rudd, Arthur E. McKim, and W. A. Bushnell-Several items were referred to the committee, and the report so far as known as correct was adopted.

Organization.

President J. A. Gunsolley and his associate Vice President T. J. Elliott were chosen to preside, and authorized to appoint the committees named in the program.

The credential committee reported some minor changes in the printed report which were approved.

The chair anounced the selection of the following committees:

On Resolutions: J. W. Wight, J. A. Becker, B. J. Scott

Notification: A. C. Barmore, A. W. Smith.

Press: J. F. Garver, Paul Craig, Charles Fry. The passage of a motion to provide for a nominating committee was denied.

Appropriations: Edward Rannie, J. A. Tanner, S. A. Burgess, J. O. Dutton, M. C. Fisher.

Patriarch and Mrs. F. G. Pitt were chosen in charge of the music of the convention.

REPORTS.

The report of Harvey Sandy of Kansas, City, Superintendent of Good Literature was read, followed by a paper written by Max Carmichael of Thurman, Iowa, was read by Miss Ruby Jackson, of St. Joseph, Mo. The subject of the paper was "Should Articles on the Problems of the Day enter into the Literature Distributed."

The report contained the following:

Literature distributed: Tracts, 87,895; Ensigns, 4,686; Heralds, 5,022; Autumn Leaves, 41; Books, 134; Miscellaneous, 6,132; grand total, 103,910. Subscriptions to church papers taken, 30. The figures alone are gratifying, especially when it is taken into consideration that they show an increase of 150 per cent over last year's report. But the part that pleases us most is the manifest willingness the part that picases us most is the manniest willingness and enthusiasm shown by the literature workers throughout the land. The people are beginning to see the wonderful possibilities of this department of the society, and are taking hold of it with faith and confidence. The word comes from allparts: "I cannot do enough for the gospel literature match!" literature work.

The report of the Librarian, S. A. Burgess, of St. Louis, Mo., was read, after which Mrs. T. J. Sheldon of Independence, Mo., gave an address on

After the singing of a hymn the president addressed the convention on "The Keynote of the Coming Year." The "keynote" of his address was 'Learn and Do."

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The afternoon work was begun with a series of conferences which held until 3 pm. Elder J. A. Tanner of Kansas, City held a round table discussion with those interested in "Adults."

Mrs. M. A. Etzenhouser of Independence led a conference dealing with the subject: "Boy of the teen age." M. H. Seigfried, W. O. Hands, and M. A. Etzenhouser made addresses at this confer-

Miss Mable Knipschild of Lamoni was the leader of enthusiastic conference with workers in-terested in "Girls of the Teen age." In addition to the leader, Prof. J. A. Gunsollev addressed the conference.

At 3 p. m. the convention gathered in the upper auditorium and after the singing of a hymn prayer was offered by Eld. A. G. Miller of Mississippi. The minutes were read and an additional report of the credentials committee.

Standing Committee.

The reports of standing committees were taken up one by one.

In behalf of the Executive Committee the president reported that there had been no meeting held since immediately after the close of the last convention, and that consequently there was no report to make.

The lessons Committee reported having held such meetings as were necessary in connection with adopting outlines of subject matter upon It was which the less ons were to be written. found early in the year that material for biographical sketches of prominent men and women of the church for Junior Lessons was difficult to obtain, and hence a change was authorized whereby the biographies of men of Book of Mormon history were taken instead."

The Committee on Revision of Lessons reported having performed its duty, and that the utmost good feeling between the Committee and the Editor had characterized the work throughout the

The Religio Historian, Mrs. J. A. Gardner, reported her work. The report in part follows:

We have just completed copy which covers the first two ears of the history of the Religio, and several years preliminary to its organization.

The progress of this work has been slow because of insufficient data in the records, and we have had to make a careful and detailed search through the church papers and conference minutes. Besides this, much correspondence has been necessary in order to confirm certain data and to correct conflicting statements.

Any statement of facts given which were not found in minutes of the Religio, Conference or Church pay been verified by two or more of those who were immediately concerned.

A typewritten copy of the above mentioned history is ow in the hands of our President, J. A. Gunsolley.

Some constitutional amendmendments were reported by the Committee on Constitutional Amendments, the same having been published in the February "Autumn Leaves' sufficiently previous to the convention as to be within the rules. No action was taken at this time.

Elbert A. Smith, Editor of the Arena Department in Autumn Leaves reported having performed his work, being ably assisted by Sr. Estella Wight. He said the work was so well known to readers of Autumn Leaves that he did not need to report further.

Ralph W. Farrell. editor of the Religio Quarterly reported that it seemed that he had already reported every week. Apleasing change had ben made in the apparanc of the Qurterly. He says: "If I did not think that some good was being accomplished I should give up the task; as it is I feel that a larger interest in the latter day revelations has been awakened, and the end is not yet* * *The great chief thing which the Religian must have before his or her eye is the NEXT step which leads toward God."

S. A. Burgess reported for the Committee on Normal Text Book of the Bible. He said in part: We have heard nothing directly from any other member of the committee or Board of Editors since the last Gen-eral Convention. Early in the Convention year we prepared manuscript on topics assigned us, "The Bible, Its Meaning, Books, Texts, Canon and Origin" and the Jewish Calandar," and sent them to the chairman of the committee, Elder J. W. Peterson. We had previously received his manuscript. Whether any other manuscript has been prepared we do not know. We were advised early in the year , through your executive officer, that Mrs. Anna Salyards had resigned. An effort was made to fill the vacancy, but, we were recently advised, without success. Your President also informed us that Mrs. W. H. Deam has resigned.

Per a previous request of Elder Elbert A. Smith, we also prepared a more extensive outline on Biblical Criti-cism, which was printed in the Herald. This had nothing directly to do with the committee, except that this matter of fuller discussion in the Herald had been considered by committee.

ersonally we believe there is need for such work; and that we have the talent in the Church and its auxiliaries to prepare it, so believe the work should be continued and completed.

E. H. Fisher, the Religio member of the Library Commission, reported encouragingly of the library work. Among other things he said: See report in another column.

C. B. Woodstock, Religio Member of the Social Purity Board representing the Religio, Sunday School Association and the general Church, reported. The report in part reads:

The past year has seen but little public activity on the art of the Board for the reason that we have sought through careful study and research to reach a successful through careful study and research to reach a successful analysis of the problems we desire to solve. The lack of agreement among leading educators of today concerning both method and policy in dealing with the perplexing problems of immorality and impurity, warrants us in moving forward with caution. We are convinced that the most fruitful field for educational development is among most fruitful field for educational development is among the present home builders and the coming fathers and mothers of the next generation. A certain amount of warning may be necessary that serious evils and pitfulls may be avoided, but more we need right living among parents, right preaching on the part of the ministry, intelligent parental instruction of the young, proper supervision of, and provision for, wholesome, legitimate, and educational recreation for our young people of all ages; a simple, nutritious diet, and the spirit of the restored gospel put into practical daily application. It is the power of the Holy Spirit, enlightening, directing, and strengthening the body, that may enable the Saints to occupy as the children of God: The gospel of Jesus Christ intelligently and consistently lived, stands paramount as the most and consistently lived, stands paramount as the most effective moral prophylaxis.

Among the publications by men, dealing with the thought and problems of the age, we are selecting a linited number which may be endorsed and recommended by our board, and by other official bodies of the church organizations, and then placed within the reach of the membership at large. These books shall be the best that can be obtained until similar works are produced under the influence of the grantle. fluence of the gospel.

S. A. Burgess, president of Graceland College, Lamoni, Iowa, reported that the special fund appropriated last year to help worthy students secure their education, had all been used, the money being loaned to students. It was expected it would be repaid within two years when it would be again available for helping others. It was urged that a similar appropriation be made this year.

A paper on"Conserving for the Church;' was read by Miss Minnie Scott, of St. Joseph, Mo., which was by vote referred to the Editor of Autumn Leaves for publication.

Elder R. C. Russell of Canada addressed the onvention on the subject of "What can the Religio contribute to the life of the Church?

The report of the president, J. A. Gunsolley was read by himself. He said the statistics showed a gain all along the line.

We are in the "hastening time," it has been said, and what element could contribute more to this speeding on-ward than to see our army of young men and young women, our boys and our girls, so trained, and so enthused with the idea that this is the work of God, that they o!! would become active laborers in the Lord's vineyard?
1.0 one can estimate the rate of progress this church would take on were this the case.

To bring this about two things are necessary, a greater deeper spirituality, and a more complete directing of the activities of the young people. Your presiding officer believed it was a mistake when we abandoned the monthly prayer-meeting, and strongly advises that there he a r turn to the greater devotional spirit incident to the ob-servance of specific time for devotional training. Some of servaine to specific time for devotional training. Some of our best locals are at the present time gaining rich experience from this feature of their activities. I am also convinced that our policy of dealing with the young is too much of the "Johnnie don't" kind. Little use it is to be adminishing them "don't do this," or "don't go there," or to complain over the lack of interest in better things, so long as so little is done to furnish them something interesting as so little is done to furnish them something interesting to do or some interesting places to go.

It is of little consequence, too, for me, or any one, to call attention to this matter without offering some suggestions as to practical ways of improving the situation. It is with no little satisfaction to know that social purity work has taken definite satisfaction to know that social purity work has taken definite shape and has come to stay, after being urged in two consecutive communications to the conventions. Taking courage from this, I venture suggestions along this line. Every branch of the church has young people, more or less. All young people are alike, more or less. Nearly all branches have Sunday Schools, and many have Religios. These branches, Sunday Schools and Religios all have officers. These officers are responsible for the care of the membership, not only to see that they do not do wrong, but to see that they do do right. The training of the young in right-doing is of much more ine training of the young in right-doing is of much more importance than restraining them when older from wrong-doing. Hence, these officers should co-operate, as all have to do with the same individuals, more or less. Council meetings should be held at stated intervals, attended by the officers of all the organizations, including those of the Woman's Auxiliary, at which the whole sitution should be canvassed, measures discussed and adopted to improve conditions. Containly the branch officers to improve conditions. Certainly the branch officers should take the initiative in such meetings.

Why should not the church be made more of a special center, where the young may find such amusement, enter-tainment and training as will develop them along right lines? This need not necessarily remove from it in any degree aught of sanctity that should attach to it.

Why could there not be as a result of joint effort, by committees for the purpose, some manual work that would not only entertain, but also train in useful things? Why could there not be as a result of such co-operation a committee to have supervision and charge of directing the amusement and entertainment of the community, securing a series of good lectures, concerts, and entertainments of various kinds? The social feature could be worked out upon the part of the Religio through the Social Comittee, but there is no committee whose particular duty it would be to provide for the industrial work. The joint council, however, could provide one.

These two things I believe to be our most preent need at the present time. The sweetest thing anyone ever experienced is the communion with God through His Holy Spirit. Our young people need to have this experience, and it will be realized in the prayer and devotional service as no where else. The study is all right, and the program idea is correct, but more is needed. As evidence that it is needed we have only to be reminded that in some branches clubs and leagues are being organized for the acomplishing of such things as I have mentioned. There is nothing undertaken by any of them that the Religio could not properly provide for, and should do so, so long as they are legitimate.

as they are legitimate.

May we, then be guided by divine wisdom in planning and executing, so that a movement "onward and upward" may be seen all along the line.

Mrs. Eva Holsworth, Superintendent of the Home Class Department reported. The report showed receipts $13.58. Expenditures $7.56.

The report said:

The report said:

Some of the superintendents have reported that the interest has grown in this department; while others find that many will take up the work but owing to the fact that our lessons are based upon the Doctrine andCovenants many of the members drop out. The department obtains most of its members from among the isolated Saints and it appears that the lessons we are using are too difficult. Among isolated ones we find that the Book of Mornion the second so much polyand. We have sought this year to Among isolated ones we find that the Book of Mornion lessons are much enjoyed. We have sought this year to reach some of the isolated ones and now have an enrollment of about sixty members, the majority of whom are entirely isolated from church privileges, and they seem to be very appreciative of the instruction they are obtaining through this medium.

The Home Department is a missionary work, and we wish all the superintendents could realize the macnitude.

wish all the superintendents could realize the magnitude of their calling, and the great possibilities before them of gaining souls to Christ, and of presenting this work to many hungry souls who are isolated. To these it is a means whereby they may qualify for future usefulness and service in the Master's cause, so when the Master calls they may be ready to say, "Here am I, Lord, use

me."
The report of Mrs. David H. Blair, Superintendent of the Normal Department was read, covering eleven months of the year. The receipts were $69.23, Expenditures $50.37, Balance on hand $18.86. Among other things the report said:

The normal department has had a very busy year. We have not had so many enrollments as formerly, but a very much larger per cent have taken examinations. This shows that our workers now realize that a normal diploma is a reward of merit and means a definite amount of work Examinations.—Teacher training lessons: First examination, 287; second examination, 121; third examination, 70. Examinations Book of Mormon Normal: First examination 56; second examination, 27; third examination, 39; making a total on the standard course of 109 gradu-ates. Six have taken examinations on the advanced course.

The Sunday School and Religio officers are beginning to realize that they are responsible for the training of an efficient force of workers and teachers, and many see the advisability of making the training work a part of the curriculum of every school and local.

A motion to revert to the former method of holding a Religio prayermeeting monthly as suggested by the president in his report, was referred to the resolutions committee.

The following was also moved, and referred to the resolutions committee.

Resolved that the suggestions on social and industrial features in the report of the president be approved, and resolved that the executive committee of the Z. R. L. S. in consultation with the First Presidency of the church be authorized to prepare a definite plan for the maturing of such features, such plan to be presented to the next General Convention for consideration and action.

Two letters from Jerusalem, one from Apostle U. W. Greene, and one from Sr. Koehler setting forth the conditions and needs of the work in that mission, and suggesting how help might be offered were read. No action was taken.

Hymn 73 was sung and the benediction was offered by M. C. Fisher, of Boston.

Thursday April 2nd, Evening Session.

This session was opened with Pres. Gunsolley and W. A. Bushnell in charge. Following the opening exercises Christian Ott, Mayor of the City of Independence made an address of welcome. greeting the visiting delegates and giving them the freedom of the city, inviting them to call upon him at the city hall. The mayor was warmly greeted and his address well received by the saints.

An excelent talk was made by L. F. P. Curry of Pitsburg, Pa., who talked on "Mr. Pastor, how are you rated?" showing the assets and liabilities of the pastor's makeup Pres. E. A. Smith also addressed the convention on Three Keys, which were Work, Study, Faith. In introducing his address he said he appreciated the invitation of the mayor as he had never been in the city hall though he had been in the jail-Being a progressive however he did not remain there. He led on from the thought of being progressive to show the three keys to a successful life.

To give a few minutes relaxation to the essembly Elder Pitt sang "The Holy City," Sr. Pitt accompanying him upon the piano. The audience sang "When we met safe at Home," and W. A. Bushnell offered the benediction.

Friday April 3rd, Morning Session.

At eight o'clock a meeting was held in the lower auditorium to consider the subject of Social Purity. It was under the auspices of the Social Purity Board, R. W. Farrell of Winter Hill, Mass., being in charge, who also offered the prayer. He introduced Charles B. Woodstock of Lamoni, member of the board, who spoke upon "Social Purity in the World." He emphasized the fact that the world recognized the pressing need of action by those whose minds have been awakened to the terrible menace sweeping the country. He offered statistics to show the alarming extent to which the evil has developed, and that it has actually become a fearful scourge. F. A. Russell also spoke "Purity Work in the Church." He said we must have before we can give. Only to the extent that our lives and actions are pure can God approve. Be pure and clean in conversation and conduct, avoiding the suggestion of evil. He represented the extremes of thoughts which seek to enter the mind as the animals of a menagerie. Innocent and pure thoughts like the lamb may be left free to act and frolic-they will do no harm. but evil thoughts like the lion, must be caged and kept under absolute control or serious harm will result. The meeting was well attended by the men of the convention.

The regular session opened at 9 am, with J. A. Gunsolley presiding, assisted by A. W. Smith, President of the St. Louis District who offered praver.

The report of the general treasurer was read, showing total receipts including a balance of $2756.36 on hand March 26th 1913, of $3530.84 The expenditures were $1261.31, leaving a balance on hand February 16, 1914 of $2269.53. It was reported correct by an auditing committee composed of Charles Fry, Lester Haas, and Kearney Kelley. Both the treasurer's and the auditor's reports were adopted.

Temperance Department.

A proposed amendment was read from February Autumn Leaves providing for the adding to the list of officers a "Superintendent of Temperance Department," who "shall have general charge of the work of this department," etc. A recommendation for its adoption from the resolutions committee was approved and the amendment adopted.

Amendment on Tobacco.

A proposed amendment to the constitution, also published in February Autumn Leaves providing that "Members of Zion's Religio Literary Society purposes than those sanctioned in Doctrine and Covenants, are hereby declared disqualified for officers or teachers in this organization," was read and its adoption moved. This developed considerable discussion from which we caught the following points:

J. W. Wight: Its adoption may prevent the organization of many locals in localities where the people have not as yet been educated above the use of tobacco.

O. D. Shirk: It seems to me that if we adopt this resolution, to be consistent we should adopt one to deny the offices of the Religio to those who eat meat in the summer time, as both are advised against in the Word of Wisdom.

F. G. Pitt: I doubt if there is anyone in the church to whom tobacco is more disgusting than myself, but I have come from a part of the country where tobacco is generally used by men or women. I think we ought to go slow. Our aim should be to educate—not to force. A brother told me once when they were trying to pay off a church debt: "Let them get the good Spirit and the money will come alright." So with tobacco— In time these outlying districts will come to cease its use. I plead for tolerance.

W. A. Bushnell: There was a time years ogo when among the officers of the Independence local several used tobacco, but that time has passed. Others may come to our standard.

J. A. Tanner: This resolution does not infringe upon the liberties of any. It does not say that you shall not smoke or chew, but it provides that only pure men and women shall be our teachers to train our children. There should not be one set of rules for the ministry and another for the members, but the revelation says we should all be blameless. We have the right to say that a man shall not spit on our carpets, or smoke in our parlor, and we have a right to say that one who uses tobacco shall not hold office in the Religio.

Bro. Zeigler suggested that the matter be left to the districts and locals.

Mrs. Joseph Harrington referred to the ideals set by the North in regard to slavery and stated that the whole country had been benefitted by the adoption of those higher ideals notwithstanding it created somewhat of a stir.

Leon Burdick: I have been some in the regions where many of the saints are addicted to tobacco but never yet have I seen an active worker in the church who used it but what he was ashamed of Dan. Macgregor spoke of the power in the gospel which helps men to overcome their evil habits, but said that legislation never will. Such resolutions come up every year. If we pass it, another will come up next year like this "Resolved that we don't baptize anybody who uses tobacco," "Resolved that nobody shall be permited to pray or bear testimony in church who uses tobacco. Let the Spirit of God do its work.

F. A. Russell: The resolution does not prohibit members from doing as they please in this matter, but only says that we shall not make them officers in the Religio if they use it. I have been informed that by the action of the Iowa Legislature a boy who uses tobacco is not permitted to attend the public schools. If persons want to occupy as officers this resolution means they must clean up.

The vote was taken and carried, 117 voting for and 31 against.

Granville S. Trowbridge spoke on "Organization and its Activities as a means of Character Build-

Elder F. G. Pitt sang "If we could only understand," from Zion's Praises, the audience joining in a chorus, following which B. J. Scott of St. Joseph, Mo., spoke on "The Religio and the Community."

The report of the committee upon merging the Religio and Sunday school Associations, appointed last year presented a report. Tine for adljournment being near no action was taken at this time.

Friday April 3rd, Afternoon Session.

The session apened with singing, prayer being offered by J. L. Parker of Des Moines, Iowa.

The Merger.

After the reading of the minutes, the matter of merging the associations, which was pending at the adjournment of the morning session, was taken up, and the report of the committee was again read:

Independence, Mo., April 3, 1914. To the General Religio Convention, Greeting:

We your committee appointed to consider the question of affiliating the auxiliaries of the Church, desire to rethat so far as practicable to do so the committee has had, under advisement the matter committed to them though much of the work has of necessity been done out side of committee room.

The members of the committee are agreed that the time is opportune for at least the initial steps to be taken look-ing to a closer affiliation of the work of the auxiliaries of the church. Therefore, we desire strongly mend that the question of amalgamation be looked upon with favor by your honorable body, though the committee is unprepared at present to attempt a report upon the details of the organization. Suffice it to say that in the opinion of the committee this movement will not in any opinion of the committee this movement will not in any way reduce the number of workers, but will increase the opportunities for individual efforts, though the duplication of machinery will thereby be eliminated, and this is the great point to be reached, namely, the elimination of all unnecessary duplication of machinery, and increasing the force of workers so that activities will be entered in upon. Let us indicate briefly what some of these unreached activities are:—The social welfare of our young people such as are provided by the Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A.; physical culture; entertainments and social improvement in general; an expanded literary program; provement in general; an expanded literary program; general educational facilities not provided by our public schools; musical development; manual and vocational training; night schools for the benefit of those not able to take advantage of the facilities of public schools; general course of intellectual development for young and old; amusements and entertainments, together with athletic activities; improvement of conditions surrounding the young people of rural districts; vacational activities, such as summer camps combined with institutes and special programs and summer conventions; in a word, general physical, moral and intellectual deveropment of the young people particularly, many places of which are at the present time entirely neglected by the church and its auxiliaries.

Frederick M. Smith John W. Rushton

Committee.

It was moved to adopt.

R. S. Salyards spoke as a member of the committee. He said in part that it had been suggested that the matter should not be presented till next year, but he believed it was time that we should be thinking about it. He spoke of the duplication, and multiplication of machinery in carrying on the work, and thought that by integration of the various departments more effective work might be done. He held that the plan did not mean the loss of identity of the Religio.

A substitute was offered and moved as follows: Moved that we favor the general idea of closer working arragement between the church and the auxiliary societies and more extended activity along lines suggested cieties and more extended activity along lines suggested in the meiging committee's recommendation, and that the matter be referred to a joint committee composed of three members each from the Religio and Sunday school and Woman's Auxiliary; this committee to formulate a definite plan for amalgamation, and report to next General Conference and conventions, provided the General Conference and other auxiliaries concur.

R. S. Salvards again spoke showing the right of nomination resident within the leading quorums of the church.

A question being raised as to the effect of the substitute upon the original motion it was moved that the substitute be laid upon the table until the main question be disposed of, which was carried.

After further remarks the vote was taken resulting in a tie seventy on each side. The vote being challenged a recount was made resulting in its adoption by a vote of 83 to 78. An effort to take up the substitute failed.

Election of Officers.

It was moved that the body nominate the entire staff of officers and submit to the council of the Presidency and Twelve of the Church for its approval.

It was resolved as a substitute that we proceed to the election of officers.

On the original motion the question was asked if it did not infringe upon the constitution to thus change the order of the procedure in the election.

The chair ruled the proposed action constitutional, reading from the constitution: manner of election shall be determined by the convention assembled."

After some discussion the vote was taken and the substitute was lost. The original motion prevailed.

"Take up thy cross," was sung and the body proceeded to nominate by acclamation as follows: For Superintendent: J. A. Gunsolley, T. J. Elliott, L. F. P. Curry and J. A. Gardner.

For Vice President: T. J. Elliott, W. A. Bushnell, Granville S. Trowbridge, L. F. P. Curry. For Secretary: Mrs. M. A. Etzenhouser, Miss Minnie Scott, Mrs. Annie Stuart.

For Treasurer: J. A. Gardner, John Smith, J. A. Becker.

For Librarian: S. A. Burgess, Mrs. J. A. Gardner, Mrs. T. J. Sheldon.

For Superintendent Home Department: Mrs. Eva Holsworth, Mrs. Alberta Lake.

For Superintendent of Temperance Department: J. W. Gunsolley, B. J. Scott.

The chair announced that the list of nominees would be submitted by the hand of the Notification Committee to the joint council of the church.

The Resolutions Committee presented the following which was adopted.

"Resolved that the suggestions of the president relating to social and industrial features, be referred to the First Presidency of the Church and the Executive Board for consideration and report."

The committee also reported the following:

"Resolved, That the appointment of field workers be referred to the Joint Council of the Presidency and Twelve for their consideration and report, with the request that they make such recommendations and suggestions with reference to such appointments and our rights therein as they may feel should be made."

The resolution was adopted.

In substitution of a resolution read at a previous session it was

Resolved, that as a convention, we favor the reinstatement of the monthly prayermeeting, as suggested in the President's report.

Several spoke in favor of strengthening the devotional spirit, and the resolution was adopted.

A letter from the Joint Council was read reporting a pleasant and cordial session had with the Executive of the Religio.

last year to help Graceland Students:

In regard to the appropriation made by the General Convention of 1913 to Graceland College, we beg leave to report that some problems in the administration required consideration this year so that all the applications were not made quite as fully as we should have liked.

On the practical side, five students received material help, and this help was limited to those actually needing it The number of students was limited for the simple reason, that those requiring less than $60.00 were assigned to the Sunday School fund, for ease in book-keeping, since five times sixty makes the even $300.00. This money has been a great help to the students. We condidently expect that a great part of it will be repaid within two years, and so become again available.

The College is in serious need of help, because of the taking of the collection for the debt fund for the Presiding Bishop hindered the collection in behalf of the College until November, and meant on the whole, a decrease on the College day collection and endowments. Early in November Elder John W. Wight, at the advice of the Bishop, was put in the field and succeeded in raising nearly $1,20.00.0 by March 15. While this is valuable help, it will easily be seen that it will not relieve the College from wareing demands let alone precise which your lege from pressing demads, let alone provide what your fund does for those students needing help. Previously those in need of help received it by donations of scholarships or room rent coupons. We believe your method to be greatly preferred; that is, to loan the money when the student needs it, with the privilege and expectation of its being repaid, as soon as may be practicable.

We therefore, respectfully petition and request of your honorable body, the continuation of this fund by a like donation this present year.

The term of Sr. W. H. Cowan of Denver as member of the Committee on Graceland College Endowment Fund having expired, she was elected to succeed herself.

The Council of Seven Presidents of Seventy of the Church presented a report expressing the opinion that members of the Quorum of Seventy, the the missionaries of the Church, should not be chosen for officers of the auxiliary organizations without the approval of the appointing powers of the Church to whom they are subject. The matter was referred to the Joint Council.

A report from the Appropriations Committee including a document from the Quorum of the Twelve was read. The document from the Twelve as follows was approved:

To the appropriation committee of Z. R. L. S.

I am authorized to present you the following resolution of the Quorum of Twelve: Moved, we advise the 2 R. L. Society to limit their donations to the Palestine Mission to $50 for tracts and $75 for supplies for school work. But do not favor at the present time the investment of money in translating the Book of Mormon into Arabic language.

The Quorum express their appreciation of the generosity of the Z. R. L. Society in donating money for the translating of literature and other work, but advise that in future all money which your society can donate for these purposes be placed in the hands of the Presiding Bishop, subject to disposition by the Presidency and Twelve, and e Bishopric. Very respectfully,

John W. Rushton, Secy.

Approved by Appropriation Com. M. C. Fisher, Clerk.

The appropriations recommended by the committee for yearly expenses were as follows the same being adopted:

Good Literature Department $75. Normal Department $75, Home Department $50, Social Purity Board $50, General expense fund $350, Library Commission $100.

The session apjourned to the evening hour.

Friday April 3rd, Evening Session. "Trust and Obey," was sung, and A. E. Warr of Bay Minette, Ala., offered prayer.

Nominations were made for members of the Committe on Normal Text Book, when it was moved "That as far as our rights are concerned, the matter be referred to the Executive Committee, Board of Publication, and Church Historian with power to act." It was so referred.

Amendments.

The proposed constitutional amendment published in March Autumn Leaves providing that local elections be held the second week of December and June instead of the first week of January and July, and also providing that the District Presidency shall be ex-officio members of the district convention, was adopted-

No action was taken on the proposed amendment to Section 3, Article 3, as published in January Autumn Leaves.

"The business of the convention being finished," President J. A. Gunsolley, in his closing remarks said, "I am as happy as I can be and have been so all through the convention, not excepting the time this afternoon when my name was in I would have been just as happy if a change had been made in the Presidency, and I would have been glad had Bro. Elliott been chosen, but I want to be willing to work when the responsibility is placed upon me. It has been gratifying to note the excellent good feeling throughout the convention, with nothing in the way of dis-harmony to disturb. I hope for a successful year."

"Go Spread the Joyful Tidings" was sung, and President Gunsolley gave a fitting benediction, when the convention stood adjourned.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION.

Continued from page 3 ing arrived the matter was voted deferred to the evening session.

"I Have Found the Glorious Gospel" was sung with emphasis, and Chairman G. R. Wells dismissed with prayer.

Evening Session.

The Saturday evening sesion mixed entertainment with business in a pleasant way. Little time is lost between sessions, so that the convention "Hark! 'Tis the Shepherd's opened at 7 o'clock Voice" was sung by the largest audience of the conventions, and prayer was offered by J. F. Garver, of Lamoni.

A very interesting paper on "Learning to Live by Serving," was read by Mrs. Flo. McNichols, of Atchison, Kas., which was by vote referred to the editor of Autumn Leaves.

The Committee on Appropriations recommended that the proposed appropriation of $50 to the Social Purity Board be referred to the Executive Committee with power to act. It was so referred.

A further recommendation that the request of Elder Alexander Kippe, of the German mission, for help in translating and publishing the Doctrine and Covenants in the German language, be referred to the General Conference, was adopted.

The Independence choir, under the direction of Mrs. B. M. Anderson, daughter of President Joseph Smith, rendered two excellent numbers entitled "Daybreak" and "Silent Night."

The request of U. W. Green, of the Apostleship, for help in prosecuting the Palestine Mission and in the establishing of a school at Jersusalem, was, upon recommendation of the Appropriating Committee, referred to the General Conference. committee then recommended an appropriation of $125, the amount asked of the Association, which was granted.

A petition for the adoption of a letter of removal of members of Sunday schools removing from one school to another was presented through the Resolutions Committee. A motion to adopt was laid on the table-

A petition from the Southern California District for a new form of record book was referred to the Executive Committee with power to act.

A request for the publication of a book of poems and recitations suitable for Sunday school children, and representative of the faith of the Church, was referred to the Executive Committee with power to act.

A request from the Eastern Michigan District, relative to changes in the Quarterlies, was referred to the Executive and Lessons Committees with power to act.

A petition of the Southern Nebraska District for a field worker was likewise referred to the Executive Committee.

The matter of a Cradle Roll superintendent, deferred from the last sesion, was taken up. It was moved to defer one year. A motion to lay on the table prevailed.

A report from J. W. Peterson as a member of the Committee on Bible and Normal Text Book was read, showing that a portion of the work had been completed and was in the hands of the President of the Board of Publication, Upon the suggestion of Supt. Macgregor that an offering be taken at the Sunday afternoon session in behalf of the Palestine Mission it was so moved. After some discussion it was decided to take the collection to-night. While "Onward Christian Soldiers" was being sung offerings were made to the amount of $117.31, to which was added from the sale of delegate badges $6.20, making at total of $123.51. This, with $125 previously appropriated, and a like amount appropriated by the Religio, provides a fund of $373.51 for the mission at Jerusalem. A subsequent action provided for a further collection on Sunday evening.

The matter of a Bible Normal Book was taken up and referred by vote to the General Conference.

Election of Officers.

Upon taking up the election of officers the chair was resigned to G. R. Wells. The committee appointed to confer with the Joint Council reported the council's nomination of Wallace N. Robinson for Superintendent. He was elected by a vote of 233 to 4.

For First Assistant Superintendent-Nominations: L. F. P. Curry, G. R. Wells, Granville S. Trowbridge. G. R. Wells elected.

A vocal sextette, "Donizetti," was sung by Misses Bernice Griffith and Emma L. Criley, and Messrs. C. B. Eaton, Frank Criley, O. Flanders and Clarence Resch. It was well rendered and received the approval of the asesmbly.

A vote of thanks was tendered the retiring Superintendent, Daniel Macgregor. Also to Mrs. M. A. Etzenhouser, the retiring Second Assistant Superintendent

"Praise God From Whom All Blessings Flow" was sure and Supt. Macgregor offered the closing benediction.

Sunday, April 5, 1914. work began early this Convention morning, meeting at 7:45 for prayer, John Smith and G. E. Harrington being in charge. From 9:30 to 10:30 the regular session of Sunday school was held, in charge of the local officers. The attendance was reported as being over 2,000. Immediately after the school session at 10:30 the appointed program was taken up. After the usual devotional exercises Mrs. W. N. Robinson, of Kansas City, rendered a vocal solo, followed by "A Critic's Comments on the Sunday School Session Just held." D. J. Krahl spoke on "Securing Efficiency," and L. F. P. Curry spoke on "The Father of the Boy." A violin solo and a talk on "Music; Its Place and Power in the School," by Albert N. Hoxie, Jr., of Philadelphia, completed the morning

Sunday Afternoon, April 5, 1914.

From 1 to 2 o'clock the School of Methods held a session similar to that of Saturday afternoon, convening in the basement of the church. The various departments of the Sunday school work were represented.

Beginning at 2:15 a sacramental service was held in both the auditorium and the basement, that first mentioned being in charge of the Independence Stake Presidency, and the latter in charge of Elder M. H. Bond. The meetings were active and a good spirit was manifested throughout.

At 3:30 a chorus selected from pupils of the lntermediate Department of the local Sunday school rendered a song, which was followed by threeminute reports from the School of Methods.

At 4:10 Miss Mabel Knipschild, of Lamoni, Ia., read a paper on "The Successful Teacher," which was very interesting and instructive. This number was later ordered to be submitted to the editor of the Sunday School Exponent for publication.

Members of the Sunday School Orchestra then contributed a number, following which John Smith, President of the Lamoni Stake, made a talk on "An Old New England School." This completed the program for the afternoon.

The attendance was quite large, which necessitated overflow meetings. This was arranged for during the afternoon by holding a session devoted to Round Table work in the basement. A number of excellent points on the process of teaching were developed. This discussion was in charge of W. W. Smith, Philadelphia, Pa., and D. J. Krahl, Independence, Mo.

Sunday Eevening, April 5, 1914.

The session opened at 7:30 o'clock, Supt. W. N. Robinson and the retiring Superintendent, Daniel Macgregor, being in charge.

The congregation very heartily sung number 38 in the "Zion's Praises," after which prayer was offered by Elder John W. Rushton.

Two numbers were then rendered by the Mt. Zion Orchestra, "Hozanna," by Granier, and a selection from the opera "Il Trovatore," by Verdi. Mr. Chas. B. Eaton wielded the baton

A paper was read, written by Miss Lucy H. Sears, New Bedford, Mass., on the subject of "Handwork and Homework."

One of her remarks was that "Eve learned something she wanted to know when she ate of the forbidden fruit, but she didn't enjoy the knowledge."

A story of a little girl's question on tithing excited much interest: "Do you think," asked the little one, "the Lord will trust me until I get big enough to earn money to pay my tithing?"

At this juncture, Frederick M. Smith made several announcements relative to the opening of the General Conference on the 6th. This was followed by a talk on the "Adolosecent," by Mrs. M. A Etzenhouser, who, in her characteristic style, very vigorously outlined several striking points on the growing child.

Speaking of that period when the lad begins to think of the girls, which she called the "supersilly time," she said: "This is about the time the boy bégins voluntarily to wash his neck." sally elicited a hearty laugh from the listeners.

She pleaded that the church open its doors more readily to the young and that more provision be made to keep the youths in the church during this very important stage of development.

as authorized at the business session the preceding day, another collection was taken for the Jersusalem Mission School.

A baritone solo was rendered in a very pleasing way by Paul N. Craig, in charge of the work at Omaha, Neb.

The concluding number of the evening program and of the convention was a talk by Elder W. W. Smith, Philadelphia, Pa., on "Stopping the Leaks." He dwelt upon the different factors which hinder the spiritual growth of the individual and the things which draw the young away from the influence of the church.

He laid stress on the fact that the Sunday school should not be called a branch of the Church, but should be considered as a function of the Church, just as eating and sleeping are not termed departments of the home, but are looked upon as functions of the individual.

In speaking of the failure of the minister to gain the attention of the young people to his discourses, he told a story of one minister who, when he lost the attention of his congregation, or lulled them to sleep, had his deacon use drastic means to awaken him.

As the numbers were rendered in the auditorium the speakers repaired to the overflow meeting in the basement, where they were repeated for the benefit of those who could not gain admittance above ..

Just before announcing the closing song, Wallace N. Robinson, the newly-elected Superintendent, made a very earnest plea for the support of the Sunday school workers during the ensuing vear.

Song number 21, "With a Steadfast Faith," was used, which was sung with such heartiness that a feeling of inspiration went with it, drawing attention to the thought expressed by one of the placds displayed on the wall of the auditorium: "The end of the convention is the beginning of effort."

Prayer by Elder F. G. Pitt brought the Twentythird Annual General Association Convention to a The character of the matter submitted throughout marking it as the best yet held.

CORRECTION.

In the opening address of President Joseph Smith in this issue, page 1, a little below the middle of the second column, the word "divinity" should have been "avidity," making the sentence read: "As to what may transpire during these sessions, I may have some avidity of mind," The wrong word carries a wrong meaning.

INCIDENTS AND REMARKS.

The elders who met at 8 o'clock April 6, 1914, at Carson's undertaking parlors, were startled by the presiding officer announcing as an opening song "Nearer My God to Thee." The atmosphere perceptibly cooled.

Due to the rain of Monday, the opening day, the gallery of the auditorium looked like the piked walls of ancient battlements as the array of umbrella handles extending above the balustrade presented a formidable apppear-

The interest of the assembly at the first session was most intense when the venerable President arose to address the delegates. Some saw and heard him for the first time in their lives and the hopes of years were realized. others had known him long and rejoiced that he still lives

THE GENERAL CONFERENCE (Continued from last issue.)

Wednesday, April 8th.

Samuel Burgess gave the first of his series of lectures to the ministry on "Comparative Religions," at 8 o'clock. These lectures are very helpful to the elders, whether missionaries or pastors, and should be followed up each year with similar lectures upon various topics of vital interest to the active men of the church. Every man called to the ministry should make his purpose to qualify himself by study along the various lines and be prepared to meet the different issues that come up in his work. These lectures are a means of help.

The rest of the morning, so far as the ministry were concerned, was taken up with quorum work, each quorum taking up such matters as properly belong to it. It may be interesting to note some of the duties devolving upon the several quorums:

The Presidency have the arranging of the mission fields, of the ministers in charge and the assignment of men over them, and with the Quorum of Twelve to make the appointments of all High Priests. Either independently or con-jointly with the Twelve they have the consideration and decision of a multitude of questions and problems referred to them by the General Conference or otherwise; the consideration of names for ordination to the office of High Priest or Bishop, and many other matters. The Twelve, in addition to the above, have the appointment of all the Seventies and Elders and Priests who are sent out as missionaries, the consideration and solving of many problems coming from various sources, and passing upon many things presented to them by the Conference as well as by individuals. quorum has been in session since March 17th.

Other quorums, councils, committees and members are busily at work doing the many things which enable the machinery of the Conference to run smoothly and quickly. The High Priests Quorum occupies in the Church of Christ building on the Temple Lot, and two of the Quorums of Seventy meet in the Baptist and Christian churches. The Bishops, though belonging to the High Priests' Quorum, sometimes meet separately to consider matters along the temporal lines which belong strictly to their office. The Patriarchs, also an order in the Quorum of High Priests, meet separately a portion of the time to consider the special evangelical work.

The usual prayer meeting was held at 9 a. m., J. C. Chrestensen and M. M. Turpin in charge, and the preaching service at 10:45 a.m., in charge of D. E. Tucker, the sermon being by Samuel Brown, of Canada.

Wednesday Afternoon, April 8th.

The session opened at 2 o'clock, with Frederick M. Smith again in the chair. President Joseph Smith and Elbert A. Smith were also in their places.

The opening song, led by Paul N Craig, Omaha, Neb., was, "God Is Marshalling His Army." room rang with the vigorous singing of this num-Bishop Richard Bullard, of the Independence Stake, offered prayer.

Further printed ministerial reports from the following were received and included in the minutes without objection:

W. M. Aylor, in charge of Southern Mission No. 13; James A. Gillen, in charge of Mission No. 1; John W. Rushton, in charge of Missouri, Kansas and Central and Southeastern Illinois; Peter Anderson, in charge of Rocky Mountain Mission; J.

F. Curtis, in charge of Mission No. 11; R. C. Russell, in charge of Mission No. 4.

The report of the Board of Auditors was also received and placed in the minutes.

It was moved to approve the report of the Board of Auditors.

It was then moved that the special report mentioned as having been made to the Joint Council be read to the body.

After lengthy remarks a motion was made to defer the matter until Saturday, April 11th, at 3 o'clock. This resulted in further heated discussion followed by the previous question being or-The motion to defer, and the motion to have the special report read were lost. The motion to approve the report prevailed.

Report of Sunday School Association.

A report from the General Sunday School Association was included in the minutes, as was also a supplemental report which was read, dealing with the session which closed Sunday night.

It was moved to adopt that part of the supplemental report referring to making a member of the Presidency and one of the Twelve members of the Executive Committee of the Sunday School Association. The part referred to reads as follows:

Among the important resolutions approved was one authorizing steps to be taken to provide for the adding to our Executiv Committee one member from the Presidency and one member from the Twelve, who, representing the parent body, may serve us in an advisory way.

It was adopted, the selection of such members being left to the quorums named.

Report of Religio.

The original and a supplemental report from the Zion's Religio Literary Society were inserted in the minutes, as likewise was the report of the Woman's Auxiliary for Social Service.

Bishops' Report.

The report of the Presiding Bishopric, accompanied by the anual statistical report, were in cluded in the minutes.

It was moved that the financial report, together with the supplemental report, be approved and that the appropriations and recommendations By motion the items therein be provided for. were taken up separately.

College Budget.

That relative to the provision of a budget of the expense of conducting Graceland College for the ensuing year was first taken up.

A motion adopting the recommendation was made, but was superseded by a motion to defer further consideration until 3:30 o'clock p. m. tomorrow, which carried

Certificates of Stewardship.

Reference was next made to the recommendation of the Bishopric relative to the issuance of certificates of stewardship to those who have complied with the law.

It was moved to adopt, which, after discussion on the part of the delegates, and an explanation by Bishop Kelley, was done.

"Guide Us, O, Thou Great Jehovah" was sung and prayer was offered by Patriarch F. A. Smith, and the session adjourned.

Thursday, April 9th.

The usual lecture was delivered to the ministry by Walter W. Smith at 8 a. m. The prayer meeting at 9 was in charge of Samuel Twombly and George A. Smith, and at 10:45 J. E. Wildermath was the speaker, assisted by R. O. Self. quorums continued their sessions during the morning.

Thursday, April 9th.

The business session opened at 2 o'clock, with President E. A. Smith in the chair. President Joseph Smith took his place a few minutes afterward.

The song "God Speed the Right" was used, led by F. G. Pitt, after which prayer was offered by Bishop E. A. Blakeslee.

A report from the Quorum of High Priests was read recommending the ordination of the following to the office of High Priest: A. J. Corbett and G. W. Stewart, of Australia; James F. Kier, Chicago, Ill.; Samuel A. Burgess, President of Graceland College, and Ephriam Squire, Brooklyn, N. Y.

The recommendation was concurred in by the First Presidency.

Bro. Burgess, the only person under discussion present, stated that he had received evidence of this call some years since, and that he was prepared to accept, feeling that his attitude was best expressed by the words, "I'l go where you want me to go." The other brethren were favorably me to go." spoken of by the delegates who knew them, following which the motion to approve the recommendations and provide for the ordinations was carried.

A report from the Seven Presidents of the Seventy relative to those selected for ordination to their quorum was read. The following were recommended for ordination: David J. Williams, Hiteman, Ia.; Wm. E. Shakespeare, Lamoni, Ia., and Jas. D. Shower, Independence, Mo.

The first two named accepted the call, while 'n the case of Bro. Shower, he stated he was not prepared at this time to accept.

Accordingly a motion prevailed approving the recommendations on the names of Brethren Williams and Shakespeare, while action on the name of Bro. Shower was deferred and the name referred to the Seven Presidents of the Seventy. Bureau of Publicity was read and made a part of the minutes. It was recommended that the bureau be continued and that a similar work be done among the teachers and editors as has already been done by the "Open Letter to the Clergy," sent to over ten thousand ministers. Report of the First Presidency on Bureau of Publicity.

Report of the First Presidency on Bureau of Publicity.

To the General Conference:—

In order to properly carry on the work of distributing litrature and information the First Presidency deemed it necessary early in the conference year to effect at least a temporary organization of a Bureau of Publicity. This was done after consultation and agreement with the Presiding Bishop and members of the Quorum of Twelve. Elbert A. Smith and John F. Garver were placed in charge of the work for the year.

The main feature of their work has been the distribution of the Open Letter to the Clergy. This document, gotten out in very neat and attractive style, has been mailed to many clergymen in various parts of the counmailed to many clergymen in various parts of the country. One edition of ten thousand copies has been exhausted and the work of distributing a similar edition is under way. In each instance the Open Letter is accompanied by a letter from the Bureau of Publicity inviting further investigation. In the matter of distribution the bureau has co-operated with ministers in charge and district and branch presidents. There is practically no limit to the work that might be done along this line if means were at hand to carry it forward. Almost unlimited numbers of names and addresses might be secured from the year beeke of various denominations had we the money to propose of various denominations had we the money to propnames and addresses might be secured from the year books of various denominations had we the money to properly prosecute this work. But the bureau did not feel at liberty to go farther than it could go with the aid of voluntary contributions from local congregations, and has made the work pay its own way thus far.

The matter of publishing and mailing the Open Letter was handled by the Herald Publishing House, the manager co-operating with the bureau in that regard. The price of the Open Letter was placed at such a figure as to cover express of nostage and clerical aid so that that feature of expense of postage and clerical aid so that that feature of the work was handled by the Publishing House and not by the bureau.

The bureau has endeavored to render assistance in other

The bureau has endeavored to render assistance in other ways to those in the field and to promote publicity for the work wherever practicable.

The British Isles Mission proposes to establish a mission bureau of publicity for the distribution of the Open Letter in that mission. Their communication to the Joint Letter in that mission. Their communication to the Joint Council regarding that project has been referred to the Bureau of Publicity for action.

Apostle U. W. Greene secured the publication of the Open Letter in the press in Jerusalem and proposes to publish it in German for use among the Germans. We recommend that some action be taken by the Conference to continue the Bureau of Publicity, as we see in the most resultilities for good to the work by general.

is great possibilities for good to the work in general.

The work among the clergy should be followed by a similar work among school teachers and editors.

Respectfully submitted, M. Smith

Frederick M. Smith.

It was ordered that the report be approved and that the bureau be continued. It was further directed that the matter of appointing the personnel of the board be left to the First Presidency.

It was then moved that such works written against our church as may need reviewing and reply be replied to by the Bureau of Publicity.

Report of First Presidency.

Report of First Presidency.

To the General Conference, Greeting:—
In the past year the members of the Presidency have continued such activities as they could under existing circumstances. President Joseph Smith has remained in Independence, working, as his health would permit, at his correspondence, editorial work and memoirs. The Second Counselor, E. A. Smith, has acted as Associate Editor of the Saints' Horald and Editor of Autumn Leaves, which work has absorbed most of his time and attention, though the property of the Saints' Horald and Editor of Autumn Leaves, which work has absorbed most of his time and attention, then the proposed most of his time and attention, the proposed most of his time and attention, the saint of the saint sai though he has done some correspondence on affairs connected with the Presidency, and visited at two reunions and some conferences, and has carried on considerable correspondence in connection with the bureau of publicity.

The First Counselor and Secretary of the Quorum was for about nine months of the year in the West, though the work of the office was carried on as best it could be under such conditions. This absence necessitated addi-tional correspondence, but despite the disadvantages he kent quite closely in touch with the work of the Church different phases, besides doing some writing for he Secretary of the Presidency has at various times in the past year had correspondence with the State De-nartment at Washington, D. C., and through these efpartment at Washington, D. C., and unough these cr-forts has reached the foreign office of Great Britain and the German Empire relative to our work in those cou-tries. It will be necessary to follow these matters up as the results reached have not been satisfactory, so far as the German Empire is concerned, though from the proper authorities we have been informed that in Great Britain there is at present little likelihood of any legislation that will be inimical to our work there.

Some of the activities of this Quorum will be indicated other parts of this report.

Reports.

It has been the object of the Presidency to formulate and put in active operation a system of reporting where-by the Presidency would be regularly informed as to the conditions existing in the various districts, so that the local work might be kept pretty closely under the general supervision of this Quorum. We are pleased to state that the system of reports installed by us has met with quite general support on the part of the District Presidents out of a total of seventy districts we have received the last quarterly report from all but four, and these four may be heard from at any moment. In general, these ports indicate a rather pleasing activity on the part of local priesthood though there are some districts which are not in good shape owing to the indifference or inactivity or lack of supply of local priesthood. We are pleased to note that in many of the districts there is a for more men for ministerial work, and the oppor-ities for work greatly exceed the supply of men needed.

In this connection we desire to state that we have felt the necessity for the general appointing powers of the Church, namely, the Presidency and Twelve, to select High Priest of presiding ability to look after some of the districts which are needing the work of an executive, and to improve the condition in some of the branches where the lack of good spiritual conditions can be attributed almost directly to a lack of proper co-ordination of the work of the local priesthood. This work of arousing the local priesthood to activity and to regular appointments and a general and persistent interest in the prosecution of the work has in many quarters progressed encourag-ingly and we urge closer attention to it. In many places, however, the need for pastors is great and we trust that the developments of the near future will anable us to fill thee demands.

Besides the reports from districts, we are receiving reports more or less regularly from practically all the Quor-ums of the Church through these reports are not up to the general standaard that we desire to see. However, as greater interest in Quorum work becomes developed and as the benefits of Quorums activity are becoming more apparent, we find an increasing desire on the partof Quor-um efficient leads after the poettage for remarking to Carefum officers to look after the matter of reporting to Confer-ence, we have as indicated in the past, been quite insistent in our instructions that Quorums organized locally should report to local conferences and should not expect to re-port to the General Conference, though all Quorums should report at regular intervals to the First Presidency. Thus the local conferences, so far as the Quorums are concerned, will stand as representatives of the General Church in receiving reports from Quorums. We desire to commend the activity of the Quorum officers who are striving to enhance the value of their Quorum meetings and to urge upon all Quorums the holding of regular meetings where properly supervised and carefully worked-out programs may tend to the elevation of the spiritual nd mental tone of the members of the Quorums.

Besides reports from districts and Quorum officers, the Presidency has received reports from special officers of the Church, general and otherwise, and we desire to state that this matter of reports will receive even more careful attention at the hands of the Presidency, as we desire to keep in close and constant touch with the general officers and the work throughout the world by careful and persistent reports. The reports of the Mission Presidents have as usual reached you through channels direct.

Publication of Reports.

It will be remembered that the last General Conference authorized the Presidency and the General Church Secretary to print all reports to Conference, so far as practicable to do so, previous to the opening of Conferpracticable to do so, previous to the opening of Confer-ence. The Presidency desires to express its pleasure at the readiness with which the various officers and com-mittees have responded to our urging that their reports be in our is add in time. These reports have been pub-lished and will be placed in the hands of the Conference, We have received reports from practically all officers and most of the committees and these reports will be found published.

One report, however, which reached us in time for publication does not appear, namely, the report of the Physician to the Church, Dr. Joseph Luff. This report reached us accompanied by a report on the Sanitarium made by the House Physician to Dr. Luff. The report was held up until too late to appear in printed reports, owing to an attempt at adjustment of the question as to whether the reports should reach the Presidency and the Conference through Dr. Luff or through the Beard of Sanitarium Trustees. Therefore, his report is presented separately, and will be read to the Conference.

Graceland College.

The Presidency desires to call attention to the paragraph in the report of Graceland College as found on page 25 of the published reports, in which attention is called to the fact that the finances of the college can only be handled satisfactorily in connection with those of the whole Church. The time is ripe for Conference to determine a definite policy as to the financial support of the college. That institution, in our opinion, merits a support which will enable it to enter upon its activity without being crippled as it has been in the past by uncertain financial backing, and we hope the Conference shall be able to devise some means whereby those in charge of the college may be able to figure with a reasonable degree of definiteness upon the financial support upon which it can depend. The immediate needs of the institution are succinctly set out by the President of the college, and we trust that careful consideration will be given this question.

General Chorister.

The Presidency is in receipt of a report from the General Chorister, Bro. Albert N. Hoxie, who was appointed by the Presidency and the appointment ratified by the General Conference. We are pleased to note the general interest which has been awakened in musical circles, and the co-operation of the work of the choristers that has been effected by Bro. Hoxie's enthusiastic and efficient We are specially pleased to note from his report that a splendid feeling exists among the musicians of the Church, and that the spirit of jealousy so often found seems to be at a minimum.

In his report Chorister Hoxie expresses the belief that the time has not yet come for us to consider a musical organization so far as a formal and heavy organization is concerned. The Presidency believes the present organiis concerned. The Presidency believes the present organization is quite effective and we suggest that the organization be allowed to remain as it is, namely, that the General Chorister be selected by the Presidency subject to the approval of the General Conference. Acting on the presumption that such will be the case this year as in the past, we submit the name of Bro. Albert N. Hoxie to be continued as General Chorister of the Church.

Portions of Bro. Hoxie's report to the Presidency will be of sufficient interest to the Church to justify their insertion in our report. He says: "The influence of the Choir movement has been quite generally felt throughout the Church. The progress and achievement of the various choirs have received recog-nition in the Staff column, edited once a month by Sr Audentia Anderson, and published in the Herald. They have been so numerous and interesting as to cause us to be encouraged with the gradual awakening of our people as to their possibilities along musical lines. Sr. Anderson is to be commended for her careful and conscientious son is to be commended for her carctul and conscientious work. From Conference time until August 1st, I visited Independence, St. Louis, Omaha, Chicago, Lansing and Flint, Mich.; Toronto, Niagara Falls and the Eastern Michigan Reunion in the interest of the Choir Movement, gave several concerts, rendered many solos, and spoke in the interests of the movement. In August I was se-lected to the Choristership of the Philadelphia Branch, and organized a choir of fifty voices whose efforts along the organized a choir of fifty voices whose efforts along the lines of oratorial and concert work have received much commendation from the press and our friends. ### Committee on Tracts.

years there has been carried on the minutes of the Church a committee known as the Committee Tracts, and inasmuch as this committee has been the First Presidency we do not see the advisability of carry-ing this longer as a committee, but that such work as has been done by this committee as such be referred to the First Presidency as a function of their routine duties. That is to say, we deem it unnecessary to longer recognize this as being a specific committee. The committee, therefore, in our opinion, may be abolished and the work recognized as a part of the routine of the Presidency's office.

Some few years ago, on the suggestion of the Presidency, there was referred to the Joint Council of Presidency, Twelve and Bishopric the matter of reorganizing Quorums with respect to locality. This committee after taking the matter under advisement referre? the matter to the Presidency for action favoring the reorganization suggested by the Presidency. The Presidency in turn suggested by the Presidency. The Presidency in turn turned the work over to the Secretary of that Quorum and turned the work over to the Secretary of that Quorum and the work has been prosecuted as advantagously as appear-ed practicable under conditions exicting. We have hereto-fore reported on várious Quorums organized and are pleased to see that the results following the reorganiza-tion have justified the anticipations of the Presidency to a large extent, though there is still much to be done in this direction. In the past year the following Quorums have hear organized: have been organized:

St. Louis Quorum of Elders (St. Louis District, Cent-St. Louis Quorum of Edgers (St. Louis District, Central and Southeastern Illinois Districts), organized September 28, 1913, by J. W. Rushton.

Ohio Quorum of Elders (Ohio, Southern Indiana and Kentucky), organized February 22, 1914, by R. C. Rus-

St. Louis Quorum of Priests (St. Louis, Central and St. Louis Quorum of Friests (St. Louis, Central and Southeastern Illinois Districts), organized September 28, 1913, by J. W. Rushton. St. Louis Quorum of Teachers (St. Louis, Central and Southeastern Illinois District), organized September 28, Southeastern Illinois District), organized September 28, 1913, by J. W. Rushton.

We feel that there is no necessity for a committee be ing continued on this matter, as the work has developed and is organized to such an extent that further develop-ments can well be left to the direction of the Presidency ments can wen be lett to the direction of the rresidency as part of the routine of that office, leaving them free to suggest organization of new Quorums as the demand seems to exist, referring the matter of organizing in speseems to exist, referring the matter of organizing in specific localities either to the members of the Quorum of Twelve direct or to such local officers, such as Stake Presidency, etc., as in the judgment of the Presidency are qualified to effect the organizations demanded. We therefore recommend that the matter of further organization be left to the Presidency, and the committee as form-erly constituted be considered as discharged and that the minutes so show.

Peace Congress Delegate

On the 14th of April, 1913, at the last General Conference, the Secretary of the Presidency presented to the Conference a matter touching the appointment of delegates to the Fourth National Peace Congress. By moto the Fourth National Peace Congress. By mo-tion the Presidency was authorized to appoint delegates to this congress. Subsequently the Presidency ap-pointed as such delegates Elders F. M. Sheehy, J. W. Rushton, T. J. Elliott and Russell Archibald. No formal report has been submitted to the Presidency by these delegates, though two of the members, namely, Brethren Sheehy and Rushton, have verbally reported to the Secretary of the Presidency concerning their attendance at this Congress. We feel that the movement was well advised and that the Presidency should be authorized to appoint delegates to conventions of this character when in their judgment attendance thereat would be advantageous to us as a body.

On the whole, the general outlook is encouraging.

reports coming to this office indicate an awakening in many places. So, while storm clouds appear to threaten many places. So, while storm clouds appear to threaten disturbance of the waters, yet the appearance of the sun in other places gives promise of better things. Such disturbing causes as exist can with brotherly and saintly co-operation, under divine guidance, be sooner or later eliminated, we feel sure. Let us grow together under the peaceful, gentle, but advancing influence of the Holy Spirit and saintly fraternity.

Respectfully submitted,

Frederick M. Smith.

REPORT OF PRESIDING BISHOPRIC. To the Presidency and Members of the Conference, Greeting:-

The work of the Bishopric the Conference year just past has in many ways been specially blessed under the divine hand, and whatever may be said of the indifference, lack of earnestness or unfounded criticism on the part of a few who have been faithful laborers with the Master in His cause, the fact remains that generally speaking no previous year has witnessed the universal interest on the part of the Saints in the financial work as that manifested rring the one just closed.

The demands upon this arm of the service have also the demands upon this arm of the service have an expense attaching to foreign and home missions; furnish aid for the sick, poor and needy; sustain the general and special work of building and improvements, and many others, have required the hearty volunteer help and service of the laborers, whatever the calling, in the interest of the gospel work in home and foreign fields.

gospel work in home and foreign fields.

It will be naticed upon examining the financial statement herewith submitted that the receipts the past year exceed those of any previous year in the sum of $32,235.87, the total for the year reaching the sum of $560,611.30. The expenditures, including the amount on church debt fund, aggregate $514,873.30. The amount of church debt fund paid in to January 10, $23,166.44.

This, notwithstanding the fact that there has been a depression in financial lines in many parts of the country.

pression in financial lines in many parts of the country, shows true growth and development in the financial work the year 1913.

During the year past Bishop E. A. Blakeslee, Counselor, has devoted what time he could in the interest of the work, has devoted what this he could not be indecessor the story, and local bishops and agents have generally performed excellent work in their respective fields, the full account of each appearing in the full financial report submitted for

There is urgent request for help the present year in ar nere is urgent request for nerp the present year in arranging the mission work in Jerusalem and other cities of Palestine, which merits immediate attention. The financial condition of the work in the British Isles Mission is much improved and Bishop R. May reports confidence in further advancement the present Conference year.

the Scandinavian and German Mission fields there must be ample financial support the present year, as in the past, to overcome the many difficulties to be met by the missionary in his work, but the outlook is brighter for this The Bishop for Australia, Bro. George Lewis, sets forth the financial work in that country to be in an improved condition, and the Saints in that far-off country, as also foreign countries, have manifested their full interest in the gospel work by the late remittances received of their portion of the special debt fund.

The conditions of the Society Island Mission and also the work in the Sandwich Islands indicate a need for some help in a financial way during the year which must be met from the general fund, but we do not anticipate any great difficulty in meeting these demands.

As per suggestions of the last general conference we respectfully call your attention to the condition of Graceland College, the financial report of which has already been presented by the President and College Board. Graceland College has been unfortunate in the last few years in having to provide for its work, just the things that its patrons and the church membership, who were acquainted with its work, were demanding. An argricultural department was deemed necessary (and properly too we think) and land was purchased to enter upon this department of the work. Dormitories were absolutely necessary to the proper running of the institution and the College Board proceeded to erect the same. New buildings for heating plant were necessary, as also a new plant, and these must be had or the college stop, so this was erected and a proper heating plant secured. All of these required extra large expense. The college day was set apart in the church to raise funds to meet the expenses necessary to the running of the institution. While the expenses necessary to the running of the institution, yet not sufficient collections have been made to meet the outlay of funds to secure the necessary grounds and buildings demanded for successful running the college, and the college at the present time shows an indebtedness of a little more than $30000 that must be provided for. I know of no number of this body or the church who takes the ground that these furnishings for the college were not to be the best educational advantages, but the objection seems to be that a debt was created in performing the work. I know of placing funds to what was deemed a necessary use. In this consideration of the case it occurs to me there can be but one true way to settle the question, tha is, to move forward and arrange for the payment of the debt.

This has been fully realized by the Bishopric for the past year and it has been our determination that when the church debt fund, that was called for, was paid in that from $15000 to 20000 of the same would be devoted to the extinguishing of this college debt fund, the Bishopric believing that the $75000 called for would be sufficient so that the college debt fund could be handled in connection with its work. It is for this reason that the church has not expected to call for either interest or principal upon the $4000, college indebtedness, which it carries. To the mind of the Presiding Bishopric it will cost more to cease the running of the college than to carry it on. True economy is on the side of running the institution. No one can just exactly take the position that saints and friends shall not educate their children and in a proper way. If we stop our educational institution much more money is required to send the children to other institutions of learning than to provide them for our own. This was effectually shown by the amount of the money expended by those who avail themselves of the priveleges of other institutions before Graceland College was opened, even by the few who were given such privileges but there were very few children of the few saints who received these educational advantages prior to the opening of Graceland College in comparison to those who have been supplied since.

lege in comparison to those who have been supplied since. In the view of the Bishopric, as a financi': verture the church is benefited instead of injured by running the College and then we comprae the advantage of moral life and culture in behalf of the children who must be sent to an institution of the kind for educational advantages, it removes the question of what shall be done with the college beyond reasonable discussion.

In addition to looking after the indebtedness, which we have referred to, the budget of running expenses of the college for the year is as follows.

the conege for the year is as follows:
For salary of fourteen instructers and helpers. $8000.00.
For fuel for all buildings1100.00.
Expense, water, light and machinery600.00
Insurance
Up-keep of Library
Advertising college work and properly presenting the institution
Bookkeeper 200.00.
Stenograghers 400.00.
Making a total of

These are the amounts which have been fixed in consideration of the budget with the president of the college, and adding an tem of $125 for unseen expenses, which will likely arise, we present to you as necessary to the running of the college for the ensuing year the amount of $131,000.00. From $2500 to $3500 of this may be calculated upon as tuition received from students. About the same amount can be relied upon from the college day offerings, making a total of about $6500. The remainder, 4500, would be required from the church unless by the increase of students in the college and the increase of the college day collection, this remainder of $4500 shall be provided

The past few years the question has been urged upon the Bishop of the church to issue to brethren, desiring to conform fully to the rules of the law, certificates of stewship. We have not thought it would be wisdom or proper for the bishop to issue certificates of this nature unless authorized by the body, believing that all things of such special undertaking as that, should be begun undertaken rule of combon to consent in the body. It is the opinion of the Presiding Dishopric that this work may be entered upon if the body and of the same mind and seese fit to incruet the presidency and Bishopric to enter upon the administration of this part of the law.

We submit herewith full itemized financial report of the business of the year just passed.

Very respectfully, E. L. Kelley, Pres. Bp. Independence, Mo., April 8, 1914.

NOTES.

The first week of the Conference was a busy one. Business was disposed of with about the usual dispatch, or possibly a little more rapidly than usual. The time usually consumed in reading the numerous reports of officers and standing committees was saved by having the reports printed and placed in the hands of the delegates. The proposed change in the manner of selecting the trustees and assistant physicians of the Sanitarium occupied some time though no exchange was consummated.

The furnishing of a budget of expense for Graceland College by the Bishop was a new departure, which was provided for by a resolution last year. It required some time for its consideration, as it involved the question of meeting the deficit of the college from the general funds of the church. The budget was adopted by a large majority.

A change of procedure was effected on Saturday when the body by vote amended the rules so that the central branches in the Stakes would have their own President independently of the Stake Presidency, leaving the latter free-to look after the work throughout the Stakes. Much was said upon both sides of the question, though we believe much of the argument did not properly belong to the question, while the real issues were scarcely touched. The previous question in this case shut off the opportunity for further discussion which ought to have been had in the consideration of a matter so far-reaching in its results, for not only the two Stakes now existing are effected but all the Stakes to be organized in the future unless the church should again consider the matter.

The developments of the Conference show an extension of the work into new lines, a systematizing of the work through more perfect organizations, and a growing interest in every department. The Saints are learning more fully than ever before that Zion can only be built up by intelligent, persistent effort and development in every proper line. While the ministry must develop in their work the membership must also develop in their suntil they attain perfect conditions. There must be a re-adaptation, a taking on of new conditions, a steady improvement of environment, if the Saints are to be rid of the distressing conditions now prevalent in the world and Zionic conditions are to be attained.

No full happiness, as far as earth life is concerned, can be had by a community where sickness and ill health abound, hence the need of Godfearing physicians and nurses and other teachers to teach and put into practice the laws of health. The Sanitarium, built by command of God, is helping to do this. True happiness cannot obtain when poverty abounds, hence the law of the gospel embodying the practical application of the golden rule, "Therefore all things whatsover ye would that men would do unto you, do ye even so unto them," and the Bishops of the Church whose duty it is to teach that part of the law.

Ignorance will never lead to Zionic conditions, hence the need of the various methods of education by which the mind might "know the truth," and that by the truth they might be made free. The Sunday school, the Religio are nelping the Church in this great work.

Music has its place in meeting the yearnings of the soul. The general choir movement, with what will vet grow out of it, is helping or will help, to meet this need, and that movement will become a power in the Church in singing the gospel into people's hearts and souls. A story was told once by a missionary who became the object of the vengeance of a mob which came to drag him from his abode. He begged the privilege of singing a hymn before going and sat down to the organ and sang 'Nearer, My God, to Thee," and the mob hushed. When he finished the strongest among them, with heart melted to tenderness, stepped to his side and became his defender. This is the power of music, and this great gift rightly developed and properly used, attended by the Spirit of God, will accomplish wonders.

Happier conditions can be obtained by improvement in the home life in its various phases, and the work of the Woman's Auxiliary is helping in this, teaching along the lines of training children, cooking or domestic science, and other things pertaining to the home and family.

The developments of the Conference provide for the improved qualification of the ministry in their work through the lectures on Homiletics and Comparative Religions, and the work of the several quorums in taking up various matters for consideration and discussion.

In all of these things, and others, the Church is steadily and rapidly re-adjusting itself to the new demands which are being made upon it, and while it has not kept up with the times on some points, the effort is now being made not only to bring it up to the times, but to set it far in advance so that it shall become indeed a light to the w rid.

So far the Church and its membership have

So far the Church and its membership have been able to exemplify the full gospel of Christ only in small degree, and there must come an uplift, a shaking off of the old conditions and putting on of the new, in order that the truth shall be shown in acts, and love by deeds. The conference indicates rapid progress along these lines, and if he would keep up and become a helper, each member must continue to loosen his hold upon the world and strengthen his hold upon God by a holy life, with prayer and faith, and faithful, diligent effort.

The number of young men and women at the Conference, many for the first time, who are active workers, and earnestly desirous of doing all in their power for the gospel's sake, and of consecrating their lives to God, give promise of future support to the work. New men are being astantly raised up to take the place of the gospel veterans who are of necessity ceasing the active conflict. The advantages of many of these younger men and women educationally and in religious training are in advance of those had by those of other years.

Another item of incidental interest was passed on Saturday, viz., a resolution requesting the Board of Publication to omit from church publications advertisments of ral estat, banking institutions, and any projects of a speculative character. This we believe is not improper, but will be a protection to the Saints throughout the church in places outside the two leading branches of Independence and Lamoni. Much sentiment gathers about these places in the minds of the more distant Saints, and it is to this sentiment that the advertising of homes in the places named appeals, and through it many are induced to buy without knowing fully the conditions, only to meet with disappointment sooner or later and possibly financial loss. It is not a question of the honesty of the advertiser, but the law of the Church makes the Bishop or Bishops of the Church the advising officers in contemplated removals to the Stakes, and when they are ignored it is inconsistent to hold the church to blame for mistakes which may be made or losses incurred.

With the continued increase of young workers, with the new developments along many lines of church work we look for great things to happen in the way of results.

AN ORDINATION MEETING.

On Saturday evening a meeting was held at the office of the Quorum of Twelve, 819 West Electric Street, and among other business ordained the brethren who had been approved for the several offices, and who were present at the Conference.

Samuel A Burgess was ordained to the office of High Priest by John W. Rushton and J. F. Curtis, R. G. Davis was ordained to the office of Seventy by J. W. Rushton and C. A. Butterworth; W. T. Shakespeare to the office of Seventy, by William H. Kelley and James McKiernan; and D. J. Williams to the office of Seventy by J. A. Gillen and Wm. Aylor.

These brethren will be received into their respective quorums and will enter at once upon the work of their offices.

- I would urge a closer co-operation between the various departments of the work. This is pre-eminently a work of co-operation. We cannot do the work individually, but collectively.—Gunsolley.
- I want you to carry home the true missionary spirit.—Macgragor.
- "It is a great curse to be out of work; it is a greater curse to be unable to work; but the greatest curse of all is to be unwilling to work."—Elbers A. Smith.
- I want you to impress the little minds with the value of prayer.—Macgregor.

THE GENERAL CONFERENCE. (Continued from page 1)

A substitute was offered that books attacking the faith of our church be referred to the First Presidency, Board of Publicity and Church Historian for their consideration and reply if thought necessary.

While discussion on these matters was being carried on the time arrived which had been set for the special order for to-day at 3 o'clock, namely, consideration of a report from the Joint Council of the Presidency and Twelve on the Sanitarium. The special order being called for it was ordered taken up. Printed copies of the report had been distributed as follows::

To the Conference of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, Assembled at Lamoni, Iowa, April, 1913.

Greeting:—After having given the matter serious and prayerful attention and for the purpose of facilitating the work of the officers and directors of the Sanitarium, and to avoid possible difficulties that may arise in the carrying on of the work for which the Sanitarium was instituted, I call your attention to what there should be a

At present the mode of nominating and appointing members of the board, known as the Sanitarium Board, and the assistant officers necessary for the carrying on of the work leaves the matter in some confusion, in that it is a matter in which there is no understood method by It is a matter in which there is no understood method by which the nominations to fill the vacancies in the board when occurring or to appoint the assistant physician to the physician-in-charge, whose duty it is to be in service at the Sanitarium itself and to look after the immediate interests there which the physician-in-charge cannot pay sufficiently close attention to, may be made, and is left to the same apparently loose method by nomination by any who may be present at the conference where the appointments are made.

I therefore deem it my duty to present to your body the idea, that, to secure and maintain a greater degree of harmony within the board and between the board and narmony within the board and between the board and the physician-in-charge, whoever he may be at the time, and the assistant physician who is to serve at the Sanitarium, I recommend that the privilege or duty of nominating individuals to fill vacancies in the board when they occur shall rest with the members of the board itself, or with the physician-in-charge, in order that persons may be with the physician-in-charge, in order that persons may be selected who may work in harmony together as members of the board, and also with the physician-in-charge, who has been appointed or who may be hereafter appointed, and to secure greater efficiency in the work of the Sanitarium itself. For a similar reason the duty of selecting or appointing the assistant physician who will be in charge at the Sanitarium itself under the physician-in-charge appointed by the body, and that a similar harmonious relation may be preserved, should rest with the physician-in-charge. the physician-in-charge.

The work of the Sanitarium has greatly increased in the number of patients receiving treatment, and is likely to increase still more. It is, therefore, essential that the matter of securing a board and an assistant physician-who may work together in harmony with the physicianin-charge should be better understood and be less likely to errors or mistakes.

The Physician to the Church, who is understood to be The Physician to the Church, who is understood to be in charge of the medical administration in the conduct of the Sanitarium at the present time, is known to be Elder Joseph Luff. Since his appointment the work has grown to a considerable extent and the services have been difficult and wearing. His increasing age and consequent decreasing powers of recuperation are a warning that it may be found necessary for him to retire from the active oversight which it has been justly expected should be exercised by the physician-in-charge and another chosen in his stead. It would seem therefor to be wise that the church should empower the physician-in-charge to make selection of an assistant whom he should nominate for the support of the church and the board, in order should a change be necessary the local machinery of the department may not be seriously deranged.

It is for this purpose that I, as President of the Church and as one who has been cognizant of the manner in which the Sanitarium was called into being and the Physician to the Church appointed to the charge thereof, make this recommendation to the body, that they may by voice make such direction in the matter as wisdom may

There can be no objection upon the part of the physician-in-charge to place the nominating power for the members of the board in the board itself, or members thereof who may be present at the conference when vacancies are oers of the noard in the poard itself, or memoers thereon who may be present at the conference when vacancies are filled. While he might possibly feel that nominations made by himself would continue to be more satisfactory as far as harmony is concerned, he evidently would cheerfully acquiesce in the nomination and appointment of any made by the voice of the body.

It would seem to be wise that the nomination of an assistant should lie with the physician-in-charge, but the presumption is fair that by an understanding with the beard this nominating power might also be entrusted to the board or members thereof; of course recognizing the glat of the body to ratify the nominations which should be made.

There is a similarity in this recommendation in the articles of incorporation which provide that the Board of Publication advised be nominated by the Bishop, who is made an ex-officio member of the Board of Publication.

Trusting that this recommendation will meet with the favor which we deem necessary for the future success of the work of the Sanitarium, I am, As ever your co-worker,

Joseph Smith,
President of the Church.

To the General Conference, Greeting:

We are authorized to transmit to you the following action of the Joint Council of First Presidency, Twelve and Presiding Bishopric, touching communication from President Joseph Smith pertaining to the Sanitarium, which was referred to the Joint Council by the last General

After a comparison of the document with the articles of incorporation of the Sanitarium, we find that the docu-ment could not be adopted without a modification of the articles. The articles of incorporation make it the duty articles. The articles of incorporation make it the duty of the Trustees to provide for a board of physicians and regulate and direct the management and business of the Sanitarium, and provide further that such rules and regulations shall be in harmony with the articles of in-

Article 9 of the Articles of Incorporation reads as fol-

"ARTICLE IX

"ARTICLE IX.
"Duties of Trustees.
"The Trustees by a two-thirds majority vote at any regular or special meeting shall have power to enact measures, make by-laws, provide for a Board of Physicians and regulate and direct the management and business of the said Sanitarium, providing always that such rules and regulations shall be in harmony with these articles of incorporation."

e suggest and recommend the following procedure: First-The Board of Trustees of the Sanitarium shall be selected or sustained by the Annual or General Con-ference; the Conference to nominate direct unless it shall choose to refer such nominations to a committee or to quorum or quorums of the Church.

Second—The physicians to be selected and appointed by the Board of Trustees as at present provided for in Articles of Incorporation, after due consultation with the physician-in-charge.

Respectfully submitted. Frederick M. Smith, Secretary Presidency. John W. Rushton Secretary Twelve.

"It was moved to amend the report of the Joint Council by striking out all after the word 'Church" in the second paragraph and adding the following: "That where vacancies occur in the board in the interim between Conferences, that such shall be filled by the board themselves. Second. That in providing for the Board of Physicians as set out in the Articles of Incorporation that the Chief Medical Director and Physician to the Church should make the nomination, subject to the approval of the Sanitarium Board of Trus-Third. That in case of the need of an assistant to the Chief Medical Director of the Sanitarium that such assistant to be appointed by the Medical Director, subject to ratification of the Sanitarium Board."

It was moved that the report be adopted.

While the amendment was being debated the time arrived for considering the College Budget, made the special order for 3:30 o'clock to-day.

A motion to defer until thet report on the Sanitarium was disposed of was carried, when discussion on the Sanitarium matter was continued.

Bro. Joseph Luff, Physician to the church, was speaking to the amendment when objection was made to certain papers he was reading. A motion permitting him to proceed was sustained. Other speakers touching upon various phases of the subject were: Joseph Smith, E. L. Kelley, F.M. Smith and R. C. Russell.

Debate occupied considerable time, extending until 4:30, when announcements for the following day were made.

"Yes; we trust the day is breaking; Joyful times are near at hand," was sung, and Bishop Bullard offered the closing prayer.

Friday, April 10th.

The congregational prayer service was held at 9 o'clock, in charge of Orman Salisbury, of Des Moines, and A. V. Closson, of Independence.

David Dowker, of Chicago, preached at 10:45, being assisted by E. G. Goodenough. The regular lecture to the priesthood was given by S. A. Burgess, on the different beliefs in Deity. By the large number of elders attending these lectures and the interest being taken in them are evidences of their appreciation. They are being well received and will strengthen the ministers in their

Business Session.

Pres. Elbert A. Smith called the asssembly to order at 2 p. m. and the hymn "Come, Gracious Lord, descend and dwell, by faith and love in every breast," was sung and Patriarch J. W. Wight offered prayer.

Following the reading of the minutes the chair stated that the matter relating to the Sanitarium. pending at the adjournment of yesterday's ses-The following was sion, was before the body.

"At this morning's session of the Quorum of the First Seventy the following was adopted, to be presented to the body for favorable considera-

"Resolved, That it is the opinion of the First Quorum of Seventy in the matter pending before Conference yesterday in regard to the Sanitarium, that the whole matter be referred to the Presidency, Twelve and Seventy. This action has been concurred in by the Second and Third Sev-J. F. Mintun,

"Secretary First Seventy."

It was moved to so refer, which motion prevailed.

Pres. F. M. Smith then took the chair and the matter of the Bishop's report on the College Budget was by vote taken up. By motion the speeches were limited to 10 minutes. The record touching this matter was read and the chair stated that the motion to adopt the budget was before the body. Upon call that part of the Bishop's report was read as follows:

In addition to looking after the indebtedness, which we have referred to, the budget of running expenses of the college for the year is as follows.

For salary of fourteen instructors and helpers. $8000.00.

 stitution
 200.00

 Bookkeeper
 200.00
 Stenograghers 400.00.

Making a total of $10875.00.

These are the amounts which have been fixed in consideration of the budget with the president of the college, and adding an item of $125 for unseen expenses, which will likely arise, we present to you as necessary to the running of the college for the ensuing year the amount of $11,000.00. From $2500 to $3500 of this may be calculated upon as tuition received from students. About the same upon as tution received from students. About the same amount can be relied upon from the college day offerings, making a total of about $6500. The remainder, 4500, would be required from the church unless by the increase of students in the college and the increase of the college day collection, this remainder of $4500 shall be provided

Almost every phase of the question was discussed with interest and education to the body by H. E. Moler, Columbus Scott, S. A. Burgess, F. J. Ebeling, Walter W. Smith, F. A. Russell, Joseph Smith, H. J. Davison, J. W. Wight, E. Holloway, E. E. Long, Bishop Kelley, and Jasper O. Dutton. The previous question was ordered and a number called for the yea and nay vote.

The demanding of the yea and nay vote necessitated the assembly breaking up into its numerous delegations to formulate their votes.

Upon reassembling the secretaries read the exofficio list, taking the vote of each elder, followed by the reading of the delegations and the recording of the voice of eash. The time being late no count was announced, the same being left till the session of Saturday.

"Blest be Thou, O God of Israel," was sung and the assembly was dismissed with prayer.

Saturday, April 11th.

The morning lecture by Elder W. W. Smith, at 8 a. m., to the ministry, was on "The Subject of the Sermon." He outlined a convenient and proper procedure for study in the preparation of the subject for a sermon, also the selection and arranging of the matter collected.

The prayer and preaching services had a large attendance, the former being in charge of Patriarch H. O. Smith and Elder T. C. Kelley, and the latter in charge of Elder J. M. Stubbart, James E. Yates being the speaker.

The Business Session.

President E. A. Smith occupied the chair at the opening of the business session and announced hymn No. 251 and the body sang, "Come, O Thou King of Kings! We've waited long for Thee."

Prayer was offered by Paul M. Hanson. In the reading of the minutes the secretary read the ex-officio and delegate vote upon the adoption of the budget for Graceland College, presented by Bishop Kelley. The vote stood to adopt, ex-officio, 185; delegate, 389; total, 574. Against adoption, ex-officio, 76; delegate, 162; total, 238. President Joseph Smith made a statement relative to his attitude in the matter of the Sanitarium Trustees and Physicians, acted upon on Thursday, and asking that since two members of the quorum took a different view than himself, asked that he be excused from the necessity of sitting with the council to whom the matter had been referred. By motion his request was granted.

President F. M. Smith requested in this connection that a copy of President Joseph Smith's state-ment be furnishd to the council in their consideration of the matter, which was also granted.

Sale of Property.

The laws of the State of California require that real estate held by a trustee or trustees in behalf of religious and similar organizations can only be sold by the direct authorization of the organization.

To meet this requirement, the sale of three lots in San Diego, one in San Fernando, and two rural tracts was ordered.

A report from the Council of Bishops was read: "I am instructed by the Bishopric to present to you the following resolution for your consideration and adoption:

"Resolved, that we instruct the Board of Publication not to accept for printing in the church papers any advertisements of real estate dealers or banking institutions.

"J. A. Becker. "Secretary of Bishopric."

It was moved to adopt.
A motion to amend "to include mining stocks or other projects of a speculative character" was made.

An effort to limit speeches was followed by the previous question being ordered when the amendment was carried, and also the motion as amended.

The following report from the Independence Stake was taken up and read:

From Independence Stake.

"Resolved, That this Conference petition the General Conference, beginning April 6, 1914, to amend the Rules of Order and Debate, page 105, Section 170, second and third lines, as follows:

In place of the words 'Branch in the city of the Stake, or seat of organization,' substitute the word 'Stake,' so that the rule as amended shall read as follows: "The duties of the Stake Presidency are to preside over the Stake, have immediate charge and oversight of the general spiritual work of the Stake, etc.'

Its adoption was moved, when it was moved to refer to the Presidency, Twelve and Seventy, which was lost.

A motion to refer to the Presidency and Twelve was also lost.

Discussion was had by R. S. Saivards, J. W. Wight, M. M. Turpen, Joseph Roberts, M. H. Bond B. F. Miller, J. F. Curtis, J. Zahnd, W. H. Garrett, C. E. Guinand, C. Scott, J. Garver, G. E. Harrington and B. J. Scott, the speeches being limited to ten minutes. The vote being taken the motion to adopt prevailed, 231 for, 51 against.

Bishop Kelley arose to a question of privilege, and said that he thought that some misunderstood his attitude in regard to the special report made by the auditors to the Joint Council, and that he now presented a copy of their report to the Conference for its reading if so desired, with an explanatory statement of his own attached. It was moved that the papers be read. It was further moved that the reading of the papers be indefinitely postponed. The latter motion prevailed.

It was moved that the amendment already adopted providing for an amendment to the Rules of Order relative to the Presidency of Stakes, be referred to the Committee on Revision of the Rules of Order, with authority to insert. It prevailed.

A question being asked as to when the new rule would become operative the chair stated that it was in force now, the Presidency of the Stakes holding over until their successors were elected.

The matter of fixing the time limit for the introduction of new business was left with the Presidency.

A long list of announcements was made for the Sunday appointments, which provided ministers for the adjoining branches and missions, as well as the place of the Conference. The audience sang "My Times are in Thy Hands," and Bro. Joseph Loff pronounced the benediction.

Monday, April 13th.

Elder S. A. Burgess delivered the third of his lectures on Comparative Religions at 8 o'clock. A goodly number of the ministry have been in attendance at these lectures and the interest taken shows their popularity.

The morning prayer service was conducted by Brn. R. M. Elvin and T. W. Chatburn, and was well attended.

Elder Amos Berve, of Lamoni, Ia., speaker at 11 o'clock, being assisted by J. M. Terry, of Oakland, Cal.

Business Session.

The second week of the Conference business was begun at 2 o'clock p. m., when President F. M. Smith called the assembly to order. "All hail "All hail the power of Jesus' name" was sung, being led by Edward Bell, of St. Louis. Prayer was offered by Patriarch Ammon White.

After the reading of the minutes, the time limit for the introduction of new business was set for 3 o'clock p. m. to-day.

A report from the Presidency recommending the ordination of Joseph Lane, of Pisgah, Ia., to the office of High Priest, the recommendation having been concurred in by the Quorum of High Priests, and the Quorum of Twelve. It was approved and the ordination ordered provided for.

A resolution referring to the lectures on Homiletics, and one on the Boy Scout movement, were tabled.

The following was moved and after brief discussion was adopted:

"Resolved, That it is the sense of this body that no further debt be incurred by the Board of Trustees of Graceland College for such extensions as gymnasium, dormitories, etc. until such proposed work of extension shall have been first presented to this body for their approval."

A petition of S. A. Burgess, President of Graceland College, relative to auditing the accounts of the college was read:

"To the Presidency and General Conference:

"As a matter of personal privilege and in fairness to the conference, we respectfully beg leave to make the following statement in regard to the audit of the Graceland College books:

"In the interests of economy, the bookkeeping has been done by students of the college. result was, on account of sickness of the bookkeeper and other reasons, the books were not fully closed when the auditors were first in Lamoni. We urged that the books should be audited and the conditions frankly stated. The auditors, however, very courteously suggested that we should close the books and they would return for the audit. The books were in shape and the auditors notified prior to the submission of our financial statement either to the publisher or the Presiding Bichop and the auditors repeatedly agreed that they should be audited, certainly before the opening of the Conference. Various other demands interfered with their doing so, but still it was agreed that the audit should be made. And we were very much disappointed to learn yesterday that it had not been done.

"We therefore respectfully request that the auditors make an examination as soon as possible after the close of the Conference, and that their report be published in the church papers and in the Conference minutes.

"Respectfully submitted,

"S. A. Burgess."

"Independence, Mo., April 11, 1914." The request was granted.

A motion pending when the time the special order relating to the Sanitarium was called on Thursday, the 9th, and upon which no final action was taken, was called up. The resolution was "That books attacking the faith of our Church be referred to the First Presidency, Board of Publicity and Church Historian" that reply might be made if deemed advisable. It was discussed and a motion to lay it upon the table carried.

The paragraph in the report of the Trustees of Graceland College relating to College finances, action on which had been deferred until after considration of the report of the Bishop on the college budget was had, was taken up. It was read as follows:

"We respectfully represent that the finances of the college can only be properly handled in connection with the finances of the whole church, and consideration given to every department. end may largely be met through an annual budget, and when fully undertaken, the college should be run within the limits laid down by the body, the debt met, reduced, and paid off, and when paid kept paid, and additional expenditure made only with the consent of the body. should be economy in collection as well as in expenditure. But under existing circumstances, it is an open question if there is any other alterna-tive than for the College Board of Trustees aggressively to push efforts for the securing of means."

Discussion was on the motion to approve. A substitute was offered:

"Moved as a substitute that the college debt, together with the appropriations provided for in the budget made by the Bishop, be paid out of the general Church funds."

The substitute was lost by a vote of 140 to 202. and the motion to approve carried by a vote of 234 to 37.

Some misunderstanding having arisen over some points involved in the resolution last adopted, and the chairman having previous to its passage, in answer to a question, given his understanding of the meaning of it, it was moved that the interpretation given by the chair be inserted in the minutes of the Conference. The motion prvailed. The statement of the chair was as follows:

"If we adopt this motion as we have it contained in the report of the college, it places the administration of the college financially under the financial officers of the Church and authorizes them to pay it out of the funds of the Church if hey so choose,"

The time of adjournment having arrived, announcements of the services to follow were made, and the assembly sung:

"From all that dwell below the skies,

Let the Creator's praise arise."

The benediction was offered by Patriarch J. W. Wight.

AN INTERESTING CONVERSION.

Among the delegates at the Conference are Bro. and Sr. Charles E. Jones, of Columbus, O., who have been members of the church but a few years. Their whole souls are in the work, however, and they are daily rejoicing in the glorious gospel which they heard for the first time in the far-distant north.

Some years ago they were in Alaska, and being disposed to seek the better way, attended the Congregational church. In the same place and having the same desires for righteousness were Bro. and Sr Will Stoft, who as members of the Reorganized Church never fail to let their light shine. They also attended the Congregational churchthe only one available-and the high character of the principles set forth by them, supported by righteous lives, gave light to Mr. and Mrs. Jones. who were very much impressed with what they heard of the gospel. As neighbors they together took up the Home Class work in the study of the Book of Mormon in connection with the Bible.

Leaving Alaska they traveled in various parts of the United States and searched the while for more light among the various churches with which they came in contact without success. sojourn in Florida left them still hungering, and they moved to Columbus, O. Here they sought out the Saints at their meeting place, and to their joy found the very gospel they had been looking for, and in the 25th of June, 1911, offered themselves for baptism.

The multiplied joy which came to them on their reception of the greater light in the gospel still remains with them, shining out upon their faces as well as in their lives, and they are diligently engaged in helping in every way possible to spread the glad message to others. Bro. Jones was ordained to the office of teacher shortly after his baptism, and one year later was ordained to the office of priest, and six months later to the office of elder, in which office he is doing faithful labor. He is studying also to qualify himself for future work. Sr. Jones is also actively engaged in auxiliary work, and is a great support to her husband in his work in the ministry.

One of the delights of the Conference to them is the renewed association with Bro. and Sr. Stoft, now of Omaha, who first led them to the light in far-off Alaska.

"We want to carry the spirit of prayer into our study, and the spirit of investigation into the Church."-Elbert A. Smith.

THE HOLY CITY.

This beautiful cantata which had been in preparation by the numerous choirs of the church for several months was rendered on Saturday even-ing, April 11th. Long before the time of beginning the church auditorium was crowded to its capacity and hundreds were unable to gain admittance, notwithstanding it had been previously announced that it would be given again on Sunday

Bro. W. N Robinson was in charge of the occasion, prayer being offered by J. W. Wight and W. W. Smith giving an introductory address. Albert N. Hoxie was the director, Miss Amy Winning organist, and R. G. Smith pianist. A quartette, consisting of Mrs. W. N. Robinson andMrs. Frances Norris, and Brethren O. L. James and Paul Craig. Each of these also took solo parts. The chorus also had within it a double trio of ladie's voices, and a second choir of sixteen voices. The entire program lasted about two hours.

"The Holy City" is a fine musical production portraying in its first part the longings of earth life for the thinge divine in the havens, and expressing the anticipated joys of that glorious realm. The second part attempts a description in music of the new heavens and the new earth, and the praises of the redeemed as they stand around the throne of God singing "Holy, holy, holy is the Lord of Hosts," the rejoicings of those who have come "out of great tribulations, and have washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb. The final climax of joy and exulting praise is reached in the last chorus, "Great and marvelous are Thy works Lord God Almighty; Just and true are Thy ways, Thou King of Saints."

The effort is such as can stir the soul, and bring into the inner life an apprciation of the divine goodness and the glories of the world to come that can not be had in any other way. The wonderful harmonies of the ladies' voices as they sang:

List! the Cherubic host, in thousand choirs, Touch their immortal harps of golden wires, With those just spirits who wear victorius palms Singing everlastingly devout the holy psalms."

seemed to bring a touch of heaven to earth, or perhaps opens to the longing soul a momentary view of that world of light and purity. It was uplifting and inspiring.

This effort is but a beginning of what will be don by the choirs of the church combined from time to time at the General Conferences. It should be a stimulus to more of the young people to take up the study of music and develop their natural gifts, and thus be fitted more fully to render praise to God and blessing to their fellow

THE COST OF MILITARISM.

In a letter addresed to the Pressident of the Peoples National Bank of Pittsburg, Col. Samuel Harden Church states that while in Europe last summer he made the somewhat startling discovery that articles frequently purchased in Parisian shops can be bought to better advantage as regards quality, attractive models and price, in New York than in Paris. He learned upon inquiry of Frenchman of high position the reason for high priccs abroad. "They replied," he says, "without hesitation, that the rise in prices, not only in Paris, but throughout Europe, was due to the extra war taxes prevailing everywhere. For example, every soul in the population of France, young and old, and both sexes included, is required to pay on the average $7 a year for the maintenance of the army and navy, and this does not include pensions."

Col. Church also drew up some statistics showing the cost of war preparation for each of the ten principle nations (without including pensions or the destruction caused by past wars) and the ratio which the cost of army and navy bears to the total expenditures of each nation. The figures are for the year 1911; since the Balkan war the European nations have increased financial burdens.

The cost of the army and navy in Austria-Hungary was 9.8 per cent of the nation's total expenditures; in Spain 22.9 per cent; in Russia 23.5; per cent; in Italy 24.1 per cent; in France 30.9 per cent; in Turkey 31.4 per cent; in Japan 32.5 per cent; in Great Britain $4.3 per cent; in the United States 43.3 per cent; in Germany 43.5 per cent.

The cost per unit of population varies from $1.-70 in Austria-Hongary to $7.60 in Great Britain! The Feoples National Bank concludes the statement thus: "Altogether apart from the ethical side of the question, it must be odvious to all thinking persons that such huge burdens impair the economic efficiency of nations; and if effect is carefully traced back to cause, will be found large ly responsible for the social unrest in Europe.

IN EXPLANATION.

A number of complaints have come to our office stating that subscribers were not receiveing their daily Ensigns regularly. Upon investigation we find the names correctly upon our lists, and each issue has been mailed upon the day of issue with the exception of our first number dated the 6th, which failed to get into the outgoing mail on that day and consequently laid over in the sacks until Tuesday morning the 7th. Upon taking up the matter with the postal authorities it is found the delay has been in the sacks not being distributed promptly to the trains leaving Kansas City. The Ensign office has done all possible to have the difficulty remedied at once, and we hope that there will be no further delays.

THE GENERAL CONFERENCE.

The lecture on Homiletics was equal to those preceding, and it was quite evident that it found appreciation with practically all the ministry. Walter W. Smith was the speaker.

A still larger audience attended the morning prayer service, the upper auditorium being filled upon the main floor. The testimonies were good, expressing abiding faith in the gospel, and the progress of the Church. One feature is that those taking part in these gatherings have come from various parts of the land, from the Atlantic States and the Pacific States; from Canada and from the Gulf States, and others less distant, but all bring the same testimony of the power of the gospel to save, and of the reception of the blessings promised to the obedient believer. A variety of spiritual manifestations are related, and the gifts of the Holy Spirit are enjoyed. William Johnson and John Midgorden were in charge of this morning's service.

The audience was somewhat increased for the preaching service when H. J. Davison spoke, being assisted by Wardell Christy.

The Business Session.

After the opening exercises at 2 p. m. the assembly proceeded immediately to business.

A resolution was adopted providing for the sale of on or more real estate lots at Urbita Springs, San Bernardino, Cal.

A report from the Joint Council of the Presiaency and Twelve on a petition from the Minnesota District relative to carrying out the principle of equality in ministerial allowances, referred to the council on the 6th, was read. The report was adopted.

"Independence, Mo., April 13, 1914.

"To the General Conference:

"We are authorized to report the following action of the Joint Council of First Presidency, Twelve and Bishopric in reference to petition from the Minnesota District which was referred to the Joint Council by the General Conference for examination and report:

"'Resolved that in our opinion the matter is already sufficiently covered by existing resolutions and the law as contained in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants.

"Respectfully submitted,

"Frederick M. Smith, "Secretary Presidency. "John W. Rushton, "Secretary Twelve."

The Presidency presented a report relative to changes in the Standing High Council which was adopted, as follows:

"Independence, Mo., April 14.

"To the General Conference:-

"The Presidency desires to suggest the advisability of releasing Bro. John Chisnell from the High Council because of advanced age. Bro. Chisnell has been a member of the Council for many years, and though we regret to find his age is disqualifying him, yet we feel that it is necessary to have someone on the Council who can give his time when necessary. We therefore suggest that Bro. Chisnell be honorably released. To fill such vacancy and the one created by the ordination of Bro. W. A. McDowell to the office of Patriarch and Evangelist, we desire to submit the name of Brn. Charles Fry and Richard J. Lambert.

"Respectfully submitted, "Frederick M. Smith,

"Independence, Mo., April 6, 1914.

"To the First Presidency and General Conference. Greeting:

"We, your committee appointed to consider the advisability of publishing proper text books for Graceland College, respectfully beg leave to report as follows:

"We have carefully canvassed the situation, and recognize the fact that many of the text books now commonly used in institutions of learning, assume as proven certain hypotheses, which in the minds of the young tend to raise questions of doubt as to the faith of their fathers, and that the manner in which these questions are sometimes discussed tends towards Agnosticism or even

"And while we believe that in the revelation to Oliver Cowdery and W. W. Phelps, an opportunity vas given to meet some of these difficulties, yet in the education of our young people we must fit them to meet the questions of the day, and many of these ideas are too firmly established to be ignored with impunity, even were that desirable.

"Aslo, for accredited standing, definite work must be covered, and especially if advanced work is to be taken in other institutions of learning.

"We therefore respectfully recommend that the standard text books used in other institutions of like rank be used in Graceland College.

"That as rapidly as possible supplementary lectures be provided in which these topics are discussed in a fair and proper manner, and that provision be made for discussion by the proper instructors on these questions in a manner to set forth clearly the truth; and that when it may be deemed advisable, supplementary texts may be provided, but such texts only to be used in connection with the standard texts most commonly used in other institutions of learning of like rank.

A report of the United Order of Enoch was read, the chair stating that it was received and would be spread upon the minutes there being no objection.

Independence, Mo., April 1st, 1914.

To the General Conference in Session at Independence, Mo., Greeting:-

As the Trustees of the United Order of Enoch we present this as our annual report for the year, indicating the service performed so far as existing circumstances would permit.

Organization of Board.

At our first meeting the organization of the Board was effected by the election of E. L. Kelley, Chairman; M. H. Seigfried, Treasurer, A. H. Parsons, Secretary, with power to chose his assistant. David J. Krahl was selected. In addition to these officers named, Richard Bullard and George E. Harrington were selected to act with them as the Executive Board for the Trustees.

Work Accomplished.

Some of the work accomplished during the year by the Board was the drilling of a well so as to have living water for the people of Summit Addition. After going about three hundred feet it was abandoned and a pipe run out there carrying city water, the projects costing about $126.00 for both deals.

Deeds and Abstracts.

Deeds and abstracts have been delivered for 298 lots on the Summit Addition to the City of Independence, Mo.

Donations of Different Kinds.

Donations of different kinds have been extended to the Order, such as Stock in the Independence West Planing Mill Co., twenty shares, by Wm. Newton; fifty-nine shares in the Independence Coal Mining Co., by the same party; six hundred shares in the Central Lumber Co., by D. L. Palsgrove. And many patent rights have been offered and equity in real estates, some of which the Board did not see their way to accept.

The Woman's Auxiliary for Social Service reported having selected Mrs. Lucy Resseguie as its nominee for member of the Board of Trustees of

A. H. Parsons, Secretary.

Respectfully submitted in behalf of the Board.

the Children's Home. The name was indorsed and Sr. Resseguie made a member of the Board.

The Woman's Auxiliary also reported the work of its convention, the report being received and spread upon the minutes. That part of the report relating to business transacted reads:

port relating to business transacted reads:
"At our business session held on Thursday, April 9, Mrs. B. C. Smith, President, gave a survey of the work of the organization for the past year, further stating that as she had borne the responsibilities of the presiding officer for a great many years, it might be well to make a change and release her from this office. Therefore she placed before the convention the matter of soliciting the advice of the Joint Council of Presidency and Twelve, in the selection of a President, and any suggestions they may have to offer regarding our work. Regrets were expressed by speakers at the possibility of Mrs. Smith leaving the office she had held so long, and in which she had so faithfuly served. But believing the burden could now be assumed by others a motion was made that the Joint Council be notified of our meeting and that nominations for presiding officer be sent them with the request for their selection and any further advice they may have to give. A courteous reply was returned to us with the selection of Mrs. S. R. Burgess for President, Mrs. B. C. Smith for Vice President. This action was ratified by the convention. Mrs. D. J. Krahl asked to be released from the office of Secretary, and in the regular order of election of officers Miss Minnie Scott, of St. Joseph, Mo., was chosen Secretary, Mrs. J. A. Gardner, Treasurer. The two additional members of the Advisory Board are, Mrs. M. A. Etzenhouser and Mrs. D. J. Krahl.

"The Convention, by a rising vote, expressed their appreciation of the past service of Mrs. B. C. Smith and Mrs. D. J. Krahl, President and Secretary.

"By vote of the Convention, Mrs. B. C. Smith was made Historian of the organization.

"Respectfully submitted,
"Mrs. D. J. Krahl,

"Mrs. D. J. Krahl, "Retiring Secretary."

The Second Quorum of Seventy presented a report by H. E. Moler, Secretary. One part of the report provided for the suspension of one member and the expulsion of another for transgression, which action was affirmed by the Conference by the adoption of the report. In part it reads:

"The Second Quorum of Seventy have held eight meetings in all, and have participated in three joint meetings with the other Quorums of Seventies. Thirty-seven of our number are present. They are: William Anderson, A. C. Barmore, Samuel Brown, A. M. Chase, J. D. Curtis, H. J. Davison, John Davis, E. A. Erwin, Levi Gamet, M. F. Gowell, O. J. Hawn, A. J. Layland, C. G. Lewis, Daniel Macgregor, J. W. Metcalf, H. E. Moler, J. L. Parker, J. W. Peterson, A. B. Phillips, J. T. Riley, F. A. Russell, J. W. Roberts, F. L. Sawley, C. Scott, R. O. Self, T. J. Sheldon, A. C. Silvers, S. W. Simmons, F. M. Slover, W. A. Smith, C. L. Snow, Henry Sparling, J. D. Stead, J. M. Stubbart, Swen Swenson, D. E. Tuckeer, R. T. Walters.

"The amount of labor reported having been done by the Quorum during the past year is as follows: Services attended, 10,084; sermons, 6,178; assisted or presided, 2,777; baptisms, 362; confirmations, 234; children blessed, 197; administrations to the sick, 1,954; ordinations, 25; debates held, 6; marriages, 24; new openings, 23; actual time in the field, 8,949 days; Sunday schools organized, 4; Religios organizd, 4."

Graceland Extension Institute.

The beginning of a new organization designed to encourage and help the studious men of the church, especially the young, in their study of various subjects, and to provide help and give direction in such study, presented through the Secretary, Walter W. Smith, a report, which by motion and vote received the endorsement of the Conference.

"To the Presidency and General Conference Assembled, Greeting:—

"I beg to submit the following on behalf of those interested in education as a means of glorifying God and rendering service to His children.

"Two informal gatherings have been held upon invitation of President Frederick M. Smith, much interest was manifested by the brethren and a general demand for extension and correspendence work seems eminent among the Saints. At the first meeting, on April 6th, a committee was selected to outline a plan for organizing and unifying the educational interests of the church by bringing together those interested in education, either as teachers or students,

"There seems to be a great demand for home study and extension work in educational, scientific and philosophical subjects. To meet and supply this demand a plan was adopted and an organization effected to be known as Graceland Extension Institute. President Frederick M. Smith, of Indpendence, Mo., was chosen director; Elder Samuel A. Burgess, President of Graceland College, Lamoni, Ia., was chosen Associate Director, and Professor Chas. B. Woodstock, of Graceland College, Lamoni, Ia., was chosen Register. The three officers to constitute the managing board of the Institute.

"Membership of the Institute shall be composed of two classes. First, the Fellows, those who are willing to outline and prepare courses of study and supervise extension work; and second, martriculated members who shall register with the Institute and pursue an approved course of study. A nominal rebistration fee is required to cover the cost of postage and stationary. The services of the officers and fellows are entirely free.

"An annual meeting of the Institute is provided at which time officers shall be elected and regular business transacted. The Institute is open to all, and an invitation is extended to all those who have teaching qualifications to assist in this work, and to all those who desire assistance to enroll as students.

"Trusting that this may meet wish yoru approval we submit the same for the Institute.

"Walter W. Smith,
"Secretary of the Meeting."

"Independence, Mo., April 11,1914."

A resolution asking that a committee be appointed to consider the matter of incorporating the Church in Canada was laid upon the table,

The Next Conference.

Resolutions of Lamoni Stake and Branch inviting the General Conference of 1915 to meet at Lamoni were read.

It was moved that when this Conference adjourns, it does so to meet April 6, 1915, the place to be designated by the First Presidency.

A substitute was offered that the invitation of Lamoni Stake and Branch be accepted.

A plea was made in behalf of a petition from the Southern California District to the Conference of 1911, asking that the Conference of 1915 be held upon the re-union grounds of the Southern California District. After some discussion the previous question was ordered and the substitute was lost, and the original motion carried.

The recommendation in the report of the Frist Presidency (published in Daily Ensign of April 9th), recommended the perpetuation of the present musical organization and the selection of Albert N. Hoxie, Jr. as General Chorister, was by vote endorsed.

The recommendation of the Presidency to discontinue the Tract Committee as such, the same being composed of the First Presidency and that the duties of that committee be left with the Presidency as a part of their routine duties, was adopted.

The further recommendation that the Committee on Reorganization of Quorums be dispensed with, the work having been largely accomplished, and that future work in this direction be left with the First Presidency was also adopted.

The suggestion in the Presidency's report that the Presidency be authorized to appoint delegates to congresses or conventions, such as the Fourth National Peace Congress, which was held last year, was approved and authority granted

In regard to the request of the General Sunday School Association for the Presidency and one of the Twelve to sit as honorary members of the Executive Committee of that society the chair stated that E. A. Smith had been nominated to represent the Presidency on that committee. The nomination was approved.

The chairman as a member of the Committee on Filling Vacancies in the Board of Auditors, reported that there had been no vacancies and hence the committee had not been called together. The committee, consisting of F. M. Smith, J. W. Rushton and H. A. Stebbins, was sustained.

The business of the afternoon was done with dispatch and with the spirit of peace and good will prevailing in all. "Shall we meet by life's pure river?" was sung and the closing prayer offered by Richard Bullard.

THE GENERAL CONFERENCE.

Wednesday, April 15th.

The elders in their morning gathering, by unanimous vote, expressed their approval of the courses of lectures given by Elders S. A. Burgess and Walter W. Smith, and declared themselves in favor of their continuance another year at the Conference of 1915. The lectures have helped to broaden the minds of the eldership and to lay the foundation of a personal research and study. Elder Burgess occupied this morning, taking up the principle of Priesthood in its purity and divinity, and also in its perverted forms, showing how that fragmentary truth has followed through a perverted priesthood.

John Smith and D. E. Powell were in charge of the morning prayer service, and the preaching following was by James W. Davis, assisted by Lyman Fike.

At the conclusion of the morning lecture President F. M. Smith distributed to the officers of the various quorums a document from the President of the Church for quorum consideration, and directing that the ministry assemble in the places appointed and pass upon it. The quorums so assembled in their usual places.

The Business Session.

Upon the assembling of the delegates for business they sang:

"The Spirit of God like a fire is burning; The latter day glory begins to come forth."

and A. B. Philips, of Boston, offered prayer. After the reading of the minutes, a report from the Quorum of Twelve was read announcing the selection of J. W. Rushton as its representative to meet with the Executive Committee of the Sun-The selection received day School Association.

the approval of the Conference. J. W. Rushton and F. M. Sheehy reported for the delegates appointed to attend the Fourth American Peace Congress, held at St. Louis last With the two other delegates viz.: T. J. El-May. liott and Russell Archibald, they had attended seven of the eight meetings of the Congress, being registered as delegates from the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. The report showed a hearty sympathy with the peace movement, and by vote the report was approved and a copy ordered sent to the Secretary of the American Peace Society.

The Revelation.

President F. M. Smith, who was in the chair, stated that a document from the President of the Church, and which hed been considered by the quorums, would be read with the action of the several quorums thereupon. Secretary R. S. Salyards read the document as follows:

"To the officers, delegates and members of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, in Conference Assembled; Greet-

"In agreement with the notice for the general fast of the Church to be observed on the first Sunday, being the 5th day of April, 1914, I, Joseph Smith, President of the Church, in common with the custom of the brotherhood, observed the rule requiring the fast and spent that day in meditation and prayer upon the work of God and our present duty in the affairs intrusted to our care. Before the hour of breeking the fast came I was blessed by the presence of the Holy Spirit resting upon me in quiet assurance and in power. In the still small voice which giveth light and understanding to the intelligence of man, exalting the soul and sanctifying the spirit, there came unto me the directing voice of Him whose work we are engaged

"Thus saith the Spirit unto the Church: The time has now come when the necessities of the work require that the servants of the Church, Bishops Edwin A. Blakeslee and Edmund L. Kelley, should be more closely associated in the carrying on of the financial affairs of the Church and caring for the various organizations requiring the expenditure of the moneys collected from the membership of the Church and the care of the properties belonging to the Church as an organization under the laws of the Church and of the To accomplish this object the servant of the Church, Edwin A. Blakeslee, should make himself more thoroughly acquainted with the affairs in the office of the Bishopric, that he may be better prepared to advise, strengthen, and aid in controlling the affairs of the Bishopric to the successful accomplishment of the object in view when he was called and ordained to the Bishopric.

"The Spirit saith further, that it is expedient that additional aid be given to the Bishopric in charge of the general affairs of the finances, and to do this Richard C. Kelley, son of my servant Bishop Edmund L. Kelley, should be called and ordained to the office of an Elder that he may act with the Bishopric in case of necessities and to work in the office of the Bishop in looking after and caring for the affairs appertaining to that office; and in due time, if he approve himself in this work, he should receive an ordination to the High Priesthood, which would authorize him to act fully as a part of the Bishopric.

"The Spirit saith further, that the spirit of distrust and want of confidence in those who are called and ordained to act in the various responsible positions in the priesthood and in authority in the Church is unbecoming those professing faith in God, Jesus Christ His Son, and the Holy Spirit of Truth, and evinces a serious lack of that charity which Paul, an Apostle of Christ, declared to be the quality of Christian virtue which thinketh no Those who go out from the assemblies and solemn conclaves of the Church should exercise great care in their ministration abroad, both to the branches where they may officiate and in their preaching the gospel to them outside to avoid sowing seeds of distrust and suspicion either in public ministration or in private conversation. The Church has been admonished heretofore in this respect and the Spirit saith again, it is unbecoming to the character and calling of them who administer in the name of Jesus Christ the Lord.

"In Witness whereof I, Joseph Smith, President and servant of the Church, hereto set my hand this 14th day of April, in the year of our Lord 1914.

"(Signed) Joseph Smith."

President Elbert A. Smith reported verbally: "The junior members of the Presidency have examined the document and are willing to accept it as a revelation from God and cheerfully to abide by its provisions."

Reports were read from the Quorums of the Twelve, Seventy, High Priests, Order of Evangelists, Order of Bishops, Elders and the Aaronic Priesthood, all expressing indorsement of the document as a revelation.

It was then moved that the revelation be adopted and that it be incorporated into the canon of Scripture known as the Doctrine and Covenants. Comments were made by various members of the Conference, after which the vote was taken, the motion carrying without a dissenting vote.

It was moved and ordered that the revelation be printed in proper form for insertion in the Doctrine and Covenants, and published as a supplement to the "Saint's Herald "and "Zion's Ensign."

Address of President Joseph Smith.

President Joseph Smith addressed the Conference, his address being listened to with close interest. It is here given in full: Brother President:

"It would have been manifestly improper for me to have spoken to the adoption or the rejection of this document, for no one knows better than I, who stand in the presence of God to-day, that I shall have to answr for the genuine character of that which was presented and shall be judged upon the honesty of purpose and the integrity of duty. Called, as has been acknowledged by the Church, by divine authority under which the Church originated and under which it has always existed, and that call and the investiture of the right to act having been received from the people of the Church in solemn assembly and acquiesced in it for fifty-four years, I have a right to believe that as I stand to answer before God for my honesty and uprightness of intent and purpose and for the integrity of duty which I may have performed under this calling, and know full well that I stand nearer to the answering of my duty before God than perhaps any other man in this assembly (with perhaps two or three exceptions); hence, I may say, with confidence, that I feel very grateful indeed to God and very grateful to the people composing the Church and its representatives here, for the kindness of their treatment to me in me discharge of this duty of answering to the call of the people in imploring divine direction, and in transmitting what I received through the Spirit, which directs the work unto those who represent the body at large.

"The difficulties rise up before me, and it is necessary, and it always has been, for me to take a careful survey of the whole field, so far as my ability enables me to do, and when that is done, to transmit faithfully the intent and purpose and the will of the Master, who has so far carried the work, in His wisdom, and has not, as yet, permitted it to meet with defeat or disaster. Hence, 1 would, if I could, put within the mind-and I may add, the soul-of every one present to-day, what I have felt of the difficulty of the situation under which I was called to act, and that which I have felt in discharging that duty. For the wisdom of it I do not answer; for the reason of it, my portion of it, I do not answer; I know not, beyond what is given, what may have been in the divine mind, and should any one of you ask me about this or that in any of the Revelations which I have been permitted to give to the Church, I must answer, inevitably, unless the Revelation itself contains a reason, or the reasons for them, I am not able to I am but a humble instrument in the answer. hands of God, as are all of you; I claim no higher tribute, no higher characteristic or qualifications of honesty of intent or purpose than that which each one of you may claim. I am not to be considered as within the counsel of the Almighty, only so far as that counsel is transmitted by the voice of inspiration to me, when occasion on my part is required. I dare not listen to the cries of disaster, loss or damage. I dare not life up my heart in triumph at apparent conquest over enemies that oppose the Church. I can only, as the rest of you, do that duty that lies nearest to me, and which I am expected to perform, and leave the result in the hands of God, and brethren, if He does not know His duty, and has not had the ability to perform it, I am sure, so far as I am concerned, He has chosen a weak instrumentality. Whether or not individuals called thus, choose to serve the Church or refuse, it lies with them. we refuse to receive the word of God, that which must ensue lies with us; if we do, and we are blessed as we have been hitherto in many instances by following the divine Mind, we surely are justified in a large degree for still making appeal to Him, and trusting to that which He may give us.

"I have, for the past year, studied earnestly what might result, providing that the inflow of means to sustain our work should cease, and that sooner or later the Bishopric would not be able, out of that which was in the treasury, to meet the demands of those who are abroad in the fields, or those officers who are necessarily gathered to the centers of business for the transaction of the affairs of the Church. What would be the result? For a good number of years, the Church existed and the administration of the preaching of the

CHICAGO, CENTRAL BRANCH.

Judging from the testimonies, the hour spent in testimony and prayer on Wednesday night of each week, is certainly a blessing to the saints here. We are only sorry that the world cannot see their folly and worldliness, and that the world cannot see their folly and worldliness, and that they are not putting forth any effort to learn of their Maker and the heavenly Father. They don't seem to look forward to a future. If they could but sense the sweet influence that we the "children of God" enjoy in our daily lives, with a realization that it does come from God, there is no doubt that a large majority of the world would abandon their desire for worldly pleasures, and would fit themselves to receive the blessings of God, and enjoy the pleasure that comes from no other source than a heavenly one. heavenly one

It is for us then, to become better men, women and children, that we may show by our daily walk and talk that we have something to be thankful for, that the world at large does not have, and that those whom we come in coatset with may be tempted, not by the adversary, but by our shining light.

Six services were held Sunday, namely—Young People's Prayer, morning preaching, Sunday school, baptismal, Religio, and evening preaching. Bro. J. Kier of the H. of I. Branch, addressed us in the morning, and Bro, R. G. Davis, who is on his way back from General Conference, addressed us in the evening.

A LITTLE MOTHER PASSED AWAY.

On the morning of the twenty-seventh of March-just past midnight-the spirit of 'Beth, the wife of Bro. Walter Badham, and daughter of Bro, Heman and Sr. Vida Smith (one of our department superintndents) slipped away into the larger life and left a little son, only seven days old. Beth passed her twenty-first birthday last November, the third.

The hearts of the many in Lamoni and elsewhere have bled in true sympathy. The heart-broken husband clings to his baby and the pretty new cottage home, and is desolate and bowed down as with a weight of years.

But what can we say, and what can we do? "Such is life"-it is true; and many such experiences come to the households of the earth in this life,-but there is no comfort in this knowledge. There is only comfort in the knowledge that "there is no death" and that God is over all and in all, and will give us "strength to endure and to hold out faithful unto the end.

We often think of a poem written by one of our young saints, in humble, heart-broken submission, upon the demise of his bethrothed. One verse reads thus:

I lose the web of my desire. To set thee free, to set thee free. Fly forth on wings that never tire, Nor think of me, nor think of me! Love, grief, submission, endurance! May the the Father of us all grant the young husband comfort, and pleasure yet in life, for he still has the baby life (flesh and blood of her who with him loved it and rejoiced and planned its coming. And she will come again!

Her parents have in Beth, parted with their baby, and the mother lay prostrate with grief and her heart filled to bursting with memories. She had received a blessed warning of the sad event, through the Spirit, and can well take comfort in the thought that the life just entered here will prove to be a balm and a solace, during the absence of the one just entered into the realms of the "future" life.

THERE IS NO DEATH.

There is no death! The stars go down To rise upon some fairer shore, And bright in heaven's jeweled crown They shine forevermore.

There is no death. The dust we tread Shall change beneath the Summer showers To golden grain or mellow fruit Or rainbow-tinted flowers.

The granite rocks disorganize To feed the hungry moss they l The forest leaves drink daily life From out the viewless air.

There is no death; the leaves may fall,
The flowers may fade and pass away—
They only wait through wintry hours
The coming of the May.

is no death! An angle form Walks o'er the earth with silent tread; He bears our best loved things away, And then we call them "dead." He leaves our hearts all desolate-He plucks our fairest, sweetest flowers; Transplanting into bliss, they now Adorn immortal howers

The bird-like voice, whose joyous tones
Made glad this scene of sin and strife,
Sings now in everlasting song,
Amid the tree of life.

And where he sees a smile so bright, Of hearts too pure for taint and vice, He bears it to that world of light, To dwell in Paradise.

Born into that undying life, They leave us but to come again; With joy we welcome them-the same Except in sin and pain.

And ever near us, though unseen The dear immortal spirits tread; For all the boundless Universe Is life-there is no dead.

MOTHERHOOD.

The following poem was written by Rabindranath Tagore, the Hindu poet, who has been awarded the latest Nobel prize for literature. The poem is called "The Beginning" and is from a collection entitled "The Crescent Moon," just published by the Macmillan Company.

"Where have I come from; where did you pick me up?"
the baby asked its mother. She answered, half crying half laughing, and clasping the baby to her breast:
"You were hidden in my heart as its desire, my darling.
"You were in the dolls of my childhood's games; and when with clay I made the image of my god every morning, I made and unmade you then.
"You were enshrined with our household deity, in his

"When in girlhood my heart was opening its petals, you

"Your tender softness bloomed in my youthful limbs, like a glow in the sky before the sunrise.
"Heaven's first darling, twin-born with the morning light, you have floated down the stream of the world's life, and at last you have stranded'on my heart.

"As I gaze on your face, mystery overwhelms me; you who belong to all have become mine.
"For fear of losing you I hold you tight to my breast. What magic has snared the world's treasure in these slener arms of mine?"-Kansas City Star.

NOTES. Homiletics.

The interest being taken in the lectures on Homiletics (Preaching) by the ministry shows that the ministers of the Church are desirous of improving their personal standing and qualifica-tions by all proper means. The time when men thought that the only thing needed to preach was to enter the pulpit and open their mauths is past, and the power derived from intellectual and other attainments is recognized as having a necessary part in the work of preaching.

A resolution presented on Monday seeking to put the study of Homiletics under the ban was tabled as soon as it was presented. The elders have mostly been called from various vocations into the work of the ministry without having the advantages of a theological education, and some of them with but little of the common school education, and they have gone out and done good work under the light and power of the Holy Spirit. But their lack of education has become apparent to themselves, and they gladly grasp every opportunity of improving the conditions and fitting themselves for greater usefulness. The two series of lectures by Brn. Smith and Burgess are what they want and they are taking them in.

Development along these lines in no degree discredits the work and office of the Holy Spirit, but rather makes the work of that Divine power more convenient and effectual. If the Spirit is to bring all things "to your remembrance," it must be apparent that knowledge that is not already within the mind cannot be revived. Elder Smith represented the Spirit as a light brought into a dark room. It illuminated things but it did not create them or change them. The turning on of the light does not arrange the furniture of a room in order, nor polish the chandeliers, but only shows what is there. It is the individual's part to store the mind with the knowledge, and to arrange that knowledge in systematic and proper order for use, and then when the light of the Holy Spirit is given the speaker has at his command the whole storehouse of knowledge, and he has, as we say, "Liberty."

The lecturer also remarked that many mistook the tempering of the steel for the sharpening of it. The man may be tempered by the Holy Spirit He must do the but still be a dull instrument. sharpening. When he as an instrument of God is both tempered by the Spirit and is sharpened by personal attainment he becomes a power for good. How Long?

Usually the Conference does not move many days until the question is heard: "When are we going to adjourn?" or "When will we get done?" The frequency of the question grows with the days until adjournment comes. Present prospects as we see them indicate that the Conference will not finish its work before Saturday of this week, though any kind of a guess is very uncer-tain. What sometimes impresses us as momentous questions, and likely to consume considerable time are sometimes disposed of quickly, and in other cases matters unseen, or if seen, considered to be unimprotant, arise and require much time to settle. Sometimes problems arise suddenly, like a great thundercloud above the horizon appearing as if it would overshadow the whole heavens only to be turned away by a diverting wind leaving a

However, the important question should be not "How long?" but "How well?" Every member ought to determine that so long as there is important business to be done he will be in his place to help do it. Sometimes, we fear, men in their anxiety to do the business and get home, use the "Previous Question" to thoughtlessly and hastily and cut off discussion that ought to be had in order to arrive at the true facts. It may be observed that in the early part of the Conferences there is a tendency to argue to the limit every detail, and in the latter part when weariness ensues to rush lightly over some of the important things.

The General Conference is a deliberative body and its business should be done with the most careful deliberation in all points.

MODEL OF KIRTLAND TEMPLE.

Upon suggestion of Bro. C. Edward Miller, now upon his mission in Australia, that a model of the Kirtland Temple should be made to scale, so that should the need ever arise for its reconstruction it could be done, President F. M. Smith arranged for carrying out the plan.

Some time ago Bro. Harry Smith, son of Bro. and Sr. B. C. Smith, of Independence, and who is engaged in architectural work in the East, visited the temple at Kirtland, O., and took careful measurements of the building in all of its parts, making drawings, etc., and taking photos. From these Bro. Harry, and Bro. Paul Craig, with Bishop Kelley's son Emlin, have constructed a plaster paris model to the scale of 1/4 inch to the foot. The details of the building are worked out in artistic exactness even to the showing of the thousands of small windowpanes, and the graceful lines in the large colonial windows. The model is on exhibition at the conference and attracts much attention both from those who have seen the original and those who have not.

The Kirtland Temple was built by the Church in a very early day, the corner stones being laid on July 23, 1833, and the building dedicated March 27, 1836. The manifestations of divine power at the time of its dedication and subsequently, were the greatest the Church has ever known, which gave assurance that the efforts and sacrifices of the Saints in building it according to the command of God were approved, and the building accepted at their hands. The remarkable manner in which the building has been preserved is an interesting story, and many believe it is due to the special providence of God.

According to the Revelation directing its erection it was built fifty-five feet wide and sixty-five feet long, having two large auditoriums, one above the other, besides the smaller rooms upon the third floor. It is prized to-day as one of the historical treasures of the State of Ohio, and visitors come from all parts of the world to see it. It is built of stone quarried in the neighborhood, and the outside is plastered with cement into which was mixed broken glass which sparkles in the sunlight. Most of the original cement still remains and seems to-day more durable than those parts put on at a later date in repairing the breaks.

After the Saints left Kirtland, soon after its dedication, it went into disuse, being left to its enemies, and it was not until about fifty years later that it came again into possession of the Church, which also had met with adverse conditions, but which had been reorganized with the son of the original prophet at the head. it belongs to the Reorganized Church and is being kept in proper repair and preservation.

The model is both interesting and useful in that it gives those who have never seen the original a proper idea of the appearance of the building from the outside, and also in that it preserves the outlines and dimensions, and even the details of the

A PARTING MEETING.

Just after the final adjournment of the Conference the Eldership were assembled in the lower Auditorium for a few words of counsel. President Elbert A. Smith briefly spoke of the necessity of maintaining high ideals of life and character, and prging the men not to forget that they were out on important business of a high character, and that they could not afford to step down to yield to the sinful things of the world. J. W. Rushton also made some remarks relative to the list of appointments, and the meeting was closed with the invitation of the divine blessing upon all by the Presiding Patriarch, Frederick A. Smith.

The Eldership gathered in groups around their ministers in charge for final suggestion and personal direction, and then most of them hastened away to catch their trains to their diverse fields.

GENERAL CONFERENCE.

(Continued from page 1.) gospel continued, and we had no systematized form of administration of the affairs of the Bishopric. Individuals went out, taking, as it were, their lives and their human fortunes in their hands, and trusting to the charity of those among whom they labored for sustemance, the daily bread to them or those dependent upon them.

"I have concluded that should some of those things occur, which some have seemed to foresee, it could but be the interest or the duty of the Church in the magnificent faith of those who might remain faithful unto Christ to again take up the peripatetic work of the Church, and so far as it is possible for them to continue the preaching of the gospel until the fortunes of the Church shall again be resuscitated by divine assistance, and those who were able to help us, again send their tributes of support into the work of the Church, to those who had charge of the treasury.

"It seems to me that we ought not to faint, that we ought not to fail, that we ought not to quail, and when I learn that our elders have sat in discussion before those who have attacked the faith, I have lifted my heart and hands in prayer to God, asking that they might be sustained; and from the day when Bro. William Kelley and myself, in the discharge of our duty, our ministerial duty, pased on into Canada, and Bro. Blair departed in the discharg of his duty, we provided for a discusion at Quincy, Mich., and we three old elders in the work, left a boy, scarcely turned in his majority, to meet a polished minister of the Christian Church, and we went out and left him to the battle, and we carried away with us (I answer for one) we carried away with us no fear of disaster, no fear of defeat; we believed that as the young man with his sling and pebble from the brook, met the champion of the Philistine host and defended Israel against that attack, so would the Master's arm thus lead, and he would maintain the faith; and so it has been since that year--1878, if my memory serves me right--that we have been thus trusting to God and to Christ in the defence of His work. Shall we fail now? In the name of God, no; in the name of Christ, nay; in the name of the Holy Spirit, which has stood by us from the first to the last, I say 'NAY.' [Amens from the audience.] And I hope, brethren here assembled, I hope I say 'NAY' with you, and you say 'NAY' with me to this question. [Amens.]

"I thank you, my brothers; I thank you as men, I thank you as officrs, I thank you delegates sent here by the voice of your Conferences, your Districts and your Branches, for the faith you hav still rposed in me, and if I have failed by rason of advancing years in taking cognizance, proper cognizance of what my duty was unto the people, I pray you, if it would be feared that disaster should result from my being continued in the trust, that you will relieve me and put a younger and stronger man, or men, in the position that I have held so long before you, and I shall feel no regret; I shall feel no sense of injury, or personal difficulty or want of confidence in any one who may believe that such should occur. I am ready to lay down the weapons of my warfare, either to be taken to my final rest or to continue in session with you unshorn of any of this responsibility, and trust for you to choose whom you may call, or whom may be pointed out by divine wisdom.

"Again I thank you, one and all, for the confidence you have expressed in the vote which you have taken this day."

Under the leadership of the General Chorister the audience sang:

"We thank Thee, O God, for a Prophet To guide us in these latter days,"

President Elbert A. Smith offered the closing prayer, which was befitting to the occasion:

"As it was, our Heavenly Father, when the Master met His children anciently, so it is with us—that our hearts burn within us and we realize that He who came to save Israel has been with us. We thank Thee, our Heavenly Father, that during the viscissitudes of the past year Thou hast preserved the life of our aged prophet, and once more he has been privileged to deliver to us Thy word. We thank Thee, our Heavenly Father, that in all 'he past fifty years or more, that he has spoken to as through and by the aid of Thy Spirit, and we have always received that which has made men better, and never have we received that which has made them worse, and so by the fruits and by the works we realize that it is indeed the Word of God that has come to us. And so we pray that Thy divine benediction may be upon this our latest Revelation from Thee, and we present before Thee those who are called to assume the greater responsibility, and we pray that they may be blessed in carrying that responsibility and in accomplishing the work that is entrusted to their care—that the work of the Bishopric may move forward, that together we may be inspired with confidence and with the spirit of consecration and devotion, and commending this, Thy people, to Thy care, we pray Thy blessing to be with us in Jesus' name. Amen."

The chair made some annoucements, and advised the quorums to make an effort to have all business ready for the morrow's session, in view of the possibility of reaching final adjournment at that time.

Thursday, April 16th.

In view of the probable adjournment of Conference on Thursday it was arranged that Bro. W. Smith should give his lecture on Wednesday evening in the lower room. It was a continuation of the series on Homiletics. At the same time A. B. Phillips preached in the main auditorium, being assisted by T. J. Sheldon.

Thursday morning S. A. Burgess continued his series of lectures on Comparative Religions, following up the previous lecture on Priesthood, and showed the easy growth of perversions including those brought into the Church at Nauvoo, by which it was led into apostasy. It was a lecture that would be helpful to the elders in their work.

Two of the Presidency of the Independence Stake, Brn. M. H. Bond and W. H. Garrett, were in charge of the morning prayer service, and at 10:45 J. M. Terry was the speaker, assisted by James McKiernan.

Business Session.

President F. M. Smith occupied the chair at the opening of the business session at 2 p. m. "Shout the Tidings of Salvation" was sung and William H. Kelley offered prayer.

Statements of Brethren Named in Revelation. Following the reading of the minutes the chair stated that the two brethren named in the Revelation and who were not present upon yesterday when the Revelation was received, were now present, and if they were so disposed he presumed the body would desire to have an expression from them of their attitude in regard to the provisions of the Revelation.

Bishop Blakeslee being called upon said:

"Mr. President:—This document was handed me a short time ago. I see nothing in it but what I can comply with and will try to do so as far as possible for me to. And any way that it is possible for me to help the Church, why I will be very glad to do so. I realize my weakness in these matters and always have. But I suppose that none of us can give the proper results in any of these matters except by the influence and help of the Spirit of God. I presume if we put ourselves in the right attitude and try to do the right thing that He will be with us to guide in every way that will be for the upbuilding of His work. "I can see great possibilities for the work if we

"I can see great possibilities for the work if we can get together a little more in harmony of heart and in harmony of purpose. I am confident that it will be necessary for us to do this, it will be necessary for us to do this, it will be necessary for us to have the spirit of charity, and the mantle of love must dwell in our hearts or we can never accomplish those results that the Lord desires us to accomplish here, and that which is in the heart and mind of each one who is working in the cause here.

"I am confident that we all are interested in the upbuilding of the work, and that we have an earnest, burning desire that it should grow and develop so that the gospel might be carried throughout the earth, that the honest in heart everywhere might have the privilege of hearing of it and thereby have the opportunity of obeying its blessed principles. But we never will be able to accomplish this until we get together and all work with one purpose, and we must abandon in our hearts and minds the spirit of suspicion, the spirit of doubt of the purposes of our brethren who are working with us. That should be the spirit of our prayer all the time. And if we feel that those with whom we are associated are not quite accomplishing that which perhaps in our minds we think they ought to accomplish, let us take the matter to the Master in prayer and pray for them, pray for that quorum, and earnestly unite our sympathies and solicit the sympathies of Christ in their behalf to enable them to understand and fulfill the full purposes of their work. Perhaps then if we are not in perfect accord the Spirit of God will bring us in accord if we should happen to be outside. Sometimes I have thought we ourselves get outside of the line when we think our brother is outside.

"Now, I am confident that if our purposes are turned in this direction that nothing in this world can stop the onward movement of this great work in which we are engaged and which we all believe and know is the work of God here on the earth."

Richard C. Kelley, also being called upon, made the following statement:

"Mr. Chairman, Members of the Conference, Brothers and Sisters:—During the last three days I have been giving most serious consideration to that part of the late Revelation which sets forth that I should change the plan of life along which I have been working and should devote my work to the Church and to the ministry. I have the highest respect and honor for the men who have given their lives to the advancement of the work of the Church. I believe that I see in them examples of the highest type of service that men can give to their fellow men. In the eyes of all true Christians it must be an enviable position to go forth to represent the Gospel and the Church of Jesus Christ with that faith and spirit which can result only from great assurance that the work of the individual is mapped out and approved by no lesser authority than God Himself.

'I have been in attendance at many Conferences of our Church and have witnessed the acceptance of many Revelations pertaining to the general work of the Church and the calling of special men to positions in the Church. I have always believed that these men took up their work only after having received a personal direction and assurance of the Spirit that wherever and in so far as they lacked in their personality, in their physical and spiritual powers, that which would make them able to fill the part to which they have been called-I say that they had an assurance that whatever lack they had in those lines would be made up by the spirit which prompted their calling. I believe that ordinations to office should always be taken after the receipt of such assurance.

"I have no choice this afternoon other than to request that the arrangements for my ordination to Eldership shall be deferred until I may receive light in this matter and direction of the Spirit, which I have, as yet, not received. I bespeak your prayers in my behalf in seeking this light."

In view of the above statement it was moved that the ordination of Bro. R. C. Kelly be referred to the Presidency of the Church. The motion prevailed.

Report of the Committee on Archæology.

A lengthy report of the Committee on American Archæology was read by the chairman of the committee, F. M. Sheehy. By vote the committee was continued as at present constituted, being composed of W. H. Kelley, A. B. Phillips, R. Etzenhouser and Wm. Woodhead, in addition to the chairman named. The report will be published in full in the official minutes.

Counselor to Bishop Short.

Bishop Short stated that he had selected for his counselor in the Bishopric Hubert Case and asked that he receive the endorsement of the Conference. The selection was endorsed.

Second Quorum of Seventy.

The Second Quorum of Seventy reported, from which we take the following:

"During this Conference Columbus Scott, who has presided over this Quorum from its organization, presented his resignation as President of the Quorum, which was duly accepted. Arthur B. Phillips was selected as his successor, which selection was ratified by the Council of Presidents of Seventy.

"Resolutions of appreciation wave adopted and presented to President Scott for his long and faithful service as President of the Quorum. He is still a member of our Quorum. Our present number is fifty-eight."

The action of the Second Seventy was approved. Recommendation for Ordination of Patriarch.

A report from the Quorum of Twelve was read recommending the ordination of Issac M. Smith to the office of Patriach. Its adoption was moved.

Elder I. M. Smith made a statement saying that he had received intimation of his call to this office through the Spirit several times during the last three years, and though recognizing the defects in his qualifications was willing to accept and give such service as he was able. William Aylor of the Twelve and L. G. Holloway gave testimony of having received spiritual evidence of the brother's call, and of his fitness for the office. The recommendation was by vote approved.

Committee on Boundary Lines.

The Committee on Boundary Lines reported on several matters which had been referred to them, making the following recommendations:

"That Tulsa County, Okla., be taken from the Eastern District and annexed to the Central Oklahoma District.

"That the State of Colorado be divided into two districts—Eastern Colorado and Western Colorado, and that the Continental Divide be the dividing line.

"That Montana be divided into two districts— Eastern and Western Montana, and the west boundary of the present Counties of Valley, Dawson and Roseland be the dividing line.

"That the petition of the Nauvoo District asking the annexation of Adams County be referred back with the suggestion that the district confer with the Central Illinois District in the matter."

The report was signed by C. I. Carpenter, Secretary of the committee and was adopted.

Third Seventy.

The Third Quorum of Seventy reported having held eight meetings and three joint sessions with other quorums. Twenty-two members were pres-The quorum has never been filled. J. W. ent. Davis, Secretary.

Council of Seven Presidents.

The Seven Presidents of Seventy reported having met on March 27, and held sixteen meetings. Two had been selected for ordination and previously approved by the Conference, viz., Daniel J. Williams and W. E. Shakespeare. Columbus Scott had resigned as President of the Second Quorum of Seventy and A. B. Phillips chosen as his successor. The council consists of Columbus Scott, Senior President; James McKiernan, President First Quorum of Seventy; J. F. Mintun, Secretary; W. E. Peak, T. C. Kelley, J. Arthur Davis and Arthur B. Phillips.

First Seventy.

The First Quorum of Seventy reported having held twelve sessions and four joint sessions with other quorums. The quorum is full, having seventy members, though some are becoming aged. Sixty-five of them reported to the quorum.

The Order of Bishops.

The Order of Bishops presented a report of their Conference work:

"To the General Conference, Assembled, Greet-

"The Order of Bishops beg leave to report that since April 4th they have held twelve sessions, four of which were held in Joint Council with the First Presidency and Quorum of Twelve. Bishops and three Counselors have been in attendance at the Conference and have been very regular in their attendance at the quorum sessions.

having an average attendance of ten. "Several problems of great importance to the Church have been under consideration resulting in a better understanding of the duties resting upon this arm of the priesthood of the Church. While there has been a great earnestness displayed in the discussion of the matters before us, there has also been manifested that kindly and brotherly consideration for each other's feelings which characterizes the servants of the Lord.

"Our association with the First Presidency and Quorum of Twelve in Joint Council was of great importance to us as an order and has helped us to more clearly see and understand the relationship that should exist between us. Our hearts have been made glad as a result of our association with them.

"With a great desire as stewards over the temporalities of the Church, we are looking forward and arranging for future work which we hope will help us more fully qualify ourselves for the responsibilities resting upon us.
"J. A. Becker, Secretary."

Board of Auditors.

The matter of filling the annual vacancy in the Board of Auditors was taken up, and G. W. Blair, Lester Haas, G. W. Eastwood, James F. Kier and M. C. Fisher were nominated. G. W. Blair received a majority of all votes and was declared elected.

Board of Publication.

Upon inquiry as to vacancy in the Board of Publication, Bishop Kelley nominated to succeed E. L. Kelley, Bishop E. A. Blakeslee, the other members to remain as at present constituted. They are: F. B. Blair, Albert Carmichael, Oscar Anderson, and T. A. Hougas. The nomination was approved.

A vote of thanks was tendered Bishop Kelley for his long and faithful services as President of the Board of Publication.

Library Commission.

The representatives of the Church on the Library Commission were sustained. They are: E. A. Smith, E. A. Blakeslee, Heman C. Smith, E. H. Fisher and S. A. Burgess.

Committees Abolished.

The recommendation of the Presidency that the Committee on Historic Relics be abolished and the work placed with that of the Historical Department was adopted.

A further recommendation that the Committee on Publishing Reports to Conference be abolished and the work left with the Presidency and Secretary was adopted.

The business of the day being finished the chair made annoucements and J. W. Wight offered the benediction, after the audience had sung, "Hark! Listen to the Trumpeters."

The Evening Hour.

Hubert Case was the evening speaker, being assisted by W. A. Smith. At 7:30 an ordination meeting was held at the offices of the Quorum of I'welve on West Electric street, where the brethren selected for ordination to the several offices were ordained. Peter Anderson was in charge and after prayer, ordinations were performed as follows:

Ordinations.

Hubert Case was ordained to be Couselor to Bishop Short, by William M. Aylor and R. C. Russell of the Twelve.

Isaac M. Smith was ordained a Patriarch by Presiding Patriarch F. A. Smith, and Peter Anderson of the Twelve.

Joseph W. Lane was ordained to the office of High Priest by F. M. Sheehy and J. E. Kelley of the Twelve.

Charles Fry was ordained a member of the Standing High Council by J. E. Kelley and F. M. Sheehy of the Twelve.

Richard J. Lambert was ordained a member of the Standing High Council by J. A. Gillen and Peter Anderson of the Twelve.

Friday April 17th.

"The Delivery of the Sermon" was the subject of the morning lecture by W. W. Smith. elders received many helpful suggestions tending to aid them in the work of their ministry, especially in pulpit speaking.

It is apparent that a higher standard is being demanded of the men who represent the Church. by the conditions in the world where they have to labor, and by the necessities of the work as represented in the Church itself. No man should expect to become proficient in the work of the ministry without study and thought as to what he is going to present to the people and how he is going to present it. The "School of the Prophets" is a divine provision for the meeting of this need, but in the absence of the organized school, it is well that the preparatory efforts should be made, and no doubt the present movement will lead ultimately to the establishment of the school by divine direc-

Prayer Service.

The gifts of tongues, interpretation and prophecy were had at the morning prayer service giv-ing counsel, warning and hopeful promise to the Saints, and assuring the ministry that God would be with them in their labors of the year. Asa Cochran and John Garver were in charge.

The morning sermon was preached by E. E. Long, assisted by George Robley. The attendance remained good notwithstanding the approach to the time of adjournment of Conference-the time that many are accustomed to depart for

Business Session.

At the opening of the last session of the Confernce the Saints sang "Beautiful Zion, Built Above," and Patriarch F. A. Smith led in prayer. The house was well filled in anticipation of the reading of the appointments and final adjournment, interest in the appointments of the missionaries being keen.

Report of the Joint Council.

A report of the Joint Council of the Presidency, Twelve and Seventy, which the Senior President had been relieved from on his request, and to whom had been referred the matter of the Sanitarium, reported:

"The Presidency, Twelve and Seventy, to whom was referred the Sanitarium matter, that was being considered by the Conference, met in Joint Council this forenoon, and after due consideration, the report of the former Joint Council of the Presidency, Twelve and Bishopric was adopted, and we were so authorized to report to you at this afternoon's session.."

It was signed by J. F. Mintun, Secretary for the Seventies, and J. W. Rushton, Secretary of the Twelve. The report of former Council was previously published.

A motion to adopt the report was discussed at some length and the vote being taken it prevailed.

Actions on Committees.

The Committee on Church Offices, consisting of the Presidency, Twelve and Bishopric, announced that it had no report to make. It was continued.

Regarding the Committee on Saints' Homes, Bishop Kelley was authorized to make such changes in this committee he thought wise.

The chair stated that unless there be objection the Presidency would continue to appoint the Committee on Credentials prior to the General Conference.

The Committe on the Publication of a Teachers' Edition of the Inspired Version was continued.

The Committee on Jeuvenile Church History reported that the work was made up ready for the press and would be issued soon. The committee was continued.

The Committee on Translation of the Book of Mormon was continued.

The matter of the Sanitarium Board of Trustees was taken up and George E. Harrington resigned, his resignation being accepted. Nominations were D. J. Krahl, Charles Fry, E. Etzenhouser to fill the vacancy. Charles Fry being elected.

The Committee on Revision of the Book of Rules asked for further time, which was granted and the committee continued.

Officers Sustained.

The various officers of the Church were sustained by motion from the body and vote. Following is the list:

Joseph Smith, as Prophet, Seer, and Revelator to the Church, and Frederick M. Smith and Elbert A. Smith as his Counselors.

The Quorum of Twelve. Presiding Bishop E. L. Kelley, and his Counselor, E. A. Blakeslee.

The Church Physician, Dr. Joseph Luff. motion that it be the sense of this body that the Physician to the Church should make a report to the Bishop was followed by a motion to refer the matter to the Presiding Bishop, to report at next Conference. It was so referred.)

The Church Secretary, R. S. Salyards. The Church Recorder, C. I. Carpenter.

At this juncture John W. Rushton offered his resignation as a member of the Board of Trustees of the Sanitarium, and on motion it was accepted. Nominations for the vacancy were I. A. Smith, D. J. Krahl, Dr. Charles Keowan and E. A. Blakes-E. A. Blakeslee was elected.

Bishop E. L. Kelley also resigned as member of the Sanitarium Board of Trustees, and nominated Dr. Charles Keowan to succeed, Dr. Keowan having the scond highest number of votes in the election just preceding. The resignation was accepted and Dr. Keowan's nomination affirmed.

A motion that unless objection was urged the Presidency and Secretary would upon behalf of the Conference extended thanks to those to whom they were due.

A motion to sustain the Auxiliaries prevailed, and the minutes were read.

Bishop E. L. Kelley announced as the nominees for the Saints' Homes Board the present incumbents: Joseph Roberts, Lorenzo Hayer and R. J. Lambert.

Appointments.

All other business being finished, the matter of the appointments of the various ministers was taken up.

A motion to approve the appointments subject to necessary corrections prevailed.

It was then moved to adjourn subject to previous order. The General Chorister led "God be with you till we meet again" and President Joseph Smith offered the closing prayer, as follows: "Our Father! It is with gratitude that we acknowledge Thy supremacy and Thy power yet over us. We thank Thee that the spirit of grace and love has been with us, and we thank Thee for the directions which Tho hast given each in the discharge of the duties of this assembly. And, we pray Thee, that as we commend ourselves to Thee in this parting hour, that Thou wilt remember each of us as we go from out the divine presence, and from each other's association, unto the places where our labors lie, that Thou wilt in Thy infinite love, continue Thy care, and grant unto us the Spirit of Christ, the Master, to still be with us that our labors in His cause may be effective,

"And, we ask Thee, that Thou wouldst help us, one by one, to faithfully observe the covenant that we have made with Thee to do that which is right according to our understanding thereof; neither to swerve to the right nor to the left by the inducements or enticements of the adversary nor the seductions of the world.

"Into Thy hands we commend us, as a people, as a Church, as an association, all officers and members in a common cause, asking Thee for a continuance of the care which Thou hast had, lo. these many, many years over this cause, which we represent, and thus we ask all, in Jesus' name. Amen."

CORRECTION. In the opening address of President Joseph Smith, published in issue of April 9th, page 1, the word "divinity" appearing just below the middle of second column should read "dublety," making the statement read: "As to what may transpire during these sessions I may have some dublety of mind," etc. Our former correction of this error, through haste, was also a mistake.

DIED

Huddleston.—Amanda Jane Brown was born in Sumner Co., Tenn., Dec. 24, 1852. She was married to James P. Huddleston March 9, 1879, baptized into the Church in 1889, by Bro. I. N. White. She died at Deepwater, Mo., April 9, 1914, leaving to mourn her husband and a sister—Sister Harriet C. Sedoris, of Independence, Mo., besides other more distant relatives other more distant relatives.

Badham.—Lois Elizabeth Badham, wife of Walter Badham, and daughter of Heman C. and Vida E. Smith, was born in San Bernardino, Cal., November 3, 1892. She died at Lamoni, Ia., March 27, 1914. She leaves an infant son, Robert George for whom she went into the valley of the shadow. Her husband, father, mother, two sisters, and one brother, besides a host of other relatives and friends, mourn her departure. She retained her childhood purity and gentleness, and went over to the other side unmarred by this world; like the Hebrew children, without the smell of fire upon her garments. The funeral was from the church in Lamoni, March 29; serman by M. M. Turpen; of fire upon her garments. The funeral was from the church in Lamoni, March 29; serman by M. M. Turpen; John F. ### Divine Life.

O, Selfless Life, come thou to me, And let me e'er abide in thee; O let me drink thy waters sweet, And bathe my head and weary feet!

O, Love-lit Waters, crystal fair, Wash out all self, put Jesus there; For self has been my thorn of life, Has caused me pain and useless strife.

With all self out and Jesus in,
My load is gone, I'm free from sin,
O, Selfless Waters, Christ-like life,
I'll drink from thee eternal life!

ENTER NOT INTO TEMPTATION.

In fulfillment of the divine mission of saving "his people from their sins," Jesus omitted no vital principle in his instruction of the people which was essential to their salvation, and withheld no warning by which they might be apprised of the dangers which might defeat that salvation. One statement containing both admonition and warning is found in his final words of instruction to his disciples prior to his crucifixion, as recorded in Matthew 26:41: "Watch and pray, that ye enter not into temptation."

Temptation is most certain to come to every man, but temptation which comes to him against his will finds him fortified against it, but when he consents to its presence, or voluntarily or carelessly enters into it, his battle is more than half lost. It is against the danger of a lost battle that the Lord warns us and urges us to "watch and pray," lest we enter into those conditions where the adversary will find us unprepared and consequently will quickly overcome us.

Looking at the root of the matter temptation has its basis in man's imperfect or evil nature. The Apostle James truly says that "every man is tempted, when he is drawn away of his own lust, and enticed." God, who is perfect, James also says "cannot be tempted with evil," but man who is perfect is susceptible ti influences of evil, and without watchfulness, and prayer for divine aid, is liable to fall into sin. "Tempt" is defined as "To lead, or endeavor to lead, into evil; to entice to what is wrong by promise of pleasure or gain; to seduce," from which we gather that deception coupled with a play upon men's appetities and desires are the means used in temptation by the adversary.

Paul follows this thought in 1 Timothy 6:9. which we quote from the emphatic diaglott which makes the meaning a little plainer: "But those wishing to be rich fall into a temptation, and a snare, and into many foolish and injurious desires, which sink men into destruction and utter ruin." The desire for mealth is a condition of the heart which invites the tempter to come with his seductive offers. It is the beginning of many a man's downfall, for it is through this desire that men are tempted to defraud, to extort, to default, and to commit numerous crimes against the law, and so when one entertains this desire for wealth by that very desire he is entering into temptation, he is putting himeslf where the adversary will find welcome entrance into his mind and heart.

Pride, when permitted to exist in the human heart, egens the way for temptation by which men are led often by gentle and subtle influences into sin. Vanity, one of the forms of pride, suggests extravagance; high-mindedness is an inviting soil for the sowing of the seeds of unbelief: and the desire for social position often breeds contempt for others. When hatred dwells in the heart, the temptation to injure another by word or deed finds that man a ready instrument for the consumation of its purpose. To enter into any of these things, or to permit them to enter into us, is to enter into temptation, for they are the things upon which temptation bases its hope of success. A young man who had been striving to subdue a desire for attending the theatre, stopped to view the advertising pictures at the entrance. He says the tempter spoke to him urging him Of course! what better opportunity to go in. would the tempter want than to find his desired victim standing before the theatre with wistful eyes and hesitant attitude? The moment he stopped there he put himself in danger of violating his previous determination,-he entered into temptation. The man with an appetite for drink who willingly or carelessly walks where he will catch the odor of liquor walks into a place where his powers of resistence will be very much lessened,-he walks into temptation. Those who voluntarily go to places of questionable amusement, or where moral principle is vitiated, put themselves under the influence of temptation as under a hypnotic spell.

No man is so strong that he can afford to consent to temptation. The man who enters into temptation trusting in his strength to resist may stand today, and perhaps tomorrow, but sometime without fail there will come the day when he will fall; he will be overcome. When a man voluntarily goes into temptation the divine presence will not go with him, and he finds himself without divine help, but when one keeps himself upon the safe side and temptation comes to him, the divine presence will sustain him.

Had the wonderful vision of all the kingdoms of the world and their glory been shown to every man and the offer made that was made to Christ, are there many who would have resisted it? The too general desire of men for glory, for wealth, for domination, for luxury, and other similar things of the world, would have offered a strong reason for yielding to the importunity. But Christ was not seeking the glory of the world, nor any worldly thing, but to magnify among men the glory of God, and the offer of these things could not move him. Further, he safeguarded his position by appealing to the word of God and making a proper application of it to his present needs. The man who follows his example in keeping improper desires from his heart, and intelligently applying the word of God to himself in all the affairs of life will be safe from the influ-

Every man has his strong points and his weak points, and it is one of the arts of welfare to strike the enemy in the weakest part. Like Goliath, men too often trust in their strength without making proper estimate of their weakness, and without considering the strength of the adversary, and thus put themselves in a condition of danger and subject themselves to defeat. To carelessly disregard these things is to enter into temptation.

To voluntarily enter into temptation is to "tempt the devil," and is an invitation for him to come on and try his strength and see what he can do. Jesus, strong as he was, never "dared" his adversary to come to him, neither inviting nor welcoming him, but "the tempter came to him." The attitude of Christ was that of resistence, and "Get thee hence, Satan." This is a safe example for every man. If temptation comes, as it did to Christ, resist it; permit it not to continue but demand its departure. Give Satan oo opportunity, no invitation, but "Put on the whole armor of God, that ye may be able to withstand in the evil day, and having done all, to stand."

While the human desires for the things of the world and the demands of fleshly appetite, are then dense through which the adversary of men's souls seeks to lead them into sin, the safeguard by which men may avoid entering into temptations is given by the Lord: "Behold, I give unto you a commandment, that ye suffer none of these things to enter into your heart." (Matt. 5:31, inspired version.) When selfish ambition and love of gain are removed from the heart, when the love of pleasure is subdued, Satan will find little that he can work upon, and nothing to invite him into the heart. But with the heart cleansed, the Spirit of God will find a desirable abiding place, and will there take up its abode to bring joy, peace, strength, and intelligence. watching and praying advised by Christ, involves all necessary effort upon man's part to attain and maintain that condition of heart which will give the divine Spirit free operation to do its work of bringing him to salvation through the plan wrought out by Christ.

FOR NATIONAL PROHIBITION.

A recent attempt of a mail order liquor house to sell its mailing lists to institutes for the cure of drunkenness, according to recent press reports, was brought out by the publication of two similar letters to different parties. 10,000 names were offered for $200, or 40.000 to 50,000 names for $400. The significance of the effort is brought out in two quotations from the letters, one being that "Our customers are your prospective patients." The other, referring to the list says: Each man on it has been a regular buyer of liquor by mail and a constant user of it, and there is not a single one who would not like to quit the habit. Each man is alive to the injury of his practice, and he is only awaiting some way of stopping." The liquor company was about to sell The liquor company was about to sell out its interests.

If this report be correct it furnishes one of the strongest arguments for national prohibition. For the United States Government to permit the mails to be used for the conducting of a business which while enriching the promoters at the impoverishment of the customers, also makes each customer a prospective patient for a hospical for the cure of drunkenness if not for more serious conditions, is not in harmony with its policy along other lines. If a man uses the mails in defrauding another the prison bars confront him, notwithstanding he causes no physical injury to his victims, but the manufacturer of lipuors may use the mails freely to advertise and condust his business, and to send out his products, which impoverish both soul and body as well as the purse, and leave the country dotted with subjects for the hospital or other institution, and in all this he is protected by the present laws of the country.

A number of the states have forbidden the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors within their own borders, but one of the greatest obstacles to prohibition within such states is the protection which liquor manufacturers and dealers have in the national laws, by which liquors can be shipped into prohibition states against their protest. True this difficulty has been partially remedied under the recent Webb law, but only partially. The mail order house selling liquor still flourishes.

National prohibition is the only remedy which will give the people full protection along this line. When the manufacture and sale of liquors are stopped within the United States, and when the mails are closed to the advertising and carrying of them, then the people will find protection through the national government, a protection that shields the morally weak from the avaricious dealer who plays upon debasing appetite in order to fill his coffers with wealth.

Let a disciple live as Christ lived, and he will easily believe in living again as Christ does.

As the days of spring arouse all nature to a green and growing vitality, so when hope enters the soul it makes all things new. It insures the progress which it predicts. Rooted in faith, growing up into love; these make the three immortal graces of the gospel, whose intertwined arms and concurrent voices shed joy and peace over our human life.

INDEPENDENCE ITEMS.

As a few lingering shots follow the close of a battle so the efforts of a few of the general conference visitors follow up the close of the conference business. The few tollow up the close of the conference business. The few remaining ones are however fast departing and soon we shall be left to the normal quietude until the conference of—we were going to say 1916, but recalling that the place of next conference is not yet decided, we cannot say when. On Sunday morning Elder Walter W. There should be no premium placed upon ignorance in the service of God. In the evening Elder J. A. Koehler, also of Philadephia, pastor of the Second Church, spoke from the text:

ST. JOSEPH, FIRST BRANCH.

Now that conference is over and we are returning to the usual routine of every day life. We hope to once more find space in your columns for a few items from our branch

We are at present in a rather disturbed condition of mind as a congregation. At the close of the conference we came home joyfully assuring one another that "all is well, we are going to have Bro. B. J. Scott another year," which assurance was eminently satisfactory to us year, which asstrated was enhinently satisfactory to as as a branch, his work among us, having met with general approval and his many fine qualities having won genuine respect and liking. So when the report came the other day that we were not to have Bro. Scott after all it was like a clap of thunder out of a clear sky. We sincerely hope that some one may be sent in his stead as we feel greatly the need of a shepherd for this Vesselgade 7, Copenhagen Denmark, April 10. Vesseigade ', Copennagen Denmark, April 10.

Editor Ensign:—It was on the 10th day of April 1864, hence fifty years ago this very day, that I together with my parents and the rest of our family, six in all, left our native land, bound for what we then believed was the my parents and the rest of our nature, sax in an, letter day Zion, amid the rockey mountains of Utah. I was then scarcely four-teen years of age, and when I today look back over that time, that has intervened it seems more like a dream, and it is almost with difficulty that I convince myself that it was so long ago; yet when I am compelled to acknowledge that half a century is past, I am forcefully reminded that I am no longer a boy. As I reflect upon the past, some of the experiences of those days, come vividly to mind, and seem as if they only happened yesterday. I behold in my life work some things that I have reason to regret, and wish had been otherwise, but I also see many things that I have great reason to be thankful for, as all along I can discern an overruling providence, and so many evidences of a loving Father's hand and protection. Sr. Hansen and I have celebrated the day by visiting the harbor and, so far as I now was able to locate it, the very spot on the dock, where we embarked on the little steamer that then carried us to Hull in England. ried us to Hull in England.

Traveling in those days did not mean pleasure trips, especially for people traveling as we did. We were Mormon emigrants and the arrangements for our passage were all in the hands of the church authorities, the details of which no one were informed, and none were supposed to ask questions, for such would at once been regarded as an evidence of weakness in the faith and a disposition to apostatize.

Our company consisted of several hundred people, Our company consisted of several nungred people, mostly from Denmark, nearly all of whom, never before had been a days journey from home. They were about to enter upon new experiences, all because of what they had been taught regarding "Zion in the West." The steamer was not a regular passenger-boat, and contained no conveniences for the large number of people. no conveniences for the large number of people. The only place besides the open deck was a room not large enough to afford much more than standing room for all, so although the journey lasted three days and nights, there could be no thoughts of a place to sleep either night or day, but that of course was not expected. The situation was made worse, almost desperate, by the fact that we encountered a severe storm, which besides impediture on more course course, deep the fact that we encountered a severe storm, which besides impediture on more course course, deep the fact that we have the fact that t ing our progress caused great suffering from seasickn he open deck became both dangerous and uncomfortable y the constant splashing of the waves, which caused early all to seek shelter in the one room below, where the air became so foul that it is almost a wonder that people could live under the conditions. I shall attempt no further description, those who have had some experience along the line will understand something about it while those who know nothing about sensickness under such condition could not, from any description that I amable to give, form a conception of what it was like. I will not burden the readers with a detail of this part of the journey, but an idea as to with what rapidity we were progressing will be obtained, when I inform them, that not putil April 28 ceptatons due form the time was were progressing will be obtained, when I inform them, that not until April 28, eighteen days from the time we embarked at Copenhagen, did we set sail, for the passage from Liverpool to New York, having spent all of two weeks in Hull and Liverpool waiting for the ship to be ready to sail.

ready to sail.

The vessel upon which we embarked at Liverpool was named, "Monarch of the Sea," a sailing vessel, but a fine ship apparently; but if reports that later reached us were true, the high sounding name was a failure, as we were informed that she was lost at sea on her return.

The "Monarch of the Sea" carried us across the At-lantic in 35 days, which was considered quick time for a sailing vessel. We were about one thousand passengers, a sailing vessel. We were about one thousand passengers, the larger portion from Scandinavia. The accommodations were better than on the small steamer, for although this ship had not originally been built to carry passengers, temporary arrangements had been made so that all had a sort of sleeping berth, where they could retire for the night. One trouble that confronted us was to get our stable posterior of the state o meals cooked, and we had many a long fast because we could not eat things raw as they were divided out to the passengers each week. The ship was not supplied with ranges of sufficient dimensions to cook for such a multitude, and besides the cooks were persons of no experience in that line, but they had secured the job to earn their passage.

The most serious thing that befell us on board ship, was that disease broke out among the children, to an alarming extent, and invariably proved fatal. Over sixty children died and their bodies buried in the great deep, my two younger brothers among them. It was at one time no uncommon thing to see the one little corpse after another, carried on deck and thrown overboard. It caused a feeling of sadness to come over all, but even then, the majority found comfort in the thought that it was all endured for the gospel's sake, and the belief that we were journeying Zionward, gave comfort and encouragement in the midst of affliction and trials.

From New York to St. Joseph, Mo., we were transported by rail, sometimes in regular passenger coaches, but part of the way in common box cars. We came by steamboat up the Missouri from St. Joseph to Wyoming Nebraska, a few miles north of Nebraska City. Here we had our first experience in out of door camp life, as we camped in the edge of the woods and on the prairie for about six weeks, before we began our tedious journey across what is called "The Plains."

Here sickness again broke out, this time regardless as to age, and quite a number of both men and women in the prime of life became fatal victims. The out door life, the extreme heat and other new conditions, to which Europeans were not accustomed was no doubt the cause. The deaths became so frequent, both while in camp and after we had resumed our journey westward, that it became difficult to get men to bury the dead. All were not onesidered sick, yet very few felt well, and especially after our march had begun, men felt so weary and in need of rest rather than to be digging graves. A number of the dead were poorly buried not only without coffins, but so scantly covered that their bodies likely became the prey for wild animals.

Our journey from Wyoming to Salt Lake City was with our journey from Wyoning to Salt Lake City was with ox teams, and with what was known as the "church teams." That is, the teams were sent by the people in Utah, being called upon to so do, by the church authorities, thus to "help the poor saints gather to Zion." The people furnishing the oxen and wagons, and young men were called to go as teamsters, several hundred teams being provided, all in the name of building up Zion and of beling the noor. It was learned however that the main ing provided, all in the name of building up Zion and of helping the poor. It was learned however that the main and principle object was to bring out merchandise for "Zions Cooporative Mercantile Institution," for previous to any of the emigrants baggage being put on the wagons, they were heavily loaded with various kinds of merchandise, and when as in several instances that was of a bulky nature, it was with difficulties that room was found for the fifty pounds of baggage each person was permitted to carry with him, on this part of the journey; as for the ole: they were expected to walk.

This arrangement might have been justified, had it really been an act of charity, as it was made to appear to be. But even this part proved to be a scheme to enrich the church, or its officials. While in camp waiting to move on, it was one day announced, that all heads of families and all single persons going with the church teams should report at the office and sign their names. (I believe it was Joseph Young who was in charge of the affairs) there appeared nothing strange or unreasonable in this request, and there was a ready and general response by all, but these Scandinavians did not know what they were signing, these Scandinavians did not know what they were signing, as they did not read the language, and not until years afterwards, when we were ready to leave Utah, did we know that father had signed a note promising to pay $240 for the transportation or four persons from Wyoming to Salt Lake City. This note was drawing interest at the rate of ten per cent yearly, which was added to the principal and then drawing same rate of interest, until paid; honce we found quite a debt to cancel before we left little. we left Utah.

As stated, we were six persons in the family when we entered upon the journey and we were all in the enjoyment of health, but only two of the number; father were able to help ourselves when we arrived Salt Lake City, my mother and sister being helpless in-valids as related the two younger children had died. My sister was among those who took sick while in camp at Wyoming and the only one who was permitted to ride all the way from there to Salt Lake City, she being so low that she could not stand alone, much less walk; the rest made the journey on foot wading the rivers as well as smaller streams, the teamsters having strict as well as smaller streams, the teamsters having struc-orders to let nobody ride who were able to walk. This rule caused a serious accident to befall my mother, when we were yet two or three hundred miles from Salt Lake Gity. My sister was at the time so low that she was not expected to live, and hence mother kept herself very near expected to live, and hence mother kept herself very near the wagen, and now and then, while it was still in motion, would step upon the wagen tongue in front, to see how she was and if anything could be done for her, but the last time she fell in front of the wheel, and the heavy loaded wagen passed over her breast and shoulder. She loaded wagon passed over her breast and shoulder. So was then picked up, more dead than alive, and from there was hauled in that mangled and bruised condition, over the rough and rocky road to Salt Lake City, where we arrived Oct. 6, nearly six months after we had left Copenhagen.

Contrary to all hope and expectation, mother and sister finally recovered, the first named reaching a good old age, though the effects of her accident was frequently felt by her as long as she lived. The greatest of all our trials and discouragements were, when instead of finding a people honoring God and his word, we found conditions that indicated that we were in Babylon instead of in Zion, and that the leaders of the people were teaching that the revelations of God, as found in the Scripwere of minor importance, as now we must be ned by the counsel of the priesthood, the living oracles. The consequence of tha tdoctrne was that strange and unholy practices were not only sanctioned, but declared to be the very means through which to obtain an "exaltation" in the eternal world.

We had however not been long in Utah until we heard of the reorganization of the "Josephites" as they were called. In fact rumors had reached us while in camp at called. In fact rumors had reached us while in camp at Wyoming, about Joseph the son of the prophet. I think that was the first time that we learned that the prophet had a son, not identified with the church in Utah. The stories we heard were of the most sensational kind; the son of the prophet was a wicked apostate, he was liable to visit the camp, and we were admonished to beware as he had wonderful powers to deceive, having some name written on his forehead. This of course had no effect, only to cause us to think it strange, that the prophet's son was not associated with the church in Utah. This matter was brogult to a more serious and earnest

This matter was brought to a more serious and earnest consideration in 1867, while then living in Boxelder Coun-ty, Utah, when we heard of the "Josephites" holding meetings at the home or one David Powell, north of meetings at the nome or one David rowel, north of Brigham City, Somehow we became informed as to the claims and teachings of the "Josephites," which led to an investigation and a search of the Scriptures, and be-fore ever heaving a sermon we were "Josephites" in faith. Later in company with father and others we attended meetings, at the home of the above mentioned attended meetings, at the nome of the above mentioned David Powell, walking the distance, about ten miles, through snow, slush and mud, and the result was that a goodly number, including father and myself were baptized in March 1861, by David Powell, he being an elder in the church.

Mother and sister united with the church

Since then I have been identified with the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and since 1873 I have defended its claims and endeavored to preach the gospel of the Son of God. I have for a number of years travelled as a missionary, in different parts of the United States, and to quite an extent in Utah. I have also been several times in Scandinavia, and now after fifty years have rolled away since I first left my native land, I am back to declare the good tidings of salvation through Jesus Christ our Lord.

I am glad to stand identified with a people whose faith is in God, and whose foundation is the revelation of his will. I can with satisfaction and a good conscience Since then I have been identified with the Reorganized his will. I can with satisfaction and a good conscience recommend our faith to every honest soul, as worthy of their consideration and acceptation. Not that I think that we as a church have reached perfection, for I sometimes see that among us that makes my heart feel sad. But we have no ruling priesthood whose words are to be accepted as law, until we are convinced it is from the Lord, and no "living oracles" hold dominion over us. The law given of the Lord is binding upon all without exception.

What I have related, as a result of my reflections, is not for the purpose parading my goodness and faith-fulness, for I am not blind to the fact that my impertections are numerous, and I often wish I had been more careful and more diligent in the servic of the Lord. I am however thankful that I am associated with the people that God still owns and is willing to bless. I am people that God still owns and is willing to bless. I am glad that through the past experiences that I have been able to retain faith in the Lord, and have been permitted to remain until the present, and I hope by the help of the Lord to hold on unto the end.

In gospel bonds,

Some sections of both states are rough and hilly, and in places the soil is poor, but the same complaint could be made against any state in the world. Since this section has been settled it has never failed to produce enough food for eyerything living upon it. True many people still hold to the old-fes-ioned fire place, but if here are cracks and holes in these which let the wind through, it is a very rare Furniture in the houses here will average with the set of the states.

In regard to productive qualities of Tennessee and Kentucky, most Americans know that they are above an average for general products; fine for cattle, sheep, hogs, and fowls of all kinds; especially so for fine horses. All kinds of berries do extra, well; and clover of all kinds. Wheat yields up to sixty bushels per acre, and in our region saveet and Irish potatoes do extra well. Corn often yields sixty-five bushels per acre, and tobacco frequently yields sixty-five busness per acre, and tobacco frequently as high as 1600 pounds per acre and somtimes as high as 2200 pounds bringing as high as $220 per acre. All kinds of fruit do well when given proper attention. Taking the two states into consideration thy excel in their products, and God is as near the honest in heart here as elsewhere.

FROM THE REPORTS TO GENERAL CONFERENCE.

Few reports are read to the Conference this year, but nearly all have been printed and distributed to the delegates. Most of them are too lengthy to give in full, but the following paragraphs are selected as containing the most important or the most interesting parts:

Recorder's Report

C. I. Carpenter, Recorder,

To the General Conference, Greeting:—The records of this office show the following statistics for the year 1913: Our last year's total membership was 68,211, to which we have added 3,670 by baptism, and 2,137 by letters of transfer, while we have sustained a loss of 1,670 by letters of transfer, 89 by expulsion, and 656 by death, leaving us a net gain of 3,491 and a present membership of 71,702; of this total, 60,505 are in the United States, while 11,197 are in other lands.

There were 384 ordinations, 560 marriages, and 1,38 children blessed, while the reports show 4,895 men or 6.82 her cent of the total membership holding the various or-lers of the priesthood, and 28,673 members, or 39.98 per cent of the total membership are reported as absent from branch organizations.

Of those baptized about 65 per cent were by mission-aries, and 35 per cent by the local ministry; 36 per cent were males, and 64 per cent females; and 36 per cent were under fifteen years of age.

As compared with other years the baptisms and net gain are the largest ever reported as the work of any one year, but to be more explicit we note that the report of year, but to be more explicit we note that the report of 1891 showed a total of 25,368; for a period of ten years following this the annual averages were: Baptisms 2,368, expulsions 150, deaths 391, net gain 1,987, making an average increase of 5.75 per cent, with an average of 212 missionaries in the field. The report of 1991 showed a total membership of 45,381, and the averages for the ten years following were, baptisms 2,433, expulsions 132, deaths 544, net gain 1,708, making an increase of 3.22 per cent, with an average of 309 missionaries in the field. As compared with these two ten years periods the present report shows for the year 1913, baptisms 3,670, expulsions 89, deaths 656, net gain 3,491, making an increase of 5.11 per cent, with 347 missionaries in the field.

The Historian's Report.

Heman C. Smith, Historian.

Young People's History.

The manuscript of this work up to 1852 was placed in the hands of the Revising Committee immediately after the adjournment of the last Annual Conference, from that committee passed to the Board of Publica The board will doubtless report the further disposition of i. Subsequently the committee to whom the matter was referred, viz., the Board of Publication and Historian, appointed Sister Vida E. Smith to write the history from 1852 to date. Press and Pulnit.

These agencies have been very active in the past year in opposition to the work, but some notable instances have occurred where men and perodicals have spoken our defense and in corrections of misrepresentation. I historical periodicals have almost universally been hon able and just treating upon our history. Several of these exchange with the Journal of History and are very courteous and fair.

Indians.

These people are making some significent movements for the betterment of their race, among which is the organization of "The Society of American Indians," in which all Indians are eligible to membership without references. ganization of "The Society of American Indians," in which all Indians are eligible to memborship without reference to tribal relations. The motto of the society is: "The honor of the race and the good of the country shall be paramount." During the year they have issued from Washington, D. C., a magazine of great merit entitled: "The Quarterly Journal of the Society of American Indians." Report of Order of Evangelists.

Frederick A. Smith, President.

Hyrum O. Smith, Secretary.

During the year there has been considerable activity upon the part of the members of the order, along what may be known as the evangelical line, and many services may be known as the evangelical line, and many services have been held in branches as revival meetings, which have been conducive of much good among the memberhave been conducive of much good among the membership. Some of these meetings have been well attended by outsiders and a number of them have been brought into the church. The evangelical feature of the work is increasing and, as we believe, becoming better recognized and appreciated. Believing as we do that this is our first and primary work in connection with counselling and advising, as the revelation provides, it will make its influence felt for good in the church when it has become more fully recognized and appreciated, and we are satisfied that a work will be accomplished that will produce excellent results. It will relieve the missionary staff of much of this kind of work which they have had to do in times pust and will enable them to push their work more energetically in the new fields, and at the same time the branches can be encouraged and strengthened and the work built up and revived from time to time through the work of this order, as the Lord has designated and the benefits and results intended by the Lord in giving this, will not only be realized by the church but also fully appreciated.

The brethren of the order, although some of them are quite aged, have been quite active. There has been but little complaint during the year, and anyone who will study the report carefully will discover that the patriachal blessing feature has not been made the chief feature, but we have not neglected nor refused to perform that part of the work when called upon to do so, and while we are conindent that this has its place in the economy of God's work and if properly understood and properly used, will be pro-ductive of great comfort and strength to the membership of the church, but like other good things that the Lord ha given, if abused it will not accomplish its purpose and may be productive of evil results.

We are hopeful that the future of the order may be one of active interest in behalf of the church and that we may prove worthy of the confidence of the church and shall be of such benefit and worth as shall evidence the wisdom of God in making provision for the work of this order in His church.
